UNDER CHRIST THE KING, FOREVER

THE DELIVERER shall have come out of Zion, he will turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Rom. 11:26—Emp. Test. Cf. Isa. 59:20,21.

That this language of the Apostle Paul, quoted from Isa. 59:20 and 27:9, pertains to time yet future is evident from the context. Concerning Israel, which has been for the time "broken off", the Apostle says in verse 23 that "they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graff them in again." They were not yet grafted again at the time when the Apostle wrote. He was pointing to a future time and, after admonishing his Gentile brethren of the necessity of their confiding faith, lest they also should be broken off, he continues with the statement above quoted from v. 26.

Israel's blindness was to continue, so stated Paul, until the fulness of the Gentiles should come in. Israel's turning to belief in the Messiah would not result till after the fulness of the Gentiles. The completion of Gentile times will have finished only with the second coming of our Lord.

That the second coming of Christ is the event around which these statements revolve is further assured by verse 27 which says: "And this with them, is the covenant from me, whensoever I may take away their sins." Emp. Test. It all indicates future time. It will follow the return of Christ to Zion.

In fact that is one of the missions of Christ in returning. Is He not the One of whom Jeremiah wrote in 23:5, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his day Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."

It is in His day that Judah and Israel (that is "all Israel") "shall be saved". It is in His day that they "shall dwell safely." But "his day" will not be until He returns to earth for the performance of His work. It is in agreement with this that the prophet continues in verse 7 and says, "Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt:

but, the Lord liveth which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all the countries whither I have driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land."

Just as Moses was, by God, sent back into the land of Egypt to gather Israel from that land and place her in the land of promise, so also has God promised to send back a prophet like unto Moses, even Jesus, into the broad earth to gather the same chosen race of God, not only from Egypt but "from all countries whither I had driven them." This will be Christ's work just as positively, definitely and literally, as was the former work the work of Moses. And just as literally as Moses delivered Israel from Egypt, instructed her in the wilderness, planted her in the promised land, just so literally will Jesus deliver Israel from all countries, instruct her, and again plant her in God's promised land.

This and only this will make possible the fulfillment of Luke 1:33, "he (Jesus) shall reign over the house of Jacob forever."

But before this can be accomplished, the Christian church shall needs have been received by its Lord. Its members will have been fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ: they will have been "changed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye"—from mortality to immortality, from corruptibility to incorruptibility. God's rich provisions for the church are today fulfilled but in small part—in small "foretaste". These His purposes must needs be completed.

Those who during this present Christian dispensation come into Christ by being baptized into Him, will then fully enter their new position in Christ. Having in this day chosen to come into Him, and having chosen to forsake their former standing and position as Jews or Gentiles, they have enrolled for this position and standing, even the position of new creatures in Christ. Being today in Christ, they constitute the church. The people of this church are they who will be changed and fashioned "like unto his glorious body", fully qualified for position with Him, "above every name that is named." Then, after

GOD'S RIGHTS

WE seldom think of it in that way, do we? But really God has some rights in us.

He has a Right to a proper portion of our time—a portion set apart by schedule, which portion no human being can innocently deny his Maker.

He has a Right to a proper portion of our service. Daily service to God results also in daily communion with God. To such, God surely has right. What follower of His Son can justly ignore the Father's right to his service.

He has a Right to a proper portion of our income. His word has designated that portion to be the tenth. Abram recognized this. Jacob pledged it, Israel was blessed because of it or cursed because of indifference thereto.

And who shall say that the Corinthians, 1 Cor. 16:2, did not "lay by" according to this same rule. The tithe belongs to God. Yes, God, has rights.

BIBLE TRAINING CLASS

HOW MANY of the readers of The Herald are realizing something of the meaning and responsibility of a Bible Training Class?

Every man and woman who definitely choose their life's work are electing an activity that can have no other result than to affect for all time to come many people who will come beneath their influence. Those who enter the Bible Training Class are mostly electing life's vocation. As such, they desire to acquaint themselves with the truths of God and to fit themselves to present those truths to others in the most forceful and influential way. They hope to be the means not only of leading many to Christ who otherwise would not know Him, but they hope also to be instruments in God's hand to strengthen and maintain true Christian devotion in those who may already have taken upon themselves Christ's name.

No man can accomplish such work without changing, converting the characters of all people whom they may influence. Such changes can but have their effects throughout all ages to come. Some people who otherwise would never know their Lord, will through the instrumentality of those who enter the Bible Training Class be converted to serve Him not only in this age, but in future ages. This thought, to the writer, is most impressive.

But again, the forces that make the Bible Training

Class possible are the ones which first of all should give earnest and deep consideration to these facts. Whoever cooperates to make such a class possible and to give such class strength and standing, are engaging in a work the results of which can be measured only by God Himself. Most human efforts are with direct reference to temporal life. Very few have purpose to extend farther. But here is a labor made possible by the united effort of many with a view of enlisting many, even unborn generations, to relationship with God the result of which knows no end. Truly this is a work for eternity.

But seemingly the greatest responsibility of all rests upon those who come in personal contact with the members of the Bible Training Class to teach, guide and develop those students. Here is a responsibility from which any human being might well shrink, especially so when it is realized that such instructions have more or less a tendency to establish foundation thoughts in the minds of the students that will influence them in all of their teachings and labors. No human being, unaided, can possibly be qualified for such work. Only the Father in Heaven and His Son can know the full meaning of such labor and can rightly direct the efforts put forth.

To carry forward this work in greatest honor to God the brotherhood of the Church of God is requested to cooperate in every possible way. In addition to a number of letters indicating hearty approval, a few have already sent in contributions, with a view to covering some of the additional daily expenses resulting from this added activity.

Once a conception of the magnitude of the labor is grasped by all and cooperation rendered, the work can be carried forward with increasing efficiency in Christian results. Daily prayer to the Father for His guiding watchcare over this work is sought of all whose hearts are in accord with this effort.

THE MAN OF SIN

2 Thess. 2

By James Browning

This interesting article which was published in THE RESTITUTION HERALD of January 25, 1912, is here reprinted at the suggestion of the author.

The writer emphasizes three special points. Each of them are truly important. He endeavors truly to present them according to Bible statement. They are:

The man of sin is to be an individual man, not a succession of men;

The time allotted to him is 1260 days, not years;

The Temple of God is for Jerusalem, not Rome.

The reader student may not agree with the author in his presentation, but it will be well to at least enquire—What saith the Scripture.—Editor.

NOW WE beseech you brethren touching the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him; to the end that ye be not quickly shaken from your mind, nor yet be troubled, either by spirit, or by word, or by epistle as from us, as that the day of the Lord is just at hand: let no man beguile you in anywise; for it will not be, except the falling away come first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, he that opposeth and exalteth himself against all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he sitteth in the temple of God, setting himself forth as God." R. V.

The subject here introduced is one that has given rise to much speculation; and yet, it is one that undoubtedly formed a very important part of the Apostle's ministry. In verse 5 he says, "Remember ye not that while I was yet with you I told you these things?" It seems therefore quite clear that Paul had not only previously spoken to them of this matter, but that in this epistle he was seeking to refresh their minds in regard to the truths he had, at that time, unfolded.

The importance of the subject is also indicated by its prominence; substantially one third of this epistle is devoted to it, and when we consider the great number of passages that refer to it, either directly or indirectly, scattered as they are throughout the writings of the prophets, and the evangelists, besides the revelations made to John on Patmos—we are forced to admit that the subject is indeed of great importance, and as such, should be lifted out of the realm of speculation, and made the basis of the most solemn warnings, and most positive instruction to the saints of God.

Now in considering any part of God's word, it is very essential that our minds be freed from bias given by circumstances, or early training. Theological ideas, imbibed from infancy, often form a veil over the mind, hindering the acceptance of what might otherwise appear plain. The demand to prove your point, is indicative of enquiry, but where the power of prejudice is very strong, the demand can never be met, for the evidence which to an unprejudiced mind is regarded as overwhelming, to the other is regarded as inconclusive, unsatisfactory.

Coming then to the subject, my first proposition may be put thus: The man of sin is to be a man, a person.

This it will be seen is counter to the idea, that the expression refers to a succession of men, viz: the popes of Rome. That the early believers regarded the man of sin as an individual might be shown from various writings which have come down to our day. Barnabas, the companion of Paul, Justin Martyr, Irenaeus Tertullian, Hyppolytus, Origen Victorianus and others, expressed their thoughts fully and clearly on this matter. Indeed, before the rise of the papacy, there seems not to have been a single writer who ventured to suggest that the expression could have had any other meaning than as pertaining to a person, who was to be emphatically "the man of sin." After the rise of the papacy, some who refused to be bound by the decrees issued, conceived the idea that in the chapter before us, Paul gives a pen picture of that pernicious system. That is to say: instead of permitting prophecy to illuminate the dark place to which it pointed, (viz: the time immediately preceding the day of the Lord) the light of prophecy was diverted, and in a measure obscured, by forcing its terms to meet the supposed requirements of the events then transpiring.

The expression "man of sin" is not, as imagined, an "official title", but an appellative, given to a person because of his characteristics. He is distinctively "the man of sin". The epithet implies his individuality. His acts are those of a person; he exalts himself; he sits in the temple of God. Surely, if language is the true medium of imparting knowledge, our proposition is proved by Paul! To show himself as God, he must claim infallibility as to his acts. The pope makes no such pretensions—he has his own confessor, even as the priests and the laity. The popes have been many; God is one. How, it might be asked, can the many represent themselves as God? The popes are elected to their position—the man of sin exalts himself! The pope claims to be the vicar of God, and acknowledges his dependence upon God. The man of sin opposes God. He not only denies, but defies God, setting himself forth as God!

Still further: if the vile person of Dan. 11, the king of verse 36, is identical with the "man of sin" we have a side light thrown upon the prophecy, which absolutely forbids the application of it to the papacy. Mark the words, and note the fact, that the prediction concerns what should befall Daniel's people "in the latter days". Verse 36 reads thus: "And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all."

It is not improbable that Paul referred his hearers to

SOWING AND REAPING SUCCESS

By Melba Glanton Arlington

FIRST OF ALL what is success? It is not money, nor is it fame. Men have been known to turn into gold all their earthly possessions and yet, starve to death. Success is the liberty to command coupled with a conscience-free heart. We have only to read the life histories of Abraham Lincoln, William Gladstone and Livingstone to understand why they were successful men. Jesus of Nazareth was greater than all, but He was divine. Success does not include money and power enough to look down on one's neighbor. The successful man's mission is to try to lift his neighbors, spiritually and materially. And who is his neighbor? EVERY HUMAN BEING!

Someone has given a fine example of the sun. Did you ever stop to think that you could and should be the S-U-N-S of God as well as the S-O-N-S of God? But in order to be the Suns of God, you must plant the seed of love in your hearts. Too many of us like to be cold dead moons and do not try to shine, then after a time, it becomes impossible. You must love your work, then put your interest and yourself into it. It is just as easy to grow success as it is to grow wheat, and sometimes a great deal easier.

Wheat must be sown at a certain time of the year, but the time to sow success is right now. The farmer sows his wheat and the seeds seem so very small and sometimes we wonder how so much wealth can come from such a tiny seed. The farmer can't see his wheat growing, yet he knows that it is, and while it is growing he has a pride in his heart for the fine crop that will be produced. When the first green peeps through the ground, his love for his field increases and he gives it his tenderest care. Then when harvest time comes, and he gathers in the golden grain, he reaps the reward for his untiring efforts. And why? Because he sowed LOVE with every grain of wheat, and success is the sequel of love.

