For proof of this assertion, let us read Psalm 14:2, 3: "The Lord looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one." Psalm 53:2, 3 tells the same story. Solomon said, "There is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not" (Eccl. 7:20). Paul quotes, "There is none righteous, no, not one" (Rom. 3:10). Mankind, as a whole, is nothing before God. "All nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity" (Isa. 40:17).

To climax these records hear what Jesus Himself said. "Behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God" (Matt. 19:16, 17). When Jesus who never sinned refused to be called good, how can we be called good or moral? "Our righteousnesses are as filthy rags" (Isa. 64:6). Morality cannot save us, it only leads us deeper into the mire. These facts being established, we can realize that our conduct must be regulated by our obedience to God's instructions.

Many think that is they say, "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ," they will be saved. But do such persons know who Christ is, and what His office is, and how He can save? One must have an intimate knowledge of another person before he can believe (Please turn to page 11)

Death or Imprisonment?

By John O. Conrad

HAVE long been interested in the pro's and con's of capital punishment. My interest has been increased of late, partly, as it concerns the citizens of Ohio, the shocking publicity given it by the Governor of Texas, and a recent article in The Restitution Herald.

It is remarkable the extent to which people are accustomed to think and act in relation to punishment, which too often seems to reflect an attitude of revenge. God has said, "Vengeance is mine." That does not imply that it is a part of His attitude, but that it should not be a part of ours. Mr. Blackstone once said, as I recall, "The great end of law is not to punish the evildoer, but to deter him from repeating the offense."

Many people entertain the mistaken idea that capital punishment has a restraining effect on those who might otherwise commit grave criminal acts, but statistics fail to confirm this impression.

Capital punishment implies law and order, without which society could not well exist. Order is a matter of custom or opinion, but law has its primary meaning in the divine will. Statutes which prescribe capital punishment are said to have precedents in the laws of Moses. However, laws relating to ethics are conditioned upon mercy as well as justice.

It is true that many of the provisions of the law of Moses provide, in effect, for capital punishment. Two things should be considered, however, in relation to the people of Israel: first, they were ignorant, undisciplined, and purposeless; second, it would have been quite impractical to have established prisons in the wilderness.

Obedience to divine will was undoubtedly the great objective of the law of Moses. The penalty of death for certain violations would seem to have been a temporary means of expediting the effectiveness of the law, rather than that it should be thought of as being a permanent necessity.

The spectacle of being stoned to death, or stricken by a blast of heavenly fire, would undoubtedly produce a fearful obedience in all who witnessed such acts; but it is difficult to believe that they would ever produce a wholesome and willing obedience. Moreover, the sudden or irrevocable application of capital punishment makes no provision for either mercy or repentance.

It is to be observed, that during the administration of the law in the wilderness, when the Israelites were unduly influenced by the reports of the ten spies, God did not condemn all over twenty years of age to immediate death, which impartial justice might have decreed, but returned them to the wilderness, thus imprisoning them for life. We observe the same condition in the instance of Adam and Eve who were not slain for their disobedience, but driven out of the Garden of Eden. Cain also was banished for life from the society of his family for having killed Abel. Is not the application of capital punishment in any form, in any government, a limited concept of a higher law, that of mercy, which has existed even from creation?

Let us notice a prophecy of Him who was to become the administrator of this higher law: "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken; according to all that thou desiredst of the Lord thy God in Horeb in the day of the assembly, saying, Let me not hear again the voice of the Lord thy God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not'' (Deut. 18:15, 16).

We believe that Jesus was that prophet. Who can doubt that He was more concerned about mercy than justice? Notice the parable of Matthew 13:24-30. The "wheat" here undoubtedly typifies the saved, and the "tares" the lost. The tares are not to be destroyed during the growing season, but at the harvest, lest the wheat also be rooted up with them. Again, in the account of the adulterous woman (John 8:3-11), justice was superseded by mercy. The verdict was, "Go, and sin no more."

My attention was attracted to a recent news item of the death of Anatole Diebler, high executioner of France since 1898. He fell dead on his way to execute his 402d victim.

Death, like some invisible contagion, seems to exert some malignant influence on all who are in any way associated with his nefarious office; extorting from them some vital tribute, as it were, to the "King of Destruction."

I have come to feel that wherever capital punishment is practiced, intelligent, thinking citizens feel to some extent that they are remotely responsible, and are themselves made to suffer in some degree whenever it is invoked.

We have progressed far from the law of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and a life for a life, but there is still room for improvement if we would pattern after the Man of Merey.

Some are born mentally deficient and must be incarcerated. Many who are regarded as social misfits and have been imprisoned, have sacrificed their right to liberty, not by choice, but because of the conditions affecting them.

A greater improvement in education and environment will undoubtedly lessen the amount of imprisonment, but, while imprisonment may continue to be a necessity, certainly capital punishment is not.

Christians—Ordinary and Unordinary

By Lottic E. Young

THE UNITED STATES, and a large majority of the countries of Europe are nominally Christian, but many of the inhabitants of these lands do not live up to the standard set by Jesus Christ: "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." The definition of a Christian is: "one whose inward and outward life is conformed to Christ." If we look at our own lives, and those of the relatives and friends by whom we are surrounded, how many are there who can truly say, "I am fully surrendered to God, taking my cross daily"? Some may say this is too much to expect from frail humanity, but if Jesus gave this command to His followers when He was among them, would He not repeat it to us at this present day?

We sometimes hear the excuse made, "There are so many hypocrites in the church I would not care to associate with it." Undoubtedly, there are hypocrites, even as in the days of Jesus when one of the Twelve chosen by Him was not only a hypocrite, but a traitor to the Great Example he had been watching and following for three years. Then, there are "tired" Christians, and again in the Bible we have at least one such—John Mark, the companion of Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey—who, after undergoing the hardships endured, decided to leave the two older men to struggle on, and he went back to the comforts of home.

Have you known those who could stay very much awake at some form of entertainment until the wee small hours, but always confessed to a drowsy feeling in church after twenty minutes of preaching, sometimes yawning in the face of the speaker? Retired Christians are those like Peter who, not seeing any immediate result from the Lord's resurrection, was disappointed after a short time and said, "I go a fishing." Then the Savior appeared, and Peter was distinctly given work to do, being told, "Shepherd my sheep and lambs." Many start their Christian life energetically, but when discouragement or opposition arise they decide they are not fitted for the work, and retire from active service altogether. They forget the words, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

There are some "tiresome" Christians, who may regularly go to church, but are real trouble-breeders and fault-finders, always ready to quote "they say" when a nice bit of gossip comes along, or a fellow man does not do the right thing, not remembering the "seventy times seven" of Jesus for forgiveness. Some churches are afflicted with "bossy" members, who think it their duty to direct the affairs of same, whether they are competent to do so or not. They like to have "a finger in every pie," often against the wishes of the majority, thus breaking up many a gathering.

We almost laugh at the unbelief of those early Christians who, when Peter was in prison, were praying earnestly that he might be restored to them, yet when the maid said, Peter is standing at the gate," they said, "Thou art mad." But does it not make us think of the prayers ascending to God for some dear one in our midst in trouble, and the faint belief we have that our petitions will be answered, although we may sing, "God hears and answers prayer"?

Do we know any such "ordinary" Christians, perhaps more or less faithful attendants at churches? Possibly so, but let us rejoice that we also know some who are "unordinary," seemingly tireless in the work for the Master. We draw a long breath after reading 2 Corinthians 11, which tells of what the Apostle Paul endured that he might preach Jesus Christ to the nations, and wonder if any today are doing likewise. However, books and papers tell us of devoted men and women who are constantly witnessing for Christ, giving their lives to enlighten others.

Then there are "courageous" Christians, ever ready to sacrifice self to an ideal. A letter recently received from China told of native converts who had been "through fire and through water," literally. While their faces were drawn and haggard from the suffering endured, and tears flowed as they told of loved ones not heard from for months, and of burned homes, yet they always closed with a "Praise God" for mercies rendered, and for safety when every day their lives were in jeopardy.

An incident was reported of the son of a wealthy brewer who was seen wearing a button on his coat showing his firm adherence to total abstinence. When asked how much he was paid for wearing same he replied, "I will tell you what I have given up for doing it, and that is $100,000." His father had cut off all his fortune for this action.

What kind of followers are most desired? Fruit bearing, and the practice of the virtues given in Galatians 5—love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meckness, self-control. These graces will indeed convince all those with whom we come in contact that we are Christians in the fullest sense of the word. There used to be an old hymn which read:

"O the bitter pain and anguish
That a day could ever be,
When I proudly said to Jesus,
'All of self and none of Thee.'"

Succeeding verses bore the refrain:

"Some of self and some of Thee, Less of self and more of Thee, None of self and all for Thee."

This is the ideal of a truly consecrated Christian. Shall we try to live up to it?

"The Things Concerning the Kingdom of God"

Concluded

By J. M. Morgan

WHAT are the things (elements) of the kingdom of God? When will they be brought together? Why should we know and believe these certain truths of the kingdom of God?

Jesus' very first discourse was about the gospel of the kingdom of God. We read, "When Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee" (Matt. 4:12). This is the place and the time that Peter tells of in Acts 10:36, 37, saying, "The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all:) that word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judæa, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached." "Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom" (Matt. 4:23). Luke 8:1 says, Jesus "went throughout every city and village preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God."

Now let us consider Jesus' last discourse. It, too, was about the kingdom, and was forty days long: "Being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3).

Philip, also, preached the things, or elements, of the kingdom. "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts 8:12). Notice the truth here, that these Samaritans believed the things concerning "the kingdom of God," before they were baptized. Did you have the same kind of faith the Samaritans had before you were baptized?

When Christ is King the kingdom of God, spoken of in Daniel 2:44, will then be "set up." This kingdom when "set up" "shall not be left to other people," as the so-called church kingdom is now left to others, "but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms (not churches), and it shall stand for ever." It is "the ever-lasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 1:11). This kingdom will be "under the whole heaven" (Dan. 7:27). The dominion of this kingdom will be "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth" (Psalm 72:8).

In Isaiah 9:6, 7 we read, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

throne, "the throne of his father David" (Luke 1:32). Here subjects are included in the word "kingdom," for there can be no kingdom without subjects.

"There came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" (Matt. 2:1). To further show that Christ will be King we read, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee:... and the battle bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak peace unto the heathen (the nations): and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth" (Zech. 9:9, 10).

In Luke 1:31-33 we have a clear statement as to the king, the throne, and the subjects: "Call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

There must also be associate rulers. We read in Isaiah 32:1, "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." Paul says, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him (Christ)" (2 Tim. 2:12). We read in Revelation 5:9, 10, "They sung a new song, saying, Thou . . . hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

In Revelation 2:26, 27 we read, "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father." Further, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21).

Acts 17:31 shows that God will "judge the world" by Christ, and in 1 Corinthians 6:2, 3 Paul both says that "the saints shall judge the world," and "Know ye not that we shall judge angels?"

Such language is strong proof showing who will be the associate rulers and judges with the King.

Another important "thing" about the kingdom is the capital city. Jesus said, "Swear... neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King." (See Matt. 5:34, 35 and Isa, 24:23.)

Another essential element of the kingdom is that it shall fill the earth. All kingdoms of men have used only parts of it, but the everlasting kingdom is destined to use all the earth. "The Lord shall be king over all the earth" (Zech. 14:9). "The kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him" (Dan. 7:27).

This earth was first given to Adam. He was to "have dominion over . . . every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Gen. 1:28).

Likewise, God promised this earth to Abraham, and to Christ. "To Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, That the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise" (Gal. 3:16-18).

God's promises to Abraham included earth, for the Lord said, "Lift up now thine eyes, and look . . . northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever."

Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5). And in Psalm 2:8, David, speaking of God, about Christ, said, "Ask of me (God), and I shall give thee the heathen (the nations) for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

Finally, let us notice the element of law in the kingdom. In Micah 4:1-3 we find the kingdom and its law. "The law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. . . . He shall judge among many people."

Daniel Eleven

Article 2

By A. R. Johnson

IN OUR last article we came to the development of the two iron legs of the great image of Daniel 2. We are now arriving at the point where these two divisions are beginning the last series of wars to precede our Lord's advent.

In Daniel 11:7 (R.V.), we read, "Out of a shoot from her roots (Mary's office?) shall one stand up in his place (Christ's place?), who shall come unto the army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and shall prevail."

Though the first of these epochal wars is in favor of the king of the south who is ready before the northern king is prepared, this latter king soon makes a comeback, and strikes a heavy blow carrying the war into southern territory, greatly angering the southern king who battles in real carnest. (V. 13.) Casualties run into the tens of thousands. The resources of the king of the north are too great for even him who is strong and well prepared. The opposition is too great for the southern king. Many stand up against him, even "the children of the violent among thy (Daniel's) people," the children of Israel. (V. 14.)

The statement is made in verse 14 that this action on the part of certain Jews in Palestine is "to establish the vision." Did the revealing angel expect Daniel to be there to check events against the word spoken over two millenniums before? Surely this is not the thought, for these "violent" ones "shall fall." (V. 14.) We believe this was placed on record for our instruction, who, like Daniel, are desirous of knowing what the future holds.

With this victory the king of the north becomes the fourth beast of Daniel 7, and the seventh king of Revelation 17:10. The king of the south who wounded one of its heads as unto death is portrayed as the great red dragon in Revelation 12:3.

Following the death of the northern king, who "shall stumble and fall, and shall not be found" (v. 19), there is to be a time of peace in which his successor raises the taxes until he also is removed to make room for the last great dictator, who arises in a period of peace. (Vv. 20, 21.)

This last dictator is a contemptible person who obtains the kingdom by flatteries and the careful use of force, until he is in possession of it all. (V. 22.) He originates from a small people. (V. 23.) One of his first acts is to "make a firm covenant" (Dan. 9:27) with the people of Israel known as the Jews, who evidently render him considerable financial help. The Savior spoke of this in John 5:43, saying, "If another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive." This will mark the beginning of the last week of Daniel 9:27.

To us this covenant has much of interest. Israelites, the world's financiers and the most persecuted nation, are now being pushed hither and yon, none wanting them, even as Moses predicted in their beginning. (Deut. 28:68.) It is easy to see why they shall surely be quick to covenant with this false Messiah.

The establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine is a heartbreaking failure for the Jews, largely due to Britain's interest in Moslem lands. This covenant, then, must have something in it to remedy this situation. To the coming ruler these obstacles will not exist. Thus, having received him as their deliverer, and with their ancient home thrown open to them, Israelites will flock in, happy even in their unbelief to find a haven where they may escape the world's persecution.

With Palestine predominantly Jewish, it is not hard to visualize the Mosque of Omar being torn apart and the material in it being used in the fourth Jewish temple, and the ancient sacrifices, burnt offerings, and ritual again instituted as in days of old. (See Ezek. 22:17-22.) If that covenant with the "man of sin" does not consist of such restorations, how shall he break it by taking their things away? (Dan. 11:31; 9:27; Isa. 33:1.)

He will cause craft to prosper by his policy. (Dan. 8: 25.) This must be an explanation of the futile efforts to this end by our contemporary rulers; for if he is to "cause craft to prosper," evidently, it has not prospered for some little time before.

About this time the great king stirs up his power against the king of the south, subjugates him, and becomes first universal ruler of all the earth. (Isa. 10:14; Rev. 13:1, 2.) Isaiah 10:12, 24 identifies him as an Assyrian. Chapter 14 identifies him as King of Babylon, as was his type Nebuchadnezzar, King of both Babylon and Assyria.

Nimrod, also, was a type of this last ruler. Isaiah calls him the "day star," or Lucifer, because of being the last ruler before the Lord's coming to end Gentile darkness.

Meditations on Evil and Sin

Concluded

By A. Anthon

ONE may visualize God, before ever He created our universe, sitting on His great white throne in the midst of grandeur, splendor, magnificence. It would seem everything was there that it was probable God could want, including myriads of faithful angels whose very beings are saturated with fidelity, and who were there to do God's every bidding. Yet, if one could have looked into God's eyes he might have read there a loneliness—a yearning for more than He had—an ever-progressive disposition, urging Him onward to greater achievements.

God may have had such a yearning for our universe, and for us. God, with all His angels, may yet have yearned for children of His own, even us—children to love and to love Him, dutiful, appreciative children.

How was God to have such children? If He created them to be exactly of such character they would not be that way by reason or choice of their own minds. Because they could not be any other way they would be automatons or machines, like a phonograph saying and doing only those things it was made to do and say—not anything of its own mind. God wanted children who could and would do things of their own minds, children to be free moral agents. He wanted children who could be naughty if they wanted to, or who could be appreciative and noble if they so chose.

With this desire in mind, God created this universe and His first two children, Adam and Eve. They must have been babes—baby free moral agents. They had opportunity to do right or wrong, just as they pleased.

God did not put His babes where pain, sickness, and death were, as we have today. They were placed in an Eden, a paradise, a kingdom of heaven, a kingdom of God. However, they were not satisfied with this, and did not like to dress and keep this Garden. (Gen. 2:15.) They had a tempter to suggest naughty things they could do that would surely give them pleasure. The naughty thing that the serpent suggested was to eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil which the Lord had forbidden.

Now, let us study a bit. Eve could not know that she was in a paradise. She had never seen a thing go wrong: had never a pain, heartache, or fright in all her life up to this time. She had all of the finest fruits to eat. Every animal was a pet, lions, bears, and mice. There were no lice, fleas, or mosquitoes to cause discomfort. She had never dashed her foot against a stone or root. There were no briers. Her bed on deep grass was most comfortable. Weather was ideal. But how could she know this was a good place when she knew nothing of anything unpleasant? Thus, after long experience, when children disobey God's way they surely should be punished.

So it was with God and His children. They disobeyed because they did not realize, did not know, did not appreciate what God had done for them. God began His great school of trials, and put them in it to learn that Eden was a grand and glorious place in which to live. The only way, the best way, was to let Adam and Eve live for a while where things were not very pleasant, to let them live in a place just like where you and I are living today, a place where things go wrong much of the time, a place where things go right just enough of the time to make us see how good things must have been in Eden. God put Adam and Eve and us to live in this place to teach us to want to live in Eden.

Now, if we learn to want to live in Eden God will let us into His paradise after our resurrection. God will let back into Eden all who prove by their deeds now that they will do righteously in Eden, who will do as they are asked to do.

In ordinary schools of today some pupils learn easily, some slowly, others never learn. Some have to be punished, others are ideal pupils. Some have to be expelled! God deals in exactly the same way with us. We receive punishments as God knows to be right. Those who will not learn in the end are going to be expelled—rocked to sleep in a

SAVED AS BY FIRE

By E. E. Giesler

"If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire" (f. Cor. 3:15).

THE word "work" does not refer to sin in a man's life that will be burned out, or purged, in the day of judgment, but is something that will cause the man to suffer loss if it is burned up. Sin purged would not be a loss, but a gain.

"For this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labour be in vain" (1 Thess. 3:5). Paul knew there was danger of this church falling away, and that its members might lose the crown of life promised them, and that their loss would also be his loss—not that he would lose his life on account of their waywardness, but he would lose his "work" among them.

The same thought is brought out in 1 Corinthians 3. Paul and Apollos were ministers by whom the Corinthians believed. Paul said, "We are labourers together with God: ye (the members) are God's husbandry (field), ye are God's building (temple)" (v. 9). Paul, "as a wise master-builder . . . laid the foundation, and another (minister) buildeth thereon. But let every man (minister) take heed how he buildeth thereon" (v. 10).

In verse 11 we see that Christ is the foundation, and in verse 12 there are six building materials named. Three of these are indestructible, and three are destructible. Gold, silver, and precious stones represent members worthy of being saved. (1 Peter 2:4, 5.) Wood, hay, and stubble represent members that failed, and are worthy of destruction. (See Jer. 5:14; Isa. 47:14; Malachi 4.)

Sin not repented of will be punished by death: There is no chance of a cleansing by fire in a purgatory after death. Do not be led away by the error of the wicked.

BE STRONG TO DO RIGHT

"So many temptations around us are spread That we must keep watching while onward we tread; We'll try to remember, while hard is the fight, When evil assails us, be strong to do right.

"In life's happy morning there's work to be done,
No time to be idle, God counts on each one;
With loyal endeavor we'll go in His might,
When evil assails us, be strong to do right."

"I had fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living. Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the Lord" (Psalm 27:13, 14).

THE CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD

His Word, and you will find harmony in that Word.

Romans 1:25 records, "Who changed the truth of God into a lie." Yes, this can be done. When one does this, destruction will come to him. "As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction" (2 Peter 3:16). The Bible has the power to save, and the power to destroy—save the believers and destroy the unbelievers. (2 Cor. 2:15, 16.)

The church finds Christ's orders in the Bible, the Bible only.

"lake of fire and brimstone," or destroyed by "the breath of his lips."

Eve disobeyed being innocent; you and I are not innocent! We see the vicissitudes caused by sins. Consequently, we should know enough not to sin and cause more vicissitudes to be heaped upon us. Thus, we see we are more sinful than Adam and Eve. Any one of us would have sinned the same as Eve did if we had been there, for we sin now with all our knowledge.

We can visualize Eve after she was driven out of Eden, crying and promising to be obedient if God would let her back into Eden. But all this came after she had stepped on a thorn, dashed her foot against a root or stone, or a wasp stung her. However, both she and we must stay in this great school of God's until Eden will be so glorious to us that we will forever be satisfied with it, never get tired of it. We must prove by our lives here that we will enjoy righteousness, and will not again yearn for naughtiness.

Let us all be "apt" students in God's great school, and graduate into the Eden restored, there to joy with God, Christ, angels, and each other.

THE MORAL LIFE

in him. Paul makes this clear, saying, "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?" (Rom. 10:14, 15).

The majority of professing believers will tell you Christ brought in a new doctrine, but remember, that whenever He was asked a question he replied, "What saith the scripture?" In John 7:16 Jesus said, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." He taught only what God had already taught through the prophets in the Old Testament, and that is where we go for much instruction concerning salvation.

We find the first gospel promise in Genesis 3:15. Abram received his promise of inheriting the earth in Genesis 12: 1-3. These promises were afterwards repeated and enlarged to Isaac and Jacob, later to Moses and David. In fact, these promises comprise the main theme of the Old Testament, and run through the whole Book. After one has studied these promises, and learned all about Christ who came to confirm them (Rom. 15:8), he is then beginning to understand how to obtain salvation. After believing all these things and being baptized (Acts 8:12), one is then eligible for eternal life when Christ comes to bestow it. Having gospel faith we live the moral life from choice, not looking for salvation through this means alone.

Belief in God's promises engenders love toward Him for His great goodness to us. He owes us nothing. Therefore, it is our duty to thank Him and to appreciate his condescension toward us. We always find our greatest pleasure in doing things for those we love on earth. Hence, when we know our heavenly Father as we know our earthly fathers, it is only natural that we should strive to please Him in every way possible. Having this desire to please God causes us to live the moral life, as men call it. In reality, the love of God changes our nature from the worship of material things to the love of spiritual things. May God help us to respond to the Spirit of Christ.

and there it is the object of the preposition "of." Wind is the thing that is being spoken of, and we are told what it does; just how it operates. "So is every one that is born of the Spirit." Can people in this life come and go as the wind? Christ did that very thing after He was born of the Spirit, and so shall we when "we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Keeping a Promise

Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

Is this matter of keeping a promise of any importance to you? Does it bear any significance to you? Most of us who are Christians would say immediately that of course it is important, and that we keep all the promises we make. But do we really fulfill all our promises? So often one makes a promise because he wishes to avoid an argument, even though he knows perfectly well that he has no intention whatever of doing what he has promised to do.

People look to us to do things, and are depending upon us to cooperate when they ask a favor of us, else they would not waste their time and ours with the matter. A promise kept is a step toward a steadier character, it wins respect from others, builds confidence, and last but never least, a fulfilled promise gives one a feeling of inner satisfaction—a feeling that something worth while has been done.

Little duties well fulfilled lead to bigger and broader tasks in all phases of life. If one keeps little promises people will soon learn that he can be depended upon, and sooner than we expect he will find that he is entrusted with responsibilities of great value, not only pertaining to his own life but to the lives and works of others. Confidence that what has been promised will soon be done is an essential factor in any work or employment. No employer wants a slipshod worker.

The ability to keep promises is no inherited trait. Anyone who will use his will power can learn to do the things he promises to do, no matter how distasteful and hard they may seem. If you are a promise breaker, try keeping just one promise you have made, and see if you don't have an inner glow of satisfaction.

God's promises are steady, sure, and never-failing. Why don't you try to have these same qualities of keeping a promise?

Life and Death

Mrs. Claibourne Lee, Hammond, La.

"As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. 15:22). The loving favor of God enters into the thought of this verse, for it is written that "he (Jesus) by the grace of God should taste death for every man."

Are we as Christians thankful to have the promise of eternal life? Do we appreciate that there is to be something better in the future life? Are we grateful for the prospect which lies before us and our fellow men?

Do you remember about the ten lepers who were healed by Jesus? Only one of them turned back and glorified God; only one healed of that terrible disease gave thanks. Let us be like the one leper, rather than unthankful like the nine. Let us truly appreciate God's goodness and love. It surely does not take much thought to appreciate what eternal life, instead of death, really means.

It is promised, concerning Christ, that we shall see Him, that we shall be with Him, that we shall reign with Him. All these blessings will be part of the eternal life to which we have been called. What is this hope of eternal life which is ours? The eternal life which God the Father, and our Lord Jesus possess—life in themselves—is to be the crown of life given to you and to me if we are faithful unto death. This is a Bible promise; it cannot fail.

God is immortal, Jesus Christ is immortal, and of us it is written, "We shall be like him." "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:54). Immortal life is the best possible gift we could receive.

In its gift, then, we see that God's grace supports us, and helps us to bear up under trials and sufferings.

Berean Motto

How many know what the Bereau motto is? Most of you, I hope, but how many find it possible to live up to such a motto as "Search the Scriptures Daily"? It can be done. Many have proved that it is possible, and several we know are reading the Bible through this year. You may, in your reading, question if you are getting any good from it. Let me give you an illustration.

Two women using baskets were attempting to dip water from a stream. One, realizing the futility of her efforts, became discouraged and quit. The other argued in this manner: "Tis true that we cannot carry water in our baskets, but see, the mud that was in the bottom of my basket is gone, and the basket is clean and white." This is an almost ludicrous illustration, nevertheless, a good one. When we read our Bibles we may not retain all we read, but we are cleansing ourselves.

In our Berean work we need to exercise our motto, primarily for our own good; secondarily, so that we can be ready always to give an answer to any questions that may be asked us in regard to our Bibles. Let us truly "Search the Scriptures Daily."

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (2 Cor. 5:17).

Saul Becomes a New Man

Saul thought he was pleasing God when he caught and punished Christians. He was going on a long journey, and he was sure he was going to catch Christians! Had he not gone to the high priest and been given letters to the synagogues at Damascus, "that if he found any of this way (Christians) . . . he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem"?

Damascus is often called the oldest city in the world in which people still live. Although from recent pictures it looks like any modern city, it is said that in the side streets one can find people living just about the same way others lived long years ago. Damascus is about one hundred forty miles from Jerusalem, measured straight across mountains, rivers, and valleys. So, no doubt, Saul had to go over twice that far to get to Damascus. From reading Acts 9:3, 4, 7, and 8, you will discover that Saul walked. He had no fine automobile to ride in, nor even a horse and buggy. How anxious he was to serve God, to walk all that distance to persecute Christians!

Our ECE Club members who study their daily lessons know that Saul suddenly saw a great light shining from heaven. What did Jesus say to him?

Our lesson shows that Saul's desire was to do God's will, for he, surprised and trembling, answered Jesus, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

How the Lord would enjoy hearing each of us ask from our hearts that same question! We trust Him to guide us day by day, and we learn His will from study and prayer.

Can anyone be a good farmer if all he knows about farming is how to milk a cow? Can anyone be a good house-keeper if all she knows how to do is to wash dishes? Neither can we be good Christians by only reading the Bible. We must put to daily use the ideals of right living we learn from our Bible study. We learn to decide right words to say from wrong ones, how to choose good friends to play with instead of bad ones, and to really be kind and helpful instead of only knowing how to be kind.

After Saul understood God's will be repented and believed and was baptized by immersion. Instead of doing evil to the Christians at Damascus, he preached Christ to them in the Jewish synayogues! Saul had become a new man! In Acts 13:9 we read that his name was changed to Paul. Why do you think his name was changed?

ECE Club News

Every week brings several new members. Generally, they send a postal card with their age, and other important facts and often tell me if they like our page, or what part they enjoy most.

Here are parts from one letter. Meet Pauline, Ruby, and Ishmael Humphreys of Royal, Arkansas. Pauline writes:

"I have been going to Sunday school at Bear for about five or six years. There used to be a village here called Bear. It was named from Bear Mountain. The land is pretty hilly, and there are some real mountains here; also hot springs. There are hunting and fishing grounds. There are many trees here. We live about fourteen miles from town. Ruby is six years of age. I am in the sixth grade, and thirteen years of age. Ishmael is nine, and is in the third grade. Our father teaches the adult class at Sunday school."

Here are two poems written by Ishmael:

"Jesus came to save from sin,
That eternity we'd win.
Let us love him day by day,
Let us never from Him stray."

"We should to our Lord be true, Honor Him in all we do; We should ever watch and pray That we may not from Him stray."

These above verses can be sung to the tune of "Jesus Loves Me."

Later on we will publish parts of the letters from other members.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD Near Tipp City, Ohio

Many here have been sick the past few weeks, and it was deemed advisable to hold the Berean meetings in different homes, rather than heat the church for only twenty or thirty. Last week we met with Sr. Callie Worley, where the class was organized and held weekly meetings about ten years ago. This week we plan to meet at the home of Bro. and Sr. Clyde Pearson. This will be a treat for Sr. Pearson who is still confined to her room most of the time.

Sr. Zelma Kessler, who has been suffering from bloodpoisoning, and Bro. Charles Doll, who has an ear abscess, are both recovering, although still confined to their beds.

Seven-and-one-half-pound Dennis Clyde arrived March 16, to make his home with Bro. and Sr. Harold Pearson.

Plans are being made for special Easter services, including a sunrise service and special speaking both morning and evening.

The sewing circle met March 9 with Sr. Verna Stine.

Mrs. E. M. Pearson, Reporter.

OUR DAY IN SOUTH BEND

In spite of the worst sleet storm in years, March 12 proved to be a very pleasant day. After negotiating the very treacherous high-ways we reached South Bend in time for Sunday school, and were pleased to find a very good attendance, and to observe the genuine interest in Bible study that was evident in the young adult class.

Attendance and interest at the sermon periods both morning and evening were good. These brethren deserve much credit for the loyal way in which they have carried forward the work in years past with no church building of their own.

It was our privilege on this occasion to inspect the building which they have now purhased and into which they hope soon to move. We wish to congratulate them most heartily We wish to congratulate them most heartily in the obtaining of such a splendid building in so desirable a location. When properly decorated this church home will be one of the finest in use by our denomination in the United States. May God continue to guide and bless these loyal workers.

SIMON PETER

"I am a sinful man, O Lord," was richer treasure to Peter than the "great multitude of which filled his net let down into the "Depart from me," prayed at the feet of his Lord, was more confession than command. Jesus, alert to gold previously hidden in the sand, replied, "Thou shalt eateh men." Then Peter forsook all, and followed him."

"In the midst of the sea, tossed with waves, in the fourth watch of the night," fear, splashing into the boat, quenched the faith of the crew. Then, as if bringing death, He looked like a phantom on the waves! "But straightway Jesus spake, . . . and Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water." Jesus said, "Come." Now, though the apostles all feared, and though Peter started to sink, it is wonderfully true that Peter "walked on the water, Over many months a multitude of thrilling, gripping, converting experiences, as unmis-takably real as the two mentioned developed in Peter a consecration and determination in Peter a consecration and determination that at last found victory in the cross. While Paul worked westward, it must not be forgotten that Peter, too, evangelized in fields untouched before. As a result of his work in the east he could prayerfully close his letter, "The church that is at Babylon, elected to the safe way and that you." Peace he gether with you, saluteth you; ... Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen" (1 Peter 5:13, 14).

It is a simple, unappreciative mind that to loudly hears the boastful crowing, but forgets the bitter tears. Why will men so often see the sand, so seldom see the gold?

That Peter led the Twelve there can be no doubt. When once the Twelve were questions of the same peter's ready voice.

tioned by Jesus, it was Peter's ready voice which said, "Thou art the Christ." Again when questioned he answered well for all, "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of

Called "blessed" by his Lord (Matt. 16:
17), promised the rule over a tribe (Matt. 19:28), taken to the scene of transfiguration (Matt. 17:1-9), admitted to the room of the camsel's resurrection (Mark 5:37-42), directed to eatch the tax-money fish (Matt. 17: 24-27), prayed for and forgiven by the Christ he denied (Luke 22:31-34, 54-62), witness of his Lord's resurrection (1 Cor. 15:5), leading evangelist at Pentecost (Acts 2:14), this is the man we shall study—the fisherman from Galilee who preached not only from Dan to Beer-sheba, but from Babylon to Rome.

PETER'S DOCTRINES

That Christ was alive, and alive with the immortal nature, was Peter's main burden to the Jews. (Acts 2:22-36; 1 Pet. 1:3.)

There was no question in Peter's mind, nor can any be found in his writings, about an eternal reward for the saints. (1 Pet. 1:4; 5:4, 10; 2 Pet. 1:4, 11.)

Peter was positive of Christ's return to this carth. (1 Pet. 1:7, 13; 2 Pet. 1:16-18; 3: 3.14.)

Peter was very plain in his teaching about repentance and water baptism. (Acts 2:38; 3:19-23; 10:47, 48; 1 Pet. 3:20, 21.)

Peter taught the judgment of death for the wicked, using such words as "destruction," and "perish." (2 Pet. 2:1, 12; 3:16.)

And not least among his doctrines was that of living a clean, faithful, charitable life. (1 Pet. 3:8-12.)

ALVERDA E. CHAPMAN

Mrs. Jacob Chapman of Camden, Ill., died March 8, at the home of her son, John E. Chapman. Sr. Chapman, formerly Alverda Ellen Potts, the daughter of Enos and Martha Tavener Potts, was born in Adams Co., Ohio, June 7, 1848. She was married in that county to Jacob Chapman in 1869. The newlyweds moved to Brown County, Ill., that same year, and then to a farm in Schuyler Co., in 1876, on which farm she has lived ever since.

Sr. Chapman heard the gospel and obeyed the call in baptism by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. Though she was confined to her bed for the last eleven months, a more patient and uncomplaining person has probably never been found.

She was the mother of nine children. Her husband and three children preceded her in death. The surviving children are: John E and Bert of Camden; William F. of Galesburg; Artie B. of Rushville; Mattie F. THE BIBLE

Give the children the Bible,
Give them the message of old;
Give them the full revelation,
All that God's servants have told.

Teach them the story of Eden; With the Creator begin; Tell of the garden of beauty, Marred by the entrance of sin.

Lead them past ages of dimness On to the clear, shining light; Tell how God constantly kindled Light in the darkness of night.

Farther and farther, then bring them, Till, at the dayspring of love, Angels and shepherds are hailing God's wonderful Gift from above.

Tell how His people have used it,
Spreading its message abroad,
Teaching each new generation,
Leading the children to God.

Salt in Lumps

No one likes salt in lumps, and 'tis a poor cook who serves it so. You may have five large pieces of meat, and a fifteen pound sack of salt—enough to preserve all the meat. If you put all the salt on one piece and nothing on the other four, the four will spoil and the one will not be fit to eat. Salt serves its purpose only when used rightly. Jesus said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Then let us not allow it to be in lumps! Spread the Word! Go-for evangelism!

Clear Sailing and?

The good ship MSE set sail on November 1, 1938, to establish on new soil and to cultivate on older soil the Word of God. Now, in its fifth month, a regular course has been established. Much good has already been done. Before us lie even greater opportunities, but listen—

SOS-SOS

Our ship "Minnesota State Evangelism" is sounding the distress call, for we're in shallow water, and in immediate danger of becoming grounded on the sands of financial distress. Under prevailing conditions we can hold out only until April 1. Nothing less than strong favorable winds and a rising tide of financial support will bring our ship into clear sailing again. Let everyone of us talk it up, do our biggest bit, and above all, pray for His work. Pray!

Are You Behind?

If those of us who have not yet paid our 1938 dues ($1.00 per year per member) will do so it will help a great deal. Our treasurer is Mrs. Ruth Hoskins, Eden Valley.

Faith Without Works

Do you remember the story of the little girl who, upon seeing her brother set out a trap for the birds, prayed that Jesus would keep the birds from entering the trap. Then, just to be sure, she prayed again that Jesus would prevent the trap from closing even if the birds did go in. Finally, recognizing her own ability, she went out and picked the trap to pieces. Don't expect God to bless this work if you are not doing all you personally can to make it a success.

Mite Boxes

We hope you not only might, but really will. Most of us are acquainted with our mite box system. If anyone is not, let us know and we will send information. You who do have them, please remember that we will be glad to send you a new one just as soon as you remit the savings of your old one.

A Gift to You

We now announce a very special offer. We have on hand a limited supply of the "History of the Minnesota Church of God Conference." This book contains a number of pictures as well as the written background of our church work. To as many of you as will send in a contribution to the State work, we will send a copy of this book. Be sure to get yours.

Beware! Be Where!

Be at St. Cloud, Minn., June 7-11, 1938, for another bigger and better Annual Conference of the Church of God in Minnesota. Bro. F. I. Austin of Chicago will be the guest speaker and teacher. The St. Cloud group is making preparations for a large crowd. Plan now to attend!

Crime School!

Several months ago the above title was displayed on the bill board of one of our local theaters. In this day when crime is on the increase, and the larger percentage of the criminals are young men, we are inclined to believe that for once the theater was advertised in its true light. We do agree that it could be a wonderful agency for good, but as in so many other things the Devil and his imps have the upper hand.

The reason theaters are such a great influence is because eighty per cent of what one learns is impressed upon the brain through the eye gate. If the theater were showing pictures that were always uplifting, then they would be a blessing, but when they glorify nude women, liquor, immorality, sex troubles, murderers, robberies, divorce, etc., they have become a curse to our nation, and especially to the plastic mind of youth. Too many feel as this following line suggests:

A little Sunday school lad, after seeing his first movie, rushed into the presence of his mother and said, "Oh! Mom, if you ever went to the movies once, you would never want to go to the prayer meeting again."

The nearer one gets to God the less he cares for the things of this world, and the more one gives himself to the things of this world the more out-of-place he feels in God's place of prayer.

Is it wrong? Why should real Christians be concerned about this thing of the world? Does a Christian ever ask, "Is it wrong to pray; or to go to church; or to sing His praises; or to help those who need?" We had better ask, "What is right about it?"

Even great crimes against society which may be committed because of the movies' influence might be forgiven, but the greatest crime of all is that the people who frequent these places of the world neglect the greatest thing of life—Eternal Salvation!

Was He Forsaken?

By Harvey U. Krogh, Jr.

MY God, MY God, why hast thou forsaken me?" These are words of our Savior as He hung upon the cross. They are also the words of David, the prophet and psalmist, in the twenty-second Psalm. This chapter is a prophecy of the sufferings of Christ. We sometimes wonder if Jesus may not have spoken many of the words of that Psalm in His hour of suffering.

The four Gospels give us seven things which Jesus spoke before His death. Matthew wrote to the Hebrews whose minds were steeped in the law of Moses. They understood the meaning of a sacrifice and the shedding of blood. Therefore, Matthew emphasized the fact that Christ actually gave His life as a sacrifice for sin.

Let us consider the sufferings of Christ. He had deep affection for His Father. He loved Him and obeyed Him. Jesus said they were one, their fellowship was so intimate. Yet, they were not the same, for there were two wills. Jesus confessed that it was not His own will that He was doing, but the will of the Father.

He was the Son of God and the Son of man. As He was a man, we can understand His suffering, His emotion, and His strong feelings with cries. As the Son of God we see Him always giving His strength, His time, and His service for man. And last, His life, the perfect sacrifice, the supreme gift, was given for the salvation of sinful man.

We see Jesus having completed His first two years of successful ministry—successful, yet not without trials and many difficulties. Then came His last year of preaching. The plot deepened, His enemies became more antagonistic, more desperate. He told His disciples of the things that were to come upon Him. They ate the last supper together, and He prayed the blessed prayer of John seventeen. They crossed the brook Cedron, and went into the Garden of Gethsemane. Then came the great struggle of our Savior, who was victor when He steadfastly determined to do the will of His Father. The disciples slept. The soldiers assembled. Jesus was betrayed. His disciples then fled, and He was taken before the high priest and before the governor.

He went through the mockery of a trial, was scourged, beaten, buffeted, and spit upon. They mocked Him, crushed a crown of thorns on His head, and put a purple robe upon Him. They compelled Him to carry His cross to Golgotha, and there they crucified Him.

Darkness fell upon the whole world. He not only forgave His enemies, but prayed for them. In answer to the plea of the penitent thief He promised a place in paradise. Jesus commended His mother to the beloved disciple, and commended John to His mother. It was the bequest of Love. It was all that He had.

Then He "cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

Had God forsaken Him? No! He was cast down, but not utterly forsaken. He was allowed to die, but not to be lost. God had to withdraw His sustaining power from Him, else His soul could not have been poured out unto death. His lifeblood was shed that it might cover our sins, and that He might carry our iniquities into death and leave them beyond the camp.

Did God forsake Him? NO! For on the third day God called Him forth from the tomb to life and immortality, and has set on high and placed His name above every name.

Will God forsake you? Will Christ forsake you? No. He said, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

The centurion and others who saw these things said, "Truly this was the Son of God."

Oh, the darkness of sin!

Behold, Jesus the light of the world!

Where He Was Before

Jesus asked doubting Jews, "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" (John 6: 62). This verse demands study. It holds a pleasant surprise. Denied comparison with other texts, it seems to teach that Jesus pre-existed and was about to return to heaven. John 6:62 is no such bare bone. It is "meat in due season."

God does not require true faith to be founded upon a tangled conglomeration of incredible theories that men thump from Bible keys. There is harmonious music in John 6:62, not the discord that Jesus dethroned Himself to enter the womb of Mary, from whom His former immortal self was born the mortal Jesus who again became immortal for a return trip to heaven.

Can immortality become mortal? If Jesus was coequal with God in a pre-existent life, how could He have died? It takes no master theologian to discover that the pre-existence theory denies the actual death of Jesus. If Jesus did not actually die He did not actually rise, and "if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins."

Study with us. We shall surely find that God's Word—its own best interpreter—proves that John 6:62 teaches resurrection.

The Sign of the Prophet Jonas

Doubting Jews sought an unfailing sign that Jesus was the Messiah. Jesus said, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth" (Matt. 12:39, 40).

In Matthew 16:21 Jesus plainly foretold that He would "suffer... be killed, and be raised again the third day." The whale could not digest Jonah. The grave could not hold Jesus "whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it" (Acts 2:24)—the prophecy promised, "neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption."

Yes, doubting Jews were given an unfailing sign! The stone was rolled away. The tomb released its prey. "Behold my hands," said Jesus. A doubter had to believe; but Thomas was reproved a little with Jesus' words, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet believed."

But most of the Jews were too busy, too blind, too wicked, to see the "sign of the prophet Jonas." This time Nineveh did not repent. A plea had been made, "If one went unto them from the dead, they will repent" (Luke 16:30). But answer was made, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead" (v. 31)... "What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" Resurrection proved nothing to the blind!

"Ascend"—Anabaino—"Rise Up"

The word "ascend" in John 6:62 is anabaino, the same Greek word that is translated "rise up" in Revelation 13:1. With the authority of the Bible's own use of the word anabaino we try the "rise up" translation of it in the text that some have supposed proved the pre-existence theory. Here is the promised pleasant surprise:

"What and if ye shall see the Son of man rise up where he was before?"

In other words, Jesus was again promising the unfailing sign of His resurrection to prove His Messiahship; "the third day he shall rise again" (Matt. 20:19); it is "the sign of the prophet Jonas" (Matt. 12:39; 16:4). And that sign, His resurrection, is the only unfailing sign that Jesus promised to give to "an evil and adulterous generation." The apostles, and they alone, saw Jesus ascend into heaven, but ten thousand doubting Jews saw an empty tomb! Praise God for a risen and living Lord!

Clinched

Immediately after Jesus said He would "ascend up where he was before," He explained, "It is the spirit that quickeneth." Christ was "put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit" (1 Peter 3:18). Obviously, Jesus was made alive at resurrection, at which time according to the preceding verse He rose up "where he was before."

Bread From Heaven

Even as God supplied manna for Israel, Jesus is "the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread he shall live for ever" (John 6:51). None insist that Israel's manna actually poured from God's very throne. Rather, it was miraculously furnished. Likewise, Jesus "is the Lord from heaven." Feast on your gift from God! Dare any hunger for Egypt's "fish, . . . cucumbers, melons, . . . leeks, . . . onions, . . . garlick" (Num. 11:5)?

Some Predictions Concerning Easter

By F. L. Austin

IT WAS "very early in the morning" of the first of the week, Sunday, Nisan 17, when some women were startled before the door of the empty tomb. The world of that day was wholly ignorant of the marvelous things transpiring. A few lives had been saddened by the government's recent judgment against Jesus; another group, possibly larger, was gloatingly gleeful over the same condemnation; but humanity as a whole knew not, was wholly unconcerned.

Accepting Hebrews 10:19 as authoritative, it was at this early-in-the-morning hour when the resurrection of the God-anointed High Priest became the hour of the completion of His entrance into the holy of holies once for all time. In His death the veil of His flesh (v. 20) had been "rent from top to the bottom," but His journey through the temple to the holy of holies beyond the veil was not accomplished till "very early in the morning" of that particular first day of the week, which in that year was on Nisan 17.

How strikingly God had long previously pointed out that day—Nisan 17! And, as throughout the intervening centuries when God's sun dial annually pointed anew to the wave sheaf offering upon Nisan 17, so, on the resurrection morn of God's "only begotten Son," both Israelite and Gentile were equally unconcerned.

GOD'S PROPHETIC PASSOVER

Israel—the seed of Abraham, the people of God's covenant promises—had been under serfdom and bondage in Egypt. The appointed promised time for delivery was nearing. Nine plagues had covered the land. The strange, superhuman things which were daily transpiring had caused dread uncertainty in both bondmen and masters. The rulers insolently repudiated the name of God; Israel gradually grew in faith. To Moses God assured that after one more plague Egypt would release Israel. That plague was to be the death of the first-born son of each family.

But to the families of Israel God instructed that a yearling male lamb should be offered, and so used as to form identification marks of faith. This would release the first-born son from succumbing to the tenth plague—death. The lamb was to be free from all imperfections. It was to be selected upon Nisan 10; kept until the 14th; slain, and its blood applied. The record in Exodus 11 to 15 completes the narrative: Following midnight of Nisan 15, under a full moon, the Israelites took their journey. Looking back through the Hebrew Soli-lunar Calendar Table to the year of exodus, 2513 A.M., we learn that Nisan 15 fell on the day we call Friday. Israel hurried. Only three brief camps were pitched for hasty rest, the third being made late on Saturday at Pi-habiroth. Soon camp was hastily lifted, for the waters of the sea had parted asunder under the outstretched rod of Moses' faith, and Israel was marching between its liquid walls to his exodus.

It was "in the morning watch" of the first day of the week, Nisan 17, that the wheelless chariots greatly slowed the pursuing Egyptians, and Israel was putting foot on freedom's land—"very early in the morning." That which the Egyptians presumed would be certain death to Israel became their certain life.

What similarity! The same day of the month, the same day of the week, and "very early in the morning"!

A PROPHECY OF CHRIST'S EXODUS

Is it possible that the exodus which took place at the first Passover season in Egypt was also an "example" and "pattern" (as Hebrews 8:5 and 9:23 mention in regard to other matters) of the exodus of our Lord from "the street of that great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified"—an exodus which God provided Him at a later Passover?

Yes; verily.

To this agree the words of Moses and Elias in the vision of transfiguration, as recorded in Luke 9:30, 31, when "they spake of his decease (Greek—"exodus") which he should accomplish at Jerusalem."

True, Christ's exodus was, in a smaller sense, out of life into death. It was a "decease." But, in the real and greater sense, His exodus was from the holy status of life and activity into the status of life and activities represented by the holy of holies. This, just as Israel's exodus was, in the greater sense, out of a status of bondage into a status of liberty and blessing. While Israel went down through the sea—"were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea"—Christ went down through death, which was the rending of the veil of the flesh of Hebrews 10:20.

More to Follow

But there are still other exoduses to take place. One of them is sufficient to mention here. Turning to Jeremiah 16:14, 15, we read: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers."

That preparations for this prophesied exodus are this day rapidly advancing is (Please turn to page 11)

Jesus, the Light of the World

By George M. Siple

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

As WE view the life of Jesus while He was on earth we find that He was born in Bethlehem, raised in Nazareth, and began His work in Cana and Capernaum. His first words recorded in Scripture are found in Luke 2:49, "How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

Jesus' mother and Joseph went up to Jerusalem, as the custom was, each year to the feast of the Passover. This feast was the first of the annual festivals of the Hebrews to commemorate the exodus when the destroying angel, had passed over their first-born, and had smitten those of the Egyptians. Each year at this feast the paschal lambs were slain. Jesus, although only twelve years of age, was aware that the lamb was a type of Himself.

In those days people traveled on foot in large companies as they went to Jerusalem for the Passover. At this particular time when they started home, Jesus was not missed by His mother and Joseph, until they had gone a day's journey. They had supposed He was among the relatives and friends. When inquiry was made they found that He was not in the company, and they turned back and sought for Him three days, finally locating Him in the temple. The foregoing quotation was Jesus' reply to His mother's anxious inquiry as to where He had been while they had sorrowfully sought Him.

Jesus was found "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished" (2:46, 47). This plainly shows that Jesus was far in advance of the ordinary child at that age. "The child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him" (2:40), "and Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man" (2:52).

"Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbad him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him" (Matt. 3:13-15).

Christ was baptized to fulfill His personal mission on earth, as well as to be an example for true believers. His burial in the watery grave signified His willingness to die in order to make possible man's salvation. Christ was willing to suffer a horrible death in order to redeem sinful man from the curse pronounced upon him because of Adam's transgression.

"For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the heavens; who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, when he offered up himself" (Heb. 7:26, 27).

The life of Jesus combined in a threefold way the office of prophet, priest, and king. His prophecies pointed both to the time and manner of His work of redemption. His priestly office was shown in His atonement for the sins of men, and His kingly office appeared in His power of leading men to do His will for the good of all the people. To His church, He became prophet, priest, and king above all others who had held any of these offices. Jesus founded a system of morals that is still bearing fruit in the lives of His people.

Jesus was only an obscure Galilean wood carver, often called "the caprenter's son." His time on earth after baptism was short, though all are not agreed on the exact time. Jesus went about healing the sick, the lame, and the blind. There is no record that anyone that came to Him for help or healing was ever turned away. The only one He ever turned away was the tempter. "When he had fasted forty days and forty nights, he was afterward an hungred. And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread. But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:2-4). He was tempted and tried in many other ways, but ever stayed the sinless One.

When our Lord entered upon His ministry He was followed by great multitudes. He called teachers who were to assist Him in the work. The Twelve Apostles whom He selected were needed to assist Him in the great work of spreading the gospel. He ordained them to go forth to preach, and bestowed upon them a special gift of the Holy Spirit. This gift, more plentifully given on the day of Pentecost, enabled them to work miracles, and to speak with tongues.

The life and message of Jesus comprise the main subject matter of the New Testament, and much of the prophecies of the Old Testament. Moses and the prophets held up to view a person who was to appear to do wonderful works: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9:6);

"There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots" (Isa. 11:1);

"But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel" (Micah 5.2);

"And he (God) said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth" (Isa. 49:6);

"He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth" (Isa. 53:7);

"I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him, and there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed" (Dan. 7:13, 14).

Much of the foregoing prophecies has already been fulfilled, when our Savior came the first time. Jesus was born in Bethlehem from the tribe of Judah, and has already proved Himself a light to the Gentiles. He also suffered and died a humble death upon the cross that He might be a redeemer for the sins of the world.

The prophecies in regard to His second coming, at which time He will set up His kingdom on David's throne in the New Jerusalem, are still to be fulfilled. We can rest assured that just as surely as He came the first time exactly as was prophesied, He will also come the second time. He will then reward all those who have faithfully served Him until the end of their lives, or until the return of our Lord from heaven. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:16, 17).

John tells us, "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven" (John 3:13). David was a man after God's own heart, yet after he had been dead for centuries,

I Have Resurrection Hope! Have You?

By J. H. Anderson

I AM a mortal man under the sentence of death. Soon I must fall asleep, and return to the dust. (Gen. 3:19; Eccl. 9:10; Rom. 5:12.) I love life, and should like to live forever. I do not want to die, and go to the grave where there is no knowledge of God, no love, no joy.

Shall I live again? (Job 14:14.) The Bible, God's Book, teaches that God's people will live again—live where there will be no death. (John 14:19; Rev. 21:1-4.) What a wonderful message of hope! How it encourages me!

The preacher, however, tells me the Bible is full of errors, mistranslations, and my hope fades away; for if the Book is full of errors, then all its promises that God's dead shall live again may not mean anything. However, I go to the Word, and find these passages that lead me to believe God's Word is true: Matthew 5:17, 18; John 10:35; 2 Peter 1:19; 2 Timothy 3:15-17. Yes, I believe the Bible is all inspired, and that it is the truth. (John 17:17.) Thank God, that I do believe His Word.

How and when shall I live again? Jesus tells me that His people will live again when He comes. (Luke 14:14.) Paul tells me the same. (1 Cor. 15:21-23.) John points out a great blessing to come to those who shall be made alive when Jesus comes. (Rev. 20:4-6.)

How can anyone bring me to life after I have returned to dust? Doubts assail one. Will God be able to take the dust and from it make me again—make me in the likeness of Christ? (1 John 3:1-3.) I find that nature is one of God's witnesses, and that the Bible is the other—that God has two. (Matt. 18:16; Acts 1:8; Psalm 19:1-6.) All around me the trees are budding, flowers blooming, plants coming out of the ground into a new life, from seed that has been in the dust during the long winter months. Nature says there is a new life. Faith says, "Yes, God is bringing new life from the dust and will give new life to His people by bringing them from the dust." (Isa. 26:19.)

As I think about coming from the dust into immortal, life, if a doubt comes into my mind, then Acts 26:8 fills my mind with renewed hope. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" God made this universe with all its many planets, suns, etc., and made them out of things that do not appear. (Heb. 11:3.) Yes, our God who made this universe has given His Son the power to resurrect us, give us eternal life. (Matt. 28:18; Rom. 14:9; Rev. 1:18; John 10:27, 28; 14:19.)

Is there anything that I must do to be raised like Jesus, immortal? Yes! "For if we have been planted (by baptism) together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection" (Rom. 6:5).

Reader, I have been. Have you?

What About Bible Miracles?

A Reply to the Rationalist Objector

By R. H. Judd

NEARLY twenty-six hundred years ago Scripture prophesied through the Prophet Daniel that "knowledge shall increase" (Dan. 12:4). During that whole period from then until very recent times scarcely any perceptible increase in knowledge transpired; certainly nothing that could be described as epoch-making in importance. The science of today is but of yesterday. Yet, strangely enough, it is from the standpoint of science (modern knowledge) that attempts are now made to overthrow the Scriptures which have until now stood the tests of some three thousand years. Did Scripture thus foretell its own overthrow through the channels of science? We think not, for "the word of God . . . liveth and abideth for ever" (1 Peter 1:23).

Probably in no other sphere of Scripture testimony has there been a more united attack than that directed against Bible miracles. Professors and students, atheists and infidels, and even ministers and clergy have united in proclaiming their disbelief in miracles. Some earnest believers in the Bible as the Word of God, still maintain their belief in miracles, but they are, generally speaking, utterly unable to give any cogent reason for their belief, other than their belief in God as the Author of the Book. Such testimony, owing to their wider knowledge of the Bible, may be in a measure satisfactory to themselves, but it obviously cannot suffice to those who are ignorant of the wonders that lie between its covers.

It must be conceded that the miracles of the Bible occupy a sufficiently prominent position to call for explanation, and that it is by no means unreasonable that from among leaders of religious thought there should be expected a satisfying and convincing answer to those in doubt.

Modern knowledge under the exceedingly modern name of "science" has, with an arrogance almost unsurpassed, assumed the role of "final authority" which it does not possess. It has, to all practical purposes, put God out of the reckoning, and substituted a code of laws which scientists term "natural" and "immutable," and with this as their basis they have decreed, like Professor Foster of the Chicago University, that "a miracle cannot be admitted."

Mr. Lecky in his History of the Rationalists contends that "as knowledge has advanced belief in miracles has declined." We may add that even this does not embrace the present extent of disbelief in miracles. It is also contended "that with further advance in knowledge belief in miracles will absolutely disappear." Mr. Laing says, "If Christianity exists at all, it will exist without miracles."

R. H. Judd

We are told by these "rationalists" that miracles are incredible because "they are contrary to universal experience, and are at variance with the laws of nature." In making these statements we think that we have interpreted fairly the mind of these objectors, whether they be scientist, minister, or layman. Mr. Laing says, "Former ages saw miracles everywhere, the age in which we live sees them nowhere." Mr. Blatchford, the well known atheist, says, "The Christian's Bible is full of miracles," and still another, "In the Old Testament miracles occur incessantly."

We wish to notice two lines of thought expressed here, and to examine the correctness of them, for, as they are the basis of rationalistic objections to miracles, to disprove their accuracy will go far to disprove their objections.

To say that miracles are contrary to experience is claiming a conclusion before the matter has been investigated, because, according to the Old Testament, they were not contrary to the experience of the men of those times. There may be many things in your experience to which I am a stranger, and conditions which are perfectly natural to the Arctic Circle are unknown at the equator. To say that miracles are at variance with the laws of nature amounts to an egotistical claim that the speaker is in possession of all the laws of nature, which is obviously not the case. Further, the only source from which "experience" can be tested, is human testimony. The same objector asks, "Why, if God furnished proofs to one generation, did He not ordain that those proofs should be established for all time beyond the possibility of cavil?" But the objector surely knows that so long as human nature is what it is, men will never cease to cavil, no matter what the issue. Besides, if every generation were furnished with "miraculous proofs" these would cease to be miraculous.

Let us call renewed attention to one vitally important fact which the objector to miracles has failed to notice, and which the Bible has not left out, namely, that "God is." The Bible starts with the words, "In the beginning God." We might stop there, insofar as the existence of God is concerned as one insurmountable difficulty to the infidel and doubter, but for its intimate relation to a phase of the question that seems to have been overlooked by those who in their certainty of the unchangeableness of nature's laws have deduced therefrom the supposed axiom that "miracles cannot happen." Had nature's laws continued to carry on in nature's way, we never would have had the miracles of the tomato, the navel orange, the Burbank plum, the magnificent British draft horse and carriage horse, and all the varied species so wonderfully adapted to human needs. Bronze, aluminum, and stainless steel would never have come into existence. But, a new law came into being (not by the hand of nature, for nature never has and never will create-God alone can create) through the ingenuity of man. This new law in the person of man's will controls the laws of nature, as nature left to its unchangeable laws could never have been made to deviate from its immutable course. Thus, we see that the objector to miracles has not only declared theoretically his personal acquaintance with all law, but he has by his very attitude declared that no new law can come into being, the absurdity of which does not need to be pointed out.

We now consider the statement that "the Bible is full of miracles," and we ask, Is the statement true? Let us sec.

We think that it will be readily granted that the supposed supernatural as exemplified by legend, myth, and miracle occurs in nearly all religions as their starting point, and that the rationalists have themselves stated this to be the case. Strangely enough, the Bible is in this respect uniquely different! During the two thousand five hundred years from creation to the exodus there is not recorded any

The Germ That Raises the Dead

By Wilsie J. McKnight

FARMER on his knees was digging into the soil. A A few days before he had planted corn. Why should that make him dig in the soil? When he worked hard that spring-plowing, harrowing, and planting-he looked forward to the next fall for the fruit of his labor. As surely as he had prepared the soil and planted the seed corn, he had expected it to come forth from the ground in the form of a plant. He had faith that the seed would be sprouting, hence, was digging to see how soon it would be up.

When seed is planted, it must decay before it can come forth in a new plant. In the very end of the seed is a minute particle called the "germ," and it has life. In the spring, when the conditions are right, this germ will send forth a shoot, and the decayed material of the seed gives food to the germ and shoot, hence, vanishing in the new plant. A person can see no resemblance between the corn that is planted and the corn that comes forth as a plant, yet the one comes up in the other.

Such is the story of the resurrection. When Paul explained the resurrection of the dead to the Corinthians, he used this illustration of the seed planted in the ground: "But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die (the seed decays): and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat or of some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. . . . So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. . . . It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. . . . And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. . . . For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality" (1 Cor. 15:35-53).

The resurrection is like the plant. The righteous dead (for Paul uses this illustration for the righteous only) will come forth in the spring of God's kingdom. We will then have a body as superior from this one, as the new plant which comes forth in the spring is superior to the seed planted. Even those who are in the rapture and have their bodies changed immediately (v. 51 and 1 Thess. 4:16), must die to this body, though it is "in a moment," and receive the immortal body, as we know "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption" (v. 50).

If the resurrection of the righteous is like the seed, what is the germ that brings life to them in the spring? It is the Word of God. In the parable of the sower (Luke 8) the seed that is sown is the Word of God (v. 11), and the ground is our hearts (v. 12). If the ground is cold and unproductive the germ will die, but if warm and fertile the seed will grow.

When we go into the grave in death, what can we take with us? Regardless of its value, we can take nothing that we may have accumulated in this world, except the Word of God. This Word of God must be planted in our hearts. and by its abiding in the heart at death, we shall be raised in the spring-"being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever" (1 Peter 1:23).

We may feel that we have the Word of God in us if we know of His plan of salvation and truths that are set forth in His Word. But is that all? No, for how can the Word be alive within us unless we obey it, unless it controls us in all our thinking and our actions? We might understand all the mysteries set forth, and it would do us no good unless we conformed our lives to it. Therefore, may we keep the seed in our hearts, and the germ alive, that it may go with us into the ground and bear us forth in the resurrection.

Nothing but God's Word through Jesus Christ can raise the dead. Job said, "Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.'

Betraying the Lord That Bought Them

By R. A. Curtis

"There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresics, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction."

A PPARENTLY, "there is no new thing under the sun." (Eccl. 1:9, 10.) Even the ties of consanguinity were ruthlessly swept away at the beginning of Adam's race when Cain killed his brother Abel. (Gen. 4:1-8.)

At the beginning of Christ's ministry, "one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot," sought opportunity to betray Him. (Matt. 26:14-16.) If "all these are the beginning of sorrows," what may we expect at the culmination of "the times of the Gentiles"? (Matt. 24:8, 9; Luke 21: 24-27.) Would your convictions of truth and loyalty to Jesus, "unto death" in prison walls, not lead to a betrayal? (John 8:32, 36; 17:2, 3; Rev. 2:10.) "There are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him. And he said, Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father. From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him. Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life" (John 6:64-68). When "faith and a good conscience" is voluntarily put away; then shipwreck of all that makes life hopeful, happy, and desirable, is swept away as "with the besom of destruction." (1 Tim. 1:19; Isa. 14:23, 26, 27.)

Jesus has given us His blessed assurance to minimize our trouble, and quiet our fears, saying, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:27; Phil. 4:6, 7.)

"The care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word," and cause many professed followers of Jesus to betray their allegiance to Him, and to become unfruitful and offended. (Matt. 13:21, 22.) "Looking back," with longing for the transitory "pleasures of sin," will render many unfit "for the kingdom of God." (Luke 9:62; Heb. 6:4-6; Matt. 12:31, 32.)

If you would not walk in the shadows, you must keep your face to the sun. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:12).

The antediluvian age, with its "evil" thoughts, and world-wide "violence," is rapidly becoming a prototype of "this present evil world." (Gen. 6:5, 13; Gal. 1:3-5; Matt. 24:37-42.) Of Adam's race living in Noah's time, only eight persons were saved in the ark. (1 Peter 3:18-20.) Although the saved ones were few, the rest outside the ark "were destroyed from the earth." (Gen. 7:21-23.)

"He is a coward, who dare not be In the right, with two or three."

This truth is amply verified by Jesus, who is the personification of Truth. (Matt. 18:20; John 14:6.) "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad" (Matt. 12:30). "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels" (Mark 8:38). "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." (Josh. 24:15; 1 Kings 18:21; Deut. 30:19.)

If you have chosen Jesus as the captain of your salvation, "will ye also go away?" To do so is betrayal. Judas was a betrayer. Would you choose his end? "Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!" (Matt. 18:7; 26:24; 24:7-13.) "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being lead away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness." (2 Peter 3:17; Eph. 4:13-16.) "But that which ye have already hold fast till I come" (Rev. 2:25).

"How blessed, as the years pass by While pilgrims here we roam, To leave the desert track behind, To find we're nearing home; Not looking back with vain regret, But looking up with praise, And looking on that bless'd day When Christ His own will raise-And we, the living, shall be changed, And rise to meet our Lord. Oh, blessed, bright, and glorious hope, What joy it doth afford; And 'hitherto' our hearts can say, Our God has been our stay. Henceforth in restful trust in Him We tread our pilgrim way. Upon the barren desert sand Falls manna from above, And every footstep of the way Proves God's unchanging love. So while our days are passing by, Our days of testing here, We tread in perfect peace our way, Till Jesus shall appear."

Death Is Swallowed Up in Victory

By James A. Patrick

SOME time ago I heard a funeral sermon with the foregoing caption as a text. For a lesson the minister read 1 Corinthians 15:51-58, in which the words quoted above occur, and for the believer in the immortality of the soul he gave a very good sermon; the best I think I ever heard from that standpoint. He read about every text that is ever used in the attempt to prove that "Saints go to heaven when they die when they die, Saints go to heaven when they die. Sinners go to hell and stay there a spell, Brought back and judged to find out why."

The foregoing stanza of poetry was composed by the late Brother A. E. Hatch, the blind minister who was among us some years ago.

The man who preached the funeral sermon tried very hard to prove that the saints go to heaven when they die, but he said nothing about the sinner or where he goes. That question is not discussed very often any more by the believers in the immortality of the soul, for it is rather an embarrassing question to most of them.

The minister mentioned in the foregoing stood over that dead woman and repeated his text over and over again, carrying the idea that she, instead of being dead, had gained the victory over death.

Let us examine some scriptures to see if such conclusions can be honestly drawn.

David, a man after God's own heart, when the time "drew near that he should die," said to his son Solomon, "I go the way of all the earth." If we can find where David went in death, we will know where all the people of the earth go. In 1 Kings 2:10 we read, "So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David." In Acts 2:29 Peter says, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day." And in Acts 13:36 we find these words, "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers and saw corruption."

· Paul and Peter tell us where David did go, and Peter tells us where he did not go. Listen: "David is not ascended into the heavens" (Acts 2:34). And remember, David said he was going the way of all the earth.

I heard the same minister mentioned in the foregoing say of a man whose funeral sermon he preached, "He has been called to the Master's side." The Master is in heaven. Up till Jesus' time on earth, no man had ascended into heaven, according to Acts 2:34. If this minister spoke the truth, there must have been quite a change made after Jesus' time.

Is it not strange that people will cling so tenaciously to a doctrine that has no Scriptural foundation?

One of my Sunday school class recently said, "Mr. Patrick, you are spoiling all our pretty pictures." They believe that their loved ones go to heaven at death, and they make, what to them is a pretty picture of them floating away to heaven. But to me that is not a "pretty picture' at all. All I have known of my loved ones are their physical bodies which I can caress and love. If at death they change to something that would scare most people stiff to meet, it doesn't seem to me that it is a very "pretty picture." I told the class if the truth was spoiling their pictures, they ought to be spoiled.

I have refused to tell them what I think or believe, but when they ask questions I quote scriptures to answer them.

The lady who made the statement in the foregoing, later asked, "Mr. Patrick, don't we ever go to heaven where God is?" In answer, I had them take pencil and paper and I gave them the texts that are used pro and con. It was since that that she said I was spoiling their pictures. I give them the scriptures, because I feel that the Bible can take care of itself.

Now let us consider the lesson the preacher read for the basis of his funeral sermon: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a mo ment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump (when? at the last trump!): for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. . . . Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" (1 Cor. 15:51-55).

When is all this to take place? At the last trump! How could anyone read this beautiful language, and then stand over a dead woman and say that she had swallowed up death in victory? Death was actually victorious over her. Not till the last trump can anyone be victorious over death.

Of course the preacher was trying to comfort the mourning relatives and friends, but he went at it in a different way than Paul did. Paul said, "Comfort one another with these words." What words? "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven... with the trump of God," the dead will be raised, the living will be changed, and all will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. (1 Thess 4:16, 17.) That will bring the "far more exceeding and eternal weigh of glory" Paul speaks of in 2 Corinthians 4:17. And the prophet of old adds his word: "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from oft all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it" (Isa. 25:8). How will the Lord do this? "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction" (Hosea 13:14).

If, when people die, death is swallowed up in victory, how could God redeem them from death? Why would He be death's plagues, and be the grave's destruction if death is victory over death? Yes, and why would He call death an enemy, and say, "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death"?

Dear brethren, it is too bad that we are not putting forth more of an effort to destroy this God-dishonoring doctrine: the doctrine that makes of Him a liar, because "he that believeth not God hath made him a liar" (1 John 5:10).

FOR YOU AND ME

By Edith Andrew Burchell

Jesus softly tells me
He died on Calvary,
So that the world could see
He shed His blood,
For you and me,

Come, weary and distressed,
Lean thou thy head upon His breast,
And He will give thee rest;
He shed His blood,
For you and me.

We know that God is Love, He watcheth us from realms above, He knoweth all our fears, Sometime He'll wipe away all tears.

He 'rose from out the tomb,
The stone was rolled away,
He conquered Death—Hell and the Grave,
On Easter Day.

we read, "David is not ascended into the heavens" (Acts 2:34). Only Christ, the "Sun of righteousness" looks down upon us from the sky. From that exalted position He shall yet come to bless His waiting people. Jesus says, "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12). Earth's clouds will then be scattered, and Jesus, "the light of the world," shall shine in His fullness.

MARKS

By D. C. R.

EASTER is here. Thoughts of many are turned to perhaps their one annual appearance in some church. For some it is their semiannual showing, but for faithful ones it marks another year for Christ in which He has had the preeminence.

Naturally, on Easter we think of the cross and Christ's love for us. Let us look a little deeper at those marks, marks, as it were, of identification. In Luke 24:40 we read, "When he (Jesus) had thus spoken, he shewed them his hands and his feet." There we have Christ showing His identification marks to His fellow workers.

Christ was the sacrifice for our sins, just as the lamb offering in the Old Testament typified. In Numbers 28:3 we find commandment concerning two lambs without spot (or marks) for a burnt offering. In Christ we have the sinless one—the one not marked—becoming marked for us.

In Romans 3:23 we read, "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." We are marked from our birth—marked with the sin of our foreparents, Adam and Eve. In Africa many are marked with the tribal signs all over their bodies, some just on their faces. All are marks of identification, telling what tribe the individuals belong to. Paul says, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus" (Gal 6:17). In the tribulation period many will be marked with the mark of the beast on their foreheads. (Rev. 13:16.)

Let us trust in the marks of our Savior's hands, side, and feet, and the fullness of His sacrifice on Calvary. Then He will not say of us, "Thine iniquity is marked before me." Best of all let us be ensamples of Christian love and duty, until others can truthfully say, "Mark them" for examples. (Phil. 3:17.)

When you tithe your increase you are not helping the Lord as much as you are helping yourself. That, of course, is not the attitude a true tither takes, but God really does not need your service, seeing that He is Lord of heaven and earth. God has given us the wonderful privilege of sharing in His work and also sharing in His glorious riches. Can we afford to let such an opportunity go by?

WHAT ABOUT BIBLE MIRACLES?

miracle in the commonly accepted sense of the word. We repeat, two thousand five hundred years without a miracle, and yet we are told that in the Bible miracles occur incessantly! Again, in the golden age of David and Solomon there were no miracles. We then come down the stream of time for two hundred years to find that miracles lie in another group during the days of Elijah and Elisha. Then, there is another period in which there were no miracles until the Babylonian captivity, and from that time on, for a period of six hundred years until the New Testament opens, no miracles are recorded. We thus see that miracles are not incessant, and that the Bible is not "full of them." They lie in well-defined historical groups, and he who says that the Bible is erammed with them misstates the case.

Why do miracles occur in groups? The question is reasonable, and requires an answer. Before giving our answer we wish to point out one important consideration. It will be noticed that in the Revised Version the word "miracles" is often replaced by the words "mighty works," "powers," and "signs." The last named is certainly the most frequent. Strictly speaking, in the Bible sense, a miracle is a "sign." A miracle wrought for the purpose of merely ereating astonishment is of no value. To be of value it must have relation to some purpose. Hence, according to the Bible miracles are "signs."

A careful study will show that miracles were wrought primarily for the people of Israel in relation to the kingdom of Israel with the Lord Jehovah as King. Only incidentally were outside nations involved. Thus, miracles generally occurred during the establishment, or just prior to the establishment of the kingdom. The same is true of the New Testament, for it first presents Jesus the Christ as the King destined to rule, and you will find that when miracles were performed by Him, the cry was often raised that He was "the son of David." When the words "he shall save his people from their sins" are quoted they are mistakenly supposed to refer chiefly, if not solely, to moral salvation, but "his people" has undoubted reference to His own race. Moral salvation is unquestionably included, but that without the attainment of perfect salvation can be of no permanent value. Christ's answers to the Pharisees in reference to the man let down through the roof in order that he might be healed, shows clearly that He who can rightfully pardon sin, can, must, and will remove all the consequences of it.

We would call attention to the fact that the Scripture nowhere endeavors to explain miracles. The fact of the miracle alone is stated. Even Paul, looking down the whole vista of the past, does not explain the modus operandi of miracles, but he does define them, and his definition is significant. He calls them "the powers of the age to come" (Heb. 6:5). All miracles wrought, including those by Jesus the Christ, are presented as earnests and pledges of "the age to come"—a phrase Christ Himself makes use of. Prophecy distinctly declares that the ushering in of that kingdom (as in the earlier one) will be accompanied by "signs" and "wonders" in heaven and on earth.

There is possibly one exception to the foregoing statement that the Scripture nowhere endeavors to explain miracles, nor does it except in the sense stated by Peter in Acts 2:22 with reference to the miracles of Christ, which are to most of us perhaps the most wonderful. There it is said "God did" the miracles, signs, and wonders "by him." Thus, we are again brought to our starting point as expressed in the Bible, "In the beginning God."

Before the rationalist seeks to discount the miracles of the Bible let him first explain the wonderful fact which lies before him, namely, that in this Book—the Bible—covering centuries of time, there is carried forward by different authors without possibility of collusion, a definite plan expressing a definite purpose with regard to miracles. One Author alone could perform that, and that Author is God Himself.

unquestioned. And when it starts not even the whole world, of which Egypt was a type, can stay its progress or abbreviate its completeness. Related thereto are many, many other phases of God's revealed plan. For instance:

Moses, God's announced leader for Israel, first fled Egypt—an exodus—for "a far country" where he tended sheep. Christ, God's true Leader, has gone to a far country. He, too, is caring for His "fold."

Moses returned to his charge, and made ready for delivering Israel, which deliverance God knew would be on Nisan 10 to 17. Jesus, the true Leader, Himself received deliverance Nisan 10 to 17. He, too, is coming back to redeem Israel anew. It will be a permanent exodus unto abiding blessings.

ARE HEBREW FEAST DAYS PROPHETIC?

Several feasts were established by the Father to be solemnized yearly by Israel. Surely past remembrances were not all that were referred to by those annual solemn occasions. The Passover in Egypt pointed to a greater and future Passover for Christ; Pentecost, to a future Pentecost; Tabernacles, also to a future Tabernacles. It becomes more and more startling that each of these several feasts possibly point prophetically also to events yet in our future.

The world is looking for Christ to return—as did Moses—and gather His first-born lambs for service unto a new-made Israel. Will that be at some Passover anniversary? Scriptural indications are that Christ and His first-born church will lead Israel from his present world bondage to the liberty of God's righteousness. May it be that the prior Passovers prophesy of some future Passover when an exodus of far more comprehensive proportions will be occasion for "the song of Moses and of the Lamb" to thrill many seasides?

ATTENTION!

Let us watch the approaches to all Hebrew yearly convocations which God commanded to be observed. (This year's Passover season of Nisan 10 to 17 falls on our March 30 to April 6.) They probably are prophetic of consummations suggested by their former beginnings. In a sense, let us discontinue so much concern about the "shadows" of the past and focus attention upon the approaching realities of the eternal future.

Thoughts on Easter

Easter, the greatest of Christian holidays, is with us once again. Just what do we mean by Easter, and what does it signify to us? That question might be answered differently by various people. Let us consider what these ideas might be.

To the "socialite"—one who is oftentimes known as a member of the four hundred-Easter is merely the time when one puts away his old clothes that he has been wearing all winter, and dons new spring outfits. The Easter parade down Fifth Avenue in New York City is known the world over for its styles. The clothing that is worn there on Easter Day really sets the style for clothes that are to be worn by others all spring and summer. Women (and the men as well) plan for months ahead what they are going to wear on this day. To most of them the fact that Christianity is celebrating the resurrection of Christ, has but a remote connection with the Easter holiday. To a lesser extent, people everywhere are bitten by the new-clothes bug on this great day. No doubt all of us who possibly can will have new suits, hats, shirts, dresses, and various other things to wear Easter Sunday.

If we were to ask a child what he thought of on Easter, he would no doubt tell us that he thought of the eggs that the rabbit laid. Now I ask you, in all sincerity, what possible connection can eggs and rabbits have with this holy day? One encyclopedia tells us that eggs once signified the resurrection, but the rabbit part remains a mystery. Yet, every Easter, otherwise normal parents hide eggs, or otherwise do their best to convince their children that the rabbit laid the eggs. Why do they not tell them the truth? It is a wonderful story that they could tell their children—a story that would not be stretching the truth one bit.

In the United States there are thousands of people who profess to observe the ancient penitential rites of Lent. Lent is a period of forty days of fasting and sacrifice previous to Easter. There are probably a good many of these people who truly worship God during this period, but to a great many Easter is a day when they are at last free to do the things that they want to do. We know it to be true that even on Easter night many people have a dance to celebrate the ending of Lent, that had prevented them from having their regular dances. Easter to them marks the end of religious ceremonies that have grown tiresome. None of these ceremonies are mentioned in the Bible. In fact, Easter as we celebrate it is not taught in the Book. We celebrate it through custom.

Since the whole world celebrates Easter as the time of the resurrection of Christ, and since in the springtime when Easter comes the beauties of Nature are being resurrected after having laid dormant for many months, I see no reason why Christians should not observe this ancient feast day as the actual anniversary of Christ's resurrection. To us who believe that Christ died and rose again, Easter is the most important day in the year. Christmas is a great day, indeed, but not nearly so much as is Easter. To the Christian Easter is the day that he recognizes that he has a living God. Most other religions have gods that are dead, but Christianity does not. We have a living God who has imparted that life to His Son Jesus Christ, and who, in turn, has promised us that life if we are faithful to Him.

Are you going to worry whether or not you can afford as "nice" a hat as your neighbor's across the road? If you worry about such a trivial thing as that, you have not the true meaning of Easter. Rather should you worry whether or not you are living the Christlike life, so you will be recognized as one of His! Are you celebrating Easter hiding eggs so your youngsters can find them, and then telling them that the Easter bunny laid them? Shame on you, if you are! You had better be telling them the story of the resurrection of Christ, so that they will really know what Easter is.

Are you glad that Easter has come, so that you will no longer have to do without meat, or eardy, or something else that you enjoy very much? Rather than sacrificing these things during a part of the year, you had better heed Romans 12:1, and "present your bodies a living sacrifice" all of the time.

Are you thrilled at the thought that Jesus once was dead, but that He overcame the enemy death, and gave opportunity for all to live who are faithful to Him? If you are, then you are blessed of God. You are one of a very few who see in Easter a wonderful day. You are a real Christian, a rare specimen of humanity.

Let us appreciate the beauty of the resurrection, and do our utmost to observe this great anniversary with our minds on Jesus Christ, the Life-Giver.

"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the firstfruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. 15:20).

Paul Tells of the Risen Christ

How unhappy were the friends of Jesus when they found only an empty tomb! But when they learned that the Lord had risen, how happy they were!

Paul, in our lesson today, tells his friends about the risen Christ. Once more we are planning to meet at our various Sunday schools and churches to celebrate that most wonderful event in all the world.

Because Jesus rose from the dead on "the first day of the week," Christians have kept that day as the day to meet to worship Him.

Last week we learned how Saul was converted. As Paul, the apostle, he won many people to Christ. The people we study about today are some of those who had learned about Jesus through Paul's teachings.

When Paul wrote this letter to the Corinthians there were still many who could say, "I saw Jesus after His resurrection." Paul, too, was sure Jesus had risen from the dead. We know, through faith, that Christ lives and is in heaven at His Father's right hand.

It seems that some of the people at Corinth did not believe in the resurrection of Christ. Paul told them that Jesus was the "firstfruits" of the ones who slept, or the first to gain eternal life, and that He had conquered death. Because He lives, we, too, shall live with Him if we daily follow Him.

It is an interesting fact that the word "Easter" is found in Acts 12:4.

With all sincerity let us sing the first verse and chorus of this hymn by Jessie B. Pounds:

- "I know that my Redeemer liveth, And on the earth shall stand;
 - I know eternal life He giveth,
 That grace and pow'r are in His hand.
- "I know, I know that Jesus liveth, And on the earth shall stand;
 - I know, I know that life He giveth,
 That grace and pow'r are in His hand."

ILLINOIS CONFERENCE REPORT

The Illinois Quarterly Conference and spring board meeting held at Ripley March 25, 26, are now history. Every service was well attended. Seven other churches were represented: Eldorado, Oregon, Rockford, Dixon, St. Louis, Macomb, and Camden. The preachers present were: L. E. Conner, S. E. Magaw, Harvey Krogh, Jr., Paul C. Johnson, and our local pastor, Wilsie McKnight. Over a hundred attended the Sunday morning services, although it was raining hard. Seven Illinois board members were present and all the General Conference board.

We feel we have been strengthened much in the Lord's service by being thus blessed with this opportunity of meeting brethren from other churches. It is our prayer that this meeting truly glorified God. We can say with the Psalmist, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Mrs. Frank Laning, Seey.

"A GOOD NAME IS RATHER TO BE CHOSEN THAN GREAT RICHES"

When Victor Smith made his hazardous flight from South Africa to England, he was offered $5,000 if he would ask for a certain brand of whiskey as soon as he landed. He refused, $2,000 was offered him if he would say he smoked a certain brand of eigarettes on the way. Again he refused, $7,000 against a glass of whiskey and a package of eigarettes! He left Capetown at midnight. When dawn broke he saw a piece of paper, a note from his mother, and he read: "For I, the Lord thy God, will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not, I will help thee."—Selected from Church of God Messenger.

"GOLDEN STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS"

A Book Review

This is the title of a delightful volume of stories and attractively colored pictures for children from six years of age to ten, if read by themselves. They are stories that are interesting and uplifting as well, and may be read to tiny tots. For example, the story, "The Twins' Birthday," takes Robert and Roberta through a day at the zoo and ends with Mother telling them a good-night story about Noah and the animals in the ark.

Easy lessons in drawing are also found in this fine book. Several poems of simple lines, appealing to children, are included. Stories of Richard E. Byrd and Charles Lindbergh will be found of interest to both boys and girls. Daniel and his three companions also come in for their share of attention.

Attractively bound, 191 pages, all in all, it is an excellent birthday gift for that beloved child you wish to remember.

Written and compiled by C. L. Paddock, and published by the Pacific Press Publishing Association. For sale by National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill. Price $1.75.

PAUL, GEOMETRICIAN

The Apostle Paul is the Q. E. D. to Christianity. Either he saw the glorified Christ, or he did not. If he did not experience the Damascus Road vision, there is yet to be advanced a plausible explanation of his missionary life. On the other hand, if he did see and hear the ascended Christ whom he had before persecuted he would most surely live the very life that is so truly recorded of him. We challenge the craftiest skeptic to explain the conversion of Saul into Paul, in any other way than that which he personally said he was converted.

Only absolute persuasion, which in Paul's case required sight and conversation, could have led the one who once imprisoned Christians and then "compelled them to blaspheme" to at last say, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ" (Phil. 3:8). If the whipped, beaten, and stoned Paul was a farce, then show us a man who is true.

"Flattery is 90 per cent soap, and soap is 90 per cent lye."

Gleanings From the Field

Bro. C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Ont., reports the holding of a shower for two young people of his congregation whose coming marriage has been announced. They are Melvin Haines and Violet Snow. . . This is the correct season for showers, and for violets, but Snow had better change her name.

Many of the Oregon brethren motored to Dixon, Ill., Thursday evening, March 30, to hear Bro. G. E. Marsh of Grand Rapids, Mich., who had been invited by Bro. L. E. Conner to participate in the pre-Easter service. Bro. Marsh visited with us at The Herald office on Friday morning, and, accompanied with his son Arlen, returned home in the afternoon. We were glad to see you, Bro. Marsh.

Members of the Dixon and Oregon churches tendered a farewell to Bro. Arlen Marsh of the Oregon, Ill., church on Tuesday evening, March 28. Arlen will make his home with his parents, Bro. and Sr. G. E. Marsh, 2514 Oakley Ave. S.W., Grand Rapids, Mich. Mizpah! (Gen. 31:49.)

Bro. and Sr. W. V. Lansbery and Bro. and Sr. William Lansbery, all of Casey, Ill., recently visited the office force. Come again—August 1-13, if not before.

The Summer Training School will begin on July 5. Every church should send at least one student. We want workers.

Every congregation should have a pastor; it is more expensive to go without one.

Bro. Earl Brossard of Eden Valley, Minn., is slowly recovering from his long sickness. His family looks up.

Bro. and Sr. R. F. Dunbar of Delta, Ohio. have been in Battle Creek, Mich., for seven weeks, where Bro. Dunbar installed four 12-inch water wells for the city. They are now leaving for Lexington, Mich., and are planning their other spring work so as to be able to return home in time for Bro. S.J.Lindsay's visit in June for the annual series of meetings at the Delta church.

"We plan to attend General Conference next summer. . . . We are expecting to have Bro. James A. Patrick to preach at Brush Creek on Easter, and Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., to conduct a series of meetings in April."—Mrs. Earl Smith, Dayton, Ohio, Rt. 1.

They are good to read, worthy of your library, suitable for gifts, and cost only 25¢ each or $3.00 per dozen. What? Bro. W. H. Wilson's books, "The Destiny of Russia," and "The Revelation Made Easy to Understand." Get yours.

"There are fourteen in my non-member class, and all seem to be enthusiastic."—S. J. Lindsay.

With her order for The Restitution Herald to be sent to four new readers, Sr. F. T. Blyth of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, writes, "We hope these friends will get the inspiration and instruction from The Herald that we do."

"Keep up the good work. We are praying for you."—James A. Patrick.

Sr. Rowena Randall of St. Cloud, Minn., is visiting at the Hardesty home in Oregon, Ill.

Sr. Clara Freydl, 5421 Magnet Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, has just sent us seventeen new subscriptions. We do have missionaries!

INTERNATIONAL HOOKUP

That Paul lived nineteen centuries ago in no way affects the sound of his voice. He is heard in all nations, and loved by all races. In his program there is no static of tom-tom jazz, political gabble, or cookbook frivolism. His messages of "truth and soberness" have larger audiences than any other speaker, even from Rome, is able to boast of. Paul has a world hookup, and there is no authority among men that can put him off the air . . . But where is there even a whisper of Voltaire, Paine, or Ingersoll? Let book shelves support them; but the human heart holds Paul.

PAUL'S NAME IS LEGION

That Paul lives in the hearts of many people can be readily seen from the fact that his name is so frequently used. Paul once spoke of Timothy as his "dearly beloved son," but if Paul were alive today he would find a legion of sons whose names and lives reflect his own. That some have shamed the name in no sense detracts from the high purpose of their mothers who chose the name.

More Pauls have been so named by choice, than there are Joneses, Smiths, and Browns, all combined, whose names have come by birth.

FOUR GREAT CHAPTERS

From Paul's inspired pen came four of the Bible's outstanding chapters. They are:

(1) 1 Corinthians 13. As a prism separates what seems to be such common light into its various and gorgeous hues, so this chapter of Holy Writ—unrivalled in its picture of love—divides love, usually so loosely used, into its several grand and unfailing characteristics.

(2) 1 Corinthians 15. Resurrection, a life like Christ's, is here not only promised the Christian, but, lest some should think that

(2) 1 Corinthians 15. Resurrection, a life like Christ's, is here not only promised the Christian, but, lest some should think that Paul was but painting a picture of his own desire, he boldly reasons that if there is no resurrection his whole life of service has been wasted, and all Christian faith is vain.

(3) Romans 8. Here is freedom! Not a

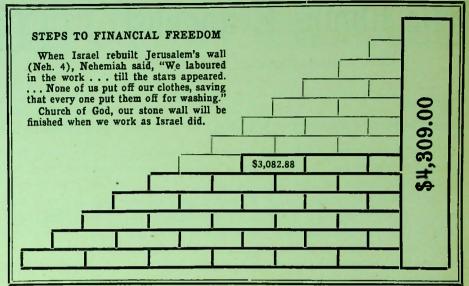

(3) Romans 8. Here is freedom! Not a freedom to sin, but freedom in Christ from having to die for one's own sins. Here is hope! Not a hope for more of the husks of lust, but of being glorified with Christ. Here is victory! Not by self, but by the power of Christ who loves and makes "intercession for us."

us."

(4) Hebrews 11. This is the Bible's great chapter on faith. Faith explains the universe. Faith of the ancients won God's favor. None can please God without it, and since the grace of. God is not restricted, faith is thereby proved to be a possible element of every life. Faith works. It has built an ark on dry ground and it has accepted torture when deliverance was at hand. Faith will have its sure reward when those already tested with those of the present who prove true are mad perfect together in the "better resurrection."

Quarterly Conference a Success

The day and a half meeting at the Ripley Church of God was well attended, there being about a hundred present at Sunday school although it rained all day.

On Saturday afternoon Bro. S. E. Magaw gave an interesting and helpful Bible lesson on "Our New Life by Faith in Christ." Saturday night the sermon given by the writer was on "The Things That Empower Us." Sunday morning Bro. Magaw gave a stirring message on the fulfillment of prophecy and how it should cause us to have great faith.

In the afternoon a short talk was given on the Illinois State Conference work, and Bro. L. E. Conner gave an explanation of the purpose and work of the National Bible Institution. Bro. Wilsie McKnight then spoke on "Baptism, a Stumbling-Block." The closing sermon was given by our General Conference president, Bro. L. E. Conner.

It might be of interest to know that all of the pastors of the State and the Sunday school superintendents from Oregon, Eldorado, and Rockford were present.

Next Quarterly Conference at Eldorado in June.

A Rumor, Take Notice!

We have heard from reliable sources that Ohio is planning to outnumber the Illinoisians at the Illinois Bible School and the General Conference. We would be glad if all of Ohio would come over for those blessed days of fellowship and study, but you and I had better be there, too. What do you think about it? Can you make it? If we begin right now to make plans to attend (if you have not been planning all of the time), I'm sure the Lord will help us so we will not have to miss the Bible School this year.

Don't forget the dates: August 1-13.

Start working on a plan to take several auto loads from your church or community. Share expenses and make the trip. It will be the best two weeks you ever spent. There will be some new teachers and speakers. Be sure to come.

The March of Dollars

The returns from the four hundred Dollar Day letters sent out has so far been one hundred eleven dollars. We wish to thank all of you who have sent in your dollars. If you have not yet sent yours in, it is not too late, and it can still be used to proclaim the gospel in the State.

Don't Forget

THE RESTITUTION HERALD is being sent to you once a month by the Illinois State Conference if you are not a subscriber. By sending one dollar you can receive the paper every week for nine months as a trial subscription. Join the "Read-It-All Club."

The Month's Question

We would be very glad to receive an answer to this question, as it is one in which we are deeply interested. Here it is: Do you know of any Christian that tithes who does not give more than his tithe to the Lord's service? We contend that a tither will always give more than his tithe. Are we right or wrong?

A Fact in Finance

God will not trust His children with very much of this world's goods until they have proved to Him that they know how to use a proper portion of those goods in His service.

One Solitary Life

"Here is a man who was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in another obscure village. He worked in a carpenter shop until He was thirty, and then for three years was an itinerant preacher. He never owned a home. He never had a family. He never went to college. He never put His foot inside a big city. He never traveled two hundred miles from the place He was born. He never did one of the things that usually accompany greatness. He had no credentials but Himself.

"While still a young man, the tide of public opinion turned against Him. His friends ran away. One of them denied Him. He was turned over to His enemies. He went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed upon a cross between two thieves. While He was dying His executioners gambled for the only piece of property He had on earth, and that was His coat. When He was dead, He was taken down and laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone, and today He is the centerpiece of the human race and the leader of the column of progress.

"I am far within the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that were ever built, and all the parliaments that ever sat, and all the kings that ever reigned, put together, have not affected the life of man upon this earth as powerfully as has that one Solitary Life."—Author unknown.

A Famine of Hearing the Word

By H. H. Hawkins

WHEN one thinks of a famine, he usually thinks of a general scarcity of food, due, as a rule, to the failure of crops or outbreaks of a plague.

Scripture records several famines in Palestine and the neighboring countries. However, the most remarkable one was that of seven years in and around Egypt, while Joseph was governor. It was distinguished for its duration, extent, and severity. Owing to the general fertility of Egypt, it was least expected in that territory.

In our everyday hurry have we ever stopped to think that there might be a famine of another type slowly creeping upon us. Let us turn to the sacred page of Amos 8:11: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord."

Amos was one of the greatest prophets, and, no doubt, was referring to the very day in which we are now living. It is claimed that the majority of church members of our land have little or no interest in spiritual things. They have more pleasure in worldly amusements and companionships than they have in Christian fellowship. Bible study and prayer mean little or nothing. In other words, they have no Christian testimony, and for this reason they have no joy in the Christian life. They seem to have a sense of security because their names are on some church record, but they assume no responsibilities for the spiritual life of the church.

The Apostle Paul has sounded a warning which seems to fit our present day. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:3, 4). Jesus asked, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). Again, in 2 Timothy 3:4, Paul speaks of those who are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God" ("preferring pleasure to God"—Moffatt).

Little do we realize this condition until we stop and take inventory of the day in which we are living. Statistics compiled some two years ago show that $890,000,000 were spent for amusements, as compared to $551,000,000 for churches and welfare institutions. For years, the amusement bill of America has been increasing far more rapidly than has the amount spent for the maintenance of religion.

When we lose the spirit of worship that our forefathers had, then amusements and similar things creep in, and they undermine the foundation of our faith, and society as well. In the last few years we have seen the mushroom growth of the so-called saloon or cafe in our cities and on our highways, and it is now claimed that there is a saloon for every 209 population.

When we see crowds pouring out of the theaters as compared to the small numbers coming out from places of worship, we can readily understand the words of the Prophet: "a famine of hearing the word." Please bear in mind that it is not a famine of God's Word, but of hearing the Word. The Bible is still the greatest seller of all books, and is found in practically every home, yet its pages are seldom searched.

Man may corrupt "the way" of the Lord, but he cannot improve it. Whenever he attempts to adapt it to meet his circumstances he converts it in "the way that leadeth to destruction" which is both broad and easy to walk in, being in perfect harmony with the lusts of the flesh. These are some of the things which cause humanity to drift into the sea of confusion and darkness, resulting in ignorance and unbelief, because people have become "alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them."

People of today are very much like those of old when the hardness of their hearts caused Israel to become "a stiffnecked people" who wandered from God's ways, statutes, and covenants. Today, we find many whose time is so taken up with the things of the world that they have little or no time for the Word (Please turn to page 11)

Truth Spiritualized

One handy and popular way to dodge truth is to spiritualize the factual statements of Scripture. That there is figurative language in God's Word is most surely true. Its beauty belongs there. But it is evident that milk-fed teachers have taken a dangerously wide license in spiritualizing the very plain and positive truths of God.

The ministry is guilty in this matter; so are "itching ears." Jesus asked, "Can the blind lead the blind? Shall they not both fall into the ditch?" James warns, "Be not many of you teachers, my brethren, knowing that ye shall receive heavier judgment" (3:1, A.R.V.).

In Romans 1:21-26 Paul tells of men who "knew God," but they "became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, . . . who changed the truth of God into a lie. . . . For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections." Here is a kernel: it makes a difference what one believes; for truth in its purity will bless, but when changed into a lie will curse.

The world today is steeped in "vile affections." Why has God allowed this world to become so drunken, and mired down in lust? God has been mocked! Stubborn sons have refused the Father's plan. With God's Word in their hands, clergymen have long preached over but not from the Book. Does someone ask, Wherein have modern teachers "changed the truth of God into a lie"? Dear reader, you may be the judge as you study the following list:

God is modernized to G-o-o-d
Conversion is warped into catechism
Death is flowered into a door to glory
The church is dwarfed into a social club
Repentance is dried up into formal confession
The return of Christ is three ways spiritualized
Zion is a simplified "beautiful isle of somewhere"
A prophetic kingdom is hurried into the church
Gehenna's fires are being cooled to electric shocks
Prayer is modernized into the doubter's meditation
"One baptism" is guinea-pigged into a dozen kinds Christianity's "Go ye" is now a passive "Come ye"

Rev. Warper, why not spiritualize it all? "Oh, no," says he, "My salary must be real cash." So, why not pay him his sure reward? Add a fried chicken, and let him go!

- Ad infinitum -

Reality in Immortality

Brother Ellsworth Richardson of Hammond, Louisiana, has asked us to explain the nature of the next life. To what will saints be "changed"? His question may be yours.

The hereafter is the richest field for spiritualizers. Edwards saw ten thousand immortal souls dancing on the point of a cambric needle. Pope saw "the soul dance upon a jig to Heav'n." A weird home in glory "ghostulated" with gaseous beings who travel like blazes, though they have all eternity in which to get there (where?), is as warped an idea as guess-so's could make if they tried. Maybe they did try, and "there came out this calf." Bah!

God has ordained that saints shall be "conformed to the image of his Son, that he (Jesus) might be the firstborn among many brethren" (Rom. 8:29). "We shall be like him" (1 John 3:2). Christ "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body" (Col. 3:20, 21). Christ was "raised from the dead, the first-fruits of them that are asleep" (1 Cor. 15:20, A.R.V.).

Was Jesus raised a spirit? Our blessed Lord denied that! The disciples "supposed that they had seen a spirit," but Jesus pleaded, "Why do thoughts arise in your hearts? "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." (Luke 24:36-39.) That the immortalized Jesus was an actual person is proved in that His disciples "did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead" (Acts 10:41). Nor was Immortality vegetarian! "Have ye here any meat? And they gave him a piece of broiled fish, and of an honeycomb. And he took it, and did eat before them" (Luke 24:41-43).

"In my flesh shall I see God." "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body" (1 Cor. 15:44).

The risen Christ, whose flesh had not corrupted (Acts 2:27, 31), was necessarily the same person that was buried! True, "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom," but that may refer to blood-life. It most surely does not teach that resurrected saints will be fly-away will-o'-the-wisps.

Can the more abundant life be any less real than the present life? If, in my resurrection, I become an intangible nothing, why call it my resurrection? No ghost deserves my reward! How could a ghost enjoy before God that prize for which I had suffered?

The Gospel in the Old Testament

By Emma C. Railsback

"For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it" (Heb. 4:2).

THE APOSTLE is speaking in the foregoing text of Israel's lack of faith in the gospel, which he states was preached unto them under the Mosaic covenant. (Heb. 3: 8-11.) Writing to the Galatian church, he informed the brethren there that the gospel was preached unto Abraham, God saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed."

Looking for a Scriptural definition of the word "gospel," we find from an abundance of evidence that it is good news of the kingdom of God and all that pertains to it—the things pertaining to Jesus Christ, His joint-heirs, the laws, the territory, and subjects, are all things related to the kingdom of God. We speak of the last nineteen hundred years as being the gospel or church age, and so it is. Nevertheless, the good news was proclaimed on the first pages of the Word, when God said the seed of the woman would bruise the serpent's head. However, this promise did not reveal the time, place, or manner of the plan of redemption from sin and its penalty—death.

Considering the promise made to Abraham, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 22:18), of which Paul is so sure that it is the gospel, we find that it not only included a seed, which is Christ (Gal. 3:16), but also territory. "I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession" (Gen. 17:8); "to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever" (Gen. 13:15).

We find in Genesis 15 how God revealed to Abraham, through the "horror of great darkness" that came upon him, that he must first fall under the power of death, and be gathered to his fathers in peace. But God sealed the covenant with Abraham in sending fire to consume the sacrifice he had prepared. In spite of certain death, Abraham believed God's promises, and God counted it to him for rightcousness.

Now, just what was it that Abraham believed? He believed in the promised seed, in the inheritance of the land, and in the final blessing of all nations through the promised seed, which blessing could be fulfilled only in the promised land. This is what Paul called "the gospel"; yet, how many there are who have never heard it, and how impossible it is to find and comprehend it, if we reject the Old Testament scriptures which Paul tells us were written for our learning, and to give us hope! (Rom. 15:4.) Abraham understood that everlasting life must go with an everlasting inheritance, else the promise was of no avail. When he sacrificed his son Isaac, he foreshadowed God's sacrifice of His Son. Abraham sojourned in the land of promise with Isaac and Jacob, also heirs, not having received the promise, but they died strong in the faith of being made perfect with the redeemed of all ages.

Because we have the name "Church of God of Abrahamic Faith" on our little edifice in Los Angeles we have been asked if we are Jews. Many professed Christians today are decidedly ignorant of the fact that Abraham's name appears seventy-four times in the New Testament.

Paul tells us that the gospel was preached to the natural seed of Abraham, so we look further to find where the gospel came in under the old covenant. There are so many types which were real gospel messages to Israel that we shall mention a few of them. The slaying of the Passover lambs pointed to "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." The bread from heaven foreshadowed the true Bread of Life, even Christ. The smitten rock represented Him who was smitten that we might have the water of life. The brazen serpent lifted up, to which a sin-sick people could look and be healed, was a certain type of Christ. Then, too, Moses fore-certain type of Christ. Then, too, Moses foretold of a prophet like unto himself, whom God would raise up, whom they must hear and believe.

Yes, there were many gospel messages in the types and shadows, which could have produced faith in all the Israelites had they not been so hardened in sin. Evidently, the gospel was operating in that day, as it is in the present time, to take out a people for God's name. (Acts 15:14.) Paul enumerates a few of the Israelites who obtained a good report through faith, not having received the promises, but having embraced them. (Heb. 11.)

God gave the prophets visions of future events. David said, "I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved" (Acts 2:25). David looked forward with the eye of faith to the immaculate character who was coming to take away the sin of the world. The Old Testament scriptures revealed Christ as the Redeemer, the Prophet, the High Priest, and as King in God's kingdom.

Isaiah foretold of so many phases of Christ's redemptive work that he is called the Messianie Prophet. He foresaw the virgin birth of the child on whose shoulders the government of the earth would some day rest. Isaiah saw that He would be called the Prince of Peace. He saw His righteous judgments, Ilis humilia- (Please turn to page 11)

The True God

By S. J. Lindsay

CHRISTIANS are warned in the Bible against serving idols. Yet, the one who adores and extols the Bible, without knowing what it contains, is an idol worshiper. So, too, the one who worships any other god than that revealed in Scripture is worshiping an idol.

John says, "Because as he is, so are we in this world" (1 John 4:17). It is said that one becomes part of what he eats. There is a sense in which this is true. It is also true that one becomes like the God he worships. If I worship a God of hate, I will likely become hateful. If my God shows no mercy, I will become unmerciful. If He is a furious God, I will no doubt give way to fits of fury in my dealings with others.

The idea that one becomes like the God he worships is found in the language of Matthew 5:44, 45, which reads as follows: "I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."

Our Father directs us to do as He does because He wants us to be like Him—like Father, like children.

If I have a God who delights in tormenting His contrary children throughout eternity, and if I firmly believe that, I will surely lend myself to the task of torturing or tormenting those whom I dislike. Indeed, I believe that it was Queen Mary of England who excused herself for the tortures she inflicted upon heretics by pointing out that God has in store for heretics something far worse. Her reasoning was right if she had a God of that kind.

How shall we account for this language: "God is jealous, and the Lord revengeth; the Lord revengeth, and is furious" (Nahum 1:2)? Other language of like import may be found, and it is sometimes hard to harmonize with other statements which show God's great love.

In the first place, God created us not machines, but human beings with a right to choose our course in life that we may have pleasure in it. He has placed good laws before us. They are for our good, always. "The Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always (italics ours), that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day" (Deut. 6:24). To serve us to a great purpose, there must be a certain potentiality in His law. If a law is to do us good by observing to keep it, there must also be hurt in the opposite direction if those laws are broken. To illustrate:

Here in Arizona, farmers depend entirely for moisture for their crops upon the water stored behind four great dams. The one from which the water is directly drawn for that purpose is the Stewart Mountain Dam. It is up the Salt River Valley about thirty miles from us. There a large body of water is impounded. By the law of gravity it has force back of it. When the law of gravity is properly observed, that water furnishes us with great currents of electricity, able to light in a great way the whole country round about, and to furnish power to turn all the machinery of a large part of the State. On the other hand, if something should happen to suddenly break that dam, all that housed up power turned loose would bring terror to the citizens of the valley below. There must be a power for harm in the broken law as great as the power for good as long as that water can be housed up.

So it is with God's laws. They are able to do us great good if observed; they are capable of doing great harm if they are broken. Great floods, tornadoes, and other like catastrophes are but evidences of broken law. Denuding the land of its forests is likely at the base of these terrors. Broken laws of health bring pain. Health laws observed are able to strengthen even those who have inherited disease tendencies.

God is always the same. I could not honor a God who gets furious in the sense in which it is generally spoken of. If God started something that failed in any sense, could He be God? To get furious would make Him still less a God to be worshiped.

Strange ideas of God exist. While I was editing The Restitution Herald, a brother wrote a splendid article in which he beautifully set forth the character of God, showing the error of the idea often expressed that God was so angry with sinful man that He turned His back upon him and would not be reconciled to man until He could see the terrible death of His Son on the cross. He called attention to the fact that "God so loved the world (when it was found in sin), that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

In a short time a man wrote us a very biting criticism, in which he declared that God's dignity was so hurt that He could not be reconciled to man until He saw the blood of the cross. This critic was determined to have me cut the writer off from further access to the paper. Because I refused to do it, he wrote the board of directors, asking that we be fired from our job. We are glad to say our directors never saw fit to pay any attention to him.

But how can such ideas of the Father in heaven be reconciled to the fact that our God always exhorts us to love mercy, gentleness, and kindness, and points out to us that if we lack these qualities we can have no part in the coming kingdom? We are invited to reason together with God. We are admonished to choose the good, and to reject the evil.

God's love, like His sunshine, has a different effect upon what it touches. His sunshine acting upon running water, purifies it; but shining into an inactive pool, stagnates it. God's love shown to Moses made him a deliverer of Israel; the same love made a Pharaoh. Pharaoh brought upon himself the result of broken law. The great things of God are done by observing His commandments. Obeying His commandments delivered a people from bondage. Breaking His commandments drove them again into exile.

What God do you worship? Is your God one who, because his subjects in a short lifetime commit so much sin, will require an eternity of suffering for Him to get even with them? Or is your God one who says, "I take no pleasure in the death of the wicked" (Ezek. 33:22)?

Are You Carnally Minded?

By Vernon Nichols

THE war clouds are threatening more each day to east the world into another orgy of bloodshed. Even the most optimistic of our statesmen think it is inevitable, a matter of but a few years if not months, or even weeks. It makes it of vital necessity, then, for all of us, especially the young man of military age, to settle the problem of bearing arms for his country. Those of us who lived through the trying times of the last world conflict, know how necessary it is to decide what the attitude is to be toward war. It takes the strength of firm conviction to sustain one in such circumstances.

There seems to be some difference of opinion among our people as to what extent, and in what manner, the Christian is to separate himself from worldly things. I am sure all agree that a separation is necessary. 2 Corinthians 6:17 is one of many testimonies that cannot be overlooked.

The problem, simply stated, is: What do we owe the country that affords us protection? Our Guide Book instructs us to render to Cæsar that which is his, and to God that which is His. (Luke 20:25.) The world powers are ordained of God for a purpose, and we do owe them an obligation. (Rom. 13.) In our patriotism, however, we must not lose the all-important fact, that all men fall short of the standards of righteousness set by Christ for His people. If this were not true, there could be no work for the saints to perform during the millennium. This duty and privilege will be to teach the nations righteousness. (Rev. 2:26-28; 20:6.) We are taught to avoid all unrighteousness. Thus, it is a serious error to become a part of that which is ungodly.

The soldiers were instructed to do violence to no man. (Luke 3:14.) The apostle who severed the ear of the servant of the high priest was rebuked for his violence. He that lives by the sword will perish by it. (Matt. 26:51, 52.) The example of the Master was to do good to those who hate and mistreat you. Since nations are only a collection of individuals, bound together by ties of race and thoughts, there cannot be one law for the man, and another for his country. In order to follow in Christ's footsteps, one must be a man of peace, as He was.

Those of us who live under the stars and stripes should be proud and thankful for that blessing, but we should not idealize it too much. We must keep vividly in mind that God is not a respecter of persons or nations. Even though the blessings which are promised to those who deal kindly with the Jew (Gen. 12:1-3) could be applied to an entire nation, it does not of necessity follow that any such nation has the approval of God for all its acts. All worldly powers are under sin, and will continue to be till freed from the curse by the righteous reign of Christ and His corulers.

We must not forget that in peace and in war we all pray to the same God for a blessing, whether we are German, Russian, Bulgarian, or of any of our so-called Christian nations. Our duty is ever the same, regardless of our fatherland. Taking arms for one's country must be without consideration of principles involved, or by personal animosity. Either leaves that person guilty in the sight of God. Vengeance and judgment is not for you and me. (Rom. 12:19.)

Those who transgress through ignorance have some redress, but not the wilful violator. The world sees "through a glass darkly," but a child of God should be able to see with clearer vision. The gist of the matter is, we are no longer bound by the law of retaliation that was in effect before Christ's time, but we are now bound by the law of love which completely separates us from that which still holds the nations in its militant grasp.

The training and association of war is anti-Christian, and utterly foreign to the person trying to follow Christ's example. In the military training where the once guileless and innocent boy is made into a first class killing machine, the first requirement is to eliminate these same attributes of childhood, (and Christian manhood). The following language was used verbatim by an officer in the late war, and speaks for itself—this was said when gun drill was supplemented by bayonet practice, which makes a vastly different weapon out of the rifle:

"Men, you are up against real war now! There is a Hun before you! It's him or you! If you don't get the knife in him first it's your hard luck. Wipe the smile from

That Martyr Complex

By J. R. LeCrone

BEFORE the martyrs of Christendom, both ancient and modern, we bare our heads in deepest humility. To be east to wild beasts and torn asunder, to be burned as a human torch to light the festivities of some cruel emperor, to face a well nigh intolerable existence in a concentration camp, or to stand before a firing squad rather than to be for one instant false to the Savior who died for the sins of the world, that is martyrdom indeed, and worthy of our deepest respect. We can only pray that, should the time ever come when we must face similar trials, our courage and faith in God will be equal to theirs.

We know some Christians, however, who are living in the midst of their loved ones, among comfortable surroundings, wearing good clothing, and eating three satisfying meals a day, who seem to rather fancy themselves in the roll of martyrs. These people will tell us, resignedly and bravely, how much their faithfulness to Christ and the gospel is costing them: "If I chose to disregard Christian ethics in my business, I could be a rich man right now." "Were it not for the tithe of my income that I pay for the support of my church, I could have a new car every year." "Except for the limitations placed upon my activities by my Christianity, I could have such a good time." "Oh, if I could only do the things that other people do, and still be sure of salvation." Thus, their "martyrdom" is laid bare for the whole world to see and marvel over.

Such people seem to feel that, though they may some day reap a reward for their "sacrifices," the world has all the best of it now. According to their way of thinking, those people who have the greatest possessions and the fewest restraints on the lusts of the flesh are the ones who lead the happiest and most contented lives. They are the ones who live "the more abundant life."

To them the "abundant life" consists of plenteous wealth, and lots of leisure in which to enjoy it. That this combination could fail to bring them happiness and contentment never seems to enter their minds. Our present political administration has defined the abundant life as consisting of higher wages and shorter hours, and for most people that definition seems to suffice.

How successful wealth and leisure are in bringing about this much desired happiness is evidenced by the fact that during the next twenty-five minutes, someone, somewhere in the United States of America will willfully end his life by his own hand. Before another twenty-four hours have rolled around, fifty-two more citizens of the richest nation on earth will have decided that "the more abundant life" of the administration was not worth the living.

If all the citizens of the nation who will commit suicide during the next twelve months could be gathered together in one place they would make a city of twenty thousand inhabitants. Add to that number the forty thousand who will make unsuccessful attempts to "end it all," and you would have a city of sixty thousand people who are dissatisfied enough with their life to desire to terminate their existence upon earth.

If the bulk of these were from among those living in slums or among the crippled, blind, or sick, we could attribute their acts of self-destruction to desperation born of insurmountable financial or physical handicaps. Dr. Jean S. Milner points out, however, that "those who kill themselves are those who have everything in the world to live with, but nothing to live for." The sad truth is that by far the huge majority of these maleontents come from among the middle class (financially) and upward. They are the ones who possess the wealth and leisure that our Christian "martyrs" have "deprived" themselves of in order to help along the cause of Christianity among men.

It is apparent that Jesus had something entirely different in mind when He used the term "abundant life" that the politicians have so blithely borrowed and turned to their own uses. "I am come," said Jesus, "that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10). But when a certain man said to Him, "Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me," Jesus replied, "Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12: 13-15). And in the parable which immediately follows He told of a certain rich man who had prospered greatly and was prepared to spend his declining years in comfort and ease. "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God" (Luke 12:19-21).

Being rich in this world's goods, according to the Master, is as nothing when compared to the joy and satisfaction that comes with being rich toward God. That His apostles caught this spirit is plain both from their deeds and from their advice to their converts. Says James, "Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" (James 2:5.) And Paul admonishes Timothy, "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to

That Jesus himself lived the most abundant life of any man whose feet ever trod the accursed soil of this old earth, no one will deny. Yet of Himself He said, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head" (Matt. 8:20).

The rewards that Jesus promises His followers, both now and in the future, are not only the things that make life worth the living; they are the things that money cannot buy. "Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee. And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life' (Mark 10:28-30). To those who have long been active members of the Church of God this verse needs no explanation. They know that there are many times a hundred homes scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land where they can drop in at any time and find, brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, with whom they expect to share the second half of the promise—eternal life in the world to come. Without these, wealth and luxury turn to ashes and dust!

Neither, as many men both rich and poor have found to their sorrow, can gold and silver purchase immunity from the curse of sin as it is promised in the future to those who are God's people. "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain" (Rev. 21:4).

True, Jesus promised His apostles that they should "sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 19:28), but He went to great length to be sure that (Please turn to page 10)

Whosoever Will May Come

By Mrs. Mac Nedrow

"Jesus . . . said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

IN A SMALL village an evangelist had been holding services in a tent. At the conclusion of a sermon he asked those of the congregation who had not accepted Jesus Christ as their Savior to come forward. Timidly, a shabbily dressed woman of middle age went forward, along with a few others. One of the elite of this certain town, and an active member of a church, laughingly turned to her companion, saying, "Look who is going forward." She did not seem to understand that salvation is full and free, that God is no respecter of persons, and that "whosoever will" may come.

Not long ago, I had the opportunity to work among a group of underprivileged children. One of my sons was operating a gasoline service station near a little community center where it was customary for children to stop to buy candy. One day a little boy of eight years picked up my Bible that lay on the counter, and asked me what kind of a book it was. I told him it was the Bible, and that in it was revealed God's purpose and plan for our welfare, showing that we may grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Savior Jesus Christ. I told him about the Savior who died on the cross for our sins, of the resurrection, and of God's kingdom that some day will be established on the earth.

Tears filled my eyes as I heard him say, "Oh, but that isn't for us poor 'kids'; that's just for the 'kids' that have good clothes, and whose shoes are not ragged." I told him that God and His Son Jesus never looked on the outward appearance, but at the inside, the heart. That morning this little lad spent three hours with me asking me to tell him more of the One who loved little children.

That afternoon—like Andrew—he brought his brother, later his little sister. More of these little children came each day, asking me to tell them about my God, and about Jesus who loves the children.

For weeks, morning and afternoon, they came. I put newspapers on the floor where they would sit, all ages from three years to fourteen. One day there were twenty-five present.

How their eyes opened wide the first time I brought them to church—to a real Sunday school! It was a glorious sight, and my heart rejoiced as some of them—barefooted and in overalls—walked up the aisle telling me God's house was the prettiest place they had ever seen. . . . "Yea; have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?" (Matt. 21:16).

Then, there was the little boy with the beautiful, big, blue eyes. He was very timid. He could hear but had never been able to speak. He never came with the others, but would come alone and peek through the window. If I was alone he would come in, point to the Bible on the counter, and then point up. It was his way of telling me to read the Bible, God's Word, to him.

Dear brethren, there are many near us who have never heard the Word of God. May we proclaim the gospel of the kingdom of God, and tell them of salvation through Jesus Christ.

The Strange Case of Apollos

By Norman J. Macleod

IF YOU were told to bury a dead animal, would you not cover it so deeply that there would be no possibility that it would be uncovered by any chance? Would you not bury it so that there would be no doubt that it was buried? If you merely sprinkled a little dust on the dead body, or poured a single shovelful of dirt on it, would you think that it was buried? Would anybody else think that you had buried it? Why do Christians read and not understand: "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection" (Rom. 6:1-5). The old man of sin is dead, why not bury him? Why sprinkle a few drops of water on a symbolically dead man, and say we have buried him? Why pour a dipperful of water on a dead body, and say we have buried it? Certainly, that is illogical. Christian baptism is a symbol of death, burial, and resurrection. Should not the symbol be as accurate as possible? Should it not represent all three things?

For many centuries the Hebrews had practiced baptism as a rite of cleansing, of symbolic purification in connection with their traditional worship. But, with the coming of John the Baptist it took on a new significance: it was a rite of the cleansing of repentance; it included a belief in Jesus as the Christ; and it served until the death, burial. and resurrection of our Lord. But after that event John's baptism was no longer valid, because the symbolism had changed. "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 3:18-21). This was a new baptism; not the old rite of the cleansing of the flesh, but "the answer of a good conscience toward God." But, some will say that if we have that good conscience that is all that is necessary. What do the Scriptures say? The afore-quoted passage says, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us" (my emphasis).

Apollos was a Jew who was a mighty preacher among the Jews at Ephesus, and he had converted many Jews to belief in Jesus Christ. Notice in the account, as given in Acts 18:24 to 19:7, that Apollos was instructed in the way of the Lord, and received careful training thereafter from Aquila and Priscilla. "He mightily convinced the Jews, and that publickly, shewing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ" (Acts 18:28). This Apollos had baptized many people in Ephesus. However, before we conclude certain things concerning this man, let us also follow another mighty worker for Christ, who baptized the first Gentile.

The story of Peter and Cornelius is so familiar that there is no need to rehearse the series of miracles that preceded that immersion. Cornelius was heard of God, sent for Peter, was instructed by that great teacher, and had received the gift of the Holy Spirit. Surely, was that not enough? Surely, if nowadays a man received the gift of the Holy Spirit he would say that he need do no more. But, did Peter or Cornelius stop there? No! After "they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God," Peter asked, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" (Acts 10:46, 47.) Baptism was so important that it must needs be administered in such a case.

The people who had been baptized by Apollos, in spite of his mighty eloquence, had not received the gifts of the Holy Spirit. When Paul eame back to Ephesus he said, "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:4, 5).

Why is the rite of baptism so important? Why is it important to perform it correctly? Why be so meticulous as was the Apostle Paul? Surely, nowadays the Apostle would be accused of "splitting hairs." The answer is in history, and in the world about us.

The Boy Scouts of America have a sign and salute that must be learned by each new member before they admit him to their ranks. A boy cannot legally be admitted to their ranks before he understands what that sign and salute mean. Do any of them expect to gain admission to the ranks of that organization without such information?

Light in Darkness

By Mac Magnus

"Unto the upright there ariseth light in darkness: he is gracious, and full of compassion, and rightcous" (Psa. 112:4).

NOT long ago we were living in a rather comfortable and stable world. Prosperity was at its peak. We placed our confidence in many things that we thought had a permanent value. Today, with the thousands of unemployed, we are living in a time when all these things are falling in ruins about us.

Hurricanes, floods, scandals, murders, graft, world-wide unrest—all on a scale larger than ever before—are here. Our statesmen are at their wit's ends. Thinking minds tremble at what may come next. There is no power on hand to stay the on-coming tide. Only God's children are in possession of the light which shines in a dark place. Christians may begin to realize something of their worth in such great darkness.

In reading 2 Peter 1:19 and Psalm 119:105, we find that students of God's Word are children of the light, His children of the day. "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief" (1 Thess. 5:4).

All students of God's Word know that prophecies give us a picture wherein we know that we are now living in the last days. 2 Timothy 3:1-5 (A.R.V.) says: "But know this, that in the last days grievous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, implacable, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God: holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof: from these also turn away." We know that being "lovers of self" is just about where all the trouble starts. In Zechariah 8:10 a condition is foretold that we know also exists today. "For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast."

In reading Matthew 24 and Luke 21 we find a description of conditions as they are today. Here it is recorded that the disciples asked Jesus what would be the sign of the end of the world, and of His coming again. Jesus related things that would come to pass, and said, "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. . . . They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark."

I turn back to Genesis 6, and find recorded: "The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose. . . . And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of his heart was only evil continually." It grieved God in His heart that He had made man upon the earth. God said He would destroy man off the face of the earth. But Noah was a righteous man, and God instructed him to build the ark. Those that went into the ark, and only those, were saved out of the Flood.

Are we striving to be in our Ark of safety, which will carry us through? Luke 13:24, 25 says, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door" it will be too late.

Jesus told the disciples to learn a parable of the fig tree, and said, "When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it (the kingdom) is near, even at the doors." He also said we should "look up," for our "redemption draweth nigh."

Those who have the light are patient, knowing that soon there is to appear a silver lining to the dark clouds that now cover the world.

Peter, James, and John were given a vision of the light and glory of the kingdom which is to follow the breaking up of the present kingdoms. The "more sure word of prophecy" can do as much for anyone who will put his trust in God, and search God's Word.

In place of present-day calamities, sorrows, and discontent, we have the promise that there is to be a time when there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor tears. All things will be made new.

Should not our hearts burn within us when we open God's Word and read in Isaiah 25 and 35 these wonderful words:

"In this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things... And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory: and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from all the earth."

"The redeemed shall walk there: and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

As for me, I cannot figure out any other time this could take place except when our blessed Redeemer returns to this earth to reign. Isaiah 9:6, 7 shows that "the government shall be upon his shoulder," that His throne will be the throne of David, and that "of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end."

THE STRANGE CASE OF APOLLOS

swearing of allegiance to the United States;

- (3) He goes to school to learn the history, government, and traditions of the United States;
 - (4) He goes before an examiner of the court;
- (5) He must go before the judge to be declared a citizen of the United States.

He must do all of these things, and is not a citizen until he has been so declared by the judge. No matter how much knowledge he has, and no matter how much desire he has, if he does not do these other things he is not a citizen.

We become citizens of the kingdom of God by being baptized into Christ. How, then, can we expect to become citizens if we do not perform all the duties of that citizenship? To so expect is just as ridiculous as it would be to attempt to become a citizen of the United States without first performing all its duties!

The symbolism of baptism has a meaning. Each covenant in the Bible has a token. The Noahic covenant had the rainbow given as a sign that God would not again destroy the world by water: the sun must shine through water to give a rainbow. The clouds must be broken to admit the sunlight. Hence its symbolism! When Abraham left his native country to sojourn in the Holy Land he did a wonderful thing in the annals of faith. When he took the promised son, the son of the covenant, to offer him to God he certainly demonstrated that faith beyond a doubt. But even after so marvelous a demonstration of faith he must needs seal that faith by the token of the covenant-circumcision. (Gen. 17:11.) That token was carried over into the covenant through Moses. With the coming of John the Baptist a new token was instituted for that covenant—the baptism of repentance. That token was sufficient until the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, when a new baptism was necessary. That baptism includes the symbolism of those three facts. Unless one understands those things, and that he is coming into covenant relationship with God through Christ, as is set down in Galatians 3, he is not baptized. But baptism has more to it than just that.

Paul, in writing to the Romans (Rom. 6), states quite clearly that baptism represents the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. Baptism points back, therefore, to those events. He further states that it brings us forth to a newness of life, in which we walk from day to day. This life must needs be fed by the spiritual food at the Communion table; it is a new and renewing process. Furthermore, there is a most glorious element that enters into baptism; it points forward to that great resurrection day when the life of today shall be swallowed up in a new life, the eternal life of the kingdom of God! What a wonderful rite baptism is!

Baptism demonstrates our belief in the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus. Baptism brings us into a new daily walk with Jesus. Baptism looks forward to citizenship in the kingdom of God. Baptism is the token of the new covenant which "the law that was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul" (Gal. 3:17). Baptism is the "answer of a good conscience toward God" (1 Peter 3:21). Certainly, we should not pass it over lightly!

ARE YOU CARNALLY MINDED?

your face! Think murder! See blood! Curse! Or do anything to get into a fighting mood!"

Does this harmonize with Christ's way? "Become as little children"; "Love your enemies . . . do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." The general spirit of gentleness and meckness was the essence of His whole character. There can be but one answer.

they understood that they were to be elevated to the position of judges, not that they might receive the homage of the masses in indolence and ease, but the rather that they might thus be able to be of more service to them. "Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them. But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister: and whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all. For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many" (Mark 10:42-45). And when He ascended His throne, he assured them that it was "to prepare a place for them"

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21). Not, that the one thus rewarded may shrivel into a selfish, useless tyrant, we may be sure, but that by his new position of influence he may grow and expand into a far greater influence for good—become more rich toward God.

Who ever heard of an active, faithful Christian ending his own life because he found it unbearable, or not worth the living? Every moment is so filled with good works that he has no time to pity himself, nor to bemoan the things of the world that he has passed by. Is the world not filled with many more sin-sick and suffering people than he can possibly reach with the message of salvation in one short lifetime? Does he not find immeasurable joy and satisfaction in the knowledge that the work that he is doing will bear fruit throughout all eternity? Is he not of all men most happy? "It is significant," remarks Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, "that an era in which the sense of impotence is rife should be one which has largely turned its face from God. There is an interrelation here. The universal statement is that suicides always increase with a decline of religious faith and moral sense."

So, dear "martyred" Christian brethren who are bemoaning the easy times and fun that might be yours had you not given them up to become Christians, envy the world no longer. You are not missing one thing that could possibly bring you any measure of happiness. But by putting your hand to the plow and looking backward you are missing much in your Christian life that can and will bring you joy. Said the Master, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27). You are not to be pitied as a martyr; you are to be envied by the world that is so madly seeking that which Jesus has placed at your disposal. Accept His peace. It passes all understanding and it is for you! You are of all men most blessed!

tion, and suffering. Isaiah saw the law going forth from Zion, and the nations going up to Jerusalem to be taught the Word of God. He saw those nations converting their implements of warfare into implements of agriculture. He saw the deaf, the blind, and lame being healed. He saw Israel planting, and eating of the fruit. He saw the Israelites building, and enjoying the work of their hands, sitting under their own vines and fig trees. He saw the earth bringing forth abundantly - fir trees and myrtle trees instead of thorns and briers. He used figurative language to describe the rejoicing of all nature: "The mountains and hills shall break forth before you into singing, and the trees of the field shall clap their hands." He saw the wild animals and serpents made harmless. He saw the time when the inhabitants of the earth shall not say, "I am sick. Time and space fail me to tell all that this one prophet saw, yet Peter tells us that God has spoken these things by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. (See Acts 3:19-21.)

Yes, God said to Moses, "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with my glory" (Num. 14:21). "Let God be true" though it makes "every man a liar," said the Apostle Paul. (Rom. 3:4.)

This is the same message that Jesus came into Galilee, teaching in the synagogues, going through every city and village, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, while the Twelve were with Him. (Matt. 4:23; 9:35; Luke 8:1.) Jesus explained to the Sadducees how that God must raise Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob from the dead in order to be their God, and that many would then come from the east and west and sit down with them in the kingdom of God. He called the attention of the two disciples on the way to Emmaus of all the things that Moses and the prophets had said concerning Himself. Before His ascension He commanded the apostles to go into all the world and preach this kingdom gospel. It was preached by Peter, Stephen, Philip, Paul, and all the apostles. It was the message concerning which Paul gave solemn warning to any who would pervert it

Yes, it is the only message that is God's power to save those who believe.

of God. Judgment seems to be the farthest from their minds. The Prophet Isaiah seems to bear this out in stating that "truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter."

Are not these some of the signs to indicate that we are living in the "last days," or in the end of the "Gentile times" when people are running "to and fro" as they have never done before?

As reported, people in Germany belonging to minority religious groups have been sent to concentration camps on a small pretext that they have been reading their Bibles, and groups have been denied the right of assemblage for Bible study. During the five year plan in Russia, churches by the hundreds have been closed there to stamp out religion. With these conditions growing, with the jazz age and late hours of excitement prevailing, is it any wonder that there is becoming a "famine of hearing the word"?

How long, O Lord, will these things be? The Lord is long-suffering and of great mercy, and in due time will send His Son Jesus Christ to cleanse this sin-cursed earth from all unrighteousness. Then every man shall dwell safely "under his own vine and under his fig tree."

We should not stray from the "strait" and narrow path. Jesus has warned us, "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares" (Luke 21:34).

As the natural man requires material food to sustain life, so we must acquire spiritual food to attain that higher and greater life to come. Jesus said, "I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst" (John 6:35). Every true Christian who has a place of worship, should make an effort to set aside at least one day out of seven to worship with others by feeding on the Word, "and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25). "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15).

May we be among those who sow to the spirit while it is day, and in due time be among those who shall reap life everlasting.

Do We Know God?

Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

When one meets a friend on the street it is customary to greet him in a friendly manner. This is because one knows him, is familiar with him, and recognizes him upon sight. But, I sometimes wonder if one ever really knows another! Do you really know your friend's characteristic traits, his attributes, habits, or ways of dealing with his fellow man?

We are confronted with another very significant question. Do we know God? Of course, in this life we won't see Him, for no man hath seen God at any time (1 Tim. 6:16), but we can gain an insight into His work, personality, habits, and traits, by being diligent students of His Word. If we are careless students we may read through all the Bible without being awakened to the realization of the actual characteristics of God.

God is a loving Father in that He sent His Son that "whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Is this not a fine trait? God loved us because He permitted His Son to give His life as "a ransom for many." God is truly the loving Father in that He sends blessings to those who keep His commandments.

In time of trials and temptations God is ever near us to guide us, turning our steps in the right path. In time of sorrow and burdens, we have the privilege of going to God in prayer, and there finding comfort and solace. Can we say this of anyone else?

God is the Creator of the universe, showing us His power and wisdom, wherein we stand in awe of Him who could fashion them so. Unlimited power is at the command of the Creator. The inspired Psalmist, in explanation of how God created things in the beginning, gives us an insight to His omnipotence. (Psalm 33:9.)

The God we worship is a living God. The Mohammedans worship a dead leader. It is true that their leader had fine principles and standards, but they do not worship a living leader. Life is one of the crowning attributes of God. God glories in the fact that He lives forever. (Deut. 32: 39, 40.) Immortality is His, and He is the Fountainhead of all existing life. (1 Tim. 1:17; 6:16.)

There is no god like our God. (Deut. 10:17.) He is Lord of all. (Rom. 3:29.) He plainly states the way of the righteous. (Prov. 15:19.) He is ever watchful of them, and listens for their cry. (Psalm 34:15; 1 Peter 3:12.) We cannot hide a thing from God. (Prov. 15:3). Because of the greatness of God, He does not overlook the needs and well-being of His people. (Matt. 5:45.)

God's attitude toward the believer is that of a compassionate Father living in complete unity with his children.

The infinite God, Creator, and Ruler of the universe, must remain forever invisible to mortal men (1 Tim. 6:16), yet, like Philip, all who know Him have a desire to see Him face to face. To meet that natural desire of those who love and worship Him, God sent His Son into the world to reveal the Father's person and character, so that those on the human plane might understand the Father. "No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him" (John 1:18) by word and deed.

The glorification of God through Christ should be the main purpose of every prayer. God, in sending the Comforter and in answering our pleas for help in time of need, manifests the provident care of a father over his children.

God is gracious and merciful" (2 Chron. 30:9). It was a very common thing for Israel to forget God and worship other gods, thus failing to do His will. When a new king came into power—if he were a godly man—he would seek a reform by attempting to lead the people back to God. We find in Hezekiah such a leader. When the Israelites repented and returned to serve God, not one time did God turn them away, but through His mercy received them.

Our heavenly Father sympathizes deeply with His disobedient people when punishment must be brought upon them. Jesus said, "Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke 15:7). There must be sorrow in heaven when a child of God turns away into sin and brings suffering and loss to himself. How gracious God is to be willing to receive us again into favor the moment we repent and return unto Him.

"Every good and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning" (James 1:17). We have adequate proof of God's stability. God never forgets a promise. What a comfort it is to know that the love of God never changes.

May God give us the knowledge and wisdom to understand His Word, and to apply its teaching in our lives.

"This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5:11, 12).

Through Much Tribulation

A missionary who had been preaching to the Russians spoke in our church about a year ago. He also showed some slides of those people and their surroundings. We saw little girls and boys, about your age, standing barefooted on frozen ground. Besides that, they had walked miles to hear about Christ. A few of them wore their fathers' big, heavy boots that reached up almost to their knees. Many of the older people were barefooted, too.

As you read this, compare in your minds their way and our way. Then ask yourself, "Do I love Jesus that much?"

After getting to the place of worship there were no seats to sit in to rest while they heard the gospel preached. They stood! Sometimes they were quite crowded, too.

This missionary said he preached for several hours, and when he quit and started to leave, they asked, "What's your hurry?"

These services were not held in Russia, as the government would not allow it, but they were held just across the border, in Poland.

Another interesting picture he showed us was of a very pretty, grown, young daughter of one of the speakers. It was the first time she had ever had her picture taken. She had borrowed a dress and a pair of shoes, as she had no shoes of her own. She later became this missionary's wife.

Their food was far from good. He said, "And here we complain if we don't get our favorite frosting on our cake."

Paul Establishes Churches

Paud and his partner Barnabas had been preaching, too. (Acts 14:1-7, 19-23.) The people of Antioch had become so interested in their messages that the Jews who didn't believe had forced Paul and Barnabas to flee. But they were no quitters! They just "shook off the dust of their feet" (Acts 13:51), and went on to Iconium. There, as was their custom, they went to the synagogue of the Jews to preach. Here, too, Paul had a successful meeting. Another church was started! Churches, you know, are not the buildings, but the people or believers. While some in Iconium believed, some did not—just as it is today. Paul and Barnabas fled from Iconium to Lystra, as they were about to be stoned.

In Acts 14:21, 22 we read of true Christian courage, for those missionaries retraced their steps, meeting again and strengthening those who had started to follow Christ. The last verse of our lesson tells us that they not only taught, but organized the Christian communities. They ordained elders in every church. Be sure you find out what that means. If you have a concordance you can find it in your Bible.

ECE Club News

Our first real club has been organized! Read about it: "I called a meeting of the ECE Club Thursday, March 23, 1939. We elected the following officers: president, Donald Bartlett; vice-president, Marelyn Millner; secretary, Alice Plantner; and treasurer, Helen Hamilton. We opened the meeting with the Twenty-third Psalm, and sang, "Shine Where You Are." Our motto is:

"I'll always speak the truth,
I'll watch each word I say,
I'll try to do the things I should
To please God every day."

"We have three groups. The girls will sew just now. The boys, from nine to twelve years of age, will make wooden mottoes for their bedrooms. The smaller children will make scrapbooks.

"Will you please write us and let us know more about this organization. We will meet again in two weeks. The secretaries will let you know just what they are doing.

"If you do not approve of this organization, tell us. We will love you just the same."

Mrs. Dorothy Frazier, Cleveland, Ohio.

Isn't that grand!

Who will be the next group to organize? Only six members are required to organize a local club, you know. Invite your Sunday school friends to write to me, and to become members.

The next club may choose the Club song. We want one everybody will know.

I do hope you will all learn our ECE Club motto they chose for us, and try your best to live up to it every day.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

ARKANSAS-OKLAHOMA CONFERENCE

July 20-22, 1939

The annual session of the Arkansas-Okla-homa Conference of the Church of God will meet with the church at Cleveland, Ark., on Thursday, July 20, 1939, continuing over the 22d. To our members in these states we say, "This is your Conference." To those from other states we extend a hearty invitation to come, and to work with us. The kingdom of God will not be bounded by state lines. Your presence will be a help to us, and our united efforts may find favor with our God. We hope to have with us delegates from every church in this Conference district.

G. H. Bradford, President.

PEACE, BE STILL!

I stand beside fair Galilee. A sudden tempest sweeps the sea. I see a vessel's straitened sail; I see a crew, whose efforts fail
To bring her safely through the gale,
And One I see who seems to sleep, And One I see who seems to sicep.
Unconscious of the rolling deep.
Oh! can it be Thou hast forgot,
And for Thy loved ones carest not?
"Master," I hear the anguished cry,
"Unless Thou savest we must die."
And then I see Him as He stands,
Illia hear the stands, His loving face, His outspread hands I hear His whispered, "Peace, be still," And waiting with my heart athrill See wind and waves obey His will.

The centuries have rolled away: I stand beside the sea today. The winds of strife blow wild and strong, While waves of trouble roll along.

And through the blackness of the night The storm increases in its might. Our wisest men in vain have tried To stem the rising of this tide. But One I see who seems to sleep, Unconscious of the raging deep. Onl: Can it be Thou hast forgot,
And for Thy children carest not?
Ah, no! He waits to hear the cry,
"Unless Thou savest we must die."
Then He who heeds the sparrow's fall Will answer when His children sail. Through faith again I see His stand; I listen to His blest command. Enraptured now, I know the thrill; For, lo! I hear His "Peace, be still." Through faith I see a newborn world, I see His flag of peace unfurled And men in homage own His sway, Whom stormy winds and waves obey."

READ-IT-ALL CLUB

Members of the Read-It-All Club are those who read The Restitution Herald from cover to cover. The following have recently reported:

Mrs. Morris Zeller, Alliance, Nebr., Rt. 1.
Mrs. Jessie Groves, Bemidji, Minn., Rt. 4.
Mrs. Thomas Lewis, Ripley, 1ll.
Mrs. Lucy Haan, 104 Meerse St. Grand

Mrs. Iva Moore, 324 W. Gilbert St., Muncie, Ind. Miss Anna E. Drew, 629 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Ill.

IT SHOULD HAVE READ

In The Herald issue of March 21, page 4, second column, line 36, the complete verse Revelation 3:5, should have been published, in order to correctly carry Bro. Laurence M. Howell's thought. The verse follows: "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels."

WEB DUSTER ANSWERED

By Emory Macy

Question: Where in the Bible does it say that someone will hide behind a tree to eat mice?

Answer: Isaiah 66:17. The following answered correctly:

Mrs. Harvey Krogh, Jr., Macomb, Ill.

Mrs. Emma Friend, Newkirk, Okla.

Mr. George Siple, Oregon, Ill.

Mrs. Richard LeCrone, Woodstock, Va.

Mr. Fred C. Smith, Russellville, Ark.

Mr. Grover Gordon, Springfield, Ohio.

ONE IS ENOUGH

"I cannot find any verse that speaks of one hiding behind a tree to eat mice (plural). In Isaiah 66:17 it says that swine's flesh and the 'mouse' (singular) shall be consumed to-gether. As far as I am personally concerned, one would be too much. What do you think?"
—Grover Gordon. . . . Yes! Yes!

Gleanings From the Field

Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., Illinois evangelist, will be at Fredericktown, Mo., April 11, 12; St. Louis, Mo., April 13, 14; and at Casey, Ill., April 15, 16.

Bro. T. A. Drinkard plans to begin a series of meetings at Bowring, Okla., April 19.

Good attendance marked the Easter services at Oregon, Ill.

"We are much enjoying the visits of The Herald with its glad tidings of the soon com-ing King, with its timely warnings to a per-ishing world, and with the true light of Scripture held up to those in darkness that the day of Christ should not take them unawares. Our ministers, young and old, are doing a noble work in their preaching and writing."—Mr. and Mrs. Alex Scroggs, Murphy, Ore.

"Can you imagine Jesus cheating on His lessons in school, or taking anything out of someone else's locker?"—M. W. Lyon.

"Jesus warned His disciples against 'the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.' . . . Paul 'ceased not to warn every one night and day' against false teachers, even some in the church would 'arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.' . . . The modernistic teaching of Holy Spirit baptism, and that men and women can receive remission of sins before being baptized in water is being taught in our midst. A greater error was nover taught. We warn against it." — Editorial from The Gospel Trumpet.

Bro. J. H. Anderson stays faithfully at his post. Sunday, April 23, he will preach at three different places in Indiana: Plymouth at 10:45 a.m., North Salem at 2:30 p.m., and South Bend at 7:30 p.m.

We rejoice with the brethren of South Bend. Ind., in their purchase of a church building. For years they have rented a room for a place of meeting. Their new home, which they hope to occupy by May 15, is on the corner of Dayton and Leer Streets.

Bro. James McLain recently closed a series of meetings at North Salem, Ind., resulting in the baptisms of Gale and Ralph Schaal, twelve and fourteen years of age, respectively.

Bro, L. E. Conner, pastor of the Church of God in Dixon, Ill., announces that Bro. James McLain will assist him in a series of meetings to be held May 15-28.

"To the household of faith we introduce Bro. and Sr. Carl Barber, whom Bro. H. J. Prosser baptized beside the Pacific Ocean. March 26."—Gladys Barber, Secy., Corvallis, Ore., Church of God.

"I shall one of these days find myself in the mood of writing, and may then flood you with copy."—S. J. Lindsay. . . . "The heaven was black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain" (1 Kings 18:45).

"My brother, H. Scott Smith, preaches once a month at Pleasant View, Ark. Henry Blaylock, one of our Sunday school teachers, started a Bible reading contest which closed April 2. Mrs. Faye Stutts won first honors, having read 2,408 chapters."—Fred C. Smith. Russellville, Ark.

"We are earnestly trying to seek first the kingdom of God, and we believe that our loving Father in heaven will guide and direct us."—Mrs. Irene Holland, Thorold, Out.... Concerning His sheep, Jesus said, "No man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand" (John 10:29).

ADELAIDE WHITE

Adelaide Ely White was born December 4, 1849, in Oleanne, N. Y., and died at the home of her daughter in Omaha, Nebr., March 21,

Her girlhood was spent in Illinois. At the close of the Civil War the family moved to Nebraska. Here she met and was married to Charles H. White on April 20, 1870. He pre-ceded her in death on August 1, 1890. To this union were born seven children, two of whom died in infancy, and two in adult life.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Emory Dixon of Omaha; two sons, Lester, also of Omaha, and Arthur of Bennington, Nebr.; fifteen grandchildren; eighteen great-grandchildren, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

In 1892 she was baptized by Elder Almus Adams, and she remained steadfast in the faith of the Church of God of Abrahamic Faith until the time of her death.

Services were conducted from the Fitch
Mortuary in Omaha and the Church of God in Blair, Nebr., with interment in the Blair ceme-There she will rest until the trumpet sounds and the dead in Christ are raised.

EDWARD ENGLE

After nearly six years of struggle against the "white plague," Edward Engle died in a state hospital for tubercular patients. A young man of 26 years, possessed of a pleasing per sonality, deeply interested in church work and a lover of home, he made and held a host of a lover of home, he made and held a host of friends. He was baptized by Bro. G. E. Marsh during his pastorate at Niagara Falls, N. Y. Like the rest of us, he loved life and clung to it tenaciously, never despairing of hope until the final end came. The Engle home has been beset with sickness for a number of years, and the fortitude with which Sr. Engle. step-mother to Edward, has carried on has been an inspiration to all who knew her. The sympathetic heart of the Niagara Falls church goes out to this trouble harassed family.

Funeral services were held from one of the funeral parlors in Niagara Falls on Sunday afternoon, March 26. About two hundred friends and relatives paid tribute to this young man by their attendance. The writer brought words of hope from the resurrection promises.

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION Oregon, Illinois

"Home, Sweet ome"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Conditions of entrance into Golden Rule Home are as liberal as absolute security permits. Write for full particulars concerning the Home and its advantages. Or, better still, come and visit the Home itself and let the Family tell their own story of its advantages and comforts.

Address: Golden Rule Home, Mrs. Idona Romine, Matron, Oregon, Illinois.

Search the Scriptures

By Lydia E, Miller (See Editorial)

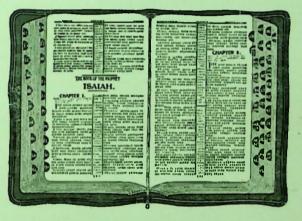

"Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me."

NINETEEN hundred years ago a child was born in Bethlehem of Judea, whose advent created a sensation throughout the land. Strange tokens appeared at His birth. But very soon the excitement appeared to have died out, and little more was heard of Him till He arrived at twelve years of age. At the feast of the Passover in the temple of Jerusalem He astonished the doctors of the law by His questions and answers, and "all that heard him were astonished at his understanding" (Luke 2:47).

Time passed on, and little more was heard of the young Nazarene until He began to be about thirty years of age (Luke 3:23), at which time He came to John and was baptized of him in Jordan; and then the Spirit of God descended like a dove and lighted on Him, and, lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my Son, in whom I am well pleased" (Matt. 3:17). Jesus fasted forty days. The tempter tempted Him to command the stones to be made bread, to which Jesus answered, "It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Three times Jesus said to the tempter, "It is written." The third time the tempter tried to allure Him with the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, if He would fall down and worship him. Jesus replied, "It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

This should teach us to observe closely what is written, and do just as it is written, and to study the Word of God to know what is written. But there is no use in asking any to search the Scriptures who do not believe in their divine inspiration.

I want you to get the import of that word "search." It means to study, to examine, to investigate, to scrutinize, to analyze. You know the Bereans of old were commended by the Apostle as being "more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." Too many persons of a religious turn of mind think that all that is necessary is to daily read a certain number of chapters in the Bible, and they are then at rest as having performed their whole duty. That is a very different matter from searching the Scriptures. We must dig deep for knowledge and understanding, and search for them as for hidden treasure.

To those who will diligently and prayerfully search the Scriptures a rich mine of treasures will be opened up. The Psalms are full of assurances of God's goodness, and the grandest and most cheering exhortations of trust and rejoicing that were ever penned by the hand of man. In God is my salvation and glory. The rock of my strength, and my refuge is in God. Trust in Him at all times, ye people; pour out your hearts before Him. God is a refuge for us.

The New Testament epistles contain fit warning and admonition to every child of God, whether only beginning in the Christian race, or far advanced in the battle of life. The words of Christ apply to all. "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." And if anything further is needed to promote a spirit of search and humble reliance in God's Word, let it be the thought that the Scriptures are able to make men "wise unto salvation," having been "given by inspiration of God... that the man of God may be perfect."

"She Shall Be Praised"

"Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised.... Let her own works praise her" (Eccl. 31:30, 31).

It is a pleasure to introduce Sister Lydia E. Miller to you. Her home is at 206 South Madison Street, Delta, Ohio. Although in her eighty-eighth year and confined much of the time to a wheel chair, her Christian zeal reaches out in this issue of The Restitution Herald to all who will read her article, "Search the Scriptures." Her faith at the sunset of life paints beautiful tints in darkening skies about us.

Read her message. "Let her own works praise her," words that were written from a wheel chair, where "a certain woman named Lydia . . . worshipped God."

Let Aaron's rod begone, More precious faith lives on; Let tongues and healing "cease" For nobler faith's release!

How Every Church May Help

The Church of God needs workers well trained. The Summer Training School, which will this year be held July 5 to August 13 at Oregon, Illinois, will most surely enrich both those who attend and the church at large.

Full details of the coming session will soon be presented by Brother G. E. Marsh, chairman of the Board of Education. He is planning for the School.

In the meantime, we recommend to all our churches that they do their part in making the Summer Training School a success. Help us to enlist students. Encourage those to attend who are naturally inclined to leadership, and all those who in any way show an interest to become trained workers for the Lord and His flock.

If each congregation would send one or more members it would not only help to build the School, but would react to create local interest in the cause and purposes of our denomination. Students! That is what we want: students from the Pacific, students from the Gulf, students from the Atlantic, students from Canada and from every church in the denomination. This is a school for the Church of God as a whole; the Church of God must get behind it.

If we sleep on the oars of our own boat, nobody else will row. When nobody rows the boat gets nowhere fast.

The Sunday School's Challenge

The Sunday school's challenge is to interest its members in the more advanced activities and the more sacred responsibilities of the church. The Sunday school is ceasing to be an auxiliary of the Church of God; it is rapidly becoming a competitor of the church. Though this is being unconsciously done, it is nonetheless real. This unfortunate condition is acknowledged by many of the successful ministers and Sunday school superintendents of our denomination.

Church services that are somewhat formal, especially to youth, are doubtless much to blame. Long sermons have been blamed, though the anathema would better be charged against uninteresting sermons — twenty-minute sermons may be popular, but they result in very few baptisms. That the church lacks the Sunday school's entertaining and contest features which so readily appeal to youth is really no stigma against the church. However, it is not so much the purpose of this editorial to locate the blame as it is to suggest one way that the ill can be most surely corrected.

Yes, the Church of God may well present services with more appeal for youth. But because of the very influence of our Sunday schools over youth, they must rise up as a true auxiliary to enliven and defend the parent church. It is not that the Sunday school has failed; it is, rather, that a most successful organization now has a wonderful opportunity to give the church that very life that the church is now mocked for having lost.

A five-year Sunday school button is neither repentance nor baptism. And the Sunday school must say so! The voice from the pulpit cannot convert youth that has hurried home with a medal for having come on time.

A preacher delivered a sermon for youth. It had appeal. But five words in the Sunday school room would have been better heard than the ten thousand words in an unknown tongue. The challenge of empty seats in church must be met by that body that youth listens to.

Youth, we invite you, really want you, need you, and we are going to have you if you will give us a chance! You are not asked to enjoy button-behind-collar sermons. Most of our preachers have children. Over half of our preachers are young men. All of us are warm-blooded like you.

We believe that in God's sight that Sunday school is biggest which best supports His church,

THE CALICO PIG

By C. E. Lapp

PHERE recently came to my desk the story of a pig. 1 This pig was like all pigs in that it had a head, four feet, and a tail. The only difference was that he was made of calico, was hollow, and had a slit in his back. He was given the very best of care, for he went to many meetings conducted by the ladies of the church. At each of these gatherings, the ladies would bring their nickels and dimes and put them through the slit in his back. He grew and grew until he became so fat the ladies declared he was fat enough to butcher. The great day arrived, and he was butchered—"all to the glory of God"!

We are living in the wealthiest land under God's shining sun, but one in which too many of the churches are depending on just such contrivances to furnish the capital to carry on God's work. We have calico pigs, fish ponds, oyster suppers, card parties, sewing circles, hamburger fries, bowling alleys, roulette wheels, bingo, ice cream socials, plays, picture shows, slot machines, turkey raffles, and God only knows how many other things in churches today to raise money to carry on His work, and they are done in His name. Is it any wonder a man of the world can see no reason why he should unite with any church that does its business in such a fashion? Every conceivable contrivance is used in churches to raise money-"for His glory"!

Thank God that not all the churches have bowed the knee to Baal, and do not have to depend on the dough in the pie pan or bake sale to earry on the gospel work. Any number of churches today must depend on how much the ladies' aid makes at the oyster supper to determine if there will be money enough to meet the expenses of the church, "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly (stomach, Diag.), and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things" (Phil. 3:18, 19).

Jesus said, "Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled" (John 6:26). There comes to mind a church which at one time raised a great portion of their finances through suppers in the church basement. The crowds came as long as they could eat of the loaves, but as soon as the church stopped the suppers the crowds stopped coming. If as much time and energy had been put into Bible study, prayer, and trying to feed some lost sinner the Bread of Life, eternity would reveal the greater amount of good accomplished, God pity the church that has to serve a lunch to appease the appetites of those whose gods are their stomachs.

It seems that Christians in the days of the early church thought it was a good thing to fast and pray. The order in these modern times has changed to feast and pay. When they did fast and pray, God laid it on their hearts to give as they had been prospered. Do you suppose the church at Antioch had to put on a big church bazaar to raise money so Paul and Silas could be sent out in God's work? Modern churchgoers would pooh! pooh! such a thing as ridiculous; and especially so if they were not able to daily fill their stomachs with at least three square meals. There is a good deal more concern today among the nominal church members about the daily bread, than there is about the Bread of Life. Jesus said, "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed" (John 6:27).

Such cheap contrivances to raise church finances are a shame and disgrace to the One whom we profess to love with all our hearts. It would be different if we were ignorant, but God's plan is not concealed in a mystery. Furthermore, where God's plan is used, there the people love Him, for they show it by putting Him first even with their pocketbooks. Paul told the early Christians to lay by the first of each week as God had prospered them.

The Prophet wrote, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it" (Mal. 3:10).

One time a father wanted to teach his little boy to tithe, and taking ten dimes placed one by itself for the Lord and the other nine in a pile for himself, whereupon the boy exclaimed, "Why, Daddy, are you going to keep all that for yourself?" Even children would be more fair with the Lord than many grown-up persons. Perhaps Jesus knew we should become as little children in a number of things.

For a number of years the Church of God has been hampered with a debt. If every member of the entire organization would tithe from now to Conference (August 1), that debt could be wiped out. God's financial system works!

Someone objects that tithing was taught only in the Old Testament, but tithing was the only thing that Jesus in all His ministry ever commended the Pharisees for doing. (Luke 11:42.) And where in the New Testament do we find the teaching for hamburger fries, card parties, bingo, ice cream socials, picture shows, and calico pigs, to carry on the gospel work?

(Genesis 14:18; Hebrews 7:1)

By R. H. Judd

"For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that through patience, and through comfort of the scriptures we might have hope" (Rom. 15:4, R.V.).

So MANY people feel that the so-called "obscure passages" of Scripture have but little interest. The question is often asked, "What does it matter? What difference does it make who Melchizedek was?" There is no question but that these difficult passages of Scripture do require patience and study. But when, as in this instance of Melchizedek, one is a type of Christ the study will be found to yield rich reward.

The word "patience" does not occur in the Old Testament, not even in the book of Job. Of its more than thirty occurrences in the New Testament, it will be noticed that in the great majority of instances it does not carry the meaning of "forbearance" so commonly understood, but of endurance and continuance. Such is the sense in which it is used in Romans 15:4, also in James' reference to "the patience of Job" (James 5:11). We need to persevere to reap worth-while results in our study of the Scriptures.

After reading an interesting article on Melchizedek, the present writer felt impelled to restudy the question, for quite a different viewpoint to his own had been presented. After many hours of careful study, and some prayer for guidance, I wish to present what appears to me to be the Scriptural viewpoint.

The question before us is: "Who was Melchizedek?" That is his name—not his title. I see no reason for supposing that he was Shem, or even an angel—one of the elohim—for whenever an angel is spoken of by name the fact of his being an angel is always stated in some closely connected passage.

That Melchizedek was a man is surely evidenced by his receiving the tithes from Abraham, which consisted of "the best of the spoils" (Heb. 7:4, Weymouth), for "spoils of war" can hardly be of value or of any purpose to an angelic being. Paul tells us that the angels are "ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation," and the writer is unable to recall any instance of an angel retaining a gift, except of food for immediate use.

It is quite true that "anthropos (the Greek word for man') is not in the Greek text, and that only the Greek word autos, a pronoun referring to Melchizedek, is used." But, it is to be noted that practically all translations here make use of the word "man" as being necessary to the sense, and when doing so they do not indicate by italics, or otherwise, that the word is supplied. If the reader will consult Liddell and Scott, also the many references in Young's Concordance, he can search out numerous instances where the Greek pronoun is used, and the word "man" is necessarily recorded as implied. This is true of both secular and sacred writings.

Hebrew names (and Melchizedek is a name) were frequently—one might say generally—given for their significance, and according to Young's Concordance the meaning of the name "Melchizedek" is "my king is rightcous." The title of "king" is in itself additional proof of humanity, for I cannot recall that an angel was ever honored by hearing it. Certainly Melchizedek, as his name signifies, was typical of Christ as King of Righteousness and King of Salem (Peace).

Paul's comments concerning Melchizedek leave us in no doubt that he was regarded as a type of Christ, and for that reason alone he could not have been other than a mau. In writing to Timothy (1 Tim. 2:5), Paul says, "There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." Many similar scriptures will come to the memories of those who read these lines. God chose a man to redeem men.

Weymouth's translation calls Melchizedek the "priest-king," and it is evident from Hebrews 6:20 that he is regarded as high priest, of which there could be but one living at any one time. In this connection it is worthy of note that in Psalm 110:4, the Revised Version margin gives us the word "manner" in place of word "order," and Dr. Schofield is authority for the statement that the Revised Version is more generally correct in its marginal render-

"Hold Fast Till I Come"

By R. A. Curlis

A MONG other "signs of the times" that prophetic students can discern is the world-wide proclamation of "this gospel of the kingdom," as a witness unto all nations.

"Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts. For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little: for with stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people. To whom he said, This is the rest wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest; and this is the refreshing: yet they would not hear. But the word of the Lord was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.

"Wherefore hear the word of the Lord, ye scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem. Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us: for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves: therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste. Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding place.

"And your covenant with death shall be disannulled, and your agreement with hell shall not stand; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, then ye shall be trodden down by it. From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you: for morning by morning shall it pass over, by day and by night: and it shall be a vexation only to understand the report. For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it: and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it" (Isa. 28:9-20).

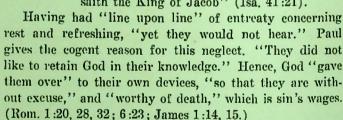

To get a comprehensive view of God's "eternal purpose" (Eph. 3:11), "hearken" unto James testimony as given at the first conference convened at Jerusalem to settle a dispute about circumcision and keeping the law of Moses. "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things" (Acts 15:14-17).

The testimony of God's Word has been proclaimed among all nations, as a witnessing factor, to select from amongst the mass of rejecters of His Word here and there a "jewel" that shall shine "as the stars for ever and ever." (Mal. 3:17; Dan. 12:3.) Earth's coming "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev. 19:16) is now selecting His royal cabinet from "every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation," to assist Him in His world-wide millennial kingdom. (Rev. 3:21; 5:9, 10; 21:1-5; Psalm 2:6-12; 72:8-11, 17-19; Isa. 65:17-25.)

The world, in its unbelief, may reject the "sure foundation" that God has provided in the person of "his only begotten son," and attempt to build up its own wall. It may "daub it with untempered mortar," but both wall and building will perish alike, and no more cumber the ground. (John 3:14-16; Ezek. 13:10-15.) The Lord's challenge to agnosticism is, "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob" (Isa. 41:21).

Jesus, speaking to His storm-tossed followers on the lake of Galilee, said, to quiet their fears, "Be of good cheer; it is 1; be not afraid" (Matt. 14:27). During the little while of waiting and affliction, Jesus comforted their sorrowing hearts with the same fear-dispelling message, "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." (John 16:16,20,22,33.)

"But that which ye have already hold fast till I come. And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father" (Rev. 2:25-27). He that hath ears, let him take heed.

The Old Road

By J. E. Adamson

FROM Egypt to Damascus, thence eastward over the Syrian desert to the Euphrates River, and down that historic stream to the land of the Chaldees, runs the old road—the highway of history. Over much of it now are operated modern air-conditioned, American-made stages that make the six-hundred-mile trip from Damascus to Baghdad in a few hours—across desert that eamels took many days. (See "Change Comes to Bible Lands," in National Geographic Magazine, December, 1938.)

Over this road have traveled soldiers, traders, and religious pilgrims for centuries upon centuries. Abraham came this way when he emigrated from Ur of the Chaldees, and the road was old even then. Pharaoh, King of Egypt, went over this road when he "came to fight against Charchemish in the days of Josiah, king of Judah."

Sennacherib, King of Asyria, came over it to fight against Hezekiah, and went home with his army a pitiful remnant after the Lord fought against him. Over this road Nebuchadnezzar came twice to fight against Judah and Jerusalem, and carried back with him Daniel and others to a captivity in Babylon.

Cyrus the Great, the God-favored Emperor of Persia (see Isa. 45), took this road in his wars against the Greeks. Alexander the Great went by this road in his invasion of Asia. The Cæsars used it, Napoleon Bonaparte used it, and in the late war it was used by the British and French. At one point the rocks bear the names and dates of many great soldiers and travelers.

Traveling along the modern highway some places it parallels the old Roman stone roads, and some places the Roman roads are seen to cross portions of the old road of the Hittites who had been in the land many years before the coming of Abraham.

Old roads always have interesting memories clinging about them, and this oldest of roads is no exception.

"Give me a house by the side of the road Where the race of men go by;

Men that are good, men that are bad,

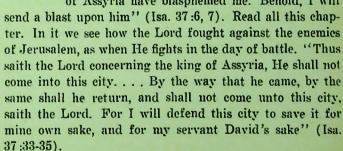

As good and as bad as I."

This verse by Sam Walter Foss aptly fits the old road. Over it have come men that served and loved the living God, and men that served only gods of wood and stone.

The first of these men we wish to study was a great pagan king, Sennacherib. He was a typical dictator and as ruthless a braggart as ever led an army into battle for territorial gain. His kingdom lay astride the Euphrates River about four hundred miles from the Persian Gulf, and from there he undertook to build an empire. About the year 710 B.C. he launched a campaign to add Syria and Palestine to his dominion. With an army of 185,000 well equipped and trained soldiers he came over the old road by way of Charan, over the mountains, down through Damaseus and other old eities of the Jordan Valley, and finally camped round about Jerusalem. It was in the reign of Hezekiah, and in the time of Isaiah the Prophet. For weeks upon weeks he laid siege, and from his headquarters on the Mount of Olives sent messengers with taunts and insults to the King of Judah. "Say ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, What confidence is this wherein thou trusteth?" (Isa. 36:4). Rabshakeh, chief captain of the Assyrian army, refused to talk privately to the messengers of King Hezekiah, but talked big and loud to the Jewish soldiers on the walls. "Beware lest Hezekiah persuade you, saying, The Lord will deliver us" (v. 18).

When Hezekiah heard this, he sent messengers to the Prophet Isaiah for advice, and it was promptly forthcoming. Isaiah said unto them, "Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the Lord, Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me. Behold, I will

The Assyrian army came down the old road in great splendor, but it was was fortunate that Sennacherib had his name inscribed on the memorial rocks on the way to fight rather than on his way home.

How fitting the words of Lord Byron on "The Destruction of Sennacherib":

"The Assyrian came down like a wolf on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;
And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
When the blue wave rolls nightly on the deep Galilee.

"Like the leaves of the forest when summer is green,
That host with their banners at sunset were seen;
Like the leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay withered and strown.

Gospel Gleanings

By John O. Conrad

THE word "gospel" is found only in the New Testament, It is used ninety-nine times to convey the meaning of two Greek words which are uniformly translated "gospel." There is one exception in Galatians 3:8, in which the Greek word means, "to announce glad news in advance." This occurrence refers back to Genesis 12:3, where God foretold the gospel to Abram, saying, "In thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." God's plan may be discerned even earlier in Genesis 3:15, and later in Deuteronomy 18:15-19.

There is another word, "tidings," which means "glad news," and it is used in both the Old and New Testaments, but it is not included in this list.

Of the other ninety-eight references to "gospel," the first of these is used twenty-four times. In this, the meaning is, "to announce good news," "to declare glad tidings," "to preach the gospel." This word seems to emphasize action; to announce, as in John 1:41, 42. "He (Andrew) first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messias. And he brought him to Jesus." Also, it sometimes is used to declare, as in John 4:29, "Come see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" Again, it is used "to preach," as in Acts 8:35, "then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus" (the Messiah). This is the gospel opportunity for those who cannot preach or teach, to bring people to those who can.

The second word translated "gospel" is used seventy-four times, and means, "a good message," or "good news." The Book of James, 2 Peter, 1, 2, 3 John, and Jude, have no words which convey the meaning of "gospel" that I have discovered. The Gospel of John does not employ the word "gospel," but in 1:18, the same idea is expressed in the word "declared." The same is true of 1 Timothy and Titus, in which the word "saying," is used. All other books of the New Testament frequently use one or both forms of the word "gospel."

The meaning of this "good message" deserves careful attention. The word "good" in Scripture carries a superlative meaning, and might be thought of as a "godly message." This message was to have its fulfillment in the Messenger described in John 1:17, "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." Perhaps we should think of this as being "a compassionate message." In Acts 20:24 we read, "But none of these things (persecutions) move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." There must of necessity have been many messengers after Jesus and the apostles. There have been many, and there is need of many today.

Jesus used many terms to describe Himself. He said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life," "the door," "the shepherd," "the vine," "the light," but he did not say, "I am the gospel." These titles are descriptive of the kingdom, or the means of entering into it. The statement in Galatians 2:5, "the truth of the gospel," is not a reference to Jesus, but to the reality of the gospel being revealed truthfully and accurately.

It is true, however, that Jesus is to be thought of as being a part of the gospel. He affirmed that He was the one of whom the prophets foretold, that He was the Son of God, and that He was a king, all of which the kingdom implies. "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye and believe the gospel" (Mark 1:14, 15). Parables were Christ's favorite means of preaching the gospel. The statement in Romans 1:9, "the gospel of his Son," means that gospel which was preached by "his Son."

Before Israel, as a nation, asked for a temporal king, God was his King. God later promised that of the house of David He would maintain the throne, that David's descendants would occupy it continuously. About four hundred years before Jesus was born, God refused to allow any more of David's house to reign because of their wickedness, declaring that there would be no more kings until one should come of whom He would approve. Jesus was the fulfillment of God's desire, not to occupy the temporal throne at that time, but to become a spiritual leader until "the times of restitution" when His literal throne will be reestablished, and He will be crowned with honor and power and great glory. Israel might have accepted Him as a temporal king, but could not as the spiritual Redeemer.

"And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God" (Luke 8:1). Here "preaching" means announcing, and "shewing" means exhibiting or demonstrating.

Our attention is often called to our modern need by way of an appeal entitled, "The gospel of sanitation," or "The gospel of safety." These are important, but their mission must be always limited to the duration of this present age. In Ephesians 1:13, 14 we read, "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory." According to the statement of Luke 21:25-28, we may reasonably feel that "our redemption draweth nigh," but this is yet the age of "the gospel of (our) salvation."

In Romans 10:15 we note that we may have our hearts, as well as our heads, lifted up when we read, "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" Surely, "the gospel of peace" can have its fulfillment in reality only when the Prince of Peace shall return "in the beauty of holiness" to grace the long vacant throne of His father David. Then shall He establish peace by effecting the "restitution of all things" according to the plan of creation. When this shall have been perfected the King of the King of kings will be King eternal in a kingdom of peace and righteousness. (1 Cor. 15:28.)

A Lesson From a Mouse

By C. A. Smead

ONE recent Sunday morning, when I picked up my Bible to go to church, I was dismayed to see that a mouse had been there under the cloak of darkness, and had nibbled away a portion of the Bible's edge. I mourned over this, as the Bible had served me faithfully for eight years, and I have some comments of my own in the margin. The mouse had not caten as deeply as I first thought, however, and so my main grief was over the disfigurement.

Then, a minister of another church in town glanced at my Bible and remarked with fervor, "You surely do read your Bible. Look how your thumb has worn it." After explaining the circumstances to him, the thought occurred to me: Why, that really is a scar of use, and scars of use really add to the glory of a Bible!

The experience has suggested two ways in which people can handle the Word of God: either they can tear at it destructively; or they can eat it, digest its teachings, and be built up in the most holy faith. But whichever way people use the Bible, destructively or constructively, their action boomerangs back upon their own heads to their infinite loss or gain. The Word of God stands secure. No one can really injure it, no matter what he does against it: "whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder" (Matt. 21:44).

You cannot blame a mouse for its destructive activities, but Christians are responsible for what they do with the Word of God. The Christian is a Bible for the world to read, and when Christians cut out parts of the Bible they cut out vital parts of their own lives' gospel story. If I do not use the truths of the Bible to order my life, I myself reap the sorry consequences.

Let us examine one of the texts that is very easily left out of the weaving of the tapestry of our lives, thereby cheapening our lives.

"Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth" (1 Cor. 13:4-8).

When this wonderful virtue of love is left out of a life, since nature is said to abhor a vacuum, she rushes in with something to take its place. There are always plenty of cheap materials at hand to take the place of love. I have heard it said that love and hate are sisters under the skin. When hate takes the place of love, the life will then give evidence in preaching the gospel of hate—just the opposite of the text quoted above. It will be easy to be unkind to someone else on the slight provocation that he has been unkind. One will envy the other person his better house, car, job, convenience, beauty, ability, or friends. One will have unseemly pride in what he has that the other person lacks. Selfishness will be predominant, not only in earthly things, but in the gospel of salvation itself which will be held back from those not one's social equals, this in spite of God's wishes, "who will have all men to be saved" (1 Tim. 2:4). A quick temper will take the place of the sweet spirit of Christ. There will be a desire to believe the worst possible about the other person, and a secret pleasure in the other fellow's downfall. Forgiveness will be a mental impossibility. The Bible will be hard to believe except that lip belief will be easy. In the time of sickness or misfortune these faults will grow bigger and bigger, while in the loving heart the times of sickness and sorrow call forth a deeper expression of love.

We wish to point out that when one bitterly gives himself over to resentful, fleshly thoughts about others, he himself is harmed the most. For he loses that Christlike spirit out of his life. He has lost something which is without price. His faith, tarnished, is a feeble glow. The basis of his fellowship with the Father and with other Christians has been destroyed.

Do you now see how cutting this text out of the Bible can boomerang back, and heap destruction on our own heads. Rather, let it be used to build us up in the Lord. Eat it constructively. Let it become part of us, woven right into the warp and woof of our being. Let us be the world's Bible, sharing in the Bible's honor now and in eternity. Today and in eternity all else fails but truth. What will you do with the Bible?

THE PURPOSE OF BAPTISM

By E. O. Stewart

"The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 3:21).

ONE'S deliverance from past sins through baptism is similar to Noah's deliverance from the corruption of the old world by the Flood. Both are figures of the future deliverance of the true believers from their corruptible natures, at the second coming of Christ. Our past sins, and the corruption in Noah's day represent the corruptible nature from which the faithful shall be delivered through resurrection. In short, if we understand the purpose of water baptism, we are forced to believe that it teaches immortal emergency of the saints. Baptism is for the purpose of picturing Paul's most positive declaration, that "the dead shall be raised incorruptible" (1 Cor. 15:52).

Christ shed His blood for the remission of sins, and He shed that blood in His death. His blood was never raised from death, but remains right where He shed it for our benefit. He arose from the dead with a bloodless life, leaving His lifeblood in death where we—through the figure of baptism—can contact the blood in order to obtain remission of past sins.

The blood is the life. (Gen. 9:4.) Christ shed His blood in His death. Therefore, we must—in figure—go into His death to obtain remission of sins, by contacting His blood. The moment we reach that blood, we—in figure—come in contact with life, for the blood is the life. Now the question arises, Where, and when do we contact the blood? It most certainly is when we go into His death. When do we go into His death? Hear Paul as he declares, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection" (Rom. 6:3-5).

This proves that baptism is the act that puts us into Christ's death. As He shed His blood in His death, then we contact the blood in baptism. But the blood is the life. Therefore, it is while we are buried with Him in baptism that we come in contact with the newness of life which we come forth from baptism to walk.

As Christ was not quickened with blood life, but with the Spirit of God, and as the Spirit of God entered into Him while in the tomb, and not after He came forth, it follows as an evitable conclusion, that we, too, if made like Him, must come forth from the tomb immortal. To me, this is what baptism teaches. May I hear from someone else along this line of thought.

HOME MISSIONS

By Rachel Humphreys Morris

Look on the fields; for they are ripe already to harvest" (John 4:35).

A THE ripened fields, dear readers, is where we stand today. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few" (Matt. 9:37). We do not need to go to China to begin working. Where is Christ needed any more than in our United States?

There are ten million Negroes and five million foreigners in our states depending solely on us for the gospel. And think of the many millions of others who do not know Christ,

As Christian workers we must remember that evils are increasing, the clouds of spiritual darkness are thickening. Many of our own people do not go to a church of any kind, and so many of the other Protestant churches are no more than society centers. As Christians we should try more than we ever have to make our homeland a land of Christianity.

Let us think for a moment of the dangers that are facing us. There is war, famine, and pestilence of every kind. How it should make us lift up our heads, to go forward for Jesus, and to be ready for the time that cannot be far distant.

Soon, "the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words" (1 Thess. 4:16-18).

Do we hear much of such comfort? No! So often not even our own preachers say much about our Lord's return, and His great gift.

Communism, atheism, lawlessness, the liquor traffic, race prejudices, and worldliness are growing stronger every day. Are we doing all we can for Christ? Let us not forget in our daily toils that in God's sight "all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags" (Isa. 64:6).

I wonder what our Master thinks of us as we sit almost idle, doing so little for His cause.

If, instead of striving so hard for earthly possessions, we would devote more of our time in getting ourselves prepared for that glorious meeting, we would get more actual pleasure from life than we ever have. Let us remember that we brought nothing into this world; just so must we leave it.

"All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose" (Rom. 8:28). We may be one of "the called" ones, but Jesus forces no one. Each must make his choice. Let us choose that part that cannot be taken away. Thieves cannot steal it, neither will it rust nor decay. Let our lights shine even as a light on a hill that cannot be hid.

It is sad to know that in many places our own church is the only denomination that is not teaching the Devil's lie. All others that I know about are preaching, "Thou shalt not surely die," though God's Word plainly teaches that we must die because all have sinned. But, if we lose our life for Christ's sake we will surely find it again.

Let us strive to be ready for the time when "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain" (Rev. 21:4).

"The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit" (Psalm 34:18).

WHO WAS MELCHIZEDEK?

ings. This rendering of Psalm 110:4 is confirmed also by Young's Concordance. "Order" may, or may not, refer to more than one. Christ became High Priest "after the manner of Mclchizedek."

The statement that Melchizedek was "without father, without mother, without descent (pedigree, margin), having neither beginning of days, nor end of life" (Heb. 7:3), is perhaps somewhat disconcerting to the average reader. Other translations give the words "no record of ancestry." The Jews generally kept record of their genealogy, and in that respect were not regarded merely as individuals. Every Jew was definitely connected by his ancestry (genealogy) to past and future generations. It was not so with those who had not kept their genealogy. They simply stood as individuals, their beginning and future being "not reckoned" (see v. 6), "whose genealogy is not counted." In secular history Philo spoke of Sarah as "without mother," because her mother's name is not recorded. Speaking to the mob in the Roman forum, Scipio said, "You have no father or mother." Thus, we find that Paul made a logical argument from a well-understood custom of speech, and which was always applied to mortal persons. In this manner Melchizedek was high priest in his own right, and once for all. In these respects he typified the Christ. He had no connection with the Levitical priesthood of the law, being some four hundred thirty years before the law. Here again, the author of Hebrews takes much pains to make it clear that Christ also was not of the law, or of the tribe of Levi, but was of the tribe of Judah. Christ alone is High Priest; believers are but priests.

A further point of interest regarding the name is its reference to righteousness. Just as the faith of Abraham had nothing to do with the law (being four hundred thirty years before), so it is true of both Melchizedek and Christ in regard to righteousness—Melchizedek being before the law, Christ after it. This incident of Abraham being blessed by Melchizedek beautifully illustrates our "imputed" righteousness from Christ—not through many (as of an order), but through one—one Mediator. (See Rom. 4:13, R.V.).

One or two other details may be of interest. The Apostle takes notice of the greatness of Melchizedek over Abraham, which in those days was reckoned by possessions. In so doing, Paul draws attention to Melchizedek's antitype, Christ—"a greater than Abraham." That Melchizedek was undoubtedly "great" may be incidentally intimated by the change in the Revised Version in Genesis 14:17. There "the king's vale" is capitalized to "King's Vale," which, by its close connection with the story, would point to Melchizedek as probably the king after whom the Vale received its name.

It is generally supposed that the Salem referred to is Jerusalem. Some doubt this, as we learn from Young's Concordance, as does also our preceding writer. That there was a city by the name of Salem at that time is brought out by the marginal rendering of the Revised Version in Genesis 33:18. That it could not have been Jerusalem because of brambles there is scarcely conclusive, for it is not impossible or even improbably for brambles to be within the precincts of a city. The land of Moriah is mentioned in the narrative, but not the name of the mount. Isaac, like his antitype, may have been "sacrified" outside the city. Christ was not crucified where Solomon's temple stood!!

In our opinion none can show that a Melchizedek "order" of priests (plural) dated from creation. It is more reasonable to judge that the name indicates the founder, and Scripturally, Melchizedek was evidently the first and the last of that name, as high priest of the Most High God.

"For the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast,
And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed;
And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill,
And their hearts but once heaved, and forever grew still.

"And there lay the steed with his nostril all wide,
But through it there rolled not the breath of his pride;
And the foam of his gasping lay white on the turf,
As cold as the spray of the rock-beating surf.

"And there lay the rider distorted and pale,
With the dew on his armor and rust on his mail;
And the tents were all silent, the banners alone,
The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown.

"And the widows of Ashur are loud in their wail,
And the idols are broke in the temples of Baal;
And the might of the Gentile, unsmote by the sword,
Hath melted like snow in the glauce of the Lord."

His grand army of one hundred fourscore and five thousand had been destroyed in one terrible night when pestilence spread death and disaster without the stroke of a sword. He died by the hand of his sons in the city of Nineveh.

Bereans at Work

The above heading has been used two or three times by the Editor of The Restitution Herald, when the Bereau editor had not sent enough material to fill the Bereau page. I like it! It appeals so much to me that henceforth when there is enough material to warrant it there will be a report of Bereau activities under that heading. So, send in your reports and various other news. I know that there are many things that your local Bereaus are doing that will be of interest to all.

Following are some of the things Bereaus over the country are doing:

The Minnesota State Berean Society is planning a conference to be held on the last Sunday in April. As far as we know this State Society is the only one to hold separate conferences. From experience the Minnesota Bereans have found that such conferences pay, and pay well. Young people from various parts of the state have come to know one another better, making for better cooperation. The Bible classes and sermons given at these conferences have been a source of inspiration to all. While our activities have been curtailed during the winter, we fully expect this coming conference to start things again. We already hear of local Bereans planning for their summer activities. Take notice, Minnesota Bereans, and be at the conference to be held in Eden Valley the last Saturday and Sunday in April. The exact dates are the 29th and 30th. Be there:

To the other Berean societies, whether you are formed into state societies or not, take the example of the Minnesoto Bereans, and try the conference idea. You, too, will find that it pays.

Two state societies are publishing their own papers at present. The Iowa Society publishes an excellent little paper called "The Searchlight." You can see that they had the Berean motto in mind in choosing the name for their paper. Its editors are: Mrs. Helen Tempel, Mrs. Blanche Harland, Norma Brown, and Delbert Jones.

Here is a selection from this excellent little missive of

Suggested Bible Study for Bereans

"For the Cradle Roll members it is suggested that the older ones memorize as many of the Beatitudes as possible. For this month try to learn the first two. (Matt. 5:3, 4.)

Parents, please help your little folk with this. We would be glad to receive from you the names of all who succeed with this memory work, "For the Junior Bereans it is suggested that they memorize the Lord's Prayer (Matt. 6:9-13), then the Twenty-Third Psalm, and next, the books of the Bible.

For the Senior Bereans it has been suggested by the state secretary that they read the life of Christ. This can be accomplished by reading the Book of Matthew, two chapters each day for fourteen days. What phase of Jesus' life and character does Matthew emphasize?''

The above is given that all Bereans might know the type of work the Iowa Bereans are doing.

The Minnesota Society publishes "The Nobler" each month. It takes its name from the verse concerning the name of the Bereans (Acts 17:11). Its editor is Miss Muriel Randall, and, as there has appeared on this page an article from that paper, we will forego reviewing any selection from it.

We have given you these two examples of work that Bereans are doing so that other societies might not become stagnant, and eventually die. I know of one society that died, merely because it had nothing to do. It might easily have been in existence yet, had it published a paper or held conference.

We trust we haven't bored you with these things.

Help! Help!

We thought we knew what an editor was, but to make sure we looked it up in the dictionary. There we found the following: "one who edits; one having charge of a publication." Nowhere did we find where it said an editor was supposed to personally compile his whole publication. Yet, that is what your Berean editor has been doing very frequently. This is your page. The only thing I can do is to prepare the page with the articles and reports that you send me.

Do not misunderstand me. It is not that I dislike writing articles, but I feel that all Bereaus should develop their writing talents. After all, the page may grow rather dull if only the editor writes. We need the ideas of all. Think it over. Is there some idea that you have had that you could put into words? If so, write it down and send it to me.

This message is not to the many who have written articles. We can only thank those who have done that. It is to those who have a talent and are not using it that we are directing these words. THANKS!

Loyalty to Ideas

Daniel was captured, along with many of his people, by the King of Babylon. The King, Nebuchadnezzar, asked to have some of the best of the Israelite children come before him. They were to be physically perfect. They were to be the brightest and best educated. Those children were chosen to learn the language and ways of their captors, the Chaldeans.

Now Daniel was among those chosen. He was given another name, as were the others. (Dan. 1:7.) These young people were to be fed with the King's own food and drink; or what the Chaldeans thought were the best foods. Many boys might have thought it best to forget their home teachings and their God, but Daniel did not. He refused to drink the wine and eat the meat, as did also three others. They were allowed to be put on a trial diet of pulse, or vegetables, and water for ten days. When, some time later, they all stood in the King's presence, he could find none to compare with Daniel and his three friends, who had refused the rich and unclean food of the King.

We do not know how many young people were in the group, but we do know that only four were loyal to their God. I know the reason Daniel was true. It was because he "purposed in his heart," or decided to do right, for he loved God.

We know Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." So we, too, must make decisions often. I hope all our readers will decide the right way every time a decision is made.

God's Love

The warm sun, like God's love, melts all the dirty snow, and the warm rains then wash the earth so clean—just the way God's sunshine takes away the soiled, darkened spots in our hearts and lives. We often sing about letting God's sunshine into our hearts—in through the darkened windows.

Let us get His love into our hearts, to warm us and make us more kindly. We will let God melt away all the bad habits and unkind words that soil our hearts and lives. When our hearts have the planting space ready, let us plant a garden there! We cannot expect seeds to grow until the planting space is clean and freshly spaded and worked. Next week we'll read more about these "Heart Gardens."

A Church Conference

Many of you have gone to your State Conferences. Perhaps you have been to the National Conference at Oregon, Illinois, too.

Today we find a group gathered in a conference, or council, at Jerusalem. There were the apostles, teachers, and the other brethren who were the listeners or laity.

There had been a difference in the teachings of some of their leaders. This group was to decide which way was right, without causing any harm among their churches.

The problem was whether the Gentiles had to become Jews in order to be Christians, whether they must keep the laws of Moses, or if to believe in Jesus and do His will was all the Gentiles were required to do.

This group decided that the Gentiles were to be asked to obey only certain easy rules found in Acts 15:29. Faith in God was enough; they did not need to become Jews.

Years later, we read, Paul returned to Jerusalem. He was so anxious that the central church at Jerusalem should know what he had been teaching the Gentiles. He wanted to help the church to work together to spread the gospel. Paul tells us of three men regarded as "pillars." Who were they? They gave Paul and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship, and sent them to continue to preach to the Gentiles.

"And Jesus said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15).

to have one or more students from each church of our faith. See editorial "How Every Church May Help," page 2.

The tuition for the coming Summer Training School will be the same as it was last year, $30.00 per student. That small cost covers board and room for the full six weeks of tooining. Can you live at home with any less expense?

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

The pre-Easter week of meetings held at the church were well attended and resulted in three young people asking for baptism. Bro. G. E. Marsh and Bro. F. E. Siple were in charge of the meetings. Special music was featured by members of the choir at all of the services.

Easter was a very busy day at our church. The young people had an early breakfast in the church annex at 7:30. At 11:00 o'clock the choir, under the direction of Miss Evelyn Barr, presented an Easter cantata, "The Resurrection Light." The church, packed to the doors, received this inspiring music with very

IOWA EVANGELISM

There is a call for evangelistic meetings in Iowa through the spring and summer months. Our need is great. We are appealing to the brethren for assistance. Bro. Eldridge Ellis, 319 Cutler St., Waterloo, Iowa, has been appointed treasurer of the evangelistic work. you are willing to help us, will you write to him and tell him so? We ask for your prayers that God's work may prosper, not only in lowa, but wherever His Word is proclaimed. A. M. Jones, Conf. Pres.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

Having received the resignation of our faithful pastor, Bro. C. E. Lapp, to take ef-fect June 1, 1939, the Church of God in St. Cloud, Minn., wishes to hear from ministers of the faith who may be interested in becoming our pastor. Mrs. George Savage, Seey., Waite Park, Minn.

HOLBROOK - MOOREFIELD, NEBRASKA

The Holbrook and Moorefield Churches of God held their Easter services together at Holbrook. Bro. Giesler gave us two good sermons. A letter from Bro. and Sr. Gordon to the church was read, which we all appreciated very much. There were forty-five in attendance. Basket dinner was served in the basement.

PENNELLWOOD CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

The season's activities, beginning with the Spring Conference from March 24-26, have been very gratifying. The Conference, with the state pastors as speakers, was well at-tended, although the folks at Coats Grove and Kalamazoo were unable to be present because of sickness.

Bro. F. L. Austin arrived March 27 and was guest speaker for our pre-Easter series of meetings. His theme was, "The Gospel of the Kingdom," as taught by Christ so many years ago. Good interest was shown throughout the meetings.

The finding of an empty tomb that first Easter morning was commemorated by a large number of members and friends at a sunrise service this Easter. At least half of those at-tending were young people. We thank God for the youth who are proving true and loyal to their Savior, and steadily increasing in nambers by bringing others.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

The South Bend Church of God Sunday school enjoyed one of the most impressive services Easter Sunday morning ever presented before our group. It has been our aunual custom to supplant the regular Sunday school with an Easter program. Our program this year consisted of a song and appropriate recitations by the wee youngsters and slightly older children, a beautiful rendition by a young male trio, a solo, pianologue, timely talks by the older people, and a three-act play, "The Crucifixion of Christ." This play was written and directed by Sr. Alverta Leighty, and was, indeed, a very touching scene. We are so well pleased with the work and results of this junior class. May God also be pleased, and bless its efforts.

We are still holding services in the local Y.M.C.A. building, where we have held services for a good many years, but we expect to be worshiping God from our church building this time next month. We are so excited and happy over our new prospects, and pray that we may be able to produce fruit from our new conquest. We have adopted the title "Hope Chapel" for our new building.

Frances Boyle, Seey.

Due to Bro. Dunean Macleod's voice changing, dropping an octave in one week, he was unable to sing his scheduled solo as announced in The Herald of March 21.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

At the annual election of church officers. held April 3, at 7:30 p.m., the following were elected: Trustee for three years, William J. Eckert; elders, DeWitt C. Dauntler and William G. Ford; deacons, F. E. Duvall, William J. Eckert, and Elwyn Drew; deaconesses, Mrs. M. W. Missman and Mrs. R. C. Drew; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. William G. Ford.

Every Tuesday evening a Bible class is held at the home of one of our members. This week-ly meeting begins at 7:30, with Bro. Conner as teacher. We feel that we learn a great deal in a class of this kind, as each one has an opportunity to take part if he so desires, and our teacher is most capable of leading us in the truths of God.

Easter services at the Dixon church were very well attended.

Our junior choir furnished the music at the end of the Sunday school hour. A number of the small children gave recitations proclaiming the Easter message. One number worthy of special mention was a quartette entitled "Early in the Morning." This was given by four intermediates, namely, Shirly Myers, Lois Selgested, Billy Dunbar, and John Selgested. At eleven o'clock Bro. Conner delivered an inspiring sermon to an attentive congrega-tion. The young ladies' chorus sang appropriate anthems at this time.

In the evening Bro. Conner's subject was, "What the Resurrection Means to the Christian."

A two-weeks' evangelistic meeting is being planned for the last two weeks in May. Bro. James McLain of Burr Oak, Ind., is to be our speaker. We are looking forward with great anticipation to these services. May we receive a spiritual blessing and a renewed desire to press forward for the prize of the high colling in Christ Legus calling in Christ Jesus.

Mrs. Wm. G. Ford, Secy.

WELLINGTON, KANSAS

Bro. Cantwell Drabenstott visited us on his return from Texas to his home in Indiana. On Sunday, April 2, about thirty brethren and friends assembled at our house, where we all enjoyed a sermon by Bro. Drabenstott, and a short talk by Bro. Leslie LeCrone. The people came from Attiea, Milan, Caldwell, Arkansas City, Oxford, Kan., and from Newkirk, Okla., and Blair, Nebr.

We are hoping to have Bro. Frank Siple of Grand Rapids, Mich., to hold a series of meetings in Arkansas City in June.

Mrs. Letha E. Rinchart.

BLANCHARD, MICHIGAN

The Good Friday service which was held from noon to 3:00 p.m. was a big success. The church was filled to capacity and many say it was the best service of the year. I have very much enjoyed the articles in The Restitution Herald. May God bless the writers, and help them to keep up the good work is my prayer.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

Resurrection Day was a very happy time this year at Golden Rule Church, for six more adults took this opportunity to put on Christ in baptism. Our new members are: Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Grable, 2181 W. 85th St.; Mrs. Dorothy Knapp, 2181 W. 85th St., Mrs. Retha Love, 4001 Fulton Court; Mr. Lewis M. Parish, 13508 Earlwood Road; Mrs. Sophia Seifert, 13705 Diana Ave.

The first four are kinfolk of Sr. F. L. Austin of Chicago, Ill., who first became acquainted with the church and the faith through Bro. and Sr. Austin's work last summer. Mrs. Love is Mrs. Grable's sister. She has a large family, some married, and some still at home and small. She is teaching her children the Bible so that they, too, may become obedient some day. Mrs. Knapp is Mrs. Grable's daughter. She and her husband have two small children. They have all been diligently studying God's Word to prepare for this step.

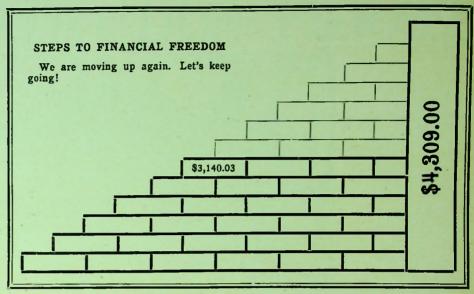

Mr. Parish follows his wife into the church, who was baptized on Easter two years ago. Thus, within a few weeks' time, we have twice seen husbands and wives take their stand together in Christian baptism, and two other families united in faith through the obedience of the husband. Such scenes bring great joy to us all.

Mrs. Seifert has been an attendant for a number of years, and has long contemplated this step. The writer made his home with her for four years.

All these we are happy to welcome into our church fellowship to share with us our hope of life eternal, and the joyous service to our Savior which accompanies it.

Excellent attendance at both Sunday school and church marked the Easter observance. At the evening service the choir presented a musical cantata, "The Dawn of the Kingdom."

M. W. Lyon, Pastor.

THE LAST LINE By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

The correct wording for the last line to the poem appearing on the back cover page of The Restitution Herald of April 4, 1939, follows: "In that day when I make up my jewels."

AN EXPLANATION By James A. Patrick

In the first part of my recent article, "The New Birth," I made a statement that was misunderstood by our folks at Springfield, Ohio. I hasten to make a correction.

I said in my article that I had a discussion with some folks at Springfield that took the position that the new birth and conversion were one and the same thing. It so happens that we have some very good brethren at Springfield, and they are pretty straight as far as truth is concerned, yes, and in every other way. They thought I might have had reference to them, and if I hadn't others might think I had.

The discussion was arranged by our late beloved Sr. Overholser. She and Bro. David Beek went with me to the home of the minister of the other group.

ister of the other group.

Well, you couldn't hold them to anything. As Bro. Beek told Bro. Gordon a few days ago, "They went from Genesis to Revelation." For instance, one of them said that Christ said, "The kingdom of God is within you." I asked, "To whom was Christ speaking?" He answered, "He wasn't speaking to the scribes and Pharisces, that's sure." I told him to look it up. He did, and finally said rather dejectedly, "He was speaking to the scribes and Pharisees, wasn't he?"

After we had talked for a while, and they

After we had talked for a while, and they had done most of the talking. I asked that I be allowed to say a few words. Their whole group, except the minister, got up and left.

group, except the minister, got up and left. Well, Springfield, I had no thought of our brethren when I wrote that article.

"Home, Sweet Home"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Nebuchadnezzar's Dream

By T. A. Drinkard

"The king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream" (Daniel 2:3).

WHAT a dream it was! Nebuchadnezzar's dream so sorely affected him because the God of heaven had previously planned to reveal to this king "what shall be in the latter days," and He chose to present it in this manner. By selecting this method of revelation, the King's worldly magicians, astrologers, and soothsayers were confused and perplexed over the matter. Likewise, today's great men are perplexed. A careful study of this account will convince the most skeptical that God chose a very simple way in which to make known to Nebuchadnezzar some matters concerning the destiny of his own kingdom, and of others that would succeed him in their order. God caused this world-kingdom leader to dream about five kingdoms, but the first four were separated entirely from the fifth, according to Daniel 2:34, 35.

The King saw a great image, and "the form thereof was terrible" (2:31). This great image, which in the dream was made up entirely of metals until the feet were reached, represented world governments from the time that Nebuchadnezzar sat upon his throne as king over Babylon until their overthrow by the establishment of God's mighty kingdom under the personal supervision of Jesus Christ at His second appearing. True it is that the Babylonian kingdom, as such, ceased to exist, but what became of it? It became a part of the kingdom which conquered it, the Medo-Persian. So the gold element of the image became a part of the silver. Likewise, when the second kingdom, represented by the silver, was conquered by the third kingdom of brass all the gold and silver became a part of the brass kingdom, namely, Greece. And when the fourth kingdom of iron came into existence and conquered the brass kingdom, what became of the gold, silver, and brass? All of these elements then became a part of the Roman Empire, just as Austria recently became a part of Germany.

Has the Roman world-power ever disappeared from the earth, since its establishment as such? When this most dreadful of all the world powers—as shown by the image reached the zenith of its power, it contained all the elements of the preceding gold, silver, and brass kingdoms. All earthly world powers have their day. They will run out in the course of time, and here we see the Roman kingdom running out into its ten-toe divisions. I notice that "these kings" (2:44), which I submit are represented by the ten toes of the two feet of the image, are in existence when the kingdom of God is established. Therefore, every carnal element of human government as represented by the various parts of the image, such as "the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold," will be broken to pieces by the greatest kingdom that has ever been established upon earth. The world kingdoms as represented in this dream, and which started with Nebuchadnezzar, will come to an end in the toes of the feet, in their divided state of ten kingdoms. That is the reason why it is and the gold, will be "broken to pieces together" (2:35). You will notice that there was no unity existing between the four powers mentioned in the dream; neither will there be peace and unity between the ten kingdoms referred to by the ten toes, and ten crowns of Daniel 2 and 7.

The present signs clearly indicate that human rule and control are hastening to an early conclusion, which the prophets and Jesus Christ foretold would come, and for which they advised God's people to expect and anticipate. Contrary to the Prophet's advice not to place confidence in the strong arm of the flesh, the general hope and trust is wholly in man. What a surprise awaits those who thus misplace their trust!

Jesus Christ clearly foresaw the "great whirlwind" (Jer. 25:32) of the last days. (Luke 21:25-36.) The fastapproaching general upheaval will be so severe that it will try the hearts of even the faithful men and women. Are we (Please turn to page 11) ready for that time of

The Hope of the Church of God

While Paul wrote of some "having no hope, and without God in the world," the Church of God most surely has a hope which is founded on the very Word of God. It is the hope of the return of Jesus, and the glorious blessings that He will then shower upon the earth. The sleeping saints will then be raised to immortality. The living faithful ones will be changed from mortality to immortality "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

The Church of God looks "for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fushioned like unto his glorious body" (Phil. 3:21). God has appointed us "to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him" (1 Thess. 5:9, 10). "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body" (1 Cor. 15:44). "And as we have borne the image of the earthy (Adam), we shall also bear the image of the heavenly (Jesus)" (v. 49).

The return of Jesus to this earth will be marked with other blessings, too. Being made like Christ, the Church of God will better reflect the light of "the Sun of rightcousness," and will be crowned "kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10). When Jesus comes "in power and great glory" His people will share in that power and great glory to rule the world. When Christ and His saints rule, instead of the war gods, justice and peace will also be brought back from the dead. Then "shall judgment run down as waters, and rightcousness as a mighty stream." "That blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ" draws nigh. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand."

Thus, the hope of the Church of God is necessarily interwoven with the resurrection theme. Our hope involves the second coming of Christ for the very simple reason that there can be no resurrection until He comes who said, "I am the resurrection, and the life." Only at the coming of Christ is He pledged to reward the faithful, except for temporal blessings which are but a foretaste of the showers to come.

Let us understand well that there can be no reward in death, for "the dead know not any thing," and "the wages of sin is death." If death is the price tag of sin, how then could death be a door to glory? Must one commit sin to gain a pass to glory? God's voice plainly calls death an enemy, speaking of Christ, saying, "He must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet," and "the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

The Bible is God's letter to His children. Why should God lie to His own? God cannot lie! And God has promised the day of resurrection and reward. God's promises do not fail. God's Word is more dependable than man's sight. The Flood came! There was an Exodus! The Temple was destroyed! There was an empty tomb! And today the nations are angry and war-mad just as prophesied long ago! "Despise not prophesyings." "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" (Acts 26:8). "God is not a man, that he should lie," and "the things which are impossible with men are possible with God."

While resurrection and the life to come are most clearly taught in the New Testament, the Hebrews of old also believed in the "one hope." Job wrote, "If a man die, shall he live again?" and answered his own question with, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands." He further prophesied, "I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

Abraham "offered up Isaac . . . accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead."

Joseph charged Israel to carry his bones out of Egypt into the Promised Land when the Exodus should take place. He surely foresaw the resurrection.

David prophesied, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."

Jeremiah promised the resurrection of babies slain by Herod when Jesus was sought, saying, "Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: . . . they shall come again from the land of the enemy."

Thus, writers of both Testaments agree that Christ will come to claim His jewels. So, friend, hold high the banner stained in blood. "Fight the good fight of faith." Crusade for Christ, and "thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just" (Luke 14:14).

The Significance of the Tabernacle

Article One

By A. E. Griffiths

A STUDY of the Tabernacle seems especially appropriate in the spring of the year. Therefore, a series of articles on this subject may be welcomed by readers of THE RESTITUTION HERALD.

So many people, especially those who are members of the orthodox churches, fail to understand why Christ died for us, and why He rose again from the dead. The fault is that the majority of people do not study the Bible for themselves, but leave those deep thoughts for the preacher to study and explain. Consequently, they even look to the minister of their church to instruct them as to how they may be saved, instead of asking God who is the Author of salvation.

One idea very prevalent is that God caused His Son to die to appease His anger, whereas the Scripture tells us that God is a God of love, not wrath. Therefore, this theory hardly harmonizes with God's character.

One principle we must bear in mind is that God never changes. When He created this world He knew exactly what was going to happen to it, and to its inhabitants. We all know God placed a curse on the earth after the disobedience of Adam and Eve, because of their sin. But God also foresaw a means of removing that curse without reflecting on His own stability of purpose. We read, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning" (James 1:17). God and Christ are alike in this respect. Paul says of Jesus Christ, that He is "the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever" (Heb. 13:8). Having established the fact that both God and Christ are unchangeable, we can understand that God's plans and purposes are absolute. Nothing can change them. For proof of this let us turn to the Scriptures for a study of the Tabernacle.

We realize that this edifice was intended for the children of Israel in which to assemble for worshiping God after the manner He had commanded, but why was He so particular in giving its component parts and construction in such minute details? Moses not only received all these instructions from God, but was actually given a vision of the whole thing as when completed. Paul says, "Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount" (Heb. 8:5). After Moses had received verbal instructions of how to build the Tabernacle he was actually shown, in a vision, the whole edifice completed, so there could be no mistake in its construction. This causes us to ask, Why this special adherence to detail?

The fact is, the Tabernacle was a prophecy in a material form. Every item of its component parts referred to Christ and His body, or followers, who will be rulers of the earth during the millennial age, in which period the earth will be transformed from wickedness to a condition of righteousness and perfection.

To emphasize how particular God was in instructing Moses to build the Tabernacle a certain way, He said, "Sec, . . . that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount." (Heb. 8:5; Ex. 25:40; 26:30.) Three times God said this, so that there should be no mistake about it.

This teaches us that we must do things according to God's instructions. Man is always altering and improving, as he thinks, on God's plans, but that only brings him into condemnation. In reviewing Israel and their shortcomings, God spoke through Isaiah, saying, "Who hath required this at your hand?" (Isa. 1:12). Israel was intent on offering many sacrifices, though he had previously been told, "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22). Why can't people do what God tells them to do, instead of conjuring up so much useless formality that only vexes God, and leaves those implicated in such things no chance of salvation?

The first instructions concerning the Tabernacle will be found in Exodus 35. The people were told to contribute the materials for its construction. God then selected certain men to be filled with wisdom and knowledge of workmanship, that they could produce the exact results He required. Notice particularly how Bezaleel was "filled . . . with the spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship" (v. 31). Aholiab was also imbued with the same wisdom so that the work might be carried out exactly to God's specifications. People who do not carry out God's instructions are referred to by Christ, saying, "And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity" (Matt. 7:23).

Solomon was wise in his day. He said, "Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions" (Eccl. 7:29). Why will men continue to find out new ways to serve God, when the authorized way is so simple and easy?

The next feature concerning this edifice is that there were two series to it: first, (Please turn to page 10)

The Church of the Living God

Concluded

By J. H. Anderson

JESUS CHRIST owns the church, having bought it with His own blood. "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28). "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:18, 19). Thus, if I am a member of the one true church, I belong to Christ.

Does He own all of me, or only part of me? "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit (mind), which are God's" (1 Cor. 6:19, 20).

Being a member in the church, God owns my mind and body. Then my mind and body should be kept clean and used in His service only. This can be done only by the Word freely used. "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you" (John 15:3). "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth" (John 17:17). "That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water (baptism) by the word" (Eph. 5:26). In Philippians 4:8 we are taught the only way to keep our minds pure: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." By doing this we can keep our minds filled with the things of God, and in this way have pure minds. Our bodies which Jesus bought must be kept clean, and they cannot be kept that way if we fill them with strong drink, or live immoral lives. Paul said, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway' (1 Cor. 9:27).

Of course, the perfect being will not be attained until the change comes at the resurrection. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." This change is pointed out in 1 Corinthians 15:42-54. Read these verses, please. Also, in Philippians 3:21, Paul points out how that Christ will change us, saying that He "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."

The church must obey Christ in all things, and receives His orders through the Bible. "Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord?" (This voice comes only through the Bible.) "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22). "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" (Rom. 6:16). When we were baptized we yielded ourselves unto Christ who became our owner. So, from that time forward we must obey Him. As His orders come only through the Bible, we must believe-have faith-in that Book. (Heb. 11:6.) The more we study that Book the more we shall know of the Master's orders, and the better we can obey them. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:31, 32). Let's keep the Word so that we shall be made free from sin and death when Jesus comes. The close relationship between Christ and the church is clearly shown, (1 Cor. 12:27, 28; Eph. 5:22, 23.)

How do people become members of the church? "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls, . . . praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved" (Acts 2:41, 47). The Lord puts one into the church, but that one is put through the word and baptism.

Can one ever be put out of the church? "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. . . . If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned" (John 15:2, 6). These verses teach that after one has come into the body of Christ, the church, he must bear fruit or God will take him out. "For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them" (2) Peter 2:20, 21). Yes, after we come into the church we can go back into the world, and be lost. When we come into the church we are placed on trial, and the trial lasts until death. (1 Peter 4:17; Matt. 24:13.)

God will give eternal life to every member of the true church. (John 10:27, 28; Rom. 6:23.) In addition to eternal life, He will give the kingdom unto the faithful flock. (Luke 12:32.) He will then give a reward to every one of the church, "according as their work shall be." (Matt. 25: 14-30; Rev. 22:12.)

Thus, the more a member does, the more he will receive. It pays even in this life to serve God. (Mark 10:28-30.) However, the great reward will be granted when Jesus comes and the resurrection takes place—no reward at death. (Rev. 22:12; Luke 14:14; 1 Peter 5:1-4.)

The Old Road

The Boy King—Article 2

By J. E. Adamson

A BOUT nine hundred seventy-five years before the birth of Jesus, and only a few years after the death of Solomon, idolatry became rampant in Israel. Jeroboam "made two calves of gold," and "he set one of them in Bethel and the other he set in Dan." "So he offered upon the altar which he made in Bethel . . .; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, and burnt incense" (1 Kings 12:33).

"And, behold, there came a man of God out of Judah by the word of the Lord unto Bethel; and Jeroboam stood by the altar to burn incense. And he cried against the altar in the word of the Lord, and said, O altar, altar, thus saith the Lord; Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name; and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burned upon thee" (1 Kings 13:1, 2). At this point there happened one of the many dramatic incidents of the Old Testament: "Jeroboam put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand . . . dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him. The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out" (1 Kings 13:4, 5).

We now leave the Old Road with its travelers for a period of 330 years, and we find the land under the rule of a boy King, "Josiah by name," only eight years of age. "He did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, and walked in the ways of David his father" (2 Chron. 34:2).

"In the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places. . . . They brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; . . . he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem." (2 Chron. 34:2-5.) This chapter should be read without missing even a small part of the intense drama described in it—the cleansing and repair of the Temple by Hilkiah the priest and Shaphan the scribe, the finding of the book of the law, and the reading of it before the King. What intense feelings must have been stirred to make the King say, "Go, enquire of the Lord for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great is the wrath of the Lord that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the Lord" (v. 21).

Hilkiah the priest and Shaphan went without delay to the college of prophets in Jerusalem, to Huldah the Prophetess who dwelt there, and they made known their errand. She made answer as dramatic as the outburst of Josiah the King, "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, . . . because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods. . . . As for the king of Judah, . . . say unto him . . . Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God . . . I have even heard thee also. . . . Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither shall thine eyes see the evil that I will bring." (Vv. 23-28.)

On receipt of this message, Josiah "sent and gathered together all the clders of Judah and Jerusalem, and in a public service he made a covenant before the Lord to keep His commandments. Josiah was then about the age of twenty-six years. He called for the keeping of a great Passover in Jerusalem, a most thrilling and dramatic event during which the priests were set in their charges and the Levites were told to put the holy ark in the house of the Lord, and charged, "Serve now the Lord your God." Great numbers of lambs and kids were killed for the Passover, and for the cleansing offerings thousands of cattle were given. There had been no such Passover since the days of Samuel the Prophet.

But now, after a period of peace and prosperity lasting to the thirtieth year of the reign of Josiah, the Old Road again felt the marching feet of armed men. Pharaoh-Necho, King of Egypt, came up to fight against Charchemish on the upper Euphrates River. To reach this city it was necessary to cross over the land of Judah and to pass through the Valley of Megiddo, where so many famous fights have taken place.

Josiah, proud of his land, refused to agree to the transfer of armed troops, and threatened armed resistance.

But Neeho said to him, "What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, ... forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that

A Man After God's Own Heart

By Mrs. William Stine

"But now thy kingdom shall not continue: the Lord hath sought him a man after his own heart, and the Lord hath commanded him to be captain over his people, because thou hast not kept that which the Lord commanded thee."

SUCH was the message Samuel gave to Saul after he disobeyed God. (1 Sam. 13:14.) The Lord then told Samuel to go to the home of Jesse the Bethlehemite, and that God would select a king from among his sons. After preparing a sacrifice and inviting Jesse and his family, Samuel made seven of Jesse's sons to pass before him. Each in turn was rejected by the Lord. Samuel asked if these were all his sons, and Jesse replied that the youngest remained with the sheep. Samuel commanded that this one, also, be brought before him.

"And he sent and brought him in. Now he was ruddy and withal of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the Lord said, Arise, anoint him: for this is he" (1 Sam. 16:12). Samuel took the horn of oil and anointed David, the humble shepherd boy, to be king over Israel.

From that day on the Spirit of God was with David. Soul, however, was troubled by evil thoughts. One of his servants suggested that he send for a man who could play on a harp, that the music might sooth his distracted mind. Another remembered having met David, and recommended him to be cunning in playing the harp, a mighty valiant man of war, prudent in matters, a comely person, and a man whom the Lord was pleased with. Thus, David played for Saul, found favor in his sight, and became his armorbearer.

That David was a mighty man, and that the Lord was with him, was proved when he slew the giant Philistine. A slingshot, five smooth stones, and most important, his faith in God, were David's weapons. Saul then appointed him captain of his armies, and David again proved his title, "a man of war," by the many victories he won for Israel against the Philistines. The people's admiration that had once been Saul's now belonged to David. They cried out, "Saul has slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands."

Jealous hatred burned in the heart of Saul. From that day on he devised ways to kill David. However, Saul's son Jonathan loved David and made a covenant with him to protect him from his father's anger. This he did. Also, the Lord many times delivered Saul unto David's mercy, but David loved his enemy and left him unharmed. On the other hand, only miracles saved David from the murderous Saul.

Saul schemed to have David killed by sending him against the Philistines, and promising to him his daughter Merab in marriage. David was victorious, but Merab was already a bride when he returned. Again, Saul put before him the same proposition for the hand of his second daughter, Michal. David not only won the battle, but also the love of the girl, much to Saul's chagrin. Even though Saul knew the Lord was with David he continually tried to destroy him.

Saul met a dishonorable death in a battle against the Philistines. After having been wounded he fell upon his own sword. Three of his sons, including Jonathan, were slain that same day. This battle was fought while David was fighting the Amalekites. He received news of Saul's death sorrowfully.

David then inquired of the Lord what he must do next. The Lord told him to go to Hebron. There he was anointed king over Judah. For many years there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, but Saul's house grew weaker while David's became stronger. After ruling Judah seven and a half years, David was anointed king by Israel, also. In 2 Samuel 5:4 we read that David began to rule at the age of thirty, and reigned forty years. We recall that Christ began His life's work at the age of thirty when He was baptized, and forty days after His resurrection He completed a period of work on earth.

Nathan continued the work of Samuel after that prophet's death. We read in 2 Samuel 7 the prophecies of the Lord concerning His house and Israel, which prophecies Nathan gave to David. It was promised that Solomon would rule after his father's death, that he would build a temple for God, and that God would guide and chastise him as it might be necessary. Israel would be planted in a land of his own, never again to be oppressed by wicked men, and David's house would be established forever before Him. David offered prayers of thanksgiving for these wonderful promises.

The fact that David was a man after God's own heart did not make him immortal or free from sin. The sin he committed in a weaker moment when he chose to rely on his own strength is considered by man most serious, even to being unforgivable. But we must realize that the Great Judge understands the true intentions of the heart, whether they are to do good or evil. God forgave David for committing adultery with Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah the Hittite, and for sending Uriah to the front ranks of battle where he was slain.

David was not unpunished, however. Just as parents find it necessary to chastise their children to strengthen them against sin, just so God punishes His children. David suffered the loss of his first child that was born to Bathsheba. Also, God said a traitor would raise up in his own household. The traitor was his son Absalom. By flatteries and false promises Absalom gained Israel's admiration, and Israel turned from serving his king. In fact, it became necessary for David to flee for his life. While David was in exile his enemies cursed and threw stones at him, but he would not allow them to be punished. He humbly accepted God's punishment.

David was betrayed by Ahithophel, who committed suicide by hanging as did Judas, the one who betrayed Christ. Absalom, too, finally met his death when the mule upon which he was riding ran through thick boughs of an oak tree that caught his head fast. Joab, a servant of David, then thrust three darts through his heart. The news of Absalom's death sorely grieved David. Israel then repented, and once more claimed David their king.

We conclude the story of "a man after God's own heart" with a Scriptural passage that supports our belief in man's mortality. "So David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David" (1 Kings 2:10).

After studying the life of David we are more able to appreciate the mercy of God, our Father. He, being able to understand our hearts, judges accordingly, and not as man, who judges only by outward appearances. As God was ever ready to forgive and help David, He is ever near to all of His children who continue in Christ. The faith of David is a goal toward which we all should aim. Then the reward of such faithfulness will be ours, which is eternal life.

SWAN SONG

By Arlen Marsh

A CCORDING to Readers' Digest, Robert Ingersoll once called on Henry Ward Beecher just after Beecher had purchased a remarkably good globe. Ingersoll looked at the globe, and then at Beecher.

"I've been looking for something like that," observed the Colonel, "for a long time. Who made it?"

Beecher stared at him in simulated astonishment. "Why, Colonel," he exclaimed, "You should know better than that! It just happened!"

For thirty years Ingersoll had given over the major part of his time to attempts to prove the Bible untrue and religion a fallacy. He had written in pamphlets and magazines and newspapers and had shouted from the housetops that the universe was not the result of a creative process instituted by a god, but had merely "happened" to evolve from a fortuitous combination of circumstances and natural forces.

Ingersoll's arguments are out of date today, but they are typical of the debates put up against Christianity by almost every agnostic. Beecher adopted precisely the tone which was best calculated to embarrass the agnostic; he had fought fire with fire; he had met ridicule with ridicule.

"Are we to believe," Ingersoll had demanded in a twohour lecture a few years before, "that some Divine Providence guided the germs to march into the ark two by two? Are we to assume that the fishes grew feet, and that they strode up the gangplank behind the elephants and fleas, the monkeys and the moles? This is what our Christian acquaintances would have us believe!"

Blessed with the force of the Colonel's personality, the excitement stirred by his eloquence, such arguments as these had been pounding home the theory that there was neither a God in heaven nor more than a figment of truth in the Bible. That the arguments could be shattered at one blow by any skilled debater was beside the point; ridicule would have its effect on minds unaccustomed to looking for facts behind words—ridicule would eventually triumph over halfhearted religious faith, simply because ridicule is unpleasant for everyone to endure when it is directed against him, but is music when it is directed against anyone else.

If any party or clique in the world has the right to use ridicule, it is the Christian church. Voltaire sang the swan song, the death knell, of Christendom; so did Thomas Paine. Voltaire and Paine are practically forgot; the Bible still sells more than ten million volumes a year. Is there any circumstance in history to arouse more scathing satire, more biting ridicule, than that? Yet the church, perhaps because it is motivated by Christian principles but more likely because it has not seized its opportunities, has permitted its chances to turn the agnostics' own weapons upon them to slip past!

Darwin presented a theory to the world. Writers seized upon the theory, modified it, circumscribed it with theories of their own, and offered it to the world as fact. Tests taken time and again by these same writers and pedants established that spontaneous generation of life was not merely incredible, it was definitely impossible; yet, despite the evidence they themselves had accumulated, these seekers after wisdom continued to foist upon the world the thought that life had sprung into being automatically, through no external force, and that it had in itself the power to evolve into ever higher forms. They proved themselves wrong, yet still clung to their beliefs! Could anything be more ridiculous than that?

But because the church had failed to be scornful, because the church had led with its chin instead of its right, the theories of the agnostics took hold even in the ranks of the ministry. Protestant organizations were formed, taking the name of Christianity, to teach the notion that God was merely a primal force, and that He had neither form nor conscious intelligence as intelligence is understood among men. Clergymen ranted at the advances of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, and offered neither argument nor ridicule to support their ranting. As a matter of fact, argument was unnecessary; Beecher's system was by far the best.

As the church lost its grip on men, Christian principles lost their grip on government. Christian principles had had little enough to do with government as it was; now, they became definitely passe. The United States Administration of 1938 was only following a universal trend when it referred in publicity releases about Indian missionary work to the "cheap rascality of Christian soul-saving." Nations which formerly held high principles renounced contractual obligations even to their own citizens; churches labored for political ends rather than for religious purposes; international piracy under the guise of "subduing disorder" and "protecting the rights of nationals" became the general fashion.

Finally A. J. Cronin found a "Sermon From the Snows." In the April, 1939, Readers' Digest, Cronin told of his experience in a small Switzerland church, high up in the glacier country. The minister spoke in German, and Cronin knew no German; but he was able in the first five minutes to catch two words: "Christus" and "Fuehrer." The two words sent Cronin to thinking of the swan song that was being sung for civilization, of the decadence of morality, of the failure of the world to apply either Christian or other religious principles to its activities. And Cronin decided that the cause for this decadence and retrogression which were destroying civilization as cancer destroys the human body was that the earth had forsaken God. . . . When the sermon was ended, Cronin learned from an English friend who spoke German perfectly that his soliloguy had paralleled the minister's sermon exactly.

There has been good reason for the world's forsaking God. The church has consistently adopted the defensive rather than the offensive. It has quarreled uselessly and dangerously within its own ranks. It has been hypocritical and unjust. It has not taken the greatest opportunity of all time to teach its own beliefs, but has permitted erosion to eat into its soil. In the face of ridicule, it has shivered and shaken; but it has not been forthright and honest. It has, in short, permitted the agnostic to sing its swan song and practically to bury it under an avalanche of satire, when it has had all the weapons of mind and faith and emotion at its disposal.

During the last few years, the church has turned itself to prophecy. Crowds have flocked to hear what is to come to pass upon the earth. They have heard of Armageddon; they have been told of the Biblical assertion that seven years will be required to clean up the debris following the last great battle about Jerusalem; they have been taught to watch the persecution of the Jews, to seek for wars and rumors of wars, to anticipate great social and economic cataclysms.

All this has had little effect upon the world. The world knows that disasters exist. The world has watched a war to end all wars, has seen twenty million young men killed, has ohed and ahed over the concentration camps of Germany and what once was a happy Austria. It has provided gas masks for its babies and has buried its gold in vaults beneath the French Seine and the American Kentucky hills. To preach of wars and rumors of wars is nothing new for the now-existing world.

The church has ignored its greatest offensive weaponthe kingdom of God. It has endeavored to frighten men into Christianity rather than to encourage them into it. Those who preach of the tortures suffered by infants in the hottest sections of the medieval hell were no different from those who preach that men should join the church now because of the disasters that will come upon them. Men know disasters will come upon them. Why should the church be pessimistic, too? Let the church preach of peace and the cessation of labor wars. Let the church teach the coming of the Son of God and the establishment of a perfect kingdom. Let the church teach of the optimistic things-the coming of a vigor that cannot be secured from a sunray lamp or a vibrator, the creation of an educational system that will have no Reds and no trouble with the taxes, the alleviation of population maladjustments and unequal marketing arrangements.

The church is no recruiting station to keep men out of war as conscientious objectors; the church is an institution to convert individuals to God and to His Son and to Their work. The church is an active body—or it should be; it has an optimistic message to present, not a pessimistic one. Will it permit the agnostics and the atheists to ridicule it into seething silence, or will it meet ridicule with ridicule and logic? Will it permit men to attend its services merely to satisfy their curiosity about the future, or will it fulfill its divine destiny of turning men to faith in the Golden Rule and its ultimate establishment as the supreme law of the universe? The answer lies altogether in the church itself—and unless it mends its ways, the church will have a future as dark and dismal as the future predicted for the world at large!

THE DOLLAR AND THE CENT

A big silver dollar and a little brown cent, Rolling along together they went, Rolling along the smooth sidewalk, When the dollar remarked—for the dollar can talk:

"You poor little cent, you cheap little mite, I'm bigger and more than twice as bright; I'm worth more than you a hundredfold, And written on me in letters bold Is the motto drawn from the pious creed, . 'In God We Trust,' which all can read.''

"Yes, I know," said the cent,
"I'm a cheap little mite, and I know
I'm not big, nor good, nor bright.
And yet," said the cent, with a meek little sigh,
"You don't go to church as often as I."

Michael, Israel's Angel

By John R. Fiske, Jr.

A NGELS occasionally come to earth. (Dan. 9:22, 23; Gen. 28:12; Matt. 28:2; Luke 1:19, 26; Heb. 1:14.) Their comings are almost always invisible. If the present world is under their subjection (Heb. 2:5), and since they "minister" unto the saints, we can see a reason for this. Further, we can see why Michael is called "Israel's ruler." (Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1, Rotherham.) These references show that Michael was Israel's ruler in Daniel's time, and will still be Israel's invisible ruler "at the time of the end." (Dan. 11:40; 12:1.)

Joshua 5:13-16 (A.R.V.) indicates that in Joshua's time Michael was Israel's "prince," and in Isaiah 63:9 he is called "the angel of his (God's) presence." Michael was God's representative. (Ex. 23:20; 32:34; Gen. 32:24-30; Num. 20:16.) He was emphatically "the angel of God" with Israel. (Ex. 14:19; 23:20, 21-23; Judges 6:11-23; 13: 3-21.) He was Israel's defender in 2 Kings 19:35.

Knowing that Michael was Israel's invisible ruler, we can see how Michael "contended" (Jude 9) with "the devil"—Balaam—"about the body of Moses"—the people of Israel (1 Cor. 10:2) who were the Lawgiver's "body" through baptism in the Red Sea as believers are Christ's body. (Gal. 3:27; Col. 1:18.) This Balaam (Num. 22:22-35) was an adversary (devil) to "the angel of the Lord." Likewise was Judas called a devil in John 6:70. Michael and Balaam "contended" over Israel, but "the angel of the Lord" rebuked him. (2 Peter 2:15, 16.)

We find the "angel of the Lord" appearing unto Moses (Ex. 3:2; Num. 20:16; Acts 7:35, 38), and to many others during Israel's history.

As Christ and Gabriel had the power to veil or to reveal their glory as immortals to mortals (1 John 1:1; Acts 22: 6-13; Luke 1:11, 12, 19, 26; Dan. 10:5-18), so Michael has the same power. (Judges 13:3-21; 6:1-23; Dan. 7:9.) Even when Michael's glory was veiled his countenance was described as "very terrible." As mortals frequently resemble each other as to hair, eyes, and voice, so we note a resemblance "betwixt" Gabriel and Christ as to feet, eyes, voice, etc. (Dan. 10:5, 6, 8-10; Rev. 1:13-15, 17), and Michael and Christ (Dan. 7:9; Rev. 1:14). Since Christ is the "express image" of God's person (Heb. 1:3), and since our "vile body" (Phil, 3:21) is to be changed "like unto his glorious body," and since in the hereafter we are to be "like him" (1 John 3:2), and "as (the) angels of heaven" (Mark 12:25), so that we, too, are in God's likeness (Psalm 17:15), there will be, no doubt, a great personal resemblance in the entire family (Eph. 3:14, 15)-whether man, angel, Christ, or God.

Since Michael is to be Israel's invisible ruler just before Christ's second advent (Dan. 10:13, 21; 12:1), and since Christ is his ruler just after that event (Matt. 2:6; 25:31; Luke 1:31-33), Christ has either dethroned Michael or else Michael has given the kingdom to Christ. Since the first is not possible, it follows that when Christ comes Michael will give over the kingdom or the rulership of the world (Heb. 2:5) to Christ. This being true, then the "one Ancient of days" (Dan. 7:10, A.R.V.), and the "one like unto the Son of man" (7:13), are Michael and Jesus.

Moffatt's Version of Daniel 7:9, 10 is as follows: "I watched until an Assize was held, when a primeval Being sat on the throne of justice, with robes white as snow, the hair of his head pure white like wool; his throne was a blaze of flames and its wheels were burning fire, a stream of fire poured from his presence; millions of angels were at his service and myriads attended him. The court was held and the records were opened." Leesers Version says that "they sat down (on chairs) to hold judgment and the books were opened." Kindly note that Michael is here termed a "primeval being," which he certainly is, but Christ is no more primeval than John the Baptist, who was His senior.

To our mind the "primeval being" and his "millions of angels" who "sat down (on chairs) to hold judgment" are "Michael and his angels." If this is correct we can see how at "that time" when "Michael (shall) stand up" for "thy people"—that is, those whom Michael and his "millions of angels" "found written in the book"—they shall be delivered "from the time of trouble" (Dan. 12:1).

The place where Michael, a "primeval being," and his "millions of angels" "sit down to hold judgment" is the earth, for he is said to "come" (Dan. 7:22), just as truly as the "one like unto the Son of man" is said to "come" (v. 13). Michael's coming is invisible to man, as angels' comings usually are. When he sees the Lord "descend from heaven" "the archangel (will) call" (1 Thess. 4:16, Moffatt) to Him.

If the one "Ancient of days" is Michael, then the one "like unto the Son of man" must be Jesus, for

- (1.) Daniel 7:13 and Revelation 1:13 both speak of "one like unto the Son of man," or "a son of man," but this "one" says, "I have the keys of hell" (Rev. 1:18). Who can this be, but Jesus?
- (2.) The "primeval being" and the "one" of Daniel 7:13 are two persons for the obvious reading implies it. Furthermore, both are spoken of as "his" and "him." One "came to" the other, and they brought "him" before the other "him." Each is, therefore, "one" person separate and distinct from the other. One has "his chair," "his wheels"; the other one "his dominion" and "his kingdom" (Leeser).
- (3.) Mark 14:62 (A.R.V.); Revelation 1:7; Matthew 24:30; 26:64; Mark 9:26; and Luke 21:27, speak of Christ's "coming with the clouds of heaven." This "coming with the clouds of heaven" is shown by 1 Thessalonians 4:16 to mean to "descend from heaven." Since "no man has ascended up to heaven" but Jesus (John 3:13), it follows that only He is the one seen coming with the clouds of heaven to which Daniel 7:13 alludes. How can the saints "come with the clouds of heaven," that is, "descend from heaven." when they were never there? Note the "one like the Son of man" comes "with the clouds" first to the "primeval Being"; then He is "given a kingdom"-exalted to the political heavens. Matthew 25:31, 34 show that "when" Christ comes He is "then" enthroned, and then the time comes that His saints are invited to "possess the kingdom." When the "one like unto the Son of man" (which Revelation 1:13, 17 show to be Jesus) "comes with the clouds of heaven" He is "given a kingdom"-enthroned-then His saints also "take the kingdom" as coinheritors (Rev. 3:21; 2 Tim, 2:12) as also shown by Daniel 7:13, 18, 22, 27.

But, it may be asked in view of the foregoing, What of Revelation 20:11-15? The answer is, The scenes of the two texts are not the same. Revelation 20:11-15 has to do with the postmillennial resurrection for these reasons:

- (1.) "The books" of Daniel 7:10; 12:1, are opened before "the Ancient of Days"—Michael—while those of Revelation 20:11-15 are opened before God.
- (2.) Those in "the first resurrection" are proof against "the second death" (Rev. 20:6); those of Revelation 20: 11-15 are not. This being true, the dead of Revelation 20: 11-15 are not the ones in the "first resurrection."
- (3.) The dead who "awake (to) everlasting life (or) shame" (Daniel 12:1, 2) have their books, we repeat, "opened" before "the Ancient of Days," or Michael, and as a consequence the living are then delivered from the time of trouble, and many of the dead awake; while those of Revelation 20:11-15 first stand before God, then their books are opened.
- (4.) Daniel 7:9 speaks of "thrones" and "a throne"; Revelation 20:11-15 only of a "throne." In one "the throne was like the fiery flame," while the other is "white." Keep in mind, this is descriptive as to colors of each "throne" during the opening of their books. The first speaks of judges who "sat down (on chairs) to hold judgment" (Leeser), while the second omits this and deals with the ones "judged."
- (5.) The books of Daniel 7:10,13 are opened just before the coming of the "one like unto the Son of man," and therefore just before His reign commences; the books of Revelation 20:11-15 are opened just before death is east into the lake of fire for destruction, and therefore just before His reign ends. (1 Cor. 15:24, 26.) So the two texts are separate and distinct from each other.
- (6.) In Daniel 7:9, 10; 12:1, the "garments" of the coming one who was "Ancient of days" (A.R.V.) were "white," as are also the garments of "angels" (Rev. 4:4; Acts 1:10), and the immortal Christ is "sprinkled with blood" (Rev. 19:13; Isa. 63:1-3).

As God shall "judge the world" by Christ (Acts 17: 31), so Christ in turn shall "judge the world" by His saints. (1 Cor. 6:3; Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:30; Rev. 20:4; Psalm 149:9.) The angels, too, will assist Him in judgment by opening the books before His coming (Dan. 7:9, 10, 13, 14); gathering the elect at His coming (Matt. 24:31), etc. When this is done the saints will assist in executing upon the world the judgment written. (1 Cor. 6:2; Psalm 149:9.)

"thou shalt make," and the second, "and he made." To some minds this appears to be repetition, but it is necessary because God has said, "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established" (2 Cor. 13:1). See also Hebrews 10:28; John 8:17; Deuteronomy 17:6.

These particulars are recorded in Exodus 25 to 31. We find that God used this system of repeating to make things sure. For instance, when Pharaoh had a memorable dream, we read, "For that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass" (Gen. 41:32). So, there is reason in these double recordings.

There are certain combinations that always attend the workings of God, plan and fulfillment; command and obedience; prophecy and history; divine purpose and realization. These conditions always follow in sequence. We must remember Paul's words: "The law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things" (Heb. 10:1). Everything that occurred centuries ago was a forecast of what would happen in the future, or in other words, the time of the end.

When Moses came down from the mount, having received commands from God, he found Israel had apostatized; when Jesus came down from heaven (as He said in type), He found the same condition, only worse. Moses cast the tables of stone from him and broke them; Jesus cast the law from Him, "nailing it to his cross" (Col. 2:4), and so fulfilled the Mosaic operation. Thus, we see how the law was the shadow of good things to come. It is no wonder, then, that Jesus said, "There is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust" (John 5:45). If Israel could not believe Moses, how could be believe Christ? At Christ's first advent He drove the apostates from the temple with a whin: at His second advent He will cast them into outer darkness. And as Moses flung the tables of the law from him, so Christ at His second advent will throw the invitation of the gospel from Him and close the door, admitting no more into the kingdom.

After Moses had chastised the people he returned to the Lord, and said, "This people have sinned a great sin, and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—" (Ex. 32:31, 32). Here is the foreshadow of Christ's words on the cross, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Then He ascended to heaven to intercede for sinners.

We see by these references how all the doings and sayings of Moses—both of which were inspired by God—were a shadow of things that Christ would say and do many centuries later. All these incidents help us to realize how the law of Moses prophesied the things that were going to take place in the day that Christ was to be born of the Virgin Mary, and in the day yet future when He will come to set up the kingdom, and thus fulfill all the prophecies God gave to men all down the ages. This illustrates, too, how the Bible, although written by many men and at times far apart, harmonizes in all its parts. Combined, it forms a complete Book with no discord or contradiction.

There is another parallel in the fact that Moses had the commands of God written on stone. Paul says, speaking of the words of Christ, that they are "written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart" (2 Cor. 3:3). These final instructions of God were provided for the purpose of placing the indelible imprint of God upon His own children, so that their dead bodies will be legible to Him at the time of the resurrection when He shall distinguish them from the refuse of which the world is so full.

Christ will soon descend to the earth to establish the kingdom of His Father. At that time Christ will set up a new Tabernacle not founded on the law of Moses, because the sacrifice of bulls and goats could not purge sin. The blood of Christ not only purged man from sin, but brought in a new covenant (Heb. 9:12-15), and that covenant included the new Tabernacle in which God will be worshiped during the millennial age. It will be the Temple of Ezekiel's prophecy. This will be the most magnificent and largest building the world has ever seen.

Here again we shall have a repetition of the Mosaic law. While the kingdom will be ruled by Christ and His immortal saints, the subjects will be the mortal nations saved from the destruction. They will once more give sacrifices to God: "Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt offering and whole burnt offering: then shall they offer bullocks upon thine altar" (Psalm 51:19). When Isaiah gives us a vision of the future kingdom, he says, "Their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar; for mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people" (Isa. 56:7).

We see by these references that the law of Moses was a shadow of the things that would be accomplished in the future, and in the day of the kingdom the same condition will point back to what Christ's death accomplished. These thoughts bring us back to the study of the Tabernacle, which we shall have to now reserve for our next article.

trouble"? It is on the way, just as surely as God's Word is true.

May God give us strength to now do the work that He expects of us. May we open our eyes to the opportunities for service in that work, and go forward to do the things that should be done.

LEST ANY MAN SHOULD BOAST

By D. G. Harvey

"For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast" (Eph. 2:8, 9).

PAUL said, "Though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" (1 Cor. 9:16). How different it is in our day. Men worship and serve the creature more than the Creator. (See Rom. 1:25.) It is not uncommon to hear ministers boast of conversions, forgetting that the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. The man is but the instrument of God. "But now ye rejoice in your boastings: all such rejoicing is evil" (James 4:16).

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away" (2 Tim. 3:1-5). These are sad conditions! Can this great falling away be of those who are truly converted by the gospel of Christ? Can one of those added to the church by the Lord (Acts 2:47) be among that number?

It seems, rather, that these weaklings must be the members who were but converted by man. They are our own work. Then, what a failure our work has been! Where now is our "confidence of boasting"?

"Go work in my vineyard, there's plenty to do,
The harvest is great and the lab'rers are few.
There's weeding and fencing and clearing of roots,
And plowing and sowing and gath'ring of fruits.
There are foxes to take, there are wolves to destroy:
All ages and ranks I can fully employ.
I've sheep to be tended and lambs to be fed,
The lost must be gathered, the weary ones led.
Go work in my vineyard, there's plenty to do,
The harvest is great and the lab'rers are few."

he destroy thee not. Nevertheless, Josiah would not turn his face from him, . . . and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of Megiddo. And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore wounded' (35:21-23).

His servants took him back to Jerusalem, where he died. "And all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah."

Convincing Men!

In the days before Christ, God dealt directly with man. Up to a certain time He dealt with individuals, and then with a nation, Israel. Even then we find that He oftentimes selected a certain one, and gave him instructions. However, we, as ambassadors and ministers of Christ, are now dealing with the people of the world, and we oftentimes feel that our work is a great task. We become discouraged, and feel that everything that we are doing has become as nothing, that people will never come to Christ, or desire to learn of Him. It is but natural for us to become discouraged when we see so many more people on the side of sin than are on the side of Christ, but we should not. Even God, when He dealt personally with men, had to use every means to convince them that He was truly God.

Consider Moses, the leader of Israel. When God first came to him. He did so through the medium of the burning bush that was not consumed. One would think that such a phenomena as this would satisfy Moses that it was truly God who called him, but it was not enough. We find that while Moses believed in God after this, that he was afraid that the people would not believe him when he told them the things that God desired. It is then that we find recorded in Exodus 4 how God changed the rod of Moses into a serpent, then back into a rod; how He caused Moses' hand to be leprous when he thrust it into his robe, and became normal when he withdrew it. The question that God asked Moses in the second verse of this chapter could easily be one that we can ask ourselves when we become discouraged and think that we have not the ability to do a certain thing. The question was, "What is that in thine hand?" Moses was finally convinced that he was able to do God's will, if God would but help him.

Gideon, a later leader of Israel, was as hard to convince of his duties as was Moses, if not more so. Gideon was the son of a poor man and had never done anything great in Israel. Thus he could not believe that he was to be a "leader in Israel," and asked of God this question, "If now I have found grace in thy sight, then shew me a sign that thou talkest with me." So Gideon went and made ready a sacrifice for God, and took it to an altar to make the sacrifice. While he was doing this an angel of God gave him instructions, and then took his staff, touched the sacrifice, and it was consumed by fire. When Gideon perceived that it was the angel of God, he truly believed. Later, when God sent Gideon against the enemy to save Israel, Gideon demanded another sign. He told God that He would put a fleece of wool on the floor, and if the dew was upon the fleece only, and not on the rest of the floor, that he would believe. This was done, but Gideon was not yet satisfied. He again put down the fleece, and asked God if He would send dew upon the ground and let the fleece be dry. This God did, and Gideon was finally convinced that God was with him.

We, then, through Christ which strengtheneth us, must use every means available to bring men to Christ. Show them through our living that the Christ way is the best way.

Are You True to Your Convictions?

Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

I am wondering how many can truthfully answer this question in the affirmative. I dare say, if the plain truth were known, not many would be able to say that they continue true to their convictions, although outwardly they may appear to. Young people, let us beware of false pretenses. Let us stand up for the truth, even though the consequences seem unpleasant.

Do you always agree with the majority just to be in accordance with the group? When the majority is in the wrong and you feel in your heart that it is, do you stand true to your convictions? It is good for you if you are not swayed by the majority. Only by bravely standing up for what is right can Christians press onward, and gain any noticeable ground. As a general rule the Christian is in the minority, and his ideas or standards do not fit in with the ideas or standards of others. Here, then, is the place where the test comes. Will the Christian forsake his idea of what he believes to be the right, or will he move with the crowd? A Christian cannot always be changing; he must remain true and steadfast, if he is to grow in grace and knowledge. A true Christian is one who cannot be moved. "Just like a tree that is planted by the waters, I cannot be moved," is his motto. He has standards of well-being, habits, ways of conduct, and morals, that are not easily shaken by what others might think, say, or do. He is like a rock; nothing can make him budge from those standards of right and wrong. Unless you bravely face the facts, others will never know that you are a Christian, or that you have any Christian convictions.

Why not stay true to your convictions? You will grow in spiritual, moral, and intellectual attainments, and at the same time develop a steadier character. "If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again."

"After he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go into Macedonia" (Acts 16:10).

The Macedonian Call

Paul wanted Barnabas to go with him on his second journey. However, Barnabas wanted to take John Mark along, and Paul didn't. So, Barnabas finally went his way with John Mark, while Paul set out on his journey with Silas.

Paul and Silas began the second journey by revisiting Derbe, Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch in Pisidia. It was at Lystra that Paul found Timothy. He was a young man who had learned of God from his mother and grandmother. Later on Paul wrote some letters to Timothy.

After visiting these cities, they preached in several others also. They finally came to Troas. It was there that Paul received a vision in which a man from Macedonia appeared, saying, "Come over into Macedonia, and help us."

Paul was willing to go to work wherever God called him. They began at once to get ready for the trip to Macedonia. They went by boat to two other cities before they finally arrived at Philippi where they stayed for some time.

Although Philippi was the chief city of Macedonia, there was no house of worship there. Philippi was ten miles inland, and an important gold mining city. In the cities where there were a great number of Jews they generally had a synagogue. However, among the followers of Christ, we again find the group without a church building. You will remember that when the church of God prayed for Peter to be delivered the people were met in the "house of Mary." Paul gathered with the others at a river bank where they met for prayer. Paul lost no opportunity to spread the gospel. His efforts were rewarded, too, for Lydia, a seller of purple, was converted and baptized. She, too, began to work for the Lord. She invited Paul and Silas to stay at her home while they were in Philippi. It appears that the house of Lydia became the gathering place for the Christians of Philippi. It is interesting to note that this is the church that "sent once and again" unto Paul's need for money while he was in Thessalonica. Lydia's hospitality and Christianity bore rich fruit, did they not?

Location Map Study

Have you been using the full-page map on the inside cover of your Truth Seekers' Quarterly? Let us trace Paul's second journey, using this map.

This trip took Paul north from Antioch in Syria, and west through Cilicia in Asia Minor. He most likely went through Tarsus, his birthplace. As he journeyed westward he revisited the four churches: Derbe, Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch in Pisidia. This last city is not named, but you can see the dot for it. It is almost where the dot would be to dot the capital "I" of Iconium. Do you see it? They preached at several other cities, and finally went to Troas, which is on the eastern coast of the Aegean Sea. From there they went to Philippi in Macedonia.

Heart Gardens

I hope your heart gardens are ready to be planted, for this is the season to sow seeds. Isn't it wonderful that the little tiny seeds we plant, with proper care, will grow into beautiful flowers! Flowers of truth, love, loyalty, kindness, purity, goodness, and fairness—all springing from little deeds, their seeds.

But there is more to it than just planting the seeds. They must be warmed by the sun—God's love. They need rain, too—little showers like little troubles that make us grow strong and brave. And then we watch impatiently for the blossoms to appear, but it takes a while for the seeds to grow. Then one day we notice that other things are growing up besides our flowers—weeds. Unless they are pulled up they will choke the growth of our lovely blossoms. What are these weeds? Well, some we might call bad thoughts, lies, unkind acts, but the biggest and toughest of all is self-ishness. It keeps springing up, and continually needs to be plucked out.

However, with sun and rain for growth and with careful weeding, our gardens are still in danger. For destroying bugs can fall upon the flowers and ruin the beauty in no time. And what was once beauty becomes ugliness. While the weeds are enemics that grow up within our heart gardens, there are also enemies from without that come like an army and kill the lovely flowers—these destroying bugs that might be bad friends, bad books. And you, the gardeners, must protect your heart gardens from such blight.

God looks at each one of our heart gardens, and He is so happy when they produce beautiful flowers!

BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD

(Near Tipp City, Ohio)

Bro. J. A. Patrick of Ashland, Ohio, spoke both morning and evening Easter Sunday. All were delighted to have an ordained minister of the gospel with us again. Sunrise services were held at seven o'clock.

April 10, Bro. Patrick officiated at the wedding of Sr. Margaret Lehman and Earl Kesling of Eaton, Ohio. This was the twentyfourth wedding anniversary of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. David Lehman. The bride, attired in blue erepe, carried tea roses, while her attendant, Mrs. Glen Wissong, attired in beige and brown, carried yellow roses. The groom, an efficient radio electrician, was at-tended by Glen Wissong. The ceremony took place at 7:45 p.m. before an improvised altar of ferns and lilies in the home of the bride's

The Ladies' sewing circle met April 14 with

Sr. Dorothy Demmitt.

The Berean classes are meeting at the church again, after meeting for several weeks in different homes.

If all goes as planned, Bro. Harvey Krogh will hold a two-weeks' meeting here, starting April 23. All are urged to attend and feast on the spiritual food he is sure to bring us.

Sunday evening services the past month have been conducted by Bros. A. J. Hoke, Earl Pearson, and the Berean classes. E. M. Pearson, Reporter.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS

Easter morning at six o'clock we held a sunrise service here. We read Acts 8:26-39, and, beginning at the same scripture, retold the story of Jesus, stressing the fact that it was "the Lord" who was placed in the tomb and was raised again "the third day." The invitation was given and three, who had expressed privately their intention of being baptized in the faith, came forward and publicly professed their faith in Christ.

At 9:30 a.m. we met again for an Easter program given by the children. Immediately after the program we gathered on the beach, and Bro. John W. Polinard, his wife Irene, (3413 Ave. E), and Mrs. Bernice Whitley. (3523 Ave. D), were baptized into Christ. We again assembled at the church to partake of the bread and cup, in memory of the Lord's

Our March report is: Ater, Texas, (4,5), 2 sermons; Mullin, Texas, (11, 12), 3 sermons; Cleveland, Ark., (18, 19), 3 sermons; McGintytown, Ark., (20, 21), 2 sermons; Little Rock, Ark., (22, 23), 2 sermons; Driggs, Ark., (25, 26), 3 sermons, a total of 15 sermons mons.

I am very glad to present this report, as it indicates that an effort is being made to place the gospel before the brotherhood, and the world. Yes, the brethren need their portion of gospel truth in order to grow as God would have them grow, and help to protect them from error that is often "privily" brought in (2 Peter 2:1). We plead that the Church of God carry forward the work of preaching the gospel; upholding and defending the faith and doctrine that has been such a comfort and joy to so many that have gone down the valley and shadow of death, and which now means so much to us. Responsibility rests upon those that know the truth, and failure to acknowledge and assume that duty that is our portion will bring us sorrow in the end. May the Father add His blessing. T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

Easter services at the Eden Valley church were highly satisfactory. The building was practically filled, and in attendance were people from Minneapolis, St. Paul, Isle, from the state, and from Cogswell, N. D. In the evening our audience numbered around fifty.

Bro. Earl Brossard who has been in University Hospital, Minneapolis, for the past three months is steadily improving, and hopes to be able to return home in the near future.

We have resumed our Sunday evening services for the summer months, also our Berean meetings on Thursday. We feel that these meetings are a vital part of our church life. Gerald L. Cooper, Pastor.

ELIZABETH FRANCES ORCHARD

Elizabeth Frances Orchard was born December 28, 1852, in Cooperstown, Ill., and died April 8, 1939, at her home in Los Angeles, Calif. The major portion of her life was spent in the vicinity of her birthplace, where she was familiarly known as Jennie Cox.

All her near relatives had preceded her in

In 1923 she came to Los Angeles, where she was married to Bro. J. E. Orchard. He also preceded her in death, Aug. 17, 1931, after having kindly made ample provision for her care as long as she should live, by his nicee Mrs. E. J. Fiscus. A fond mother could not have cared for an only child more tenderly, than Mrs. Fiscus cared for Aunt Jenny during her gradual decline, and her final lingering Sr. Orehard was a devout student of God's Word. Early in life she accepted the teaching of the return of Christ to establish God's kingdom on the earth. The Scriptural teaching of man's condition in death, and the promise of resurrection were stressed to the goodly number who were assembled at the Pierce Brothers' Parlors to pay their last respects on April 10. She was laid by her husband in Roschill Cemetery. Emma C. Railsback.

SARAH FACHNIE

Sarah Fachnic was born August 15, 1881, in Ontario, Canada. She died February 26, 1939, at her home in Waterville, Wash. She came to Douglas County forty years ago, and lived in the Fachnic home in the south end of town till her death.

On May 18, 1912, she united with the Church of God, and was a faithful member of that denomination, loved and respected by all who knew her.

She is survived by two brothers, William of Chelan, and Fred of Withrow; and one sister. Mrs. Susan McIntyre of Alberta, Canada, who has been living with her for some time.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Thomas Undertaking Parlors in Waterville.

"Home, Sweet Home"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Conditions of entrance into Golden Rule Home are as liberal as absolute security permits. Write for full particulars concerning the Home and its advantages. Or, better still, come and visit the Home itself and let the Family tell their own story of its advantages and comforts.

War Madness, the Sign of Christ's Coming

By C. A. Smead

(A sermon delivered by the president of the Michigan Conference, at its recent session.)

You have gathered here in conference because of a deep feeling of need in your hearts. In this world evil seems to gain the victory and might crushes right. You who love righteousness and hate iniquity need to be assured and reassured of the final triumph of right. You are gathered here to receive that which will reaffirm your faith, and send you forth with new courage as good soldiers of Christ Jesus.

You are fervent believers in a golden age of righteousness and peace upon this sin-battered home of ours. You long for an end to this tragic misrule of man that has seourged the world with strife and soaked the earth in misery. To you I declare glad tidings—the gleams of the golden morning are plainly visible on the hills. Man's night is almost over. The unclouded day is at hand. Soon righteousness and peace shall clothe the earth as a garment and from every throat in every nation praises shall swell to God on high.

In presenting this message to you it will be necessary, because of the exigencies of time, to pass over many notable harbingers of the coming of the kingdom of heaven to earth, and to settle on just one general sign of the times. Thus, we shall only mention, in passing, such weighty signs as, the return of Israel, last-day changes in Bible lands, social conditions as in the days of Noah, and the lukewarm Laodicean church. These subjects are worth your diligent attention as gleams of the coming morning.

In presenting the subject of "War Madness, the Sign of Christ's Coming," we apparently are found exulting over the most tragic sorrows with which the human race is afflicted. Such, however, is not our intent. Our exultation is over the promises of God which these sorrows proclaim to us.

A certain man laboring over a muddy road was directed how to find the smooth highway. He was told the worst part of the road was found just before coming to the good highway. So, when the man came to the deepest mud-holes he took hope and courage, and plunged exultantly through, knowing what lay beyond. Even so, we hopefully portray the evidences of war madness in our present civilization, hoping to enforce the words of James 5:8: "Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

"What shall be the sign of thy coming?" The disciples desired a sign that all could understand—from the youngest to the oldest, from the least lettered to the most educated—a universal sign that people of all the civilized world could see at a glance. The Lord Jesus, looking down the corridor of time, saw the turmoil of the last days, saw the world crashing in the earthquake of universal war. He saw beyond the abyss of the great tribulation, and saw the new world rising at His command when the carnage is over and the smoke has cleared away. Therefore, He spoke to His disciples about the world plunging into the chaos of war and its attendant evils as the birth pangs of a new world. Yes, the crazed, war-mad world of the last days, wasted by famine, ridden by pestilence, recling helplessly in terrifying earthquake, are evidences of a new birth about to take place. A new world is to be born!

"And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet" (Matt. 24:6). In other words, there shall be the misery of war all down the long tragic descent. Do not be troubled at this, for "nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places" (v. 7). "For" here suggests, I am going to tell you what to be troubled about: When you see a sudden increase in the number, extent, and savagery of war—out of all proportion to the records of history—when you see the greatest famines ever suffered by man, the most devastating pestilences, the most ruinous (Please turn to page 10)

We Visit Busy Churches

It was the privilege of your editor and family on Sunday, April 23, to visit the churches of our recent pastorate in Ohio. In the morning we worshiped with the Lawrence-ville brethren, and in the afternoon and evening we worshiped with the Brush Creek brethren. Both churches are busy, progressive, and joyful. At Brush Creek Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., was beginning a series of evangelistic services. His Sunday evening audience numbered well over a hundred persons in rapt attention.

Lawrenceville Says, "It Can Be Done"

The Lawrenceville Church of God deserves special mention. The brethren are few, but all are zealous and optimistic. They are working, and God is blessing them.

Like members of many of our smaller churches, some of the Lawrenceville brethren had become discouraged, some had moved away, some of the very pillars had fallen in the sleep of death, some could not clearly see just what should be done but continued with faith in Providence, and some were resigned to merely keeping a candle flickering until the Lord should come.

Then, the power of youth rose up to claim God's blessings that were waiting there. The best fruit is often in the top of the tree; it requires effort to find the blessing, but God puts it there. The church being once inspired, youth did not work alone. Every member volunteered.

"We need a full-time pastor, a real worker, and one solid in the faith." God provided Bro. Grover Gordon.

"We should have a basement under our church. We would then have more Sunday school room, and we could move the furnace down there so that our worship would not be disturbed when 'Uncle' Dave shovels in the coal." God provided better than the prayer. The Father would have given it sooner had it been really wanted before!

"While we're working, let's install a new furnace and air conditioning." God put Bro. A. J. Hoke to work.

"With just a little sacrifice we could remodel the whole church." They climbed a little higher in the tree, and God put fruitage there!... Lawrenceville,

Bro. M. W. Lyon Sends Cupid to School

Cupid has shot many arrows, and he is going to continue shooting. He seldom misses the target when he once lets loose the string, but should he miss there are always other arrows in his quiver. Many an arrow binds two hearts together in love for life, but some arrows only rend the hearts to make them bleed for life. Judge, beware when you attempt to pull an arrow out!

Cupid is very young. His skill is pitifully shamed by his careless selection of hearts to be joined. Cupid, though, is growing up. Whether or not he likes it, he is being sent to school. It is time for him to go, even though it may slow up his work, a little, that when he graduates he may shoot with wisdom as well as with skill.

Cupid will learn that arrows pointed with poison are fatal, but that those pointed with love "never faileth." He will learn that some hearts are pure and others foul, that opposites attract only when they are magnetized and that magnetism wears out. He will learn in physiology that two hearts beat as one only when the pulse of two souls are in rhythm. He will learn from statistics that the spirit of a certain Galilean is the best seal to marriage. A course in sociology will make him repent for mixing races, and for the other adulteries he has tried to bless with little more than an arrow, or two, or three, or four, or five, or six.

Cupid will learn in arithmetic that marriage is a multiplier (which it should be), and common sense will teach him that God never intended a family to live on love alone. He will learn in bookkeeping that when the stork puts in his bill it is just an initiation to a half that has never yet been told. In fractions he will learn that a "house divided against itself shall not stand."

Cupid will learn in algebra how to figure in minus quantities, and it is a compulsory course! In geometry he will learn how to make ends meet, and will hear much about theories that help not at all in taking care of "notes" which his course in music will most gently suggest.

Cupid, you are just a naked urchin. You must go to school, and unless you are careful the red will drip from your arrows onto your report eard. Your deportment is already bad. You need a shaking up, and we are most pleased that Bro. M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Golden Rule Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, is giving it to you.

Building the Homes of Tomorrow

In Two Parts—Part One

By M. W. Lyon

Betty and Bob have been keeping steady company of late. They are always seen together. If we could look into their secret thoughts, would we see their rosy dreams of the future forming air eastles of wondrous design, visualizing each other as possible partners together in a home which is to be? Ah, we do not know. Only they know, and they are not telling-yet.

Perhaps this is a picture of yourself, for I am sure that just at this moment, among the thousands who may chance to read these words, there must be couples living together those eestatic courtship days! Or perhaps you are a fond parent, and this is a picture of your son or daughter. How anxiously you watch their intimate companionships, hoping, praying their choice when it is made will be a happy one.

Never, probably, did two lovers walk hand in hand in the moonlight who did not hope their bright dreams would be fulfilled. Even in the face of domestic tragedies of those who had walked the road before them, they still insisted, in spite of all, "This won't happen to us. Our love is different. It is going to last. Nothing will ever come between us."

We wish it might be so. Yet the relentless law of statistics decrees that for every six couples who stand at the altar to pledge their vows to each other one couple will dissolve their partnership in the divorce court. The chances of happiness in marriage have been decreasing so rapidly that now when you get married you have only five chances in six of staying married! And what shall we say of the countless number of homes where husband and wife fight like many cats and dogs, and of those which are far from happy but cannot bring themselves to the publicity and shame of a formal divorce, who never get on the record? A distressing picture indeed!

Why should so many homes be broken on the rocks of discord in spite of the almost universal desire to make marriage a success? The answer, I think, we may find largely in three contributing causes.

First of these is ignorance. Young people do sincerely want to make a go of it, but they simply don't know how. They have studied readin', writin', 'rithmetic, grammar, geography, business, cooking, and Elizabethan literature, but not how to be happy though married. Their chance is about the same as that of a girl seeking a job as private secretary who doesn't know typing or shorthand.

Second in causes of marital unhappiness is thoughtlessness. We assume too much. We hope everything will turn out all right, without taking any special pains to make it so. We forget that it takes more than sex appeal to build a happy home. Young people leap recklessly into marriage, without regarding whether their prospective partners are suited to them or not. Their parents, knowing the things that might spare them much, cruelly, thoughtlessly, leave them unsaid and sidestep their solemn responsibility. How many of us would wish to buy even a house on such a haphazard policy?

And third is tradition. We are just about as bad as the Pharisees of old, who were scrupulous in their observance of the traditions of the fathers, but cared little for the needs of men. They tithed mint and anise and cummin but neglected the weightier matters of the law, justice, mercy, and truth. "Oh, dear," warns Madame Grundy, "We must not speak of these things. It simply isn't done." And so when our children have inquired about the unknown mysteries, we have cried, "Shame, shame," or have deceived them with some stork fable or anything to conceal the truth, so that they have been forced by our hypocrisy to resort to unworthy sources to learn the facts of life. So there has grown up about marriage a sort of joke. We have made the most sacred day of a person's life a day of sport and ribaldry.

happiness in marriage, and by our fear of doing anything different from what has always been done.

Now I fancy I can hear some good old father or mother with ten children rising up and saying, "What does that upstart of a bachelor think he knows about marriage? I've done a pretty good job of raising my family, and I don't need anyone to tell me how to do it!"

You are quite right, my dear parent. It is not you I am concerned about-not at all. But what of the myriads of young couples whose story is not such a happy one? What of the countless number of children with neither father nor mother nor real home, left to shift for themselves or live with strangers because they had the tough luck to have parents who didn't do such a good job of it? I speak for them. In the name of the blasted happiness of multitudes, in the name of the broken homes which fill our land from one end to the other, I ask you, which is better, to tell your sens and daughters what is before them so that they can face the future prepared, intellectually-and psychologically-or to stand by like Pharisees and say with smug unconcern, "Let them learn by experience, the same as we did"?

There are two kinds of knowledge in this world, that which we get firsthand and that which we get secondhand. You have heard it said by them (Please turn to page 9)

Pride and Ostentation Condemned

By R. A. Curtis

"THE fear of the Lord is to hate evil: pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the froward mouth, do I hate" (Prov. 8:13). "Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall" (Prov. 16:18). We need our merciful Father's protection "from the pride of man," and "from the strife of tongues." (Psalm 31:20: 27:5; 59:12.) "A rod of pride" is found "in the mouth of the foolish," and pride and contention are generally found working as teammates under a common master. (Prov. 14:3; 13:10; Rom. 6:16; Psalm 91:1-4; 124:1-8.) "A man's pride shall bring him low: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit" (Prov. 29:23).

Pride, loftiness, and arrogancy are generally found together (Jer. 48:29), in accord with the pithy saying, "Birds of a feather flock together." "Pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness," together with her haughtiness and neglect "of the poor and needy," caused Sodom's overthrow. "The Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire," which destruction of the proud and sinful was "an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly." (2 Peter 2:6; Jude 7; Gen. 19:24, 25.) Pride is ever the forerunner of abasement. (Dan. 4:37; 5: 18-21.) Pride, with its concomitant evil thoughts, come from within, "and defile the man" who gives them lodgment in his heart. (Mark 7:20-23.)

Even gifted political and ecclesiastical leaders have to manifest discretion in their leadership, and not to think of themselves "more highly than (they) ought to think" (Rom. 12:3). A bishop should not be a "novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil" (1 Tim. 3:6). "Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble" (1 Peter 5:5).

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that docth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:15-17).

I quote the following beautiful stanzas, written by some unknown author, which I memorized over sixty-five years ago. (William Knox was the Author.—Editor.) They seem to climax this article so nicely that I present them as a supplement.

"O why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

Like a swift-flitting meteor, a fast-flying cloud,

A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,

He passeth from life to his rest in the grave.

- "The leaves of the oak and the willow shall fade,
 Be scattered around and together be laid;
 And the young and the old, and the low and the high,
 Shall moulder to dust and together shall lie.
- "The child that a mother attended and loved,
 The mother that infant's affection who proved,
 The husband that mother and infant who blessed,
 Each, all, are away to their dwellings of rest.
- "The maid on whose brow, on whose cheek, in whose eye, Shone beauty and pleasure,—her triumphs are by;
 And the memory of those who have loved her and praised,
 Are alike from the minds of the living erased.
- "The hand of the king that the sceptre hath borne,
 The brow of the priest that the mitre hath worn,
 The eyes of the sage, and the heart of the brave,—
 Are hidden and lost in the depths of the grave.
- "The peasant whose lot was to sow and to reap,
 The herdsman who climbed with his goats to the steep,
 The beggar who wandered in search of his bread,—
 Have faded away like the grass that we tread.
- "The saint who enjoyed the communion of heaven, The sinner who dared to remain unforgiven, The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just, Have quietly mingled their bones in the dust.
- "So the multitude goes, like the flower and the weed,
 That wither away to let others succeed;
 So the multitude comes, like those we behold,
 To repeat every tale that hath often been told.
- "For we are the things our fathers have been;
 We see the same sights that our fathers have seen,—
 We drink the same stream, we feel the same sun,
 And run the same course that our fathers have run.
- "The thoughts we are thinking our fathers would think;
 From the death we are shrinking, they, too, would shrink;
 To the life we are clinging, they, too, would cling;
 But it speeds from us all like the bird on the wing.
- "They loved, but their story we cannot unfold;
 They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
 They grieved, but no wail from their slumbers will come;
 They joyed, but the voice of their gladness is dumb.
- "They died,—ay, they died; and we things that are now, Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow, Who walk in their dwellings a transient abode, Meet the changes they met on their pilgrimage road.

"Yea, hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
Are mingled together in sunshine and rain;
And the smile and the tear, and the song and the dirge,
Still follow each other like surge upon surge.

"Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death,
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud,— Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

Is His Yoke Easy?

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

"For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matt. 11:30).

THESE are the words of our Savior, and blessed words to those who have heavy burdens to bear. Every one of us has, or shall soon have, the burdens of life upon us. Is there any help from Him?

First, Is His yoke easy and His burden light? We have heard it said that the Christian life is a hard life. What about this? Jesus told His disciples, "Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake." "But take heed to yourselves: for they shall deliver you up to councils; and in the synagogues ye shall be beaten: and ye shall be brought before rulers and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them." "They shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons." "Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." (Matt. 24:9; Mark 13:9; Luke 21:12; John 15:20.)

Paul told Timothy that he knew Paul's doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, long-suffering, charity, patience, persecutions, afflictions. "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." (2 Tim. 3:10-12.) What shall we say to all of these things? "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world" (John 16:33).

Were the apostles in Christ? Yes, they were baptized into Christ. Did they have peace? Yes, in Christ they had peace. Were they in the world? Yes, "I pray not that theu shouldest take them out of the world." Did they have tribulation? Yes, in the world they had tribulation because it was promised to them. They had peace, too, for He said, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." He promised more than that: "These things have I speken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." Joy to the full? How? "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."

Once more we find blessing and persecution in the same verse. "But he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life" (Mark 10:30).

These things together, contrary one to the other: peace, joy, and blessings against persecutions, trials, and tribulation. How can we explain it all?

Paul tells us, "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted; but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed" (2 Cor. 4:8, 9). Paul may have been perplexed by many things, and persecuted, but he did not feel those things, for the peace of God that passeth understanding was in his mind and the joy filled his heart to overflowing. He tells how this can be in a part of a verse which we omitted. "What persecutions I endured: but out of them all the Lord delivered me" (2 Tim. 3:11).

Paul's character and manner tell why God would deliver him. "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." Oh! that all His ministers might so preach. "For God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Has the light shined in your heart? "But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us." (2 Cor. 4:5-7.) Paul was a helpless mortal, but the light of the glory of God shone through him, and the power of God dwelt in him. Paul was a mighty power for God.

Paul found Christ's yoke to be easy and His burden light. Why? Because he obeyed the command. Did you ever notice the command in front of our text? "Come unto me." You cannot come to Him without full repentance for every sin. Humbly yield yourself to Him and truly your rest will be sweet. "Take my yoke upon you." Did you know that a yoke was made to ease the load for the oxen, and to divide between two the load which before was carried by one?

Sometimes the oxen would not pull together and the yoke would chafe their necks. Herein is a great truth made known. We must pull together with our Lord and our fellow servants. That is why Jesus said, "Learn of me." Do you know your Savior well enough, whom to know means

Article Two

By A. E. Griffiths

HAVING reviewed the parallel meanings of the law of Moses with the life and teachings of Christ, let us now look into the construction and erection of the Tabernacle in the wilderness.

We hear higher critics carp at the absurdity of a church being built in a desolate wilderness, especially as it is recorded to have been composed of very expensive materials. Let us look into this objection, so that we can prove such a building was possible and was actually erected. In Exodus 38:24, 25 we read, "All the gold that was occupied for the work in all the work of the holy place, even the gold of the offering, was twenty and nine talents, and seven hundred and thirty shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and the silver of them that were numbered of the congregation was an hundred talents, and a thousand seven hundred and threescore and fifteen shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary." Where did the Israelites get all this treasure?

After God had plagued the Egyptians to the point of taking even the first-born of every family, from the King downwards, the record of Moses is, "And I will stretch out my hand and smite Egypt with all my wonders which I will do in the midst thereof: and after that he will let you go. And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty: but every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians' (Ex. 3:20-22).

This historic record accounts for the presence of so much gold and silver being subscribed by the children of Israel in the wilderness. Even apart from this contribution for the Tabernacle, we have a record that they fell from grace during the absence of Moses in the mount while receiving the law, and made a golden calf. (Ex. 32:1-6.) These verses show that the women, daughters, and sons were possessed of gold earrings. While they were serfs in the land of Goshen they certainly could not have possessed such things, but they did possess them when they left that land, because they took them from the Egyptians by God's command, of which fact we have ample proof.

Having established the reality of this wealth among them, we ask, How much gold and silver in our weights was required for the construction of the Tabernacle?

When we translate the quantities mentioned in Exodus 38 into their English equivalents, we find that the Israelites gave twenty-nine hundred sixty pounds of gold, and ten thousand one hundred eighty-eight pounds of silver, which even in these days would be large amounts of precious metals. Thus, that metal which originally belonged to a heathen nation was utilized to glorify God, showing that everything of value on this earth will eventually follow the same course. (Psalm 148:13, 14.)

Having traced the source of the wealth that was put into this building, let us now look at its construction. An important point of interest is that when God commenced His instructions to Moses He began by telling him how to make the ark of the covenant (Ex. 25:10), which was the very heart of the edifice and represented God and His power. When Moses began to build he started at the curtains of the outer court (Ex. 36:8), and worked inwards toward God, whereas God commenced with Himself and worked outwards toward man. This teaches us most emphatically that we must start in our mortal state and work toward the divine nature which we can only acquire by being faithful to God's laws. (See 2 Peter 1:4.) This also agrees with Paul's teaching in 1 Corinthians 15:46, first the natural and afterwards the spiritual.

Another lesson we can glean from this building is that giving to God's glory is always a blessing to the giver. When the children of Israel were asked for contributions, they responded with such abundance, that Moses had to stop them. (Ex. 36:5-7.) They had at this point contributed more than necessary for the work, so Moses restrained them. How often today are we asked by the church to stop giving? Yet, there is a general trend of religionists today to claim the world is getting better. Far from it, it is getting worse, as Scripture foretold it would. (1 Tim. 4:1, 2; 2 Tim. 3:1-5.)

In recording the building of the Tabernacle, it is only logical that we, who are mortal, should begin where Moses began, at the curtains of the outer court. It is recorded that he was "meek above all men which were upon the face of the earth" (Num. 12:3). Let us, therefore, follow his example and begin where he did.

Dimensions of the outer court are given in Exodus 27: 9-19, which translated to our measurements were one hundred fifty feet long by seventy-five feet wide, and the curtains or walls were seven and one half feet high, enclosing a space of eleven thousand two hundred fifty square feet. This gives us an idea of the size of the building; and remember it was situated in the very center of the camp of over two million people.

On the south side there were one hundred fifty feet of linen curtains, and on the north side one hundred fifty feet of linen curtains, on the west side seventy-five feet of linen curtains, and on the east side twenty-two and one half feet of linen curtains on each side of the opening, making forty-five feet of curtains on the east side. This left an opening of thirty feet for the entrance.

Now for the details. The curtains were made of fine twined linen (Ex. 38:9), and linen represents righteousness (see Rev. 19:8), showing that the world-Israel included-was walled off from God by the righteousness that was represented inside those curtains. These were held up by twenty pillars each on the north and south sides, ten on the west side, and six on the east side, making fifty-six pillars all together. These represented the prophets and teachers of the gospel down through the ages. The sockets in which they stood were made of brass, which represented mortality. (Ezek. 1:7.) In giving the description of the living creatures, Ezekiel says that they "sparkled like the colour of burnished brass." These creatures represented the saints, which are originally mortal. Ezekiel 40:3 and Daniel 10:6 give the same description of mortality eventually putting on immortality.

The entrance to this enclosure was on the cast side of the Tabernacle. The east in every case denotes the direction from which Christ comes. We read in Matthew 2:2, "We have seen his star in the east." In Psalm 48:7 a divine wind from the east prophetically destroys "the ships of Tarshish"—the British navy. The main entrance to the temple of Ezekiel's prophecy is the east gate, reserved for the prince, Christ. (Ezek. 43:2.) This rule follows all through God's plan of salvation. Lastly, we find Christ and His saints coming from the east. (Rev. 16:12.)

their authors. They were set in brass sockets like the rest of the pillars, showing that Christ and His disciples were mortal. The curtain was different from that surrounding the court. It was composed of blue, purple, scarlet, and fine linen. Here we have a wonderful description of Christ. The first color, blue, represented healing. "The blueness of a wound cleanseth away evil" (Prov. 20:30). Isaiah says, "With his stripes (bruises), we are healed" (Isa. 53:5). Next comes the purple, which always represents royalty. Purple is even used in the world courts by their rulers. At Christ's trial, His enemies clothed Him in purple (Mark 15:17), and admitted He was King of the Jews. Scarlet always represents sin (Isa, 1:18; Rev. 17:3), which is a component part of man. Even Christ Himself was "made of a woman, made under the law" (Gal. 4:4), and He bore our sins. Fine twined linen represented the righteousness of the saints. (Rev. 19:8.)

This curtain is a representation of Christ who proclaimed Himself "the way" and "the door." When we enter through His door we are inside the encampment of righteousness, and become the sons of God, but we must enter through this door. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber" (John 10:1). This proves that to be in Christ and to be eligible for salvation, you must enter by the prescribed way. No other way will lead to eternity.

By Harry Goekler

THE first five verses of Revelation 21 present to us one of the most beautiful pictures recorded in the Holy Scriptures. Written under inspiration by the beloved Apostle John, then an old man who had been banished to the lonely island of Patmos, these verses reveal in a beautiful and appealing manner the perfection and beauty of God's tomorrow.

An artist dreams of painting a perfect picture which will create lasting beauty for our eyes, a musician dreams of composing a perfect sonata which will forever charm our ears, but John dreamed of the perfect life itself and received a divine revelation of what it would be.

The old city of Jerusalem had been destroyed, but in vivid words John tells of the revelation which came to him of a new heaven and a new earth and a new and holy city. The sea is a symbol of restlessness, separation, peril, loneliness, and terror; in the new order that John saw, there will be no separating sea. The natural enemies of man are abolished in the sweet security of God's presence. The new city, whose citizens are Christ's true followers, John describes as adorned like a bride for her husband, not adorned with outward trappings and glittering jewels, but with the inner qualities of love, purity, and righteousness. God's presence will insure these qualities, and all will be drawn together into a perfect society of security, peace, and love.

There will be no death, nor sorrow, nor crying, nor pain, because the evil conditions that had caused these will be destroyed. All things will be made new.

In his vision, John beheld God seated on His throne. And God commanded him to record what he saw. The purpose was to encourage the friends and disciples of Jesus to be true and to live by their great ideal, no matter what the cost. God promised John that all things would be made new, that all things would be righteous, and that those who had been faithful and true to Christ could face life with renewed hope, courage, and love. Such was this portion of John's vision. As we today read again these wonderful verses of the future and know that one day the great King shall return to make up His jewels, we are inspired to live ever more faithfully in accordance to the Scriptures so that when this picture becomes a reality we may be there to share its beauty and glory with other faithful ones.

The Nature of the Soul

By Z. B. Self

I't IS important to notice that nowhere in God's Word—the Bible—is the breath of life said to be a soul, or any part of a soul, except it be through a misconception or mistranslation of the original language into the English. Indeed, the Bible is emphatic in saying that "man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). "And so it is written, The first man Adam (not the breath of life) was made a living soul" (1 Cor. 15:45). Because man did not become a living soul until the breath of life was breathed into his nostrils is no proof that he was not a lifeless or an inactive soul-before the breath of life was breathed into his nostrils, even as he is after he dies.

It is contended that the soul is composed of two component parts, namely, man formed of the dust, and the breath of life. To those who believe such I will ask these questions:

- (1.) Since the Scripture says, in Ezckiel 18:4, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," what part did the breath of life have in that sin which was committed in the Garden of Eden?
- (2.) If the breath of life had any part in that sin, why does not the Scripture say so, instead of being so silent along that line?
- (3.) And why was not condemnation placed upon the breath of life in Eden, if it was a part of the souls who sinned there?

A thorough investigation of Genesis 3 reveals that the only things there accursed, and condemned for sin, were Adam, Eve, and the Serpent. The breath of life in that circumstance was not mentioned. Surely the Scripture meant what it said when it said, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." If the breath of life is part of the soul, it would also have to die. Whoever heard of the breath of life dying? It does not live in the first place!

It is written, "Every soul, which will not hear that prophet (Christ), shall be destroyed" (Acts 3:23); "What his soul desireth, even that he doeth" (Job 23:13); "My soul trusteth in thee" (Psalm 57:1). If the breath of life is part of the souls here spoken of, then what part did it have in the "hearing," "desire," and "trust" that these souls here exercised?

Job said, "O remember that my life is wind" (7:7). James said, "What is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away" (4:14). Whoever heard of the breath of life, which is a "wind" and a "vapour," trusting, hearing, desiring? Yet, if we believe that the breath of life which God breathed into man's nostrils is a component part of the soul, we must believe that the breath trusts, hears, and desires. How ridicular lous! This within itself is sufficient evidence to render such a theory incompetent,

It is contended that like as hydrogen and oxygen are united to form a new substance called water, so also God united man and the breath of life (Gen. 2:7) to create a new thing called soul. But, what is the substance of this new thing called "soul," and which was formed at the union of man and the breath of life? What is the soul composed of? It is logical reasoning that nothing was added to the literal, physical, structure of man, nor to the breath of life, at the uniting of both; hence, nothing is taken from them at their separation. True it may be, that new things are created at the union of the breath of life and man, such as the actions or deeds of the flesh. Both man and his breath, united, are essential to the exercising of the five senses, but these are no part of either the breath of life or man. They are only attributes of man. These attributes of man are created at the union of the breath of life and man. They cease at their separation, and cannot be Scripturally called a soul. (Psalm 146:4; 6:5; Eccl. 9:5, 6.)

It is my firm belief that the breath of life is no more a component part of the soul (or man) than the gasoline is a component part of the automobile. If the soul is only divided at death - part of it returning to God, and part to the dust - then how could David's soul (not just a part of his soul) be under the power of the grave to be redeemed therefrom? (Psalm 49:15.) If the soul entirely ceases to exist at death, then how could John see "under the altar (death) the souls of them that were slain" (Rev. 6:9)? If the language used in Job 7:2, "thou shalt see me in the morning, but I shall not be," refers to Job's soul and indicates that it will not be, in any sense of the term, then how can we explain the former part of this sentence, which reads, "For now shall I (Job's soul) sleep in the dust (death)?" If, when David died, his soul was to be no more, an any sense of the term, and the pronoun "I" refers to David's soul, how then can we explain David's language in Psalm 17:15, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I (David's soul) shall be satisfied, when I awake (from the grave to immortality), with thy likeness"? Hence, it is logical to conclude that the sense in which David and Job (or their souls) are not, is, that they are not alive or active as they were when they wrote or spoke the language previously quoted. They (or their souls) do exist in a dead, or inactive sense, asleep in the dust of the ground.

If this article is instrumental in enabling the reader to come to a better understanding of God's Word concerning the soul question, it will have accomplished the purpose for which it was written.

THE TABERNACLE

A correct understanding of the lesson taught by the Tabernacle enlightens us as to the attitude of man toward God. It condemns all self-righteousness, and what is often referred to as natural religion. The word "religion" is derived from two Latin words, re (again) and ligio (to bind). Hence, "religion" means a rebinding to God. Man fell from God's grace through Adam's sin. Consequently, there had to be a sacrifice of blood before man could get back to God, and Christ made that great sacrifice. He was condemned to death for sin He did not commit, and in this way fulfilled God's requirements. When a man approached the entrance he was not admitted unless he was circumcised. This ordinance was absolutely necessary (see Gen. 17:5-10), also he must have a sacrifice with him, a goat, lamb, or heifer, showing he had conformed to God's requirements. The animal sacrifice was to prefigure the great sacrifice which Christ in the distant future was to accomplish. Therefore, the law and the Tabernacle point to Christ in all His phases: birth, death, resurrection, and His second coming.

No stranger could enter through that door. "The soul that doeth ought presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the Lord; and that soul shall be cut off from his people" (Num. 15:30). Psalm 50:5 says, "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." A sacrifice must be made, or we cannot approach God. Paul made this clear when he told the Gentiles that they were "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12). Consequently, the entrance to the Tabernacle teaches us that no one can enter through that door to worship God unless he has first conformed to the divine commands.

The alter of sacrifice which is the first object we observe after entering the court will be the subject of our next study.

of old time, "Experience is the best teacher." This is only a half truth, and therefore the more dangerous. Experience is also the most expensive teacher. Few of us can afford to hire her for long. Life is too short to learn many things by the trial and error method. Wise men learn by others' experience; fools must find out for themselves.

Furthermore, not always is experience the best teacher, not by any means. A drunkard may get drunk a hundred times, but does he learn from that the evils of drink and cease his drinking? A criminal may go to the electric chair; does that experience teach him anything? You say that's not a fair illustration, for the man is now dead and has no chance to profit by it. It is a fair illustration, and the only fair one, for there are pitfalls in the path of young people that can literally lead to death, and worse. There are some things which, having once been lived, can never be unlived. There are frightful diseases, there are ruined personalities, there are chambers of horror no words can describe awaiting the unwary traveler who makes just one misstep from the path of rectitude. If your child were unwittingly wandering near a precipice, would you leave it to chance that he might find his way back to safety without falling over the edge? That is exactly his situation, if you have left him in ignorance of these things!

So if a person errs in his choice of a life mate, it's too late to profit by his mistake, for he cannot separate and try it over again, not, at least, if he is a Christian. And even if he has no scruples about divorce, there must still be a tragic loss to both parties. And there is no assurance that the next experiment will be any better. Witness the muchmarried folk who flit from one mate to another in their vain search for happiness, forgetting that happiness is not found but made. The only sensible course is to learn before marriage what factors make for success and what for failure. Indeed, if one doesn't understand these things before marriage, he isn't fit to marry! (That may explain why there are so many misfits.)

I speak unto you, young people, for you are the builders of the homes of tomorrow. Outside of your relationship to Jesus Christ, this is the most important business you will ever have to face. Your happiness all through life will depend on what wisdom you use in the choice of your life partner. Even your religion may be endangered by the wrong kind of mate. Give heed to these things before it is too late. Use your head now before your heart runs away with your better judgment!

I speak unto you, parents, for yours is the holy responsibility of equipping your children for lives of happy usefulness. They have a right to look to you for light and guidance. You are their most trusted counselors. You have it in your power to teach them aright and shield them from many blunders, or to sidestep this responsibility and permit them to face life and marriage unprepared. Don't let them down when they come to you for help! Inform yourself, if necessary, so you can be of utmost help to them.

I speak unto you, my brother ministers, for you are the spiritual leaders of God's people, and your people trust you to teach them the truth. If we have it in our power to prevent a spiritual tragedy, and do not do it, do we not stand on the side of the road with the priest and the Levite? Instead of trying to patch up broken homes, which we are so often called upon to do, how much better to prevent, if we may, some of the mismating which must inevitably result in discord! Instruct your young people in the needful things. Wake up the parents who are remiss in their duty. Hold classes in preparation for marriage in your churches and conferences. The church has no stronger ally than good Christian homes where happiness and faith dwell.

Young people and leaders of young people, all have a stake in this question, for it is in the home that religion succeeds or fails. Let us build Christian homes.

"Yes, all this is fine as a theory," responds a large chorus of objectors, "but it doesn't work out that way. Whoever heard of anyone in love who would listen to advice?"

Just so! That is precisely the reason why early training is imperative. "Love is blind" only after the reason is swept aside and passion takes control. If the factors which make for happy marriage are carefully thought out before one becomes involved with his emotions, then reason should so control as to guard against an unwise choice. Of course, marriage is always a gamble at best, but that's no reason we should deliberately overload it with unnecessary risks.

As soon, therefore, as your children start questioning on matters of sex, give them true answers, so that gradually, as they grow to adolescence, they will also grow into an interpretation of the sacredness of sex and marriage. Their minds will thus be shielded from the injurious shocks of later learning these things from unwholesome sources. And as soon as a child is about fourteen years of age, or at any rate, before he begins having dates, he should be given full knowledge of what to seek in a prospective mate and taught how to judge between different personalities and to rightly evaluate the relative qualities of his boy and girl friends.

If you are unmarried, and have not yet found the Right One, decide now what qualities you feel are essential in the one you should choose, so that you will not permit yourself to fall in love with someone who would be incompatible with your own personality.

earthquakes, all bearing down at the same period in the world's history, that will be the sign of My coming.

"All these are the beginning of sorrows" (v. 8), or, "the beginning of birth pangs," is the meaning. It is a glorious truth that carries us in expectancy beyond the present pain and uncertainty of the night of birth to the glorious morning to follow. We are told that birth pangs are the most painful, but also the most easily forgotten pains. The long night is over! There is a new life! The new world is born! What matters the pain and suffering of the past? All is become well.

WAR AS BIRTH PANGS

The Great War (1914-1918) was the beginning of earth's birth pangs. There have been more and fiercer wars since the turn of the century than for many centuries past—all such wars put together. Fifty-five million soldiers took part in the War. Four hundred billion dollars in material wealth was destroyed. Eight million men were slain outright. Almost as many more became human dereliets for life. But even worse than all these curses, the faith of men in God took a terrific fall. Morals descended to a new low. There was a heartbreaking shattering of those ideals which had been the comfort and hope of many during the darkest hours of human history.

In spite of the awful loss of the World War, the world has not learned its lesson. In a fever of war madness it has gone about provoking more and more wars as the birth pangs become more acute.

There is no turning back. The new world must be born! There is none other deliverance than that one according to God's plan.

THE ATTENDANT TROUBLES AS BIRTH PANGS

Famines. The world's greatest famines have occurred during and since the Great War. Twice as many have died of starvation as died in the action of the War. Who can count the number of the starved? At least twenty million have perished with hunger.

Pestilences. The influenza epidemic during the height of the War destroyed many millions. World-wide epidemics of disease are the natural consequence of world-wide war. Who can tell the consequences of the germ warfare predicted for the next great horror to visit mankind?

Earthquakes. Recorded major earthquakes have been on an increase for centuries. From a record of 137 in the fourteenth century they had climbed to 2,119 within the last century. And now, earthquakes have reached an all-time high for ferocity and intensity. The most devastating earthquakes of history have been in the present century.

What greater earthquake is needed to waken the sleeping world to the nearness of God's judgments? Man has no control over earthquakes. They come suddenly and without warning. Men are blind in a world filled with the evidences of a new birth about to take place. Don't they know an unattended birth is dangerous? Never fear, the new world will be born under the skillful hand of the Great Physician, but the old world will die!

THE LITERAL MADNESS AND HORROR OF WAR

Read Jeremiah 25. Notice that the cup of fury of which all the nations shall drink refers to war (v. 27). Also notice that the nations shall be mad (v. 16).

First, let us observe that insanity is on the increase in our modern world. Dr. John S. Boggs of the United States Public Health Service, wrote: "A fatal tragic blight is sweeping over society in general and particularly over the United States. Unless its progress is stopped our civilization is doomed. Insanity has increased more than eight hundred percent in the past fifty years; it is still increasing. There are now ten million persons in this country, who are now, or at some future time will be, affected with some mental disease or defect." Is this any wonder in the face of the terrific nervous strain under which modern Americans place themselves? Now visualize the nervous strain of the inhabitants of war-scared Europe, and drink in the truth of this statement by Lloyd George: "The world is becoming like a lunatic asylum, run by lunatics."

As the second evidence of war insanity, recall the numerous treaties meant to last for time and eternity that are broken in a few short months. Their number is legion and need no listing here, from the Kaiser's "scrap of paper" to Hitler's "no more territorial demands in Europe."

Third, huge armaments demonstrate the madness of the modern world. With their peoples compelled to live without the necessities of life, nations take some of the little food left in their mouths to buy destructive weapons of aggression. And the futility of the huge armaments has never been better demonstrated than in the case of the vanished Czechoslovakia.

The fourth evidence is the devilishness of modern warfare. It takes away all sympathy for human suffering. Let me point to the well known book by Vittorio Mussolini that aroused such a storm of protest in America some time ago. He exulted in "the beauty of war," saying, "I remember one group of horsemen that gave me the impression of a budding rose as the bombs fell in their midst. . . . Exceptionally good fun. . . . Magnificent sport." Truly, the world needs to be born again, from above, instead of from below.

The fifth evidence of a war-mad world is the multitude of new death-dealing instruments now being brewed in the poison caldron of the modern world. Terrifying new gases whose potency can only be guessed at, are thirty-five times as numerous as at the beginning of the World War. Whole cities could be destroyed overnight if the defense measures failed. Germ warfare will unloose epidemics of unknown ferocity, possibly turning even upon the hand that uses them. Civilian populations will offer a better target than front line soldiers. Aerial machine guns, incendiary bombs, new explosives more powerful than TNT-some of which have no power to destroy buildings but will destroy humans, wholesale, through shocking the nervous systemhuge airplanes capable of carrying a hundred and fifty men could transport our whole army to Europe in two weeks, robot airplanes that inflict tremendous damage without risk to the nation using them, speedy tanks, rifles shooting like machine guns, all these are proofs of a war-mad world. Yes, there is a long line of new war instruments, some whose destructiveness is problematical, but taken as the imaginations of men's hearts, prove them mad, insane, every nation for itself, and the devil take the hindermost. The horrors of mass murder do not seem to stagger the modern mind.

All these are birth pangs. The world enters the travail that will know no deliverance short of the coming of the kingdom of God to earth. Increasing in intensity, making the mentality of the old world break under the strain, these birth pangs come thick and fast. The world is in a whirlpool, irresistibly whirling toward Armageddon and the judgment of the nations.

THE PRESENT CHANGING STRUCTURE AS BIRTH PANGS

Jesus said, "Behold the fig tree, and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand" (Luke 21:29-31).

"The fig tree' means the Jews, and it is a prophecy of their national rebirth," you say. True, and so, "all the trees" means the other nations. Nationalism, the raceconsciousness of peoples, Germans, Italians, Japanese, etc., is one of the distinguishing marks of our times. It is also a sign of the coming of the kingdom of God.

In Revelation 13:4 there is a prophecy of a power that shall bring peace to the world. The present rise of dictators who found their claims upon race prefigure this beast of Revelation. In the phrase, "Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?" there is a direct challenge to the Lord Jesus Christ. This challenge is answered in Revelation 17:14 in the deliverance, the new world born: "These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings."

THE GREAT DELIVERANCE

"This generation shall not pass away, till all be fulfilled" (Luke 21:32). That is, the generation that witnesses these signs will not pass away before the kingdom of God is established. Dear ones, you and I are living in that generation. What are we doing about it? Time is short now to tell you about the rapture of the saints, the tribulation saints who come out of the great tribulation, the Jewish nation regathered and repentant, and the kingdom of God on earth. These all have their proper order-"every man in his own order" (1 Cor. 15:23). Would you go through the stark, mad days that are upon us without God, without Christ? The church has a promise of being caught away in God's own time before the tribulation breaks in its worst fury upon the world. "God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess 5:9). Would you go through the wrath of the tribulation when you could escape it? The Christ is coming. What will you do about it?

Let me now refer you to the peaceful kingdom that will occupy this world on the deliverance morning. The old will pass away, the new will be born. Read Isaiah 2:2-4. "It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

IS HIS YOKE EASY?

life eternal for us? Have you learned that He is meek and lowly in heart and that you and I must be like Him?

Paul once suffered because he was pulling against Christ, and when the goad was used, he kicked against it. It is when we do not pull evenly that the yoke chafes us. Even a light yoke chafes if we pull sideways.

But if we will come to Jesus and learn of Him, even though we are persecuted, we will find His yoke is easy and His burden light.

By faith in Him those trials and persecutions will seem nothing for the joy and the peace that are ours in Him.

The Dreary Part of Life

Thelma Richardson, Hammond, La.

Life is full of wonders, Wonders we know not of; Life is full of sorrows, Sorrows we cannot solve.

Dreariness comes in life When one is only small; The way to help oneself Is on the Lord to call.

If you are sick or lone, And shunned by every friend, Remember there's Someone, And blessings He will send.

Someone in time of stress Will lift the heavy load; He helps you, and will bless The path of life's hard road.

In journeying life's track
The course seems very hard;
But One supplies your lack—
That One is Christ, our Lord.

Returning Good for Evil

One of the favorite themes of our Master's teachings, when He was here on earth, was the rendering of good for evil. One reason for this was the teaching of the Mosaic law of "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." Christ had a desire to show the difference between that law and the law of grace.

A great example that Jesus used to teach grace is the parable of the good Samaritan. In that parable He showed a man being robbed and left for dead. The priest and the Levite shunned the man, and passed by on the other side of the road; but the Samaritan, one of a race that the Jews hated, came by and cared for the man who was evidently a Jew. In this, Christ showed to the Jews that even the hated Samaritan had the idea of doing good, more than the scribes and the Pharisees.

In addition to the teachings of Christ in regard to such grace, we find that several authors of the New Testament wrote regarding doing good for evil. Moreover, we find in our studies in the Old Testament that the returning of good for evil is not confined to the New Testament.

Let us consider the controversy between Saul, the King of Israel, and David who had been divinely anointed to become king in Saul's stead. At the first they were good friends, as we find that David slew the giant Goliath for Saul, and saved the nation of Israel from destruction. The first jealousy crept in after this, when the women of Israel sang, "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands." Saul later sent for David to come and soothe him with his music. This David did, but just barely escaped with his life a couple of times when Saul cast his javelin at him. David was finally forced to flee from the presence of Saul, and gathering a small group of men about him, became a wanderer in his own land. Everywhere that David went, we find Saul following him, trying to kill him.

One time, according to the account given in 1 Samuel (read the entire book for the complete story), Saul was sleeping in a cave when David came so close to him that he was able to cut off the lower portion of the garment that Saul was wearing. David then showed his desire to return good for evil, when he would not permit his men to kill Saul. He reasoned that Saul was the anointed of God, which indeed he was, and for that reason should not be slain. Another time, David went into the camp where Saul was sleeping. Here was an opportunity for David to rid himself of this enemy, but he would not kill Saul nor permit his men to do so. In order to show Saul that he did not intend to kill him, David took Saul's spear and a cruse of water, and left. Saul awoke a little later and discovered what had happened. He swore to David that he would not harm him nor try to do so any more, but we find that David fled from the land.

The crowning achievement of David's returning good to Saul, after Saul had done him evil, came after Saul had been slain. David then proclaimed a period of mourning, rather than rejoicing, and paid high tribute to the man who had made life so miserable for him.

We have no record of Christ using this example to teach returning good for evil, but it is entirely possible that He did use it in His teaching. It is a good lesson for us. Surely, there is no one that is pursuing us to kill us, or that has ever done so, yet the one thing uppermost in many minds when they feel that wrong has been done to them is, "I'll get even, if it takes a thousand years."

Don't be like that! It isn't Christian!

"If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink" (Rom. 12:20).

The Faith of Paul

In our study last week we left Paul at Philippi after Lydia had been baptized. Many interesting events happened in the life of Paul after that. There is an interesting story of Paul and Silas being followed by a maiden whom Paul healed of an unclean spirit. This healing resulted in Paul and Silas being put in prison. Find this story and read it.

After they were free again they went to some other cities, preaching and teaching the Word of God. Among these cities was Berea. Those Bereans "searched the scriptures daily" to be sure the things Paul taught were true. Do you know that this is where our "Bereans" get their name and motto? I hope you will all become Bereans.

Paul also preached in Athens. He had to flee for his life, for the Jews certainly became angry with him. It was while he was waiting for his helpers to catch up with him that he preached at Athens. It was here that he saw so many people worshiping idols. He "disputed," or reasoned, with the Jews in their synagogue, and talked with those people he met in the market place.

Paul didn't have to be in a church before teaching of Jesus. On the streets he talked to the people about God, too. A few believed from his faithfulness in being ready at all times to teach God's plan of salvation.

Paul went on to Corinth before Silas and Timothy joined him. Paul became greatly discouraged, for the people quarreled among themselves. Paul was ready to leave these people and go to the Gentiles, but God spoke to him in a vision. God told Paul to speak out for Christ and not to be afraid, for He would not let anyone hurt him. What must have surprised Paul was when God said He had many people in Corinth! Paul had found only a few. He had won some few to the Christian life, too. But now Paul was ready to stay and find those others whom God had said were His. We read that these missionaries stayed in Corinth for a year and a half; which was a much longer time than we have found Paul previously staying in one eity.

The last five verses are a part of one of Paul's letters which he wrote to the people of Corinth who had become Christians. From these verses we find that Paul came humbly as he gave God's messages to the people. He didn't want to be important, for then the people might have become followers of Paul instead of Christ.

Even today we find we are likely to think we must listen to this minister or that one, when we should be worshiping God. It is not important who brings the messages, but only that the messages are brought. We do need godly leaders who know their Bibles so they can "feed the sheep."

ECE Club News

Did you read about the "Golden Stories for Boys and Girls" that was reviewed in the April 4 issue of our Herald? It is certainly a splendid book, and I wish each of our readers could have a copy. Perhaps you could get one for your birthday, or save your money to personally buy one later on. I liked the story of the boy who began to smoke cigarettes. His marks on his report card went down, his parents were no longer proud of him, and—well, you just ought to read what the poison in cigarettes do to anyone who uses them!

It tells us a story of a boy who refused to touch tobacco or drink alcohol, and even coffee, so he could keep himself strong and well. He didn't dance or play cards or stay up late at night, yet everyone knows of this American hero who has done a great deal for our country. Who is he? Here's a hint: he took a long trip alone, some years back, over the ocean.

THE TITHING BULLETIN

The Tithing Bulletin, as prepared by The Layman Company, offers every church the most effective of tithing education plus relief from half the expense and worries of the ordinary church bulletin. It combines simplicity, effectiveness, and economy. The Bulletin consists of four pages. Pages 1 and 4 are for the use of the local church. Pages 2 and 3 carry any one of thirty-two of the fa-mous Layman tithing messages. This affords a quiet but effective course in stewardship education.

A sample set of the bulletins will be sent to any address for 20 cents, by The Layman Company, 730 Rush St., Chicago, Ill.

IOWA SPRING CONFERENCE

The Iowa Spring Conference will be held Sunday, May 14, at Hickory Grove, near Max-well. Bro. C. E. Lapp of St. Cloud, Minn., will assist our local ministers in this conference. We anticipate a large attendance. The morning and afternoon preaching services will be at 11:00 o'clock and 2:30 o'clock, respectively. Esther Jenkins, Cor. Seey.

EXPLANATION

There seems to be room for misunderstanding concerning the announcement in The Restitution Herald of April 18, under the heading of "Iowa Evangelism." Charles W. Howe is treasurer of the Iowa State Conference, and to him all funds are to be sent for regular conference work, including salary for J. W. Williams in his regular pastoral work. Bro. Howe states that there is urgent need for funds in this field, and that all contributions will be gladly accepted.

At the 1938 Iowa Conference last August, the need for evangelism was stressed, and it was decided to put an evangelist in the field this spring, continuing as long as funds are available. Bro. T. J. Ellis was appointed to serve as treasurer for this special work, and serve as treasurer for this special work, and this spring Eldridge Ellis was appointed to fill the place left vacant by his father's sudden falling asleep. Already several have responded to the call.

Please note: State treasurer of the Iowa Conference is Charles W. Howe, 1036 Newton State Present State Prese

St., Waterloo. Funds for completing the building on the conference grounds (which has been finished this winter, including heating system), are to be sent to Mrs. Florence Allard, 1118 Rainbow Drive, Cedar Falls. Funds for special evangelistic work are to be sent to Eldridge Ellis, 319 Cutler St., Waterloo.

Gleanings From the Field

"We were out at Albert City Sunday, April 23, where there is a good interest though the work is handicapped by lack of a regular place of worship."—A. M. Jones, Eagle Grove,

Sr. Alice Graham Jennings of the St. Louis, Mo., Church of God had just returned home from the Central Hospital, having undergone a major operation, when her brother Roy was rushed to the hospital for an emergency appendectomy.

Orien Scaline, eight years of age, and son of Bro. Arnold Scaline of Stanhope, Iowa, has just returned home after a five-weeks' stay in the Boone Hospital where he underwent an operation for double mastoid.

"Mother saw an article by Sr. Miller who is in her 88th year, and since Mother is also in her 88th year, she was encouraged to write a short article, which I enclose."—Ella Siple, Hammond, La. . . . Grandma Siple's article will appear in our next issue, which will be largely prepared by mothers,

"It is the most enthusiastic class I have had for a long time." So writes Bro. S. J. Lindsay about a class of young women who are not members of the faith. Some of them are soon to try to show him that the Bible allows sprinkling for baptism. He writes, "I am likely to learn something." We add, "So are they."

Bro. and Sr. Charles Netts who have been in Florida for the winter are now returned to their home at 1013 Pine St., Springfield, Ohio.

Those who wish to communicate with Bro. A. Drinkard for his services this summer should address him at Handley, Texas.

We are glad to learn that Bro. O. J. Parker, who for six weeks was a patient in the Indianapolis Veterans' Hospital, is able to be home at 725 S. Waugh St., Kokomo, Ind. Bro. D. G. Harvey faithfully carried the ministerial responsibilities in Bro. Parker's absence.

Bro. J. D. Fields of Plymouth, Ind., is now in the Indianapolis Veterans' Hospital. He may be addressed there in Ward No. 1.

BAPTISM

At the conclusion of our non-member recitation on Wednesday, April 26, a young mother was baptized into Christ. The members of the class stayed to witness the service, and we are sure it was impressive to them. The new sister is Mrs. Celeste E. Kitts of our city (Tempe, Ariz.). Her family is in Sunday school, and one chi'd, a seven-year-old, recited the names of the beaks of the New Testament on last Sunday. Our whole company is made to rejoice in this Elster's decision to put on Christ. May she be faithful and may that faithfulness lead others of the family to take the same kind of action.

We find that our non-member class is attracting the attraction of many outsiders and we have promise that others plan to attend. May the good work go on.

JAMES ALBERT SMITH

James Albert Smith was born May 14, 1872, in Annowan, Ill., residing there until 1880, when he moved with his parents to North Dakota. After a number of years the family returned to Illinois.

On May 18, 1898, he was united in marriage to Elizabeth McDermand. To this union were born four children.

On March 7, 1915, he was baptized into the Church of God of Cashmere, Wash., and he was an active worker in the capacity of superintendent and, later, for years a deacon. He was an avid reader and student of ancient history the past twenty years, making a special study of the Bible, and was recognized as an authority on the subject.

He fell asleep in Jesus April 8, 1939. He leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, Blanche Smith, and four children: Morris W. of Cashmere; Mrs. Joseph B. Schuster of Wenatchee; Mrs. Adair L. Eickmeyer of Wenatchee; and Mrs. James W. Lofquist of Mesa, Idaho; and eight grandehildren.

Bro. A. L. Corbaley assisted the writer in services at the Kuelbs Funeral Parlor, after which the deceased was taken to the burial grounds, there to await the call of the Master.

IN MEMORY OF "UNCLE" JOE NORDIN By Virginia Smith

In a quiet country churchyard,
There is a newly made mound
Where our loved one is peacefully sleeping,
'Neath the cold and silent ground.
Though our hearts are broken and bleeding.
And the cross is so heavy to bear;
Still, he is sweetly sleeping
Without a sorrow or care.

Gone is the pain he has suffered,
The sorrow that entered his breast,
The cross he ofttimes must carry,
For he is securely at rest.
Though there is much to oppress us,
So much we cannot understand;
The heavenly Master has promised
To lend us a helping hand.

In Christ alone we find comfort;
He can turn our sorrow to song;
He's the only one to help us;
When everything here has gone wrong.
If we place our hand in Jesus',
And follow where the Master trod,
A bright crown will be waiting us
When we enter the kingdom of God.

Oh! what joy, what bliss, what glory,
When we reach the golden shore;
For we'll meet our precious loved one,
To never be parted any more,

ESSENTIAL TRUTHS— Anonymous

A brief arrangement of the necessary requirements of salvation as to faith and works. It provides copious Bible references showing that belief in the coming kingdom of God on the earth, the restoration of Palestine to Israel, the reign of Christ and His saints over all nations, the resurrection and immortalization of the dead in Christ, eternal life to be obtained only through Christ at His coming, the final destruction of the wicked, repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, followed by a holy life of Christian service, are included among the "Essential Truths" of the Bible.

HARVEY KROGH, JR., EDITOR

"When the Church Builds Evangelism, Evangelism Will Build the Church."

Just Behind the Future

That is where we are right now. The future is before us; but the most important time of our lives is right now. If we take care of the things that must be done now, and live each day as we should, the future will take care of itself. That is saying much, because there is more in the future than there has been in the past.

Let us get down to something definite. What is the most important event of the future? We are all assured that it is the coming of our Savior. The great question for us is, "Will we be ready when He comes?" Here are some simple rules for each day that will take care of all the future.

- 1. A little fellowship with God before you begin the day.
- 2. Do all things as unto God, not as unto men.
- 3. Love others as God has loved you.

If you ask God to help you keep these simple rules you will find that each day will be sweeter and you need not fret about the future.

Up to the Feast

It was the custom for the Jews to go up to Jerusalem to the feast of the Passover once a year. Many of them went, not because they were commanded to keep the Passover, but because they wanted to worship God, to fellowship with their brethren and receive the blessing of the Lord.

We do not keep the Passover feast, and we cannot go to Jerusalem, but we can go to the Illinois Bible School and General Conference and feast on the Word of God and have uplifting fellowship with the brethren. There are going to be some new speakers in the evening and some new teachers for the classes during the day.

Again we say, as we have said before, that the effort, time, and money that it takes to come, cannot be compared to the benefit and blessing received.

All ye seed of Abraham, come up to the feast!

Once Not Enough

It does us a wealth of good to have a conference once a year, but it is better if we can attend several. The next one for those in Illinois, and anyone who is able to come, will be held at Eldorado, Illinois, in the latter part of June. Look for the dates and make plans to attend. It is just a day and a half of conference but it is filled with good things for all.

The Summer Training School

We need workers in the Lord's vineyard—Sunday school teachers, Berean workers, and pastors. The Summer Training School will be held in Oregon, Illinois, beginning July 5, and continuing through the second week in August. If you have not decided to go, make plans now to attend.

The Month's Question

How can Christians be taught that if they will let Christ be Lord of their pocketbooks it is so much easier for them to let Christ be Lord of their whole lives?

Send answers to this question to the editor of the page at 409 South Dudley Street, Macomb, Illinois.

None Better

The following was found in a mission bulletin the other day: "Your best alibi for not preaching the gospel yourself is to provide the means for someone else to do it."

Sacrifice and Beauty

Two plowshares were made from the same pig iron. One was sold to a farmer, who used it constantly. The other remained on the shelf in the hardware store, unsold, until it was covered with rust. The farmer brought his worn-out share to get another like it. The rusty share was brought out, and there was its brother shining like a silver mirror. "How is it," the rusty one asked, "that your life has been so wearing and yet made you so beautiful? Once we were alike. I have grown ugly in spite of my easy life." "That is it," replied the shining share, "the beautiful life is the sacrificial life."—Selected.

Can You Be Trusted?

God is calling out of the world a people for His name. Those who accept that call are required to do certain things to prove their loyalty to God. The one great thing that makes a Christian different from others is his faith in God and his faithfulness to God. If we prove to be faithful stewards of all that God has given us in this life He will give us immortality at the resurrection. Can God trust you today?

The Source of Happiness

The other day I had the pleasure of visiting with the president of a large manufacturing company. After learning of my work, he said that I was in a position to reap the greatest happiness that can be for man in this life. Although this man has what we would call a fair-sized fortune, yet he confessed to me that his enjoyment in life had not come from his money or possessions, but from his work.

If we only could realize that truth, how happy we could be now, serving the Lord with whatever we have and wherever we are.

The Mother's Watch

She never closed her eyes in sleep till we were all in bed,
On party nights, till we came home, she often sat and read.
We little thought about it then, when we were young and gay,
How much the mother worried when we children were away.
We only knew she never slept when we were out at night;
And that she waited just to know that we'd come home all right.

Why sometimes when we'd stayed away till one or two or three,
It always seemed to us that Mother heard the turning of the key,
For always when we'd stepped inside she'd call and we'd reply;
But we were all too young back there to understand just why.
Until the last one had returned she'd always keep a light,
For Mother couldn't sleep until she'd kissed us all good night.

She had to know that we were safe before she went to rest.

She seemed to fear the world might harm the ones she loved the best.

And once she said, "When you are grown to women and to men, Perhaps I'll sleep the whole night through; I may be different then."

And so it seemed that night and day we knew a mother's care;

That always when we got back home we'd find her watching there.

Then came the night that we were called to gather round her bed.
"The children all are with you now," the kindly doctor said.

And in her eyes there gleamed again the old-time tender light
That told she had been waiting just to know we were all right.

She smiled the old familiar smile, and prayed to God to keep Us safe from harm throughout the year, and then she went to sleep.

Christian Motherhood

By the editor's wife, Margaret Magaw

The story of Hannah of old offers a good illustration of what present Christian motherhood should be. Hannah, one of the two wives of Elkanah, was in bitterness of spirit because she had no children, and was the more provoked by her rival, the other wife, who was blessed with sons and daughters. Elkanah was a devout man and a good husband who loved Hannah, and tried to comfort her by assuring her that he was better to her than ten sons. But this did not suffice for Hannah. So she took her trouble to the Lord in prayer.

Hannah persisted in her silent petition for a son to the extent that Eli, the high priest, finally noticed her and rebuked her, supposing that she was drunken. Correcting this false impression, Hannah explained to him with gracious words all about her affliction. She found favor in his sight, for Eli assured her that the God of Israel would grant her petition. So Hannah went her way, and was no more sad

At the birth of her God-given son, Hannah called his name Samuel, saying, "Because I have asked him of the Lord."

When Samuel was weaned, Hannah took him up to Shiloh to the house of God, there to fulfill her vow to God by giving Samuel back to Him forever. So Samuel grew up before the high priest in the house of the Lord, and became a strong and able leader of God's people, Israel.

It is well to notice, also, that Hannah did not forget to offer her thanksgiving to God, for, like Mary the mother of Jesus, her heart overflowed with a grateful song. (1 Sam. 2:1-10.)

It is a far cry from Hannah's day to ours, but the responsibility of rearing our children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" just as surely devolves upon the shoulders of consecrated Christian mothers as upon Hannah of old. While both parents share in this responsibility, the mothers are particularly intrusted with the sacred duty of giving religious training to their children, and this in a day when the world is more drunken than ever in its mad lust after pleasure.

Christian mothers, are we doing all in our power to guide our children through this bewildering maze, and to impress upon their young minds the things that pertain to their eternal welfare? Let us not leave all the work to the Sunday school to guide them in the paths of godliness and truth, but supplement this good work with home Bible reading, story telling, and examples of Christian living.

When Mother goes about her daily work singing a cheerful hymn, small hearts are gladdened, and foundations are laid in young lives for trustfulness and faith in the heavenly Father later on. When little Johny or Susie has been naughty a timely spanking is in order, so that rebellious little heart may be purged and a foundation laid for the later enduring of more severe trials which will come to every child of God.

There are many ways in which we influence our children for good or for bad. So, mothers, and fathers, too, let us look to our own lives. Are we setting before our children the right kind of examples? If not, God is sure to hold us responsible. "Let us not be weary in well doing for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9)

Mother and I

When I clasp my hands there is such a mutual agreement of sensation that I cannot tell which hand feels the other the more. If I clasp them together when one is cold and the other warm the result is so mutually agreeable that I cannot tell which is first felt, the heat or the cold. My hands never quarrel. They are of like flesh, blood, and bone. Each needs the other. They understand each other. They even look alike. Yet, there is one undeniable difference: one, because of its training, seems a whole generation ahead of the other in skill and dependability.

Mother, you are my own right hand.

God's Greatest Combination

Wife is man's gift from God. Mother is man's inheritance from God. What roles Wisdom gave to both! As if to intensify their worth, God combines the roles of both. When maiden becomes wife and wife becomes mother, and never before, womanhood gains her God-given glory, and from her zenith shines down upon man to bless his toils.

Mary, the mother of Jesus, was mother of at least seven children. Jesus was "her firstborn son" (Luke 2:7), and we read, "Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? And are not his sisters here with us?" (Mark 6:3). Mary thus blessed of God sang; she did not complain.

The Tapestry of Motherhood

By Mary A. Gesin

God came to me first in my mother. Later I began to know God in other ways. Now, in my old age, my mother is gone, but God remains." Thus spoke a well known writer and minister. Truly words of wisdom, honoring above all other women the one who gave him birth! And on this Sunday, May 14, the entire nation honors all mothers.

In that priceless volume, the Bible, we find that God came first to men through their mothers, though it is, as some have termed it, a man's Book. God must have been revealed to Samuel in very early childhood, in fact, in babyhood, through the mother of whom we invariably think when considering the mothers of the Bible. Hannah would never have left her small son in a strange home, among strange people, without first having explained to him all that his childish mind could comprehend of God and His service through the temple worship.

Think you that that godly mother would consider surrendering the son whom she had received through prayer to circumstances totally unfamiliar to him? Ah, no! Reading between the lines, we can see Hannah telling Samuel the stories of the patriarchs—Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and others. For students of the Word tell us that the small boy was older than we would be led to think from a reading of 1 Samuel 1:24, in fact, closer to six years of age than one, when she took him up to the Temple and left him there.

Naturally we meditate, pondering the fact that Hannah received such a full measure of joy through the granting of her constant prayer to God. How could she voice the song of thanksgiving after leaving him with Eli and having the meager happiness afforded her by only one yearly visit? But the keynote of true motherhood was then, and still is, sacrifice.

Further, what mother would not rather her son should expend his full powers in service to the God she loves and worships, though he must be separated from her, than that he should receive great worldly advancement? Because his mother was willing, yes, eager, to "lend" her son to the Lord, countless numbers, we know, were blessed through his ministry. All Israel, and through it pagan peoples bordering Israel, were led to see the greatness of Israel's God.

Another mother whose name comes instinctively to mind is Eunice, the mother of Timothy. And in this instance, the grandmother Lois comes in for her share of approval as well. The God whom Timothy served so faithfully and so worthily was indeed first revealed to him through his mother. A careful reading of Paul's letters to Timothy, particularly 2 Timothy 1:5 and 3:14, 15, gives us a beautiful picture of a boy at his mother's or grandmother's knee learning the stories from the "holy scriptures," and fashioning his life from their precepts.

In the case of Timothy, as in that of Samuel, wider and ever wider grew the circle that is benefited because of his mother's devotion, as well as his own faithfulness. Even down to our day we rejoice because God was revealed to Timothy in earliest childhood through his mother.

Above all others, the mother of Jesus is accorded highest honors. Not a great deal is recorded of her, but we know hers was a quiet, thoughtful nature, strengthened by unfaltering faith in God. Though she is only mentioned about four times, we are certain that she sacrificed her own interests for the greater interests of her Son.

The physician Luke gives us a beautiful portrait of her. In a few words he reveals to us that the purity of her life must have been one of the reasons God chose her, out of all the Jewish maidens of the time, to be the mother of His Son. We know that she was not remiss in her duty.

The tapestry of all life is truly of an intricate pattern, so many diverse threads making up its fabric. But the tapestry of a mother's life is woven into the lives of her children. She must select threads of tolerance, sympathy, understanding, love for God and His Son, and obedience to their Word. Thus will she embroider upon their lives each year beauty and peace. And the only way in which men can truly honor Mother is in living lives that will convince her that her sacrifices have been worth while, because they have built something that is of enduring worth.

When at last faith turns to sight,
"Tis mother's hands have held the light
That led men on;
And on the day, their tasks complete,
They lay their treasures at Thy feet,
Thou'lt say, "Well done!"

A Prayer for Mothers By Mrs. William Stine

Kind heavenly Father above, Hear our petition, we pray, Shed on our mothers Thy love, Let sunshine their pathway array.

To give to a world a new life,

Many dangers they willingly brave;

Walking with death's gruesome shadow,

They stop only short of the grave.

Put in remembrance those daughters
Who would thoughtlessly put to shame
The sweetest, dear name of "Mother,"
To gain for themselves worldly fame.

For these many blessings we thank Thee, May Thy Holy Spirit attend Both mothers and daughters forever, Till mortality's journey shall end.

Building the Homes of Tomorrow

In Two Parts—Part Two

By M. W. Lyon

THERE are few more alluring pictures than those presented by happy homes where love and understanding reign. Whence comes this loveliness? It does not come from the mere fact that a marriage has taken place and two people are living together, nor even from the fact that there may be children in the home. It comes from the fusing of two personalities into one. It is the spirit, the feeling, the sympathy, the understanding, between the members of the home which makes it truly a home.

How, then, shall we go about building the homes of tomorrow? What factors will make for happy unions?

Let us examine some of the most important ones:

(1.) Our Thinking on Sex and Love is too often lopsided. Sex is more than the physical, much more. It governs the pitch of our voice. It colors our whole personality. It controls our thinking. Do you think that, in a million years, men and women will ever think alike even on simple questions which each is sure should be perfectly obvious to the other? Many quarrels, much unhappiness, many divorces result because we fail to recognize this. But still more important, the two sexes are diverse in emotional makeup. They do not feel alike. Their psychological reactions are different.

So those who choose on the basis of physical attraction, and nothing else, are courting, not only a mate, but trouble. Just because she has a "skin you love to touch" or he the manly figure of a Greek god, or just because you get a thrill out of the physical contacts of "petting" is a poor guarantee that your emotions will have the staying qualities that will last through the years. All these are right and desirable, of course, but they are not enough. Passion is not love, but only one of its expressions. It is soon gone. Then, after physical desire has faded, if there is not something more substantial upon which the marriage has been built, there will be little left to hold the partners together. True love will endure after "all those endearing young charms" have vanished, yea, it will grow even stronger with the years.

You remember the story of Amnon and Tamar, how Amnon conceived a sinful desire toward his sister Tamar, and after he had satisfied his guilty lust, it is written of him, very significantly, "Then Amnon hated her with exceeding great hatred; for the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her" (2 Samuel 13:15, A.R.V.).

So it is with everyone who marries for lust, not love.

(2.) Mature Attitudes are necessary in marriage as well as in life itself. There is a difference between the child and the adult. The child is predominantly selfish. The center of his world is within. He must be served. If he doesn't get what he wants, he makes life miserable for everyone concerned, and some that aren't. His happiness arises from getting. The adult tends more to the unselfish. Life requires it. The center of his life is without. He lives to serve others. When he doesn't get what he wants, he adjusts himself to the situation and works out some other solution, or else, failing of that, he accepts defeat philosophically. His happiness arises from giving. This is most nobly exemplified in the Master, who said, "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." (I know this is overdrawn somewhat, but I have chosen extreme cases to better illustrate the point.)

There are many people physically grown, perhaps even old in years, who are still children mentally, and will never be anything else. They have never grown up. They live only for their own pleasure, care not a rap for anyone else's likes or dislikes. They must have their own way or none at all. Hitler and Mussolini are shining examples of this type. You can think of plenty of others.

But he who would successfully live with other people must perforce consider other desires than his own. Especially is this true in such an intimate relation as marriage. If one party is emotionally mature and the other not, then one of two things will happen, either the unselfish one will be a slave to the other, or there will be an explosion. But there can be no such thing as happy sharing between two such unequal partners. And what do you think will happen when two people, both of whom have been accustomed to having their own way in everything, try living together in the same house?

Jesus gave us a formula which we might well call the Golden Rule of happiness in marriage. It is indeed the only one which ever works, "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise" (Luke 6:31). And again (v. 38), "Give, and it shall be given unto you." For marriage is like life itself; no one can hope to cheat on the game, and take out more happiness than he puts in. If only men and women would learn this simple rule, and practice it, how much of heartache and misery in family relations could be avoided!

Would you know what love is, and how to practice it? Hear Paul's definition of it, as Moffatt gives it to us, in 1 Corinthians 13. You have been in the habit of thinking of this chapter as applied to ordinary human relations, or perhaps in a religious sense only. But now make the word "love" mean family love—it certainly was meant to cover that, at least! Think what any home would be like which fitted this description:

"Love is very patient, very kind. Love knows no jealousy; love makes no parade, gives itself no airs, is never rude, never selfish, never irritated, never resentful; love is never glad when others go wrong, love is gladdened by goodness, always slow to expose, always eager to believe the best, always hopeful, always patient. Love never disappears . . . When I was a child, I talked like a child, I thought like a child, I argued like a child; now that I am a man, I am done with childish ways."

Marriage is not child's play. Those homes which endure must be built upon two partners who have both ceased being children, and have come to look upon life in a sensible, mature, unselfish fashion.

(3.) Christian Homes are definitely more enduring than non-Christian. Dr. Walter A. Maier, in his book, "For Better, Not for Worse," points out that reports from surveys of many thousands of cases show that among Protestant church-attending families, there was only one divorce for each sixty families. Another survey showed better yet, only one divorce for every 145 families. Remembering that the ratio for the whole country is 1 to 6, these figures are highly significant. They mean that a Christian home has ten times, or even more than twenty times, the chance for permanence as the non-church home! This conclusion is corroborated by the statement of Judge Carl V. Weygandt, of Cleveland, Ohio, (now Justice of the Ohio Supreme Court) that of the 7,000 cases which had come before his court, only an insignificant number were church members.

Thus it is demonstrated in cold figures that Christianity does count, counts overwhelmingly in terms of happiness and permanence. No one should be surprised at these results, however, for the qualities which Christian faith builds in the individual are also the qualities required for happy home adjustments, namely, love, unselfishness, trust, loyalty, service, and all their kindred virtues.

If, therefore, you have any regard at all for the happiness of your future (or present) home, see to it that you are a devoted Christian as well as your prospective partner is.

(4.) A Constructive Attitude Toward Money is very important. High among the causes of family breakups is trouble over money. In marriage, too, "the love of money is the root of all evil." For a home is necessarily a business, and two cannot live as cheaply as one, even if they always remained but two! Money itself is not necessarily such an important item, for many couples are happy in poverty, but good business judgment is. If a poor man marries a rich girl who is not willing to adjust her wants to his income, the strain on their love is going to be pretty severe. Or, if Betty doesn't know how to economize or is not willing to cooperate, so that she is always running up bills which poor Bob can't pay, how long do you suppose it is going to be before an argument starts in that home? Or, if she is a careful and wise spender, but he is shiftless and doesn't care whether he has a job or not, isn't that going to be pretty hard for her to always admire and worship him as she did on the day they were married?

So preparation for marriage includes developing a good sense of financial values, and training in thrift and management. The words of Luke 14:28-30 (A.R.V.) are as true of marriage as of the Christian life: "Which of you, desiring to build a tower, doth not first sit down and count the cost, whether he have wherewith to complete it? Lest haply, when he hath laid a foundation, and is not able to finish, all that behold begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finish."

(5.) Marriage Is Essentially a Sex Partnership. People do not marry for friendship, nor companionship, nor even for a home, only. They marry to bring children into the world and to rear them in the best possible way, and for the high satisfactions these processes involve. Whatever other purposes marriage may have, this is the great purpose. No one who is not willing—and ready—to become a parent has any right to marry, unless there is a clear understanding of that fact by both parties before they marry. (We are not referring now to elderly people who may have already raised their families, or to exceptional cases. We are thinking of the normal young couple founding their first home.)

But, in spite of the fact that the sex relationship between husband and wife is of this vital importance, it is the one thing for which there is customarily no preparation beforehand. Business judgment, intellectual and social skills, religious nurture, almost every other normal requisite of the marital relation, can be and usually is developed to some degree at least by association with one's fellows prior to marriage. But this particular function, because of its very nature, cannot be learned beforehand, and because, by almost common consent, the subject is banned from conversation as one unfit for discussion, even in private, there is little opportunity for young people to learn anything at all of what is to be expected of them as husbands and wives.

Hence untold grief and misunderstanding and even tragedy result between mates who are ignorant of sex technique. How serious is this danger to marital happiness is showed by the following statement quoted by Roy E. Dickerson in his book, "So Youth May Know" (a book every young man should read):

"Writing in the Survey, Mary E. McChristie, referee in the division of Domestic Relations of the Hamilton County Court of Common Pleas at Cincinnati, tells of one result of her interviews with persons who applied to that court for divorce.

"The showing,' she says, 'of a necessarily superficial survey of 600 cases in which I talked privately with as many divorce plaintiffs, was astonishing. In these 600 cases of alleged gross neglect or cruelty, 580, or 97%, confided stories which indicated sex antagonism or sex maladjustment—a startling deduction and an eloquent cry for sane, wholesome sex education before marriage."

Again we quote from the same work:

"As well recognized an authority as Paul Popenoe expresses the opinion in his 'The Conservation of the Family' (p. 80) that 'It is safe to say that sexual maladjustment plays a part in almost every divorce, and that it is the most important factor in a majority, even though not known to be such by the parties.' ''

In building your home of tomorrow, you will no more want to start out without a knowledge of the sex side of marriage than you would without knowing how you were going to support the home or furnish it. This knowledge you will need to seek out yourself, for no one is likely to offer it to you, unless it be someone who has not your good at heart. If your parents are unable or unwilling to tell you, your physician may, if he is progressive and human, and you will find invaluable help in certain fine, understanding books which are available to the youth of this generation. Most of the literature on this subject has come out within the last fifteen years or less, but now there is really a splendid selection of clean, wholesome books on sex and marriage, some of which you can probably get at your local library by inquiring of the librarian. If you will write to me, directly, I shall be glad to recommend such books by title, telling you where they can be obtained if they are not available locally. Please give your age, whether you are married or single, and whether you desire books for your own information or for counseling others, or both. This will help me in my recommendations.

But as you value your happiness and that of your future mate, do not marry until both of you understand this vital aspect of your mutual relation.

(6.) Compatibility Is Highly Desirable in Four Important Realms of Personality. First, of course, there is the physical. Unless two people are physically appealing to each other, their marriage will have a weak foundation. For marriage is more than just a happy friendship. Here is where "sex appeal" enters in, and should, by all means. No amount of compatibility in other respects should justify marriage unless there is genuine love, and included in it that mysterious something which reasons not but only feels, that flame of passion which gives a thrill to every contact with or thought of the other. If this be present in their relation, it can carry a couple over many of the rough places and cover a multitude of misunderstandings. More-

God-Fearing Mothers

By Mrs. Emory Macy

THE home fires are kept much brighter by the sweet personality, character, and companionship of God-fearing mothers. A righteous mother is more precious than gold. "Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies" (Prov. 31:10).

Eve, the mother of all living, helped to introduce sin into the world, but she is a worthy example of motherhood. Was she not the beginning of civilization of the universe?

Sarah, the wife of Abraham and the mother of Isaac, was the mother of the faithful. It was Sarah who said to her husband, "Cast out this bondwoman (Hagar) and her son: for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac" (Gen. 21:10).

Exodus 2 shows the fear every mother feels for her child. A daughter of Levi bore a son, Moses, who in later years became the leader of the children of Israel. Because she feared death for her son she hid him in the bulrushes until danger was gone.

Hannah was indeed a righteous mother. She kept her promise that she made to the Lord concerning her son Samuel, and with her guidance and loving-kindness he became a worthy judge of Israel.

The Scripture, according to 1 Kings 3:26, acquaints us with two women who were harlots, but the Lord saw fit to bless even them with motherhood. Any mother, whether righteous or unrighteous, fears nothing for herself, but for her children.

The Israelites readily accepted the judgment of Deborah, the only woman judge to rule over them. According to her loving-kindness, interest, and fellowship she was truly "a mother in Israel." "The inhabitants of the villages ceased, they ceased in Israel, until that I Deborah arose, that I arose a mother in Israel" (Judges 5:7).

Surely praise should go to mothers who live faithful lives, and are examples of righteousness, as was Timothy's mother. Paul said, "I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that (it is) in thee also" (2 Tim. 1:5).

The Virgin Mary is honored above all mothers. Because she was a Jew and of the house and lineage of David she was chosen to be mother of our Savior; for it was prophesied that a Savior of the lineage of David would be born. There is little mention of Mary in the Scriptures, but each time we find she was near to comfort, cheer, or to be an example of righteousness to those round about.

In review of a few of the Bible mothers we are reminded of each mother's fear, love, prayer, and watchfulness for her children. Consider, also, that little children are ever using mothers as their patterns. Would it not bring gain to each mother to do as Solomon suggested: "Say not thou, I will recompense evil; but wait on the Lord, and he shall save thee" (Prov. 20:22)? "Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the Lord" (Psalm 27:14). "In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths" (Prov. 3:6).

Necessity of Humility for Salvation

By Mrs. William Stine

"Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time" (1 Peter 5:6).

'N THE dictionary we find the word "humble" means: I modest, meek, submissive, lowly. Then, if we wish to please God we must be humble ourselves. We are told in Numbers 12:3 that Moses was "very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth." Christ, our greatest example of humility, said, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls" (Matt. 11:29). Humility is not without its blessings. David said, "The meek will be guide in judgment; and the meek will be teach his way" (Psalm 25:9), and "The Lord taketh pleasure in his people: he will beautify the meek with salvation" (Psalm 149:4). Christ told His disciples, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." There are many more promises made to the meek which we will not take time to mention.

The word "submissive" seems to convey a little different meaning than the other words given as definitions of "humble." The verb "submit" means to surrender, resign, comply with, yield. We think of obedience in baptism in connection with these words—not merely a form of baptism but humble obedience, as was our Savior's example. In humility, He who was without sin was baptized in muddy River Jordan. (See Mark 1:9.) If it was necessary for this lowly One to show humility, how much more important it is for us, who are proud in spirit, to abase ourselves.

I believe a most serious disregard for humility may be credited to church baptistries. If such were the will of God He would have made provision for the same in the Tabernacle which Moses established under God's directions. Instead of artificial means for baptism, God has provided amply the natural means. There are clear running creeks in green pastures which may be reached with but little effort. Besides, they are so typical of the thought of the Twenty-Third Psalm. Of course, baptistries do afford comfort from cold and stony creeks, and the church can be closed to scoffers. But let us ask ourselves some questions concerning these arguments. Did Christ dodge muddy River Jordan? Did He hesitate to allow His body to be crucified for you and me? Did He mock His scoffers, or hide from them? We all know the answer-No! Christ's great love and faith carried Him through. Considering all He did for us, is it not a small thing He asked of us in comparison? So let all who think to wait for warmer weather for baptism go now and obey this command, for Christ will not delay His coming because of weather conditions. Your manifestation of faith may be the means of saving others.

A good example of humble obedience is found in 2 Kings 5:8-14. Naaman, a captain in the Syrian army, came to Elisha to be healed of leprosy. Elisha commanded him to dip seven times in the River Jordan. He was healed only after he had dipped the seventh time. Of course, there was no healing power in the River Jordan, but because of obedience in this humble act Naaman received grace from God.

Parents do not expect their young children to understand all the "whys" and "wherefores" of commands they give them, but later in life they will learn it was necessary to obey without a question. Humbly complying to the will of the heavenly Father may seem unnecessary to many, but there is a very good reason for it. This is to prepare Christ's followers for the greater trials of life. If we can successfully stand when the tempter or scoffer confronts us, we are ready for greater and more trying tests which are sure to come—possibly persecution.

In our service to God we must also be humble. Jesus taught, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister" (Matt. 20:26), and "Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant" (v. 27). Therefore, if we wish to be great in the Father's sight we must humble ourselves to the station of servant. In just this manner Christ became exalted above all men. In Matthew 20:18, 19 Christ tells of His service to the Lord.

Solomon said, "Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honour is humility." How true this passage describes the doings of the "man of sin" who will yet be revealed. The latter part of the verse is for our benefit. Also, in Proverbs 16:19 Solomon says, "Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud." Why? For answer we read 1 Peter 5:5: "Likewise . . . Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."

In conclusion, let us all truly humble ourselves "under the mighty hand of God," that He may exalt us at Christ's coming, which is "the due time."

Advice for making a good boy (Prov. 23:14), and you will have a good cake,—Selected by Mrs. Harold Pearson.

In His Name

By Mrs. Florence E. Tuttle

NOTHING is of so much value to mortal man as the precious name of Jesus, yet no name under the heavens has man abused more. Mockery, sham or false pretense in order to deceive has shamed the name of Jesus. Christ's name is used by the ruffian in the form of a curse.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7). Our heavenly Father will not always let man go unpunished in his wickedness. Turning to Philippians 2:9-11, we read, "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Before Jesus was crucified men made a mockery and a sham of Him. (Matt. 27:26-44.) Verse 29 reads, "When they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews!"

Perhaps at no other time is the display of sham and mockery so predominant as on Easter and the twenty-fifth of December, for the world celebrates in making the temple of God a house of merchandise on both of these memorial days. John 2:16 says, in part, "Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise."

In the name of Jesus many a false religion is taught, for if one follows Jesus in truth it means separating himself from the things of the world. 1 John 2:15 says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

Again, the true Christian life means suffering, "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake" (Phil, 1:29). Seeing the hypocritical trends, it is no wonder Jesus said, "In vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men" (Matt. 15:9). Woe unto any minister who willingly preaches false doctrines that he may not offend the popular majority of his flock, fearing he will be without a position and a salary. Jude 13 speaks of them thus, "Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever." In verse 16 Jude adds, "These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and their mouth speaketh great swelling words, having men's persons in admiration because of advantage," and in verse 18 he says, "How that they (Christ and His apostles, v. 17) told you there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts."

Dearly beloved brothers and sisters in Jesus' name, let us be very careful that we do not worship or bend our knee in mockery or pretense. "For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. 4:12).

Speaking of the world in general, people worship as Jesus said to the woman of Samaria, "Ye worship ye know not what." Nevertheless, "we know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews. . . . The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him." (John 4:22, 23.)

"As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion" (Prov. 11:22).

BEHOLD THE BRIDEGROOM!

"GO YE OUT TO MEET HIM"

By Mrs. A. M. Siple

("Grandma" Siple of Hammond, Louisiana, is in her eighty-eighth year, and has long been a faithful mother of the Church of God.)

I HAVE been thinking lately of our little band of believers here. How many of those who started out bravely to follow the Master would be ready if He should come tomorrow. Dear brothers and sisters, let me urge you all to arise and trim your lamps and be ready, for the signs that He has given us proclaim His coming very near.

We are told that men would run to and fro, and that knowledge would be increased. Was there ever so much running to and fro as at the present time? Knowledge has surely been increased. We are told that men will become lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. It surely looks as though the whole world had gone to play. Look at the theaters, how they are filled, and the churches have plenty of vacant seats. The financial condition of the world today, the way men and nations are spending money, surely cannot continue long, as they will go bankrupt. It looks as though the great battle of Armageddon is just around the corner.