The unsuccessful man sows hate and mean thoughts with his wheat and reaps failure.

I once knew a young doctor just home from college. He put up his "shingle" and started in to practice medicine. At first only a few patients came to him and he had very little money to live on. One day he hurried down the stairs, which led from his office, jumped into his coupe and drove away. In a short time he was back again, running up and down stairs all day, and to all outward appearances, he was a very busy man. But the truth of the matter was that he had no calls and would simply ride into the country and come back.

He put his thought and energy into his work and the result? He soon had more patients than he could take care of. He said not a word, but people began to observe how very busy he was and felt sure that he must be a fine doctor. Just a little bit of his own individuality united with energy and he won success.

I might give another example, a grocery. For years it has been the leader in my home town because it's owner and employees are courteous and refined. Every article in their store is of the very best quality, attractively placed, and cleanliness predominates. They are always considerate of the public welfare which is evidenced by their kindly attitude and constant desire to please.

You must love people and be able to see them as they see themselves in order to be able to move them. Love must go out to all mankind. Did you ever try smiling at everyone with whom you came in contact? How readily they will smile back, but look cross and growl like a dog over an old bone, and you will have a real Australian boomerang.

You may say that you haven't time for all that sentimental rubbish and that the best way to get along in this old world is to be just as mean as the other fellow. "Jim Jones makes a lot of money and he doesn't trust

Sowing and Reaping Success is different. Young and old will enjoy it. The writer sows many recognized truths, stamping them with conspicuous labels, such as follows:

"In order to be the S-U-N-S of God you must plant the seed of love in your hearts."

"The time to sow success is right now."

"We don't allow ourselves time to be what we really are."

"If a man really loves his neighbor he will not give him poison to drink nor will he harbor him when he is deliberately breaking the laws of his country."

"Wives must see that the home is clean and comfortable, a real place of refuge from the world and from its many trials."

"Husbands must do their part. Take ten or fifteen minutes a day and get acquainted with your children—and with your wife."

"Statistics prove that the home life has the greatest influence upon the lives of our children, for good or evil."—Editor.

The Resurrection Morning

Dark was the night, and still the tomb,
Where our Lord was sleeping:
Sealed was the stone, and set the watch,
Ceaseless vigil keeping.
When from on high, with shining ray,
Filling the place with light of day,
Coming to roll the stone away
Sped the mighty angel,

Calm rose the sun that wondrous morn,
O'er the garden flinging
Radiant beams on those who came Love's last offering bringing.
Sadly they came, and full of fear,
Soon to receive the word of cheer,
Lo, He is risen, He is not here,
Christ the Lord is risen!

Why seekest thou among the dead
Him who now is risen?
Heedest thou not the words He said,
How He'd break death's prison?
Hail Him our Lord upon His throne,
"Glory and praise are all Thine own,
And to our hearts Thyself make known,
Jesus, draw us nearer."

-Pentecostal Evangel.

LOVEST THOU ME?

IN SYMPATHY does the Christian heart reach out unto the conscience-stricken Peter as three times the Savior's tender though searching question is placed, "Lovest thou me?" It was not the voice of one carrying a crown of thorns, it was the voice and eye of Him who had passed through death, who had slept the chill sleep to a finish and who had been triumphantly raised; it was He who was speaking with a voice echoing forth from glad immortality.

"Lovest thou me?" could but have had a far deeper and more searching meaning to Peter than was possible in the hours of that bitter agony of the Savior's passion and trial. There was no excuse for Peter's denial, but there was great reason why Peter could now thrice answer the Savior in unmistakable words.

"Lovest thou me?" are words still vibrant in the heart of every true follower of our Lord. It is just as necessary for you and for me to confirm Peter's reply and to assure to Him our love, as it was for Peter. We, too, have all too oft denied our Lord.

Upon this anniversary memorial of His resurrection what better could each true Christian do than to assure with word, with heart, with action true, with life's devotion, that we, too, love Him who died for us.—F. L. A.

He Is Not Here

By Margaret Widdemer

*THEY have taken away my Lord,
And I know not where He is laid, . . .
O soldiers keeping ward
Over the world you have made,
Have you anywhere seen Him pass?
For His footsteps touched the grass,
His hands touched a little one's head,
Surely but yesteryear!
"We think that our Lord is dead
Two thousand years ago:
We only watch for a blood-red dawn
That we must greet with our weapons down,
In grief and fear,
In hate and deed."*

[3]

*They have taken away my Lord,
And I seek for Him in vain . . .
O priests who once adored,
Though you rend His robe in twain
Surely you yet can tell!
For you cry on the nethermost hell
And up to the heavens high Surely not vainly still!
"We have hoped . . . yet none saw Him die,
There's none that has seen Him rise,
So we cease our watch on the close-locked skies,
To fill His house with gay merchandise,
Lest the altars chill,
And its folk pass by."*

*They have taken away my Lord,
And I know not where He has lain . . .
O Wise Men riding far,
Building the world again,
Have you knelt to Him anywhere?
For He healed your wise despair,
He gave you a Star for guide,
Surely but yesterday!
"We have lost His Star's sure gleam,
And the stall where we would kneel;
Our gifts are but gold and iron and steel
We only know wounds that no myrrh can heal,
Not His Star's white ray,

[4]

*They have taken away my Lord!
Yet bright by His empty grave
A winged one keeps joyous ward! . . .
"Be glad of the faith ye gave,
He is risen!" the angel saith:
"Where Love is, there is no death;
Christ lives, than your breath more near:
But now, on the common road
He trod and talked at your side . . .
Not where the soldiers march in pride
Where the priests rebuke or the Wise Men ride
But where Love burns clear
He is risen indeed!"—From Christian Herald.*

He Is Not Here, He Is Risen

For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.—John 20:9.

AND WHEN THE SABBATH was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun. And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great. And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified: he is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him.—Mark 16:1-6.

SHEOL AND HADES

TO the Editor of The Globe: In the issue of The Globe dated July seventh, a long letter appears, signed, "A Robinson", in which an attempt is made to prove that "sheol" and "hades" denote the grave, and that death means complete annihilation. With your permission I desire to ask Mr. Robinson a few questions.

The most complete and lucid revelation concerning the fate of mankind after death was given by Christ in the story of Dives and Lazarus (Luke 16). Mr. Robinson, however, insists that the revelation is merely a parable. But what are the parables of Christ? In Matt. 13: 34, 35, we read: "All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world." From these words it is evident that the parables of Christ were revelations of "things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world." Why, then, does Mr. Robinson ransack the Old Testament for information which was not possessed by any human being until after it had been revealed by Christ in person? Why should he and others refuse to accept the revelation of the only Person who was fully informed of the facts, and who uttered, not merely His own words, but those put into His mouth by His Almighty Father? "And the Lord said unto me, They have well spoken that which they have spoken. I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him." Deut. 18:17.

Mr. Robinson argues that death means the complete extinction of the individual; but does he not realize that the doctrine of annihilation utterly nullifies the doctrine of the resurrection? If at death the individual is completely annihilated, how could that individual be raised up? God could create an individual similar in every respect; but a newly created individual would not be a resurrected one; neither could he possibly be a redeemed sinner.

George Johnston.

A REPLY TO THE ABOVE

The foregoing letter by Mr. Geo. Johnston was published in the Toronto Globe of July fifteenth. The writer of it sent to me a carbon copy of same, together with a remark to the effect that he thought he had "this time given the annihilationists more than they could answer." I wrote to Mr. Johnston, stating that for various reasons we repudiate the name "annihilationists", chief among which being that we prefer to abide by Scripture terminology, of which there was no lack. I also stated that should his letter find space in The Globe, I would be very pleased indeed to offer a reply, and anticipated no difficulty in doing so.

There are one or two outstanding points to notice in the letter under consideration.

First, That by his own heading of the letter the author admits Sheol and Hades to be equivalent—that what is true of one is true also of the other.

Second, That being the case, if it can be proved from Scripture that the state of those in Sheol has already been revealed, then is also proved the state of those in Hades.

Third, There are some 65 occurrences of Sheol in the Old Testament, and from these we may gain abundant evidence of the state of its inmates, as the following few examples clearly show: It is a place for grey hairs, Gen. 42:38; for blood, 1 Kings 2:9; for bones, Psa. 141:7; for worms, Isa. 14:11; for weapons of war, Ezek. 32:27; without memory, Psa. 6:5; 30:9; Isa. 38:17; for tents, their inmates and their possessions.

It must therefore be clear from the foregoing that the state of those in Sheol having already been revealed, Mr. Johnston's application of Matt. 13 to the narrative is evidence that he himself cannot be correct in his estimate of its basic purpose.

Again, our friend states, in his letter to me, that if the story is not a parable it must therefore be history. He is thus obliged to grant the converse, viz., if it is not history it must be parable. History has reference to the present and the past, hence if it can be shown that the story is not history, it must in consequence be parable. Two very definite facts overthrow any suggestion of its being history in the sense indicated, and these are taken from Mr. Johnston's own remarks.

First, His use of the term "after death";

Second, His evident belief that resurrection is yet future.

One cannot rightly speak of "after death" until death has been terminated by resurrection to Life. These two facts which are closely allied completely annul our friend's statement that the narrative is history, and the very narrative itself declares it to be parable. True, it is not actually called a parable in our Authorized Version, neither are the two preceding parables which are very similar in style.

One cannot pass by the very serious charge made against those who do not see with the above writer in this matter, viz., that they "refuse" (italics mine) to accept the revelation of the only Person who was fully informed of the facts." The statement coupled as it is with Deut. 18:17, to say the least, is an unfair charge against his brethren. It is more than unfair, it is unjust. The onus of proof lies with Mr. Johnston to demonstrate beyond peradventure, that the purpose of the narrative was expressly to reveal the state of the dead, and to prove beyond question that the dead are not dead, but living. That Christ had no such purpose is abundantly evidenced by His remark in John 9:4, that "the night

ON WILD WATERS

Three boats are pushed from shore into a rapid and dangerous stream. Each is manned by an oarsman, muscular and strong. The oars are in their locks, ready for immediate use. No question but that the boats will out ride the treacherous waters, if their respective oarsmen will intelligently ply the oars.

The boatman in number one, promptly reaches his seat and with firm hand and strong arm, grasps the right oar allowing the left to remain idle, and rows with steady and strong stroke. He is confident of his ability; his bark is sturdy; his oar is able. But the confidence of the boatman in his own strength and ability fails to keep his skiff nosing properly into the troubled waters. Round and round the bark swings. The harder the oarsman labors, the more rapidly the boat whirls round. Steadily he is carried by the flowing waters farther and more rapidly toward the danger point below. He forgets that there is another oar; perhaps he feels if he cannot exert sufficient strength in the use of one oar, that it would be impractical to use two.

The man in boat number two, seeing the dilemma of the boatman in number one, quickly decides that the trouble is in the use of the wrong oar. Immediately he puts the left oar into action, leaving the right one lying idle. He, too, has the power to row steadily and successfully across the turbulent waters, but, much to his bewildered astonishment, he finds he is in exactly the same dilemma as is his brother oarsman, excepting that his boat is whirling round in the opposite direction to that of boat number one. He, too, drifts toward the danger zone of the rough and rapid waters. He, too, could put into use the second oar. It is there for that purpose. The designer of the boats knowing the need, provided the proper means for propelling the boats safely and successfully over any waters, across any seas. But number two, like number one, apparently thinks that it is best to concentrate all of his energy and power upon the one oar. Both boats are drifting violently into waters which distress the boatmen and the onlookers from the shores.