We are told when we see these things come to pass to look up and lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draws nigh. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

"Jesus Wept"

By Mrs. Alma Orr

WHY did Jesus weep? The occasion was the death of Lazarus. Since Jesus had purposely stayed away until death had occurred, we cannot think He wept for grief because of this death. Neither would He have wept and groaned within Himself through sympathy for the grief of others, when He was so soon to restore the dead to life. Lazarus died in faith, as evidenced by Martha's statement, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day."

There are two deaths spoken of in the Bible. One might be called physical death, such as that experienced by Lazarus, the other spiritual death, which is the forfeiting of the potential spiritual life. Physical death is easily recognized by all. Only Jesus could recognize spiritual death at all times. We know there is such a death because we read in 1 Timothy 5:6, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth," and in Matthew 8:22, "Let the dead bury their dead." Both the spiritual and physical deaths are referred to in this latter verse. It is possible for one to be dead either physically or spiritually, or dead both physically and spiritually. In the latter case he has perished forever as the beasts. He will never see life again. (Psalm 49:12-20.) If one is dead spiritually and alive physically, he may become spiritually alive through faith. Christ says, "Verily, verily I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life" (John 5:24). If one is dead physically but alive spiritually, he will rise again at the last day. Such people are not reckoned by God as being dead. "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him" (Luke 20:37, 38).

Physical death was not caused by Adam's transgression, but is inherent in man's nature. Man was created mortal, with the possibility of becoming immortal or spiritual. Webster defines "mortal" as, subject to death, destined to die. Consequently, in time the natural body was destined to pass away. "All the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died" (Gen. 5:5). Year after year Adam grew older. Paul says in Hebrews 8:13, "Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Adam would have died or vanished away if he had not disobeyed. There was nothing he could do to prevent physical death, as we read, "It is appointed unto men once to die" (Heb. 9:27). Physical death was mandatorily appointed. Spiritual death was elective. He could obey and live, or disobey and die.

The threatened punishment for disobedience, then, could not have been physical death. To say it was seems to favor the serpent's statement rather than God's statement. God said, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," but Adam's physical life did not end then. The very instant Adam sinned he died the spiritual death. This death passed upon all and it is only through Christ that the spiritual life can be redeemed. Christ came to give His life "a ransom for many" (Matt. 20:28). When a ransom is paid to redeem a thing, the thing redeemed is the thing which was lost. If the physical life was lost through Adam's transgression, then the physical life, and that only, can ever be redeemed. In the resurrection the dead would be raised a natural body and not a spiritual body. The spiritual life must be redeemed before physical death occurs. Then, as Martha said of Lazarus, "He will rise again in the resurrection at the last day." Because his spiritual life has been redeemed, he will rise a spiritual body.

The Bible says, "Jesus wept." We do not know that He ever laughed. He moved about among the spiritually dead. This was more sorrowful to Him than to be in the midst of the physically dead. Because of His power to perform miracles, Jesus could raise the physically dead to life again without any cooperation on their part, but the spiritually dead must believe on Him before they could pass from death unto life. This so many refused to do. Hear His cry, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"

No wonder Jesus was said to be "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief"! No wonder He wept! The Jews thought He wept because of His love for Lazarus. Rather, He wept because of His love for the Jews.

CALL MY FAMILY PHYSICIAN

By Angelin Harrington

Is the than to see before her a period of sickness for her head of the house? And if this misfortune comes in the winter, then, indeed, the household daily tasks seem almost unbearable. Fortunately for us we are well aware that "the daily round, the common task" is a merciful means of making us more docile toward the watchful waiting of the slow progress of winter illness.

Moreover, the very monotony of manual labor and irksomeness of chores ought to really keep us so cheerfully occupied that we would have no time for worry. Probably, however, that is no longer generally true with a modern woman. After all, a woman has always been an individual, and her mind searches for tranquility, even while her hands seem quiescent under the "hum-drumness" of household tasks.

So sickness came to my house. In that month that is called the "silent month" there came a pitiful period of illness. In every sickness there seems to be a pause when we mark time—and pray: hopelessness, heartache, then fortified by faith we humbly wait on the Lord.

Nevertheless, there was for me a blessed break in these chilling clouds. By special bequest, by a God-given privilege, I was surrounded by the loveliest rime frost of the winter. When I walked to the well my spirit was uplifted, entranced, by this hoary horizon.

I walked into the white jungle—a garden in blossoming beauty. Every bare and barren twig remembered, cloaked in white, by a living Lord. I walked in simple faith while a cloud of snowbirds wheeled and veered back in scattered formation. I walked, feeling in this snow-sea the confident calmness of the Christ, the great Physician.

And, as I saw this soothing symmetry of Nature I believed, again, that Christ could still heal by hand and voice. Then I returned, carrying the sweetness of well waters. I was no longer burdened and weary with human hopelessness. For I had been with my faithful family Physician. Even from those still shores of Galilee those healing Hands had stretched out to my own hearth fires. And from that day forward I looked with renewed hope toward a happier and healthier horizon for our family.

MOTHER

By John O. Conrad

No one is nearer, or treasured dearer,
In any land or tongue,
While praise is sung
Of her, whose hearer, none hears clearer,
The one dear name no other
Can have but Mother.

I've heard it ring, while thousands sing,
And joyfully repeat
The name so sweet,
Of those who bring, the ones who cling,
To loving hands no other
Can have but Mother.

On cloistered walls, and public halls,
Within a gilded frame,
A fadeless name
Inspires, enthralls, when it recalls,
A niche in fame no other
Can have but Mother.

WORTHY

"Have you ever heard the appeal, 'Don't do it; it's not worthy of you'? . . . With those who have a decent self-respect it is very effective. But it is weak indeed compared with the Scriptural appeal, which is that we should 'walk worthy of God.' Ah, that is an exalted plea! Many things which might be quite worthy of us as self-respecting human beings are simply unthinkable for those who would really walk worthy of God."—Selected by Sr. F. L. Austin.

over, it can make their home a haven of joy unspeakable, a little picture of the glory of the home God is preparing for them that love Him.

Second, the intellectual. What a world of satisfaction there is in mental intercourse between two people, even regardless of sex, who think along the same lines and delight in the same thoughts! If Bob and Betty are mental equals, and if they keep growing together, there will be a joyous fellowship between them which will be one of the highest satisfactions of their married life. They'll think alike on many of their important mutual interests, they'll enjoy the same books, delight in the same sports, like each others' friends, agree together on the theory of raising the children (and what a bone of contention that is in too many homes!) and their conversation with each other will be keenly pleasurable and stimulating. But if there is a great gulf here, look out. Here is the reason why many international marriages fail. Mental backgrounds clash, divergences of life philosophies are too great to be bridged easily. The same with educational gulfs, or with too great disparity of ages, or with those who have been reared in greatly differing environments, or with those who are still mental children, unable to reason or to think logically for themselves, who act mostly on emotion. Seek for yourself a life partner with whom you can enjoy mental kinship. Let there be a fine fellowship of the mind between you.

Third, the emotional. Oh, how we bungle here! How common the tale of woc, "He (or she) doesn't understand me!" Bob forgets her birthday, and never afterward can explain to her that he still does love her after all. Or Betty sits enthralled under the spell of a great symphony and can't understand how he can remain so utterly unmoved and bored. I have known homes to be broken up because one party was warm and sympathetic and very demonstrative in affections and the other was unresponsive and cold and matter-of-fact. Life is controlled far more by feeling than by thinking. If Betty and Boh are going to be happy, they must ask themselves whether they can feel together as well as think together, whether their temperaments (I was going to say, tempers) are harmonious, whether they are much given to moods, and if so, if they can make allowances for such things and overlook them if they cannot overcome them. They will check each other's reactions to criticism, pain, disappointment, fatigue, defeat, as well as to success, praise, and emergency, to see whether they "can meet with Triumph and Disaster and treat those two impostors just the same." The degree to which they can make a successful emotional adjustment to each other may well be the measure of the success of their marital venture.

Fourth, the religious. If two people differ widely in religion, and both are serious about it, there arises a grave problem of adjustment. We give up our religious beliefs, or even modify them, only with great reluctance. I know of any number of homes in which the husband is of one faith and the wife is of another, and as a result neither one goes to church and the children get no religious training. Or each may go to his own church, and in either case you have a house divided against itself in life's most important concern. Many of these unequal unions are Protestant-Catholic combinations. Under no circumstances would I advise such a marriage. Not only are religious views vastly different, but many of the other ways of looking at life are so different that invariably there is a gulf that is extremely difficult to bridge. Nearly always some compromise has to be made equally unsatisfactory to both. Just one example is that the Catholic Church absolutely demands that all children of a mixed marriage, if it is recognized at all, shall be raised Catholic. Or take another possibility. Suppose you are deeply religious and are tied up to someone whose constant delight is to make mockery of sacred things and to insult your Christ? Could you forgive him that? Could you be happy under such conditions of living, year after year after year? Oh, let us have Christian homes, above all, where the altar of prayer shall always be found and Christ shall sit as Head over its family group! Homes where every member is united together in the fellowship of faith, singing together the songs of Zion, sharing the deep joys of breaking together the Bread of Life, and exalting together the name of the blessed Master! Thrice blessed are they who dwell in such a home. Resolve that yours shall be such.

In choosing one's life partner, I think there should be sought the highest possible degree of harmony in these four respects. I do not say that perfection in all or in any of them, is necessary, for perfection is never found in this life. But beware if there is incompatibility in very many points, and, wherever you find a point of disagreement, ask yourself whether your love will be able to make the adjustment, take your partner as he is and never afterward bring it up as a matter of recrimination. The more of these handicaps there are, the greater the strain on the love tie. We should strive to eliminate as many of them as possible, and to find a mate who will match our own personality in all these points, to whom we can give our heart unreservedly, to whom we can be an intellectual companion, with whom we can share a rich, satisfying emotional life, and who will walk with us on the happy road to the Kingdom of God! Surely this is what God intended of marriage, and what all His children should ask of it, as well as be willing themselves to give.

(7.) Lastly, since marriage is a partnership, its happiness will be measured largely by its number of Shared Interests and Attitudes. Its greatest joys and sources of reinforcement will come from the things the partners share with each other, from the variety of ways they can devise to enjoy happy intercourse together. "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers" (2 Cor. 6:14, A.R.V.) is especially the case here. The greater the number of things they can find which they enjoy doing together, the greater the ties which will bind their union closer and more securely together. If they can understand each other in their sex life, in their mental life, in their religious attitudes, in their financial problems, if they can happily adjust their emotional relations, if they know how to play together, work together, suffer together, if they can share their talents, their hobbies, their friends, then the storms may come, the rains may descend, the winds may blow and beat upon their house, but it will stand, for it is founded upon a rock!

In all these seven particulars, and no doubt others, Betty and Bob will seek to find in each other the nearest approach to the ideal companion not only as they walk down the shady solitudes of lover's lane, but as they size up each other facing the normal responsibilities of daily living amidst human society in the work-a-day world. Some chemicals, when thrown together in the laboratory, always explode. Some people, when thrown together, do the same thing. They will want to make sure that their personalities do not have that effect on each other. The period of acquaintance and courtship is the testing time. This is the time for applying 1 Thessalonians 5:21 (A.R.V.), "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." If there is serious incompatibility, now is the time to discover it, not after marriage, when it will be too late. The pain of parting, if you are unfitted for each other, will be as nothing compared to the regret and heartache you will be storing up to destroy the happiness of your married life. If ever there is a time to "prove all things" it is when one is testing out the reactions of a prospective partner, for upon no other choice of life does so much happiness depend. There should be perfect frankness on the part of both, for it is poor strategy to "catch" a fellow or a girl by concealing certain drawbacks only to store up unhappiness for the day when those same drawbacks shall certainly be revealed, as well as the deceit which concealed them.

"If that's the case," you say, "I'd never get a partner." Well, so be it. There are worse things in life than to be unmarried, and one of them is to be married to a person with whom you are not compatible. Love can stand many things, but it cannot stand insincerity; it can thrive only on full trust and confidence. Show each other, then, your worst side as well as your best, and then there will need be no fear of what the future will bring forth.

It is quite apparent, then, that no adequate testing out of personalities can be made by a couple who rush to the altar (or the justice, more likely) after two weeks' acquaintance, or two months', as the case may be. But they will meet each other's family and friends, learn their his-

Mother's Day

Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

On May 14 we shall again celebrate Mother's Day. Does this day have any real meaning to you, or is it just another day? Perhaps you do not have a mother to honor on that day, but why not try remembering some other mother whose children have forgotten her? Observing Mother's Day shows that we recognize her as such and honor her on that day.

Mother's religion is a vital part of her life, for her faith is a living faith. Her religion centers around sacrifice, service, love, and helpfulness—attributes that crown the Christian home. Her religion makes life sweeter, rosier, happier. We should hold sacred Mother's religion, for therein lies the one thing that has served to make better men, and to spread the gospel to others. Her religion also serves to sustain the church, and gives us freedom in the sense that we are not slaves to sin, but are ever heedful of Mother's teachings. Most mothers strive to instill in their sons and daughters the ideals that they hold dear.

Mother's work never ceases. She is the one upon whom the responsibility of the family rests. Silently she bears the burdens of the family, its sorrows, and its joys. Mother knows the burden of thankless toil and bravely endures it. God's work for Mother is never done. She has the privilege to bring children up in the atmosphere of a Christian home.

There are several mothers mentioned in the Bible. They occupy their place in the Good Book. You recall Hannah, Eunice, and Rizpah, but Mary was the ideal mother. She was chosen to be the mother of Jesus—a position of honor and distinction. Every mother is the best mother to someone. Mothers stand on the threshold of their children's lives, and live in the lives of their children—their joys are Mother's. Their love for her is something that warms her heart and helps her to see the best that is in each of her children. Mothers are entrusted with a great care in that theirs is the responsibility of molding the individual's life. In her hands lies the task of building the character of her children, of planting in their lives high ideals. Children's lives are guarded by Mother's love and by Mother's prayers.

You are very fortunate, indeed, if your mother is living. Thank your heavenly Father for His wonderful love and mercy in permitting her to live to guide you through the rough and stormy sea of life. It is a very sacred privilege of yours to honor Mother on this day. But better still, why not make every day a Mother's Day by being helpful and saying some cheerful words to her? It will cost you little effort, but it may cause heartaches on Mother's part if you forget to do these little acts of kindness.

Make Mother's Day a joyful occasion for Mother!

Bereans at Work

The Minnesota State Berean Society convened at the Church of God in Eden Valley on Saturday afternoon, April 29, for its Spring Conference. Although the class was small in attendance the interest was excellent. Christ's parable of the talents was our theme, and we brought out how young people, especially, are entrusted with valuable talents for the Lord, and how they can improve those gifts. Many good points were also brought out how Bereans can best serve their church.

On Saturday evening a large attendance witnessed a presentation of the drama, "The Challenge of the Cross," which was given by the group from St. Cloud. Some of you will remember this as having been presented last summer at General Conference. Its simplicity of thought, and its power to make one consider if he is doing his share in bearing the cross of Christ is remarkable. It was also good to see fifteen or twenty reconsecrate themselves to Christ after this service. Following this a social was held in the basement of the church, and all enjoyed the fellowship.

On Sunday morning the Conference joined with the Eden Valley church in its regular services. Though many of the St. Cloud people had found it necessary to go home Saturday night, there were several in the audience from other places in the state. A dinner was served at noon by the Eden Valley society. In the afternoon Bro. John Denchfield taught a class of over thirty Bereans and friends. His subject matter concerned how our thoughts influence our actions, and that if we wish to do good we should think good thoughts. Again in the evening, Bro. Denchfield brought us a message from God's Word, showing the great challenge that is laid before all, especially the younger ones.

In addition to the local Bereans and the St. Cloud group there were Bereans in attendance from Little Falls, Mora, Hector, and Lester Prairie. All in all, a good spiritual time was had. Neither did they neglect the business phase, for at their business session held on Sunday afternoon it was decided to finance at least one person in his attendance at the Bible Training School to be held July 5 to August 13 at Oregon, Illinois.

The next conference will be held in St. Cloud in June, in conjunction with the State Conference.

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE
Waite Park, Minnesota

"But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. 2:13).

Scripture: Acts 19:1, 8-10; 20:17-21; Eph. 2:19-22.

Paul As an Example

Paul made many friends as he traveled, preaching the gospel. He dearly loved the young lad, Timothy, who worked with him, Titus who was another fellow worker, Luke the beloved physician, and others.

These people believed in Christ and were good men. They helped Paul, and he spoke more boldly than he could have had he been alone and friendless.

Do you recall that Timothy had learned of Jesus from his grandmother and mother? I trust that you who are learning from the Bible with the help of your grandmothers, mothers, and teachers, may some day have the privilege of helping to strengthen some of our own ministers and teachers—our Pauls and Peters of today.

Let us follow Paul's example of being friendly, yet never forsaking Christ to follow unworthy, un-Christlike companions. Paul always urged his hearers to walk honestly "as in the day." Sin is often spoken of as "works of darkness." He also tells us, "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof."

How can we "put on Christ"? To "put on Christ" means to accept His views, take His interests and make them yours, to use Him as an example and follow in His steps; to be entirely on His side, obeying all His commands because you love Him.

To completely "put on Christ" your sinful nature must die to sin. After you are "buried" by baptism, then "resurrected" or "raised" to walk in newness of life, you are Christ's. You have then begun your walk with Him. If you continue to follow Him you will say long years from now, as did Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness" (2 Tim. 4:7, 8).

Parents As Examples

What do you think about your parents? Perhaps your thought would tell us more about you, and the kind of a boy or girl you are, for your thoughts reveal the real you.

Does it seem that your parents always want their way? Do you feel they just don't understand you? Have you ever paused to think that your parents may be thinking the same thing about you?

Did you ever try hard to see your parents' point of view? If you want them to see through your eyes, why not try just as hard to see through their eyes.

For example, think how your parents hope you will keep strong and well. So, naturally, they wouldn't want you to do any thing that would hurt you or weaken your body.

Perhaps they have scolded about report card grades, for without an education there is much less opportunity these days for a choice of work to be secured for a happy future. And, too, if you are careless and indifferent now, you will be still more thoughtless as you grow older, unless corrected. Why not try to improve yourself when you are corrected, as it is for your own good.

Remember, your parents love you very much. They work and do without, that you may have more. They have had much more experience than you, and therefore are more able to judge, just as you are better able to judge than your tiny brother or sister. So, you will try to take your Christian parents for examples! You will find they are honestly trying to understand you and provide for your needs, to help you to become a happy, useful Christian.

ECE Club News

Today we are glad to add six new names to our list. They were sent in by Grandma Damie Lowry of Vanzant, Missouri. Versal was in our Easter parade. I believe these are her sisters and brothers who join today. They are:

Alvin, Evelyn, Bernice, Velma, Earl, and Chalmer Dennis of Vanzant, Missouri. We trust they will be faithful club members who will help show they are Christ's followers by their "Everyday Christian Expression."

A Mother's Day Poem

Because He knew our feet were apt to stray, God gave us her to guide us on our way; He knew when life would twist and turn and tear, Steadfast and true would be her loving care; And if the lesser loves should fade and fail, Hers would enfold and her belief prevail.

O Wondrous One, each day do we renew Our thanks to Him, because He gave us you.

Happy Birthday Wishes

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

Something new in church services was in-augurated last Sunday, April 30. A worship program for young people between the ages of 10 and 14. This meeting takes place during the regular morning worship and is held in the church annex. The work is sponsored by Mrs. Grace Marsh and Miss Mildred Siple, and they state that this worship service will be planned especially to appeal to the younger ages

The Crusaders Class, of which Mrs. Frank Siple is the teacher, sponsored a supper in the church annex on Friday evening. The purpose of this supper was to raise funds to enable the class to send some worthy young person to the Bible Training School at Oregon. Ill., this summer. The program that followed the supper was planned by the class. A large crowd was present, and the report received as to the proceeds from the supper is most gratifying.

Because of the illness of Bro, Ray Abbott on Sunday evening, the Pennellwood Church did not hold services but attended the evening worship at Southlawn. A good crowd heard Bro. G. E. Marsh on "Rome Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow."

Emery Toogood was a guest of Arlen Marsh over the week-end. Emery is a teacher in the schools at Bloomingdale, Mich. Leslie Niles, Reporter.

Gleanings From the Field

Our sympathy goes out to Sr. Orpha Le-Masurier of Paynesville, Minn., whose hus-band, Clarence, was claimed by the enemy death on April 21 in his thirty-sixth year.

"Everyone very much enjoys the sermons of Bro. Harvey Krogh."—Sr. Emory Macy.

"Please accept my remittance for The Restitution Herald. I like it very much. My ago is 81."—Sr. Rena Coyner, Colfax, Ind. My age

Sr. Olive Wood of Golden Rule Home is visiting her sister, Mrs. Judd of Sugar Grove, Ill.

We have not yet heard who it will be, but at least one student from California will be en-rolled in the Bible Training School.

Sr. Leota Hanson, treasurer of the National Bible Institution, visited recently at the home of Sr. J. E. Hatch, Harvey, Ill.

"The thermometer ran around 100 yesterday afternoon. I plan to go fishing this afternoon, and if it is that hot the fish will be already cooked when we catch them."—Guess who.

Bro. R. H. Judd is preparing a series of articles entitled, "Have the Churches Failed?"

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Loudenslager, residents of Golden Rule Home who had been visiting for some time in Washington, D. C., returned home May 7. Welcome back!

MARY ANN BARTON SATER

Mary Ann Barton was born in Tennessee, April 3, 1866. When she was a young girl the family moved to Missouri. Later they moved to Oregon, and from there to Weiser, Idaho.

She was married December 24, 1882, to Giles A. J. Sater, who preceded her in death on March 16, 1910. She moved to Tacoma, Wash., in 1925. She became a member of the Church of God of the Faith of Abraham of Puyallup, Wash. Sr. Sater died in Tacoma on April 7, 1939, in the hope of the soon coming of the Lord to claim His precious jewels, and to give them a home in His glorious kingdom. She was highly esteemed and greatly loved by all who knew her.

She leaves to mourn her loss: two brothers, James Marion Barton and Asbury G. Bar-ton: three sisters, Barbara Stevens, Emeline Wiseman, and Pernic Tullock; seven sons, Giles G., J. Alonzo, Dallas F., Ben H., Cecil H., Charles M., and Elry C. Sater. She also leaves seventeen grandchildren, and nine greatgrandchildren

She was conscious until almost the last moment of her life, rejoicing in the precious hope of the soon coming of the Lord, and that "whether we live . . . or die, we are the Lord's."

The last rites, held at the Mellinger Funeral Home in Tacoma, were conducted by the writer and Bro. Lyle Rankin. She was taken to Weiser, Idaho, and laid to rest by the side of her husband.

ALFRED N. HARLAN

Alfred N. Harlan was born August 23 Afred N. Harian was born August 25-1850, in Randolph County, Ind., and died April I, 1939, at Corvallis, Ore. One of twelve children born to Mr. and Mrs. Barton Harlan, he, as generations of his family before him. was always a pioneer. From Indiana he moved with the frontier to Iowa and then to Nebraska before finally coming to Corvallis

In 1872 he was married to Matilda Jane Johnson who preceded him in death in 1919. To this union were born seven children, four of whom survive. They are: Mrs. Frank Woolman, Republican City, Neb.; C. A., Toledo; H. B., Corvallis; and Roy L. of Yakima, Wash. There are also seventeen grandchildren and several great-grandehildren, besides three sis-ters, Mrs. Anna Cady, Corvallis, Mrs. J. H. Adams and Mrs. C. A. Stowe of Holbrook, Neb

Bro. Harlan was a baptized believer in the faith which we hold dear, and was a regular attendant at the Sunday school until failing health forced him to stay at home. Despite the fact that he was confined to his bed during the past year, his cheerful disposition was undimmed. He was, truly, a fine man.

We pray that the time will be short until our Lord and Master comes to waken His sleeping ones.

GATES

By Mrs. Lyle Rankin

They are used in many different places, but always for one purpose, which is an entrance or exit to some place.

When closed there can be no passing through.

In the days of Israel the shepherds had sheepfolds, each having a gate or a door. After the sheep were brought in at night the gate was closed, safely keeping them until morning.

God chose certain cities of Israel for cities of refuge, that those who had accidentally slain someone might flee to these cities and be in safety within their gates from those desirous of vengeance for the death of their brother.

Jerusalem and other cities of Judæa were built with walls around them. These contained gates through which people might enter. At the close of day the people who had gone to their fields would return from their day's labor. I have been told that a watchman would stand upon the wall of the city just before sundown and, placing his hands to his mouth, would face out into the distance and cry, "Come! Come! Come!" Anyone outside the city who heard the cry turned his face away from the crier and repeated the call, that others in the distance might know the day was fast drawing to a close and that the gates would soon be shut, thus to stay closed till morning.

Gates—gates to pleasant places, gates to prisons, gates of safety, gates or doors to treasures and riches; if they are locked how can one open them without a key? What a dreadful thought to be in prison and without a key, or of fleeing to a city of refuge only to find the gates were closed, or of having a box of jewels but no way to open it.

Friend, all mankind is under the bonds of sin by nature. Sin will take us down to destruction if we do not come to the One who holds the keys of death. (Rom. 6:23; Rev. 1:18.)

Let us picture eternal life as a jewel in a chest that is locked. If we find the right key (way), we may then obtain the precious jewel. (Matt. 7:7, 8.)

The kingdom of God is truly as a city of refuge. It was the glad tidings of the kingdom of God that Jesus spent His ministry preaching about. (Luke 8:1.) It was the gospel of the kingdom His apostles were to tell to the world (Mark 16:15, 16), thus teaching faith, repentance, baptism, and obedience in all things commanded by Christ. (Matt. 28:19, 20.)

"I am the way, the truth, and the life" (John 14:6).

Jesus is the door to the sheepfold. He is the way through which we must enter, as John tells us in 10:7-10.

"Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matt. 7:13, 14). Let us strive to enter in while it is yet day; while the watchman is calling, "Come! Come! Come!" (Matt. 11:28.) The sun is sinking in the west, and when it sinks below the horizon the gates will swing shut. All chance of safety for the night from the enemy will then be gone.

"Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor. 6:2). Let us answer the call of Jesus (the Watchman on the wall), then turn our faces to the world and echo His call to others who are not noticing the near approach of night. Jesus is desirous that all should come to repentance. (2 Peter 3:9.) Let us make that needed preparation to enter before it is too late. Some will find themselves without, crying, "Lord, Lord, open unto us." And He shall answer and say unto them, "I know you not whence ye are" (Luke 13:24, 25).

"The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (Rev. 22:17).

tory and that of their families, observe how they take their place in the home, how they assume responsibility, how each reacts to the other under many, many different circumstances. Only thus will they learn to know each other well enough to entrust themselves and their happiness into each other's keeping for as long as they both shall live.

And when the happy union is at last consummated, and they stand to say the sacred words that make them one, it will not be before a justice of the peace and in some neighboring state far from home and friends, but at the altar of God before a minister of the gospel and under circumstances which shall shed happy memories around the day of days whenever they may look backward to it across the years.

The World, the Church, and the Kingdom of God

By S. J. Lindsay

HAVING been invited to write about the Kingdom of God and its beauties, we have concluded to cover a little more ground than that in a series of articles to appear from time to time.

In this article we shall deal particularly with the world. There are so many false doctrines taught these days concerning Bible matters, that we feel an urge to see if we can get any real light from Scripture on them.

God created this world, and when He looked upon His handiwork He declared it to be good and very good. He then created man to dwell upon the earth. He gave men the beautiful Garden of Eden for a home, and told him to care for it and keep it. That man might enjoy these blessings the more God gave him commandment that of one of the trees in the Garden he must not cat. Man was created in innocency, but not in perfection. He was to become perfeet through overcoming. Life is made more happy and worth while because of the difficulties one meets and overcomes. But man did not overcome. In transgressing God's law man brought down upon himself and his posterity the results of broken law-sorrow, suffering, and final death. Because man transgressed the earth was cursed. This curse was for man's sake. In the sweat of his face he must toil, and in many instances to no purpose. Thorns, thistles, noxious weeds, troublesome insects, all these came to trouble man in his endeavor to live and to exercise the functions of life. This is all for man's sake in some way. We may not be able now to see this fully.

The question sometimes arises, Why does God bring all this upon man? Shall we not declare that God did not bring it upon him! Man brought it all upon man, and what God did was to better man's condition after man had brought such hurt to himself. Let us set forth a principle here that we believe to be truth: death, torment, aches, pains, all the ills of life were brought upon man not by the Father, but by man's own action. Any kind of suffering we may have to endure does not come from the Father, but from the fact of sin by disobedience of man. If there are any who go into the second death, it will be by their own choice and not by the choice of God. The writer does not worship a God who gets into fits of anger ending in a nervous breakdown because of man's sinful conduct.

God has advised that lawbreaking brings certain dire results. He is not a threatening God, but One who forewarns men of what broken law will do for them. Why could not God have given a law that would not bring such results when broken? There are some things God cannot do. Any law that had virtue in it if observed, must bring contrary results if broken.

We have no law of any kind where this is not true. The law governing electricity is so. Its laws obeyed will bring us power, light, heat, cold, carry our messages, and make our voices heard round the earth in the fraction of a second, but if electricity's laws are broken there will come disaster and death. A law that has such potency for good if obeyed is bound to bring a proportionate amount of disaster if broken. Many illustrations might be used to show the truth of this principle. The world in sin hates God, but God does not hate the world nor does He hate sinners. He is the highest sense of love that is exercised. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." God is a God of love and not of hate. His love for the Israelites impelled Him to cry unto them to turn from their wicked ways and live. He further states in this connection that He has no pleasure in the death of the

Just why should the world hate God? It does. Yet the world in all of its wickedness is receiving blessing from the God it hates. Russia, Germany, Mexico, and multitudes of people the world over, are exercising hate toward God. Why should they? He furnishes the air they breathe, the food they cat, and the lives they possess. It seems that, instead of recognizing the evils of (Please turn to page 11)

Fire

In The Restitution Herald of March 14 Elder T. A. Drinkard presented an article entitled, "Will the Literal Earth Be Melted?" He reasoned and used much Scripture to show that God will never melt the earth. Referring to this article, J. J. Schaumburg, editor of Messiah's Advocate, writes:

I would say that since "water" in Noah's day did not destroy the earth, but cleansed it, so fire will not destroy it, but clean it. (2 Peter 3; Mal. 4:1-4; Matt. 13:38-42.)

If we figure the "fire" of 2 Peter 3 away, there is nothing to stop others from saying that the "water" of Noah's day was not literal!

If in our Lord's teaching in Matthew 13:38-42, He did not refer to literal fire to burn all things that offend, then please tell us what language He should have used to teach such a thing. If Peter had wanted to teach that the very elements will melt with fervent heat, and the earth also will thus melt with literal heat, how could he have used any plainer language that he did use? It isn't our opinions that count; it is what Peter actually said.

I have a clear conception, I think, of the promise made to Abraham and his Seed, yet I see no difficulty in believing that the "old farm" will be cleaned up! It should be, before we go onto it.

Thus, both author and critic are agreed that the "old farm" will still be in existence, "cleaned up," and that we shall "go onto it." Fire, then, is the only subject left to get "fervent" about.

It cannot be denied that Peter draws a comparison between God's judgment by water and His judgment by fire. We believe the antediluvians were drowned in literal water. The Church of God so firmly opposes the unthinkable theory (I refuse to call it a doctrine) of endless and unescapable torture in a Dante's hell that some of our scribes may lean a wee bit backward, leaving the thought in the minds of readers that there can be no judgment by literal fire. . . . While the Old Testament sheol and the New Testament hades, both translated "hell" in the King James Version, always refer to the grave rather than to a hell of conscious damnation, we understand that gehenna, which also appears as "hell" twelve times in the New Testament, refers to destruction of the ungodly by fire.

However, Bro. T. A. Drinkard did not so much as suggest that the incorrigibles will not melt! In fact, because we know him well, we venture he almost hopes they will melt.

Bro. Drinkard did not say in his article that God would not use literal fire in the judgment of the second death. What he did so positively and truthfully show was that the earth—literal old Mother Earth that God created in the beginning to be inhabited—would never melt. And to this the fellow editor's "old farm . . . cleaned up," and his quotation that we shall "go onto it," surely agree.

Water is as certain a solvent as fire, or more so. The earth did not melt in the Flood! Yet Peter says that the earth perished! Plainly, then, Peter must have meant that that wicked people and all their works perished. Did the Flood melt "the mountains of Ararat"? If so, the ark would have had no resting place. Will fire melt Mount Zion? If so, where will King Jesus and His Queen reign? God did not promise the faithful an eternal home that requires the protection of any fire-insurance policy. "Thou hast established the earth, and it abideth" (Psalm 119:90). "The earth abideth for ever" (Eccl, 1:4). The word translated "earth" in both these texts is erets, the same word which is used in Genesis 1:1, saying, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." The earth that God made, that did not melt in the Flood, "abideth for ever."

The importance of this doctrine is not seen by those who believe in the immortality of the soul, for if the soul goes to heaven for its eternal reward what sense could there be in it breaking loose for a descending excursion to earth? The so-called Orthodox (they do not deserve the title) have no need of an eternal earth. Hence, they are not interested in the Abrahamic promises. In fact, they are not aware that Abraham was made "heir of the world," and that by baptism into Abraham's Seed, Christ, we, too, become "Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3: 27, 29). . . . If by any chance pious souls are streaming their way to heaven, and if by any chance Jesus should return to bless all families of the earth in fulfillment of Genesis 12:3, who, oh, who, would really be in the wrong place and get left out of the blessing?

Brother Drinkard, we liked your "Will the Literal Earth Be Melted?" We now ask, Will the literal wicked be melted? Some want floods of fire, others insist on mere electric shocks. Brother Drinkard, will "the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" be a place hot enough to make an ungodly dictator pray for asbestos?

Ruth the Moabitess

By R. H. Judd

"He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 1:20). "Every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him" (1 John 5:1).

THE story of Ruth is always interesting, probably because it is unquestionably true that God has implanted deeply in the natures of all intelligent life that indefinable quality we call love. Like other God-given sensibilities love increases in intensity as the years advance, varying in strength in each individual according as opportunity presents that which responds most forcibly to its own. With such a definition it will be readily understood, in a measure at least, that God in His wisdom provided for the more rapid development in mankind of other indications of character before human affection should come to the full, so that the powers of so consuming a passion might gain wisdom and discretion.

No one needs to be told that love cannot exist alone. Love must find that which responds to its nature, or it will cease to have active existence. Nor is it difficult to comprehend that with the loss of love every other attribute with which man is endowed will suffer, for love is unquestionably the motive power which actuates all persistent endeavor. Man does not strive for himself alone. Hence, the Godinspired assertion that "it is not good that the man should be alone" (Gen. 2:18), has a significance seldom realized. The "greatest" (1 Cor. 13:13) quality of man's being soon would become extinct, and love-even to God-would be a probable impossibility, for "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" (1 John 4:20). We thus see that there was a deeply significant purpose in giving to Adam an helpmeet (or one "answering to," margin of Gen. 2:18). The ultimate purpose was that Adam might love God. It is no wonder that Paul, in speaking of faith, hope, and love, says: "The greatest of these is love." Can a man love God? It is the wonder of wonders that God says he may. The beautiful story of Ruth shows us how from loving her mother-in-law Ruth came to love God whom she had not seen, and to dwell "under the shadow of his wings."

The title of the story might well have borne the name of Naomi in addition to that of Ruth, for the name of Naomi is of more frequent occurrence throughout the narrative.

There can be no doubt but that both Elimelech and Naomi were devout worshipers of Jehovah, and that even the ten years' sojourn away from the land of Judah did not diminish Naomi's recognition of His sovereign care of all that concerned her, for on her return to her own land Naomi's acknowledgment of God came as naturally as ever from her lips. There was no thought in her mind, so far as she was concerned, of any other than the One—"the Lord God of Israel," "the Almighty."

That Naomi had been, as her name implies, a naturally pleasant woman, also widely appreciated, would seem to be a fair inference from the reception accorded her by the women of Bethlehem, for they were unmistakably rejoiced at her return. (See Ruth 1:19, R.V.)

Having left the land of Judah for the purpose of bettering their circumstances, and to return bereft of husband and sons in addition to which her daughters-in-law belonged to an alien people, and one of these had left her on the way, is it surprising that in her sorrow Naomi asked that her name be changed to Mara, which means bitter? We think not. But was her request granted? Not once again is the name Mara even referred to. Naomi continued to be the name she was lovingly called by the faithful women of Bethlehem. They had no wish to remind her of the troubles of the past. Though in all probability Naomi had erred in leaving Bethlehem, they recognized that her faith in God had been constant. She had not followed after other gods even in a strange land.

That Naomi's testimony had not been without result is beautifully shown in Ruth's answer to her mother-in-law: "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me and more also, if aught but death part thee and me."

This final plea of Ruth, claiming Jehovah as the only God, and that "LORD" as used by Ruth in verse 17 can apply to but one Personality (see Psalm 83:18; Isa. 42:8; 48:11, and note the pronouns), were evidently the deciding factors that fully convinced Naomi that Ruth was determined to go with her.

Reading over the whole story there is one momentous fact that stands out most clearly, namely, the love, unity, and fellowship that prevails when all the members of one family, or one community, worship the same one true and living God. It was this bond that bound the women of Bethlehem to Naomi, and Naomi to the women of Bethlehem, who had lovingly assured her that "the LORD (note the definite article) hath not left thee." It was the basis of the love of Boaz for Ruth, because she had come to put her trust in "the Lord, the God of Israel." He knew full well that if he could but win her love, a love that had been so steadfast toward Naomi, the same faithful allegiance would be given to him, as her husband, as she had so expressively declared for her mother-in-law. And what more could any

All Things Work Together

By Arlen Marsh

IT WAS in 1932 that I caused combined shock, disapproval, and downright reproof to flicker over the face of a leading Church of God minister. This facial evidence of what novelists would call "mixed emotions" was born from my casual observation that I felt that every Christian had to be, to a certain degree, a fatalist.

Despite the ministerial disapprobation of my theory, I still cling to the notion with all the fervor of a drowning man clutching at straws. There is, after all, a certain fatalism about all life, whether it be governed by religious conviction or by the suggestions of Darwin. Human loves, hopes, fears, ambitions, have been the same ever since the serpent tempted Eve; the history of individual lives has been repeated countless times as surely as the history of nations has displayed marked similarities over thousands of years. If temptation comes today, men will either sin or resist the evil; and the ultimate results of either action are the same now as they would have been had the temptation occurred, say, in the days of Tutankhamen.

Predestination and fatalism have nothing in common. God does not determine individual courses of action. It is the doctrine of predestination that He does. God does not force men to sin or to "be good." It is the doctrine of predestination that He does. But God does outline the results of faith, the effects of certain courses of action—and it requires a brand of fatalism to accept God's outline without demur.

What, for example, is more fatalistic than Romans 8:28:

"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose"? Or, as An American Translation puts it a bit more comprehensibly, "We know that in everything God works with those who love him, whom he has called in accordance with his purpose, to bring about what is good"?

And what is more fatalistic than the flat statement of Paul and Silas to the Philippian jailer: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house"? Or, what is more fatalistic than the commission issued by the Christ Himself: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned"?

The rewards of faith are as inevitable as the rewards of unbelief. Nothing men can do can change the irrevocable laws of God. "What is to be, shall be," and all the protestations of humanity against the arbitrary rulings of the Creator in regard to eternal salvation will have as little effect as sandpaper on diamonds. If God demands that men must have faith in Him and in His Son, if God demands that men must live in accordance with the Bible, if God demands that men must be baptized by immersion in water, then men must be pretty fatalistic about the whole thing.

For men are unable to revise these God-given demands, and the demands, consequently, must be accepted with as much philosophy as we can muster.

But it is primarily with the Pauline observation of Romans 8:28 that this essay is concerned. "All things work together for good . . ." It is impossible for us to circumvent that positive assertion. If we love the Lord in sincerity, if we do those things He desires us to do, if we make a strong effort to live as He wishes us to live, it is impossible for us to escape from the results: good. The literal translation of the verse does not quite conform to the idea of An American Translation; for the literal translation makes the verse point, not to general good, but to specific good for the individuals who love the Lord. Here is the literal translation, revised sufficiently to make sense: "And we know that to those who love God all things work together for good . . ."

Whichever interpretation one makes of the verse—whether one believes that general good results from love of God or whether one believes that specific, individual good results—the basic idea of Paul's writing remains unchanged. Christians must be fatalists to the extent of accepting the knowledge that, if they keep God's commandments as far as they are able, they will inevitably receive great good.

Now there are those who insist that Paul was writing of the future, not of the present—that the "good" mentioned was, in effect, a prophecy. These people believe that eternal life in a perfect earth is the good Paul meant. It seems, however, that this view does not go far enough. Are we to assume that present good will not result from being or trying to be Christians? Must we believe that our only personal reward for good living, individual sacrifices, and resistance to ridicule will be handed us when the book of life is opened?

It is in answering these questions that the problem of fatalism comes in most strongly. Fatalism is a desirable philosophy in that it encourages men to accept what will occur. But the Christian should not carry it to the extent that he does not try to mold events. Certain causes bring inevitable effects, and these combinations cannot be changed. But Christians can exercise a degree of control over the causes, and thus indirectly control the effects. Christians can, for instance, teach others to be baptized and to live righteous lives, and thus they can bring salvation to men; on the other hand Christians can permit the world fo go untaught, and so permit men to go unsaved. Christians cannot disturb the law which says that men must believe in order to receive eternal life, nor can they disturb the law which states that the wages of sin are death.

The experience of Christians throughout the last nineteen hundred years would indicate quite clearly that present good, in one sense or another, accompanies efforts at rightcousness. True enough, many early Christians died on the wheel, on the cross, or at the stake; but nevertheless, thousands more Christians have lived "threescore years and ten" without facing any further persecution than their own consciences and the temptations wrought by environment. An inner peace, a self-respect, a self-confidence, that are sadly lacking among those who are irreligious are the natural heritage of those who take their Christian faith sincerely. Those who follow the precepts of the Christ live more happily, enjoy life to a fuller extent, and in general are healthier than those who pursue the normal course of worldly existence. It is no sense of contributing to church work that makes insurance companies offer lower premiums to ministers than to any other class!

It is here that the need—yes, need—for fatalism enters the picture. One endeavors to live correctly; one believes that Jesus is the Son of God and the Savior of the world; one is baptized—and he goes on living in an astonishing lack of wealth and influence. But good, as mentioned by Paul, does not consist in money and political power; it consists, rather, in a calm conviction that the cause one is espousing is a righteous cause, in seeing others benefited by one's own life and teaching, in being as unselfish as it is humanly possible to be.

Moreover, Paul's "good" goes farther than all this. It reaches into specific acts and results of acts. One may have the tragic experience of seeing a near relative or friend die; one may have the perhaps more tragic experience of what some American writer euphemistically called "unrequited (Please turn to page 11)

TEMPERANCE

By R. A. Curtis

WEBSTER'S definition of temperance is "Moderation, especially in the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions—in a narrower sense, moderation in the use of alcoholic liquors, or entire abstinence from such."

The Bible is very comprehensive in its statements concerning the proper use of good things, and total abstinence from bad things. Wholesome food, and pure water, are necessary for one's continued well-being at the present time. Yet if either is partaken of imprudently it may cause impairment of health, or even death may ensue. Paul's statement to the Philippian saints is as pertinent to saints now as in apostolic times: "Let your moderation be known to all men. The Lord is at hand" (Phil. 4:5).

"Wash you, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as searlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool" (Isa. 1:16-18). "Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good" (Rom. 12:9).

It took several years of agitation upon the saloon question, by women of our country who were annually being despoiled of thousands of their male companions who were being swept into untimely graves by drunkenness, before prohibition of alcoholic beverages was inscribed upon the statute books of the United States. As women were the chief sufferers from this unholy traffic, so have they been the most aggressive advocates for its prohibition. He alone who can feed the birds, color the lilies, and number "the very hairs of your head" (Matt. 6:24-30; 10:29-31), is the One who can count the widows who are widows because of drink, the mad men who are mad because of it, the bright and happy boys and girls who are blasted into shame and misery by such parentage, until, as someone has expressed it, "The vault of heaven itself has become one vast whispering gallery to prolong and reverberate the groans of those who have slain their own peace by this voluntary empoisonment."

Centuries of sorrow attest to the wisdom of Solomon's statement that "wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise" (Prov. 20:1). Isaiah's language, too, is explicit on this topic: "Woe to the crown of pride, to the drunkards of Ephraim, whose glorious beauty is a fading flower, which are on the head of the fat valleys of them that are overcome with wine!... The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden under feet.... But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way; the priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink, they are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink; they err in vision, they stumble in judgment. For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness, so that there is no place clean" (Isa. 28:1, 3, 7, 8).

"Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder" (Prov. 23:29-32). "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people" (Prov. 14:34).

"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10:31).

It's Time for Signs

By J. Eagleston

THAVE been asked by several of the brethren to write about some of my most interesting experiences abroad, especially to tell of conditions in the towns I had visited, including London, Chatham, Forest Hill, Greenwich, and other sections within London-the metropolis now having a fifty-mile front. I arrived there on the Gitanno, a cargo steamer, which took twenty-five days from New Yorkloading and unloading—until we reached East India Docks in London, September 23, 1938. Here were business steamers lined up against the docks, and others looking for parking (or docking) something like one does when the automobile parking space is at a premium. This is a regular thing, as Great Britain depends almost entirely on the cargo steamer service for her foodstuffs from all parts of the world. I signed up on this boat as one of the crew (assistant purser) which saved me paying the ticket tax in the United States, and it facilitated my entrance into England. Of course, I had to have a passport from the United States.

My first trip was from London to Tunbridge in Kent, down near Dover, where many maritime troubles have started and ended. After this I went to Chislehurst, Bromley, Bickley, Forest Hill, Crystal Palace which was burned down, and in London itself—around Buckingham Palace—which is noted for its protection and drill of soldiers and sailors at all times.

Then came the notable September 28. The night of the Munich crisis was about as near war as could be without it actually occurring. Everybody prepared for the worst. The proclamation had gone forth—and under penalty of heavy fine or imprisonment the population of every town must obey it—that even a crack of light must not be showing in the window at night, nor any lights appearing on the street after a possible warning given by whistle that bombing planes had appeared, when all would seek the shelter appointed and stay there until the whistle would blow again informing them that the danger had passed. At present, people are still looking for safe places to hide in case of such an emergency.

Those old estates, such as Windsor Castle and all the mansions of rich families, are provided with secret tunnels, caves, and other hiding places which the English fore-fathers used. Some are known to have existed since the fifteenth century, and were used then for the same purpose in which they will be used again. Man seems to have always known that the safest place for protection is in the earth itself. Even today, with all the destruction that a big bomb can do, it can hardly phase the top of a mountain or some of those high cliffs of mostly solid flint, chalk, or granite. Some of England's caves are long enough to house an entire town of 1,400 population. One at Tunbridge that I visited was of this description. It was once used for prisons and dungeons, but today is equipped with lights, seats, rooms, canned foods, even canned water, so that people could live through quite a siege. What is more, these precautions are drilled regularly into the people, some places every week. Most anytime one might be ordered to don the mask, and one is liable to a fine if he does not call to be fitted for a gas mask. There are places where banks are established and now doing business under a solid hill of stone. The government will supply blue prints showing how to build an individual bomb-proof shelter.

Now, as brethren, you do not need to ask me why the governments of Europe are going to all this trouble, nor do I need to tell you that all this activity over there is based on more than supposition. There was a parade in London of those who survived the recent war in Spain. Do you think they would dare describe this bombing business as a mere thunder storm which is generally only a great big noise? They know better than that, even in old London. One brother from Spain showed me a coat he had worn to business in the morning, and there were holes all over it. He had been dug out from bricks and mortar. His desks were broken and found quite some distance from his office. His name is Addison. He and his wife are suffering with nervousness, and are easily overcome by any unusual event. These people of God meet together with others at least three times a week, and their whole hearts' desire is "Come, Lord Jesus," and "come quickly." Some of these people went through sieges of trouble from 1914-1917, and they know what all the talk of these days portends. Their prayer is that they may be delivered from the great tribulation coming upon the earth at this time.

There are many provisions for protection, especially against bombing, but I leave them to be described by magazines which are more concerned over showing what "we can do" and what "we have done."

I come now to a very plain and specific statement in Revelation which describes some of the conditions I have told you are right now taking place. Read Revelation 6: 15-17. They are pointed words. . . . Even the King and Queen have certain caves near Windsor Castle and, no doubt, at their other homes throughout England and Scotland. They know that they must resort to some such place when the whistle of warning blows, signaling that bombing planes are appearing. How could John write such accounts which are coming only too true to this generation? These caves and tunnels will be the graves of many who think at the present time they will be protected against all enemies, especially bombs. Who can say, to the contrary, that we are not living on the verge of such things described in this whole sixth chapter of Revelation? Men are preparing

The Hidden Man of the Heart

By J. M. Morgan

GOOD MORNING, folks. I just wish to talk with you about your inward man, your hidden man of the heart.

What is "the inward man" (2 Cor. 4:16), and "the hidden man of the heart" (1 Peter 3:4)? According to Colossians 3:9, 10 there is an old man that can be put off, and a new man that can be put on. There is some place in man where each one of these men can and does stay for a time. That place is in the heart. Each of these so-called men develops a different condition of heart in the actual man. A little baby possesses neither the old nor the new man spoken of in Scripture, for both the old and the new man are acquired by the mind or heart.

In Scriptural language the deeds of the old man are these: "Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witcheraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like" (Gal. 5:19-21). Here, too, Paul plainly warns "that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

Likewise in Scriptural language the deeds of the new man are these: "Love joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" (Gal. 5:22-24). And here Paul promises, "Against such there is no law."

Most people believe and teach that the inward man is a spirit or soul within him that lives on after the body is dead. But this cannot be true. The soul (life) "vanisheth away" (James 4:14). In Mark 8:35, 36 both "soul" and "life" are translated from the Greek word psuche. In fact, psuche, the word for soul, is translated "life" forty times in the New Testament. The breath or spirit of the Almighty in man's nostrils gives man life. (Gen. 2:7; Job 27:3; 33:4.) When that breath is withdrawn there can be no conscious part of man to continue. The inward man of Scripture refers to something else.

There is a part of man, in man, called the heart. It has "fleshy tables" (2 Cor. 3:3), called "inward parts" in Jeremiah 31:33, "spirit" in 1 Corinthians 2:11, "minds" and "hearts" in Hebrews 8:10; 10:16. This spirit is not the spirit of God in man's nostrils, neither is it the Holy Spirit. But this spirit, mind, inward parts, heart, is where God wrote the new covenant (Heb. 8:10; 10:16), and is where God put wisdom. (Job 38:36.) "There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them (the men) understanding" (Job 32:8).

The spirit or heart of man can and does die, and it is dependent on God for life. Hezekiah said, "In the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave (not to heaven): . . . I shall not see the Lord" (Isa. 38:10, 11). But if he would have gone to heaven he would have surely seen the Lord—else why go? The life of Hezekiah's spirit would have come to an end if God had not added the fifteen years to his life. According to verse 15, he said, "What shall I say? he hath spoken unto me, and himself hath done it." "Done" what? "Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption" (v. 17). "O Lord, by these things men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit" (v. 16). This shows that the spirit or heart of man has no independent life, but can and does die.

"When the wine was gone out of Nabal, and his wife told him these things, . . . his heart died within him, and he became as a stone. And it came to pass about ten days after, that the Lord smote Nabal, that he died" (1 Sam. 25:37, 38). Here is a man's heart, mind, spirit, or inward parts dead ten days before he actually died.

"With the heart man believeth unto righteousness" (Rom. 10:10). The inward man is Christ formed in you. (Gal. 4:19.) Christians are "strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith" (Eph. 3:16, 17). Therefore, Christ planted by faith in the hearts of men really becomes the inward man. Paul says, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man" (Rom. 7:22). This law could not be the old Mosaic law, but is "the law of the Spirit of life by Christ Jesus which makes me free from the law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2, Diaglott).

Paul further speaks of the two laws, saying, "I perceive another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and making me a captive to that law of sin existing in my members" (Rom. 7:23, Diaglott). He then exclaims, "Wretched man that I am! who will rescue me from this body of death?" A footnote in the Diaglott thus explains the body of death:

"There seems to be here an allusion to an ancient custom of certain tyrants, who bound a dead body to a living man, and obliged him to carry it about till the contagion from the putrid mass took away his life."

Of Christian women, the Apostle Peter wrote, "Whose adornment let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel: but let it be the hidden man of the heart" (1 Peter 3:3, 4). In verse 4 the Diaglott reads, "But decorate the hidden man of the heart with what is incorruptible,—a meek and quiet spirit, which is very precious in the sight of God." Now, if Peter had said, "Let it be the hidden woman of the heart," then the popular claim for the real woman being inside of the body of the actual woman might have been strengthened. But Peter did not so write. It becomes very evident that the inner man, or inner person, is not then a self, but the reformed condition of the heart or affections of one who is truly Christ's

Article Three

By A. E. Griffiths

THE specifications for the building of the altar of sacri-♣ fice are given in Exodus 27:1-9. The dimensions in our measurements would be seven feet six inches square, and four feet six inches high, constructed of shittim wood. The tree is the same as mentioned in Isaiah 41:19, "I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah tree, and the myrtle, and the oil tree." This prophecy refers to the fertile condition of the land in the kingdom age. This tree is what is now known as the acacia tree, which has a trunk so thick that a five-foot wide plank can be cut from some of them. This particular wood was used largely in the construction of the Tabernacle. It was of a hard nature, and most suitable for the work. The frame of the altar, being made with wood, was then covered with brass. Both wood and brass typify mortality: the wood is produced on the surface of the earth, and the minerals from which the brass is made are produced under the surface of the earth. As the altar was going to come in contact with fire, it had to have a metal covering to be able to withstand the heat. A horn or hook was fastened at each corner. Horns are always an emblem of power in the Scriptures, showing in this case the power sacrifice had with God. They were also used to secure victims, previous to sacrificing them, as indicated in, "Bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar" (Psalm 118:27). The top of the altar was a grating made of brass and acted as a grill does in a modern stove. There were two rings, attached to either side, through which two wooden poles covered with brass were inserted when the Israelites were prepared to carry the altar from one encampment to another. When the altar was in use these poles were withdrawn.

The whole device being four feet six inches high, it would not be easily accessible to the priests to lay the sacrifice upon it, so it must have been banked up on three sides to allow them to reach it. The fourth side was left level with the ground where the ashes were emptied. Steps were not allowed. "Neither shalt thou go up by steps unto mine altar, that thy nakedness be not discovered thereon" (Ex. 20:26). There is no doubt that the priest was elevated while making an offering, because Scripture says, "Aaron lifted up his hand toward the people, and blessed them, and came down from offering of the sin offering" (Lev. 9:22).

We must also remember that the offering was not set on fire by the priest, for "there came a fire out from before the Lord and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat, which when all the people saw, they shouted, and fell on their faces" (Lev. 9:24). This act by God signified that He accepted the sacrifice. We have a similar instance of God causing fire to consume a sacrifice when Elijah proved that he worshiped the true God: "Then the fire of the Lord fell, and consumed the burnt sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench" (1 Kings 18:38). This took place when Elijah was sent to that wicked King Ahab, and did not take place in the Tabernacle—showing that God can perform His wonders anywhere, when He finds it necessary or expedient.

Now comes a very important operation concerning the altar. Every morning and evening a lamb without blemish had to be sacrificed on it. This is recorded in Exodus 29: 38-46 and in Numbers 28:3, 4. This offering was to atone for the sin of the congregation, that is, for all the people. Hence, it was a national offering. This was to prefigure the Savior of mankind, of whom it is written, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1:29). "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things . . . but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:18, 19). Here was the exact type of Christ, the lamb without spot or blemish. Christ, although a mortal man, never sinned, though he could have committed sin had He wanted to. He withstood temptation, and so gained the victory over the desires of the flesh. Paul tells us, "It is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sin" (Heb. 10:4). This is true because these sacrifices under the law were but figures of Christ's sacrifice. Whose blood could take away sin. He was a man like us-animals, not being men, could not accomplish our atonement. Animals had not fallen from God's grace through sin, but man had, and it required a perfect man who had never sinned to voluntarily shed his blood to meet God's demands and to justify His wisdom of the law of forgiveness.

The shedding of blood was necessary for forgiveness for the simple reason that God has said, "The life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul (person)" (Lev. 17:11). When Adam and Eve sinned God pronounced the sentence of death upon them, and there was no court of appeal against that sentence. Hence, God could not rescind His own wise judgment without a just and wise reason therefore. A sinless life had to be forfeited to nullify the original judgment. Consequently, all who believe in Christ, His death and resurrection, are computed as sin covered by Him, "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree" (1 Peter 2:24). Therefore, the sacrifice of a lamb, morning and evening, was a prophecy of the sacrifice that would eventually take place to countermand that sentence of death that had been passed on mankind soon after the Creation. Death being the opposite of life, of which God is the owner and original author, it was naturally obnoxious to Him. Therefore, everything dead or pertaining to death was unclean, and that is why the law lays stress upon this condition. "He that toucheth the dead body of any man shall be unclean seven days" (Num. 19:11). Death being a condition so opposed to God, He was willing to devise a means of annulling it in a way that was befitting His power and dignity. Thus, the altar of sacrifice supplies the type for God's method of abolishing death.

Let us consider another thought in relation to the sacrifice of a lamb morning and evening. Notice, it must be a male; a female would not typify Christ. For details let us read Leviticus 1:10-13: "And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish, and he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the Lord: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar. . . . But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water; and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar." The lamb was to be killed on the north side of the altar. Why that side, particularly? Well, we realize now that everything concerning the Tabernacle was prophetic. Rome killed Christ, and Rome is north of Jerusalem where He suffered. Also, Calvary where Christ died was on the north side of Jerusalem. Again, at the end of this dispensation, a northern power, "the king of the north," will descend on God's people to destroy them. All Scripture fits in and agrees beautifully when it is read right and comprehended.

The blood was sprinkled at the bottom of the altar, and when Christ was elevated on the cross the Roman soldier pierced Christ's side and His blood ran out, and, naturally, was poured out at the bottom of His cross. Is this not a perfect type? Then the priest had to wash the inwards and the legs with water. What does this represent? Washing always means cleaning and preparing. Paul says, "Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me" (Heb. 10:5). Christ was prepared for the work He did. In the first place, He submitted to baptism which was a cleansing operation, and so fulfilled the type of the sacrificial lamb. Although Christ's baptism did not represent what ours does, yet He submitted to a spiritual washing, and "according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Spirit" (Titus 3:5). All the details of the sacrifice under the law point unmistakably to Christ, who was to save all mankind that believed on Him. It makes it absolutely certain that only those who submit to God's laws and believe in them have a chance of salvation, and even then we must be faithful until we die, or until Christ may come during our life.

While talking of washing we might also take cognizance of the laver which was placed just west of the altar and in front of the entrance to the Tabernacle. We must remember we have not reached the Tabernacle proper yet; we are only in the outer court.

The particulars of the laver are recorded in Exodus 30: 18-21. By its description we learn it was a large basin made of brass, and the foot also of brass. It had the appearance of a large vase. The metal for its manufacture was supplied by the women of the congregation. "And he made the laver of brass, and the foot of it of brass, of the lookingglasses of the women assembling" (Ex. 38:8). In those days the lookingglasses were made of polished brass. So the women were willing to sacrifice some of their adorning equipment to be used for the glory of God.

The reason for the laver being placed in this position, between the Tabernacle and the altar, was that the priests could wash their hands and feet before going into the Tabernacle or officiating at the altar of sacrifice. A priest had to be clean before he could come into contact with holy things, and all things inside those curtains were holy. This same principle was taught by Christ when He said, in John 15:3, "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." This shows that, as the water cleansed the priests, so the Word of God now cleanses us from the impurities of the world.

Reverting to the subject of death, the reason this condition was so repulsive to God was because it was the result of sin, which was antagonistic to Him. Consequently, before anyone could approach God, the person had to go through a form of cleansing. We read in Exodus 29:4, "Aaron and his sons thou shalt bring unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shalt wash them with water." This is definite instruction and was followed by Christ when He washed the disciples' feet, as recorded in John 13:4-11. In this reference Jesus proved that washing was necessary for cleansing by which eleven of them were clean, but Judas was not, showing at that time He knew Judas was a traitor and was beyond being saved-consequently, washing of Judas was unnecessary. Water is often used to symbolize the Holy Spirit, as for instance, "Whose drinketh of this water shall thirst again: but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst" (John 4:13, 14). These words of Jesus to the woman of Samaria were antitypical of the water that washed the priests before they could touch anything that was holy. Remember in John 20:17 Jesus said to Mary, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father." This command was given to her because Mary last saw the Savior dead, and the law forbade anyone touching a dead man. Jesus respected the law, even after His death and resurrection, because until He had completed His work (He had not yet ascended to heaven), she (Mary) was still amenable to the law.

This ordinance of washing was therefore necessary to portray the future. David knew this when he said, "Wash me throughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin" (Psalm 51:2).

The laver is a beautiful figure of the cleansing process we have to go through before we are fit to stand before the Savior, and to enter into the kingdom. Only those who have fulfilled all their obligations toward God can hope for the reward of everlasting life.

FIRE

By F. O. Sapp

SHALL we analyze the context of 1 Corinthians 3:10-15? We are told by some that Paul, in verse 13, speaks of a coming day when the impenitent sinners will be burned up in a moment of time. I am sure that we all agree that the incorrigible sinner will be burned, destroyed, or consumed—soul, spirit, and body. But does 1 Corinthians 3:13 teach positively that the sinner will be destroyed with literal fire in a moment of time? I think not.

It is said by some, "So let this day be long or short, . . . it presents a fiery ordeal for sinners at its very commencement, for it is revealed by fire." To the truthfulness of the actual quotation I am sure all can agree. But let us notice that Paul is speaking in regard to builders and buildings, and that those builders who build upon Christ (the Rock of our salvation) will likewise be tested, or revealed by this fire. (Vv. 14, 15.) All know that the builder mentioned here refers to man, and the building, of course, represents his character. So, neither the builder nor the building is literal, but both are illustrative. Could it not be that the word "fire" has a similar meaning? I think it has. (See Gal. 6:7, 8; Matt. 3:11; Luke 12:49; Acts 2:3.)

Is it possible to develop a Christian character in a moment of time? Does it not take days, yes, years for some of us to grow up into Christ? The new creature, or new man, is not actually born till the resurrection. (1 Cor. 15:35-49.)

I wonder if we do not sometimes make the word "fire" too literal, when the word has been used to only emphasize the surety of consuming, or to annihilate identity?

The incorrigible sinner will be destroyed, but not necessarily with literal fire like we kindle in our stoves to keep warm by. I am inclined to think that the wicked will be electrocuted, or destroyed with acids of some kind, for I am sure there will be no worms around to consume what could not be destroyed by literal fire. (Mark 9:44.)

Again, if the literal heavens and earth, and all that are therein, are all set on fire at the same time, where will Christ and His church be while everything that belongs to this world will be burning with literal fire? Remember that the saints go up only into the air to meet the Lord when He comes back to this earth. (1 Thess. 4:13-17. R.V.) Are the saved fireproof? Such a theory is ridiculous.

Is it not more reasonable to conclude that it is the contaminations of nature and sinfulness of men that are to be burned, or destroyed, by whatever means God chooses.

The Prophet Malachi says, "Behold, the day shall come burning like an oven, and all the arrogant and every doer of wickedness shall be stubble, and the day that comes shall burn them up," says the Lord of hosts, "so that it will leave them neither root nor branch," and the righteous "shall trample upon the wicked, for they shall be dust under the soles of their feet." (Mal. 4:1, 3, Am. Tr.)

The day that Malachi prophesied of is to be a onethousand-year day. It will take all of that day to judge and destroy the incorrigible. Malachi says the wicked shall be stubble. Did you ever see a field of stubble burn up all at once? To the contrary, only part of the stubble burns at first, the remainder of the stubble burns when it comes within the path of the fire. I believe the wicked will be destroyed in a similar manner.

Yes, this fire, or process of execution, will begin soon after Jesus comes back to this earth, and will continue until the times of restitution have been completed.

But some will say the fire is not symbolic. If the fire in 2 Peter 3, 1 Corinthians 3:13, and Malachi 4:1 is literal, then the fire mentioned in Jeremiah 5:14, Mark 9:43, Ezekiel 36:5, Exodus 9:23, Malachi 3:1, 2, and Revelation 13:13 is likewise literal fire, because they each came from the same original root word, being used in different terms and expressions—depending upon how, when, and by whom the word is used.

Let us study well the context of scripture before placing a positive interpretation upon the Word. (2 Tim. 2:15.)

IT'S TIME FOR SIGNS

right now in Great Britain and all Europe for just such an emergency. "Who shall be able to stand?"

Now please read Luke 21:36. As these words are of no value except to the brethren, cannot I say to you, as well as to myself, that we should "watch and pray," as the Master here urges all who have ears to hear. Listen, too, to our beloved Apostle Paul in Hebrews 12:23-29. I try not to be an alarmist, but all of us must wake up and realize that our love toward one another must be of that quality which we so often read about in 1 Corinthians 13. When we meet some, they have such a fallen countenance that one wonders if they have really read and understood the meaning of Jesus' words in Matthew 18:35. These words spoken to His disciples also apply to us. I urge every brother minister to bury every difference he ever had, or still retains, toward another brother or sister, so that not one thought, idea, black look, hypocritical feeling, or anything else, may separate us from the love of God through Jesus our blessed Master. Let us determine that Romans 8:33-39 shall be our watchword for the rest of this year, 1939. Remember, it's only the scoffers who ask, "Where is the promise of his coming?" It is only the scoffers who say that something else must be fulfilled before Christ can come.

Brethren, we do not know the day nor the hour of Christ's return, but by these signs we surely know He is at the door. Let us, indeed, be one another's keepers. By doing this we shall be sure of an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom.

love"; one may see his life's savings torn away by broken banks and poor investments—and these things still may result in good right now! Who knows what tragedy, what pain, may have overtaken the dead relative had he lived—is not death better than the last stages of cancer, or better than a lifetime of paralysis? Men have loved and lost throughout all the past ages—and most of them have re covered from their heartbreak and later married with quite outstanding success. The financial debacle of the early 1930's sent many thousands back to church, turned even the thoughts of commercial clubs and chambers of commerce to God and prayer.

The Christian must view the apparent evils with the optimism his faith ought to engender. He must be a fatalist in the sense of realizing that all things work together for good—not merely for the general good, but for his particular good, in this life and the next. He must accept things as they come, "and therewith be content." He must acknowledge that, if he lives and thinks as Christians should, he will inevitably receive a great reward now as well as in the future. If he does not so acknowledge, if he does not regard his life with a sort of optimistic fatalism, he denies the truth of what Paul wrote.

man of the heart. Both most surely were speaking of the innermost affections of the Christian heart. Why do some insist on trying to use texts to teach that man has an inner immortal soul? Did Nabal's immortal soul become as stone ten days before he died?

"Having put on that new one, being renewed by knowledge, according to a likeness of him, . . . put on love; it is the bond of the completeness. And let the peace of the Anointed preside in your hearts" (Col. 3:10, 14, 15, Diaglott).

man desire than the vow: "Where thou goest I will go . . . and thy God shall be my God"?

We can thus see the wisdom of the persistence and the insistence of the Scriptural command "to love the Lord thy God," and the reason why the Son of God deemed it "the first of all the commandments," and the greatest.

The recognition of but one Common Center, one true and living God, is an absolute necessity to every individual, for it is impossible to visualize the fullness of perfection in more than one Personality. This may seem to be a strong statement, but thoughtful meditative students will, I think, find it absolutely correct, and an unanswerable argument for the unity of God. Further, it would seem to be true that nothing short of perfection in its fullness will ever satisfy the mind of man: not that he can ever attain to it, for the very objective of eternal life is "that (in order that) they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." There can be no end to immortality, neither can there be any limit to its purposeful objective, namely, the knowledge of God. Nor can it be denied that given the possibility of love for such a Being, who always has been, and always will be "the Almighty," there is no force in heaven or upon earth that can equal it for unifying power.

Ruth surely had a "full reward." She had found a mother-in-law whom she loved so dearly that the women of Bethlehem told Naomi that the love of Ruth was better than that of seven sons. She gained a husband because of her love for the same God whom he both loved and worshiped; and, as is so generally the ease when both husband and wife are as one on the essentials of worship, Ruth's child followed in faithful footsteps. Obed, her son, became the father of Jesse, and Jesse became the father of David, and the name of Ruth became linked in the genealogy of great David's greater Son. Few women in sacred or secular history have had such a reward.

life as of their own making, they lay all their troubles on God. But that is the condition of the world today because sin entered. Man loves his way rather than God's way. He cannot seem to see that he has been a failure ever since he determined to go his way rather than God's way. But this is the world in sin. It is the law of sin to lead to ruin, and the world is fast approaching the day when that will have come.

When men have determined upon their own extinction God will take a hand to again put the world on its feet. This will be accomplished with a universal Ruler who will restore man to righteousness. God does not propose to lose the work of His hands. He will restore the earth to its primitive condition. He will make it the home of righteous man. God will be successful in bringing to pass that which He designed from the first, and the time will come when the earth will be populated with a class of people who will become altogether righteous and worshipful, when the nations will go up from year to year to worship the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem.

Does It Make Any Difference?

Emily Fyfe, Jericho Springs, Mo.

A few days ago an interesting letter came from a friend living in the beautiful country of the mountains. Before the closing words I find this question: "Does it make any difference what we believe, just so long as we are sincere?" As a bit of a surprise to both the inquirer and the Berean editor, I wonder if I might answer this question through the columns of the Berean page, rather than by personal correspondence as was expected.

The man was sincere when he took poison for cough syrup, but that did not keep him from losing his life.

It is interesting to read how people of long ago in other lands worshiped. Buddhism, so we are told, is the worship of dead men's ghosts incarnated in beasts, birds, reptiles, and idols. Kings and heroes of the past are supposed to be transmigrating through animal organism, and are worshiped through the animals they are supposed to inhabit. Thus, in India monkeys, snakes, tigers, and insects are permitted to increase for fear that death to them might be death to an ancestor. Women even feed their own children to the crocodile god to appease him, and to reconcile him to them. Yet, there is no doubt that all these people are sincere when they do such things.

In Siam the white elephant is a chief deity, valued highly because it is supposed that in such a palatial residence Buddha's soul or spirit will dwell long. Each owner hopes to have the elephant in which Buddha dwells.

Among some tribes in Africa, when the great chief dies, his wives and slaves are burned on his funeral pyre, or are buried alive with him, because it is sincerely believed that he will need them in some spirit land where he is going after death.

Mohammed taught that at the transition called death the immortal soul is supposed to cross a bridge as narrow as a hair and as sharp as a sword's edge. Those who are good Mohammedans cross over into fields of delight and immediately enjoy a sort of carnal paradise, and then some time after that their bodies are resurrected.

The Indian of America believed in the happy hunting grounds. When an Indian of any repute died, his dog, pony, bow and arrows, and all his personal belongings were buried with him, because in the happy hunting grounds to which his spirit was supposed to go he would need them.

Now whether or not the above-mentioned believed those things or not, we only know from hearsay or reading. In our own modern churches such are not believed! Or are they? Let us enter one of these beautiful churches, where a well-learned minister is paid a "handsome" salary. As we enter, a time-honored funeral service is taking place. We hear the minister say: "The soul (meaning immortal soul) has taken its flight, and our friend is in that beautiful isle of somewhere, singing with the angels." Is that true? It surely must be when people of so many lands and ages believe the reward is at death.

We turn to the Bible, truly the Book of books. There we do not find any account of an immortal soul going to heaven, but we do find what it says. We learn: "Abraham believed God, and it was accounted unto him for right-cousness" (Gal. 3:6). Are we blessed for our faith? "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham" (Gal. 3:9).

Time and space forbid telling about the great and precious promises God made to Abraham, which are to be fulfilled through the heir, which is Christ, but they are so well known they need little comment. "Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel" (Mark 1:14, 15). Jesus said, "Believe the gospel," so it must make a difference what one believes. The gospel does not teach anything concerning an "immortal" soul.

Paul, the apostle, was not ashamed of the gospel. He said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greck" (Rom. 1:16). Jesus said, "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day" (John 12:48). "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith" (Heb. 12:1, 2).

Yes, it does make a difference what we believe. Let us "search the scripture," for in them we find the truth.

A personal letter from one of the program committe for Berean Day at the coming General Conference reveals that the speaker for the evening service will be Brother Harry Gockler, president of the National Berean Society. Other details will be published later.

"Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee" (Lev. 10:9).

Scripture: Jeremiah 35:5-10; Ephesians 5:15-21; 6:1-4.

We Have Obeyed

Jeremiah is sometimes called "the weeping prophet." One can read of the conditions of the people to whom he prophesied, and can see why anyone who loved God could easily weep. The people were idol worshipers. They did not listen to Jeremiah. He was one time thrown into prison, and another time into a dungeon with a filthy, muddy bottom. A kind negro, Ebed-melech, helped him out. Find that story and read it.

How great was the example set by this family, the Rechabites? They were a wandering tribe, who had taken refuge for a while in the city. They were from the country and were, no doubt, called "old-fashioned," even as some are today who go to the cities from the farm. We might think the Rechabites should have obeyed Jeremiah when he set the wine before them and told them to drink. Surely, under such circumstances they could have broken their father's command. But—no!

They had a great deal more family pride than many boys and girls have today. They not only had family ideals, but they lived up to their ideals. They knew to drink would be to disobey their great, wise ancestor's command, "Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever." Neither circumstances, nor the position of the one who offered the drink to them was considered. Their one and only consideration was to not touch strong drink.

These Rechabites were not only from the country, but they also were not Israelites. Yet they were better examples of the godly life than the idolatrous drunkards among the Israelites.

Today we sometimes see people outside of the Christian church who are better examples of temperance and total abstinence than some who have named the name of Christ and are supposed to glorify Him. Should we not have family pride? Pride which is right to have, of doing what is right in His sight?

Once more let us repeat this illustration: Hold up both hands. Count your fingers and thumbs. Fold down three. That means three of every ten who drink cannot stop, but get the "habit" or become drunkards. No one can say which of those ten represent you—if you ever taste wine or strong drink. But, if you will be like those who obeyed their father in our lesson, I know you'll never be one of those three that hang their heads because they are drunk-

Decide now to never touch a single drop of any of it.

Paul said, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend" (1 Cor. 8:13).

That, I believe, is the true Christian standard for eating or drinking or "any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak" (Rom. 14:21).

"O, that they should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains."

Cigarettes are a great enemy, not only of boys but also of girls. Here again, family pride and love should keep a girl or boy from forming this dirty habit. This habit steals away the will, for how difficult it is to quit when once begun. The very best remedy is to never begin. The next best cure is to decide to stop, and do so. God, too, said, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Cor. 10:13).

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

The work here is progressing well, although during the recent strawberry season the attendance dropped off considerably at some of our services.

We were pleased recently to have Mrs. J. C. Lindsey of Shreveport in attendance at our Happy Woods church service and Bible class. Although she is isolated from our churches here her faith remains true to the teachings of the gospel.

Preston Landry, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Landry, is recovering from an emergency appendectomy.

Vernon Lobell of the Blood River church has recently secured employment in New Orleans. His presence and help at the various services are greatly missed. Our attendance will be further decreased this summer at Blood River because Mr. and Mrs. Claiborne Lee and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Robinson are leaving this week for Kentucky, and later will go to Michigan for several months. Their presence and help will also be missed.

In recent weeks two new babies have made their appearance at Blood River. Born to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Robinson, a girl. Born to Mr. and Mrs. William McKinney, a girl.

There is talk already of several attending conference. We trust that when conference time arrives that talk will be put into action. Harry Goekler, Pastor.

PENNELLWOOD CHURCH OF GOD

Grand Rapids, Michigan

Bro. R. M. Abbott was recently confined to his home for two weeks by sickness. In his absence Bro. Arlen Marsh supplied the pulpit on April 30 and May 7.

We are glad to welcome home two of the pioneers of the Church of God in Grand Rapids, Bro. and Sr. Charles Simpson, who had been spending a very pleasant winter in Florida.

The family of Robert Townsend is now under quarantine for scarlet fever. We will not be sorry to have this pest leave our community.

As the Pennellwood church has been asked to have charge of the baccalaureate services, Bro. Abbott will deliver the sermon at the Godwin auditorium on the evening of May 14.

The church and Sunday school have eight members graduating from the Godwin High School this year, and Iris Hall from the Caledonia High School.

Mrs. L. F. Sloeum, Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

"We devoted our midweek meeting last night to the Bible Training School, Our sub-ject was 'Religious Education in the Bible,' We pointed out the manner in which God educated or taught Israel through Moses and the early disciples through Christ and the apostles, and we tried to show the need of intensive education of workers today."—G. E. Marsh, 3514 Oakley Ave. S. W., Grand Rapids, Bro. F. L. Austin, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, conducted morning and evening services for the Church of God in South Bend, Ind., on Sunday, May 7.

Here is a bone-drying quotation from a funeral sermon: "The wages of a sinful life is death—death to the human body and our immortal soul." Don't sink your thinker into that one very far or you will strike bottom. . . . Nowhere in all the Bible can one find the expression "immortal soul," but if one should, by what definition could anything "immortal" die?

Announced fully! What? The Bible Training School. When? From July 5 to August 13. Where? At Oregon, Ill., Read the back cover page for further details.

Doesn't the Calendar of Evangelism inspire you? Let us keep it there the year round. God never hibernates.

Next week Bro. J. H. Anderson will greet you from the front page of The Herald. His article is entitled, "The Perfect Day."

"I enjoy preaching, and shall be more than glad to help sow the seed of peace, love, and life unending."—O. E. Beck, Paris, Ark.

"Miss Alice Sword, Meaford, Ont., the nurse who so efficiently and graciously cared for Mrs. Randall last summer, is spending her holidays with us."—C. E. Randall, Fonthill, Ont.

On Sunday, May 28, Bro. J. H. Anderson will preach in the morning at Plymouth, in the afternoon at North Salem, and in the evening at South Bend, all points in Indiana. Bro. Anderson may wear out, but he will never rust out.

As a result of somebody's appreciation of Bro. M. W. Lyon's recent article, "Building the Homes of Tomorrow," he has been engaged to give a lecture relative to the same subject. We have not heard where.

We are sorry to learn that Bro. R. M. Abbott, pastor of the Pennellwood Church of God in Grand Rapids, Mich., has been sick for the past several weeks, but glad to learn that his health is now returning. He lives at 3808 John Ave. S.E.

We were recently interested in seeing 3,000 turkeys all under one roof. They belong to Mr. Harper Koontz of Mt. Morris, Ill. "There is a path which no fowl knoweth" (Job 28:7), and it is just 197 days to Thanksgiving Day.

"We have a new baby boy at our house. Dean Willard, 7 lbs., 3 ozs., was born May 2. Mother and baby are doing well."—J. Don Swartz. Congratulations.

Bro. R. H. Judd, 111 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ontario, would appreciate a few copies of the February 28th issue of The Herald. Have you one to spare? If so, wrap and address it to him, and put on a one-cent stamp.

REPORT FROM T. A. DRINKARD

My April report is: Ater, Texas, (1, 2), 3 sermons; Mullin, Texas, (8, 9), 3 sermons; Little Rock, Ark., (12, 13), 2 sermons; Cleveland, Ark., (15, 10), none; Bowring, Okla., (19-28), 11 sermons; Arkansas City, Kansas., (30), 2 sermons, Places visited, 6; a total of 21 sermons delivered.

The regular monthly services were held at Ater and Mullin, Texas, and Little Rock, Ark., but the services were rained out at Cleveland, Ark. At Bowring, Okla., a splendid meeting was held, and a number expressed the desire that I return this fall for another meeting, which I promised to do; also promised to give time for a meeting in southeastern Kansas, in a place where none of our ministers have gone. We have two more calls in Oklahoma for work in new fields. The Lord giving me the strength, I shall fill these calls. It was a real treat to be with the brethren at Arkan-sas City, Kansas, for the 5th Sunday for two services.

After the morning service there Bro. Pelton of Caldwell, Kansas, and I went with Bro. John Fiske to the home of his sister, Sr. S. L. Baber, who is confined to her home by an affliction that causes her much suffering. How happy she would be to receive letters of encouragement from the brotherhood. Her address is Arkansas City, Kansas, Box 144.
After a very fine meal prepared by Bro.
Baber's mother and sister we had a short service in the home. After the afternoon service I went with Bro. Fiske for a night and day visit with him and his family in his farm home near Milan, Kansas. It was a real pleasure to visit with these faithful soldiers of the cross in their home. They pledge their influence and power toward the gospel work. Also, was glad to meet Sr. Nancy B. Robison. with whom I have corresponded some for several years, but never met her before this. May God bless such soldiers of the cross who are not easily shaken in mind by modern theories that are leading many astray.

A number of meetings are planned for Texas during the summer. The time for sev-Texas during the summer. The time for several in Arkansas has already been set. Our meeting for Cleveland, Ark, will be July 14-23, which will embrace the state conference, Bro. Harry Gockler of Hammond, La., will, the Lord willing, assist me most of the time in that meeting. Does our effort to answer these calls for service without first asking, "How much will you pay me?" appeal to you? Is it not the Scriptural way for ministers to do? We are living in momentous times. If it was necessary for Chirstians to be faithful in the days of the apostles, it is equally so now. The Church of God needs men and women who cannot be shaken in their faith and loyalty. Why surrender the their faith and loyalty. Why surrender the truth? I appeal to every brother and sister to give their undivided loyalty to the preaching of the gospel. I shall be happy to hear from you.

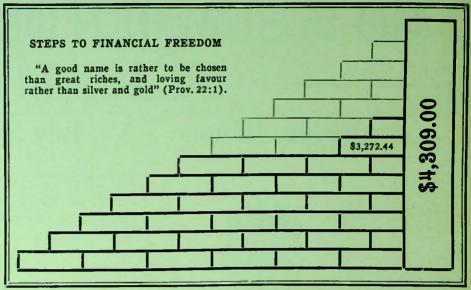

T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas.

MOTHER DEAR By Malcolm Magaw (age 11)

Mother, you seem to be so kind, You have a very thoughtful mind. I couldn't get along without you, Mothers like you are very few.

Some day when I get real rich, And won't be digging any ditch, I'll buy you a well-furnished home. Even better than they have in Rome.

Every year on Mother's Day I'll try to make you gay. We'll have a great big dinner, And won't care whether we get fatter or thinner.

HUGH LOGAN

Hugh, the youngest of a family of seven hoys and one girl, was born to Charles and Sarah Logan on December 14, 1858, in a oneroom pioneer log cabin south of Plymouth,

He spent his entire life in the county where he was born, except for a few months in the last few winters when he made his home with his only son, Glen, in South Bend, who, to-gether with a grandchild, Mrs. Jack Morris. survives. His death came on May 3, 1939. At the age of 19 he was baptized by Eld. Hugh Barnhill, for whom he was named. For more than sixty years he was faithful to the One he chose then to serve, and while in his strength was always to be found at worship, Sunday school, and Berean services. He was a deep Bible student and could quote Scrip-ture in a most wonderful way. This ability was of much value in the last several years of his life, as he became afflicted with blindness which was partly overcome by an opera-tion. He had served as Sunday school super-intendent, and 20 years as an elder of the North Salem church.

his death, which came with little warning. He kept the heritage of a good name above re-proach, his grandfather being a pioneer cir-cuit-riding pastor who came to Marshall Coun-ty in 1836. Only one member of this noble family survives, Marshall of this vicinity.

We testify to his life as one of deep faith wrought with good works.

The funeral was conducted at the Richardson Mortuary in Plymouth, by the writer, after which he was laid to rest beside his companion, Eva L. Penrod Logan, who preceded his demise by 8 years, there to wait with her the call of Him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life."

GO to SUMMER TRAINING SCHOOL!

July 5-August 13

"Having attended the 1938 Summer Training School and knowing the wonderful benefit derived from the various classes, I cannot recommend the School too highly. The spiritual inspiration received, the knowledge gained through study, and the Christian fellowship experienced with others of like precious faith, enrich a person for time and eternity. If you have opportunity attend the School this summer. You will never regret it."—Harry Goekler, pastor Louisiana Churches of God, Hammond, Louisiana.

"After spending six weeks at the Bible Training School last summer, I think that anyone would be benefited by attending this year. I only regret that I cannot do so myself. The School brings the best of the church minds together, and lets the students benefit not only by the teaching but by discussions among themselves. Those who are comparatively new in the church, particularly, will find the School is just what they need to strengthen their faith and to build their spiritual lives. Anyone who thinks of his religion as being really important to him will enjoy the actual work in the classes as much as he will enjoy the devotional spirit of the School."—Miss Frances Munshaw, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Elder Sydney E. Magaw, former pastor of the Brush Creek, Ohio, church and at present pastor of the Oregon, Illinois, church and editor of The Restitution Herald, is only one of the three first-rank instructors who will teach the members of the Summer Bible Training School this year. Biblical interpretation, church administration, and evangelism will be the backbone of the curriculum. S. J. Lindsay will handle the first of these subjects, C. E. Randall the second, and Elder Magaw the third. Tuition, including board and room, will be only $30.00 for the six weeks!

The Perfect Day

Proverbs 4:18

By J. H. Anderson

I LAY down on my bed with my face toward an east window. The night was very dark, and, as I couldn't sleep because of bad health, the hours were long and it seemed that day would never come. However, I finally fell into a sleep. Some time later my eyes opened, and I noticed that the darkness was leaving and light was taking its place.

Looking through the window I saw a red glow in the eastern sky. I watched. Presently the rim of the sun came up. The darkness was driven away and replaced by the light of the risen sun—the light of a new day. I arose, stepped out into the sunshine of a new day. The birds were singing, the trees and grass were green, and the flowers were blooming—a new life was all around, and I forgot the long hours of the long night. I was in a new day.

About six thousand years ago Adam sinned, and brought the long dark night of sin, sickness, and death. (Rom. 5:12.) It has, indeed, been a dark night over the world. "Behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people" (Isa. 60:2).

This night of sin is soon to come to its end before the rising Sun that is to bring in the perfect day. "Unto you that fear my name shall the Sun (Christ) of righteousness arise (come) with healing in his wings; and ve shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall" (Mal. 4:2). I could see the light of the new day before I could see the sun that brought the new day. So, by the light of prophecy, we can see the light of the new day before Christ shines in all His coming glory. "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise" (2 Peter 1:19). The more sure word of prophecy shows that the long night of sin is about over, that the perfect day will soon be here. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore east off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light' (Rom. 13:12),

J. H. Anderson

The nearer we come to the new day the brighter becomes the light of prophecy, the light coming from "the Sun of righteousness," the only light that shines into the future. "But the path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4:18). Yes, the nearer we come to the perfect day the brighter becomes the light of prophecy. Today we can understand many things in prophecy that our fathers of fifty years ago could not understand.

The perfect day will be one thousand years of our time. "Beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (2 Peter 3:8). This day is the great Sabbath day when the people shall rest from their labor of six days under the curse. (Heb. 4:1-10, marg.) The Sabbath days in the law age were types of this great Sabbath. "Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief" (Heb. 4:11).

We now see in the many signs that God is giving us that the day is nearly here. "So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand" (Luke 21:31). We see Israel going back to the Holy Land. By this we know that we are in the latter days, for it was prophesied, "The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king (there has been no king for 2,500 years), and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim (more than 1,800 years have passed since Israel's Temple was torn down): afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days" (Hosea 3:4, 5). As we see Israel going home we know that we are near the close of the long night. near the dawn of the great Sabbath day.

Jesus prophesied that there would be "upon the earth distress of nations, with per- (Please turn to page 11)

"God Save the King" (1 Sam. 10:24)

Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth, first reigning monarchs of Great Britain ever to set foot on American soil, were given a tremendous welcome at historically famous old Quebec, May 17, 1939. The King and his Queen will travel "from sea to sea" and back again. At several points along their way they will see where the north winds drop the maple leaf upon another land, and from June 8 to 11 they will bless with their presence the opposite side of that line which nature does not recognize. They are welcome. Two flags wave joyfully as ten million voices are joined with a hundred million more in their loud acclaim, "God save the King." Dominion and States rejoice alike. God save the King!

Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth were delayed a little; then the ice and fog broke away, and fearful hearts were at once made gay. Suddenly, the cannon shook the earth. Suddenly, the King appeared! It had never been so before. And every ear heard him, though not a word of hatred, irony, or war. The Queen goes honored at his side, and partakes of every blessing there. God save the King!

Like invisible roots of trees intertwine with others beyond the line, invisible but very real interests and emotions of two great nations are so interwoven as to never be pulled apart. King George and President Roosevelt will probably say so at Washington, Mount Vernon, and Hyde Park. No greater love exists between two former foes than the love that flows where nature says it must. The glory of Niagara is not seen from either side alone, and the colors at night upon the American Falls must shine from Canada's shore. What grace will be shown when King George lays wreath upon the Mount Vernon tomb where our sleeping hero will be crowned, as it were, by the great-great-grandson of another sleeping king. When even king will bless his foe it is well to say, "God save the King!"

This summer the roots of trees will intertwine a little tighter; trees on either side will nod their heads with even more friendly understanding than before. "Neither shall they learn war any more." Let eagles build in maple trees.

It was good to hear the King, but I believed he was real before I heard his voice. I believed, too, that His Royal Majesty was really coming to bless our land before ever he left his father's throne. In fact, world conditions indicated that it would be wise for him to come, and I had no good reason for doubting the advent message. The King's servants do not lie, nor does the King deceive his own. The King has come; the Queen is at his side. God save the King!

It was most appropriate for the King to first appear to his very own people, and at a Provincial capital. New York or Washington could not be called "the city of the great king." But that King George will visit both of these chief cities of our land shows kingly wisdom and a love for "other sheep."

Both the King and Queen are happy. They reign to gether. They are "one flesh." They plan, work, and rejoice together. They think alike. They are one power working for the very best interests of the subjects of all their dominion "under the whole heaven." "Thousand thousands" will this spring minister unto the King and Queen. God save the King.

I speak of Jesus, too. Is Jesus Christ to be a lesser King? Is there no honor reserved for Jesus' Queen? Is the "KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" to be less real, less true, less grand, than any other potentate? Shall distance, fog, or ice prevent His coming? Will Jerusalem close her gates?! What say the signs? Does not the international situation warrant faith that Jesus Christ will come to bless the land? I have no reason to doubt the advent message.

King Jesus is on His way; the "times of restitution" are drawing near. Suddenly, the fog will lift or drive away. "In a moment . . . the trumpet shall sound," "every eye shall see him," "he shall appear in his glory," "he shall have dominion also from sea to sea." "Thousand thousands (will minister) unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand (will stand) before him."

Nature will know no geographic lines. The roots of all peoples intertwine beneath the surface of a hundred circling camps. Multitudes of "all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, (will stand) before the throne, and before the Lamb." And the trees will nod their heads in more friendly understanding: "Then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord." In that day the Queen will share the King's immortality, and be sheltered at His side.

Quebec has called Jerusalem on parade. God save the King! God send the King!

Himself He Could Not Save!

By J. R. LeCrone

FOR three years Jesus had been working earnestly in the midst of the people of Israel in an attempt to get them to accept Him as their Messiah that He might bring them to God. All this time He had given His time and energy unreservedly on their behalf. He had instructed them in the scriptures and had pointed out their applications. He had healed their sick, given sight to their blind, hearing to their deaf, voice to their dumb, and had even restored some of their dead to life. As a reward for all of this He was bearing His own cross to Golgotha where He well knew that He should be nailed to it and lifted up to die a humiliating and agonizing death before the eyes of all the people!

Abysmal self-pity at being crucified for doing good and a blind rage at the people for their lack of appreciation of His efforts on their behalf would seem to us to be the most natural reaction to such treatment. We have seen people fly into rages and go into orgies of self-pity over much less. "After all that I have done for them, they treat me like this," is the stereotyped phrase with which men so often court the sympathies of their friends and try to arouse their indignation toward those whom they fancy have wronged them. But not Jesus! The "sob sisters" of His time had gathered about Him to weep over Him and to express their indignation at the inhuman way that He was being treated. What a splendid opportunity to pour His tale of woe into sympathetic ears! But Jesus' concern was elsewhere, and He had no time for such an inglorious waste of precious energy. "There followed him a great company of people, and of women, which also bewailed and lamented him. But Jesus turning unto them said, Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children. For, behold, the days are coming, in the which they shall say, Blessed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave suck. Then shall they begin to say to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us" (Luke 23:27-30). Beaten, persecuted, spat upon, His concern was not for Himself, but rather for His tormentors. "Weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children." That they, not He, were in need of sympathy is well attested today by the fact that He sits with the heavenly Father upon His throne, while the children of the daughters of Jerusalem are literally calling for the mountains to fall upon them and for the hills to cover them. So intolerable has their lot become that many of them have preferred death to life under conditions as they exist in many of the countries of Europe.

As Jesus hung upon His cross, He was made the subject of many a coarse jest and the butt of much crude wit. "They that passed by railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Ah, thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself, and come down from the cross. Likewise also the chief priests mocking said among themselves with the scribes, He saved others; himself he cannot save. Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe. And they that were crucified with him reviled him" (Mark 15:29-32). Little did these tormentors of the suffering Jesus realize the great truth that they uttered that day: "He saved others; himself he cannot save." Because Jesus would provide a way of escape for them, He could not come down from the cross, but must needs endure its agony until the bitter end. In spite of the fact that all power in heaven and on earth had been given Him and that He need only pray His Father and "more than twelve legions of angels" would immediately have been sent to His defense, He refused to use the power or to invoke the defense. To have done so would have been to deprive those who reviled Him, and the whole world as well, of all hope of salvation. Because He would save others, Himself He could not save.

If, as Peter and other apostles assure us, Jesus came to be an example for us, we are forced to the conclusion that the person worthy of our tears is not the one who loses social position, wealth, friends, or even his health in the service of the Master, but rather his self-righteous and scornful brother who refuses to permit his service to cost him anything. Weep not for the poor "faithful few" who are always present at services and upon whose shoulders fall all of the burdens and responsibilities for keeping the work going, as well as the blame for anything that happens to go wrong. They shall sit with Christ upon His throne to rule the earth. Weep rather for those others who attend services only when it is most convenient and refuse to accept any responsibility, financial or otherwise, for keeping the work going. Weep for them and for their children. They shall be cast into outer darkness. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Jesus gave to His followers that same blessed privilege and laid upon them the same sacred duty that were His when He sacrificed His life for us. "Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it. For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mark 8:34-37). If we use our lives for selfish interests only (whoseever shall save his life), we cannot be instrumental in bringing others to Christ and are a dead weight (shall lose it) upon the church now, and would be worse than useless in the kingdom. But if we subordinate our selfish desires (whosoever shall lose his life for Christ's sake and the gospel's) to the service of Jesus, (Please turn to page 10)

THE CHARGE

By T. A. Drinkard

"I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine" (2 Timothy 4:1).

WAS it necessary for Paul to deliver this charge to Timothy? If so, why? Why could be not have told Timothy that it did not matter what he preached to his congregation, rather his brethren, in the matter of doctrine, because the different ministers should be given the privilege of teaching anything and everything according to their fancy? The deliverance of that charge was very necessary to the welfare and interest of the Church of God then, and I submit that if it is lived up to now much good will re sult. The tendency today is to allow each minister to use his own discretion as to what is truth, and what should be taught as the faith and doctrine of the Church of God, Biblically speaking. It was not so in the days of the apostles, according to the Scriptures, and I further submit that we should realize that every member of the body, the church, is duty bound to be guided by, led by, directed by, instructed by the Head of the church, even Christ, We must preach the truth, not error.

If we ministers choose to do otherwise, the Lord will allow us to do it, but not for Him. Herein lies the trouble. Some are inclined to imitate Peter, who thought he had a better way than his Lord's, and said, "Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee" (Matt. 16:22). Just anything and any way will not do, everything must be done according to the charge that has been given. Let us see how careful Paul commanded Timothy to be when he said, "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee" (1 Tim. 4:16).

Why should Timothy take heed unto himself, and especially "the doctrine," if it was not necessary for him and them that heard him? The trouble today is that there are too many would-be leaders who want to have their way in what they believe and teach, and demand that they be allowed their way. They discount the authority of Paul and insist that their experience be accepted, because they know (?) it is true to promise. The fact of the matter is that God has never made a promise that any human experience should take the place of His Word in the lives and hearts of His people. When Moses was about to make the Tahernacle he was instructed of God to follow the pattern that he had recently received, or seen, in the Mount; everything had to be made according to pattern, or plan, and woe to the man who dared to question or change the plan in the least, thinking that something else would do just as well. During this age Christ is building His church according to His orders given Him by the Father as indicated by, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work" (John 4:34). Again, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18).

Not once did Jesus make effort to tamper with, or change, the will of the Father by substituting something else that He thought might do just as well, and which He could do without much sacrifice. It would be well for us to follow the example of the Master in our ministerial work, by following His commands to the very letter. We have all to gain and nothing to lose. We may think that we are putting something over on the Lord, when in fact we will be the losers in the end. Under the leadership of the Holy Spirit the inspired Apostle Paul said, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts 20:28). To feed the Church of God! With what, poison? He "sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church. And when they were come to him" (vv. 17, 18), he delivered his charge to them. Why use his energy and time in this direction if it did not matter as to what they believed and taught, just so they were honest and sincere in it? These elders were commanded to "feed" the church. The mother in the home feeds her children any kind of food, doesn't she? When the new infant pays them a visit she orders him a nice steak, doesn't she? How careful she is to feed that infant the proper food adapted for its needs, and to those who have passed farther along in the scale of years she will feed food of a stronger nature, and in a form adapted to their requirements. However, all of the food must be pure and wholesome, not poisonous. Are we equally as careful of the food that we give to the brotherhood, and the world? Or do we think that any kind will do, just so it has our seal of approval on it?

When Jesus Christ called His disciples He delivered unto them this charge, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16). But we live in modern times, and behold modern ways because Christ's commands do not quite agree with modern theories and opinions of men and women. But let me offer a word of warning: the man who makes effort to add to God's plan will be the loser in the end, it matters not if he is sincere in his teaching. I am writing for and in the interest of the Church of God, warning you, my brethren, to be careful what you teach; to safeguard and protect the faith and doctrine of this Church as you would your very lives. Some are proving untrue to the trust placed in them, teaching a present Holy Spirit baptism, and that it is not necessary for the believer of the gospel to be baptized in water in order to receive the remission of sins. Such teaching will undermine the faith and doctrine of the Church of God, and I shall oppose it. I am not ready to say that Christ did not know what was best for us, when He said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The man who chooses to say that he knows Jesus was a good man, but He simply made a rule that is too difficult for people to obey, and it is better to lay aside baptism in water as an element of salvation for the believer in Christ, and in this way we can secure more members, is not representing the faith and doctrine of the Church of God for which she has stood the trying test of criticism through the years. We have gone far along the pathway of service to allow that Bible doctrine to be repudiated by any professed minister of the gospel.

I shall follow the charge of the Master, and the inspired Apostle to the end of the day, at the close of which I can truthfully and faithfully say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:7, 8).

Article Four

By A. E. Griffiths

A FTER studying the outer court we now come to the Tabernacle building itself, particulars of which will be found in Exodus 26:15-30.

The three sides were constructed with boards of shittim wood overlaid with gold. They were fifteen feet high and twenty-seven inches wide, with two tenons on the bottom end of each one that fitted into silver sockets set into the ground. Each of these gold-covered boards had four gold rings attached, two near the top and two near the bottom. Through these rings were inserted four bars of wood covered with gold. This held the boards intact, and, to reinforce this construction, a bar was shot through slots in each board in the middle, thus showing that the boards must have been sufficiently thick to allow grooves to be made in them from side to side. Further, each board had to be grooved in exactly the same place, or the bar going through the inside could not correctly meet the groove in each board. (See Ex. 36:33.) This shows how accurate the workmanship had to be for the whole thing to fit together easily.

There were twenty boards on the north side, and twenty on the south side, with forty sockets on each side to take the forty tenons. The corners were made with two boards coupled together. Six other boards were on the west side, and with the two corner boards there were eight, all fitting into silver sockets. The west boards were bound together the same as the north and south sides. There were fifty-two boards all together—counting the double boards at each west corner—representing the prophets of that number.

The whole thing when put together was strong and rigid. Each board had a cord attached to its top, and was fastened to a brass tent pin driven into the ground on the outside. These cords prevented the boards from falling inward, and the great weight of the four coverings prevented them from falling outward. This gives us a rough idea of the construction of the Tabernacle building itself, which was erected at the west end of the outer court and measured fifty feet long, eighteen feet wide, and fifteen feet high.

We shall now study the meaning of these specifications. God always has a reason for everything He does, so let us look into His reason for this particular mode of building.

The boards being made of wood represent mortality, but when covered with gold, teach the lesson Paul taught in 2 Corinthians 5:1-4: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, for in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven: for we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." This very clearly shows us that the lesson of the boards is that men in themselves are mortal, but, by the boards being covered with gold, we see that mortal men will put on immortality when they come in contact with God. This completely contradicts the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, which is that the soul is a separate entity of man, instead of the man himself. Therefore, the lesson these boards teach us is that the flesh-and-bone man himself must be brought back to life, clothed with immortality. The four bars covered with gold, passing through the four gold rings on each board prophesy of a binding together by God, and to prove He is always seeking to do this let us read 1 Timothy 2:3, 4: "For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour; who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." This shows that God is always willing to save men, but to be saved they must be willing to be saved and desire salvation. The four bars on the outside could stand for four

From Natural Law

By James M. Watkins

As MAN from the beginning felt himself—through a natural craving for companionship—drawn into the first order of social history, so has he from the beginning found himself not only swayed but mystified by those natural laws that with his limited intelligence he could not possibly understand.

The very first order of religious practices and worship of which we have record involves an evident attempt to appease or put to personal use these mystifying forces. As years have come and gone these pagan conceptions based upon a fear of the unknown have gradually crept into human thought and usage, until at times it requires a great amount of study to determine exactly where paganism leaves off and Christianity begins.

At one time, and perhaps even today, in some parts of the Asiatic world the mandrake plant held an important part in religious thought. Human characteristics were given it because of the peculiar shape of the roots. The roots were oftentimes further carved to represent human beings, until the superstition finally arose that the plant gave forth a human wail as it was pulled from the earth, and that anyone who attempted to uproot it would die. Almost as a human it came to be worshiped as a god, and because of its aphrodisiac tendencies was recognized as a god of fertility. Its stupefying effects were recognized and used as a gift of the gods in certain crude surgical operations. Thus it was only natural that all sorts of magic and religious thoughts came to be connected with it.

Modern science recognizes the mandrake for what it actually is, a very potent and dangerous narcotic. As such, it is easy to see how the belief came into being that all who touched the plant died, for all those who pulled and used the plant were undoubtedly addicted to its use, and as such addicts their lives were most surely shortened.

Yet many of these thoughts of the pagans were undoubtedly carried over into the practices of the early Christians. At least in Old Testament times (according to Genesis 30), in the exchange between Leah and Rachel we find the mandrake featured as a very treasured piece of property.

Hashish also had its place in earlier beliefs, being put to unscrupulous use by Hasson Ben Sabbah, who, according to Herodotus, encouraged the use of hashish among members of his gang on Mount Lebanon. He told them that it was through the agreeable visions and sensations they received from this drug that they were in paradise. From this it was but a step to the belief that if they failed to carry out his plans of murder and robbery he could deny them entrance to paradise, which he did by simply withholding the drug. It is from these practices that the modern world has come to use the word "assassin."

While hashish was used in an unscrupulous way, opium, although used in a more upright fashion, seems to have inspired much the same conceptions concerning paradise. It would even appear that many of the modern conceptions concerning paradise are traceable to the use of opium among the pagans. Assyrian cunciform and Egyptian papyri record the use of opium as far back as 1500-2000 B.C. Pagan priests, in the earlier days of its use, were quick to point out that opium was a bridge over which the soul could reach the abode of the gods. Opium appears to have followed the ancient caravan routes from Babylon and Nineveh across Mesopotamia as far as Egypt and northern Africa. Early Mohammedans, although rigidly barred from the use of alcohol, were permitted the use of opium, believing that in this they had a foretaste of paradise. Among these earlier people it was looked upon as a purely worthwhile and honorable product in its everyday use. Paracelsus called opium the philosophers' stone, apparently believing that its visions and agreeable sensations in the earlier stages of its use comprised a suitable foundation for philosophy. Laudanum, a preparation of opium, was used by many early writers for the visions it produced, not realizing the disaster so potent in its use.

Concerning the migration of souls natrun has played an important part. The ancient Egyptians have based much of belief in the existence of a soul only as long as the body was preserved upon the fact that some bodies buried under certain circumstances merely mummified and did not deteriorate. To them it seemed only logical to suppose that their gods favored certain ones by preserving their bodies in order that their souls might continue to live. They did not realize that it was the natural deposits of natrun that caused the mummifying, although at later dates they used similar products of sodium to attain the same results. All of the Egyptian belief concerning the soul and the necessity of preserving the body to maintain the soul, as well as much of the later belief concerning the underground place of the dead that was introduced into and later developed by so-called Christianity, was based upon what to us is merely very easily understood natural laws.

In many of these natural laws of chemistry and drugs we find the forerunner of many popular misconceptions, such as the ability of the soul to reach the abode of the gods, and many conceptions of paradise. It seems most peculiar that, although we have long ago been favored with the knowledge to understand the perfectly natural laws that prompted these thoughts, a great majority of mankind persists in accepting them—even at this latter day—as the foundation for spiritual thoughts men prefer not to understand.

The Gospel of the Kingdom

By Alta King

THE three statements of Christ's last commission to the apostles are:

"All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you" (Matt. 28:18-20).

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15).

"Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures, and said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24:45-47).

"All things whatsoever I have commanded you" in Matthew's statement, "the gospel" in Mark's, and "repentance and remission of sins in his name" in Luke's are three ways of stating the message which Jesus commissioned the apostles to preach in all the world among all nations. According to these three statements the gospel is the glad tidings of the repentance and remission of sins which are wrought by the name, the power, of the resurrected Jesus.

Previous to giving this commission to the apostles, Jesus said that the "gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations" (Matt. 24:14). Before His death and resurrection Jesus called the gospel that was to be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations the "gospel of the kingdom." After death and resurrection He called the gospel that was to be preached in all the world among all nations "repentance and remission of sins in his name." Jesus identifies the gospel of the kingdom as the gospel of repentance and remission of sins in His name and vice versa.

Since repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus is the good news of the kingdom, Jesus, the King of that kingdom, will work repentance in the hearts of the people over whom He shall rule and remit their sins.

Jesus' personal ministry when He was working visibly among men demonstrates the truth of this statement. He said concerning the purpose for which He was then working, "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent" (Luke 4:43). His preaching was "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 4:17). He not only preached the kingdom of God by word of mouth, but He showed it. (Luke 8:1.) He not only said the kingdom of God is at hand, but he made it at hand by making kingdom activities present on a small scale. He administered effective judgment against the hypoerisy of those in controlling leadership. He gave out teachings of truth with commanding authority. He remitted sins through the healing of mind and body and raising the dead. Such works showed the kingdom. He made the kingdom thus at hand the basis of His call to repentance, and His call brought results. The people everywhere throughout Israel under the power of His words and works repented and glorified God. Jesus declared through concrete demonstration that repentance and remission of sins in His name are the good news of the kingdom.

The apostles preached the same message in the same way in fulfillment of Matthew 24:14 and the last commission. They executed effective judgment, healed the sick, raised the dead, and accomplished widespread repentance. thousands repenting at a time. By word and deed they preached that repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus are the good news of the kingdom of God.

Paul, also, the apostle to the Gentiles, preached repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus as the gospel of the kingdom. In Acts 20:21 he says he was "testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." In verse 24 he says the ministry he had received of the Lord Jesus was the ministry of testifying to the gospel of the grace of God. In 2 Corinthians 5:18, 19 he refers to this ministry as "the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them." In Acts 20:25 he refers to the fulfillment of this ministry as "preaching the kingdom of God."

Both Jesus and the apostles preached repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus as the gospel of the kingdom of God, and they made this good news a then present fact by accomplishing widespread repentance and granting remission of sins through healing and resurrection. Paul says their demonstration of the kingdom good news was a taste of the powers of the world to come. (Heb. 6:4, 5.)

Repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus have been God's good news to man since the first sin was committed. He told the serpent that the seed of the woman should bruise his head. (Gen. 3:15.) Jesus is the seed of the woman, and He bruises the head of the serpent when He works repentance in the sinner and remits his sins. God announced repentance and remission of sins to Abraham as the gospel when He said, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Cp. Gen. 26:4 with Gal. 3:8.) Peter, in Acts 3:25, 26, identifies this blessing as repentance and remission of sins. Jesus and the apostles unfolded the gospel that God announced to the serpent in the Garden and later preached to Abraham. They showed that "bruising" as used in God's prediction concerning the serpent, and "blessing" as promised through Abraham and his seed, mean repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus, or, by Paul's preaching, God's grace in Christ reconciling the world to Himself. They called this "bruising" and this "blessing" the good news of the kingdom.

There are two purposes for which repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus are being preached in all the world. Jesus says, in Matthew 24:14, that it is being preached for a witness unto all nations. It testifies to the nations that the work and purpose of God's kingdom are the repentance of the people over whom Jesus shall reign as King and Priest, and the remission of their sins. Note that this purpose is not the salvation of the nations. The kingdom organized and established will save the nations by working their repentance and the remission of sins. Preaching this work as the good news of the kingdom is not designed to save them.

The other purpose for which the gospel is being preached was stated by James in the Jerusalem conference. In Acts 15:14 he says that Peter's preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles was to take out a people for His name. As concerns this purpose the gospel of repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, . . . for therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith" (Rom. 1:16, 17). Paul states this same truth in Romans 5:8, as follows: "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Christ's death for sinners is the gospel of repentance and remission of sins in His name, for the purpose of His death was to make repentance and remission of sins in His name possible. (Luke 24:46, 47.) In one scripture Paul says that the gospel reveals God's righteousness, and in another he says it reveals God's love. Revealing one the gospel reveals the other, for the two are inseparable. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth because it reveals God's love, and the believer believing in this love loves in return in accordance with God's law of love-"We love him, because he first loved us" (1 John 4:19). And man loving thus is born of God (1 John 4:7), and "whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepetn himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not" (1 John 5:18). (In these verses John asserts for the believer the righteousness of the birth of the Spirit through the resurrection on the basis that God, through the surety of His power and purposes, calls those things that be not as though they were, even while they are in the process of becoming.)

Repentance and remission of sins are the source not only of the believer's love for God. They are also the source of his love for fellow man, for through the fact that they are the good news of the kingdom he perceives that the power of Jesus' name shall reach to the uttermost parts of the nations of the earth, working repentance and remission of sins as it has worked them in his small life. Through this perception his love for God unfolds to the breadth of God's love thus revealed. In no other way can the believer love his fellow man, including his enemics.

This inception of love in the heart of man through repentance and remission of sins worked by the power of Jesus is the begettal of the birth of the Spirit which is man's salvation. No other truth has this begetting power. Peter says of the believer: "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever," and he then limits the "word" which is the incorruptible seed, by saying, "And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." (1 Peter 1:23, 25.) Because of its begetting power the value of the gospel truth is basic and supreme over all other truth in God's dealing with man. Because of its basic and supreme value, Jesus died that it might become effeetive in the lives of men, and God guards it as His good news to man by placing a curse on preaching any other doctrine as His gospel, (Gal. 1:7-9.) Repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus is distinctly the gospel. No other truth holds this distinction. Other truths have saving power only through a subordinate relationship to the truth of repentance and remission of sins in the name of Jesus. The death and resurrection of Jesus seals the fulfillment of this good news of the kingdom with all power in heaven and earth. Nothing can break that seal.

prominent men in God's economy during two dispensations, first under the law, and afterward under grace. Our first character under the law could be Noah who was the first under the law dispensation to preach righteousness, and then Samuel who was given to God by his mother. (1 Sam. 1:11.) Next, we suggest David, a man after God's own heart, and lastly Daniel, who gave us the full particulars of the four kingdoms of the world which were to be replaced by the kingdom of God. These four characters, ordained by God bound His plans together. And the bar going through the center, which bar was the mainstay, could stand for Moses, whose teachings pass through all these things given to mankind. Turning to the fulfillment of the prophecy, the four bars can stand for the four gospel writers, and the center bar binding them together is Christ. There is no absolute proof that these characters are depicted by these bars, but they can be easily made to fit in with the prophecy, and are thus edifying to the believer. They certainly portray a binding together. "Bind up the testimony, seal the law among my disciples" (Isa. 8:16). "And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven" (Matt. 16:19). The text from Isaiah shows there had to be a binding under the law, and the one from Matthew, being addressed to Peter, shows that there would be a binding by the disciples.

Having considered the boards and their bars, we now notice the cords and brass tent pins which acted as stays. The brass pins portray mortality, and the cords the same. The brass pins which were driven into the ground and their respective cords to the boards covered with gold show man in his earthly tendencies holding, nevertheless, to God by faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please him" (Heb. 11:6). The real thought expressed can be found in Hosea 11:1-4: "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt. . . . I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love." Christ expressed this same thought in John 6:44, saying, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him." Here we have a prophecy of God, represented by the Tabernacle, drawing man to Him. This makes a perfect type. The three sides of the building now being considered, let us turn to the east side, which was the entrance.

God gave instructions how the different tribes should be grouped around the Tabernacle. We read, "On the east side toward the rising of the sun shall they of the standard of the camp of Judah pitch throughout their armies" (Num. 2:3). Christ was of the tribe of Judah, and it says of Him, "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be" (Gen. 49: 10). Again, we read regarding the temple which will be erected when Christ returns to earth, "The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east, . . . the prince shall enter by the way of that gate" (Ezck. 46:1, 2). And, going back to the days of Adam and Eve, we find that God "placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life" (Gen. 3:24). The east is always the entrance for God or Christ. The sun rises in the east and the "Sun of righteousness" will come from that same point of the compass. (Mal. 4:2.) This fact being established, let us find out how the entrance was arranged.

"Thou shalt make a hanging for the door of the tent, of blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen, wrought with needlework, and thou shalt make for the hanging, five pillars of shittim wood and overlay them with gold, and their hooks shall be of gold: and thou shalt east five sockets of brass for them" (Ex. 26:36, 37).

The curtain was made of the same material as the one of the outer court, the meaning of which we have already described, but we find this entrance had five pillars instead of four as at the entrance to the outer court. All the boards of this edifice were in silver sockets, but the pillars were in brass sockets. At the entrance to the outer court we found a prophecy of the four Gospels founded on mortal men, and their message to mankind gave us an entrance to the knowledge of the truth-which is the only means we have of obtaining salvation. But in the case of the Tabernacle itself we have five pillars. What five men are distinguished in connection with the work of preaching the risen Christ? There are exactly five authors of the Epistles: Paul, James, Peter, Jude, and John. These pillars can easily represent these men, because we have great detail in God's plan of salvation recorded in their Epistles, whereas the Gospel writers chiefly recorded the life and words of Jesus and did not refer so much to the conditions after His death and resurrection. The entrance to this compartment known as the Holy Place was entered only by the priests, and the entrance to the Most Holy, which was an inner compartment, was entered only by the high priest, representing Christ entering into heaven to the presence of God. We realize now that all these details are for a set purpose. They are a prophecy of the way God demands to be approached and worshiped.

This building now being erected, we will study the four coverings which were laid over it. We read the particulars of these in Exodus 26:1-14. The first was of fine twined linen, blue, and purple, and scarlet, embroidered with cherubim. This needlework was visible from the inside, and represented Christ. This first covering was formed of ten parts and divided into two sections. Each section was fortytwo feet long by six feet wide, and had fifty loops of blue down one side and fifty gold hooks on the other side. Five curtains were fastened together and spread lengthways over the Tabernacle, so as to fall over and cover the west end and sides of the Tabernacle. The other five were laid over the front end, and just reached to the entrance. The second covering was of goat material, most likely from goats' hair. It was made the same as the linen covering, but had eleven sections, and the hooks were brass instead of gold. Being larger, it overlapped the linen curtain and completely hid it from view on the outside. It fell over the entrance about three feet.

This latter covering represents the false church. Christ said He would separate the sheep from the goats, and here they are prefigured in close relation to one another. The true sheep are inside, looking at the Tabernacle and the glory of God, whereas the goats are on the outside-cut off from God. The ecclesiastical organizations of the world give us fighting bishops and so-called Christian politicians. They may be better than Mohammedans or barbarians, but they are not close to God. The only purpose they serve is in distributing the Bible, so that those who sincerely want to learn the truth may have the opportunity. The hooks of the covering were brass, just a worldly connection. The loops were made of hemp, which had no healing power. The goat covering being larger than the linen shows that the false church is larger than the true church and, in fact, conceals it.

The third covering was of rams' skins, dyed red, and not divided into curtains. Blood shedding, aggressive power is portrayed here. In other words, here were shown the military powers of the earth which will bring about the coming of Christ. So, over the goat covering we see the state upholding the false church which is what is taking place in all so-called Christian countries. Finally, over these three coverings was another of badger skins. This had no artificial treatment, no dyeing or hooks or loops, looking out at the sky. It was a protection to the other coverings. What could this stand for but nature. "His tender mercy is over all his works" (Psalm 145:9). This gives us a rough idea of the Tabernacle in relation to man, and how he is kept from God until he learns the right way to approach Him.

Our next study will be the furniture inside this building, and what the equipment signifies. This we shall find of great importance and has a direct bearing on our mode of worshiping God.

MORE ABOUT MIRACLES

By R. H. Judd

THE real issue between the believer and the nonbeliever in reference to Scripture miracles is not whether they are established by sufficient testimony, but whether they can be established by any testimony at all. Let it once be granted that testimony is admissible—and it is difficult to see how testimony can be dismissed—it is scarcely possible to conceive of stronger testimony than that supplied by Scripture. There are two witnesses which, each in its respective sphere, are strikingly unique, for they are the testimonies not of man only, but of God. Indeed, the human testimony is actually given through man, yet under circumstances over which he could not, owing to his brief span of mortal life, exercise control. The combined human testimony of prophets extending over centuries of time, yet working out an interwoven preconceived plan could only be accomplished by a supreme, overruling, immortal Personality, using men as His instruments,

The two testimonies or witnesses, referred to above, are the history of the Jewish nation before Christ's coming, and of both the Jewish and the Christian world after His coming. Whether it be by natural, or by supernatural means, it cannot be denied that God, to whom the natural and the supernatural are alike, has permitted a course of events in the world to bear witness to Christ such has never been borne to any other person on earth in the world's history.

The honest doubter cannot deny that the prophetic writings contain descriptions which agree with the person and history of Jesus of Nazareth as they agree with no other man, and that the rites and ceremonies of the Jewish religion have a meaning typical of Him which no other interpretation will supply. The remarkable coincidence that the Temple and its services were brought to an end after His appearance adds undoubted significance to the fact that they were expressly intended to represent Him.

The testimony subsequent to His appearance among men is every whit as unique and remarkable as that preceding. His dominion has spread over the world to such an extent as to afford no parallel. However these things may be accounted for, they are sufficient to mark Jesus the Christ as the central figure of the world's history; looked forward to by all preceding generations, and looked backward to by all following. Thus, history as well as Scripture points out the Christ to be God's chosen Redeemer to bring this world out of chaos.

What marvel if such a testimony be accompanied by signs and wonders such as no other history can claim—the antecedent probability in the case is for them, not against them! It is to be expected that an event so unique in the world's history should be accompanied by others partaking in measure of its own character. Let the doubter first account for the undoubted historical facts of the Jewish nation before Christ's coming, and after, and we venture the certainty that he can only arrive at the conclusion that they constitute a miracle in the light of which all others must take second place.

we shall gain training and character which will make us valuable aids (shall save it) as corulers with Jesus, and He shall give us a place with Him on His throne.

Let's listen to a few scraps of conversation, wherein we seem to hear people bent upon saving their lives in the sense which Jesus says will cause them to lose them for eternity:

"Where were you last Sunday?"

"Oh, I worked hard all week and was just too worn out to get up and go to church."

"To whom have you spoken concerning His eternal salvation, or whom have you invited to church where he will hear the gospel declared and learn the way of life eternal?"

"I am sorry to say that I have spoken to no one. My job keeps me so busy that I don't have time for anything else."

"What portion of your income have you devoted to the spreading of the gospel?"

"Well, to be honest about it, I have been intending for some time to set aside a tenth, but it seems that by the time we get our bills paid and buy the things that we need there is never anything left."

"Well then, how about helping with the work of painting the church, mowing the lawn, serving on a committee, acting as Sunday school superintendent, or teaching a Sunday school class?"

"I would be glad to if I could work it into my schedule, hut just now I can't seem to find any place to fit it in."

Is there something all too familiar about these bits of conversation? Have you heard them in your church, or (God forbid) have you been so interested in conserving your own strength and resources for personal gain that you could not interest yourself in the needs of others? "He that saveth his life shall lose it"! Like the Master, if we would save others, we cannot save ourselves.

A missionary doctor went to China. After he had been there for some time the people began to die by the thousands from some sort of a strange plague. The doctor succeeded in isolating the germ that caused the plague, and tried to send living samples of it to the United States that it might be subjected to research and study that perhaps some means of control might be found. To his dismay the germs failed to survive the long journey. One day while his family was at church he deliberately swallowed some of the germs, and then took the first boat to the United States. In the meantime he kept an accurate record of his reaction to the germs, and as soon as his ship docked he went directly to a hospital. He there placed himself and his notes in the hands of specialists, giving instructions that they devote themselves to the study of the disease. The germs took his life, but the attending doctors gained much valuable information that should later help to save the lives of thousands. He saved others, but, because he would do so, himself he could not save.

The spectacle of a mother, worn out and weary from long hours of vigil beside the bed of some sick member of her family, yet refusing to leave for even a few hours of much needed rest, has become so commonplace to us that we frequently miss much of its implication. She knows that she is overtaxing her strength and endangering her own health and perhaps even her life, yet, because she would save this loved one, herself she cannot save.

The illustration need not be so heroic. Perhaps it is some humble pastor laboring faithfully in the service of an indifferent congregation, or some faithful layman carrying on a dogged battle against the introduction of worldly practices into his church. In any case the principle is always the same—if he will save others, himself he cannot save.

It is a healthful practice for Christians to occasionally ask themselves, "With what will I recommend myself to the Master?" When put into words, "I went to church whenever the weather was nice and it was convenient for me to go, and I tipped the Lord a dollar or so whenever I could not conveniently avoid it" sounds woefully inadequate as a basis for eternal salvation. If we have been thus saving ourselves it is safe to say that we have had nothing to do with the saving of others.

The term "cross" is sometimes abused by Christians. We speak of the hard labor that we must do, our aches and pains, our poverty and all other hardships indiscriminately as crosses. What we overlook is the fact that the thing that makes the cross of Christ significant is the fact that it was borne for the sake of others. The thieves were crucified, too, and no doubt suffered quite as much upon their crosses as did Jesus on His. The difference was that Jesus was suffering for your sake and mine, while the thieves—by their own admission—were getting a just reward for the deeds that they had committed. The suffering of Jesus changed the course of all eternity. The suffering of the thieves was only a minor incident in the history of a nation.

Before we assign our own particular burdens to a place among the crosses of Christianity, let us examine them with a view to determining whether we have deliberately assumed them that we might bring others to Christ, or whether they are merely results of the sin that is in the world which we have been unable to dodge. In the first case they are Christian crosses; in the second instance they are merely a part of the curse and are borne by saint and sinner alike. Paul referred to his infirmity as a thorn in the flesh, but in no case did he call it a cross. To try to escape a cross would be unworthy, yet Paul besought God three times to remove his thorn. "For this is thankworthy," Peter assures us, "if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps' (1 Peter 2:19-21).

The Master assures us that the Good Shepherd will willingly lay down His life for the sheep. John, the Apostle of spiritual insight, interprets that message for Christians, the under-shepherds of Jesus: "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren" (1 John 3:16).

Jesus saved others, Himself he could not save. If we would save others, ourselves we cannot save. Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life for Jesus' sake and the gospel's shall save it.

plexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the power of heaven shall be shaken" (Luke 21:25, 26). We have these conditions more today than ever before in the history of the world. So we know we are near the kingdom that shall be set up at the sunrise of the day. We now ride in the chariots that Nahum said would come "in the day of his preparation." So we know we are in the day when God is preparing to bring in the kingdom in which His Son shall reign and give us the perfect day when we shall reign with Him a thousand years. "They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years" (Rev. 20:4). "Thou . . . hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9, 10).

Many are today leaving the Bible, and by this, too, we know that we are near the end of the night. "Now the Spirit speaketh (through the Bible) expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils" (1 Tim. 4:1). Today we have perilous times because men are in love with themselves. (2 Tim. 3:1-6.)

Are we watching these things? "Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch" (Mark 13: 35-37). Near the end of the night there will be a great danger of our being deceived by false teachers. "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived" (2 Tim. 3:13). "Take heed that no man deceive you" (Matt. 24:4). How shall we take heed? By giving heed to the "more sure word of prophecy." "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." Note: these signs and wonders will be given by false Christs (more than one). The next verse tells us how to escape the deception. "Behold, I have told you" (Matt. 24:24, 25). Then the only safe way is to take the Bible only.

In our next article we shall write of the great events that mark the dawn of God's great day.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Gerald L. Cooper, Editor, Eden Valley, Minn.

Harry Goekler, President Route 3, Box 50-A Hammond, Louisiana Frances Munshaw, Treasurer 740 Laraway, S. E. Grand Rapids, Michigan

Early in the Morning

Practically all who call themselves Bereans are in what we would call the early morning of life. I would like to call your attention to the many Bible references made to "the early morning."

We find that Abraham rose up "early in the morning" when he started to the mountain to offer Isaac. (Gen. 22:3.) This was a command of God, and while Abraham might have wondered at the command we find him, nevertheless, getting a good early start.

In the account given in Genesis 28, in regard to Jacob, we read how he had a dream, and that God in that dream reiterated the promises that He had made to Isaac and Abraham. We read that Jacob rose up "early in the morning" after that wonderful dream, and took the stone that he had put for his pillow and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.

Following are given briefly the experiences of several Bible characters: Joseph told the butler and the baker their dreams "in the morning." (Gen. 40:6.) Pharaoh called for his magicians "in the morning." (Gen. 41:8.) Moses appeared before Pharaoh "in the morning." (Ex. 7:15; 8:20; 9:13; 10:13.) Because we are told that the Israelites killed their Passover sacrifices during the night, we are led to believe that they started on their long journey out of Egypt early in the morning. The Lord "troubled" the Egyptians "in the morning." (Ex. 14:24.) Moses and Aaron told the children of Israel that they would see the glory of the Lord "in the morning." (Ex. 16:7.) The manna, by which the Israelites lived, was gathered by them "in the morning." (Ex. 16:21.) The Lord manifested Himself to the Israelites in the cloud "in the morning." (Ex. 19:16.) When Joshua made preparations to lead the people of Israel across the River Jordan to their Promised Land he arose "early in the morning." (Josh. 3:1.) The conquest of Jericho began "early in the morning." (6:12, 15.) Joshua arose "early in the morning" to rid the camp of the sin of Achan. (7:16.) David, the Psalmist, says in one of his great Psalms that "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning" (30:5). Finally, we find in these Old Testament references that the king of the Medes rose "early in the morning" to find out if Daniel had perished in the lions' den. (Dan. 6:19.)

In the great lesson of the resurrection of Christ we find the women coming to the tomb "very early in the morning." Peter went into the Temple "carly in the morning." (Acts 5:21.) Jesus states in Revelation 22:16 that He is "the root and offspring of David, the bright and morning star." Jesus also says that to him who overcomes He will give the morning star. (Rev. 2:26-28.)

In practically all of these cases where people rose up early to perform a task we find that they were men of God, and that the task each was going to perform was a worthy one. Now, Bereans, you are called to perform the most worthy task that can fall to man, that of bringing lost people to Jesus Christ. Are you going to truly arise in the early morning of life, and do your tasks well? Or are you going to do them half-heartedly, and wait until later to really perform for the Lord? To those of you young people (and others) who read this article we ask, Are you going to waste the early part of your lives in riotous living and give your wasted, emaciated body—in the evening of life—to Jesus Christ?

"Ye Are the Light of the World"

Lila Kirkpatrick, Little Falls, Minn.

"Ye are the light of the world" (Matt. 5:14) was spoken many years ago by Jesus to His disciples as He took them up into a mountain to teach them. Even today Jesus invites us to be a light for Him.

Some Christians are like an old kerosene lamp that becomes dirty. Inside there is a light, but it can't shine out where people can see it. We allow our "chimneys" to become blackened and smoked so the light we may have burning for Jesus is hidden and can't be seen from the outside. Let each one of us closely examine ourselves to see if the lamp couldn't be just a little cleaner and brighter, so people can see our light shining, and so Jesus can truly say to us, "Ye are the light of the world."

"Do a Good Deed Daily"

The foregoing quotation is one of the things that a Boy Scout holds to be necessary if he is going to be considered a good Scout. We have always admired the good traits of the Boy Scouts, and especially this one. However, I will venture to say that there are many Scouts who mechanically do this thing, and see to it that they do "a" good deed daily.

That motto might well be one that every Christian should use. He must not serve mechanically—just because he thinks he must—but because, being Christian, he gladly and voluntarily does all he can. "Do a good deed daily" is a good motto, but "Do good deeds continually" is a better one for the Christian. Use your Christianity every day.

PREPARED BY MADGE SAVAGE

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (Romans 1:16).

Scripture: Romans 1:1-17.

Indifferent or Ashamed?

One day two young persons were talking in their room at a boarding house. One girl said, "But the Bible tells us so."

The other replied, "Yes, I know. But do you know that you are the first person I've ever known who tried to live up to what the Bible says?"

Which one of the girls represents you? The one who does, or the one who only hears and is indifferent?

In Noah's day many heard that a flood was coming. Many were told about God's way of life, but only eight souls did anything about it. Only Noah, his wife, his three sons, and their wives were saved from the Flood.

You are warned in God's Word to not be "hearers only, deceiving your own selves." James 1:23, 24 explains, "For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was."

Then let us not be idle or indifferent or ashamed of the gospel of Christ, but let us accept that good news and be among those who will be Christ's at His coming. We wish to be loving. Then let us try to be a good influence on those around us. Let us be good examples!

How the Little May Be Big

We—every one of us—are very unimportant when compared with Paul or Peter or Christ. But we are important in a measure if we try to fill our places by living our very best. For example: your thumbnail is not as important as one of your eyes, but it has its place. If you have ever smashed your thumb you know what a disturbance such a little thing can make. When we do our best, though small be the task, we are important in that we help make everything stay right.

"What can I do for God?" you ask yourself. Well, do you speak, or sing, or play an instrument? Perhaps when you are older, or even now, you can help God with your talents. But, do you know the very best and biggest way we can all help? Just be there in your place, listening every Sunday to your minister as he tells of God's plan and work and love. I believe a great mistake is made when you boys and girls do not remain for church services.

The Sunday school is a good place to study God's Word and a fine place to have His Word introduced to you. But in the church services, too, you oftentimes have a greater and deeper love for God developed. Generally fewer verses are used, but the explanations are usually greater and broader. There you hear and worship and grow in grace, too.

So be there, in church as well as in Sunday school. Our lesson today ends with a thought which gives us a good reason for remaining for church services: "The just shall live by faith." How do we get faith? "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God" (Rom. 10:17).

Remember your duty to God and to your friends as well as to yourself.

A Thought

Would you like to have a friend who helps you to be strong?
Who makes the right way easier, and keeps you from the wrong?

One who to the best you know helps you to be true? Then be the friend you'd wish to have some other be to you.

ECE Club News

More members needed! We need ten more members before we have one hundred.

I am trying to get some membership cards ready for you. I hope they will be nice enough for you to frame and hang in your room.

Shall we endeavor to study our Sunday as well as our Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday Bible lessons even better than we ever have? This warm weather should not cause us to forget our study time.

Did you miss clipping out the ECE motto? Clip it out, and tack it up where you can often see it.

Do you have a Scripture motto for your room yet? Write me about it. Which one did you choose? Did you make it?

Here is the ECE Club motto:

I'll always speak the truth,
I'll watch each word I say,
I'll try to do the things I should
To please God every day.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE NOTICE Los Angeles, Calif., Sunday June 4

The next Quarterly Conference for Califor nia will be held at the Los Angeles church, located at 230 West 103d St., on Sunday, June 4. Come, and meet with those of like precious faith! Marie Bleasdale, Conf. Secy.

HURRY! HURRY! HURRY!

Have you Thirty Dollars to invest in an absolutely safe security of assured merit, one that is certain to bring you large dividends in a short time? If so, read the following carefully.

The Lord needs workers qualified workers-to complete the task of calling out a people for His name be-fore the coming of His Son. The time is short—the labor difficult. It is grow-ing harder all the time to arouse the interest and hold the attention of those whom Jesus died to save. In these days of skepticism and indifference, to accomplish this purpose requires men and women of peculiar and outstanding ability. They must be specially edu-cated and carefully trained for this work.

Just as Paul knew the Greeks and Romans and Jews of his day and became all things to all men that he might save some, so the Christian worker at the present time must understand the world in which he lives. He must know how people think, and what they think about, else he cannot interest them in the things of God.

Of course he must know his Bible and be thoroughly grounded in the condi-tions of salvation as set forth in the gospel of the kingdom of God, but he must also know how to present those conditions in a way that appeals to the modern-minded people he is to meet or his effort will be futile.

Now here is where you and your Thirty Dollars come in!

Personally you may not be able to go out and preach the gospel or impressively and convincingly teach a Bible class, but if you have Thirty Dollars you can and will invest in the Lord's work you can do both these things by proxy!

Just send that amount to the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Ill., and say you want to pay the cost of tuition and board for some young person at the Summer Bible Training School for six weeks and your part will be done. As a result of your contribution or investment some young man or young woman will be permitted to take an intensive course of study under some of the best teachers the Church of God affords and go out as your representative to carry the living Word to a dying world.

Choose, if you care to do so, the one you wish to have take the course, or, if you prefer, leave the matter of selecting a student in the hands of the secretary of the General Conference who will see that your money provides for the training of someone who will represent you

Ing of someone who will represent you in a most worthy way.

But act quickly! The time is short! The Lord's need is pressing and there are earnest, devoted young people who would be only too glad to give their time and talent to this great task of the last days if they had the means for attending this summer's Bible Training School!

BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD (Near Tipp City, Ohio)

On April 23 a basket dinner was held in the church basement in honor of S. E. Magaw, our former pastor, and his family of Oregon, Ill. They could be with us only the one day, but we were glad to again clasp their friendly hands and see their happy smiles.

This also marked the beginning of a twoweeks' series of meetings by Bro. Harvey Krogh. Although these meetings came at a very busy time they were fairly well attended and enjoyed by all who did attend. Much good seed was sown which will bear fruit in its season.

One night we were surprised and delighted to have with us, besides several from Law-renceville, Bro. and Sr. Platts and Bro. and Sr. Shute and son of Fonthill, Ont. Bro. and Sr. Shute beautifully sang "In the Garden." Come again, folks.

Babies have arrived to bless the homes of Sr. and Mr. Howard Rhemart and Bro. and Sr. Ashford Jones. We now have five babies under six months of age in our congregation.

The Mother's Day service, conducted by the young people's class, was well attended.

At the Brush Creek sewing circle it was deeided to do away with our old cook stove and to install electric hot plates in the kitchen. This will add to the efficiency and appearance of our kitchen, and make more room. The ladies cleaned and arranged the kitchen in preparation for our annual June Meeting.

Nine from here attended the Sunday school class meeting recently held at the home of Bro. and Sr. Overholser near Springfield. The class is of the Lawrenceville church, and we find them a wide awake group.

The service on Sunday evening, May 21, will be in charge of our young married peu-ple's classes. They will present, "The Life of Christ in Scripture and Song."

All are cordially invited.

WEB DUSTER

To date Sr. Mae Nedrow of Oregon, Ill., has sent us the only correct answer to Bro, George Siple's recent Web Duster. And that is the one for which we invited replies from the far corners! Here, again, is his question: Who are the smallest people mentioned in the Bible?

JOSEPH ELMER ROBINS

Joseph Elmer Robins was born near Bloomsburg, Pa., Sept. 2, 1846. He died in Los Angeles, Calif., May 4, 1939. Early in life he engaged in the lumber business with two of his brothers in Shenandoah, Pa.

On September 12, 1868, he was married to Dora W. Hassler. The family moved to Sac City, Iowa, in 1879, where Mr. Robins led a very active business life, engaging in the live stock, grain elevator, lumber, and milling businesses until 1917, when soon after the death of his beloved wife he moved to Los Angeles.

Six children were born to this family, two dying before reaching maturity. Those surviving are: Mrs. Eva L. Stearns and Mrs. R. L. Denise of Los Angeles, Mrs. F. C. Montross of Troy, Ohio, and Joseph L. Robins of Rapid City, S. Dak.; also five grandchildren. Clifton R. Stearns, Mrs. Dorec Denise Maxfield, Mrs. Carol Denise Gray, Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Gowen, and Miss Elizabeth Montross; besides two great-grandchildren, Virginia and Eurella Stearns.

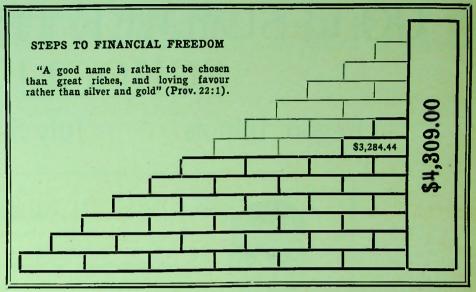

When about twenty-nine years of age, Mr. Robins heard and accepted the Scriptural teaching of God's kingdom to be established on the earth, with Jesus Christ as King of kings and Lord of lords. He was a deep student of God's Word, and led a happy Christian life, making many sacrifices to teach and promote the doctrines he held so dear. He not only taught, but supported many others who also taught these precious truths. His activities in this line led to the establishment of a Church of God in Sac City, his home town, and also the organization of a state conference in Iowa many years ago. He never missed an opportunity of helping and encouraging those in unfortunate circumstances, and many will miss his helping hand and cheering smile. Like many another, whose life was bound up in the truths of God's Word, he had an ardent desire to live to witness the Lord's return, but when his usefulness began to wane he pressed a desire to fall asleep. As he realized that he was drawing near the end of this mortal life his mind naturally turned to that grand theme, the resurrection of the dead, and he made a request that it should be the one to be considered in his memorial service. His request was carried out, and he was taken to his former home in Sac City, and laid beside his wife to await the voice of the archangel and the trump of God.

GO to SUMMER TRAINING SCHOOL!

July 5-August 13

"Having attended the 1938 Summer Training School and knowing the wonderful benefit derived from the various classes, I cannot recommend the School too highly. The spiritual inspiration received, the knowledge gained through study, and the Christian fellowship experienced with others of like precious faith, enrich a person for time and eternity. If you have opportunity attend the School this summer. You will never regret it."—Harry Goekler, pastor Louisiana Churches of God, Hammond, Louisiana.

"After spending six weeks at the Bible Training School last summer, I think that anyone would be benefited by attending this year. I only regret that I cannot do so myself. The School brings the best of the church minds together, and lets the students benefit not only by the teaching but by discussions among themselves. Those who are comparatively new in the church, particularly, will find the School is just what they need to strengthen their faith and to build their spiritual lives. Anyone who thinks of his religion as being really important to him will enjoy the actual work in the classes as much as he will enjoy the devotional spirit of the School."—Miss Frances Munshaw, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Elder Sydney E. Magaw, former pastor of the Brush Creek, Ohio, church and at present pastor of the Oregon, Illinois, church and editor of The Restitution Herald, is only one of the three first-rank instructors who will teach the members of the Summer Bible Training School this year. Biblical interpretation, church administration, and evangelism will be the backbone of the curriculum. S. J. Lindsay will handle the first of these subjects, C. E. Randall the second, and Elder Magaw the third. Tuition, including board and room, will be only $30.00 for the six weeks!

As It Was in the Days of Lot

By C. A. Smead

T HAS been over a century since Bible students of the Church of God began insisting that the return of our Lord is at hand. For years our faithful workers have been heralding the early establishment of God's kingdom upon this earth. At first those early believers stood out almost alone. The vast majority of people in the socalled Christian world were content to put off the coming of Christ to some far distant period after the church had evangelized and converted the world. However, light was springing up in great minds here and there as men studied the Word of God. Members of all denominations, yes, almost whole denominations, have swung over behind the banner of believers in the soon coming of the Christ. Praise the Lord!

But, even as the army of believers in the soon coming kingdom of God on earth has been increasing, the army of scoffers has also been increasing. The numerous dates set have but added to the ridicule. "If He is coming, why doesn't He get here?" they laugh. "Has He missed His connections? Why does He delay?" Our answer is one of faith. The Lord has missed no connections. No, He is not delaying. The time has not yet come. When the hour strikes He will be here, right on the dot. Peter gives us the reason why Christ has not yet come, saying, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9). The purpose of this article is to impress upon each one of you the supreme urgency of being ready now against that coming hour. That hour will he one of trouble, for wicked men must be punished. Those who inhabit the earth, being neither meek nor righteous, must be evicted to make room for God's righteous kingdom.

To believe in this soon coming of Christ one must subdue the enemies within his own breast. Pride will not let many people believe that Christ is almost here, for pride makes people want to think of the world as getting better, and that if given enough time it will become perfect — and Christ will then come to see the triumph. We must east out our pride, for the words of Jesus are plain, "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. . . . As it was in the days of Lot . . . even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed" (Luke 17:26, 28, 30.)

Let us enter into an honest comparison of the days of Lot with our own days. This should enable us to

to bring our own wills into subjection to the purpose of God in the world today. Why should people discourage their own hearts going about the utterly impossible task of raising the whole structure of the world to a perfect plane, when right here before us is the work at hand, the practical and often successful task of snatching a few lives as brands from the burning? Consider yourself as a man with a rowboat, and that the Lord has given you the task of rescuing as many as you can from a sinking ship. In your rescue boat there is room only for people, none for the lost cargo or baggage.

Without doubt, all are familiar with the history of Lot's exodus from Sodom on the morning of the very day the city was destroyed for its wickedness. Let us see what that wickedness consisted of, and let us then compare to see if America has any of those sins.

The chief sin of Sodom was its indifference to God's judgment. "They did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded" (Luke 17:28). In that there was nothing wrong, except for what was left out. All was for the body now, nothing for God or eternity. "But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all" (v. 29).

"Quit You Like Men"

It too frequently happens that the father "lets" the wife and children love the Lord, while he is engrossed in his more important business, which sometimes is the Sunday morning golf course or an hour of worship in the "funnies" and on the sport page. Having had a restful morning in robe and slippers, most any pastime may be included Sunday afternoon; or if the golf course claimed him in the morning a pleasant afternoon nap is likely to be god. In either case, whether it be slippers or walking shoes, it is not likely to be "that old hard bench" in the evening. And on Sunday evening a thousand ministers in a lesser number of cities twiddle their thumbs or join their congregations on the softer theater seat. There is a hardness of heart that makes Moses suffer the things that from the beginning were not so.

Men, men of the Church of God, "quit you like men." The work of the church is a man-sized work, and it demands the best that you have. Where you have put your shoulder and heart into the work the church is strong, and strong to the glory of God. Where you have failed your sacred trust the church is weak, and weak at the expense of truth. Men of the Church of God, "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."

Jesus Called Men

Every one of the Twelve Apostles was a man. The Seventy were likewise men. Jesus knew His business, and did it well. That Judas failed is no suggestion that Matthias was not a man. Paul, too, was every inch a man. Maybe Judas thought his wife could get him through, but whatever was the cause of his failure his work was given to another man. Men of the Church of God, "hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

Daughters of Abraham

That Jesus chose men to do His public work is no rebuke of womankind. Deborah, who "arose a mother in Israel" and faithfully judged her people, only shamed the men who

Pennellwood Church of God, Grand Rapids, Michigan Senior Men's Sunday School Class

"did evil in the sight of the Lord" and who "walked through crooked ways." Jesus found faithful servants in Mary and Martha, and in Mary Magdalene. Our Lord's own mother surely and well fulfilled her most important and honorable and godly role. In numerous scenes women were blessed by Christ when others would have stoned them or sent them away. True it is that women were last at the cross and first at the tomb. Jesus was "made of a woman," but not begotten by a man! Lydia and Doreas will reign with the King. Insofar as being loved, invited, needed in godly service, heirs of eternal salvation, "there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus," but insofar as Jesus chose men as leaders to do His public work—all typified by the Levitical priesthood of men—the responsibility of church work must yet weigh heavily upon the men. God will not have it otherwise.

Like Deborah of old, a daughter of Abraham will now and then arise to lead and shepherd the fold. In almost every church there has been a day when a daughter of Abraham refused to let the work dwindle and die. God be praised for faithful womankind! But such exceptions should demand a close observance of the Bible rule that God calls men, and the best of men, for their very best of service in His church.

Meeting the Challenge

Men of the Church of God, you must meet the challenge of empty seats and of the faith and doctrine so woefully despised. You are the heads of families who will listen to what you do. If it is hard to pray, you must learn to pray. If you haven't time, you must arrange time. If you need recreation, you dare not steal God's time in which to have it. If you can't sing, whistle! Do something, even if it has to be anything, for the Lord.

Men of the Church of God, you have not fulfilled your Christian duty when you provide for your own. The infidel does that. With that same zeal with which you guard your loved ones you must also build for God. "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."

Be Still! Listen to God!

By F. L. Austin

"Be still, and know that I am God:..." (Psalm 46:10).

"Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will show you today: ..." (Ex. 14:13).

"Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth" (1 Sam. 3:9).

"Be still."

Attentive silence is the first requisite for mastering the valuable art of listening. And, in truth, listening is an art. It means more than just to recognize a sound or an articulation. True listening endeavors to receive for analysis the thought that the speaker would convey. But this study refers to listening to God. And if a good listener of things pertaining to man's own realm of nature requires a conditioning of the mind, surely to listen to Heaven's vocal and written word, of spirit origin, practically necessitates that the listener shall still his brain-close his mind and heart against the persistent invasions of worldly distractions—that he may be in proper condition of mind to note God's beckoning voice. For, listening to God's Word is not. a matter of mere moment, it is a continuous matter, both in sleep and in waking hours. He who would be God's faithful listener would seem to be like unto a full-time watchman in that he should be continuously in the spirit and attitude of duty, always listening for Heaven's call: "Attention, please."

How strikingly this great truth-thought is brought to the worshiper's attention by the Psalmist. Beginning with "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help...," he proceeds to cite works, and mercies, and love acts of God, and then, as though to confidentially whisper to the reader, the inspired Psalmist records another word from Heaven's throne: "Be still, and know that I am God:..."

Moses had likewise instructed Israel. It was on the western shore of the Red Sea. The host of Pharaoh's army was bearing down upon the Israelites from the west, the sea was before them eastward. The Israelitish mind and heart were all astir with fear. Moses spoke and "said unto the people, Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, . . ." Not only were they to cease talking, they were also to cease milling around in fear like eattle in a roundup. Their hearts were to cease thumping, their fear was to quiet. "Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, . . ." Immediately the sea opened for their exodus.

OTHERS ALSO HEARD GOD

Man never saw God. Adam and Eve heard Him in the Garden in the cool of the day, and hid themselves. Their minds being otherwise absorbed rendered them in no fit mood to cherish God's presence and word.

Elijah was sent to Sinai to listen for the Lord. When the "great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks" he was unable to hear God speak. In the earthquake and the fire it was impossible to hear the Lord. But there followed "a still, small voice." It was recognized. Thus, in 1 Kings 19:12, the Scriptures illustrate the necessity for man to be still if he is to hear and recognize God speaking.

These instructions were not given alone for a Moses, or an Elijah, or a David. The same principle is as true today as ever it was. Our Savior acted upon the same principle. John upon the Isle of Patmos, quietly alone with his God, heard Pim.

How vital it is that today the Christian person should likewise "be still" if he is to recognize the presence of the Almighty before his own life.

IN GOD'S PRESENCE

God is real. Man was created in His image. God wishes to have man in His own divine presence. To be sure, man is in that presence physically, for God's presence is everywhere, but God invites him to be present in mind, in heart. Only under such status can poor, weak, finite man hope to be listening to God.

Man, in the heat of effort resulting from his own judgment, deeply concerned with his own wise decisions and actions, cannot possibly at such moments be attentive to God. Nor, racing through the thrilling stories of fiction or of tragedy, or fighting the surging battle of the wheat pit, or haranguing from the banked seats of the sport's field—in none of these attitudes would one expect that he was in the presence of God in mind and in heart.

How essential is a day of rest and quiet that all worshipers may "stand still" in mind and in heart, and retreat from so-called worldly plans, and action, and care, and sport, and with minds settled upon the Father, listen unto Him and to His Word. Not a day of rest to be formally observed by withdrawing oneself from a week of labor, then devoting himself to the thrills and sports of life, but a day when—to him—the jingle and bustle of the street and countryside are closed out; when the sportsman's rod and gun are at rest; when the dance hall din and tumult are stopped; when the crowded traffic of the street is absent: all that he can sit, and read, and pray, and meditate of God, and listen to His admonitions.

"Be still, and know that I am God: ..."

ISRAEL

Israel failed. She failed often. She refused to "be still." Rather than to wait for God's time for speaking, she turned to the myriad gods of man's creation. She was not often at "attention"—listening to receive God's words and directions. The result: a shaded line across the page of history marking the darkened (Please turn to page 10)

The Old Road

The Head of Gold—Article 3

By J. E. Adamson

FOLLOWING the death of Josiah in 654 B.C., the kingdom of Judah drifted from bad to worse under the reign of Jehoiakim. In 606 B.C., the old road again felt the march of feet when the armies of King Nebuchadnezzar came from Babylon and laid siege to the city of Jerusalem. After its capture they returned to Babylon with many captives, but the city itself was not destroyed. It was a fixed policy with Nebuchadnezzar to take from each country added to his empire a choice group of young people to be held in Babylon for training in the life of the people of Babylon, and to thus add to the mental and technical supremacy of his empire. Among the eaptives from Jerusalem were Daniel and his three friends, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, also Ezekiel the Prophet, and others who were destined to make history for us to read. While these young men were held captive their state was not one of servitude. They were given all the advantages of the best of the empire in food, clothing, and education,

About ten years after the first invasion of the land of Judah, the armies of Babylon came again to force the puppet king, Zedekiah, from the throne and totally destroy the city. These invasions fulfill the words of Isaiah, "The Lord bringeth . . . even the king of Assyria, . . . and he shall pass through Judah; he shall overflow and go over." (Isa. 8:7, 8.) Ezekiel, also, speaks of the overthrow in these words: "Thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, . . . Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: . . . I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek. 21:25-27).

Nebuchadnezzar was a mighty soldier and a great statesman. The empire of Babylon grew under his leadership until it dominated nearly all of the old road from the Persian Gulf to the border of Egypt.

The hand of Jehovah was upon Nebuchadnezzar in many ways to further the divine plan of the ages. Not many great leaders of the Gentiles can be found so favored. The hand of the Lord reached out and shook him mightily, that he might know the power of the "most high God." He was given to see dreams so astounding that he called in all the educated men of the city of Babylon in an effort to learn their import. Out of the conglomeration of thought that was brought together came no real information until he came to one of the young Jews, Daniel, who had been brought over in the captivity a few years previously.

After a special prayer to the "God of heaven," the secret of the dream was revealed to Daniel in a night vision, which is a former way God said He would speak to man. Armed with this information, Daniel went to the King and said, "There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days" (Dan. 2:28). This incident brought Daniel prominently to the attention of the King, who promoted him and his three friends to positions of trust and responsibility in the empire.

We are likely to be so enthralled with this great dream that we may lose the import of the opening words of the interpretation: "Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. . . . Thou art this head of gold" (Dan. 2:37, 38). From the interpretation of the dream there first came interest between the King and the captive Daniel and his three friends, then came a deep-seated friendship. Shadrach, Mechach, and Abednego were placed "over the affairs of the province of Babylon: but Daniel sat in the gate of the king" (Dan. 2:49). Next only to the King, Daniel was the greatest man in the empire. This friendship was given a severe test when "the king made an image of gold," and called upon all people to "fall down and worship the golden image." (Dan. 3:1-7.) This was contrary to the faith of the Jews, and their refusal to bow down to the image brought about accusations from other officials who were looking for a chance to purge the Jews from positions of trust.

The incident also furnished an occasion for the power of God to be displayed. The King had heard the interpretation of a dream, but that tended to increase his self-concert. Did not that say, "Thou art this head of gold"? The furnace was prepared to receive the three stalwarts of "the most high God"-the preparation going just a little too far, for the heat killed even those who east the others in. Then came the miracle. The three men were not hurt by the raging flames. Instead, there appeared with them in the midst of the fire a fourth man. The King said, "Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire?" They answered, "True, O king." He said, "Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God." (Dan. 3:24, 25.) Right then came the beginning of a great change in Nebuchadnezzar. As he stood near the furnace he cried and said, "Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither." They were looked over and found to be unharmed; not even the smell of fire was upon them. Then came the King's decree, "That every people, nation, and language, which speak any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, shall be cut in pieces, . . . because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort" (Dan. 3:29).

of the man Nebuchadnezzar. This picture was another dream. Again, it was the King's friend, Daniel, who interpreted it for him. The story was not told until after the fulfillment had taken place, and is recorded as an evidence of the conversion of the King from serving pagan gods to the service of the "most high God." The dream had a profound effect on Daniel, as he said, "My Lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies." No head of gold here, but insanity instead. "They shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall he with the beasts of the field, . . . and seven times (years) shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will" (Dan. 4:25).

How many are prepared to make such a confession as we find coming from the lips of this great soldier statesman and final friend of the Jews? Listen! "Mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation" (Dan. 4:34).

After Nebuchadnezzar's death in 562 B.C., the empire fell to pieces under the misrule of Belshazzar and came under the rule of Cyrus of Persia.

What Is Death?

By Charles T. Lindsay

IF "death is the voice that Jesus sends to call us to His arms," is it not a friend and a blessing? And should we not then look and long for it as we do for a welcome visitor? But the Scriptures teach that death is an enemy, even "the last enemy that shall be destroyed" (1 Cor. 15:26). God surely would not destroy a friend. If it is true that death is the "gate to glory" (as some teach), and seeing that the Scriptures teach that death is an enemy to be destroyed, does it not follow that when Christ destroys death He will destroy the "gate to glory"? If death is both the liberation of the immortal soul from the "mortal coil" and "the gate to endless joy," then are we not indebted to sin for our liberation, and for the gate to endless joy? This inconsistency is more clearly seen in view of the fact that the Scriptures teach that sin brought death into the world (Rom. 5:12).

To me death means no functioning of any of the senses man has. Death, Scripturally, is that condition of being in which there is total cessation of life. "Thou shalt die, and not live" (Isa. 38:1). "In that very day his thoughts perish" (Psalm 146:4). In short, of all the vital functions "the dead know not any thing" (Eccl. 9:5). Only warped theology teaches that death is the "gate to endless joy." The Scriptures teach that the Devil has the power of death (Heb. 2:14). Now if both could be true, the Devil, would then have the power of the "gate to endless joy." That is too absurd to entertain for even a moment. Which, then, shall we accept?

"Let God be true (though) every man a liar" (Rom. 3:4). Why will people be duped? Why will some deceive by declaring that "death is the voice that Jesus sends to call us to His arms," when the Bible so plainly speaks of death as an enemy which Christ came to abolish? (2 Tim. 1:10.) Why will intelligent people believe that the dead are "not dead, but gone before," which is a re-echoing of the lie uttered by the Scrpent: "Ye shall not surely die"? The Bible declares that man shall "surely die" (Gen. 2:17), that "in death there is no remembrance" (Psalm 6:5), that when a man dies "his thoughts perish" (Psalm 146:4), that "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence" (Psalm 115:17). Why, we ask, do some continue to teach such things unless it is that they have "made a covenant with death and entered into an agreement with hell"? Many have made a covenant with death to preach it as their best friend—one that will transmit them to "the courts where angels dwell," and they have entered into an agreement with hell (sheol, or the grave) to preach it as being satisfied with the body, while the soul is allowed to escape to realms of bliss.

Reader, shun the profane and vain babblings of so-called orthodoxy, and accept God's Word which—in harmony with natural facts—treats death as the cessation of life. God's Word offers you a resurrection from the dead! While the Bible teaches that man is mortal (Job 4:17), it offers you immortality upon the condition that you "by patient continuance in well doing seek for (it)" (Rom. 2:7). Of course, as long as you allow yourself to be deluded with the theory of the immortality of the soul you will not have any use for the gospel which has "brought life and immortality to light" (2 Tim. 1:10). Neither will you be likely to seek for that which you believe you already nossess.

The Bible says, "In death there is no remembrance of Thee (God): in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" (Psalm 6:5). "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence" (Psalm 115:17). Tradition says, "What we do not know now we shall know when we die." The Bible says, "The dead know not any thing, their love, and their hatred, and their cuvy, is now perished" (Eecl. 9:5, 6), and that when a man dies "his breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish" (Psalm 146:4). Tradition says: (Turn to page 9)

Article Five

By A. E. Griffiths

LET us imagine that we enter into the Tabernacle through the curtains of the entrance, and being inside, facing the far end of the room we see the veil which divides the holy place from the Most Holy. Remember, on the other side of the veil is the ark of the covenant and nothing else, but first we will consider the room in which we are standing.

On the left, the south side, stands a seven-branch candlestick made of solid gold, on the right stands the table of shewbread, made of gold, and in the center near the veil stands the altar of incense also of gold. This gives us a rough idea of the appearance of the interior, and the value attached to these sacred accessories to the church or Tabernacle. Having noticed the furnishings of this chamber, we shall now commence our study of the candlestick.

We must first realize that this room is in darkness, because there are no openings or windows. Therefore, a candlestick is necessary to furnish light to attend to the routine of the service held in this chamber. We find particulars of this seven-branch candlestick recorded in Exodus 25:31-40. Verse 31 says it is made of beaten gold. Gold represents both faith and immortality. In many instances the apostles were beaten for their faith. Whether this meaning is really inferred or not we cannot prove. Anyway, metal beaten into a desired shape is always a sign of the best workmanship, and this naturally had to be observed in producing this candlestick. That it had seven branches harmonizes with Revelation 1:12, where seven candlesticks are referred to as the seven churches of Asia—representing perfect or complete light of the truth.

The light from the candlestick was produced by burning oil (the word), supplied to it by the priest, morning and evening. Here we have the symbol of the Word of God being read continually, which supplies us with the light of the truth. By this light we can walk in the darkness of the world.

This light of the candlestick was not like the light God supplied over the ark. That was divine light, but the candlestick produced light only as oil was daily supplied to it, symbolizing that we receive light only as we daily read the Scriptures. Psalm 119:105, also, expresses this thought. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Again, in 2 Timothy 3:15 we read, "The holy scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation."

The knops mentioned in Exodus 25:31 undoubtedly refer to the almond blossom as a decoration, which was used also in the temple adornments. We have the same sign in Numbers 17:8, when Aaron's rod blossomed and bore almonds, showing that the Levites were God's choice of tribe for the priests. The almond in Scripture signifies "to liasten." "The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, what seest thou? And I said, I see a rod of an almond tree. Then said the Lord unto me, Thou hast well seen; for I will hasten my word to perform it" (Jer. 1:11, 12). Thus, the almond being a part of the candlestick signified that by receiving the light of the Word God would hasten His salvation toward men. The bowls where the oil was placed were also shaped like almonds, teaching the same lesson. The weight of the whole thing was a talent, or in our weight ninety-three pounds twelve ounces avoirdupois, which in our money would be worth about $27,000. Quite some money for one piece of furniture! The oil (typifying the Word) was supplied by the children of Israel. "Command the children of Israel, that they bring unto thee pure oil olive beaten for the light, to cause the lamps to burn continually" (Lev. 24:2). This prophecy has certainly come true, for the Jews gave us the Word of God. Without them we could never have learned the truth. "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God" (Rom. 3:1, 2). This work was performed by them through much tribulation, being beaten frequently, harmonizing with the oil being beaten out of the olives. This all tends to show the type portrayed by the Tabernacle and its furnishings. Jesus said, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee" (Matt. 23:37). The Jews are noted for being martyrs, although they gave us the Word of God. This is in perfect harmony with the oil.

On the other side of the chamber stood the table of shewbread made of wood covered with pure gold. It was three feet long, eighteen inches wide, and twenty-seven inches high. The description of this table is found in Exodus 25:23-30. Besides the top being covered with gold it had a gold crown around it signifying the royalty of God, because He was King over Israel: "The Lord said unto Samuel, hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them" (1 Sam. 8:7). The table had four gold rings, two on each side through which they inserted two staves made of wood covered with gold, to earry it by when on the march from one encampment to another. These signified the same as the poles with which they carried the altar of sacrifice, mortality covered with faith which leads to immortality. On this table were the dishes to hold the bread, also spoons, bowls, and covers for same, all made of pure gold. On each dish stood six cakes of bread, which represented the twelve tribes; and on the top of each pile was a vessel containing frankincense, always in the process of burning. This incense symbolized prayer, which is the type of our custom today of giving thanks on the first day of the week before we take the bread. These cakes were called the shewbread, because they were always on show before the Lord. Every Sabbath these cakes were replaced by fresh ones, and the ones a week old were eaten by the priests. This bread acted as "a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the Lord" (Lev. 24:7). This memorial links the Jewish religion to the true religion. Remember what Jesus said, "Salvation is of the Jews" (John 4:22). The holy place signified this economy. Paul's religion was the hope of Israel (Acts 28:20). This was Paul's description of the hope of the gospel, "Unto which hope our twelve tribes instantly serving God day and night, hope to come" (Acts 26:7).

This shewbread was a figure of that bread which Jesus gave His disciples the night before He died. As the shewbread was a memorial in the days of Moses, so the bread on the table of the Lord today is a memorial of Christ's death. As the priests ate the "bread of God" (Lev. 21:6) every Sabbath, so we should eat "the bread that came down from heaven" every first day of the week, which was the custom of the apostles. "Upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them" (Acts 20:7). This shows that the main reason for meeting together was to break bread, and Paul used this opportunity to preach to them, proving that the preaching was a secondary matter. This thought is also expressed in Acts 2:42: "They continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine, and in fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Notice, here they continued steadfastly in doing these things. That means in plain language that they were continually doing them as every first day of the week came around. If it had been a monthly or quarterly ordinance it would have been thus stated, but it was a continual practice. Eating the shewbread was a type of this ordinance and was observed every week. Therefore, the observance of our memorial must follow suit, or it ceases to be an antitype.

Having studied the south and north sides of this chamber, we now turn to the last piece of furniture standing in the west center, near the veil. This piece was the altar of incense. For particulars of its construction read Exodus 30:1-10. We find this also was made of wood overlaid with gold, with a gold crown around the top like the table of shewbread. It had gold rings at the four corners to receive the two wooden staves covered with gold, to carry it by. On this altar, incense was burned each morning and evening by the priest when he dressed the lamps on the candlestick. Burning incense represents prayers, and they must he rendered in the way God has commanded. We remember the fate of two of Aaron's sons, Nadab and Abihu, "Nadab and Abihu died before the Lord, when they offered strange fire before the Lord in the wilderness of Sinai" (Please turn to page 9)

House Cleaning

By J. Don Swartz

THERE are very few of us who, at some time in our lives, did not look forward to a visit from some dear friend. Unless the visit was totally unexpected, there was quite a considerable preparation done in advance. If the guest had not been in our home for some time the walls would have to have new paper, the kitchen painted, and mother would have to have new rugs and curtains for the guest room. She would also insist on a new dress, coat, and hat.

This preparation begins the minute the news arrives telling of the expected visit of the guest. Nine times out of ten there is a last-minute rush to get things done, and sometimes they don't get done. Why was all of this extra work necessary? If the housework was done orderly and in regularity would it not be presentable for the most noted guest at any time, with but very little straightening?

Most of us, from about the first time we went to Sunday school, heard that a visitor was coming back to earth sometime in the future. He didn't say when He would arrive, but just said, "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come" (Matt. 24:42).

There was an incentive to be ready when your house guest arrived, because if he were treated rightly he might remember you in his will.

How much greater incentive there is to be ready when our heavenly Guest arrives, as He told us that whoever finds favor with Him shall have eternal life! What greater reward could be expected than that? We know these things are true, because we have God's Word that they are true. And who can disprove God's Word?

Knowing all this in advance, why aren't we ready? Some of us haven't even started to wash the windows of our spiritual house so that the true light can come in. There probably are a few who are almost through with their spiritual house cleaning. Did I say "through"? It's just like it is with a thorough housewife—there is always something to do. However, we cannot expect to be perfect yet.

Our house guest said he would arrive on the fifteenth of the following month. He said if we were not at the station when he arrived he would wait for us. Our heavenly Guest didn't say when He would arrive; only, "Be ye ready"!

When you hear the blast of the trumpet on that great day, do you think you will then have time to start your house cleaning? Do you think the heavenly Guest will wait for you?

Concerning "Meditations on the Gospel"

(THE RESTITUTION HERALD, Feb. 14, 1939)

By William Askenaz

G op must be a "grand old man," wise and fatherly, a lover of children. He had thousands of faithful servants—an-

Serpent or not, free to love God or not.

If the reader is tired, here is relaxation; if he is hungry, here are spice and theology just a whit.