Boatman number three relies more upon the instructions of the builder. All three have had the same instructions, but boatman number three applies the same in his use of the oars. Shoving from shore, he immediately takes the two oars, one in either hand, and begins to propel his boat. He is no stronger than the other boatmen; he has no keener eye; but with steady use of the oars both right and left, he steers his boat into the troubled waters, and steadily and successfully rides against the flowing stream and reaches his goal.

These oarsmen are Christians upon the troubled sea of life. Their oars are respectively named, Faith and Works. As in guiding the boat upon the waters, so in guiding one's life through its Christian course, both oars must be used. When one uses Works alone, the craft goes round and round, and is at the mercy of every wind and tide. Reversely, to use Faith alone, the craft of life likewise moves in a circle, for it has nothing upon the other hand to strengthen life. But the Christian, who uses both Faith and Works, who by works makes his faith complete, that Christian safely outrides the storms of greatest terror. His faith in God leads him into implicit trust. His works, which are in harmony, indicate and testify that faith. The God of heaven tempers the wind, strengthens the stroke, calms the waters; or, according as He sees best, He adjusts conditions to bring such Christian to victory through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Faith and works.

By works is faith made perfect.

WITH THY MIGHT

By F. E. Siple

The servant of God would do well to heed the advice of Solomon with reference to doing whatever lies at hand. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."—Eccl. 9:10.

Sooner or later each one comes to the end of life's walk. All of his mental ability is used up, and physical strength is gone. No one knows just how far distant that day is, but each realizes that the day is approaching, and that every setting sun brings him one day closer.

But the grave knows no work, no device, no knowledge nor wisdom. All is done, then, and life's record complete. Hence Solomon's exhortation, whatever you find at hand to do, do it. It may seem small or unimportant, but great lives are made up of many small things. Do each one that you can, and let the sum total thus become large before the night of rest comes.

this very prediction. The language used justifies the thought, for if Paul had in mind one other than this vile person, it would seem to be incumbent upon him to make some distinction. The "latter days" undoubtedly refers to the last of the 70 weeks, during which the sanctuary (the temple) is polluted by the placing of the abomination", verse 31.

In Matt. 24, we have most explicit testimony, for there the abomination is to "stand in the holy place"; and the residents of Judea are exhorted to flee to the mountains. The great tribulation will then have come upon Israel (Daniel's people) and this leads right up to the darkening of the sun and moon which, as shown by Acts 2:20, precedes the great and notable day of the Lord. Here then, we have three great prophecies, and if one is as a light shining in a dark place, we might find by the aid of three that the light is proportionately increased.

THINGS THAT ARE REALLY WORTH WHILE IN LIFE COST A PRICE. RESULTS REALLY WORTH ATTAINING DEMAND GENUINE EFFORT AND SACRIFICE

WE HAVE never yet seen a real successful Berean class except where some one or more persons actually made real sacrifices to keep the work going. If each one sits comfortably around waiting for someone else to go ahead, nothing of note will ever be done. Someone must carry the load and lead out. Anyone who is sincere and becomes enthusiastic may do this. It is not nearly always the one who is the best Bible student who makes the best leader.

* * * *

The one who leads out in religious work must always be willing to accept criticism. People who never do anything themselves are always full of criticism for those who do try. But nevertheless, although he who tries is criticized and found fault with, still he is respected and recognized as the most valuable member of the group, even by those who pick the most flaws.

* * * *

So don't get blue and discouraged, thinking that your efforts are not appreciated. Just go right ahead in a kind, humble way, and the final results will be far more than worth your while.

* * * *

If there ought to be a Berean class in your community, and a large number of the people say, "No, it can't be done," don't give up and let it pass. Proceed in a kind way to show them that it can be done, and most of them will fall in line as the work develops. It is human nature to object and wish to be different, but success is contagious, and all like to join in when they see that something is really being done.

* * * *

UNEQUALLY YOKED WITH UNBELIEVERS

In a recent Berean class a number of questions were asked and some discussion followed on 2 Cor. 6:14-18. The expression around which most of the thought centered is, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

Oftentimes this text has been applied specifically to the marriage relationship, indicating that Paul here taught that one who believes the gospel should not marry one who does not.

Marriage, however, is in itself an equal, not an unequal relationship. That is true where there is the same degree of give and take on both sides. While we feel that in a large percent of cases it is unwise to marry out of Christ yet we know of no scripture to forbid or condemn such action where there is freedom left to carry out one's religious desires unmolested. But if the union ties one to another who is overbearing or unkind in attitude toward the truth, so that the marriage practically destroys the free action of the one in the gospel, then that is an unequal yoking, and would undoubtedly come under Paul's condemnation here.

But marriage is not the only relationship that can be considered under this head. If a Christian is connected in business relationships with one who is not a Christian in such way that the non-Christian holds the reins and can control quite largely the things that the Christian does, then that is also an unequal yoking with an unbeliever.

* * * *

Even in social matters, many times, one in order to keep in with certain persons or a group, will knuckle under and accept the dictates of others as to what ought to be done or said, thus in a way surrendering his independence of thought and action. For the Christian to do this is altogether wrong. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." Whether it be in marriage, in business, or in social affairs, the true Christian should never yoke or bind himself so that the un-Christian has the long end of the yoke, or the controlling advantage. Keep yourself free from any alliances which would destroy your freedom of action and service for the cause of truth. This life is too short for us to allow any combinations which it may offer to destroy our great opportunity for the life to come.

"There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing: there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches,"

CHURCH ADVANCEMENT

THE CHURCH

Figuratively speaking, the Church is "the body of Christ, and members in particular", 1 Cor. 12:27. As such we are "members one of another". Rom. 12:5.

Not for the purpose of making a larger man-made organization, not for the purpose of making a greater show or more bluster in the world's kaleidoscope, but because of the fact of the position of the Church in relation to our Lord and Savior should every member of His family recognize the greatness of the position of the Church before God and His Son. Thus should every member render true and faithful service for the upbuild and maintenance of it and of its members.

Evangelize? Certainly. The proclamation of the glad news of salvation through Jesus Christ is the one requisite at all times. By it the succeeding new-born generations of man are taught the purposes of God toward man. Therefore, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 15. By this method men are "added to the church".

But is this all? Having been "added to the church" does the Christian's responsibility toward those brought into Christ end? By no means. Being then members of "the body of Christ" all should then "have the same care one for another", 1 Cor. 12:25, the same care as do the members of the human body have for each other, as explained in the preceding verses. There are the "babes in Christ", those who "are yet carnal", including those who cause "strife, and divisions" and who "walk according to man" (margin) that must be fed, if necessary, "with milk", 1 Cor. 3:1-2. These must be cared for. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6:1.

It is not sufficient then that the evangelist preach, baptize, and then that such as are newly "added to the church" be forsaken to roam for themselves. The Church, as such, has a bounden duty to give Christian attention to all such and assist them that they "may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ". This, too, seems to be one of the real objects of church advancement—to aid and protect each other from the weaknesses of the carnal in ourselves, and to aid and protect from the carnal in others.

To this end the Church has a duty always present. It should exercise constant watchcare as to the Christian interests of others. It should keep all bound together in the closest of fellowship. Each local church unit has much of duty here and needs the fullest strength that can result from the closest and fullest fellowship.

Let each local church strive to do all possible to increase its strength and constant influence. As a means to this end and in true and careful Christian effort, let every church unite, if possible, on Rally Day, Oct. 16, to advance your church by increasing its service, increasing its numbers, and increasing its spirituality.

PROPER APPORTIONMENT

New means of communication and religious edification have rapidly sprung up in these last days. This makes it better to take advantage of improved physical methods of conducting our religious labors.

It is important that all local Christians shall group themselves in churches for their own best Christian advancement. This is just as important today as it was in the days of Paul. This work should largely, all if possible, be borne by the local church.

Because of the fact that these same local churches can be of mutual benefit by banding themselves together as one in certain territories, the State Conferences have been established.

Again, because that the means of communication are as they are, it has been found that all of the churches and all of the State Conferences can best do certain phases of their work through a General Conference.

Now each of these bodies are advantageous to the individual Christian: He needs the local church for local service and uplift. He needs the State Conference as a means to gather in and strengthen the isolated ones, and to evangelize the non-christian. He needs the General Conference to administer the larger problems—publishing, Bible Training, unifying local and state work, maintaining Home advantages, etc.

All of these are alike advantageous to one and all.

It therefore seems best that some system should be perfected to best apportion each one's labor of contribution to these different working bodies. The last General Conference in session considered this matter and the following apportionment was suggested for consideration:

Of every dollar one contributes to Christian work contribute 60 cents to his local church; 20 cents to his State Conference; 10 cents to the General Conference; and 10 cents to various other calls.

Those who do not affiliate with a local church could well consider apportioning their contributions between their respective State Conference and the General Conference.

Think these things over, prayerfully, for action.

ELIJAH IN NABOTH'S VINEYARD

Devotional Reading: Psalm 04:17-23

GOLDEN TEXT

Be sure your sin will find you out. Numbers 32:23.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

God's Ways Are Not Man's Ways. It is not indicated that Naboth was of righteous or wicked character. Jezebel disregarded such questions. The fact is revealed that God was watching and at the proper moment caused "the wrath of man" to praise Him. Psa. 76:10. And lest that wrath continue over much Jehovah then showed His ready ability to cut off the doers thereof. For God called upon a man whose faith had enabled him to stand alone against 450 false prophets. He called him now to stand alone, single-handed, before the invisible God, against the powerful, treacherous, unjust king. Here again Elijah revealed personal faith, performed his task, received God's blessing, and again gave evidence that "if God be for us, who can be against us?"—Rom. 8:31. He further revealed God's ways of accomplishing His works by using even the weakness of man.

Prophecy reveals that the same principle will yet be used in bringing hard-hearted, rebellious Israel of today to a recognition, not only of God, but of God's Son, the Messiah of Israel. Although Israel shall yet be in alliance with and under the direction of a future king more wicked than Ahab and Jezebel, yet God reveals in Rev. 18 and 19 that His word will be fulfilled, the blasphemy of the monstrous beast and the treacherous deceit of the false prophet will be utterly destroyed together with all those of Israel who trust therein, and His Son will occupy the throne over the faithful of Israel.

Questions on the Subject. Does this narration illustrate how God uses ways different from man's ways to accomplish His ends? Was Ahab ruling the ten tribes for God? Did he honor God? Was Israel honoring God? Did God need armies to overthrow Ahab or Israel? F.L.A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Take note of your sin, that it will find you out." Num. 32:23. Roth.

Man generally seeks to hide his sin. He may succeed for a time, but usually it comes to light. It may be many years before sin is revealed to fellow man, but it is not hid to the Father in heaven and He will bring every secret work into judgment. When sin has found out the man others see him as God sees him. Can you think of any Bible characters who sought to hide their sin but did not succeed?—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Sin Reveals Itself. It is impossible to cover up sin permanently, because sin interferes with the harmonious working out of God's purposes. Just as impaired operation suggests a worn or broken bearing in a machine, so hesitating and reluctant service reveals the presence of sin in the life of the Christian. It is only when each separate part is working in harmony with every other part that an engine can develop its maximum power and efficiency. So again it is with the servant of God. It is only when all our talents are employed freely in God's service that we can realize the fullest possible degree of success before Him. Such complete concentration indicates harmony of thought and design with the Father. His will becomes our will, His ways, our ways.