Eden restored. The naughty student is sidetracked.

Read your Bible. The Serpent did not put the curse of gels. Still, He wanted children, all His own; children that loved Him not of necessity but because they loved Him, appreciated Him as a Father; children who if they did not want to love and obey Him did not have to; children that would enjoy Eden—God's estate. However, if any of them would rather be with the Serpent in its estate (sin), they would be permitted to go, and to stay there till they were anxious enough to come back "home" to stay for good. God would oppress no one, not even His own children. They must be free: free thinkers, free choosers, free to love the God created His first children, man and wife, to be just exactly the kind of children He wanted - free choosers. Therefore, God set before them the opportunity to choose to live in a paradise with their heavenly Father or in the land of sin where their Father was not-Satan's land. If would indeed have been gospel to God had they chosen to love Him with all their mind, strength, and life; to be very obedient and appreciative children, ever mindful of serving Him. But it was not thus. Adam and Eve did not honor their heavenly Father. They brought sadness, bitter anguish, to their Father's heart. But it would have been more anguish to have forced them to dwell in Eden when they despised God. If God had created them so that they could not do anything but love and obey Him they would not have been free choosers: they would have been only mechanisms, automatons-not children. Again, if God had not allowed Eve to come in contact with temptations she would have been nothing but a "dumb Dora," not a bright, cheerful, playful child, capable of thinking, choosing, understanding, doing things her own way and of her own mind.

God foreknew that these babes-in-knowledge would sooner or later choose to follow the Serpent's suggestion. These babes-in-knowledge had never seen or met any trouble, aches, anxiety, accidents, death, pests, or fear. They could not realize that their Eden was Paradise. God knew they were this simple. God knew that these babes needed vicissitudes before they could realize that Eden was Paradise. This is why God created the Serpent and the tree of knowledge.

God began His great school without delay. He taught His first children to learn how to choose the good and refuse the evil. Adam and Eve were as first graders in school. They made many mistakes, blunders, and wrong guesses. The apt students will graduate at commencement of life in vicissitudes on the earth. God did it. The Serpent suggested to Eve to disobey God, but God cursed the earth because Adam and Eve followed the Serpent's suggestion. God was going to let them study in the most efficient school—the school of experience. It was not a "book larnin' skewel," but one in which they grew in wisdom, knowledge, and understanding.

We can see these babes during their first day in this great school. Did they cry? Yes. Everything was so strange. Besides, Eve and Adam were barefooted-had only sheepskins tied around them-and were only a short time inside the schoolhouse door when she stepped on a thorn; the wasp stung. The schoolhouse door was where they stepped into the great open spaces out of Eden, a kind of mamma's arms and lap. Shortly, each was sweaty and frightened by childish fears. They looked back toward the closed door through which they came, and in their mind saw Eden as a mother's lap. Possibly a tear rolled down God's cheek. And they cried and promised, "Father, we will be good. We won't disobey again. We did not think. We did not realize we were being naughty. The Serpent told us to. We won't listen to it any more." But God knew exactly when they had been long enough in school, when they had learned enough to be ready for commencement of life in Eden restored, or whether they ever would learn to be fit for Eden.

Oh, it was such a little misdemeanor for these babes-inknowledge to do. They only ate of a wonderful fruit tree in their play yard. Parents as we are would hardly chastise a child for disobeying that little bit. But God knows best. Begin early. Get children into training while very young, while their feet are tender. God knew delay was dangerous, so rushed them right into His great school, the greatest of all schools. But as these babes met the vicissitudes of their life, how they must have yearned, begged, and promised! How contrition must have laid hold on them when they realized that they were naughty! They were so unappreciative of their Father that they would not even obey Him in a very small matter. He had asked them to leave the tree of knowledge alone, and they would not. God was their Father; He had put them in a wonderful paradise, blessed them with playful pets, luscious fruits, no aches or pains. Oh, why had they been so self-willed. A joyful twinkle must have come to God's eyes, a smile of gladness that would not wipe off. He could picture Himself enjoying Paradise with His children; they having learned to choose the good and reject the evil. They had learned that Eden was indeed a most wonderful paradise, had learned that lesson so thoroughly that they would forever and ever realize that Eden is a grand and glorious home, never would become tired of it and want to sin again, never become satiated.

God has laid them and all their descendants away in death till He has graduated enough pupils to fill His Paradise—Eden restored. He will then resurrect them; then He and they shall joy together forever. Then will the toils of the road seem nothing when we get to the end of this way. God and His people will then have mutual joy—God's ideal.

Why did not Adam and Eve become sullen in this great school? They had a joy set before them. Christ was promised to them, and an opportunity of returning to Eden; also, the joy of doing things for their Father whom they had saddened. Again, this promised Child of theirs was to be a great king in Eden, and how much joy it would be to be with Him then. This Son should bruise the Serpent's head (kill it), and destroy all of its works. Adam and Eve understood how that their sins were to be the cause of Christ's death; and that this Christ would be a child of theirs—their only truly faithful and upright son. Surely, they wanted to live to make amends to Him and God.

It takes contrition to make Paradise paradise.

Replying to the question, "Why are the Socialists in Milwaukee so successful?" Victor Berger, the leader of the party in that city, replied: "Because we put nine tenths of our campaign funds into literature, and because we have three hundred men who are pledged to get up every Sunday morning at five o'clock for the purpose of placing Socialistic literature into the Sunday morning newspapers found upon the front doorsteps."

Would it be possible to secure three hundred Christians to pledge themselves to arise every Sunday morning at five o'clock for the purpose of placing Christian literature upon the doorsteps of the people living in their communities?

SHUT OFF THE RADIO

Solomon said, "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under heaven." There is a time to turn on the radio, and there is a time to turn it off. God never intended that one in prayer should need the lungs of an auctioneer in order to compete with a radio, nor has God promised to smell the sweet incense of prayer when it is mixed with the stink of jazz....

Yes, I shall be honored to offer prayer at your table, but first shut off the radio.

WHAT IS DEATH?

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify;
A never-dying soul to save
And fit it for the skies."

Instead of saying that the soul is "never-dying," God says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4, 20), and, instead of saying that the soul goes to the sky, the Bible says, "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave" (Psalm 49:15).

Some teach that the dead are "not dead, but gone before." The Bible says of the faithful, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises" (Heb. 11:13), and that if there is no resurrection of the dead they "which are fallen asleep in Christ have perished" (1 Cor. 15:18). Tradition makes the Word of God of none effect, for if the wicked go to their punishment at death and the righteous go to their reward, what need would there be for a resurrection? Tradition says men are recompensed at death, but the Bible says the righteous dead shall be "recompensed at the resurrection of the just" (Luke 14:14).

Death, then, is the cessation of life, resulting in dissolution; and resurrection is the reformation of man and the renewing of life.

(Num. 3:4). This was the result of offering incense other than what God had commanded. God will always have His own way. God has good reasons for all He does, though man is always thinking he can improve on them. That was the trouble with Nadab and Abihu, but in their case and for our instruction "fire came out from the Lord and devoured them . . . and the Lord spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and before all the people I will be glorified" (Lev. 10:2, 3). This lesson teaches us that no one can approach God unless he is sanctified or set apart. One has to come out from the world and become God's child before his prayers are acceptable to God. If one does not know God's plan of salvation he does not know what fo pray for. Only the priest was allowed to offer up this incense or prayer for the people, but since Christ has died and abolished these ordinances, each person must now pray for himself. Therefore, this necessitates a knowledge of the truth, and then entering into a covenant with God through Christ. Paul made this clear when he declared, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3:29), and again, "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty" (2 Cor. 6:17, 18). This altar was not only for burning incense on, but was also touched once a year by the High Priest with blood from the altar of sacrifice. This was for the atonement of all the people. Christ enters the picture here. We must be touched by the blood or sacrifice of Christ, or we are not acceptable to Him. It is marvelous how all these laws concerning the Tabernacle fit in with all our instructions through the gospel.

Having reviewed the whole chamber, we can now stand back and imagine the splendor of this room. The boards of the walls being covered with polished gold, the candlestick reflecting its light all around would add a dazzling splendor to the surroundings. When we consider the spiritual significance of this richly embellished interior, the luster becomes a speaking parable of the mental condition we have to acquire to come into relationship with God.

BE STILL! LISTEN TO GOD!

pathway left by Israel as she, too, like Adam of old, tried to hide herself from God.

But indications are that Israel is today awakening to her error. For nations, like individuals, are to "stand still, and see the salvation of God:..." At Moses' bidding Israel once experienced the great result of such obedience. Today, again, through Him who is greater than Moses, the call goes forth to lost and scattered Israel to "stand still" and hear the call of God to come forth into the open again and "see the salvation of the Lorp."

International, social, and economic movements all indicate that we are in the closing days of a dispensation, that the world is really crossing the threshold toward a new age. Again and again are the Russian, German, Italian, and other characters manifesting themselves in such ways as to give all but certain testimony identifying themselves as the great characters responsible for the prophesied turmoil of the closing days of this dispensation. If these things are true, then the Bible student can but know as never before that God is now speaking. Yea, more: If His prophetic voice of centuries past is today reaching us, then He is due to speak yet again. In fact, He is speaking every day. For daily, prophecies sound upon our ears with new force and meaning. But is humanity listening? It is feared not. Rather, the great Babylonian banquet of carousal-praise of unknown gods seems to be on again, and a hand seems again to be writing upon the wall. Would that all would "be still" these days, and learn that He is God.

GOD'S WORDS ASSUME FORM

As one of the words of God in Genesis 1 became grass and herb and tree; and another of them became sun and moon and stars; and another became fish, and living things of the water; and another word became cattle and creeping thing and beast; and just as another "word" of God in John 1 became flesh "and dwelt among us": so also, words of God spoken millenniums past are today coming to assume form, in kind, in agreement with the words spoken.

Do we hear the frequent "click" of the fulfilling of these words? Are we "still" enough that we can see His salvation being wrought? Do we withdraw from our own mortal judgment, and wisdom, and egotism sufficiently that we can really say that we have come to "be still"—able to recognize God's fulfilling words?

HEARING GOD

Yes, God is speaking. The multitude hears not. The multitude of the Christian world hears not. They think "it thunders." But no; the voice of God is sounding. Both the Christian Church and the Kingdom Nation should be listening at "attention" unto His every word. One of His words will soon be spoken unto the Church. It will be the Savior speaking. That word will be a call hither. It is doubtful if any whose life and thought and concern are absorbed in human unessentials will be sufficiently "still" as to hear that voice when it calls. To the nation a Voice is soon due to call Israel and Judah unto a new covenant. Rapidly is this coming to be recognized by myriads. Other myriads continue to refute this Biblical fact.

Would that the Christian pulpit, and press, and life were such that the world would be attracted to a realization of these things.

It is said that briefly preceding the thrust of the cyclone there is a hush so quiet that it is oppressive. Would that the Christian life of today, and each day until the Master shall call, were of such stillness and quiet that the world might feel its hush and be alert for the coming change.

It was the boy, Samuel, who thrice heard the Father's call, and knew it not. Eli, the priest, at last realizing what was taking place, instructed the boy thus, "... it shall be, if he call thee, thou shalt say, Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth." To the Christian world the writer would like to exhort each person to so comport himself in mind and heart that when the signal of the Lord's call shall come each may be ready to say, with Samuel,

"Speak, LORD; for thy servant heareth."

"Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy. And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore I took them away as I saw fit" (Ezek. 16:49, 50).

They declare their sin as Sodom, they hide it not" (Isa. 3:9). One of the chief characteristics of modern America is the brazen way so many people sin. Many say this doesn't mean our generation sins any more than preceding ones, but that people are more open about it. Whether this be so or not, this very openness is a sign of the times. Supreme indifference to God is the attitude of many.

Walter Lippman, news commentator, says: "The irreligion of the modern world is radical to a degree for which there is, I think, no counterpart. . . . This is the first age in the history of mankind when . . . any fixed and authoritative belief is incredible to large classes of men."

It will be evident to all that the quoted scriptures concerning Sodom find their counterpart in many of the social evils of the modern world. When men forget God they lay themselves open to the entrance of every immorality and vice. We will mention some of the social conditions in America that it will be self-evident are patterned after the conditions in Sodom.

Sex sins were prodominant in Sodom. America "hides it not," all the way from immodest attire through the alluring sexy ads of liquor and tobacco. The eighteen million citizens infected with social diseases, the hundreds of thousands of young girls and women debauching themselves in just the same way men have debauched themselves for generations, the breakdown of the home, increase in divorce, and many like conditions are not only signs of the times, but also evidences of dissolution. America has passed the crossroads, and is marching down the broad way.

The apathy of the American public to the awful toll of the automobile on the highways is appalling. Life is held at a low price, just as in Sodom.

Crime has increased 500 per cent in thirty years. Organized racketeering is a modern cancer on the life of the world.

There were 178,000 saloons before prohibition. There are now 500,000 places where liquor is being sold openly, besides three times as much bootlegging as there was during prohibition. Five billion dollars a year is spent for liquor. America spends one and one half billion dollars a year for cigarettes: three times as much for tobacco as for churches; ten times as much spent for liquor as for churches; and twenty times as much spent for controlling crime as for churches. An analysis of the way America spends her yearly income as she worships the great god comfort would be revealing.

Crowded movie palaces and empty churches make an ugly comparison. Many churches forget the gospel, and to keep alive become social clubs or amusement halls. Paul said to Timothy that men in the last days would be "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God" (2 Tim. 3:4). This was the sin of Sodom!

The unbelieving brain of man has built a great structure of pseudo-science, "science falsely so-called." Rather than take the simple truth of the revealed Creator, man has invented an explanation of the earth and himself upon it which will tickle the ears and sooth the conscience of man. Starting with the evolutionary theory, man has clambered into the very throne of God with the false teachers' deification of man. Of Sodom it is written, "They were haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore I took them away as I saw good" (Ezek. 16:50).

SPIRITUAL CONDITION OF LOT AND THE CHURCH TODAY

There is a startling similarity between Lot and the last day church. The church is the salt of the earth according to Jesus' own statement (Matt. 5:13). Lot was the rightcous man of his city: "Just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation the wicked: (for that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds" (2 Peter 2:7, 8). The church professes to have a hatred of sin and a love of righteousness. As such, it has been given the gospel as the means of salvation for the lost. Lot tried to reform his contemporaries. When the end came Lot tried to get a few of his relatives to flee with him. Lot failed in his last call, "He seemed as one that mocked" (Gen. 19:14). Is it any wonder that the influence of Lot was nil, his cry impotent, and his message ridiculed? He had "pitched his tent toward Sodom" (Gen. 13:12), "sat in the gate of Sodom" (Gen. 19:1), and had "lingered" (19:16) until the destroying angels had to force him to leave. Then his wife had looked longingly back at the fruitful plain she was leaving so hastily and unwillingly, and so God allowed her also to partake of the overthrow of the Sodom she loved.

In Lot we see the last days experience of the church. Its message is vital, but its voice obstructed by its own love of worldliness; the church is being ridiculed, sneered at, frustrated. Its faith and its works fail to "jibe." It is lukewarm (Rev. 3:14-22); it has "become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal" (1 Cor. 13:1). A few brave, faithful, loving voices here and there are smothered in the general indifference. Its "form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" (2 Tim. 3:5) will be brought to judgment. "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished" (2 Peter 2:9). The church must be unloaded as Lot was unloaded.

By comparing Luke 17:28, 29—the escape of Lot—with verses 30-37—the escape of the church—we get a vivid picture of the rapture of the saints of the Lord. "The one shall be taken, and the other left." In the suddenness of that hour many will be like Lot's wife, the love of the world will be too strong. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2:15). Are you, my friends, ready for the coming of that hour?

To the world I say, Take warning, be convicted of your sin and the imminence of God's judgment. I should like to impress upon you the supreme urgency of having Jesus the Christ for your Savior.

To the Christian I say, Examine yourselves according to God's standards in the Bible. "Watch and pray." Let nothing come between you and the Christ. Would you choose to be left to the tribulation and judgment of the world as Lot's near relatives were left?

To the finally impenitent world, I pronounce that God's judgments will come, separating the wheat from the chaff. It is up to you as to where you will be in that coming day. You may be so near, and yet so far away.

Are you ready?

The Handwriting on the Wall

One of the most interesting stories of the entire Old Testament is the one told in the book of Daniel about the handwriting on the wall. Let us review it to see if there is anything that we can learn from the story.

King Nebuchadnezzar who had befriended the Prophet Daniel had died, and in his stead reigned his son or grandson, Belshazzar. In the exchange Daniel had been forgotten, and our first introduction to the new king is when we are told of a great feast that he made. Perhaps you have heard at some time or other, the old song, "At the Feast of Belshazzar and a Thousand of His Lords." The feast was not only a drunken and riotous one. Belshazzar further added to its indignity by drinking from the sacred vessels of God vessels that his grandfather had brought from the Temple in Jerusalem. Daniel 5:4 tells us, "They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone." So we can see that this feast surely must have been extremely displeasing to God. Sometime during the feast the king and all his company were startled to see a hand suddenly appear and begin to write on the wall. Furthermore, it wrote in a language that none of the people assembled there, nor the magicians, could understand. Finally the queen remembered Daniel and the various dreams that he had interpreted for Nebuchadnezzar. Thus, they called for the Prophet. Daniel was given the interpretation of the writing from the Writer, God, and told it to the king. Translated, it read: "God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. . . . Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. . . . Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." A little farther on in the chapter it is stated how that very thing was

I ask, Is there not today some handwriting on the wall of the world? Christ said that when the leaves put forth on the trees we know that summer is nigh, illustrating that when we see signs heralding the last days we know that His coming is very soon. God has provided these signs for us, and we can see them if we will but look about us. I wonder, though, if to some it will be "handwriting," as it was to the wicked king. Some of the very things that are today going on in the world will some day be used to tell an unsubmissive world, "Thou are weighed in the balances, and art found wanting." Those will be harsh words to hear. Live your lives so that they never will be pronounced to you. Live not in riotous living and drunkenness as did Belshazzar, but in soberness as did Daniel.

Brotherly Love

* Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

"Let brotherly love continue" (Heb. 13:1). A very shining example of brotherly love is that of Christ when He died on the cross. An unselfish love is strongly exhibited here, in that God gave His only Son that the human race might be saved. The only way we can show an appreciation of such love as God had for us, is to show a reflection of such love in our attitude toward others.

The parable of the good Samaritan offers further light upon this subject. We should show the consideration that the Samaritan showed the wayfarer, to anyone who may need similar help from us.

"Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, . . . that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good. . . . Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect" (Matt. 5:44-48). This is the perfect love.

Joseph's brothers treated him in a harsh and shameful way, but he didn't think of revenge as most people would. He returned good for evil. He was kind to them and dealt with them in a brotherly way. He had their interests at heart, and did not seek to harm them, for love works no ills. When the love of God dwells in the heart of an individual, he will not wrong his fellow man. Love is a fundamental principle of Christianity. The real Christian life has not been experienced by those who have not had true brotherly love for all mankind.

Joseph did not think of revenging his brothers, for he was thinking of their needs and the needs of his father. Sacrifices express mutual love. Then, too, one should sacrifice his own interests if need be so that the family will be in unity. Thus, we see Joseph sacrificing so that his family might continue united. The family tie is a sacred one and should be given consideration.

In many churches there is sometimes division and strife. This not only keeps the people from having the blessings that come from maintaining the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace" (Eph. 4:3), but also works directly against the principle of brotherly love. For a while their motto might well be: "Let brotherly love commence." Living up to that, they should adopt the Biblical standard: "Let brotherly love continue."

"Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it" (Solomon 8:7).

"I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day" (Acts 23:1).

Scripture: Acts 21:40; 22:1-4; 24:14, 15; 26:19-23.

The Starting Place

If I were to invite you to go with me to fairyland, most of you would laugh, for you know there is no fairyland. But there is a place to which I invite you which is real. It leads to something better than any fairyland could boast. It is to be on this earth made new. Only the good can enter. Jesus will be the light. There will be no sickness, pain, or parting, and all will be joy and peace.

The starting place oftentimes is the Church of God. So won't you go, and take your friends with you? In Sunday school and church you learn of Paul and others. There you hear and get faith to believe. There you receive strength for the tasks ahead.

The Road

The way the Christian travels is full of peril and temptations. After becoming converted and baptized, there are still many trials to meet. The path so often followed unknowingly is a broad, beautiful, enticingly decorated way, called "the broad way." Sunday school students know that "the narrow way" is the Christian way that leads to life, and "the broad way" leads to death. So, many times one must turn back when the broad way is to be the one on which he is going.

Many fall along the wayside. There is less danger of falling if you have plenty of daily nourishing food from your Bible. We see that one cause of failure is from lack of the proper food—the milk and meat of the Bible.

Sometimes weeds check our pathway. The journey is slowed until we can see but one step ahead.

The Royal Family

Christians have a Leader who goes on ahead. He knows every step we must take, for He suffered for us, trod the very same path, was tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin. So, let Christ lead. He is King of this royal family.

Don't you wish to join the singing, praising, trusting band who walk the Christian road to God? Then study your Bibles. Study your Sunday school lessons. Go where you will be with those who are fed on God's Word—to church.

With Christ as your King, put on the whole armor of God, and choose God's people for your friends.

Then begin fulfilling the royal law, which is, according to the Scripture: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (James 2:8). Strive to belong to the "royal priesthood" (1 Peter 2:9), who will reign with Christ "on the earth" (Rev. 5:10).

The Child and the Year

Said the child to the youthful year:
"What hast thou in store for me,
O giver of beautiful gifts! what cheer,
What joy dost thou bring with thee?"

"My seasons four shall bring
Their treasures: the winter's snows,
The autumn's store, and the flowers of spring,
And the summer's perfect rose."

"All these and more shall be thine Dear child—but the last and best Thyself must earn by a strife divine, If thou would'st be truly blest."

"Would'st know this last, best gift?
"Tis a conscience clear and bright,
A peace of mind which the soul can lift
To an infinite delight."

"Truth, patience, courage, and love,
If thou unto me canst bring,
I will set thee all earth's ills above,
O child! and crown thee a king!"

-Celia Thaxtor.

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING Oregon, Illinois

The annual business meeting of the Church of God in Oregon, Ill., will be held at the church at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, June 14. Mabel Andrew, Seev.

KOSZTA, IOWA

Bro. C. E. Lapp closed a series of nine days' evangelistic meetings here Thursday, May 18. Though a very busy time, good crowds were in attendance to hear interesting sermons on:
The Lord's Coming, Condition of the Jews in Palestine, The Day of the Lord, Wrath,
Judgment, and others.

On Thursday noon the Doreas circle gave Bro. and Sr. Lapp a picnic dinner at Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright's home. Forty-two were Mrs. Walter Wright's home. Forty-two were present. At the afternoon meeting Mrs. Doris Danskin conducted a lesson on "Galatians," followed by a recipe for a life of abounding joy given by Sr. Lapp. She chose Philippians 4: Rejoice in the Lord (v. 4); prayer unto God (v. 6); think on these things (v. 8); contentment (v. 11); strength for all things (v. 13); all our needs (v. 19). All these ingredients properly mixed together will secure for you happiness in this life and also in the you happiness in this life and also in the world to come.

Sr. Lapp's sweet voice and accordion solos added much to the meetings. Little Elaine helped entertain the children. They left Friday morning for their home in St. Cloud, Minn., feeling their stay had been an inspiration to all. They met many old friends from four years ago when they were here, and made many new ones.

May the Lord bless their work here, also in the future, is the prayer of the Koszta people.

Mrs. L. M. Kiger.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

At the last meeting of the official board Bro. G. E. Marsh was selected as official delegate to the National Conference at Oregon, Ill., this summer. Mr. and Mrs. Dale Rouch and children of South Bend, Ind., were recent visitors at Southlawn Church.

Sydney E. Magaw has been engaged as the principal speaker at the Michigan Summer-Conference to be held at Southlawn, June 12-18.

As a result of the recent drive for funds made by members and friends of the church, a new roof has been added to the church annex, and the church building and annex will receive a new coat of white paint.

MINNESOTA EVANGELISM

The ship, Minnesota State Evangelism (MSE) is still sailing (thanks to some), though somewhat crippled (thanks to others who perhaps forgot).

Interest and attendance at Hector, Mora, and Lester Prairie continue very good, with prospects that are encouraging. ous unavoidable circumstances it has been impossible to have services at Onamia for some time, but in the future work can perhaps be reestablished.

Our present schedule leaves one Sunday open each mouth. Hector, second Sunday; Mora, third Sunday; Lester Prairie, fourth

Come to the Conference business meeting to assist in planning the evangelistic work for the coming year. 1939-1940 hold many oppor-tunities for all in Christian service.

Minnesota Evangelist.

Gleanings From the Field

"We had a splendid quarterly conference last Sunday at Maxwell. Our attendance was unusually large."—O. J. Allard, Cedar Falls,

A number of the brethren from Oregon, Ill., have been attending the evangelistic meetings at Dixon, where Bro. James McLain is assist-in Bro. L. E. Conner.

On May 19, twin girls were born to Mr. and Mrs. Loyd Cooper of Fredericktown, Mo. They are Rosa Lee and Lila Marie. . . . Congratulations. Congratulations.

"I am unable to attend church, so I derive my spiritual food from reading The Herald. May its work be greatly multiplied."—Jessie B. Boyle, Fort Worth, Texas.

Bro. S. J. Lindsay recently received a let-ter of appreciation from the Tempe Garden Club, informing that the only reason the Church of God there did not receive a prize in a recent survey was that churches were not included in the competition. . . . Congratula-tions, Bro. Lindsay, and to Bro. Ray Saylor whom you report as having done much of this

Those graduating this spring from high school who are from the Oregon, Ill., congregation are: Georgia Johnson, Margaret Mattison, Jeanette Romine, and William Cullen. Congratulations all.

Although not in a conference, nor even being called together, it chanced recently that five ministers were brought together at one office. They were: Bros. L. E. Conner, James McLain, Harvey Krogh, Paul Johnson, and the writer. A day or two later Bro. F. L. Austin visited us, and in a very few more days we expect to see Bro. S. J. Lindsay.

"We plan to return to the brethren at Browntown for another series of meetings this fall, and trust that at that time there will be several who will obey in baptism,"—J. R. LeCrone, Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Magaw of Lester Prairie, Minn., and Mr. William Birkeback of St. Paul, Minn., are visiting a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Vivian Magaw, Tipp City, Ohio. Mrs. Sydney Magaw accompanied the travelers as far as Harvey, Ill., where she is visitin her mother and brother, Mrs. J. E. Hatch and Paul. and Paul.

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

We had a very enjoyable meeting at the Salem church near Marshall and Martinsville, May 15-19. The attendance was good, considering that it was a busy time for many. There were about fifty present the last evening.

The church is now looking forward to the meeting in June with Bro. S. J. Lindsay.

LESLIE EUGENE RICH

Leslie Eugene Rich was born in Montpelier, Vt., June 29, 1865, and died in Long Beach, Calif., May 9, 1939. When he was eight years of age his parents moved to Kansas. There, at the age of twenty-one years, he married Mary Esther Carter. He later moved to Tempe, Ariz., and still later to Santa Ana, Calif., where he and his wife made their home on a ranch until 1919, when they moved to Long Beach. Five children were born to them, as follows: Forest Rich and Mrs. Ray Saylor of Tempe, Ariz.; Mrs. Roy Judon of Compton, Calif.; Mrs. G. E. Wertz of Low; Beach; and Mrs. Francis Beach of Hillsbory. Ore. There are seventeen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. A brother, Clerener Rich, and a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Rossier, both of Long Beach, also survive.

Bro. Rich had his attention first called to the gospel by his daughter, Sr. Ione Saylor, When a meeting was held in his home during December of 1931, he with others embraced the opportunity to yield obedience by baptism, the writer holding a meeting there at that time. He united soon thereafter with the church in Los Angeles. Bro. Rich was thoroughly consistent in his Christian walk. never missing an opportunity to attend services when health permitted. He had spent the winter in Tempe where he had become a fixture with us in the church services. He has gone to his rest in the dust, there to await the call of the Master in the early morning of the great day for which we all look, when the works of mortality shall have come to an end.

Services were held in the Coon Mortuary near his Long Beach home, and he was laid away in the beautiful hillside cemetery in Whittier where Sr. Rich had been placed less than a year before. Sr. Railsback ably assisted in the services.

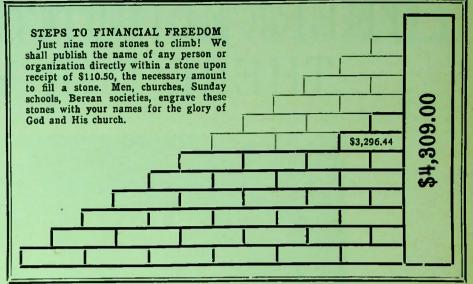

S. J. Lindsay.

THE TITHING BULLETIN

The Tithing Bulletin, as prepared by The Layman Company, offers every church the most effective of tithing education plus relief from half the expense and worries of the ordinary church bulletin. It combines simplicity, effectiveness, and economy. The Bulletin consists of four pages. Pages 1 and 4 are for the use of the local church. Pages 2 and 3 carry any one of thirty-two of the famous Layman tithing messages. This affords a quiet but effective course in stewardship education.

BAPTISM-

by S. J. Lindsay

This is a treatise on the significance, importance, and mode of baptism by one of the most able Bible teachers. The subject is presented in an interesting and logical manner, setting forth the biblical truth that baptism by immersion in water, following a definite belief in the gospel, is essential to salvation.

8 pages-2 for 5¢; per dozen 20¢; per hundred $1.20.

ESSENTIAL TRUTHS-Anonymous

A brief arrangement of the necessary requirements of salvation as to faith and works. It provides copious Bible references showing that belief in the coming kingdom of God on the earth, the restoration of God on the earth, the restoration of Pal-estine to Israel, the reign of Christ and His saints over all nations, the resurrection and immortalization of the dead in Christ, eternal life to be obtained only through Christ at His coming, the final destruction of His coming, the final destruction of the wicked, repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, followed by a holy life of Christian service, are included among the "Essential Truths" of the Bible.

THERE'LL BE COURSES THERE FOR YOU!

You'll find a course to meet almost every Christian need at the Summer Bible Training School to be held in the Oregon, Illinois, Church of God (pictured above). S. J. LindThe total cost of the six weeks' work will be only $30, including board, room, tuition, and books. Living quarters will be provided in the Illinois State Conference dormitory,

"Last year's Bible Training School was of inestimable value to me. Six weeks' intensive training, with the constant fellowship with co-Christians and co-students, gave me a better understanding of 'why I believe what I believe' than I've ever had before. Raised in a home where Bible study is as much a part of the day as the meals, and having taken all the Bible training work possible in school, I still fall down occasionally on telling others the basis of our faith. I anticipate with much pleasure this year's Training School,"—Delbert Jones, Eagle Grove, Iowa.

THE CHURCH

By S. J. Lindsay

"God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name" (Acts 15:14).

N A FORMER article we dealt with the world. In this article we shall consider the church in its relation to the world. The word "church" means "called out ones." That is, the church is a body of people called out from the world to serve the true and living God. The church and the world, then, are separated bodies of people. How far-reaching is that separation? Jesus gives us the measure of that separation in the language of John 17:15, "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." The separation of the children of God from the world is the separation between that which is good and that which is evil. The called out ones are the ones who are to share joint inheritance with Christ in His forthcoming kingdom. Not all are to be saved when Jesus comes; only the called out ones—the ones who have been called to another kingdom than that of men.

The kingdom to which the church has been called is to be a righteous kingdom, while the kingdoms of the world are sinful kingdoms. Called out ones must withdraw from the evils of the world and cling to the righteous principles that will prevail in God's righteous kingdom. To this end must they train themselves in right things. The church must withdraw itself from the evil that is in the world. If the church is true to its calling, it will not be popular with the world. Jesus says, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you" (John 15:18, 19). The reason for this hate is expressed in these words: "For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles (the world's nations), when we walked in laseiviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries: wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you" (1 Peter 4:3, 4).

The purpose of the church is tersely expressed by the writer to the Hebrews as follows: "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (10:24,25). Our frequent meeting together in our assemblies is for the purpose of helping each other to cultivate the graces that will prevail in the kingdom of God. Just in proportion as the beauty of the kingdom grows in our minds, just in that proportion will the things of the world vanish from our minds. Study of the Word will become sweeter. Our coming together is for the purpose of study that we may have the advantage of the help of others who have preceded us in the way. When Philip asked the eunuch if he understood what he was reading, he replied, "How can I except some man should guide me?" It is in our church relationship where we may be helpful to one another. In this we should excel the world in general helpfulness. The world is helpful for financial gain. In the church we exercise helpfulness regardless of gain that those in fellowship with us may be benefited because they are brethren.

It is not the office of the church to entertain the world. It isn't kind to the goat if we milk her to feed the sheep. If we solicit the world to help us to pay our debts, how can we expect to be independent of the world when it asks some concession of us?

The Great Commission authorized the disciples to go preaching the gospel. We are told that they went forth and preached everywhere. The command to Peter was to feed the sheep and lambs. We are taught by Paul to study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth. Peter tells us to sanctify the Lord God in our hearts and to stand ready always to give a reason for the hope we have.

The mission of the church, then, is to minister the Word to all who will listen to it. The early disciples of our Lord exemplified to us the mission of the church by going as they were directed. It is the duty of every disciple of Christ to make himself acquainted (Please turn to page 11)

Conference vs. Debate

In the early years of the church dispensation there was much dissension about circumcision. Following the first missionary journey of Paul, who had baptized many Gentiles, the necessity of circumcision was insisted upon by some of the Jewish Christians. Paul and Barnabas had returned from Asia Minor to Antioch in Syria, and there "they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles" (Acts 14:27). There was an evident joy on the part of all the church at Antioch that the gospel had been received by the Gentiles. Soon, however, along came the monkey wrenches: "Certain men which came down from Judgea taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved" (Acts 15:1). There is invariably some upstart who feels the burden of correcting Paul, especially if the older and truly authorized teacher has had outstanding success. Then "Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them."

From this newly kindled flame the fire was fanned, resulting in the first conference at Jerusalem. In spite of the fact that there was "much disputing" (v. 7), God poured oil on the troubled waters, and "all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul" (v. 12). Both Peter and James spoke in favor of accepting the Gentile converts without circumcision. In fact, the opposition soon melted, and God's true servants were confirmed as knowing what should be taught as gospel.

While it was fortunate that this irksome question was thoroughly examined and disputed and settled, it must not be concluded that the only purpose of a conference is to give opportunity for an argument, nor should it be concluded that an argument is an opportunity. The absolute truth of the matter is that the named and the true disciples did not quarrel! Only some monkey wrenches flew into the machinery.

At the ideal conference there will be sweet communion and fellowship. There will be the conferring of problems, true enough, but it will be done in the spirit of true brothers trying to help each other and willing to receive help of each other. There will be song, prayer, study, and praise. There will be the joyful meeting of friends from all directions. There will be preaching and conversions. The aged will attend for comfort, and will bless youth gathered there to study and serve. Children will be there if the spirit of Jesus is there. Where children attend there will be a church tomorrow, but where only debaters claw at one another there will be no children, no converts, no church—not even in Jerusalem.

Old Fashioned Visiting

Feeling last evening that I had hardly a moment to spare, I found the rest and strength that all have sometimes found by taking time for an old fashioned visit. God has made people sociable. Self interests have made people cold. And when selfishness hedges tightly around there is no way left open for either man or God to come in to bless. We had no particular problems to discuss, no enemies to complain about, no false friends to smear, yet, when it seemed surely time to leave, our host looked pained and urged to visit a little more. We had thought the dinner was over, but the dessert was still to come.

God has never intended that His church should entertain the world. Every true Christian knows that the church has a work to do that is often shamed by frolic and jest. Church auxiliaries have crowded out the altar of God, and gossip is the Devil's radio. But that the church needs more of the old fashioned visiting cannot be questioned. Man needs man. Christian needs Christian. Love is warmed by other love, and religion without love is not Christianity.

In the days of Malachi the children of Israel had sadly drifted away from God. They thought it was useless to serve God. But there was a remnant and a Malachi. "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another.... And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels" (Mal. 3:16, 17). That the Israelites may have revived public worship is not questioned, but that they also took more interest in each other is even more evident. There can be no love of God where there is no love for man. The two great commandments are as surely linked as are God and His own creation.

Jesus frequently visited with but one other person. He found time to be friendly, to be human. He knew everybody, and multitudes knew him. One of the very accusations against Jesus is now seen as a testimonial. Critics charged that He dined with sinners and publicans, but they were too cross eyed to see that these people Jesus dined with were also dining with Him . . . "and they did all eat, and were filled." Levi the publican was a precious soul to Jesus; Matthew the apostle proved friendship's worth.

The Dawn of God's Great Day

By J. H. Anderson

"We have also a more sure word of prophecy; . . . a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn."

I'T WAS winter, and all around me were desolation and death. The trees and the grass seemed to be dead. There were no flowers. The birds were silent. I asked myself, Can there ever again be life here? A few weeks went by. The sun brought showers of rain and warmed the earth. I again looked around. This time the trees and the grass were green, the beautiful flowers were in bloom, and I heard the sweet songs of the birds. I was in a new world, a world of life. I felt it was good to be in this world, to have a part in the life that was all around me. A mighty change had come—a change that brought new life to the world—and I was glad that I had seen the change from the old dead world to the new world of life.

Six thousand years ago Adam and Eve sinned. The summer ended, and there came a long winter, the winter of desolation and death. The world has been in that winter since Adam sinned. Shall we ever see the end of this winter? Will spring—the spring of new life—ever come?

"When these things come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh. And he spake to them a parable; behold the fig tree, and all the trees, when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass know ye that the kingdom (spring) of God is nigh at hand" (Luke 21:28-31). We see "these things" which Jesus foretold. Therefore, we know that spring will soon be here.

"My beloved spake (Christ to the church), and said unto me, Rise up (in the resurrection), my love, my fair one, and come away. For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away" (Song of Solomon 2:10-13). Yes, the signs show that spring is nearly here, that new life will soon come from the dust, raised by the power of the "Sun of righteousness" (Mal. 4:2). "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust (in dust, not in heaven); for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall east out the dead" (Isa. 26:19).

Great changes must come to bring the perfect day, the springtime of the new age:

(1.) The "Sun" must "arise with healing in his wings" (Mal. 4:2). Christ must come to bring that promised Sabbath of rest to the people of God. "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12).

- (2.) Satan must be bound so that he will not deceive the nations during the "thousand years" (Rev. 20:1-3).
- (3.) The righteous dead must be resurrected, and the righteous living changed. (See 1 Cor. 15:51-57; 1 Thess. 4:13-18.)
- (4.) The kingdom must be established, for the perfect day comes in the kingdom.

We are even now living in the time when the kingdom shall be established. "Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind earried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain (a great kingdom), and filled the whole earth. . . . And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure" (Dan. 2:35, 44, 45). Here we have an inspired statement that in the days of the toe kingdoms which grew out of the fourth world power (Rome) of the great image God would set up a kingdom. Myers History of the World shows that Rome became a universal power in 168 B.C., was divided into two parts in 395 A.D., and that the toe powers began coming up about 483 A.D. Now, if Daniel made no mistake, the kingdom of God must come before these toe kingdoms pass away: for they are to be destroyed by God's kingdom. God's kingdom is to be set up in the days of kings, not in the day of a king, "It shall come to pass in the last days, that that mountain (kingdom) of the Lord's house (church) shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it" (Isa. 2:2; Micah 4:1). As we are in the last days we may look for the kingdom, and for the kingdom to destroy the toe kingdoms. This kingdom of God will not come with a great show. (Luke 17:20, 21, (Please turn to page 11)

Burden Bearers

By John O. Conrad

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ" (Gal. 6:2).

"At the cross, at the cross, where I first saw the light, And the burden of my heart rolled away."

These lines were popular when I was a boy, and I enjoyed singing them because they were set to a cheerful melody. However, I was unable to comprehend the meaning of "the burden of my heart rolled away," because I had no burden on my heart.

Time soon brought the necessity of assisting in the burdens of the family, and some of them seemed pretty hard to bear. It was then that I began to ponder the reasonableness of the statement in Psalm 55:22, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee." It sounded somewhat as though the Lord might be in the free delivery business. I had seen men running trucks with a sign "Free Delivery" painted on them, and I secretly wished sometimes that the Lord would drop around to give me a lift, but I never had the requisite faith to wait for Him, considering my father's rigid expectations. Happy is the person who learns, in youth if possible, that life and burdens are practically synonymous in the plan of the Creator. As I grew older I came to know that there were some burdens for which there really was a free delivery service, particularly those burdens of the heart which I had not been able to understand earlier. The problems of burden bearing, both temporal and spiritual, are as old as creation, and the creature as well as the Creator has been forced to bear with them in every age.

Peter was of the opinion, according to his statement in 2 Peter 2:5, that Noah was a preacher of righteousness; in which case, God had not dealt with the wickedness of the world by means of the Flood without having first manifested the burden of His mercy through Noah that the antediluvians might repent.

Later, we find the burden of the Lord having been declared to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. How do we know? Well, in Malachi 1:1, 2 we read: "The burden of the word of the Lord to Israel by Malachi. I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord: yet I loved Jacob." Still later, Moses was charged in a very exacting manner to prepare and administer a law designed to aid all the Israelites whereby they and their generations might assist in the ultimate will, plan, or aim which was really God's burden. It was sufficient to energize the judges, prophets, and kings after Moses. Notice the beauty of Isaiah 58:14: "Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord; and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father:

for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." It was not until Jesus (the Messiah) came that the full importance or significance of the Lord's burden was revealed.

Jesus not only revealed His Father's will, but He became the first in history to be able to bear the whole burden of His heavenly Father in taking upon Himself the sin of all mankind who would accept Him as the Son of God, repent, be baptized, and follow Him.

It is not the purpose of this article to describe in detail the extraordinary perfection of this unusual Burden Bearer, but to point to Him as the standard of excellence by which all who share in such a desire should strive to pattern. Paul said in Ephesians 4:13, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ." It would seem that Jesus poured out the whole burden of His being in the few words recorded in Matthew 11:28-30: "Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." This statement, though hard for us, was easy for Jesus to understand. He knew that His own burden grew lighter as He bore the burdens of others. We are prone to feel that the opposite is preferable.

Following the master Burden Bearer came the apostles. Of that group, Paul felt that he was the most heavily burdened. He was quite aware that his opinion of himself would sound like boasting, but history indicates otherwise. If we would boast as Paul did I think we might be justified. Let us notice what he said: "By the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I laboured more abundantly than they all: yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me" (1 Cor. 15:10). Paul had many burdens, and some of them were very grievous to bear, but in his own opinion none of them could be compared to those of his Lord and Master. He said, "I am determined to make known nothing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified" (1 Cor. 2:2, Diag.). Paul's Epistles are monuments to his burdens well borne.

Stephen bore his burden in such a zealous manner that he became the first martyr. According to Fox's Book of Martyrs, and to other historians, we may well believe that there were millions who were willing to join the kindred dust of Stephen because of their having been inspired by the same spirit which prompted Peter to say, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you' (1 Peter 1:3, 4). It is gratifying to believe that there are those today whose faith would impel them, if necessary, to be numbered among the martyrs, but, even though it is commendable to be willing to die for Jesus, is it not of first importance to all Christians that they be determined to 'live' for Him?

John was by no means the least of the great burden bearers. He also has a stately monument to his memory. In closing his Gospel, in the last verse, he said, "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." What a wonderful tribute to the burden which Jesus bore, and to John's ability to estimate it! Perhaps

John would be surprised to know the extent to which the world has been filled with books relating merely to what is known of the deeds of Jesus. I am inclined to believe that there was more real faith among believers when there were less books than there are at present. However, I would not discourage the making of many books, but would rather discourage the indifference of many Christians in not being willing to read more good books than they do. John appeals to our sense of responsibility in Revelation 2:7, saving, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." What may we overcome? Perhaps foremost of many things, our lethargy or indifference in being unwilling to become active burden bearers. How! Well, how about doing some fishing or hunting? Where? Anvwhere, everywhere! Who? Anyone. When? There is no closed season. License? None needed.

DOING IT

By Gerald L. Cooper

POR some time, like many others, I have been intending to write an article for THE RESTITUTION HERALD, I even went so far as to write the editor, telling him that I intended to write "soon." I am sure he will pardon me if I quote his answer to me: "The only way for the Church of God to publish a paper is to do it." As soon as I read those words the scripture, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," came to mind. I was unable at first to find the verse, but finally located it in Ecclesiastes 9:10. Note the entire verse: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." When I read it all I realized that there always comes a time when one cannot do what he desires to do. Our only opportunity to serve lies in the present time. If we wait until later we may not then be here.

Christ, the great Teacher, gave us two good lessons in regard to excuses. One was His parable of the great supper, the account of which is found in Luke 14:16-20. A man made a great supper and invited many. However, when he sent his servant to tell those whom he had invited that supper was ready, all began to make excuses. One had bought a piece of ground; and had to go to see if it was any good; another had purchased a yoke of oxen and wanted to see if they were good oxen; and still another had been recently married and, I suppose, wanted to go on his honeymoon. These were lame excuses, but men are even today using similar excuses. When men are called on to serve the Lord they are invariably too busy with something else. In my own case, as editor of the Berean page, I first thought that I was too busy with that to write for other columns of THE RESTITUTION HERALD. However, I soon realized that being busy was just an excuse. Search yourselves! See if the excuse you have for not doing something (it may be other than writing for THE HERALD, such as going to Sunday school or worship services) is valid.

The other lesson that Christ gave which warns against making excuses was His parable of the talents. You are familiar with it. The part I wish to consider is the excuse made by the servant who had been intrusted with only one talent. He had not properly invested the talent (a piece of money) as had his fellow servants, but had hid it. Here is his excuse: "Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed; and I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth, lo, here thou hast that is thine" (Matt. 25:24, 25). We are intrusted with various duties for the Lord, but sometimes we do not do them. Our excuses sound like the one the unprofitable servant made. Some people are apparently afraid to do anything for the Lord, lest they do the wrong thing. The man who sits idly by, and doesn't try, is making a greater mistake than the man who tries and fails. "The Lord helps those who help themselves" is a trite expression, but a true one. The end of the parable about the unprofitable servant who did nothing, lest he displease, reads as follows: "Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth" (Matt. 25:30).

Don't make excuses when you are asked to serve the Lord, whether it be in writing for The Restitution Herald or in serving in any other way. Do your best, and I am certain that the Lord will bless you for it. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," and with the help and might of God in whom all should put their trust.

RETROSPECTIVE

By J. W. Cooper

WHEN Brother S. E. Magaw was at Ripley attending the Illinois Quarterly Conference last March, he asked me to write for The Herald. I pleaded inability, and before I could get straightened around with another excuse he referred me to the parable of the talents. Naturally, the first thing I thought of was the one in the parable who had the one talent, and his fate for not at least trying to use it. While I feel that my talent is very limited, especially in writing anything of value, I wondered if something along the line of a review of the ministers who have in the years past visited and preached at Ripley would be interesting. Since the Ripley church is one of our oldest, and since it has had its ups and downs as have other churches, you may read in its history the history of your own church.

What is written is being done altogether from memory, and not from records. So if the order given in which the ministers came to Ripley is amiss, or if any who ever visited us is omitted, it will be an oversight and not intentional.

J. M. Stephenson was the first minister that I remember, although there were some before his time. Bro. Stephenson was a great orator, and seemed to enjoy the work as he would sometimes preach for an hour and a half. He ended his days here and is buried at Ripley. His grave is marked by a little monument erected a number of years ago by the Illinois State Conference. If you have never read Stephenson's book, "God's Plan of Salvation," you should obtain it and read it, if at all possible.

The next minister to come here to preach was Brother John Foore. We had no musical instrument in the church at that time, and "Uncle John" would lead the singing. He was of German descent, and spoke with an accent.

Brother J. S. Hatch, a large man with a large message, was the next in order to appear here. I wasn't much interested in spiritual things at that time, but I remember a point that he made in a sermon on the Tabernacle and the service connected with it. He showed how the high priest went into the Most Holy Place alone to offer sacrifice for the people, and they were not allowed to enter. He closed by exhorting his hearers to be careful about saying that they were going where their High Priest was, at death. Rather, Christians must wait until He comes again for them.

The next minister to visit Ripley was Brother D. M. Hudler, living at that time, I think, at Muscatine, Iowa. He was a splendid speaker, well versed in the Scriptures, and rather enjoyed an argument on a point of doctrine. There were some here of other denominations that believed in defending their side of it, and it naturally followed that Brother Hudler had several arguments. Of course, I always thought Brother Hudler was the victor.

Brother Foore and Brother Hudler continued to occasionally visit Ripley for several years, as have a number of our other ministers of whom I will speak later. Many of them are still active in the work.

Just prior to 1900 (I fail to recall the exact date) Brother F. L. Austin came and held a series of meetings. He interested many with his knowledge of the Scriptures and his ability to easily and quickly impart his knowledge to others. He has held several protracted meetings here, and had charge of the services at the rededication of our building in November, 1930.

Brother W. H. Wilson was here at one time to hold meetings. I recall that he could explain in a very able manner the meaning and teaching of the image of the King's dream as recorded in Daniel 2. Brother Graham, also, was here about this time—the beginning of the present century.

In March, 1902, Brother L. E. Conner first put in his appearance at our growing church. This was back in the old days when people filled an ordinary sized building in their anxiety to hear the truth. On the opening night of his meetings there was one of those crowds, and the people had been waiting over a half hour when Brother Conner arrived. The very first words he said were: "The reason we didn't get here sooner is that we didn't start sooner!" He had come with a brother who lived out about three miles from the church. We then had only clay roads, and they were very muddy. This series of meetings is perhaps more indelibly impressed on my mind than any of the others, for it was at this time my wife and I united with the church, as did several others.

Brother W. L. Crowe, then of Chanute, Kansas, was the next to help in the work here.

Brother S. J. Lindsay was the next to visit us. If I remember correctly, his first sermon at Ripley was on "Christian Love." During this series of meetings Brother Lindsay suggested some changes in the method of our church work, which ultimately led to a desire for higher ideals, and closer Christian living and fellowship. As he continued coming he would sometimes bring Brother O. J. Allard of Iowa with him, and sometimes Brother Allard would come by himself. When they were here together it was especially interesting, as they would divide the time. They sang some for us, which was enjoyed very much.

At this point, I wish to tell you of Sister Anna Drew's visit to Ripley in the interest of the Berean society. We had a good sized local society at that time, and considerable interest was manifested. Sister Drew was the Illinois president at that time. Her presence and suggestions were instructive and very much appreciated. The society continued to function in a way—sometimes up, sometimes down—until some five years ago when it was voted out.

Brother G. E. Marsh first visited Ripley about the year 1914, and has been here several times since. At his first meetings he was greeted with large crowds. I remember two or three other adults and myself sitting on the platform with the children in order to accommodate the people that came to hear him.

Brother J. W. Williams moved to Ripley in the fall of 1919, and became our first resident pastor. His family and mine visited back and forth considerably, and we enjoyed many hours together. Brother Williams was a good preacher, a good neighbor, and a good gardener.

Soon after this our church began to grow rapidly as Brother F. E. Siple began to make monthly visits to us as Illinois evangelist. He baptized a great many, some of whom had been members of other churches but who saw, through his preaching, the necessity of rebaptism. I always liked to consider Brother Siple as our pastor, even though he was preaching for other churches, also. Sometimes he was unable to make his appointments, and would send other ministers. According to our memory Brothers Melville Lyon, Paul Johnson, and Harry Sheets all preached here during this time, and Brother Johnson has returned several times. Also, during Brother Siple's leadership we had the opportunity of meeting two products of Minnesota, Brothers Randall and Magaw, who each held meetings with Brother Siple. Brother Magaw has since been with us some.

In the fall of 1930 Brother Paul Hatch visited the church once a month, and it was during this time that our church was renovated and rededicated as has been mentioned previously. While we were repairing our building the Methodist Episcopal Church graciously opened their building to us.

We are now down to just a few years ago, and the details are getting harder for me to remember. (Those who are past sixty years of age will bear me out on this, I think.) In the fall of 1930 some of the members of my family moved to Oregon, Illinois, so that my son Gerald could attend the Bible Training School there. When they returned home at Christmas time they brought Brother C. E. Lapp with them, and he started coming regularly to Ripley. After about a year of coming once a month he moved here, and became our resident pastor. It was while he lived here that he married. (Please turn to page 11)

Seeing Jesus

By Virginia Smith

JUST as certain Greeks of long ago came to Philip, saying, "Sir, we would see Jesus" (John 12:21), so certain people of today are desiring the same thing. As Jesus is not today here in person, the only way people can see Him is in the lives of Christians. Our lives are like mirrors. Jesus is in our lives, so we reflect Him to others. People who never read the Word of God are daily reading our lives. "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost" (2 Cor. 4:3).

There are children in our large cities who daily come in contact with Christian men and women, though these children continue to be as ignorant of Christ and the way of salvation as a child in the wilds of Africa. Why? Because the Christians with whom they meet have their light hid under a bushel! How sad it will be at the judgment to hear Jesus say, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me" (Matt. 25:45).

Jesus said to His disciples, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid" (Matt. 5:14). Again, He said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:16). We must open wide the doors of our hearts; we must let Jesus fill our hearts and lives before we can show Him to others, "for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

The disciples were spending precious time as they sat at Jesus' feet, and as they walked with Him beside the Sea of Galilee and learned His word. One of the most valuable things we can do today is to study the Word of God. As we study the Bible we learn more and more of Jesus, and we must personally know Him before we can show Him to others.

Peter speaks of the "hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price" (1 Peter 3:4). The inside of man is what God covets. God must inhabit that in order to control the outside. Only that man is strong, and only he has genuine ambition who can lay down the common ambitions of life—and life itself if need be—that the poorest and vilest of his fellow men may be lifted up to God. Let our lives be so pure that wherever we go, or wherever we may chance to be, others may see Christ Jesus in us.

Let us pause for a moment to consider our lives. Are we living each day as we should? When others look at our lives, can they see Christ Jesus, the pure and the good? Remember that our lives are like mirrors, into which others are looking each day. If we fail to do our duty someone may wander away. But if we live each moment for Jesus, and follow the path He trod, we may cause many of our fellow men to enter the kingdom of God.

The Significance of the Tabernacle

Article Six

By A. E. Griffiths

WIIY was the veil placed before the ark of the covenant, and what did it represent? In the first place, it was made of pure linen with cherubim worked into it with purple, blue, and scarlet. We know that white linen represents righteousness, so if the veil had been made of pure white linen without any other ornamentation it would have more correctly represented an angel, and Christ was not an angel. However, having purple, blue, and scarlet woven into it foreshadowed the preparation of an Adamic man. If the veil had been all scarlet it would have simply represented sinful man, and that would not symbolize Christ. Christ was "made of a woman, made under the law" (Gal. 4:4). He was a higher production than an ordinary man. Matthew 1:20 says, "That which is conceived in her (Mary) is of the Holy Ghost." In Luke 1:35 we read a similar description of Jesus. He was a specially prepared man, and not the product of an accident. He was the express provision of divine workmanship. Paul says, "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteonsness, and sanctification, and redemption" (1 Cor. 1:30). The searlet entered into the veil's make-up and signified sin (Isa. 1:18; Rev. 17:3). Although Christ was sinless, yet He was subject to sin the same as all men are. The blue, of course, foreshadowed Christ's healing abilities. "With his stripes we are healed" (Isa. 53:5). He was made the same flesh as all men. "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same" (Heb. 2:14). The veil, therefore, represented the flesh which separates us from God. At Christ's death the veil of the Temple was rent in twain, signifying He had shown the way into the presence of God, though Christ did not stand in God's presence until later when He ascended to heaven. To sum up the component parts of the veil we have white linen for righteousness, purple for royal office as king of the whole earth, searlet for sinful nature and sacrifice, blue as a healer of all our sins, and the cherubim figures as bearers of the divine glory. This is all centered in the record of Hebrews 10:19, 20: "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." The veil was held up by four pillars made of wood covered with gold and standing in silver sockets. This is the same symbolism as the other pillars. They, no doubt, stood for four men, and who might they more likely be than Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, the authors of the four gospels? James, Cephas, and John are referred to as pillars in Galatians 2:9. We now leave the veil and enter into the Holiest.

As we stated in our first article, God commenced at the ark in giving His instructions because it represented Himself, and gradually worked outward toward man, but we have taken these particulars in the opposite direction the same as Moses did, and have gradually worked toward God, which brings us now to the ark. The significance of the Tabernacle is a prophecy of Christ. We must remember that under the law Israel was kept at a distance from God by the routine ordinances, but Christ was to come and show the way to God by a more direct route. Jesus told the woman of Samaria, "The hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. . . . But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth" (John 4:21, 23). One does not now have to go to the Temple or the Tabernacle to worship, because Christ has fulfilled the prophecy and put us in direct communication with God through Himself. Paul makes this clear in this statement: "The Holy Ghost this signifying, that the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing" (Heb. 9:8). We must not limit ourselves to thinking only of Christ in this prophecy. The individual Christ is primarily the head of the body, and the full purpose of God will not be manifested until the Bridegroom and His bride will be immortal and in occupation of the earth to the glory of God. With this broader view let us study the ark. Both in form and utility it was a container, being in the form of a box made of wood and covered inside and out with pure gold. This box was three feet nine inches long, twenty-seven inches wide, and twentyseven inches deep. Inside this were placed the two tables of stone on which were the Ten Commandments written by the finger of God (Ex. 31:18). Later were added the rod of Aaron that budded and the golden pot of manna (Heb. 9:4). The lid of this box was called the mercy seat. This was made of pure gold, and it had on each end a figure of a cherub. They faced each other with wings outstretched, covering the mercy seat. All these descriptions will be found in Exodus 25:10-22. Like the other articles in the holy place, it had four gold rings, two on each side, through which two wooden poles covered with gold were inserted by which to carry it.

Now, let us consider the meaning of these things. The ark was essentially a container, and was the shadow of the future body of Christ in whose hearts is enthroned the will of God, represented by the tables of the law. The idea of an ungodly person coming in contact with God is preposterous. The ark proved this fact. It is the obedience to God's law that makes man beautiful and well-pleasing to God. Even Christ Himself "learned . . . obedience by the

The Story of Two Sons and Two Axes

By B. L. Hunt

AM reminded of the story of a man who had two sons whom he asked to go to the woods to cut wood. The first took his axe and departed, without first having fitted his axe for the work. The second son took his axe and first sharpened it. When they began to work the first son had difficulty cutting wood, while the second son did his work easily, because he had prepared for the work. When noon came the first son was tired out and had cut only a little wood, while the second son had a large pile of wood and was not nearly so tired.

Let us compare the two axes to the true doctrine of Christ and to the way it is taught by the churches of the world. The first son's axe is the common doctrine of the orthodox churches, full of nicks—the nicks representing the errors of the doctrines of men, such as the transmigration of the soul, and the errors concerning heaven and hell. The second son's axe represents the true doctrines of Christ, clear cut, keen, sharp, and without a nick. The doctrines that the apostles taught were the true and only doctrines whereby we may be saved.

"Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye erucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:10-12).

It is only through Jesus Christ and His doctrine that we can expect to gain salvation. So we see the importance of accepting and believing the true doctrine.

In Galatians 1:6-8 we read, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel (or doctrine) of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." We cannot, by any stretch of our imagination, allow ourselves to accept any other gospel (or doctrine) lest we, in trying to save our lives shall lose them.

Let us do as the wise son, and use the axe that is sharp (representing the doctrine of Christ), so that we can do our work (to follow Christ) in the most efficient manner. That means that we must not be satisfied, even after we have been baptized, for that is only the beginning, but each must "study to shew (himself) approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). The only right way to do this is to intelligently study the Word of God, proving scripture by scripture. We should remember that the Bible was nearly four thousand years in the making, and was written not by one man, but by many, and then only by inspiration of God.

Galatians 1:7 reads, "There be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ." Peter calls them "false prophets" in 2 Peter 2:1, saying, "There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction." Please notice that Peter says there "shall be false teachers." He prophesied of a condition not then existing, but of a condition yet to come. Likewise, if we but turn to 2 Timothy 3:2, we find that Paul in speaking of the last days says, "Men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers"—the very condition brought about by these same false teachers spoken of by Peter.

Again referring to the writings of Paul, we find him speaking of "false teachers" in these words: "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron" (1 Tim. 4:1, 2). This is also a prophecy which is being fulfilled before our very eyes. It is a condition that exists because many teachers, like the first son in the story, are using an axe that is full of nicks.

In 1 Timothy 6:1-5 Paul gives us a bit of good advice in these words: "Let as many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed. And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren; but rather do them service, because they are faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. These things teach and exhort. If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself."

John 5:39 says, "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me."

Let us see to it, then, that our axe is not full of nicks, but sharp and able to do good work. We shall then have the praise of God, which is like a pearl of great price.

FOR THE MORTAL MATHEMATICIAN

By John Mercer

ADDITION:

A body plus God's breath equal a living soul. (Gen. 2:7.) A body plus God's power equal a living soul. (Rom. 13:1.) A body plus God's spirit equal a living soul. (Job 27:3.)

SUBTRACTION:

A body minus God's breath equal death. (Psalm 146:4.)

A body minus God's power equal death. (Rom. 13:1.)

A body minus God's spirit equal death. (Eccl. 12:7.)

MULTIPLICATION AND DIVISION:

Clay times water equal mud. Divide the two parts, and the mud is not, but again there are clay and water. A very similar thing happens when God's power or spirit in the form of breath is divided from the body: the living soul is not, but there is a body to again return to clay and there is also the breath of life which returns to God who gave it. (Cp. Eccl. 12:7.)

things which he suffered" (Heb. 5:8). Therefore, the law of God in the ark represented God's commands to us indelibly written in our hearts, even as David said, "The law of his God is in his heart; none of his steps shall slide" (Psalm 37:31).

The next article contained in the ark was Aaron's rod that budded. This stood for the principle of divine choice and appointment. It originated in the rebellion of Korah against Moses (Num. 16:1-3). This is a very common mistake made today by the majority of people. The worldly churches are today full of self-righteous people. So many are referred to as good, when there is no such person. "There is none righteous, no not one" (Rom. 3:10). The fact that a dried up rod should bud and blossom showed a miracle had been performed, and by this act the tribe of Levi was divinely proclaimed as the tribe that should furnish the priesthood. When there is a choice to be made it is God that does the choosing, not man. God rules even over bad men, as stated in Daniel 4:17: "The most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men." We cannot escape from God.

There is another important element in the budded rod. It was the shadow of a dead branch brought back to life. Christ is referred to as a BRANCH in Zechariah 6:12, and after the murmuring of the people had killed Him, God brought Him back to life. It was the murmuring of the people of Korah that caused the dead branch to be laid in the Tabernacle in the first place. So we get here a symbol of the resurrection without which God's plan of salvation could not have been accomplished. The budding rod lying in the ark foreshadowed the resurrection of the saints. Christ being already raised, our hearts are tuned to that hope of our own resurrection.

There was still one more thing in the ark, the golden pot of manna which was a sample of the food God provided forty years for Israel in the wilderness. This reminds us that God provided the food for the Israelites, and without it they would have perished. Does not God today provide His people with food, also? Beyond that, Christians receive spiritual food through God's Word, and without that we could not hope for eternal life. Christ made this clear to John on the Isle of Patmos, saying, "To him that overcometh will I give to cat of the hidden manna" (Rev. 2:17). Again, when speaking of the Mosaic manna, Jesus said, "I am the living bread that came down from heaven" (John 6:51). This clearly illustrates that there is no future life outside of Christ, and yet most people think that their souls go to heaven, and that they do not need a resurrection of the body.

Now, regarding the ark or container itself: it was made of wood, which represents mortality, covered with pure gold, which stands for a superior condition, immortality. That conforms to Paul's words in 2 Corinthians 5:2: "For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." Notice, Paul was not looking for a new condition entirely, but was expecting the same body with a new clothing to it, and that clothing will be immortality, or eternal life. The cherubim on the mercy seat represented the glory of God in the highest, and the ark underneath represented good will to man. But, remember the contents of that ark only stood for obedient, Godfearing men, not everybody. At first mortal man (wood) must be covered with faith (gold), and, finally, the mortal will be covered with immortality and will rule in the kingdom of God. The crown around the edge of the mercy scat showed the majesty and kingship of God, and will be manifested when Jesus is on His throne in Jerusalem, ruling the earth with His saints.

The mercy seat was pure gold, showing a finer nature than the ark itself. That portrayed Christ, the Mediator, who was without sin and was fit to be present at the very point where God showed His glory, between the cherubim. The blood of the sacrifice sprinkled on the mercy seat by the high priest spoke of the blood which Jesus gave for the sins of the people—the whole thing redounding to the glory of God. The poles covered with gold by which the ark was carried spoke of the pilgrim stage in which we are now living, and the fact that these poles were not to be removed showed that when we once learn the truth we must not withdraw from it. "And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke 9:62).

This completes the description of the ark, but there was still the golden censer used in this compartment on the day of atonement, in which the high priest burned incense with coal from the altar of sacrifice. This represented prayer according to the way God had commanded. On one occasion Nadab and Abihu substituted fire from another source, and they were at once struck dead as a lesson to those remaining. The fact that the fire had to come from the altar of sacrifice foreshadowed that prayer has to be offered through Christ who made the great atoning sacrifice. For that reason we close our prayers today with the words: "in the name of Jesus Christ, our Savior." The incense had to be broken small, showing we must pray always (Luke 18:1), and not offer prayer at one time and then forget to render thanks when we are doing well. Prayer is mostly thanksgiving to God for all His mercies to us. Prayer will always be in order, even in the kingdom age when praise will be continually offered to God for all His bountiful blessings.

All of the Training Class of that year will remember the time they came here and were caught in a snow storm. Nevertheless, each had a turn at preaching in our church. Those who spoke at that time were Brothers C. E. Lapp, John Denchfield, C. A. Smead, Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., J. R. LeCrone, and Sister Lucille Appleby.

After four and one half years of work, Brother Lapp was succeeded by Brother Krogh, who was our pastor for three years. During his pastorate Brother Grover Gordon held meetings for us, as did Brother T. A. Drinkard. Brother Drinkard had been engaged several years previously for a series of meetings, but circumstances prevented his coming at that time.

Our present pastor is Brother Wilsie McKnight, one of our younger ministers. Our church is proud of the way it has always encouraged the younger men. Our last three pastors have practically obtained their start in our church.

I do not want to forget to mention that one of our ablest evangelists is a native of our community and was first baptized into our group here. I refer to Brother James W. McLain, at present state evangelist for Indiana.

I can hardly close this review without mentioning my son Gerald, who has frequently supplied for Brothers Lapp and Krogh, and who preached his first sermon to his home church. Gerald is at present the pastor of the Church of God at Eden Valley, Minnesota. I am indeed thankful that he chose the profession he did, and I pray that he and all the younger ministers may grow in grace and knowledge, rightly dividing the Word of truth. We need more young men, for we know in season, if the Lord tarries, that many of our older ministers will be compelled to pay the penalty of Adam's sin.

In the thirty years that I have been associated with the brotherhood at Ripley I have seen many changes, and have made many mistakes. However, I have never regretted that I made the start, and am trying to live that I may have a share in the glory that will be revealed in our Savior when He comes.

In my experiences here at the Ripley church I have been led to see the necessity of a resident pastor. Protracted meetings are very good, but it is the regular work that counts in an organized body of believers.

If I have forgotten to mention any brother that has preached at Ripley I beg your pardon in advance, for, as I stated at the beginning, it has been written from memory.

I hope to meet a number of the brethren at the General Conference this summr, but if I do not, may we all meet where there is "no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying."

see margin.) It will start as the least of all kingdoms. (Dan. 2:35; Matt. 13:31, 32.) It will be the kingdom of Judah restored. (Acts 1:6; Ezek. 21:25-27.)

Watch the Jews and the Holy Land. In Daniel 2:35, 44, 45, we find that God's kingdom will destroy the toe kingdoms, and in Jeremiah 51:20 we find these words: "Thou (Israel) art my battle axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms." So, the nation of Israel, God's kingdom, will be used by God to destroy these Gentile nations, thus showing that that nation under the reign of Christ and the bride will be the one to bring righteousness and peace to the world when spring shall come to all the earth. "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" (Num. 14:21).

In my next article I shall write about the glories of the coming kingdom of God.

with the Word of God, that he may be able to teach others who in turn may be able to pass on the good news. The question often comes up, Is it wrong to join worldly organizations, such as the Masons, Odd Fellows, etc.? The best answer to this is to call attention to the fact that if a Christian is doing his full duty to the church, he will have no time left to spend on them. Too many people use the church only as a social center, making their boast that they know nothing about the Bible. What a pity that such mistaken ideas prevail in the minds of many. We have known men to join a church for political and business advantage. All this is wrong, of course. But the wheat and the tares must grow together until the time of harvest when the tares will be gathered out and burned as chaff.

The true members of the body of Christ will be found much in prayer, and when the hour of assembly is at hand they will be in their places to give or to receive instruction. With David they will say, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go up to the house of the Lord."

Bereans at Work!

The following was received the other day from a Berean in Cleveland, Ohio, and speaks for itself:

"The young people's class of the Cleveland Bereans have been studying the lessons for youth in the Berean Bible Studies, Book IV. As they are a course in 'Applied Proverbs' at 'Solomon College,' some of the members earried out the college course idea by writing themes. . . . We enjoy the paragraphs 'Bereans at Work,' and think we should have more of them. . . . We in Cleveland know very little of the Bereans throughout the country, and would like to know more about them and the work of the National Berean Society."

Thank you, Cleveland Bereans, for your cooperation.

Go Straight

Eunice Hawkins, Cleveland, Ohio

(Read Proverbs 4:25-27 in connection with this article.)

Those of us who have studied geometry have learned that a line that has the same direction throughout its length is called a straight line, and that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points.

Christians have an aim or, better still, a goal to reach, and in order to reach this goal we should take the most direct route. There must be no obstacles in the way. We don't want to have to reach it in a triangular fashion. That is, we must avoid all angles, such as corruptness or evils of any sort which would eventually lead us to temptation. "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away" (Prov. 4:14, 15).

One is either weak or strong. Oh, how much better it is to be a member of the latter class, for we find in Proverbs 4:19 that "the way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble," and in 1 Samuel 2:9 that God "will keep the feet of his saints, and the wicked shall be silent in darkness." Also, in John 12:35 we read, "Yet a little while is the light with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you: for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth."

We know that it is necessary that Christians work and mingle with the world, yet we must not be part of it. What temptations we meet in our everyday lives! We are told in Titus 2:12 that, "denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world." And in 1 John 2:15, 16 we read, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." This, you say, is hard to abide by. But Christians have the promise that "he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." Let us, therefore, make ourselves clean, put away the evil of our doings, learn to do well, and seek judgment (Isa. 1:16, 17).

Commencement?

In every section of the country there are countless graduation exercises that have been held or are to be held soon. We know of a great many readers of our Berean page who are graduating either from grade school, high school, or college. It is to them that this message is directed.

To the grammar school graduate I would say, "Do not let anyone tell you that there is no need of you going to high school. There are scarcely any who will tell you so today, but there are some. Ask anyone who had an opportunity to go to high school and didn't accept it, if he wishes he had gone, and almost without exception he will regret that he didn't go.

Are you graduating from high school? If so, you think that you are pretty "smart," don't you? Well, you are, but not nearly so much as you might think. Your life has only started, and the main thing that you have to think of is what you are going to do. Some of you will continue your schooling. Watch out lest some cynical college lead you astray from God. Remember also that God needs workers in His field, both boys and girls. You may say that you have no talent for that. Why not go to the summer Training School to find if you have talent for the Lord's work? If you have, plan to develop it. If you do not definitely make the Lord's work your work, remember that in whatever you do, you can glorify your Lord by doing your work well, and "doing all to the glory of God."

If you are graduating from college you are indeed commencing your life, and will soon be facing stark realities. Your lot is a happy and envious one. You have something that all people are not privileged to have. Use your knowledge to some good purpose, not flaunting it in the face of those less fortunate than yourself. "Doing all to the glory of God," applies to you also.

Your fellow Bereans congratulate you, and pray that you may have the best of everything in whatever path of life you choose to follow.

"Let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ" (Phil. 1:27).

Scripture: 1 Cor. 1:1-3, 10, 11; 4:14-21; 1 Thess. 5:12-15.

Called to Be Saints

We are called to be members of the bride of Christ, and are definitely named "the church of God," "a people for his name," "a peculiar people."

Paul tells us to have no divisions among us, agreeing in all important truths. If the people who gather at church meetings and services do so with reverence for God, and are prompted by a desire to worship Him, then the spirit of prayer surely will help keep that group unified. There one is sure to find a group who truly worships God, and not a mortal leader.

Because of "the hope" our churches of God have, we can never feel we have done enough for the Master. We must ever strive to be better in word, thought, and deed, as do all of the individuals who help make up our churches.

Paul did a great deal to build up the churches he organized. He never wished or allowed the people to see him any more clearly than they did Christ. He ever "preached Christ" to them.

A Cannibal's Grandson

Have you read stories of cannibals—those wild people who eat other people? They know nothing of God or what is right or wrong.

This grandson of a cannibal is a Christian. There is a full-page picture of Ratu Meli in the Golden Stories book. Do you have a copy? Write to me about the books you own,

This man is black. He lives on the Fiji Islands. In one hand he has a large club with which his grandfather used to kill people. In his other hand he holds a Bible. In his story he tells us about his people. Ratu Meli loves his people, and is so happy they have been told of Jesus and His soon return.

What do you suppose he says his new club is? The Bible, which is "God's club that kills sin."

The Bible always changes people when they read it. If we read it every day it will help make us better, too.

Copy the three-layer pie puzzle on a sheet of paper if you do not wish to cut your HERALD.

Cut vertically into twenty strips. You will then have twenty strips with three letters on each strip, one above the other. Rearrange the strips so that you can read the sentence along the horizontal lines. There are dots between the words. You will then have a verse from our lesson today. Which verse is it? Let me know how you like these puzzles.

Five more today join our ECE Club parade. They are Robert Eaton, Cleveland, Ohio; and Richard, Robert, Mary, and Bruce Savage, Waite Park, Minnesota. We trust they will receive great pleasure and help from their page, and be loval members.

Following is a spring poem for your scrapbook:

Nature's Hired Man

Diggin' in the earth, Helpin' things to grow, Foolin' with the rake, Flirtin' with the hoe;

Waterin' the plants, Pullin' up the weeds, Gatherin' the stones, Puttin' in the seeds;

On your face and hands, Pilin' up the tan— That's the job for me, Nature's hired man! Wages best of all Better far than wealth Paid in good fresh air, And a lot of health.

Never any chance, Of your gettin' fired, And when night comes on Knowin' why you're tired.

Nature's hired man! That's the job for me, With the birds and flowers For society.

Let the other fellow For the dollar scratch I'm quite contented With my garden patch.

MICHIGAN ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Jesus said, "Whosoever therefore shall con-fess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven." Let us unite in confessing our Savior at the Annual Michigan Conference from June 12-18, at the Southlawn Church, Grand Rapids.

Elder S. E. Magaw of Oregon, Ill., will be the guest speaker. The program includes Bible classes for all ages to be held twice daily from Monday through Saturday, as well as sermons each evening and Sunday morning and afternoon.

The business meeting will be held following the Saturday afternoon Bible class, and Com munion following the Sunday afternoon ser-

Bro. Magaw's sermons, both prophetic and doctrinal, will help you.

As far as you are concerned, your conference success depends upon your cooperation.

IOWA SPRING CONFERENCE

The Iowa Spring Conference held at Hickory Grove May 14 was a profitable one. The attendance and interest were very good.

The Sunday school classes were in charge of Bro. H. S. Hunt, Bro. C. E. Lapp, and Sr. ayme Jones. The morning sermon, "The evenfold Gospel," was given by Bro. J. W Williams. A short business meeting was held by the Conference board. Bro. Sydney E. Magaw and Bro. S. J. Lindsay are planning to attend the Annual Conference this year. Other teachers will be Bros. Williams, Hunt, and Sr. Mayme Jones. A Mother's Day address was given by Bro. C. E. Lapp, and Sr. Lapp favored us with an accordion solo. We also enjoyed two vocal solos by Patty Bean and Margaret Fish.

Bro. Lapp has held a series of meetings at Koszta, and the brethren there plan to have some more meetings conducted by Bro. Williams.

Remember the Annual Conference dates: August 22-27. We'd like to meet you there. Esther Jenkins, Cor. Secy.

Gleanings From the Field

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Slagle and daughter Beverly, of Peoria, Ill., and Mrs. Slagle's sister, Miss Streitmatter of Princeville, Ill., recently visited the office. They are hopeful of building up a work in Peoria, where a new subdivision is waiting for evangelistic work.

If interested in a camera bargain write to Bro. Arlen Marsh, 3514 Oakley Ave., S. W., Grand Rapids, Mich.

We should like to receive from our readers the names of books they have read showing the agreement between the Bible and science. Please state, too, where the books can be se-cured, and if possible give the retail price.

"I like The Restitution Herald, and try to read all that is in every paper. It is good to see the pictures."—Mrs. M. F. Cook, Winchester, Va., Rt. 2.

"We are endeavoring to help enlarge the circulation of The Restitution Herald."—F. B. McCullough, Austin, Texas.

"The Lawrenceville brethren are very fond of Bro. and Sr. Grover Gordon. Bro. Gordon will assist Bro. J. H. Anderson in a series of meetings at Brush Creek, June 4-11."—Mrs. Belle Hartman, Springfield, Ohio, Rt. 2.

"I love to read the articles in The Herald, and do not wish to be without it."—Mrs. Anna B. Eychaner, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

"Bro. and Sr. Willie Platts, Bro. and Sr. Shute and son Howard, all of Fonthill, Out.. recently called on us."—Grover Gordon.

Bro. John Eagleston, now attending conferences in the West, hopes "to land at the General Conference for the opening salutation."

"As long as one believes in the natural immortality of the soul and eternal misery for the finally impenitent, he cannot grasp God's plan of salvation, nor harmonize such views with the central teaching of the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, that God is love."—R. A. Curtis.

Sr. Eva Fletcher of Kalamazoo, Mich., recently fell, and cracked two ribs. She is staying with her daughter, Helen M. Chisholm.

Sr. Calvin Hammond, Portland, Ore., Rt. 2, writes, "We surely enjoy the good articles in The Herald. Bro. Lyon's and Bro. Drinkard's recent articles were food for thought."

The Oregon, Ill., Church of God lost a faithful member in the death of Sr. Anna Sherman. Bro. G. E. Marsh, her former pastor and a friend for over a quarter of a century, conducted her funeral service.

We were reluctant to bid farewell to our parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Magaw, and to Mr. William Birkeback, when on May 31 they returned to their homes in Minnesota. They liked Oregon, and Oregon awaits their coming again.

Now is the time to order, and we hope it is the time for you to increase your order for the third quarter Truth Seekers' Quarterly. They are in the making. How many can you use? Price: 17 cents each per quarter, or 15 cents each if three or more are ordered for the same address.

Sr. G. E. Marsh, Frances Munshaw, and Arlen Marsh accompanied Bro. G. E. Marsh on his recent trip to Oregon, Ill. It was good to see them, though but for a short time. They returned to Grand Rapids, Mich., June 2.

Bro, and Sr. S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz., arrived at their Oregon, Ill., home on June 1. The Elder is now holding a series of meetings at Delta, Ohio.

It is good to hear that Bro. J. H. Anderson, a former pastor of the Brush Creek Church of God in Ohio, is now holding a series of meetings there. Bro. Anderson was the pastor for four years, back when his children were little.

Bro. C. E. Randall assisted in the Victoria Day celebration at Fonthill, Ont., May 24.

Bro. L. E. Conner was called to Casey, Ill., on June 2 to conduct the funeral of Sr. Carrie Taylor.

"My mother from Omaha, Nebr., and my sister and two nephews from Denver, Colo., are visiting us. We have been enjoying a good visit and some side trips."—Mrs. Richard Le Crone, Woodstock, Va.

TRUTH SEEKERS' QUARTERLY

In a few more days the third quarter Truth Seekers' Quarterly will be ready for mailing. Many Sunday schools have standing orders, as have also a number of isolated members. We encourage this, as it saves correspondmany to publish. If you do not have a standing order, let us hear from you today.

Truth Seekers' Quarterly is no experiment.

It has been gaining in favor and circulation for over twelve years. It is the work of several of our writers, and by no means the work of one or two. The present staff includes, in addition to the editor: F. A. Stilson of South Bend, Ind.; Mrs. Lydia A. Railsback, also of South Bend; C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Out.; Mrs. Dorothy Demmitt of Tipp City, Ohio; and Mrs. Verna C. Thayer of Rockford, Ill. Each of these writers is especially talented for the particular work assigned. Let their messages assist you in your study of God's Word.

Place your standing order for Truth Seekers' Quarterly. It is a mistake for Sunday schools to try to "get by" with just what is positively needed. Some copies will disappear. You have visitors during the quarter who would appreciate the gift of a Quarterly. Be like the Truth Seekers' Quarterly is, missionary in spirit.

The price is 17 cents each, or 15 cents each if three or more are sent to one address. Shall we hear from you?

SUMMER BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

The second annual summer Bible Training School, sponsored by the Church of God, is to be held at Oregon, Ill., July 5 to August 13, inclusive. This six-weeks' period of intensive training is for the purpose of fitting minis-ters and lay workers alike for more effective service in the churches, Sunday schools, Bible classes, and other branches of religious activities. It is conducted on a no profit basis. The tuition fee of $30 for the entire period is barely enough to pay for room and board of the

The urgent need for more trained workers is too generally recognized to need discussion here. Through this Bible Training School each person in the entire brotherhood has a each person in the entire brotherhood has a golden opportunity to help supply that need. If you can possibly do so attend the School yourself, but if you find that impossible you can still help to make it possible for another to gain this valuable training. Though the tuition is low, that added to the transportation expenses, will be sufficient to keep some who have the desire and the ability to become who have the desire and the ability to become effective Christian workers from attending.

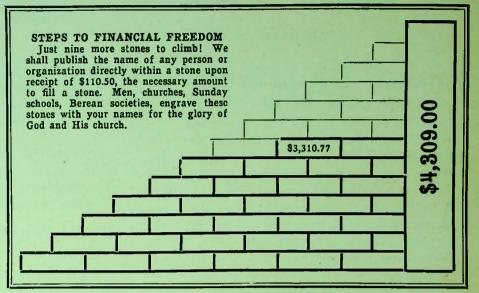

Last year the brethren of Virginia had no part, as an organization, in this wonderful work. If you have felt the need for more trained leadership in the church and are un-able to personally attend, send your contribuable to personally attend, send your contribution to your pastor at Woodstock, Va. If the amount received is sufficient we will do our utmost to find some worthy young man or woman from our home state who desires to attend. Otherwise the money will be forwarded to the proper authorities, to be used in making it possible for someone from another state to attend. This School meets a definite need. Let's get behind it, Virginia!

ANNA SHERMAN

Anna Sherman, wife of George W. Sherman, of Byron, Ill., died May 30 from burns sustained in a naphtha explosion which occurred while she was using the cleaning fluid in the basement of her home.

Sr. Sherman was born August 27, 1884, in Sr. Sherman was born August 27, 1884, in Chicago, the daughter of Martin and Mary Aslaksen. She married Samuel J. Smith in September, 1905, who died February 12, 1920. To them five children were born, all of whom survive. They are: Samuel J. of Freeport; Mrs. Dortha Hofer of Oak Park; Mrs. Harriet Opel of Detroit, Mich.; Lucille Smith and Charles Smith of Byron. Three sisters and a brother also survive. Sr. Mary A. Gesin of brother also survive. Sr. Mary A. Gesin of Oregon is a sister. In 1937 she was united in marriage with George W. Sherman, who also survives.

Sr. Sherman was known to the brotherhood of the church as Sr. Anna Smith because of her association with and labor for those who gathered at the Bible school and conference in Oregon during the years when she was head cook.

. She was a faithful mother, having labored diligently to provide for her family and to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. She was baptized at the age of fourteen by Bro. William Wilson, and she saw all her children obey the same command of our Lord. She now sleeps, awaiting the resurrection trump—the call to a more abundant

Bro. G. E. Marsh of Grand Rapids, Mich., spoke words of comfort and admonition to a large gathering of relatives and friends at Byron and at the Church of God in Oregon. Bro. S. E. Magaw assisted in the services.

LOUISE McROBERTS

Louise Ann Williams was born in Oregon Township, Ogle County, Ill., May 22, 1862. She married Samuel H. McRoberts May 23, 1880. The husband and one daughter preceded her in death. Sr. McRoberts had been a loyal member of the Church of God for thirty-two years, and was active as long as her health permitted. Her home, family, and the hope of the coming Lord were most precious to her. She fell asleep in Christ at her home in Oregon, Ill., on May 31, 1939.

Those surviving are: a daughter, Mrs. Nellie Tilton, and a son, Irvin, both of Oregon; two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Blocher of Belton, Mo., and Mrs. Catherine Swearingen of Kansas City, Mo.; three grandchildren and one greatgrandchild.

Funeral services were conducted from her home and the Oregon Church of God on June Sydney E. Magaw. 3 by her pastor.

Quarterly Conference at Eldorado

Don't forget to come. The time is Saturday afternoon and Sunday, June 24 and 25. The meeting will begin at 2:00 o'clock with preaching services at night. There will be Sunday school at 10:00, sermon at 11:00, basket dinner, afternoon services, and preaching again at night.

It gives inspiration and courage to meet and fellowship with the brethren of other localities. If you have been to a quarterly conference, come again. If you have not attended before, here is your opportunity.

Eldorado welcomes you!

Does It Make Any Difference?

We know that in many things the quality and the quantity make a vast difference in the final result.

It does make a difference what we believe when it comes to being saved and obtaining eternal life. It makes a difference whether or not we have faith. Does it make any difference how much faith we have? Some may say that we either have faith or we don't, and that you cannot measure real faith. There is a sense in which we can have a greater or lesser amount of faith, that is, the extent to which we will trust God varies somewhat.

For example: you may trust God to the extent that you would even expose your life to danger as the Apostle Paul did in order to preach the Word of God, and I might not trust God to protect me and, therefore, I would not preach. You might spend your whole time in God's service, trusting God to add unto you the necessities of this life, and I might spend all of my time personally providing for the flesh—not trusting God to do anything for me. You might give liberally to the work, trusting that God will continue your strength and help you make a living above His portion, and I might not dare give Him anything, fearing that I would not have enough for myself.

What would be the difference between you and me? The difference would be manifest in this present time and in the life to come. You would rejoice in your Lord and the security that He gives you, and I would be fearful that I might not make both ends meet. You would have a rich reward in the life to come because you had been faithful to use what God had given you, but my reward would be small because my faith had been small. I sometimes wonder if I would have any reward at all no matter what I believed if I did not have faith enough to live the kind of life God wants and to do the things for Him that He has requested?

Does it make any difference how much faith we have? It makes enough difference that we ought to be devoting much time to the increasing of our faith and that of others. God is faithful in all things, and we should be faithful in the little things that He has given us to do.

Lord, increase our faith that we might seek Thy kingdom and righteousness first, knowing that Thou wilt be faithful to us.

The Month's Answer

Because the person who tithes has a sense of obligation to God that is sacred his contribution is as regular as his income, his giving is in direct proportion as God has blessed him, and he does not miss what is used in the Lord's service because he has never counted it his own, and his conscience never hurts him.

Maybe you can find the question.

Would You Care?

Within the last few days a proclamation has gone out in one of the dictator nations that forbids the publication and distribution of all church literature. We are not anticipating such a thing in our own nation, but we question if we appreciate our blessings until they are taken from us. The things that are happening in other places are gentle reminders that we are still richly favored of God and that we should use what we have.

"And Who Is My Neighbour?"

A gentleman once said to Dr. Skinner, who was asking aid for foreign missions, "I don't believe in foreign missions. I want what I give to benefit my neighbors." "Well," said Dr. Skinner, "how much land do you own?" "About five hundred acres," was the reply. "How far down do you own it?" inquired Dr. Skinner. "Why, I never thought of it before, but I suppose I own half way through." "Exactly," said the doctor, "I suppose you do, and I want this money for the Chinese—the men whose land joins yours at the bottom."

Since the earth is a sphere, man's possessions of it must converge to a point identical with that owned by every other human being. Everyone's property joins mine. We are all neighbors.—Selected.

Time Passes Swiftly

It will soon be time to get into the old car and start to Oregon, Illinois, for the Illinois Bible School and General Conference. You may never have a better opportunity to attend than you have this year. Come and worship with us.

The Bible Training School

It is not too late to decide to come to the six-weeks' Bible Training School to be held at Oregon, Illinois, from July 5 to August 13. The three competent teachers are Brothers S. J. Lindsay, C. E. Randall, and S. E. Magaw.

Spring Dollar Day

Your dollar will still be accepted and counted in the March Dollar Day. The figure is now at one hundred twenty-three.

RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 28

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JUNE 13, 1939

NUMBER 36

THE CHURCH OF GOD AT SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

It is our pleasure to present to you a picture of Hope Chapel, the new home of the Church of God in South Bend, Indiana. It is located at the corner of Dayton and Leer Streets, where a welcome awaits you.

The progressive spirit of the South Bend brethren will be further appreciated when it is considered that their total membership is but forty-seven. For some twenty years they have been meeting in various halls, always hopeful of some day having their own church home, but never seriously doing anything about it. Recently, however, there arose a determined spirit to launch out into the deep and to let down their nets. Since then, the Lord has been filling those nets with visible blessings.

Brother F. A. Stilson writes, "For twenty years the church was practically dormant, but thanks to the stalwarts who persistently kept the group together, we have started to grow spiritually and collectively." It is not amiss to mention that Brother Stilson was one of those "stalwarts." For a more complete report of this congregation and its new outlook, turn to the "Among the Churches" section of this paper.

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."

EDITORIAL

King and President

"How are you? I'm so glad to see you." With those unfeigned words President Roosevelt clasped the hand of King George when they met at Washington, D. C., June 8, 1939. The King smiled broadly, and then presented Queen Elizabeth to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

House of Parliament

There were the cheers of 600,000 American citizens, the erash of saluting cannon. The Marine Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King." Along the mile-and-a-half route to the White House soldiers and sailors and marines-one every four feet-lined the way. At the White House the heads of earth's greatest nations are in friendly conversation.

Never before has England's king graced American soil. Never before have Constitution and Pennsylvania Avenues seen such parade. It was like a "superinauguration." The historic Potomac rose up to see, and added a better chapter to its story. But with all the solemnity, and with all the show, there was, too, the simplicity of truly great men. "How are you? I'm so glad to see you," and the smile and the hand of the King, each told a story of greatness. Understanding and feeling and agreement were there. Let no one think for a moment that the emotions of the great are stilled.

"With All the Young Lions Thereof"

There is a prophetic significance in this most friendly meeting of President and King. That neither of these men is much concerned with Ezekiel 38 is no indication that they are not fully aware of earth's perils which so surely foreshadow a terrific conflict. When that conflict comes, and the mother lion needs help, the young lions will leap the Atlantic to her rescue. Prophecy is more than a vision; it is reasonable and becomes realistic.

In spite of the Arab thorn in the flesh, Zionism lives. In spite of Britain's necessary diplomacy in the East, she sympathizes with the Jew. In spite of riots, Palestine looms big as the most logical and probable haven for those who have worse than rioting in a score of other nations. The birth pangs of Jerusalem must result in the deliverance of a new nation.

United States Capitol

"After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, . . . and they shall dwell safely all of them" (Ezek. 38:8). Then a northern confederacy "shalt think an evil thought," shall swarm against "the land of unwalled villages . . . to take a spoil" (vv. 11, 12). "Thou shalt come up against my people Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days" (v. 16).

"The merchants" will then be already supported "with all the young lions thereof," for together they challenge Gomer and Gog, roaring their warning: "Art thou come to take a spoil?" (v. 13). . . . Has America no interests in Jerusalem? Who built the Y.M.C.A. building there? And millions of Monroe-Doctrine Americans will this year catch the spirit of prophecy, a little, as they read the following quotation over the entry to the Palestine pavilion at the New York World's Fair: "If I forget thee O Jerusalem let my right hand forget her cunning."

There are two outstanding nations who have clothed and fed and given drink to the persecuted brethren of Jesus Christ the Jew. Two nations, at least, will be set ou the right when the Judge of nations comes. Those two nations have printed all the Bibles and have sent all the missionaries. It is prophetically important that America's President and Britain's King, heads of these kin nations, are "in the latter days" in most friendly conversation.

Televised

King George was televised June 10, while visiting the New York World's Fair. This was the first time in the world's history that a king was seen by television. The Queen, too, was glorified. Thousands at a distance saw them.

Science and prophecy keep pace. True, television cannot yet span the earth's curvature, but there is no particular hurry for that. The King of whom it is written, "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him," has not yet appeared. Neither is God dependent upon man's television to reveal the returning King. Rather, the blind progress of man inspires faith in the otherwise seemingly incredible truths of God. "We shall see him as he is."

Do You Believe?

By R. A. Curtis

IN MY search for truth, many years ago, I was perplexed by the conflicting testimony of religious teachers concerning man's nature and destiny. It was almost an unquestioned proclamation in that portion of Ohio where I first saw the light of day—eighty-five years ago—that man was an immaterial, immortal personality, whose conscious existence would run on endlessly with that of his deathless Creator. Being blessed with a retentive memory, I am now presenting thoughts that built up and strengthened my faith, many years ago, in solving the Scriptural problems that popular teachers so muddled up. Lest I be accused of plagiarism I mention that this style of presentation was used many years ago by a certain brother whose writing appealed to me.

Do you believe: "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7)?

Do you believe: "Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not" (Job 14:1, 2)?

Do you believe: "Man dieth, and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up: so man lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep" (Job 14:10-12)?

Do you believe: "If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands" (Job 14:14, 15)?

Do you believe: "His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not, and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them" (Job 14:21)?

Do you believe: "The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun" (Eccl. 9:5, 6)?

Do you believe: "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest" (Eecl. 9:10)?

Do you believe: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead, . . . and shall no more cover her slain" (Isa. 26:19, 21)?

Do you believe: "That there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust" (Acts 24:15)!

Do you believe: "The hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28, 28)?

Do you believe: "He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong the issues from death" (Psalm 68:20)?

Do you believe: God "will ransom them from the power of the grave" (Hosea 13:14)?

Do you believe: "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:26)?

Do you believe: "In the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe" (1 Tim. 4:10)?

Do you believe: concerning "the righteous, that it shall be well with him: for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him" (Isa. 3: 10, 11)?

Do you believe: "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23)?

Do you believe: "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began" (Titus 1:2)?

Do you believe: "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life" (1 John 2:25)?

Do you believe: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5:11, 12)?

Do you believe: "We shall not all sleep; but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:51-54)?

Do you believe: unrepentant rebels "shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal" (Matt. 25:46)?

Do you believe: their "everlasting punishment" will consist in their "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess. 1:9)?

Jesus Is Coming Again

By George M. Siple

READER, do you fully realize and appreciate the fact that Jesus is really coming back, and that very soon? He will return to this earth in a very similar manner to that in which He made His departure.

Jesus had just been explaining to the apostles that in a short time there would be a special power given to them, even the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The Jews were looking for Jesus to come to reign as King at that time, so they asked Him if He would at that time restore the kingdom to Israel. He said to them, "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight" (Acts 1:7-9).

At Christ's first coming the world rejected Him. He was the despised Nazarene, but when He comes again He will appear as "the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords" (1 Tim. 6:15).

Paul wrote in his letter to the Corinthian church, "I have espoused you to one husband that I may present you a chaste virgin to Christ" (2 Cor. 11:2). In this text Paul refers to the church as the bride. Christ is to return as the Bridegroom. There are other texts along the same line. "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

Jesus came and fulfilled the prophecies of a suffering Messiah. Is it not reasonable to believe that He will also come to fulfill the prophecies of a glorified Messiah reigning in majesty and power? Think of the many prophecies descriptive of the suffering Savior, which prophecies we have seen literally fulfilled. Do not then fail to heed divine warning by rejecting the hope of a literal fulfillment of the numerous prophecies regarding Christ's second coming, and His glorious reign upon the earth.

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:16, 17).

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth: they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5:28, 29).

"While they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven? (Acts 1:10, 11).

"The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

"Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven:

and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory" (Matt. 24:30).

Peter pleaded that "the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 1:7). He later admonished, "Rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy" (1 Peter 4:13).

In the book of Job we read, "I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God" (19:25, 26).

These references should be sufficient to prove to any unprejudiced mind that Christ's return is sure, and that it is only a question of time as to how long He will delay His coming for the good of mankind. In other words, Christ will give as many as will a chance to get into the gospel wagon before it is too late.

Christ's first coming did not mean death to the Jews, and they did not so understand it. Neither will Christ's second coming mean death to Christians, and they should not so understand it. If it were true that death brought us our reward more quickly than to await Christ's literal return, death would then be our friend, but it is never so called in the Scripture. Death is always given in the Bible as our enemy. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. . . . For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:22, 25, 26).

Nothing is promised us at death except to be at rest. John the Revelator wrote, "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith, the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them" (Rev. 14:13).

Paul did not believe in any reward at death, but he did believe in a reward to be given at Christ's return. He wrote, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:8). Likewise, Peter wrote: "When the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away" (1 Peter 5:4).

We see from these texts—and many more could be given—that our only hope of life after death lies in Christ's appearing and the resurrection from the dead, which is the time when Jesus will give us the victory over death. Oh! That all who call themselves Christians might realize the grace that is to be given us, not at death, but at the coming of Jesus Christ (1 Peter 1:13).

Nowhere in the Savior's teachings are Christians commanded to watch and prepare for death, but we are commanded to watch and be always ready for His return to this earth. Therefore, let us not be deceived by the thought that our greatest enemy, death, is the coming of Jesus. Perhaps some will say, "I don't know much about it, and don't think it makes much difference what we believe as long as we live right." Such indifference to truth is deplorable. Paul exhorted Timothy, saying, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). It is true that there are many passages in the Scriptures that are hard to understand. Some of them we shall not be able to fully comprehend as long as we are in this mortal life. However, God's Word is before us, and should be searched daily, like hunting for a hidden treasure.

One of the greatest facts of history is that Jesus the Christ has been in this world. The most important fact of the present is that Christ is in heaven interceding for us. Our greatest hope is that Christ is coming again to this earth.

Talking With God

By Harvey U. Krogh, Jr.

ONE of the Ten Commandments is: "Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." God knew the benefit of that command. One who honors his father and his mother will consult his parents as to what is best to do. He will try to please his father. He will ask assistance when he needs it.

You can always count on a child that respects his mother's wishes. That child will be true, honest, and usually successful. People sometimes worry about children, but if they could be assured that those children were honoring their fathers and mothers there would be little cause for worry.

A minister should have concern for people, and especially for those who are children of the Father in heaven. If a pastor could know they were always honoring the Father, he would not worry about their welfare.

We might speak of giving money to the Lord's service, that is, to "honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all thine increase" (Prov. 3:9), or honoring God with your presence in His house, or by studying His Word, but we wish to speak particularly of honoring God in prayer. "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me" (Psalm 50:23). If all Christians prayed as often as they should, they would likely study their Bibles more, honor God with their substance, and be more interested in the preaching of the gospel. That is why prayer is so important. You could not honor your earthly father if you went from day to day without even speaking to him. That would be greatly dishonoring him. Neither can you honor God if you do not speak with Him. There are people who do no pray from one week to the next, and their lives show it.

Maybe we don't feel the need. David felt the need. "Bow down thine ear, O Lord, hear me: for I am poor and needy" (Psalm 86:1). David, the king of Israel, was rich in gold, in servants, in armies and fortifications. What did he need? He needed to talk with God. If David was poor and needy, how much more are we!

Maybe we need to be reassured that God hears and answers prayer. We may have doubts as David apparently had at first when he cried, "Why standest thou afar off, O Lord? why hidest thou thyself in times of trouble?" (Psalm 10:1). But he spoke with more assurance later. "The Lord is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out of his land. Lord, thou hast heard the desire of the humble: thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cause thine ear to hear" (vv. 16, 17). David even addressed God as, "Thou that hearest prayer" (Psalm 65:2).

Others have found God faithful: "Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel among them that call upon the Lord, and he answered them" (Psalm 99:6). When Jesus raised Lazarus He said, "I knew that thou hearest me always." How did Jesus know? Had God told Him in a dream? No! Jesus knew that by simple experience.

If we do not know that God hears and answers prayer, we have not really prayed. And if we have not prayed, we are as orphans when we could be enjoying the blessedness of being sons of God.

Maybe we have not known the benefits of daily prayer. From personal experience we find that on the days we pray, things run more smoothly. There is more peace, and work goes along better. Is there any benefit in peace? Do you pray for strength? Do you pray that you enter not into temptation?

Synthetic Jewels

By J. R. LeCrone

FOR many centuries men have dreamed of the wealth that would be theirs could they but discover how to transform some of the baser, easily obtained elements of the world into those which, because of their desirable qualities and difficulty of possession, men call "precious." Paul lumps them all under the headings of "gold, silver, and precious stones." Wise men of all ages have searched for the alchemy by which this process could be accomplished. In more recent years men have been analyzing the composition of jewels and the manner in which they were formed, in the hope that by bringing together the necessary elements and artificially duplicating the conditions under which they were formed, man might produce them. To date, though he has produced many elever imitations, man has never been able to duplicate the work of God in this respect. So far as his attempts to produce precious metals or stones are concerned, his efforts have proved futile.

Man reasoned that if the diamond is composed of carbon which has been purified by extreme temperatures and compressed under millions of tons of pressure somewhere in the heart of the earth that he, merely by bringing the carbon together with the heat and pressure, might artificially produce diamonds. To date the nearest approach to success produced an extremely hard substance, useless as gems but valuable as an abrasive upon which to sharpen tools and with which to cut and polish genuine diamonds.

Though man has greatly improved his means for finding the precious metals and stones of the earth, they can be produced only by God Himself and by His own original processes. The imitations produced by man are easily detected under expert scrutiny and always fail to survive tests that only genuine products will survive.

Perhaps that is one reason why God speaks to His people as His jewels. The genuine jewels that have been formed according to God's plan will survive all tests and be preserved to grace the diadem of the Lord, while those produced by any other method will be destroyed by the testings. "Then they that feared the Lord, spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not" (Malachi 3:16-18).

Please note that the jewels are those who speak often one to another (forsaking not the gathering of themselves together) concerning the Lord and His will, and who strive to be of mutual help and encouragement in obeying that will. Those destroyed may be, to all outward appearances, very much the same as those preserved, but God does not leave us in ignorance regarding the reason for their destruction. "Your words have been stout against me, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, What have we spoken against thee! Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts? And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered" (Mal. 3:13-15). Though they maintain the outward appearance of religion, their heart is not in it and they regard it as of no profit. Because men observe that those who do not regard the will of God gather about themselves the greater portion of the world's goods and occupy the positions of greatest power and honor they "call the proud happy."

With such an attitude of mind it is inevitable that they will soon begin to make compromises with the world and to adopt some of its ways in order that they, too, might work wickedness and be set up and tempt God and be delivered. Their duplication may never be discovered by men, yet they have changed God's plan for producing jewels and the resulting imitations will be destroyed in the testing. "For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch" (Mal. 4:1).

"But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts" (Mal. 4:2, 3). Thus shall God distinguish between the genuine gems, made according to His plan, and the synthetic ones, prepared according to the substitute plans of mankind.

The composition of a lump of coal is practically the same as that of a diamond, yet, because the coal has never undergone the refining influence of great heat and tremendous pressure, the coal is regarded as of little value and hurns readily, while the diamond is regarded as precious and is practically indestructible.

Some of the jewelry that we see today is so obviously imitation that no one is fooled. Most people can detect

J. R. LeCrone

"ten-cent store jewelry" at a glance. Other imitations, however, are so clever that only the expert who knows the distinguishing characteristics can tell the difference.

In much the same manner, many Christians are quite obviously not what they pretend to be. Others look so much like the real thing that only God and the individual himself can tell the difference. But how can the individual himself know whether he is a real gem or only an imitation that shall be destroyed in the fire? The answer is simple. If we become Christians according to the plan laid down in God's Book of Truth, and not according to some substitute plan that men said was just as good; if we willingly submit to the various processes of preparation that God requires rather than trying to invent ways to circumvent them; if we reject every effort of man to change the ordinances of God in order to make them easier and less humiliating for us, then we may know that we are genuine.

We know of people who have rejected part of God's plan of salvation as being unnecessary and have changed other parts to suit their own convenience, yet they appear to live lives that are just as clean, useful, honest, and sincere as those of people who insist upon keeping all the commandments of Jesus and the apostles and making themselves thoroughly familiar with the Scriptures. So far as we can see they are just as "good" and may even sparkle a little brighter than those who cling to God's plan. Yet, when we remember how badly synthetic jewels always fare when put to the test we cannot but feel very sorrowful when we consider their position in the day when God shall make up His jewels.

Only God holds the formula for transforming a base and practically useless material into something useful and precious. He tells us quite plainly in His Book how that an ordinary man who is condemned to death because of his base, sinful nature can be transformed into a special treasure of the Lord, pure, useful, and indestructible. We urge that you check the following formula against your own Bible. Reject any part of it that you find to be false, add any missing parts, and then follow it to the letter.

Take one man.

Bring him to the realization that he is in sin and condemned to death: "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23).

Induce repentance: "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death" (2 Cor. 7:10).

Cleanse thoroughly: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38).

Add one new Master: "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" (Rom. 6:16).

And something new has been created: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (Rom. 5:17).

Which when tempered in the fire: "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 1:7).

Shall come forth indestructible: "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:54).

A jewel fit for the Lord's diadem: "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God" (Isa. 62:3).

If wisdom is in us we will take great pains to be very sure that in preparing ourselves for a place among the jewels of God we are following God's formula and not some substitute plan that appears more attractive to men. To do this we will study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed.

CHRISTIAN PEACE

By Jessie M. B. Kauffman

PEACE is a much used word these days. The people cry peace, the nations talk and write about peace, but where there is restlessness there is no peace!

To those of us who have suffered a great loss or experienced a deep sorrow there can be real meaning in peace. The whole mind and body endured a raging storm of heartbreak and grief. One felt he couldn't bear the conflict another moment. Then something suddenly came over him, bringing great calm. A stillness so deep was felt all around, like the clock that had suddenly stopped ticking. A wonderful peace penetrated physically and mentally. Prayers were ascending from the brethren who knew the sorrow. and the great promise from God's Word came to the mind, reminding that God would not test one more than he was able to bear. Other words came into mind: "Peace, be still," and the storm was rebuked. Another comforting promise came to mind: "Let not your heart be troubled. neither let it be afraid." Peace entered grief-stricken hearts, and the storm passed.

It pays to become a Christian. Christianity imparts strength to overcome temptations and weaknesses. It steadies us in the time of trial and grief. When peace enters, true guidance for life is imparted.

Peace is what the people of the world really want, but they are leaving God out of the solving of that great blessing. It is coming, brethren, that peace that passeth all understanding. If we are justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. So let us keep "The Prince of Peace" in our lives, and go often to the throne of grace that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

The Significance of the Tabernacle

Article Seven

By A. E. Griffiths

A FTER our rudimentary study of the Tabernaele, we can at least realize that God chooses those whom He considers worthy to serve Him, and will not tolerate any undue familiarities. When God's plan of worship necessitated a mediator between Him and His people, He chose the tribe of Levi for that purpose. Any other tribe or person daring to usurp that privilege received the punishment of death, as demonstrated in the rebellion of Korah and his followers (Num. 16:31-33).

Aaron's rod that blossomed and bore almonds was a direct and official communication from God that Aaron was chosen to represent God as a priest and mediator, showing clearly that no one can be man-appointed. Paul explained, "No man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron' (Heb. 5:4). Therefore, Aaron was a type of Christ, who had been prophesied since Genesis 3:15. As a mediator between God and man, Aaron functioned only for the Israelites, but Christ functioned for all men.

We will now take notice of the dress of the high priest, the particulars of which will be found in Exodus 28. The dress was very rich in appearance. Verse 2 says it was "for glory and beauty." After reading the description we can surely visualize how magnificent and rich it was. The different items of this attire, enumerated in verse 4, were: a breastplate, an ephod, a robe, a broidered coat, a miter, and a girdle.

The component parts of this attire were made of the same materials as the veil: gold, blue, purple, scarlet, and linen, and they represented tried faith, healing by chastisement, royal destiny, sin nature, and, lastly, perfect righteousness. All these attributes are necessary for the finished product, immortality, which all God's plans are intended to achieve. We shall now take these different items in the order they were put on, which we will find in Leviticus 8:7, 9.

The coat. This was a tunic or long garment of fine woven linen, and embroidered (Ex. 28:39). The linen, of course, stood for righteousness, and the woven work and embroidery for acts of righteousness. John said, "He that doeth righteousness is righteous" (1 John 3:7). Also, in Psalm 45:14 we read, "She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework." This garment was the groundwork of man's mental attitude toward God, showing that man must seek that which is pure and righteous if God is to recognize him.

With this article Brother Griffiths concludes his presentation concerning Israel's Tabernacle. He has left few stones unturned in his search for truth as revealed in this structure and its furnishings... Should any of our readers wish to communicate with Brother Griffiths, by way of sending words of appreciation or inquiring for further explanation, we direct you to his addresss 1610 East 82d Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

The girdle. This was a sash of the same material and needle-work as was the coat. It acted as a belt to draw the coat together at the loins. David expressed the meaning of this when he said, "It is God that girdeth me with strength, and maketh my way perfect" (Psalm 18:32). Peter says, "Gird up the loins of your mind" (1 Peter 1:13). Here were types of physical and mental significance. The girdle gave the coat a tidy and complete appearance, and portrayed the mind closely attuned to righteousness in realization of God's desire concerning man.

The robe. This was a skirt of blue woven work which somewhat resembled the petticoat of female attire, but was worn over the coat and was about ten inches shorter than the linen tunic. It was fastened at the waist by a quilled edge like a habergeon. The lower edge was finished with tassels resembling pomegranates worked in blue, purple, and scarlet, alternating with gold bells. The reason for the bells was that "his sound shall be heard when he goeth in unto the holy place before the Lord, and when he cometh out, that he die not" (Ex. 28:35). This was a safeguard whereby the other priests might know if Aaron had complied with God's requirements when he went into the Most Holy on the day of atonement. If they could still hear the bells they knew Aaron was moving and alive, but if they could not hear them he was still and lying dead because of insubordination. Spiritually, as long as the bells are sounding, the gospel is being preached. It is a continuous process, and the gospel will be preached after the kingdom is set up, till the end of the thousand years' reign. "I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people" (Rev. 14:6). Thus, John himself will testify about the gospel after his resurrection and during the millennium. "Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings" (Rev. 10:11). Therefore, the pomegranates and the bells stood for words and deeds, words and deeds on behalf of God the creator of all things.

The ephod. This is a Hebrew word and it has no English equivalent. It was a garment like a waistcoat, only fastened at the back instead of the front. This, no doubt, is the reason for the ecclesiastical fashion of both Catholies and Episcopalians to wear such a garment, but they are made of plain black cloth and without ornament, whereas the ephod of God's design was a very magnificent garment. In Exodus 39:2-7 we read a description of the ephod. It was made of fine linen embroidered in gold, blue, purple, and searlet. The gold in its construction was beaten into thin plates and cut into wire to work in with the other colors. This gives us not only a slight impression of the superb workmanship, but also the beauty and gorgeousness of its appearance. How different to the drab and flat suggestion of the present clerical gentleman. These colors and materials of the ephod in combination give us the qualifications of Christ Himself, whom God produced to fulfill His requirements to take sin out of the world. The idea of a man draped in dead black is repulsive to a condition of light and glory which is always associated with God and His plans. How could a person in such attire conform to righteous requirements? God has told us through Moses, "I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me" (Lev. 10:3). Would God recognize a man draped in black coming into His presence? Mercy, no! God wants light and glory. On each shoulder of this garment was fastened an onyx stone. Each stone was engraved with the names of six of the tribes of Israel. These were set in gold ouches or settings. This represented that the high priest bore the children of Israel on his shoulders when he went into the presence of God.

While only Israel was admitted to worship God, we must remember that Israel has been enlarged since then. Paul says, "Whereby when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ, which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit, that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel" (Eph. 3:4-6). This agrees with the same writer in Romans 9:6, 7: "They are not all Israel, which are of Israel . . . but in Isaac shall thy seed be called." The propheey of Christ, symbolized in the high priest, is now fulfilled. All who believe in Him and the gospel of the kingdom are included in this body of true worshipers. This body will be greatly augmented at the end of the age: "To the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect" (Heb. 12:23). As the high priest carried Israel on his shoulders, so Christ carries us to the presence of the Father.

The breastplate. In front of this ephod was placed the breastplate. This was made of the same materials as the ephod, and had gold rings attached to each corner. These were fastened by a blue cord at the top to gold rings in the shoulder buckles, and the lower corners were fastened to two gold rings fastened on the ephod a little above the girdle, thus tightly holding it against the ephod on the breast of the high priest. This breastplate was set with twelve jewels or stones, four rows with three in a row. Each stone had the name of one of the tribes engraved on it. Therefore, the high priest, besides carrying Israel on his shoulders to the presence of God, also carried them over his heart, showing a mental relation to God.

The particulars of this breastplate will be found in Exodus 39:8-21. It must have had a magnificent appearance, being about nine inches square. This is what contained the Urim and Thummim (light and fullness). The interior of the Tabernacle where the ark was kept was quite dark, but the light of the glory that appeared over the mercy seat would naturally light up the jewels in the breastplate and cause them to look very beautiful, but unless God answered the high priest they were dull and lifeless.

Therefore, unless the high priest was wholly in accord with God, the breastplate would not function. This was the case after the captivity in Babylon. When the Israelites returned they could not decide who was the direct heir to the priesthood. "The Tirshatha (governor) said unto them, that they should not cat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with Urim and with Thummim" (Ezra 2:63). Another instance was in connection with Saul who had departed from God. "When Saul inquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor by Urim, nor by the prophets" (1 Sam. 28:6). The Urim and Thummim were reflections of God's glory, and the priest's request was not answered unless that light appeared.

The miter. This was a linen bonnet for the head. It represented a crown of righteousness, and was very different from the two-horned headpiece of ecclesiastical bishops. which associates the wearer with the two-horned beast of the earth, church and state, which is far removed from God. In front of this bonnet was a plate of pure gold engraved with the words, "Holiness to the Lord," and tied with a lace of blue to the miter. Read Exodus 28:36-38, "It shall be upon Aaron's forehead, that Aaron may bear the iniquity of the holy things, which the children of Israel shall hallow in all their holy gifts." Thus we see all the offerings made to God were unclean as emanating from sinful man, and they required a divine cleansing before being acceptable to God. This was the type, the antitype was manifested in Christ who bore our sins in His body on the cross.

So we come to an end of our study of the Tabernacle. Volumes could be written on this subject, because it foreshadows all God's plans in relation to man. Time and space have restricted us to only a limited description of the building and its meanings. However, if any of our readers are interested in it enough to continue this study for themselves, we shall feel our labor has not been in vain, and that it will help those who do study it to look forward to the future Temple in the kingdom age.

Is it a benefit to escape temptations?

Is it a benefit to have joy?

Is it a benefit to do God's will? Who asked to know the benefit of prayer?

If talking with God is good for one, it is good for all of God's children. God is the source of our power and the provider of our needs. He is our Father.

Do we honor Him by prayer?

Facing Some Facts

In Two Parts—Part One

By Arthur G. Young

"According to the eternal purpose which he (God) purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Ephesians 3:11).

WE START with the belief that there is a God, supreme and eternal, and that as Paul states plainly and authoritatively in the above text, He has an eternal purpose or plan for this world and all the generations of its inhabitants. Furthermore, this plan is one based on supreme love and mercy, combined with perfect justice.

It is indeed with thankful hearts to God and to His Son Jesus Christ for this first supreme fact that this article is written. May the thoughts herein expressed be of help and blessing, resulting in further careful investigation and meditation by the reader.

Throughout the ages, man has striven to improve the conditions surrounding him. The civilizations that have existed and those which now exist reflect these efforts. The best men of each generation have hoped and worked that the world in which they lived would be left to succeeding generations a better place than that which they inherited. That is a proper and laudable human ambition. God desires mankind to work to that end, but there is an essential factor to permanent success, namely, that man must plan and work in harmony with God's purpose, and not make the foolish mistake of attempting to substitute man's plan for that of God's. It is only in the harmonious combination of God and man that God's plan will be accomplished and ideal and perfect conditions on this earth be achieved.

Now, whether the history of the human race began numberless years ago, or only approximately six thousand years ago, is not a point at issue here. The real points worth inquiring into are:

- (1.) What are the existing present conditions of the world in which we live and of its human inhabitants?
- (2.) The causes of these conditions.
- (3.) Is there a complete and permanent remedy?
- (4.) If so, how, where, and when?

In view of the known millenniums of human history and the constant striving of each generation to attain the ideal perfect conditions, and in the light of present facts, it appears reasonable and true to state there must be some deep and fundamental reasons why we have not been able to attain to a better condition of affairs than those existing today.

It is, therefore, the purpose of this article to see if we cannot seek out and place before others for their openminded consideration the fruits of long observation, reading, and meditation, an answer to these questions.

It has been well said, and not successfully disproved, that the root cause of past and present conditions is Satan's and man's disobedience and consequent rejection of cooperation with God and His plan, but it is the purpose of this article not to rest in such a general statement, true as it is, but rather to call attention to some facts existing in all generations and which can be observed today. These can be examined and tested today by anyone.

It will be readily agreed that of all the living creatures on this earth, man is supreme over the inanimate world on which we humans live, also over all other living forms of life. This is in exact accord with the Great Charter granting to man "dominion," as recorded in Genesis 1:26. This charter carries responsibility to the grantee, as delegated power always does.

While it is easily possible to demonstrate that man's supremacy exists, it is quite readily discernible that there also exist limitations to that power over which man has no control or power to change. For instance: Can man change the seasons, or cause the earth to divert from its course? Can man stop the effects of age resulting in death? No; and this has always been so, in spite of efforts of man to the contrary. It is not necessary to multiply illustrations of this fact, as one has only to think realistically for a moment to admit that man's powers have definite limitations. It is, however, only fair to state that while man's powers are limited, by the same token man's responsibilities to God are, therefore, also limited. In other words, God is not holding man responsible for certain conditions over which he has no control. This is only right and just.

Narrowing the problem down in pursuit of some of the facts of our existence, we assert:

- (1.) There is a field in this world in which man has power to act and has responsibility for his actions, which register his will, and
- (2.) There is a field in which a Higher Power than that of man alone can act to change existing conditions.

Let us first examine the realm in which man has power and responsibility.

Throughout all generations man has had power to either choose God and His plan or reject same, so it is in that choice that man's test is found. This was just as true of Adam and Christ as it is of you and me. The fundamental test of belief in and obedience to God is that on which everything hangs for each individual. It can, therefore, be readily seen how important it is that we, as individuals, make the right choice whenever we have the opportunity presented. There is one thing God never has done and never will do for man, individually or collectively. God will never make that choice for us. We must make it for ourselves. When that decision is once made, then results follow naturally and inevitably.

Space does not permit the elaboration of this line of thought, as in order to make clear certain existing facts as reasons why a perfect ideal state of affairs has not yet arrived, it will be necessary to consider more fully the conditions over which man has no control, and to alter, which (and they must be altered for the better, or the prospects of ever attaining to perfect conditions are hopeless) alone is in the province of God.

The following facts are, therefore, presented and can be readily examined.

No man, except the divine Son of God, and, therefore, no group of men, has ever had complete knowledge of all the facts bearing on any given problem; so at no time has it been possible for anyone to exercise sufficient wisdom to make perfect decisions at all times. All that has and can be done is to assemble all possible past and present facts bearing on the problem in order to arrive at a decision, which decision inevitably affects the present and the future. It can readily be seen that in order to make perfect decisions which affect the future, knowledge of the future should be in the possession of the one making the decision, but, of oneself, knowledge of the future is not in any man's possession except to the extent revealed by God. Therefore, with the best of intentions (which, alas, is not always the case), because of the fact of this restriction of man's knowledge and the rejection of God's revelation, imperfect decisions are frequent and, as stated above, perfect ideal world conditions cannot be realized without there being perfeet decisions all the time. Life, of necessity, consists of constant decisions, and as our existence is the sum total of these decisions, so life of both the individual and of the group inevitably falls below perfection.

There is another basic existent fact outside of man's control that stands as a bar to attainment by humanity alone of perfect ideal conditions. No man (save One) and, therefore, no group of men have ever had in their possession adequate power to put into effect perfect decisions one hundred per cent of the time, even if universal correctness of decisions were possible. Life, as all will sadly admit, consists of compromises of one sort or another and we are powerless to escape this fact. We must admit, in all fairness, that man's record, both individual and collective, throughout the ages has been and is one of inability to institute a perfect law or to administer perfectly with justice and equity for all any and all law, whether given by God or made by man.

Here is another basic fact worthy of our honest observance. Man has an inadequate tenure of this life, for as each generation, through observation of the records of past generations, and from its own experiences, gains the knowledge and wisdom that come from a lifetime of thought and action, that generation comes to an end and a new generation comes into control of affairs for good and ill. This process is inevitable under present conditions and man is powerless to change it. Therefore, how is it possible for mankind to secure the necessary continuity of a perfect policy of rule and government of both individual and collective lives, even if it should be possible to institute such a policy? The record of man's history proves this. The fact of the inevitable succession of generations is a true explanation of man's administrative failure. The true history of man's administration of the world and his own personal record is an uneven one, and by no stretch of imagination can this record be truthfully interpreted as some do as a constant, unbroken, progressive upward success.

The fourth and last basic fact which we wish to submit is that man has been given and is in possession of a will. He can, if he so chooses, exercise that will in harmony or in opposition to the will of God. In harmony to his blessing, and in opposition to his hurt, it is in this essential choice that man's responsibilities lie. History records times without number when man has set his will—and he is so setting it today—in opposition to God's will. The converse is also true. However, the point is that man can and does have the power of choice.

This being so, it is a fair question to ask how there can ever be, so long as this fact exists, perfect ideal conditions in this human dominated world of ours when there does not exist perfect harmony of purpose and will between God and all men.

DO YOU BELIEVE?

Do you believe: they "shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch" (Mal. 4:1)?

Do you believe: "He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire" (Matt. 3:12)?

Do you believe: after this riddance of bad rubbish "they shall be as though they had not been" (Obad. 16)?

Do you believe: "The upright shall dwell in the land, and the perfect shall remain in it. But the wicked shall be cut off from the earth, and the transgressors shall be rooted out of it" (Prov. 2:21, 22)?

Do you believe: the Bible statements concerning "a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there shall be no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev. 21:1-4)?

A request of the writer of these important questions to the readers: Please read this article over once more, and substitute "I do believe" for the words "Do you believe?" The result may surprise you, but it will be eausing you to acknowledge the truth of Conditional Immortality, or "life through his (Jesus") name" (John 20:31; 3:14-16; Acts 4:12; Rom. 6:21-23).

Fishing Season!

"Have you been fishing yet?" That seems now to be the big question up here in Minnesota, as the fishing season opened on May 29. Ever since that day there has been a steady stream of cars going by on their way to some lake. The fish are biting fairly well, too, and it seems that everyone with whom we are acquainted has been fishing, or intends to go soon.

My mind goes back to another group of fishermen, standing on the shores of the well-known Sea of Galilee. They were talking excitedly, for one of their number had just come with great news. Andrew, who gained a place in the Scripture because of this very act, had come with the word that he had seen the Messiah. These men had heard all their lives that sometime the Messiah would come, and He had now really arrived. In my mind I can see them discussing the matter. Peter, the boldest of them, asserted that he would like to see Him, and be His servant. Even as they talked, the One of whom they had been speaking was coming along. They were not afraid of Him, as many today seem to be afraid of their rulers, but they were eager and anxious to see Him. If they were expecting a great and powerful speech, telling them of all the benefits that would be theirs if they but followed Him, they were disappointed, for all this Man said to them were words with which they were wholly familiar. They were simply: "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Eagerly and quickly "they forsook all, and followed him."

The record in the Bible tells us how these humble fishermen went out, and with the great power and leadership of their Master they truly did catch men for God. One time, we are told that Peter became a little discouraged and decided to go back fishing, but before he could get very far Christ came again to him, this time in the glory of immortality, and Peter went ahead with the rest of the disciples and preached the Word until his death.

That call which Christ gave those humble fishermen back there on the shores of the Sea of Galilee—"Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men"—is still ringing out unto all people. In fact, there never was a time when Christ needed "fishermen" any more than He does today.

Note the enthusiasm of the fishers of fish. They arise more times than not while it is yet night, and are on the lake early because that is the time the fish bite best. Also, each tries to get there before anyone else. Another great characteristic of most fishermen is that nothing can keep them from fishing. Some will even forsake their church.

Oh, that such enthusiasm might be for Christ in the great fishing for men! Suppose that all rose early in the morning to work for Christ, before the tentacles of sin fastened their greedy hands on the lives of men. We might eatch more men for Christ than we do. Instead, we wait, oftentimes until it is too late. We then wonder why we have such poor success. Suppose we let nothing come in our way of fishing for men, not even the fishing for fish! It is my sincere belief that if we had half the enthusiasm in the great fishing task, which Christ has given us, that many have in the great sport of fishing, we would bring many more into the fold of Christ.

That clear call of Christ is still echoing down through the centuries. It calls to you and to me: "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Will you accept the call today? The "catch" you make will be valuable.

Laziness

J. Don Swartz

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise" (Prov. 6:6).

This, one of the tiniest of creatures, is set above some men for wisdom. The ant has no one to watch over it and tell it what to do, but instinctively and as a matter of course, the things are done.

All have many times read and told the story of the ants and the grasshopper. How well that story fits the above proverb. Yet, while some of us are like that, none of us want to be called a grasshopper.

Someone, for argument's sake, might quote Luke 12:24, "Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not." Why, then, should I work my fingers to the bone and be like the ant, while the lily does nothing at all and is more lovely than Solomon in all his glory?

This attitude but shows the true spirit of the lazy man or sluggard. We read in Proverbs 13:4, "The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing: but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat."

This type of sluggishness brings on poverty, and poverty brings on fear. The element of fear is very prevalent in the sluggard. "The way of the slothful man (sluggard) is as an hedge of thorns" (Prov. 15:19). There are different types of fear, but I think the type we are speaking of brings on a desire for evildoing, and that immediately turns to destruction.

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise."

Paul's Letters

Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ, wrote to his friends. Timothy was one of Paul's young friends for whom he hoped great things. He wrote Timothy some very good advice, didn't he?

Paul loved Timothy as his own son. He prayed night and day for him, and was anxious to see him again, even as we are glad to see our loved ones when we have been separated from them.

Aren't you glad Paul was filled with joy when he remembered that Timothy had been taught about those things which gave him faith? His grandmother was filled with faith; so was Timothy's mother. We have learned that faith comes by hearing the Word of God, and by reading it.

No doubt, Timothy studied his Bible lessons with his mother's and grandmother's help, just the way many of us do today.

2 Timothy was written when Paul was getting old, and was in prison in Rome.

Philemon is another letter Paul wrote. It is a very short book in our New Testament. It contains only twenty-five verses. Read the whole letter.

From Paul's letters can we not tell that he was very kind-hearted and dearly loved his friends to whom he took the time to write? And we can still feel cheered and lifted up and instructed by those letters written long ago by the great Apostle.

Letters Today

There has never been a time when letter writing could be done with less effort than today.

We need not walk miles to mail a letter. The letters do not have to travel weeks to reach most of our friends. Yet how we do put off writing even the letters we ought to write!

For example, how I am cheered when some of my readers send me a letter or poem or even a card! If the members write letters telling of their churches, homes, and surroundings, I shall be glad to publish them.

Then, too, perhaps you see someone's name in the "Happy Birthday" corner who is the very same age you are. If you'd like to write to any of the boys or girls, tell me, and I shall send you their addresses,

ECE Club News

Do you think I am happy this week? I have thirty-five new members to introduce to you today! Now, who wouldn't be singing with good news like that to send our members?

Reva and Joan Hetrick are two of the members. They are from Ripley, Illinois. Their names were sent to me by Miss Ednah Cooper. Thank you, Ednah!

Also, Elder Harry Goekler of Hammond, Louisiana, sent me a typed list of names of thirty-three boys and girls from his churches. The same day those boys and girls sent cards also! So thank you, Brother Goekler and the following new members: Mary Helen Landry, Joyce Landry, Marie Landry, Rita June Landry, Gordon Landry, Preston Landry, Gene Bauerle, Robin Bauerle, Margaret and Marjorie Bauerle (twins), Irene Richardson, Dorothy Richardson, Thelma Richardson, Neville Richardson, Peggy Campbell, Buddy Campbell, Marion Barnum, Elsie Barnum, Mable Barnum, Junior Gainey, Mary Patterson, Ivy Mc-Kinney, Winnie McKinney, Iris Foster, Ella Lou Foster, John Anthon, George Anthon, Merlin Anthon, James Siple, Henry Hutchinson, Herbert Hutchinson, Lucy Lee Bankston, and Laura Mae Bankston from Hammond, Springfield, and Ponchatoula, Louisiana.

I trust you will continue to read our page and study your Bibles and be good members.

ECE Membership Card News

THE RESTITUTION HERALD is printing us some fine membership cards, suitable for framing and to hang in your bedrooms. So if you want one, and are not yet a member of the ECE Club, send your name in at once, for only two hundred cards are being printed, and we already have one hundred thirty members!

These eards tell all of our aims, just what to do in order to be a good member. The better you can carry out the aims, the better members you will be.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

Believing The Restitution Herald readers might be interested in a synopsis of the South Bend church, we have prepared the following:

The first meeting called for organization was early in the year 1916. There were about ten charter members. This group held meetings, and slowly grew by worshiping in various halls. Meetings have been held in the community room of the Y.M.C.A. building for a great number of years. For twenty years the church was practically dormant, but thanks to the stalwarts who persistently kept the group together, we have started to grow spiritually and collectively.

Three years ago last February, Bro. Lynn Leighty, then superintendent of the Sunday school, started a church building fund which senool, started a church building fund which has since grown by leaps and bounds. The cooperation and financial assistance of our own group (which now totals 47 members) have been very good. We also extend our thanks to those interested parties, members and friends, who have helped so substantially in this cutornoise, by their dentiting.

By Christmas time last year (1938) our building fund had swollen to the point where building fund had swollen to the point where we were able to make a down payment of $1,000.00 on a church building. We now have possession of that building, with a substantial amount of money remaining in our treasury for reconditioning and redecorating. This building, while not a new building, is very large and well built, and affords great opportunty for the Lord's work. It will be known as Hope Chapel, and is located at the corner of Dayton and Leer Streets.

The Church of God (Abrahamic Faith) is a nation-wide organization with headquarters at Oregon, Ill. The phrase "Abrahamic Faith" is often misunderstood. This phrase is not a part of the name but a means of identification, distinguishing it from other denomina-tions also organized under the name "The Church of God." This identification is based upon God's covenant to Abraham in Genesis 13:14-17, where the earth is promised to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession. In Hebrews 11:39, 40 we find that he died without receiving the promise, since it was God's plan that the Gentiles should also share in the promise. Galatians 3:16 clarifies the promise by showing that the "seed" referred to was Jesus Christ, rather than multitudes of people as is often thought. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ... And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (vv. 27-29).

We believe and teach the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth, with Jesus Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint-heirs with Him in the government of the nations.

We pray that the little stone is starting to roll, and that the South Bend church will be a part of that little stone.

BAPTISMS AT KOKOMO, INDIANA

We were made to rejoice on May 23 when Mr. and Mrs. Henry Martin were taken to the water and baptized by the writer into the all-saving name of Jesus Christ. They were thor-oughly convinced of the wonderful truths of the Bible, having regularly attended our Be-rean class and church services the past year. We ask all, especially those of the household of faith, to pray that these new lives will be filled with spiritual blessings. So we now introduce Bro. and Sr. Martin into the family of God. Omer J. The church here is not yet large enough to support a full-time pastor, but we have been successful in employing Bro. E. O. Stewart of Sweetwater, Texas, to preach the fourth Sunday of each month when he is not called out of the State for evangelistic meetings. So far, Bro. Stewart's humble and meek spirit, and his teaching ability, have awakened interest in the study of the Word to the extent that some have offered to join wife and myself in distributing tracts every Sunday afternoon.

If the lay members could realize that the life and growth of the church depends upon their services as much as upon the service of the pastor, they would, no doubt, wake up to the fact that they are just as much to blame for small attendance as the pastor is. All Christians are watchmen upon the wall. If all watch for opportunities for service there will be found many souls who are hungry for the

Among the timely articles of late, I was especially interested with "Grandma" Siple's advice that we should trim our lamps. Ves, then put oil in the lamps, If we let our oil burn out, failing to stop at the station to refuel, it will be unfortunate for us. The door of salvation will stay shut against the lamps that have no oil. Much labor will be lost because some have not continued to run the Christian race. Some are a little too proud to ask the Father for oil. Those who expect to be worthy of the rapture had better heed "Grandma's" advice.

VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

The Virginia brethren have been fortunate in securing the services of Bros. F. L. Austin and James McLain for the Virginia Conference to be held July 20-30 at the church at Maurertown. The presence of these two tal-ented men is sufficient to assure us of an interesting and inspirational conference.
We urge all the Virginia brethren to make plans to attend and cordially invite those from other states to come and enjoy this conference with us. Dormitory accommodations will be provided for those who desire them. Your only expense will be for transportation.

The Glories of the Coming Day

By J. H. Anderson

"As it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (Isa. 64:4; 1 Cor. 2:9).

THE good things that God has prepared for His people in the kingdom are so grand that our minds cannot grasp them in all their fullness. However, the Holy Spirit has in the Bible revealed them to us as far as our minds can comprehend them. "God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God" (1 Cor. 2:10).

"What, then, has God revealed to us in the Bible about the future good things prepared for us? "No good thing will be withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Psalm 84:11). Accordingly, all that is good will be ours, if we are His. The earth is to be the saints' future and eternal home. What kind of an earth will it be? "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" (Num. 14:21). This is an oath, and God's oath can never fail (Heb. 6:17, 18).

When Adam sinned a curse was placed on the earth. God said, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:17-19). All this came upon man because of his sin. Man is of the ground, and his destiny is connected with the ground. Man was made for the earth, and the earth was made for man. When man sinned it affected the earth. Before he sinned all the trees, except the tree of knowledge of good and evil, bore fruit for him. "God said, "Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat" (Gen. 1:29).

In the future, when the curse shall have been taken away by Jesus, every tree will again bear fruit for men. "There shall be no more curse: but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him" (Rev. 22:3). "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee. Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our God, shall bless us" (Psalm 67:5, 6).

When God led the Israelites into the Holy Land, He told them that the land flowed with milk and honey, and that if they obeyed Him He would bless the land, but if they disobeyed Him He would make the land a desolate wilderness (Ex. 3:17; Lev. 26:23-35). In Leviticus 26:4 we find these words: "Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit." Yes, if men serve God the land is blessed. We read that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation" (Acts 17:26). When God divided to the nations of the earth their inheritance He gave the Holy Land to the Jews (Deut. 32:8), and He separated the Jews from among the Gentile nations for that land. "Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts (land)" (Ezek, 37:11). Israel must learn that only in their own land can their problems be solved. Today we see that land being restored to where it will again flow with milk and honey (Isa, 61:3-7; 62:1-6).

Yes, God is building up the land of Palestine. That means that the "Sun" of the perfect day will soon rise to shine in all His glory. "Thou shalt arise (come) and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favour her, yea, the set time, is come. . . . When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory" (Psalm 102:13, 16). Christ is to stay away in heaven until restitution work begins. "God shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began" (Acts 3: 20, 21). The restitution work has (Please turn to page 11)

Closed for the Summer

The story is told of a certain church which had this inscription above its door: "God's church is the gate to glory." Each summer for three full months a notice was placed directly on the door: "Closed for the summer." It is easily seen that the church mocked itself.

While it is true that but few churches discontinue all their services during the summer, it has become a general practice of churches to recess the evening services. So, though one dare not say "the gate" is closed, it cannot be denied that "the gate" is only ajar. God "opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles" (Acts 14:27). Why ought it for three months each year be left ajar?

God has not told His children exactly what hours or how often they should meet for public worship, but God has charged that we "consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:24, 25). Though the majority of churches forsake an assembling together, God's charge is that His true worshipers should not do "as the manner of some is." Invariably the majority is in the wrong; God is always right. "Consider one another." "Bless the Lord at all times." "Meditate day and night." Faithful Paul "testified the kingdom of God... from morning till evening," and once even in the summertime (for Eutychus sat in a window) Paul "continued his speech until midnight."

It is true that circumstances alter cases, and wisdom is a better guide than an iron rule. It may even be that God is so pleased to see the door of His temple ajar, instead of entirely closed, that He will bless the service there. But this modern practice of sloughing at the Divine is but one more faithless step in the exodus away from God to gods. It is not alone that the church is hot in the summer months; it is, rather, that the highways and theaters and parks and distant friends surpass the only true and living and loving God. "Worship God" (Rev. 22:9).

The Sunday evening service in your church is a barometer of its evangelistic strength. Recess evangelism, and you have recessed growth. God will snuff at the morning prayer and the morning tithe if the evening is wasted in hurrahs and spending. Sodom, too, had her fun, then paid the price. Said David, "The day is thine, the night also is thine." Said Paul, "I ceased not to warn every one night and day."

A Modern Application

While it may be true that some of the young people will not attend Sunday evening services in the summer months, it is absolutely true that they cannot attend evening services if there are none. Beware, lest Jesus' words to the Pharisees have a modern application: "Woe unto you, seribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in" (Matt. 23:13).

True or False

Some of you have attended class socials that were dry enough to burn. Others of you have questioned just why at a religious social it should be necessary to know the advertising slogans of a dozen brands of cigarettes, or to recognize by pictures all the latest automobiles. For a change of menu, and for something that will savor a bit more of true manna, try the following statements upon your class at its next social—each statement to be answered by "True," or "False":

- (1) Nehemiah is the name of a book in the Bible.
- (2) Hezekiah is the name of a book in the Bible.
- (3) The stork is a Bible bird.
- (4) Adam was deceived by the serpent.
- (5) The letters of the word "heart" can be rearranged to spell the name of Abraham's father.
- (6) Noah was a shepherd.
- (7) Nimrod was a great hunter, and founded Babylon.
- (8) Decapolis was one of the cities where Jesus taught.
- (9) Elijah and Elisha were father and son.
- (10) Elisha's servant told Naaman how to be cured of leprosy.
- (11) Elisha's servant became a leper.
- (12) While on the cross Jesus used an expression of David.
- (13) Judas was a fisherman.
- (14) Jesus was born in a manger.
- (15) Moses wore a veil.
- (16) 2 John is written directly to a woman.
- (17) When Jesus said, "Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her," He spoke of the poor widow who gave her all.
- (18) In the above text Jesus spoke of Mary.
- (19) Paul was converted by Ananias.

Have the Churches Failed?

Introductory Remarks

By R. H. Judd

SOME little time ago the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett (Canada's former Prime Minister) stated from a public platform that in his opinion "the churches had failed." Such a statement, coming from a man so eminently known both nationally and internationally, created considerable interest and comment. Perhaps wisely he made no specific charges as to the nature of the complaint, or the cause of it; possibly feeling that many reasons were contributory, and that more good would be accomplished by merely calling attention thereto, and thus institute a prac-ing attention thereto, and thus institute a practical spirit of inquiry into the matter.

That the visible church has failed in large measure is very generally acknowledged, but by no means to the extent many would infer. It is still doing a valiant and noble work on the mission fields, where missionaries, as in China today, are facing seriously dangerous conditions in the midst of a war-torn land, refusing to regard their own safety that they may help the Chinese in their sore distress.

The changes taking place in China are both rapid and colossal, and are acknowledged to be due largely to the enterprise of those splendid men and women who have devoted their lives to missionary endeavor. Its medical services and agencies for the distribution of knowledge are resulting in bettered conditions for many millions; and in considering the question of church failure these important facts cannot be overlooked, and credit must be given where credit is due.

But the question arises, Upon what foundations are foreign missions building? Will the structure of their work endure? These questions can be answered only by considering the conditions now prevailing in the homelands, which are the sources of these foreign missionary agencies. What are the conditions in the homelands? A study of the current religious journals will support the contention that, in spite of advanced education, crime is on the increase, and that education has not only not prevented crime, but has actually given impetus to it in the manner and methods of its commission.

It is further acknowledged that in the face of continued additions to legal restraint, respect for authority has almost vanished; due in no small measure to the flattering but obviously false teaching that all men are equal, and that every man has a right to his own opinions, whether or not they are based on sound premises and the conclusions reached are correct! These are common expressions, heard almost daily. We are said to live in a "free country," and "every man's life is his own to direct as he pleases!"

The essentially selfish spirit which is really basic to these ideas, is carefully hidden by the apparent plausibility of the sentiments expressed, and even where authority nominally exists it has found it all but impossible to satisfy the conflicting demands. Obviously, to the really thoughtful mind, so many ideas seeking for control cannot all be right, and wrong can never be compatible with right.

The Bible nowhere condemns education, namely, the getting of wisdom. If any interested students will carefully > read Proverbs 8 and 9 they will not fail to see that the getting of wisdom is most earnestly enjoined. The Bible does, however, make it clear that foolishness must be forsaken, and that instruction be given to a righteous man (Prov. 9:9). The Bible recognizes that righteousness must come first, and that it is practically worse than useless to give instruction to an evilminded person. It goes even further, for in effect it makes the claim that there is no wisdom apart from righteousness. Another truth made clear is that wisdom must be imparted, and obviously by one who is himself righteous. In other words, there is a Source-a primal Authority from which all wisdom proceeds. This fact is frequently referred to both by incident

God has put these two things together, namely, authority and wisdom, from the very dawn of history. The issue in the Garden of Eden was not primarily the eating of the tree of knowledge, for it was there to be eaten; but only after due acknowledgment of the Source of Authority and Giver of the tree of life. The whole history of mankind has been blighted because man has desired to repudiate authority, and be a law unto himself. The only boundary that God has placed upon the limitless horizons of knowledge is that He Himself be recognized as the Authoritative Source, and as the only Source.

This spirit of every man being a law unto himself and of repudiation of authority has become so general that it has invaded every sphere of human activity, and even the churches are imbued with the same ideas. The boast is made that every man has the right to worship as he pleases, and to make his choice as to the object of that worship, and the churches have not been slow to admit that claim. The denominational churches, professing themselves to be custodians of the teaching of Scripture, have themselves gone so far astray from Bible funda

In Two Parts—Part Two

By Arthur G. Young

WHOEVER has followed the thoughts expressed to the point where our previous article closed, has shown patience and perseverance. It all sounds pretty hopeless, and perhaps the thought has come, Why did the writer take the time and make the effort to present such an apparently dark and dreary picture of conditions?

If it all ended here, there would be no sense in dwelling on these conditions, but thanks be to God, who alone can and will change same, the remedy will be presented. It is not with idle, false hopes resting on insecure foundations, but rather on a real basis for hope that we grasp the practical aspects of God's plan. By doing this, we see not only the plan but the means to translate it into actuality. Instead of being hopeless, we have every right, by faith in God and obedience to Him, to realize a participation forever in those perfected conditions for which our whole being longs.

That plan contains a perfected physical world (Rev. 21: 1-5; 22:1-6), a righteous administration of perfect law by God's Son in person on this purified world in the position of "King of kings and Lord of lords" (1 Tim. 6:13-16) resurrected and perfected inhabitants who will be obedient partners in the further constructive work He has for such instruments, and toward which glorious condition the whole past and present have been pointing. Oh, it is a glorious, loving, and perfect purpose! The personal question we must ask ourselves is, Are we prepared, through belief in and obedience to God and His Son Jesus Christ, to assume the place in this plan that God in His love offers to everyone? Consider this well, as out of each one's decision on this point are the issues of life in the future. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). Meditate on this word from Him who has the power to judge the individual as to eternal death or eternal life.

In addition to the plan, God has provided the instruments through which He will make the plan effective. These are three in number: (1) His Son Jesus Christ; (2) Israel; (3) Church.

These will be joined together in cooperative work in the kingdom age soon to be inaugurated by the personal return to this earth of God's Son in kingly power and majesty. If this sounds strange to some, the following texts are quoted from a great number of equally plain ones. If we honor and believe Christ, we specially believe His own words. In John 14:3 He says, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

Now we believe Jesus went away into heaven in strict accord with this statement, i.e., if I go. Then, that act having taken place, why should we not have reasons to have faith that the other part of His promise will be as literally carried out? He chose the time to go and, likewise, will choose the time to return to this earth at the very Mount of Olives from whence He left (Zech. 14:4).

Then take the formal, legal, and categorical statement by the angels immediately after the ascension of Christ from the Mount of Olives as recorded in Acts 1:10-12:

"And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven, as he went up, behold two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey."

Can we deny the plain words just quoted, or dare try to twist their meaning that this same Jesus, who was raised from the dead, will again personally return to this earth? He will return, not as a sacrifice for sin as He once came. That has been accomplished on the cross, but Christ's return will be as Ruler of the world, the Redeemer of Israel, and as the Head of the body, His church, with all power (see Matt. 28:18), wisdom, and knowledge to change the conditions so that conditions foretold in Revelation 21 and 22 (the most sublime message ever enunciated) will be an actuality on this earth.

There is a very important part in this for mankind. We are not now here to twiddle our thumbs and expect God to do it all. Not a bit of it! We, here and now, as in past generations, have definite responsibilities of belief and obedience, which latter is a lifelong job in itself, and in which is included all we mean when we say that Christianity is a Way of Life. We also now have a responsibility to tell others about both the gospel of salvation and the gospel of the kingdom. These are two interwoven messages, but dealing with two phases of God's plan and should not be confused.

There have been previously outlined four basic facts that at present stand as insurmountable barriers to the attainment of perfect ideal conditions.

There is a complete answer provided by God to remove all four problems, which I will restate:

(1.) Man has inadequate wisdom and knowledge.

Christ, as Son of God, personally has perfect wisdom and knowledge of not only the past and present but also of the future. Therefore, Christ, in the position He will occupy as Ruler of the kingdom of God on this earth, will make only perfect decisions.

(2.) Man has inadequate power.

Jesus Christ, as Son of God and after His resurrection, plainly claimed, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28:18). That is an all-embracing and complete grant of power, and it is in the same Person who, as aforesaid, has all wisdom and knowledge.

(3.) Man has inadequate tenure on life.

Jesus Christ, after His resurrection and at the time He appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos (Rev. 1:18), said: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell (the grave) and of death." With the possession of immortal life in the person of Jesus Christ as Ruler, there is definite assurance of the continuity of the administration of a righteous policy of government.

(4.) Man's will has never been and is not now in perfect harmony with God's will.

In Jesus Christ's life upon this earth is found the only perfect example of harmony on the part of man's will with the will of God. In the garden of Gethsemane, when facing the crucial test of obedience even unto the cross, Christ uttered those decisive words: "Nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done" (Luke 22:42). Also in John 6:38: "I came down from heaven not to do my own will but the will of him who sent me." This perfect harmony of Christ's will with the will of God makes Christ the perfect instrument of God to fulfill His purpose.

Therefore, in the one person of Jesus Christ is found the remedy and the complete answer to all four existent problems.

We must think through more carefully what is revealed to us in God's Book as to what is meant by and included in the term "kingdom of God." Current ideas are very inadequate, but space does not permit more than to say that it is the conditions to be within which Christ, Israel, and the church are to operate after Christ's return, all to the glory of God and for the benefit and blessing of all participants, toward which everything is heading and for which everything has been planned.

The important part from the personal standpoint is whether or not each of us will be entitled through faith and obedience to be included in that kingdom.

May each one of us have the wisdom given to us to see the necessity to trust in Him to do the things we cannot do for ourselves, and to do the things that one alone individually can do. If we do this, we shall of a certainty meet our Lord with joy when He soon returns to this earth, and we shall then enter into the blessed partnership of service with Him throughout the ages to come. May God impress this on the reader's heart as a personal question which cannot be escaped but which must be answered.

Will the Literal Wicked Be Destroyed?

By T. A. Drinkard

"As smoke is driven away, so drive them away: as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God" (Psalm 68:2).

THERE is no subject of Biblical importance more clearly 1 taught than the final destruction of the wicked, and from which there will be no return for those who enter therein, regardless of the protests that may be offered contrary thereto in order to uphold some humanized theory that tends to justify the necessity and practice of sin in the lives and hearts of men and women. The Spirit reveals that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). Not one time is it said that God authorized the practice of sin in order that His will be carried out. God has repeatedly warned that He will destroy the wicked, and that expressed will is going to be executed to the very letter. The earth will be cleansed of sin and sinners just as surely as it was cleansed of the same by the Flood. God used water to cleanse it at the time of the Flood, but the next time His other agent of fire will be used. I humbly submit that there is not one passage of Scripture that holds out one ray of hope, directly or indirectly, for the redemption of any sinner that dies under its judgment.

Sin has been, and is yet the blighting curse of humanity. One of the great tragedies of life is to hear men try to excuse those who practice sin, promising them a most wonderful future with all the fruit of one tree; and, if they are very stubborn, that God will take them through His purifying plant to purge out their carnality and give them immortality, whether they sought it or not. May God pity the man who teaches such theories which tell God in so many words that He may know how to rule heaven, but He uses poor judgment as to the future destruction of the wicked. God knows just exactly what He intends to do, and it pleased Him to reveal a portion of His wisdom to us in His Word. Shame on us to add to, or to take therefrom.

Let us now look into some of the statements of the divine Record to see if we can find a solution to our difficulty. We read, "The fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death" (Rev. 21:8). To determine just what the two elements of destruction, such as fire and brimstone, will do, allow me to refer you to Genesis 19:24, which reads, "Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven." Gentiles Must Be Naturalized

By Bonnie D. Martin

WHEN God created man He placed him in the Garden of Eden. God gave man dominion over all things. He said to Adam and Eve, the first man and woman, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth, And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat" (Gen. 1:28, 29). "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2: 15-17).

This was the first law ever given. God, in His all-wise way, knew from the beginning that man being weak and of a carnal nature, needed some form of law or government to make the world a safe place in which to live. God instituted this law, thereby teaching Adam that a system of rules is needed to bring the conduct of the individual into harmony with the recognized practice of his fellow men. Law is only custom. God said He created man for His glory and the earth to be inhabited. God, knowing the end from the beginning, knew that laws would be needed to give directions to individual actions that are regarded as essential to the welfare of the group. Therefore, He instituted what we term "remedial law," or the law which applies remedies, concerns itself with the redress of wrongs and the punishment of criminals.

To Adam God said, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." This foretold the punishment that Adam would receive if he disobeyed God's law. Before Adam and Eve ate of the forbidden fruit they could walk and talk with God. After they transgressed God, the great Judge, held a court scene in the Garden. In Genesis 3:9-13, 16-19, 23, we read, "The Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself. And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Hast thou eaten of the tree whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat? And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. And the Lord God said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. And the Lord God said . . . unto the woman . . . I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou are, and unto dust shalt thou return. . . . Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken."

After God heard man's testimony of the wrong, He sentenced him to till the ground the remainder of his days. Notice that God did not drive man out of this Garden until he had been given a chance to testify for himself. A judgment is the assertion of a truth, to judge is to affirm or deny one thing or another, and the result of the act of judging is called a judgment. Adam and Eve both were called in judgment by God, and both asserted the thing that they had done.

God has so directed man's ways upon the earth that His teachings are made plain by simple, everyday occurrences. In Christ's day when He taught the disciples He used things that they were familiar with to illustrate His teachings—such as the parable of the sower.

Just so, the laws of our country today clearly teach God's plan of laws. Read Leviticus 26. There we find that God made laws to govern the Israelites. He also told them of the blessings they would receive if they obeyed those laws. He also told them of the punishment they would receive if they disobeyed them. Just as He told Adam and Eve! God has made laws from the beginning of creation that if obeyed will bring great joy and life; if disobeyed will bring punishment and death. God promised Israel if they would obey His laws He would take them into a land flowing with milk and honey; but they rebelled and brought death upon themselves. God made His promises to the Israelites. They were led by Moses from Egyptian bondage, journeying toward that great and blessed country, where they might have enjoyed freedom. But they rejected God, built graven images and worshiped them. All of God's promises were first made to the Jews. The Gentiles did not have any promises until the Jews rejected God's

In Acts 13:46, 47 Paul and Barnabas were preaching to the Jews, and they said, "It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation to the ends of the earth."

A citizen of the United States has certain blessings promised to him by the Constitution of this country or by the laws of this country, just as the Jews had the promises of the Father made to them. If a person born in the United States commits a crime he no longer enjoys this freedom, but is placed in confinement, or otherwise punished. A person born here has the natural right of a citizen. The Jews were the natural heirs of Christ. They were His heirs by blood relationship. The Gentiles were not of the same lineage as Christ, and "were aliens from the commonwealth of Israel . . . having no hope and without God in the world." A person born in France or some other foreign country can become a citizen of the United States by taking out naturalization papers. His first step in securing citizenship is to file his intentions, or first papers, with this government. In so doing he must state his intentions to renounce allegiance to every foreign potentate or state. Not less than two years later he may petition for his final papers. After he has been naturalized, and has become a citizen of this country, he is entitled to all the rights and privileges of a native-born citizen,

The Gentiles, therefore, being the wild olive branch, may be grafted in, or may take out naturalization papers to become citizens of the kingdom of God-God's great government that is to be established upon the earth. They may enjoy its blessings by renouncing allegiance to the works of sin, and by believing and obeying God's law. The Gentiles. by believing the promises made to Abraham, may become fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of faith. "Wherefore remember, that ye being in times past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: but now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. 2:11-13).

Paul, the Apostle to the Gentiles, said that the mystery of the gospel was made known to him by revelation, that "unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ; and to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery" (Eph. 3:8, 9).

A citizen of a foreign country would have to know about this country—at least know about its rulers and the protection promised its citizens—before wanting to become a citizen of it. Just so, the Gentiles had to hear the gospel concerning God's kingdom and the blessings that will come to a citizen of it, before they would want to apply for citizenship there.

The gospel that the Gentiles must hear was the one that was preached to Abraham. The gospel preached to Abraham was that through him and his seed should all families of the earth be blessed. Christ was of the seed of Abraham, and it is through His shed blood that man will be redeemed from the law of sin and death. "It pleased the Father that in him (in Christ) should all fulness dwell; and, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in the earth, or things in heaven. And you (speaking to the Gentiles) that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in his sight" (Col. 1:19-23).

The Gentiles take out their first papers of naturalization, or their first step for securing citizenship, when they believe, obey the gospel, and are baptized into Christ, thereby showing that they have renounced the old man of sin and are become servants of God and His Christ. Christ says, "Ye cannot serve two masters." You cannot be a citizen of God's kingdom and the Devil's at the same time. You must renounce allegiance to the Devil and his works. When you believe the promises made to Abraham, believe that Christ died and rose again, and are baptized into Christ, you are then an heir of God and a joint-heir with Christ. (Read Rom. 8:1-17.)

If a citizen of the United States denies, or becomes a traitor, to his country, the death sentence is imposed upon him. "It is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame" (Heb. 6:4-6). Their end is death.

God created man for His glory. Knowing that man was of a sinful nature, God prepared a way for him to escape the death penalty that was brought upon him by disobedience. This way is through a belief in His only begotten Son. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16).

If Adam had never sinned, the law that pronounced death would never have been given. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Rom. 5:12). I Timothy 1:9 says, "Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient."

The only way, then, for the Gentiles to be saved is to take out naturalization papers for the kingdom of God, by appealing to God through their mediator, Christ Jesus. "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby ye must be saved," saved in the name of Jesus only, and in Him crucified.

GOOD COUNSEL

"When an idle tale is told you,
Of someone who has gone astray,
Of someone who was respected,
But now walks the downward way;
Do not judge or tell the story,
Let your ears hear not a sound,
Do as Jesus did when with us,
Write in silence on the ground."

MEDITATIONS

Wherein Is the Efficacy of Christ's Death?

By Alfred Anthon

"HEAR another parable: There was a certain householder (God), which planted a vineyard (the earth), and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower (God made this earth complete, perfect, well protected, and fully equipped, that it should yield abundantly), and (He) went into a far country." God, the householder, attended to other business, leaving all of Ilis husbandmen to care for this vineyard, the earth, after giving the husbandmen certain laws. (Matt. 21:33-41; Mark 12:1-9; Luke 20:9-16.)

This householder, God, gave His husbandmen (all of mankind) to understand that if they could manage this great estate He would give it to them forever and ever. Any unprofitable husbandmen would be destroyed. In Genesis 1:27-29 we find that eternal life was placed before man, but that he had the right to squander it. In Genesis 2:15-17 we find that death is to be the end of those who are not profitable husbandmen.

When the time of the fruit drew near God sent His servants (divine messengers) to the husbandmen (mankind) that these servants might receive the fruits of man's works on this earth. God intended for His angel-servants to receive the respect of love and faithfulness of His husbandmen, that He might bestow more blessings upon each, accordingly.

All of the husbandmen (including you and me) took His servants, beating one, killing another, stoning another, driving others away empty, and we shamefully handled many others. These servants were angel-people—prophets, judges, kings, and priests.

"Then said the lord (God) of the vineyard (earth), What shall I do?" This householder was beginning to feel there was no use having this vineyard. But bear in mind this is only a parable—a story told to teach us how ungrateful and wicked we are. God, when He created this earth and us, foreknew just how things were going to develop. He knew how much trouble it would be to train up a crew of husbandmen to "dress and keep" this earth (Gen. 2:15). "I (God) will send my beloved son (Jesus): it may be they will reverence him when they see him." God thus reasoned, they mistreated My prophets, but they surely will not mistreat My Son. This is a parable showing that God knew all of us, had we been present, would have murdered Christ. God was determined to teach us how wicked we are, to teach us that all of us deserved destruction, that we are wicked enough to murder His Son.

"But when the husbandmen saw him (Jesus), they reasoned among themselves, saying, This is the heir: come, let us kill him, that the inheritance (honor and praise from men) will be our's." The only "fruits" God can get out of this vineyard (earth) is love, respect, obeisance, honor, and praise from us, His husbandmen.

When Jesus miraculously cured the sick, the people praised Jesus more than they praised the unprofitable husbandmen. This praise of men is what they wanted. They would rather see a poor sufferer of some bad disease be left uncured if somebody besides themselves received the praise. This is why we (the husbandmen) crucified Christ. He was doing so much good that we became envious of Him.

"What therefore shall the lord (God) of the vineyard (earth) do unto them? He shall come and destroy these husbandmen." Certainly! Therefore, this parable leaches that because Christ was crucified God will destroy man, that Christ's death makes God more determined than ever to destroy man. It does not teach that Christ's death makes direct reconciliation between God and man. Because the husbandmen crucified Christ that in itself does not propitiate for our murder of Him. The parable does not teach that our murder of Christ made Him die in our stead. It does not teach that He was a substitute for us, and now since we have murdered Christ, God becomes willing to forgive. It does not teach that if we had not been wicked enough to murder Christ that God would not forgive us of our sins.

Wherein, then, is the efficacy of Christ's death? Peter plainly told the answer on Pentecost: You have murdered God's beloved and only begotten Son. Now you are under condemnation of eternal destruction for having committed such wickedness. You know no king will allow such persons to live.

Does anguish of soul lay hold on them? Most terribly! Do they wail? "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Oh, if only we can get out of this trouble! Why did we do it? We were surely wicked. We really deserve death, and everlasting death at that. Oh, if we could be forgiven!

God and Christ were watching. They began to see the results of their labor of pain and woe among men. They saw these folk wailing, and could see more than that. God and Christ saw that if these folk were now forgiven they would be contrite, that they would faithfully love God and Christ for having forgiven them. My! How much these people thanked, honored, loved, wanted to obey God, wanted to work for Him, when they found that forgiveness of murdering Christ was held out to them! Was it good news? It was gospel! How much joy they must have had! How happy they were! God and Christ saw that those who had been wicked husbandmen were now most faithful husbandmen, just the kind of husbandmen God wants. In fact, they were the only kind God will ever have. God wishes free moral agents who always want to be of service—persons who love and appreciate their heavenly Father, God, and their King, God's Son Jesus.

This way that God has of dealing with us wicked husbandmen is gospel. This way that God has of dealing with us wicked husbandmen has power to change wicked husbandmen into righteous husbandmen. This is the "power" in the "gospel," referred to in Romans 1:16.

No husbandman of us, beginning with Adam and including those of our very day, who docs not know and feel that he has crucified Christ will be saved. Meditate on this

Christ died for the sins of the whole world of mankind God saw that to let man do the most wicked deed that it is possible to do—murder God's beloved and only begotten Son—would prove to many of us wicked husbandmen that we deserve eternal death, and when forgiven would forever after have only righteous thoughts, meditations, and deeds.

If Christ died for (or to show up) my sins, then by my sins I crucified Christ, and I am in the same predicament as they to whom Peter preached on Pentecost. Likewise is the whole of mankind.

When God watched mankind crucify Christ tears may have run down His cheeks. He must surely have turned His head. But God and Christ are now at the end of that way. They sit together in heaven, seeing the results of their work with us. It gives them joy to forgive. It is gospel—good news—to them. They are happy to see us learn how to be happy instead of overfed babies. It is a hard school for most of us, but a very efficient one. When we graduate from it we shall be thoroughly qualified and prepared for salvation.

God, chastise me when it is best; but do not, O God, do not turn from me.

One Hope of Your Calling

Ephesians 4:4

By Lydia E. Miller

WHAT is your hope? Please let me tell you of mine. Hope is likened in the Scriptures to an anchor that holds one steady while he rides out the storms of life. It takes but two words to define hope: "desire" and "expectation." One may desire to go to heaven at death to see God's face and to behold all the wonders of God's throne which John saw from the Isle of Patmos, but one can have no Scriptural expectation of going to heaven at death.

We read in God's Book: "The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men" (Psalm 115:16). Just before Jesus ascended He told his chosen disciples, "Whither I go, ye cannot come" (John 13:33). We understand, therefore, that the Book of books does not give us the expectation or hope of heaven. It does give us who are true Christians the hope of reigning on this earth. Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5).

I desire and expect to realize immortality as promised in God's Word. 2 Timothy 2:I0 and 1 Corinthians 15:51-54 are sure and plain promises of eternal life to be given the faithful at Christ's coming. I desire and expect to see Jesus and to be made like Him, but I know from God's Word that I cannot receive those blessings until Christ shall appear. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in Glory" (Col. 3:4). "We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is" (1 John 3:2).

I desire and expect to see the fulfilled promise of Revelation 22:3, saying, "There shall be no more curse." I desire and expect to see the earth filled with the glory of God, for He has promised that "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa.

11:9). My hope includes personal salvation, eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, and a blessed place at His side. I shall then be a partaker of the divine nature. No one has thus far been privileged to look upon the face of God, but Jesus has promised, "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8).

Christians are exhorted to "be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you" (1 Peter 3:15). Ephesians 4:4 speaks of "one hope of your calling." What is the one hope of the Bible? Let us see. In Acts 26:6 Paul says, "Now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers." The fathers were Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and other faithful leaders of Israel. What promise did God make unto them, which promise was yet unfulfilled in Paul's day? Let God's Word answer: "The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham: . . . and said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, . . . and come into the land which I shall show thee. . . . And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; vet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child" (Acts 7:2, 3, 5).

Thus, Stephen reminds us of the Abrahamic promises. God promised Abraham an eternal dwelling in the earth. All the land which Abraham saw was to be given to him and to his seed for an everlasting possession. Galatians 3 shows clearly that Christ is the promised Seed of Abraham. But Christ was rejected of men, and Abraham is now dead. God's Word being true, there is but one possible conclusion, and that is that this hope is yet to be realized.

Further, Romans 4:13 shows that Abraham was made

"heir of the world." For Abraham to inherit the world, and to have it for an everlasting possession, implies that Abraham will have everlasting life. Hence, Abraham must have a resurrection from the dead, and the Scripture beautifully teaches that Abraham will yet come into this blessing and at the very time when Jesus, his Seed, returns to reward not Abraham alone, but all the faithful family of Abraham who are heirs of the same promise.

"As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.... And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3; 27, 29). Without the coming of Christ there can be no future reward for Abraham, no reward for baptized Christians who are heirs with Abraham.

God will not fail to keep His promises. Reader, if you are one in the faith of Abraham you have the one hope of eternal inheritance in this earth, eternal and glorified life when Jesus comes. That Jesus invites us unto Him that we might share in the promises means so much to me.

"My hope is built on nothing less Than Jesus' blood and rightcourness;
I dare not trust the sweetest frame,
But wholly lean on Jesus' name.

"His oath, His covenant, His blood Support me in the whelming flood; When all around my soul gives way, He then is all my hope and stay."

STORIES OF GREAT HYMNS

"BLESSED ASSURANCE"

By Mary A. Gesin

FANNY CROSBY, the author of more than seven thousand hymns, was enjoying one day a visit from her dear friend, Mrs. Joseph Fairfield Knapp, who went to the piano and composed a melody. After playing it over two or three times she turned to her friend and asked her what it said. Quickly Fanny Crosby replied,

"Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine;
Oh, what a foretaste of glory divine!"

The author of so many hymns which have given comfort and cheer to countless thousands, was stricken with blindness when only six weeks old. But throughout her life she displayed a sweetness of disposition and a rare contentment. When she was only eight years old she wrote:

"O what a happy soul am I!
Although I cannot see
I am resolved that in this world Contented I will be."

In early years Fanny Crosby memorized all the first five books of the Old Testament, many of the Psalms, the Proverbs, the Book of Ruth, the Song of Solomon, and much of the New Testament. In her hymns evidence is found of her rich treasure of mind, for they abound in phrases of Scripture.

"Saved by Grace," another of her loved hymns, was written for herself, as she told those in attendance at a conference at Northfield in 1894, but finally given for publication. She was seventy-one years of age when she wrote this well known song. Her own favorite hymn was, "Faith of Our Fathers."

At the age of twenty-seven years she became a teacher in the New York Institute for the Blind. Eleven years later she married Alexander Van Alstyne, a talented musician, also blind. Together they were happy in a world they could not see. Fanny Crosby, best known and beloved of all sacred song writers, died in 1915 at the age of ninety-five years.

THE DIVORCE EVIL

By Catharine Davis

A QUINCY legislator says that divorce is so common among screen stars as to have become a menace to our boys and girls. The divorce and remarriage practices of these stars are such bad influences that an effort is being made to pass a law to keep these actors and actresses from being shown in pictures. The influence of such people is destructive to our American homes.

However, there are many other causes of divorce. Strong drink is one, and poverty and unemployment are others. Satan always finds something for idle hands to do. The most common cause of divorce is the desire to marry someone else, and the strange thing is that these people think it is all right to do so. Some of these I have known even belong to a church, but that means nothing to them.

What shall become of the children of these broken homes? What about the example set before them by the fathers and mothers? Oh, yes, some say that not much is thought of it in this modern age, but when murder of the other man or woman follows, it shows that public opinion is not dead. When there is praise for divorce—which our courts unwittingly do by granting so many—can legislators stop this evil? True, laws are needed for the unruly, but I believe there is only one force that can make people do right. That force is the true conversion of men and women. Only the love of the truth and of rightcousness can change the hearts and lives of carnal men and women. The love of Christ and His teachings can change these hardened, selfish people.

I have always thought family worship in a home to be ideal for children and parents alike, and Bible reading and prayer a help to right living. Such worship is sadly needed in American homes, and if practiced there would not be so many go wrong from so-called Christian homes.

Jesus taught that a man or woman who puts away wife or husband and marries another commits adultery and causes the one who is put away to commit adultery. Paul taught that if the unbelieving wife or husband should depart, a sister or brother is not in bondage, for God has called His people to peace.

One cannot hope to inherit the kingdom of God who lives in adultery, unless he breaks off from his sins. An adulterer cannot have hope in Christ, for all sin is of the Devil. I have always been against divorce for the sake of marrying someone else.

started in the Holy Land. It will continue until the whole earth is brought back to where it was when God said it was very good. Christ must reign until He has destroyed all enemies. "He must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:25, 26). "Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Heb. 2:14, 15). "The Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3:8).

After Christ has removed the curse, destroyed death, the devil and all his works, He is to make new all of God's works that have been under the curse. The earth and even the righteous people will be made new. "He that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new" (Rev. 21: 5). The earth will then again be in its Eden state, and God will again say, "It is good, and very good."

WILL THE LITERAL WICKED BE DESTROYED?

turn to Luke 17:29, and read, "But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all."

Jesus believed that God actually and literally destroyed those people, and I am of the same faith. Just as literally as God destroyed these people, just that literally will He destroy the ungodly in the second death with fire and brimstone, and the judgment thus carried out will be eternal because the divine decision cannot and will not be revoked through eternity. Why men and women will go forth to practice that which means their ultimate end is for them to answer. Paul was informed by the Spirit of God concerning such a time, saying, "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord. and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess. 1:7-9). Again, it is written, "For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch' (Mal. 4:1).

With this amount of evidence before us, there is no escaping the conclusion that literal destruction awaits all sinners, and that their destruction will come in the second death in which fire and brimstone will play an important part. No redemption therefrom? None whatsoever.

When God called and sent Noah to build the ark, it was an unusual thing to do, as such had never been done. But though it had never been done was no reason that it would not be accomplished. Never before had the people heard the teaching that a Flood was coming. They refused to believe that Noah knew what he thought he did. They only watched Noah from day to day building the ark. Though they never believed him before, when the clouds appeared, the thunder rolled, and the lightning flashed, men realized that Noah had been preaching the truth, that God was carrying into execution His Word, and was destroying man from the earth—all because of sin.

So it was with Sodom and Gomorrah. God completely destroyed them with fire and brimstone, and all because of sin. Jesus compares the destruction at the close of this age with that which came to the people of Noah's day. Did the Flood waters purify the people while Noah and his family were in the ark? Neither will the fire and brimstone of Revelation 21:8 do other than destroy sin and sinners in the second death, as the Scriptures so clearly teach.

HAVE THE CHURCHES FAILED?

mentals, that when their doctrines are compared with Scripture in its clear, definite, and simple language they cannot be recognized as having the same origin. They are, therefore, on these very grounds under compulsion to give equal privileges to others who differ from them.

Owing to the illogical, untenable, and incomprehensible nature of much that is taught in the name of religion, so utterly incompatible with even the elementary facts of science, the churches do not now hold the privilege of imparting instruction, and "the fear of the Lord, and knowledge of the holy" is no longer considered "the beginning of wisdom." Consequently, the nation from its infancy (and by that I mean each rising generation) has no focal Center of Authority, no standard of right, and no aim beyond the gratification of personal desires and individual capacities, from the very earliest stages of the journey of life. Under such a state of affairs is it to be wondered at that world conditions are those of strife, each ego and nation contending for the mastery, irrespective altogether of the terrible results that may fall to others? The churches today freely admit that God must come first, but no longer is God the personal Being represented by Scripture. Instead, the Being of God and His Authority and Power are subdivided into three, and no longer is God in actual fact "The Holy One of Israel"-"the Almighty."

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Gerald L. Cooper, Editor, Eden Valley, Minn.

Harry Gockler, President Route 3, Box 50-A Hammond, Louisiana Frances Munshaw, Treasurer 740 Laraway, S. E. Grand Rapids, Michigan

Minnesota State Conference

We have just returned from the Minnesota State Conference held at St. Cloud. It is not our intention to give a report, for it will be fully reported by others, but it was such a feast of God's Word that we can hardly refrain from mentioning some of the happenings there.

First, I would like to tell you of the wonderful Bible classes and sermons that were given by Brother F. L. Austin. He gave inspiration to all, but the encouragement that he gave to the young people was especially noteworthy. While he warned us that we are passing through extremely difficult times, yet he encouraged us to ever press forward in our work for the Master.

One phase of the Conference that will be interesting to Bereans was that of the State Conference going on record as encouraging and cooperating with the State Bereans in every way. As in other places, there has been a tendency for the Bereans to work independently from the adults. How this came about is not known exactly, but all that is now in the past, as far as Minnesota is concerned.

On Sunday afternoon the Minnesota Bereans held a short business session. The old officers were all retained for another year, and a discussion was held in regard to sending someone to the Summer Bible Training School. It was decided to obtain as much money as possible for this, and if there was not enough for this, to use the money in another good way. There are at least two of our young people who will attend the Training School if funds can be obtained.

We were asked to announce through these columns that if any Minnesota Berean has not paid his dollar for dollar day, there is still ample time to do so.

What Sort of Sponge Are You?

I learned something that I never knew before in one of Brother Austin's classes, and I want to pass it on to you. Did you know that before an ordinary sponge such as we sometimes use in washing our automobiles and for other needs, must be dampened before it can immediately absorb water? Brother Austin went on to tell us that he, through the medium of his Bible classes, was "dampening" us, and that we being dampened could act as sponges and absorb more of God's Word. He went further and stated that we could not even be "dampened" unless we helped "dampen" ourselves by going to the Lord in prayer and meditation before going to Bible class.

What sort of sponge are you? Are you willing to be "dampened" so that you can absorb the Word of God?

Or are you willing to just let the Word of God run off you like the proverbial "water off a duck's back"? Let us always prepare ourselves for study by prayer and meditation.

A Thought on Beauty

Elizabeth Dodge, Cleveland, Ohio

"As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion" (Prov. 11:22).

An ungodly woman does not deserve beauty, because she uses it in the wrong way. She puts herself on display, not merely in facial characteristics, but her form is usually shown in a blasphemous manner.

It is not merely the physical beauty that we value so much as the spiritual beauty which so many women possess. A beautiful woman may be beautiful mentally as well as physically. Her features may not be perfect, but her mental beauty shines out, brightening and glorifying her person. Our thoughts and our service determine whether or not we will be beautiful.

A beautiful woman may allow herself to be tempted, to do wrong, and her true beauty is at once ruined. She knows that she has sinned, and her features are marred with lines of worry. She becomes careless and thoughtless, and as this is wherein her beauty lies, it is at once destroyed. This is what happens to a fair woman without discretion.

In naming the fair women of Scripture we name the faithful. Sarah, wife of Abraham, was faithful to God and Abraham. In Genesis 12:11 we are told of her beauty: "It came to pass, when he was come near to enter into Egypt, that he said unto Sarai his wife, Behold now, I know that thou art a fair woman to look upon." Sarai was not only fair to look upon, but was also beautiful within her soul, for she trusted in God and was faithful to Abraham.

Another example is that of Esther, who saved the lives of her countrymen when Haman demanded of the king that all the Jews be destroyed. In Esther 2:7 we are told of her physical beauty, "He brought up Hadassah, that is, Esther, his uncle's daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was fair and beautiful." Her thought of kindliness toward her countrymen, and her actions, show her beauty of soul. Both Esther and Sarah were women with discretion.

Let us associate with "Beauty" the righteous acts and worthy thoughts that determine whether or not a person is truly beautiful.

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith" (2 Tim. 4:7).

Scripture: Phil. 1:12-14, 21-24; 2 Tim. 4:7, 8.

Paul's Last Letters

Paul wrote his last letters from Rome. He wanted his friends to know that whatever happened to him, Christ would be glorified the more. He turned his prison into a pulpit and preached to his guards, and even the servants of Casar's household. Then, too, he wrote to many he could not reach by his voice.

"And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more hold to speak the word without fear."

Today when someone is brave enough to stand firmly for the right, often others become stronger to resist temptations and follow Jesus more closely. So let us never sit still when we should be working for the Master. But rather, let us watch our lives so that our actions and words all point to Christ and bring more glory to His dear name.

Philippians 1:21-24 says, "Therefore, for me to live is for Christ, and to die, gain. But if to live in the flesh, this is to me a fruit of labor; and what I should choose I do not exactly know. I am, indeed, hard pressed by the two things;—(I have an earnest desire for the returning, and being with Christ, since it is very much to be preferred;)—but to remain in the flesh is more requisite on your account" (Emphatic Diaglott).

Compare these verses with the King James translation in your Quarterlies.

May each one of us so live that he can say, "I have fought a good fight, . . . henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord . . . shall give . . . at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

O, that we may say with Paul that whatever we do will be to Christ's glory and gain for His work!

Vacation Days—ECE Club

No, we have no vacation from the Holy Book. No, not from study of the Word, or from prayer, or from striving to live a godly life. We are to continue daily, pressing on—on toward that mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ.

So keep up your family devotions. And if you are very busy, part of your lesson, as the Bible story, could be told by your mother or father while you all join together in weeding a garden patch. For were not God's people of old told to talk to their children as they walked by the way? Our devotions are not a service to be held and then forgotten for the rest of the day. But if Christ is first in our lives, we will talk and sing about Him as we go about our daily duties.

Then, on that very busy day, some Bible verses may be read before the dinner or lunch is served.

But, choose a time to pray when you can really get in touch with God. Before you begin the day is a good time for a prayer of thanksgiving. We have so many reasons to be thankful!

Then, as the tasks of the day grow bigger and the burdens harder, is a good time to raise a prayer for strength and help. O, there are so many times to pray, if one will be "instant in prayer," ready to lift sincere voice or thoughts to God.

And as one prepares for rest after a busy day, then he can take time to review the day's happenings. We can all remember our mistakes, and after we have done all we can to remedy them, ask God for forgiveness and peace.

You will continue to live for Christ all summer?

"An angel paused in his upward flight, With a seed of love and truth and light, And cried: 'O where shall it be sown That it be most fruitful when it is grown?' The Savior heard and said, as He smiled, 'Plant it for Me in the heart of a child.'"

In All Things Giving Thanks

Be thankful in the morning

For the sunshine up above.
Be thankful in the evening

That God sends you His love.
Be thankful when it's noontime,

And at nighttime, too.
Be glad and thankful always

Gleanings From the Field

The editor spent the past week in Grand Rapids, Mich., in attendance at the Michigan Conference.

In the absence of the pastor of the Oregon, Ill., church, Bro. Harold Hardesty spoke in the morning, and in the evening "The Kingdom Gospel Unit," with Bro. James M. Watkins as speaker, had charge of the service. This is a newly organized body which has for its object evangelistic work in localities close to Oregon wherever openings can be found.

Sr. Belle McCandless, who spent the winter at Golden Rule Home, returned to her home in Pence, Ind., Thursday, June 15. Bro. and Sr. Lewis Romine and Jo Ann accompanied her. and spent a few days visiting in Indiana.

Bro. and Sr. George M. Siple of the Oregon, Ill., church and their granddaughter Betty Jean Lindsay are spending a few weeks in the sunny South visiting relatives in and around Hammond and New Orleans, La.

"The brethren at Mullin, Texas, have just finished putting a new shingle roof on their building, and laying a new floor. Thank God for it all."--T. A. Drinkard.

The Summer Training School announces the enrollment of Miss Emily Fyfe of Jericho Springs, Mo., and Miss Mary Richardson of Hammond, La. Both of these young ladies are active Berean workers. John Mercer of Macomb, Ill., has also registered. John was with us last year. Will those who have definitely decided to attend, please advise us at your earliest convenience.

We pray that she and we may find favor."—D. G. Harvey, Kokomo, Ind.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

All services are going along in fine shape, and the attendance has picked up considerably at both churches. The Sunday school and church service at Blood River on June 11 had the largest attendance of the entire year.

The children of the Happy Woods church gave a children's day program Sunday night, June 11, before a full house. This program was well presented and well received.

As the time draws near for the Training School in Oregon, Ill., it seems evident that at least one of our number will attend. Miss Mary Richardson of the Blood River church is the one planning to go, and we know from personal experience that she will receive much good from this school.

Harry Gockler, Pastor.

HEMINGFORD, NEBRASKA

The special meeting from May 27 to June 6 resulted in our introducing to the faith and fellowship of the Church of God three young men (cousins), Robert Zeller, son of M. E., of Alliance; Russell, son of R. E., and Charles, son of H. T., both of Hemingford.

These boys are grandchildren of Bro, and Sr. C. W. Zeller of Hemingford who came into the faith more than thirty years ago under the teaching of Sr. King at Palmer and the ministry of Elder Adams. All of the Zeller children, and also the grandchildren who are old enough to understand, are now in the faith. Brethren came to the meeting for miles. Bro. and Sr. McCann made the round trip of 180 miles each evening from Mitchell. The road is never too long if one is interested.

The new members would appreciate a let-ter from some of the Bereaus. There are four-teen among this group of believers who will soon organize a Bereau class, E. E. Giesler, Evangelist.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

Bro. James McLain of Burr Oak, Ind., conducted special services at the Dixon church from May 15 to 28. He delivered some very inspiring and interesting sermons and also favored us with some musical numbers.

The attendance was not as good as we had anticipated, but we hope the seed sown may bring forth fruit later on. There were no baptisms, but the members feel that they were greatly benefited by these services, and pray that Bro. McLain will be blessed in his evangelistic work.

We are very grateful to the Oregon choir for their choir selections. The Hardesty brothers sang some beautiful numbers, and we are indeed thankful to them.

Mrs. Wm. Ford, Seey.

Signs of the Times

By A. E. Griffiths

"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"—Jesus.

WHEN will Christ return to the earth? He has promised His people that He will return. Christians know for a certainty that Jesus will keep that promise.

Much has been written on this subject, and many dates assigned for this great event. Up to now Christ has not returned. Perhaps some may doubt and mock. Peter records, "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" (2 Peter 3:3, 4). As long as Christians are sure that Christ is coming, it does seem like procrastination in so much delay. But is it delay, or simply that we do not realize God's definition of time? Moses said, "A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday, when it is past, and as a watch in the night" (Psalm 90:4). This being the case, can our minds grasp this life's limited duration in comparison with God's idea of eternity? If not, we certainly are not in a position to judge very accurately on matters concerning the duration of this era.

Students find certain time periods mentioned in prophecy, but can they always definitely fix the commencement of these eras? If that were possible, the end would be clearly defined, which fact would not harmonize with Christ's words: "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour, wherein the Son of man cometh" (Matt. 25:13). Also, read Matthew 24:42-51; Luke 12:46.

These references discourage one from fixing any specific time for Christ's return, but on the contrary teach the lesson that true Christians must be always ready for the moment of His arrival. That thought will keep us constantly avoiding the pitfalls of the world, and working to His interests and our own future glory. This is of the utmost importance to us, and should be our chief desire in life.

However, there is one type of inquiry into this subject which is open to us. In fact, it is the most important, and that question concerns the signs referring to Christ's coming. Jesus gave us more particulars on this mode of study than any of the prophets in the Old Testament. We might almost say that He restricted Himself chiefly to signs. Jesus did not quote any dates. That being the case, is it not reasonable to suppose that we can get more satisfaction from this source of study than from trying to set a date for this great event? Jesus likened the days of Noah and Lot to the days of His coming. We have the historical events of these two lives, so we must profit by their experiences.

A. E. Griffiths

In both these cases destruction came suddenly on the people, and that is what will happen when Jesus returns. We must not overlook the fact that both of these men were forewarned, and were expecting the wrath of God to fall on the unbelievers; they who were obedient to God being saved. That is exactly the application of the prophecy to us. The world at large does not look for Christ's coming and, therefore, will be overtaken as the sinful people of Noah's and Lot's days, but we who do believe in His coming will not be caught unawares.

Paul tells us, "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief" (1 Thess. 5:4). That proves that Christians should know approximately the time of His coming, especially as the time draws near. The signs spoken of in Luke 21:25, 26 are now appearing all around us. We read in our daily papers of distress of nations, and how they are perplexed, the sea and waves roaring-meaning the multitude of people crying for help. All nations are in trouble, each one distrusting the others, and amassing enormous armament debts. These things all point to the end of this age.

One of our greatest troubles in this country, and elsewhere, is the unemployment (Please turn to page 10)

THE MOTHER OF INVENTION

That the Church of God should maintain its own school for the training of ministers and other church leaders was forcefully sounded when two of our young and talented men were recently ordained to the Christian ministry by another denomination which offers the training that youth is determined to have.

As worthy as a neighbor may be, and as joyous as he may be to bless my children, it is, nevertheless, my Godintrusted responsibility to train my own. If I fail to do my duty, and my neighbor then patiently and efficiently cares for my children, I dare not expect anything else than that their devotion and service will be interwoven with that of the foster parent.

Birds of one feather are seldom raised in the nest of another. Seldom does one mother prefer another to feed her young. Birds have instinct, at least.

Just how to organize, build, and maintain a Church of God seminary is not so much the problem, as it is to thoroughly arouse the interest and cooperative spirit of our every church and worker. All must first see the need. Necessity will then mother invention.

It would require the most flexible imagination to suppose or even desire that another denomination would give that type of training to our young people which would make them zealous leaders for the Church of God.

THE SCHOOL IN NUCLEUS

The Bible Training School, which will convene this year in Oregon, Illinois, July 5 - August 13, is a most meager beginning of a school the Church of God should have. However, it is a nucleus from which a more substantial work must ultimately develop.

God lives. He is the author of life, and His laws that govern the reproduction of life are irresistible. As surely as God is in the tree to make it bud and bear, He is likewise a very part of His people to keep them alive and fruitful. Leaders of the Church of God might well confess that the present Bible Training School was conceived in doubt and born against desire, as though God alone determined to give us new life.

As reluctant as the Church of God has been toward this new gift of life from God, we shall learn to love the child as it grows up to bless us. There must first be years of expense, sacrifice, and vigil. It will be impossible to vaccinate against all diseases. There will be sleepless nights with the burden crying in our arms. Yet, in a short while all will be amazed at the rapidity of its growth. At last there will be another generation to carry on our work. To live tomorrow we must accept and love the life that God has given us today.

THE FINAL CALL FOR STUDENTS

Youth of the Church of God, you stand on holy ground. See, hear, understand, then move at God's call. There is an almost impossible work for you to do. Mocking magicians will jeer you; Pharaoh will harden his heart against you; three plagues, at least, will haunt you; you, too, will need protecting blood upon the door. But, if you will rise up to lead God's people, there will be a mighty exodus for the Church of God.

Youth of the Church of God, you may have sinned, your own people may despise you, you may now have a most menial occupation, you may have no vision of duties that await you, you may be far from eloquent, but if you will hear and obey the Voice which speaks to you from the sun that burns and yet is never consumed, the great "I AM" of the universe will surely use you to lead the journey to the Canaan of God. An Aaron awaits to help you on the way.

ENCOURAGING ENLISTMENTS

A goodly number has already seriously considered this call to service in the Church of God, as indicated by the following students now enlisted in the coming Bible Training School: Delbert Jones of Eagle Grove, Iowa; Mary Richardson of Hammond, Louisiana; Kenneth and Malcolm Macleod and Charlotte Rahn of Pomona, California; Elwyn Stilson of South Bend, Indiana; Elsie M. Moore of Niagara Falls, New York; Mary Newell and Jeraldine Louks of Grand Rapids, Michigan; Leslie Le-Crone of Kennard, Nebraska; Emily Fyfe of Jericho Springs, Missouri; Ellsworth Routson of West Milton, Ohio; Laura McInturff and Beatrice Clem of Toms Brooks, Virginia; Vivian Kirkpatrick of Aurora, Walter Wiggins of Eldorado, John Mercer of Macomb, Evan Knodle and Evelyn Carr of Oregon, Illinois.

Several others are hoping to attend the School. To any who may be undecided we say, "COME."

Daniel Eleven and the Beast of Revelation

A Prophetic Study

By A. R. Johnson

THE scene of this article will be headquartered in Asia Minor, but the effects of these foretold events will reach to the ends of the earth. The nations will be divided into two opposing confederacies, led by "the king of the north" and "the king of the south." The southern division will be subjected to the northern by the last dictator, "a vile person" (Dan. 11:21), "man of sin," and "son of perdition" (2 Thess. 2:3), "beast" (Rev. 13), "king of Babylon" (Isa. 14; Jer. 50 and 51), "Assyrian" (Isa. 10:5).

There are three periods of time foretold in Daniel 11 which will be marked at their respective beginnings and endings by events easily discerned by us, the watchers. The first, at the beginning of the seventieth week of Daniel 9, will witness the covenant the northern ruler makes with the Israelites, causing them to prosper, to build their Temple, and be largely gathered back into Palestine—at least enough of them to be considered a nation.

It now appears that the Jews are about to be cut adrift by the British who evidently consider the Arabs more valuable as allies. This is necessary to complete the alignment of the Moslem people with the southern division. Also, it will be a very good reason for the Jews to welcome the invaders from the north (vv. 14, 22, 23).

However, this situation will be too good to last long. Friction will surely develop someplace. In verse 30 an incident is prophesied that will cause the world ruler to have a change of heart; for ships of Chittim are to come against him. This is also spoken of in Numbers 24:24 by Balaam in the days of Moses. These ships might also be airships. This incident will end the Israelitish prosperity, will bring "the time of Jacob's trouble" (Jer. 30:7), and will mark the end of the first half week and beginning of the second. This is also spoken of as "travail" (Jer. 30:4, 6), and refers to both Israel and Judah.

In this time the Israelites will again learn to call on the name of the Lord, as is evidenced by Isaiah 26:16-18 and Micah 5:3. Ezekiel sums up the situation in these words: "Son of man, the house of Israel is become dross unto me. All of them are brass and tin and iron and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are the dross of silver. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because ye are all become dross, therefore, behold, I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem. As they gather silver and brass and iron and lead and tin into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger and in my wrath, and I will lay you there, and melt you. Yea, I will gather you, and blow upon you with the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof. As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I, Jehovah, have poured out my wrath upon you" (Ezek. 22:18-22, A.R.V.).

It should be added that the Israelites were formerly in unbelief, and did not recognize the work of God among them

Zephaniah, also, wrote of this occurrence, saying, "I will take away out of the midst of thee thy proudly exulting ones, and thou shalt no more be haughty in my holy mountain. But I will leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall take refuge in the name of Jehovah" (Zeph. 3:11, 12, A.R.V.).

The thought is carried in Revelation 12:1, 2, where Israel is represented by the woman in travail. She is there shown arrayed in the sun, meaning again in God's favor, and the moon (Christ) under her feet. Prophetically, she cries out, calling again on the name of the Lord. (Cp. Isa. 26:16, 17.) Israel's persecution will be world-wide, or wherever the nation happens to be, as the main work of the last ruler foretold by Daniel is to break in pieces the power of the holy people (Dan. 12:7).

Hitler has made a beginning of what this last ruler will finish. In Revelation 12:3 the southern division is represented by the great red dragon who is merely a spectator with evil intentions. The scene culminates with the child being "caught up unto God, and to his throne" (v. 5)

The child represents the true church and all the people of God from the beginning who are to rule the world in the next age (Rev. 2:27). God will again fight for Israel, as represented by Michael warring with the dragon or the southern division of mankind. Israel, the woman of Revelation 12, will be nourished in the wilderness for the third period of three and a half years, while the church celebrates the rapture and wedding supper. All this will be preparatory to setting up the kingdom of God with headquarters at Jerusalem, and Christ's subduing the earth to rule it for one thousand years (Rev. 20:6).

While Israel is in the furnace of affliction there is another consideration which is of great importance to us. We feel there is a good reason for the prominence God has given this period in His Book. By searching His Word we learn where we are on the chart of time, and what is to be expected as we pass through these eventual three and one half years, the end of (Please turn to page 11)

Have the Churches Failed?

Article Two

By R. H. Judd

THERE are, as human standards go, no grounds for complaint regarding the moral character of thousands of splendidly earnest men and women who are foremost in leadership in the churches in the world today. But we do not live in medieval times when, because of the gulf existing between the learned and the great masses of the unlearned, it was not deemed necessary to question, much less examine, the foundations of faith. Times have changed; learning has come within the reach of all, and men are no longer willing to accept another's mere statement as all-sufficient for their belief in vital matters of personal religion.

The man of today, like the early Christians, wants more. He desires to "know the certainty (the accuracy, margin) of those things, wherein (he) has been instructed" (Luke 1:4). We believe the request is not only not unreasonable, but commendable. The real issue, then, is: Have the leaders, with their greater opportunities of knowledge, in passing on to others the beliefs which have been passed on to them, been sufficiently careful to examine their foundations? It is our belief that in this respect they have failed, and signally failed, and that they have instead sought to take the path of least resistance by endeavoring to "prop up" already tottering beliefs.

If in this article we have occasion to call attention to the specific statements of well-known men, it is because the position they hold has given wings to their message to the thousands who look to them for teaching on the Word of God. Frank examination of Biblical exegesis that has been seriously put forward in print should be welcomed on every side. Truth is what we seek, not for ourselves only, but that an ever-increasing number may build their foundations on solid rock.

As contended in our previous article, one of the main causes, indeed, the main cause, of the failure of the churches, and through their example the failure of conditions throughout the world is the lack of the recognition of authority—of Authority that is undivided, absolute, and final in relation to all mankind.

The question will naturally be asked, "Why are the churches responsible?" The answer is, "They are responsible because as leaders of the people they have departed from the worship of the one true and living God, who says, "I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God" (Isa. 44:6). Language such as this, clear and unmistakable in meaning, abounds again and again throughout Scripture. Yet the churches have, in the face of these definite declarations regarding the nature and being of God, sought to give to the people a god (or rather gods in the worship of the Trinity) so totally at variance with the facts of Scripture, so contrary to all that nature and science record, so incompatible with man's God-given reason, as to make the God they profess to worship utterly incomprehensible and unapproachable. Thus the Scriptural command to "love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. 6:5) is incapable of performance, and an unbridgeable distance is made between man and his Maker.

It is quite generally admitted in the churches in defence of the doctrine of the Trinity so commonly taught, that the doctrine is a "mystery beyond the powers of human understanding." If such is the truth, and it is, can it be wondered at that men and women in general evince no desire for acquaintance with God, and regard a knowledge of such a being as the churches describe as utterly unattainable, and fellowship and true worship as a prescribed impossibility? Are not the churches themselves thus to blame for the world being "without God"?

But in contrast with these frequently uttered statements of ministers and clergy we have God's own Word regarding Himself: "Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord" (Jer. 9:24), and "knowledge of the Holy One is understanding" (Prov. 9:10, R.V.). (See also Matt. 13:23; Luke 8:10; I Tim. 2:4.) Equally as pithy are the words of the Son of God: "This is (the purpose of) life eternal, that (in order that) they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John 17:3).

There is nothing to glory about in the declaration of the churches that "the doctrine of the Trinity is an incomprehensible mystery," but there is much for us to glory over in regard to the ever-expanding horizons of an understanding knowledge of "the only true God."

We shall consider some of the arguments put forward in defence of the doctrine of the Trinity, but before doing so it will be of interest to note some of the apologies the advocates of the doctrine feel they are obliged to make on its behalf, ere they attempt an exegesis of the subject. We believe that the discerning reader will agree that these do not in any way strengthen their position, but on the contrary weaken it.

We quote from a well-known English minister whose pamphlet is entitled "Herbert Lockyer Writes on the Trinity in the Scriptures." His work is typical of that of many other writers. On the title cover is pictured a clover leaf bearing "Father," "Son," and "Holy Spirit" on each of its three petals, respectively; and below that an open Bible. The pamphlet is published by Zondervan Publishing House, Grand Rapids, Michigan. His arguments, together with others, will be considered later.

Three times in the first three paragraphs the doctrine is expressly stated to be a "mystery," which makes one wonder if the number of occurrences is accidental or designed. That is another mystery! Turning over the leaf the author says, "This is a divine (?) riddle, where one makes three, and three make one." In the same paragraph he quotes the question of another, and asks, "Do you expect to understand the arithmetic of heaven?" The question mark after the word "divine" is ours, and we should like to suggest that "the arithmetic of heaven" is surely revealed in the Scriptures, and that the onus of proving it to be different from that of earth rests with Mr. Lockyer. We still await his proof.

On the next page Mr. Lockyer says, "The Trinity is purely an object of faith." Following that, he argues that "it cannot be demonstrated by reason," and further, "Study reveals the Trinitarian view as a view transcending reason." In our opinion such assertions as these are equivalent to saying that in some of His acts God is unreasonable, for if they are outside the pale of reason they cannot be reasonable. We would point out that God expects our "reasonable service," and man may depend upon it that all God's dealings with His creatures will be reasonable also. In Proverbs 4:7 we read, "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding." If it is wisdom to believe in the Trinity, as our friend asserts, then we are here enjoined by the Scriptures to get understanding. One should progress with the other. Every exponent of this doctrine whom the writer has met admits that it cannot be understood. Thus, the doctrine and those who believe it are condemned as being unscriptural.

May God grant that as we reverently examine the arguments advanced, a deeper knowledge of the Scriptures may result in our own lives, and that the following beautiful lines may be true of each of us:

"Hast thou found some precious treasure,
Pass it on.
Hast thou found some holy treasure,
Pass it on.
God Himself is ever giving,
Loving is the truest living,
Letting go is twice possessing,
Would you double every blessing,
Pass it on."

The Youth of Today

By Mrs. Mae Nedrow

"Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity" (1 Tim. 4:12).

WE READ so many disheartening comments these days in our current magazines and newspapers about the young people of today. But really, are they as bad as the daily press would have us think they are? Let us rather examine ourselves to see if we also may be doing the things we object to our children doing.

Is yours a home where God dwells? or do you mothers and fathers quarrel while your little ones look on with bated breath and frightened eyes, listen to the bitter words that rise to your lips? Such occurrences make lasting impressions on their lives, and they will never be erased from their memories—not as long as life lasts. I have seen just such homes, where parents drank liquor and smoked and then told their children they must not do these things. I have heard parents use the vilest kind of language in the presence of their children, and when these little ones repeated these vile words they were beaten.

Let us remember that our children were given to us to love and care for, that they would never have looked wistfully into this world were it not for us. It is the parents' duty to make a home for their children, and to see that happiness reigns within its walls. Children should bind us in love and peace.

Today I wish to pay tribute to the children and young men and women who so ardently strive to lead lives that are pleasing to God. Truly, they make mistakes, but who does not? I also know that when they do err, they are deeply repentant and ask the Father's forgiveness.

At this time of the year, especially, we of the Church of God in Oregon, Illinois, look forward to the General Conference which is held here each August. We think of you, beloved brethren, and the many young people who come from near and from far away to worship together with us, and who give a testimony of God's great love and mercy. We rejoice to learn of the work you are doing in your communities. We feel that it will be that way in the kingdom. People will come from near and far and say, "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths" (Isa. 2:3).

For the kind association of you, dear Christian workers, and especially for Christian youth, I give thanks to God. May we march bravely on in one great body. May we older ones say to the young people of today what the Apostle Paul said in his letter to Timothy: "Let no man despise thy youth: but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity" (1 Tim. 4:12).

Bonds and Imprisonments

By John Eagleston

VERY real were bonds and imprisonments in the days of Jehovah's patriarchs, prophets, and other human messengers. We start with Noah. He was told to warn the people of his day that a flood was coming that would cover the whole earth. The reason was that the minds of the people were so perverse and grossly wicked. The Creator said He would destroy every soul that He had created, except one man and his family whom He knew believed what He said. Noah is the first messenger on record sent by his Creator to rebuke sinful man, and to bring to his mind that his actions and even the imaginations of his mind were continually evil, and unless he repented he would be destroyed.

Was Noah faithful in delivering this message? Well, he preached it as one subject for nearly one hundred twenty years. Did he get many converts? Not one outside of his immediate family, and his own sons' wives. There were great numbers of people living in the neighborhood of the Garden of Eden in those days before the Flood. Would you think these people, whom Noah was continually rebuking for their wickedness, loved him for so doing? We can safely imagine that they conspired and plotted against him to get rid of him, and tried their level best to shut his mouth. There is no account on record that they bound him or imprisoned him, but it is safe to say that Noah was faithful against much criticism. Undoubtedly, the plans and specifications for the ark were given Noah by Jehovah's messengers. These inspired specifications would help to keep up his zeal and courage, not only in building the ark, but in preaching to those ungodly sinners who were repugnant in the sight of God. Was Noah's preaching all in vain? Verily, no! The time came when Noah was told to take his family and his sons' wives into the ark. When those eight souls were in, Jehovah shut the door.

The crowd could then get angry if it wanted to. Some possibly threw stones at the ark, or laughed and danced, saying, "Thank goodness, we shall not have that old 'crank' continually harping on his flood proposition." Possibly, some said, "Why, the first thing you know those wild animals he has in there will be starting a rough house, and we shall have to help him out." They were no doubt glad to see the back of Noah. But Jehovah does not forget.

When the only ones who were of any account from God's standpoint were cared for, it was not long until Noah's words of warning were most terribly brought to pass. Cries and threats were then of no avail. The mighty Creator showed no mercy, but thundered down His wrath upon the sinful earth until every living soul that breathed on the earth perished. But those of the one family who believed and obeyed still trusted their Maker. They believed God would guide their rudderless bark to a safe haven in due time, which we know He did. What about His enemies? None was to be found anywhere!

Thus, the faith of the first great messenger is a lesson which has come down through all the ages, and the Son of God Himself used this same story to show how corrupt humanity would again become in the close of our present dispensation. We may expect similar conditions. "Except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved." He saw how terribly disastrous the effects of sin and warfare would be. The Flood was bad enough. It accomplished Jehovah's purpose, and in a merciful way after all, because to be drowned could not be so bad as to be blown to pieces by bombs, suffocated with gas, or to go through other tortures man has invented to destroy everything.

Now, it is a long way from Noah to the prophets, to Jesus and His faithful apostles, and especially to our beloved Apostle Paul, chosen and sent to all the Gentiles it was possible for one to reach. Yet Paul's faith in God was much like Noah's faith. What a testimony Paul left at every place! Did he flinch from proclaiming the whole truth? Hear his own words in Acts 20:27, "I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." Such admonition given freely by Paul at that time had cost him dearly, yet he went on giving time and talent, sacrificing himself for the honor of being one of the Master's chosen messengers. Those who follow Paul's example and faith will be able to say even with him, "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ" (Phil 3:8). We should also be able to say with the Master, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (John 2:17). There is plenty of room for more zeal among our brethren, especially among the spokesmen. Perhaps a little more persecution would put us on our mettle, testing us as to whether or not we are really living up to what we are telling others.

The testimony of the apostles and others following them, shows that they carried their lives in their hands when they dared to fully proclaim the resurrection of the dead, and to sound warnings. Who among us would be brave enough today to demand of the Supreme Court of the United States as Paul demanded of Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?" (Acts 26:8). Are we afraid of suffering bonds and imprisonment for Christ? There are now many in Germany who are gracefully suffering per-

Redemption in Christ's Blood

By R. M. Abbott

THE BIBLE is a history of the past, a prophecy of the future, as well as a reference work referring to various subjects; but the most important of all to Christians is the Bible's plan of redemption that is made plain for us, both in type and in reality.

Transgression left the transgressor doomed to death, and from that condition there was no way of escape. The world must have looked dark to the ones who started sin in the world, when they realized their sin and loss. But God, who is a God of love, did not leave them long without hope, for He promised them that there would be a way of escape for the future people of the world. He said the seed of the woman would bruise the serpent's head, meaning, as we see in the Bible records, that a way of redemption would be provided.

In Exodus we read an account of a plan of redemption that was promised and carried out, that was a type of the redemption that you and I depend upon today for the salvation of our lives. The events leading up to this record concerned the mission of Moses in securing the release of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. Thus far Pharaoh had refused to let the people go, though different plagues had been visited upon Egypt because of his stubborn refusal. We next read of a plague that came upon Egypt, a disaster worse than any of those that had preceded it. This was the slaying of the first-born.

The principal truth that we should get from this is the part that blood played in the redemption of the Israelites from their bondage. Egypt, where the Israelites were in slavery or bondage, has always been taken to be a type of sin, and the people who were delivered from Egyptian slavery to be a type of people redeemed from sin. Now, we want to find out just how important a place blood held in the redemption of the people who were released.

We are living in a time when some are telling their listeners that blood has nothing to do with salvation from sin, but it is only safe for us to look to the Word of Truth for our decisions in the matter. Better by far a single "thus saith the Lord" than all that men may say to the contrary. Let us read the history of the plan that was devised for the redemption of the Israelites. Beginning at Exodus 11 we have record of what was to befall the Egyptians. In chapter 12, reading to verse 13, we have the provision to be made for the escape of the Israelites. Also see verses 21-23. We have the results given in verses 29, 30.

Thus, we see that there was one thing that saved the first-born of the Israelites from death, and that was the blood upon the doorposts. God had promised, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you." The blood was not applied to the people, but to the doorposts; thus telling us that it was faith in the blood that saved them. Had they had no faith in the blood they would never have applied it to their doors. It is the same in the provision that is made for us under the gospel plan: it is faith in the blood of Christ that provides redemption for us—"Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood" (Rom. 3:25).

Thus, we see that the first-born of Egypt were saved from death through faith in the blood. They had been promised by the Lord that "when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the Lord will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you." They naturally had faith in God, but with faith in God and with no blood on the door, death would be the result. Thus, they were saved from death through blood. Just so, we are saved from the penalty of sin through the blood of Christ: "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins" (Col 1:14). Our redemption is wholly dependent upon the blood of Christ: "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter 1:18, 19).

The Israelites were freed from any possibility of death through just one thing, and that was blood. Just the same way the sinner is freed from his sins by just the one thing, and that is the blood of Christ. How much of his sin is he freed from by blood alone? All of his sins: "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellow ship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin (1 John 1:7).

The question may arise, What followed after the Israelites had been saved from death through their faith in the blood? The answer is that they were baptized. This typifies the exact course that believers are to take today. First, to believe in the blood and be saved from past sins, and then to be baptized.

Had the Israelites stayed in Egypt after they were saved from death through their faith and application of the blood, they would never have been delivered from Egyptian bondage. Using Egypt as a type of sin, it was necessary for these people to get clear away from sin, and leave it in the past, if they were to be free. This they did by leaving Egypt and traveling toward the Promised Land, until they came to the Red Sea, They crossed the Red Sea, putting that between them and Egypt, just as water baptism to the believer today puts a mark between the sins of the past and the life of the new man that is to be lived from then forward. Egypt had no more hold on them after they were baptized in the Red Sea, and sin is to have no more hold on the believer after baptism (Rom. 6:14).

Someone may object to saying the Israelites were baptized in the Red Sea. I have seen the time-when I would have thought that impossible, but the Word confirms the fact that they were (1 Cor. 10:1, 2). We read, "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." When were they baptized? After they were saved from Egypt and their past bondage, and had left Egypt (the type of sin) behind. To us in the gospel age this tells that it is necessary for the sinner to believe in the blood of Christ in order to be saved from all past sins, be separated from them, and then be baptized to bury the dead past—typifying Christ's death, His burial, and His resurrection. "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin" (Rom. 6:6).

The expression, "the old man," occurs elsewhere in the Bible, as in Ephesians 4:22: "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man," and in Colossians 3:9: "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds." It refers to the corrupt human nature. In contrast to "the old man," believers are to "put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him" (Col. 3:10). This will make it plain how believers are to be new creatures in Christ Jesus. Putting off "the old man" and putting on the new would surely mean a different man after so great a change. What became of "the old man"? "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed." The wording here is, "crucified with him." If we are crucified with Him it is fair to believe that "the old man" was crucified at the cross where Jesus was. To some the preaching of the cross is not desired. They say it sounds too literal. But with Paul each should say, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world" (Gal. 6:14). There is a danger of preaching too little regarding the cross and what it stands for, for there is no greater or more important message than that of the cross. Paul said, "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God" (I Cor. 1:18).

Jesus completed the plan of redemption at the cross, and He died at the cross, "having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself" (Col. 1:20). "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins" (Eph. 1:7). "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past" (Rom. 3:25).

mission of sins that are past" (Rom. 3:25).

To avail oneself of all the benefits that Jesus' death on the cross procured for men it is necessary that one believe that they are for him, and that by believing he is to be redeemed from the curse under which every person is born. Having faith in His blood for the atonement of one's sins, and acting accordingly by his confession of them, one is saved from the condemnation under which he lived before he believed. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:16), and he would stand condemned even though he were baptized if he did not believe. Salvation depends upon faith (belief) and there are some who have been baptized but who do not believe. This is evidenced by the life they live. They are no more interested in Christian work after baptism than they were before. They take no particular part in the program of furthering the gospel, and are by all appearances not deeply interested. Their language and their daily living have in them the same faults that were there before baptism, while the requirement is that they be new creatures in Christ and that all the old things are to be exchanged for new ones. Can it be saying too much that there is every indication that "the old man" was not crucified before baptism, but came up in the life after baptism to still rule that life?

The trouble is, some have depended on baptism to rid them of sin, instead of using the means provided for that purpose, and that is "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." When we have exercised faith in His blood for the forgiveness of sins that are past, we have then crucified "the old man," and we have something to bury in baptism. We should never try to bury "the old man" as long as he has any life in him. The blood cleanses from all sin, and it takes faith to accept it. "He that believeth not shall be damned," and that even though he may have been baptized.

Baptism by itself has no saving merit. Salvation is through faith in the work of Christ that was accomplished on the cross. There are instances in the Bible where some were saved through faith without, or at least before, baptism, but there is no instance where anyone was ever saved by baptism alone.

When the jailer asked, "What must I do to be saved?" he was told, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." What was it that was to save him? Belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. Not one word was said about baptism. When was he baptized? After he believed. This is the same in other instances. Speaking of the people of Samaria, we have these words: "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts 8:12). They were baptized after they believed the preaching of the gospel. Believing, they must have been exercised by their belief in what they heard, and if they were, "the old man" had been crucified, and they were ready to bury him in baptism.

All know the incident referring to Paul's intention of going to Damascus, where he expected to afflict the people of God. When he was stricken with the bright light he heard the voice saying, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me." The question is sometimes raised, "When or where was Paul converted?" Some think one way, and some another. The meaning of the word "converted" would have a tendency to make us believe that it would refer to having a changed mind. Paul's mind was made up when he started on his trip to Damascus, to persecute the church people when he would arrive there, but he changed his mind, or he had his mind changed. So, "When was Paul converted?" is easily answered. Whereas he was going to afflict the people of God, he said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" It is plain to see that his mind was changed from opposing the Lord to being willing to do His will. If this is true, then Paul was converted at least three days before he was baptized. This is the word that was given to Paul of what he should do: "Arise, (comma) and be baptized, (comma) and wash away thy sins, (comma) calling on the name of the Lord" (Acts 22:16). Some get the idea that by water baptism Paul's sins were to be washed away. There is just one way spoken of by which we are washed from our sins, and that is by the blood of Christ: "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood" (Rev. 1:5). There is no other way provided, and we are warned that "without shedding of blood is no remission." If we say, "The child has no shoes," we mean it has no shoes at all, and if there is no remission without the shedding of blood, there is not any remission by any other means. "This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. 26:28).

In Luke 24:46, 47 we read the commission given to the apostles to evangelize, and these are His words: "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." In the light of all the scriptures relating to the blood of Christ being necessary for the remission of sins, what would the apostles preach to fulfill this commission? They were told that "remission of sins should be preached," and since there is no remission without the shedding of blood, would there be anything left for them to do but to preach remission through the blood of Christ by which we are cleansed "from all sin"?

How are we saved? "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Why are we baptized? "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus" (Gal. 3:26-28).

Who are baptized? Those whose sins have been remitted through Christ's blood or, in other words, only believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. The people who were saved in the Ark were godly people, and they were that before they went into the Ark, as we read in Genesis 6:9: "These are the generations of Noah: Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked (Please turn to page 10)

The Second Coming of Christ

By E. O. Stewart

SOME people take the position that Christ came on the day of Pentecost. Others say He came at the destruction of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. But the latest interpretation is that He came in the year 1914.

When people who take any one of the several positions mentioned are pressed for evidence of a past coming, the answer is, "He came in a spiritual sense." They seem to forget that Jesus said, "My peace I leave with you," and, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." So, if there be such a thing as a spiritual presence, Jesus has never left the believers in that sense, and of course it could never be spoken of as a future event.

When Christ comes the second time, the dead saints are to be raised incorruptible, and the living saints are to be changed and caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air (1 Thess. 4:16, 17).

Where is the evidence of so wonderful an event? If it took place on Pentecost, Paul was mistaken when he stated that Hymenaeus and Philetus erred concerning the truth, and had overthrown the faith of some in teaching that the resurrection was a past event (2 Tim. 2:17, 18).

If Christ came at the destruction of Jerusalem, or in 1914, there is absolutely no proof of the resurrection of the saints. But someone might say that the dead saints could be raised and caught away secretly. That might be possible, and granting that that could be true, there still remains an explanation which shrouds the whole affair in mystery. The living saints are to be changed and caught up together with the risen saints.

Who missed any of their Christian associates in A.D. 70, or in 1914? Where is the history of any such change, or the miraculous absence of loved ones at either date? Why claim that Christ has come the second time when the evidence robs that long-looked-for event of the fond expectation of every dead and living Christian, namely, resurrection and change

Pastor Russell, a man who must be given credit for bringing to light many wonderful truths, died in the year 1915. Why was he not changed in 1914, if Christ came then? "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven." The dead shall be raised and the living changed, and all shall be caught up together in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: "Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming" (1 Cor. 15:23).

This article will be followed by another, treating on the difference in advent, presence, and revelation.

REDEMPTION IN CHRIST'S BLOOD

with God." It has always been held that the Ark was a type of Christ. As the people who were saved in it were righteous people, it is fair to say they would be a type of people who come into Christ today by baptism. This will agree with 1 Peter 3:20, 21, where we read: "Once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."

Thus, we see the need of believing in the blood of Christ for the remission of sins, and the absolute need of water baptism in order to come into Christ and to put on Christ.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

To be saved, two things are needed: to believe and to be baptized. To be lost, only one thing is needed, and that is to fail to believe.

secution, and many of them have said less than I have written here. But what do we find among ourselves? Many are ready to fight for a name, rather than dare to suffer for a kingdom—even Christ's kingdom which will eventually cover the earth.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

problem. This is today the greatest of all difficulties to overcome here and in all countries, except in Germany where there is a shortage of labor. Strange as it may seem, this fact is driving that country to disaster. All the nation's workers are busy producing munitions of war, leaving farming and food production neglected. Consequently, the necessities of life are getting scarce in Germany, which is beginning to cause dissatisfaction in many quarters. This cannot last much longer. The people must eat! When their rations give out there will be a general revolt against such conditions. Germany faces revolution or war.

A few months ago we spoke of Germany as being the nation to represent Gog, referred to in Ezekiel 38:2, 3. This power at present is in league with Italy which holds Libia and Ethiopia. These two countries are mentioned in verse 5 as being part of this company, thus appearing to fit in with present conditions. Germany has been very quiet lately. The opposition from England and France has cooled Hitler's ardor for the time being. However, it is generally calm before a storm. We must carefully watch this nation for developments. Internal unrest in Germany is sure to bring about a change of feeling among the people. If they break loose it will mean the fall of Danzig, followed by a general advance east, which is in the direction of Palestine.

Hitler himself seems to be designated in Daniel 11: 36-39. He has magnified himself above every god, and spoken against the God of gods. He does not regard the God of his fathers, but honors the god of forces (of munitions, margin). He certainly is making munitions his god. He is opposed to Christians as well as Jews, especially the Catholic element. These descriptions all seem to fit the man in question. When this power invades the Holy Land, it will be opposed by "the king of the north" (Russia), and "the king of the south" which undoubtedly represents the British Empire. We must remember that Edom, Moab, and Ammon escape out of his hand (Dan. 11:41). These countries are in the hands of the British at the present time, and they may be expected to fight for the Jews.

When the stage is all set for this scene, the divine power will appear. "It shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face" (Ezek. 38:18). "And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord God: every man's sword shall be against his brother" (38:21). Here is a very significant text "I will call for a sword . . . throughout all my mountains." The word "mountain" in prophecy refers to a government or nation. At this time God's judgments will not be confined to Palestine only, but will operate all over the earth, "throughout all (His) mountains."

That thought harmonizes with Jeremiah's prophecy: "Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation... The slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: ... they shall be dung upon the ground" (Jer. 25:32, 33). Read, also, Isaiah 66:16, which corroborates this statement. This means that conditions of war will not be confined to the Holy Land, but will be general all over the earth. We realize that conditions are now bad everywhere, but they have not yet reached that unbearable stage, or the saints would have been already taken away.

Remember what Jesus said: "Except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved" (Matt. 24:22). It would be a sad report for us to hear that Christ was at the Mount of Olives, for if we are chosen for eternal life we must be with Him there in the immortal state. If we are not there when He appears it will mean that we have been rejected. These thoughts will keep us constantly watching for the signs leading to Christ's coming, and those signs are chiefly the disposition of the nations we have been reviewing and their ascendency to power.

Gog must become powerful before our angel comes to us and says, "The Lord awaits you, follow me." And if we live to hear these, or similar words, we shall know that our dead brethren have already left their graves and are speeding into the presence of Jesus. What a wonderful time that will be!

A resurrection passage which is frequently misinterpreted is worth a moment's study: "Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them (the dead) in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air" (1 Thess. 4:17). The original Greek text omits the definite article referring to clouds. It reads, "shall be caught up together in clouds," meaning a quantity, and not referring to the atmosphere. Naturally, we shall travel through air as our immortal nature will be able to overcome the laws of gravitation, the same as Jesus did when He ascended to heaven. Also, the angel that appeared to Manoah and his wife was not subject to the laws of gravitation. "When the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, . . . the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame of the altar" (Judges 13:20). These facts of history prove that the saints in their immortal state will have control over the elements, and will pass with ease through the air. Their quantity will be like a cloud in the same sense as Gog is to come down on the land of Israel: "Thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land" (Ezek. 38:9). We do not understand that the land will be darkened by a cloud of saints, but that a quantity will pass from the point where they were raised, or changed, to the point where Christ awaits them. This simplifies this text, and does away with the thought of an immortal soul floating away in space, which is the orthodox interpretation.

These thoughts bring us to the conclusion of our study. Let us remember Paul's advice "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. But continue thou in the things that thou hast learned" (2 Tim. 3:12-14). Thus, we are reminded that only "through much tribulation" shall we "enter into the kingdom of God" (Acts 14:22).

Christians must look for the condition of the world to get continually worse. As soon as we see the Holy Land in danger of invasion, we may know that the Lord is at the door. Nothing then can interest us, except a messenger from Him to relieve us of the pains and woes of our mortal nature. Then we shall witness the salvation of God, and the destruction of all the evil nations that now predominate on the earth. What a glorious day that will be!

DANIEL 11 AND THE BEAST OF REVELATION

which is marked by Israel's deliverance and our Savior's coming for His bride. Daniel 11:32-35 shows an active, energetic church at that period. These "exploits" of God's people (v. 32) will be world events, though the world will be ruled by one "vile" man. Daniel 7:21 reveals a persecution of the saints as also does Revelation 13:7.

However, the church will survive, even though war is made upon it by the evil ruler of the earth. This is depicted in Revelation 13:11 by the two-horned beast that spoke as a dragon, and came up out of the earth, or from among mankind. Rulers for ages have desired a united people. As a means to this end, they ever seek to have all men of the same religious faith, or of no faith at all.

This final great dictator will be no exception during his persecution of Israel. He will even desecrate Israel's Temple, and proclaim himself to be God (Isa. 14:14; 2 Thess. 2:3, 4). In this regard, his forerunners are already with us; also a challenge to the church of the southern division whose claim is that she rules in Christ's stead.

The beast that will come up out of the abyss represents church and state, and will be presided over by the false prophet (Rev. 19:20). This beast power will do certain miracles and works to glorify his master, the great dictator. An image will be built, of which Mussolini's is a forerunner, and Nebuchadnezzar's image (Dan. 3) was a type. The Savior referred to this image in Matthew 24:15 as something His disciples would see, and it will "stand in the holy place." The Savior indorsed Daniel the Prophet in this, calling it the "abomination of desolation."

Like Nebuchadnezzar's efforts in this line, there will be penalties for not worshiping according to prescribed form. It is interesting that there will be two penalties, evidently one for each division—the north and the south. The south will evidently retain its religious forms, and will seek to unify its people, compelling them to comply with its majority through the power of regulating buying and selling (Rev. 13:15-17).

Daniel says that the wise among the people should instruct many, in spite of the beast's war with the saints, stating that they will "fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil many days" (Dan. 11:33). It is evident that many of Israel will be instructed by the twelve stars on the head of the woman of Revelation 12:1. That Elijah will be one of these is evident from Malachi 4:5. Besides, there will have to be disciples of Christ there to see that "abomination of desolation" when it is set up.

Much in the Good Book refers to this stirring period. We believe it was put there that when the time arrives Christians might have sufficient knowledge and courage to withstand the trials to come. Overcomers are spoken of; let us strive to be among that number.

The Savior referred to these times with this warning to His disciples: "Watch ye at every season, making supplication, that ye may prevail to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man" (Luke 21:36, A.R.V.). Nearly all of the book of Joel refers to this period, also Ezekiel 38. The Savior also referred to it as a time of treachery when "the love of many shall wax cold" (Matt. 24:12).

Elijah's drought of three and one half years was a type of the world's coming drought, which will end with the deliverance of Israel, the bride meeting the Lord in the air (1 Thess. 4:17), the defeat of the great dictator, and the temporary close of the gospel age.

BEREANS AT WORK

Blood River Berean Class

The Blood River Bereans meet every Thursday night at the church, and at present are studying Berean Bible Studies, Book Two. The interest is good, and the average attendance is fourteen.—Effic Wall, Secretary.

Ponchatoula Berean Class

The Ponchatoula Berean class meets every Monday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bankston. We are studying Berean Bible Studies, Book One, and find the lessons most helpful. The average attendance is twelve.

DEPARTING TO BE WITH CHRIST

By Thelma Richardson, Hammond, La.

"For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better" (Phil 1:21-23). These were the words of the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Philippian brethren.

This text is often incorrectly interpreted by believers of human immortality. According to their belief, Paul meant that he expected to leave his body when he died and go to heaven where Christ is. According to our understanding, Paul's gain in dying was not gain for himself, but for Christ. If he lived he could continue to preach Christ, but if he died his death would cause many others to accept his teachings because of his martyrdom. Hence, there would be gain for Christ.

Paul knew that self meant nothing, and that Christ meant everything. He was in a strait "betwixt" life and death. However, his sincere desire was for neither death nor mortal life, but a third thing which is "far better," that blessed hope of our Lord's appearing. If Paul died there would be no gain for himself, because the "dead know not any thing" (Eccl. 9:5). He wanted to witness the Lord's coming and be changed (1 Cor. 15:51-54). "To depart" is from the Greek word analusia, which is translated "return" in Luke 12:36, and is used in connection with the Savior's coming again.

From Scriptural evidence the truth is before our eyes. A false interpretation will not harmonize with other texts. May we learn to more fully have that same desire which Paul had.

EVERY CHRISTIAN A SALESMAN

By Wylodine Lederer, Willoughby, Ohio

Please read Romans 12:6-21 in connection with this article.

Every Christian is a salesman. I think all know what a salesman is. At one time or another each of us has sold something.

In successful selling we discovered the first thing we needed was a good product. This soap or that cleaner—perhaps you used it, or your neighbor used it—was found to be good. You liked it after you had tried it. When you were convinced that it was a good product, it wasn't hard for you to sell it to others. One must believe in what he sells.

Each one of us is a salesman. Our product is our religion. Have you honestly tried it? Is it good? Do you like it? Are you convinced that it is the best product? Unless you have put into practice the teachings of Jesus, and have actually tried Christianity, how can you hope to sell the teachings of Christ to others?

Now, what are some of the ways we sell our religion? We sell through writing, through music, some through speaking, and another through simply being an animated testimonial letter—a living proof that he practices what he preaches.

Paul tells us in Romans 12 that Christians are given different talents. He names some of them and he tells us the ways we can sell. We see there are many, many ways in which we sell our religion. Whether we are active or not, we are still selling. We must be very careful not to misrepresent such a worthy product by living an insincere life. Let us be sure that what we salesmen sell, day by day, is the product of which our Head Salesman, Jesus Christ, would approve.

WHAT CONSTITUTÉS A BEREAN?

Several times within the past year I have been asked the above question, especially in regard to the age limit of a Berean. Perhaps that same question has been asked you. May I quote the answer I have given? "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so" (Acts 17:11). You will note the requisites for Bereans in this verse that tells about the original ones. I leave you to judge for yourself whether or not you are a real Berean!

"Give thy servant therefore an understanding heart . . . that I may discern between good and bad" (1 Kings 3:9).

Lesson: 1 Kings 3:5-15.

A KING WHO STARTED RIGHT

Solomon means "peaceful." He reigned forty years as king of Israel. His father, David, ruled before him. David was told that his son Solomon would have peace during his reign and would rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem.

Do you know how Solomon gained his riches? When he became king he was not more than twenty years of age. His kingdom was very large. Soon after he became king he went to Gibeon, a few miles north of Jerusalem, where the altar of the Lord stood until the Temple was built. There Solomon made offerings and worshiped God.

That night God came in a dream to Solomon, and said, "Ask of me whatever you choose, and I shall give it to you." It was then that Solomon said he was only a child and did not know how to rule God's large number of people. So he asked the Lord to give him wisdom and knowledge that he might judge God's people and know how to rule them aright.

That request pleased the Lord, so He told Solomon, "Since you have not asked of me long life, nor great riches, for yourself, nor victory over your enemies, nor great power, but have asked wisdom and knowledge to judge this people, I have given you wisdom greater than that of any king before you, and greater than that of any king that shall come after you."

This dream came true. Solomon began at once to make use of his wisdom. Do you remember the story of the two women who claimed the same child? How did Solomon decide which woman was the mother?

THE BEST CHOICES

Today we have to make choices, too. We are told that if we strive daily and are "faithful unto death" we shall receive a "crown of life."

Many of us have Christian parents. We are regular Sunday school students. In other words, we have a pretty good beginning in walking the Christian road. But what the outcome will be depends upon our efforts to constantly—daily, hourly, moment by moment live for Christ and keep His "Royal Law" of neighborly love.

Solomon had a very good beginning, but we learn that he married women who were idol worshipers. Did they strengthen him in his faith in God? No! They caused him to turn aside. We are told in honor to prefer one another. We are also told to not be unequally yoked together with unbelievers. If we begin to think of these things while we are young, when we are grown we shall be more likely to choose life companions from our own church circles.

Boys and girls, we have very important issues to decide. Shall we serve God every day? Shall we take Him with us to school? on our vacation trips? Shall we put Him first, and trust He will provide for our needs? Shall we sell anything that God does not approve of in order to earn our way?

ECE CLUB NEWS

Six more join our parade today. Their names are sent in by Dorothy Frazier of Cleveland, Ohio, Thank you, Dorothy Frazier!

The new members are: Ralph Lederer, George Lederer, Wylodine Lederer, Irene Mary Smith, Doris Jean Smith, and Jackie Hearps.

Sr. Frazier also promises us a picture to be soon published on our page. If there are any other groups who can have regular photographs taken, send them to me and we shall publish them. We should have some pictures of our club members. Don't you agree?

Perhaps all those who attend the Oregon, Illinois Bible School and General Conference can get together. How about it? Will you be there? It starts August 1. Write to me if you plan to attend.

MEMORY'S BOOK

How would you like it if every night, When you have gone to bed, You had to listen to every word, That day you had thought or said?

If through all the day you say pleasant words, And none that will make folks weep, At night you can look through memory's book. Then happily fall asleep.

At the annual business meeting, held the carly part of June, all the old officers were re for their positions. As one brother held two offices, those of deacon and trustee, we elected a new deacon. Bro. John Coulter was selected for this place. Also at this meeting, the pastor of the church was rehired for the coming year.

Bro. Earl Brossard who spent the major portion of the winter in a hospital in Minne-apolis has been home for some time, and con-tinues to improve slowly but surely. We pray for his entire recovery.

We are eagerly looking forward to the meetings to be held here June 27 to July 9 by Bro. F. L. Austin.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

We are pleased to report that at the regular We are pleased to report that at the regular church service at Blood River Sunday morning, June 18, six persons came forward and requested baptism. In the afternoon of the same day they were all baptized into the saving name of Jesus. Their names and addresses are as follows: Mrs. Lottie McKinney, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Foster, Mr. William McKinney, all of Springfield, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hutchison of Hammond, Rt. 1. All of these have been contemplating baptism for some time, and we trust that they will ever remain true to the teaching of the gospel.

true to the teaching of the gospel.

We might mention that a new copy of Young's Concordance has recently been added to the memorial library at Blood River. Mr. and Mrs. George Siple and their grand-daughter, Betty Jean Lindsay, of Oregon, Ill., are visiting relatives and friends in and around Hammond, and, of course, are attend-ing all our various services at the Happy Woods church, We are glad to have them with us, Harry Gockler, Pastor.

TO OUR BROTHERHOOD

I am coming to you again, asking for more liberal contributions to the National Bible Institution that its activities may be kept going. We always experience difficulty in this regard during this season of the year. Many of our people feel that they can contribute only a limited amount for religious purposes, and at this season the State Conferences and General Conference must be supported and attended; the Bible Training School must be supported. and others want to take vacation trips, etc., all of which requires expenditures of money, of which requires expenditures or money, of which none seems to have great amounts. Furthermore, all of the above mentioned things are proper, needful, fully justified, and should be supported.

However, the different activities of the National Bible Institution are regular, and serve our people with an up-to-date paper, fresh from the press every week, the best Sunday school quarterly published for our Sunday schools, with tracts in quantities for distribution generally, to say nothing of Golden Rule Home, commended most highly by all who visit and inspect it. In a word, the National Bible Institution serves as a sort of clearinghouse for our churches in the several states. But we must have more money from some source to keep our work going, and the only source from which I feel justified in seeking this relief is our brotherhood.

You have done splendidly in the past few ears in keeping our work going, and in addition to this, contributing thousands of dollars for payment of accumulated indebtedness, and for which payment we are now on the last lap. A few hundred more and the last outstanding note against the National Bible Institution will be destroyed.

But can't you make some extra sacrifices at this time to help us over the present emergency? Soon there will be no indebtedness fund column in The Restitution Herald asking for contributions. We probably will never see the time in this life when we will not be called upon to make contributions for the support of our work. Indeed, making contributions and sacrifices are the means by which Christianity is kept alive and developed in us. But this is much easier to do when we are not burdened with old notes that seem constantly to be falling due and payment expected, if not de-

to the National Bible Institution a clean slate at our coming General Conference, and I am asking you kindly to make some special sacrifices if necessary, that this may be accom-plished, to the glory of the Lord and the benefit of the church.

L. E. Conner, President and Manager.

NOTICE OF 1939 CENSUS

Blanks have been sent to all churches for recording the membership statistics in preparation for this year's report, as ordered last year by the General Conference. By the time you read this they should be in your hands.

This is a reminder to kindly be prompt in filling out the blanks and returning them, so that all churches will be enumerated. You have only a month to do it. All reports should be in my hands by July 25, Carefully record the changes in your memberships since a year ago. Let all figures be as recent and as accurate as it is possible to make them.

Churches in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and Minnesota are being handled through their State secretaries. Please cooperate with them in furnishing any further information requested. If there is any church, or any group of Church of God members, anywhere outside of the four states named, which has not received a blank, notify me at once, and you will be sent one. Or send your report on a plain sheet or post card, answering by number.

The following information is desired of every church:

1. Is your church organized, having officers and meetings?

2. Do you have a pastor? Part time or full time?

If so, give pastor's name and address.

Church secretary's name and address. Do you have your own church building?

6. How many members on your church roll now? How many were lost during the past year by death, etc.? How many added by baptism or otherwise?

7. How many members has your Sunday school now? How many a year ago?

8. How many are in your Berean or young people's society now? A year ago?

Send all reports, as soon as possible, directly

MEETINGS IN ARKANSAS

While in Arkansas, from where we have just returned home, we preached at Pisgah, Cleveland, Lord's Schoolhouse, McGintytown. Little Rock, Bear, Walnut Grove, and Wave land. At every place interest was splendid considering the rainy weather. We are to return to each of the above places mentioned for meetings in July and August. We look forward with much interest, and ask your prayers for successful meetings.

Wife is in very poor health, and drug bills add to the expense of living. If any feel like contributing to our necessities, you may address me at Sweetwater, Texas, Box 485.
Thanks.

HOLBROOK, NEBRASKA

Here are just a few lines to let you know we are still faithful in the work of our Lord and Master. Although we are few in number. we are strong in the faith.

We have our Sunday school every Sunday morning, also our midweek prayer and Bible service. The first Sunday of each month we have an all-day meeting with Bro. Giesler as speaker. June 11 was our special day this month, as Bro. Giesler was at Hemingford, Nebr., holding meetings, and could not be with us on our scheduled day. But we had our regular Sunday school and two good sermons. with the Communion service.

Sr. Mila Scott has been sick, but is better at this writing. Sr. Leona Lathrop has just returned from visiting the New York fair. Mrs. Arthur Barnett.

THE OUARTERLY CONFERENCE IN CALIFORNIA

The Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in California was held at the Los Angeles church on Sunday, June 4. We have never had a more interesting meeting. The church was crowded to overflowing all day with loyal members, many of whom came miles to enjoy the fellowship with which we, as Christians. are blessed. Distant towns represented were Hanford, Tulare, Ventura, Santa Ana, River-side, Tustin, and Norco. As usual, many of our members attended from Pasadena, Long Beach, and Compton. The Pomona church was our welcome guest.

Sr. Railsback, who addressed us in the morning, had as her subject "Prophecy." She used many references from David to prove to us that our Lord is indeed soon to come. Bro. Elton of Ventura broke and blessed the Communion bread for us.

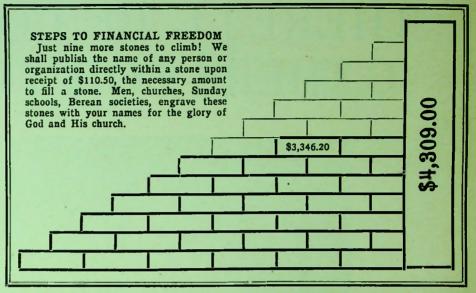

During the noon hour we dedicated the new church pergola with a picnic lunch. A short business meeting followed, during which we discussed candidates for the Bible Training School in Oregon, Ill., this summer. Then the Bereans of Los Angeles presented a short play called "The Bearer of the Cross." The hour following was given over to short talks by Bros. Macleod, Lichty, and Eagleston.

The Church of God in California is indeed blessed in many things. One of these is our Conference president, Sr. Jessie Kauffman, who in spite of the fact that she lives many miles from the church, always manages to have Conference Sundays filled with well-planned, interesting programs. Another blessing is the beautiful voice of Sr. Charlotte Rahn, who sings songs of our faith in such a way that we feel closer to our Father in heaven. She and Mr. Arthur Waters both contributed to our musical service.

Announcement was made of the approaching marriage of Miss Anna Smith, daughter of Sr. Garravean Smith, to Mr. Brown on July 3; and of the wedding on June 14, of Dr. S. Philip Meyers, a member of the Los Angeles church and Marie Bleasdale, Conf. Seey.

THE MICHIGAN CONFERENCE

If others were helped half as much as the writer by their attendance at the recent Michigan Conference, the meeting was a success. It was our first opportunity to get really ac-quainted with Bro. and Sr. G. E. Marsh who graciously cared for us in their home. We love them better.

While the Conference was held at the Southlawn church, it was our pleasure to preach one sermon for the Pennellwood church, where Bro. Ray Abbott is doing a good work. Except for this one service when neither church could have held all the people, both churches united in the Conference work.

Bro. Cecil Smead, for six years pastor at Blanchard, was one of the Conference teachers, and Bro. F. E. Siple, former pastor for even a longer period of time at the Southlawn church, assisted in the work. Though we went to serve, the Conference turned out to be such a blessing to us that we feel all the more our weakness in the blessing that was our duty to have delivered.

"Last year's Bible Training School was of inestimable value to me. Six weeks' intensive training, with the constant fellowship with co-Christians and co-students, gave me a better understanding of 'why I believe what I believe' than I've ever had before. Raised in a home where Bible study is as much a part of the day as the meals, and having taken all the Bible training work possible in school, I still fall down occasionally on telling others the basis of our faith. VOLUME 28

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JULY 4, 1939

NUMBER 39

Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio

The present building of the Golden Rule Church of God, on Diana Avenue and near East 140th Street, was dedicated September 9, 1928. Brother G. E. Marsh preached the dedication sermon.

Brother L. E. Conner served as pastor of this congregation from September, 1906, to March, 1929. Brother M. W. Lyon was then elected to succeed Brother Conner, and has served as its pastor up to the present time.

The seating capacity of the auditorium is about two hundred. There is a full-sized basement, where the Sunday school congregates every Sunday at 9:30 a.m. It has a present enrollment of one hundred seventy, and there are classes for all ages. The Berean department, too, uses the basement, meeting each Friday at 7:30 p.m. The preaching services are held each Sunday at 10:45 a.m. and 8:00 p.m., except that there are no Sunday evening services during the months of June to September, inclusive.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879.

PRE-CONFERENCE HERALD

A special pre-Conference number of The Restitution Herald will be mailed July 18. Please promptly report the names and addresses of your friends and enemies to whom you wish this special number sent, that we may know how many extra copies to print. Price: five cents each. In this way The Herald cooperates with its readers, hoping that they will also cooperate with it. The Golden Rule works with double action.

WINGS OVER THE OCEAN

Said an angel to Daniel, "Scal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." On June 28 the forty-one-ton four motor "Dixie Clipper" of the Pan American Airways left Port Washington, New York, inaugurating regular passenger service through the air, across the Atlantic Ocean, and on to Marseilles, France. . . . I believe the prophecy.

HURRAH??

On June 29 Ray Olson, trailed since June 17 in the heavily wooded sections of northern Wisconsin, was shot and killed at Lake Namakagon. He was a killer.

"Hurrah! The madman is dead," said a deputy as soon as the pulse was gone.... Let us grant that Ray Olson deserved to die. Can any flesh and blood rejoice when other dying flesh begs, "Turn me on my back"?

Jesus was no deputy. No criminal was hunted down by Him. No malefactor died in Jesus' presence. The Lord never waited pulse of man. Though "the wicked shall perish," and "be as though they had not been," God plainly says, "I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked."

says, "I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked."

"The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us" (I John 1:8, 10). "This is a faithful saying . . . that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners" (I Tim. 1:15). And Jesus said, "The Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them" (Luke 9:56). Did David "hurrah" when Saul died? And why were the hands of men (of the priests) placed upon the slain animals offered in sacrifice? Who dares to throw stones? Who does not deserve death? Who shall not die?

"Hurrahs" at death will surely mock the laughter!

THORNS HAVE ROSES

Roses have thorns, and thorns have roses. As though God guarded against careless plucking of the rose—as one might pull a weed—He covered this flower's stem with thorns. But that God would have men see the good in life and overlook the evil is suggested in His putting all the beauty in the rose, and by its foliage hiding almost every thorn. Unfolding from the bud come dainty petals all in order, most gorgeous color, and perfume that draws the wing which gathers nectar from the bloom.

A child, unschooled to the ways of God's creation, left a broken stem with fewer thorns and its flower hanging down, as he hurried home to mother who withdrew what seemed to him as needles. The rose has thorns.

The mother then inquired about the flower. She tenderly lifted the half-plucked rose. The petals were pages of Nature's revelation. She saw design and beauty, and breathed a fragrance made pure and delicate by the dew. And in the rose she saw beyond death's wintry sleep the rising up of other and more glorious life. To her the thorns have roses.

"The Rose of Sharon" far transcends His sting.

BROKEN DOWN WITH FLOWERS

In my neighbor's yard there is a trellis broken down with flowers. For a brief few days it looked as though the vine had so interwoven with the frame as to support it, but this was optimistic supposition. The frame was weak with rot, and though the flowers did their best, the trellis crumbled down.

Jesus warned, "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you!" (Luke 6:26). When praise gets so thick as to almost conceal and glorify even one who is false, the trellis is doomed to fall.

REAL CHRISTIAN SPIRIT

It recently seemed best not to publish a certain article. The author accepted disappointment with the following words: "Please find inclosed postage for the return of my article. Thank you. I am going to try again in the near future to write another article, hoping it will be acceptable. The Herald is getting better and better; there are so many zealous writers."

About twelve out of a baker's dozen would have made us eat more humble pie. This was real Christian spirit.

When the King Comes

By Virginia R. Kincheloe

A BRITISH king and queen have recently visited the United States of America, an unprecedented event of modern history.

President Roosevelt and the American people have given this royal couple a welcome, such as had never been accorded guests from foreign shores. Our government officials spared no money to provide for their entertainment. The people all along their journey waited hours in a broiling sun just to get a glimpse of their majesties as they passed by in their blue and silver streamlined train or in the open parade in the cities of Washington and New York. Thousands of soldiers and policemen guarded their every movement. Pomp and splendor and feasting graced every step of their way.

I could not help thinking, as I listened over the radio to the descriptions, how very different will be the reception and the scenes in these cities and all over the world when the King of kings comes back to this sin-cursed earth. No elaborate preparations will have been made, for Jesus will come unannounced and unexpectedly. No planned meetings, no garden parties, no sumptuous feasts, no hot dog picnics at Hyde Park will have been prepared by government officials. No bands will be playing "The Star Spangled Banner" or "God Save the King." No precautions for the safety of His person will have been made. No soldiers, no marines, no policemen, no scouts will be standing guard or marching in His honor. No airplanes in column formation will be flying in the sky overhead. No curious crowds by the hundreds of thousands will stand ten deep on hot pavements, thus lining the streets to see King Jesus pass by in a streamlined motor car. No wreaths will He lay on George Washington's tomb, nor will Jesus stand at attention before the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Instead, the King of kings will come in the eastern sky with inherent power and Shekinah glory to raise the dead and seek out the righteous living. High position in government and social circles will then count for nothing, for only those who are pure in heart and love His appearing will be drawn up to meet their King coming in the clouds of heaven. They only will shout for joy and sing songs of victory. What a groan of anguish will be heard all over the earth from those who are left in their sinful natures on the land—multitudes weeping and wailing and gnashing their teeth, and crying for rocks and mountains to fall on them.

Brethren in Christ, are you ready to greet the King of kings? Do you want Him to come today? I had but little desire to join the throng in Washington, D.C., to get a glimpse of the king and queen of Britain, but I do want to be among those who rise to meet King Jesus in the air, and ever continue glorified with Him and the saints. I want the privilege of having some small part in restoring this earth to its Edenic beauty. I want to live forever with only pure and right-minded people. Only Jesus and His true church can put down all of man's evil rule and authority in this chaotic world, and establish justice and righteousness and peace in the everlasting kingdom of God on earth.

The longer I live, and the more I study God's Word, the more I realize that I must live a consecrated life in Christ Jesus. I must search the Scriptures of Truth, find out what God wants me to do and do it whole-heartedly and completely. I must examine my thoughts and habits, cast out all that is sensuous and evil, and so perfect a true Christian character if I am ever to get an invitation to the wedding feast of the Bridegroom, Jesus the Christ, when the true church is called to be His bride, the Lamb of God's wife. If I would be saved I must believe that God is and that "he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6). Further, I must add to my faith in God and His anointed Son, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness brotherly kindness and love (2 Peter 1:3-8), if I am ever to become a partaker of the divine nature. Christian love, as it is described in 1 Corinthians 13, must guide me in all I do and say and think. My lamp must be filled with the oil of righteousness if I shall be ready to go out to meet the Bridegroom.

What applies to me in my Christian experience also applies to you, and to all people, for "God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him" (Acts 10: 34, 35). May we so live now that when our King comes all can rejoice because, like Paul, we "love his appearing" (2 Tim. 4:8).

Prophetic Significance of the King's Visit

There seems to be a prophetic significance of the nearness of our Lord's second coming in the unprecedented visit of Britain's king and queen to our country. In Psalm 2 David gives a very unique prophetic description of what the kings and the people on the earth will be doing when God sets King Jesus upon His "holy hill of Zion" (v. 6). According to this Psalm the rulers of the earth are to "take counsel together, against the Lord, and against his anointed" in a vain attempt to rule the world by using their man-made plans and wicked devices and isms. Just as the dictator form of government is now growing in preparation for the development of the Antichrist, so is the idea of calling conferences of world rulers for the avowed purpose of settling international difficulties,

Because He Wholly Followed the Lord

By Harry Goekler

IT IS always an inspiration to follow the life stories of the mighty men of Biblical times; to note their strength and their weaknesses, their hopes and their fears, but most of all their courage and faith which set them apart as followers of the Lord. Our pulses quicken, and our hearts are thrilled, when we think of Caleb as a youth, as a mature man, and in the evening of life still a man of great faith who "wholly followed" the Lord.

Back at Kadesh Barnea, when the Israelites had reached almost the end of their journey homeward to the Land of Promise, Caleb had been one of the rulers of the tribes sent across the Jordan to spy out the land. On their return, while the cowardly spies were "melting" the hearts of the people with their stories of the fierce enemies and the giants dwelling there, Caleb spoke up bravely, "Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it" (Num. 13:30). Caleb had great faith, and he stood firm upon the promise and power of Jehovah.

However, neither Caleb nor Joshua, both pleading with the host of Israel, could prevail to quiet the fears of the frightened crowd. So great was the sin of this unbelief that God in judgment condemned the Israelites to wander in sorrow through the wilderness until death came without their having seen or possessed the Promised Land. Observe Numbers 14:23: "Surely they shall not see the land which I sware unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it." But what about Caleb? Note the next verse to observe God's tribute and promise to him: "But my servant Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land whereinto he went; and his seed shall possess it."

Those days are now past, and Israel's folly has become history. Back in the wilderness lie the bones of every mature person of the great host upon whom God's solemn judgment had been pronounced. A new generation crossed the Jordan, and entered the Promised Land to tread it with the soles of their feet, and possess it according to God's gracious promise.

Then came Caleb to stand before Joshua in Gilgal, where the great leader portioned out the land to the various tribes. The tribes of Judah came before Joshua in Gilgal. And there was a grand sight—the meeting of the two old friends who forty-five years before had gone out from Kadesh Barnea on that eventful journey. It must have been a great meeting of these two strong men, who had been lads together in the days of the long trail that led up from the bondage of Egypt to the Land of Promise.

The speech of Caleb, recorded in Joshua 14:6-12, reveals a world of knowledge concerning Caleb's character and Israel's weakness. Like many other sublime passages of the Old Testament scriptures it moves onward in a series of utterances that paint pictures within pictures and tell stories within stories. It is truly impressive, this speech of Caleb's, standing with simple dignity in the presence of his friend of a lifetime to claim the promises of long ago.

"Thou knowest the thing that the Lord said unto Moses the man of God concerning me and thee in Kadesh-barnea. Forty years old was I when Moses the servant of the Lord sent me from Kadesh-barnea to espy out the land; and I brought him word again as it was in mine heart. Nevertheless my brethren that went up with me made the heart of the people melt: but I wholly followed the Lord my God. And Moses sware on that day, saying, Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the Lord my God. And now, behold, the Lord hath kept me alive, as he said, these forty and five years, even since the Lord spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel wan-

as the Lord said."

On one basis alone rested Caleb's hope of driving out the Anakims and possessing his promised mountain. He depended upon the promises of God, the help of God who would be with him when he stood before the great cities with their formidable fences. Caleb was depending on the "if" of his expression: the only "if" in all his talk to Joshua, and might be construed by some to indicate doubt, but it seems more likely that he used it only in a sense of humility in the sight of God. Here we see Caleb, a man of faith and of great courage, yet still aware of his own unworthiness of God's grace and continued favor.

Harry Goekler

"And Joshua blessed him, and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance" (Josh. 14:13). And so Hebron became the inheritance of Caleb because he "wholly followed the Lord God of Israel." Because he believed and obeyed he was permitted to enter the Land of Promise.

In that great day soon to come, many "shall come from the east and the west" to claim their portion when Christ will sit on the throne of His kingdom, and the unbelievers will not receive a part in that glorious inheritance of the faithful. Like Caleb of old, let us "wholly follow" the Lord, and exercise faith in Him and His promises in order that the rich experience of God's tomorrow may be our portion.

A Letter and an Answer

The Letter

Dear Brother Lindsay:

I am sending you a letter from my daughter . . . She believes in healing by faith and prayer, also talking in unknown tongues; while I believe that the miracles ended with the apostles, and that we have to go to the Bible for our instruction. I would like to get your views on the subject with Bible proof to send to her.

From your brother in hope of the kingdom,

Our Answer

Dear Brother ---:

Your letter is at hand. Your daughter has written in a splendid spirit. In her letter she says nothing radical as many do with regard to the subject in hand. To correctly interpret her letter I would want to know more definitely what she has in mind when she speaks of miracles. The word "miracle" means anything that makes us wonder. To me the telephone and radio are miracles. The chances are that she holds that miracles as in the days of the apostles are still done. If this is her view, then I think she is laboring under a mistaken idea.

In 1 Corinthians 12 Paul rehearses these gifts, and then closes the chapter with the statement, "Yet shew I unto you a more excellent way." Evidently, then, God has something more excellent for us than the working of miracles. Then in 1 Corinthians 13 Paul tells us that these things must pass away, so that only faith, hope, and charity are left. He shows, too, that if these miraculous things are not accompanied by charity (love), they amount to nothing. He says:

"Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge (miraculous knowledge), it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part (in the possession of these things). But when that which is perfect (charity, love, as manifested in the gospel) is come, then that which is in part shall be done away" (vv. 8-10).

But there are three things that are to abide—faith, hope, and charity. These are with us now.

But what was the purpose of these demonstrations? When these things were being done, a new covenant was being introduced. There was no New Testament at this time. But these men (the apostles) were to give us the New Testament by word and in writing. Had they written it on their own word, nothing would ever have come of it, but God added to them the ability to do the miraculous in order that their words might have the testimony of Heaven. In other words, they were to do these things that the word which they spoke might be confirmed. Consequently, we read in Mark 16:20: "And they (the disciples) went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."

Again, we read in Hebrews 2:3, 4: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?"

We read nowhere that the gift of tongues was ever given to women. On the day of Pentecost, I understand that this power was given to the eleven (Galileans) as we find in Acts 2:14. In verse 43 we read that many signs and wonders were done by the apostles.

God's Spirit has come to man in many different ways. It manifested itself to Moses in the bush; to Baalam by the mouth of an ass; to Mary by the voice of an angel. In these last days He has spoken to us by His Son. So we read in John 6:63, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."

Thus we find the Spirit of God today coming to men through His Word. This is why we are exhorted continually to study the Word, and to let the words of Christ dwell in us richly.

As to prayer for the recovery of our sick, we have ample evidence in James. We are told that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." With this limitation, we are called upon to pray for the sick. This is a wonderful chance for the exercise of faith, and it has promise of reward if done according to the Spirit's direction.

I trust this may help some in clearing the way for a proper understanding of the Spirit matter,

Your brother in hope,

S. J. Lindsay.

The Old Road

Daniel, God's Judge-Article 4

By J. E. Adamson

A FTER the fall of Jerusalem in 606 B.C., the Babylonian or Chaldean army sent home such of the forces as were not needed to occupy the newly conquered land. With them went ten thousand prisoners, including artisans of all sorts and several hundred of the choicest young men from the best families of Judah. Of these our interest centers mainly in four young men who, being about of one age, were drawn to each other. Of all the tired marching throng, only these four made a place in history. The old road was not easy to travel, and the one thusand four hundred miles gave time and opportunity for these young men to become closely attached to each other. Long before they reached Babylon they were the best of friends. Their ages were just right for high resolutions, and soon they bound themselves in a pact to stand together and to serve the God of their fathers, no matter

Little could these youths' grandest thoughts have included such trials as the fiery furnace and the den of lions, or the high office and the king's favor and friendship which was to be their reward. During the sixty or seventy days this party must have taken to reach Babylon-days with the endless tramp of tired feet, and the nights under desert skies—the time went by slowly enough, but as they became hardened to the effort of walking, these young men found time to talk together of the homes they had left behind in their beloved land of Judah and of the unknown experiences in store for them in the new land. Would they be held for long, or for only a short time? Then Daniel remembered having been told that Jeremiah the Prophet had said the captivity would be for seventy years (Jer. 25:11), and that they would then be allowed to return and rebuild Jerusalem and the Temple; also, that Isaiah had said that a king named "Cyrus" of Persia would be the one that would let them go (Isa. 45:1). How the knowledge of these promises must have upheld the spirits of these boys, for boys they were, even though they were being tried in ways that would break the nerve of many grown men. Most of the captive Israelites never returned to their homeland, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the Temple and the wall was left to their children.

Like all other things, the awful journey came to an end. There was a grand entry into Babylon. How the people cheered! What loads of valuable loot, and what a splendid looking lot of prisoners! The prisoners were soon allotted to the various departments of the Babylonian government that could best use them, and here we find our four young friends making their first stand for liberty. With others, they were assigned to the house of Ashpenaz, master of the king's eunuchs. Their names were changed from Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah to Belteshazzar, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. With the exception of Daniel, we never hear of them again by their own names, not even in the Hebrew writings.

What heroic figures these young men were to become! They were placed in one position of trust after another, and always they devoted themselves to the interests of > the king. The test of their persistent faith came in the matter of food and drink, as shown in Daniel 1: "Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs" who was persuaded to give them the simplest of food to eat and water to drink for a test period of ten days. "At the end of the days" the prince brought them before the king.

> "And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king. And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ten times

"As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams" (v. 17).

Not long were Daniel and his companions to wait for opportunity to serve. The great king had a dream which he could neither understand nor remember in detail. He called first the Chaldeans, who were the college class of that day, then the charletans of various kinds-all to no avail. No one had thought of the young lewish princes in the house of the eunuchs. They were just a bunch of boys. How would they know? But it was one of those unseen, mysterious ways in which God moves, "His wonders to perform." After hearing what was asked by the king, Daniel, in company with his three friends, made request to God for help. Daniel was not only shown the interpretation of the dream, but he was made to dream the same dream the king had dreamed, and was thus able to tell it in detail.

This great dream has become a classic in Bible lore, and is even today a basic study of prophecy. Daniel made such an impression with this dream that he became a favorite with the king and was made his chief adviser, or what we would call the Secretary of State. "Daniel sat in the gate of the king," and it came to be said that "in him was the spirit of the most high God." The friendship between Daniel and Nebuchadnezzar grew stronger from year to year and was a deep mutual regard. When the dream of the tree came to the king and he saw the matter worried Daniel, the king said, "Let not the dream . . . trouble thee." But Daniel said, "My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies." Daniel then told his friend things that brought the king to confess the name of Jehovah as the most high God, as the only God that could reveal secrets, and as the God whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and His dominion from generation to generation.

During the reign of Belshazzar, Daniel had two interesting and important dreams. One occupies the seventh chapter of his prophecy and is a companion in many ways to the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, but in more detail, particularly as to the latter days. It also gives in more detail the story of the judgment. The other dream is given us in chapter eight.

Daniel also had a dream during the reign of Cyrus.

This dream was so intense in its pictured story that Daniel was stricken almost as one dead. In this he saw and talked to Michael the archangel, "the great prince which standeth for the children of (God's) people."

Daniel's dreams were all tragic, and they had true prophetic significance, even though there are found differences of opinion among latter day readers of this great work. Daniel's complete prophecy is not used in our version of the Bible which gives only twelve chapters.

Daniel dropped into some obscurity during the reigns of Nabonidus and Belshazzar. The latter, a profligate of a very low order, was not one to be interested in a servant of the most high God. It was only on the last night of his life and of his kingdom that fear caused Belshazzar to listen to the voice of the queen mother and call in Daniel to read and interpret the famous handwriting on the wall: "MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN." Daniel pronounced the dreadful interpretation: "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. . . . Thy kingdom

Beautiful Nature

By R. L. Tice

WHEN we read of creation we see so much of beauty: a home for all mankind was stocked with everything beautiful and pure. An all-wise Father, loving and kind, created all this, and formed man in His own image to inhabit it. Will God deprive man of it after he has paid the penalty?

Can we in our weakness draw on our imaginations to get a pen picture of the beauties of Eden? Even the beasts were submissive, and showed a loving kindness. Even the blossoms would unfold their petals to kiss the dew, to send their fragrance broadcast to the world to make the place of man's feet more beautiful and pleasant.

In spite of the present curse, one can still look on nature and see beauty. The broken clouds show beauty as they travel through space, gathering somewhere to collect moisture and then water the earth that it might bring forth more abundantly. But, as a general rule, mankind so little appreciates the beauties of nature. Read of the past, enjoy the present, and with an eye of faith look to the future for the beautiful restored Eden.

Do the masses really understand what restitution will mean when death is abolished? Take but a faint look at God's loving kindness, and one can see more beauties and less strife. When there will be no angry or hurtful or destroying disposition among beasts, surely there will be none in mankind. With this outlook one can see some of the things the loving Father had in view for mankind when He made the place of His footstool so beautiful. He was pleased with the work He had done, for he said it was very good.

God so loved His work and all mankind that He gave His only Son to redeem all that was lost. If the Father so fully loved His work, and the Son so surely loved mankind that He submitted to death for men, surely we can show more love for a wayward or suffering brother. How can we love God whom we have not seen if we cannot love our brother whom we have seen? (Cp. 1 John 4:20.)

Lord, let me do my duty each day, and if the darkened hours of despair overcome me may I not forget the strength that comforted me in the desolation of other times. May I still remember the bright hours that found me walking over the silent hills of my childhood days, or dreaming on the margin of the quiet stream when a light glowed within me and I promised my early God to have courage amid the tempest of the changing years. Spare me from bitterness and from passion's unguarded moments. May I not forget that poverty and riches are of the Spirit. Though the world knows me not, may my thoughts and actions be such as shall keep me friendly with myself. Lift my eyes from the earth and let me not forget the uses of stars. Forbid that I should judge others, lest I should condemn myself. Let me not follow the clamor of the world, but assist me to walk calmly in my path. Give a few friends that will love me for what I am, and keep before my vagrant steps the kindly light of hope. Though age and infirmity overtake me and I come within the sight of the castle of my dreams, teach me still to be thankful for life-for time's olden memories which are both sad and sweet. And may the evening's twilight find me gentle and still.

Have the Churches Failed?

Article Three

By R. H. Judd

ONE of the oldest and even now a common argument brought forward in defense of the doctrine of the Trinity is the Hebrew word Elohim.

Elohim occurs in the first verse of the Bible, and some fifty-six times in the first three chapters of Genesis. In the whole of the Old Testament it occurs two thousand four hundred seventy times. This word is not so eagerly advanced in proof of the doctrine of the Trinity as it used to be, but as even yet the proportion of Christians who really study their Bible is small, it affords an opportunity of presenting what seemingly is, at least on first approach, fairly good presumptive evidence in its favor. It is, therefore, seized upon by those desirous of creating an impressive argument at the commencement, irrespective of what may develop from closer examination.

Many think of Elohim as a name of God. One is surprised to find such well-known writers as Professors Blcek, Knobel, Ewald, Angel, Dr. R. A. Torrey, D.D., author of "Fundamentals of the Christian Faith," and others so regard it, the three first named endeavoring to prove two authors of the books of Moses; one using Elohim as the name of God, the other using Jehovah. Thus developed what is known as the "Elohistic" and "Jehovistic" theory of authorship. Others say that Elohim and lehovah are interchangeable, sometimes one being used, sometimes the other. That both these theories are erroneous can very conclusively be demonstrated. There is the same difference between Elohim and Jehovah as between Deus and Jupiter, or Homo and Petrus; the one expresses the race, the other the individual, as for instance: the man Peter. Elohim answers to our word "God" or "Deity," and is, therefore, used of false gods as well as the true God. Jehovah is a personal name which stands for the One Personal Being who alone bears that name (Psalm 83:18; Isa. 42:8; 48:11).

This distinction is easily discernible early in the Record (as in Gen. 2:4) by any careful student, but is strikingly brought into focus in the words of Elijah: "If Jehovah be Elohim, follow him: but if Baal (be Elohim) follow him" (1 Kings 18:21). Here it would be impossible to change elohim for "Jehovah," and say "if Baal be Jehovah." There is an essential difference in signification, and though Jehovah is the true God, and the true God is Jehovah, and, therefore, either might sometimes be used, yet in consequence of that difference there are instances where there is a peculiar propriety in using one rather than the other. There are other cases where one must be used and the other cannot.

As Jehovah is the proper name of God, it does not take a genitive case of a suffix. It is, therefore, impossible to say in Hebrew "the Jehovah of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," or my, thy, or our Jehovah. In such cases Elohim must be used—as "the Elohim (God) of Abraham." Again, "Jehovah" could not occur in the mouth of one to whom He had not been revealed. Therefore, when Moses and Aaron used "Jehovah" in speaking to Pharaoh, they added "the God of Israel." But Pharaoh still asked, "Who is Jehovah?" and they explained "the Elohim (God) of the Hebrews."

Moses might have used "Jehovah" instead of Elohim in Genesis 1 (except in v. 27 where elohim is compulsory), but in the opening of the Record it was necessary to make it clear that God was Creator, and that the Creator was not merely the God of any particular people. The first use of "Jehovah" (Lord) occurs in Genesis 2:4, where Moses links the name with the word "God" with the evident purpose of declaring that God the Creator and Jehovah are one and the same.

At the time of Moses' writing every nation, small or great, had its deity, and it was current among outsiders to speak of Jehovah as "the God of the Hebrews." But while it was customary for each nation to choose its own god (or more correctly, gods) the case was reversed with reference to the Israelites, for they were chosen by God (Deut. 7:6, 7). Here we have, incidentally, in the universal plurality of gods among the heathen, one very natural reason why (although there is a singular) the plural word Elohim came to be the commonly used expression in reterence to deity, whether of one or more than one. Eloah, the singular form of Elohim, occurs some fifty-six times. Had the Trinity been an established fact, the singular eloah could not have been used except in reference to one individual member of the Trinity. Eloah is never applied to any god, true or false, unless the reference is essentially singular. That it is frequently applied to the true God is ample evidence of the unity of God. (See Deut. 32:15; Neh. 9:7; Job 11:7; 19:26; 22:12; Psalm 18:31; 114:7; 139:19; Isa. 44:8; Hab. 3:3.)

But the evidences against Elohim being proof of the Trinitarian doctrine are not by any means exhausted. "Orthodoxy" maintains that the God of creation is a trinity, giving the plural Hebrew word Elohim as proof, and sometimes adding the remark that the very first reference to God in the Bible is plural. But in their eagerness to convince others of their position they have overlooked some very important considerations, and they have failed to observe one very fundamental rule of good exegesis, namely, to give proper attention to context.

It is true that in our English version, God (Elohim) is the first Scripture reference to God, and that it is a plural word. But in the Hebrew Scriptures the order is: "In the beginning he created, God (Elohim)..." Thus, the singular form of bara (he created,) comes first, and establishes the essential unity of the Creator; for if a plurality of persons did the work of creating, Professor Fuchrer informs us that barcu (they created) would have been used. We thus see that while here Elohim means gods literally, it means God textually when taken in the sense of the nexus or word connection, which is bara, that is he created.

Next, I would state here in my own words another thought given expression by Professor Fuehrer, namely, the linking of elohim, a plural word, with names and words which are singular, such as "Jehovah" and the first and second pronouns (as in Isa. 45:18; Amos 6:8; (Please turn to page 10)

Making God a Liar

By James A. Patrick

PAUL said to Titus, "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began" (Titus 1:2). If God cannot lie, how can anyone make him a liar? I assure you I would not want to be irreverent in the least; I am only using John's words.

"If we receive the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5:9-12).

"He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself." Do not all professing Christians believe on the Son of God? They profess to, but do they believe the record God gave of His Son? Let us see. What is the record? The one given in Matthew or Luke? Not at all. "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." Well, doesn't everyone believe that?

In the early days of my ministry a minister of one of the orthodox (?) churches tried to convert me to his way of thinking. He argued that he had an immortal soul and had life in himself and could not die. I asked him what he did with Romans 6:23: "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." "O," said he, "Life does not mean life; it means joy and happiness. I've got life in myself, and I make it joyous and happy in Christ, or miserable out of him." You can see how he contradicted himself by saying that life doesn't mean life, and then saying that he had life in himself. Besides, the quotation from Romans 6:23 says that eternal life comes through Jesus Christ our Lord, and not through an immortal soul.

Some time ago I read a book that was written for the instruction of the officers of a certain church. In that book this statement occurred: "The righteous go immediately to heaven at death, and are at once perfected in glory." It is easy to see that to most people death doesn't mean death in the sense in which the word is used in the Bible. Instead, it means a more glorious life. God said to Eve, "Thou shalt surely die." The serpent said, "Thou shalt not surely die," thus saying that God had lied. Doesn't the teaching of a great many people harmonize with what the serpent told Eve? Are they not making God a liar? This is strong language, but the Bible uses just such language.

"Ye are of your father the devil," said Christ, "and the lusts of your father ye will do. He is a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it" (John 8:44). Christ was speaking to the superreligionists—the religious elite of His day, yet He did not mince words.

It seems that many otherwise very honest and very good people are today teaching the devil's lie, and, as John says, making God a liar.

Is it not strange that when God has said, "The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not any thing," that men will say that the dead know more than they ever did while alive? I heard a minister say that he would know more in five minutes after he was dead than he ever knew while he was living.

It will be noticed that one does not have to do anything in order to contradict God. All one has to do is fail to believe what God has said. He that believeth not God is guilty.

Believing in the immortality of the soul and believing that man has life in himself is not the only way men contradict God. Christ said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," but men say that it doesn't make any difference whether one is baptized or not. There are many other ways that men can contradict God. Reader, can you think of any way by which men may contradict God?

It stands us in hand, then, to know and believe and obey what God has said. How are we to know what He has said? "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15).

BEWARE

By Nancy B. Robison

WHO first gave this warning, and why? When the disciples once came to Jesus, He said to them, "Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees" (Matt. 16:6). The disciples then "reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread" (v. 7). In verse 11 Jesus said, "How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?" The apostles then understood "how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees" (v. 12).

This warning from Christ was preparing the disciples for the solid foundation of truth on which the church should be built. Icsus not only gave them this warning, but asked some very important questions, namely, "Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?" To this question they answered, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets." Jesus then put the question a little closer: "But whom say ye that I am?" Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ" (the Anointed, Diaglott). Jesus is God's Anointed to be the King of Israel, that promised One. Jesus then said, "I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church." (Christ is called the rock in many places in the Old Testament.) Notice, "And the gates of hell (hades, the grave) shall not prevail against it." The resurrection is here taught.

In Matthew 16:21 we read, "From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day."

"Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee." Listen to the rebuke Jesus gave Peter: "Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me.

Why? Peter was saying "the things that be of men." Peter had not grasped the meaning of "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it" in the extent, even, of its application to Christ, the church's Head. Hence came the necessity of telling Peter and the other disciples, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (v. 24).

"After six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light."

Peter thought it so good to be there—where in vision he had seen Christ in His resurrected glory, and Peter no doubt thought the kingdom had come—that he wanted to make three tabernacles: one for Christ, one for Moses, and one for Elias.

So convincing was this vision that some twenty-eight years later Peter assured us, "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount" (2 Peter 1:16-18). In verse 15 Peter entreats us to "have these things always in remembrance."

The great Teacher carefully laid the foundation of truth on which we are to build. The warning against leaven is needed today. The doctrine of the Pharisees is woven in song and story.

HAVE THE CHURCHES FAILED?

Gen. 22:16; Jer. 51:14; Heb. 6:13) does not make "Jehovah" and these pronouns plural; but expresses what is endorsed by the various names (and they are many) through which God (Elohim) is known to His people. It makes Him an all-embracing God—a God who was to Israel all, and more than all—a God represented by all the gods of the heathen, or that the mind of man can conceive. The Trinitarian idea limits God, and debases Him to the limited number of three, each responsible to the other, for the Trinitarians claim that they took counsel together at creation, claiming Genesis 1:27 as proof. But the Bible conception of the true God is of one God who is Himself omnipotent, and has no need to take counsel of any. (See Isa. 40:18, 25; 44:24; 45:18.)

In further proof of our claim, that owing to the universal worship of many gods instead of one living God the plural form elohim came to be commonly used in all circumstances where deity is referred to, we find that it is applied to persons and objects (such as idols) that are unquestionably singular. In Exodus 4:16 and 7:1 it has reference to Moses. In 1 Samuel 28:13, R.V., it has evident reference to Samuel. In Exodus 22:20; 32:4, R.V., margin; Judges 6:31; 1 Kings 18:27, and other numerous passages it has reference to individual heathen deities.

Elohim is also applied to human judges in Exodus 21: 16; 22:28, R.V., margin; and 22:9. It is applied to angels in Psalm 8:5.

Any careful student of English literature, grammatical or historical, will have no difficulty in recalling words in the singular number that are used both in a singular and plural sense; and other words that are strictly plural, yet in customary usage they are also employed with a singular meaning. Some collective nouns, such as "committee" may be referred to by a pronoun in either the singular or plural number according to the objects which are the subject of reference.

In our next we will consider the arguments advanced by some well-known men in reference to the Hebrew word echad, meaning "one."

WHY ATTEND THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL?

By John Mercer

ONE cannot number the questions that he asks and answers himself during just one day. Stop and think of how you must choose what to do next, and the questions you ask yourself.

The title question, constructed as it is, reminds one of the selfish person who said, "You don't want any more shortcake do you, John?" That made it hard for John to answer in but one way. The same thing is found to be true when one asks himself if it is wrong to dance, or if it in any way hurts one to smoke.

A subtle lawyer similarly constructs his questions to convince a jury. He tries to make the questions answerable in but one way—the way he wants them answered. Abraham Lincoln was a master at this; Christ a genius. Christ's opposers tried the same method to catch Him.

One must be careful of the sentence structure in the many questions that confront him.

Instead of asking, "Does it hurt me to smoke?" or "What harm is there in dancing?" one should ask, "Does it help me to smoke?" or "Does it do me any good to dance?" Compare the results in those who do and in those who don't.

Instead of asking, "Why go to the Bible Training School?" ask yourself, "Why not go to the Bible Training School?" What will be the most helpful toward God, your brother, and yourself—to go, or not to go? Consider.

I accomplished last year one of the biggest things that one can accomplish, and in just six weeks of this Bible Training School. I learned that I didn't know a thing. That sounds like there was a waste of money, but far from it. It started me to working, studying, and really preparing for our Savior's return. It was the most enjoyable, interesting, and encouraging six weeks of my life.

Go, if you can. You can, if you will. You can't, if you won't. Do.

is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." That very night the city of Babylon was captured by the armies of Cyrus and Darius, and Belshazzar was slain.

Under the rule of Darius the Mede, Daniel was again set up to high position, even though there came the shortlived set-back of his sentence to the den of lions. He emerged from this with such glory that for the rest of his life he kept the favor of both Darius and of Cyrus.

Daniel was largely instrumental in obtaining the decree from Cyrus for the rebuilding of Jerusalem, telling him of the prophecy of Isaiah 45, which shows that Cyrus was chosen of God and even called by his name long before he was born.

The life of Daniel should be an inspiration to the youth of all times for his outstanding clean manhood in the face of adversity, also for the fact that he could hold high positions of trust and not lose his abiding faith in the God of Israel. Daniel is the kind of man Kipling wrote about in "If":

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue, Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch; If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, If all men count with you, but none too much, If you can fill the unforgiving minute With sixty seconds worth of distance race, Yours is the earth and everything that's in it, And what is more, you'll be a Man, my son."

WHEN THE KING COMES

Though the English speaking nations acknowledge a trust in God, at least by word of mouth, and have been kinder to the Jews than any other, yet they, too, are putting their trust in men, guns, battleships, bombs, and army planes. All nations are now preparing for war as never before and all are now putting their trust in manpower and prestige instead of God and His Son. Yes, even our own fair land will play her part in the final struggle for world supremacy. However, because of our religious tolerance to all men, we may hope to be chosen as one of the sheep nations when Jesus divides the sheep from the goats.

There was a deeper underlying motive for the visit of King George to his domains and our country in North America than is apparent on the surface. Time Magazine (June 19 issue) quotes the London News Chronicle as having made the following comment on the king's American visit: "The result will be not only to make a marked difference in Anglo-American relations, but also to affect all political calculations in Europe."

It is altogether likely that the Roosevelts will repay this royal visit at some time in the not distant future. Visits of reigning monarchs and dictators have been frequent the past year. This may lead eventually to the calling of a world conference of kings of the earth as predicted in Psalm 2. Our president has already held a New World Conference of Presidents to cement the unity between North and South America. It has been announced over the radio and reported by the American press that European diplomats desire President Roosevelt to call a conference of heads of governments in the near future. Coupled with efforts for conciliation made last fall in Europe at Munich, and the desire of all nations to postpone war till more guns can be made and more ammunition stored, these exchange visits of foreign rulers are timely and significant.

Brethren, when and after these kings of the earth set themselves and take counsel together in their own strength to promote their man-made systems of government, you may lift up your heads and rejoice, for one of the very few remaining prophecies will have been fulfilled and the King of glory will soon thereafter be ruling in Jerusalem. Put your trust in Christ.

DEPARTING TO BE WITH CHRIST

By Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

Paul was a very outstanding Bible character, as all Bible students will readily acknowledge. His life and works are revealed to us in God's precious Word, the Bible. In parts of Paul's writings he looked back over his experiences wherein he had brought to churches and individuals the rich heritage of an example of zeal, devotion, faith, and courage.

A very zealous worker was Paul, as we find in Philippians 1:12-24. Nothing could hinder the ever-forward march of Christianity. According to verse 20, Paul had a strong determination that Christ should be magnified in his body, whether by life or death, Paul definitely stated that all he had done, was done for Christ. If he lived he would continue for Christ, and if he died he would die for Christ. By being a martyr he would gain a better life. Paul expected and hoped for the resurrection (Phil. 3: 10, 11). To Paul, death meant death, but he had the true hope of eventual resurrection and immortality. Some would have us believe that Paul instantly gained his reward at his death, but Christ has not yet come, nor has a resurrection taken place. Hence, Paul is still waiting for his reward. Paul prophetically said, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

Paul did not desire death; he was between life and death, not knowing which to choose, but he longed for a third thing, much to be preferred to either life or death—the hope of a better resurrection. Neither life nor death is to be compared with actually being with Christ when He returns. Paul knew and recognized this great truth, that in death "the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten" (Eccl. 9:5). If Paul lived a longer life he would have more opportunities in the field of Christian service.

Let us not be deceived by every false doctrine, but look at things in a clear, unbiased manner. May God help us to more fully understand His Word.

WHAT IS A LOVING LIFE?

By Wylodine Lederer, Willoughby, Ohio

"Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love" (1 Cor. 13:13, A.R.V.).

A loving life is one which embodies the qualities Jesus gave in the Beatitudes (Matt. 5:3-11). If one loves, he will be humble, open-minded, and willing to enter into the other person's point of view. He will be willing to take suggestions, and will have the spirit of humility.

The life guided by love will be penitent, ready to see personal failures and conquer them. He will be meek; a quality that enables one to use to the full all his resources, all his opportunities, and in every situation. In other words, one will exercise self-control if his life is one of love.

All Christians should be eager and ambitious for growth into the best. We should be merciful, should see the point of view of the other, and understand his struggle. The comfort of feeling safe, having neither to weigh thoughts or measure out words, but pouring them all out and knowing that a faithful Hand will sift them to keep what is worth keeping and to forget the rest, will be ours.

Jesus indicates that the loving life will be distinguished by purity in heart. That heart will have the spirit of respect and deference, and will have a sense of values. Christians will be peacemakers, not only in seeking to avoid trouble, but will definitely seek those things that make for peace.

Lastly, love must be a self-sacrificing spirit. It is the climax of all the other qualities. To be entirely unselfish in the little things is indeed a proof of love.

If we would be disciples of the loving life we must obey Jesus' command to "love one another." And when we love we will be striving for all these listed virtues.

Is yours a loving life?

THOUGHTS ON THE FOURTH OF JULY

Eré these words are read, the "glorious Fourth" will be past. We are expecting at this time to celebrate in some special manner. After all, it is the birthday of our nation that gives us religious freedom, so why not celebrate it?

When a firecracker or any other type of fireworks fails to explode, it is called a "fizzle." Sometimes men are called "fizzles" when they fail to properly do their work. You know, I wouldn't care to be either a firecracker or a fizzle. A firecracker makes one loud noise and it has done its part. So many people are like that—one loud noise and they are never heard from again. Christ doesn't desire that sort of workers, but rather needs those who are enduring.

The United States as a nation has celebrated one hundred fifty years of independence. The Christian can celebrate, every day, almost two thousand years of independence—freedom from sin made possible by Christ.

"In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths" (Prov. 3:6).

Scripture: 1 Kings 11:26-31, 37-40.

A MAN WITH A GREAT OPPORTUNITY

Jeroboam was a young man of the tribe of Ephraim, who gained favor with King Solomon because he was strong and industrious. Everyone admires a hard worker. Solomon gave Jeroboam charge over the men of his tribe, in building one of Solomon's castles.

Ahijah, a prophet of God, found Jeroboam alone in a field outside of Jerusalem. He took a new garment from off his own back, tore it into twelve pieces, and gave Jeroboam ten of them. He said, "Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee" (1 Kings 11:31).

The Lord told Jeroboam He would not take the kingdom from Solomon, for David's sake, but from Solomon's son. He also told Jeroboam to reign according to all his soul desired. He was promised that God would go with him if he listened to God's commands and walked in His ways.

Solomon must have known Jeroboam had received God's favor, for Solomon tried to find Jeroboam to kill him. But Jeroboam fled into Egypt where he remained until Solomon had died and the people were gathering to make Rehoboam king. (The story of Rehoboam's short reign is our lesson for next week.)

What a wonderful opportunity Jeroboam had to lead his people back to God! You remember that Solomon's idolatrous wives had led Solomon to build and worship idols.

In 1 Kings 12:28 we find that Jeroboam also made two calves of gold and told the people that it was too much for them to go to Jerusalem to worship. He said, "Behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt."

Do you agree that those images had led the Israelites out of the land of Egypt? Did those lifeless calves cause the Red Sea to part so the people walked across on dry ground? Could those man-made idols have caused the cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night to have been their guides in the wilderness? How could Jeroboam and his followers have been so blind? O! how could they have worshiped those images after having known the wonderful help and loving care of God?

Today we find people choosing the easier paths. Many people choose a church because it is the nearest one, because it is too far and takes too much effort for them to go a little farther to hear the truth.

Some of our members, I know, go as far as thirty miles to attend the Church of God!

Boys and girls are sometimes put in places of leadership. For example, a group is playing. Someone asks, "What shall we do next?" or "Where shall we go?" The one whose suggestion is acted upon has, in a way, become the leader of the group. If you are the one, will you consider the worth-while joys, and use your opportunity of leadership that good may result?

ECE CLUB NEWS

First, we are glad to welcome our one hundred fortyeighth member today. Her name is Ruth Graham. Her home is in St. Louis, Missouri.

Second, I have sent the names of our members to The Restitution Herald. The new Club Membership Cards will be mailed to you from Oregon, Illinois.

Please notice that the cards for the thirty-three members from around Hammond, Louisiana, are being sent to Brother Goekler. Cards for the thirty-four members from Cleveland, Ohio, are being sent to Mrs. Dorothy Frazier. Cards for the twelve members from Eden Valley, Minnesota, are being sent to Mrs. Floyd Mills. A list of the names of the members will be included, so the leaders will know for sure just which ones are members. Others are being sent to the individual members, or to the person who sent me the names.

I hope each of you will frame your card. I shall be waiting to hear how you like your card, and to know if it is any help to you.

REPORT OF MICHIGAN CONFERENCE

Although the 82nd Michigan State Conference has become history, pleasant memories linger on and we hope that forget-me-nots of the Bible School and the sermons will continue permanently.

Southlawn church, Grand Rapids, was host of the Conference which was held from June 12-18.

Elder S. E. Magaw, our guest speaker, conveyed many a new thought while presenting the age-old subjects.

The Bible School, consisting of seven classes, was held twice daily throughout the week with an average attendance of 77. The young people's class, with Dorothy Siple and Elder Magaw as teachers, won honorable mention with an average attendance of 24, and 10 members had perfect attendance.

Sickness again prevented some of the Coats Grove folks and Mrs. Eva Fletcher of Kalamazoo from attending.

Elder G. E. Marsh, 3514 Oakley Ave. S. W., Grand Rapids, was elected president, and
Lloyd Stevens, 36 Conrad St. S. W., Grand Rapids, was elected treasurer for the coming year. Any constructive suggestions or finances for the State work will be greatly appreciated by them, as well as by the other officers who were retained.

Mrs. L. F. Slocum, Secy.

PENNELLWOOD CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

With the advent of warm weather, we trust scarlet fever has left for good. The family of Robert Townsend and Miss Donna Hale are well again and have been released from quarantine.

At a baptismal service on May 28, Bro. Abbott assisted the following to put on the all-saving name of Jesus in baptism: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Stidd, 1580 Allen Road S. W., Mrs. Irene Burton, 652 Chatham St. N. W., Mrs. Vern Norris, 135 Lexington St. S. E., Miss Elda Rhoades, 337 Thurston St. S. W., and Miss Merriem Munshaw, 740 Laraway Road S. E.

Bro. Abbott officiated at a wedding held at Southlawn church on the evening of June 1, when Miss Alice Prentice became the wife of Mr. Robert VanPortfleet, Miss Phyllis Van Portfleet and Mr. Richard Townsend acted as maid of honor and best man. We ask God's mand or nonor and best man. We ask God's blessing to rest on this young couple as they make life's journey together.

By courtesy of the State Conference, Bro. S. E. Magaw of Oregon, Ill., filled the pulpit on Sunday morning, June 18. His interesting sermon was enjoyed by a full house.

Mrs. L. F. Slocum, Secy.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

Bro. G. E. Marsh, pastor of this church, was elected president of the Michigan Conference for the coming year.

Sydney Magaw, editor of The Restitution Herald, was the principal speaker at the Michigan Conference. His sermons were timely and extremely interesting, especially those on the types of the Old Testament. We sincerely enjoyed Bro. Magaw, and hope he may visit us again.

The members of the choir and their friends enjoyed a picnic lunch at one of the near by lakes on Tuesday night. This was a sort of farewell party to Sr. Evelyn Barr, choir director, who will leave soon to attend summer school at the University of Michigan.

Mary Newell, a member of last year's Bible Training School and Jeraldine Louks will soon leave Grand Rapids to attend this year's School at Oregon, Ill.

READ-IT-ALL CLUB

We are pleased to learn of the following who also read The Restitution Herald from cover to cover, and who thus deserve member-ship in our Read-It-All Club:

Mrs. Bonnie D. Martin, Williamston, S. C. Miss Virginia Smith, Russellville, Ark. George O. Renner, Wheatland, Calif. R. H. Judd, Toronto, Ont. Mrs. Iva Moore, Muncie, Ind.

Gleanings From the Field

Bro. R. H. Judd is thankful to those who sent him copies of the February 28th issue The Herald.

"During one of Ingersoll's lectures he tried to discount the raising of Lazarus, challenging anyone to tell him why Jesus called out Lazarus by name if Jesus knew that he was dead and hence beyond any possibility of hearing. An elderly lady replied that if Jesus had not said, 'Lazarus, come forth,' all the people in the graveyard would have come trooping out of their graves. Ingersoll was nonplused."—Church of God Messenger.

Vivian Kirkpatrick has been secured by the Church of God in Blanchard, Mich., to begin pastoral duties next September. He will first attend this summer's Bible Training School and the General Conference at Oregon, Ill.

"Inclosed find $2.00 for my renewal to The Herald, I would not miss a copy."—Mrs. Em-ma Scott, Blanchard, Mich.

We are sorry to learn that Beatrice Clem of Tom Brooks, Va., has been stricken with appendicitis, and her doctor has forbidden her making the contemplated trip to Oregon, Ill., for the Bible Training School. Blessings to you, Beatrice.

We are sorry to hear of the death of Sr. Almus Adams of Omaha, Neb. She was a faithful member of the Church of God.

"The long ancient honor has come to us. We are Grandpa and Grandma Patrick. A girl came to stay with Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Williams June 28."—J. A. Patrick, Ashland, Ohio.

With his sketch about the Golden Rule Church of God appearing on the front cover, Bro. H. H. Hawkins writes, "We are planning to get to General Conference for a few days at least."

"Our newly organized Sunday school is do-ing very well. Please send us twenty of your Truth Seekers' Quarterly."—Mrs. Marie Cooper, Browntown, Va.

Flash! Three from the Brush Creek Church of God in Ohio are coming to the Bible Training School, They are: Ellsworth Routson, Lor-na Macy, and Richard Smith. Sr. June Macy is bringing them, though she will be unable to stay.

Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., will become pastor of the Brush Creek Church of God the first of September. Congratulations to both minister and congregation, and may the Lord continue His blessings upon both.

We are glad to report that Bros. J. Arthur Johnson of Sac City, Iown, and James M. Watkins of Oregon, Ill., and one or two from Minnesota are planning to attend the Bible Training School.

MINNESOTA CONFERENCE REPORT

The sixty-fifth Annual Conference of the Church of God of Minnesota convened at St. Cloud, June 7-11. The guest speaker was Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago, who also conducted Bible classes each afternoon for senior young people and adults.

The forenoon classes were led by Bro. C. E. Lapp of St. Cloud and Bro, G. L. Cooper of Eden Valley. Sr. Ruth Hoskins of Eden Valley took charge of a class of the little folks. Sr. Madge Savage of Waite Park, an active member of the St. Cloud church, was music and song leader. She provided some very good special numbers, both vocal and instrumental, by calling on members from the various churches represented.

The services were well attended, especially on Sunday. Interest and attention were good. Since the close of the Conference, Bro. Austin has conducted meetings each evening at St. Cloud. His next series of meetings will be at Eden Valley June 27 to July 10.

REMINISCENCES OF SOUTH BEND

I wish to make an addition to the recent synopsis of the history of the South Bend, Ind., church. As Mr. Railsback and myself are probably the only living charter members of the church, I feel qualified to give an authen tic report of its organization and history up to July, 1919, when we left Indiana to move to California.

It was about February, 1901, when Bro. A. H. Zilmer came to South Bend from Plymouth, and looked up a few people who had been members elsewhere, besides a few Advent Christians who had recently disbanded as an organization. Bro. R. C. Railsback was then in Hot Springs, Ark., but later returned and became our leader.

We struggled along for a number of years, managing to maintain our organization and identity. We had preaching when we could, but always held Sunday school and worship services. We entertained the Annual State Conference under difficulties a number of times.

There were times when the situation was very discouraging. Once when we seemed to be making no progress whatever I was ready to disband and try my hand at teaching the truth in another Sunday school where there was more life and enthusiasm, but Bro. B. W. Woodward, who was passing through our city at the time, succeeded in instilling into my mind the importance of maintaining our identity. In fact, he spoke quite sharply about the matter, but I have many times since felt a deep gratitude to him for impressing on my mind this fact.

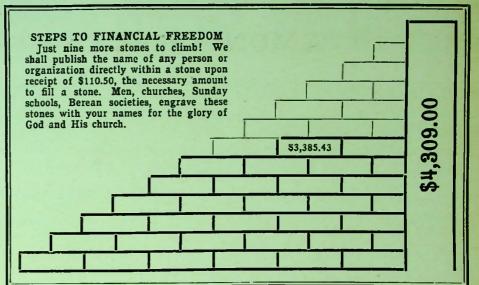

At one time, probably about 1912, a movement was started to buy a little church, but was soon dropped as some of the older ones felt that we younger ones were too enthusiastic in the matter.

It was in the South Bend church that our children learned the importance of working with the "little flock" which stands firmly for the truth regardless of the size of the congre-gation. It was there that we passed through many beneficial experiences, some pleasant and some trying ones, and our hearts rejoice with this little group which has now secured a place of its own, where its members can worship God and send out the gospel message to the world. Emma C. Railsback.

The Illinois Evangelist

HARVEY KROGH, JR., EDITOR

"When the Church Builds Evangelism, Evangelism Will Build the Church."

THE STATE WORK MUST GO ON!

Jesus said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." There is no doubt as to whether or not the gospel shall be preached. The important question is: Will it be preached by us and with our help?

This is an opportunity for you to have a part in the preaching of the Word that you could not have if all do not work together in this way.

PROGRESS THIS YEAR

More services have been held in the State this year than last year, and two more churches were regularly contacted. This has been done because of an increased effort on the part of a few faithful Christians.

The number of regular contributors to the State work has been doubled this past year, which brings the total to an all time high of twenty-five, since the present treasurer has been in office. (This number, however, does not include those who contributed to the Dollar Day funds, but those who contributed at regular intervals through the year.)

IT CAN BE DONE!

If every member in the State would (we know you could) regularly contribute 25 cents each month to the evangelistic work, there would be $150.00 each month for the hiring of an evangelist, for special revival meetings at the different churches, for the sending of this page to every member in Illinois, and for other means of serving our Lord.

It is not the large amounts that we are asking of you who have not been helping, but only a very little from many. We are glad for the larger sums, and we thank the Father for you who have been helping and trust that you will continue.

SEND IT BACK

If you have not filled out the card that you received like the form printed at the right, do so right away to Harvey Krogh, Jr., 409 S. Dudley St., Macomb.

Here are the reasons: Your treasurer's address will change soon, plans for the coming year's work must be made at the Illinois Bible School and Conference, and our Savior may come and find us not working.

During the month of July will be the best time to send in this statement of your intentions,

THE MONTH'S QUESTION

If the early apostles had possessed no more enthusiasm than most of us who call ourselves members of God's Church, would there be any evidence today that there had been a church?

A GREAT SAVING

If everyone gave as much as he thought his neighbor ought to give to the church, much space on this page could have been saved and used to tell of the growth of God's people and the spread of the Word.

THE KING NEEDS SOMETHING I HAVE

"The Lord hath need of them" (Matt. 21:3).

Whenever He sends word that He has need of something: a colt, an upper room for a meeting and a feast, a life—either your own or your child's—to be sent in some distant land, an income to be put back of somebody's life so sent out, a life to be lived gently and strongly for Him in social circles at home—whatever it may be—we will say with a glad ringing voice, "The King needs something I have. What a delight! He needs something. I have it. He asks for it. Isn't it splendid that I am able to give what He asks!"—Selected.

JUST THREE WEEKS!

That isn't very long, and the time will be gone before you know it. Don't let that time go by without making full preparation to be at the Illinois Bible School and General Conference. Anything that you might have to give up in order to come will not be much of a sacrifice when you consider the value of the thirteen days of fellowship and blessing that you are sure to receive while there.

The place is Oregon, Illinois. The time, August 1-13.

The Gifts of the Spirit

By John R. Fiske, Jr.

"They went forth, and preached . . ., the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."

THE gifts of the Spirit, as well as eternal life, are promised to every obedient child of the Father (Acts 2:39; Rom. 2:6, 7). They are "powers of the world to come" (Heb. 6:5). In the past they were given in a limited and measured form, except in the case of Christ. They were but foretastes, first fruits, earnests, and prophetic intimations of the feast of heavenly powers which the saints will enjoy in full when the kingdom of God will come (Matt. 12:28; Luke 9:1; 11:20; Rom.-8:23; 2 Cor. 5:5; Eph. 1:13, 14; Heb. 6:5). Christ excepted, they have been seldom possessed and rarely exercised in the past (1 Cor. 12:27-30; Eph. 4: 8-12; 1 Sam. 3:1; Luke 4:23-28; John 10:41).

Every Bible dispensation has had its foundation laid in a series of miracles: the antediluvian in its miracles of Eden, the Mosaic in those of the Exodus, the gospel in those of the apostles. If miracles continued in full force during the whole gospel age it would be contrary to what the Eather would be contrary to what the Father has done in previous ages. But such is not the case.

There are two outpourings of these gifts, termed the "former" and "latter rain" (Hosea 6:3; James 5:7; Joel 2:23). The design and purpose of the "former" was fulfilled in a "confirmed" Word and completed revelation (John 14:26; 16:13; Eph. 4:7, 8, 11-16; 2 Cor. 13:9, 10; Acts 20:17-23; John 20:30, 31; 1 John 5:10-13; 2 Tim. 3: 15-17; Jude 3, the Greek; Mark 16:17-20; Heb. 2:3, 4). Spirit gifts now, therefore, would be superfluous, and if they existed they would discredit God's Word. The "latter rain" is yet to be, and it belongs to "the age to come" (Heb. 6:5). Between these two "rains" "now abideth faith, hope, love" (1 Cor. 13:13, A.R.V.).

Now, such gifts as "tongues," "healing," drinking "any deadly thing," etc., are termed "signs" (Mark 16:17). Speaking of "tongues" and other signs, Paul declares

"they shall cease," and inasmuch as in the "former rain" men were merely given a "taste" of these "powers of the world to come," he declares what they did and knew were "in part" and, therefore, "shall be done away" (1 Cor. 13:8-10). But before that which was "in part" was "done away" the Spirit-filled elders (Acts 20:28) were exhorted to cure the sick under certain conditions (James 5:14). However, these miracles became more and more rare as the time neared for the complete revelation and confirmation of God's Word. Hence, we find Paul left Trophimus at Miletum "sick" (2 Tim. 4:20), and Timothy was told to "use a little wine for (his) stomach's sake" and his other infirmities (1 Tim. 5:23). Finally, the "gifts" ceased entirely.

Though Spirit "gifts" have ceased till the "latter rain," God meanwhile heals "diseases" (Psalm 103:3) and blesses His children generally through His natural laws. Timothy's stomach was helped thus, and this is now true of all His saints.

It is sometimes insisted that the "oil" of the "wise" in Matthew 25:4 represents the Spirit gifts. There is no proof for this. In view of (Please turn to page 11)

"Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall ccase; whether there be knowledge (supernatural), it shall vanish away.

"Now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

"Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

-1 Corinthians 13:8, 12, 13.

FIFTY PER CENT CEMETERY

Whoa! Traveling too fast, Mr. Dualist may overrun the "strait" gate, and miss the narrow way. He writes: "What about the word 'cemetery'?" In answer harder than his riddle he then explains: "'Ceme' means the same as 'semi'—half; and 'tery' from the Latin terra means earth. The reason for this is that but half of man is buried there, and that another half is not buried."

Ha. It is fun to speed; see the speedster go. Fifty per cent cemetery means room for two in every grave, or a cemetery that is never full.

Webster's 1939 International Dictionary (unabridged) is choice authority on the derivation and definition of words. It has no such explanation. Instead, Webster says the Greek koimeterion became the Latin coemeterium which, in turn, became the English "cemetery," that the word originally meant "a sleeping chamber, burial place," and adds that this noun compares to the verb koiman which means "to put to sleep." Webster defines "cemetery" as "a place or ground set apart for the burial of the dead, . . . a graveyard." Certainly!

Nevertheless, if Webster did not know, and if Mr. Dualist and all his cohorts are most convinced that they will be but half buried, neither God nor undertakers need agree. God never said, "Thou shalt surely half die." Something else told the lie. Moreover, the word "cemetery" (half earth?) does not even once appear in all God's Word. The Bible's silence warns!

Jesus said, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore" (Rev. 1:18). There is an inspirational ring in Jesus' voice. Speedy Mr. Dualist says, "But half of man is buried"! There is no chapter and verse for his quotation, and honest students of the Bible know it. His theory hurries Jesus past the tomb. If but half of man is buried, then only half of Jesus Christ was raised. If but half of Jesus was raised, then only half of Christians' sins are borne, for "if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins" (1 Cor. 15:17). If Christians are half in sin, can they in any sense expect more than a half salvation?

Is half salvation the real salvation? Which half-if only half—will be saved? Job said, "In my flesh shall I see God." Jesus said, "Why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." Jesus raised was Jesus; not just His half. Job resurrected will be whole Job!

VAIN MATHEMATICS

Some have "believed in vain," who did not "keep in memory" that "Christ (not half of Him) died for our sins . . .; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures: and that he was seen" (1 Cor. 15:2-5). Dualism is a vain division of Jesus that denies His actual death and resurrection!

Not only have mathematical theologians divided God into three parts, but they have taken one of those supposed parts, Christ, and divided Him into two. Morcovet, these figurers tell us that God and Christ are one, which, unless my reason is all agog, is saying that a sixth part of God is God. Einstein is not so hard to understand!

What camels Orthodoxy swallows! It is surprising that there are not more infidels. But how the crafty theologians strain at baptism right out in the river as Jesus was baptized, and how they shun the simply stated promises of Jesus' physical return to earth! Why are there no Sunday school lessons in the widely used quarterlies of our day using such texts as Acts 1:11? Shall youth not be taught the plainly stated second coming of our Lord (Heb. 9:28), yet be persuaded that Jesus was only half in the tomb? Children know that one cannot be six.

REASONABLE RELIGION

In accord with reason and scientific fact and the Bible, the whole man dies, all the man is buried, the buried are in their graves. The resurrected Jesus was really Jesus, and every whit a man. Being "the firstborn among many brethren" (Rom. 8:29), it is sensible to believe that Jesus' resurrection typifies the resurrection of all His brethren.

To believe the true promises of God requires little more confession than to admit the actual incredible inventions of man. Who a century ago believed what one now sees? Who can put a boundary on the sky?

Good Things for God's People

By J. H. Anderson

GOD has set before us eternal life and all good things if we obey Him, and everlasting death if we disobey Him. "See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil. . . . I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live" (Deut. 30:15, 19). If we choose life we shall then get life and every good thing that God can provide for us. "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Psalm 84:11).

God blesses His people in this life (Mark 10:28-30), but the eternal blessings will come in the perfect day of the kingdom. "In this mountain (kingdom) shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it" (Isa. 25:6-8). Note: In Matthew 22:1-14 the Lord shows us that while the feast is prepared for all people only those who obey-who come dressed with the wedding garment-will eat of it, or share those blessings. The greatest enemy that we have is death, and that enemy will be here until destroyed in the kingdom, in the perfect day. "For he (Christ) must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death" (1 Cor. 15:25, 26).

Now, as all these eternal blessings will come only to God's people in the kingdom, we should be interested in the kingdom and how to be members of God's family. The kingdom of God is the outstanding subject of the Bible. It was the Master's subject during His preaching. Paul spent the last two years of his life teaching this subject (Acts 28:30, 31). It comes first in prayer (Matt. 6:9-13). We are to seek it first (Matt. 6:33). The kingdom is not now in existence, therefore we pray for it to come.

What is the kingdom of God? It is a real government with all the elements of a government (Isa. 9:6, 7). Note: Here it is called a government, the government of King David. Christ, King of kings, will be the supreme King of this kingdom. The Twelve Apostles and the overcomers in the church will be subordinate rulers (Matt. 19:27, 28; Rev. 2:26, 27; 3:21). The twelve tribes of Israel and the left of the nations will be subjects (Zech 13:8, 9; 14:16; Matt. 25:31-34). The earth will be the territory, and Jerusalem the capital (Dan. 2:35; Jer. 3:17). God prepared the kingdom for His people at the foundation of the world. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you" (Matt. 25:34).

God gave Adam and Eve dominion over all the earth, commanded them to subdue it (Gen. 1:27-31). Thus He made them rulers of the earth. They sinned and lost the kingdom (Gen. 3:1-24). Christ came to seek and save that which Adam lost. "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). Having done this Jesus invites His people to enter the kingdom.

The kingdom of God once existed as the kingdom of Israel. God organized the kingdom of Israel (1 Sam. 8). God put David on the throne after He rejected Saul (1 Sam. 16:1-14). God made a covenant with David by which He pledged Himself to give David a Son to sit on his throne forever (Psalm 89:27-36). Christ is that Son (Isa. 9:6, 7; Luke 1:28-35; Rom. 1:1-4). That kingdom was overturned three times to be no more until He comes whose right it is to sit on David's throne (Ezek. 21:25-27). Since the third overturning, A.D. 70, there has been no such kingdom.

Today, as we see the Jews going to the Holy Land and the blessings of God coming to that land, we believe God is now bringing in the kingdom (Isa. 2:2-4; Dan. 2:35, 44, 45; Hosea 3:4, 5). In this kingdom Christ will reign in righteousness, and princes will rule in judgment (Isa. 32:1). Then every man shall sit under his own fig tree and no one will molest him (Micah 4:4). The little children will be safe there. "The sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea" (Isa. 11:8, 9).

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away" (Rev. 21:4). The devil and his works will have been destroyed, the curse removed (Heb. 2:14, 15; 1 John 3:8; Rev. 22:3). In Revelation 21:5 we hear the one sitting on the throne say: "Behold, I make all things new." Then in Revelation 5:9-13 we hear every creature in heaven, earth, and sea praising God. Thus in the kingdom of God in the perfect day will God fulfill His oath: "As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord" (Num. 14:21).

In the next article we shall try to find out what one must do to become a citizen of this wonderful kingdom.

The Judgments of God

Temporal and Eternal

By J. M. Morgan

THAT which is temporal is but for a limited time, and it is designed for a special or particular purpose. That which is eternal refers to the end, to that which is to last; and is not a purpose to an end, but is the end itself. A judgment is a judicial decision, and implies inflicted punishment. The Lord's judgments will be attended with inflicted punishments from the Lord God. The Day of Judgment will be a time, period, or age, in which the Lord passes judgment.

God's first special judgment, which is a temporal one, was pronounced upon Adam and his world (kosmos). Kosmos really means order, or arrangement. Thus, because of sin, Adam and his order were judged and cast down. But before Adam and his kosmos went down there was given the promise of Christ, "the lamb . . . killed, from a casting down of a world (kosmos referring to this present fallen world)" (Rev. 13:8, in the word for word translation of the Diaglott). We understand then, that after Adam sinned, but before he was driven out of Eden, God clothed him and his wife with skins, evidently from lambs which prefigured the Lamb, Jesus Christ.

Thus, in type, the first sacrifice—necessitated by sin and shame—preached the atoning blood of Christ as of a spotless Lamb. Peter says of Jesus, according to the Diaglott, that He was "foreknown, indeed, before a laying down of a world." (See the word for word translation of 1 Peter 1:20.) Further, God said that the seed of the woman would bruise the serpent's seed (Gen. 3:15). Jesus, who atones for man's sins, is the very one to destroy Satan, and to at last establish righteousness in the earth.

We next notice that the effects of God's judgment on Adam and his order were an end of his Edenic ownership and his right to eat of the Tree of Life. "So he (God) drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life" (Gen. 3:24).

Because of Adam's one sin, the death penalty passed on Adam and, consequently, on all his descendants—all the race. No human eye will ever see the untold heartaches and the suffering resulting from sin, and which affects the whole race of Adam. (Editor's note: Critics sometimes mock at the justice of God in temporarily subjecting the race because of Adam's sin, but let them not forget that God offers freely to bless eternally because of the obedience of Christ. If men despise this offer of God, they are choosing for themselves the wages of sin which is death, just as surely as Adam chose death for himself. The temporary prefigures the eternal.)

Some believe that death, the final result of sin, is a blessing. Would God punish with a blessing? Christ is going to destroy death (1 Cor. 15:26). Would Christ destroy the very way to glory? If death is a blessing to all the race, then the Devil deserves credit for the lie he told Eve (Gen. 3:4; John 8:44). Sin and its effects can be traced to the Devil's lie.

In the course of time there came to be two religious teachings, and two distinct religious classifications of men. Abel was of the one and true faith, while Cain erred from the true way of offering sacrifices to God (Gen. 4:3; Heb. 11:4). In Genesis 4:26 we find recorded the birth of Enos, Seth's son. "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord," or according to the margin, "to call themselves by the name of the Lord." That is, some professed to be "sons of God." Enoch and Noah were of the true faith and family. "Enoch walked with God" (Gen. 5:24).

The great multitude of people before the Flood served other gods. This teaching of other gods was then, and is now, one of men's chief sins. Joshua said to Israel: "Put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord" (Josh. 24:14).

It was not only a sin for men to serve the gods before the Flood, but it seems that God did not approve of the "sons of God" marrying the "daughters of men" (worldly women). The account of the "sons of God" marrying the "daughters of men" is found in Genesis 6:1-5. Verses 5, 6 read: "God saw that the wickedness of man (not angels, as some teach) was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart."

But why should the Lord repent that He had made man, and why should it have grieved Him at His heart, and why did God send the Flood upon man to destroy him, if it is true, as some teach, that God prearranged sin in His plan for the very good of man? If "the wages of sin is death," and if man is what does the sinning, how can it be that only the Devil and sin are to be eternally destroyed in the final judgment and in the lake of fire?

Sin caused the old world or order (kosmos) to be destroyed. Notice the effects of the Flood as stated in Genesis 7:22, 23. We quote verse 22: "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life...died." Notice, the Scripture does not say, "all in whom were immortal souls," but it does say, "in whose nostrils was the breath of life."

"Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark." Of the worldly multitudes Jesus said, "The flood came, and destroyed them all" (Luke 17:27).

The Penitent Thief's Request

By R. A. Curtis

DID the colloquy between Jesus and the repentant malefactor indicate that they would be together in paradise the same day in which the request was uttered? Some professed religionists, who hold to the mistaken theory that Adam's race is inherently immortal and immaterial, think Jesus and the thief were actually with their heavenly Father that day; in a disembodied state to mutually share in "fulness of joy" and "pleasures for evermore" (Psalm 16:11).

"He that is first in his own cause seemeth just; but his neighbour cometh and searcheth him" (Prov. 18:17). And in order to "prove all things" so that he can "hold fast that which is good," calls upon his neighbor, saying, "Produce your cause," and "Bring forth your strong reasons" for the "hope that is in you." (1 Thess. 5:21; 1 John 4:1; Isa. 41:21; 1 Peter 3:15.) In our search for truth, which is fully equipped to make us "free from the law of sin and death," we must discriminate between assertion and proof, between rhetoric and logic (Rom. 8:1, 2; Titus 2:1, 8).

The penitent's request implied a period of waiting ere he would be in Christ's kingdom when it comes. He petitioned, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom" (Luke 23:42). With what prayerful solicitude the doomed malefactor must have experienced as he made his dying request. Since that memorable event took place on Calvary, over nineteen hundred years ago, many repentant sinners have uttered the same prayer, to be realized when "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ: and he shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. 11:15).

Christ's "appearing and his kingdom" are synchronous events, and "our gathering together unto him" cannot take place until "the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" "the second time without sin ('a sin offering,' Diaglott) unto salvation" (2 Tim. 4:1; 2 Thess. 2:1; Heb. 9:27). The following facts make it preposterous for the realization of the thief's request the day he uttered it:

- (1) Death by crucifixion was a lingering death. Sometimes those crucified lingered several days ere death came to their relief.
 - (2) Christ died before the day had ended, but the repentant thief had not yet died. Pilate "marvelled" that Christ was "already dead" (Mark 15:44, 45).

- (3) Three days after the conversation took place at the cross between Jesus and the penitent thief, Jesus said to Mary, "Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father" (John 20:17).
- (4) Jesus has not yet come into His kingdom (Matt. 25:31).
- (5) "Wars and rumours of wars" are not yet forgotten themes (Mark 13:3-8; Luke 21:24-28).
- (6) The "wheat" and the "tares" are still unseparated (Matt. 13:36-43).
- (7) Death's reign is still unbroken (John 5:28, 29; 6:39, 40, 44).
- (8) The "curse" still lingers (Gen. 3:17-19; Rev. 22: 3-5). "Thorns and thistles" make us still reminiscent of man's willful rebellion to his merciful Creator (Gen. 3:17-19; Isa, 55:12, 13).
- (9) Pain, tears, and separation of loved ones is cumulative evidence that none of Adam's race is "already perfect" or fully "satisfied" (Phil. 3:7-14, 20, 21; Psalm 17: 15).
- (10) The Savior's promise should coincide with the penitent thief's request.

Christ promised the dying malefactor, while hanging on the cross and external evidence all seemed to refute its ever being realized by them, "I say unto thee to day" (or give the assurance now that in harmony with thy request, and at the time specified, when I come into my kingdom) "Shalt thou be with me in paradise." That paradise will be "the world to come," for Christ's "kingdom is not of this world" (John 18:36; Heb. 2:5, 8).

Paradise was once the Garden of Eden from which Adam was driven out because of willful disobedience (Gen. 2:15:17; 3:17-19, 22-24). As punctuation is not inspiration, and was unknown until near the middle of the fifteenth century when Manutius, a learned printer of Venice, invented it, by placing the comma after "to day" any seeming discrepancy of this text with other scriptures is obviated. When the blissful "times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord" "the paradise of God" will bloom once more. Its "tree of life" with leaves of medicinal properties will be used for "the healing of the nations" (Rev. 22:1-5; Ezek. 47:12; Acts 3: 19-21). As the restored "tree of life" will be "in the midst of the paradise of God," we can readily (by comparing Rev. 2:7 with 21:1-4; 22:1-5) discover when the penitent robber's prayer will be realized. It will be in Christ's coming kingdom for which we wait, watch, and pray (Luke 23:50, 51; Mark 13:33-37; Matt. 6:10; 2 Thess. 3:5).

"That Restitution, Lord, we wait, Though circling years move slow, Since exiled from our blest estate, Six thousand years ago."

Good Times Ahead

By Mrs. Raymond Knife

As WE ponder and wonder about this great terrorstricken world in which we live, we ask ourselves the question: Will there ever be a time when all this sorrow and trouble will cease? To this we answer: Yes, when our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ returns to lift the curse of sin and trouble from off this earth. We are living in perilous times, for one cannot listen to a news broadcast, or read a newspaper, and not be stricken in awe by all the trouble that it contains. Everything seems to point to Christ's soon coming.

Paul's prophecy in 2 Timothy 3:1-8 is surely being fulfilled. Also, Luke's prophecy in 21:25, 26 is now easily understood to point to our own day of "perplexity." But in the same chapter we have the comforting words of our Savior, "Then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." In 2 Timothy 2:12 we are told, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him." This being true, we are given grace to bear the afflictions and trials that come to us. So let us take up our cross and go forward in Christ's service, teaching the truth, living the truth, praying the truth, and singing the truth.

We know that the Lord has promised us good things and good times, that our reward is sure, that He has promised never to forsake us, and that when the load is more than we can bear we are told, "Cast your burden upon the Lord, and he will sustain you." Job was tired and afflicted. David kept in hiding for fear of Saul. Paul suffered many things, yet spoke of his sorrows as "light afflictions." So, with all these things in mind, let us trust and work for Jesus that we may live in that good time that He has promised and which He will provide for all who love and serve Him.

The following poem, "Sorrow and Joy," by our late Sister Alice B. Curtis so fluently and beautifully gives similar thought to my words that I add her message to mine:

> "Each one must meet with Sorrow here And feel her molding hand, Though we murmur at her presence,

And are slow to understand
Why she shadows earth's fair pathways
And in all life's music sweet,
Blends her minor chords of sadness
Ere the music is complete.

"God's Word alone can answer
What we ask ofttimes with tears,
Whence cometh Sorrow? Why does she Exist throughout the years?
Man plunged in ruin by his sins,
A captive of despair,
Was dwelling near the gates of Death,
When Sorrow found him there.

"She lays her heavy hand on him,
His wayward heart she wrings,
Till, learning Sorrow follows sin,
He strives for better things.
Man ever would with Pleasure walk,
And from Life's lessons turn,
Which he must in Affliction's school,
From Sorrow's pages learn.

"God will not break the bruised reed,
Or contrite heart refuse;
But from the meek and sorrowful,
His people He will choose.
A Man of sorrows was our Lord,
He bore our grief and woe,
And we must drink of Sorrow's cup,
His fellowship to know.

"Weeping endureth for a night,
But soon comes Joy's bright morn,
When from Earth's heart, in one glad day
A nation shall be born.
Haste, happy day, when Christ shall come
And lift the curse of sin!
Lift up your heads, ye gates, and let
The King of glory in.

Have the Churches Failed?

Article Four

By R. H. Judd

AS INTIMATED in the closing paragraph of our last article, we come now to the study of the Hebrew word echad. In doing so it will be necessary to examine the writings of eminent leaders in the churches who, owing to their exalted positions as recognized teachers of the Word of God, have exercised a far-reaching influence on large numbers of people who are less favored than they, as regards educational standards. The very prominence of these leaders gives weight to their statements. It at the same time makes them a legitimate source of inquiry as to the correctness of their conclusions. There can, therefore, be no discourtesy or impropriety in considering what they have publicly put on record. The sincere scholar will welcome criticism, recognizing that in the interests of all the ultimate goal must be truth.

I keenly recognize that the emphatic teaching of the Bible is that "God is one," yet was taught during childhood, youth, and early manhood in association with churches and colleges that God is a trinity of Persons consisting of "God the Father," "God the Son," and "God the Holy Ghost." Those in positions of responsibility in the churches, theological institutions, and Bible colleges have sought for some means of harmonizing these irreconcilable statements. To do this from the English translation of the Scriptures is recognized as a manifestly impossible task. To state that "God is one," and at the same time assert that He (note the pronoun) is "a plurality of persons"-as does Dr. R. A. Torrey in his book, "The Fundamentals of the Christian Faith,"-is a feat that cannot logically be accomplished through any method known to English grammar. The only course left open to them is an appeal to the Hebrew. The following statement is made by the aforementioned author (page 69): "The Hebrew word translated 'one' in the various passages given (namely, Deut. 4:35; 6:4; 1 Tim. 2:5; Mark 12:29) denotes a compound unity not a simple unity" (italics mine).

The Hebrew word occurring in the references from Deuteronomy, and in over five hundred other texts in the Old Testament, is echad. It will be noticed that Dr. Torrey's assertion regarding this Hebrew word, while emphatic, is ambiguously guarded. It may mean, or it may not, that echad denotes a compound unity not a simple unity, in the passages named only. In any case, he advances no proof, for the very simple reason that the proof does not exist. It matters not, therefore, whether he refers to these, or all the passages in which the word occurs in the Old Testament.

It may be advisable here to put on record one of the main reasons for giving detailed study to this particular phase of the controversy concerning Trinitarian doctrine. Among those strenuously circulating the teaching we are now examining in reference to this Hebrew word (and there are many who have followed Dr. Torrey, who at the time of publishing his book was Dean of the Moody Bible Institute) is the Biblical Research Society with headquarters at Los Angeles, California, having branches in Toronto, Ontario, and other cities. In the face of its own declaration that "the Jews believe" (and we may add, always have believed) God is one in the sense of absolute oneness as opposed to compound unity," this society has as its avowed main objective the influencing of "the people of Israel" to accept as a "basis of faith" "the Triune God: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit." This is surely an amazing objective in the light of Scripture."

From the twelve members of the Headquarters Advisory Board we list the following well-known names: Arthur I. Brown, M.D.; H. A. Ironside, Lit.D.; P. W. Philpott, D.D.; B. B. Sutcliffe, D.D.; and Canon F. E. Hewitt. Representing the Toronto branch are Wm. Hamilton, Esq.; A. H. Dancy, Esq.; Andrew Chisholm, Esq.; and Mrs. L. B. Hamilton. The founder and president of the society is Dr. David L. Cooper, Th.M., Ph.D., Hebrew scholar and author. Many other names of widely known men and women of education and repute could easily be added.

Taking into consideration the serious facts to which we have called attention and the issues involved, we ask our readers to patiently and prayerfully accompany us in our study, and to honestly and sincerely seek the truth, proving all things by the test of the written Word of God (Luke 2:23; 10:26; Acts 1:20; 7:42) holding fast to that which is good (1 Thess. 5:21).

In view of the names mentioned, we feel that we are voicing fairly what is current teaching in the churches, if we examine the published statements of those who are their accredited representatives.

Elijah Jacob Baron, a Jewish convert through the instrumentality of Dr. Cooper named above, publishes a thirty-six-page pamphlet, with cover bearing the title, "Life From the Dead." A copy of the first edition—comstory of Sandalphon, the angel of glory? It is but a legend, I know, a fable, a phantom, a show, yet the old medieval tradition, the beautiful strange superstition, but haunts me and holds me the more."

This cunningly devised fable of human immortality, which started so long ago in the Garden of Eden, is still defying the God of heaven. This fable tells us the wages of sin is not death. It denies that we are bought with a price, the precious blood of Jesus. It denies that He died that we might live. Yet how many times we have read, "If ye believe that Jesus died and rose again"!

To claim we have what we are taught to seek for (Rom. 2:7), is robbing Christ of the glory He came to bring. How grieved we are to see friends, with an open Bible, place flowers on the coffin of a loved one, and tell us the same cunning fable in these words: "The flowers are an emblem of immortality." God's Book tells us the very opposite. "The voice said, Cry. And he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth and the flower fadeth, because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; surely the people is grass, the grass withereth and the flower fadeth, but the word of the Lord endureth for ever" (Isa. 40:6-8).

This same Peter who made known unto us the power and the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, also says, "Ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, . . . but with the precious blood of Christ" (1 Peter 1:18, 19). He also tells us we are grass (v. 24), showing we need to be redeemed with the precious blood of Jesus.

May we take heed to the written Word. Let us dare to be like Paul, and to be bound in chains rather than to compromise with error.

"High festival is of less moment than high resolve, but a hint from the calendar can help to keep the resolve altert."

"HELL" AS USED IN ACTS AND THE EPISTLES

By G. E. Marsh

PETER, whom God sent first to the Gentiles (Acts 15:7), used two Greek words which were translated "hell" in the Common Version. They are:

(1) Hades—Acts 2:27, 31. This is a quotation from the Old Testament (Psalm 16:8-11). Applying the passage to Jesus, Peter implies that He went to "hell," but was not permitted to stay there except for three days and nights. He does not suggest that wicked men are sent there for punishment.

(2) Tartaroo—2 Peter 2:4. This is the only occurrence of the word in the New Testament. Peter declares that God sent angels (not men) that sinned to tartaroo (hell) to be held in chains and darkness until the judgment. They were sent to "hell" before, not after, the judgment. He does not suggest that men who sin will be sent to tartaroo (hell) for punishment.

PAUL. The word "hell" appears nowhere in the recorded sermons or epistles of Paul in the King James Version or in the Revised.

Hades—1 Corinthians 15:55. Paul used this word, here rendered "grave," but once in his writing, and nowhere in his sermons.

DARK SAYINGS

By A. Anthon

"God cannot be tempted with evil" (James 1:13). God cannot be tempted to sin—to do wickedly.

"The Lord said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil?" (Job 1:8).

"Then Satan answered the Lord, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought? Hast not thou made a hedge about him, and about his house? . . . Thou hast blessed the works of his hands. . . . But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will curse thee to thy face" (vv. 9-11).

God then said, in substance, "I will show you that Joh is perfect and upright. Put suffering and waste upon him as you like, and thus prove to yourself that Job is faithful. Slay all his sons and daughters and the families with all their children. Yet, I know you will find Job faithful." While this is paraphrased wording, it is much in accord with the actual thought of Scripture.

Why should God prove to Satan Job's integrity? Why did Job say (v. 21), "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away," if it were Satan's fault? Job did not accuse Satan! In 2:3 God says, "Still he holdeth fast his integrity, although thou (Satan) movedst me against him, to destroy him without cause." Does God confess that Satan tempted God and prevailed? Did Satan make God take the life of Job's babies, and did God confess to it? God did these things if Job is literal history.

Further, Job plainly said, "God hath delivered me to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked" (16:11). Did Job accuse God of being responsible for his calamities? Yes.

Deductions

Do you see what a mess you are in if Satan is a wicked superhuman being? Did God create this "Satan"? and did this Satan then tempt and prevail over God to do such an ungodly deed? No! No! Ten thousand times, No! No!

But carefully study Job, and you will find it portrays a most wonderful God, a loving God, a beneficent and indulgent Father. God wrote the Book of Job. It explains how God's chastisements are personified by "Satan." Job teaches that God is not tempted by another superhuman being; but that God administers "spankings," evil, punishments, corrections. God directs and controls this "Satan."

Job was very righteous, the most righteous of humans; but not so righteous that he was wholly perfect—that he could not yet improve: not so perfect that God could not yet teach him to be more perfect. The more perfect a person becomes the stricter God must be to improve him. Am I willing to be improved? Am I willing to be trained to do the work that God wishes I would do in the kingdom? God has a certain work for me to do in the kingdom. I must be trained—educated—to hold that position. God is trying to educate me. If I will be trained, an eternal blessing will be mine. If not, God will rock me to sleep in a big warm bed.

HAVE THE CHURCHES FAILED?

mar could inform him that the words "as one" clearly indicate that the sentence is incomplete, and that the comparison referred to must be stated in connection with the numeral. The numeral here has direct and unquestionable reference primarily to the word "man." In view of these serious facts and their endorsement by the Biblical Research Society, whose advisory board of twelve members and numbers of other widely known men and women associated with them—all of whom are representatively drawn from the churches—it is surely time that the question, "Have the churches failed in their allegiance to God's Word?" be made a dominant issue.

One writer gives "one cluster of grapes" (Num. 13:23), and "a bundle of sticks" (Acts 28:3) as proof of compound unity. We state it as our firm conviction that there can be no alteration of numerical values. Further, the logical and only conclusion is: that in the first instance the numeral has reference to one cluster as against two or more clusters, and in the second instance to one bundle of sticks in contrast to more than one bundle, and not to the number of sticks contained.

We feel compelled to notice two other remarks by the writer of "Life From the Dead." The first is on a par with his thoughts (stated and implied) in reference to Ezra 2:64, and the second is couched in language so strong as to call for emphatic protest; but to which there could be no objection, provided he could definitely prove his serious charge. While giving him due credit for earnestness, we submit that his arguments are neither scholarly nor Scriptural.

Mr. Baron says, "If it were intended that God should be represented as an absolute oneness, the word vachid would have been used." Though the gentleman is himself a Hebrew, we submit that his statement is incorrect. According to Young's Concordance (a recognized authority) yachid is never rendered as a numeral in the Scriptures, but is in every instance translated by the word "only." So strongly did the revisers recognize that echad is a numeral representing absolute unity that in Isaiah 51:2 they have substituted the words "but one" for the word "alone" of the Authorized Version. That yachid occurs but five times in Scripture should be ample testimony that Mr. Baron is seriously in error. It is difficult to realize that these facts were not known to him. For him to follow such an argument with the remark that, "This position is incontestable and can only be avoided by one who has a motive to avoid the truth," is, in view of all that we have pointed out, a reprehensible and false accusation of those who differ from him. Such language is only permissible when truth is deliberately ignored, and then only when the motive and the error are unquestionable.

Daniel 12:9, 10, the "oil" of the "wise" seems to be their understanding of Daniel's words which are "sealed till the time of the end." Inasmuch as "none of the wicked shall understand" these words, it follows that they have no oil in their lamps. Remember that Matthew 25:1-13 and Daniel 12:9, 10 both deal with "the time of the end."

Now, before these "gifts" vanished they were used punitively in association with their benevolent uses (Ex. 4:6-8; 6:13, 17, 29; 9:22, 29; Num. 12:10, 13; 2 Kings 5:14, 27; Isa. 38:1, 2; Acts 5:1-11; 8:20, 24; 13:9-11). Knowing that Jesus is forever "the same" we may be sure that if these "gifts" were now extant, scoffers at the Word would be punished now as then; but since such is not the case we may be certain these "gifts" no longer exist.

In conclusion, the prophetic Word requires the present cessation of miraculous power (Psalm 74:7-10; Micah 3: 6-12; 1 Cor 13:8-13), and existing facts surely corroborate the prophecy. Therefore, look not for those "gifts" now, but in "the world to come."

TRUTH

By Donna Johnson, Freedom, Neb.

"He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler" (Psalm 91:4). The shield was the most ancient piece of defensive armor. It was composed of a variety of materials, and was of various forms and sizes. The ordinary shield among the Hebrews was of wood covered with leather. Some shields had brass or copper coverings. God is figuratively termed the "shield and buckler" of His people. Faith, the truth, and salvation of God are called a shield. The buckler was a small shield.

"The Lord . . . cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth" (Psalm 96:13). "His truth" means the Scripture. People who think they can believe just anything, had better take into consideration that they will be judged by the truth.

"His merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord" (Psalm 117:2). "The truth of the Lord (which) endureth for ever" isn't something that is here today and gone tomorrow, but it is here forever. It is something we can put our trust in. We should study and try to learn all we can before the coming of the Lord, and not wait until the last minute before taking any interest in the Scripture.

"The Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations" (Psalm 100:5). His truth is everlasting through generations and generations.

THE EXAMPLE OF PAUL

By Lorraine Brossard, Eden Valley, Minn.

Paul's teachings in many ways show his great satisfaction and contentment in his field of work. Dissatisfaction is responsible for the helter-skelter way of modern living, but Paul said, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content" (Phil. 4:11), and Paul was indeed speaking from a full life of many experiences. He knew what it was to endure every kind of physical hardship, but he also knew the great happiness of receiving the Lord's blessings and commendation. Any Christian today knows he has weaknesses. Paul did, too, for at one time when he prayed that the thorn in his flesh might depart, the Lord answered, "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (2 Cor. 12:9).

Christ does not choose His workers for their great strength, rather for their trustiness and worthiness. His most loved and ardent workers had weaknesses, but their faith in Christ produced great works.

So, let us believe as Paul expressed in Philippians 4:13: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," and "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 3:14).

BEREAN DAY

Monday, August 7, has been designated as Bercan Day at the General Conference. While we have not as yet received a full program for this day, we know that it will be just as interesting as it usually is, and perhaps more so. Keep in mind that Brother Harry Gockler, National Bercan president, will be the speaker of the evening.

We sincerely wish you to attend all of the Conference, but try especially to be there on Berean Day. Then, as good Bereans, attend every other session that it is possible for you to attend. Without the full cooperation of every Berean we shall fail!

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32). "The truth shall make you free" from what? Romans 8:2 answers this, saying, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." When will Christians be wholly free from sin and death? This freedom will come at the resurrection. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive" (1 Cor. 15:22).

"If I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15). The church is called "the pillar," because it upholds and supports the truth.

"But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed" (James 1:25). The "perfect law of liberty" is the law of Christ, or the truth.

Lesson: 1 Kings 12:1-5, 12-17, 20.

REHOBOAM'S FOOLISH CHOICE

Rehoboam is the only son of Solomon whose name is recorded in our Bible, although Solomon had many wives and sons.

After Solomon's death, but before Rehoboam was called to Shechem to be made king, some of the people remembered Jeroboam and called him from Egypt. He arrived in time to go with the people to speak to Rehoboam about the heavy taxes. They asked Rehoboam to lighten their burdens. Rehoboam told the people to wait for three days for the answer to their request.

Shall we notice what Rehoboam did in trying to find the right answer to this problem? Did he pray to God for wisdom as his father Solomon had done? No; for he was an idol worshiper. First, he called the wise old men who had been his father's helpers. He asked their advice, but was not satisfied. He then called for more help. To whom did he go next for help? He went to the young men who knew little of the affairs of the king. This last advice satisfied Rehoboam. So the third day he answered the people roughly. He told them he would treat them even worse than his father had!

Can you blame the ten tribes for making Jeroboam their king?

Only two tribes, who became known as Judah, remained with Rehoboam. He reigned over them for seventeen years.

CHOOSE YOU THIS DAY

Today we have a choice to make. Shall we worship idols, or God? If we fail to choose to follow God and Christ, we are choosing the evil way, for there are not three roads, as some would have us believe. There is no middle road! Only the right and the wrong ways lie before us. If we are not walking on the "strait" road, we are then on the broad road that leads to destruction. So don't delay in making your choice. We are told, "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor. 6:2). Christians are needed who have their whole lives, their hearts, minds and bodies consecrated to God's service.

CALL FOR MEMBERS!

We are still searching for new ECE Club members. Send me your name, age, and birthday. I shall be happy to enroll you, and to send your membership card—ready for framing.

MORE COOPERATION NEEDED

We have a few churches which have all their boys and girls of this club age enrolled.

Two of the largest groups we have are from Hammond, Louisiana, and Cleveland, Ohio. We are glad some adults are interested in helping boys and girls to study their Bibles every day.

If you cannot read The Restitution Herald, get someone to read it to you, or borrow one from someone to read.

Most of our ECE Club aims are about attendance at church and Sunday school, and home study of the Bible.

Can't you get some boy or girl to join? Who can tell how many homes would begin daily family worship, if their children were urged to study and pray every day!

ECE CLUB

Thank you, Henry Hutchinson, for your request. I have sent William's address to you and I hope you will become warm friends, and help each other to hold fast to that which is good.

The following new members join today: Lorna Adams, Norbeck, South Dakota; Lois Elaine Chek, Hazel Eileen Stadden, Paul Swartz, and Joyce Ann Stadden, all of Cleveland, Ohio; and Richard Paul and Patricia Mc Gowan from Niagara Falls, New York.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY WISHES

DELTA, OHIO

On Sunday, June 4, Bro. S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz., began a week's series of meet-ings at Raker Union Church, Delta, Ohio, On the first evening "The Challenge of the Cross" was presented by the Hustlers' Class of the Sunday school, directed by Bro. Glen Dunbar. Sr. Bernice Elton, of Toledo, Ohio, took charge of the music, and Sr. Margaret Mattison of Oregon, Ill., with her violin, added a very impressive atmosphere to the service.

The leading part was enacted by the teacher of the class, Mrs. Hazel Aeschilman of Wauseon, Ohio, who splendidly carried out her part and deserves much credit, as well as the other members of the play. It presented in a very clear manner the modern way of many in wanting to follow the cross. At the close of the play Bro. Lindsay gave a very impressive discourse on "The Three Crosses." The house was well filled.

During the following week we listened to wonderful lessons on the truths of the Bible. A good audience and interest featured every meeting. We are glad to announce one baptism, Bro. Alfred Reighard of Delta, a young business man of good standing.

Bro. Lindsay was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. Sarah Cox, a woman of great worth to the community, on Thursday afternoon. He spoke words of comfort and hope to those present.

and hope to those present.

We were surely glad to have Bro. Lindsay with us again, as he always leaves us refreshed and strengthened in the Word. We were also glad to have with us his grand-daughter, Miss Margaret Mattison of Oregon, Ill., who accompanied him here. Margaret's sweet personality and tunes on her violin won her many friends. We hope we may all meet again another year. Sr. Elizabeth Reighard of Wauseon, who is almost ninety-one years of age, was present at every service.

CONFERENCE DELEGATE FORMS

In accord with action taken at the last Gen-Conference, delegate forms have been mailed to all our church secretaries that we know about. These forms should be filled out according to instructions on the form, and returned to the secretary of the General Conference before conference begins.

The purpose of the form is to have uniform records of active members of the Church of God that the various churches might be correetly represented, and to make it convenient for the various churches to furnish such membership lists.

It is the intent that every church should receive one of these forms. If the secretary of your church has not received one by the time you read this notice, please inform us; giving name and address of the secretary. We wish every church represented at General Conference, August 1 to 13.

TRAINING SCHOOL ECHOES

Bro. G. E. Marsh, chairman of the Board of Religious Education, opened the second summer Bible Training School on Wednesday morning, July 5. Under his direction the School was organized with Bro. C. E. Randall being chosen dean.