Reproof Necessary. "Reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine", 2 Tim. 4:2. Rebuke that leads to repentance and restoration; reproof expressed through a keen appreciation of the loss the disobedient will suffer if he does not change his ways; earnest, yet tender exhortation that the sinner may be induced to seek pardon, that through pardon he may obtain life.

Punishment for Sin is Sure. Just as one chemical reacts against another, so sin reacts against the human soul. Sin changes the viewpoint, the conduct and the character of the sinner for the worse. "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death", James 1:15. Death is the logical result of sin, because it puts an end to rebellion against God.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Naboth's vineyard.

That Israel, in the person of her king, Ahab, had experienced, on Mt. Carmel, only an infinitesimal degree of conversion to the truth, "the Lord he is the God," is evidenced by Ahab's seizure of Naboth's vineyard. By this act he showed that there was in his heart lack of reverence for Israel's law, for the personal rights and independence of his subjects. Instead of these, consummate, petty selfishness, covetousness, murder, and pride were dominating his thinking, and, above all, he was under the control of influences opposed to God as they were personified in his wife. And yet, this infinitesimal degree of conversion was accepted by God as a gain to His purpose, for He removed the drought on the strength of it. How large the reward in comparison to the gain made! Why does God reward so generously a step forward so small that it is hardly discernible to human thinking? Is it not because the distance between man and God is so great that a dot of that distance is to God as miles would be to man? At least this was God's verdict when He declared His policy to abundantly pardon—"for he will abundantly pardon for my thoughts are not your thoughts for as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways."—Isa. 55:7-9.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Shall wrong be tolerated or rebuked?

In the years that have passed since the slaying of the prophets of Baal at Mount Carmel, Ahab has been given victory over his enemies and has established his nation in strength and power. But selfish greed has not been curbed, and in today's lesson Ahab has allowed his wicked wife to receive the vineyard of his desire.

The strong and scathing rebuke, which Elijah gives to Ahab as he comes to possess the vineyard, is a striking example of God's desire that sin shall be reprimanded. The man today who passes quietly by the wrongs of others with no indication of disapproval is, in reality, condoning and encouraging wrong. But in order that one be in position to rebuke wrong, one's own life must measure up to a high standard.

Which is the stronger rebuke to sin, words that one may speak, or a life of purity that he may lead?

Does complacent tolerance of wrong really make one a sharer in responsibility for it?—F. E. S.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

The Chicago church has changed its time of meeting. It will meet from 10:30 to 12:00 instead of from 11:00 to 12:30.

Services at the Salem church in Illinois over Saturday and Sunday, September 24 and 25, were well attended, the house being literally filled for the closing meeting.

Following the Salem church appointment Bro. Siple spent Monday visiting the brethren at Casey, Illinois, and that night met with them in an interesting class at Grandma Weaver's home. Sr. Bertha Partlow is much improved in health since her sojourn in the Effingham hospital.

The special meetings at Eldorado, Ill., have "started off nicely" according to report. The meetings are announced to continue over next Sunday. Those living in or nearby Eldorado will do well to hear Bro. F. E. Siple and also contribute encouragement to the work.

Bro. Elmer Goekler has located temporarily in Tucson, Arizona, with a view to improving his health. He can be addressed by his many friends at 421 South Railroad Ave.

Bro. Thos. Bates, of Kennard, Nebraska, who was injured while at his work on the railway right-of-way last February, is now in Ward 1107 of St. Luke's Hospital, 1416 Indiana Ave., Chicago. The displaced joint and the injured arm refused to mend under local home treatment. Being a stranger in a big city, a caller or a written word will be gladly welcomed.

CHICAGO—NOTICE!

Chicago church members who meet from house to house on the west side will be glad to talk with any in other parts of the city who would be interested in a get-together downtown preaching service once a month.

If enough are interested and will share in the expense, such a meeting could be held in a downtown hall centrally located.

NEWS FROM VIRGINIA

On September 15 the writer closed a very unusual series of meetings at Browntown. We were invited to speak in the Union church at that place because of the interest shown in our doctrines. Many had wanted to hear us but the extremely poor roads leading up to our mountain church prevented.

At these meetings the writer urged one and all to bring their Bibles and follow the texts as read or to copy them and search and study the same at their leisure. They responded very willingly, as most of them were anxious to arrive at truth.

We started with the gospel preached to Abraham, Gal. 3:8, and developed God's great plan of salvation and mercy. Many were astonished to find that the promises were all given through Israel and Israel's promised kingdom. They had never heard of Israel's kingdom on earth with Christ as King and His Church as co-rulers. They had believed, and been taught, that the righteous were to be recompensed in heaven and yet had prayed almost daily, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth, as it is now done in heaven." Like the Bereans of old they began to search the Scripture daily to see if these things were true.

The extreme dryness of the season had so that none was urging. It is to the temporarily ended nearly all farm work, credit of the people that many of them used their leisure to discuss and study the Scriptures. Many spent several hours daily in this search for eternal life. We were called upon many times daily to answer questions and to throw light upon misunderstood passages and doctrines.

It was indeed an inspiration to find that there were still people hungry for the word of God.

Several with years of active church work to their credit, came to us and asked: "Why don't our ministers teach the return of Israel? Why don't they tell us of the second coming of Christ, its nearness and importance? Why don't they give us scripture for everything as you do? Why don't they tell us these things when they are so important?"

Some frankly confessed that they had never heard of the second coming of Christ or of the antichrist, until we told them about them, although they had listened to ministers for years. No wonder they are questioning their ministers. What will Christ say to such negligence? We tremble to contemplate.

On September 15 two answered the call of the gospel and were immersed into the body of Christ. Those thus accepting the high and holy calling are: Mrs. Charlotte Rudacille and her daughter, Augusta, both of Browntown.

It is inspiring to see a mother take the step for Christ that will bring her eternal life and cause her to become a source of strength to those entrusted to her care. Her step gives to her children their greatest earthly treasure—a Christian mother.

Augusta, a girl of about 15 years of age, is of fine upright character. She was a student throughout our Bible School this year. She returned to her home convinced of her call to Christ, and answered that call with her mother.

We wish these two new believers in Christ the best guidance, protection and blessing that comes from God. May God bless and keep them in the faith is our prayer.

Harry A. Sheets.

Bro. Jacob Boyer has been confined to his bed for over two weeks. His doctor feels certain now that he has his complication of troubles well under control and that he soon will be up and around. Bro. Boyer states that his appetite is improving and that he generally feels much better. He has been one of the outstanding pillars of the Church of God in Virginia for many years. His loyalty makes him missed sorely now. We ask one and all to pray for his recovery. We need him!

On September 21 Miss Katherine Bauserman was united in marriage to Bro. Otis H. Ritenour, only son of Bro. and Sr. Jack Ritenour, Woodstock, Va. They left almost immediately for a trip to New York City.

Bro. Ritenour is considered, by many, to be one of the most promising young men of Shenandoah County. Sr. Ritenour, a school teacher of reputation, is known by all to be of high, sterling character. The union of these two lives will be a great power for good, as both are earnest Christian young people.

After Oct 2 they may be addressed at 1332 Belmont Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

We extend to them the best wishes of the Virginia Church of God.

A LETTER OF THANKS

Mr. F. L. Austin: Someone is sending me The Herald, for which I am very thankful, as I love to read about the coming of Christ. I could not see to read the Bible which I had because the print was so fine, but the matron of the home gave me a good one. So I spend a part of the day reading it. As I am getting old and all broken down and can not work much I try to do a little for some of the unfortunate ones here like myself; I can read the good things in the paper to some of them.

MRS. ESTELLA COFFIN

Was born to James and Mary Wells, of Raisin township, Mich., on Dec. 10, 1856, and died on August 10, 1927. She was one of seven children, of whom three preceded her in death. On Dec. 25, 1878, she was married to Mr. Dan Coffin, who died on Aug. 20, 1926. To them were born three children, Ethel, who died, Feb. 16, 1899; Mrs. Wm. Pangburn, of Adrian; and Mrs. Fred Stephens, of Deerfield, Mich.

The deceased spent her life in the township where she was born. At the age of twenty she expressed her Christian faith and became a member of the Church of God, of which church she remained a faithful member till the time of her death. Besides numerous friends, the deceased is survived by her brother, Edwin Wells, of Monessen, Penn.; two sisters, Mrs. Olive Critchell and Mrs. Belle Frank, of Atlanta, Georgia; two daughters; eighteen grandchildren; and twelve great-grandchildren. She was laid to rest in the family lot of the Raisin Center cemetery, where, according to her faith of many years, she awaits the coming of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life.

The writer attempted to comfort the bereaved ones by holding out to them the Blessed Hope of which the Scriptures are so full.

Jas. A. Patrick.

SILAS MURPHY

Silas Murphy, son of Christian and Diana Murphy, was born on Jan. 8, 1874, in Clark county, Ill., and grew to manhood in the vicinity of his birth. In March, 1902, he was united in marriage with Miss Lucille Reedy, to which union three sons: Theron, Percy and Lucian—were born. In 1906 his wife, the mother of his children, died; and on April 1, 1908, he was united ed in marriage with Miss Cora Paul.

When a youth of 16 he united with the Church of God and remained true and faithful to the Lord and His church during the remainder of his life.

He died in his home in Clarksville, Ill., Sept. 18, 1927, leaving his wife and three sons, above named, together with his mother, three sisters and two brothers, with other more distant relatives, friends and neighbors to mourn the loss of a husband, father, son, brother, friend and neighbor who lived true to the duties and responsibilities imposed by such relationships, and with a devotion seldom exercised by natural man.

For thirty years I have enjoyed the intimate acquaintance with Bro. Murphy, and he was one of the best men it has ever been my good fortune to know. He possessed a richness of Christian character which was very helpful to those who were privileged to associate with him. The church at Salem, Ill., of which he was a member, has sustained an inestimable loss in his death; the church at large has sustained a loss which can be appreciated only by those who knew him well, and the neighborhood in which he lived and transacted business for many years feels keenly the irreparable loss it has sustained.

The beautiful floral pieces and large attendance of friends and neighbors at the funeral services—there being approximately three hundred who could not be accommodated in the church building where the services were held—gave silent testimony to the esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

And while our hearts are sad as we say farewell, we thank God for the rich contribution his exemplary life and conduct has been to those with whom he associated in life, and whose sorrows and burdens he helped to bear. He sleeps in Jesus, and we labor on, hoping to meet him when the Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams.

DR. FRANK HALE HEMPHILL

Dr. Frank Hale Hemphill, son of Watt and Rebecca Hemphill, was born on Dec. 27, 1872 in Jasper county, Ind., two miles west of Rensselaer, and died at his home in Rensselaer on Sept. 13, 1927.

His father died when he was two and one-half years of age, and he spent the remainder of his boyhood at the home of his grandfather, Thomas H. Grant. He attended the grade and high schools in Rensselaer and later was graduated from the Central Medical College at St. Joseph, Mo.

On Jan. 1, 1902, he was united in marriage with Mary Etta Harris, of near Peru, Ind., to which union one son, Byron Francis, was born.

At the age of sixteen, under the pastorate of the writer, he united with the Church of God, of which he was always unstinting in his support.

Dr. Hemphill's personality, friendliness and unselfish devotion to his patients in the practice of his profession won to him a host of friends. He was greatly endeared to the Harris family, and his passing has brought to them deep sorrow.

Frank, as he was familiarly known to his intimate friends, was greatly attached to his relatives and words cannot express the depth of their devotion to him. He lived in close companionship with his three uncles—Abel, Franklin and Colfax Grant, who were always as fathers to him.

He leaves his wife, his son, and one sister, Mrs. Wm. Scott, in addition to many more distant relatives and friends to mourn his death. He was one of the most kindly men the writer has ever known.

After appropriate funeral services he was laid to rest beside his grandfather, whom he loved so well when a boy, to await the coming of our Lord.

ELIJAH IN NABOTH'S VINEYARD

DID YOU ever hear anyone say, "The more you have, the more you want"? Well, that was true of King Ahab. He had a fine palace, beautiful gardens, servants, riches; but he was not happy.

Next door to his palace in Jezreel lived a poor man named Naboth, who owned a good vineyard. Ahab could see it from his window. Every time he saw it he wished he had it, but Naboth did not want to sell it. It was his home; he loved it very much and besides, the law of God said he must not sell in this way what came to him from his father and grandfather.

Ahab went to Naboth and said, "Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for a garden of herbs, because it is near my house, and I'll give you a better one or pay you for it." But Naboth said, "No, I cannot sell my vineyard to you, even though you are the king."

The more Ahab thought about the garden, the more unhappy and displeased he became. What do you think he did? Went to bed, turned his back to everyone and refused to eat. Why you children would not be so silly, would you? And here was a man, a king, acting exactly like an overgrown, spoiled child—pouting in bed.

Soon Jezebel, Ahab's wife, came to him and said, "Why are you sad, and why do you not eat?"

Ahab replied, "Naboth will not sell his vineyard to me."

Jezebel was a bad woman, but she was not weak like Ahab. She determined upon a plan to get the garden for her husband. She said, "Are you the ruler of the kingdom of Israel or not? Arise, eat bread, and be merry: I will give you the vineyard of Naboth, the Jezreelite. Just leave it to me." And you cannot fathom how wicked her plan was!

First, she wrote and sealed letters to the elders and nobles in the city—friends of Naboth—and signed them with the King's name. This is what each letter said: "Proclaim a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people. Then set two men, sons of Belial, before him to bear witness against him saying, 'Thou didst blaspheme God and the king.' Then carry him out and stone him, that he may die." That means, that these two men were to tell lies about Naboth, for Naboth was a good man, and would not say dreadful things about God.

Accordingly, the fast was made and the two men declared these false accusations and poor Naboth was cruelly dragged out of the city and stoned until he died.

Then Jezebel told Ahab to go and take possession of the vineyard, and Ahab did take the vineyard. He knew it was a wicked thing to do but he did not care so long as he procured what he wanted. But do people really enjoy things they get in the wrong way? Not often, and not for long.

God cared for poor Naboth and God would punish Ahab and his wife. He called the prophet, Elijah, to carry His message to Ahab. He told him where Ahab lived, and that he was now in the vineyard of Naboth. And God told Elijah just what he was to say to the king.

So Elijah went to Ahab and said, "Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou killed and also taken possession? - - - In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine." That was a terrible punishment, and a most undignified death for a king or queen; but did not the king and queen deserve such punishment?

Ahab must have been frightened when he saw and heard Elijah, for he said to Elijah, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?"

Elijah replied, "I have found thee; because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord."

And so is everyone found out who sells himself to do wrong before God.

Who was Belial?

In how many ways did Jezebel and Ahab sin?

this church shall have been perfected, the Redeemer comes to Zion—to Zion the capital site of God's chosen nation. To this place, even to Jerusalem, the Lord assembles the outcasts of Israel. It is a new work. It is for that day yet future.

No work is in progress today, in this dispensation, in an effort to regather Israel from all nations. Such work pertains to God's nation, concerning which God promised Abraham, "I will make of thee a great nation." The people of that nation will be numerous as the stars of heaven are numerous; numerous as the sands upon the seashore are numerous. The work will be a lengthy one. The stony hearts of Israel must be crushed; fleshly hearts must be given them instead. It is the work of Israel's Redeemer when He shall have come.

Not only time and instruction will be requisite unto Israel, but miracles will follow. They will come to Him; they will "call upon him whom they have pierced"—"if they abide not still in unbelief".

This condition announced by Paul in Romans 11:23, is conclusive evidence that so far as God's promise is concerned it will not be enforced upon the individual. "All Israel", that is, the two tribes and the ten tribes, Judah and Israel, the whole nation, "will be saved", regathered; not necessarily all of the nation's people. The engrafting of each individual is made dependent upon his belief.

This is a second phase of God's work. On page 805 the writer endeavored to emphasize the position of the one who is baptized into Christ. In this article, reference is made to a different people destined to a different position in God's plans. Both of these people are included in God's promises to Abraham. While they are separate and distinct from each other in position, yet they are related to each other very closely. The fulfillment to one class is equally certain as is the fulfillment to the other. It requires both to complete God's plan. Christ, the Head of the church is also the King of the nation.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

By George Johnston

Part 13

DANIEL'S VISION OF THE FOUR GREAT BEASTS Daniel 7

AFTER THIS I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it had ten horns." This beast could not be named by the prophet, though in Rev. it is called the 'dragon'. It was the Roman empire, which included within its bounds the territories of all the others, and therefore to Daniel's eyes it must have appeared as part lion, part bear, part leopard, and part dragon. It will therefore be seen how strange and terrible it must have appeared to the prophet, and there is no beast in existence to which he could liken it. In Rev. 13:1, we have a description of the three earlier empires joined in one body—the Byzantine empire—and that beast is also unnamed. The beast of Daniel's vision was 'strong exceedingly', and what empire has ever equalled the Roman in strength and extent? It had 'great iron teeth' to denote that what it grasped was firmly held; and by 'the feet of it' were indicated the Roman armies, which not only supported the empire, but trampled down every power within its bounds.

This beast and the horns which arose out of it absorbed the attention of the prophet, so turning to the angel who stood by he enquired concerning these things.

"So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings which shall rise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever."

"Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in peices, and stamped the residue with his feet; and of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows. I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom. Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings."

In his opening statements the angel gave a brief summary of the whole vision, but Daniel was desirous of obtaining full information concerning the fourth great beast and the horns on its head, more particularly that which came up last, and before which three of the others were subdued. This information was not given to the prophet to gratify his own curiosity, but for the strengthening of the faith of those who in the course of time would be persecuted by the beast, and by the stout horn which grew out of it.

As already stated, this great beast symbolized the Roman empire, and this point being fully grasped it becomes an easy matter to locate the exact period of time when the ten horns or kingdoms arose, and to identify the horn before which three of the others were plucked up. It will readily be perceived that so long as the Roman empire retained its full power no independent kingdoms could be erected within its bounds; and therefore it is the history of the period of its decline that must be examined in order to ascertain what kingdoms were represented by the various horns.

For many years before the fall of the Western Roman empire members of German tribes from Northern Europe had been flocking into it, and it was by them that it was brought to ruin. When Theodoric the Great destroyed the kingdom of the Herulians in Italy (A. D. 493) almost the whole of Western Europe was in the hands of German tribes which had erected kingdoms of their own therein. Some of these kingdoms lasted but a short time, but the following is probably an accurate summary of those represented by the ten horns: (1) The Allemanni in Alsace; (2) the Alans in Galicia; (3) the Angles in Britain; (4) the Burgundians in Burgundy; (5) the Franks in Northern Gaul; (6) the Ostrogoths in Italy; (7) the Saxons in Britain; (8) the Sueves in Spain; (9) the Vandals in Northern Africa; (10) the Visigoths in Southern Gaul. The eleventh horn before which three of these fell was the Papal in Rome which in course of time grew into the Holy Roman empire; and the kingdoms which blocked the rise of this empire, and which, consequently, it was necessary to remove, were the Burgundian, the Visigothic, and the Ostrogothic.

"And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion . . . and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

The steps which led the rise of the Holy Roman empire, its actions while it was endowed with power, and the person by whom, and the means by which it was to be overthrown, are fully foretold in Dan. 11, and shall be explained in due course.

The will of God is not always something burdensome which we have to bear; it is something glorious which we have to do.

anybody. I simply haven't time to be pleasant to everybody." And this reminds me of a story of the "tenderfoot" and the cowboy, who sat together at dinner one day. The tenderfoot had noticed with great awe the very poor etiquette of the cowboy. Finally the westerner noticed the easterner looking at him, and with a large morsel of food on the end of his knife remarked, "Say, stranger, I want you to know that I got manners, but hain't got time to use 'em."

That is just the trouble with all of us. We don't allow ourselves time to be what we really are. But suppose that God suddenly becomes too busy to send us His love and sunshine and rain; what would happen? Our plant life would dry up and nothing would grow and soon we would wither and die for want of sunshine and food. Our race and all others would in a short time become extinct.

Ah, but a great God like ours does not do such things. He gives us all things necessary to life and much more, even if we revile Him, scoff at Him, take His name in vain and disobey His commandments. And which commandment did Jesus say was the greatest? "Love thy neighbor as thyself." If we are not careful we are going to bring about our own destruction and wreck a wonderful world for LACK OF LOVE.

Prohibition was and is a fine thing for the country, especially for the younger generation, but has it really been a success? While traveling through the South not long ago, I stayed over night in a very fashionable hotel in a large city. It was almost impossible to sleep because of the occupants of the next rooms. They were all men and disgustingly drunk. The next morning very early, I met the night clerk in the office and asked him why such things were permitted. He smiled and said, "I am very sorry that you were disturbed but we were very busy on the next floor trying to keep them quiet. You see they are all men of high standing and regular customers, and if we turned them out they would be arrested and we would lose their patronage."

If a man really loves his neighbor he will not give him poison to drink nor will he harbor him when he is deliberately breaking the laws of the country. Therefore prohibition will never be a success until our love for humanity becomes so great that officers of the law and every other person fully realizes his or her duty to mankind.

Knowledge has increased by leaps and bounds, but immorality has increased too and there is absolutely no remedy for a sin-sick world but pure love. Laws of a high order will never be successful until they are properly enforced by God-fearing and humanity-loving people.

I once knew a woman who had not learned the secret of love in the home. It seemed that the evil one had taken possession for good and soon the woman was forced to go to a man of the law for aid. A divorce seemed inevitable, but somehow the woman began to study and put into practice the law of love, when everything else had failed.

There was no divorce and the woman has since told me that the man of the law hoped her love would win. I know the woman and it has succeeded.

"Husbands love your wives, even as your own bodies." Wives love your husbands also. Women have come forward in the last few years and have done great things for the country, but in so doing have they done great things for the home? Marriage and a career simply will not mix. It must be one or the other and the decision should come before the slender band of gold is placed upon the finger. Many things may be done from the home, but the home and children should come first.

Wives must see that the home is clean and comfortable, a real place of refuge from the world and its many trials. Then the husbands must do their part; take ten or fifteen minutes a day to get acquainted with your children (I speak of children because no home is complete without one or two shining little faces). Play with them, get down to the level of childhood and see what great fun it is and how it will add years to your lives.