Shortly after the School was under way a student council was created. The following students compose the Council: Walter Wig-gins, Vivian Kirkpatrick, John Mercer, Leslie LeCrone, Emily Fyfe, Jeraldine Louks, and Emily Fyfe, Jerico Springs, Mo., who is on the Correspondence Committee of the National Berean Society, should be addressed for the next five weeks at Oregon, Ill., care of Na-tional Bible Institution.

Bro. G. E. Marsh, chairman of the Board of Education, was in Oregon, Ill., to open the first session of the Bible Training School, en Wednesday, July 5, at 9:00 a.m. The students and teachers are hard at work, and are enjoying it because it is the Lord's work.

Bro. J. M. Morgan of Edmond, Okla., is doing evangelistic work. He asks an interest in your prayers.

Your editor's Sunday evening audience had a pleasant change on July 9, when Bro. S. J. Lindsay broke the bread of life, Bro. C. E. Randall, dean of the Bible Training School, will deliver the evening sermon of July 16,

At the Sunday school of the Golden Rule Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, over forty had perfect attendance the second quarter.

Bro. H. S. Lasher of Deerfield, Fla., is en route to New York, from where he will come west to General Conference.

If you are really interested in the Church of God, next week's Herald should be worth as much to you as what it would cost to send a new subscription to your neighbor. Do you dare ask, "Who is my neighbor?" . . . "Go thou, and do likewise."

An esteemed college chum, Robert Robinson, together with his wife and four children, recently visited the editor and family. Time will not be stayed; it had been sixteen years since we had seen our friend. "Bob," don't wait so long to come again.

Bro. Harry Sheets of Newark, Ill., recently fell from the peak of a barn. Though badly bruised, he is expected to fully recover. Harry, it is less than three weeks until Conference.

Bro. C. E. Lapp, now with the Brush Creek, Ohio, brethren, reports that Sr. John Garard is a patient in the Stouder Memorial Hospital of Troy. We are sorry to hear this, and pray for her recovery. Also, Bro. Lapp reports the recent marriage of Sr. Gladys Pearson and Bro. Fred Pensyl. We guessed it. Congratulations, Fred.

"The last Quarterly is one of the best and most helpful issues the National Bible Institution has thus far produced, it seems to me." —G. E. Marsh. . . . Thank you, Bro. Marsh. We only wish that all of our ministers and churches were likewise appreciative.

Iola and Malcolm Magaw are visiting at Brush Creek, Ohio.

Bro, and Sr. Ezra Railsback of Los Angeles. Calif., after a brief visit in Oregon, Ill., left for a visit at the Frank Partlow home in Casey, Ill. From there they plan to visit the Brush Creek, Lawrenceville, and Cleveland, Ohio, congregations, and relatives at other points in Ohio. They plan to be at Brush Creek and Lawrenceville on Sunday, July 16, and at Cleveland the 23rd.

"Sunday, July 18, was an inspiring day at Niagara Falls and Fonthill. One came for-ward at the 'Falls' church for reconsecration. and eight at Fonthill in the evening; and one, Sr. Violet Haines, presented herself for baptism. She was immersed on Sunday evening, July 2."—C. E. Randall.

Bro. James A. Patrick is supplying for Bro. C. E. Randall during July.

Leila Whitehead, Evelyn Austin and Virtie Sitler, all of Chicago, are traveling in the eastern states, and will shortly be joined at the Vinginia Conference by Bro. F. L.

With an order for baptismal certificates, Bro. F. L. Austin reports an encouraging in-ercase in attendance of the special meetings at Eden Valley, Minn. Faith is victorious.

the efficient care of Mrs. Grace Wiggins, who will also be "Mother" to all during Conference and the Bible School.

Rowena Randall looks after the prayer list, while Delbert Jones has the task of being custodian of mails.

This week started off with an enrollment of twenty-six. The school spirit is par-excellent. Everyone seems to be trying to do his or her utmost to make the School an honor to the church, as well as a blessing to the members of the class.

John Mercer returned to his home in Macomb, Ill., to conduct the Sunday church work. The writer accompanied him.

Students will assist in the regular work of the Oregon church, such as conducting the midweek prayer meeting and acting as ushers.

Bro. S. J. Lindsay, one of the teachers, preached the evening sermon at the local church on "The Creation As a Type."

INDIANA BIBLE SCHOOL AND CONFERENCE

North Salem Church

The 1939 Indiana Bible School and Conference convened on Wednesday, June 14, and closed Sunday, June 25. One hundred eighteen closed Sunday, June 25. One hundred eighteen were registered for classes which were organized with the following teachers in charge: Mrs. James W. McLain, beginners; Mrs. Lulu Stilson, primary; Floyd Stilson, juniors; J. W. McLain and S. J. Lindsay, intermediates; J. H. Anderson and S. J. Lindsay, adults. Before the close of the meeting there were three baptized: Miss Eva Nellans, Rt. 1, Argos; Miss Florence Wickizer, 316 E. Wenger St., and Miss Magioric Rauch. 1710 Medora

St., and Miss Marjorie Rouch, 1710 Medora both of South Bend.

The business meeting was held at 2:00 p.m., Saturday, June 24. A discussion of the evangelistic work which was being carried on in the State took place. Everyone agreed that Bro. McLain made a splendid evangelist, and that the State should be more active in this work than in the past. The conference board is to assume all responsibility of carrying on the evangelistic work. They decided to retain Bro. McLain as state evangelist.

Several suggestions were made to improve the working of the Bible School. An extended effort will be made to increase the enrollment next year, and to get trained supervisors to take charge of the boys and girls.

Bros. Otto Dick and Floyd Stilson were chosen to be delegates to the General Conference held in Oregon, Ill., from August 1 to 13. The following were elected as officers of the conference board: Otto Dick, president; Floyd Stilson, first vice-president; Ernest Logan, second vice-president; Willard Naylor, treasurer; and Erma McChesney, secretary.

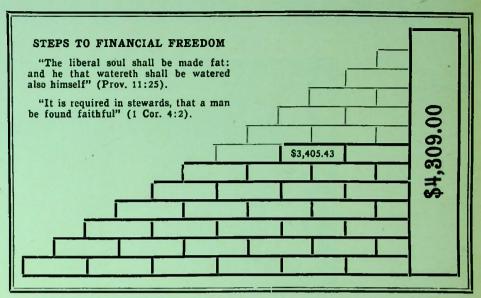

We were very happy to see Bro. and Sr. Frederick Claussen, Sr. Leota Hanson, and Sc.

Prederick Canssen, Sr. Leota Hanson, and Sr. Lois Carpenter from Oregon, Ill.; also Bro. Paul Hatch and his mother of Harvey, Ill. Bro. and Sr. C. E. Lapp stopped for a short time on their way to Ohio, and as Bro. and Sr. Lewis Romine were passing through, we Bro. Lindsay brought his granddaughter, Sr. Margaret Mattison of Oregon, Ill., with him. She is an excellent musician, playing both the violin and piano. We very much enjoyed hav-ing her, and hope that she may come again

We were happy to witness the obedience in baptism of three more parents on Sunday, July 2. We introduce to the household of fairh Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Plantner, 13711 Me-Elhatten Ave., and Mrs. Rita Brooks, 1354 W. 93rd St. Bro. and Sr. Plantner are faithful attendants and deeply interested in the faith and the church. They live near the church and will be a real source of strength. In fact, they are active workers already. Their daughter Alice, who has been raised up in our Sunday school, is looking forward to taking the same step herself. She is largely responsible for leading her parents to Christ. Sr. Brooks is a daughter of Mrs. Retha Love, who preceded her in baptism not long ago. She has been studying this step carefully, and we all rejoice that she has chosen to take the stand for the Master even in the face of difficulties.

A beautiful touch was added to the ocea sion in the presence of Sr. F. L. Austin, a rel-ative of Sr. Brooks', at the service. Sr. Austin, together with Sr. Leila Whitehead and Sr. Sitler, all of Chicago, worshiped with us on their way east to join Bro. Austin in Virginia. We were happy to have them and renew old friendships for the day. Thus the first Sunday of our new church

Thus the first Sunday of our new enactayear was a very joyous occasion.

The writer is leaving July 4 to be with his father. Bro. J. S. Lyon of Citronelle, Alz., who was badly injured June 21. He fell from the roof of a house, and broke his right elbow and right hip bone. He is in City Hospital in Mobile, Ala., where he will likely be confined for a long time.

"Home, Sweet Home"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Conditions of entrance into Golden Rule Home are as liberal as absolute security permits. Write for full particulars concerning the Home and its advantages. Or, better still, come and visit the Home itself and let the Family tell their own story of its advantages and comforts.

Address: Golden Rule Home, Mrs. Idona Romine, Matron, Oregon, Illinois.

Which Bucket Are We?

By Leota B. Hanson

"Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation" (Isa. 12:3).

SAID a bucket to his companion as they were going to the well, "How dismal you look!" "Ah!" replied the other, "I was reflecting on the uselessness of our being filled, for, let us go away ever so full, we always come back empty." "How strange to look at it in that way," said the other bucket. "Now I enjoy the thought that, however empty we come, we always go away full. If you will only look on it in that light you will be as cheerful as I am." This is a simple illustration. Nevertheless, it speaks almost volumes so far as our Christian lives are concerned.

Nothing should lie nearer to the hearts of God's children than the advancement of His work. At Illinois Bible School and General Conference the teachers and leaders have been selected with much thought and prayer, and it is their desire to convey to their classes the fundamentals which are so essential to our salvation. As servants of God they are doing effective work and instilling in the minds of their pupils the admonition of Paul: "Work out your own salvation." This is strictly an individual matter. It means labor and exertion. God has so ordered the physical condition of men and women that labor is essential to their existence.

The question is asked, When shall we work? Jesus said, "Work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work" (John 4:9). How shall we work? Work diligently. "Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren (idle) nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 1:5-8).

In unity there is strength, and much can be accomplished which one would not dare to try alone, but when our efforts are in accord with God, the result is irresistible. It is God who works in you, and Paul in all the fervor of enthusiasm of his nature exclaims, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" To the believer this assurance gives confidence and courage for emergencies of every kind.

The Christian life is one of activity. Are you laboring hard in this direction? As an incentive, remember you are co-workers with God. It is God who works in you. When you return to your respective homes, will you carry to others the feast of good things you have learned from God's storehouse? Which bucket will you be?

We need conferences to get acquainted. Yes, it is the personal contact that counts the most in the work that we do together if that work is to accomplish the greatest good for the Mas-

It is at General Conference that we talk over our difficulties, our plans for work, and our hopes for the future. Those from all parts of the country and Canada discuss, plan, and find the best Christian way. We unify our work, and are better fitted to do better work for the Master because of the suggestions that have been given at the meetings.

The General Conference, therefore, is a clearing house that gives the personal (Turn to inside back cover)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879.

COME THOU WITH US

If but a small percentage of those who are more or less interested in the Church of God would really line up with the shoulder-to-the-wheel workers, there would be both a very noticeable increase in membership of the church and an outpouring of God's blessings to brighten the lives of all. Come to Conference.

With Egypt behind and Canaan before, Moses invited his brother-in-law to journey with Israel to the Promised Land. Moses urged, "Come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the Lord hath spoken good things concerning Israel. . . . It shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the Lord shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee."

Likewise, the Church of God invites all its friends and scattered members to join in with the General Conference work, that they might share, too, in the blessings promised to all who are faithfully occupying until the Lord of men returns. The Church of God, like Israel of old, is pressing toward the Promised Land, even the kingdom of God upon the mountains of Judea where Jesus shall judge the nations. "Come thou with us, and we will de thee good. . . . It shall be, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the Lord shall do to us, the same will we do unto thee."

Attend the General Conference and Illinois Bible School at Oregon, Illinois, August 1-13. You will have a pleasant and profitable time. Hobab stayed at home. Hobab never saw Canaan. Everybody COME.

THE LORD'S BUSINESS

When but twelve years of age, Jesus was interested in His "Father's business." Being left alone—and at that tender age—did not direct Jesus' mind away from duty. His heavenly Father's business was most important.

Paul charges Christians to be "not slothful in business," but "fervent in spirit; serving the Lord." The proverbial dry business meeting in church work is but a token of indifferent Christianity. He who sits under a shade tree when others are engaged in the Lord's business within the house of prayer surely puts a meager price tag on his own religion.

The Conference is more than a place to fan; it is a place to sweat. With so little done and so much to do, it is past time to put our hands to the plow and keep plowing. It was said of Israel, "The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play." Do not come to Conference to have a good time; come to carry on the Lord's business, and you will have a better time. Cart-before-the-horse religion will make a poky Conference. Come with the faith and courage of Paul, come determined to do service for the King, and there will be business in the business meetings for the Lord.

Sydney E. Magaw

CONFERENCE REPRESENTATION

By the time this issue of The Herald reaches you, the various church secretaries should have received delegate forms from this office. All pastors are asked to cooperate with their respective secretaries in getting the delegate forms correctly filled out. Be sure to list the names of the delegates from your particular church. If we have overlooked any church, please write immediately for your delegate forms.

Every church should be represented at the General Conference. That means that every church should promptly select its delegates. They need, surely, a few minutes notice that they are to serve.

I QUIT TALKING

In the midst of conversation I suddenly realized that my companion had stepped into the adjoining room, leaving me alone. I quit talking. See, then, the importance of faith in the personality and presence of God, if one would live the prayer life. Like the Pharisee, many stand and pray only with themselves.

Conference Values

By C. E. Randall

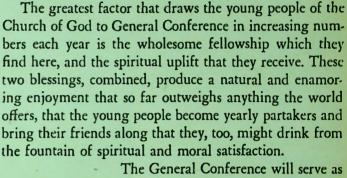

THE General Conference of the Church of God is near at hand. Plans have been completed and final arrangements made for the conducting of many meetings and care of the large number of delegates that will attend from all parts of the country. The indications forecast a record-breaking attendance. There are several reasons for this Conference consciousness. The first one, in all probability, is the summer Bible Training School. The urgent need for trained workers is being realized in every section of the country where we have work. Along with this recognition for better qualified teachers and preachers is a rising sentiment that such preparation should be under Church of God instruction, where its doctrines are valued and taught. The Bible Training School is a forward step in meeting this recognized need and in satisfying the demands of the church. People soon observe a quickening in church life and are accordingly aroused themselves. The Training School is wooing many to General Conference.

A second reason that harbingers a large attendance is the evangelistic spirit that is getting rooted in the local churches and State conferences. While this change of spiritual outlook has not been of sudden outburst, but rather of gradual passing from a state of self-centeredness to a passion for the spread of the gospel, yet the general awakening indicates such change. This orderly and progressive shifting of ideals and methods gives evidence of a healthy spirit. Such trends are encouraging us—even though we may not be conscious of it. This awakening of spiritual affections and actions will swell the Conference registration.

The third reason for expecting all available space to be filled at headquarters during Conference is that is is becoming the meeting place of our young people. It is not the purpose of the Conference and Bible School to promote romances, yet many heavenly blessed courtships have been started at these annual gatherings—resulting in many lives being "joined together by God." This is no jest! The future preservation of the Church of God will be largely affected by a foresightedness in having our young people marry in the Church of God.

The General Conference will serve as one of the greatest safeguards to our homes, if we will send our young people to it.

Coming more directly to the "values" of the Conference, several should be noted, first of which is,

An Increase in Knowledge.

This knowledge is mainly Biblical in content. The nature of the Bible School, and the manner in which conducted, provides a liberal instruction in the essential Bible doctrines. The class work during the two weeks is so intensive that those attending return home well filled with bread from heaven. Simplicity is not sacrificed at the cost of thoroughness. That is, the bulk of material is so pre-

That is, the bulk of material is so presented as to make it easy of understanding. Members of the Bible School are students of the Word!

Then, there is another type of knowledge obtained by attending the Conference. It is a firsthand understanding of the work accomplished throughout the whole denomination; the methods employed and the attendant results. Thus, the best ways of conducting the work are discovered, and can be taken home and applied in the local field. Another important "value" is, that it is

Regardless of who we are or where we live, we need at least once a year, a thorough revitalizing of our faith and spiritual life. The Conference is a place and time where and when these Christian batteries can be recharged, which will give new life, power, and usefulness to them. First Learners, Then Leaders

"The people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits" (Daniel 11:32).

IN every avenue of life those who have achieved the greatest measure of success are those who are leaders, those who can inspire others to a like service. But these same leaders were once learners. They studied thoroughly the real value of the service they expected to promote, the means by which others might be enthused as they were, and the results to the public as well as to themselves.

ROCK RIVER FROM CASTLE ROCK
A Typical Scene Near Oregon, Illinois
(Pieture by A. G. Townsend, Grand Rapids, Mich.)

More than nineteen hundred years ago the Man of Galilee pointed the way to the highest form of service to mankind, and became the greatest Leader of men the world has ever known. Jesus of Nazareth, the world's Redeemer, was Himself once a Learner.

Was it not said of Him, when He was still very young in years, that He "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man" (Luke 2:52)? Truly, His wilderness experience later was a schooling of the severest and yet most valuable sort. And He emerged from this learning "in the power of the Spirit" (Luke 4:14).

Immediately, we read, His public ministry began in the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom, which was thereafter His constant theme. "And his fame went throughout all Syria . . . and there followed Him great multitudes of people" (Matt. 4:24, 25). Thus, early in His ministry, God's blessings were showered upon His Son so that astonishing results were apparent.

However, Jesus did not desire to serve alone; He appointed helpers to follow in His steps. The story of the calling of the Twelve is at once such a human and such a valuable narrative that all love to read it again and again. From the beginning of His ministry Jesus devoted much time to the training of these disciples, for a most significant part was to be played by them in carrying on His work after His ascension.

The world still needs learners and leaders. Jesus needs helpers today in proclaiming the greatest message of all time, the good news of God's coming kingdom. "To every creature" the gospel was to be preached, and men are in as great need today, perhaps even greater, of the blessings following belief and obedience.

Now assembled at Oregon, Illinois, there are young people from all points of the compass who are learners, earnest students of the Word. Among these are some who will be the foremost pastors and teachers of the Church of God of tomorrow. These leaders will need under-leaders, helpers, in whatever church they may serve. Every pastor, regardless of how capable a leader he may be, desires helpers.

The name of one who was a helper to the greatest preacher of the gospel, excepting our Savior, comes to mind when considering learners and leaders. Timothy was a learner, receiving his lessons in "the holy scriptures" when a child at his mother's and his grandmother's knees. And Paul counseled him to "continue" in the things which he had learned, for they would make him "wise unto salvation." The great preacher declared that these same scriptures were sufficient "for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Thus we see that learning the Word of God gives one a fourfold education.

Does your church lack leaders? Worth-while service does not result automatically. It must be definitely and consciously planned for, if it is to be of value. No results are achieved with the feeling that "there is nothing I can do." The most important problem to solve is how to begin.

Your State conferences and Bible schools are a fine means of broadening your sphere of activity. They deserve your hearty support. The General Conference gives a broader outlook, a wider field of study, a fuller opportunity for learners to become leaders. Your life will be blessed by association with others who are striving to live more closely to our great Leader.

Do you not agree that one of the most rewarding experiences is to become a more thorough learner and in time, perhaps, even a leader, to bring others to the feet of Jesus? No greater accomplishment can be realized, no more profitable business pursued. General Conference invites you; it needs you. Learners and leaders, you need General Conference. Come!

Why Go to Conference?

By Paul M. Hatch

WHY go to Conference? More specifically, why go to the General Conference of the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois? We are presuming, yes, we are presuming that a reporter is close by. What is he going to report?

One here says, "August 1-13 is just the time for a good vacation from the daily grind of labor, so I think, yes, I think that is where we shall go on our vacation." Over there, another says, "Now let me see—I have not been to General Conference for a long time, and I think I can make it this year. Just think, I may again see some of my well-beloved brothers and sisters that I have met at other seasons. Yes, I am going." At a distance, a very great distance away, another is thinking, "How I would love to go, but it's no use to try. Times have been pretty hard, and I cannot afford the expense of the trip, or to lay off from work. So, I guess I may as well stop thinking about it." Still others are thinking, "It's about time to take inventory of my Christian life, and it is needful that I go to commune with those of like precious faith, so that I may take stock of my knowledge of the Lord and bring back my flagging spirituality and replenish my spiritual shelves with precious promises."

Come one, come all; no matter what your motives are. If it be for a vacation, no better vacation land is offered anywhere. For we have at Oregon and vicinity the expanse of Rock River, dotted here and there with tree-full islands, verdant bluffs, and time worn base rock carved by the winding stream. Upstream is a castle among the hills, best seen from a grand sweeping bend in the river. The Giant statue of Black Hawk, chieftain of the Sauk and Fox Indians, stands in silent meditation, gazing down the river trails of his domain. Downstream you will visit Castle Rock, Sinissippi Farm of Ex-governor Lowden of Illinois, Grand Detour where the first steel plowshare was forged in the West, and the City of Dixon. To the west of Oregon is the beautiful and restful White Pines Park, where one may see the most extensive growth of white pine and other pine in the State of Illinois. Other places of interest can be visited and appreciated.

To those who wish to renew old acquaintances and gain new ones, no other place can offer any more than the General Conference, with people assembled under the "one Lord, one faith, one baptism." Unity of mind and spirit prevails. Old and new acquaintances continue as one of the pleasant experiences of everybody's life. When friendships are set in the beauty of religion, men's hearts are bound more firmly together, giving a lasting luster to their lives and a sweet anticipation of further adventures in their associations.

Many of those who have despaired of coming in other years, because of living and distance difficulties, received joy in that the way was opened. They arrived with ready and willing hands to do their share of the work. Maybe such joy will come again, and an opportunity and effectual way will arise. Churches may help by sending delegations. The Lord is always willing to assist. He gives His blessing to those who give and to those who receive. Consider the blessing of the Lord and the association of His people as the most desirable of all life's experiences. To such ones the invitation is open, and may God's blessing rest upon them.

To all, whether it be for one motive or another that you might attend the Conference, are you not needing to once again take stock of your Christian living? Take down that part from the shelves of faith and works which shows no profit and does not readily turn over to the glory and honor of Christ, and replace it with a goodly supply of knowledge and faith that will show a benefit. Such is good business practice. How much each and every one of us needs to clear out of his life, at frequent intervals, the dusty and unused articles, and to restock with those that will show what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. How can one do this? Well, many are the ways to accomplish such things. One of the best methods is to select good company, to come to the Conference of the Church of God, and there to commune one with another in the precious articles of faith and promise.

At the General Conference are departments for all branches of church work, the enlightenment of old truth, and latest thought on the advance of prophecy. Here you will receive the doctrinal teaching of the Great Teacher. Members are edified. The unskilled are taught to rightly handle the Word of God. Ministers, church and Sunday school workers receive the tried methods of other ministers and church workers. Tangent ideas are often modified to conform more closely (Turn to inside back cover)

Paul M. Hatch

Filled With the Spirit

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

ONE of the most important things in any business is efficiency, and especially among workers. If the ones who are working do not do their best, there is work that will be left undone. Every manager of a business finds it his duty to see how things are going and to encourage efficiency.

Being a Christian is the greatest business in the world. Others may be building for time, but the Christian is building for eternity. Being true Christians is the business of which we wish to speak.

First, we must understand that a Christian is not compelled to work for the Lord. There may be some exceptions, but most of us choose to serve of our own free will. In a large sense, a Christian determines his own destiny. Christ did not call us "servants," but "friends."

There are men in business who work, not because they have to, but because they want to. They like their work and they love to learn more about it. They put their whole souls into it, and it is sometimes said of such a one that he has caught the spirit of it. When radio was new and someone spent much time experimenting and learning all he could about it, people said, "He has the radio bug." At least he had something that others did not have.

When someone is that interested in Christian work, having recently discovered some of the joys of Christ, people sometimes say, "He's got religion." That is not the expression used by the New Testament writer when he spoke of the zealous man, Stephen, as "a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 6:5). Of Barnabas it was said, "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and of faith" (Acts 11:24; quotations from Weymouth).

We may think that this enthusiasm of the early followers of Christ was for them only, and that we are not to have such fullness nor the responsibility that goes with it. Paul did not think so. He said, "Be filled with the Spirit," when he was writing "to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus."

THE BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD

Midway between Tipp City and West Milton, and fourteen miles north of Dayton, Ohio, is located one of our most active churches. Within the past two decades Bros. J. H. Anderson, James A. Patrick, M. W. Lyon, and Sydney E. Magaw have been the pastors there. The next pastor will be Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., the author of this article. Paul also said, "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:9). Sometimes we are not sure that we are His, but Christians have right to be sure, for Paul says, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God" (v. 16).

If we have not that Spirit, then is there great inefficiency in our service. To please our Savior we must be more awake to our work. How can we be?

Be filled with the Spirit! How can we be filled with the Spirit? Can we be full of one thing, and then be filled with something else at the same time? How was our Savior filled with the Spirit? Did He say that He would do His own will and please Himself? No! He said, "I came . . . not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." Again, "Not my will, but thine, be done." (Luke 22:42; John 6:38.) Christ emptied Himself of His own will, and turned from the way that the flesh would have taken Him.

In this same manner, by making room in our minds for God's Spirit, we also can be filled with His Spirit. If we allow God to have a voice in our thoughts, He will be the director of our speech and actions.

God's Spirit, as we are to receive it today, is God's personal influence upon our minds. God's Spirit at one time strove with man before the Flood. God's Spirit is still striving with men, but today we are better blessed than the earlier people, for we have God's Word, the Bible, which reveals His plan and purpose. The Spirit is, of course, not the Word, as Paul tells us that we are to "take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God" (Eph. 6:17). The Word is an instrument of God.

By the Word is the knowledge of God and His plan, but God will also grant us wisdom that we may understand that Word, if we ask of Him (James 1:5).

Sins of a Christian. Too often, and without thought of what we are doing, we oppose God in His striving with us. When the conscience burns within, causing us to feel that we ought or ought not to do some certain thing, we will make excuses to ourselves and as quickly as possible forget it. That is quenching the Spirit, and Paul said,

"Quench not the Spirit" (1 Thess. 5:19). That burning of our conscience is the cleansing power of God's Spirit. Heed God's rebuke. Don't quench His Spirit.

Hast Thou Faith?

By Vivian Kirkpatrick

"And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very froward generation, children in whom is no faith" (Deut. 32:20).

AT CONFERENCE in business meetings I have listened to discussions as to what wages a minister should receive, some contending that a pastor should not accept less than one hundred dollars a month, while others expressed willingness to work at any salary. Much discussion might take place as to which group was correct. Both groups seem to forget the most important points which should be taken into consideration at such a discussion.

The first point is the laborer himself. Some may be worthy of the higher salary, some may not. My belief is that there should be no set figure on salary. Three places in the New Testament we are reminded that "the workman is worthy of his meat" (Matt. 10:10), "the laborer is worthy of his hire" (Luke 10:7), and "the laborer is worthy of his reward" (1 Tim. 5:18). And so long as the laborer is working for his monetary reward that is all he will ever be worth. The work of the Lord is not for those who labor for the money income. If that is what one desires then he should go into some other line of work. When I hear discussions as to the income one should receive as a pastor, I am reminded of this verse in Matthew: "No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (6:24).

Some express the feeling that a minister should not accept a church unless he is assured a good salary, a living wage. To those men I recommend the verse at the head of this short exposition. If their concern is on the monetary returns of their work, their heart is not fully on the work the Lord has need for them to do. They will not be able to do justice to their task. It harks back to the texts quoted about the "laborer being worthy of his hire."

There is a definite suggestion of a lack of faith—faith in God; also, faith in man as God's instrument—on the part of those who are in a position of leadership and yet have so little faith in the mercies of God that they would quibble over His monetary reward for service. Can we have faith in our leaders and the messages they bring if we have the evidence of their lack of faith in the very God whose love and care we are admonished to put our trust in?

I am reminded of a time when Jesus slept while the boat in which He was a passenger was crossing the Sea of Galilee. When the wind came up, when the way grew rough, they lost faith (Mark 4:37-41). Likewise, when the way gets rough for our ministers, when the outgo seems greater than the income, they, too, become fearful. Christ rebuked His disciples for their lack of faith.

I have been advised to try to combine teaching with the ministry. Advised, thereby, to advertise a lack of faith in the love and mercies of the God of whom Paul writes this, "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19).

Can we expect to receive the blessings of God if we have not faith enough to believe He will care for and keep those who labor for Him? Is it possible for a minister to be effective when he tries to work at some other occupation to enlarge his income? Is it not correct to state that so long as there is any doubt in the mind as to the depth of the care of God, just so long will there be a lack in the ability of the minister to "make ends meet"?

James says, "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone" (James 2:17). Would not the reverse also hold true—work, without faith, is dead? And is there full faith on the part of any pastor, or layman, if there is a single doubt in his mind as to his ability to live on what he has been offered? Is there any doubt of God's ability to supply every need? Will not God supply our every need as soon as we reach the place where we will lean on Him and trust Him fully?

"Come Ye... We Will Walk in His Paths"

By James M. Watkins

"MANY people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we shall walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (lsa, 2:3).

Somehow, when we hear of a congregating of the adherents of Jesus Christ, this portion of Isaiah always comes to our mind. Especially is this true as the season activities at Oregon, Illinois, call to mind the approaching General Conference.

Conference, to our mind, should always imply something of what the Prophet Isaiah saw, as looking down the long, long road ahead into what is yet in our future, he visualized the coming together of the people of God in the peace and security of a new age.

At the greater conference of tomorrow, when all the people of God will assemble at Jerusalem, it appears that we see above all else a unity of purpose. There is seen a sincere desire of the glorification of God in word, deed, and thought, to which all other interests are subordinated.

It is then that the activities of the assembly will be turned with one accord to a learning of the ways of God. It is this picture of learning that to my mind implies the humble reasoning of friend with friend for mutual advantage in the ways of the Lord. It implies a sincere reception of those who are there for the first time, and the beginning of types of friendship that shall seal their future with ours. It will be the ointment of reassociation for those whose feelings may have been ruffled when last they journeyed together.

It becomes apparent that such an assembling together in the ways of the Lord must indeed become an antidote for strife, for the Prophet continues with the assertion that swords shall become plowshares and spears shall become pruning hooks. The very nations shall not lift up sword against each other.

Unfortunately, it seems that Christianity has at times become imbued with the thought that our only association with God is in death, yet Luke 20:38 says, "He is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him." If we could convince all those we strive to serve of the one fact that God is concerned only with living people, either before or after the resurrection, perhaps they might then come to realize something of material benefits derived from an association together in the ways of God.

The history of Judah is replete with the story of those who have turned away from God and the consequences. Manasseh turned away from the things of God, and the hosts of Assyria came against him. Amon, his son, continued against the things of God, and was slain by his own servants. Josiah returned to the ways of God, and the people again prospered. Why persist in the thought that the only results in an association with God is in death, when the entire Scripture is a record of God's association with living people.

So it is with the assembling of the great conference of the future. It will be, rather, to learn of the ways of God, that His blessings might be had in an everyday existence.

In the world of tomorrow when certain ones fail to assemble to learn of the ways of God a very material thing will be done. They simply will receive no rain. It will be God's danger signal that they are heading toward dangerous ground.

If everyone could come to believe in a God of the living perhaps men might also come to see that in the grasshopper plagues of today, the droughts, and dust storms, and all of the very real and disturbing things of nature that we have, God may be just as sincerely and just as earnestly trying to tell men that they are on dangerous ground, and that it could all be avoided if everyone would assemble themselves to learn of the ways of God.

We are not as yet able to make a regular migration to Jerusalem and there come face to face with the realities of the Lord, but the assembling of the followers of Christ after this pattern can be just as real, just as beneficial in even the material things of life if one recognizes God's dealings with living people. All of which is dependent upon the sincere invitation of various portions of Scripture, and voiced by Oregon, Illinois, and the General Conference, saying, "Come ye, and let us go up." Let us "reason together" that we may learn of "his ways" and "walk in his paths." Like Jerusalem, Oregon is "beautiful for situation." May those gathered there in conference commune together in unity.

James M. Watkins

Christ and the Law

By E. L. Macy

THE children of Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt about four hundred thirty years, being in bondage and much affliction to Pharaoh. "It came to pass in the process of time, that the king of Egypt died: and the children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage. And God heard their groaning" (Ex. 2:23, 24).

God then opened the way of the Red Sea, and led the children of Israel into the wilderness. He gave them laws and ordinances concerning the way to worship, saying, "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage" (Ex. 20:2). While in the wilderness God provided for their temporal needs. He gave them manna, meat, and other food, and stayed their clothing so it never wore out. The Lord also provided them with spiritual needs. We read that "the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light." Their Tabernacle was ever near, and the men of the tribe of Levi served as God's priests.

The law was not given that the children of Israel might so live as to gain through it their inheritance in the Promised Land, because that was promised to Abraham and his seed before the law. The law "was added because of transgressions, till the seed (Christ) should come to whom the promise was made" (Gal. 3:19). Thus, the law was to be observed only by those to whom it was given—the Israelites. Moses wrote, "These are the statutes and judgments and laws, which the Lord made between him and the children of Israel in mount Sinai" (Lev. 26:46). The laws of Moses were just and in harmony with God's promises to Abraham, but they were without life. The law was not a law of obedience unto life, but it was "the law of sin and death" (Rom. 8:2). The lawbreakers in the days of Moses abided by the following types of laws:

"The murderer shall surely be put to death" (Num. 35:17);

"There shall be to you an holy day, a sabbath of rest to the Lord: whosoever doeth work therein shall be put to death" (Ex. 35:2);

"He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death" (Matt. 15:4).

Thus, the law carried death, not eternal life. Christ being born of woman was born under law, in order that He might redeem those under law, that they might also receive the sonship. In the great Sermon on the Mount we read Christ's words: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled" (Matt. 5:17, 18). In explanation of the laws of Moses, Jesus showed that committing the act was all that brought judgment upon the Israelites, but, according to the new law, Christ tells us: "Whosoever is angry with his brother without cause shall be in danger of the judgment," and "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery," and "Swear not at all, neither by heaven, nor by the earth, neither shalt thou swear by thy head." Therefore, sin is often committed without the act, because the Lord judges from the heart and not the outward appearance. "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you," and you shall receive blessings twofold.

Even in the days of Paul, while on his missionary journeys, he met with certain men from Judea who taught circumcision from the old law, and who declared that only through circumcision could men be saved. After considering the matter with apostles and elders at Jerusalem, Paul wrote letters to the brethren, instructing them in the way of truth, saying that "only through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved." In the Galatian letter he says, "Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing. For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law" (Gal. 5:2, 3). Therefore, if one keeps a part of the law as it was given to Moses he must also keep it all.

The Israelites kept as memorials each feast day and holy day. They had their days of drink offerings, meat offerings, and days of the new moon, all of which set them apart as a peculiar people. Under Christ we who are His are not recognized by our respect of any service which is hereditary from the old laws. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ' (Col. 2:16, 17). Where there is a shadow there must also be a light. There must be an object to cast a shadow. It is the body of Christ. The shadow is always the express image of the object in the light. This shadow (of Christ) then falls back over the law of Moses which has the wonderful figures and types of the true Christ who was to follow. Thus, the law was all right to those who lived in the time of the giving of the law. But Christians should worship now the true Christ, not the shadow. Any shadow may have arms, legs, head, and body, yet it has no life.

What became of the law? The Scripture states that Christ "took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross" (Col. 2:14), "having abolished in his flesh the enmity, the law of commandments contained in ordinances" (Eph. 2:15). It would be unreasonable to consider Christ taking the law away from mankind without putting something better in its place. The law made nothing perfect; it is only an introduction to a better hope, through which we draw near to God. In place of this law we have a promise: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne." Is not a promise much better than the law?

After Christ carried His own cross to Calvary, after He received the scourges in Pilate's hall, after He gave up the ghost: in fact, at the selfsame moment the veil in the Temple was rent in twain from top to bottom—the law dispensation was fulfilled. This veil was not torn from bottom to top, for that is man's way of accomplishing the task. When the veil was rent in twain the Holy of Holies was exposed to the entire priesthood who served in the Temple. Only once each year the high priest went beyond the veil into the Holy of Holies to perform his duties, (Please turn to page 16)

Conference Inspiration

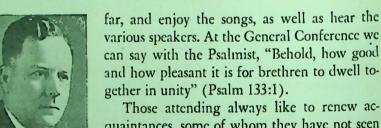

By H. H. Hawkins

THE time of year has arrived when all roads lead to Oregon, Illinois. As one drives through the country or cities, he sometimes comes upon a sign: Attend Church Somewhere. Suppose we change this slightly, and say, instead, Attend Conference at Oregon, Illinois. If it is not possible for the reader to stay for the full period of Conference, then plan to stay for a part of it.

No doubt, there are many who have never attended the General Conference. To those, our earnest plea is to make an effort to attend. You will receive a wonderful blessing from the Lord and from His people.

The Bible admonition is for Christians to frequently assemble, Paul's words being, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching. . . . For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry" (Heb. 10:25, 37).

What wonderful gatherings of the people there must have been in the days of the boyhood of Christ, when all the people went each year to Jerusalem to the Passover. All members of the Church of God should be exceptionally thankful, not only that we have come to a knowledge of the precious Word, but that we live in a land where religious freedom has full sway, and at the Conference sessions we can rub elbows with those scattered near and quaintances, some of whom they have not seen for a few years, and every year new faces loom up to be added to the memory list.

Conference is a stimulant to one's faith; it builds one up, making him spiritually stronger. How often do men think of material food for this present life—food that is necessary for the physical strength. Yet, men just as surely need that spiritual food to keep them close to Christ. Job, in the midst of trial and adversity, said, "I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food."

How few there are these days who love the Word of God better than their food. Christ, when offered food by His disciples, on one occasion said, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of. My meat is to do the will of him that sent me."

It is quite true that we of the Church of God receive spiritual food at our various meeting places, and yet it is a most helpful change to journey to Oregon, Illinois, to receive some of the spiritual food furnished there, for "blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after right-cousness, for they shall be filled" (Matt. 5:6).

Beauty Culture

By J. R. LeCrone

"IF ANY be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was" (James 1:23, 24).

As we read the foregoing scripture, we smiled to ourself and wondered whether it was by accident or design that the word "man" was used in the comparison. Accordingly, we determined to find out whether the word there used was a general term including all the human race or merely the males of the genus homo. We were delighted when we found that the word here translated "man" comes from the Greek word aner, and means literally, an adult male person. While it is not important from a doctrinal point of view, it gives the verses a saltiness and a touch of understanding humos that would otherwise be missed.

We have observed that the average wome beholding her natural face (literally "face of her birth," Bullinger) in a mirror, immediately decides to do something to improve its appearance. She straightway hauls out her powder puff and lipstick, her comb and curlers, and sets to work, or if she is able to do so, she hies herself off to the beauty parlor for a facial and hair "do."

The average man, under the same circumstances will look with distaste at his rapidly thinning hair, the enlarged pores upon his face, and the wrinkles that are beginning to appear. He will grimace and decide that he must do something about it one of these days. He will then immediately become engrossed in some other interest, and forget all about his unattractive appearance. As a result of his poor memory his self-confidence remains unshaken and he goes through life completely satisfied with his appearance.

Just so, says God, is the person (male or female) who, upon considering the Holy Scriptures, sees himself mirrored therein as a sinner, condemned to death and without hope in the world, decides that some day he must repent and be baptized—and then becomes interested in the pursuit of wealth and pleasure, and forgets what he looks like to God. The mirror performs for us the desirable function of helping us to see ourselves as others see us. The Holy Scriptures perform for us the much more important service, revealing us to ourselves as God sees us.

The maintenance of an attractive physical appearance will often help us to social and business success, but to appear attractive to God is a matter of life and death. God cares not one whit whether our physical faces are beautiful, plain, or homely, but He is intensely interested in the spiritual face that is turned toward Him, for He sees the thoughts and intents of our hearts. His Book of Truth not only reflects to us our true spiritual image, but it also contains a picture of the Ideal Visage, together with instructions for beauty treatments that will help us to look like the Ideal.

Our "natural" faces are ugly and repulsive to God, "for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). The first step in God's beauty treatment is to "repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). Our Ideal of spiritual beauty is the Son of God. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." And the beauty shop of the Lord is the church. "Let us consider one another to provoke unto

We urge that every person reading this article will look long and earnestly into the "mirror" that God has given him, and compare what he sees there with the picture of Jesus as presented in the Gospels. If you find that you measure up to that Standard of spiritual beauty in every respect, we have no message for you. If, however, you find that you have not yet attained that Ideal, we urge that you make a practice of regularly visiting God's beauty parlor (the church). The operators (your church and Sunday school leaders) are there for the express purpose of helping you to more and more resemble Jesus. The treatments, in order to be effective, must be regular.

In this instance, at least, one can profitably imitate the woman: to imitate the man is to be barred from the kingdom of God.

TO ALL BEREANS

By Harry Goekler, President

Another year of Berean work and activity has passed into history. The time is near to meet at General Conference on Berean Day, August 7, to elect Berean officers for the coming year and to discuss various parts of Berean activity. This is your Conference, and we want all of you who can to be present at the opening of the Berean business session on Monday morning, August 7. Come with your criticisms and suggestions, and let us make the coming year one of activity and growth. Let us make the statement, "Bereans at work," a reality in all our societies. Jesus is coming soon, and we want to be found faithfully laboring in His service when He appears.

Remember, also, that July is the month to send in your semiannual dues and contributions to the National Berean treasurer, whose name and address appear at the top of this page.

THE WHITENED HARVEST FIELD!

Just now, I stepped to the window in my room, and looked out at the fields surrounding. As I looked I could count four or five fields that "are white already to harvest." One neighbor lady just stated, via telephone, that they were going to start harvesting soon, perhaps today. When the harvest is ready it must be attended to, else the grain will spoil.

It seems that is the way with the great harvest field of the world. It is ready to harvest—to harvest human beings for Christ—and the fields are white already. We cannot wait until we have more time, or until we feel more like it, or perhaps it will be too late. Jesus said, "Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest."

Young people, there is a place for you in the harvest field of Jesus. Many of our respected older brethren have done their parts and will continue to do so until the end of their lives, but we also can help in many ways. Let us work so that the statement of Jeremiah 8:20 will not be said of us, which is, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

BUILDING GOD'S TEMPLE

By Beatrice Clem, Toms Brook, Virginia

"According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon" (1 Cor. 3:10).

On the night of June 2, 1939, I watched several of my friends receive their diplomas. Members of the graduating class were leaving school days behind them to commence the great building of their lives. Some of them will go to college. Many will become permanent citizens of the community ready for their work. In just one year another class will receive diplomas, and I will be one of that number. One year until I start the greatest career of my life, and give my time and talents fully to the work of God. But the training of a Christian starts with life. Going to school is just laying the foundation of later life, carefully choosing the material. God expects all of us to build our lives upon a strong and firm foundation of Christian faith and love.

"Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?" (1 Cor. 3:16). Paul tells us who are Christians that we are the temple of God.

Rome was not built in a day or a week, but it took a number of days to make it a beautiful city. Neither can the temple of God be made serviceable in a short time, but it takes years of ambition, faith, and a true Christian worker to build the temple God wants us to build. The high school graduate may choose any profession he or she wishes, but all will be happier and be more benefited by choosing to be Christian workers in the service of the Lord.

Let us develop our minds and interests, young people, to the extent that we may include love and help to all mankind. It requires little effort to be a true Christian worker for God. Prove that the Spirit of God does not uselessly dwell in us, and that we are striving earnestly to be worthy servants of God.

Be a worker for Jesus,
Tell the world of Him;
Represent the Church of God,
Do not let Truth's light grow dim.

THE THIRD KING OF JUDAH

You recall how ten of the twelve tribes followed Jeroboam, and left only two for Rehoboam? This division left Rehoboam's land, called Judah, very weak and small. Its chief city was Jerusalem, where the Temple of the Lord and the king's palace were.

Rehoboam did not follow in the ways of God, but led his people in idol worship, so that on nearly every high hill and in every grove of trees one could see an idol of wood or stone. This displeased God, and He allowed the city of Jerusalem to be taken by an army led by the king of Egypt.

After Rehoboam's death his son Abijah ruled in Judah. He was Judah's second king. Abijah trusted God. When his small army was in danger of being destroyed by Jeroboam who was still ruler of the ten tribes, called Israel, God helped the people of Judah win over the larger army of Israel, so that Jeroboam never again tried to capture Judah.

After Abijah's short reign of three years, his son Asa became the third king of Judah. Asa was a great warrior, a wise and good king, and a follower of God.

When the strong, warlike Ethiopians came against Asa, he prayed to God. God gave Asa a great victory over his enemies.

As a tore down the idols in Judah. When he found his own queen mother had made an idol, he broke it up and would not allow her to be queen any more. As a truly loved God more than anyone, even his mother, didn't he?

After the idols were destroyed, As a rebuilt the altar of the Lord which had fallen in ruins, and called all his people to worship God.

When Asa was an old man we find he forgot to asl God's help when he became ill, but called in doctors who worked their cures by the power of idols. One can never do wrong, such as Asa did, without having evil results, especially one in such a high position of leadership as Asa had. So, because Asa called in these idol worshipers, many people of Judah again turned to making images and trusting in idols instead of in God.

ECE CLUB CARDS

You have your membership cards framed and hanging in your bedrooms by now, I "expect." I'm anxious to hear how you like them. If you haven't joined our club, will you write to me? There are about fifty cards left for the first fifty who join our club. After that I cannot promise any more right away.

Perhaps you would like to thank the editor and his co-workers for printing these cards and sending them to you. I shall be glad to print your notes you write to me.

NEW MEMBERS

We greet the following today: William, Otto Jr., Betty, and Richard Dick of Frankfort, Indiana; Richard Paul and Patricia McGowan of Niagara Falls, New York; Lorna Adams, Norbeck, South Dakota; Lois Check, Hazel Stadden, Paul Swartz, and Joyce Stadden of Cleveland, Ohio.

COME CLEAN

When the game is on and your friends about, And you could put your rival out By a trick that's mean, but wouldn't be seen; Come clean, my lad, come clean!

When exams are called and you want to pass, And know how you could lead your class, But the plan's not square—you know it's mean; Come clean, my lad, come clean!

When you're all alone, with no one about, And not a soul would find it out, You're tempted to do a thing that's mean; Come clean, my lad, come clean!

MEET THE HERALD'S WRITERS

All the writers whose pictures appear in this issue, and many other writers who contribute from time to time, are planning to attend the General Conference. They will be glad to meet their readers, and we wish you to meet your writers. Further, writer will meet

No family reunion offers an equal blessing to that of meeting the brothers and sisters of the faith. We assemble in honor of the Elder Brother and under the blessing of the Father.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

After spending several weeks visiting relafriends in and around Hammond, Bro. and Sr. George Siple and granddaughter Betty Jean Lindsay left this week for their home in Oregon, Ill. They were accompanied on the return trip by Sr. Ruchie Alexander, who plans to remain in Oregon until after Conference.

Mrs. J. C. Lindsey of Shreveport is recovering from a recent major operation, and is oring from a recent major operation, and is now home from the hospital.

Sr. Ella Siple is taking a much needed rest at a health resort in Mississippi.

The writer was recently called to his home in Marshall, Ill., to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. George Claypool, one of the older numbers of the Salom Claypool, one of the older members of the Salem Church of God.

According to present plans, we are to leave Hammond July 17 for Cleveland, Ark., where we are to assist Bro. T. A. Drinkard in a series of meetings, also the Arkansas Conference. From there we plan to drive to Marshall, Ill., for a few days' visit, and then on to Oregon for the General Conference. Following the Conference we will return to Louisiana to begin another year's labor with the churches here. May we always be guided and di-rected by God's Holy Word. Harry Gockler, Pastor.

ILLINOIS CONFERENCE BUSINESS MEETING

The annual business meeting of the Illinois Conference will be held at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon, Aug. 11, 1939, in the Oregon church.

Besides the election of officers, there are other matters of importance to come among which is evangelistic work in our State.

Illinois members, please plan your trip to Bible School and Conference so that you can be at our State business meeting. When the business meeting fails, the work will fall. Paul C. Johnson, President.

MICHIGANTOWN, INDIANA

The Sunday school of the Hillisburg Church of God held its annual Sunday school picnic July 2 at the T.P.A. Park in Frankfort. There were thirty-one members and guests present. At the noon hour a basket dinner was served. At the noon hour a basket (inner was served.

A pleasant day was enjoyed by all. Owing to illness and other unavoidable reasons several were unable to attend. This pienic is an annual affair, being held the first Sunday in July.

We are having a good Sunday school, and we still have our faithful pastor, Bro. J. H.

Anderson, with us. Preaching services are held every third Sunday.

Our Sunday school superintendent has been elected president of the Indiana State Conference. We are wishing Bro. Otto Dick the best of wishes in his new office.

Lota B. Huffer, Reporter.

Gleanings From the Field

Bro. James Cole and Sr. Ruth Townsend are the teachers of the two Sunday school classes shown in the picture in this Herald. It is a sacred privilege to teach such classes.

Bro. and Sr. Robert Townsend of Grand Rapids, Mich., are happy parents of a nine pound daughter. She was born July 7. We suppose there are, also, four happy grandparents.

"If you need company, buy a cottage."-Bee Slocum.

"Our store is kept closed on Sundays."-Russell Currens.

Bro. and Sr. Ezra Railsback of Los Angeles, Calif., recently visited some of the brethren at Eldorado, Ill., and are now in Ohio.

"We enjoy every article in The Herald."-Mrs. J. H. Balliard.

Bro. and Sr. Leland Hanson of Leaf River, Ill., vacationing in the western states, attended services in the Pomona Church of God on Sunday, July 9.

Since last reporting, Sr. Muriel Randall of Braham, Minn., has enrolled in the Bible Training School.

"We are much in need of preachers and teachers who will dare to preach the truth... How I wish that we who are in Cheyenne, Wyo., had the privilege of attending a Church of God."—Mrs. Esther H. Last week Vivian Kirkpatrick and Walter Wiggins conducted the midweek Bible study Bro. Kirkpatrick spoke on "The Garden of God," making application to our personal lives—showing how necessary it is to keep the weeds of sin out of our Lyzz. Bro. Wiggins reviewed the life story of Joseph with its happy ending and then used it as a type of Christ bringing the presentation to a touch. Christ, bringing the presentation to a touching climax.

Bro. Leslie LeCrone went to Nebraska last week and returned, bringing with him his wife, Nadine.

The class went to White Pines Park about eight miles west of Oregon on Saturday afternoon, where they enjoyed an outing and partook of a well-prepared picnic dinner. C. E. Randall, Dean.

DAILY PROGRAM

As may be seen from the following daily schedule, those who come to General Conference and Illinois Bible School and Conference will be busy. As it is possible for us to enjoy our everyday labors even though we are kept busy from daylight to dark, so it should be possible to enjoy this work for the Lord.

- 6:00 Morning Call
- 6:45 Breakfast 7:30 Ministerial Conference
- 9:00 Devotional
- 9:30 Assembly of classes for all ages
- 11:00 The Church and It's Auxiliaries
- 12:00 Dinner
- 1:30 Assembly of classes for all ages
- 3:15 General Conference Business
- 5:30 Supper
- 7:30 Song service followed by sermon,

There will be little change from this program except on Berean Day, Monday, Aug. 7, and on Sundays.

TREASURES IN HEAVEN

We saw Bro. Conner's recent call for financial help to keep up the work of the General Conference. It brought to our minds the words that Bro. W. H. Wilson used to frequently speak, and which were first spoken by our Lord: "Lay not up for yourselves treas-ures upon earth, where moth and rust doth steal: but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth cor-rupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Bro. Conner's call for assistance contained very good advice. Inclosed you will find our money order, and with this we wish to thank the brethren for their many good articles which appear in The Restitution Herald.

OUR LITTLE CHURCH By George J. Wagner (deceased)

Our little church-you'd most pass it by; Nothing about it would much eateh your eye. A plain little organ plays sweet, but not loud. Our people? Just folks—there's none of us proud.

And if on a Sunday you'd come in and stay, Hark to the gospel, to sing, and to pray, Maybe you'd learn, or perhaps understand How to us—it's the grandest church in the land.

As the lesson unfolds-with the truth burning bright-

Old Bethlehem's Star in this world's sordid night,

Our eyes see a vision of the kingdom to be; Our souls-for an hour- are most gloriously free.

We stand with the Master amid hosts of the saints, All sorrow is vanquished as prophecy paints

The glory of God—a just reign and true. The promise of Jesus to me and to you.

These walls-they all vanish, and with Judah's lion

We stand at the Temple on green hills of Zion. Our songs rise in power His victory to praise. Our glorious Hosanna to the Ancient of days.

What need of a spire, or organ of gold? No walls ever built, this vision can hold, But here, till that day, we'll meet—you and

Where the glory of God in promise we see.

Our little church—you'd most pass it by; Nothing about it would much eatch your eye; But, Oh! what heart comfort, what joy, what

Is here—of God given— with His fellowship blest.

"And grieve not the holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption" (Eph. 4:30). As long as God will strive with us we know that we are sealed unto the day of redemption, but if we are no longer chastened, and if our conscience has been deadened so that we do not hear that still small voice or feel the burning now and then, we are no longer sons. Beware of this condition.

When you feel that you should read some in your Bible, do it. Don't grieve your Father. When you feel that you should pray, don't put it off until some other time, pray now, and often henceforth. When you think you should start going to church more regularly, do it. Grieve not the holy Spirit of God."

By ridding our minds of unclean thoughts and asking help to do His will, not ours, we can be filled with His Spirit, and be found faithful in all things.

When God gently persuades you to follow His way do it, for Jesus' sake.

CHRIST AND THE LAW

wherein he met God in His glory. Christ went through the veil for us, and only through Him can we come boldly to the throne of grace.

"If ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law" (Gal. 5:18). Should we then sin because we are not under the law? God forbid! "For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Gal. 5:14).

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 28

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JULY 25, 1939

NUMBER 42

Maranatha—Our Lord Cometh!

By G. Eldred Marsh

"While daylight lasts, we must be busy with the work of him who sent me: night comes when no man can do any work" (John 9:4, Mosfatt).

THE last day of the last days is rapidly drawing to its close. The fading light of evening settles over the earth. The shadows sweep farther and farther across the valley as the sun of Time sinks below the mountain peaks of Prophecy. The darkness is intensified by the black clouds of a gathering storm that threatens momentarily to break with devastating fury over the terror-stricken world.

The Night Is at Hand!

Deeper, darker, longer grow the shadows thrown forward by the grim but invisible specter of destruction that is advancing with the resistlessness of time itself. No man living can see a single day into the future, but all men realize that the world is approaching a crisis of unprecedented magnitude. Sometimes we wish that we could catch a clearcut vision of what is in store for us, that we might more intelligently prepare ourselves for it.

"O, that a man might know The end of this day's business, ere it come, But it sufficeth that the day will end!"

It is enough that the disciple of the Lord knows that "the end of all things is at hand." It is enough that he realizes, if he does so realize, that this long day of anxiety and suffering, of sacrifice and labor, is about to terminate.

"And the Door Was Shut"

Just how long the twilight will linger we do not know, but we are assured that "the Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9). So tenderly gracious is our Father that He would extend to its utmost limits the period of universal opportunity, that "whosoever will may come."

Yet we know that "as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man" (Luke 17:26). The hour will strike when the gate at the end of the way that leads to life will be closed forever by the hand that shut the door of the ark before the Flood came. After that had taken place the "preacher of righteousness" no longer pleaded with men whose thoughts and deeds were "only evil continually"! The door of salvation was shut! It was shut difinitely, finally, irrevocably, as an act of divine judgment. The preacher's work was ended, his task complete. There was nothing more for him to do but to stay secure within the ark of God's protecting care until the tears were wiped from the face of the weeping sky and the tinted bow of promise spanned a cloudless heaven above a clean new earth!

The experience of Noah presents a striking parallel to that of the Church of God today, for each member of the body of Christ is an antitypical Noah—a preacher of righteousness, whose duty it is to warn the world of the doom that awaits the ungodly and unbelieving, and to assure the repentant and faithful of future reward and blessing.

Again humanity is approaching a crisis, an outpouring of divine wrath. Again God's warning is sent ringing round the earth. But those who stand in the gravest peril neither hear nor heed it. That, however, does not relieve the messenger of his responsibility. For, as the Lord said on a later occasion:

"When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity: but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, (Please turn to page 11)

THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

A front cover picture of the Bible Training School will appear in next week's issue of The Restitution Herald. Most of the articles will be written by members of the School. Every article will be well worth your reading. The students are doing their best to make the next issue one that will rejoice the hearts of our members at large. If you enjoy their work, tell them so, that they may be encouraged to press on.

Excepting the most necessary direct blessing of God upon our every effort, the youth of the Church of God is the denomination's greatest asset. Whose duty is it to educate the youth of the Church of God? Who will train our youth to be strong workers for the Church of God, if even we, ourselves, should fail?

The present work is commendable. It is a step in the right direction, but it is not enough. Only six weeks of training out of a whole year never made a champion. The Church of God needs a permanent school for the training of its youth; and the Church of God can have a permanent school just as soon as it becomes interested in one as it is interested in houses and lands and automobiles. The "five yoke of oxen" excuse has become streamlined, but the excuse, in one form or another, is still a barrier to Christian service and to Christian growth. As surely as the Church of God begs to be excused from the training of her youth, that most joyous feast will be for others.

WHAT DOTH IT PROFIT?

"If a brother or a sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?" (James 2:15, 16). There was enough Christianity in our Lord's very brother that he knew it could profit nothing to simply talk and do nothing more than talk. Christianity acts.

"Thou shalt know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32) is a choice text with all lovers of the truth. They are words of Jesus. Every word is a simple monosyllable loaded with meaning. But "what doth it profit, my brethren," though we say, "Thou shalt know the truth," yet do nothing to clothe and feed people that truth without which they will surely perish?

INTRODUCTION

Mrs. Bonnie D. Martin, whose article entitled "Wisdom" appears with her picture on page 3, lives at Williamston, South Carolina. She has been a regular attendant of the Guthrie Grove Church of God near Piedmont, South Carolina, since childhood, and a member there the past fifteen years, having been baptized by her uncle, Elder A. N. Durham. For eleven years she has taught public school, and for the past ten years she has been a Sunday school teacher. Also of special interest, she writes that about four weeks ago she became mother of her first-born, a son.

We are glad to enroll her as a contributor to The Restitution Herald. You will enjoy her talent.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

Brother and Sister Richard Skeels, senior members of Southlawn Park Church of God in Grand Rapids, Michigan, have been married fity-nine years. The Grand Rapids church was started in their home. How well the memory spans those forty years! "Our first preachers were O. R. L. Crozier, H. V. Reed, R. V. Lyon, and then both Benjamin woodward and his wife." There is a sacred monument at 1216 Eastern Avenue. I worshiped there.

There is no way to misunderstand Brother Skeels' words. His thoughts, as I recall them, follow:

"Worldliness is the cause of church decline. Even professing Christians are more interested in pleasure than in God. Many homes are broken up because the women prefer to work away from home; divorce often resulting. Young people are not enough interested in prophecy to see it being fulfilled before their eyes.

"The Church of God needs doctrinal preaching. If Michigan's first preachers were alive today, I believe they would get good crowds. They were zealous. The Church of God will grow faster if our preachers become more evangelistic, and preach more from the Bible."

WISDOM

By Bonnie D. Martin

"Surely there is a vein for the silver" (Job 28:1).

SCIENTISTS have classified everything in or on the earth into two great classes. A thing either has life or is the product of life, or else it has no life. All forms of life belong to the first class; all minerals belong to the second class.

All forms of life, whether people, plants, or animals, have their beginning; they grow for a while and then die. The human body and the body of animals are made up of different organs which are used to carry on the various processes of life. Some of the organs are used for eating, drinking, breathing, and moving. Plants have different organs for various purposes.

Minerals do not have any sign of life, and one part may be removed without hindrance to the rest of the mineral. If you break a mineral into many pieces, each piece is exactly as much mineral as before. On the other hand, if any part of a plant or any organ of a living body is removed, that hinders the rest of the plant or body. All life, therefore, has a beginning and an ending. Just where minerals came from scientists do not know. They believe that the interior of the earth is made up of great masses of minerals.

Man doesn't know where silver came from, but he knows it is found in veins underground, and that he must search for it if he finds it. This vein of silver has been deposited there by the one and only Supreme Being, who is the Creator of all things and the Source of all wisdom.

Just as there is a vein for the silver there is a vein for the truth. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. . . . All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made" (John 1:1, 3). God made the vein of silver and hid it in the earth for man. He also gave man a more precious vein than the one of silver; that vein is the vein of truth that is found only in the Bible, the Word of God.

The minerals for which men dig are not evenly distributed in the earth, and not all miners receive the same amount of minerals. The search for minerals has led man to the four corners of the earth. Gold is found in some countries, silver in another, and diamonds in another.

Likewise, the precious vein of truth begins with Genesis 3:15, and takes in all the gospel promises that are found in the Bible. These gospel promises are not all found in any one book of the Bible. Not any one of the writers of the Bible tells us all about the great vein of truth that God has given for us. But we are admonished to do as a miner would do when he is seeking a new vein, or seeking to know how rich a new vein is. He begins to make borings here and there, piercing the vein at different places, and then examines the specimens to see how rich they are. We are told to "search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39). We can only find out how rich this vein is by searching.

A miner may think he has a profitable mine, judging from all outside appearances of the mineral, but when he examines it more closely, he may find that it is not a pure mineral. A pure mineral can be melted, and as it passes from a fluid to a solid state its particles attract each other along definite lines and build up a solid which shows by its outward form that there is a definite relation between all its parts. Sometimes, when we study different passages in the Bible, we seem to think that one contradicts the other, but when we search the Scriptures we find that they all agree and form a definite relation one to another.

How may one know the pure vein? Paul says in 1 Thessalonians 5:21, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." Jesus says in Matthew 24:4, "Take heed that no man deceive you." Why? For as Proverbs 14:12 says, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death." James 3:17 says, "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy." Then "study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15).

One may know he has the pure vein when it comes directly from God's Word. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruc

How to Become a Citizen in God's Kingdom

By J. H. Anderson

IN PREVIOUS articles we have written of the greatness of the kingdom, that it will fill the whole earth, be under the whole heaven (Dan. 2:35; 7:27). In Proverbs 10:30 we find that the righteous shall never be removed from the earth, and in Psalm 37:29 we find these words: "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever." In Genesis 17: 1-8 we have God's covenant in which He pledged Himself to give the earth, the territory of the kingdom, to Abraham and his seed (Christ and the church) for an everlasting inheritance (Gal. 3:16, 26-29).

Now, as I can't go to heaven, can't be on the earth forever unless I get into the kingdom, this question arises: If I don't get into the kingdom, where shall I be? Here is God's answer: "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be" (Psalm 37:10). So, if I exist in the eternal age, I must become a citizen of that kingdom. As the kingdom is to be given to the church of the living God, if I am a member of the church and continue a member, it will be given to me.

How, then, may an unconverted person become a member of the church? "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls, . . . praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved" (Acts 2:41, 47). Here we learn that God puts in the church those that gladly receive His Word, gladly receive the Word and obey it by faith in it, repenting of their sins and being baptized into Christ (Mark 16:15, 16; Acts 2:37, 38; 2 Cor. 7:7-10; Gal. 3:26-29). By these steps one comes into Christ, into His church.

Next, what must the members of the church do to enter the kingdom? Before we answer this question, let us consider Christ's words to Nicodemus, which words are recorded in John 3:1-13. Here the King tells Nicodemus that a man must be born again, born of water and of the Spirit, to enter the kingdom. In Genesis 2:7 we find, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life;

Jordan, Where Jesus Set the Example and man became a living soul." This dust-made man can never enter the kingdom unless he is born of the water and of the Spirit. In John 3:1-13 we have three births spoken of: flesh, water, and Spirit. Life with men begins fully by the birth of the flesh. Without this birth we could not have this life. Death, the returning back to dust, will end this life for the most of us before the kingdom comes. As we enter life through birth and the fleshly life ends in death, it follows that it will take a new birth to bring us the new life that we must have in the kingdom. So, Jesus said that men must be born again to see the kingdom of God. We must live the Christian life in this age, and this life begins with a birth, the birth of the water. All that precedes the water birth is preparatory to the Christian life. In baptism the old man is buried, and a new man is born of the water to walk in newness of life. "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised from the dead ('born from the dead,' Col. 1:18) by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life" (Rom. 6:4). Peter writes to this class thus: "Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as newborn babes, desire the sincere mik of the word, that ye may grow thereby" (1 Peter 2:1, 2).

So, by the water birth men come into Christ to walk the Christian life. Now comes the question: What must this newborn babe do to enter the kingdom? Or, is he in the kingdom? The King speaking to His disciples said, "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 5:20). The disciples who were in the church (1 Cor. 12:28) could not get into the kingdom unless their righteousness exceeded that of the Pharisees. The Pharisees being ignorant of God's rightcousness went about to establish their own which was as filthy rags in the sight of God (Rom. 10:1-3; Isa. 64:6). God's righteousness is represented by a fine linen garment, the wedding garment. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the rightcousness of saints" (Rev. 19:7, 8). Christians must have this garment of rightcousness to exceed the filthy garment worn by the Pharisees.

When we come into Christ His righteousness is imputed to us, "for he (God) hath made him (Christ) to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (2 Cor. 5:21). "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption" (1 Cor. 1:30). "And therefore it was imputed to him (Abraham) for righteousness. Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead" (Rom. 4: 22-24). In Jesus, and by faith, Christ's righteousness is imputed unto us, and we have the wedding garment that will let us continue in the kingdom after we have entered it (Matt. 22:1-14).

Redemption From the Bondmaster

By Lois Dismukes

WE READ in 1 Corinthians 10:1, 2, "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea." Paul here refers to the escape of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage, all of which was a type of the plan that God later gave man for escape from sin through His Son Jesus Christ.

In studying this type we find that the bondage of the Israelites served as a type of the bondage of sin, while Moses, the deliverer of his people, was a type of Christ; but let us notice, especially, the deliverance of the Israelites as a type of the deliverance from sin. The Israelites, when placing the blood upon the lintel and doorposts in order that their first-born might be spared, had and confessed faith in God as a prerequisite to their escape. Just so today, we must have and confess faith in Jesus Christ before we can escape our bondage. The placing of the blood upon the door did not remove the bondage of slavery, it was only a preparatory step toward the accomplishment of the removal of bondage, just as faith is today.

They were not free from bondage until they passed into the Red Sca. When they passed from Egypt into the Sea (though the Sea parted and they crossed on dry land) they left the land, the life, and the deeds of servitude behind them. And there in the Red Sea their bondmasters perished, for they had followed after the Israelites. Now, consider, as the Israelites had bondmasters while in Egypt, so does the sinner, for is not "the old man," the carnal mind, the bondmaster of the sinner? (See Romans 8: 5-8.) Now, as the Egyptian bondmasters perished when the Israelites passed through the Sea, just so does the bondmaster of the sinner, "the old man," lose his hold upon the individual in baptism. "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" (Rom. 6:3). Now, Christ's death took place in His crucifixion, and "knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him," "for we have been planted together in the likeness of his death," we must know that the crucifixion of "the old man" is accomplished in baptism into Christ's death. Then, as the Israelites came out of the Red Sea free from Egyptian slavery, so the individual comes up from baptism free from the bondage of "the old man," the carnal mind, and from the servitude of past sins. He is raised a new creature, to walk a new life in Christ Jesus. He is then free of his past servitude; but he should take heed, lest he turn and again serve the carnal mind, for he cannot serve both Christ and the carnal man (Luke 16:13). Paul states, "To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ve are to whom ve obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness" (see Rom. 6:16-23).

According to Romans 3:25; 1 Peter 1:18; 1 John 1:7; and Colossians 1:14, it is the blood of Christ that cleanses men from sin; but the question arises, Where does the sinner contact that blood (figuratively speaking)? It was in Christ's death that His blood was shed. Hence, men must go where that blood was shed before they may hope to be cleansed by it. But Paul leaves no doubt as to how one may reach Christ's blood, for the Apostle tells us that as many as have been baptized into Jesus Christ have been baptized into His death. So, if one goes into His death in baptism, he also reaches His shed blood, the cleansing power, in baptism (figuratively).

Then, as the Israelites came out of the Red Sea free from their bondage of slavery, the sinner, too, may gain his freedom from the servitude of his bondmaster by faith and obedience in Jesus Christ.

Have the Churches Failed?

Conclusion

By R. H. Judd

WHEN one considers the vast amount of organized work carried on by the churches through Sunday schools, Bible colleges, seminaries, mission agencies and missionary societies, to say nothing of the tremendous opportunities open to the ministers through the Sunday morning and evening sermons and the midweek services, he cannot but be amazed at the prevailing ignorance concerning even the fundamental doctrines of Scripture that obtains.

Enter into almost any church in this city of Toronto, Ontario, or any other city, and the proportion of members who have more than a superficial knowledge of the Bible is small indeed. For instance, very few could upon request give a logical and clear statement of belief as to man's nature; what he really is, what happens to him in death, if, why, when, and how he may live again, and definite Bible proof in relation to the life that now is and that which is to come. In a church not far removed from the writer's home, with a membership of over five hundred persons, it is questionable whether there are half of half a dozen persons who could give in "sound speech that cannot be condemned" irrefutable, Scriptural, and logical answers to that one basical subject which so vitally affects themselves. The minister has for thirty-six years been preaching the doctrine of the Trinity, yet when called upon neither he nor his officers, nor any member of his congregation are able or willing to "give an answer to him that asketh" that will stand the test of honorable criticism.

In our last we considered at some length the claim made by many prominent ministers in the churches that the Hebrew word echad, meaning "one," "denotes compound unity not simple unity." From actual tests of Scriptural usage we found the statement to be definitely incorrect, both from the Scriptural point of view and that of true scholarship; also, that one or two examples which were put forward by Mr. Baron were regretfully very much of the nature of misrepresentation.

Coming to more simple arguments that should be well within the comprehension of all persons of ordinary attainments, we cannot but be somewhat surprised at the credulity which has, by implication, been attributed by ministers and clergy to those who lack the educational advantages which they possess.

The plural pronoun "us" which occurs in Genesis

1:26, and a few other similar instances in Scripture, is naively brought forward as "striking proof of plurality of persons," and the assertion is seriously made that "God Himself uses plural pronouns when speaking of Himself" (italics mine). These statements are from the pen of the late Dr. R. A. Torrey, D.D., in his work "The Fundamental Doctrines of the Christian Faith," published when he was dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Wc know of no grammar in any language that would sponsor such an argument, yet because of the source from which it comes it is commonly and unthinkingly believed. We may, and do, talk about the "poetic license of poets," but nothing they have yet produced approaches the license of these leaders of the churches in thus prostituting language to wrongful purpose. Strange to say, even so, the error repeated often enough is accepted as truth, and the more readily because it is done in the name of religion. Is it to be wondered that men of eminence such as Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Canadian Premier, and others, accuse the churches of having "failed," when such arguments as these are presented as being fundamental to Christian doctrine?

The writers whom we have quoted are not obscure personalities, and in quoting them we have fairly represented the churches through them. We are well aware that we are drawing the censure of many earnest Christians in thus combating what has been put forward by these recognized and influential leaders in the churches. But in all kindliness we ask, Which is in fact the more serious in the sight of God and in the light of His Word: to use one's high calling to promote such errors as we have pointed out, and thus draw many away from the plain and simple truth that God is one in the strict sense of that word; or fail to faithfully point out the errors, and endeavor to "be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayers"?

To whom, then, was God speaking? Certainly not to Himself! That the angels were in existence prior to man is clearly established by Psalm 8:4, 5 and Hebrews 2:7, for nothing can be said to be "lower" if the comparison by which it is measured does not exist. The very numerous passages which describe God as "the Lord of hosts" and "the Lord God of hosts" emphasize this fact, and in Job 38:7 the existence of angels before men is still more strongly stated. They were continually "hearkening unto the voice of his word" and ready at all times to "do his commandments" (Psa. 103:20). If man was made, as the Scriptures assert (Gen. 1:26; 5:1; 9:6), in the image of God, and also that of the angels, as Old Testament experiences prove, how appropriate is the word: "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." What more reasonable than that Genesis 1:26 should be a brief record of one of these numerous occasions of the fellowship of God with His angel hosts. Scripture does speak of God's person, but never of His persons.

What is to be said for the churches who have deliberately shrouded in mystery one of the most glorious scenes in creation that shines forth from the Word of God? "If they do these things in the green tree what shall be done in the dry?" (Luke 23:31, R.V.). The peoples of the world are asking for bread, but the churches give them a stone.

It would be easy to multiply instances such as those given, where the proper use of language, rules of grammar and common sense are set aside, and even prevarication resorted to, in order to bolster up this untenable doctrine. One writer would have us believe that "God is at once Sender and Sent." Another puts forward the claim that "Jesus is God," but is unwilling to state that God is Jesus Christ; though he earnestly desires to be considered as a believer in the fact that "there is one God; and there is none other but he" (Mark 12:32).

If the churches themselves had accepted the very clear emphatic doctrine of the Bible of but one living and "only" true God, "the Almighty," instead of spending energy in confusing the minds of millions with the incongruous teaching of "one God" divided into three persons, each separately called "God," one of which is denied the honor of a name, what a mighty power for good they might have been!

How many adherents of the churches today can say as Paul said: "We know . . . there is none other God but one" (1 Cor. 8:4)?

How many churches today when confronted with the (Please turn to page 10)

False and True

By J. W. Cooper

THE other day while looking through a little handbook of information, I noticed that in a newspaper poll, conducted by over two hundred fifty daily papers, the choice or favorite poem of nearly sixty-two thousand people was Longfellow's "Psalm of Life."

It is beautiful, except in a few places. I wish to call attention to the second verse of the poem:

"Life is real! Life is earnest!

And the grave is not its goal,

Dust thou art, to dust returnest,

Was not spoken of the soul."

After reading the entire poem, I wondered how a man with the ability and intellect to write such inspiring verse, could be so at variance with God's Word. God so plainly told Adam that in the day he ate of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil he would surely die. After he had eaten, God cursed the ground for his sake, and said to Adam, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

The Prophet came to Hezekiah, and said unto him, "Thou shalt die, and not live." Hezekiah evidently believed that he was to die, for he prayed to the Lord, and reviewed his past good life. The Lord then had mercy on him, and added fifteen years to his life.

In Ezekiel 18:20 we read, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Surely the word "soul" means just that. So it runs through the Bible that man shall surely die, with the exception of the statement of the serpent found in Genesis 3:4.

I have talked with people who make no pretense whatever of Christianity, who perhaps never look inside a Bible. To them the ideas of present immortality and a future life are inseparable, because they fail to grasp Christ's power given Him by the Father to raise the saints from the dead. A brother likewise once said to me, "If the people would get rid of the 'never-dying soul' idea, God's whole plan would become easy and understandable to them."

Perhaps some are willingly ignorant; others think it doesn't make any difference what they believe. Perhaps there are still others who understand and believe God's Word, but for some personal reason affiliate with groups who do not believe the truth. Of course, the great majority of people believe as the poet, that man has a "never-dying soul to save."

I am thankful to be associated with a people who not only believe that true Christians have future life only through Christ, but who also teach it.

"Let God be true" (Rom. 3:4).

Pearls of Truth

By Florence E. Tuttle

DO YOU promise to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth? Something like this is demanded of a witness in a courtroom before he can testify. Physicians are under an oath to save life at whatever cost, and not to destroy it. Is anything like the foregoing demanded of ministers when they leave theological seminaries? No. If one wishes to become a minister he is taugh what his particular denomination believes, and that is about all.

Do the Orthodox ministers care whether or not they are preparing to be true witnesses for God? To them preaching means a business for worldly profit, and not an earnest desire to find pearls of truth that they might save perishing souls.

"A faithful witness will not lie: but a false witness will utter lies" (Prov. 14:5).

From a child I was resentful against the heaven-going theory. What little religion I had gathered in my young mind was, that good people go to heaven when they die. I was observing, and soon realized that everybody that died—good or bad—was judged to be in heaven. I seldom heard good spoken of any of them while they were still on earth. I reasoned that if such covetous, hard-hearted, indifferent people went to heaven, I could never be happy there. Yet, little children are told to be good, or they will go to hell and burn forever. I shunned religion as I grew older, as a bitterness had formed in my heart. The picture of heaven I had conceived seemed like a ghastly thing. I did not care to become an angel with wings. I had heard people say they had seen the soul leave the body and go right up through the ceiling, explaining that it was sort of egg-shaped. I could not conceive of such irrational ideas.

Many nights I have lain awake in fear that some departed dead one had come back and was in my room.

About twenty-two years ago I became acquainted with a certain denomination that taught some truth. It was satisfying to learn that people were going to live again after death on this earth and with real bodies, but when I was told they were going to live in heaven a thousand years before they could come back to earth, it was too much. I was told that when Jesus returns to take people to heaven, that if the Sabbath day overtook them, they would stop and rest in mid-air. This idea was taken from Matthew 24:20.

Later, I commenced reading Judge Rutherford's literature. I was then getting closer to the truth. Finally, I was convinced that I was still outside of God's truth, "for there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect" (Matt. 24:24).

The day finally arrived when God opened the way and let me gather His pearls of truth. I now feel a responsibility to share these pearls of truth with others who are desirous to come out of darkness and error into God's glorious light.

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls: who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it" (Matt. 13:45, 46). By careful study of the Scriptures I have found pearls of great price.

I am truly convinced of the falsity of many beliefs, such as angels having wings. If angels have wings, why didn't Jacob, in his dream, see them flying back and forth from heaven, instead of ascending and descending on a ladder (Gen. 28:12)?

I know now that I shall not go to heaven at death, for Jesus says in John 7:34, "Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come."

I know Jesus will return to this earth as King of the Jews, not in spirit form, as some teach (Luke 24:39), but bodily, the same as He ascended (Acts 1:11). He is coming back to destroy the wicked in death, not to punish them with everlasting torment, for Acts 2:31 tells me that hell is the grave. Ecclesiastes 9:5 says that "the dead know not any thing." Learning this truth has vanished many a haunting fear from my mind. "Soul" no longer means to me a little bit of armless, legless, headless nothingness, but all that goes to make up a human or an animal (Acts 2:31; Num. 31:28).

I know when the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord (Rev. 11:15), and when Jesus brings me a righteous reward—if I am worthy—it shall be eternal life on this earth. It will be an active, busy life in the restored Paradise of God, and not a dormant life in heaven.

Dear reader, did it ever enter your mind what effect false religion might have on your children? "Thus saith the Lord of hosts; There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age. And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof" (Zech. 8:4, 5). Yes, when Jesus returns to sit on the throne of David in Jerusalem (Isa. 9:7), children will be there, and not in heaven fluttering around with wings.

But Jesus said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 19:14). When God removes the vicious, sinful nature from man and animals, this earth will be heavenly, for we read in Isaiah 11:6, 9: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fat-ling together; and a little child shall lead them.... They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

How beautiful is the truth! Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:32).

The truth will make you free from doubt and haunting fear and superstition. This is my testimony. Will you accept it?

The Fate of the Ungodly

By H. Glen Mills

X/E FIND no indication in the Scriptures that man possesses an immortal nature. Quite on the contrary, we find the records teaching that man's natural condition is one of mortality. The word for mortal is enosh, which is translated "man" more than five hundred times in the Old Testament. We also find the New Testament calling our attention to the fact that man is mortal. "Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof" (Rom. 6:12). "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8:11). "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality" (1 Cor. 15:53). "For we which live are alway delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh" (2 Cor. 4:11).

Mortal man does, however, have a chance to choose for himself that which shall be given to him upon his resurrection. He knows that it will either be eternal life or it will not be eternal life. "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal" (Matt. 25:46). "But he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life" (Mark 10:30). "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). If he does not receive eternal life, the question is, what shall he receive?

Let us confine our attention to the teachings of the New Testament. We find the ungodly are threatened with everlasting punishment: "Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed . . .

and these shall go away unto everlasting punishment" (Matt. 25:41, 46); with cternal damnation: "He that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation" (Mark 3:9); with everlasting fire: "Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire" (Matt. 18:8); with everlasting destruction: "Them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord" (2 Thess. 1:9); with hell: "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell" (Matt. 5:29); with hell fire: "If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out and cast it from thec: it is better to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire" (Matt. 18:9); with death: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" (1 Cor. 15:55). "The wages of sin is death: but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). "If ye live after the flesh ve shall die (not talking of the end of this life, because is added), but if you through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live" (Rom. 8:13). "Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:15). "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death" (1 John 5:16).

Because we find the fate of the ungodly so often spoken of as eternal death, we should consider it in the same light that we consider eternal life as the reward for the righteous. If eternal life means union with God forever after the resurrection, then eternal death means separation from God forever after the resurrection.

Everlasting punishment, eternal damnation, everlasting destruction, everlasting fire, hell, and hell fire are listed, as above cited, as the fate of the ungodly. The first three certainly can be compared with eternal death. Is not death the punishment received for an ungodly life? Is it not damnation to receive death instead of life? Is not eternal death everlasting destruction?

And when we turn to consider the term "hell" from a Scriptural standpoint, it does not mean the theological idea that has been connected with it as the suffering and cruelty given out by the God of love. The word "hell" as used in the New Testament sometimes comes from the Greek word hades which is the same as the Hebrew sheel which means the land of the dead. This means the place where the dead await the resurrection, and not the place where the ungodly meet their doom. The word "hell" also comes from the Greek words tartaros and gehenna. Tartaros is used but once in the New Testament, where it refers to the place where fallen angels are reserved in chains against the day of judgment (2 Peter 2:14). Gehenna is the word from which the theological ideas of torment, suffering, punishment, and fire are derived. It is always used as the place of future punishment following the judgment and is a place of fire and temporary suffering. Specifically, the word is a Greek form of the Hebrew Ge-hinnom, meaning the Valley of Hinnom, or Tophet, outside the walls of Jerusalem. "Because this ravine had been the scene of idolatrous worship King Josiah desecrated it, and made it the garbage pit or dumping ground of the city. Offal was thrown there and all manner of refuse. Dead animals, together with the bodies of criminals, were cast upon its burning heaps. In order to dispose of its contents, fires were kept burning constantly; and, as would be inevitable in that climate, worms or maggots bred freely and preyed upon the filth. Thus, between the fires and the worms the valley would soon be emptied, except for the fact that new material was constantly being added. It is a far from pleasant picture, but it is the figure our Lord chose to use wherewith to illustrate the final destiny of the impenitent. We cannot understand the teachings about hell without keeping this picture in mind." (Hewitt.)

Matthew 18:8 with regard to everlasting fire, and Matthew 18:9 with regard to hell, are used with the same meaning and can be understood if considered in the light of the quotation above. In connection with Gehenna we have the "unquenchable fire" and the "undying worm." Does this mean that the bodies of the unjust shall be immortal in such a way that they shall be forever tormented by "unquenchable fire" and by an "undying worm"?

HAVE THE CHURCHES FAILED?

assaults of the ungodly on the Word of God in reference to creation, the problems of evil, of life and of death, of things present and things to come, can give a convincing answer to the questioner? How many churches teach from the books of Moses, Job, and the Psalms, the great fundamental truths on which all true science is built; and from which all later study of ever-expanding detail in every branch of science is enriched by sure and certain foundations?

These questions are not idle questions. God is known by His works, and the leaders in the churches have had unique opportunity for disseminating a knowledge of God that would have been the deathblow to infidelity, atheism, and every evil ism that this world knows.

With knowledge, wisdom, and understanding, all based on the "knowledge of the Holy One" (Prov. 9:10, R.V.), the great truth that "there is one God and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus," will shine forth in all its simplicity and beauty, and men and women will lift their hearts in praise to the "God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Eph. 1:3).

WISDOM

tion in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

"My son, if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee; so that thou incline thine car unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasure; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom" (Prov. 2:1-6).

Proverbs 3:13-18: "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her.... She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her."

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding" (Prov. 4:7). "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him" (James 1:5).

MARANATHA-OUR LORD COMETH!

he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul" (Ezek. 33:7, 8).

Just as is the case today, "when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark" (typical of the church, which is now being built) "was preparing," but "few, that is, eight souls," believed the announcement and were "saved." All the rest of mankind disregarded the warning, rejected the salvation God had provided, and perished miserably in the engulfing Flood. Nevertheless, Noah faithfully performed his Godgiven task. Had he not done so he would have been held responsible for the terrible consequences that followed.

"While Daylight Lasts"

There is no time to be lost! "The day of the Lord is at hand!" We are living in the last day of the last days! These vital closing moments should be the busiest the church has ever known. Every believer should be an evangelist. He should hold himself individually responsible for carrying the message of salvation to those around him. Like the disciples who were scattered by the first great persecution that followed the tragic death of Stephen, we should go "every where preaching the word."

"While daylight lasts, we must be busy with the work of him who sent me," Jesus said, for "night comes, when no man can do any work."

"Work, for the night is coming,
Work through the morning hours;
Work while the dew is sparkling,
Work 'mid springing flowers;
Work when the day grows brighter,
Work in the glowing sun;
Work, for the night is coming,
When man's work is done."

God's Message for the Last Days

Noah was not the only preacher of his time. Enoch was his contemporary and he, too, warned the world of its impending doom. But his mind reached out farther into the future than did the mind of Noah. Perhaps, because he was not himself to be affected by the Flood, God gave him a more comprehensive understanding of His purposes than He gave to Noah. Or it is quite possible that we are not told all that Noah preached. Anyway, this much we know: Enoch, a contemporary of Noah, addressing the people of the same period, said, "Behold, the Lord cometh" (Jude 14). That was the theme of his sermon. That was at once the hope and the warning he held out: The Lord cometh!

Facing as we do, the unprecedented responsibility of bringing God's last vital message to the world, we thoughtfully ask ourselves this question: What shall we preach? Of what shall we warn mankind? What shall we promise men?

At a time like this, when men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking after those things that are taking place on every side, when "darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people," when all the world is seeking vainly for light and hope and assurance, there can be but one answer to our question!

We must preach the gospel of the coming King! Employing every means at our disposal, utilizing all the resources at our command, we must echo the words of Enoch, and send the rallying cry of the early church ringing round the world:

Maranatha! Our Lord Cometh!

There is no other truth in the Scriptures so filled with hope, with comforting assurance, with the pure gold of promise, as is that which finds expression in this Aramaic phrase: Maranatha—Our Lord Cometh! Thus did the disciples, who expected the Lord to come at any moment, voice their "blessed hope"—the hope for which they labored and dared and prayed in the face of persecution and death. It was this hope that drove them forward in heart-thrilling evangelistic effort, that others might be led to rejoice with them in time to come.

They did not build temples of worship in those days! They did not attempt to reform the political or social structure of the world at that time! They founded no religious seminaries and they developed no complex theological systems then! The Lord was coming! Possibly before the cornerstone of the temple was laid, before the reformatory measures could be put into effect, before the first student graduated from the seminary—the Lord would come with power and great glory to the earth! He would raise the dead saints, transform the living, set up a kingdom of righteousness on the earth that would "break in pieces and consume" all other kingdoms. What would then be the value of temples, political and social reforms, and educational institutions established by men?

O! may the hope of the early church, the zeal of the carly church, the spirit of the early church, animate those who assemble at General Conference, that they may "forget those things which are behind, and reach forth to those things which are before," and press forward in the service of God in these momentous days, crying to all who will hearken, and even to those who will not heed (that we may perform our full duty), this wonderful word of hope and promise: MARANATHA! OUR LORD COMETH!

HOME-COMING!

Not so long ago it was my privilege to attend a home-coming of a school district here in Minnesota. Many were in attendance who had gone to school together fifty years ago or more. It was interesting to be a bystander, as I was, and note the joyous expressions on the faces of the people as they visited with friends that they had not seen for several years. In the afternoon a fine program was given, and being the minister, I was given an opportunity to say a few words. I was glad, for it seemed an excellent opportunity to point those who were there forward to another and greater Home-coming!

The words "home-coming," or "going home," are full of meaning to one who has not been home for some time. I know what I am talking about, for I am planning a short visit to my home as I write these words. Home, where live my father and sisters, whom I have not seen for some time; home, where I will meet old friends and talk over the things in the past; home, where I will attend services in the church from which I was baptized and from whose ministers I have learned all the truths I now hold dear; home, where my mother lies waiting the resurrection call of Jesus. Such experiences are ones that may come to many of you this summer and in times to come.

In such a temporary visit, and in a gathering such as mentioned above, our thoughts are brought ever nearer to that time when there will be no more parting. In that day there will be no need for going home, for we shall already be in our everlasting, eternal Home. The things that will be ours are so much greater than those that we have today, that our mortal, carnal minds can hardly comprehend them. Sufficient is it for us to know that if faithful, we shall be rewarded by a place in God's kingdom, and there we will ever dwell with those others who have likewise been faithful, ever doing the service of our Elder Brother, and heavenly Father.

Home, today, is the most precious of places, but in the future our home with Christ will indeed be glorious. Let us each strive to live consistently with the teachings of the Scripture so that we shall be accounted worthy for the promised reward.

The next issue of The Herald will appear during the General Conference. Do you have your reports and other things that the secretary of the National Society has asked you to send her, sent yet? If not, better do so very soon. The time is short.

We will see you at General Conference on August 7, Berean Day!

RESPONSIBILITY

By Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

Responsibility is a duty Christians should not try to shirk or shift to someone else's shoulders. The Scriptures very clearly bring out personal responsibility. Galatians 6:5 says, "Every man shall bear his own burden." Each must live his own Christian life, and do the will of God. Another cannot live your life. As it was in the olden days, so is responsibility today. We have God's Word with us. It is for us to read and learn what is required of us. If we fail in this manner, we are responsible for the results caused by the failure. "So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (Rom. 14:12). Each must give an account of himself—not of his friends or relatives. We should not judge others, but live lives that are clean and honest, so that our accounts will be satisfactory. Everything we do, our words and actions, are charged to our accounts (Matt. 12:36, 37).

We find in Genesis 3:12, 13 that Adam tried to shift the blame to Eve for his disobedience, and Eve accused the serpent. The responsibility for obtaining eternal life or losing it is placed upon each individual. In Ezekiel 33:13-16 we find clearly stated the destiny of the righteous and the wicked. It has always been life to the righteous, and death to the wicked (Deut. 30:15, 19; John 6:40; 1 Thess. 4:13-18).

We must give account not only of ourselves before God, but also for the influence our deeds have had on others. In 1 Kings 11:32-36 we find that Rehoboam suffered not only because he himself had forsaken God, but because he had led the people into idolatry.

We frequently find that in churches some overexercise their responsibility in trying to rule. In 1 Peter 5:3 are recorded these words: "Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock."

May we ever faithfully seek to execute our responsibilities.

The membership cards have been sent to all our members. If you haven't your card by now, send me a postal card. I shall see that you get one.

NEW MEMBERS

There are several new members today, which gives our ECE Club a total of one hundred sixty-seven members.

Sent in by Mrs. E. W. Johnson are: Phyllis Ann Johnson, age 12, Hector; Virgil Hammer, age 14, Bird Island; and Richard Hammer, age 12, Bird Island, all places being in Minnesota.

Mrs. Floyd Mills sent in the following all of Eden Valley, Minnesota: Vonnie Cossairt, age 10; Joyce Bennett, age 9; Eileen Swanson, age 8; Roger Swanson, age 7; Bonnie Welde, age 7; and Marion Welde, age 6.

Anyone who wishes to write to the new members, do so. You may also write to anyone listed in our birthday corner. Addresses are given.

ECE CLUB CORRESPONDENCE

Thelma Richardson of Hammond, Louisiana, writes: "I received my club membership card Sunday from Brother Harry Gockler, and was very glad to get it. I have been very anxious to get it ever since I read of it in The Restitution Herald."

Thelma suggests that we start an ECE Correspondence Club for the older members. As some girls and boys do not like to write, I wish you to write to me about beginning such a club. Thelma suggested that I publish a group of names each week as: "Thelma write to Joyce," etc. Shall I do that?

Or, do you wish to continue to choose from the lists given in our birthday corner, and from the new members, the ones to whom you wish to write? Let me hear from you!

OBEDIENT JEHOSHAPHAT

As we study about Asa's son, let us see if we can find some scriptures that refer to our different daily readings.

Jehoshaphat tried to serve the Lord. That is all anyone needs to do, to truly serve—just try his very best, day by day, remembering to study the Bible from which we learn what is pleasing to God.

Yes, we will make many mistakes as we go along. No one ever gets through making mistakes. Christ is the only perfect one. The more one tries to do right, sometimes the more difficult it is to keep from making errors.

Jesus' words were, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14).

Jehoshaphat tore down the places where his people worshiped idols.

We find that all the people of Judah were friendly with this ruler, and the near-by kingdoms were at peace with Judah. This friendly relationship caused Jehoshaphat's heart to be "lifted up," not with pride, which would have been sinful, but he was drawn closer still to his God—"lifted up in the ways of the Lord" (2 Chron. 17:6).

We find that Jehoshaphat not only took away the idols and places of idol worship, but he sent godly men as teachers to the different cities of Judah, who taught the people out of "the book of the law of the Lord."

Jehoshaphat knew that "to obey is better than sacrifice," and he wanted his subjects to know it, too.

The very greatest of all the commandments that were given to us to keep, were according to Christ, "The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Mark 12:29-31).

NOTICE OF MISSOURI CONFERENCE

The 32d Annual Missouri Conference will meet with the Fredericktown church August 12-20 for a whole week of Bible school and preaching. Bros. S. J. Lindsay and L. E. Conner have promised to be with us to conduct the meetings. We invite all lovers of truth to come. Make our homes your homes while we study the precious promises given in God's Holy Word, the Bible.

To all the brethren in Missouri: this is your Conference! Why not come? To the brethren Conference! Why not come? To the brethren in other states: you are just as welcome. Come! Let us enjoy your acquaintance. Help us with our Bible lessons and singing, and hear some of the best sermons that can be delivered. Your board will cost you nothing. Ethel Manken, Secy.

FREDERICKTOWN, MISSOURI

Meetings were held at Fredericktown, Mo., from July I through July 7. Although it was rather hot several nights, and some were very busy over the Fourth, there was good attend-ance and much interest was shown. There is a desire to have services more often.

The Missouri Conference is to be held at Fredericktown from August 13-20. Harvey U. Krogh, Jr.

TRAINING SCHOOL ECHOES

The coming week will be well filled with outside activity for the class. On Thursday, a trip to Chicago is planned, where different museums will be visited, among which will be the Field Museum and the Museum of Biblical Archeology, Chicago University. Saturday af-ternoon, the class will join the Oregon Sunday School in a picnic at the Ben Carpenter home. Then on Sunday, July 30, the class will have charge of a service at the Dixon, Ill., church.

The date for the presentation of attendance certificates to the members of the class has been set for Thursday evening, August 10. C. E. Randall, Dean.

WHO ARE ACTIVE MEMBERS?

By vote of the 1938 Annual General Conference, "only such members of the Church of God shall be eligible to be represented in the business meetings of the General Conference as shall have attended church at least once during the year, or have contributed to the church work during the year, or have shown some active interest during the year."

ILLINOIS BIBLE SCHOOL

This year the teaching personnel of the This year the teaching personnel of the School will be made up of teachers from many parts of the country. The adult class will be taught by L. E. Conner and F. L. Austin; advanced young people by M. W. Lyon and Lyle Rankin; junior young people by C. E. Lapp and J. R. LeCrone; intermediates by Harvey Krogh, Jr.; juniors by Mrs. Louise Lapp; primary by Mrs. Verna Thayer; beginners by Mrs. Ruby Railton. Thus we have Bro. Rankin from Washington on the west and Bro. LeCrone from Virginia on the cast. Bro, LeCrone from Virginia on the east.

Bro, LeCrone from Virginia on the east.

In addition to the foregoing there will be an hour each day devoted to "The Church and Its Auxiliaries." One of the topics to be discussed will be "The Sunday School and It's Relation to the Church." Bro, Harry Goekler of Louisiana has charge of this hour.

The superintendent of the meeting will be Bro. James McLain, who also will have charge of the music. Bro. Gerald Cooper is arranging for the devotional hour. Sr. Ruth Blanchard will be head cook, and Sr. Grace Wiggins matron.

Those who want rooms in private homes should write to Miss Elizabeth Ordnung, Ore-gon, Ill., stating time of arrival and length of stay

If there are some who feel unable to come because of lack of funds to contribute toward board and lodging in the dormitory but who are willing to help as waiters and dishwashers, please write to Miss Leota B. Hanson, Oregon, Ill. Sr. Minnie Johnson from Minnesota will have charge of the dining room.

ILLINOIS CONFERENCE BUSINESS MEETING

The annual business meeting of the Illinois Conference will be held at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon, Aug. 11, 1939, in the Oregon church.

Besides the election of officers, there are other matters of importance to come up, among which is evangelistic work in our State.

Illinois members, please plan your trip to Bible School and Conference so that you can be at our State business meeting. When the business meeting fails, the work will fall.

THE FATE OF THE UNGODLY

This again can be considered in the light of the actual Valley of Hinnom. The fire of Hinnom was constantly having added to it more refuse which was material for more fire and for more worms to digest. It was an "unquenchable fire" in that it was not left to burn out what refuse was there before more was added. The worms also lived on the added refuse and multiplied the same as they do on garbage today.

We, therefore, find that Jesus' teachings in the New Testament lead us to see that there is going to be a purifying of the earth by fire which will leave it in preparation for those who are worthy, but the ungodly will not receive of its purity because their fate will be death and not life. Their fate will be complete and final destruction. This is the meaning of Gehenna and hell.

Other statements in regard to future punishment infer that the punishment will be everlasting in that it will not continue after it has taken place, that is, none will continue to suffer after he has been punished by eternal death or separation from God. "Except ye repent, ye shall perish" (Luke 13:3). "Them who draw back unto perdition (entire loss; ruin)" (Heb. 10:27). "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (2 Peter 3:7). Also with these passages we find that the Lord does not want men to perish, but to have everlasting life. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Everlasting and eternal are forms of aion meaning age and of aionios meaning age-lasting. Therefore, when we find these words used, whether applied to everlasting destruction or eternal life, we should consider them in their true form. For example, an aionios fire will last until it is burned out—the age of the fire; and an aionios (age-lasting) kingdom with Christ is promised not to end. "And of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:33). "And the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom" (Dan. 7:27).

With the promise of destruction for the wicked (or ungodly), we find many interesting metaphors which promise destruction as of combustible substances. "Every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit . . . is cast into the fire" (Matt. 3:10). "He will burn the chaff . . ." (Matt. 3:12). "Wide is the gate . . . that leadeth to destruction . . . narrow is the way that leadeth unto life" (Matt. 7: 13, 14). "The tares are the children of the wicked one; . . . are gathered and burned in the fire" (Matt. 13:38-40). "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned" (John 15:6).

The fate of the ungodly seems to be, then, everlasting destruction or the suffering of death—complete loss of being or the losing of personal identity. "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power" (2 Thess. 1:9). "These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal" (Matt. 25:46). "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23).

After a careful study of the Scriptures' teachings of the fate of the ungodly, there is no reason for anyone to go on teaching other views. The kingdom is going to be much better without the ungodly. But I warn you that the righteous are few in numbers. Our good friend Luke, the humble physician, quotes our Lord as saying, "For many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able."

C. E. RANDALL, GUEST EDITOR

Inasmuch as Brother C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Ontario, Canada, is dean of the Bible Training School, your editor has invited him to write the editorial for this issue of The Restitution Herald. Nearly all the articles in this issue are prepared by students of the School.

It is with a feeling of honor that we sit in the editor's chair, which Brother Magaw has so capably filled during the past year. His invitation for us to act as guest editor is further appreciated, in that it affords the opportunity of being associated with the promising group of young people who are furnishing copy for this issue.

VISIONS

"Your young men shall see visions, . . . and on your handmaids will I pour out my spirit."

Like a mighty army and with the power of an incoming tide, move the young people of the Church of God. They have caught a vision of the church! They see it not only as it is, but as it can be and as God purposed it should be—a militant body. Where young people have a vision plus courage, developed by ambition under divine guidance, there can be no defeat! They have no tolerance for a "let alone" attitude or a policy of "let it take its course." When youth does with its might the task the Lord lays upon them—a crusade is on! When imbued with such a spirit, sacrifice becomes a joy and sweat-drenched labor a pleasure.

For years the dormant life of the church has been a barrier to youthful aspirations. Ambition to achieve in the fields of ripened grain has steadily been denied the young people by a languid spirit, until, in self-preservation they have arisen with a challenge that must not be thought-lessly swept aside. Possessed with a suppressed spirit and enthusiasm which times and seasons are unleashing, we must provide for these young people outlets for their God-inspired spirits, or else they are most likely to degenerate into ministers of unrighteousness. Woe be to us, if their vision is allowed to become sealed and their spirits broken through our indifference!

PROVIDING FOR OUR OWN

"But if any provide not for his own and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel."

Training our church youth is a responsibility that cannot be Biblically and satisfactorily transferred to other hearts and hands. It is our own divinely assigned task! If the performance of this duty leads us toward a "Red Sea," then let us with faith go forward and God will part the waters and give us strength for the onward march. To "stand still" in the midst of seeming difficulties will not allow the guidance of God to be manifested unto us.

When our young people are hungering and asking for the "loaves," how can we with undisturbed conscience give them but stones, then wonder why the borders of our tent are not enlarged? There are no insurmountable obstacles in the way of our providing thorough and efficient training to our young people. If there are shadows that dim the light, they are cast from ourselves standing in the way. If the Church of God is to have an army of trained workers, who will be faithful to its doctrines—loyal to its purposes and zealous in its labors—it must without delay assume full responsibility for their training.

IT IS TIME

Putting off until a more "convenient season" this work which is so essential to our future maintenance and expansion is the depth of procrastination. During the time when Israel was without a temple, God through the Prophet Haggai met all their objections which they raised against building. There were three: (1) The time is not ripe. (2) We are too poor. (3) The house will not be good enough. These same objections have stalled us in every attempt to provide a nine-months' training school for our young people. These are excuses rather than reasons. By the grace of God we can do what others are doing!

The time is ripe for the Church of God to do what it should have been doing for the past fifty years. Our denominational progress has suffered long enough from this failure. We are rich in houses and lands. We are not impoverished. We can build a school worthy of our name.

Why the Church of God?

By J. Arthur Johnson

In THE early days of our aspiration to follow the call of our Lord in preaching His Word of Truth, we were confronted by these questions, coming from a very dear friend and neighbor: "Why do you try to preach for the Church of God? Why don't you go to some other church that is stronger and can pay you better? Besides, why should you waste your time working with such few people in a church that is not popular?"

Will you go with me to the scene while I visit with my friend?

"Yes, Mr. Mills, I can see your idea about it. To get to the real bottom of your suggestion, we will need to study something of the teachings of these popular churches as compared with the teachings of the Bible. I could not work with these churches because they do not believe these teachings, and would not allow me to preach the truths that are so precious to us and to God."

"Well, aren't you all teaching that the God of the Bible is the Creator of all things and that Jesus is His Son who died for sin? Aren't you all going to the same place, after all?"

"Yes, Mr. Mills, we are all going to the same place, for a little while, at least; but it isn't the place these churches you speak about tell us we are going."

"Why, what do you mean, Arthur, aren't we all wanting to go to heaven when we die?"

"That is getting very close to the real reason for the Church of God, John. The Bible doesn't teach us anything about going to heaven when we are dead. It tells us that when we die we shall return to dust and not know anything."

"But that is just the body that returns to dust, isn't it? That isn't talking about one's soul. Don't you remember that song we used to sing, 'My Soul Shall Never Die'?"

"Yes, I remember it all right, but that song was evidently written by a man who hadn't learned the truth of the matter. The Bible tells us that 'the soul that sinneth, it shall die.' Do you want to get your Bible and read that verse? You'll find it in Ezekiel 18:4, and again in verse 20. Don't you think we need to read our Bibles instead of our song books?"

"Somehow I don't understand what you mean. I see it does say that the soul that sins will die, but isn't it speaking here of a soul as being just a man?"

"Yes, John, and that's just another thing to think about. The soul is the whole man, and not just a part of the man. Perhaps you can see it if you'll now turn back in your Bible to Genesis 2:7."

"I don't just see what you mean."

"Perhaps you will if you look at it a little closer; now watch your Book again. Doesn't it say, 'The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground' and then 'breathed into his nostrils the breath of life,' and after this had been done that the 'man became a living soul'? That tells us just what the living soul was made of, doesn't it? It is the whole man. Do you see what I mean."

"I'm not so sure, Arthur. Do you mean that the whole man dies, so that there isn't anything left? Then how can God reward us or punish us, as the Bible tells about in other places?"

"Perhaps we had first better be sure about this dying part, so you will understand better when we come to the reward that God will give His people. Turn in your Bible to Ecclesiastes 9:10. Shall we read it together? 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest.' Do you see that here again it tells us where we go when we die, and that we just can't know anything there? Look back to verse 6. There it says that in death even love and hatred are gone."

"Then how can we have any hope? Doesn't God tell us that we shall have everlasting life if we believe in Jesus?"

"Surely He does. I'm glad you mentioned that, but we shall not have that everlasting life until Jesus comes to call us out of the grave, or out of death. You see, Solomon didn't tell us anything about what was beyond the grave, but Jesus and His apostles did. Do you want to read what Jesus said about the dead people being given life again? It's in John 5:28, 29. There it says, 'All that are in the graves (do you see again where the dead are?) shall hear his voice, and shall come forth.' You see, sin brings death to all of us, but God sent Jesus to take our sin away, and just as Jesus was raised from the grave where He had been placed after He was killed, so God is some day going to send Jesus back to the earth to raise from death all those who have lived and died. He will find them just where He knows they are, in their graves."

"But I notice the last part of the verse says the bad people will be raised from death, too. What is going to happen to them?"

"We learn about that in Revelation 20. There it gives a picture of the final judgment (Please turn to page 11)

A School Needed

By Vivian Kirkpatrick

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15).

DOES the Church of God need a Training School? That is the question we are asking of ourselves and of each other today.

And why are we asking ourselves that question? Because we are coming to the realization that if we do not immediately do some serious thinking on that problem the church must continue dormant for an indefinite period of time. But that cannot be. There can be no level period. If we do not progress we shall go backwards, and once that retrogression starts it is extremely hard to stop.

I believe the entire church body has reached the place where it realizes that the progress of the Church of God is barely perceptible. It is because of that realization that we are asking ourselves the foregoing question. We cannot let the forward motion cease.

What, then, can be done about it? My belief is that education alone will do the work. That statement may need clarifying. It has been thought by some that we could rely on the state and church schools for educating our young people. What a sad mistake that has been!

We have felt that those of our young people who would be interested only in secular work could go to our state schools for the type of education they desired, and those of our young men who felt called to the ministry could be sent to a church-supported school for their preparation. But what has happened? Those going to state-controlled schools finish with a thorough education in everything except that which is most needful. It takes from them what religion they had when they entered, and substitutes philosophy, a different conception of moral standards, skepticism, doubts about the authenticity of the Bible, and evolution.

Our young men go to school with ambitions for the ministry. They study hard, but they are still young, and though they feel they are well founded in their faith when they enter, it is impossible to continue firm. We cannot always blame the church-supported schools for that, as we can blame the public schools for what they teach. We should not expect anything else. No school is going to sacrifice time for one or two students at the expense of the group. Neither should we expect an instructor to teach something he does not believe to a class which would not believe because there would be a Church of God student in his ranks. Could we expect to have our prospective ministers come away from such a school without unconsciously picking up thoughts not in accord with Church of God doctrine?

It was this which led to our people reorganizing the Bible Training School for a six-weeks' summer session. The question which now confronts us is: Does the Church of God need a Training School? Has the work accomplished last year and being accomplished this year been of such a nature that the results would warrant its continuation? My answer is: "It should be unless the church wakes up to its responsibility and goes one step farther."

The thought I'm expressing is that a "Bible Training School," such as we have had for the past two years, is inadequate. The students are able only to scratch the surface. It is very true the Bible Training School serves a purpose, but the material needed for our prospective ministers, teachers, and workers can never be taught in one year, and the inadequate number of instructors makes it almost necessary to teach much the same material year after year, rather than having separate classes for those who have already attended a year or more.

Another factor which makes the present Bible Training School inadequate is that its purpose is to instruct only those planning for the ministry or the teaching of Sunday school classes—for those interested in active church work.

What is the advantage in sending a few of our young people to train for the Lord's work when we send the rest into the world for education which will lead away from the church? There is no use in training ministers and church workers if we make no provision for a congregation to which they may minister after their preparation has been completed.

Granted, that if nothing else can be done, it is desirable to continue the six-weeks' Bible training. Still, as soon as possible, we should expand that class into a regular nine-months' school, with provisions made for other than purely ministerial training.

This last is suggested for two reasons. A minister needs more than a common-school education if he is to draw and hold those who have been to the world for their education, those who have gone to college. A minister, to be truly effective, must be the superior of his congregation along all lines of education. Again, if we are to hold our own young people we must take them out of the world. The church must furnish them with all the education in any line or along any vocation which they might desire.

That is a big order and may seem an unattainable dream, yet I believe it may become a reality. And it will be a reality when the Church of God makes up her mind to make it so-when the church determines to take her young people out of the world, and mold them after the pattern of Christ.

An Imaginary Lesson

By Jeraldyne Louks

'CTUDENT'S, please! May I have your attention? I've finally managed to answer all your questions; now I'm going to ask one.

"Emily, you've been in the faith for several years; would you now tell the Gleaners' class here at the Southlawn Park Church of God just why you are working in this church?"

"Well, Miss Rahn, there are several reasons, but, of course, the important one is that I believe in the foundation truths of the church."

Mary Newell, a young girl comparatively new to the class but eagerly and quickly grasping the truth, asked, "Miss Rahn, just what does she mean by that?"

"Walter, explain to Mary a few of the basic principles of our faith."

"I'll enumerate a few of the ideals of our church to you. For instance, in Romans 6: 4 you find the scripture that substantiates our belief in total immersion during baptism. As you know, several of the churches merely sprinkle a little water on the individual's head during that sacred service of consecrating oneself to God, But if you'll just look up the scripture I quoted, it will soon dispel that idea. What could be plainer? 'Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." The trouble with so many people is that they accept a statement without thorough study."

"That certainly is true, Walter," said Al, another boy in the group. Take the question, Is man mortal? There are people who actually believe that when we die we shall go to heaven or the direct opposite. In other words, our souls live on. When I hear a person talking like that, I always want to quote 2 Corinthians 4:11, 1 Corinthians 15:53, or Romans 6:12. These scriptures prove that when one dies he goes to the grave to sleep until Christ comes."

"Granted," answered Charlotte, "But I've heard it spoken by several of our ministers that we shall live immortally in the kingdom. Explain that."

"Evelyn, tell Charlotte your understanding of that." "Of course, the true Christian will have a place in the kingdom to come, but not until Christ again comes to the earth as the Christian King to establish His kingdom. No one knows just when He is coming, but His every follower should be preparing."

"And that brings up the question of angels. Just what does the term mean and how does it apply to us?"

"Why, Richard, you should know a little about that," said Muriel. "First of all, the word 'angel' means a messenger, as a bringer of glad tidings. And I think that's exactly what Christians will be in the kingdom to come. At the first part of Christ's coming to the earth He will snatch away His faithful followers, and they will return as angels to bring glad tidings to those who previously missed the opportunity of hearing the gospel. With the assistance of the great Redeemer, the church will spread the gospel to those who were prevented from hearing it before their first death. To be even more specific, look up John 1:51 and Genesis 28:12. The first allusion states very plainly, 'Hereafter you shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.' In Genesis, when Jacob saw the vision of the ladder, he spoke of angels ascending and descending on the steps."

"Miss Rahn, to settle another question that has been bothering me for some time, perhaps you could explain to me about God. Are He and Christ one and the same? I know several churches that teach the Trinity."

"Well," piped up Lorraine, "You could just refer any member in those churches to John 3:16, 1 Corinthians 3:23, Ephesians 4:6, and Isaiah 45:22. After studying over these verses, and a number of others I could name, I think the persons would plainly see how wrong they had been. What could John 3:16 mean other than just exactly what it reads: 'God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The Parable of the Sower

By Mary Richardson

JESUS frequently spoke to the multitudes in parables, in which were hidden very vital and important truths. It was difficult for these people to ascertain the true meaning of the parables. Therefore, they often failed to understand the full significance of the beautiful and necessary truths.

On this particular occasion, at the time which the parable of the sower as recorded in Matthew 13 was given, Jesus was so hard pressed by the multitudes that He entered into a ship, and from there addressed the multitude on the shore. We notice that on several occasions multitudes followed Jesus, some out of curiosity and probably desiring to learn of the great truths that the Master was teaching. Frequently some accepted Christ and became true followers.

The sower spoken of in this parable may be likened to the individual teacher, minister, deacon, elder, or anyone who tries to spread the gospel. Just what type of individuals do you think these sowers are? From our everyday experience and observation we can readily see that some are obedient, merciful, gentle, meek, faithful, while others are patient, peaceful, and kind. Which heading do you come under?

Now let us compare the seed that these sowers sowed to the Word of God. This seed also has many well-known characteristics. In Hebrews 4:12 the Word is spoken of as quick and powerful. Again, in Acts 26:25 it is spoken of as the Word of truth and soberness. The seed is pure, it has great strength, and it may prove very fruitful, depending upon the kind of soil in which it is planted. God's Word never changes; it is the same yesterday, and today, and forever.

Now notice when the seed (Word of God) was sown, that some fell by the wayside and fowls came and devoured it. Just what do fowls signify? Do they not partly refer to false teachers who strive to drive people from the truth? Alas! Such is the case. Sometimes ministers come into a community and introduce a new doctrine that is in reality false. They plead their cause in such an appealing manner that the people are deceived, and some actually accept the new doctrine. But Christ told us to beware of false teachers, for they would come and "deceive many." Isn't that a recognized fact today? Further, the pleasures of this world may be said to be fowls. The movies, dances, sports, and parties devour the seed (Word of God) that is sown, or attempted to be sown, in people's lives. Some people are so busy enjoying the temporal things of this life that they give little or no thought to the future. We may entertain jealousy as a fowl, also. This trait may become so firmly rooted in an individual's life that love just can't abide in his heart. This type of individual may become so envious of another's apparent success in the Lord's work, until he will do everything in opposition to his fellow men. Sickness may appear on the scene as a fowl, and snatch the Word from our lives. We may become so discouraged during sickness that we lose heart, and gradually fall away. Paul said in Galatians 6:9, "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

Some of the seed fell upon stony soil, that is, in lives in which the seed could not take root and grow. Such people will not allow the glad tidings to sink into their hearts and become a very part of their lives. They hear the Word, but it merely grazes the surface and doesn't make any impression whatever on them. Then, too, some may accept the Word and endure for a while, but when tribulations and persecutions come, they waver, just as the young plant wilts under the intense heat of the sun. The Word hasn't taken firm enough root to stand the trials. In this present age one persecution may be the objection of parents to their children becoming workers in the field (world) of God. They object because they want their children to have a good time, so to speak. Oh! If only they had the reasoning to see that such a life is of no value. Another factor that may enter into persecutions is the scorn of friends. Some folks think, "What will so and so think if I do this?" Do you care what others may think of you if you are earnestly endeavoring to serve the Christ? You will not if you are a Christian. Now let's look at another picture. I'm sure most of you read the daily newspapers, and know something about the severe persecutions that are prevailing in the foreign countries, such as the barring of religious broadcasts, restriction of the selling of religious books, and countless others. Will those who are Christians continue faithful under such conditions? It seems that Hitler wants the world to bow to him, and he will stop at nothing to gain that end. Will he ever become satisfied? Your opinion?

Some of the seed fell among thorns, and the thorns sprang up and choked them. I'm sure some of you know about thorns and what a nuisance they are. You know how hard it is to get rid of them. Some of the thorns in this world today may be the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches. These spring up where the Word has been planted and choke that Word so it can bear no fruit. Individuals have cares in this life, cares that hinder them from accepting the Word. Some think of their own desires and wishes before God. Are you of that type? I think a good admonition is, "God first, others second. and self last." The business of some folks leads them away from God; they forget Him, and put their whole being in the promotion of their business, whereas, they would be far happier and contented if they would only take time out for God. Do you take time out in the game of life to praise God and give thanks to Him? Good for you if you do! Still others give money to the church and various organizations, but it is only for outward appearance. Their heart is not in it. God wants willing hearts. They forget the hand of God in doing it, and think, "I did that, I gave money for that cause." Then, there is the housewife who considers that her duties do not permit her to take time to study God's Word. Will she be an example to her children? I'm afraid not.

But take notice of the fact that some seed "fell in good ground and brought forth fruit, some an hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold." This soil was rich and fertile, and, of course, the Word took root and became firmly planted. After the seed comes up, if properly cultivated and fertilized, it will have a good yield, depending upon weather conditions, too. Just so is the Christian life. We must constantly be weeding our gardens of the sin that is likely to crop up. We plant our lives in the rich and fertile soil of Jesus Christ. Our lives receive water from our daily prayers and nourishment from God's Word, the Bible. By hoeing and pulling out the weeds of sin we cultivate good traits of character.

The Jews As a Nation

Their Past-Article 1

By Delbert Jones

OF ALL of the nations in the world, the Jewish nation is the most peculiar and also the most interesting. To understand the Jews to the fullest extent, that is, their traditions, their ideals, and their aspirations, one must go back two thousand years before the birth of Christ to the time of their origin. God called Abraham and took him from his home in Ur of the Chaldees, led him to the land of Canaan and promised it to him for an everlasting possession. God disclosed His desires for him and his descendants by promises and prophecies. "Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

God told the children of Israel that they should be a peculiar people, and a peculiar people they are. Abram lived to a ripe old age. When He died, he left to his son Isaac the traditions and promises. He in turn handed them down to Jacob his son. Jacob's name was changed to Israel. He had twelve sons. His favorite, Joseph, was sold into captivity in Egypt. Joseph gained the favor of the Pharaoh, and through his influence Joseph's father and brothers came into Egypt. They were given a rich country to live in. As a result, they grew in numbers until the Egyptians feared their power. They tried to destroy it by persecuting them. For four hundred years God allowed them to be trodden on, and then He raised up Moses to deliver them out of the land,

In the wilderness they were troubled almost beyond endurance, and, therefore, the hundreds of thousands of departing Israelites longed for the "fleshpots of Egypt." However, God fed them, gave them water, and guided them until they reached the mountain of Sinai. Moses was called up into the mountains to receive the laws from God. If they obeyed them they would become a peculiar people. These laws, the most perfect ever known, are still used by the Jews. (Part of them are the Ten Commandments.)

Part of the laws given to Moses provided for the wonderful tabernacle service, including the ark of the covenant—the possession of which proved to be a remarkable blessing to them. At various times the ark was captured by other nations, which caused a terrible curse to fall on the victor. In the wilderness they built a Tabernacle. When it was completed God showed His presence by leading them with a pillar of fire at night and smoke in the daytime.

Christian Social Life

By Muriel Randall

SHOULD the Church of God provide for the social life of its young people? Yes, the Church of God should and must provide the social life, as well as the spiritual life, for the young people. That is, the church must be a home for the young people if it is to have any young people left.

Surely, young people of the church are the forthcoming church. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that they be held in the church. They should not be held by force, but by love—love for God, the truth, the bread of life, and Christian fellowship. The leaders play a very important part in the response that will be given by the young people and children. He must have a magnetic personality, but it should be built around staunch Christian principles.

One solution to this ever-increasing problem is an attractive social program. However, it should not be attractive in such a manner that it will detract from the gospel of truth and salvation. It should enhance our spirituallives.

Not only should the young people of the teen ages and early twenties be considered, but younger boys and girls should be provided with social life.

The Sunday school can organize midweek meetings that will attract the church children. It can form itself into a missionary group and make picture books for missions, dress dolls, and make simple trinkets. Then, games can be played and a lunch served.

Perhaps a "Little Ambassadors' Club" could be organized, teaching simple truths, songs, prayers, Bible verses, and a love for humanity. They can also sing for shut-ins, distribute food baskets, and run errands for cripples. In this way they feel they are truly working in the church. It gives them a foundation that only experience can give. It will tend to make them form their close friendships among the other children who are coming to these weekly meetings.

After they have grown out of this age group, they will be junior young people. It is then necessary to provide social life for them, only it must be more lively. Competitive games can be made interesting, and can also teach a lesson. Manual training and sewing clubs can be organized that will be instructive as well as furnishing interesting times of fellowship. These meetings should be made so attractive that the boys and girls will be anxious to attend.

The next group includes the latter teens and early twenties. At this age people have learned to study while they study and to relax while they relax. The type of entertainment does not need to be as hilarious as has been suggested for the younger ones.

A great deal of joy and happiness can be derived merely by being friendly, courteous, and sociable. There is nothing so irritating as an aloof, unfriendly Christian. Just a pleasant greeting or friendly handshake may mean the difference between a new member or an antagonist.

Christ set the example for sociability. He mingled with young and old, poor and rich, sick and well, and sinful and pure. He made friends wherever He went. Christ's followers loved this Friend above friends, so much that they changed their sinful ways to His. It is the duty of young people and old to be friendly toward each other and strangers who come into their midst. If one will be a friend, he will have friends. Thus, if the church will be friendly, it will find friends in the hearts of its young people.

When Christ wanted to explain righteous living, and to teach, He talked with people. He came into an intimate sphere with them. Thus, we can have sweet and blessed fellowship with other Christian young people, if we will but talk intimately with them.

Young people need relaxation, and why shouldn't the church supply this? There are two types of places where young people can obtain recreation: the worldly and the Christian. There are also two types of entertainment: one is lustful, and the other is unselfish.

The first one has no place in a truly consecrated life, and should never be incorporated into the church's social program. One vivid illustration of this type is dancing.

The second type is unselfish and this welcomes more and more partakers. It is unselfish, insomuch that personal happiness is not the sole purpose of entertainment. Each one having a part in this type is so concerned about someone else having a good time that he forgets self. In the end the giver of happiness is the happiest.

Lustful desires create very undesirable relaxation—that which is not Christlike. Christ should ever be the example before young people. If young people only took Christ with them wherever they went, the lustful amusements would diminish. You are wondering if there is any type of entertainment that would be suitable for Christian young people.

There are many. Here are some concrete examples that have worked. If it is at all possible, plan much of the entertainment for outdoors. In the winter skating, skiing, sliding, hiking, and sleigh-ride parties can be very popular. After an evening in the cold air, a hot lunch should be served. Then while the people are sitting around, choruses or hymns can be sung, testimonials spoken, and sentence prayers given. Some may object at first, but when they see the inward joy that comes from fellowship with God and Christian friends they will be glad to join you.

There are a number of indoor games that can be played. Physical games are usually better than mental games, and should include everyone. It is well to play several partner games, because it is characteristic of this age group to want companionship. Where is a better place to find partners than in the church of one's own faith?

There should be an officer, probably one of the vicepresidents, whose duty it is to plan the actual entertainment for the church. The person should be a leader and a popular one. He should have original ideas and be able to carry them out.

Perhaps some of the older people will object to parties in the lower church auditorium. If they do raise any objections, these parties can be held at homes and the lunch burden borne by all.

A more organized form of social activities, and yet devotional, will fill the desire for sociability. A "fellowship hour" can become a part of the church's program. Secure either a good outside speaker or several local speakers to talk on some Christian principle. If outside speaking talent is used and they do not furnish music, work up some special music from your own group. Usually, an outside speaker draws a better crowd, unless it is an unusual home-talent program. Advertise this "hour" in the church bulletin, and extend a welcome to all. Refreshments tend to complete a time of fellowship.

If each young person in the church invited some other person to all the meetings it would serve a dual purpose. The one invited is happy to have been thought of, and the host receives joy because he gave joy.

Young people must have fellowship with other Christian young people, and they must have a rest from their work. Why not give them that need in the church? If they are given so much to do in the church, they will not have time nor interest to go to the world for their good times.

GOD'S SUNSHINE

By Lorraine Brossard

"THEREFORE if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remembereth that thy brother hath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift" (Matt. 5:23, 24).

One of God's commandments is to love one's enemics as oneself, and to forgive them. In following this, one cannot come before God with a clear conscience or expect to be forgiven of his own wrongdoing unless he forgives others. A Christian's love must be strong and beautiful, patterned after the example set by our Lord. It must be warm and vital like sunshine. What is warmer than God's love shining on us; a cheerful smile or the handclasp of a friend?

In rectifying all errors we learn humility, and it becomes a beautiful experience. To harbor a grudge or brood about injured feelings is to put skeletons in our closets and burdens on our hearts.

To experience the fullest blessing of communion with God, let us worship with a free heart, not bound by hate or self-pity—then we may better know God.

"SO THAT'S IT"

By Lorna Macy

AST fall I worked for a family who belonged to the Brethren denomination. One day while I was ironing and while the mother of the home was giving the baby a bath, she asked, "What church do you go to?"

"The Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith," I replied.

"Why do you go to that church rather than another?"

"Because its fundamental beliefs are more practical than any church's that I know," I answered.

"What are your beliefs, and what does that 'Abrahamic Faith' mean?"

"We believe that the promises that God made to Abraham apply also to us."

"What are these promises?" she inquired.

"That God would always be a God to him and that God would give to Abraham as an everlasting possession, the land of Canaan. Abraham hasn't received this land yet, but he will in the kingdom. These promises were also made to Abraham's Seed, which is Christ. True Christians become heirs to these promises by becoming joint heirs with Christ through baptism."

"What else do you believe?"

"Well, what distinguishes us most from any other church is the belief that we do not go to heaven when we die."

She stopped washing the baby and looked at me with mouth open. "You mean that if my baby had died, he would not have gone to heaven?"

"Yes," I answered meekly after she gave me such a look.

"My baby, an innocent little being, doesn't know a thing about sin, and you say it wouldn't have gone to heaven. I can't believe that. I think that if my baby would have died, he would have gone immediately to heaven and would have become an angel."

"The Bible says in Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6 that 'the dead know not any thing.' John 3:13 records that no one has gone to heaven, except Christ. Genesis 3:19 states that man will return to dust. Anyway, why do you want to go to heaven when Christ is coming back here to set up His kingdom?" I tried to explain.

She paused a while, and then asked if we had any hope for our dead people.

"Oh, surely. Christ will come again and raise the dead. We who are faithful now will receive our reward then, instead of at death."

"Do you believe in a real kingdom of God?"

"Yes, we believe that when Christ comes again, He will set up His kingdom. Revelation 5:10 foretells that God will make certain ones kings and priests who will reign here on the earth."

"Well, I believe that, too," the mother stated.

"You mean that you believe Christ will set up His kingdom here, and yet you also believe that your soul goes to heaven? Why do you want to go away, when Christ is coming back here?"

She studied a few moments and then said, "So that's it. I often wondered what Uncle Ambrose believed."

THE JEWS AS A NATION

Land, God ordered them to go in and possess it. Instead of doing as God had directed, they sent twelve spies (one from each tribe) to see whether they could capture it or not. Ten of them saith that they couldn't, and only Caleb and Joshua had enough faith in God to say that they could. As a result of this unbelief, God turned them back into the wilderness to wander until all adults, who were such at the time of the exodus, had died. The miraculous care that He extended over His elect is shown in the facts that their shoes never wore out, they always had food, and His presence was always shown in the pillar of smoke or fire.

Under Joshua, after the death of Moses, God led Israel into the long-promised Land. Here, for many centuries, they found a home. During this time their rulers were called judges. The first one was Joshua and the last one was Samuel. The people wanted a king so that they would be like other nations. The people selected Saul to be their first king. David, a man after God's own heart, was next in line. His son Solomon built a most magnificent court; along with this he built the Temple for which David had assembled the material. Rehoboam his son took the throne at the death of his father. Under him, ten of the tribes revolted against his terrible taxation, and set up a kingdom with Jeroboam as king. The two tribes of Judah and Benjamin remained under Rehoboam. The twelve tribes have continued divided to this day. The Jews, as we know them, are merely the two tribes. The other ten tribes, Israel, were scattered among the nations of the earth. They have lost their identity, even though God's promises were made to all twelve of them. When God chooses, He will gather them together in Palestine.

Through the Prophet Ezckiel God said, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." This prophecy refers to Christ.

The history of Israel from the time of the overthrow of Judah is a continued struggle for their own land. Though they were captives and slaves, the Jewish people always kept their faith that God would keep His promise to them, and regather His scattered flock in Palestine. They have always longed for their own government and temple of worship.

Prophecies told the Jews that their Messiah should be from the lineage of David, born in the City of David (Bethlehem) and here Jesus was born. However, "he came unto his own, and his own received him not." They looked for a king to come in great power and glory, and rejected the Son of the wife of the lowly Nazarene carpenter. So, once again their opportunity was lost. In 70 A.D. the Temple at Jerusalem was destroyed, the city sacked and burned, and the people driven out. The land around there was laid waste; where orchards and vine-yards had been, deserts appeared. Everything in Palestine was destroyed, and it has remained such for centuries. Nevertheless, the Jews believed that in the consummation of His time, God would send them a Messiah, who would set up a righteous government in Palestine.

As I have already stated, the Jews have always been a people governed by promises and prophecies. Jesus made many prophecies in His short life on earth, some of which were fulfilled in the centuries following His life, other remain to be fulfilled in the future.

Throughout all the intervening centuries, many of the European countries followed the Roman example. That is, they persecuted the Israelites nearly beyond endurance. It was the renewed persecution that caused the present Zionist movement.

bringing others into the Shepherd's fold. Many blessings are bestowed upon those who are in the field of service and sacrifice. By our teaching and preaching our knowledge is increased to varying degrees. Our influence may be far-reaching, and we should ever strive for it to be so. Actions often speak louder than words. Others seeing our good works might come to accept. We might even serve to strengthen the faith of believers. The successful Christian is a militant Christian. The only sure path is forward. Eternal life is the eventual reward of those who are truly laborers of Christ. Don't miss the crown!

THE ART OF TEACHING

By Charlotte Rahn

TEACHING is an art which must be learned the same as any other art. One may know his subject to perfection, yet not have mastered the art of presenting it to others.

The teacher of religion should ask himself these questions before attempting to teach: Do I know how to present the subject to the class to hold its interest? Have I definitely and skillfully planned my work to be presented before my pupils?

The successful teacher of religion should be a student, and continually grow in knowledge and in teaching power.

The only way to become a learned teacher is by constant reading, having a broad background of the world in general, studying in the field of religion and religious teaching, and special preparation for each lesson taught.

The teacher should endeavor to put his whole thought and feeling into his teaching; this must be accomplished before he will receive successful results.

A teacher who adheres to this method of teaching may well rejoice, for he is accomplishing that which God had designed for him.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?

By Ellsworth Routson

WHAT do you think of starting a nine-months' Bible Training School rather than just for six weeks? Have you ever stopped to think how short a time six weeks really are?

Speaking very highly of the six-weeks' School, I shall say they are the most profitable weeks I have ever spent. The School has opened things to me which make me want to study more. Our instructors have taught us truths from the Bible which we never clearly understood before. It has been a great inspiration to me, and will cause me to work more earnestly for the Lord. If one can learn so much in six weeks, what a wonderful thing it would be to get nine months of training. That is just what our young people need, especially those who are hoping to enter the ministry.

The young people in time, will become the foundation of the church. It would be a blessing if all our young people could have such a path open to them to be able to study for nine months. It would make them well trained teachers and preachers, and that is what we are needing today.

and says that whosoever is not found in the book of life will be cast into a lake of fire, but explains that this lake of fire is the second death. In Obadiah 16 we read what this means, "They (the wicked) shall be as though they had not been." Can you imagine what it is to not be?"

"Do you mean that there will not be anything left of them?"

"That is what the Bible teaches. It says in another place (Psalm 37:20), 'They shall be consumed, into smoke shall they consume away.' Do you know what is left when fire has finished its burning on a piece of wood or cloth? Just a little ashes. Isn't that right?"

"Yes, but I'd never heard of anything like this before in connection with people. I'll have to think about it for a while, but I want to ask you about the good people who will come out of the grave. What will become of them?"

"Do you still remember, John, why Jesus said the meek were blessed? It starts, 'Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit . . .'"

"It says, 'They shall inherit the earth.' Why, I'd never thought of that, either. But say, aren't there a lot of promises about the earth in the Bible? I seem now to remember something like that."

"Yes, there are a great many promises about the earth. Do you remember what God promised to Abraham? Perhaps we should read Genesis 12:1-3. Now, do you see that the earth is really a part of God's promises to men. Abraham died without ever being given any of the land that was promised to him, but one of Jesus' apostles explained that it will yet be given to Abraham even as it was promised.

"That promise also said that Abraham should become a great nation, and we learn that Jesus is going to be King of that nation. All this will be fulfilled after Jesus comes to raise the dead.

"Do you see now why I want to work with the Church of God, and why some of these other churches would not want me to teach in their pulpits?"

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Gerald L. Cooper, Editor, Eden Valley, Minn.

EDITOR'S REPORT

On August 7 another year of Berean activities will have been completed, and your editor will have finished one year of work. Whether or not he will be editing this page next year will be decided by the executive board of the National Berean Society. I have much enjoyed the work; it has been a source of many personal blessings. I feel that a report of the various phases of my work might be interesting at this time.

As I look over my records, I find that there has been a total of sixty-five contributions received up to the time of this writing. (Two more issues of The Herald must appear before the count is final.) Of these contributions at least five have been reports. It seems to me that the Bereans have fallen considerably in their reporting of their activities. In addition to the contributions, I find that I have written a total of forty-one editorials, and have used three selections. In other years, the Berean editors have been compelled to write many more editorials than I have written, for which I am thankful. The contributions have come from twelve different states. The number from each state follows: Louisiana, 29 (17 of which were from one person); Illinois, 1; Michigan, 1; Minnesota, 8; Indiana, 4; California, 1; Ohio, 9; Virginia, 4; South Carolina, 3; Arkansas, 2; Missouri, 2; Nebraska, 1.

EDITORIAL POLICY

The editorial policy that I have followed has been comparatively simple. As I have constantly reminded you that this is your page, when you send in articles there is little else to do but publish them. Of course, numerous articles have been changed to fit the page, and have been corrected in various ways. In some instances (very few), the material sent was not usable. In at least one case we were compelled to confer with the editor of The Herald in regard to publishing some material.

If it had been possible for me to have done so, I would liked to have answered all of your letters that you wrote in sending in material. Believe me when I say that I enjoyed every one of them, even the letters of adverse criticism, some of which were received. Permit me to take this opportunity to greet all of you, and thank you for your cooperation. It will be pleasant to meet many of you at the General Conference.

It may be that another person will be editing this page next year. Whoever it may be, go forth in the Lord's work. Never let the Lord's work falter, for it is very necessary that it be done. Cooperate, as you have done the past year, for the good of the Berean page, and for the good of the National Berean Society as a whole.

BOOKS

There are Books and books! No doubt the most of us have read, at one time or another, several books. Some of them have been good, and many of them have been bad.

May I give you a personal experience that may help you in the selection of your books? Last spring, I "bit" on an advertisement to belong to a certain book agency. A liberal "free" offer was given, and it sounded good to me. I have found out since that it was not what it should be, and just now I am trying to get out of it the best way I can. The books I have obtained from the agency are not what I expected; the company is seemingly bent only on obtaining money from gullible patrons; and the money that I have spent on worthless literature is gone for good.

There is only one thing that I have gotten out of these books, with the possible exception of experience, and that is an insight into the immorality of present-day literature. The name of the Lord is taken in vain numberless times; things that Christians hardly dare whisper about are written of boldly for all to read; and sin in all its filthiness is thrust to the forefront.

What are we going to read? I don't know, unless we read the Bible at least more than we do. Do not misunderstand me, for a good book is invaluable, and many of them are a great help in Christian living. But be careful of the books that you buy. There are, of course, a few of these agencies in the country that are legitimate ones, that are worthy of book lovers. A question to someone who knows may save you from some very disgusting feelings, and, incidentally, a goodly sum of money.

You will find in the Book of books, all kinds of good reading, and I know that you will enjoy it if you just read it more. Let us be careful of our reading, lest we displease our Savior, whom we are trying to serve.

Prepared by Madge Savage Waite Park, Minnesota

"The Lord is far from the wicked: but he heareth the prayer of the righteous" (Prov. 15:29).

Lesson: 1 Kings 18:30-39.

ELIJAH, A COURAGEOUS PROPHET

So far we have been having stories of some of the kings of Israel and Judah. Today, however, we are to learn a story of Elijah, a prophet of Israel, during the reign of Ahab, a wicked king.

King Ahab and his wicked queen, Jezebel, led his people in Baal worship. It seems that Israelites worshiped idols a great deal, doesn't it?

Elijah called, "Come near unto me."

The people who worshiped idols had been given their chance to get their gods to drop fire upon their altar, but no fire fell, of course. So, now, Elijah asked them to come near to him.

Elijah took twelve stones, one for each of the tribes of Israel, and built an altar "in the name of the Lord." Around this altar he made a ditch or trench. When the wood and offering were laid in their places upon the altar, Elijah said to these idol worshipers. "Fill four barrels with water."

This they did, not once, but three times, and poured the water over the altar and offering each time. He then had them fill the trench, too! He surely believed his God to be the only powerful one, to expect Him to burn such a wet offering. He truly was brave to do this before the large gathering of idol worshipers.

Elijah offered a very short, simple prayer. But he said it very earnestly, believing with all his heart that he was doing God's will.

What happened then? The fire fell! The wood, bullock, and altar were burned. Yes, and the water in the trench was "licked up," too!

All the people fell upon their faces and said, "The Lord, he is God; the Lord, he is God!"

Elijah was not afraid to face unbelievers with his faith. He was not afraid to stand alone before people who were many in number, standing for what he knew to be right. Yet he was not really alone, was he? God was with him. He was courageous enough to act according to his belief. Let us be Elijah's today?

"God is my strong salvation.

What foe have I to fear?
In darkness and temptation,
My light, my help is near:
Though hosts encamp around me,
Firm to the fight I stand.
What terror can confront me,
With God at my right hand?"

ECE CLUB NEWS

Another letter has come to tell you, "I like the club membership card very much. I have it on the wall. It is a great help to me. I try to do all those aims. I especially like to read the Children's page of The Herald."

The letter is from Alice Plantner, who is the ECE Club secretary of the Cleveland, Ohio, group.

There are still more cards left, so send for yours now.

GENERAL CONFERENCE TREAT FOR ECE'S

I hope a large number of you are gathering in Oregon, Illinois, and that as many as come will get together and get very well acquainted.

If I am not able to be with you, I want you to introduce yourselves to my sister, Mrs. Orpha LeMasurier. She will give you my wishes concerning you who meet there.

TRUST IN GOD'S CARE

O God, who workest hitherto,
Working in all we see,
Fain would we be and bear and do,
As best it pleaseth Thee.
Our skill of hand and strength of limb
Are not our own, but Thine;
We link them to the work of Him
Who made all life divine!

-Thomas W. Freckleton.

SHOWERS OF BLESSING

Accompanying their words of appreciation for The Restitution Herald, the Bible Training School, and the coming General Conference, Bro. and Sr. Will Holland of Thorold. Ont., Canada, recently sent showers of blessing to the National Bible Institution in the form of a cheek for $250.00, specifying that $110.50 should be used for the Indebtedness Fund as a memorial to Sr. Holland's father, Bro. T. A. Weldon. The remaining amount is to be divided among several branches of our work.

Certainly the gift is appreciated, and we trust every dollar of it will be productive in the Lord's cause; but what cheers the heart even more is to know the true spirit of love and cooperation back of the gift. Bro. and Sr. Holland are sincere in their religion. Frequently at previous times when they have made contributions they even requested that their names be withheld. In all may the Lord be glorified.

WHO ARE ACTIVE MEMBERS?

By vote of the 1938 Annual General Conference, "only such members of the Church of God shall be eligible to be represented in the business meetings of the General Conference as shall have attended church at least once during the year, or have contributed to the church work during the year, or have shown some active interest during the year."

NOTICE OF MISSOURI CONFERENCE

The 32d Annual Missouri Conference will meet with the Fredericktown church August 12-20 for a whole week of Bible school and preaching.

preaching.

Bros. S. J. Lindsay and L. E. Conner have promised to be with us to conduct the meetings. We invite all lovers of truth to come. Make our homes your homes while we study the precious promises given in God's Holy Word, the Bible.

Word, the Bible.

To all the brethren in Missouri: this is your Conference! Why not come? To the brethren in other states: you are just as welcome. Come! Let us enjoy your acquaintance. Help us with our Bible lessons and singing, and hear some of the best sermons that can be delivered. Your board will cost you nothing.

SMITH - DYER

On Saturday evening, July 15, 1939, in the Old Stone Church of God at Oregon, Ill., a quiet wedding took place, when Miss Lucille Smith, daughter of the late Anna Sherman of Byron, Ill., became the bride of Mr. Stanley Dyer, also of Byron, Ill.

Owing to the tragic death of the bride's mother some weeks ago, there was no music nor festive demonstrations, as, in beauty and becoming dignity the attractive couple, attended by Miss Maida Lutz and Mr. Ray Dyer, with apparent confidence and with steady tread, marched quietly to the altar, where they took the solemn your of saged marriage.

took the solemn vows of sacred marriage.

After congratulations and well wishes had been extended the happy couple, a reception at the home of Mrs. Mary Gesin, aunt of the bride, followed.

Mrs. Dyer is a teacher, which profession she will continue the coming year. Mr. Dyer is employed by the Byron Transit Company of Byron, in which city this splendid couple will continue to reside, and in whose home we confidently hope, love may rule, that peace, joy, and success may crown their efforts in life.

MARTHA SUTTERFIELD

Martha Sutterfield, nee Hinson, was born in Washington County, Mo., Feb. 3, 1857, and died at her home in Bismarck, Mo., July 20, 1939, her husband having preceded her in death four years ago.

She was the mother of six children, three boys and three girls, the girls being triplets. Of her immediate family, she leaves surviving two sons: Samuel of near Belgrade, Mo., and Elija of Bismarck.

Mother Sutterfield, as she was familiarly known by her friends, was a staunch member of the Church of God, known as the Blush Church near Fredericktown, Mo. She was a hard-working, self-sacrificing, kind, whole-hearted Christian woman. The high esteem in which this plain good woman was held was evidenced by the mass of neighbors and citizens of the community in which she lived, which not only filled to overflowing the commodious funeral parlors where memorial services were held, but followed her to the silentity of the dead, where she now rests and awaits the coming of the Lord she loved and served in life.

Gleanings From the Field

On Thursday, July 27, Bro. C. E. Randall and the editor took the Bible Training Class to Field Museum and other places of interest in Chicago. All report an enjoyable and profitable time. An official guide led the tour at the museum.

The first to arrive for Conference and Bible School are: Ida Vogel of St. Louis, Mo., Bro. and Sr. Lyle Rankin and son, and Bro. Chadbourne of Cashmere, Wash.

Many choice articles were prepared for this issue by the Training School students, but we could not publish all. Others will be used from time to time.

By the time you read these lines Conference will be in session. The outlook is for a good meeting.

T. E. Bremer of St. Cloud, Minn., was recently baptized, following a series of meetings conducted by Bro. F. L. Austin.

Special appreciation has been expressed for Bro. Vivian Kirkpatrick's recent article, "Hast Thou Faith?"

Sisters Leila Whitehead, Evelyn Austin, and Virtie Sitler visited shortly at the Tuttle home in Geneva, Ohio, when they were en route to the Virginia Conference.

Bro. Verd Thoms is serving as temporary paster of the St. Cloud, Minn., church.

A Sunday school picnic was held by the Oregon, Ill., congregation on Saturday, July 29, at the Ben Carpenter farm.

Ida Geisman of the Oregon, Ill., congregation was baptized July 24 in Rock River. May God richly bless her in the new life.

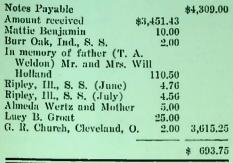

In The Herald of July 4, in a report from the Pennellwood Church of God in Grand Rapids, Mich., Mrs. Vern Norris was listed as one having been recently baptized. It should have been Mr. Vern Norris. Mrs. Norris has been an active member for several years.

Bro. and Sr. Leland Hanson of Leaf River, Ill., who have been vacationing in the West. returned home July 26. While we were glad they could go on such a delightful trip, we were equally glad to see them safely returned.

"Just a few lines to let the National Bible Institution know how much we here appreciate the larger type that is now used in printing The Restitution Herald."—Florence E. Tuttle, Geneva, Ohjo.

Bros. Arthur Johnson and John Mercer delivered sermonettes at the midweek meeting of the Oregon, Ill., church, July 26.

PARABLE OF THE TALENTS

By Laura McInturff

THE kingdom of heaven is compared to a man who went into a far country Before going, he called his servants to him and delivered his goods to them. To one he gave five talents, to another two talents, and to another one. He immediately started on his journey, and stayed a long time.

When he returned he reckoned with his servants in regard to the use each had made of his talents. The one to whom he had delivered the five talents had gained five other talents; likewise, the one to whom he had delivered the two talents had also gained two other talents; but the one to whom he had delivered the one talent went and buried in the earth that which the Lord had given him. This parable can be used as a comparison, as to the use we make of our own lives.

Each Christian is the possessor of one or more talents. The Lord expects each one to use the talent or talents which He has given him. We may use our talents either for good or for bad, God giving us our choice as to the use we make of them. To be sure, God greatly prefers us to be the faithful or profitable servant.

We, ourselves, are responsible as to the use we make of our talents or lives. Should any one of us be the possessor of the five talents, let us strive to use our lives in such a way as to gain five other talents. Likewise, should we be possessors of the two talents, we should strive to live lives so as to gain two other talents, and thus be profitable servants. If we possess only the one talent, let us not be as the one-talented servant spoken of in the parable. Let us not hide or bury that which we have, but let us earnestly strive to use that one talent in such a way as to add, at least, one more talent.

In thus doing, we may prove ourselves profitable servants for our Lord, and may hope to be in His favor, rather than in His displeasure and be cast into outer darkness where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Let all strive to be profitable servants in our Master's service.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Psalm 119:105).

GOD'S LIGHTS

By Walter Wiggins

"IN THE beginning God created the heaven and the earth." There were six creation days, or period's, of time, and on the fourth day God created the sun and moon. The sun was to govern the day, and the moon to rule the night.

The sun is a very bright light. We cannot understand how it burns from day to day for countless centuries, yet never burns up. It gets no hotter or colder. Scientists say it will yet last for millions of years. The sun's rays are necessary for life, both plant and animal.

The moon has no light within itself. It is only a reflector of light from the sun, and its light varies in proportion to the extent of the earth's shadow cast upon it. This creation period has a beautiful picture in it. The six days represent the six (one-thousand-year) periods of time. Christ, who is the Light of the world, was created on the fourth day (four thousand years after Adam). He is called the Sun of Righteousness. The church reflects the light of Christ to the world which is in darkness, and the more the world comes between the church and Christ, the less light is reflected by the church.

GOSSIP

By James A. Patrick

HAVE been much perturbed by something that was told me not long ago. I was told that the good influence of the General Conference was spoiled for some because of the gossip that was carried over the Conference grounds. The one who told me said, "You are one of the older ones, why don't you say something about it?"

Yes, I am one of the older ones. I was one of the committee of ten who worked for about a year to perfect an outline so that the Conference could be organized. I was its first president, and it has been dear to my heart ever since it was organized. I surely do not want anything to happen that will detract from its good influence.

Solomon says of a virtuous woman, "Who can find a virtuous woman? her price is far above rubies" (Prov. 31:8). Then in verse 26 he says, "She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness."

Virtue has many meanings. We generally think of virtue as moral excellence, and abstinence from vice. Christ knew at one time that virtue had gone out of Him.

In Solomon's laudation of a virtuous woman, one of the points of her virtue was, "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness."

It is the height of unkindness and folly to speak unkindly about anyone, even if the things said are true. We are not virtuous to the extent that we speak unkindly of another.

Some people say they can't remember the Bible. But they can remember all the gossip they hear, and peddle it to everyone they see and send word to those they don't see. H. L. Hastings once said that if he had a barn that would hold nothing but thorns and thistles, he would tear it down and build one that would hold wheat. He told this to illustrate the thought I am trying to bring to you.

If we know someone has done a wrong, what should we do? Tell everyone we see? Not at all. Follow the Bible rule: "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted" (Gal. 6:1). We ought to know that we cannot restore a brother by talebearing.

It will be noticed that "ye which are spiritual" are the ones to restore the erring brother, and if we do not do as God has commanded us we are admitting to Him that we are not spiritual.

This is a very serious question. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of him," and, "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" (Rom. 8:9, 14). If we have not the Spirit of Christ, and are not led by the Spirit of God, we do not belong to Christ and are not the children of God. Then, of course, we will have no part in God's glorious kingdom. Isn't that a very serious matter? If eternal life is worth anything, it is worth everything; if it is worth any sacrifice, it is worth every sacrifice we are called upon to make.

We are told to "reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine." The art of reproving, rebuking, and exhorting seems to be a lost one in this day and age.

"The words of a talebearer are as wounds, and they go down into the innermost parts" (Prov. 18:8).

Suppose some innocent girl inadvertently does something that some prude thinks is unbecoming a lady. What does the prude do? Does she go to the girl and kindly tell her where she thinks she has been wrong? O, no, that would spoil the opportunity to roll some sweet morsel of scandal under her tongue. So she goes and tells several others, and thus the story spreads. As it spreads it becomes blacker and blacker, until when it finally gets back to the girl she is horrified, and often a young life is ruined. "The words of a talebearer are as wounds, and they go down into the innermost parts." Yes, they are like dagger thrusts, and often do more harm, for the dagger can only take this mortal life, but the talebearer's words may destroy one's eternal life.

There is a way that those who do not like to hear gossip can stop it. Paul gives a rule in 1 Timothy 4:7, where he says, "Refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself unto godliness."

In Paul's time young people were seen and not heard, but today many young people can be heard before they are seen. If a Paul of today were writing to a Timothy of today he could well say, "Refuse profane and old and young wives' fables." The primary meaning of the word "fables" is "talk." So if we want to stop the gossip that goes the rounds of the Conference grounds, refuse to listen to it. If someone comes to you with a story that is to the detriment of some other, ask the talebearer if he has tried to restore the one about whom he is talking.

Our late beloved Brother Henry Dingman of Minnesota used to say that the reason we do not go to others and tell them of their faults is because we are afraid they will say, "Well, you are doing the same thing." Brother Dingman would then say, "Then tell them, 'Let us both quit.'

The Essence of Charity

By L. E. Conner

CHARITY is the most important quality in life. It should dominate the lives of all. This thought is found in 1 Corinthians 13.

The word "charity" is preferred over "love" because when one says or thinks of love it is so commonly thought of as conjugal. The love spoken of in the Bible has no conjugality in it.

In 1 Corinthians 12 we read of various gifts: healing, prophecy, tongues, and miracles. If we do not have charity these gifts avail us nothing. One must have this greatest quality before he has other gifts if he is to do the Lord's work. Charity is the "more excellent way."

"Though I speak with the tongues of men" so that all men could understand me, if I do not have love, it is simply a noise to the Lord. Integrity, sincerity, and love for the Lord's work affects the results, either favorably or unfavorably.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." Gifts are not the essence of love.

What does charity mean? If it is more important than all these gifts, and without which the use of all other gifts is nothing, we should clarify the meaning. It is that quality in man which causes him to think more favorably of his fellow men and the placing of the best possible construction on the doings and sayings of others. In other words, it is that quality that causes a fond mother to make excuses for her children's faults. In other words, it is that kind of love for each other that is practiced by most wives, husbands, sons, and daughters when something goes wrong. In true love there is claimed some reason or influence that caused the other to do that wrong.

Love is the greatest commandment ever given. It is the greatest rule of life. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets" (Matt. 22: 37-40). First love God and then thy neighbor. A companion verse to these two commandments is: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matt. 7:12).

1 Corinthians 13 deals with an ideal character. "Charity suffereth long, and is kind." This chapter teaches charity instead of selfishness. "Charity vaunteth not itself"—it keeps us humble. In our dealings with other people we should be tolerant. Give a person credit for the work that he is capable of doing. Thus by being kind we are drawn together instead of driven apart.

When we go into a home and see someone who is grouchy, and who always complains, it is easy to see that he is lacking in the greatest quality of this life. Our Lord suffered for us, and did it with love in His heart. Love is the quality that makes men and women of God.

Conduct is also mentioned in this chapter. When we go into a home where obscene language is used, we see there is a lack of love for the family. Innocent children should not be shamed with foul language. By refraining from bad and questionable conduct we can make men see the real love of our Lord and Savior, instead of conjugal love. Paul the Apostle is speaking of the deeper love in this chapter. What is more (Please turn to page 11)

BLACK HAWK

On the Rock River bluffs above Oregon, Illinois, stands the famous monument of Black Hawk. He is erect, stalwart, serene. His face is not haughty or conceited, but convincingly positive. Overlooking his lost home, he seems to challenge: "White man steal Indian's soil; no steal Indian's soul"; and that savage determination is set in stone. Though driven from his beautiful and productive valley, his lofty position and his kingly poise almost haunt one into respect. The stolid Indian stands!

Winter's ripping blasts and summer's crumbling rays have no perceptible effect upon Black Hawk, except as they magnify his unchangeable expression. Threatening winds must bend, and it is the rain that is dashed to pieces, not Black Hawk. There he stands in stone. There will he stand a hundred years from now.

"I SET MY FACE LIKE A FLINT"

Isaiah prophesied of Jesus, "I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting. For the Lord God will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded: therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed."

How lofty and stalwart was Jesus. The elements of a vicious world could not daunt His spirit. He was homeless, forsaken of friends, whipped, and nailed; but Jesus was never conquered. His compassion for sinners was not turned to scorn when sinners threw the stones at Him. He gave His back to the smiters, endured the cross, and on the cross He prayed for those who put Him there. With right and truth and God as guides, Jesus of Nazareth set His face like a flint. He is the Rock. Not only for a century, but this Rock will never crumble or fail!

Like Jesus, every member of the Church of God must wholly give himself to service. Fling off the rags of "foolish talking (and) jesting" (Eph. 5:4). "Be sober." Put your hand to the plow (Luke 9:62). Set your face "like a flint." "Endure afflictions."

"THE WORK IS GREAT"

The work of Nehemiah and many of Israel in rebuilding Jerusalem's wall was play if compared to the evangelization of the world. What, dear brethren of the Church of God, did Jesus mean when He said, "Go ye"? Did Jesus mean that the world should fill our empty pews because we open our church doors and press electric light buttons? What did "Go ye" mean to mighty Paul? "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion."

What did Jesus mean when He commissioned His disciples to go into "all the world"? Surely He included America, though at that time America was the foreign field. But is it not inconsistent with the missionary command and spirit which brought Christianity to America for the Church of God to now beg off from her responsibility of world-wide evangelism? That it may appear hard to get much or anything accomplished is of no consideration. "God giveth the increase." Irrespective of visible results, the command of Jesus is: "Go ye into all the world." The loving Savior, the great Physician, knows exactly what the Church of God needs. He has written the prescription. Shall we die?

"LET THINE EYES LOOK RIGHT ON"

The outlook for progressive work by the Church of God is the best it has been for years. To this all are agreed. The youth of the Church of God are demanding a permanent Bible Training School. If it is not given to them within the near future the young people of the church will rise up and start one. Wisdom should lead the way when zeal and courage cry for action.

With the training of youth for public service will come more public service accomplished, our horizons will clear up and enlarge. True, home missionary work is most important; but as we really look ahead and work ahead in what we know to be right we shall see farther and farther, until we discover that Jesus knew best, that there are blessings throughout the world for those who "Go." Church of God, "Let thine eyes look right on."

Evangelism

By Evangelist J. W. McLain

THE words "gospel," "glad tidings," "good news," "evangelism," and "evangelist" all spring from the Greek term composed of two thoughts: eu, meaning well, good, or glad; and aggelos, (pronounced "angel," hence the angel of the church, or messenger) meaning messenger, speaker, or proclaimer, as well as meaning the message or tidings spoken.

The above study makes it clear to us that "the gospel," "evangelism," and "evangelist" are inseparable terms. Hence, anyone who teaches the gospel is, strictly speaking, an evangelist. Also, it is imperative that to be an evangelist, the speaker's message must be that of good news, the gospel.

That the work of calling out a people for the name of God might be administered properly God "gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers" (Eph. 4:11). In this statement we see that God has made the distinction of terms concerning the various fields of endeavor in carrying out His work. Especially notice that there is a distinction between evangelists and pastors. The word "pastor" might properly be translated "shepherd."

There is a lost field of endeavor in our denominational work because people in general have lost their grasp of the significance of the original meaning of evangelism.

It is possible that one man might be both pastor and an evangelist. In fact, every pastor ought to evangelize to a great degree. However, the work of the pastor is, primarily, the work of leadership by patient teaching and example. Generally speaking, the pastor is resident where his leadership may be constantly exercised. Poorly led and fed is the flock whose minister is seldom in touch with the members. The pastor is the shepherd under the direction of the Great Shepherd.

The evangelist must have one objective in life, the proclaiming of the good news of the kingdom of God in a way that people will forsake sin and turn to the new life. This sort of effort requires a different verbal attack than is needed in developing a people in faith who have already started the way of Christ.

Primarily, the evangelist and his campaign is to win new ones, beginners, babes through the gospel. The pastor then carries on the work of leading, building, teaching, until his flock may attain the fulness of Christ's stature.

The method of evangelizing has of necessity changed in a degree. Whereas at one time it was possible to obtain schoolhouses and other public buildings for such campaigns, it is very difficult to obtain those advantages at the present. It is possible to rent halls, but this requires financial backing. Few evangelists have the financial support necessary to go into new fields and obtain meeting places in this fashion. The only entry we have into new places when hindered by lack of finances, is to work through isolated families who are willing to cooperate by opening their homes to public gatherings or by using their influence to obtain public meeting places.

The means of carrying on missionary work at the present time is by campaign conducted in the church building of an established work. It is true that this does not lead us out into new communities, but it does give opportunity to glean a few at a time in those places. Whenever the people at large get a right perspective of what constitutes evangelism in the missionary sense, they will rally to the support of such a program, and make it possible to launch out into new communities by providing the means to obtain places to hold evangelistic campaigns.

A people's idea of evangelism will correspond exactly to that kind of evangelism that is promoted by their leaders. If the evangelistic program does not include definite campaigns of protracted meetings for the winning of people to Christ, if that program does not intend to reach out into new fields, if that program is meant only to supply speaking service in a number of churches, then we may not be surprised if it is hard to get our people enthused over evangelism.

Paul gave a good example of the ideal way of evangelizing with all its attendant hardships and privations. He launched out into new fields, establishing churches and ordaining leaders to carry on the established work. He spent the time necessary to accomplish his goal in each place. At one time he stayed two whole years in his own hired house, teaching the things of the kingdom of God. He was several months at one place. In each instance he stayed on the job until the work was established. This puts us to shame sometimes, when we put forth such feeble efforts in missionary evangelism, considering our work vain if we don't have (Please turn to page 11)

The Nature of the Natural Man

By S. G. Elton

ALL scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17). "But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Cor. 2:14).

"I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beasts. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast: for all is vanity" (Eccl. 3:18, 19).

"God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth" (Gen. 1:26). "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). The man that God formed of the dust of the ground was a perfect piece of workmanship; but was without consciousness or power to act, until a supplementary creation formed the spirit of life within the man (see Zech. 12:1), then the man became a living creature, and the spirit a continuous process; the same process by which all animals are living creatures.

"The Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen. 2:15-17).

"Out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air; and brought them unto Adam to see what he would call them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof. And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for Adam there was not found an help meet for him" (that is, not found a female animal that was acceptable). "And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept: and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man" (Gen. 2:19-23). The significance of this remark will be considered later.

"So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Gen. 1: 27, 28).

From the record given by Moses, it appears that man was created in the same period that the animals were created, and for the purpose of exercising authority over the whole animal creation. In order to perfectly administer that authority it was necessary for him to be endowed with the spirit of the animal nature. Therefore, Moses regarded the man as being more intelligent than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made, but Paul teaches in 1 Corinthians 15:44 that there is a body of the animal life, and there is a body of the Spirit. So, also, Adam, the first man, was made a living soul; the second Adam became a quickening spirit. And the spiritual was not first, but the animal, and then the spiritual. The first man was of dust from the earth; the second man was the Lord from heaven.

We are now considering the man from the earth, whom Moses designated as a serpent: "He said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did cat and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked" (Gen. 3:1-7). Adam and Eve had then become conscious of their animal nature with its emotions, a sense of shame overpowered them, and they sought to hide themselves from the sight of God.

Moses has given us, in Genesis 3, a vivid picture as to how and by whom sin entered into the world, with death as its finale. The first man, Adam, was the medium or agency by which sin entered: and the spirit of life in the man was the directing force. The Apostle Paul recognized that force, which he describes in Romans 7:15-17, saying, "For that which I do I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good. Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Paul possessed the power of resistance, which Adam might have had if he had eaten of the tree of life.

"And the Lord God said unto the serpent, Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and (Please turn to page 9)

Should Family Worship Be Practiced in Church of God Homes

By Rowena Randall

In enthusiasm for converting the heathen and non-Christians, many people don't seem to realize that the greatest opportunity for evangelism is right in their own homes. One way to build the Church of God is by Christians teaching the Bible to their children. It is not only an opportunity, but it is a duty that parents teach their children about God and His truths. God required the Israelites to do just that (Deut. 4:9, 10), and I believe He expects the same of us.

The best way to do this is by having family worship in the home. Children learn to do things by imitating others. If they see their parents in a reverent and worshipful attitude meditating on God's Word, and are allowed to take part in the worship, they, too, will learn to meditate on God's Word. Some people think it is enough to send their children to Sunday school, but it is in the home where the foundation of character is laid. The time spent in church is very small when compared to the time spent in the home. Therefore, the Sunday school should not be depended upon to build strong Christian character without training in the home for a foundation.

The strength of the Church of God must be measured by the spirituality of its members. It cannot be active if its members are not active. Jesus said, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). This means that man needs spiritual food for strength to do God's will and to carry on His work. In 2 Timothy 2:15 the Apostle Paul says, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Much spiritual food can be obtained for every member of the family by having family worship, and it will make all want to tell the gospel to others. If a whole church were filled with people like this, what is there that it could not accomplish?

Family worship draws a family closer to God. It also draws the members of the family closer to each other. It strengthens the ties of love and fellowship in the home. It teaches forgiveness.

In many homes the devotional is held in the morning, because it starts the day out right and guides and directs the activities of the day. I have in mind a family that has a devotional service every morning at the breakfast table. One morning this family was in too much of a hurry, so the different members went off to their daily tasks without it. It seemed to them that everything they did that day went wrong. Their whole day was topsy-turvy, because they started it off wrong.

I think of the Church of God as being one large family. The relationships between the members of the church are very much like they are in the home. We even call ourselves brothers and sisters in the faith. The family in the home is really the foundation of the church. If there are love and peace in the church members' homes, we can expect to find love and peace in the church. If there are strife and divisions in the homes, there will probably be strife and divisions in the church. This means that our home life is reflected in our church life. So if our home life is influenced for good by family worship, family worship must also have a good influence on our church life.

I believe that family worship should be practiced in Church of God homes because it helps us to better serve God by strengthening and sustaining our church, our homes, and each one of us.

The Jews As a Nation

Their Present—Article 2

By Delbert Jones

MAY I ask, before I start this discussion, Who really owns Palestine? There are three parties involved in the claim to it. In the first place, the British claim it as a result of the World War; the Arabs say that it is really theirs, as they have occupied it for centuries; while the Jews claim it, as it was given to them by God centuries ago. Of these groups, whom do you think should have the land? A short while ago, England offered to divide it into three parts: one part was to go to the Arabs; one part for the Jews; and the third section was to go to England. It did not go through, as both the Jews and Arabs objected most strenuously.

The Jews have no homeland as we speak of homelands today. That is, they don't have a country in their name; they don't have their own laws and ruler. But since Palestine was their homeland before they were taken captive and scattered, and since God gave it to them for an everlasting possession, I am going to speak of it as their home.

Palestine Is Being Rebuilt

The city of Jaffa is mostly Arab in population, although many Jews lived there a few years ago. The Arabs started an intense campaign against them which ended in various riots. In one of these outbreaks, forty-two Jews were killed. They began to realize that they couldn't live there, and started moving to Tel Aviv.

Thirty years ago Tel Aviv was nothing but a group of sand dunes, and very few people lived there. Before the World War it was under the control of the Turks. During this battle of the nations, the Turks closed all of the schools of the city and forced the Jews to flee into the surrounding forests. This didn't stop them from holding their school, though, as they had open-air classes. By 1935 the city had attained 125,000 population, and today it is the only "all Jewish city" in the world. It has Jewish laws, Jewish laborers of all kinds, and Jewish officers.

Jerusalem

Jerusalem is another city which is rapidly being filled with Jews. It has a population of over 100,000. They have all of the conveniences of our modern times.

The land is increasing in value until it is simply astounding. For example, a certain person purchased a piece of property for $45,000 about three years ago. He was recently offered the enormous increase price of $145,000 for it.

Jerusalem's water supply has been a major problem ever since the city was built. The town is located on a very high hill, and there are no springs or wells that could even begin to supply the water. Because of this, the water had to be carried up from the valleys, but as a result of the city's phenomenal growth even this wasn't adequate. Thirty-cight miles from the city there is a place called Ras-el-Ain which has many small springs which are now being harnessed and pumped into a large pipe line which leads to the city.