Somehow the memories of home and childhood are indelibly stamped upon the brain and never forgotten. Statistics from our juvenile courts prove that the home life has the greatest influence upon the lives of our children, for good or for evil.

And husbands, do not force your wives to continually ask you for money. It is as much theirs as yours, so give them an allowance. It is embarrassing to a wife to have to ask for every necessity, especially to those wives who earned money before marriage.

A little story is told of an old negro who consulted the parson about his family troubles. He was so annoyed with his wife asking him for money. Every time he would step into the house, it would be a quarter for this and a dollar for that and he was tired of it. "Well," said the parson, "what does your wife do with all this money?"

"Lo'd bless you," said the negro, "I dunno what dat woman done do wif all ob it, I hain't give 'er none yet!"

God is love and when we take love into our homes and into our business and into our lives, we are taking God. A house built upon the sand (hate and discord) will not stand. But a home built upon the rock (God is love) will stand forever.

FOR MORE THAN A DAY

NOT JUST a day on which to get an especially increased attendance—although this in itself is commendable—but a day toward which every member shall have been doing his best in increased activity of thought and labor to interest others to attend and work in Sunday School, Church, and Berean Society: this is one of the big features of Rally Day.

There is no way for one to so advance his own Christian growth as to render real enthusiastic service to others. A Rally Day labor that will enlist the present members to full service is a Rally Day indeed.

Let us all rally to the service of Christ.

JERUSALEM'S WOE

EARTHQUAKES are of more or less frequency in Palestine. Owing to its turbulent history for 2,000 years greater attention was paid to wars and invasions than to recording facts about these convulsions of nature.

One of the greatest earthquakes, which is recorded by Josephus, the Jewish historian, was that which occurred during the reign of King Uzziah.

According to sacred chroniclers this convulsion was one of the punishments visited on the King for his sacrilegious invasion of the Temple, where he declared that he, instead of the Temple priests of Israel, would vaingloriously offer sacrifice.

He was instantly stricken with leprosy and died a leper.

The Mount of Olives was split into two parts by the convulsion which followed.

The most celebrated earthquake of all history, because of other and accompanying physical phenomena, was that which occurred in Jerusalem at the time of the Crucifixion of Christ. No earthquake story has ever been so widely disseminated as that one.

The cataclysm of July last was from every account the greatest earthquake of modern times in Palestine or Western Transjordan.

The suffering town and village people who have been compelled to desert their homes for the campagna, or open country, will experience little or no hardship beyond lack of food possibly, until the November rains and frosts set in.

Judge Khadder, who is the author of a little work published in this country, very charmingly describes this outdoor life in Palestine, as it relates to the shepherd folk:

"During the summer months man and beast may live in the open air; and do thus live. None would willingly be in a house or town who could live in a tent or vineyard, and there enjoy the absolute freedom and repose of nature.

"The shepherds more than all others live in the open air. They are always about on the hills in summer, and in the valleys in winter, excepting when snow and frost drive them to seek shelter for their cattle.

"Shepherds generally go barefoot over the rough, sharp rocks and thistles. Generally speaking there is a great difference between the Palestine shepherd and the Bedouin shepherd. The Bedouin shepherd of Transjordan carries more arms; a gun, a pistol, dagger, and club, as they are more exposed to danger owing to the frequent Bedouin incursions.

"A Bedouin shepherd can live for three days on a small piece of bread and dried buttermilk. They are more interested in their sheep and take great pains to choose the best pasture ground.

"From early morn they wander from mountain to mountain till toward noon when the heat becomes too excessive; they then guide their flock down to some spring.

"Here the lads sit and converse, for the spring is a great meeting place for them.

"When the time comes for the flocks to graze, each shepherd calls six or seven of his sheep by name and all the others follow, every shepherd taking a different course for his flock.

The most extraordinary thing is that no sheep goes wrong but that each follows his own shepherd."

(of death) cometh, when no man CAN WORK". Still further proof against the view of our contributor: If his view is correct that Dives and Lazarus are personal realities in another sphere of life, then it is equally true that they have never been seen by human eyes or touched by human hand. So evident is this that Rev. R. A. Torrey adopts it as an argument in his published works, and he definitely says, "I do not see you, and you do not see me." The Bible assures us that "whoso getteth a wife, getteth a good thing, and shall obtain favour of the Lord". The question is a fair one. Is it so if our friend has never seen his wife?

The reference of our brother to the resurrection is not unnatural. To answer it fully would take more space than can be taken here, and a bare limit must suffice for the present. Scripture, so far as the writer is aware, nowhere recognizes individuality of either plant, animal or man apart from bodily organization, and it is by the individual organism which God "giveth" to each seed (including man) that every species is distinguished and recognized from the other. Nearly everywhere in Scripture, in both Old and New Testaments, the first death is spoken of as "sleep", both in the case of the righteous and the wicked. Such a term could not apply to Mr. Johnston's understanding of this parable, for the rich man, according to him, is not sleeping—far from it. It is a remarkable coincidence, to say the least, that science speaks of "dormant life". All the individuality of the oak is in the acorn, but if it be denied the circumstances necessary to its becoming the oak, it perishes and dies, and the oak dies with it. There is promise of resurrection from the first death, but from the "second", none. Nor is the second death ever called a sleep. Some will experience the second death. Of them it is stated, "They shall not rise: they are extinct, they are quenched as tow."—Isa. 43:17.

If the findings herewith are not sufficient to convince our friend, more will be cheerfully forthcoming. Mr. Johnston's position raises many problems. Are the race characteristics still maintained in the Hades of his conception, and are the various languages in use there? These and a host of other questions are both reasonable and relative to the subject. Take the Bible view that "the dead know not anything", and most of our difficulties vanish.

This is submitted with every earnest desire for true Bible teaching.

BE STRONG IN THE LORD

THEREFORE I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong." 2 Cor. 12:10.

In this text of joyful emotion the great apostle gives vent to his feelings after a superhuman experience.

What a zealous, honest, promising young man Saul was! His autobiography: "I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day. And I persecuted this way unto death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women." Acts 22:3,4.

And, "As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison." Acts 8:3.

Paul's description of Israel is a reflection of his former self—the zealous "young man"—Saul (Acts 7:58): "For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. For He is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10:2-4.

Saul was human; and being "perfect in the law of the fathers", his phrenological protuberance of vanity no doubt was quite conspicuous. In this crude (natural) state God could not use him in teaching the grace of God:

unmerited love and favor of God in Christ. Hence, his miraculous experience which leads up to the text, e.g., "It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven (millennium, S. E.H.). And I knew such a man, . . . how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for man to utter. Of such an one will I glory: yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me. And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness.

Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." 2 Cor. 12:1-9. Paul had reached the point of determination to know nothing among the brethren save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified—1 Cor. 2:1-3. There are some things God cannot do. He can't make use of the arrogant ostentatious spirit, which is fertile soil for the enemy.

In selecting a man to deliver His chosen people, Israel,

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING

EFFECTIVE prayer to God cannot be practiced without building the character of the individual as well as being a means of temporal blessing. One may not receive from God affirmative answer to his prayer, but he cannot be truly, heartedly devoted to God in prayer without benefiting, enriching his own being by his communion with God.

Prayer builds. It not only enriches to the extent of the blessing directly derived, but it builds the individual God-ward.

It is one of God's unwritten laws. It is for man's good. "Pray without ceasing."

FIDELITY TOWARD GOD

It is edifying to note the open, positive stand which some are taking with reference to the waves of infidelity that are being rolled across the land.

The Herald is in receipt of a compilation of clippings selected by Bro. Glenn M. Birkey. Most of these have appeared previously in The Herald, therefore the omission of them at this time. But encouragement is derived from observation of the names of the authorities who have taken open stand in this problem.

In the June issue of The World's Work, a magazine of the highest class, will be found an investigation of this movement as it is related to the colleges and schools of the land. The California Voice, Messiah's Advocate, and other periodicals are openly challenging the efforts of atheism to disabuse the mind of the young of its faith in God.

Hon. P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner of Education, is quoted as having said, "The day will come when the Bible will be read in the public schools just as any other book. There is no good reason why the Bible should not have its rightful place in our school curriculum."

It is well to note that in this day when Russian infidelity is reaching into the nooks and crannies of the universe, that sober, sane, conservative characters are standing staunchly for God and His work.

Ridicule, the Weak Man's Battle Axe

There is a large percentage of men who do not hesitate to stoop to the use of ridicule as a means of carrying their point. Human nature shrinks and quivers at the finger of ridicule more quickly than it sometimes yields to reason and sane thinking. Neither youth nor old age should confuse the ridicule and blasphemy of the opponents of fidelity to God with logic and evidence.

"God's Black Sheep", "The Damned Souls", "The Devils Angels", "The Circle of the Godless", such infamous blasphemies, the titles with which different groups have dubbed themselves, are either ridicule in its most detestable form or else they are intentional blasphemies against God Himself. None can disparage the overpowering influence that engagement in such mockery must have upon the individual thus engaging.

Prophetic

On the other hand, is not this condition just what Gods prophetic word of long ago retains still upon its inspired pages? Read Rev. 13:8 in connection with verse 5. Of a yet future king it is prophesied, "there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; . . . and all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Again, Rev. 9:20 announces a certain worship of "devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood." These last can be indulged in only by those who have come to irreverently and blasphemously disregard the God of Heaven.

These are the very conditions that are repeatedly announced in the Bible as characteristic of the closing days of the present Gentile times.

HAMMERING HOME

The older we grow the more need we see for "hammering home" the great gospel truth of Conditional Immortality. We, as a denomination, have stood for many fundamental truths, only to see them absorbed by orthodox denominations, until one alone marks us as a distinctive people. That one is conditional—as opposed to inherent—immortality. This is a fundamental doctrine. A doctrine that gives lucidity to the Bible and solves many of its problems. A doctrine that destroys Platonic theory and honors God as the giver of eternal life through His Son Jesus Christ. A doctrine that is clear cut and distinctive. A doctrine that relates to and harmonizes such kindred doctrines as the "second coming of Christ", "the resurrection of the dead", the "abolishment of eternal torment in hell fire", the "punishment of the wicked and reward of the saints", the "justice and love of God", etc. This truth should be "hammered home". Not in anger but in love. Let the Christian and secular world know where we stand. We believe this message should ring true in every heart, and be the key note in every church in the denomination.

THE GREAT RALLY DAY

By E. Cedric Pope

1 Thess. 4:17

IT IS very nice to set aside a day out of every year for the purpose of reuniting the people who have at some time served in or enjoyed living in the church community. We must not forget, however, that just reuniting on that one day does not fulfill our obligations to our Father for the whole year. Neither must we feel that the reunion is altogether a matter of meeting fellow acquaintances, for Christ and the Father will be there asking us to re-dedicate our lives to their service.

When thinking of Rally Day my mind is carried back to the many political rallies of history. What enthusiasm was shown in them! How convinced the people were of their cause! Freedom was proclaimed in every direction. Preachers made it their main topic; it was hoisted on flags to the tops of buildings; it was the theme of discussion on tongue and in editorial.

Today we have an even greater reason for sending forth that great word, for we who were at one time subject to the law of sin and death, are now made free by Christ. We are released, even as this country was released from British law after the war of Independence. Even as the Children of Israel were released by Jehovah during the Babylonian captivity and were permitted to return to their favorite city, so Christ has released us and permitted us to gather together.

It was not an easy task for those people to return to their city. Many of them must have given their lives in the attempt. Suffering and hardship must have been the lot of those who finally gathered back to their city, which was in ruins, only to be tormented by the heathen around about. It was not until Nehemiah, with letters from Artaxerxes, (after many trials) rebuilt the walls that the people realized the benefit of their return.

Soon there is to be a Rally Day such as the world has never known, for Christ will call His faithful ones to meet Him. It may cost us much sorrow, trouble, and pain; even as it did those Israelites of old. It may cost you even your life as a sacrifice, and you may feel that you have suffered over-long. But what a glorious thing it will be for you, clothed with immortality, to be present at Christ's great Rally!

IT IS PAST ELEVEN O'CLOCK

On that great November morning in Europe, in 1918, fighting stopped at ELEVEN o'clock, on the ELEVENTH day of the month, on the ELEVENTH month of the year, at the end of the ELEVENTH month when Gen. Allenby had entered Jerusalem on foot, the ELEVENTH day of December, 1917, and on the ELEVENTH day from the signing of the Armistice with Turkey. Here are Six elevens! Yes, and this eleven is strikingly fitting of THIS fact: We are in the eleventh hour of the world's history, and that hour has ALL gone by! Praise God!—Selected.

DANGER SIGNS FOR OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

In connection with an editorial in The Herald of September thirteenth, entitled, "School Again", which I consider very much to the point and much said in few words, I beg to call attention to a very dangerous condition that seems to be entering our schools and institutions of higher learning throughout the United States. I do not expect that the church can stem the tide of infidelism that pervades, but that we as Christian parents who have children in these schools can be on our guard and do all we can to influence against this teaching. Many readers of The Herald have young people in high schools, colleges, universities and it is to these that I present the following selections for their attention.—Glenn M. Birkey.

ATHEISM IN HIGH SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

A Situation of Profound Concern to the Home, the Church and the State

WE ARE featuring a subject, the importance of which reaches to the very foundation of our civic life; a subject that is fundamental, and all-embracing in its relation to civil government, social ethics, moral character and religious principles. We shall preface the article with a quotation from the Hon. P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education. He said, "The day will come when the Bible will be read in the public schools just as any other book. There is no good reason why the Bible should not have its rightful place in our school curriculum."

At the annual convention (1902) of the National Education Association, or State Teachers' Association of the United States, with 10,000 teachers in attendance, the following was adopted as part of its declaration of principles: "It is apparent that familiarity with the English Bible as a masterpiece of literature is rapidly decreasing among the pupils in our schools. This is the direct result of a conception which regards the Bible as a theological book merely, and thereby leads to its exclusion from the schools of some states as a subject of reading and study. We hope for such a change of public sentiment in this regard as will permit and encourage the reading and study of the English Bible, as a literary work of the highest and purest style, side by side with the poetry and prose which it has inspired and, in large part, formed. We do not urge this in the interests of sectarian instruction of any kind, but that this great Book may ever be the teacher's aid in the interpretation of history, of literature, law, and life—an unrivaled agency in the development of true citizenship, as well as in the formation of pure literary style."

Now, we want every reader of The California Voice to read, and study carefully and prayerfully what follows, for the condensed presentation of which we are indebted to Christian Standard of recent date. In this paper Edwin R. Errett, speaking of the American Association of Atheism, says, The atheistic association is not only thoroughly alive with a full staff of officers and a program, but its officers are excitedly happy at the success they are having in establishing groups of atheists in colleges all over the land, even in the high schools.

The World's Work has been conducting an investigation of this association's work, and the June number of that magazine reveals some startling facts concerning the growing power of the organization. The article is entitled, "Atheism Rampant in Our Schools", and the facts presented fully justify the title.

The Society of the Godless

When two boys, . . . refused to listen to the reading of the Bible in New York City high schools, there was revealed the existence of an organization among high school students called "The Society of the Godless", boasting of the fact that in three months it had attained a membership of 125 among the high school students of that city.

Not only so, but this New York organization is but part of a national organization known as the Junior Atheistic League, fostered by the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism for the purpose of promoting atheism among the high school and college students of America.

In Philadelphia the high school students are organized under the name, "God's Black Sheep". In Rochester the title is, "The Damned Souls". In Los Angeles the local name of the league is, "The Devil's Angels". The group in the University of Wisconsin calls itself, "The Circle of the Godless". In the University of North Dakota they style themselves, "The Legion of the Damned", and give their local commander the title, "His Satanic Majesty".

The Gospel of the Atheists

It must not be supposed that the leaders are a half-despairing lot of cynics with a thoroughly negative program and on the verge of committing suicide. They are declared to be enthusiasts, believing themselves possessed of a real mission to free the high school and college youth from slavery to religious leadership.

The fact is, these are the only thoroughly consistent modernists, having rid themselves of the embarrassing confusion that results from the foolish effort to try to harmonize Christianity and modernism. For this reason they strike out with freedom and enthusiasm. They have the zeal of apostles. They are eager to be martyrs. They have a "cause". Its outstanding plea is liberty. They have a gospel of their own—the gospel of the human ego. They have, therefore, something so positive and challenging as to capture young people who are disposed to be unhappy with doubts and cynical toward the old order.

The beliefs which the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism (coming to be known popularly as the Four A's) is instilling into these high school and college youth, are summarized as follows:

There is no God.

The idea of the virgin birth is laughable.

There is no heaven and no hell.

Religion is worship of the supernatural and should be abolished.

The church is a dangerous institution.

THE PARABLES OF SAFED THE SAGE

THE PARABLE OF THE SINS I HAVE SAVED

There came unto me a man who desired my Advice, and he did not come Any Too Soon. And I said unto him, Thou hast acted Unwisely.

And he said, I am afraid that what thou sayest is true.
Tell me wherein my Fault Lieth. And I told him the best
I could.

And he said, I verily believe thou art right. I will amend my ways.

Then we talked of other things, and he spake as one who was free from Care. And when he had left me, he seemed Happy.

And I got to thinking it over, and I said, I did not Rub
It in enough, I should have been More Severe.

And I sate down and wrote him an Epistle, and said unto him, Forget not that thou hast much whereof to Repent, and I told him again Two or Three things.

Now I had other letters to Mail, and it chanced when I picked them up that I overlooked that one. And I returned to mine home, and saw it still unmailed. And I said,
Let me look again at that Letter.

And when I read it over, I said, How will that sound when he readeth it, and peradventure handeth it across the Table to his wife?

And I said, Verily, it was of the Lord and not mine own wisdom that this Letter had not gone out in the Mail.

And I tore it across and then again across, and threw it into the Fire.

And I said, I have rarely repented a harsh word that I left unspoken or a harsh letter that I did not mail.

And when I next met that man, he said unto me, I thank thee for what thou didst say, and I thank thee yet more for what thou mightest have said that would have been true, but which I was in the Mood to Resent. And because thou wast kind to me and hurt me no more than was Necessary, behold I have resolved to be a Better Man.

And I went unto my home, and I said, O my God, I have much to thank Thee for, but just now I thank Thee for the times when I stopped just short of Making a Fool of Myself. For surely it is no Credit to me that having done that man a Good Turn I did not Ruin it all by Overdoing it.

THE KING OF MY HEART IS JESUS

*King of my heart is Jesus!
Resting beneath His wings
Oh, how my soul is raptured—
Oh, how my glad heart sings!
Visions of wondrous glory,
Heaven's own portals rare
Open before my vision,
While He is reigning there.*

*King of my heart is Jesus!
All I have giv'n to Him—
Beautiful consecration,
Never to dull or dim.
Brighter doth grow the pathway
Marked by obedience true—
King of my heart, Lord Jesus,
Help me Thy will to do.*

*King of my heart is Jesus!
How He hath drawn me near—
How He hath satisfied me,
Deep is our union dear.
For He is walking by me,
Holding my hand each day;
Now He doth sanctify me
Reigning within alway.*

*King of my heart is Jesus!
Once there was struggle keen,
But I have given Him entrance
And He doth reign within.
What can I keep from Jesus,
What could I wish to hold,
When He hath smiled upon me,
With radiance all untold?*

*King of my heart is Jesus!
Whispering sweet and clear,
Thrilling my very being
That He is drawing near;
Love secrets of our union
When He shall take His own.
Raptured with Him forever
Reigning with Him as one.*

*King of my heart is Jesus!
Yes, and will ever be,
For I have chosen Him only
Now and eternally.
How shall I tell His sweetness—
How can these poor lips show!
King of my heart is Jesus!
I would have everyone know.*

CLOSING DAYS

By Lottie E. Young

THE fourth chapter of second Timothy records the last known words of the Apostle Paul, and as written in the evening of his life. There are many different kinds of evenings. Some are calm, some are stormy, some bright with the hope of a fine day on the morrow, others in which thunder and lightning prevail. So it is with the latter part of the lives of people. And Paul's last hours were of a stormy nature. We see him in this chapter writing a farewell message to his dearly beloved disciple, Timothy. A greater miracle was never wrought than the change in this one-time proud Pharisee to the humble servant of the Lord Jesus Christ as we know him. After his strenuous life for the Master, one wishes he might have had a peaceful death-bed, but such was not to be the case.

Paul says in Acts 20:24, "But I hold not my life of any account as dear unto myself, so that I may accomplish my course, and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God". It was this devotion to the Great Example that clouded his last hours. In the first place, he saw a great falling away of those who had professed faith in Jesus Christ. He warned Timothy of the time when "itching ears" and "teachers after their own lusts" will be manifest, even in the body of Christ.

When one thinks of all Paul endured, as shown in 2 Cor. 11:23-26, during his missionary journeys to tell others of the Lord he was serving faithfully (and perhaps his greatest care was the daily anxiety he felt for the various churches he had founded), this knowledge of the falling away which would come, must have been a sore trial and a dark cloud to his peace of mind.

Then in 2 Tim. 4:10 and 14, another cloud is shown,—the desertion of those who had been friends—"Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world," and "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil." Everyone knows how sad is the loss of the friendship of those on whom we have depended. Paul, in his Roman prison awaiting the tragic death which he knew would befall him, could say, "Only Luke is with me", while on the occasion of his first trial before the cruel emperor, Nero, he sadly said, "No one took my part, but all forsook me". So he was anxious to see his beloved "son", Timothy. We all realize the comfort that is to be found in the presence of a friend in the time of trial, but this greatest of converts to Christianity stood alone in his last hours, even as his Master had done when those dearest to His heart forsook Him and fled.

I have stood in the Mamertine prison in Rome, where it is said Paul was confined, and shivered in the heat of summer in the dark and damp old room where the Apostle to the Gentiles spent his last days. I can imagine how he longed for the "cloak I left at Troas" for needed warmth. Perhaps, though, for a man of Paul's scholarly attainments, he wished for his books, and especially the parchments from which he had suddenly and rudely been torn when the order for his arrest had been carried out, and so wanted Timothy to be sure and bring them to solace his long hours of idleness in the dungeon cell.