The electric lights are another new feature of Jerusalem. Up until 1929 all that they used were oil lamps and candles, while today they have at least forty-three miles of electric lines with six thousand consumers.

Haifa

Haifa is also growing by leaps and bounds. It is, today, one of the main seaports on the Mediterranean Sea, and the industrial center of Palestine. It has the one and only wharf which was built by the people of the city, and not by the government.

The Wealth of Palestine

Joshua drew lots after he had conquered Canaan, and thus divided the land among the Twelve Tribes. Asher received land along the coast of the Mediterranean Sea which was shaped like the limb and foot of a human being. The Bible, in Deuteronomy 33:24, says of Asher, "Let Asher be blessed with children; let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him dip his foot in oil." Has this been fulfilled? Haifa is situated in the "foot," and since the new pipe line has been built she receives a million gallons of oil a day.

Salt

Another thing that adds greatly to the wealth of Palestine is the newly founded salt industry. There is a mountain, supposedly near the former site of Sodom and Gomorrah, which is three miles wide, six miles long, and one thousand feet high. Under a crust, which is from three to six feet in depth, there is a solid base of ninety-eight per cent pure salt.

Oranges

Another of the money-making industries of Palestine is the orange industry along the Mediterranean Sea, especially near Jaffa. For many years this land was nothing but desolate sand dunes, but due to the Agricultural Experiment Station it has developed into great orange orchards. Many of the oranges grow as large as grapefruit, and are much sweeter than any others in the world. In one year they shipped out seven million crates.

Dead Sea

Until recently, men considered the Dead Sea "dead' as far as worth was concerned. A Jewish scientist spent years analyzing it for chemical value. He became convinced that there was great wealth in it in the form of potash and bromine. Major Tullock reported in the Jew ish Daily Bulletin: "From time immemorial the Dead Sea has been a synonym for all that is uscless and unprofitable. Travelers' tales have made it out to be a spot where the climate was unbearable and deadly, and where it was impossible for human beings to live. All of these tales have been proved to be entirely false. The Dead Sea today is a thing of life, pulsating with health, and conferring benefits on thousands of human beings. . . . The principal use of potash (the Dead Sca is especially rich in this) is in connection with so-called fertilizers, for ne vegetation, and consequently no animal, life can exist without it. . . . If no other potash was used the quantity existing in the Dead Sca would last for over two thousand years. . . . It is also used in anti-knock gasoline."

Major Tullock claims that the Dead Sea is healthful, instead of harmful, especially for rheumatism and similar ailments.

Land Improvement

Land improvement is carried on by the Agricultural Experiment Station. Each farmer sends samples of his land to the station. Experts go over it chemically, and send back a report which tells him what would be the best kind of crops to raise on it, and what fertilizers are needed to make them grow the best. Another of the main duties of the Station is to experiment with fruits and field crops, to introduce new strains in them and to improve them for their land. All of the information that they gather is sent out to the farmers.

The method that is used in combatting the insects is another interesting duty. The Jews have introduced an entirely new method. Instead of spraying or poisoning as we do, they breed good insects to eat the bad kinds.

Jewish Agency

It is because of this agency that so many people have moved to Palestine. It gathers money from all parts of the world, and loans it to other Jews. They use it to buy land, homes, and farm equipment.

Condition of Palestine Today

In the annual report that the British Government made to the League of Nations, it was said, "There is a constantly flowing stream of men and money; new industries are being established; citri-culture is expanding; new settlements are springing up; towns are being enlarged by suburb after suburb."

Today, Palestine has over 400,000 Jews living there. While the rest of the world worries about national debts, and how much longer the nations can keep from going bankrupt, Palestine keeps on watching her steadily growing surplus reach new highs, now over $30,000,000.

"The wastes shall be builded. And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desoate in the sight of all that passed by. And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden" (Ezek. 36:33-35). I am sure that this is being said of Palestine today. Men have reclaimed the Dead Sea, the oranges are growing on the former sand dunes, they are growing crops on land that was barren, and the cities that had been dormant for centuries are being rebuilt.

Prophecies That Have Been Fulfilled Tyre

"Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus. . . . And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers; I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock. It shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea. . . . And they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water. . . . Thou shalt be built no more: for the Lord hath spoken it, saith the Lord God" (Ezek. 26:3-5, 12, 14).

Tyre was one of the strongest cities of the world. Her merchants traded with all of the known people for centuries. But, as a result of sins and disbelief in God, He issued this statement against them.

Then came the beginning of Tyre's fall. Nebuchadnezzar, who was the king of Babylon, besieged it for thirteen years. He had expected many riches, but received none, as the Jews had moved them to an island in the Sea. As a result of the siege, all of the walls and towers were broken down, which completed part of the prophecy.

For two hundred forty years there was no sign as to when the rest of the prophecy would be fulfilled, but it was certain to come. Alexander the Great went toward the east and conquered everything in his wake. He arrived at the island city, Tyre, and called for the citizens to open the gates and let him enter. As they felt safe from him a mile and a half out in the sea on their island, they refused. This wasn't to stop Alexander from getting the riches and glory. He took all of the stones, timber, and dirt from the old Tyre, and threw them into the sea; marched his army over them, and captured the newer Tyre.

The last part of the prophecy was fulfilled as the sands of the sea drifted over the stones and made a peninsula out of the stones. In the present day, the fishermen stand on these stones and wash their nets in the Sea.

Will the Church of God Stand?

By Emily Fyfe

A S A CHURCH we realize that we are in the last part of the dark night of sin, that soon the great "Sun of Righteousness" will come to reward His faithful servants. Knowing we are nearing the end of this age, let us "fight the good fight of faith." If we are to teach others the "glad tidings of the kingdom of God," it is very necessary we carry the "good news" in a way that people will be anxious to hear and ready to accept this saving gospel. You may ask, Did our former Bible Training Schools pay in the way of trained church workers?

Let us consider a few of those who have attended our Bible Training Schools in years gone by. The class of last summer comes first in view.

Bro. John Mercer of Macomb, Illinois, can be highly commended for the services he is so faithfully rendering in his home church by filling the pulpit. Besides, you have read his articles in The Restitution Herald.

Brother Leslie LeCrone has delivered sermons in Minnesota and Kansas.

Sr. Mary Newell not only teaches a Sunday school class in the Southlawn Park Church in Grand Rapids, Michigan, but also raises her voice in praise to the Lord as she sings in the choir.

Sister Frances Munshaw, now treasurer of the National Berean Society, teaches a Sunday school class, and is working with the Berean Social Correspondence Committee.

Brother Leslie Niles, another member of the Berean Social Correspondence Committee, has taught a Sunday school class, and helped with other work in the church, being secretary.

Reports of Brother Earl Friend baptizing one into Christ brings those of like precious faith great joy. I hear that in Arkansas City, Kansas, he has organized a Bible Searchers' Class.

Brother Delbert Jones is Sunday school superintendent, State Berean president for Iowa, and has contributed to The Restitution Herald.

On some occasions Brother Harold Hardesty has filled the pulpit in Oregon, Illinois. He teaches a Berean class, and sings in the choir. In the March 7th Restitution Herald his article, "The Nature of the Human Soul," appeared on the front page. The editor acclaims it one of the best articles he has published.

Sister Lorna Macy is leading a Sunday school class of children in the "strait and narrow path." Sister Bernedene Macy is leader in a young people's class, and an assistant Sunday school teacher.

In Eldorado, Illinois, Brother Walter Wiggins is Sunday school superintendent, and teaches advanced young people.

Brother Harry Goekler, a member also of a former Training School here, is pastor of two churches in sunny Louisiana, is president of the National Berean Society, works with the Berean Correspondence Committee, and has charge of the Sunday school hour of the Bible School this year.

Another from Louisiana is Brother Vernon Lobell. He teaches a young people's class, and is president of a local Berean society.

Brother Alfred Anthon has written for The Restitution Herald, and, feeling the great benefit from last year's class, he assisted a student in coming this year.

Sister Margaret Mattison assisted Brother S. J. Lindsay, her grandfather, in four weeks of meetings in different churches the past summer. She teaches a Sunday school class, Berean class, and plays the piano for some of the services in her home church.

Now, as I don't know about the other members of last summer, let us see what those of former years are doing.

The Illinois State Evangelist for the past year has been Brother Harvey U. Krogh, Jr. He is a former pastor of the Ripley, Illinois, church, teacher in Illinois Bible School, and will soon fill the pastorate at the Brush Creek Church in Ohio.

Brother C. E. Lapp, also a former pastor of the Ripley, Illinois, church, has for several years pleasingly and faithfully served the St. Cloud, Minnesota, church.

For about six years Brother C. A. Smead has been pastor at Blanchard, Michigan. For two years, and until he retired, was editor of the Berean page in The Restitution Herald.

Another former editor of the Berean page is Brother Arlen Marsh, who was also assistant treasurer of the National Bible Institution.

The Berean editor who so cheerfully served this closing year is Brother Gerald L. Cooper of Eden Valley, Minnesota, where he is so much liked as their pastor.

Minnesota is an active state. Brother John Denchfield is State evangelist, president of the State Conference. He is a good worker with young people, has been pastor at Eden Valley and St. Cloud, Minnesota, and Koszta and Maxwell, Iowa.

Sister Lucille LeCrone Appleby has labored as pastor of the Arkansas City, Kansas, church.

Brother Paul C. Johnson, associate editor of The Restitution Herald and successful Sunday school superintendent, has kept these places well filled for many years.

Some of those of like precious faith have listened to the "precious truths" as Brother Paul M. Hatch has ministered in Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, and New York. From his pen come many interesting articles for The Herald.

In Iowa we find Brother J. Arthur Johnson, where he teaches a Sunday school class.

Brother Harry Sheets was for years pastor of the Virginia churches.

The Brush Creck Church near Dayton, Ohio, had for a while Brother M. W. Lyon as pastor. Now he is pastor of Golden Rule Church in Cleveland, Ohio.

For many years Brother Grover Gordon was loved as he faithfully labored with the church in Holbrook, Nebraska. Last year he was called to Lawrenceville, Ohio, where as pastor he labors for the Master.

Sister Ednah Cooper is a faithful member of her church, helping in many ways.

Sr. Esta Lansbery Starbuck has been treasurer of the National Berean Society, secretary of the Illinois Conference, and secretary of the Rockford, Illinois, church.

In Virginia Brother Richard LeCrone is pastor of the churches. He and many of the others not mentioned write for our church paper.

As you pause and think of these members of former Training Schools, surely you will realize the Schools were a success. Consider the churches which do not have regular pastors and the many other pulpits where aged men whom we hold in such high esteem labor in His service. You will realize that some arc in the "sunset of life." Soon they will rest from their labors; either others will have to fill their places, or the Church of God shall fall.

If the church for which our fathers fought so faithfully is to stand, we must have trained workers. God planned all things to be done in a becoming manner, and in order. Turn with me to 1 Corinthians 14:40. There we read, "Let all things be done decently and in order."

May each of us better understand the pressing need of a Training School, so as to keep the "lower lights" burning as we see the day approaching.

"I AM WITH YOU"

Just so far as the Church of God proclaims Christ's message, and in other ways occupies until He returns, will the Church of God stand. Jesus commanded, "Go ye," and then added, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," but idleness deserves no blessing.

FAITH, BAPTISM, AND EVANGELISM

By Elwyn Stilson

BEFORE anyone can become a Christian he must have faith and be baptized. The first great step is, of course, faith. Before there can be faith there must be something in which to have faith. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Our salvation is based largely upon that little word "faith." "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

Then comes the greatest step, baptism. When one takes the baptismal vows he wholly gives himself over to God and Jesus Christ. Baptism is not merely a way by which we are absolutely saved. No! No! Baptism is the beginning of a great experience, and not, as some think, the end of things. As I write, I think of an example: A girl in our community came regularly to church for a month or more. She then requested baptism. Of course, she believed that Jesus was the Son of God, etc. The meaning of baptism to her was the way by which she could escape judgment in the last days, and still she could go on loving the world as she always had. Oh! What a mistake! We learn in the Scriptures that "faith without works is dead." This further proves that baptism is not the end, only the beginning.

Evangelism is a way by which we can hold steadfastly to the faith, and show others God's truths. Though we cannot make people believe, we can show them the truth. Yes, I believe that my life has three guiding factors: faith, baptism, and evangelism.

THE NATURE OF THE NATURAL MAN

above every beast of the field: upon thy belly shalt thou go, and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life" (Gen. 3:14), which means that all nourishment, by which animal life is sustained, must come from the herbs, fruits, and vegetables that grow out of the dust of the earth; and are prepared for assimilation into the blood, by means of the digestive organs of the body. "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed, it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel" (v. 15). When God created man in his own image, "male and female created he them"; and the oneness that was established between them in the garden was disrupted when the male yielded himself into the power of sin, in opposition to God; for which his span of life was limited to a few short years.

When the Lord God gave command to the man in the Garden of Eden concerning the fruits of the various trees,

His words were directed at the man that was formed of the dust of the ground. When the first pair, the male and the female, stood before Him, He blessed them, and said unto them, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth," for in the loins of the pair reposed the two seeds that should fulfill His word. But before any fruit had appeared, the command given to the man in the Garden had been violated, and the man was made subject to mortality; for God had said, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die."

Technically speaking, it was the spirit that was formed within the man which caused him to become a living soul; for lust had been quickened into consciousness, and then into action; which brought forth death, or mortality. "When lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death" (James 1:15). Because mortality was imposed upon the seed of the first man, mortality has prevailed in the seed of all men; for the life of man is in the blood from which the seed emanates.

Adam called his wife's name Eve, because she was the mother of all living. Adam as a natural man could see only his own seed perpetuated for many generations, but could not see that woman would ever be the mother of a spiritual seed in whom all nations of the earth would be blessed; not because of sin, but because of righteousness. "Adam was first formed, then Eve. And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression" (1 Tim. 2:13). Yes, Adam being made first, and to whom the law was given for his own personal conduct, and being invested with authority over the inferior animals, should have been the leader in the direction of right, instead of deceiving the woman and involving her in the wrong to suffer for his duplicity.

"Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee" (Gen. 3:16). "Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety" (1 Tim. 2:15). The Apostle here refers especially to spiritual conception and birth, for without the woman and her seed spiritual conception and birth are impossible. (Sec 1 Cor. 7:4).

"Adam knew Eve his wife; and she conceived, and bare Cain, and said, I have gotten a man from the Lord. And she again bare his brother Abel" (Gen. 4:1, 2). In these two children we have the first-born of the natural flesh and blood offspring of the race of Adam. In Cain we have the cruel type of the animal, in Abel we have the gentle loving type of the spiritual. The first type was represented as a serpent, by whom sin entered into the world; the second represented the "Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." "Now this I say, brethren (to those of the Abel type), that flesh and blood (i.e., the Cain type) cannot inherit the kingdom of God: neither doth corruption (flesh and blood) inherit incorruption (the water of life and the Spirit of Christ)" (I Cor. 15:50). "But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of Christ dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his" (Rom. 8:9).

Listen to the words of Christ Himself: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again. That which is born of the flesh (the seed of the animal life) is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit (of Christ) is spirit." "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever. For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: but the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you" (1 Peter 1:23-25).

According to the universal rule, that the natural life should always precede the spiritual life, even we ourselves are no exception. Paul affirms the truth of this when he said to the church at Ephesus, "You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air (the spirit of life in man), the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others" (Eph. 2:1-3). "We ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another. But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, not by works of rightcousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour" (Titus 3:3-6).

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold all things are become new" (2 Cor. 5:17). "And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in his sight: if ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature which is under heaven" (Col. 1:21-23).

Dear reader, have you been made free from sin? Have you become reconciled to God, through faith in His Son?

EVANGELISM

phenomenal success in a few days' meeting.

Paul never lost interest in a work he started. His advice to the shepherds of the churches was, "Feed the church of God." His epistles to the churches and the leaders of the churches give evidence that Paul was concerned with the proper spiritual growth of the people he had won by his evangelism. He organized each work he started, that it might be self-sustaining.

Surely the harvest is ready, but where are the laborers? Surely there is a field for missionary evangelism, but who will go? We need workers who are trained and devoted to this cause of spreading the work of the kingdom. We need the unselfish interest of the established churches to make it possible that the word of the gospel may be spread to the farthest reaches of the earth. We need not rest until we have done our best and given our all toward the accomplishment of this objective. We have the Word of reconciliation. How may sinners be reconciled if they have not heard that Word?

Let's learn evangelism. Let's put it to work!

pleasant than to see a dignified man in his home, a man whom his children can respect? His children will rise up and call him blessed. Christ did not use obscene language; instead, He spoke words of encouragement, truth, and wisdom.

"Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away." Paul is not just comparing the life that is to the life that is to come. But he is speaking of us as we are in our selfish condition. It is really a contrast between the selfish and the kind of individual we would like to be.

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things." If you and I could come up to that high standard, and get away from childish things as the Lord Jesus Christ did, this world would be vastly different. Did it ever occur to you that the little child is the most selfish person in the world? You have a little child. You think everything of that child. You get it some playthings. Your neighbor has a child and brings it over. This child sees the playthings and starts to play with them. Your child immediately grabs for his own playthings. You know that that is a selfish principle. That is exactly what Paul means when he says, "I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child." Paul is comparing the selfish person to one who has developed charity and is perfecting himself.

"For now we see through a glass, darkly, but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." Most people think that the Apostle is referring here to our imperfection and lack of sight. He is speaking of something vastly more important. Paul is speaking of the difference between us when we see things darkly and when we become perfect in charity. "Then we shall see perfectly. Christian men or women who have developed this quality to a very high degree see one another with a remarkable understanding. They can overlook the mistakes of the other. It brings them together. Christians do not have to wait to literally see Christ face to face in order to understand Him.

Someone will ask, "Is it possible for us to develop into perfection the beautiful ideals that are held out before us?" Perfect harmony and unity make us to see face to face. It is wonderful to see face to face.

It wasn't because of similar natures, it wasn't because of God's uncorruptibleness that Jesus Christ developed that quality. When He communed with His Father They saw each other in Their true lights. God said, "This is my beloved Son." He has eliminated self and He loves all mankind. Through charity He is willing to sacrifice for all mankind. We should strive for that sacrificing love.

"And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." We are saved by faith, and without faith we are not justified. That gives a great deal of importance to faith and hope. We see that faith is the ground and foundation of things hoped for.

Hope is the foundation of the soul. Hope holds us to our moorings. Can anything be more important? "These three," faith, hope, and charity, are all to abide, but the greatest of these is charity. We are justified by faith, saved by faith; hope holds us to that faith; yet charity is the greatest—the greatest of these because it is the one with which we have so much to do. We violate the laws of love more than the laws of the other two. The sins of our life come to us because we fail to practice love. The satanic majesty rules many lives through the mission of love—love for the wrong. Our Lord and Master said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Because of true love we should help bear each other's burdens. Giving of our charity is more blessed than receiving.

Therefore, charity is the one quality in this life that means more than any other.

JUST AN ACCIDENT?

Following are several instances of things that have happened to people of my acquaintance, and in practically every case some have said, "Just an accident"; others have said that the hand of God intervened:

My car had taken to "shimmying" when it was driven at certain speeds. On examination we found that the steering gear had shaken loose until it had become dangerous to drive the car. In another fifty to one hundred miles it would have come off, causing me to completely lose control of the car. I thanked a kind heavenly Father for the discovery.

An entire family was returning from a trip when suddenly the car, which was pulling a heavy trailer, started for a ditch. The steering had become affected in some way, and the driver had no control of his car. Instead of turning over, the car merely slid down the embankment and came to rest between two electric light poles. The parties expressed thanks for the care they had received!

A lady was driving her car last week, and upon looking around discovered that her small son was attempting to shut one of the doors, which had not been tightly closed. She grabbed for him, and pulled him away just in time, still keeping her car in the road. I heard her express her thanks that God had been watching over her.

Yes, friends, God still takes care of His people. All of these instances that I have given you have concerned driving automobiles. He will watch over you in other ways, also. Never call a narrow escape from injury "just an accident." Attribute it to its actual Source—the hand of God.

GOD'S CALL TO YOUTH

By Mrs. Walter Skinner, St. Cloud, Minn.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them" (Eccl. 12:1).

Oh, that young people everywhere today would hear the call, and catch the vision of service to God! One of the scourges of our present-day civilization (?) is the wholesale patronage of beer parlors and other questionable places of amusement by the youth of our land.

God's work is not only for elderly people. Far from it! Read Paul's admonition to Timothy: "Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity" (1 Tim. 4:12).

In the Old Testament, too, we find many examples of zealous youthful workers, as, witness the story of Joseph, who answered the call to clean living. Joseph resisted evil in high places and in spite of temptation lived a clean, wholesome life. Would he have been found in a roadhouse? If he had been untrue, could God have later used him for the truly great things? You know the answer!

You are called to testimony: Read the story of the servant girl in captivity among strange people, and how, because of her witnessing for the Lord, the household in which she lived was freed from leprosy—a type of sin (2 Kings 5:1-9). If she had failed to speak, would she have been responsible for Naaman's death? (See Ezek. 3:18.) Would you, then, be responsible for the death (in sin) of a friend, if you failed to warn, admonish, to testify that God can keep him from sin?

You are called to service: Read once more the story of David and Goliath in 1 Samuel 17. Notice that David refused the armor (strength) of Saul (the world), and put on only the armor of God (faith) in dealing with the giant (sin).

You are called to knowledge: In the story of the four Hebrew youths, found in Daniel 1, read and ponder on the almost unlimited power given into the hands of these four. They were favored in a great nation because of their faithfulness and knowledge. Cannot the youth of today show as great a courage in refusing wine, or other forms of debauchery? Of course—if only they can say with the Psalmist, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Psalm 119:11).

Oh, youth of today, throw out the flimsy pleasures of a moment; study the Scriptures daily "to shew thyself approved unto God," then, armed with the knowledge of God's Word, go forth to conquer! "Fight the good fight of faith" for your own sake, for the sakes of your brethren, and always for Jesus' sake.

Lesson: 2 Kings 5:1-10, 14.

LITTLE THINGS COUNT

Naaman was a great Syrian captain, yet he was a leper.

A little girl had been captured from the land of Israel by this Syrian army. She waited upon the captain's wife. This captive maid told her mistress that she wished her master, the great captain, were with the prophet that was in Samaria, for she was sure he could cure her master of his leprosy.

Such a small testimony it was that was given by the little maid! Yet how great the results! Master Captain Naaman heard of the maiden's wish. His ruler, the king, told Naaman to go, and that he would send a letter to this king of Israel. Evidently, the Syrian king thought it was the king, not the prophet, who could heal.

When the messengers came before King Jehoram, he said, "Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that the man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy?" He thought the king of Syria was trying to start a quarrel with him.

The Prophet Elisha heard of the king's fears, so he sent word to the king and asked, "Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel."

Another little thing we notice is that when Naaman came to Elisha's door, that Elisha merely sent a message that Naaman was to dip seven times in the River Jordan. Such a simple little thing to do to be healed!

Naaman was very angry with his reception and command. He finally went to the Jordan River. When he had dipped six times in the dirty water and came up as much a leper as ever, consider how much faith he needed to keep on that seventh time. Such a little thing! Just one more dip! He might have grown discouraged, and quit. But he was not a mighty captain for nothing! He could carry out orders as well as give them! He had been told to dip seven times. When he had dipped the seventh time "his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean." Oh! how wonderful are the results of obedience to God's commands!

The Prophet Elijah anointed Elisha. They worked together for eight years. While Elijah was a stern reformer, we find Elisha was tender and gentle. Elisha was to "still troubled waters." He was the prophet in Israel for about sixty years.

OBEDIENCE IN BAPTISM

Everyone can have a good conscience toward God, and that answer is found in baptism (1 Peter 3:21).

We must then be "faithful unto death" to get our "crown of life."

Perhaps many of our club members are thinking of being baptized. It is good if you are able to be in a class to fully prepare yourself, or have a parent or older friend answer the questions you want answered. You must understand a great deal about baptism, and the resurrection to a new life in Christ, before you are immersed. When Philip answered the eunuch, he said, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest (be baptized)."

Then there are the verses in Romans 6:4, 5 which tell of being "buried" and "planted" when one is baptized. One then rises to walk in a new life, seeking those things which are above.

NEW MEMBERS

Two more members are reported from our biggest and still growing club: Shirley Anthony, age 13, and Roxine Durkin, age 6, both of Cleveland, Ohio, were sent in by Mrs. Frazier, 670 E. 140th St. Their membership cards are being sent to them.

ANNUAL IOWA CONFERENCE

The Annual Iowa Conference will convene, the Lord willing, from the evening of August 22 to and including August 27, at the Waterloo Church of God campgrounds. Bro. Sydney Magaw will be the guest speaker and teacher.
As Bro. S. J. Lindsay expects to visit the Iowa Conference this year, we hope to hear a few messages from him.

Tents will be furnished, but anyone wanting rooms should write to Mrs. W. H. Allard, 1118 Rainbow Drive, Cedar Falls, Iowa. Meals will be served at a nominal fee in the dining Berean Day will be on Thursday as usual. Young people, come prepared for the after-noon program, and don't forget you are wanted at the business meeting, also.

A good representation is urged to attend from every church in the State for the Fri-day business meeting, when the Conference officers will be elected for the coming year.

Please bring or send reports for the early part of the week.

Please come prepared to pay Conference dues. This is your Conference, and its success will depend on your presence and support.

If you have any vegetables or other table supplies you wish to bring, they will be much appreciated.

May we meet you there.

HONORING BROTHER H. S. HUNT

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls church met at the home of Bro. and Sr. H. S. Hunt for services, Sunday, July 30, in honor of Bro. Hunt's birthday, instead of holding regular services at Waterloo. As a surprise, several brethren from churches at Koszta, Gladbrook, and Stan-hope also came to wish him many happy returns of the day. About forty in all attended.

Sunday school was held at ten o'clock. The forenoon sermon was by Bro. J. W. Williams.
At noon a bountiful basket dinner was served. The afternoon services were conducted by Bro. H. S. Hunt and Bro. O. J. Allard, after which a joyous social time was spent.

Bro. Hunt had been the Iowa Conference president for several years prior to the past year. Bro. and Sr. Hunt are very highly esteemed throughout the State.

SPIRITUAL FEASTING

On July 16 there was a gathering of about a hundred twenty-five of the brethren and friends and children in Denny Creek Camp on Snownalmie Pass in the beautiful Cascade Mountains of Washington, Many came from the east and from the west sides of this mountain range, and we heard from Bros. J. Eagleston, A. L. Corbaley, and Cecil Sater, who presented things from the Book of God, in exhortation, encouragement, and enlightenment concerning the hope of the coming of our Lord, when truly many shall come from the east and the west and shall sit down in the kingdom of God. Songs of praise were sung.

After the services food was spread on the after the services food was spread on the tables made by cutting one medium-sized cedar tree in half and placing the surfaced sides up, side by side. God was asked to bless the food, and there was enough and to spare.

In the afternoon there were visiting one with another and a half hour more of singing. Before the day was over it was learned that one desired to be obedient in baptism. Much water was near, necessary arrangements were made, confession was made, and we gathered at the water's edge witnessing the immersion of Mrs. Willis McCleland, after which the ordinances commanded by the Master were observed. May our new sister in Christ be faithful unto the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

We have just enjoyed our first day of Conference and Bible School at Oregon, Ill.

Gleanings From the Field

Bro. Alfred Anthon of Hammond, La., visited a few days with his son, O. R. Anthon, Morrisonville, Wis., after which he came to General Conference.

As the Bible Training School progresses, it becomes more and more evident that the work is a most profitable one. While the question has not yet been discussed from the Conference floor, there is a strong and healthy senti-ment in favor of starting a nine-months' School this fall. It is time.

It is a pleasure to present to our readers a message from Bro. L. E. Conner of Dixon, Ill., president of the General Conference. For many years he has been one of the stalwarts of the Church of God, and his leadership of the General Conference has been blessed with a steady growth and interest in the national work. He serves also as pastor of the Dixon, Ill., congregation.

Bro. S. G. Elton, whose article and picture appear on page 4 of this issue of The Restiappear on page 4 of this issue of The Resti-tution Herald, lives at 2206 San Marco St. Ventura, Calif. He writes, "My desire and hope is that others may be incited to delve deeper into the things of the Spirit of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God."

At the close of their work at Conference and Bible School in Oregon, Ill., Bro. and Sr. C. E. Lapp and daughter Elaine and Sr. Edna Brewer will, D.V., leave for Sunnyside, Wash., via St. Cloud, Minn., for a visit with Bro. Lapp's mother, Sr. Lucy Lapp.

"May this Annual Conference be a happy fellowship gathering, and one of real inspira-tion to those who are fortunate enough to at-tend. Please remember us to all our good -Irena Margrave and Ida Jeffrey,

On Thursday evening, August 10, special services will be conducted for the Bible Training School. Bro. L. E. Conner will deliver the message, and Bro. G. E. Marsh will present certificates.

The General Conference is well attended, and the outlook is encouraging for doing more progressive work. A permanent nine-months' school is being considered by many on the Conference grounds, though it has not yet been officially presented at the meetings, and it is probable that a children's quarterly will soon be presented to many appeals. soon be presented to our people. Also, there seems to be a reviving of the Bereaus, and some indication that a national Sunday school department will appear later; the work is now in the making.

Sr. F. M. Cawby, Masonic Home, Franklin, Ind., is comfortable and cheerful, but is now unable to walk. She writes, "I wish I could attend the Illinois Bible School and the General Conference at Oregon, though that is impossible. Pray for me. May God bless you at the Conference."

Bro. Guilford Bell of Green Bay, Wis., sends greetings to the General Conference.

On Sunday, August 6, Elders F. L. Austin, S. J. Lindsay, and G. E. Marsh addressed large audiences at the Conference. Their messages were appreciated. There were two public confessions.

Bro. and Sr. Clinton Appleby of Blair, Neb., are the happy parents of their first-born. A daughter arrived July 30, Sr. Appleby will be remembered by many who met her at various conferences as the former Lucille

OUR JOURNEY TO CONFERENCE

Beloved brethren of the Church of God, and others in the United States, Canada, and England, through the courtesy of The Restitution Herald I am given the privilege to in-form you of my visits since June 4, when I left Los Angeles after a very blessed fellowship at the conference held on that date.

Bro, and Sr. Elton invited me to ride with them to Ventura, and there we were able to visit and talk over many of the things which we see coming to pass.

We elderly brethren realize the fullness of the times perhaps more than the younger ones can. Some of them may resent this saying, but we can see what they must battle with better than they can. It takes bitter experiences and tribulations to enter into the kingdom of God, and as the hour draws near the temptations are getting more and more subtle. If parents with growing children would insist upon them finding some time every day for the worship of our mighty God and His beloved Son, our Redeemer, the young people of this age would get a prominent place in His government. We must daily give of our time to Him, or we shall find we are only formally worshiping Him.

I have been observing the attitude of the brethren, both young and old, and there is plenty of room to be really practical in our living the truths we know.

We have enjoyed many meetings of the brethren at Ventura, Calif., Portland, Ore., the Felida Conference, the new Tacoma church. Wash., Puyallup, Scattle, Everett, Cashmere, Wenatchee, and Coulee Dam, Wash., St. Cloud, Minn., then at General Conference, Oregon.

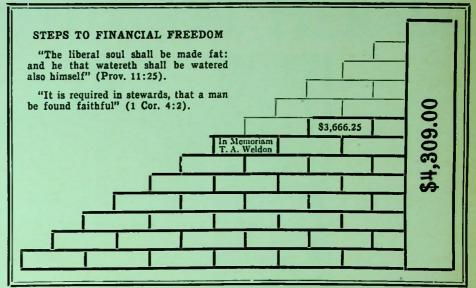

We are especially glad and hopeful over the start in Tacoma, Wash., and pray always the Lord to bless those taking part in the effort. Sunday, July 23, was a good day enjoyed with brethren at Cashmere and Wenatchee. both churches getting together at night for another farewell meeting. Two dear young people, Vernon France and his wife, were baptized at Wenatchee. We had the pleasure of traveling from there to Coulee Dam with Ver-non after the meeting, getting to the Dam early on Monday. We ask the prayers of the church at large for the few brethren at Coulee Dam, and our effort to do His will should we be permitted to return in the fall.

rom Coulee Dam we were taken to Ephrata, Wash.—about seventy miles in one hour and live minutes—by a brother in his car to reach train on the Great Northern at 4:30 a.m., then on to Minneapolis and St. Cloud, Minn., where we enjoyed fellowship and good meetings, Sunday, July 30, we were with Bro. John Denehfield and family and Bro. and Sr. Savage and family; leaving St. Cloud en Monday for Oregon, Ill.

The first two or three days have been very beneficial, especially the Ministerial Conference. Every minister seems to be desirous of rendering better service for our great Master. Signs spoken by Him in Luke 21 are surely coming to pass, and we must be up and doing while it is day, for the night is coming when no man can work. John Engleston.

MRS. FRANCES McCRODAN

Frances LaClear was born in Plainfield Trances Tacker was both in Fullment Township, Kent County, Mich., March 29, 1855, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Solomon, July 14, 1939. Elder Ray Abbott of the Pennellwood church in Grand Rapids conducted the funeral service, which was held in the Dutton church.

She was united in marriage to William

McCrodan on January 1, 1874, at Jamestown, by Bro. Joel Simonds. They moved to Dutton in 1878. To this union were born nine children. She was preceded in death by two of these, Mrs. Eliza Anderson and Clara, and her husband. The surviving children are: Mrs. Hattie Thompson, Mrs. Alice Timm, Mrs. Susie Solomon, Mrs. Mary Ellis, Mrs. Nellie Drury, Mrs. Madaline Holmgren, and William McCrodan, Jr.

Sr. McCrodan was baptized at the age of sixteen by Bro. Simonds. She became a member of the church at Jamestown and later a faithful member of the Dutton church. Although she has been confined to her rocking though she has been commed to her rocking chair for several years, she did not lose the twinkle from her smiling Irish eyes or her faith in her Lord and Savior. All who called on her to leave a ray of sunshine and a word cheer, left, finding themselves receivers as well as givers.

May the fine example she set help her family, and all who knew her, to continue faithful to the end, also.

The Jews As a Nation

Their Future

By Delbert Jones

OUR GOD is a very forgiving Father. Due to His great kindness and forgiveness, He promised to regather His former people, the Jews, which have been scattered to the four corners of the earth for the sins that they had committed and the hardness of their hearts.

As a result of their returning to their homeland, the cities which have been desolate for "many generations" will again be built up (Isa. 61:4). This is partially being fulfilled in this present day, but by no means is it being done as it will be in the future.

The people who regather in this coming glorious era will need occupations of all kinds. In Isaiah 35 and Amos 9:14 we read that the vast deserts will blossom as a rose, and that the ancient vineyards will be replanted.

The Lord will speak to His people from Jerusalem with a voice that will shake the heavens and the earth. Nevertheless, the children of Israel will place their whole trust and confidence in Him. (See Joel 3:16, 17.)

Every nation needs a true and righteous ruler, as all know. If we were certain that in this country we would have only righteous men leading and those who would issue just laws and judgment upon us, it would lift a most heavy burden from off our minds. In Isaiah 32:1 we read, "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." A person that is righteous shall allow no corruptness or unfairness in any matter.

The people of this coming age will change their implements of warfare into agricultural machinery and tools. There will be no more war! All of the nations will be under the same righteous government and laws (Psalm 72).

The law will be issued out of the city of Jerusalem by Christ (Isa. 2:3). He will also rebuke many nations for their shortcomings when they go to that beautiful country to worship Him (v. 4). Christ will not be the only king, but He will be the KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS" (Rev. 19:16). Other kings will be those Christians who have overcome the world and are accepted by Christ for His kingdom.

Christ's apostles were one day talking with Him, and inquired as to what their reward would be for following His teachings. He replied that they would sit with Him upon the throne of His glory, and judge the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

There will be people who are unsaved in this future kingdom. They will have teachers teaching them the way of life and of salvation (Isa. 29:22-24). Some people feel that there will be only saved people in the kingdom of God, but I cannot agree with such a statement, as the Word of God says that we shall be made kings and priests (Rev. 1:6). The duty of a priest is to minister to the needs of the people. If everyone is a priest or a king, there will be no one to teach. I feel that in the future age the office of a priest will be a great and noble one.

There is another great joy to look forward to: "The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

Seeing that at the present time prophecies are being fulfilled at such a rapid pace in Palestine, who can doubt that soon the righteous kingdom promised will be set up? All eyes will see that God's chosen people have been justified throughout the centuries for their confidence that He always keeps His promises (Jer. 33:9; Isa. 62:1-4).

Are you prepared to enter into this glorious kingdom? If not, prepare yourself, for it may be set up at any time! Jesus said, "Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 8:11). Will you?

CONFERENCE PROGRESS

At this writing the Nineteenth Annual General Conference is rapidly drawing toward its close. It has thus far been a most encouraging and successful Conference. The attendance is large and representative. The spirit of the meeting is one of optimism and zeal to press more faithfully into gospel work. It is yet too early to give a complete report, but there are several progressive steps being taken that all our brethren are waiting to hear about. While a later report will be more complete, this is to quickly carry to our readers some of the cheer which has made this Conference outstanding in the history of the Church of God.

A NINE-MONTHS' BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

About twenty-five ministers assembled in the Ministerial Conference agreed that the youth of the Church of God need a school where they can receive training in those truths we hold so dear. That the Church of God needs a school especially for the training of those who plan for the ministry was especially evident. Hence, it was decided to recommend to the General Conference that a nine-months' Bible Training School be established this fall.

On August 8, at the eighth session of General Conference, Brother G. E. Marsh and Brother Harvey Krogh, Jr., moved acceptance of the following resolution:

"Be it resolved that the Board of Religious Education be instructed to establish a nine-months' Bible Training School, beginning this fall, and empowered to make such arrangements as are necessary to carry out said instruction.

"Be it further resolved that the curriculum, entrance requirements, policies, financial and otherwise, and all matters pertaining to setting up and the operation of said School be placed under their jurisdiction."

Many of the ministers and laymen spoke words of praise for the motion, and a letter was read from Brother Norman Macleod of Pomona, California, pleading for the establishment of a School such as this very motion, if passed, would originate. Brethren of the Church of God, not only did the motion pass, but with the auditorium filled there was not a dissenting voice! Praise God for a dream beginning to come true. Praise God for unity in this most significant step to educate our youth in the faith and for the service of the Church of God.

Brethren of the Church of God, this is now an opportunity that you have long waited for. Will you rally in every state, in every church, in every heart, to the support of this new undertaking which will mean so much to the future of the Church? Just as soon as possible we shall report the details, such as the opening day of the School, entrance requirements, the names of instructors, estimated term expense to students, etc., but in the meantime spread the news, rejoice, and pray with us about this new work that the heavenly Father may be glorified. May this be not only a day of cheer to the Church of God, but a crowning day for the true gospel as taught long centuries ago by our blessed Lord and Savior. For this important time, and for this important work, let all the Church of God be unified.

CHILDREN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL MATERIAL

While the present Truth Scekers' Quarterly receives the praise of all the Church of God, it lacks appeal for children. Children are soon to become the church. To have a strong church tomorrow it is essential that our children be given the best possible training in the things of God. Children learn best when they see their lessons illustrated. They like to color, and to draw. Special interest must be given to children if we expect them to show special interest in the faith.

After long waiting, brethren, the plans are very promising that within another quarter the Church of God will be able to supply a Children's Quarterly, illustrated, and other helps for children. Jesus loves little children, and it is well that we do our best to train them to love Him.

FLASH! FLASH!

Just in time for this issue, we have learned that the new nine-months' Bible Training School will begin on October 2; that board, room, and tuition, complete, will be $200. Students, here is opportunity! COME.

Lest We Forget

By J. W. Cooper

CAN a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion for the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee" (Isa. 49:15). So writes Isaiah concerning the great love that God has for His people.

Deuteronomy begins: "These be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel on this side Jordan in the wilderness." The book is a history of the experiences of the people of Israel as they traveled toward the promised land of Canaan. Moses brings to the people's remembrance the many blessings that God had given them—how He delivered the different nations into their hands, how He had provided for them in every way, and how that He never forsook them nor forgot them.

Moses repeated to the Israelites the necessity of respecting the covenant God made with them, and of keeping the commandments, so that it might be well with them, and that their days might be prolonged in the land which they should possess.

In Deuteronomy 6:4, 5 Moses exclaimed: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might"—the Great Commandment according to Christ. Moses instructed the Israelites what they should do. He helped them to keep in their minds the words he had spoken to them, so that God would continue to lead them on, and into "the land which he sware to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give . . . great and goodly cities, . . . houses full of good things, . . . wells, . . . vineyards and olive trees," all of which they were to have without personal conquest. Moses then warned: "Beware lest thou forget the Lord, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage" (6:12), continuing, however, to tell them of duty, and what they could expect if they were obedient.

The Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God." Why? "For our good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day" (6:24).

Moses' faith was strong in the Lord, notwithstanding he knew that he would not be permitted to go over into the good land of Canaan. All through the first six chapters of Deuteronomy he speaks firmly and definitely. In Deuteronomy 6:25 I think the big word "if" occurs for the first time—in reference to the weakness of the people.

In 1 Corinthians 10 Paul reviews briefly some of the experiences of the fathers. In verses 11 and 12 he writes, "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are came. Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

It sometimes seem strange to Christians how Israel could forget God's goodness. He blessed Israel in so many ways: He delivered enemies into their hands, and provided for all material needs. Yet, Israel did forget Him, and wandered away into idolatry and other evils. Doubtless, Moses knew the Israelites weakness in this regard, so he exhorted them to be steadfast, to beware "lest (they) forget."

Coming down, then, to the time that the Lord was here among men, we shall find some interesting companions. During Christ's ministry He took the chosen Twelve with Him, He did many miracles among the people—healing the sick, giving sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, causing the lame to walk, and raising the dead, all of which were foretastes of the final kingdom. He told just what must come to pass regarding His death, burial, and resurrection. But, in the face of all this, men failed to grasp the great redemption plan that He was carrying out in His suffering and death.

Some of Christ's followers had apparently forgotten that He said He would rise again, some went fishing, two disciples on the way to Emmaus were trusting "that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." Though it was the third day, they were astonished at the things that some of the women of their company had told them. Others went and found it as repeated, but "him they saw not." Thomas wouldn't believe that his Lord had risen, even when the others who had seen Jesus told him. Except Thomas should see the print of the nails he would not believe,

Why did not the people believe Jesus? Why did not the apostles, especially, believe that He would rise again just as He said He would? Had they forgotten His power that He had shown them upon various occasions?

We have often wondered why the Israelites did not obey God when He was so good to them. Why did not more people believe in Jesus when He was here among men? Why did not the believers (Please turn to page 9)

Christ's Second Advent and Presence

By E. O. Stewart

THE advent and presence of Christ are distinguished from each other just as their opposites are distinguished. The opposite term to "advent" is "go," and the opposite term to "presence" is "absence." Just as "go" precedes absence, so "advent" or "coming" precedes presence.

"If I go, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3). Christ will come again (make His second advent), and will receive the faithful unto Himself, that they might be in His presence. This proves that He must come again (make His second advent), before He receives them into His presence. So, Christ's second presence is to be preceded by His second advent. "Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?"

It might be well to note that the second presence, or parousia, of Christ, is always preceded by His second advent, or coming. But the phrase, "present in spirit," is never preceded by "appearing" or "coming" or any kindred word to advent.

Paul wrote to the church at Corinth, saying, "For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have judged already, as though I were present" (1 Cor. 5:3). No coming or advent was mentioned as preceding Paul's presence in spirit at Corinth. But advent, or coming, always precedes Christ's second presence; which proves that Christ's second presence, or parousia, must be preceded by a bodily advent, or coming.

Christ left His disciples with the positive assurance, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world (age)" (Matt. 28:20). He was to be with them in spirit, from then until "the end of the world (age)." In spirit He has never been absent. That makes it impossible for His second presence to be preceded by a mere spiritual advent.

This same Jesus, who promised to be with His followers in spirit till the end of the age, "this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven" (Acts 1:11). Did Jesus come in this manner in 1914? If He did not, then He did not come at all! He could not have come in spirit in 1914, for He has always been present in spirit, ever since He went away bodily.

"We know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure" (1 John 3:2, 3). Did anyone experience in 1914 any such change as herein described?

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive, and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be (present) with the Lord" (1 Thess.

4:16, 17). If the Lord descended from heaven in 1914, then the dead in Christ arose from the dead and came into His presence by meeting Him in the air, and have been present with Him ever since. But that is not all. If the dead in Christ arose in 1914 to meet Him in the air, then the living saints, who remained till 1914, were caught up with the risen saints to meet the Lord in the air.

Can the advocates of the 1914 presence of Christ name one single living person among their number who was caught up to meet the Lord? Who did they miss in 1914 from among their number that disappeared in such a manner that would lead them to believe that such change had taken place with any of their numbers?

We are confident that if such advocates had a record of their membership in 1914, and if any of them were taken away in any such manner it could have been very easily discovered. Are we asking too much when we demand that they produce the evidence of any such miraculous change? We refuse such doctrine without evidence.

Jesus is to come in like manner as the apostles saw Him go into heaven (Acts 1:11, 12). He went away bodily, and a cloud received Him out of their sight. If He went away in spirit, then He must return in spirit in order to come in like manner as they saw Him go away. If it is a bodily abscence, then it must be a bodily return in order to so come in like manner as He went away.

It is claimed by those who advocate a spiritual presence of Christ since 1914 that no mortal eyes shall ever see Him, that He will never be visible to the nations. It seems strange that they should state that He will never be made visible to mortal eyes, just as though immortal eyes can see Him visibly, then claim that He came in spirit in 1914. If He came in spirit in 1914, and if that was in like manner as the mortal eyes of His disciples saw Him go away, then how can anyone fail to see that one statement flatly contradicts the other? If He will come in like manner as He went away, and mortal eyes saw Him go, then mortal eyes can see Him when he will come again.

If Christ's return is a spiritual coming, and if He will come in like manner as they saw Him go, then His going away was a spiritual departure. If mortals cannot see Him when He comes, how could mortal eyes have seen Him go away? This reasoning is all based upon the assumption that He came in a spiritual sense in 1914, and that that was in like manner that they saw Him go away. There can be no other conclusion, unless we admit that His going away and coming again is both visible and bodily.

This same Jesus shall so come in like manner as He went away, "and every eye shall see him" (Rev. 1:7).

Fifty Years' Experience in Evangelizing

Reported from the Ministerial Association in conference at Oregon, Illinois, August 1-13, 1939

By Evangelist J. W. McLair.

THERE is no difficulty in realizing our need of spreading the gospel. It seems to be a one hundred per cent opinion of the ministers that our need is great in the field of active, zealous evangelism. The outstanding question in the minds of the evangelists is the method of successfully doing the work of evangelizing.

In order to get the counsel of wise men of God who have experienced both successes and failures in specific evangelistic campaigns, speakers were appointed to present to the ministerial association a review of successful meetings they had conducted. They were to give their opinions as to what factors contributed to those successes. At a later session the same speakers were asked to tell of specific unsuccessful campaigns and the conditions which contributed to those failures.

The counsel of these men represents more than fifty years of experience of forging into new fields, as well as conducting soul-winning campaigns through the churches.

The following statements show the essential elements for a successful evangelistic meeting for the purpose of gaining conversions.

- (1) The distinction must be made between a series of studies to and for the church, and a campaign to reach the sinner and the unfaithful.
- (2) The church that is not alive and really active cannot expect a soul-winning success in a meeting until its own members have first been awakened. Thus, when there is a lack of preparation on the part of pastor and congregation previous to the beginning of the campaign, the evangelist must devote the majority of his time to the church.

Under such circumstances it would take several weeks before success could be seen in reaching the outsiders.

(3) It is generally conceded that a meeting of less than three or four weeks is not likely to be successful. First fruits ordinarily begin at the end of three weeks, and the climax and harvest at the end of four weeks. This should put to shame our feeble efforts of a week or ten days.

- (4) The most successful meetings reported came where the congregation had been in prayer and preparation weeks before the evangelist appeared. Surely we are losing in evangelism because we have not learned to bend the knee in its behalf.
- (5) Many campaigns have failed because of unholy settings for the gospel presentation. One instance was a meeting held in an unkempt house, where the husband became drunken and endeavored to help with the preaching and instruction.
- (6) Failures were reported where more than one speaker conducted the meeting.
- (7) Hindrance was reported where the evangelist was not given freedom to mingle in the congregation to make calls and to encourage prospective converts.
- (8) The majority gave great importance to personal contact and individual help to encourage the beginner.
- (9) The evangelist must be free to conduct his work in his own way, unhampered.
- (10) The selection of an evangelist is important if the people are to have confidence in him so that he may be given great freedom in his work.

CHURCH OF GOD pastors and leaders, these things are not theory, but the benefit of the EXPERIENCE of our foremost teachers and evangelists. May we learn from experience, and plan our evangelistic campaigns with a view to successfully winning people to the Lord Jesus Christ and His great kingdom.

LET'S LEARN EVANGELISM! LET'S EVANGELIZE!

Is the Bible Training School Necessary?

By Lorraine Brossard

THE Bible Training School for our young people is a most necessary goal to strive toward. Our young people are the foundation for the future progress and furtherance of our faith. If those who are determined to become leaders of the Church of God get their religious education and theology in colleges of other churches we perhaps would lose them, or they would lose the fundamentals of our faith. The Church of God cannot afford to lose any of its workers. Our church must branch out in every direction in order to reach the lives that may be lost.

The Bible Training School is a great opportunity for many of "like precious faith" to study together. This fellowship affords a broadening of personality, and a strengthening of the determination to become staunch workers for Christ. These many students from every section of the country express and discuss frankly their opinions. Among fellow believers beliefs can be firmly imbedded, and a faith developed to stand defiant before the onslaught of the world and its temptations. We will ever have these friends to rely on for encouragement, and will ever have a cheerful word for anyone who needs it.

The intensive study we undertake will serve us in many ways and for our lifetime. Everyone has a different type of ability, and a personal way of applying it. Each one will have his own field to work in, and can there apply these talents and develop them. Those who plan to become ministers and evangelists can absorb the many ideas on handling church problems, methods used to hold the interest of the people, and to make the Bible teachings vital.

Knowledge of Biblical background and church history is necessary to make a subject interesting. A most important factor is that a speaker must be interested in his subject before he can make it interesting to his audience. Criticisms and suggestions build confidence in a speaker, helps him to weed out bad habits and to cultivate good ones.

Those who are studying to be teachers learn much of child psychology, and learn to apply it. The subject must be so well studied that the great objective of the teacher is to teach the child, instead of teaching only the subject matter. The children of the Sunday school must be considered seriously, for they are the young lives that must be trained and developed in such a way that they will make stalwart leaders of the future church. We cannot afford to lose these young lives. They are innocent, and unaware of worldly temptations. So we must learn to teach and build them in strength and a satisfaction of living the Christian life. Everywhere we go, especially in cities, we see little tots who are left to find their amusement on the streets. If only we knew a way to bring every one of them into the fold before it is too late! This need, and our part in conserving and reclaiming the lives of those who wander, is ever kept before us as a work to be done. The Scripture teaches, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it" (Prov. 22:6).

Some students will become the laymen of the church; to do good by their presence and a willingness to cooperate. They are a foundation. No shepherd can be an overseer without a flock. These workers are a means of bringing more into the church and showing the necessity and the beauty of worshiping the true God.

This intensive six-weeks' training does much good, but because the Church of God is a true church of God we must have diligent, well-trained servants. Those servants that are given the talent of speaking and leadership must have greater qualifications of training. To attain this end we advocate a nine-months' Training School for those who are consecrating every service to God. Those in past years have resulted in many faithful and successful leaders, and there is no end to the demand.

Let our lives be in a daily training school, so that we may live closer to God: so that we may follow the ideals shown in the examples set by our Savior. Our aim is to show the light of Jesus that the world may see the beauty of our church and its belief.

There is a vast difference between the Bible Training School and any other educational institution. The aim of both is to prepare the pupil for a profession, but the difference is in the result. Those who have an education for a worldly career work diligently for a lifetime to accumulate honor, wealth, and glory—to what end? Wealth and honor are easily lost; death defeats these worldly aims. A Christian, training for service under Christ, works perhaps under great difficulties, but has the peace and joy of laying up "treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal" (Matt. 6:20).

Train, teach, admonish every true and faithful Christian to build stronger foundations, higher structures of righteousness in the church, so that the world may see the strength, the beauty, and the completion of such building.

We Need Books

By Vivian Kirk patrick

IN A FORMER thesis I pointed out the urgent need of a much enlarged Training School or embryo college. Whether or not that need is taken care of lies in the hands of those who feel that our young people are worth saving for the church, and begin making provision for saving them.

There is another need I want to discuss this week, the fulfillment of which is primarily up to the experienced ministry. That need is for books. The Church of God has published a number of tracts in times past, written by various ministers and laymen, but they have been neglectful when it comes to books.

Perhaps I can best illustrate what I mean when I say, "We need books," by confessing that one of the textbooks used in one of the Bible Training School classes contains such sentences as these: "Ours it is to deal with the infinite possibilities of child life, and to have a hand in forming the character that this immortal soul will take." "Each of these little ones is the bearer of an immortal soul..." "And ours is the dread and fascinating responsibility for a time to be the mentor and guide of this celestial being."

It is necessary to use such textbooks because we have no one in our churches who has felt deeply enough the need of a book on child training and child guidance to undertake the task of writing such a volume. I do not think we lack men who have the necessary training and ability to write such a book, if they were to once feel the need we have for books of that nature. They should be in the hands of every parent, teacher, and preacher.

This book is but one of the many needed by our people today. Books are read and reread. A sermon is heard but once. Many of our people are living in isolated spots, unable to hear the gospel except at long and infrequent occasions when some minister passes through their community. These people need the gospel, are hungering for it, and no one is feeding them.

Those people who have steady pastors would undoubtedly like to hear an occasional sermon from some of the other ministers, but such a thing is out of the question—unless our leaders put their thoughts on the written page.

In times past the Church of God has published a number of different papers. All but one, The Restitution Herald, has gone out of existence. To my knowledge, copies of these older papers were not kept. I hope I am wrong, for if we no longer have copies of these papers much valuable material, which can never be replaced, has been lost.

If any of our people still have copies of these papers I feel they should send them to The Herald office to form the nucleus of a library for the Training School.

It is only through these papers that we have the writings of past leaders. Today we have a number of leaders who are on the sunset side of life. When they leave us, the knowledge they have accumulated during a lifetime of study will pass with them. That is not as it should be. There are some, I know, who feel that to quit the pulpit would be to acknowledge that they were no longer able to carry on. I feel that the most valuable service they could render in their advancing years would be to quit the pulpit, as a steady work, and to devote their energies to the systematic assembling of their accumulated knowledge into a form (book) which would allow their teachings and preaching to go into every Church of God home.

Much permanent good could be accomplished if our older ministers would seriously consider the textbook field. We need textbooks for our Training School; although there we have the knowledge being passed on first-hand. We should think of more than those chosen few who are fortunate enough to be able to attend the Bible Training School. Think of the hundreds of our young people who would be benefited by such books who might never otherwise have the opportunity to study and to learn more than the bare fundamentals of the faith which we hold so dear!

The Devil has always been subtle in his influence. Continual contact with things tend to wipe out objections. Where at first we are outspoken in our criticism of error, if we continue in contact with it, we begin to frown rather than criticise, then to overlook, and perhaps even to accept what we hear, see, and read.

What am I getting at? Just this: We use songbooks which contain errors in our churches and Sunday schools. That has been a grave mistake, especially in the latter case. The children in the Sunday schools have not reached the place where they are able to distinguish truth from error, hence error in belief creeps into their lives from the songbooks we place in their hands. And we wonder where the fault lies when later we find them believing strange doctrine! Children are very susceptible to such influence. They pick up the tune of a song, like it, learn it, and with that tune they associate the words which many times contain error in teaching. And what the child picks up in this way sticks tighter in his mind and lasts longer than many of the things he picks up and retains from his Sunday school lessons.

When I began making inquiries as to a Minister's Service Book one person recommended this one, and another recommended something else. No one was entirely satisfied with the one he used, but used it because he had failed to find anything better. Why does not the minister who feels that he cannot find such a book that is suitable to his needs set to work and organize an acceptable one.

We feel that of all the denominations in the nation today we are the only one which preaches the truth in its entirety. If we were entirely sincere in that belief, however, would we be doing many of the things that we are doing today? If we feel that we are the chosen church, why do we send our young people to other denominational schools to be educated? If we are in earnest in our belief, why do we depend on others to write the books we use, instead of putting our own into the hands of our people and thus make sure they are not ignorantly accepting error?

I feel that if we are in earnest in our belief in being a chosen church, we would be pouring contributions into the National Bible Institution with the demand that we immediately begin the education of our young people through both methods of teaching: a full nine-months' School, and by demanding the writing of doctrinal books, and books of instruction, by those of our ministers who are qualified to do such work.

Soon to Armageddon

By Zennie B. Self

Editorial note: While Brother Self here presents an interpretation of prophecy that is not altogether the commonly accepted thought of our prophetic writers, he, nevertheless, presents a logical question. With Brother Self we find it a puzzle to accept the thought that after the kingdom of Christ has once been established throughreign—there should then be another onslaught of ungodly out the earth—and that only after a thousand years' forces.

AS A CHURCH we should consider ourselves very fortunate to be living in an age when prophecy of startling importance is being fulfilled before our very eyes, such as the beginning of the fulfillment of Ezekiel 38 and 39; Joel 3; Zechariah 14; Revelation 20:7-9; 16:12-14. Here it is plainly foretold that "Gog," which doubtless represents Germany, Italy, Japan, Mexico, and a few other aggressor nations, will assemble, in connection with lesser aggressor nations, all of her war forces to go against Jerusalem into the place called in Scripture "Armageddon" in the last great battle of this age (Rev. 16: 16).

The reckoning of the "seven times" (Lev. 26) punishment of Israel from the latest captivity of the kingdom of Israel, which was near 580 B.C., brings us, we believe, to the end of this age and to the battle of Armageddon sometime near 1940. The preparation of the nations of earth for war as well as the attitude adopted among the aggressor nations in particular, seems very much to coincide with the chronology of this reckoning.

It is my contention that the prophecies of which we have spoken are beginning to be fulfilled in the latter part of the "little season" spoken of in Revelation 20:1-3. In these verses, as well as in Revelation 12:7-9 and 13:1, 2, it is plainly shown that Satan was bound in the past (538-1538 A.D.), and gave his paganish power to the "leopard" beast (popal Rome) of Revelation 13:1, 2.

The binding of Satan, as spoken of in Scripture, was not a total binding, but indicates that Satan was bound only through paganism for a thousand years, from 538 A.D. to 1538 A.D. Since this date Satan has been loosed in the "little season," for the Scripture says: "And when the thousand years are expired Satan shall be loosed out of his prison." (See Rev. 20:7, 3.)

"The rest of the dead" spoken of in Revelation 20:5, who live "not again until the thousand years (sixth thousand years since creation) were finished" are not the wicked as some contend. The Scripture says (v. 5), "This is the first resurrection," which also indicates that the thousand years spoken of here in verse 5 are not the seventh such period, or millennium, but the sixth, instead. "The rest of the dead" spoken of in verse 5 are, therefore, the rest of the dead saints who will participate in the first resurrection at Christ's second coming, Christ being the first dead saint to be resurrected of the new creation.

Following are a few reasons why I am opposed to the theory of the "little season" being beyond the millennium:

(1) The Scripture says concerning the time of Christ's reign on earth, "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Micah

Immortality

Its Meaning and Application

By J. S. Lyon

IN THE King James Version of the Scriptures there are six occurrences of the words "immortal" and "immortality." However, three times are all that can rightly be allowed the word "immortality," and none for "mortality." Following are the instances, the Greek derivation, and the readings in both the King James and the Concordant Versions. Reference to Young's Concordance will demonstrate how right the latter version is in its text:

1 Timothy 1:17: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal (aphthartos)" (K.J.). "Now to the King of the eons, the incorruptible" (C.V.).

1 Corinthians 15:53: "This mortal must put on immortality" (K.J.). "This mortal put on immortality (athanasia)" (C.V.).

Verse 54: "This mortal shall have put on immortality (athanasia)" (K.J.). "This mortal be putting on immortality" (C.V.).

1 Timothy 6:16: "Who only hath immortality (athanasia)" (K.J.). "Who alone has immortality" (C.V.).

Romans 2:7: "Seek for glory and honour and immortality (aptharsia)" (K.J.). "Are seeking glory and honor and incorruption" (C.V.).

2 Timothy 1:10: "Hath brought life and immortality to light" (K.J.). "Yet illuminates life and incorruption (aphtharsia)" (C.V.).

It is in line with many such defects throughout the King James Version, that in this instance it gives three different Greek words the same significance of immortality. In order to show that there is a difference in meaning we give the reading wherever aphthartos and aphtharsia are found:

Romans 1:23: "Incorruptible (aphthartos) God."

- 1 Corinthians 15:52: "Dead raised incorruptible (aph-thartos)."
 - 1 Corinthians 9:25: "Incorruptible wreath."
- 1 Timothy 1:16: "Now to the King of the eons, the incorruptible, invisible, only wise God."

1 Peter 1:4: "An allotment incorruptible."

Chapter 3:4: "Incorruptibility of a meek spirit."

We see that aphthartos refers to God, to resurrected humans, and to mental attitude as well as to inanimate objects, a wreath or crown.

Since aphthartos is the adverbial adjective derived from aphtharsia in the seven occurrences of the latter noun, we have the same meanings.

But athanasia, immortality, is never applied to anything but humanity resurrected in incorruptibility. And the reason why it is only so applied may be seen in the literal meaning of this compound word which is "undeath." Immortality cannot occur to others than those who have once been dead.

So it cannot be said of God that He has immortality, but it can be said truly of Jesus Christ. This solves the meaning of 1 Timothy 6:16. It probably has not been noticed by many readers that Paul would not have said one only hath immortality if it were true that God and Jesus Christ both had immortality at the time he wrote this text, some forty years after the cross of Calvary. So we can see this limitation of the meaning of "immortality" is necessary in order to destroy any contradiction in this passage, that says: "Who alone has immortality."

As a side light on this interpretation, let us note that Jesus is said to have "been made one whit inferior" to the angels (Heb. 2:9) "because of the suffering of death." This demonstrates that the angels are incorruptible beings who have never seen death.

Not only are angels of an incorruptible nature, but it is said that the immortalized saints will be equal to them, sons of God, since they as humans have been sons of the resurrection (Luke 20:36), and in this fact we have one of the strongest arguments for the belief that Jesus of Nazareth had no previous existence. As a pre-existent Son, seated in heaven with His Father, He could not there have been less than the angels in their incorruptibility, and so would never have been able to die, or to have attained immortality.

LEST WE FORGET

believe more fully? But when we come to consider ourselves today, is it not just about the same with us? Moses warned and exhorted Israel. Paul tells us that these things were written for our admonition.

Do Christians not sometimes think that they can stand by themselves? I have heard a friend of mine say sometimes: "Human nature runs pretty true to form."

Do we not see many people today who are so taken up with worldly affairs that they have no time to think of God or His goodness to them? Do we not see professed Christians who are so engrossed with the affairs of this life that they can hardly spare any time to worship God? Are not some worshiping idols today? Are there not people today to whom prosperity is a curse, rather than a blessing, on account of the lives they lead?

Are there not those who are satisfied when they have good positions, or sufficient incomes without work. They provide beautiful homes. When health is good, and there is a bright future before men, isn't it about time for them to take an inventory of their lives, to beware lest they, too, forget? Some may think they are better than others. Some are puffed up with self-rightcousness. Shouldn't they take heed, lest they fall?

In view of world conditions today, and even in our own native land of which our people have always been justly proud, when we see the things that are coming to pass—crime of every description—doesn't it seem that the nations have forgotten God?

Let the Church of God strive to live closer to Christ, lest we forget.

Where Are the Dead?

By E. C. James

"Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his maker?" (Job 4:17).

I WAS recently privileged to hear a certain minister deliver to his flock a sermon in modern theology. He based his remarks on the words of Job, which say, "Man dieth, and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" (Job 14:10). Verse 12 of the same chapter of Job answers this very question in the following words: "So man lieth down, and riseth not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep."

Also, in verse 14 of the same chapter, Job revised his deplorement of the same subject in the following words: "If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come." Job showed with the following words that he expected to wait in the grave: "If I wait, the grave is mine house" (17:13). Job also told what he hoped for, saying, "I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another" (19:25-27). There are many scriptures found in God's Word relating to this most important subject.

Now, back to my friend's talk, he did not use this form of speech in his answer to the text. In fact, he did not in any way answer it. Instead, he jumped to the following references of death: 1 Peter 2:24; Romans 6:2-11; 7:4; Ephesians 2:13; 1 Timothy 5:6; Hebrews 6:1; 9:14; 11:4. Reader, please read these references. Do they teach that there is no actual death?

At this point my friend turned to Genesis 2:17, which I quote, "Of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not cat of it: for in the day that thou catest thereof thou shalt surely die." Here my friend turned his talk and attitude in harmony with Genesis 3:4, 5, stating that man did die a spiritual death that day, being ignorant of Paul's words to the Corinthians: "Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual" (1 Cor. 15:46). He then carried his listeners away under a spell of charm and pleasing philosophical speech of his own aspirations, picturing a most glorious departure at death for the good and a very horrible one for the evil.

Dear reader, Job's saying in 17:16: "They shall go down to the bars of the pit, when our rest together is in the dust" and other similar verses, surely disprove his theory. But please allow me to go back to Genesis 2:17. Let us reason this statement out in the light of concise logic. I shall here try to express my opinions or views in the light of the Word in as few words as possible. Man was not affixed to either life or death in the beginning, according to Genesis 2:9. But God did provide means for man to choose his own course of assured or affixed destiny, according to Genesis 2:16. God granted man His approval to take of the fruit of all the trees, including the tree of life, with the one exception of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. In these words of disapproval He said, "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it." God then gave His reason in these words: "For in the day that thou catest thereof thou shalt surely die." That is, man would become affixed to death. Man's judgment became assured, not that he necessarily had to die that same day in which he was convicted, or found guilty of death. The man Adam, in person, was then denied the privilege of eating of the tree of life. So, man's hope is now only through Christ, the mediator. Let us strive lawfully to enter in, for many will seek and utterly fail (Luke 13:24).

"Jesus says, "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death" Rev. 1:18).

THE LIGHT OF HIS LOVE

By Lois Dismukes

Let the light of His love shine through,
That Christ may be seen in you—
Then the feet of the weary will tread in the light,
And the wayward may turn and do right.

Let the light of His love shine through
The thoughts you think and the deeds you do,
For the cares of the day will grow lighter
As the light of His love beams brighter.

Let the light of His love shine through, And the darkness of sin will flee from you; No place will be found for envy and strife When His love lights the path of your life.

ENOCH WALKED WITH GOD

By R. M. Abbott

"Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him" (Gen. 5:24). Some ask, "Where did God take Enoch?" I can't say where God took him, but following are three places that He didn't take him:

He didn't take him to a moving picture show, He didn't take him to a card game, Neither did He take him to a public dance.

Nor did God find Enoch in one of these places when He took him.

How do we know?
Because "Enoch walked with God."

DAILY MANNA

By S. J. Lindsay

WE HAVE been calling attention for a long time, both by word of Mouth and by our pen, to the need for feeding daily upon the manna which God gave from heaven. So many of our people are not doing this. They have allowed the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches to lead them to neglect this more important thing.

Then, other hard-working brethren feel that they must have the rest that recreation brings after toiling hard through the week. Therefore, the various forms of entertainment call for a generous share of their time. These things gradually grow on them, and all the while the love for the truth and for the things pertaining to eternal life is growing more cold, until at last the care for God's plan of salvation is about gone.

But do these carnal things bring true satisfaction and contentment? Does the man whose life is spent in gathering riches become satisfied with his riches? Does there ever come a time when he feels that he has enough of this world's goods, and when he decides to take a rest and spend his time doing the good he should with the riches with which he has been blessed? To the worshiper of sport we would put the question, Does the sport satisfy? To all we would put the query: Are these things a source of comfort when you see the face of a loved one cold in death? Wealth and rest and pastimes are all well in their places, but in the pursuance of them we should not leave God out. We need to feed daily on the bread from heaven. Some portion of God's Word should be daily read that we may have something to think about and grow rich in grace while we strive to earn our daily bread.

4:3). However, the exponents of the theory that the "little season" is beyond the millennium contend that after the reign of Christ, and after the "little season," nations will again learn war and will go to fight against the saints and surround the New Jerusalem; and that after the kingdom of God, which at that time will have grown for a thousand years on earth, it must yet submit to the plunder of the wicked who will tread it down when they go to surround the New Jerusalem. Thus the work of a thousand years would be destroyed.

(2) The place against which "Gog and Magog" are to assemble, as recorded in Ezekiel 38:11, is not a city with a wall great and high as the New Jerusalem is said to have; but against a "land of unwalled villages," and against those dwelling with neither walls, bars, nor gates, all of these details indicating the old Jerusalem at Christ's second coming.

Consequently, at the end of the thousand years' reign of Christ and His saints, He will have put down all rule, power, and authority, and will have destroyed the last enemy, death. He will have delivered up the kingdom to God the Father, who shall thenceforth become the eternal King of mankind, and they His subjects (1 Cor. 15: 24-28).

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

THE NATIONAL BEREAN CONFERENCE

The National Berean Conference of the Church of God was held at the Oregon, Illinois, church on August 7, 1939. To many of you this is not news, for you were fortunate enough to be in attendance at this splendid meeting. However, to many who were unable to attend, we believe that a full report of the activities as seen by your editor might be interesting. Acting upon this thought, I hereby present my observations of the Berean Conference.

Although it was not on the official program of the Bereans, we would like to speak of the devotional service. Brother Emory Macy, who is an active Bercan of the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church of God, led in the devotions. It was very inspiring to realize that there are young laymen who are not afraid to get up in front of an audience to work for the Lord. In the prayer service we prayed that the Lord would bless our day's activities.

At the designated time the outgoing president, Harry Goekler, opened the business meeting. The first that we heard were the various reports of the standing committees. These proved to be very interesting to those who were permitted to hear them, but would prove to be very dry reading.

The election of the officers was the most interesting that I have ever attended. It was necessary to vote twice on the offices of president and both vice-presidents before we could decide who would be our choices. The election resulted in the following selections: president, J. Richard LeCrone of Woodstock, Virginia; first vice-president, Arlen Marsh of Grand Rapids, Michigan; second vice-president, Delbert Jones of Eagle Grove, Iowa; secretary, Muriel Randall of Braham, Minnesota; Treasurer, Frances Munshaw of Grand Rapids, Michigan. By this you can see that, with the exception of the treasurer, the board is composed of new members.

Immediately after the election of the officers, the reports of the various societies were received and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. One of these reports will be taken up in some detail either in this issue or an early one. At the request of the president for new business, a spirited discussion in regard to the printing of a new Berean book was held. It was recommended to the board that they instruct the publishing committee to publish a new book. Following this, there was a more spirited discussion in regard to a proposed bulletin to inform all Bereans of each others' activities. There were a good many discussions in regard to this problem. All seemed to see the advisability of such a bulletin, and finally there was a motion passed to the effect that the official Berean board work out a plan, either to publish such a bulletin or seek space in The Herald for an extra page at various times. All seemed to enjoy the business meetings very much, and I have never seen such a good attendance in the past ten years that I have attended the Conference.

At the first official board meeting, all the chairmen of the standing committees were reappointed by motion. This means that Harry Gockler will be the chairman of the publishing committee; Lorraine Brossard of the junior social correspondence committee; Mrs. Rhoda Hanson of the senior social correspondence committee; Mrs. Verna Thayer of the junior home study committee; and your present page editor was chosen again.

In subsequent meetings the board made some very important decisions, the main one being in regard to the proposed bulletin. It was deemed inadvisable, if not impossible, by some to try to use The Herald in this work. Consequently, Muriel Randall was chosen as editor of this new publication, which will be called the "Berean Echo." J. Richard LeCrone will do the mimcograph work, and will select someone to help him in the mailing of the bulletins. Please watch this page for further details in regard to this new plan. Please understand that this does not in any way supplant the Berean page in The Herald. Rather, it was provided for reports and news, so that our page might be used solely for articles and editorials.

May I add to this report the following suggestions included in the report of the Cleveland, Ohio, society, that was mentioned earlier in this: More reports of individual societies on Berean page; detailed reports of financial conditions; direct communications between the national president and individual societies, as well as between societies; activities of correspondence committees increased or given to more individuals; and all societies unified in some definite endeavor. Thank you, Cleveland, for your interest in the work.

May God bless us in our endeavors.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink" (Habakkuk 2:15).

Lesson: Joel 1:5-7; Daniel 5:1-7, 17, 25-28.

POISONED BEVERAGES

Strong drink is used by drunkards for beverages. These people mentioned by the Prophet Joel wept and howled when they couldn't get any more. Joel told them that the plague of locusts which had come upon their land had been sent as a punishment because of their evil living.

Belshazzar, king of Babylon, held a great feast. At this feast the sacred vessels of gold from God's Temple were used as their wine goblets.

Daniel gave the king the interpretation of the strange handwriting upon the wall. Daniel as a young man had refused to touch any strong drink. His resolution to do right was lived up to all his life. God loved him, and could use him to tell the king the interpretation. God can always use a clean-living, trustworthy person.

Daniel told the king that his days were numbered. He had been measured and found short of God's wish for him. God uses a measuring stick or scales to look every one of us over, and we must be true if we hope to live with Christ. I think the Bible is our guide.

Our lesson plainly shows us the evil results of wine. It is the same today. A drinker of strong drink first loses control of his own will. He cannot think clearly, and, therefore, cannot use good judgment when he must decide matters of importance. You see how the body, which should be the temple of God, is used wrongfully. Anyone who tastes any strong drink is unwise. Dare to be like Daniel! Dare to be wise!

A PARABLE

This parable is not in our Bibles. It is a parable I heard over the radio. The lady who told it had just returned from the Holy Land. Her Arabian guide, a Moslem, and therefore not a Christian, told it to her.

The Grapevine That Dried Up

Once there was a grapevine which began to dry up. The keeper first took the blood of a parrot and poured over it. The vine flourished and grew for a few days. Then it dried up again.

Next, he took the blood of a monkey and poured over it. Again it flourished and grew, but for a few days only.

So, last of all, they took the blood of a swine and poured over the grapevine. This time it flourished and grew and its fruit was abundant.

So is anyone who drinks the fruit of the vine. One drink, and he chatters like a parrot. Two drinks, and he acts like a monkey. Another drink, and he rolls in the mire like the swine.

This parable is used in the Holy Land to tell the contempt an Arabian, a worshiper of strange gods, has of anyone who drinks strong drink.

If one not even trying to be a Christian can be strong enough, and wise enough, to let such evil-working drink alone, can't you, as a Christian, not only let it alone, but tell others of the dangers of that first drink?

ECE CLUB NEWS

One request for a correspondence club has been sent to me. There should be many more who want such a club if one is to be started. Won't you sit down and write to me now?

NEW MEMBERS

Three new members are sent to us by one of our ECE Club girls, Iola Magaw of Oregon, Illinois. They are: Peggy Pearson, age 12, Juanita Macy, age 13, and Margaret Smith, age 13. They are all from the Brush Creek Church of God in Ohio.

CALENDAR OF EVANGELISM

TACOMA, WASHINGTON

Fifteen members of the Church of God, including myself as evangelist, rented a large room at 1904 Tacoma Ave., Tacoma, Wash. We divided this into three classrooms; the large one, of course, is used for church services, which we hold each Sunday as follows: Bible school at 10:00 a.m., and gospel services at 11:00 a.m. We hope to soon begin evening services.

We began these meetings last November having fourteen present. The attendance since then has been twenty to thirty-three. All seem to be very interested in Bible truths, and we seem to be like one family praising God and seeking for the truth of God's Holy Word, looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

All fifteen members are zealous for the cause. We have not yet organized a church, but we hope to do so. We can then truly say that we have a Church of God in the city of Tacoma.

It is certainly sad to think how God has poured out His love into this world, and sent His Son Jesus into the world to save those that are lost, and yet, as we look into the large cities like Tacoma, Seattle, and Portland, to see no churches there to represent the true Church of God. It appeals to me that we ought to reach out helping hands to those around us, and tell of this wonderful gospel of our coming King, the Lord Jesus Christ. The harvest is ripe, but the laborers are few. Who and where is the brave young min-

Who and where is the brave young minister that will step out into a strange field and say, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do." I would rather go into a new field, while others prefer to work in old fields where someone else has laid the foundation. All of this is right, but we need workers to go out into other towns where people have not heard the true gospel of our Lord Jesus.

this is right, but we need workers to go out into other towns where people have not heard the true gospel of our Lord Jesus.

Dear ones, we ought to be trying to convert sinners. Jesus said He came into the world "to save that which was lost." Remember the story of the ninety and nine. Reach out a helping hand to the one who is lost. Jesus said to go into all the world to preach the gospel. What is that? "Gospel" means good news and glad tidings of the kingdom of God (Luke 8:1). So let us, who have wisdom to preach, brave the tide, open up new fields, make places for our young preachers, and reach out the all-saving grace to a lost and dying world.

saving grace to a lost and dying world.

We ask the prayers of all the household of faith for our work at Tacoma, that it may grow.

LOST BIBLE

An American Revised Bible (Red-letter edition) was lost at General Conference, Within the Bible will be found a card from the Public Library, Baltimore, Md., bearing also the name of A. J. Brown.

If anyone can locate this Bible please send it to Mrs. L. M. Parish, 1158 E. 113th St., Cleveland, Ohio.

VIRGINIA BIBLE SCHOOL CONFERENCE

The twelfth year has been added to our list of Bible School Conferences in Virginia. We are pleased to report a total enrollment of 113 with an average daily attendance of between sixty and seventy.

As usual, four classes were held each day. The adult and young people's classes were taught by Bros. F. L. Austin and James McLain, alternately, with the morning and afternoon sessions. Bro. and Sr. J. R. LeCrone did the same with their intermediate class, and Sr. Verna Thayer had the primary class.

The central theme as taught by Bros. Austin and McLain in both classes centered largely around the Christian's pilgrimage in this life as foreshadowed in the journey of the Israelites from Egypt to the Promised Land, and its application to us in our day of grace. Bro. Austin brought in the thought centering around the three forms of government, as typified by: (1) Hagar, the Old Covenant; (2) the Harlot, Babylon; and (3) Sarah, the New Covenant in Christ.

Hebrews 11 was used in our opening devotions each day to point out the faithful of all ages as they were painted on the large chart of Bible Times by Sr. Letha Rinehart and purchased by me for use in Bible School and evangelistic work. Incidentally, it was pointed out that Solomon in all his glory is not listed among the faithful in Hebrews 11. Can you guess why? Ask Bro. Austin. Bro. and Sr. LeCrone used the chart in their class work at the Children's program.

Sr. Thayer had prepared a series of Bible ABC lessons for the little children on the theme of being "Like Jesus," which were illustrated by letters and appropriate pictures for them to color, the Bible story and verses and the hymn "More Like Jesus." We highly recommend this series of lessons for children up to the age of twelve. If any isolated friends are interested write to Mrs. Verna Thayer, 1110 Rockton Ave., Rockford, Ill., or to me at Fairfax, Va., for mimeograph copies.

Bro. James McLain gathered the children in the church each day at one o'clock for Bible drills, games, and songs. It was most interesting to hear these young children name the books of the Bible, recite verses, and sing songs from charts he had prepared and then from memory. Much good can be accomplished in this way. Especially did we like Bro. McLain's chart method of instruction from which he illustrated his simple, clear, impressive sermons. Bro. and Sr. McLain's conversion from the ways of the world and their consecration to the ways of Jesus are an inspiration to all. They are indeed living examples of the work of angels (Heb. 1:14) among the heirs of salvation. By their presence at our Bible School we have been encouraged to press on "toward the mark for the prize of the high ealling of God in Christ Jesus."

We were likewise glad to renew our fellowship with Bro. and Sr. F. L. Austin and Sr. Leila Whitchead. It has been a decade since Bro. Austin had been with us in Bible School work. His sermon "Have Faith in God" (Mark 11:22) on Sunday morning, July 3, was most appealing to the Christian mind. We were all grieved that he was called home on Thursday before Conference closed on Sunday, by the untimely death of his son. May the time soon come when all the faithful in the church now, may meet with the redeemed of all ages to part no more, and may we all be ready to meet our Savior when He comes again without sin unto salvation to all those who love His appearing.

See the editorial page (2) for news about the newly organized Bible Training School which will begin October 2. We are now seeking students and contributions so as to make the School a success from the very start. Three years of work will be required for graduation, and it is the hope and prayer of the Board of Religious Education that this effort may grow, year by year, that the Church of God might provide the very highest type of education for its own youth and all who may attend.

"I pray that you may have the best und most profitable Conference thus far held."— Mrs. Rose Starbuck, Pomona, Calif. At least, it was one of the best. The spirit throughout was optimistic and edifying.

In addition to many visitors attending General Conference, the editor and family were pleased to recently entertain Bro. Ervin Kirkpatrick of Lester Prairie, Minn., and his nephew, Edmond Kirkpatrick, of Balaton. Minn. Ervin and Edmond's father, Ira, cousins of the editor, were his boyhood playmates.

KOKOMO, INDIANA, NEWS

Bro, and Sr. Ezra Railsback of Los Angeles, Calif., and Miss Alverta Leighty of South Bend, Ind., were visitors at the local church; Sunday, July 30. Sr. Railsback was guest speaker at both morning and evening serv-ices. Mrs. Goldie Norris, 1315 S. Home Ave., requested baptism. This service was rendered by Bro. O. J. Parker, July 31, Mrs. Frances Gotcher, 1232 S. Jay St., was baptized by Bro. Parker, August 4.

Bro, and Sr. Charles N. Martin are rejoicing over the arrival of a new daughter named Beverly Joan, born August 3, Sr. Martin will be remembered as Miss Ellen Prichard.

Interest and attendance in both the Sunday school and church services are good; preaching both morning and evening every Sunday.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

Immediately after the morning services in Los Angeles, July 2, we drove to Pomona as previously arranged, and after a hearty dinner with the Macleod and Rahn families, we succeeded in getting started on our journey east to take the three grandchildren to the Bible Training School at Oregon, III. At 10:00 p.m. we were at Wickenburg, Ariz., where we spent the night. By 4:00 p.m., Monday, we were in Albuquerque, N. Mex., and Tuesday night we spent in Perry, Okla.

We arrived at Sr. Nancy Robison's in At-kansas City, Kan., so early Wednesday, a.m., that she was greatly surprised. We found here an earnest group of believers. They have built a very commodious church building in a choice residential section of this apparently prosperous little city. This is one of the new church buildings that has been built by a small group of zealous workers in these depression times and they have a nice group of young people anxious to learn God's plan and will.

Thursday, p.m., found us in Kansas City in the home of Bro, and Sr. John F. Green, where we discussed the promises of God to a small group of believers.

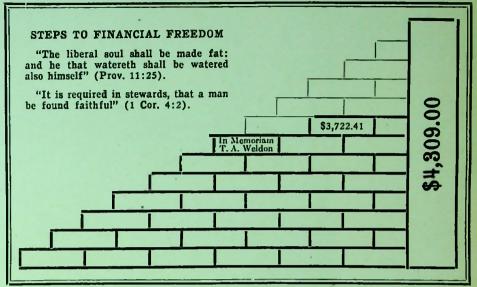

We arrived in Oregon, Ill., in time for din-ner in the dormitory Friday noon, where we introduced the children to the School Mother, Sr. Grace Wiggins, After spending the night with them there, we proceeded on our way to Casey, Ill., where we soon located the commo-dious home of our friends, the Bro. Frank Partlow family. On Sunday we accompanied them to the rural church known as the Restitution Church of God, We spoke to the breth-ren on "Divine Laws of Adoption," and later visited some of them in their homes.

Realizing that we were not far from Eldorado, we decided to visit our former co-workers in California, Bro. and Sr. H. J. Edmister. As Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., was holding meetings there, we had the pleasure of meeting with them and speaking for them one evening. We found some whom we had previously met. including our blind sister, Mina Martin, Her neduding our blind sister, Mina Martin. Her faith and cheerfulness in affliction are an inspiration to all who meet her.

From there we returned to Casey, and later drove to the home of Bro, and Sr. Vivian Magaw of Tipp City, Ohio. With them we drove to the rural church known as the Brush Creek Church of God. There we had the pleasure of speaking, not to a small group of "called-outness" but to as large and authorisation groups. ones," but to as large and enthusiastic a group as it has ever been our pleasure to meet in their regular services. Here, too, were a number whom we had met on previous occasions at various conferences. With a number of others we enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. A. J. Hoke of Dayton. This will cling to our memories as one of the bright spots of our trip. We also made the acquaintance of our aged brother, Rufus A. Curtis, whose writings we have long enjoyed.

From Dayton we were not long in locating

Bro, and Sr. Grover Gordon in Lawrenceville, Ohio, and of having the privilege of looking over their newly remodeled church building. We spoke for this small but zealous congregation that evening. This was our first meeting with Srs. Belle Hartman and Mamie Kauffman of whom we had heard for years.

One week was spent in Mt. Vernon, Canton. Akron with relatives. After this we drove to Cleveland, Ohio, early July 23, in time to attend the Golden Rule Church of God in both Sunday school and worship service. We had many inquiries concerning the welfare of the Carlson family of Los Angeles, Calif., who had formerly been workers in this Cleveland congregation. The home of Bro. W. S. Tomlinson and his talented daughter Ruth was our home for a brief time, and we fully enjoyed every minute of it.

Reaching South Bend, Ind., July 24, we had a good look at the edifice which that congregation has recently purchased and is giving a thorough renovation. Their efforts to spread the gospel should produce gratifying results when once they become established in this commodious place of worship.

After a few days of visiting in and around South Bend we went to Kokomo, Ind., where we spoke both morning and evening in a house filled to capacity. We feel that too much praise cannot be given to Bro, and Sr, Parker and Bro, and Sr, Harvey for the good that has been accomplished through their zeal and untiring efforts in building up this congregation through faith and prayer.

We have now been in the General Conference sessions for one week. Many are gathered here from the far corners of our land. There is one uppermost thought—to plan for more efficient efforts in the Master's work, It is, indeed, a joyous meeting together of those of like precious faith, who are also searching the Scriptures for additional light on prothe Scriptures 10. In phetic truth,

We plan a brief visit with Bro, and Sr. William Laning and Bro, Laurence Howell's family at Ripley, Ill., and shall then be en our way to California ere this is in print.

"Home, Sweet Home"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Conditions of entrance into Golden Rule Home are as liberal as absolute security permits. Write for full particulars concerning the Home and its advantages. Or, better still, come and visit the Home itself and let the Family tell their own story of its advantages and comforts.

A Permanent Bible Training School

A Challenge and an Opportunity

By the Editor

A NINE-MONTHS' Bible Training School will, the Lord willing, begin class work at Oregon, Illinois, October 2, 1939. This is a most progressive step in the history of the Church of God. It originated in the Ministerial Association and is authorized by the General Conference. It is the earnest hope of all that this Bible Training School will develop into a permanent institution to provide the very best in education for Christian life and service. The resolution to establish this new work was passed without a single dissenting vote at the largest attendance of any of the Conference business sessions.

The Curriculum

While definite plans are incomplete, the following tentative curriculum will give prospective students a vision of the type of work offered. Courses will be given covering those themes which the Church of God considers of special importance, such as: Conditional Immortality, Return of Christ, Kingdom of God, God's Plan of the Ages, God's Purpose in Israel, and the Christian Life. Also, there will be courses in English, history, sermon preparation, public speaking, church organization and administration, and kindred subjects.

Three years of work are being planned, but the School will be so conducted that any student attending for only one or two terms will receive several studies most necessary for public service. All studies will be presented with the primary purpose of educating young men and young women to better live and teach the truth.

Entrance Requirements

Students graduated from high school, or those of equivalent maturity, are sought. All students must be of high ideals. The term cost to each student is $200.00, which includes board, room, and tuition. Students will also be expected to pay for their textbooks. Registration should be made at once or as soon as possible. Simply address: The Bible Training School, Oregon, Illinois. Enroll now!

The Challenge

The Church of God is not large. We cannot hope to build rapidly, or to do "big things." Failure is altogether possible. Without the whole-hearted cooperation of all, and without the blessing of Jehovah, only grief awaits us. But there is no reason why the Church of God cannot work as a unit. "Is Christ divided?" The Bible Training School is reason enough why all churches and individual brethren of the Church of God must unite. God has promised to bless work done in His name. God has never failed! Shall the Church of God fail? Never!

The Outlook

The outlook for this new Bible Training School is bright. The leading ministers of the church believe the time has come to start a permanent Bible Training School. The youth of the church have shown by their support of the two summer courses that they are looking for training from leaders in the church of their own choice.

Those students who attended former educational endeavors of the Church of God are zealous to see this new Bible Training School. The alumni are already cheering to win the game.

The financial structure of the church is the soundest it has been for many years. There is a waning of the critical and jealous spirit among our people, and there is a growing spirit of cooperation and evangelization. We are ready to work, ready to progress, ready to receive blessing.

Young people of the Church of God, this is your day. The Bible Training School is your opportunity. It is your turn to speak. What do you say? COME!

ATTENDING MINISTERS

An important contributing factor in making the recent General Conference a success was the large attendance of ministers. Some reported they wished to come but were unable. In the following list of attending ministers those marked "x" are those who are beginners in the profession:

R. M. Abbott, Grand Rapids, Michigan O. J. Allard, Cedar Falls, Iowa F. L. Austin, Chicago, Illinois L. E. Conner, Dixon, Illinois Gerald Cooper, Eden Valley, Minnesota T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas John Eagleston, Pomona, California Harry Goekler, Hammond, Louisiana Grover Gordon, Springfield, Ohio Paul M. Hatch, Harvey, Illinois J. FISHERS OF MEN

Thirty-four ministers attended the General Conference. Thirty-four "fishers of men" should get up early in the morning, forget all else for the day, and go out to work. With but nominal success these thirty-four workers should find thirty-four students for the Bible Training School. Let each minister do his best to enroll one student, at least, and let all other ministers who were not at the Conference work, too, as some of the thirty-four may have difficulties with their bait and nets.

Scriously, try. Work hard, and keep at it! Who will be first to report success?

THE VOLUNTEER

Christian work is necessarily that of the volunteer. Jesus never forced men to serve Him. Forced labor is not service, but servitude. Great numbers will not volunteer to serve the Invisible Lord, but fall down before the visible gods. Yet Christianity prospers! Jesus knows best! He depends upon volunteers, for He knows their service is always the sweetest and the most dependable. Jesus wants that service which comes right out of big and honest hearts.

Christ still calls for volunteers, even in 1939. A few men hear; fewer will volunteer. They will not be the unhappy; they will not be the deceived. He who gives his life at the altar finds the richest treasures in life, and comes the closest to Him whom many others profess to follow. Oh, Church of God, there is a "falling away" in the army of God, and the Captain refuses to draft; so rally to the front and volunteer! Volunteer for God!

TWO WAYS TO SERVE

There are two very present and very pressing needs in starting the nine-months' Bible Training School. First, we need students. Second, we need money. We have no field man, but we can have many field men if all our brethren will really work to enroll students for the School. We are starting from "scratch." Send generous contributions. Invest your money in the boys and girls of the Church of God, and watch your investment grow!

The General Conference

THE Nineteenth Annual General Conference of the Church of God, held at Oregon, Illinois, August 1-13, was successful. Able teachers of God's Word had been secured by the Illinois Bible School, and many additional teachers and ministers were present to lead in making the Conference instructive and inspiring. Over four hundred attended. Twenty states and Ontario, Canada, were represented. An excellent spirit prevailed throughout the Conference, there were several baptisms, and plans are developing to do more and better educational and evangelistic work.

Following is a report of the daily business sessions:

August 1, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

President L. E. Conner opened the first business session of the Nineteenth Annual General Conference with singing, prayer, and the reading of Proverbs 1.

The President appointed Sr. Edna Brewer and Sr. Elizabeth Ordnung to serve as the Credentials Committee, and Bros. F. A. Stilson and Harvey Krogh, Jr., as Auditing Committee.

The President announced Friday, August 4, as election day, and expressed his desires to have all members of the Executive Board living reasonably near Oregon, Illinois, to facilitate the meeting of board members and conducting the business of the National Bible Institution.

It was moved by Bro. C. E. Randall and Bro. Paul C. Johnson to send words of sympathy to Bro. F. E. Siple in his bereavement, caused by the death of his daughter, Dorthy. Motion carried unanimously.

It was moved by Bro. C. E. Randall and Bro. Gerald Cooper to send words of sympathy to Bro. F. L. Austin in his bereavement, caused by the death of his son, William. Motion carried unanimously.

It was moved by Bro. Charles Netts and Sr. Leota B. Hanson to send words of sympathy to Bro. John Garard in his bereavement, caused by the death of his wife, Emma. Motion carried unanimously.

Sr. E. C. Ralisback, and Bros. C. E. Randall and James McLain discussed the publishing of a Bible storybook for children, and President L. E. Conner appointed these three as a committee to investigate the matter, and to report at a later business session.

Sr. Elsie Moore suggested the publishing of a children's Sunday school quarterly. President L. E. Conner appointed Sr. Elsie Moore, Sr. Tessa Laning, and another to be selected by these two, to study this matter and to report later in the Conference. Further, the President announced Saturday, August 5, as Sunday school day, and asked Bro. James McLain to present the needs of this part of our work.

Bro. Gerald Cooper moved to adjourn until 3:15 p.m., Wednesday. Motion carried.

August 2, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

President L. E. Conner opened the second session of the Conference with singing and the reading of Proverbs 2. Sr. E. C. Railsback offered prayer.

The Secretary's minutes of the first session were read and approved.

Sr. Elsie Moore reported that Sr. Verna Thayer would serve as the third member on the committee to plan for a children's quarterly, and indicated that the outlook was favorable toward publishing such a quarterly.

The chair called for open discussion on any questions. There being none, Bro. C. E. Randall moved adjournment until 3:15, Thursday. Motion carried.

August 3, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

President L. E. Conner opened the third session of the Conference with singing and reading of Proverbs 3. Bro. John Eagleston offered prayer.

The Secretary's minutes of the second session were read and approved.

Treasurer Leota B. Hanson gave the following report:

(3) The President made several trips during the year in the interest of securing new residents for the Home, and other business interests of the National Bible Institution.

(4) The President reported that the indebtedness of the Institution, which a year ago was above four thousand dollars, is now nearly all paid; that he has communicated with all creditors of the Institution, and that theywith but one exception-have consented to accept as full payment on their loans seventy-five percent of the face value. The President read several letters from creditors indicating a general willingness to so cooperate with the Institution in order that more and better work might be done.

The President then reported that, whereas all but one of the creditors had consented to the seventy-five per cent payment plan, additional money has since been contributed to the Indebtedness Fund. This money he proposes to pro rate among all creditors, and to then notify all that this will be the final payment, and that the indebtedness accounts of the Institution are closed.

Bro. Charles Netts gave an inspiring report of progress at Lawrenceville, Ohio. Within the past year over three thousand dollars has been spent in remodeling, and nearly all of this amount is already paid. Further, Bro. Grover Gordon has been secured as pastor. This work is being done by the hearty cooperation of a membership under thirty persons.

Bro. Arlen Marsh asked the status of interest on Annuity Bonds. The chair replied that the interest payments were resumed last fall, and that since then the payments have been kept up to date.

Bro. John Eagleston spoke words of praise for the work and outlook of the General Conference, and recommended that the Conference offer prayers of thanksgiving to God.

The President, too, spoke encouragingly of the progressive and sacrificing spirit of our brethren, as evidenced in various fields. He mentioned, especially, the work of Bro. S. J. Lindsay, pastor at Tempe, Arizona, where a new church has been recently erected.

Bro. Harry Goekler moved adjournment until 3:15 p.m., August 4. Motion carried.

August 4, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

Opening this fourth session of Conference, President L. E. Conner read Proverbs 4, Bro. G. E. Marsh led in prayer.

The Secretary's minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Auditing Committee reported through its chairman, Bro. F. A. Stilson, as follows:

"The Auditing Committee finds that the books of the National Bible Institution have been faithfully kept. However, no depreciation had been entered for furniture and equipment, which has now been done since reading of the financial reports, and with these changes the books have been approved."

> (Signed) F. A. Stilson Harvey Krogh, Jr.

(Note: the Treasurer's report as herein published is the corrected report; this to avoid much repetition.-Editor.)

Next came the election of officers, resulting as follows: President: L. E. Conner, Dixon, Illinois

1 Vice President: Leland Hanson, Leaf River, Illinois

2 Vice President: Earle Mogle, Rockford, Illinois Secretary: Sydney E. Magaw, Oregon, Illinois

Treasurer: Leota B. Hanson, Oregon, Illinois.

Sr. E. C. Railsback moved to adjourn until 3:15, August 5. Motion carried.

August 5, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

President L. E. Conner opened the fifth session of Conference, but being unable to stay, and finding but a small number who understood that at this meeting certain Sunday school work was to be discussed, suggested it might be better to postpone the meeting. However, he appointed Bro. C. E. Randall to take the chair while Bro. James McLain explained briefly the matter to be later more fully discussed.

Bro. James McLain explained that he and others thought the time had come when it would be wise and profitable to organize a national Sunday school depart-

Bro. G. E. Marsh moved adjournment to the call of the chair. Motion carried.

August 7, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

Following a song, President L. E. Conner called to order the sixth session of the General Conference. Prayer was offered by Bro. Walter Tomlinson.

The Secretary's minutes for the two previous meetings were read and approved.

The chair announced Wednesday as the day to consider the Sunday school work.

The chair appointed the following as a Survey Committee:

H. H. Hawkins W. F. Hoskins W. S. Tomlinson A. M. Jones H. S. Lasher Charles Netts Ezra Railsback Alfred Anthon Frank Laning Howard Appleby Lyle Rankin

Inasmuch as the Bereans had further business, and seeing that this was Berean Day of the Conference, the chair declared the session recessed until 11:00 a.m., Tuesday.

August 8, 1939, 11:00 a.m.

Following a song, the meeting was called to order by President L. E. Conner. He read Proverbs 8, and called upon Bro. R. M. Abbott for prayer.

The Secretary's minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Sr. E. C. Railsback, chairman of the committee to investigate the possibilities of publishing a children's storybook, reported that it seemed out of the question to now do any such work. Bros. G. E. Marsh and F. A. Stilson moved the report be received and the committee discharged. Motion carried.

Bros. G. E. Marsh, James McLain, C. E. Randall, and others favored publishing such a book, but considered that the Conference was too short a time to make plans, and that the Board of Religious Education should be the proper authority to do any such work.

Bro. Harvey Krogh introduced the motion made by the Ministerial Association relative to establishing a ninemonths' Bible Training School, which motion proposed the establishment of such a School this fall.

Bros. C. E. Randall and G. E. Marsh moved that the chair appoint a committee to draw up a resolution for the founding of the proposed School. Motion carried.

President L. E. Conner named the following committee: G. E. Marsh, C. E. Randall, and Harvey Krogh, Ir.

Bro. G. E. Marsh and Sr. E. C. Railsback moved that the Conference express its appreciation to the editor of The Restitution Herald. Motion carried, and there was a rising vote of appreciation.

Bros. C. E. Randall and C. E. Lapp moved that the Board of Religious Education be instructed to begin work on establishing a Correspondence School. There was considerable discussion, the motion was withdrawn, and, finally, another similar motion was made by Bros. M. W. Lyon and C. E. Lapp that this Board begin a Correspondence School if it is feasible. Motion carried.

Bro. Charles Netts moved adjournment. Motion carried.

August 8, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

President L. E. Conner opened the eighth session of the Conference with singing and the reading of Proverbs 9. Bro. G. E. Marsh offered prayer.

The Secretary's minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Bro. H. H. Hawkins reported for the Survey Committee, giving the following appraised values on local properties of the National Bible Institution:

Farm, 160 acres $ 8,000 Residence 3,000 Golden Rule Home 12,000 Bro. Hawkins reported that the residence in Oregon, Illinois, is rented for $25.00 per month, and recommended that it be given a coat of paint. He spoke praisingly of Golden Rule Home.

Bro. G. E. Marsh presented the following resolution: "Be it resolved that the Board of Religious Education be instructed to establish a nine-months' Bible Training School, beginning this fall, and empowered to make such arrangements as are necessary to carry out said instruction.

"Be it further resolved that the curriculum, entrance requirements, policies, financial and otherwise, and all matters pertaining to setting up and operation of said School be placed under their jurisdiction."

Bro. G. E. Marsh moved adoption of his resolution, and Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., seconded the motion.

Bro. C. E. Randall begged that time should not be wasted in discussing details, and that the motion be passed because the establishment of such a School will, in large measure, determine the future of the Church of God.

Bro. Harvey Krogh spoke to the motion, and testified as to the great help the former Bible Training School has thus far been to him in the ministry.

Bro. G. E. Marsh spoke of the modern demand for well trained men and women in the religious fields, and declared he was fully convinced the time had now come when the Church of God should start a permanent Bible Training School with nine-months' terms.

The Secretary read a letter from Bro. Norman J. Macleod of Pomona, California, pleading for the establishment of just such a School as was being considered. He wrote, in part: "Let us build the religious School. The religious School will, in turn, build our evangelistic work. The evangelistic work will build the church."

Bro. G. E. Marsh recommended Bro. Norman Macleod to the Conference as one well qualified in educational work.

Bro. Delbert Jones expressed his desire for the Church of God to establish a permanent School, saying he would attend if one is established this fall.

Others who also urged that the motion be passed were: Bros. Arthur Johnson, H. H. Hawkins, Harry Gockler, Alfred Anthon, Richard LeCrone, Leslie LeCrone, Ellsworth Routson, C. E. Lapp, and Srs. Muriel Randall, Mary Gesin, A. M. Jones, Jeraldyne Louks, and Sr. E. C. Railsback.

There being no further discussion the chair presented the question for vote. Motion carried without a single dissenting vote.

Bro. C. E. Lapp and Bro. Charles Netts moved to increase the number of members on the Board of Religious Education to five. Following considerable discussion by Bros. F. A. Stilson, M. W. Lyon, C. E. Randall, James McLain, and Sr. Leota B. Hanson, it was moved by Bros. Harvey Krogh and G. E. Marsh to amend the motion to the effect that the Secretary and Treasurer of the National Bible Institution be the two additional members to this Board. The amendment carried. The motion carried.

Bro. G. E. Marsh tendered his resignation from the Board of Religious Education, stating firmly, however, that he had planned to do so for several weeks, and that it was not to be understood as a gesture against the School project, which, in fact, he heartily favors.

Bro. M. W. Lyon protested Bro. Marsh's resignation, and the chair asked Bro. Marsh to reconsider the matter. To this Bro. Marsh replied that it might be possible for him to continue on said Board if he could be relieved as chairman of the Board.

The Secretary moved and Bro. Harry Goekler seconded that the President of the General Conference appoint annually the chairman of the Board of Religious Education, Motion carried.

Bro. G. E. Marsh suggested the editor of The Restitution Herald report his work, and the chair appointed the next regular session for such report.

Bro. C. E. Randall moved adjournment. Motion carried, and meeting adjourned until 11: a.m., Wednesday.

August 9, 1939, 11:00 a.m.

President L. E. Conner opened the ninth session of the Conference with singing and the reading of Proverbs 13. Bro. T. A. Drinkard offered prayer.

The Secretary's minutes were read, and approved as herein corrected.

The editor of The Restitution Herald reported that there are now over a hundred contributors of copy, that the subscription list has showed an upward trend, and gave the following list of leading states on the subscription roll:

Illinois	181	Nebraska	60
Ohio	161	Missouri	45
Indiana	97	Washington	45
California	89	Canada	39
Michigan	68	Texas	33

The total subscription list of The Herald was given as 1260. The total number of Truth Scekers' Quarterlies sold was given as 2018. The editor urged cooperation to increase the circulation of our publications.

Sr. E. C. Railsback and Bro. M. W. Lyon reported the California Conference and the Golden Rule Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, are paying to send The Herald to members who cannot afford to take it.

Bro. Charles Netts and G. E. Marsh spoke of the value of The Herald to isolated members.

Several spoke their appreciation of illustrations in The Herald.

Bro, F. A. Stilson advocated circulating The Herald among non-subscribers in preference to using Sunday school leaflets, inasmuch as The Herald contains copy relative to the Sunday school lessons.

Bro. C. E. Lapp moved to adjourn. Motion carried.

August 9, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

Following a song, President L. E. Conner opened the tenth session of the Conference by reading Proverbs 11.

The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and they were approved as herein corrected.

The President, finding it necessary to leave, called upon Bro. Leland Hanson, 1 Vice President, to take the chair.

The chair recognized Bro. James McLain, who spoke relative to a more organized and determined effort in Sunday school work. He advocated that all teachers, superintendents, and ministers should be more concerned about the education of our Sunday school children, emphasized that there is a present need for suitable material for children which is not to be found in the present Truth Seekers' Quarterly, and gave the following list of names to indicate that the denomination has many capable educators who should be able to plan desirable material: Leila Whitehead, Leland Hanson, Otto Dick, S. J. Lindsay, Mrs. F. L. Austin, Harry Sheets, Norman Macleod, F. A. Stilson, Mrs. Mary Gesin, Mrs. Verna Thayer.

Sr. Elsie Moore was the next speaker. She, too, advocated the preparation of work especially suitable for the children and early youth of the church, stating that the denomination is almost forced to look to questionable material to use for children in Sunday school work, and that the Church of God has the talent needed to prepare desirable material. She presented several samples of work, work that covered the needs of various ages up to where the present Truth Seekers' Quarterly would be acceptable and adequate.

Bro. C. E. Lapp questioned if Sr. Moore's samples followed the International Sunday School Lessons. Finding that they did not, he also questioned the advisability of using the International Lessons in the present work of the Truth Seekers' Quarterly.

Bro. James McLain moved the formation of a committee for the term of one year for the purpose of surveying our Sunday school needs, which committee will make recommendations at the 1940 session of General Conference, as to the most practical National Sunday school organization it is possible to have. Bro. J. R. LeCrone seconded the motion.

Sr. Elsie Moore stated that the present planned Children's quarterly can be prepared for sale at about ten cents each.

Bro. M. W. Lyon spoke in favor of the motion to have a committee to report next year at Conference relative to Sunday school work and a National organization, but also favored the immediate work on the proposed children's quarterly.

Bro. James McLain also favored immediate work on the present Children's project, but considered his motion nevertheless, in order and of real merit.

The motion carried; and the chair informed that he would leave the appointment of the members of this Sunday School Survey Committee to be made by President L. E. Conner.

Bro. C. E. Randall moved, and Paul C. Johnson seconded, that the General Conference support the preparation of Sunday school material for children as recommended by the Children's Quarterly Committee.

Bro. F. A. Stilson questioned if the present Truth Seekers' Quarterly would be in any way affected if the newly proposed Children's quarterly should be circulated among our churches. Bro. R. M. Abbott raised a similar question, and questioned the advisability of changing the present quarterly.

Bro. M. W. Lyon showed that it would be highly advisable not to alter the Truth Seekers' Quarterly, as many of our Sunday schools would continue, at least for a time, to use it.

Bro. T. A. Drinkard urged adoption of the motion, expressing his faith that our people in the southern states would heartily appreciate and surely use any Church of God helps for its children.

Bros. Charles Netts and Alfred Anthon also spoke in favor of the motion, saying they were sure that their respective churches would appreciate such material.

Sr. Verna Thayer also favored the motion, and told of her experiences in similar work that were very successful.

Motion carried.

Bro. C. E. Lapp suggested that when the children's Sunday school material is ready for sale, that samples be sent to every superintendent of Sunday schools of the denomination.

Bro. M. W. Lyon spoke words of appreciation for this new forward step in Sunday school work. He believes that the true spirit of the Lord is in the work, and that the church of tomorrow will greatly benefit by all the zealous and able work that we can do, but that if we use weak and out-dated methods in the training of our youth that the church of tomorrow will surely suffer.

Bro. G. E. Marsh spoke of how that it is his experience that a very close tie must exist between the Sunday school and church, and that the teachers in his congregation are so concerned about teaching the truths of the Bible as taught by the Church of God that there is a present departing from the use of the International Sunday School Lessons.

Bro. John Eagleston suggested that Sunday school classes would be more interested if given more opportunity to participate in the lessons.

Sr. H. H. Hawkins spoke to the contrary, stating that in the church she represents there are so many attending the Sunday school who come from non-member homes, that they really need much of the lecture type of teaching, as they are not well enough posted on the Bible to really intelligently discuss its various doctrines that we hold so dear.

Bro. James McLain reported attending a Sunday School Revival, and assured that there are unseen possibilities in Sunday school work.

Bro. M. W. Lyon introduced the question of various versions of the Bible, and moved that in all our Sunday school work the King James Version be discarded in favor of the American Revised Version. Bro. James McLain seconded the motion.

Bro. C. E. Randall questioned the advisability of the change, as nearly all our people use the King James Version, and he feared the subscription to Truth Seekers' Quarterly would be greatly diminished if such a step were taken.

Bro. T. A. Drinkard also opposed the motion. Bro. Walter Tomlinson also opposed the motion. Bro. Stilson suggested that it might be well to publish the text being studied in each lesson in both Versions, side by side, so as to lend a ready comparison to the student.

Bro. M. W. Lyon explained that the American Revised Version is nothing new, but that it has been tried and found to be superior over a period of about forty years. He challenged that the very sacredness of the Lord's work demands that we use the very best tools we can.

Bro. G. E. Marsh mentioned that scholars are now working on another American Revised Version, and that before the Conference took any such action as the motion called for it might be wise to wait, at least, until the new Revision is completed and offered for sale.

Bro. C. E. Randall again spoke against the motion, stating that he likes the King James Version. To illustrate, he mentioned that one certain late translation uses the word "boat" instead of "ark" in the account of the Flood. He feels that such modernizing has a tendency to destroy the sacredness of the Bible. Therefore, Bro. C. E. Randall moved, and Bro. Paul C. Johnson seconded, to table the motion made by Bro. M. W. Lyon. Motion carried.

Still relative to the question of the Revised Version, Bro. Marsh explained that there is a distinction between the English and the American Revisions.

Bro. C. E. Randall moved adjournment. Motion carried, and the meeting was adjourned until 11:00 a.m., Thursday, August 10.

August 10, 1939, 11:00 a.m.

Following a song, President L. E. Conner opened the eleventh session of Conference, reading from Proverbs 8:1-21. Prayer was offered by J. R. LeCrone.

The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and they were approved as read.

Bro. M. W. Lyon, statistician, gave his annual report of the church, Sunday school, and Berean census, which report will be later published in The Restitution Herald.

Bro. F. A. Stilson recommended that the National Bible Institution furnish uniform record books so as to encourage the accurate keeping of records by our various churches. To this the chair gave his approval, and promised that such would be done.

Bro. C. E. Lapp moved to adjourn; motion carried, and meeting was adjourned until 3:15. p.m.

August 10, 1939, 3:15 p.m.

After singing, President L. E. Conner opened the twelfth session of the Conference. He read Proverbs 16. Bro. Grover Gordon offered prayer.

The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and they were approved as read.

Bro. C. E. Lapp gave the following report for the Evangelistic Board:
Receipts

Balance on hand August 1, 1938 A refund (western trip) Total receipts	$ 19.50 31.77 205.38
	$256.65	256.65
Expenditures
Evangelism	$180.00
Postage	3.00
Bank charges	2.57
	$185.57	185.57
Balance on hand August 1, 1939		$ 71.08

Bro. Lapp reported that receipts are increasing, and the outlook is bright for future work. He proposed to support meetings especially in new fields, and to hold longer evangelistic campaigns than has been customary.

Bro. C. E. Randall read a report he had previously read before the Ministerial Association, in which he encouraged more evangelism, and reported that the Board of Evangelism had in the past year contributed financially to certain evangelistic efforts conducted by Bros. T. A. Drinkard, J. M. Morgan, and F. L. Austin.

The chair approved the tenor of the two reports made, and expressed his hope that much more evangelism, especially in new fields, might be done in the future. He urged that our people continue to contribute faithfully for progressive work, even as they have toward past burdens of indebtedness, and mentioned evangelism and the Bible Training School as being most deserving.

It was moved by Bro. M. W. Lyon that "This Conference approve the institution of Christian training correspondence courses for home study, and that the Board of Religious Education be instructed to exert its best efforts to provide such courses during the ensuing year." By amendments made by the Secretary and M. W. Lyon the motion finally read, and was so seconded, that "This Conference approve the institution of Christian training correspondence courses for home study, and that the Board of Religious Education be instructed to exert its best efforts to provide such courses as soon as possible." Amendments passed. Motion carried.

The Secretary read a letter from Sr. Gladys Barber of Corvallis, Oregon, addressed to Bro. John Eagleston, but which concerned the General Conference inasmuch as she was suggesting that there were places in the West where some young minister might do much good if, through help of the General Conference, one might be secured.

Bro. C. E. Randall reported that this was a worthy field, that it could support its own endeavor to the extent of possibly $40.00 per month, and that he favored looking into this field of labor in accord with the invitation.

Bro. C. E. Randall moved, and Bro. Leland Hanson seconded, that this letter be referred to the Board of Evangelism. Bro. M. W. Lyon urged sympathetic consideration of this western call for help, and that it be not sidetracked. Bro. C. E. Randall explained that it was not his purpose to sidetrack the request by having it referred to the Board of Evangelism, but to put the matter into the hands of those authorized to do such work. Motion carried.

The Secretary read letters from Bros. F. E. Siple and James A. Patrick. The chair referred Bro. Patrick's letter to the Board of Religious Education for consideration and reply, and Bro. Siple's letter, being itself a reply, did not require any action.

Bro. C. E. Lapp advocated having a field man to represent the National Bible Institution and all its activities just as soon as convenient.

Bro. Harry Goekler suggested having a Restitution Herald representative in every field of activity by our people.

Bros. James McLain and C. E. Lapp suggested listing in The Restitution Herald the names of all ministers attending the General Conference.

Bro. O. J. Allard emphasized our need of more trust in God and in prayer.

Bro. M. W. Lyon spoke of the moral obligations of the National Bible Institution, and questioned the correctness of leaving in people's minds the thought that the Institution is absolutely free from all indebtedness.

Bro. M. W. Lyon moved that this Conference instruct the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution to pay off the full accrued interest on Annuity Bonds as fast as the money comes in to enable such payment. Bro. F. A. Stilson seconded the motion.

The chair explained that about $1,900 of accrued interest has been carried on the hooks for several years, that from year to year there has been no claim for any of this by creditors, and, in fact, that the Institution does not know to whom this amount of interest is due.

The chair further explained that insofar as any moral obligation is concerned, that this particular item is no more sacred than other items that might still be brought against the Institution, running up into several thousand dollars.

The chair explained that when the depression came the National Bible Institution, like nearly all other institutions, received a very heavy blow, that he had done his very best to pay its debts and to save the Institution. It became necessary to discontinue paying of all interests, or the Institution would have gone into bankruptcy. He further explained that if we are now to resume payment of accrued interest on Annuity Bonds, it is altogether possible that much more indebtedness would rise up with equal claims for payment, though for years such creditors have been reconciled to their losses just as they had to take losses in other institutions or securities when the finances of the world were shaken.

The chair made it very plain that he should gladly pay every cent of every dollar of all indebtedness, but that he could not pay without the money to pay with; and that, therefore, in order to save the Institution and to continue to do active and progressive service for the Lord, he had paid just as much as he could, and in practically all cases had the ready acceptance, the thanks, and in some cases even praise on the part of the creditors for his having done so well.

Sr. E. C. Railsback moved to table the motion made by Bro. M. W. Lyon. Bro. C. E. Lapp seconded the motion.

Bro. M. W. Lyon still considered that the interest on Annuity Bonds should be paid, inasmuch as such parties had expected nothing on the principal, except the interest, and that they had not received any reasonable percentage, if any at all, of even the interest. He further questioned the correctness of taking from the records any debts without making an effort to ascertain the creditors.

Bro. Leland Hanson explained that the present known debts would not be lost track of, though removed as listed current debts.

Bro. H. S. Lasher suggested that an effort be made to find out just who the creditors are, and that they would probably cancel the claims that they might make if they were fully informed of the situation.

The chair pleaded again that with him one debt was just as sacred as another, that he had done his very best, that if old and almost forgotten debts were dug into, almost impossible difficulties would be involved.

The motion by Sr. E. C. Railsback to table Bro. M. W. Lyon's motion was carried.

Bro. F. A. Stilson and the Secretary, though regretting the situation, spoke words of appreciation that the problem had received open consideration on the Conference floor, so as to make it perfectly clear and above board as to the actual situation.

In all this consideration there was no question raised about the sincerity of those who have done their best to rid the Institution of its debts, nor was there any plan presented whereby the full indebtedness could be completely wiped out.

There being no further discussion, Bro. Leland Hanson moved to adjourn. Motion carried.

August 12, 1939, 11:00 a.m.

After singing, President L. E. Conner opened the thirteenth business session of the Conference. He read Proverbs 22:1-23. Bro. F. L. Austin offered prayer.

The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and they were approved as herein corrected.

The Secretary, who had been appointed chairman of the Board of Religious Education, gave a report of this Board, stating that steps were being taken to establish a nine-months' Bible Training School to begin this fall on October 2; stating, however, that this year the School would be only eight months in duration. The cost of tuition, board, and room, combined, is to be $200.00 for the term, i.e., $100.00 per semester.

Bro. M. W. Lyon moved that the Census Committee be continued as a permanent work of the General Conference, and that the President annually appoint such a committee. Sr. Leota B. Hanson seconded the motion. Motion carried. The President appointed Bro. M. W. Lyon to be chairman of such committee, and to report the church census at the 1940 General Conference.

Bro. F. L. Austin expressed his agreement with Bro. M. W. Lyon regarding the cancellation of debts.

These minutes of the final business session were read and approved.

Sr. Leota B. Hanson moved to adjourn. Motion carried.

Thus came to a close a most enjoyable and profitable meeting of many brethren from many states and Canada. The Church of God now looks forward with renewed zeal and optimism. May God bless His people.

Sydney E. Magaw, Secretary.

How Can the Church of God Save Her Young People?

By Evan Knodle

THE situation is serious. For some time we have been "viewing with alarm" the rapid rise in crime and juvenile delinquency, the falling away in attendance and membership in Sunday schools and churches, and general indifference to religion in every form. True, there seems to be a tendency among some people to get back to the true "old time religion" when people diligently studied their Bibles; but the general trend is away from true Bible Christianity. Something will soon have to be done, if we are going to keep the churches alive. We must keep the churches alive, for it is live churches that spread the gospel of Christ to the world.

About the first thing that should be done to save the young people is to save the "old" people. These older people have been converted to the doctrines of the Church of God, and may have been in the faith for a number of years, but do they practice what they believe? Do they make an carnest effort to teach the truths to their children? The lack of Biblical education among the young people today would indicate that they do not.

Since the child receives its first and most lasting impressions at an early age, the home should be run from the very start on the primary principle of Christianity, love. The parents should be firmly grounded in the doctrines of the Church of God, and should know a great number of Bible stories to tell the child at the earliest possible age. As the child grows up, the parents should read and discuss the Bible with him so that he will come to respect and love the Bible as the most wonderful Book ever written. As the child comes more or less to lean on the church for more advanced study, the parents should continue to study with him, so that they may understand his changing ideas, and be better able to understand him when the time may come for help or advice.

Parents may do their best, but not all are teachers capable of bringing out the infinite beauties of the Bible. The Sunday school was instituted to provide capable teachers, willing to give their time and talents to the teaching of children and adults. The teachers of all Church of God Sunday schools should be provided with material prepared by the Church of God itself.

The beginners should be taught the stories of the Bible, and where to find them in their Bibles. Then, as they advance in age, they should be gradually taught the true meaning of the stories, ending finally in a thorough grounding in doctrine. These lessons should be so arranged and graded that the child would grow in faith and in doctrine, instead of constantly rehashing stories in lessons prepared by an organization not in harmony with our belief and not getting very far. So much time is spent in following the lessons prepared in the quarterlies now used that there is no time left to ground the child in our basic doctrines. It is true that our young people have a fair idea what they believe, but they do not have Biblical texts in their minds, ready for quick reference when the time comes to defend their faith or teach someone else the gospel of Christ.

A list of texts supporting the doctrines of our faith might be prepared, and some kind of certificate could be given to every young person memorizing the texts in this list.

All along the route of religious education, the child should be given the proper kind of encouragement. He should be praised when he does a good piece of work, and criticized in a kindly manner when he makes a mistake, told how to do the work better the next time, and helped in doing this if necessary. He should not be praised falsely when he does not do so well. He will find out in one way or another that he was being misled, and will be of no use to the church from then on. If he is backward, he should be given special instruction. Above all, he should be impressed with the fact that he is an important member of the church, and that he has a certain responsibility in its growth.

While the child is growing in knowledge of the Bible, he should also be given a chance to follow a hobby specially suited to his talents, and this in a Christian atmosphere. An organization patterned somewhat after the Boy Scout movement would be ideal for the boys, and a Junior Dorcas Society would be suitable for the girls. While the child would be following a hobby not directly related to the Bible, the Bible would be studied at every meeting and would be discussed during work periods. In this way the children would learn to do everyday things as well as other children, and would have in addition the constant contact with the Bible and Christian ideals. It would require the services of a few "too busy" parents to supervise

ARE YOU SEARCHING THE BIBLE, BEREANS?

By G. Eldred Marsh

The following is a reprint of a poem written by Brother Marsh when he was a resident of Marshalltown, Iowa, and was handed to the editor by Sr. Anna Drew of Dixon, Illinois.

Are you searching the Bible, Bereans,
As did the Bereans of old?
Do you love to study its precepts,
And its wonderful beauties unfold?
Are you seeking the work for instruction
That will point to the pathway of life:
That you may continue steadfastly
Through happiness, sorrow, and strife?

Are you searching the Bible, Bereans,
With your hearts overflowing with love?
Are you trying to practice its teachings
For the sake of your Savior above?
Do you seek for its life-giving treasures,
As though you were delving for gold?
Do you praise God, its Author, in heaven,
For each glittering gem you behold?

Are you searching the Bible, Bereans,
With a heart that is longing for truth?
Are you willing and glad to receive it,
While still you continue in youth?
May Jesus, the Savior, be with you,
And teach you the truth day by day;
May He open your hearts to receive it,
For Christ's sake I earnestly pray.

CHISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

By Mary Richardson, Hammond, La.

"It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful" (1 Cor. 4:2). To clearly understand stewardship we must first know what a steward is. A steward is a person who has charge of another's business during his absence, and to whom he must give an account upon his return. We, as Christ's followers, are His stewards, and must give an account when He returns. God's Word was left with us, and it is our duty to proclaim the gospel to others.

A faithful Christian steward will always tell others of Christ.

Christian stewardship is always honest, and is always ready to render unto God the things that are God's (Matt. 22:20, 21). We find in Hebrews 7:2-6 that Abraham gave a tenth of all to the Lord, and in Proverbs 3: 9, 10 that we should "honour the Lord... with the first-fruits of all thine increase." All this is implied in Christian stewardship.

Faithful stewards always receive blessings from God. When Israel was faithful to God, and worshiped Him only, God showered great blessings upon the nation (Mal. 3:10, 11). To have spiritual happiness and prosperity, it is necessary to receive God's blessings.

"But such as I have give I thee" (Acts 3:6). Peter possessed neither gold nor silver, but he wanted to help the lame man who lay at the gate. He had God's Word, reinforced by the power that Christ had given him, and he said to the man, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." We should use whatever talent we possess in furthering God's interests.

Every person who faithfully does his duty toward God has an inward joy. This joy will be greater if one meets his financial obligations to God.

May we ever strive to be faithful stewards.

FACING REALITIES

This editorial is primarily intended for those of us who were fortunate enough to attend the General Conference, but is applicable to all.

We are no longer planning or working on theory. The plans that we have been working on for the past several days are now ready to be carried out. For example, the new Berean publication must soon begin to take concrete form, else it will be a failure. That will depend largely on you, for the editors and publishers will surely do their part. The planned Berean Book, that has been left in the hands of the Publishing Committee, must be started soon, also. In addition to all of these things the little, individual, personal plans of all of us must be put into operation. We are now facing realities, and the sooner we realize it the better off we shall be, and the more work we can do for the Berean society.

THE NINTH KING OF JUDAH

After the kingdom of God's people was divided into Israel and Judah, Uzziah became Judah's ninth king. He became king at the age of sixteen years. That isn't much older than many of you who read this page. Do you feel you will be ready to be the president of the United States when you are sixteen?

The fact that his mother is named in the Bible has led Bible students to think she must have been a good woman. The women in the Bible that you probably think of were either mentioned because they were very good, very bad, or for some other special reason. In Job we find another reason. His daughters are named. Then it says, "And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job." Perhaps Uzziah's mother helped him when he was beginning his reign. The meaning of her name, Jecoliah, as given in my Bible index is "able through Jehovah."

As long as Uzziah sought the Lord, God caused him to prosper. It is the same today. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord" we are told in Psalm 33:12.

When Uzziah became rich and powerful "his heart was lifted up," but not as was Jehoshaphat's. Jehoshaphat grew nearer to God, and lived closer to Him, for his heart was lifted up "in the ways of the Lord," as we learned in our fifth lesson for this quarter (2 Chron. 17: 6). But Uzziah's heart was lifted up to his destruction!

Did you ever see anything destroyed? Sometimes things are destroyed by fire. That is a swift destruction. But there is a slower way, especially when it begins in one's heart. Let us watch Uzziah's downfall.

We find that he sinned against God by going into the Temple with an evil purpose in his mind. He should have gone in to worship. But he wanted to do the priest's work. His heart must have been very bad. We know that God had chosen the priests from the Levite tribe. They were the only ones to wait upon the Temple, Uzziah had come to think he was everything. He was drunken with his own power and wealth. He did become very angry when the priests tried to warn him, didn't he? We, too, are often warned by our loved ones when they see us beginning to do wrong. Sometimes we must be punished to help us remember right from wrong.

How sad it is that King Uzziah refused to listen to the kind priests, for he suddenly became a leper! God's punishment is sure when one does evil intentionally.

In our daily readings we find that God reminds his people to not forget to serve Him, especially when prosperity comes. There is that feeling of power and of being strong in one's own self that too often creeps into the lives of the wealthy. A single dollar can make one feel rich, if it is held up close enough to one's eyes. Our Bibles tell us that the love of money is the root of all evil.

Jesus reminds us that a man's life does not consist of only material things (Luke 12:15). Far from it! Do you not recall "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," which was one of our texts of gold for this quarter? Let us not forget God's promise, "And all these things shall be added unto you." God is able to provide all we may need. No, I did not say all we may want, or even what we think our needs may be. Let us leave that up to God and be satisfied to work for Him with what He gives us. Let us pray for one another that we may not be high-minded, nor put our trust in uncertain riches, but that we may trust in "the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." We should be "rich in good works," ready to help those in need.

Sr. Elizabeth Scoville, a member of the Oregon, Ill., Church of God and a resident of Byron, Ill., died August 14. The editor conducted funeral services from the Rock of Ages Funeral Home in Byron, August 17.

Bro. and Sr. C. E. Lapp and daughter Elaine, and Sr. Edna Brewer left St. Cloud, Minn., August 17, on a trip to the West, where they will visit with Bro. Lapp's relatives of Sunnyside, Wash.

Bro, S. J. Lindsay delivered the evening sermon, Aug. 20, for the Oregon, Ill., congregation.

Bro. J. Arthur Johnson of Sac City, Iowa, preached for the Burr Oak, Ind., Church of God August 15, 16.

Leota B. Hanson accompanied J. Arthur Johnson to Peoria, Ill., August 18, to study the possibilities of doing evangelistic work there. They report good prospects.

"We, too, have been hoping that the time would come when we could take off a stone in the indebtedness wall. . . . We are sending you a check for $110.50,"—Bro. R. F. Dunbar and sons. Thank you!

ILLINOIS STATE CONFERENCE

The annual business meeting of the Illinois State Conference was called to order at 3:00 p.m., Friday, August 11, 1939, at Oregon. The meeting was opened with song followed by Scripture reading by Paul C. Johnson.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer's report was read and approved.

Reports were read from the following churches: Casey, Dixon, Macomb, Oregon, Eldorado, Rockford, Salem, and Ripley.

Bro. Paul Johnson stated that the Lanark church had been sold for $650,00, and that one third of the money was to go to the National Bible Institution, one third to the State Conference, and one third to the local church. Some money had been received, but there are more notes to become due which will be divided as stated above. Also, Bro. Johnson stated he felt a committee should be appointed to look after such church buildings that are not in use, seeing that they do not fall into other hands.

The next order of business was the elec-tion of officers, Bro. Harvey Krogh stated that Bro. Paul Johnson, who had acted as State Conference president for several years, thought it time to have a change and wished not to be considered as president any longer. The election resulted as follows: president, Walter Wiggins, Eldorado; vice president, Charles Lindsay, Pearl City; secretary, Tessa Laning, Ripley; treasurer, Delos Andrew, Ore-The two board members elected for two years were Leota Hanson and Paul Johnson. Those holding over from last year are George Siple and Frank Laning.

Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., gave an oral report concerning his work as evangelist. He thought it very much better if there could be more pastors or more men working. Fredericktown, Mo., wants more work or preaching. Bro. Sydney Magaw asked if Bro. Krogh could give suggestions as to ways of getting more work done. Camden and Christian Neck were discussed.

There was a motion by Bro, Leland Hanson and seconded by Bro, Francis Burnett that we have two dollar days during the year, Motion carried.

Quarterly conferences were discussed and their continuance urged.

Sr. Mary Gesin, in the name of the Conference, expressed great regret at losing Bro. Harvey Krogh, and wished him Godspeed in his work at the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church of God.

A rising vote of thanks, suggested by Sr. Leota Hanson, was given Bro. Paul Johnson for his long service as president.

Bro, James Watkins made a motion that the chairman appoint an Evangelistic Committee of two, with him to be on that committee. The motion was seconded by John Mercer. Motion Magaw moved that the State board have the moral support of the State Confer-ence to carry on this work, as thought needed. Seconded by Leland Hanson, Motion carried. Walter Wiggins, the new president, spoke a few words.

There was a motion to adjourn. Motion carried, Prayer by Bro. Magaw.

Tessa Laning, Secy.

MRS, JOHN A. GARARD

Emma S. Curtis was born north of Frederick, Ohio, in Miami Co., April 29, 1883, At her birth her parents lived about two hundred yards north of the cemetery where she was laid to rest. During young womanhood she accepted Jesus as her Savior. On October 31, 1901, she was united in marriage to John A. Garard.

At the time her husband became a Christian she was reimmersed with him by Bro. J. H. Anderson, Nov. 15, 1917, and since that time, until hindered by failing health, she was a faithful worker for the Lord. After a lingering illness she fell asleep August 1, 1939. to await the call of the Master.

She leaves to mourn her death her faithful husband, John A. Garard; a sister, Mrs. Anna Kelly; a neice, Marjorie Shepley; and a nephew, Charles Kelly, besides a host of friends.

HOW CAN THE CHURCH OF GOD SAVE HER YOUNG PEOPLE?

this work, but the results would be very satisfying.

When the child reaches the third year in high school or "young people" stage, he should be given an opportunity to go out and meet and mix with other young people, and still not be exposed to the danger of getting in with "the wrong crowd." A gospel team would give him this opportunity, and would make it possible for him to display musical or other talents for the purpose of spreading the Word which he has been taught since infancy.

While out on evangelistic work, the young people would naturally meet people opposed to their doctrinal views. Here they would be given a chance to apply their knowledge gained through previous years of training in explaining their views, and they would, no doubt, be instrumental in bringing a number of other young people into the church. If properly organized, the gospel unit would become so interesting that you could not drag a member away from the line of duty by holding out worldly pleasures as an inducement. Everyone could have something to do. Those talented musically could furnish the music, and others could publish a bulletin, or take care of other matters necessary for a smooth-running organiza-

If the young people are trained carefully from childhood by the Sunday school with the aid of their parents, are permitted to develop naturally with appropriate hobbies and supplementary athletic activities, and are given an opportunity to use their talents in church work under helpful supervision when they are older, there will be no need to save them. The young people will save the church.

MRS. ETTA BALL ELLIOTT

Etta Ball was born September 15, 1887, to the late David and Tryphena Ball, and was the granddaughter of the late Peter H. and Ann Bouk, Bro. Bouk was the founder of the Church of God in Fonthill, Ont., near where Sr. Elliot was born and lived all her life. She and Bro. Elliott were baptized by Bro.

L. Austin in 1903, before their marriage. They became members of the Church of God, and have lived true to their profession of faith in Christ.

She became the wife of Bro. C. B. Elliott September 20, 1905. To this union were born three children, David, Donald, and Helen. There was one foster daughter, Hazel, who was reared as one of the family. Hazel died nine years ago leaving one daughter, Margery.

Sr. Elliott leaves to mourn her death: her husband; the three children; three grand-children; one sister, Mrs. Earnest Shute; one aunt, Mrs. Pryeilla Clark; and other relatives and a host of friends.

The large concourse of people that attended the funeral, the great abundance and arrangement of flowers in the most beautiful display the writer has ever seen at a funeral, show the high esteem in which Sr. Elliott was

The writer has good reason to know of her goodness of heart, having spent about six months in the Elliott home, while supplying the churches at Fonthill and Niagara Falls.

Knowing Sr. Elliott's great love for her home, the writer spoke words of comfort from the subject: "The Eternal Homestead."

We laid her peacefully at rest in the Font-hill cometery, there to await the call of the Master who will change her body of suffering and make it like unto His glorious body. James A. Patrick.

MRS. D. E. EHMER

Goldie M. Darby was born in Doniphan County, Kan., August S, 1878, and died July 31, 1939, at the hospital in Raymond, Wash. She was married to D. E. Ehmer Easter Sunday, 1919. She was baptized at the age of nineteen years, while living at Mound City, Mo., and was for many years an active member of the Church of God at Corvallis, Ore.

After her marriage she lived mostly among attenders, but was always ready to contend for strangers, but was always ready to contend for the truth, and was faithful until death. She is survived by her husband; her father,

W. Darby of Gresham, Ore.; a sister, Mrs. Alice Pryor; a brother, George Darby of Port land, Ore.; and several nieces, nephews, and cousins.

The many beautiful flowers and the people who attended the funeral services showed the esteem in which she was held by her neighbors. A. W. Darby.

MRS. WALTER L. MILLER

Elsie S. Gesin, the only daughter of Bro. and Sr. Ernest Gesin, was born March 17, 1882, near Forreston, Ill., and died August 10, 1939, at her home near Freeport, Ill. She was united in marriage to Bro. Walter L. Miller on September 9, 1903, which union was blessed with one son, Ernest L., and two daughters, Mrs. Vinona Bear, and Elma L., at home with her father.

Early in life she obeyed the teachings of Early in the sac obeyed the tearings of the gospel, and was baptized by her cousin, Elder S. J. Lindsay. She continued firm in her belief in these truths until her death. She was a loving and self-sacrificing wife and mother, and her most outstanding characteristic was her patient cheerfulness in the great suffering she endured in later years.

Mrs. Miller leaves to mourn her death: her husband, her son and two daughters, five grandchildren, three brothers, Charles F., Earl F., and Emil L., several nicees and nephews, as well as more distant relatives and many friends. She rests in peaceful sleep, awaiting the call of the Master to that perfect life when suffering will be no more.

Funeral services were conducted on Sunday,

August 13, at Adeline, Ill., by Elder F. L. Austin, assisted by Elder Harvey Krogh, Jr. Bro. Robert Hardesty sang two beautiful hymns, "It Is Well With My Soul," and "Near to the Heart of God."

The following verse, which was found in Sr. Miller's Bible, had often given her solace in

"I have nothing to do with tomorrow, My Savior will make that His care, Should He fill it with trouble or sorrow. He'll help me to suffer and bear.

"I have nothing to do with tomorrow,
Its burdens then why should I share?
Its grace and its faith I can't borrow,
Then why should I borrow its care?"

"My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness" (2 Cor. 12:9). Mary A. Gesin.

DORTHY ANN SIPLE

Dorthy Ann Siple, aged seventeen years, daughter of Elder F. E. Siple, 140 Celia St., S.E., Grand Rapids, Mich., died July 31, 1939.

Dorthy was an active worker in the Southlawn Park Church of God of which her father was pastor for many years. She was of a retiring disposition, a student of much promise, who lived in an intellectual world largely apart from those around her. She graduated from Godwin Community High School with distinction this last spring. She is survived by her father (her mother having died in 1930), her stepmother who tenderly cared for her throughout her illness, and five sisters: Marjorie E., Mildred R., Mar-cile L., Jeanette M., and Virginia Lee.

The funeral service was held in her home church, which was crowded to capacity by hundreds of friends and relatives who had known and loved her. She rests securely in the Master's keeping awaiting His return, for she had answered affirmatively the question of her Lord: "Wilt thou not from this time cry unto me, My father, thou art the guide youth?" (Jer. 3:4). G. E. Marsh, F G. E. Marsh, Pastor.

WILLIAM AUSTIN

William Lloyd Austin, son of F. L. and Mary Austin, was born February 5, 1900, He was baptized into Christ in 1923, and was united in marriage with Miss Nelle Stowe on united in marriage with Miss Nelle Stowe in Easter Sunday in 1924.

He died July 26, 1939, leaving surviving, of his immediate family, his wife, his father, and three sisters—Ruby, wife of John Railton, Rockford, Ill.; Mary, wife of Leland Hanson, Leaf River, Ill.; and Ethel, wife of Paul Johnson, Oregon, Ill.

The writer has known William, as he was always known and spoken of by his friends, during his entire lifetime, and when a boy he was a most kind, gentle, and affectionate youth. He grew to manhood in Fonthill, Ont., and some eighteen years ago came with his parents and family to Illinois, in which State parents and family to Illinois, in which State he continued to reside the remainder of his natural life. After appropriate services, at which many beautiful floral pieces gave silent testimony of love and affection of friends and brethren in Christ, we laid him to rest in the cemetery beside the Oregon Church of God where his beloved mother had slept for some ten years, awaiting the return of earth's coming King.

Raising Money and Men

By G. E. Marsh

It is much easier to raise money than men.

Many people are willing to give of their money, but are unable or unwilling to give of themselves. That is, they feel, and rightly so, that to contribute of their material means to the cause of Christ requires much less sacrifice on their part than it would if they were to give of their time and talent. Unconsciously, they choose the easier, the less direct and less personal path of service.

Of course, money must be found with which to carry on any extensive program or purpose, for men must live while they labor. Even Jesus met this wholly material but unavoidable requirement. He paid His taxes, He appointed a treasurer to handle His funds, and when He was hungry He sent agents into the city with money to buy bread. His own physical wants were not miraculously supplied, at least, on all occasions.

In the early days of the church there were many who contributed generously to "the necessity of saints" at Jerusalem and elsewhere, while Paul labored with his own hands, plying needle and thread, that he might be a burden to no one.

There were in those days, as in these, many more people who gave of their money for the spread of the truth than there were who gave of their time and energy. There were many financially "contributing brethren" in Asia Minor, but only one Paul, one Barnabas, one John Mark, and a handful of others, who gave their lives entirely to the evangelizing of the world.

So it is today. And the consequence is that the church needs men more than it needs money! And the Church of God is finding it more difficult to secure men than to secure money. That is why I am making this appeal to our young people today.

The church wants you far more than it wants your money! That is the reason why it has established a Bible Training School where you may be received as a "living sacrifice," wholly, completely consecrated to the work of the ministry of Jesus Christ, and where you may be instructed in the best methods of using your lives in His service.

It is young lives we are the more anxious to obtain for this work—young men and young women before whom stretch all the remaining years of this rapidly passing gospel era. We want the vigor, the zeal, the quenchless energy, the resistless enthusiasm, the glowing hopefulness of youth to direct and educate for service to Christ until He comes!

Let the older ones—and the younger ones who cannot give their time and talent—furnish the money to carry on this great final campaign of conquest, but let the young folk who will give themselves enroll at once in the School of evangelism. The time is short!

OCTOBER 2, OPENING DAY

In less than one month the Bible Training School will begin its regular work. October 2 is opening day. Every student should be present for the first roll call. Punctuality and success are twins.

On the front page of this Herald Brother G. E. Marsh presents the Bible Training School. From the very beginning, Brother Marsh has been a member of the Board of Religious Education, and he is officially presenting this new and progressive undertaking to all our readers.

Young men and young women of the Church of God, read the front page and seriously plan to enroll for the training now being offered by your own church.

FOR ALL YOUTH

The Bible Training School is being planned to benefit both young men who wish to prepare for the ministry and all young men and young women of high ideals.

Many of our young people have for years been praying for just such a School. It is now being offered. It now rests with the youth of the Church of God to enroll.

THE COST IS LOW

The cost is remarkably low. Board, room, and tuition are being offered for only two hundred dollars. Some have asked how this cost can be placed so low; none has suggested the figure too high. Nor does the two hundred dollars have to be paid at one time. Instead, that amount may be paid in hundred dollar amounts at the beginning of each semester, and if necessary monthly payments can be arranged.

LENGTH OF TERM

Due to preparation time, the School this first year will be for eight months only. Hereafter, the regular ninemonths' term will be maintained.

Students are urged to enroll this first year that they might help to build up this work. For the School to be a success it must be a success its first year.

"GOMER, AND ALL HIS BANDS"

Hitler is all the news. No Caesar could better say, "I came, I saw, I conquered." Versailles has not smothered Hitler's ambition of the Deutschland Uber Alles. Danzig is his fatted calf.

At nine o'clock, Friday morning, September 1, Germans bombed Warsaw, the capital of Poland. Also, Hitler ordered the German army to use force against Poland, which order was made on Thursday and thus preceded the attack on Warsaw. This bombing was no unintentional "off side," for at about the same time eight Polish towns were bombed. All neutral ships in the Baltic were warned that they entered the harbor of Danzig at their own risk.

Poland heard the hiss and shuddered. As if in a daze Poland watched the coil, and stiffened with the spring. There was no way, and little time, to dodge. Poisonous fangs spill their deadly venom in Poland's flesh. There is a hollow cry for help. Friends try to save her, but it may be too late.

Just why has Hitler struck?

The Dictator answers, "The German army will conduct a fight for honor and the right to the life of the resurrected German people with firm determination."

If the "corridor" to the Baltic Sea were really peopled by the Germans, there would be a reason for some little sympathy to the German demands. But such is not the case. The Poles far outnumber the Germans in this section, and they have no intent of submission. True, Danzig is an important step to Germany in her rise of power, but Danzig is more important to Poland in the maintenance of her present identity. When Danzig is swallowed, Poland must become a puppet state to the swallower. Yes, "The cat licks his whiskers." (See editorial of March 21.)

These are dreadful days. It may yet be discovered that "Gomer and all his bands" are forming. "Meshech and Tubal" (Moscow and Tobolsk, Russia) are now joined, too, with Gomer. All for an onslaught "against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days" (Ezek. 38:6-16)!

A Better Time Coming

By W. S. Tomlinson

IT IS generally believed that a better time is coming, but as to the means of bringing it about there are many opinions.

Some years ago it was thought that knowledge and education would bring about that happy time, but as knowledge increases so does evil. It has been proven that what can be used to man's advantage can also be used to his disadvantage. It is claimed by some that men are learning by experience how to better their conditions, and that though they are now in trouble and distress they will in the future profit by past experiences. This, too, is a false idea, for one generation passes away before the next learns the lesson of wisdom.

Again, there are those who advance the idea that the spread of Christianity and the knowledge of Christ will bring about the desired results. No doubt, this would help matters very much. But where are the doctrines of Christ practiced? Is it by those high in authority; those who have power to do great good? Very seldom. The fact is, a true knowledge of Jesus is so rare that when He was here He asked, in the spirit of prophecy, this question: "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8).

However, there is a way by which the better time will be brought about. It is expressed in the prayer of Jesus when He taught the disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven" (Matt. 6:10). When God's kingdom comes His will shall be done on earth. Judging from past experience, that seems to be the only way by which it can be accomplished. Man has been experimenting with various forms of government for nearly six thousand years, and appears to be no nearer a solution now than at the beginning.

The Word of God is the only reliable authority we have regarding the future, and it reveals a plan of bringing righteousness and peace and good will to all mankind. It is written in Isaiah 32:1, "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." This is absolute. Isaiah was a prophet of Israel. It had long been a matter of promise with the Israelitish nation that it should have a righteous and everlasting king. This belief was based upon the promise made to Abram that in him and his seed all the families of the earth should be blessed (Gen. 12:1-4; 15:18). This promise was confirmed to Isaac, Abram's son, and, again, unto Jacob, the son of Isaac, in these words, "I am the Lord

God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed; ... and in thy seed shall all families of the earth be blessed (Gen. 28:13, 14).

As time went on, these promises were enlarged to the extent of showing how the seed would be developed. When the children of Abraham came to occupy their own land, Moses and others were appointed as judges to rule them, but after a time they clamored for a king to go before them that they might be like other nations. In 1 Samuel 8:7 it is recorded that the Lord said to Samuel, who was then judge, "Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me that I should not reign over them." From this we learn that God was their ruler and king, but they wanted a man king. Their request was granted. Saul was appointed king, but on account of his disobedience was removed and David was anointed to be king over Israel in Saul's stead.

From that time the kingdom of God and the kingdom of Israel became synonymous expressions. Compare 1 Kings 1:35 with 1 Chronicles 28:5.

Because of David's righteousness through obedience to God's commandments, exceeding great promises were made to him. When he desired to build a house for the ark of God to dwell in, God through Nathan the Prophet told David what He would do for him. "I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever" (2 Sam. 7:12, 13).

Long after David's death the prophets made frequent reference to him and the establishment of his kingdom. Jeremiah said, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUS-NESS" (Jer. 23:5, 6).

Isaiah, too, prophesied of the man who was to occupy the throne of David. Using the form of speech common with the Hebrews in speaking of things past or future as present, he foretold, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his

Raca, or Thoughts on the Judgment

By Norman Macleod

"But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire" (Matt. 5:22).

THE horrors of eternal torment have been made lurid by the teachers of most religions. They have based their doctrines on texts that have been distorted to fit pagan mythology, and to drag them in their distorted forms into the teachings of Christianity. But the enlightened mind revolts at the thought of a god who could punish his creatures by such methods. Such ideas are not those of punishment, but of revenge. Punishment is for the purpose either of correction or of annihilation. The understanding of the use of the word "judgment" is one that leads to a long line of misconceptions. The moment that the word arises, there is the picture of the courtroom scene where a trial is conducted, and the judgment given by the judge. The more correct understanding would be given by saying the "sentence." We thank the Lord that most of us have reached that stage of enlightenment when we no longer believe in eternal torment in eternal fire. Several key words are found in the verse which we have quoted that gives an entirely different idea about the teachings of Jesus which we here consider.

To authoritatively tell the average Christian that he is in danger of the judgment conjures to his mind ideas of torment that make his blood tingle. But when we examine this particular text, the idea fades into the background. To be in danger of the judgment is one thing, but to be in "danger of the council" may tell us something entirely different. What was the "council"? The governing body of the Jewish commonwealth! What would happen if you were in danger of the council? The equivalent today would be the "jury." If you were in danger of being condemned by a jury, would that affect your eternal salvation? Perhaps! But it does not sound nearly as serious as to say that you were in danger of the judgment. Yet in the language of the text, the second punishment is worse than the first: it is conveyed that to be in danger of the council is worse than being in danger of the judgment. The worst of all is to be in danger of "hell fire." In the Hebrew sense, that was worse. If you should say to your brother, "Thou fool" (we suppose without cause), you were committing an offence that would make you worthy of "Gehenna fire." In other words, such an offence would deserve the condemnation of society to such an extent that you would be cast out on the rubbish heaps where the fire burned all the time in the Valley of Gehenna.

The thought of the foregoing text is borne out later by the statement: "Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him" (Matt. 5:25). In the Hebrew ideology anybody who was an overseer was an "adversary." The word "adversary" was commonly called "Satan" in the translations. Another use of the word is what we would call "prosecutor," or, in common modern parlance, the "district attorney." Let us read Matthew 5:25 with that idea in mind: "Agree with the prosecuting attorney quickly, . . . lest at any time the prosecuting attorney deliver thee to the judge, and

One very famous passage among us is that found in Matthew 25:31-46. There we have the picture of the coming of Christ, and His sitting to judge the nations, and sending some to "inherit the kingdom prepared for (them) from the foundation of the world." Then we see another group which receives this condemnation: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. . . . And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." Certainly, this everlasting fire is not eternal torment; Who, then, are "the devil and his angels," and what means this "everlasting fire"? Strange to say, this second coming of our Lord and Savior is so often connected with fire and the like in the Scriptures: "The heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. . . . But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto ('earnestly desiring'—A.R.V.) the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth rightcousness" (2 Peter 3:7-13).

Might it not be that the same fire that destroys the works of men, that melts the elements with its heat, that dissolves the heavens and the earth that now are, are the same as those into whom the "devil and his angels" are cast? What is the heat that is to dissolve the kingdoms of this world? What is it that will bring the rulers of this world into torment? Is it not the wars and greed that are found to thrive in this age? Do we not see the torments of the present day as a result of the last war? Will not another war such as the one of 1914-'18 completely destroy the economic elements of which our modern society is composed? In fact, can we be sure that the last war has not completely disjointed our economic foundations.

It appears to the student of world affairs that the present heaven and earth are passing away with a great noise! The noise of warfare that is deliberately caused to distract the attention of the downtrodden masses from the state of their economic affairs! The noise of "isms" and plans, of movements and counter-movements! The noise of desperation such as we find in Germany where they feel that their condition could not be worse, and they have a chance of making it better! The noise of the persecutions of the Jews, of the jangling between Fascist and Communist! And always the Holy Land becomes the

Our Children

By P. H. Overholser

NOW that it is time for school to start again, our thoughts turn more vividly toward our children. Of course, there is not much Bible taught in the public schools, but there is a little. They teach the children short prayers, and have some religious opening exercises in the morning. The association with other children they meet there probably has more influence upon them.

So, if we are going to give our children the proper spiritual training which they should have, we must stop to consider the problem which our Sunday schools and homes have. Solomon tells us in Proverbs 22:6: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Therefore, it is necessary for us to start our children's religious education while they are as young as possible. At very early ages they should receive the foundation upon which they will continue to build as they grow older. It can very easily be seen that the childhood is by far the most important time in an individual's life for getting a good foundation upon which to build his spiritual education, and in the end insure his eternal salvation.

In our instruction and correction of children we must be careful not to lose their respect for us. Paul tells us in Ephesians 6:4, "Ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." And in Colossians 3:20, 21 he says, "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord. Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged."

There is another angle, also, to the child problem, if we would but realize it. If we could build up our Sunday schools with children whose parents do not come, it would be the link which would, in many cases, bring the parents in also. That is the goal toward which we are striving, to bring as many as possible unto Jesus Christ.

We should keep the Sunday school interesting, and give the children small tasks to perform. Small programs will also be good to keep them interested and coming.

But above all, children's spiritual training must not be neglected at home. The Sunday school cannot hope to accomplish in one hour each Sunday what parents can at home, where they have them most of the time. I think we should conduct a short devotional service in the home each day. In the morning would probably be the better time for it, but if this cannot be done, then by all means do it in the evening. Teach the children little prayers, and have them pray them. Letting them say grace at the table would also be helpful.

In our home the children take their turns at saying grace. They are very proud that they are allowed to do so, and each looks forward to when it will be his turn again. It teaches them reverence, gives them confidence, and it will come more natural to them as they grow older.

So, therefore, brethren, let us not neglect the children.

Steps to the Kingdom of God

By J. H. Anderson

CHRIST said to Peter, "I will give thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven" (Matt. 16:19). How did Peter open up the way into the kingdom?

Peter wrote to the elect, to those who had obtained like precious faith with us (1 Peter 1:1, 2; 2 Peter 1:1). He wrote to those who had been born of the water and who had thus become babes in Christ (1 Peter 2:1-3). In 2 Peter 1:5-11 he points out the steps the babe in Christ must take to reach the kingdom. He starts with faith. "And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins (in baptism). Wherefore the rather, brethren, give all diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

Christians must take these steps to become citizens of that wonderful kingdom. This is the way one must go from the water birth to death to ever enter the kingdom of God. As death comes before the kingdom, one must be raised from the dead, born of the Spirit, to enter the kingdom of God. Jesus said to Nicodemus, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God" (John 3:5). One must be begotten in this life to be born of the Spirit in the resurrection. "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life" (John 6:63).

The Word of God is the good seed that brings through the Spirit birth eternal life. "Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God" (Luke 8:11). As we study the Word we are begotten by the Word, Spirit, the good seed that will in due time (resurrection) bring the Spirit birth. "If the Spirit (the good seed) of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken (bring to birth) your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8:11).

When men are begotten by the Word in conversion they begin a life in Christ that they live by faith. This life ends at death. Hence, Christians must be born again. The Spirit birth is the resurrection, when God's people are born from the dead. Christ is our example. Of Him we find these words: "He is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence" (Col. 1:18).

In Genesis 1:24 we have the law that everything produces after its own kind. Under this law, to be born of the Spirit, the good seed, the Word, one must first be begotten by that Word, and, as the seed must be pure to bring the Spirit birth, we should be very careful to take only the Word of God in all its purity. "Thy word is truth," and the truth only has the power to bring the Spirit birth to God's people in the first resurrection.

To show that men are not born of the Spirit in this life, Christ spoke the words of John 3:7, 8: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." No one can meet this test in this life. Hence, no one is born of the Spirit in this life. Christ met this test after His resurrection, after His birth of the Spirit (Acts 1:9-11).

We have pointed out the master's way into that worldwide kingdom soon to be established in all the earth, soon to be the eternal home of God's people of all ages. Reader, shall we take these steps until the King shall bid us enter that eternal home in the perfect day?

We cannot shout our way into the kingdom. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity" (Matt. 7:22, 23). "But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves" (James 1:22). "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be" (Rev. 22:12).

Friends of Jesus and Paul

By Lottie E. Young

IN THESE days when "snaps" of everybody are taken, we do not have to greatly use our imagination to know how they look. However, the personal appearance makes little difference, as the old saying, "Beauty is only skin deep," still holds true, but what the "inner man" is has to be revealed in a study of his life and character. No authentic portrait has come down to us of the Apostle Paul, but after reading his letters to the different churches—he was truly a "living epistle"—if one were asked as to what type of man he was, some of the answers might be: "the most devoted follower Jesus Christ ever had," "a marvelous reasoner," "an indefatigable worker," or "a man whom no combination of circumstances could daunt."

He was certainly all that and more. We are likely to picture him as a man devoted to his work but so far above the rank and file of mankind as to stand alone, but a study of his letters reveals him as a sympathetic, loving friend of very many. While I have never counted the names he especially mentions, I have been told there are over seventy who could be called his close friends. There are several notably "dry" chapters in the Bible. For instance, in 1 Chronicles there are pages of nearly unpronounceable names. The first seventeen verses of Matthew 1 are not easy or comforting reading, beyond the fact that these names are important as they show the ancestry of the Lord Jesus Christ. Some might yawn over Romans 16, and wonder why it had to be included in this marvelous epistle of "justification by faith." When analvzed it will prove not to be at all "dry" reading, but brimful of the "milk of human kindness." Let us look at some of the persons mentioned therein.

Paul wrote to the church at Rome while he was working in Corinth, Greece. At that time the sending of a letter required more than dropping it into an envelope, sticking on a stamp, putting it into a box, and expecting it to reach its destination in safety as in this day, but was frequently entrusted to a messenger. This Roman letter was sent in the care of Phebe, a deaconess of the church at Cenchrea, who was going to Rome (possibly on personal business). Paul said, "She hath been a succourer of many, and of myself," but she was evidently wanting some kind of help herself, as the friends in Rome were asked to "assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you."

We generally send our love or good wishes in a few lines near the close of a letter, but just look at the number of names of the persons to whom Paul wishes to be remembered. With Priscilla and Aquila we feel somewhat acquainted, Paul mentioned them several times as working with him at tent making in Corinth, and as such devoted friends of his they were ready to die for him. As in many small places today, the brethren gathered in their homes for worship. We know this couple was well versed in the Scriptures, as they were able to instruct the "eloquent" Apollos, who was "mighty in the Scriptures," and show him more accurately the way of God.

Then comes one whom Paul called, "My beloved," and another—a woman—"who bestowed much labor on you," and so on down such a lengthy number of Jewish, Greek, and Roman names of friends (now "all one in Christ Jesus") we wonder how he could remember their personal attributes. Some he calls "kinsmen and fellow prisoners," others those who are "approved in Christ," and yet others who "laboured much in the Lord." The one named Rufus is generally believed to be a son of that Simon, the Cyrenian, who carried the cross of Jesus, and whom Paul calls "chosen in the Lord." In the pastoral letters we have other names, such as Timothy, "my beloved child," Titus, "my true child," and how he longed for faithful Luke and Mark when the shadows of death were creeping close!

How proud we are when we can cite some famous man or woman as "a cousin of mine," or perhaps it can only be "a friend of a dear friend of mine." If these long-ago friends of Paul could know how their names were written in the Bible, and had been read by uncounted millions, how justly proud they would be.

And yet we who are living in these "last days" can have an even prouder title than friends of the great Apostle to the Gentiles, for our Lord and Savior, and coming King, said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." What is His commandment? "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God, with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbour as thyself." We are told of some who, in the day when the righteous Judge shall be revealed, shall call upon the rocks to fall upon them and hide them from His face, but there will be others who shall hear, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." It is for each one of us to decide which side we shall be on.

A Study of Life

An Inquiry

By R. H. Judd

DURING the course of years the writer has known of many advocates of the thought that the Scriptures teach two kinds of life, each so emphatically different from the other that two distinct words are used to make the distinction clear.

Probably the most widely known exponent of this particular view is that stalwart conditionalist author, Mr. J. H. Pettingell, A.M., whose scholarly work "The Life Everlasting" is perhaps one of the best on the subject.

Owing to the esteem in which this great writer is held, many have accepted and passed on his teaching on this particular phase of the larger study. So varied and so comprehensive are Bible subjects that come under our review, it is but natural for each of us to lean on others for information that we may wish to incorporate as helpfully in line with the main thoughts of any theme under consideration.

The author referred to has gone to considerable length to present his view, maintaining that, "Whenever the new life, the spiritual life, the life of God in man, the eternal life, is spoken of, the word zoe is always used; and whenever that life which is mortal and transitory—which man possesses in common with all animals—is spoken of, the word psuche is employed."

Further, after writing extensively in reference to the facts that men and animals come into being by the same methods, are sustained in life by the same means, and pass out of living existence by the same process of death, he remarks: "But there is another kind of life belonging specially to the spiritual world, and takes hold of spiritual things, and does not belong to the kingdom of nature.

... Hence, it is called 'spiritual life.' " Again, he says, "It is the life of God Himself.... For this life the animal creation have no capacity whatever, but man is capable of a spiritual as well as a rational life, or direct intercourse and communion with God.... Herein lies the distinction between man and the brutes, ... nor does every man actually possess this spiritual life."

To quote him again, he says, "Psuche is the word by which our natural and animal life—that which we have in common with the animals beneath us—is designated. This new life is designated by zoe to distinguish it from every other kind of life, and give it preeminence over them all." Here he not only suggests two kinds of life—the natural and the spiritual—but "other" kinds of life, also. Although his remarks imply that some men have the zoe life in the present mortal state as a sort of added capacity, he quotes: "That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterwards that which is spiritual" (1 Cor. 15:46), and "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world (age), and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels" (Luke 20:35, 36), as evidently teaching a new and different life.

From the foregoing quotations from Mr. Pettingell he would, to the writer at least, appear to be confused as to whether the "new life" is in reality another kind of life, or a capacity belonging to life which the animals do not possess, but which some men do.

If it were an undisputed fact that Scripture uses psuche to teach what our friend calls animal life only, and zoe to emphasize the fact of another life, a different life, then we should naturally and reasonably expect to find that Scripture makes no exceptions, but always applies each word respectively to its kind. This, Mr. Pettingell admits, Scripture does not do, but remarks that the instances in which it is not done are rare. This admission would seem to us to weaken his case. To make his case appear stronger he adds that in the Old Testament chai and nephesh carry apparently the same distinctions between them as he claims for zoe and psuche.

Mr. Pettingell points to another important fact which he says favors his view. The fact is indisputable, but whether it affords any proof of his view is open to question. He says the word aionos, signifying "eternal" or "everlasting," is more than sixty times applied to zoe, but never to psuche.

Now let us see what conclusions we may draw from the foregoing. In the following twelve instances we would point out that zoe has exclusive reference to the present life: "All the days of our life" (Luke 1:75).

"Man's life consisteth not" (Luke 12:15).

"Thou in thy lifetime" (Luke 16:25).

"He giveth to all life and breath" (Acts 17:25).

"Neither death nor life" (Rom. 8:38).

"If in this life only" (1 Cor. 15:19).

"Despaired even of life" (2 Cor. 1:8).

"Whether it be by life, or by death" (Phil. 1:20).

"The life that now is" (1 Tim. 4:8).

"Were all their lifetime" (Heb. 2:15). "What is your life?" (James 4:15). "He that will love life" (1 Peter 3:10).

So many occurrences are too numerous to be lightly passed over as being inconsequential to the argument, and would clearly seem to show that the thought of zoe being "employed specifically and especially to denote this higher spiritual life" (emphasis mine) is not sustained.

What, then, may be the real difference between these two New Testament words that will more closely apply to every instance of their use?

In the writer's opinion (and the same may be said of nephesh and chai, but we have not space to quote examples as in the case of zoe) psuche would appear to be life itself (and, by reason of having life, the person) and apart from its associations; while zoe has also unquestionable reference to the same life (as shown by 2 Cor. 1: 8 and Heb. 2:15), but, includes life lived— in action, hence the whole process of living; and explains why the words "eternal" and "everlasting" are with good reason attached to it when reference is made to the future life. The "life to come" will also be one full of action, with the definite purpose of knowing God (John 17:3). In this connection it is interesting to note that Young's Concordance giver to zoe the meaning of "life, motion, activity."

Mr. Pettingell, Dr. Bullinger, Young, and others agree that psuche is the Greek equivalent of nephesh, as is proved by comparing Acts 2:27 with Psalm 16:10, Romans 11:3 with 1 Kings 19:10, 1 Corinthians 15:45 with Genesis 2:7. Both these words are used to express variously the vital principle of life itself, and the thing or person

What Is Death?

Ecclesiastes 3:18-21

By Ellsworth Richardson

SO MANY people tell us that when one dies he knows everything right on. Of course, we have plenty of scriptures to tell us that the dead know nothing (Psalm 146:4; 6:5; Eccl. 9:5). When one refers them to these scriptures, they say, "Oh, yes, but that refers to the body."

I wonder if they ever stopped to think about Ecclesiastes 3:18-21. If man and beast die alike, and go to one place—the soul of the beast (Num. 31:28; Job 12:10; Psalm 74:19) and the soul of the man are certain to go to the same place—it's a funny thing they never mention about the "soul" of the poor animal going to heaven. They even go so far as to say that an animal has no soul and a man has one, which distinguishes man from animal.

If it is the "soul" that receives eternal life, why should not the "soul" of an animal, as well as that of man, receive it? Of course, the resurrection is only promised to man.

Turn to Ezekiel 18:4, 20. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." They say that death means a condition. I wonder if they think that when animals die they know anything? The word "die" (muth) is used for animals, souls, and men; so the death must be the same (Ex. 1:6; 2:23; 8:13; 9:6; Ezek. 18:4, 20).

David tells us, "In death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks" (Psalm 6:5). Solomon says, "The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing" (Eccl. 9:5).

Our "neighbor" also tells us that when a wicked person dies he, or his soul, goes straight to a burning hell and begins burning in torment day and night. But Job tells us, "There the wicked (in death) cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest" (Job 3:17). Job also tells us what is done with the wicked. Read Job 21:23-34, especially verse 30. Also, see 2 Peter 2:9.

In explanation of the word "soul": Some seem to think that the soul is "something" (but they never can explain it) that lives on after death. Also, they think that the soul is what receives the reward. We understand that the soul is the living man or living body, and that is what will receive the reward. Paul writes in Philippians 3:21, "Who (Jesus) shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." "We know that we shall be like him" (1 John 3:2). Here it speaks of "body" and not "soul" at the resurrection. "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body" (1 Cor. 15:44).

Was Jesus raised a "spirit," a "ghost," or something of that sort? No, Jesus denied that: "Why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have" (Luke 24:38, 39). Jesus also "did eat" with His disciples, as recorded in verses 41-43.

So, after we get a clear understanding of what "soul" means and that man himself is to be resurrected, we can clearly see that the Scriptures teach life for the righteous (Rom. 6:23; 2:7), and death for the wicked (Psalm 37: 10, 20; Nahum 1:9, 10; Matt. 13:30-40; John 15:6; Mal. 4:1).

A STUDY OF LIFE

possessed of such life (1 Sam. 22:23; Matt. 16:25; Gen. 12:5; 14:21). The one possessing it may die, whether man or beast (Lev. 24:17, 18; Prov. 7:23), and both are called "souls" because both are possessed of life. They are called lead souls because they once had life.

In Isaiah 10:18 the vegetable kingdom is said to have both "soul" and "body," which is in full agreement with Scripture in 1 Corinthians 15, that wonderful chapter on resurrection life. There, in verses 37 and 38 (R.V.), we read, "That which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be, but a bare (or 'naked'—the Greek word is the same as in 2 Corinthians 5:3) grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other kind, but God giveth it a body even as it pleased him, and to each seed a body of its own." Thus, it is clear that the body of the wheat seed the bare (naked) grain—is the wheat plant, the body of the acorn is the oak tree through which it lives, breathes, and functions. The body of every seed is the plant that is derived from it. Paul takes us next to the animal world and draws the same analogy, and if we do not misunderstand him he applies the same thought to man.

Now, let us go back to the account in Genesis 1. The very same process and order is related there. First as to the vegetable, then as to the animal, with this difference, that in the vegetable world it is the "seed" (Gen. 1:4, R.V.) containing dormant life, and in the animal world it is the "soul" (see Gen. 1:30, A.V., margin Heb., wherein there is a living soul). Apparently, one is the equivalent of the other. Indeed, the term "seed" is time and again applied to the animal world and to man, as well as the word "soul," in every stage of their existence. In Genesis 1:20 we have the word nephesh for life, combined with chai (which Mr. Pettingell tells us is the equivalent of zoe) to represent the living, moving, active creature.

It is the writer's opinion, without being in any sense dogmatic, that there is but one kind of life, but differently manifesting itself according to the body given to it. In the case of the tree (the living individual tree, each with its own individuality—I was nearly saying "personality," and why not?) it dies, but its life is carried on by means of the seed (or soul) for the next generation of the same kind. The reader should look up in the dictionary the two words "seed" and "soul" and he will have little difficulty in coming to the conclusion that in their origins they have the same meaning of the vital principle of life (dormant) in its beginnings. In the case of the grub, the chrysalis, and the moth, its individuality would appear to be the same throughout until the death of the moth. I leave the reader here to draw his own conclusions.

There is much interesting food for thought, and many interesting questions might be asked, such as concerning the Bible word "sleep" in Daniel 12:2, "Many of them that sleep..," and 1 Corinthians 15:18, "They also which are fallen asleep . . ." Sleep implies a sleeper of some kind, as when we speak of "dormant seed" we mean the life is dormant and will not function until some outside influence gives it action in bodily existence. It may have been, or may not have been, Paul's thought that as Levi's identity (not his personality) existed in Abraham's time, so identity is preserved in the psuche. May it not be that psuche represents life both here and hereafter, for in Revelation 20:4 psuche is applied to those who have been raised; and that zoe represents the same life in action, glorified in spiritual bodies for living eternally (1 Cor. 15:43). Whether it is significant or not, the writer does not know, but Young's Concordance gives its primary meanings as "quicken": "to give or preserve life."

Dr. Pettingell makes one serious error in his preface in reference to resurrection. He says, "His death (Christ's) was human, for He died as a man; but His resurrection was a stupendous miracle. It was wrought only by the divine power that was in Him." If Mr. Pettingell means, as he appears to do, that Christ raised Himself, he is sadly mistaken, for repeatedly do the Scriptures declare that "God raised him from the dead." So we ask, "Is it a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" "Them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

RACA, OR THOUGHTS ON THE JUDGMENT

center of strife and commotion. Surely, it is moving to the student of world affairs to look at the plan of God unfold! Surely, the devil and his angels, as mentioned in Matthew 25, are none other than wicked people who have contrived to oppose themselves to God. Such were the ancestors of the Pharisees whom Jesus said were of their father, the Devil. Such an explanation of the Scriptures, which we feel is justified by the context, gives us an entirely different picture of the "judgment" from that which is ordinarily set forth.

If the Christian is living close to God as he should, and is not merely a nominal Christian, these events should herald the day that is one full of joy. And the passage from Peter should be the exact expression of our ideas: "Seeing then that all these things shall be destroyed, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"

Should the Christian desire to see the day when the governments about us shall be dissolved with the fervent heat of war and commotion? Should he look forward to the fulfillment of these terrible things in war, famine, and destruction? Yes, but only because there is the promise beyond which tells of the other side of the picture; because the passing of the old order means the setting up of the new. "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth rightcousness." That is the situation told by Isaiah: "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind" (Isa. 65:17). Do we not long for that new heavens and new earth? Then we should earnestly desire the coming of that which precedes it: the war and tumults of the closing of this age. Does not the idea of the warfare which shall immediately precede the coming of Christ, as being the fire into which the "devil and his angels" shall be cast, fit in with the ideas as expressed in Peter's letters?

What is "the judgment and perdition of ungodly men"? Should it not be read, "the punishment and annihilation of ungodly men"? The nations which will come against Jerusalem (Zech. 14) are to be annihilated by the coming of Christ: "I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord God: every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone" (Ezek. 38:21, 22). "Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle" (Zech. 14:3).

Always, these terrible events of warfare, pestilence, famine, and disaster are the prelude to the day for which we long. First the curse, and then the blessing. First the tribulation, and then the reward. First the turmoil, the strife, the confusion, the wars, riots, and revolutions of the present world; then the glories, the blessings, the inestimable benefits of the kingdom of God on earth!

A BETTER TIME COMING

shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever" (Isa. 9:6, 7). Luke informs us that a virgin named Mary would have a son, who should be named Jesus, and "the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, . . . and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Paul, in Galatians 3, tells us that this Jesus is also the seed of Abraham. That being true, both the Old and New Testament agree that Jesus is to rule and bless the world.

Now, what testimony did Jesus leave us concerning His kingship? In Matthew 9:35 we read, "Jesus went about all the cities and villages, . . . preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Luke records it: "And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God."

Jesus sent the Twelve to preach the same message. Philip was commissioned by our Lord to preach the gospel, and it is recorded of him that he preached "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12). The name of Jesus and the kingdom of God are very closely connected, because Jesus is to be the King of the kingdom.

After Jesus was raised from the dead He spent forty days with His disciples, "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3). And when they were assembled together they asked Him, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1:6). That was their hope. They had been taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come." As to the certainty of the establishment of the kingdom, we are informed by Paul, in Acts 17:31, that God "hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Peter speaks of Jesus as the One "whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

To know that this earth is to have a just and righteous Ruler is certainly "good news." Look at our country, which is probably the best in the world, and what do you see? No employment for thousands who are willing to work; strife between capital and labor causing suffering and distress; people lacking in the midst of plenty to the extent that our President says, "One third are ill housed, ill clothed, and ill fed." Think of the tremendous amount spent by all countries in the mad race to excel in rearmament; and then ask yourself what more glorious tidings could be heralded through the land than that an administration of peace and justice is to be inaugurated! Then, "violence shall be no more heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise. . . . The people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever" (Isa. 60:18, 21).

Such, briefly, is the revelation that God has given us of His purpose to establish a kingdom on earth, with Jesus as King, and all who believe and obey the gospel as rulers together with Him.

May it be ours to share in the glory to be revealed.

REWARD ON EARTH

Some people seem to think that at death they go to heaven, and there receive their reward. I have heard many persons say, after one of their loved ones had died, that the friend had gone to heaven and would there receive his reward.

The Scriptures plainly teach that the righteous will receive their reward on earth at the time of the resurrection of the just, rather than in heaven at death. John tells us, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven." Scripture plainly states that men do not go to heaven.

Christ said, "Whither I go, ye cannot come" (John 13: 33). David did not go to heaven at death, but "is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day" (Acts 2:29, 34). David was a man after God's own heart, yet he did not go to heaven, but will receive his reward on earth at the resurrection of the righteous.

"The Lord God shall give unto him (Christ) the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32, 33). Where was David's throne? It was in Jerusalem, on the earth and not in heaven.

"The Lord shall be king over all the earth" (Zech. 14:9). "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth" (Psalm 72:8). The meek and all who keep God's ways shall inherit the earth (Matt. 5:5). "The righteous shall never be removed from the earth" (Prov. 10:30). If we go to heaven, surely we are removed from the earth, but here it tells us that if we are righteous, we shall never be removed from the earth. We shall also be "kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:10).

Here I have given you some of the reasons and scriptures telling that the righteous will receive their reward on the earth at the time of the resurrection, rather than in heaven at death.

KEEPING IT ALIVE

For over twenty-seven years a group of scientists in the East, headed by Dr. Alexis Carrel, have been keeping alive a minute portion of chicken heart, taken from the chicken before hatching. In the first place they were trying to discover the secret of immortality. However, about all they have succeeded in doing is just keeping this small portion of heart, almost nothing, alive. If one of the scientists should neglect his duty in the care of it, it would die. You may say to yourself that it is very silly and extremely unnecessary. I agree perfectly with you, but I wish to call your attention to the fact that the Christian is equally guilty.

In Romans 6 we find the statement made, "He that is dead is freed from sin." That is, if one is baptized into the death of Jesus Christ and is duly risen to walk in newness of life, he really dies to, or crucifies, his old sins, and is thereby freed from his sins. The sad part of it is, however, that not many are really freed from sin, when they are baptized. They are willing to be baptized into Christ's death, but are reluctant to rise and walk in newness of life. To them, baptism means nothing. They have been baptized because it was the wish of their parents or friends, and not because they wished to lead better lives.

You state that it is impossible to keep from sinning. I grant that you are entirely correct, but we have a freedom in Christ, in the grace of God, that frees us from sin. Our nation grants freedom to every citizen, but that citizen is not given the power to do as he pleases, but must conform to the laws of the land. That is also the way with Christians. We are free to do as we please, as long as we conform to the laws of Christ. Our faith in God and Jesus imputes to us God's righteousness.

Being dead to sin, let us really die to it, and not try to keep a portion alive, as do the scientists in their experiment.

"Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

LOVING SERVICE ACCEPTED

Hezekiah's father had been a very wicked king who had worshiped idols. However, Hezekiah was a wise and good ruler. He first had the Temple cleansed, then had the people use it for worship.

The Temple was not fully ready at the regular time for the Passover. Nevertheless, when the Temple was ready, even though it was a month afterward, Hezekiah sent out a general invitation for the people to come to Jerusalem to keep the Feast of the Passover. Some of the people made fun of the invitation, while many others accepted it.

The people who came to worship had not fully prepared themselves according to the old laws, but Hezekiah prayed that God would forgive them and accept them.

Their worship was accepted of God. This fact helps us to understand that God looks upon the heart. If the heart is right, and one tries his best to do God's will, He will accept him. This does not mean that anyone can neglect any of Christ's teachings. Such unusual service can only be seen and judged aright by our just and righteous God. It is a comforting thought to know that God's judgment is always right.

This Passover Feast was one of the things Hezekiah helped to bring to pass. After the people had been made right in God's sight, they began to work, for we know that faith is dead if it has no works.

After these and other events, we find the children of Israel brought in "in abundance the firstfruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly" (2 Chron. 31:5). We find that when those people truly began to follow God, by bringing in their tithes and offerings, that God's chosen workers, the priests, had plenty, and heaps left over!

Hezekiah appointed different ones to have charge over certain offerings, and had rooms prepared in the Temple where their offerings and tithes could be stored. There was so much that they began to distribute to their brethren, and to the great and small! What a lesson in acceptable giving there is in that story for us today! Let us cleanse our heart temples. Let us have pure hearts by doing our best in every way, to serve Him according to the lessons we learn from our Bibles. Then, when rid of all our idols, our tithes and offerings will be brought to Him, and will be accepted.

SCHOOL TIME

Many of you have enrolled in school. Here is a poem which, no doubt, expresses how you feel. It is entitled, "What I've Learned," by D. D. Stephenson.

"I don't remember nine times three; But I can climb an apple tree, And eat the apples that I pick: It's more fun than arithmetic.

"My geography I've most forgot;
But I can run a race with Spot,
And find the nicest swimming pool:
I come out fresh and clean and cool.

"I didn't do so very well
In language class; but I can tell
The names of all the flowers aright,
And I can whistle like Bob White.

"There are many words I couldn't spell, But I can ride on Bonny Bell; I've found old Speckles' nest, Though Grandma tried her level best."

"They'll find that when the school-bell rings, Vacation's taught me lots of things."

ALWAYS FRESH

As a good speaker always brings things new and old to his audience in fresh and attractive ways, so the new ventilating fan which was installed in the attie of the Oregon, Ill., church just before Conference can keep the audiences supplied with fresh outdoor air. And fresh air helps the speaker to bring fresh thoughts to fresh minds.

The fan moves air at the rate of 9,600 cubic feet per minute. In other words, the air of the auditorium can be completely changed in two and one half minutes. At one evening service during Conference the temperature was lowered two degrees with a full house; on other occasions an even temperature was maintained throughout the service. The usual rise in temperature with a full house is between three and four degrees.

This ventilator was installed chiefly to keep the Conference audiences as comfortable as possible. Therefore, contributions are being solicited from the brethren at large, especially conference attendants who have benefited. The total cost was $200.00. Send contributions to the National Bible Institution or to Miss Elizabeth Ordnung, Oregon, Ill.

Gleanings From the Field

"Glad to see a real forward movement is going on."—R. H. Judd.

Bro. M. O. Williamson of Pelzer, S. C., will soon appear in The Herald. He is one of our faithful ministers, and we are glad to enroll him with our contributors.

Bro. W. S. Tomlinson, who has a message for you on page 3 of this issue, lives at Cha-grin Falls, Ohio. While he formerly wrote for The Herald, this is his first contribution this year. Come again, Bro, Tomlinson, Bro. M. W. Lyon visited over Sunday, August 20, with brethren in Grand Rapids, Mich.

On Sunday, August 20, Mary Newell and Jeraldyne Louks, members of the summer Bible Training School, reported their work for the Southlawn Park Church of God in Grand Rapids, Mich., after which Bro. G. E. Marsh, the pastor, delivered a sermon entitled, "Dividends."

While on a business trip down to Kentucky, Bro. Emory Macy of Troy, Ohio, became ac-quainted with two parties who were much in-terested in Church of God doctrine. To encourage them in further study, Bro. Macy has sent us their subscriptions to The Herald, "Go thou, and do likewise."

"There is no other paper as clean as The Restitution Herald." - Mrs. Hattie Long, Bushnell, Ill.

Bro. J. M. Morgan has just closed a series of meetings at Greeley, Mo., and reports the baptisms of: W. O. Kay, Miss Minnia Adams, and Miss Martha Adams, all of Greeley, Mo. Also, Bro. Morgan reports that he will soon return to this place for a two or three weeks' series of meetings.

Bro. James McLain reports a good interest at the Western Nebraska Conference held in Holbrook.

We are pleased to add Paul Overholser of Springfield, Ohio, to our list of Herald contributors. He is one of the leaders in the progressive Lawreneeville church.

"The Oracle," published by the Oregon, Ill., Sunday school, has made its first appearance. James M. Watkins, assistant pastor of the church, is editor. He is supported by an able staff of workers.

During the Iowa Conference Bro. J. W. Williams was called to Holbrook, Neb., to conduct the funeral of Sr. C. A. Stowe.

"Sr. Emma Railsback gave a fine report of the General Conference. . . I am glad to know that the Bible Training School is really being established as a permanent institution. I am sure our members will feel a willingness and a real urge to give to such an undertaking." — Jessie M. B. Kauffman, Riverside, "Have just finished reading the report of the General Conference, which must have been a great meeting of the brethren. I am in hearty agreement with the action taken."— Eld. D. G. Harvey, Kokomo, Ind.

Bro. Omer J. Parker, who for many months was unable to continue his ministerial duties, is again in the service. He suffers blindness in one eye, but is nonetheless faithful to do all in his power to preach the gospel in Kokomo, "Inclosed please find remittance to pay for The Herald to be sent to a friend of mine which I am hoping and praying will be led to the fountain through Christ."—J. L. Maggard, Scottsburg, Ind. . . . Faith works!

On Sunday, Sept. 3, Bro. James M. Watkins spoke for the Restitution Church at Eldorado, Ill. Before he returns to his home in Oregon, Ill., he expects to visit some of our other churches in that part of the State.

"We enjoy the wonderful messages we receive through The Herald, and pray God's blessing on each writer."—Mr. and Mrs. R. Harman, Grabill, Ind.

The editor has just returned home from a successful Iowa Conference. It was his first visit to Waterloo, but, the Lord willing, he will return next year.

Henry Teuscher of St. Louis, Mo., a close friend of our brethren there, died August 26. Sr. Leota B. Hanson of Oregon, Ill., was among those attending his funeral.

Bro. F. L. Austin, en route from St. Cloud. Minn., to his home in Chicago, visited a short while in Oregon, Ill., on Tuesday, Aug. 29. He will preach at the Church of God in Burr Oak, Ind., Sunday, Sept. 3.

Bro. Gerald Cooper, pastor of the Eden Valley, Minn., Church of God, is unable to continue his pastoral duties, and is urged by his physician to take a rest from all public activities. We pray his health may soon return.

LOUISIANA CHURCH NOTES

After more than a month's absence we returned to Hammond August 19, and resumed our work with the Blood River and Happy Woods churches, Splendid attendance greeted us at both churches, and it was gratifying to know that Sunday school and Bible study had maintained good attendance and interest the past month.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williams of Ponchatoula recently became the proud parents of a boy.

His name is John Randolph.

There has been considerable sickness among our church folks the past month. At the present time Mrs. Clarence Barnum is recovering from an operation. Mrs. Warren Landry has been in the hospital for observation, and is still unable to be up. For these we pray that God's healing hand might rest upon them to restore them to health.

As we look into the future we feel there is opportunity for growth and development in the Master's service, and we pray Goil's guidance upon our work that it might be to His glory.

Harry Goekler, Pastor.

ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

Elder J. H. Anderson of Michigantown, Ind., came to the South August 1, and held a week's meeting at Dana, N. C. We have no organized church here and no regular pastor, but interest is not dead. We have many of good, sound faith, yet, shown from the attendance at the meetings. The preaching was great, for Bro. Anderson always has a message of interest that holds a crowd spellbound throughout his discourse, and we never fail to be enlightened on some new point.

We are always glad to hear he is coming, for we get hungry for the preaching of the Word. It was through Bro. Anderson's teaching that I learned the importance of baptism, nig that I learned the importance of baptism, several years ago when he was our regular pastor. He was the one who buried me in the watery grave. He baptized my father, mother, and, thank the Lord, two of my children.

We are looking forward to his return in a short time. May the rich blessings of health to be between draw him that he had not be learned and him that he may be able to be bestowed upon him, that he may be able to continue in the Master's work. Mrs. L. W. McMinn, 14 Michigan Ave., W. Asheville, N. C.

On the evenings of August 14 and 15, we had the privilege of having Bro. Vivian Kirk-patrick and Muriel Randall with us, bringing a message from the Word of God which was very inspiring and which gave us new hope.

We are looking forward to having Sr. Muriel Randall with us during the month of September to work with our young people, getting them started in the Master's service. We are glad to welcome any of the brethren who may be near to come and help strengthen us in the Word of God.

ARKANSAS MEETINGS

While recently in Arkansas we held meetings at Pisgah, Walnut Grove, McGintytown. Waveland, Cox Valley, and Cleveland.

We are now at Bear for a week, and expect to start to Austin, Texas, next week, where we shall hold a meeting before returning home. We held a meeting at the Lord's Schoolhouse, north of Morrilton, just before Conference, which closed with splendid interest.

Large crowds with keen interest gathered at every place. Strong solicitations from many, even of other denominations, to return to these places were gratifying. Men who never go to church, came, and listened attentively.

Our efforts at Cleveland resulted in six baptisms, which will be reported by the secretary. May God bless them, is our prayer.

Lillian D. Myers, daughter of William and Susan Myers, was born March 28, 1863, at Mt. Morris, Ill., and died August 17, 1939, at the Moline State Hospital, Moline, Ill.

She was schooled in Mt. Morris, attending college there, and was a lover of art work. On August 31, 1902, she was baptized by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. This was within three years of the organization of the Church of God in Oregon, Ill., where she was for a time a very faithful superintendent of the Sunday school, and until death was one of the most faithful members. She was an eager Bible student, retimembers. She was an eager Bible student, reilcent in manner and speech, a beloved sister to us all.

Surviving are four brothers: Sherman, Fred, Clyde, and Edward. The writer conducted funeral services from the Oregon Church of God, August 20. Sydney E. Magaw.

"Home, Sweet Home"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Conditions of entrance into Golden Rule Home are as liberal as absolute security permits. Write for full particulars concerning the Home and its advantages. Or, better still, come and visit the Home itself and let the Family tell their own story of its advantages and comforts.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 28

OREGON, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 12, 1939

NUMBER 48

"West Point" of the Church of God

By G. E. Marsh

BY a spontaneous and unanimous demand of our people, the Board of Religious Education has been instructed to proceed at once to the establishment of a ninemonths' Bible Training School for the development of public workers for the Church of God. Seldom, if ever, has the denomination expressed itself so unitedly and so emphatically in favor of any forward-looking movement as it has in the present instance. It is clearly apparent that our brethren realize the momentous times through which we are passing and that the time for labor is short.

The need for qualified evangelists, pastors, and teachers is more pressing right now than ever before. It is no longer a question of finding fields for our laborers, but of finding laborers for the fields. We are convinced that the need for evangelistic work and the opportunity for such work has never been so great as at the present time. But conditions are changing. The people to whom the evangelist must appear are no longer Bible-reading, creed-defending men and women as was the case half a century ago. The masses know little of the Bible or its definite teaching. It is more generally true now by far than it was forty years ago, when Dr. R. V. Foster made the statement in his "Systematic Theology" that "comparatively few Christians even, to say nothing of mankind in general, know anything about doctrine." And yet doctrine, definite and positive teaching of the Bible concerning God and the conditions of salvation, provides our only basis for hope and faith.

Because of the ignorance and unconcern of the masses with regard to the Scriptures and their doctrinal contents, it is necessary that the evangelist, pastor, or teacher today approach his hearers in a fresh and vigorous manner and by methods quite different from those employed in the past. In short, if the Church of God is to succeed in these days in converting men and women by the preaching of the gospel, it must develop a new technique of presentation that will meet the demands of the religiously indifferent age in which we live. To develop and teach such a technique to our workers will be one of the major purposes of our School.

Our First Need-Students!

There can be no School without teachers and pupils. It was said of a certain great educator that if he sat on one end of a log and a boy on the other there would be a university. However able the teacher may be, there can be no school without the "boy" on the receiving end of the log.

The Board of Religious Education has been exceedingly fortunate in its selection of instructors. Teachers of the highest type and of exceptional ability have been secured, but their talent will be of no avail unless the Church of God provides young men and young women to be brought under their instruction. That is our most pressing duty at this time. We must influence consecrated young people to make all necessary sacrifices to attend the School. Furthermore, the churches themselves, the state conferences, and individuals of means among us, should contribute to the support of the School and its students with unstinted liberality.

The time for labor is short. The talents have been put in our hands. The Lord will soon return to question us concerning the use to which we have put His riches. The answer we shall make will be determined by our action now. Let's pray—and talk—and give, so that vigorous young soldiers of the cross may be thoroughly drilled, equipped, and organized for the final charge that will carry the army of redemption to victory before the Lord comes! We must act at once!

STUDENTS

Brother G. E. Marsh is right. Speaking of the needs of the new Bible Training School, he points out, "Our first need is students." Indeed, "There can be no School without students," as Brother Marsh also says. Students, let us hear from you. October 2 is rapidly approaching. Will you arrive at Oregon, Illinois, on that scheduled day for the School to start? Write us today!

Everything possible is being done to make the School a success from the word "Go." A thorough and determined effort is being made at Oregon, Illinois, to be ready. Students, young men and young women of the Church of God, we are not going to fail you. You must not fail us!

INSTRUCTORS

The instructors of the new Bible Training School will be Elder L. E. Conner and your editor. These selections were made by the unanimous agreement of all five members of the Board of Religious Education. For further presentation of the teachers and their respective courses of study, see page 15 in this issue of The Herald.

THE STUDENTS' HOME

An ideal home has been secured for the young men and young women who enroll in the Bible Training School. It has every convenience, even automatic heat control. The building is commodious, clean, not far from the National Bible Institution and Church of God, and has received the endorsement of the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution as being the very wisest selection of a home that could be made. Further, it is so arranged as to conveniently house both the young men and young women who may attend the School.

An experienced and Christian matron will have charge of the home and do the cooking. Students will be expected to cooperate with the matron, and every effort will be made to maintain high Christian standards.

October 2 will soon be here.
Will you be here?

EVANGELISTS

Evangelists built the Church of God. Only in recent years have many of our churches engaged pastors. A generation ago every minister was an evangelist. He had wide fields to cover. There was no letup in his work. New faces and new opportunities ever before him, he was kept ever zealous. There were many conversions. Meetings invariably resulted in baptisms.

John the Baptist and Jesus were evangelists. Their work has survived the centuries. There is no getting away from the need of evangelists. God gave them. God blessed them. And God still calls men to be evangelists.

The evangelists who founded our various churches arc, one by one, taking their rest. Recruits are needed. They must come, in a large measure, from the young manhood of the Church of God.

May God so bless the Bible Training School that it will enlist and encourage and assist young men to become true and worthy evangelists. The Lord calls men!

PASTORS AND TEACHERS

In recent years nearly all our churches have engaged pastors. These churches are the truly progressive ones. The church that thinks it cannot afford a pastor is probably in deeper spiritual poverty than material poverty. God has called some ministers to be pastors.

A few years ago some of our members asked what would become of the young men then training for the ministry. Where would they serve? Today they are half or more of our settled pastors! God knew what His church needed, even if we did not.

Others of those formerly in training are teachers. Let it not be forgotten that Jesus, too, was a teacher. Sunday schools and Berean classes are ever in need of capable and willing workers in addition to those who are evangelists and pastors. Who will now volunteer?

Conversion by Conversation

By Muriel Randall

JANE and Mary, walking down the street, passed a large, beautiful church. One could see at a glance that it was the church home of many rich people. Truly, it was a most beautiful structure. Mary, who frequently attended this church, thought it was fine to be able to worship in such a place of grandeur. Just one block farther along the street they passed a little stone church with an inviting look. Above the door were the words:

Welcome Church of God

This church was Jane's place of worship, and one that she loved dearly. It meant the place where she had found the difference between peace and strife, the difference between love and hatred, the difference between joy and discontent, the difference between satisfaction and dissatisfaction. It was the place where she had first found Jesus as her personal Savior.

She asked, "Mary, would you like to go into the church to see my church home?"

They entered, and Mary noticed at once the apparent commonness of this little, insignificant church. There were no large pictures, no statues—in fact, nothing to indicate riches, glory, or prestige. Jane's thoughts were of a thankful nature, because this was a place of rich spiritual blessing.

Finally, Mary could not refrain from asking, "Jane, why do you work with the Church of God?"

Jane immediately answered, "Because I believe we must have certain foundational truths in order to be Christians and to inherit the kingdom of God. Shall we sit down and talk about these things? We can look up some very interesting Bible references."

When they were seated, Jane took a Bible and turned to John 8:32. She read: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free," then added, "One of our truths is that we must repent and be baptized as Peter told the people on Pentecost. In Ephesians 4:5 we find that there is only 'one baptism.' The baptism is the one of which our Lord partook when John the Baptist baptized Him, as recorded in Mark 1:9, 10."

"What other truths do you especially believe in?" asked Mary.

"I believe, also, there is but one God, one Christ, one Mediator. They are one in purpose, but are three entirely different bodies. Matthew 16:16 proves that God and Christ are not one. John 20:30 also states this same truth. We know, too, that Christ did not create the earth. I suppose that you will ask me what I do with the reference of John 1:1, 'In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.' This implies Christ was in the beginning and was God. If you are acquainted with ancient history you would see that old philosophers capitalized and personified inanimate objects and words. Thus, 'Word' was one of the many words changed. I cannot think that Christ was His own Father. In fact, 2 Corinthians 1:3 clearly shows they were two persons. Therefore, I cannot believe in the Trinity."

"That is very interesting, Jane. What are some of your other beliefs?" questioned Mary.

"Yes, it is interesting, and it thrills me to think that it is all true. Our church believes that man is mortal and unconscious and does not go to heaven or hell at death. Psalm 6:5 and Job 17:16 give evidence of this fact. John 5:28, 29 says that we shall be resurrected. If we do not really die, then there is no use for the resurrection," replied Jane.

"Jane, aren't we to be like Christ?" asked Mary, in a tone of amazement.

"Yes, we are to be like Christ in all that we do," Jane said.

"Well, didn't Christ go to heaven when He died?" asked Mary.

"No!" Jane replied. "He did not. Luke 23:43 states it so that it might be interpreted as such, but we find that Christ died before the thief. In fact, according to the Jewish day He died one day, and the thief died the next."

"Jane, if a person fully believes and accepts, what is his reward, and what happens to the person who does not believe?" inquired Mary.

"That includes much, Mary, but the sum and substance of it is this: "John 3:36, Revelation 21:4, and Psalm 37:29 tell of the reward of the righteous. The complete 37th Psalm tells very plainly the reward of both the just and the unjust. The people who are not righteous shall be damned, according to Mark 16:16. Romans 6:23 speaks of the second death, and this death is final. Revelation 20:14 also speaks of death. Mary, would you like to die today?" remarked Jane.

"No, Jane, I would not," Mary replied decidedly.

"So it will be when we are divided for eternity. No one will want to lose his life. That is why God offers us His

God's Power

By M. O. Williamson

IN ROMANS 1:16 we read, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." We here find the power is something called "gospel." So by reading, "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost" (2 Cor. 4:3), we find if we do not know the gospel in which is revealed God's power we are in a lost condition. The gospel is a definite something to know, to believe, and be saved by; or from which to be hid and be lost by.

There is only one gospel that will save. No perverted gospel can save—"which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ" (Gal. 1:7). There is a curse pronounced against man or angel who preaches another gospel.

Whatever "the gospel" is, Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. Please notice the word "the" always appearing before "gospel," showing it to be something definite.

Jesus, just before going to heaven, gave a mission of work or a message to be preached to every creature, to the end that they might be saved if they would believe and obey. "He said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:15, 16). So we find it a savior of life unto life to those who believe the gospel, or of death unto death to those who believe not.

Let us see if you and I can find this, the gospel, in which is God's power. "The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed" (Gal. 3:8). Some perverter possibly may come to you with something like this: "God preached something to Abraham before the gospel." Here is the thought taught in verse 8: Before God could justify the heathen, the gospel had to be preached to them. Hence, before God justified them, He preached the gospel to Abraham. Note the Emphatic Diaglott rendering: "The scripture, having foreseen that God would justify the nations by faith, previously announced glad tidings to Abraham, that in thee shall all the nations be blessed." So we see the Diaglott says that glad tidings were announced to Abraham, as in Romans 1:16 the gospel was God's power to save. Whatever was preached to Abraham had the power to save.

Mark 16:15 and Galatians 3:8 teach Christians to go into all the world and preach what God preached to Abraham. If you and I do this, Jesus has promised that we shall be saved if we believe and are baptized. Jesus has said, "Search the scriptures" (John 5:39). Therefore, to find the gospel in which is God's power of salvation, we begin by reading the Old Bible. Some may say the Old Bible is fulfilled, but Jesus says, "Search it." So let you and me obey Jesus by reading from Genesis 12 through chapter 24. Now we have read the gospel, the one Mark 16:15 says to preach to every creature. In Genesis 12:1 God told Abraham to get away from his father's house and kindred, and into a land that He would show him. In verse 2 we read, "I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing." "In thee shall all nations be blessed" (Gal. 3:8).

M. O. Williamson

The word "gospel" means "good news" or "glad tidings." Is this not good news to know that God has promised to bless all nations (instead of the old theory of sending them to hell to torment them)? Just as Abraham was called from his father's house and kindred, we are called from our fathers' houses. Abraham did not obey in full at first; he took his nephew along. Some of us, after we understand, still want to support singing and preaching where men teach the doctrine of a never-dying soul. John 8:44 shows such doctrine originated with "a murderer." It brought strife and division in Abraham's day, and it will do the same today. God appeared to Abraham after he fully obeyed, and said, "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. . . . Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee" (Gen. 13:14, 15, 17).

Let us pause for a moment. Can people who believe they go to heaven at death do as Abraham did: view their everlasting home in every direction or walk in it while they are mortal? You and I, who believe the gospel, can do this, for Jesus said, "The meek shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5).

Abraham was seventy-five years old when the Lord called him. Sarai and Abraham had no children at this time, and because the promise was to him and his seed this question arose in his mind: "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?" (Gen. 15:18). God answered by telling him to make a sacrifice. Abraham obeyed and sat down to see how he was going to inherit the promises. Fowls came down to peck at the carcass. Just so today, when you begin to learn God's terms of salvation, some who believe they go to heaven begin to pick at your belief. We are told that Abraham drove them away; so if we want to drive away those who pick at our belief, just give them the Bible and they will go. A deep sleep, and horror of great darkness fell on him. He was told in verse 15, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age." Resurrection was taught to him in the smoking furnace and the burning lamp passing between those pieces.

I want those who believe that everybody will be saved to please explain why the furnace and light went between instead of around them. In Matthew 25:33 we see that Christ "shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left," just as was taught Abraham when God was showing him how he would inherit the land.

"I will make thee exceeding fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee" (Gen. 17:6). Somebody has said He promised the land of Asia Minor. Dear brother, how do you read of Abraham who was to be father of nations and of kings? In Daniel 2:35 we read of "a great mountain, (which) filled the whole earth." (See "under the whole heaven"—Dan. 7:27.)

When Abraham became one hundred years old, Isaac was born. "By faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered up his only begotten son, of whom it was said, That in Isaac shall thy seed be called" (Heb. 11:17, 18). "And the Lord appeared unto him and said, Go not down into Egypt; dwell in the land which I shall tell thee of: sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee; and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father; and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws" (Gen. 26: 2-5).

Denying Oneself

By E. O. Stewart

THEN said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. 16:24). Deny thyself, and take up thy cross, and follow Me.

Until one has denied himself, he has no use for a cross, for he has nothing to bear upon the cross until a dead victim appears upon the scene. The old dead self, killed through self-denial, is the victim which the newly risen creature, in Christ, bears upon his daily cross. Just so long as evil passions thrive and grow by giving way to lust and pride, no cross is needed, because the self has not been crucified. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts" (Gal. 5:24).

Evil passions and lusts stick so closely to our flesh that they are figuratively called flesh. There can be no more positive proof of the truthfulness of this statement than the fact that we are continually making flimsy excuses by which we try to justify their existence.

I went to the circus to please the children, I drank a bottle of beer because an old friend asked me to. I earn my own money and have a right to spend it as I please. I feel that I should tithe, but I have worked hard for my money, and have a right to use it to satisfy my desires. I'll buy a radio, and take the daily paper, so I can keep up with the news. I would like to take our church paper, but we are too poor. I would like to help the preacher some, but I had to pay too much income tax.

These excuses, and a score of others, prove just how much we love and adore the flesh. Hence, self-denial and cross-bearing are at a very low ebb.

Christ Our Example

Jesus had the same right to turn stones into bread, and satisfy His hunger, as we have to spend our money to satisfy our own fleshly desires, but He denied Himself. He could have prayed the Father and received the aid of myriads of angels, but He gave Himself for others.

He is our example and forerunner; and God loves a cheerful giver.

We are praying God that He will open men's hearts so that they may forget self to the extent that they will give of their means to the ministry. Let us be self-denying, taking up our crosses to follow Him.

The Bible, God's Word

By J. H. Anderson

I CHARGE thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word" (2 Tim. 4:1, 2). Reader, in your study of the Bible, have you ever noticed the many statements in it about the Word? When we find what is said in the Bible about the Word, how much God thinks of His Word, and His care of the Word, we shall not believe that He has permitted the translators to fill that Word with errors. Our salvation depends upon that Word. As most of the people depend upon the Authorized Version, we shall use it in these articles unless we refer to another translation to make a point more clear to our limited minds. Reader, have you ever read the history of the King James translation of the Bible? There were forty-seven translators, and they spent seven years in the work of translating the Word into English, and this opened the way for millions to read the Word.

Since then God has been visiting these millions through this translation of His Word to call out a bride for His Son. "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name" (Acts 15:14). "For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it" (Isa. 55:10, 11). Only the pure Word could do this. Hence, God is visiting the Gentiles through the pure Word, calling out from among the Gentiles a people for His name.

God holds His Word above everything that men can handle in this life. "I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy lovingkindness and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name" (Psalm 138:2). Would God permit anyone to put errors in that Word?

"Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the Lord your God which I command you" (Deut. 4:2). Has God allowed the translators of the Authorized Version to transgress this commandment? Let's see what His Son has to say in answer to this question. "Think not that I am come to destroy the law (the first five books of the Bible), or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled" (Matt. 5:17, 18). Not a passage in the Old Testament can pass away until it has been fulfilled. "He called them gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the scripture cannot be broken" (John 10:35). There is no church, no organization on earth, that can either add to or take from the Bible, the Word.

How did this wonderful Word come into the world? "The prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (2 Peter 1:21). "All scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Tim. 3:16).

God's Book

It took nearly sixteen hundred years to write this Book. Moses wrote the first five books about 1500 B.C., and the last book—by John—was written about 100 A.D. Part of the Book has been in the world about thirty-four hundred years, and the entire Book for more than eighteen hundred years. This proves that God is back of His Word.

What must Christians do with this Book? "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me" (John 5:39). Reader, do you believe that the Father would permit errors in the Book that testifies of the Son? "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). When we do this we find harmony in the Word of God. As stated, God is sending His Word to the Gentiles to call out a people for His name, even the church. This class is made clean by the Word—the Word only. "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you" (John 15:3).

"Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it: that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water (baptism) by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish" (Eph. 5:25-27). Only the pure Word can accomplish all this.

Now listen to the Lord's prayer: "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth" (John 17:17). Here the Son prays to the Father to set apart His people by the Word of truth. We are brought into the bondage of sin and death by the Devil's lie: "Ye shall not surely die" (Gen. 3:4; John 8:44). It will take the truth of God's Word to free His people from the bondage of sin and death.

"As he (Jesus) spake these words, many believed on him. Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:30-32). We must continue in God's Word to ever come into this glorious liberty. In this long dark night of sin and death, God's Word is the only light that can open the way of the future.

"We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise" (2 Peter 1:19). "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. . . . The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple" (Psalm 119:105, 130). This light, the light of the Word, illuminates the path of the righteous to the perfect day. "The path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day" (Prov. 4:18). To doubt the Word is to dim the light.

Fruit Bearing

By R. M. Abbott

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28).

By their inactivity in church work, it might indicate that some may have read this verse, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and, if you do, I will do all the rest."

Rest, the kind that Jesus speaks of in this verse, is the rest that is produced by work. Read verses 29 and 30 of the same chapter and they will tell us that.

The greatest kindness that God did for the man and the woman, when they were driven out of the Garden of Eden, was causing weeds to grow, forcing the people to work if they would eat bread.

What could have been a worse punishment than for the Lord to have told them that they would have to live about nine hundred years without being allowed to do one bit of work? A reasonable amount of work is a blessing to any able-bodied person, and even the sick live longer and more contentedly where they can at least do something.

Idleness is destructive to good morals. We are told that "an idle mind is the Devil's workshop." Unless the mind is occupied in doing good things, it is very likely to be "doing" anyone it meets. Even children are rested by having something to do to take up their time, and unless something is provided, they are in danger of being "arrested" and be "doing time" later on in life.

One "don't" to a child is far more distressing than two or three "do's," providing it is to do something worthwhile. Always create in the mind of the child a desire for positive, rather than negative, action. Learn to say "do" instead of "don't."

There are those who would be the very best of Christians, if they weren't required to live the Christian life to be Christians. They would like to be Christians, if they could be without being them. People of this kind are in a class with the lady who wanted to be a returned missionary without first having been a missionary.

We do not see Christianity when we see the person who is a Christian, but Christianity is the life they have lived and are living. One in Bible times said, "Shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works." When put in this form, faith can be seen. A Christian is not known to be a Christian by his present, but by his past, as a tree is known by its fruit, not by the fruit it may bear, but by the fruit it has already borne. God's people might be properly called a spiritual fruit orchard, bearing fruit unto eternal life.

Jesus said, "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." Just as in our natural orchards, so in this orchard of which God is the husbandman, there is a desire that it should produce more and more. "Every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

Here is where some of us flinch or dodge, and that is when the pruning knife, "the sword of the Spirit," is applied to our lives, and some branch of our way of living is severed from us. We should never object to the work of

Does Death End All?

By Howard Giddings

XYELL do I call to mind Psalm 146:3, 4: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Study with me in Genesis 3:1-5, inclusive: "Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ve touch it, lest ye die. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." Give emphasis to "Yc shall not surely die"—the first lie ever told. If men do not die (total oblivion of consciousness), what miracle would have been performed in our Savior's resurrection? Why should we rob Christ of His well-deserved glory in making captivity (death) captive?

I invite your attention to 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18: "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

Are saints to stay up in the air? No, because Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5). For further proof that the dead are not immortal and conscious until after the resurrection, see 1 Corinthians 15:50-58: "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God: neither doth corruption inherit incorruption. Behold, I shew you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." Is not this conclusive evidence that the dead are totally unconscious, that they return to the dust, and continue there unto the coming of the Lord? Does it not show that the final habitation of the righteous is the earth, cleansed of its curses?

Men will plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them. They will build buildings and live in them. No mortgages to be foreclosed! No goods will be taken from men. If saints go away from the earth at death, they would not be where Christ and the Holy City are to be (Rev. 21:2-4). The life on earth is in store for those who are born of the Spirit,

What is it that never dies? It is the conception of the spiritual life which must take place in this present life. Though saints sleep thousands of years in the grave, at the sounding of the last trumpet the birth with its fullness thereof will take place. Our Master told Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God. . . . The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit" (John 3:5, 8).

Before our Master's death and resurrection He would go into a room as you or I, that is, through the door, but after His resurrection, the room could be sealed tightly, and the Master would appear in the midst of those in the room.

When conception takes place in the mother, the child develops when she is asleep just as much as when the mother is awake, but when the birth takes place (which is likened unto the resurrection of the dead), the mother's heart ceases beating for the child and the mother's lungs cease breathing for the child. Its heart and lungs must perform their own functions, so the child may live. So it is with us. The conception of the spiritual life must take place in this life, and at the resurrection will be our spiritual birth with the fullness thereof.

The Holy Spirit

By John R. Fiske, Jr.

THE Holy Spirit is termed by the Father "my spirit" (Joel 2:28). Hence, as to the Father, it is declared to be the "Spirit of your Father" (Matt. 10:20), "thy holy spirit" (Psalm 51:11), or the "holy Spirit of God" (Eph. 4:30). Therefore, Scripturally it is "the Spirit of God" (Matt. 3:16). Now God speaks of "my spirit" (Joel 2:28) and "my soul" (Isa. 1:14). If "my spirit"—"the Spirit of your Father" or the "holy Spirit of God"—is a person or "spirit" separate and distinct from the Father, then logically "my soul" is a person or "soul" separate and distinct from the Father, thus making "God, the Father," "God, the Spirit," "God, the soul," and "God, the Son!" Four Gods!! But, if "my soul" or "my Spirit" as to man do not mean persons distinct from the man himself, then it is certain "my soul," or "my Spirit," as to the Father, simply cannot mean a "soul" or "spirit" separate and distinct from the Father Himself.

What is "the Spirit of your Father"—the "holy Spirit of God"? Jesus, in predicting its coming, defined it as "power from on high" (Luke 24:49). He said those receiving it would thereby secure power (Acts 1:8). In Luke 1:35, "Holy Spirit" and "the power of the Highest" are used interchangeably. Therefore, the same in 1 Peter 3:18 and Ephesians 1:19, 20 show "the Spirit" that made Jesus alive was the working of His mighty power.

Romans 8:11 and 1 Corinthians 6:14 teach us that the Spirit that will quicken or raise the saints is God's power, but why add evidence? Surely these are sufficient. Vast indeed in numbers are the texts held yet in reservation which show us the Holy Spirit of God to be the power of the Highest, and not a person separate and distinct from God Himself.

The Holy Spirit cannot be a person for these reasons: (1) It has no name of its own. "Holy Spirit" is no more a proper name than is "evil spirit." (2) The Bible speaks frequently of the Father and His Son as living or alive, but nowhere is the Holy Spirit said to be living or alive. (3) It is poured out (Acts 2:17), and fills houses and persons (Acts 2:2, 4). (4) Christ was anointed (smeared) with God's Holy Spirit (Acts 10:38). (5) The Father sheds His Holy Spirit onto the believer (Titus 3:5). (6) People filled with the Holy Spirit are said to drink of the Spirit (1 Cor. 12:13). (7) People were baptized in Holy Spirit just as literally as they were baptized in water (Matt. 3:11). (8) Christ imparted it to His apostles by having breathed it upon them (John 20:22). (9) It was distributed to certain ones (Heb. 2:4, Diaglott), and they were thus made partakers of it (Heb. 6:4, 5). (10) Jesus was begotten by the Holy Spirit (Matt. 1:20, margin). Since it is "the power of the Highest," this would make Jesus the only begotten Son of the Father (John 1:14); but if the Holy Spirit of God—the Spirit of your Father—is a person separate and distinct from the Father, then His begettal by the Holy Spirit would make Jesus the only begotten Son of the Holy Ghost!!

Reader, can a person be poured out, thereby filling houses and people? Can one drink a person? Can a person be anointed (smeared) on another? Can a person be shed, breathed, or be baptized in? If not, then it is certain that the Spirit is impersonal and not a separate person from your Father.

By means of His Holy Spirit, the Father created everything and is everywhere present through it (Psalm 139: 7; 104:30; Job 26:4; Gen. 1:2). It proceeds from the Father (John 15:14), just as light proceeds from the sun. By means of it, He is in touch with the universe. Since the Holy Spirit of God is the Father's power, it is therefore considered just as much a part of Him as is His finger (Matt. 12:28; Luke 11:20). This being true, whatever the Spirit or His finger may do, such as begetting Christ of the Virgin Mary or raising Christ from the dead, it is the Father, after all, who has done these things. Through a figure of speech called synecdoche, in which a part is put for a whole, "the Holy Spirit of your Father" sometimes stands for the Father (Matt. 1:18; Acts 13:2).

John 16:13, 14 and 14:17 are commonly supposed to teach that the Holy Spirit is a person separate from the Father. But Nehemiah 9:20, if the translation of John 16: 13, 14; 14:14-17 in the King James Version is correct, shows the Guide, the Instructor, to be "the good Spirit"— "the Spirit of your Father." If the Father's wisdom can be personified as "she," "I," "my," "me," and "her,"

(Prov. 9:6), then surely in the same way the Father's Spirit, "the Spirit itself" (Rom. 8:16), could through personification be termed "he" or "himself."

Dr. C. T. Kuinoels said, concerning John 16:13, "The Spirit to which the pronoun refers is neuter in the original." Commenting on John 14:17, Professor J. H. Thayer of Harvard University said, "The pronouns in verse 17 are neuter in the best manuscripts." Professor Toy said, "The Alexandrine does not give the masculine." Professor Gardner of Chicago said, "The true antecedent of these pronouns in John 14:17; 16:13, 14 is topneuma, and this is neuter, of course, and a true grammatical rendering makes the pronouns neuter." Here is where we rest our case.

only begotten Son that we might have eternal life," Jane answered.

"Can I go with you to church this next Sunday, Jane?" asked Mary.

"Yes, you surely can! I'll call for you at nine forty-five, so that we can go to Sunday school, too," Jane replied heartily.

Mary went home a much more thoughtful girl, determined to learn more about Jane's religion. Jane went home happy to know that she had had an opportunity to tell of her church and its beliefs, but she also felt remorse because she had failed to ask Mary to go to her church with her long before this.

FRUIT BEARING

the Lord, for "he doeth all things well," and since pruning away the unprofitable will make what is left produce more abundantly, we should rejoice in that He counts us worthy of bearing more fruit for Him.

In Hebrews 12:11 we read, "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby."

What branches need pruning? One word will name the thing that needs much pruning and purging in the Christian's life. That word is "disposition." It is our disposition that makes up our character. Someone may say, "I am not to blame for my disposition, for I was born with that." That is true enough, you were born with your disposition, and you are not to blame for that, but while you are not responsible for the disposition you were born with, you are held responsible for the disposition you live with and die with. Regardless of what kind of dispositions we were born with, God has made provision whereby those dispositions may be brought into obedience to His will. It may take much cutting away of what stands in the way, but it will all be to the one end, that we may bear more fruit. First, that we may bear fruit, then more fruit, and at the last, that we may bear much fruit. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples" (John 15:8).

NEVER ALONE

By N. H. Geiselman

The lightning will soon be flashing,
And the angry billows will roll;
The armies sure are gathering
To take an awful toll.
But we'll never be discouraged,
For Jesus has told us the way;
He's promised to keep us from danger,
And never to lead us astray.

Alone, no never alone, His saints are never alone. He's promised never to leave them, Never to leave them alone.

The nations now are preparing, And cannons surely will roar, The storm is surely gathering; God's Bible has fully foretold. On land and sea and air The meteors soon will fly, And millions now so careless We fear will surely die.

But when the war is ended We'll land in Paradise, No more to be offended, And never His truth disguised. But through the endless ages We'll praise His holy name, And fill the earth with glory: Make Hallelujah ring.

"PRAY FOR THE PEACE OF JERUSALEM"

"I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day nor night: ye that make mention of the Lord, ... give him no rest ... till he make Jerusalem a praise in the earth" (Isa. 62:6, 7).

GOD'S POWER

ham's faith. When Isaac grew up, Abraham was told to offer him for a burnt sacrifice. They came to the place of which God had told him, and Abraham built an altar there, and laid him upon the wood on the altar. Abraham then stretched forth his hand and took the knife to slay his son. He would have killed his son had the angel not stopped him. Because of this the angel called the second time from heaven and said, "By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies." "Accounting that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure" (Heb. 11:19). God swore by Himself when He made this promise, because He could swear by no greater, saying, "Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multipy thee" (Heb. 6:14). "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath: That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us" (Heb. 6:17, 18).

"Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ" (Gal. 3:16). And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head" (Matt. 8:20). So, we see Jesus, whom Paul says was the seed spoken of, did not receive the promised possession while He was here. We hear Stephen say of Abraham, in Acts 7:5, "He gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." The question arises, As Christ had no place to lay His head, and Abraham not enough to set his foot on, when will God make good His oath-bound promise? "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad" (John 8:5, 6). We see the antitype of the burning lamp and smoking furnace will be fulfilled at the resurrection.

Some ask, "Is baptism essential to salvation?" We find in the Biblical references already given that the earth (the land) was all given to Abraham and his seed only. If so, the Gentiles are not, in their present position, Abraham's seed. If we, Gentiles, wish to share in those promises, we have to accept God's provision. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ" (Gal. 3:26, 27). There is no other way to put on Christ except by baptism. Notice verse 29: "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Is it essential to become Abraham's seed? If so, the same may be said for baptism. In Mark 16:15, 16 Jesus says that the belief of the gospel and being baptized will save us. Do you want to be saved? If so, get acquainted with the gospel that God preached unto Abraham, believe it, be baptized, and as Jesus said, "You shall be saved." "What is the mode?" you ask. "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: ... even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection" (Rom. 6:4, 5).

When you have done these things, you have God's oath that you will have an everlasting inheritance. Jesus has promised to save; so, "why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord" (Acts 22:16).

"God brought him forth out of Egypt; ... he shall eat up the nations his enemies" (Num. 24:8).

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHTS

By Opal Poland

DID you, my friend, ever stop to think that the fruits of your thoughts will be passed on to your children and grandchildren? When you let your mind dwell on thoughts of sin, you are giving your unborn children an evil foundation on which to build. If we want our children to be honorable men and women, and strong in the faith, we should start with ourselves.

In 2 Timothy 1:5 we read that Timothy's faith started with his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God" (Matt. 5:8).

The angel said unto Mary, the virgin that was espoused to Joseph, "Blessed art thou among women. . . . For thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus." Because of the purity of her heart, Mary was chosen to be the mother of our Savior.

We love our children, we want to secure the very best for them that life can offer—something worth while and lovely—clean and beautiful thoughts!

"For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he" (Prov. 23:7).

It is with regret that, due to ill health, I am compelled to give up the editing of the Berean page for a time. It has been a source of pleasure and inspiration to me, and I trust it has been to you, its readers.

I ask that you will give your faithful cooperation to Sister Lorraine Brossard of Eden Valley, Minnesota, who will be your editor during my absence. Please send your articles to her.

May God bless you all, is my prayer.

INFLUENCE OF KIND WORDS

By Virginia Smith, Russellville, Ark.

Just as the beautiful flowers cannot tell what becomes of their sweet perfume, Christians cannot tell what becomes of their influence.

The little deeds of kindness we do and the kind words we speak will live on in the memory of those we have helped long after we have fallen asleep in death. Kind words always lift, encourage, and brighten the passing days of others. Nothing is more Christlike than speaking kind words to everyone.

The happiest people in the world are those who are always helping others. The Bible says: "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another" (Rom. 12:10). Wherever the spirit of Christ sways the heart, there is passion to serve. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." What kind of a spirit did Jesus have? He was kind, meek, lowly, and always helping others.

We can't all do great things to influence hundreds of people, but as we go about the home, cheering and helping to make all within its circle happy, our influence is felt more than elsewhere. How sad it is that in many homes people speak kind words to their guests, but to their own families use a bitter tone. A few bitter words, spoken thoughtlessly, often cause needless heartaches.

We Christians attract hearts by the qualities we display, and retain them by the qualities we possess. We leave our influence with everyone we meet. "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost" (2 Cor. 4:3).

Our great desire should be to live in service for the Master, so that when our lives are finished, others can truly say that this world has been made better by our having passed this way.

JUNIOR CORRESPONDENCE COMMITTEE

By Lorraine Brossard, Eden Valley, Minn.

The Junior Social Correspondence Committee handles a very important work of the National Berean Society, and this fact must be remembered not only by the chairman, but by every member of the Committee, and by the ministers and secretaries of all our churches. This work can progress effectively only when we have the whole-hearted cooperation of these mentioned.

The Committee consists of twelve members from various sections of the United States. The work is handled very efficiently by this Committee, but even above this, we need the cooperation of the ministers and church secretaries who are the means of supplying us with the work. The reports of baptisms sent to The Restitution Herald are our only way of securing them for the files. We have on file for 1938-'39, seventy-two names, yet at the end of this year, it is very disappointing to discover that many names of those baptized had not been reported to The Herald, and in many cases we have found names with incomplete addresses.

To me, this work seems vital, for in very many cases new members are in isolated districts and have very few opportunities of contacting others of our churches. Through correspondence they may become friends with some distant church and its people. This Committee works primarily with young people, and there must be a wealth of opinions, expressions, ideas, and encouragement exchanged by letters as a result of these acquaintances. These letters bring about varied results other than pleasant correspondence. They have brought about organized societies in isolated places, encouragement for renewed efforts, marriage within the church, and exchange of ideas that have rebuilt societies, and they assure future conversions.

It is my earnest plea to anyone who possesses the knowledge of baptisms to report to The Herald with as much information as possible. Please cooperate with us, and we shall endeavor to do the work to the best of our ability.

"What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Lesson: Micah 3:1-12; 6:6-8.

MICAH'S MESSAGE

From the reading of the lesson we find that Micah told the rulers of their evil doings. Their judgments were not fair. They didn't even want to judge rightly, for he told them that they loved evil! Those leaders must have been somewhat like the leaders of the present time, in some of the lands overseas.

The rulers were not the only ones. We find that the prophets told the people wrong things so that the people made mistakes, too. The prophets cried, "Peace," when there was no peace. Because of their sinfulness God would not answer their prayers.

Micah, a true prophet, did not praise the rulers and false prophets, but said he was there to tell them of their sins.

Conditions are truly very bad when the judges judge for rewards. Such men no doubt accepted money as bribes and decided in favor of the ones who could pay them most, regardless of right or wrong. Do we have anything like that today?

The priests were not interested in teaching the people the truths of God, for they were preaching only for the money they were paid for their services. Today there are churches with ministers chiefly concerned about their salaries. Many boys and girls in school are sometimes so interested in getting high grades on their report cards that they do wrong by cheating to get the desired grades! Salaries, rewards, and good grades should all be a result of one's best efforts received with the knowledge that whatever has been the reward it has been earned honestly. God judges from the heart.

Let us take Micah's advice when he said, "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Micah 6:8). May we all say with Micah, "Therefore I will look unto the Lord; I will wait for the God of my salvation: my God will hear me."

ECE CLUB NEWS

Soon there will appear on our page a picture of the ECE Club in Cleveland, Ohio. I know you are anxious to see some of your fellow members.

Any group which wishes to organize, and have a picture taken for our page may do so. Send to me for full directions if you wish.

NEW MEMBERS

Today we have one new member, our one hundred seventy-fourth! He is Charles William Mercer, age 11, of 529 W. Piper St., Macomb, Illinois. Some of you who like to write letters, write to these new members of your age.

There are twenty-six more membership cards before we have our two hundred members. If you want one of them just send me your full name, age, birth date, and address, soon. Your mother, sister, teacher, or even some friend may write to me for you. A postal card will do.

Here is what I received on a postal card this past week: "Dear Mrs. Savage: I thank you for my 'membership card.' I think it is very useful and I am trying to follow the rules on it. It looks very good on the wall of my room. I wish you much success in your leading of this Club. I thank you for Billy's address. I am Very truly yours, Henry Hutchinson."

Henry is fourteen. His address is Rt. 3, Box 48, Hammond, Louisiana. Why not write to Henry?

Life is like a ship on the sea of life: son*ship* (Rom. 8:15); fellow*ship* (1 John 1:3, 7); friend*ship* (Prov. 22: 24, 25); wor*ship* (Ex. 20:3); steward*ship* (Luke 16:3-13). How many ships do you sail on?

Sing to the tune of "Jesus Loves Me."

EDMOND, OKLAHOMA

On August 30 Bro. and Sr. Lucian Murphy of Asher, Okla., brought their daughter Mil-dred to talk with us, as she wished to be baptized

I was surprised to find that Mildred, not yet twelve years of age, was able to answer the necessary questions. As we talked with her about the gospel, tears of gladness came into her eyes and she said she wished to be baptized for the remission of sins and so she might be a member of the bride class, the church of God. With much joy we baptized Mildred. May the Lord bless and direct and

MOOREFIELD, NEBRASKA

We are glad to introduce to the faith Mr. D. C. Dovenbarger of Ingham, Nebr. Mr. Dovenbarger has attended services at Jeffry Queen for the past three years, and is the first fruits of our long labor among the people of that community. We feel there are others to follow. The work at both Jeffry Queen and Moorefield is now a little more pleasant, as the attendance and interest are better than in past months.

Bro. Wilsie McKnight preached for us on Wednesday evening, Aug. 30. There were good attendance and interest. We are always glad to have Wilsie and his good wife with us.

WESTERN NEBRASKA CONFERENCE

The Annual Western Nebraska Conference convened at Holbrook, Aug. 20 - 27, with Bro. J. W. McLain as guest speaker, assisted by Bro. E. E. Giesler of Moorefield. Junior, young people's, and adult classes were held daily at 10:00 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. There was, also, a sermon each morning at 11:00, and each evening Bro. McLain gave an inspiring sermon which helped us realize our responsibilities as true Christians.

Bro. Giesler was called to Moorefield, Aug. 20, for a funeral of one of the brethren. We were pleased to have visiting brethren from eastern Nebraska, Colorado, and Kansas. We are always glad to have visitors from various parts of the country. Come again.

At the annual business meeting, which was held Thursday afternoon, the following officers were elected: president, C. R. Meyerhoeffer; vice president, Wayne Wilson, recording secretary, Eva Phelps; corresponding secretary, Icel Stedman; treasurer, Leona Lathron Lathrop. Eva Meyerhoeffer, Cor. Seey.

REPORT OF GOSPEL WORK

I traveled about sixteen hundred miles in Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Missouri from July 13 to August 26, delivering three discourses at Marritton, Ast, the discourse at the Laid Morrilton, Ark., three discourses at the Loid Schoolhouse north of Morrilton, six at Cleveland, Ark., and sixteen three miles north of Cleveland. On the way home I preached once in Fort Smith, Ark., and eight times at Moffatt, Okla.

When I reached home August 15, I received a telephone call from Bro. E. Sutterfield of Bismarck, Mo., asking me to baptize Misses Minnie and Martha Adams, two of his cou-sins. They asked for me, as they wanted the same minister to baptize them who had bap-Bro. Sutterfield and I enjoyed the sixty-mile auto trip into the hills. There I preached five times and baptized these two dear ones into the all-saving name of Christ. At the river I made another call for any who desired bap-tism. All rejoiced when W. O. Kay, a brother-in-law of the sisters, responded. We left an impression for good there, promising to return soon for a meeting of two weeks.

May the Lord direct, bless, and save for His overlasting kingdom.

THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

Opening Day: October 2, 1939

Instructors of The Bible Training School

Elders L. E. Conner and Sydney E. Magaw are selected as the instructors for the Bible Training School to begin at Oregon, Illinois, October 2, 1939. They are doctrinally sound, experienced, and zealous to found an institution of learning and character-building which will enrich the life of every attending student. They are dedicated to the task of building an institution which will truly lead the Church of God into more progressive and evangelistic service.

Each instructor will offer two courses. Brother Conner announces a course in The Doctrines and Purpose of the Church of God. His other course, not yet definitely determined, will be announced soon. Brother Magaw will teach Biblical History and a course in Steps to Successful Evangelism.

Costs to students are remarkably low: board, room, and tuition are offered for only $200.00 for the full term of eight months, $100.00 may be paid at the beginning of each semester; or, if necessary, monthly payments may be arranged.

An exceptionally choice and commodious residence has been secured as a home for the students. A matron will be in charge of the students' home. The very best of Christian care and management will be maintained, and the best possible training given.

Young men and young women of the Church of God, the Bible Training School is for you. Your prayers are being answered. You must now volunteer your cooperation to make the School a success. The Church of God needs you! Use Enrollment Coupon below.

"Home, Sweet Home"

Provided by the love and sympathy of the entire brotherhood of the Church of God, Golden Rule Home assures to the members of its Family the comfort, security, and solicitous care which the word "home" always suggests.

Here the anxieties of earlier and more active life are laid aside forever. No threat of eviction for non-payment of rent or taxes or other indebtedness troubles the hearts of the residents of Golden Rule Home!

No doctor or hospital bills, no grocery, coal, or light bills to be met the first of the month, bring fear to the minds of the Golden Rule Home Family!

All such obligations and burdens are taken from the shoulders of these older ones immediately upon their entrance into the Home and are carried thereafter by the Golden Rule Home itself, which is amply able to bear the load on their behalf.

A hearty Christian welcome awaits all who seek the protection and lifelong support the Home provides.

Conditions of entrance into Golden Rule Home are as liberal as absolute security permits. Write for full particulars concerning the Home and its advantages. Or, better still, come and visit the Home itself and let the Family tell their own story of its advantages and comforts.

Address: Golden Rule Home, Mrs. Idona Romine, Matron, Oregon, Illinois.

War! Prophecy Fulfilled Again! War!

By M. W. Lyon

A FTER years of desperately trying to stall it off, the dreaded conflict has been touched off. After twenty-one years of armistice, Europe has renewed the deadly struggle which promises to be more frightful than ever before possible.

What a mockery now is the "war to end war"! Where are the hopes and pledges of fifteen and twenty years ago that war would never again be resorted to "as an instrument of national policy"? Where are the fond expectations of peace-loving humanity who have tried to make themselves believe the world was getting better and better? Dashed to the ground like the hopes of a Chamberlain, who sees the labors of a lifetime now shattered in a day! What disillusionment for those who had hoped against hope that the folly of 1914-'18 might never be repeated!

When will men cease to place their reliance on human efforts and learn to regard the God of heaven? Has He not foretold, over and over again, these very things? There was a day, when men were crying "Peace and safety," a few years back, when we were laughed at for saying there would be another World War. But the Bible clearly predicts it, in language unmistakable. "Behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring back the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat; and I will execute judgment upon them there ... Proclaim ye this among the nations; prepare war; stir up the mighty men; let all the men of war draw near, let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong" (Joel 3:1-10, R.V.). It is at the time of Judah's return to Palestine, therefore could never have applied to any time before this generation. And when has there ever been a war so well "prepared" as this one? For once no nation was caught unexpectedly and unprepared.

Consider also the prophecy of Zechariah 14:2-5, R.V.): "I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle... Then shall Jehovah go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east... and Jehovah my God shall come, and all the holy ones with thee." Observe that this is a world conflict, since "all nations" are engaged; it is to be centered at Jerusalem; and is to be in progress at the very moment when the Lord returns from heaven.

All this is corroborated in the New Testament vision of Revelation 19:19 (R.V.): "I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat upon the horse, and against his army." This is at the coming of Christ, when He will find the nations fighting against Him and everything He stands for. Russia has already outlawed God. Germany has returned to the ancient paganism and turned against the Jews, God's chosen people. These two are now allied together, as Bible prophecy indicates they would do, and some day they will attack Palestine and bring on the great struggle foretold.

Whether the conflict now begun in Europe will lead to this final struggle, we cannot yet say, but if not during this present war, then during another one yet to come. There will nevermore be peace on this earth until Jesus comes back to force it upon men unwilling to lay down the sword. Long ago Isaiah wrote, "Behold, their valiant ones cry without; the ambassadors of peace weep bitterly. The highways lie waste, the wayfaring man ceaseth: the enemy hath broken the covenant, he hath despised the cities, he regardeth not man" (Isa. 33:7, 8, R.V.). Today is this scripture fulfilled in your ears!

Even assuming that the aggressor can be crushed in battle, what assurance have (Please turn to page 11)

THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

Faith Put Into Action

Elder C. E. Randall has been a leading spokesman for the new Bible Training School. He has not quit with mere talking. He has followed up his words with a decision that puts power into what he says. Brother and Sister Randall's only son, Celaine, is enrolled in The Bible Training School.

Brother Randall writes, "The move to found a Bible Training School is sound and worthy, and is deserving our heartiest cooperation. We believe in the need of such a School, and have faith that it will be so guided as to meet the requirements of our youth. We are sending our son, and when we recommend The School to others, we are not suggesting something that we are not willing to endorse for our own boy."

This faith put into action is what we hope to see in other parents. "Faith without works is dead." Faith that works will enroll students.

Parents Should Understand

There are but few young men and women who are able to enroll in The Bible Training School, unless they have encouragement from their parents. Most young people of Christian training are modest in their requests for financial assistance. Parents should recognize this, but it cannot be fair to take advantage of it.

Further, when a young man decides upon the ministry for his life's work, it is often hardest of all for him to approach his own father about such a decision. Instead of being first to encourage, father is sometimes last to encourage his son in the ministry of another Son who was thoroughly consecrated but little understood.

Though John and Mary do not beg to attend The Bible Training School to start October 2 at Oregon, Illinois, they may, nevertheless, have a burning desire to attend. Parents, suggest to your son and daughter that they entoll in The Bible Training School. Do not wait for them to beg of you.

Maybe there is a grandmother who cares. A grandmother once helped me.

"OCCUPY TILL I COME"—JESUS

The Lord Has Spoken

I hope and intend to be found working when Jesus comes. The Lord of men—greater than Moses, far wiser than Solomon—has charged that His servants occupy until He returns. What else, then, can a true Christian do? A traitor has never been glorified.

A certain centurion, whose servant was "sick," and ready to die," besought Jesus to but speak the word to heal his servant, for he knew that if Jesus gave commandment that the work would be accomplished. Said the centurion: "Say in a word, and my servant shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it" (Luke 7:8). Then said Jesus, "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." The servant was healed.

Jesus is more than any centurion. Jesus is the Captain of the church of the living God. Jesus has commanded His people to "occupy" until He returns. Let nations fight. Let Hitler storm. Let men "believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth" (2 Thess. 2:11, 12)! "What is that to thee? follow thou me"! The Lord has spoken. And she who bore the Prince has charged, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."

The Church Has Work to Do

The Church of God has work to do. This is no time for the folding of hands—or pocketbooks. The last of the battle is most important, for there the victory is won. The runner spurts to reach the goal.

The obedient child seldom needs commandment. He knows his father's will. The Church of God knows all too well that God would ever lead us on. To teach and preach, and over all, to live the gospel life, this is the work, the important work, that God would have us do.

The Bible Training School is not all our duty, but it is at this very present time a large part of our duty in working and building for Christ and the approaching kingdom and spiritual work. The Lord calls men to serve.

The Bible, God's Word

(Concluded)

By J. H. Anderson

HE (Christ) answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby" (1 Peter 2:2). Every person must have food to sustain life. The babe must have milk until it is able to take stronger food. The babe in Christ must have the sincere milk of the Word until he can use the meat of the Word. No true mother gives her babe adulterated food. She wants the best food, the purest food, for the child. The Father, who has all power and wisdom, would never give His Word (food) to His children if it had been poisoned by any one. "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" (Luke 11:13). God is more careful of His children than the mother can be of hers.

Several years ago, a noted minister stopped at a home in North Carolina for dinner. When he and the family were scated at the table, and thanks had been given, the lady of the house said to the minister, "Eat, if you can find anything fit to eat. We don't have much that is fit to eat." The minister arose and left the table without eating anything. The woman asked him why he didn't eat. His reply was, "I don't know anything about the preparation of this food. You tell me it is not fit to eat, I'll not eat it." People who are hungry for the bread of life go to church to get spiritual food. They hear the preacher tell them they are reading a mistranslation of the Bible, that it is not in the original Word. They go away without the food that they so badly need. Did the preacher obey God, when he failed to give them the bread of life, the Word of God? "The prophet that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully. What is the chaff (dream) to the wheat (Word)? saith the Lord" (Jer. 23:28)

If we ministers have the Word, then we must give that Word, and by the Word call out the bride. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day" (John 12:48). If you reject Christ's words (which you find only in the Bible), His words will judge you in the last day.

The children of God are engaged in a war that will continue throughout this age. "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses" (1 Tim. 6:12). God has provided every soldier with a weapon and sword, the Word. "The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a dis-cerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. 4:12). Can we, as Christians, believe that God has provided us with a defective weapon to use in fighting for eternal life? No nation in war would give its soldiers defective weapons, if it could provide good ones.

God can provide the very best. Our weapon that God has provided is His Word. "Take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God" (Eph. 6:17). This weapon, the Word, will pull down the strongholds of the enemy.

"Though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh: (for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds;) casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ" (2 Cor. 10:3-5). What better weapon could the soldier find? Those who find mistakes in the Word place themselves as judges of the Word. When Jesus comes, the Word will judge them and may condemn them. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last days. For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment (Word), what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment (Word) is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak" (John 12:48-50).

How may I be clean in the Father's sight? "Ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you" (John 15:3). "That he might sanctify and cleanse it (the church) with the washing of water by the word" (Eph. 5:26). I want good, pure food, that I may live a true life in God's service. Where can (Please turn to page 11)

Seed—The Word of God

By Bonnie D. Martin

"Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever" (1 Peter 1:23).

ALL flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away; but the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you" (1 Peter 1:24, 25).

When one thinks of flowers, he thinks of the blossoms of plants. They are wonders of nature which spring from the ground and appeal with their beauty and sweetness to the eyes and hearts of people. People see only the outside beauty of the flower. However, the outside of the flower is not the important part. In botany, the word "flower" means "a branch or shoot, highly modified for the purpose of insuring the increase of the plant through the production of seeds." When the seeds have finally been made, there comes the matter of putting those seeds into new ground, in new surroundings to start another generation of plants.

When God created the earth, He said, "Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth" (Gen. 1:11). The life that God put in those first plants was in the seeds of those plants. God has so created plants that they produce seed, thereby insuring the increase of the plant. He has also put His Seed in the world, and has given unto Him eternal life, in order that His Seed should never be removed from the earth. Christ is that Seed.

Now the seeds of a plant, in order to produce new plants, must die. There cannot be new plants without those deaths. In 1 Corinthians 15:36 we read, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die." "Quickened" means to be made alive. Christ is the Seed of the Eternal One. He died and became the "firstfruits of them that slept." Christ was quickened, or made alive, by the Father. He received eternal life from the heavenly Father, who is the source of all life. Christ was then given the power to quicken whom He will. Christ, who is the Seed of the Eternal One, holds eternal life for the future generation—the redeemed ones.

A plant produces only one kind of seed. God's seed will all be of one kind, too. They will all be immortal because they are the seed of the Immortal One.

A person who has the Word of God abiding in his heart, is like a flower. It is not the outward appearance of man that counts toward eternal life, but it is that seed, that word of God, which abides on the inside. Jesus said, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life" (John 6:63). The seeds of a plant must be sown or planted, in order to produce new plants that will bear fruit. If a plant does not have some outside agent to help distribute the seeds, then these seeds will fall on the ground near the mother plant, and that particular kind of plant will grow only in that territory. However, the heavenly Father has provided for wide distribution of plant seeds. Some seeds are scattered by wind, some by water, and others by birds and animals. This distribution of seeds causes new plants to grow in new territory, thereby increasing the seeds.

God has chosen the members of the church to act as outside agents in the distribution of the gospel—the seed—the Word of God. Christ has said to His disciples: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). Just as the birds, wind, water, and so forth, help in the distribution of plant seed, the members of the church should spread the seed—the Word of God. The seed of a plant, if planted, will bear fruit. Just so, the Seed or Word, if planted, will find lodgment in someone's heart. We, in turn, will sow the Word, and thereby God's Seed is being continuously planted. In John 15:2 Christ says, "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he (God) taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

Just as Christ died, His followers will have to die or be changed, before they are born of this incorruptible Word. There is soon coming a day when this birth will take place. Every person who has believed and obeyed the Word of God is in Christ, and if he is in Christ, he will be given this birth into immortality by the Word of God that dwells in his heart. "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son" (1 John 5:11).

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead (in Christ) shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself" (John 5:25, 26). (Turn to page 11)

Departing From the Faith

By T. A. Drinkard

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils" (1 Timothy 4:1).

THE SPIRIT herein reveals the fact that, in the latter times some will depart from the faith of the gospel of Jesus Christ, giving heed to doctrines that are inimical to the welfare of the Church of God. How sad it is to realize that some will go astray by departing from the faith, thus denying their Lord and Master who did so much for them in the hour of need. The Spirit gives the warning that those faithful to the cause of truth might understand better how to meet the prevailing difficulties that confront them. This departure is from the faith, and indicates that before anyone can depart from the faith he must first be connected with it. By denying the faith, there is a denial of the saving efficacy of the blood of Jesus Christ, which is the blood of the covenant wherewith those of gospel faith are sanctified (Heb. 10:29). What advantage has been gained by allowing the seducing doctrines of men to lead them away from the faith? The Spirit of God knew what the conditions would be, and caused the Apostles to write accordingly.

Speaking by authority of the Spirit of God, Paul says, "Of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them" (Acts 20:30). The Spirit of God, foreseeing this condition of things, forewarned the church to be on guard to defend her interests against those doctrines that undermine her faith. So it is today, that the Church of God is confronted with some of the most destructive doctrines, or teachings, that could possibly arise to undermine and destroy her faith, her hope, and future standing in the world.

We must notice that the Spirit of God particularly warns that the trouble starts on the inside. The Church of God must arise in its strength and might and renew its faith in the guiding counsel of God, and must follow the Spirit as it directs us through the Word of God in matters concerning the gospel faith and Christian living. We must go forward to exalt our Lord and Master, to uphold the faith of the gospel, the power which God uses in saving men and women. By authority of the same Spirit, it is written, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God" (2 John 9). Then, recognizing the necessity of safeguarding the faith of the gospel, it further says, "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 10, 11). His evil deeds would be the teaching of error that tends to undermine the faith of the gospel.

The Spirit continues to warn the church against false teaching, which, if allowed to go unchecked, will lead away those of the faith, by saying, "There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction" (2 Peter 2:1). Not only will these heresies be brought in, but "many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of" (2 Peter 2:2). Men even denied the Lord that bought us with His own precious blood, in the hour of need when we most needed Him. It is almost unbelievable. The Master said, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life" (Rev. 2:10), which means loyalty to the faith of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In writing to them "that are sanctified" by the Father in Jesus Christ, Jude, in verse 3 of his letter says, "Ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Why should we contend for the faith? Does it matter whether we are faithful or not? Can we be faithful, and, at the same time, depart from the faith? How can the Church of God be true to its Lord and Master, and at the same time allow error in doctrine to enter our hearts and lives which wreck and ruin the places where it takes root? How can the Church of God be loyal to its God and at the same time condone and tolcrate teachers that advocate error? When the parents of the home see danger approaching, they take means of safeguarding the home's interests, thus protecting themselves and their children. The same principle holds true in protecting the interests of the Church of God by those who are leaders. The time will come when this fact will be acknowledged, but possibly it will be too late to save some soul deceived and led astray by deceptive teaching. God has abundantly supplied all necessary help along this line, if we will use it to His glory. Sad indeed it is to deny the faith; to deny our Lord and Master. May we see the urgent need of contending for the faith of the gospel, as it was given by the Spirit of God, and by so doing we can save both ourselves and those who hear us (1 Tim. 4:16).

The Bible and Science

The World Before Adam

By R. H. Judd

THY word is true from the beginning" (A.V.). "The beginning of thy word is true" (margin). "The sum of thy word is true" (R.V.).

Here are listed three readings of one text, Psalm 119: 160, but the central theme of each is the same, namely, the truth of God's Word. The first reading expresses a general unfolding of truth. The second lays emphasis upon a particular portion—the beginning; and the third recognizes the relationship that each part bears to the other, forming one complete whole, called "the sum."

Roughly speaking, the Book of Books was some fifteen to seventeen hundred years in the making. Therefore, its earlier portions have survived the changing circumstances of life through which the human race has passed during that period. Not only so, the Bible has kept in the forefront of progress, so that down through the centuries the keenest minds with which mankind has been endowed have acknowledged it as the source from which all true knowledge springs.

During recent years, discoveries in archeology have been continually vindicating the truth of the Scripture records. They have proven, for instance, that of the thousands of persons, cities, towns, and villages mentioned in the Scriptures—said to be some four thousand not one is misplaced. The Bible stories of patriarchal times were declared to be myths, and even whole nations recorded in the Bible were said to be in the same category. As late as 1904, one noted archeologist declared that he "did not believe there ever were such a people as the Hittites." Since that date there has been brought to light information from the ruins of Boghazkeui to fully vindicate the Bible records of these people who "had treaty rights on equal terms with the great nations of antiquity, making the Hittite power a third great power with Babylonia and Egypt." Authority for the quoted statement is M. G. Kyle, D.D., Egyptologist. He also says, "The Bible glimpses of Canaanite practices and the products of Canaanite religion exactly agree." Many, many such testimonies are being continually turned up by the spade to demonstrate the absolute accuracy of Scripture, and that, too, in a land where one civilization followed fast upon the heels of another. We mention these facts, which can be multiplied almost indefinitely, to show the outstanding truth of Scripture. The Bible has never lost out in any of its assertions, historic, geographic, or prophetic.

In the face of such testimony the question may reasonably be asked: Though the Bible may not be regarded as a scientific textbook, may we not reasonably expect its statements to be scientifically accurate in fact though not neessarily scientifically stated? The writers of the Bible were human and, humanly speaking, could only express themselves through their natural characteristics and in general accord with the education of the times; allowing, of course, for outstanding personalities as we have them in our own times. Surely the marvel is that, instead of contradicting the science of today, the Bible record should approach so closely to science. Science has again and again shifted its position, while the Bible has steadfastly held its ground from generation to generation. As the Bible has been abundantly vindicated in its geographic and historic aspects, we may naturally look for its vindication in those deeper themes which are generally termed "scientific," and which have relation to creation, the earth, and

Much interest has been aroused by recent discoveries in Italy. A human skull, said to be seventy thousand years old, has been unearthed. Many Bible lovers are being severely tested by such events which crop up from time to time, which seemingly discredit the Scripture account of creation and the antiquity of man.

It must be frankly acknowledged that, according to what has been currently taught in the churches concerning those early periods of the earth's history, there is ground for concluding that the Bible and science are at variance with each other. While this is true, it is also true that there are many students of Scripture who, from love of the Word itself and whose circumstances are unbiased toward an independent study of these themes, have taken up the issue and have clearly demonstrated that there is no controversy between Scripture and definitely established science. We believe the Bible to be true, and that Bible lovers have nothing to fear in the encouragement of a sincere spirit of investigation. As one earnest writer remarks, "If the first chapter be the offspring of human error, where does divine truth begin?"

According to the teachings of geology and astronomy, the existence of the heavens and the earth are to be reckoned by myriads of thousands of years. It is commonly supposed that, according to Moses, they are but of yesterday.

We maintain that these differences are only apparent, the result of superficial reading of the Sacred Record, and a careless mixing up of human chronology with Bible events that has been misunderstood, if not actually misconstrued.

Facts Must Be Considered

The first question then is: What did Moses actually say? Quoting from the Authorized Version, his opening words are: "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." There are some very interesting points to be noticed in this brief statement. Reshith is the Hebrew word used for "beginning," and in the original is without the definite article. Moses says: "In reshith (not in the reshith) Elohim created the heavens and the earth." The Septuagint, Chaldee, and Syriac Versions all omit the article. It is also found to be the same in John 1:1, which is incidental but substantial proof that John's reference was directly to the Mosaic account of creation and to the word spoken by the Creator as represented in the frequently repeated phrase "God said." Further, a goodly number of authorities could be quoted who state that "in the beginning" refers to duration or time, not to order, and that it is indefinite in signification, meaning eternity or previous time, according to the subject under consideration. Meyer understands it as duration before time, and translates it "pre-temporality." He says it is equivalent to the Septuagint of Proverbs 8:23, "In the beginning before he made the earth."

Others give the meaning as "in antiquities or former times." Our translators, in Psalm 68:33, have expressed the same thought, "To him that rideth upon the heavens of heavens, which were of old"; or, as another translator has it, "that were from antiquities." In Psalm 102:25 we read, "Of old hast thou laid the foundations of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands." The resulting thought, then, is that the Hebrew word is indefinite, and can include millions or milliards of years just as easily as thousands. The statement of Moses, therefore, is not contrary to science. His words are big enough to take in times indefinite, exceeding any computation that man can conceive. They also answer the absurd objection that God did not create anything during previous eternity, but was inactive until a few thousand years ago.

Here it will be interesting to note another line of argument confirmatory to the foregoing. We find some very definite allusions to it in the Old Testament, but it is reserved for the New Testament to more clearly state it.

Bible history uses a chronology, as do secular histories, which expresses itself in "years," "months," and "days." Current history finds its sufficiency and its limits in these terms, but the Bible does not. What is perhaps equally remarkable is the fact that not until comparatively recent years has humanity, in its wider search into the wonderful works of God, found it necessary to come into line with Rible facts in adopting measurements of time that far exceed what has hitherto been within the capacity of man to comprehend. In its unlimited vision, going back into the eternal past, and reaching forward into the everexpanding horizons of time, the Scriptures have, thousands of years ago, adopted a mode of reckoning which is unique. This it does under the term "age." Of these "ages" there are five at least—there are probably more but these five are traceable in the Inspired Word. We have no right to go beyond what the Bible reveals. Two of these ages are past, one now exists, and two are yet to

In the Old Testament we find that the word for "age" occurs but once in the Authorized Version, namely, in Job 8:8, 9, "Inquire, I pray thee, of the former age." In the Revised Version the word occurs twice; namely, in the passage just quoted, and where Solomon speaks of "the ages which were before us" (Eccl. 1:10).

That these ages refer to God's purpose or plan in relation to His works and His Word, there cannot be any question. Note this statement for example: "According to the eternal purpose ('purpose of the ages' in the Greek, or 'plan of the ages,' Diag.) which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Eph. 3:11). See also Ephesians 1:9 and Romans 16:25, where God, in Weymouth's translation, is called "the God of the ages." (See also 2 Tim. 1:9, 10; Titus 1:2, 3.) These varied expressions are rendered by Young's Concordance, "age-lasting times"; by the Emphatic Diaglott, "times of the ages"; by Weymouth, "periods of past ages." It should be noticed also that in connection with these, different prepositions are used, as "through age times" and "before age times."

There is another expression in the New Testament which equally shows design and purpose. It is the expression "the foundation of the world." It appears as marking a clearly marked point of time and action, dating certain important purposes or actions of God. Here, also, is additional evidence of the accuracy of the Scriptures. Two Greek words are employed to express the word "foundation," namely, thermelios and katabole. The first is used for the foundation of a building: "He looked for a city which hath foundations" (Heb. 11:10). The second is associated in every instance of its use with the word kosmos (world), while thermelios never is. The ten instances of its occurrences (Matt. 13:35; Matt. 25:34; Luke 11:50; John 17:24; Eph. 1:4; Heb. 4:3; 9:26; 1 Peter 1:20; Rev. 13:8, and 17:8) are always governed by one or the other of two prepositions. They are pro (before), and apo (form), as in "before the foundation of the world," and "from the foundation of the world"; making the foundation of the (present) world a dividing line of time.

There is a further remarkable fact concerning this word katabole, and which significantly fits in with a phase of the subject which we shall presently consider. This word is said to really signify a "casting down," "disruption," "overthrow." The verb kataballo has that meaning. It occurs in the Septuagint Version in 2 Samuel

20:15, "all the people with Joab battered ('undermined,' margin) the wall to throw it down," and in the New Testament, in 2 Corinthians 4:9 (R.V.), "smitten down, yet not destroyed."

(Note: Some have been a little puzzled that the word "foundation," which to most conveys the idea of stability, should also have the meaning of "casting down." In all languages there are some words having that peculiarity. For instance, the Greek word in Luke 12:36 translated "return" is in Philippians 1:23 rendered "depart." This word strictly means "loosing again," hence is translatable "depart" or "return" according to the standpoint of the subject. The Diaglott renders the word "return" in both places. Practical Christianity

By Rufus A. Curtis

WHAT doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works. . . . But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" (James 2:14-18, 20).

"A living dog is better than a dead lion" (Eccl. 9:4). A living faith will prompt its possessor to heed the admonition, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest" (Eccl. 9:10).

There is no ambiguity about the Master's instructions concerning "the poor," in every country on our globe. He has said, "Ye have the poor always with you; but me ye have not always" (Matt. 26:11). For this extremely needy class, "one having authority" has spoken, "When thou makest a dinner or a supper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen, nor thy rich neighbours; lest they also bid thee again, and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind: and thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee: for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just" (Matt. 7:29; Luke 14:12-14).

"Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves. For if any man be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was. But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed. If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world" (James 1:22-27; Luke 6:46-49). God "will render to every man according to his deeds" (Rom. 2:6). "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting" (Gal. 6:7, 8).

"Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 6:9, 10). "Seek for glory and honour and immortality" "by patient continuance in well doing" (Rom. 2:7, 10).

"Immortality, 'tis a priceless boon, 'tis wealth untold,
The choicest diamonds, the purest gold:
Ah! better the world, and all therein
To lose, if so doing, the prize we win."

HOSPITALITY SHOWN JESUS

By Mary Richardson

TODAY we hear people remarking about how friendly they have been treated in the home of some person who has been their host or hostess. Haven't you often said that very thing? When given unlimited hospitality in someone's home, it is very apparent to us and impresses us. It makes us feel that we are welcome there, that our presence is desired. Yet, the moment a person enters some homes, he senses that his presence is unwelcome. No matter how much the host or hostess tries to smooth down the ruffled feathers, he fails to gain the semblance of cordiality. Some people possess tact, and often if you have called at an inopportune time, you will not detect it. It is very evident in some homes that you are indeed a welcome guest, because you are treated as one of the family.

I wonder if you ever noticed whether or not there was any hospitality shown Jesus. Was Jesus ever a welcome guest at people's homes? In spite of all His rejections and rebukes, Jesus found comfort and solace in the home of two sisters, Mary and Martha. It was in this home that Jesus spent many happy hours. It is spoken of Mary (Luke 10:42), that she had chosen the good part. Martha was busy with the various duties of the home, but Mary found time to sit at Jesus' feet and listen to His teachings. She even "anointed the Lord with ointment and wiped his feet with her hair." Jesus must have had a joyful heart to know that in this home He was a welcome guest, and that He was being shown consideration, for Mary had open cars and an open heart to His teachings.

On another occasion (John 11) we have the story of the death of their brother Lazarus. These women surely held Jesus high in their esteem, for in verse 21 Martha said: "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." Can you not see from this verse that a cordial welcome awaited Jesus in this home? His heart was touched very much, for we read in verse 35 that "Jesus wept." The love that Jesus bore for this family was so great that He raised Lazarus back to mortal life. In John 12:1-3, the hospitality shown Jesus by Mary and Martha is further emphasized. Again Mary anointed the feet of Jesus with costly ointment and wiped His feet with her hair.

Although Jesus is not on this earth, we Christians can show hospitality to our fellow men, for Jesus says in Matthew 25:40, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We can be hospitable to Jesus by being obedient in baptism and patterning our lives after His. By baptism we come into a new relationship with Christ. If we welcome Him into our hearts, it is the best hospitality we can give Him. We should welcome Him into our meetings and let His Spirit dwell in us richly, guiding us ever onward.

This is the king of hospitality that Jesus wants and likes. If we show Him this kind of friendliness, His presence will be felt more, and we will have a divine feeling of security and blessing which only Jesus can give. Let us all give Jesus our best hospitality and have the happiness and joy of living that all Christians experience.

"LORD, TEACH US TO PRAY"

By Mrs. Isabel Wright Kennison

O, the pity of prayerless Christians and prayerless churches! Much devolves upon the ministry and the home in respect to this. A recent experience may reveal my thought. A near-by pastor had been asked to offer the invocation at a school graduation, but, owing to car trouble, was delayed. Consternation was felt by all concerned, but not a person present could be prevailed upon to fill the breach, so they sent for me.

During the absence of a pastor, an assistant in the church school was to conduct the Bible school. I could not remain for the session, as I had to attend another service. The woman was past fifty years of age, and had been an official in the church and school since early youth, but her plight was pitiable, for she had planned that I should open with prayer. She said, "If you can't stay, we will have to have just the Lord's Prayer." That—after more than thirty years of church membership and the ability to talk and write on almost every subject!

Are we failing to pray for our churches, pastors, and youth? Are we seeking to inculcate habits of prayer in our children, in our houses, in our church schools, and in our Berean societies? God wishes us to have a new sense of the value of prayer.

THE LIVING STONE

By John H. Riutzel

Christ is the only true and Living Stone (1 Peter 2:4). Christ is also spoken of as the "Stone of Israel" (Gen. 49: 24). In Isaiah 53:3 we find that Christ was rejected by men. We find, too, that the Stone (Christ) was rejected and became the "head of the corner." Compare these verses: Psalm 118:22, Matthew 21:42, Mark 12:10, Luke 20:17, and Acts 4:11. In the case of an ordinary stone, there is no life. Before we become Christians, we have no life nor foundation. We read these words of the Prophet Isaiah: "Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste" (Isa. 28:16). Paul tells us that there is only one foundation—Jesus Christ (1 Cor. 3:11).

If the ray of a fluoroscope is thrown on certain stones, it will reveal to the naked eye many glorious and rich colors. Even the hardest and plainest looking stones are softened into rich colors by the ray. So it is with us. Although as sinners we are hard, now, after the Light of the World, the Chief Corner Stone, shines into our hearts, we are softened, changed, and made alive (1 Cor. 15:22).

While the word katabole is correctly translated "foundation," it apparently carries the idea of foundations that are cast down, overthrown. Various well-known authorities seem to be agreed on that, such as Aldridge, Liddel and Scott, Campbell, Morgan, and I believe Griffiths Thomas. The fact that all instances of its use evidently point to the same instant of time adds weight to the thought and eminently fits in with other phases of the subject.)

Turning to Genesis 1:2 (R.V.), we read, "The earth was (or became) waste (Heb., tohu, ruin) and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep." The Speaker's Commentary says: "These two words express devastation and desolation, and not a state of chaos on the way to order, but consequent upon preceding convulsion of cataclysm." This was wonderfully confirmed more than seven hundred years after Moses by Isaiah, saying in 45:18: "Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; . . . he created it not in vain (to-hu, i.e., ruin, same word as in Gen. 1:2), he formed it to be inhabited. If it was not created a waste, it must have become so at the period of Genesis 1:2. Who could associate the idea of disorder with the following?

"The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens" (Prov. 3:19), or "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? . . . when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?" (Job 38:4-7).

If these passages show conclusively that the creation of the earth was originally an ordered work, what was the catastrophe which thus occasioned its ruin and desolation? We learn from Genesis that this was a condition in which the earth was covered with water, and that "darkness was upon the face of the deep," so that the heavens were not seen. Other scriptures refer to this state as having been caused by a sudden onrush of hidden waters. Note very carefully the following statements:

"This they wilfully forget, that there were heavens from of old, and an earth compacted out of the water and amidst water, by the word of God; by which means the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished: but the heavens that now are, and the earth, by the same word have been stored up for fire" (2 Peter 3:5-7, R.V.).

This is usually supposed to refer to the Deluge in Noah's day, but this inundation seems to be more extensive than that. This world that perished included the heavens and the earth. For the Bible definition of heaven see Genesis 1:8. We read of no creation of new heavens and new earth after the Deluge of Noah's time, but we do read of creation of heaven (atmosphere) and earth after Genesis 1:2. This passage, therefore, would seem to refer to that event. This same incident is mentioned elsewhere, and is closely connected with the statements of Genesis regarding the formation of the seas. Notice the following, and note also its reference to darkness, of which no mention is made in the later Deluge.

"Who shut up the sea with doors, when it break forth as if it had issued out of the womb? When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling band for it, and prescribed for it my decreed place (margin or boundary), and set bars and doors, and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?" (Job 38:8-11).

Other passages, we believe, have reference to this same event. As to the reason or cause for this terrible upheaval we have no knowledge. The secret has been well kept. In view of the definite statement that the earth was not created a waste—that it was formed to be inhabited (Isa. 45:18)—there may be some significance in the fact that after the creation of man in Genesis 1:27, he was commanded to be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth, which in itself is suggestive evidence that Genesis 1:2 is a dividing line. Who or what the former inhabitants were, we are not informed. The only certain conclusion to be drawn is that they were earthly and mortal -not angelic, as some have supposed—for the natural elements of earth were used for their destruction. It is not improbable that the gigantic fossils are the products of that earlier age.

(Note: Re. "was" and "became." One interested commentator remarks concerning this, "Much of the validity of the argument would seem to turn on the use of the word 'became.' We may remark that Prof. A. McCaul, professor of Hebrew at Kings College, London, England, and Prebendary of St. Pauls, gives his support to this use of "because," quoting as further evidence that Dathius translates Genesis 1:2, "had become desolation and emptiness." George Aldridge (deceased), author, and once editor of New Zealand Bible Standard, says: "The verb 'was' in Genesis 1:2 signifies 'became' as in Genesis 2:7—"man became a living soul." In corroboration of this it is significant to note that 1 Corinthians 15:45 (R.V.) alters "was made" of the Authorized Version to "became a living soul." Thus, we have the united testimony of several able scholars, together with the combined scholarship of the whole body of revisers. These facts, with others named, and others that might be mentioned, give us a reasonably strong case for the view that the earth was not created a ruin, but it became so.)

To be concluded

SEED-THE WORD OF GOD

"If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you. . . For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. . . . The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God . . . And if children then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8:11, 14, 16, 17).

Christ was the seed of God and He was an heir of eternal life. Then, if we are the children of God we will receive eternal life when Christ who is our life shall appear."

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

It's being honest and fair, just and true. It's forging ahead, true to aims and ends, It's making money, but holding friends, It's being staunch, and keeping sweet, It's being determined, denying defeat, It's learning how, and thinking high, It's going forward and learning why, It's playing a little, but doing much, It's being receptive and keeping in touch With all that is finest in word and deed.

It's being a Samaritan to those in need,
It's facing failure with a will to dare,
To laugh even pleasantly at Dame Despair.
It's learning the meaning of Love and Life,
It's being a guidepost in this world of strife,
It's sharing happiness, sorrow, and loss,
It's having confidence, knowing gold from dross.
It's playing life's game with steady hands,
It's working and winning, making just demands,
It's unselfish service, it's striving and stress,
It's doing God's noblest: that is Success.

THE BIBLE, GOD'S WORD

I get this food? "He answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). I want to be prepared to serve God in spirit and truth. Will His Word qualify me for service? "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (2 Tim. 3:16, 17).

I am surrounded with darkness that will bring death. I need light that will bring life. Where can I find that light?" "In him was life; and the life was the light of men. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:4, 9). How may this light enter my heart? "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple" (Psalm 119:130). In this time of trouble men would like to find something that is sure, something that would give them light on the events of the future. Is there anything that we can depend upon that will show us what is coming? "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise" (2 Peter 1:19).

Brethren, we need ministers who will preach the Word. We need to believe and obey the Word. It is a dear and precious Book, given by our Father to point out the way for us to receive life. He has exalted it above His own name. (Psalm 138:2.)

WAR! PROPHECY FULFILLED AGAIN! WAR!

we that the victors will be capable of making a just or lasting peace, any more than they did in 1920? False prophets have deceived the public, crying, "Peace, peace," when there is no peace. There is not wisdom enough, nor righteousness enough, in mankind to extricate itself from this international quagmire without the personal presence of Jesus Christ. Egypt is and always was a broken reed.

There will certainly be a second World War. It may have already begun! This is a dark day for civilization, with the world moving swiftly toward Armageddon. But for the true believer in God's Word, it is a bright day full of promise and thrilling hope, for Jesus said, "When these things begin to come to pass, look up, and lift up your heads, because your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke 21:28, R.V.).

In the face of such events, how can men go on living as though there were no God, as though there were no Bible, no judgment and no life to come? How can they still blaspheme His name and continue walking in the ways of sin and selfishness, hurling themselves recklessly into the destruction already upon them? In the very shadow of eternity, what manner of men ought we to be, in all holy conversation and godliness? Let us watch and be sober, for the end of all things is at hand!

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Lorraine Brossard, Editor, Eden Valley, Minn.

J. R. LeCrone, President Route 1 Woodstock, Virginia Frances Munshaw, Treasurer 740 Laraway, S. E. Grand Rapids, Michigan

Dear Bereans,

The National Berean Society is nearing a great revival! Praise God. The beginning was evidenced at the Conference at Oregon, Illinois, at the business meeting of the National Bereans. The Bereans present at the meeting, voted either to have an additional page in The Restitution Herald devoted to our work, or to start a mimeographed paper. The final decision rested with the official board members and they voted to have the paper.

The new publication will come to you once a month under the name of "The Berean Echo." It will have one editor in chief and several associate editors. "The Berean Echo" is to be sent gratis to each member or Berean family that is interested in the advancement of the various societies and isolated members. Money will be needed to publish such a paper, but many readers and friends should be willing to contribute toward its support. The purpose of the paper will be to establish unity among Bereans of the United States and Canada. If this purpose is accomplished, many should be glad to help with expenses. Contributions may be sent to the National Berean treasurer, Miss Frances Munshaw, 740 Laraway, S. E., Grand Rapids, Michigan.

"The Berean Echo" will be the size of two sheets of typing paper. One page will be used for the address of the receiver. Another will be devoted to the younger Bereans, and will be edited by Mrs. Verna C. Thayer. The two remaining pages will be used for reports from the various societies. It is not only the duty of all young people's organizations, local and state, to report activities, but it is an opportunity to let the rest of the world know they exist. All big business concerns advertise their wares. Why shouldn't the Bereans advertise for the greatest business on earth? All reports will be used, and new ideas that have proved successful in individual societies will be welcome. Please send anything that will be of help to someone else.

It is not the purpose of this paper to use articles such as those which now appear on this page. The new paper is a supplement to the Berean page in The Restitution

If it is desired, a set of Bible questions, riddles or the like, can be included each week. We should like to hear our readers' opinions about this.

It is necessary that, if each individual or family interested in "The Echo" is to receive it directly, we must have a mailing list. This requires much work and correspondence, so we appeal to you readers for help! Send in your name and complete address if you do not belong to an organized society. A postal card will do. If you do belong to a society, and your secretary or president has not yet had a request to supply a list of names, please make one out and send it to Lorraine Brossard, Eden Valley, Minnesota, or to Muriel Randall, Braham, Minnesota. We should like to have our mailing list complete by the last of September, so that the first paper may be sent out in October. Please notify us if several members of a society are in one family at one address.

The staff of this paper includes an editor, several associate editors, the printer, and his assistants. Publishing "The Echo" will be difficult, but will be done willingly if we may have the complete cooperation of each and every one. It is not a paper by or for one faction, one state, or one person, but for the entire body of workers in the Church of God. We shall be glad to consider any suggestions you may have to offer as to the general make-up and contents of the new paper.

It is hoped that this project of the Bereans will do much toward furthering the coming of the great kingdom, and that it will be as successful as the Berean page of the last year has been.

We need your prayers and contributions.

In the Master's service,

Muriel Randall.

"That's fine. You name the leaders. They can select their stories and choose the others to act certain parts," smilingly suggested Stella Rose.

Later that evening, Grace told her mother of the fun the class had experienced.

"That was a review you'll re-

The Truth Tellers' Class all were invited. As they walked home with Mrs. White, Jack said, "You know, Mrs. White, I do enjoy going to your home."

After dinner, Mrs. White told the class members to get ready to act out the lesson they liked best during the past quarter.

As soon as they were seated in the living room, Grace, the class secretary, asked, "Who has a lesson in mind that we can act out?"

Peter quickly announced, "The lesson about Heze-kiah, the cleansing of the Temple, the keeping of the Passover Feast, and the storing and dividing of the tithes and offerings among the poor would be fun! I'll be Hezekiah if you wish," he added.

"Any other suggestions?" asked Stella Rose, the class president.

"Oh, I'd like to be Elijah! We could have the idol worshipers build their altar first, and then chant and cry to their dead idols," said Joe.

"Then Elijah could do his part. We could pretend we poured water over the altar," added Peter.

Margaret inquired, "Wouldn't it be fun to act out the story of the little captive maid who helped a great ruler to be cured from leprosy?"

"Whee!" laughed Bill. "I didn't know there were so many good stories to act out. Get your quarterly, Dave. Let's look over the others,"

When Mrs. White joined the group, they still were talking of the lessons and how they might be dramatized. After listening to them awhile, she offered, "Why not di-

SR. EDNA BREWER, MATRON

The Board of Religious Education is glad to announce that Sr. Edna Brewer of Tipp City, Ohio, has been secured as matron and cook for The Bible Training School. Sr. Brewer is mother of four children who are united with her in the faith; she is experienced and qualified in all ways to make an ideal "mother" for the young men and young women who will live in the students' home.

LAWRENCEVILLE, OHIO

A record-breaking attendance greeted us at Sunday school September 10. We had a total of fifty. We are looking forward with great pleasure to the meeting to be held at Bro. James Patrick's home in Ashland on September 16, at which time we expect to organize an Ohio Conference. Six or eight members of the Lawrenceville church plan to attend. Our pastor, Bro. Grover Gordon, has a new class of girls of high school age. There is a membership of six and a good prospect of more.

Our new pews are expected to be delivered within two weeks, and we think we shall then have a church building that can be compared with most of them. That the Lord may bless our work here is our prayer

Charles L. Netts.

SOUTHLAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD Grand Rapids, Michigan

While Bro. G. E. Marsh was at Conference and on his vacation, the pulpit was accupied by Bros. Frank Siple, Arlen Marsh, and Lau-rence Bridegam. At one session Miss Mary Newell and Miss Jeraldyne Louks, members of this year's Bible Training School at Oregon. Ill., gave their reports of the work done.

Bro. Arlen Marsh has been ill the past two weeks. Last reports are that he will soon be back at his work in the church and Sunday school.

At the official board meeting held Sunday, Sept. 10, the board voted to set aside one Sunday evening offering a month to be used for the Bible Training School at Oregon, Ill. Bro. Robert Hall, one of the younger mem-bers of the church, has left for the John Marshall Law School at Chicago, Ill., where he will continue his studies. Sr. Evelyn Barr, director of music at this church, and Sr. Lois Blakely have just returned from the University of Michigan where they attended summer school. Both are teachers here in the public schools.

Leslie Niles, Secy.

Students, enroll now for The Bible Training School.

Gleanings From the Field

While en route from Pittsburg, Pa., 19 Minerva, Ohio, Bro. H. H. Hawkins' mother suffered a paralytic stroke. Many will recall having met Bro. Hawkins of Cleveland, Ohio, at the recent General Conference.

The Golden Rule Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, plans a special series of meetings to begin October 8. Elder C. E. Lapp will be the guest speaker.

Bro. J. W. McLain will hold evangelistic meetings at the new church in South Bend, Ind., October 9-21. Bro. J. H. Anderson will then continue the work through October 28.

Bro. and Sr. Irvin Barnhart, Fonthill, Ont., are the happy parents of a nine-pound boy. Congratulations! Bro. Barnhart is treasurer of the Fonthill Church of God.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Roland E. Beise of 4112 W. 45th St., Minneapolis, Minn., a daughter. Congratulations! Roland was one of the editor's boyhood pals.

Sr. Dorothy Frazier and Sr. Marcella Rick-ter are the teachers of the Cleveland ECE Club, which is shown on the children's page. Sr. Frazier appears on the picture.

Bro. Delbert Jones, enrolled in the new Bible Training School, writes: "I am bottling up surplus heat that we have at the present time, that we may open up the bottles this coming winter. If the bottles last, you won't need to worry about the fuel bill. It is 100 degrees today."

Bro. C. E. Randall announces Sunday, September 24, as Rally Day for his churches.

Bro, and Sr. F. E. Siple and daughter Jean-ette, of Grand Rapids, Mich., were recent guests of Bro, and Sr. Charles Gesin and the Saturday, Sept. 16, for Rockford, Ill., where Bro. Siple delivered a sermon on Sunday. From Rockford the Siples went to Madison, Wis., to visit their daughter Marjoric, a nurse in the University Hospital.

Sr. W. D. Tilton, eighty-one years of age and a member of the Oregon, Ill., Church of God, died September 11. Elder G. E. Marsh of Grand Rapids, Mich., her former pastor, conducted funeral rites September 13.

"The Bible Training School will be of great value to our church in the future. What can we do to help? . . . The Hemingford group may have a young person that would be interested."—E. E. Giesler.

Bro. S. J. Lindsay and Bro. J. R. LeCrone and family, who had been visiting in Minnesota, arrived in Oregon, Ill., September 12. At midnight the editor was eating fish. On September 13, Bro. LeCrone and his family continued on their way to Woodstock, Va.

John H. Riutzel whose article, "The Living Stone," appears on page 9 in this issue, is but fifteen years of age. He lives in Macomb, Ili. He writes, "Through the reading of The Restitution Herald I have come to know more Bible truths."

Miss Marian McClellan and Jack Brown of Niagara Falls, N. Y., were united in marriage September 4 by Elder C. E. Randall. They honeymooned to Quebec, Maine, and New York City.

THE ANNUAL IOWA CONFERENCE

The Annual Iowa Conference of the Church of God was held at the Waterloo Church of God campgrounds, August 22-27. The large attendance and interest for truth were very gratifying to those in charge. The officers wish to thank all for interest shown.

The food was of the usual high quality, being well prepared by Sr. Iva Palmer.

Two visiting ministers were Bro. S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz., and Bro. Sydney Magaw of Oregon, Ill. We were sorry Bro. Lindsay had to leave for the Nebraska Conference on Saturday morning, but were glad Nebraska could profit thereby. This was Bro. Magaw's first visit to the Iowa Conference. His work was so well received that he was asked to return next year. The Bible class teachers were: Sr. Hester Berry, Sr. Mayme Jones, Sr. Blanche Harland, Bro. H. S. Hunt, Bro. J. W. Williams, Bro. S. J. Lindsay, and Bro. Sydney Magaw.

Bro. Williams assisted four young people into the body of Christ: Joseph Williams, Jr., Cedar Falls, Iowa, was baptized last fall. Paul Williams, Donald Lukow, and Melissa Stauffer of Gladbrook, Iowa, were baptized at Confer-

The following officers were elected for the coming year: president, H. S. Hunt; vice president, A. M. Jones; recording secretary, Florence Allard; corresponding secretary, Esther Jenkins; and treasurer, Charles How.

Four brethren have fallen asleep in death during the past year. Their names will be found in the following resolutions. We, the Committee on Resolutions, appointed by our president, Bro. Hunt, submit the following:

First, we desire to express our gratitude to our heavenly Father, who has made this Conference possible through His blessings.

As we assemble here, we are reminded again of our obligation to those who were, in the past, instrumental in securing these beautiful grounds.

We are thankful for this opportunity to learn more of His Word, through our evangelists and teachers.

We are grateful to the officers who have made possible the continuation of this work from year to year.

This year we are especially thankful for our young people, who have enriched our services by their presence and assistance in the music. We appreciate the provision for our mate-

We wish to welcome into our fellowship those who were baptized during the past year.

Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved, whose dear ones have fallen asleep since our last Conference, namely, Sr. Arthur Johnson, Helen Mae Harland, Bro. T. J. Ellis, and Bro. J. E. Robbins.

Above any gratitude toward each other, is that for the love of our heavenly Father, without which these would be an empty repetition. Dr. J. M. Prime,

Mrs. Hattie Gearhart, Leona Marsh. Esther Jenkins, Cor. Seey.

THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

Opening Day: October 2, 1939,

Instructors of The Bible Training School

Elders L. E. Conner and Sydney E. Magaw are selected as the instructors for the Bible Training School to begin at Oregon, Illinois, October 2, 1939. They are doctrinally sound, experienced, and zealous to found an institution of learning and character-building which will enrich the life of every attending student. They are dedicated to the task of building an institution which will truly lead the Church of God into more progressive and evangelistic service.

Each instructor will offer two courses. Brother Conner announces a course in The Doctrines and Purpose of the Church of God, and another in orthocpy. Brother Magaw will teach Biblical History and a course in Steps to Successful Evangelism.

Costs to students are remarkably low: board, room, and tuition are offered for only $200.00 for the full term of eight months. $100.00 may be paid at the beginning of each semester; or, if necessary, monthly payments may be arranged.

An exceptionally choice and commodious residence has been secured as a home for the students. Sister Edna Brewer of Tipp City, Ohio, will be in charge of the students' home. The very best of Christian care and management will be maintained, and the best possible training given.

Young men and young women of the Church of God, the Bible Training School is for you. Your prayers are being answered. You must now volunteer your cooperation to make the School a success. The Church of God needs you! Use Enrollment Coupon below.

The Interesting Road

By Muriel Randall

THE Church of God is at a fork in the road. One road is downhill. The other is lost to human view, but looks very interesting. Let us think about the interesting-looking road. It goes up and downhill, and winds around obstacles, but, at the last turn, the rising sun can be seen. Is anything more beautiful than a sunrise, after one has completed a journey on a strange road?

Along this way are numerous signs guiding each traveler. Needless to say, a good road map is used. God, in His all-sufficient and all-seeing way, has given these helps. Let us, as true believers and members of the Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith, use this map, the Bible, as we begin our journey.

Some of the obstacles that we must journey around are finance, indifference, and worldly cares. In 1 John 2:15, we are told: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." Share your cares with God, and He will give you a peace in your heart that cannot be duplicated by any amount of money.

Around the first curve is a "filling" station. No gas and oil are sold here, but a fuel is given out which can do more than make a machine run. It is a fuel which "fires us up" to win souls for Christ and His kingdom. We need to refill our vehicles with this fuel so that we may continue the journey with renewed spirit and a surety of reaching our destination. What can be a more fitting illustration than the nine-months' Bible Training School? Truly, it is a filling station where the Church of God can fill the young people with truth. It is a station where renewed energy and strength can be given to carry on the great journey of life.

Funds are needed to operate this business enterprise which is necessary as ordained of God, "to preach the gospel," and bring people to a knowledge of our Savior Jesus. Many friends of the new School will be glad to help in this effort. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." That truth forms an unending effect on both giver and receiver. You people, who help some individual or The School in carrying high God's banner, make it possible for the product of The School to go out to give the good things they have learned to others. The hearers, in turn, can learn and practice the truths they hear, and thus shape their lives so people may see they are shining lights in this world of sin. Little does anyone realize now the great good that can and will, by God's grace, come from any and all financial help that is given for the Church of God "filling station." Some would-be students cannot attend The School because of adverse financial conditions. It is a sad state to see willing hearts turned aside for lack of money.

It perhaps will be impossible for all to contribute financially. Not only finance is needed, but also faith. Pray for the success of The School. Trust in God. All things are possible with Him. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things (worldly goods) shall be added unto you."

Usually, at filling or fuel stations, there is a pump with free air. So it is—talk about The Bible Training School to your church friends. Encourage the support and attendance of this School.

It is customary to have several attendants at a station, some to give out fuel, some to encourage old vehicles to continue their journeys, and some to fix flats. Come, one and all, for a position at this station. Both boys and girls should be encouraged to come, that they might go forth and help bring the Truth to the world. The Church of God needs to expand! Ministers and evangelists are needed. There is a place for all who can and will enroll. There is no unemployment in God's business.

After a stop and complete check-up at this station, where a well-known, guaranteed-to-work fuel is given out, surely the church will increase both spiritually and physically. Thus, the small, young, and weak churches of our denomination can get young people from The School to lead them in their work. Perhaps some of the groups would like to begin that work now by sponsoring some young person at The Bible Training School.

The road seems to broaden! It seems crowded with eager travelers! Surely the Church of God is at the beginning of a great campaign for spreading the truths we hold so dear. All along the path we can see signs reading, "We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

This is only an imaginary road, but there are possibilities that are becoming more real every day. Will you travel along this road?

All possible is being done by The Board of Religious Education to make The Bible Training School a success. All the churches should cooperate. Every young person of the church who can go, should go. It is time now to enroll. October 2 is opening day.

Skies Are Clearing

By Paul M. Hatch

A FEW days ago all the nations of earth were rocked with a momentous announcement from the capital city of Russia. A pact with a potential enemy nation, Germany, had been agreed upon—a nonaggression agreement, a pledge to peace between them. One year ago this was an unthinkable situation; five years ago, an impossibility. The wily dictators of Russia and Germany softened. Or did they?

Upon the unsuspecting world a confusior arose. New alignments of nations seemed imminent and inevitable. What would those alignments be? What effect would force and geographical locations have on those alignments? What had caused this sudden reversal of face on the part of Germany and Russia? All these questions are only partially answerable to mer of the world. They await with quaking hearts and gathering gloom of despair the unfolding of these questions.

Not so the Christian student of prophecy. To him the skies are clearing and God's great closures are nigh at hand. Quickly, it would seem to him, the dividing of the nations into two great hostile camps will come. They are now coalescing in military pacts, scrapping treaties of nonaggression, maneuvering in power politics. Not long will the world wait for the religious element to enter the scene and have its dynamic effect in the division of the nations.

Germany, from the revelation of the Word of God, has a destiny with the nation of Russia. According to the Prophet Ezekiel, Germany is named as "Gomer and all his bands" being allied with the Prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal (Ezek. 38:1-6, R.V. and A.R.V.), and the Lord Jehovah is prophesied to be in opposition. Language could hardly be plainer than this in naming the foregoing alliance. Further, these powers are indicated as appearing and being united in the latter days when God's people Israel shall be dwelling safely in unwalled villages of their own land—the land which the Lord gave to Abraham, Isaac, and Israel as an everlasting possession.

Almost all the nations named in Ezekiel 38 can be identified today: Gog, land of Magog, Prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal are identified as all Slavonic peoples, such as Russia, Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, Esthonia, Slovakia, Bulgaria, and Jugoslavia. Gomer and all his bands are recognized as Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Prussia, Hungary, etc. Persia is now the nation of Iran. Ethiopia and Libya are now subject lands of the Italian Empire. Togarmah is not yet recognizable, but is suggested to be Turkey and Armenia.

Armenia.

These peoples, according to Genesis 10, are descendants of Japheth and Ham. None of them are from Shem, father of the Semitic peoples. God singled out certain descendants of Shem to show His favor. The greatest one of these was Abraham, the Hebrew, dwelling in Chaldea at the time of his call. Abraham became the progenitor of the nation of Israel upon whom God sheds His particular favor, and God will be the Defender of them in the latter days.

Many times have these people been driven from the land, though promised possession in it. God's face has been set against them. His anger has been kindled against them, and He has hid His face from their plight because of their transgressions and infidelity. But when Gog arises to cover the land, God's fury will come up in His face and He will call for a sword against him throughout His mountains (kingdoms).

God's anger is especially kindled against Gog because of his godlessness, brutal and cruel treatment of Christian and Jew alike. It is God's anathema. When Gog shall think an "evil thought" to tread on holy land, to destroy and waste, he will invoke God's (Please turn to page 11)

THE SCHOOL IS READY

By the time this message reaches our Herald readers, The Bible Training School will be about ready to start. Brother and Sister L. E. Conner will have moved from Dixon, Illinois, to Golden Rule Home in Oregon, that Brother Conner may take up his work as one of the instructors in The School. The students' home will be furnished, and the classroom equipped. Already several donations have been made toward The School, and every mail brings us words of encouragement and gratitude for this new undertaking.

WE NEED STUDENTS

There is yet time for students to enroll. However, they should do so at once. October 2 is but a very few days away. In fact, any students coming from the distant states should already be packing their traveling bags and studying railroad schedules.

At this late hour there are not yet enough students enrolled to make The School as successful as it should be its very first year. A special appeal for more students to rally to the cause of this new and important work appears on the back cover page. Please read every word of it. Study the problem as we are studying it. This work has necessarily been done at top speed, but that is all the more reason why all our brethren should get into the spirit of the work without being coaxed.

STATE CONFERENCES

If every State Conference would cooperate by sending but one student each, we would not only have a good sized class, but these Conferences would feel thankful in the years to come that they really put their shoulders to the wheel and helped to get this work going. Let Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, California, Nebraska (both Conferences), Virginia, California, Missouri, the Carolinas, the Northwest Conference, Iowa, and let even Illinois get more unitedly behind this work by each financing or helping to finance a student. Any Conference which sends a student may make the payments in eight monthly installments of twenty-five dollars each.

SEPARATE CHURCHES

Some of our strongest churches are in states where there is no organized conference. To these individual churches we also appeal. You, too, are needed in helping in this forward movement of the Church of God. Is there not one in your group who can be enlisted to attend The School? This is the Lord's work, but He has commissioned His servants to "occupy" until He returns.

WE SHALL GIVE YOU TIME

That State Conferences and individual churches might more faithfully get behind this new work, a few days extra time will be allowed to solicit students. This would not be done if it did not seem absolutely the only wise course to take; it should not be done next year, nor even next semester. But because of there being such a short time since General Conference for our young people to prepare to come, and for the churches to become thoroughly informed about the actual importance and certainty of the new undertaking, we are offering TEN DAYS MORE TO WORK FOR THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL. Students will be received as late as October 12.

Every student now enrolled, and all others who possibly can, should be at Oregon, Illinois, 9:00 o'clock, Monday morning, October 2. Opening Day has not been changed! October 12 has been set as a final time for students to arrive at Oregon for The School, only to make it possible for additional young men and young women to come. This is a favor to those who may positively need it, but others should not take advantage of this situation. The School will start on October 2.

WE ARE HONEST AND OPTIMISTIC

Let none suppose that the extension of time to enroll students is so much as a whisper that The School is not a "Go." Only God knows what lies before us, and we are praying to that only true and living God. We cannot succeed if God is not with us. But when has God refused to bless a work that was planned only to build the usefulness and effectiveness of His own church to do gospel work? We are honest and optimistic.

Have You the Faith of Abraham?

By R. M. Abbott

HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price" (Isa, 55:1).

When we of the Church of God read this verse, there is danger that we are likely to get the idea that salvation to the Christian is never to cost him anything in cash.

The call is to him "that hath no money" to "buy . . . without money and without price," but when we realize this call is to the sinner and not to the Christian, we then understand it better.

It is true that salvation is free to the sinner who "thirsts" to be freed from his past sins. He isn't asked to pay one cent for his salvation from sin, but when he is saved by the grace of God from all guilt of past sins, he is no longer a sinner, but "a sinner saved by grace." He has then passed into a position where he is to pray and pay, and he must pay that his prayers may be heard.

While salvation to the sinner is "without money and without price," the plan of redemption was something that cost much. It cost God the gift of His Son; the Son, the sacrifice of His life; and, to meet the requirements laid down in the plan, it will cost everyone's entire life and living (Rom. 12:1).

There are subjects that should be brought to our minds from time to time in order "to stir up our minds by way of remembrance," and the subject of church finance is one of them.

We would have to travel many miles and visit many churches, before we would find one that had all the money it needed for the spreading of the gospel. Yet, every church that is worthy of the name should be expected to have that much. Surely, God who was wise enough to give a plan of redemption through Christ, had, also, foresight to provide means for the publishing of the plan, even to the ends of the earth.

The business of the church is to preach for the salvation of souls, but without sufficient money it can be done only in part.

In any church, where true conversions have been followed with a full Bible teaching of how funds should be raised, and where that teaching has been put into practical use, there should be little difficulty experienced in meeting all its needs and obligations so far as money matters are concerned. Just like any other need of the church, the financial need will be met when we apply Bible direction instead of ideas or opinions we may be harboring in our minds.

Where there is a lack of financial support in any church, it must be for one of two reasons, or for both: There is a lack of understanding of God's way of raising money for His work, or there is unwillingness to be guided by His direction.

We church members read in the Bible that there is "one Lord, one faith, one baptism," and we say we believe it. Do we not realize that the same Bible has a record in it of just one recognized method by which money was paid to the Lord?

We may be united in believing there is "one Lord" and "one baptism," but when it comes to "one faith," there are those who have a faith of their own, and each has his own belief as to how money should be raised to carry on church work. They do this instead of having faith in God's plan and putting it into practical use.

We call ourselves the church of the Abrahamic faith, and so often we hear the expression among the membership of "being of like precious faith" of "being of the faith." This all sounds very well, and it would be spiritually legal if it were humanly true. The question is, "Is it absolutely true?"

Abraham's faith in God was so complete that "it was counted to him for righteousness." What did his faith do for him? It made him willing to go into a land that he knew nothing of. Not only that, it made him willing to give "a tenth part of all." (See Gen. 14:20 and Heb. 7:2.)

Can we, by any stretch of the imagination, believe that Abraham was too faithful? If he practiced true faith in paying the tenth, are we doing the same by not paying it? Are we, by this means, proving that we are of the Abrahamic faith?

Some reason that we should not pay the tenth, by saying that we are not under the law. Abraham was not under the law, nor was Jacob, yet they paid their tenth. These were before the law.

Others object to paying tithes because they say it is Old Testament doctrine. This is true, it is Old Testament doctrine, but it is just as true in the New. In Matthew 23:23 and in Luke 11:42 we have an instance of people's tithing, and Jesus said to them in regard to their tithing: "These ought ye to have done." His criticism was that they had not attended to other matters as well as their tithing.

Would Jesus have told these (Please turn to page 11)

European Potpourri

By Arlen Marsh

"Potpourri: a dish made of various kinds of meats and vegetables; a medley or mixture; from French, meaning 'rotton pot.'"—Winston Simplified Dictionary.

DURING the last fortnight (this is being written on September 16), everyone in the United States, outside of Mickey Mouse, has expressed at least one opinion in regard to the European war.

Most of the soothsayers are agreed on two ideas: (a) that the democracies—i.e., France and England—will win; (b) that the Treaty of Versailles is responsible for the current explosive exchange of old iron and chemical products.

The majority of those who accept point (a), of course, either overlook or are ignorant of the fact that Britain and France entered the war ostensibly to protect a dictatorship. Since early 1938, Poland has had an authoritarian, one-party state, with Edward Smigly-Rydz as absolute dictator. (Poland's first premier, the now-exiled pianist, Ignace Jan Paderewski, commented from Switzerland shortly after the Smidly-Rydz regime took over that "it will be impossible to introduce this Fascist system without provoking war!" Paderewski is something of a prophet.)

Furthermore, the totalitarian government of Poland is distinctly anti-Semitic—which is to say, it opposes all Jews with vigor. Ten per cent of the country's population is Jewish, the largest quota outside of Palestine. It was intended, prior to the outbreak of the hostilities predicted by Pianist Paderewski, that the Jews should be gradually evacuated. Minor pogroms were frequent. Following the death of Polish Dictator Joseph Pilsudski (who fought with the Germans against Russia during the World War), there was a three-year intermission between the acts of the great Fascist opera. This intermission was marked by violent outbreaks against the Jews, who had been smart enough to grab fifty thousand of the best professional jobs in Poland. The Smigly-Rydz contingent strode into office largely to solidify and manage the public's efforts to crack down on the chosen people.

This Polish enterprise was given the silent treatment by Great Britain and France, who ached to protect themselves against the rising power of Germany's Adolf Hitler. Hitler was a little more spectacular in his treatment of the Jewish question; so propaganda flowed around the world about his inhumanity to man. Poland, of course, was rarely mentioned. Neither was it mentioned that General Smigly-Rydz was a dictator as absolute as Hitler.

The British and French have not, however, tried to convince the earth that they are fighting solely to preserve Poland, although they have openly confessed that this is one of their purposes. They are fighting, they have declared, to preserve democracy and to abolish the threat of Hitler's Nazi cohorts. It seems odd, to say the least, to carry on a major war to preserve one dictatorship at the expense of another—and to do it in the holy name of democracy! It seems doubly odd to condemn Hitler for anti-Semitic activities and to support Smigly-Rydz, whose anti-Semitism is quite as bitter as the German Fuhrer's!

Primarily, the threat mentioned by Britain and France is Hitler's propensity to rebuild Germany to the power it once had. Conquest, by force of arms or by force of bluff, is taboo in the modern European circles. Hitler has shattered the taboo, and Hitler, consequently, must forever perish. So must his politics and all his works, including Mein Kampf and the embattled Siegfried Line.

Poland, backed by British and French force, has not been notable for keeping her own nose out of other people's business. In 1920, after national boundaries presumably had been set by the Treaty of Versailles, a Lithuanian border patrol, for some inexplicable reason, crossed the frontier and shot a Polish soldier. An immediate outcry arose from thirty-four million Polish throats. An expedition under Smigly-Rydz seized Lithuania's capital, Vilna, together with some square miles of Lithuanian farm land. An ultimatum from the Polish forces convinced Lithuania that discretion was the better part of valor, and Vilna was formally annexed to Poland. The League of Nations—with Britain and France as leading lights—accepted this military conquest in a spirit of good clena fun, and allowed the boundary realignment to stand. From 1920 to 1939, a state of undeclared war has existed between Poland and Lithuania as a result of the Vilna episode. Lithuania no doubt is having a good laugh over the present plight of Poland, who drew half Europe into war when Hitler tried to reclaim German territory.

That the democracies will win the war is almost certain—"almost," because nothing about the war is altogether certain. A pact between Japan and Russia has caused the cessation of hostilities on the Manchukuoan border, and has thrown the weight of Russo-Japanese influence behind Germany. Four million men under full war kit are standing guard for Stalin's Kremlin over the Polish frontier, and Russia has publicly suggested that Poland be split into three parts-two small republics favorable to Russia, and a portion for Germany. That Japan, Russia, and Germany must eventually unite is indicated quite clearly by Ezekiel 38. If this union is accomplished as an active military force during the present war, the democracies will have more troubles than Pandora ever dreamed of. To counteract British-French propaganda, and to build a thought of fraternity, Germany officially has proposed, through its army journal, to give the United States Jamaica and Bermuda if these islands are included in Germany's spoils of war. This will, Germany hopes, be an additional inducement for the United States to keep its hands off European affairs, and will consequently make a democratic victory more doubtful.

That the United States will ultimately be pulled into the caldron despite German assurances of territorial gains in return for non-intervention is practically a foregone conclusion. Preachments of neutrality are all very well, but no nation can be neutral in fact when it is decidedly unneutral in thought—and the United States, almost en masse, is playing favorites.

П

The causes for the war lie much farther back than the Versailles Treaty. David Lloyd George and Georges Benjamin Clemenceau were only agents for the racial antagonisms and unreasoning brutalities that had developed slowly through the European centuries. To saddle the treaty they fostered with the whole blame for the new war is as insane as to hold the Outlaw of Doorn responsible for starting the war of 1914.

From the time of Charlemagne (742-814 A.D.), Europe has been a battlefield almost continuously. This is speaking, obviously, of battles fought by nations; before Charlemagne, wars among tribes, and between tribes and the Roman Empire, were frequent, too. Racial hatreds have been stirred by conquests and by propaganda that no human force can eradicate.

In the comparatively recent past, strong evidence is found to oppose the view that the Versailles Treaty is chiefly responsible for the war. Bismarck's campaigns in the middle of the nineteenth century, and his carving out of an empire from a miltitude of German states, caused a rash of trouble for Europe that will last as long as men's rule lasts. Long before Bismarck, Napoleon, with his dreams of a United States of Europe, had laid the basis for further trouble, for further hatred, for further economic and social disaster. (The French are not through yet paying the bills of Napoleon and his wars.) After Bismarck, Balkan and other wars kept Europe in a constant turmoil. The Versailles Treaty was born from this chaotic hate and greed and economic ruin; they, not it, were responsible for the war that is now sweeping Europe.

After the Treaty of Versailles had been signed, Europe settled down to peace. It was a brief peace-it was shattered before the signatures were dry on the treaty documents. American and Allied troops fought the Russians on a line that meandered through Siberia, Greece invaded Turkey, and was driven back. Rumania, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia invaded Hungary and seized much livestock and many locomotives. Poland took Vilna from Lithuania; Lithuania took Memel from Germany-and Lithuania may now be hoping that Germany will not take all Lithuania in return. Yugoslavia conquered and absorbed Montenegro, which had been independent for many centuries. For three years, a Sinn Fein government battled with the English over Ireland. In Morocco, the Spanish—and, later, the French—fought with Riff tribesmen and made famous Abd-el-Krim.

These death struggles of the World War were the cause of much of the disaster that has now overtaken Europe. Lithuania's Memel is pro-Nazi, with a large German population. Poland's western and northern territory is largely German. Danzig, by the Treaty of Versailles, merely resumed its role as trouble-maker; for centuries, Danzig had veered from nationality to nationality, and had spent much time in its capacity as a free city, independent of any country. The treaty itself settled little; had the governments it covered adhered to its provisions, there would have been no war on August 31, 1939. But the treaty, carved out of hatred, was not a treaty that could be kept by anyone. It had originated in causes for war; other causes were created by governments in spite of, rather than because of, the treaty; and the total result was that a second continent-wide struggle could not possibly be avoided.

No matter who is victor in the present war, no matter what treaty is composed, another conflict will be inevitable. War breeds war. The bases of the World War and the war of 1939 lie in wars which occurred as long ago as the decadence of the Roman Empire—as long ago as prehistoric European tribes. No treaty can abolish these causes; no form of education can change centuries-old suspicions, jealousies, and greed—and no treaty can augment them a great deal.

Ш

No matter what the outcome of the war, religion and the Jews will lose. If Hitler wins, then a government will dominate Europe in a way to fight actively all forms of Christianity on the ground that the state is supreme. If Hitler wins, Europe will be directed by a government which is founded upon the principle that it is the will of God to persecute the Jews; (Mein Kampf, Hitler's own book, states this notion very bluntly). On the other hand,

The Bible and Science

The World Before Adam-Part 2

By R. H. Judd

N agreement with the stated fact that God had already created the heavens and the earth, the conclusion would seem to be a quite natural one that the "days of creation," which followed the uphcaval to which reference has been made (Gen. 1:2), were but days of renewal of the face of the earth—surface work. (See Psalm 104:30 where the Hebrew is chadash, meaning to repair.) Thus Exodus 20:11, stating "in six days the Lord made heaven and earth," is in full harmony with facts, and no reason is required for any other than the ordinary meaning of the word "day." Volumes have been written on this particular point, but if we take the narrative as written, accepting Bible definition of terms (as in Gen. 1:8), more than half our difficulties vanish. Those who imagine that here must be found the building up of the solid earth from center to circumference are unnecessarily adding to the Word and affirming that which is not declared in Genesis. Thus read, the narrative becomes comparatively easy to comprehend, and there is no call made for deep scientific knowledge to enable the reader to understand it.

Why, to gratify human learning, should difficulties be placed in the story which are not there? Care must be taken to distinguish between Bible fact and Bible inference. The language is, in the main, easy to understand. The real difficulties lie in the facts that events described are outside the range of human experience. Modern readers of Genesis have been influenced by current ideas concerning "origins," and this has led them to imagine that the language of Genesis ought to convey these ideas. The attempt to do so has brought confusion to both the Bible and science. The reader will be amazed to see how difficulties disappear by careful, prayerful, and thoughtful study of God's Word.

Before going further, it will be well to recapitulate the main points in which we have attempted to bring the Bible and established science into harmony with each other. This will do two things:

(1) It will show us the wisdom, in such records as we have in Genesis 1 and 2, of getting an understanding harmony as we proceed, rather than borrowing from chapter 2 in order to get an understanding of chapter 1. The latter process is not logical in instances of this kind.

(2) It will give us a settled basis from which to advance, for every step proved is so much definitely gained toward an understanding of what is to come.

The following items have in all reasonable assurance, both Biblically and scientifically, been definitely established:

- (a) The language used by Moses is comprehensive enough to embrace any periods of whatever length that may be assigned by human investigation to all the processes of creative work.
- (b) The Bible use of the word "ages" harmonizes with this fact, and evidences divine purpose both in "ages" before and "ages" to come.
- (c) The earth was not created a waste, but became so.
- (d) Previous to the present creation a universal catastrophe occurred, to which Scripture definitely points, and from which all preceding and succeeding data are reckoned.
- (e) The creation succeeding the catastrophe is a surface creation, and in the light of the marvelous advance of even present-day knowledge concerning the forces of nature, there is no valid scientific reason why such surface work could not have been accomplished within the six literal days. This, undoubtedly, is the clear import of the words of Moses in Exodus 20:11, "In six days the Lord made (the word 'created' is not used here) heaven (see Gen. 1:8) and earth, the sea, and all that in them is."

In this brief sketch of the world before Adam we must include the creation of man in Genesis 1:26-28. It is usually considered that the account in Genesis 2 is a more detailed supplement to the account in chapter 1. But why assume this? Why do men not examine closely the details to see if Genesis 1 is a legitimate conclusion? Genesis does not so state, but proceeds to events in the second chapter which succeed the works of the six days. The manner in which the second account is introduced suggests something different to what has already taken place. In fact, the first chapter ends with Genesis 2:3, and a new section opens with the words: "These are the generations (toledoth) of the heavens and the earth." In all other occurrences of this word—and there are eleven in Genesis—it refers to what follows in the text. Why, then, make exception here and go back to that which is already reckoned in the past? We shall now make a detailed comparison of some of the more important differences. These are so striking and so numerous that we venture the assertion that it is practically impossible for the two accounts to refer to the same event.

Genesis 1

(1) In this chapter male and female are created on the same day, namely, the sixth day. If what has been previously said of the "day" being one of natural length is correct, and we think it then less than twenty-four hours intervened between the creation of male and female. Nothing is said as to how many there

(2) There is no restriction of territory.

(3) There is no limitation of food supply. They are "given" herb and tree "upon the face of all the earth."

Multiplicity of amounts to a command accompanied with blessing.

(5) The creation of animals precedes that of man.

(6) The animals are not named,

Genesis 2

Without question there is a considerable period between the creation of Adam and the creation of

Just one man is named.

Adam is definitely placed alone in a defined area.

Adam is limited to "every tree of the garden," which is a re-stricted area "in Eden," and there is a further limitation of two trees.

No mention is made (until later) of offspring, and then conception is imposed as a burden, if not as a punishment.

Man is first formed, then the animals, then the woman.

The animals in this chapter are and except in one instance (v. 21) no special notice taken. (See "great sea-monsters," R.V.) The original word signifies "long-stretched," and it is somewhat significant that this should be noted in view of later events and the trail of the serpent in human affairs.

(7) Here nothing is "planted." To this day many primitive races do not till the ground.

formed and brought to Adam. It would seem, therefore, a reasonable conclusion that they were selected, domesticated animals, suitable for life within an enclosed area. The word "field" does not occur in chapter 1.

Here "God planted a garden . . in Eden," and Adam was instructed to dress it and keep (guard) it." That the forms of plant life are specially those asso-ciated with cultivation is implied in the words: "There was not a man to till the ground." This statement does not mean: "There was not a man to till the ground, but "There was not a man to till the ground." In other words, there was no gardener for the garden.

Marriage in the Church

By Walter Wiggins

THE young people of the Church of God are among the most precious gifts that God has given to us. If the Church of God is to grow, we must keep our young people in the church. The young people of today will be the church of tomorrow. We older ones have not given the young people and the children of our church enough consideration. We turn them loose and hope that what knowledge of God's plan they have accidentally received, will some day cause them to turn to accept their Lord.

The Church of God has been very liberal in its policy toward its young people. This liberality usually reflects upon the training in the home. The church permits her young people to make their own decisions in uniting with the church, selecting companions, and other problems that occur. In view of the present social conditions, the marriage problem is the most dangerous. Many mistakes can be corrected, but if a mistake is made in marriage, it is very seldom righted, and usually wrecks the lives of both individuals.

The young people of the church should marry within the faith if at all possible, but if without, it should be with complete understanding. Anyone who has attained marriageable age and is not a Christian, will not make a desirable companion for one who has answered the high call and who is preparing to become coruler with Christ in the kingdom.

Christians need to be surrounded with the best of environment, for we all have times when we need help. We become discouraged and need someone to aid us to carry on. This is impossible if the home is divided. There are none of us so self-sufficient that we keep these problems from arising. Let us quote 2 Corinthians 6:14: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." There is a natural enmity between those who believe in the teaching of the Church of God and those who follow the Orthodox doctrine. This false doctrine has been on earth since the lie of the serpent in the Garden of Eden. What fellowship has light with darkness?

The Jews are a good example of racial purity. They have been scattered throughout all the world, yet they are a separate and distinct people. They have accomplished this through child training and marriage control. We, if we are true Christians, are commanded to come out from among the world and be separate people, separated by the gospel unto Christ for a special purpose.

When we Christians realize the greatness of our call, we shall be very careful in selecting our companions to help carry the loads of life.

Look around you to see how many of the young people in your locality have drifted away from the faith because they have married outside the church. The time to train young people is when they are children.

"Conservation is better than reclamation." The conservation method has been tried very successfully by the Jews and Catholics. To the Jews, God gave His plan. If it is God's plan, why would it not be good for the Church of God? Let us think upon these things, that we may keep God's holy church pure and free from isms.

Handle With Care

By Mary Richardson

PERSONS who have worked in the Post Office Department, or who have been in any way connected with it, know that there are sometimes packages on which are written these words, "Fragile, Handle With Care." Have you ever noticed such a package? The reason for this warning is that the contents of the package are precious, are easily broken, and therefore require careful handling. Sometimes, though, these instructions are not carried out, and when the package reaches its final destination, the contents are not in good condition. Would you not be disappointed if the package being sent you arrived in a damaged condition?

There is another thing we should handle with care—our speech. We can use our speech to the glory of God, or we can use it in degrading His name.

People are very often careless in their speech, sometimes resulting in "hard" feelings. A cruel word may be instrumental in causing the downfall of a life. Bitter words might cause our friends or those about us to have hatred in their hearts toward us. Sharp words may inflict lasting wounds that even time will not heal. If we unthinkingly repeat a rumor we have heard, it may injure a reputation. A gossipy person is one of whom to beware, lest we become entangled in the rumors.

In 1 Peter 3:10 Christians are admonished to keep their tongues from evil and that their lips speak no guile. In Proverbs 18:21 we read, "Death and life are in the power of the tongue." James 3:5, 6 contains the thought that even though the tongue is a small member of the body, it can really do great harm if not controlled. In verse 8 it says, "The tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." The tongue can never be fully controlled, for ofttimes we speak without thinking, but if we have the will power we can curb it to a certain extent. If cruel words are continually spoken to an individual, that person may come to feel that the world is against him and become very indifferent. There is a saying, "Kind words will never die." I think this saying is very truthful, and it should not be treated lightly.

The Christian should do his very best in controlling his speech. Read James 1:26: "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." The substance of this verse is that if any person seems to be religious and cannot bring his tongue under control, he does not value his religion. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh" (Matt. 12:34). What is in one's heart will largely determine what his life will be.

As I have said, speech can be used either to the glory of God, or to the degradation of His name. If we as Christians are kind and gracious, our speech may turn away wrath and can be very helpful in bringing others to Christ. Speaking a kind or joyous word to people may make the day seem bright and cheerful for them. How pleasant it is to be greeted by a cheery and smiling person who says, "Good morning" as if he meant it, a good morning that radiates warmth and friendliness toward the world. We so often say "Hello" as though the very utterance of the word is a burdensome task of which we are glad to be rid. All the vividness and vitality are stripped from the greeting, leaving only the bare skeleton which rattles and squeaks, creating in others a feeling of morbidness. Such a salutation might well have been kept to oneself for all the cheer or happiness it may give to others. Rather than having a pleasing effect it tends to dampen the spirits and bring to mind undesirable and unpleasant thoughts. Like a cold sharp gust of wind it passes, leaving in its wake a shivering, drawn-up feeling of loneliness. A cheerful greeting not only makes the recipient joyful, but it also creates wthin the giver a feeling of happiness and warmth. Speak words that will not only uplift your own life, but also the lives of others. By your speech, if it is Christian, others will know that you are following Christ and that you are trying to live by His teachings. They, through contact with you, might be led to accept Christ.

If you have not started bridling your tongue, begin today. Try watching everything you say. Wouldn't you rather that your speech be for the glory rather than the degradation of God? If you are in the habit of often using slang, try correcting that. Slang shows that you do not have much respect for yourself, much less for others. It isn't showing good taste, either. Slang is characteristic of persons who have low standards, morals, and ideals, but we, as Christians, should get rid of this unbecoming habit if we possess it, and show to the world that we are Christlike, that we respect ourselves too much to lower

What He Believed

By Vivian Kirkpatrick

WHEN Ichabod and Jonathan first met as roommates at college, their conversation turned to religion. Ichabod was a member of one of the modern orthodox churches, while Jonathan was a member of the Church of God.

"Just why are you working in the Church of God, Jonathan?" was the first question asked.

"There are a number of reasons why I am working in the Church of God," replied Jonathan. "Some of these reasons are: the nature of man, the question of time and location of the kingdom of God, the questions of the Trinity and the preexistence of Christ, and the church name. These are all points in which the Church of God differs from all other denominations."

"You spoke of the difference in belief in a church name. The name doesn't make any difference, does it? Isn't it just the mark of distinction between one denomination and another?"

"Yes, Ichabod, I think your conception of the church name is correct insofar as the majority of churches are concerned, but that is not the reason the Church of God bears the name it does. When Paul wrote to the Corinthians he wrote to 'the church of God,' and in many other references he speaks of that same church. He rebuked the Corinthians for trying to take different names."

"If those passages you told me about are in the Bible, then it sounds reasonable to suppose that there is a Bible name for the church. You spoke of the differences in belief in regard to the nature of man. I don't believe I know just what you mean by that."

"Among the orthodox churches the belief is that man has a dual nature. That is, they believe man has a separable soul which goes from the body at death. I believe that is wrong. If you read Genesis 2:7, you will understand that man became a living soul when the breath of life was breathed into his nostrils. Hence, before the coming of that breath, he must have been an inanimate soul. God sentenced man to death if he ate of the tree of knowledge of good and evil—He didn't say the body would die and the soul go to heaven. From the reference I gave you, I gather that man and soul are synonymous. Again, in other places we are told that man is dead when he dies. We are told he knows nothing after death. We are not told that he goes to heaven at death. So far as that goes, we are not believers in a heavenly kingdom, either."

"You aren't! What do you believe, then?"

As I have already said, I do not believe the Bible teaches inherent immortality, and so I believe that there is no basis for believing in a kingdom in heaven for departed souls. Our belief is that when a man dies he is dead for an unknown period of time, until God sends His only Son back into the world. At that time, the Bible teaches that the dead saints will be caught up with the Savior, alive once more, and that the saints still living will also be caught up with them."

But what then? Are they to continue in the air forever, or is there a kingdom there to which they go? I'm not sure I know just what you mean by the word 'saints,' either."

"I'm sorry. I thought you knew that Paul referred to the members of the church of the living God as saints, hence it will be saints who will be caught up with Christ. As to the answer to the other question, my reply is, 'Yes.' There is a kingdom which the saints will inherit with Christ. This kingdom will eventually be on this earth, which will be changed to allow for the perfecting of the saints. The New Jerusalem will be prepared and placed on earth where Christ will be our King, and if we are found faithful, we will inherit with Him."

"There goes the bell. We'd better hurry, or we will be late to class, Jonathan. Your views are new and interesting to me. Would you mind sitting down with me tonight and telling me more about these things? Before I can feel I should believe the things you have told me, I want you to show me your Scriptural proofs."

"That is just what I want to do. Tonight I'll talk to you about these same things, and I'll have my Bible to prove that what I say is what the Word of God teaches."

"YE WOULD NOT"

By M. W. Lyon

Can you imagine Jesus' reaction to the stupidity of the human race by this time, as He watches those who call Him the Prince of Peace butchering each other in war? Like as not He is saying, with sorrow of heart, as He said of Jerusalem so long ago, when once before they rejected Him and His counsel, "Oh, sons of men, how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"—Golden Rule News.

JEWISH POPULARITY.

Speaking of the regathering of Israel, God says, "I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for my holy name's sake" (Ezek. 36:22). Though ten tribes were once rent from the Davidic rule, God said, "I will not rend away all the kingdom... for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen" (1 Kings 11: 13). Likewise, Israel is to yet become head of the nations for God's "holy name's sake," "for David (His) servant's sake," and for "Jerusalem's sake."

When Jerusalem has become "a praise in the earth" (Isa. 62:7), "many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. . . . In those days . . . ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you" (Zech. 8: 22, 23).

THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE

ences, the two accounts can be said to refer to the same event is difficult to understand. Those "outside" have said, "The two accounts do not agree," and they are right. They have looked to the churches for explanation, but the churches have failed.

Many questions have arisen, and many books have been written on the supposition that all the inhabitants of the earth descended from one pair. Does the Bible affirm that all men descended from one pair? The answer can be given quite decisively and clearly—it does not. Any evidence in favor of the view is wholly inferential. Every seeming objection to the evident truth that there was more than one creation can be honorably and fairly met. Secular history records the facts that there were other people living at the same time as Adam. There could be no reason for Adam's separation in a selected spot, to dress it and to guard it, unless there were foes outside. That Eden was well known, contemporary with other districts, may be reasonably inferred from Genesis 4:15, 16, and 2 Kings 19:12. Cain, being turned out of Eden and expressing fear of being slain, is evidence that the land of Nod was populated. That he built a city in commemoration of his son is also evidence, for the distinction between cities and towns is well maintained throughout the Bible. There are other lines of evidence, both secular and Biblical, which also indicate this truth.

Surely the angels must smile when they see the multitudinous efforts to reconcile the Bible and science when the Bible is written in language easy to understand, were preconceived notions ruled out.

The inquiry here has so far been limited to the testimony of two narratives, but there is much later testimony found in the Word bearing on the theme to show that race plurality is the Bible idea. The story as we have thus far viewed it is the story of a special creation of a special man, placed in a special place, designed for a special purpose in relation to all mankind.

We are fully convinced that God is the Author of all nature, and that He is also the Author of the Bible. Therefore, we say again that the Bible and science must agree. If they do not, it is our duty to find wherein the disagreement lies.

EUROPEAN POTPOURRI

if the "democracies" win, an anti-Semitic dictatorship will be continued in Poland, and anti-Semitism will not have been stamped out in Germany.

Conscientious objectors will have no place in the war. Should the United States enter the conflict, mobilization day plans provide that conscientious objectors may be excused from active military service, but that they will be assigned to non-combative "defense service" behind the lines—in manufacturing, relief work, or actual military activity. About the same provisions have been established by the democracies already at war. Once the plan has gone into effect, it is most doubtful that it will ever be revised other than more harshly.

There will be the inevitable reaction against religion following the war. People may pray—occasionally—when war is actually at hand; but they completely forget God as soon as it is over. The unavoidable depression which will follow the war will affect the church, also—people cannot spend money for religious work when they have no money to spend for themselves.

On one front only will religion and the Jews gain. More Jews will ultimately be forced into Palestine, and the economic powers of that country will be built more firmly. Coalitions already in the offing will be established which enable the church to prove the truth of the Bible through the use of current events—as it has been able to do during the last several years. Ezekiel 38, predicting a union of Germany, Russia, Ethiopia, Libya, Persia, must yet be fulfilled; and the ground must be still further prepared for the battle of Armageddon. This war will stimulate such preparation; the European rotton pot does have some purpose, after all!

covenant with Israel which God has made with them after their regathering into their land. God has promised the Israelites that they will never again be uprooted out of it and scattered abroad.

Germany was once the light of the world. From out of the Dark Ages she arose resplendent in a garb of religious freedom when Martin Luther threw from her shoulders the enthrallment of a spiritual darkness. People of other nations were made to hope, after he had organized the spiritual lines in reformation. Luther brought in a liberal upswing of religious tolerance, and stimulated a keen desire among men to more thoroughly know the Word of God. Because of the Reformation, learned men of French and English-speaking peoples were moved to search out and translate into their respective languages many versions of the Holy Scriptures.

From such a spirit, also, Germany produced a Bach, a Mendelssohn, a Handel, and a Wagner who brought forth chords of beauty, and a Goethe beautiful in thought and pure in aspirations of man's unfettered freedom. Many others of like nature did Germany mother. All contributed something fine, something substantial, something uplifting to the museum of man's progress through the ages.

On the other side of German nature, a dark picture arises. Characters sinister lurk in her historic annals. These have contributed not to Germany's greatness, but rather to her shame. There was a Karl Marx who sowed the seeds of social reform, and who assaulted the citadel of capitalism by teaching organization of the masses of labor into revolt. There was a Nietzsche who set forth the diabolical philosophy of the "Overman," cruel and unrelenting against the order of religion and moral laws. Bismarck was an exponent of Prussian militarism and teacher of "Might makes right." Hitler now appears on the scene, and combines all three in fury.

Woe unto you, Germany, for you are taken in with a beast and now tied to a serpent. A godless nation! Today you have rejoiced over a seemingly diplomatic victory. Tomorrow you will weep bitterly for your folly of shortsightedness. More and more will you be enmeshed in its fatal coils until you go down into oblivion. The Lord has spoken and His words have gone to the far reaches of the earth. He has a controversy with the nations, and His day approaches.

Yes, kind brethren of the Church of God, the day of the Lord is approaching. Who will be able to stand? Only those who are of pure mind and heart—those who have not lifted themselves up to vanity, who have kept the faith, unfaltering, pressing onward to the goal of the high calling that is in Christ Jesus. May we all be found faithful when the Lord shall come. Out of the treasures of His storehouse will He bring forth many who have been rejected of men, despised, afflicted, smitten. Of small and insignificant account in their sight, they are precious and holy, and prepared for the glories of the kingdom of God. Basking in the full sunshine of the Savior's love, they will be given authority over the nations of earth—not the authority of a Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin, or any other earthly potentate, but the courage and kindliness of true authority of government. Have courage, then, brethren. Falter not, for soon "he that shall come will come, and will not people that they ought to tithe, if it were only for the people of Old Testament times?

According to what has been quoted and said, if I fail to tithe as Abraham did, I am not of the Abrahamic faith, neither do I love Christ as I should. Christ said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments," and His commandment in relation to tithing is: "These ought ye to have done." "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all" (James 2:10). Since God is no respecter of persons, it would seem fair that the same rule that is for one is for all.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves . . . for we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth" (2 Cor. 13:5, 8). "The time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?" (1 Peter 4:17).

In the words of Paul, "I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use sharpness, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction" (2 Cor. 13:10).

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

MARCHING FORWARD

By Arlen Marsh, Grand Rapids, Mich.

It has already been reported on the Berean page (August 15) that at the last annual conference of the National Berean Society, the Cleveland, Ohio, Bereans (through their president, Miss Ruth Tomlinson) advanced a number of constructive criticisms of the national work.

Primarily, these suggestions simmered down to two points: first, that the National Berean Society had not kept in sufficiently close touch with local Berean groups and that, consequently, the local groups were losing all interest in the national body; second, that no evidence of a definite program for Bereans everywhere had been furnished either to those who attended the annual conference or to those who did not.

It was notable that the Cleveland society was the only local organization which had a criticism of any kind to make of the national group. Unfortunately, this does not speak well for the National Berean Society, although on the surface it might seem to do so. From the discussions during the conference, it became obvious that other local and state groups had given no serious thought to the problems of work outside their own fields; and it was equally obvious that no one expected any appreciable amount of new business to be advanced by anyone before the national conference.

Tying the local societies together will be accomplished, it is hoped, by the new mimeographed "Berean Echo," soon to be published regularly by the National Berean Society. Local groups will be made aware of what other groups are doing, will be given suggestions for organizing and handling lessons, and will be shown in some detail just what their national organization is accomplishing.

But this is, after all, rather unimportant. What is important is found in the record of previous annual conferences of the National Berean Society. In 1929, only thirty were actively participating in the business of the conference; ten years later, approximately sixty voted. During this same ten-year period, the Berean organization has shown a consistent liking for decay.

Ten years ago, there were six active Berean societies in Illinois; today, there are two. Ten years ago, there were four active state organizations; today, there are three—and only one of these meets the minimum requirement set by the national constitution: "Any state Berean society of the Church of God having three or more local societies is eligible to membership in the National Berean Society."

Simultaneous with this drop in Berean power—and probably its cause—has been a decline in active work at the national annual conferences. Reports have been heard—dry as Death Valley in July; officers have been elected—with the cheerful assumption that anyone elected must be capable; but a truly forward-looking program has fallen more and more into disrepute. No serious efforts have been made even to analyze the reports; no effort has been made to use the reports as a basis for future work.

Programs are produced by cooperative effort. The Cleveland, Ohio, society this year gave constructive hints as to what should be done; it remained only to work out the details, by open discussion, of a plan to meet the Cleveland proposals. Had every local society, had every Berean present at the national conference, been loaded with suggestions regarding possible improvements of Berean service, literature, and organization, there would have been real reason to clap hands over the injection of new life into "Bereandom." Had even half the local groups or half the ones in attendance at the conference produced something besides a statistical record or a written ballot, this year's assembly would have been incomparably better.

Now is the time to be planning for next year's conference. Think about possible officers for the national or state society with which you may be affiliated; voting on nominations blindly will accomplish little good next year. If you have ideas for improving the correspondence work, the publishing work, the editorial work, the administrative work—say so. Your officers may issue a bulletin to keep you in touch with what other societies are doing, but this bulletin cannot be considered to be a constructive program for more than a year. Next year, it will be old, an established part of Berean work. Doubling the attendance at the national Berean conferences is meaningless unless the number of suggestions for the advancement of Berean work is doubled, also. When the Bereans as a whole go to work, many problems will be solved.

GOD'S WATCHFUL CARE

When Wise Men from the East visited the Child Jesus, they worshiped Him. They gave Him gifts suitable for a King, for He was born to be a King.

Although King Herod had asked the Wise Men to come to him when they found Christ, they went home another way. God had told them in a dream that they should not return to Herod. God was watching the Baby Jesus, for He was too little to care for Himself.

God also warned Joseph and Mary to take the Child and flee into another country, Egypt. God told them that Herod was going to try to destroy Christ. Joseph and Mary, too, took good care of Jesus. They obeyed God. They didn't wait until it was morning, but arose and took the young Child away in the night.

What a different world we would live in if all people obeyed God today in that manner. His Word tells us what to do, yet how few, when they understand the Bible, start at once to DO what they KNOW. I hope you boys and girls begin to do the right things you learn in your church, Sunday school, or home—AT ONCE! The evil ones know and tremble; the good ones know and work, obey, and trust God.

Joseph and Mary did all they could to take care of Jesus. They stayed in Egypt until God told them that Herod was dead.

What did Herod do when the Wise Men failed to return and bring him word of Jesus? He was very angry. He had taken great care to find out as much as he could about Jesus from the Wise Men. He knew that Jesus was under two years of age, so he sent his soldiers forth and they killed every child under two years of age in Bethlehem and in all the towns around there. What a terrible thing for Herod to do! How many homes were left with heartbroken parents, brothers and sisters? How anxious was Herod to get rid of that Child who might become king in his place (so he thought) some day!

When God had told Joseph and Mary of Herod's death, and told them to go back into the land of Israel, they went at once. But, when Joseph learned that Herod's son reigned in Judea, he was afraid to go there.

How much like other loving parents they were! Joseph and Mary took every care to see that their Baby was safe. They went, not back to Bethlehem of Judea, but into another part of Israel—to Galilee. There they lived in the city of Nazareth. In so doing, they did not disobey God, for He had not told them to return to the same city, but only to the land of Israel, which they did.

There are several prophecies fulfilled in our lesson. Can you find them? What prophets foretold these events?

In the beginning of our six-months' study of the "Kingdom of God," we find the One who is to be the King over that kingdom being very well cared for by His loving parents and an all-wise God.

OMAHA CONFERENCE

The Eastern Nebraska Conference of the Church of God held its fifty-third Annual Conference at Omaha, from August 27 to September 3, inclusive. For speakers we were fortunate to have Bros. S. J. Lindsay and James McLain, who together formed a team that brought us God's Word in a way which made a deep and lasting impression on all who heard. who heard.

All meetings had a large attendance and many brethren out in the State were present many brethren out in the State were present throughout the week.

Bro. Harvey Krogh spoke to us on the opening evening, and Bro. Richard LeCrone, who spent the entire week with us, spoke several times. Our sincere thanks go out to these two brethren and all other members for the part they took in making this Conference one of the most successful ones ever held in eastern Nebraska.

A business meeting was held in the afternations

Evening service, F. L. Austin 7:30 2:30 p.m. 7:30 p.m.

We make this announcement because many have requested it and are planning to attend our dedication program. Also, Bro. James McLain will begin an evangelistic campaign starting on Monday, October 9, and it will continue through October 21. A Sunday school campaign is in mind, as this is a new field. We expect Bro. McLain in time to arrange and lead the music for the dedication.

We invite all the brethren to come to enjoy these meetings. It has taken us four months to remodel and redecorate. Anyone who saw the condition of the church when purchased, will understand why it took so long.

Bro. L. A. Chaplin, Arkansas City, Kansas, has just placed an order for ten Junior Berean Books. Lawrence is a good builder.

Speaking of The Bible Training School, Bro. E. E. Giesler of Moorefield, Neb., says, "We here would help a little to finance any young man who would attend from this State."

Bro. Vivian Kirkpatrick is now pastoring the Church of God at Blanchard, Mich.

"My sister, Lottie Young, is on her way East to attend the National W.C.T.U. Convention, and to visit some of her friends."—Amy L Young, Scattle, Wash.

"There were one hundred twenty-two in Sunday school at Brush Creek this morning."-Vivian Magaw, Tipp City, Ohio.

I do not want to miss any of The Heralds, as they are so full of good articles."—Mrs. Fred E. Hall, Alto, Mich.

Sr. Leota B. Hanson, accompanied by Sr. Lewis Lindsay, visited in St. Louis, Mo., and Lebanon, Ill., September 23, 24.

Bro. S. J. Lindsay delivered the morning sermon at Oregon, Ill., September 24. He had an appreciative audience. He and Sr. Lindsay left September 26 to resume their duties with the brethren at Tempe, Ariz.

Bro. R. H. Judd and wife, 111 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ont., Canada, celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary on Monday, Sep-tember 18. Congratulations!

"I hope to see and read more articles by my uncle, A. R. Johnson, as he is a really remarkable Bible student on prophecy and signs of the times."—Mae F. Swanson, Hector,

As we go to press, the program of the Southern California Conference is at hand. The speakers and the teachers will be: Norman J. Macleod, J. E. Adamson, George P. Lichty, and Srs. Emma C. Railsback and Jessie Kauffman.

The Iowa State Conference plans to hold its 1940 meeting over two Sundays, beginning Saturday evening following the General Conference.

"We plan moving to Corvallis, Ore., some time this fall."-Leo Behrends, Isanti, Minn.

Following a two week's visit with the Font-hill and Niagara Falls churches, Bro. John Eagleston is en route to California.

"The Herald is very helpful and encouraging in these evil times, as we wait patiently for the coming of our blessed Lord and the setting up of His glorious kingdom. All the inhabitants of the earth will then learn right-cousness."—Margaret Burns, 1519 Skunk St., Philadelphia, Pa.

"I think The Herald is very good, and we need it."—S. J. Humphreys, 279 Woodlawn St., Hot Springs, Ark.

CORVALLIS, OREGON

After the morning services on September 3, we drove to the country home of Bro. and Sr. Delbert Hathaway, where we had a basket lunch.

Following Bible study, led by Bro. H. J. Prosser, we sang favorite hymns. After supper eided to hereafter have our basket lunches in the homes on the first Sunday of each month when Bro. Prosser is with us.

Miss Jane Kerr has returned home from Salem, and Sr. Flora Hogue has returned from California.

Mr. Counsul Weatherbee, who is now stationed at the San Diego Naval Base, visited several days among the church people and friends here.

Out-of-town visitors at the meetings were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Stewart, Scattle, Wash., and Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Baker, Mrs. Orr, and Mrs. Minnie Rogers, all of Eugene, Bro. Hiel Hathaway is vacationing at the coast.

We were deeply grieved to learn of the death of Sr. Goldie Ehmer, of Menlo, Wash., who for thirty-three years had been a member of this group. Her cheerful disposition in the face of many adversities and zeal for the faith, though isolated for twenty years from a church of her faith, will not soon be forgotten. Gladys Barber, Secy.

MARCIA GAIL KLEPPINGER

Marcia Gail Kleppinger, infant daughter of Ralph and Pauline Kleppinger of Brookville, Ohio, was born June 10, 1939, and died August 13, 1939.

The short time she was among us made her life very dear to us, and now that she has fallen asleep, we are brought more fully to know that while the aged must die, the young also may die. We look to a kind and loving Father in heaven for comfort in our sorrow.

Funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer, and Marcia Gail was laid to rest in the Brookville cemetery.

TO OUR BROTHERHOOD

Some weeks ago, during our General Conference sessions, the Conference instructed our Board of Religious Education to proceed at once to establish a Bible Training School to function nine months in the year.

The Board proceeded at once to carry out the instructions of the Conference body in that regard, and to put The School into operation at the earliest con-School into operation at the earliest convenient date, which was set to begin October 2, 1939. Although I am not a member of that Board, the operating and maintaining of this undertaking being a responsibility of the General Conference, and I being president and general manager of the institution, I deem it to be my duty to call your attention to some of the things to which serious attention and cooperation must be given attention and cooperation must be given if we are to hope for success.

Owing to the fact that the profession of preaching and Bible teaching prom-ises very limited financial remuneration, there are comparatively few who desire to enter that field, and fewer still who are financially able to pay the expenses necessary properly to prepare and qualify for this work. Therefore, prospective young men and young women need en-couragement and financial assistance to enable them to take this training.

The Board has set the price to be paid by or for each student for the first year's course at two hundred dollars, which includes all expenses of tuition, board, and room.

It must be apparent to all that this will fall far short of meeting the expenses of conducting The School which we can only hope will be patronized by a few, especially the first year.

The expenses will include rent and furnishings for the building in which to house and board the students, heat, light, water, food, salaries for matron and teachers, plus incidentals which cannot be accurately estimated.

Besides furnishings for the building, and foodstuffs, which will be governed by the number of students that must be provided for, will approximate two hundred dollars or more per month, and it can easily be seen that a large part of this must be paid from contributions, as we cannot hope to secure a sufficient number of students to meet these ex-penses themselves, especially for the first year. Therefore, since the General Conference is composed of the State Conferences, churches, and individual members of the Church of God throughout the country, I am asking these or-ganized bodies and members kindly to recognize and meet this responsibility by doing their best to secure students for this Training School, and to make and secure liberal contributions to sustain the work the General Conference authorized and instructed its Board of Religious Education to do. I am sure the Board will carry on the work as economically as it can be done with reasonable efficiency, and proper reports of receipts and expenditures be made through The Restitution Her-ald that you may keep in close touch with the progress of their efforts to make the undertaking a success.

With this cooperation of our entire body, and earnestly praying God's blessing to attend our efforts, we cannot fail.

THE BIBLE TRAINING SCHOOL

ENROLL NOW!

L. E. Conner

This is an urgent call to enlist students for The Bible Training School to begin October 2. To make a success more students must enroll. Everything else is ready. We positively need several more students, and are equipped to school many more. "Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord?"

Instructors L. E. Conner and Sydney E. Magaw are ready to begin work. The classroom is being made ready. A beautiful home awaits the students. Sister Edna Brewer of Tipp City, Ohio, is engaged as matron. Donations are already being made.

Youth of the Church of God, if you honestly want The School, it is here at Oregon, Illinois, ready and waiting for you. Enroll today!

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15).

"Ye shall know the truth."—Jesus.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:15, 16).

Fathers and mothers, the grandest book in the world is the Holy Bible. Your sons and daughters will soon, of necessity, be the Bible teachers in the Church of God. The Church of God cannot be strong to fulfill its mission in the world unless our youth is well trained in the Book of Books and in Christian leadership.

Nations conscript youth to fight and kill. The Lord invites youth to study and serve that men might be saved unto everlasting life. This is a final appeal to you: Enroll your son or daughter in The Bible Training School to become better prepared to serve the KING OF KINGS. An investment of $200.00 in your own boy or girl is no risk. Let The Bible Training School protect your investment.