Truly, there were many shadows in the closing days of this noble man, but there were also lights which a king might envy. Paul could say, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." He was familiar with the Roman games, and he knew that it was not until all the conquerors had completed their tasks that the rewards were given out. So he did not expect the crown of immortality to be given to him before it was to all those who have looked for the appearing of the Lord. And even though all earthly friends had forsaken him, he could say, "The Lord stood by me and strengthened me." And I am sure he realized the blessed truth of the words, "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

We, in these days, cannot comprehend the meaning of the bitter persecutions the early followers of Jesus Christ had to suffer. The mercy of God might send them to be burned at the stake, or devoured by hungry lions; it was still His mercy if it but kept them "unspotted from the world." The Apostle James could say, "Count it all joy when you fall into manifold trials," but the thought now-a-days is, "Safety first", and "Look out for Number One", rather than the injunction of Paul to Timothy to "endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." We are in the testing time now, and may each one of us be able to say, as Paul did in the first part of this letter to Timothy: "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him", and then his closing words: "The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

FREEDOM

By C. E. Randall

IF THE SON therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." John 8:36.

How does Christ make us free? "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." John 8:32.

People are not seeking this freedom during the present, but are heaping to themselves teachers having itching ears, and are turning away their ears from the truth and are being turned unto fables and doctrines of men. 2 Tim. 4:14.

Because they will not receive the love of the truth, that they might be saved, God is sending them a strong delusion that they should believe a lie. 2 Thess. 2:10, 11.

Many otherwise honest people are believing a lie because they haven't any love in their hearts for the truth.

ILLINOIS SELF-DENIAL MONTH

The Illinois Bereans have set aside this month of October as self-denial month. If actually observed in the proper way there would be immeasurable benefit received by all concerned.

The proceeds from this are sent in to the State Berean treasurer, and then are used in works of kindness, charity, and uplift, a large percent usually being turned over to the Relief Committee.

Isolated Bereans may send theirs in directly at the close of the month, and where there are societies the different ones put theirs together and have the treasurer send it in to the state treasurer.

In practice we have observed that it often works that a person pays little heed to the matter till the latter part of the month, and then writes a check or mails a bill to the Treasurer. So far as the poor to whom this is then turned are concerned this may do some good, but just think of the blessing that is lost!

In reality it should be that for this one month out of twelve the Berean would actually deny himself of luxuries, and keep an accurate account of exactly how much was saved in each case. If you live in town and are in the habit of stopping at an ice cream parlor a certain number of times per week, just lay aside the amount you would have spent each time, but don't go in for this one month. If you occasionally go to a show or entertainment, stay away these four weeks, but add the ticket cost to your self-denial fund. If you smoke cigarettes you may think it does not cost much, but why not leave them alone four weeks and carefully lay by the dimes you would have spent? And those pleasure drives you make with the car,—leave them off for this one month. Don't drive the car during October except for business or where actually necessary. By doing these things and making it in fact as well as in name self-denial month we will all benefit. We who deny ourselves for a short time of luxuries which less fortunate ones have to go without always will thus be more able to see things from their standpoint and appreciate our own position in life more. Furthermore, there is more joy as a result of real sacrifice than one can receive in any other walk in life.

If we will make it a real, genuine period of self-denial, we who refrain from luxuries and make some real sacrifices of things we like and want very much will receive more blessing and benefit even than those poor and unfortunate ones to whom the money will go.

Let's try it once—will you?—all the rest of this month, and let's be honest in determining what things are luxuries and leaving them off.

* * * *

So far as we know Illinois is the only state Berean Society which has ever tried this self-denial plan. Does it appeal to the rest of you? If so, why not try it in your state or locality. But if you plan to start it insist that the game be played fairly. Don't call it self-denial month, and continue to live the same that month as all others and mail in a certain amount at the close of the period. Get the full benefit by actually denying.

* * * *

The proverb given at the head of this page is one which will bear a great deal of consideration. Especially is it valuable to young people. If a boy, with all the fields of opportunity stretching on before him, can come to realize the full extent to which one is judged by the associations he keeps, and will then choose friends and associates of the standing in which he himself wishes to be considered, that boy's success is assured.

And there is real reason for this. It is not unjust to judge a person by his associates, for one is bound to acquire the ways and habits and thoughts of those with whom he associates.

"He that walketh with wise men shall be wise." Yes, if your companions use good judgment, are thoughtful and considerate, and have good habits, then you also will be of that same nature. "But a companion of fools shall be destroyed." Many a boy who had the best of parents and home opportunity has fallen in with wild, reckless companions and as a result has gone the downward road to dishonor and disgrace, all his bright opportunities fading away. It is a sad thing to see a young person sell his future for such a poor price. But the truth of the proverb stands, and the "companion of fools shall be destroyed,"

CHURCH

THE writer's thoughts have been aroused in two directions in late months. One is that the people of the Church of God fail to value the church as the writer feels that God regards it. The other is that some may think that the writer is regarding the church as a man-made organization. The writer's thoughts are far from this last suggestion.

A church, functioning and growing merely as a social center or as a moral force, is of little true value in the advancement of Christ's labors of this age. The church proper is God's own people organized for Bible research and Christian living. It is a definite, positive work. The apostles frequently refer to it as God's church. Paul assured the elders of Ephesus that they were made the overseers of the church in their community. Everything indicates that the church is the one select and chosen body of people being gathered out of this age for Christ. This being true, no one can overestimate the church in her duty of service, devotion, contribution; in her general activity of service toward Christ.

Every group of individuals must of necessity have a leader in order to maintain it in a healthful group condition. True, Christ is the Chief Shepherd. 1 Peter 5:4. During His absence, however, human elders and leaders are exhorted to exercise under Christ the work of shepherds, namely, "feed the flock of God which is among you taking the oversight . . ." 1 Peter 5:2.

Leadership, oversight with a view to provide, strengthen, maintain, is here definitely taught. Let us learn to regard the Church more nearly in its true position.

RALLY DAY

EMBARASSING as it is to confess, it is nevertheless a fact that practically all people, including Christians, fail at times from maintaining their high ideals. It is necessary to the good of all such that there come frequent experiences to prompt individuals to rally their strength and devotion toward the realization of those ideals. This is especially true of Christians and Christianity. The carnality of man, over and over again tends to cause him to err from true spiritual devotion toward God.

Let us make next Sunday, October 16, a day in which we shall truly "provoke one another unto love and good works"; a day in which we may really, grow up into Christ our living Head; a day in which we may become more deeply, more thoroughly "rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith."

In addition to rallying the Christian strength of those who are already consecrated unto Him, let us make Rally Day one in which many others may be brought into our Sunday School relationship, into our Berean services, into our Church services; a day in which many may be brought into consecration to Christ.

PLEASE! PLEASE! PLEASE!

WILL everyone making October sixteenth a Rally Day please send the The Herald a report of the work? Please do, so at once, telling how the effort affected the local work, and why.

EVANGELIZATION

EVANGELIZATION is going forward at all times of the year. Especially is the fall of the year opportune for this work in many communities. There are numerous places where there are one or more members of the Church of God living, in which places there is no public voice in declaration of Bible truths as the Church of God understands them. These words are written in hope that someone may be encouraged to undertake an evangelistic labor in cooperation with some who are living isolated from those who have like understanding of God's great words of truth.

In establishing a work in the vicinity of, and in connection with those already believing, the evangelist is not only carrying the good news to some who may not have heard, but he is providing fellowship and strength to some who are already established in the faith. The result of such labor tends more strongly toward building church activity and service to Christ than as though the work is placed in some entirely new place and the people then left without any cooperative support by those who have been longer in the faith.

Is it not well for the evangelist to carefully consider the territory in which his labors shall be cast?

* * * *

WHAT ARE the state Evangelists and the Presidents of the state conferences doing toward organizing every small body of believers into a church?

Wherever there are four or five believers, they need a leader. Without leadership any body of people of any type or class will soon vanish. God called this so forcefully to our attention when He, through Paul, sent Titus into every city to ordain elders.

From the beginning the advancement of the church has been the advancement of the individual in Christ. Surely the officers of the state conferences should endeavor to see to it that every group of believers is properly organized according to Scripture, for the best strength of those individuals.

LESSON IV.—October 23, 1927

THE CALL OF THE PROPHET

1 Kings 19:19, 20; Amos 7:14, 15; Isaiah 6:1-8

Devotional Reading: Psalm 40:5-10

GOLDEN TEXT

Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I, send me. Isaiah 6:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

The Prophet. In Ex. 7:1 Aaron was declared by God to be the prophet of Moses; and in Ex. 4:14 God said that Aaron should be spokesman for Moses unto the people. A prophet is thus explained by God to be a spokesman; a prophet of God is one of God's spokesmen. Moses was a prophet of God, Deut. 18:18. Moses is also called, Deut. 33:1, "the man of God". The term "man of God" is frequently applied to God's prophets. On each several occasion when God had a message to send to a person or a people He called, according to His own choosing, individuals to receive His words and convey them to the one or ones to whom addressed. As spokesman the prophet was not necessarily the one who foretold coming events, but he told God's word regardless of the relative time of its application.

Elisha. Like Elijah, Elisha was to be God's spokesman to give the word in due time to the people whom God was addressing. Elisha was in no way responsible before God for the authenticity of the word given. It was his to face the anger of those whom God was reproving and to trust in God for protection. He was a man of action as shown by his success in the field.

Amos. Amos was not only a tender of a dwarfed variety of sheep as indicated by the word "herdman" in Amos 1:1, but he was also a driver of oxen in the hills south of Bethlehem as indicated by the word "herdman" in 7:14. He, too, was a man of action. He was called from the country of Judah and sent to the country of Israel, the northern kingdom, to carry thence God's word to them. He left the quiet, peaceable, profitable occupation and carried words which would engender hatred unto king Jeroboam of rebellious Israel.

Isaiah. Isaiah was a prophet to Judah and Jerusalem. See 1:1. His labors continued for about sixty years. For the first 38 years Hosea was prophesying to Israel; and for 29 years in the middle of Isaiah's service Micah was also God's prophet, as was also Nahum during the last year of Micah's service.

It was in Amos 2:7 that God said, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." Whether this statement is general or whether it is particular to the special matters under consideration, it remains that whatever God has revealed through His spokesman, that thing is revealed to the end that man may have guiding information concerning the matters thus revealed by Him who knows all secrets. Therefore, Peter assures, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place."—2 Peter 1:19.—F. L. A.

Questions on the Text and Subject. What is a prophet of God? How is he qualified for his work? By what other terms were the prophets known? Is faith a requisite characteristic of one engaged as God's spokesman? What was Elisha's standing before God? What did he understand to be the meaning of Elijah's act in placing the mantle upon his shoulder? What is the lesson in Elisha's offering of the twelve yoke of oxen, using for fuel the yokes and tools of service? What was the position of Amos? Of whose kingdom was he a subject? To what kingdom was he sent as prophet? Were his words words of cheer or of discomfort? Did it require faith in God to carry displeasing news to the king? Who was Isaiah? How was he called? Was it better for him to see God in vision? Why did this speak woe to him? Could such an iniquity also be purged by God? Did God's spokesmen always carry bad news? Have their revelations always come true in proper time? Are there any prophecies yet awaiting fulfillment? Mention several. Is prophecy a safe word to rely upon? Does prophecy which reveals God's secrets originate in the mind of man or by the will of God?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Then heard I the voice of my Lord saying, Whom shall I send? And who will go for us? And I said.....Here am I,send me." Isa. 6:8. Roth.

Isaiah saw a work to be done in bringing a message from the throne of God to his people. He at once offered his service. He came to a realization of his own uncleanness and unworthiness when he saw the beauty of holiness as it shines from the Lord, and cried out, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips." Isa. 6:5. This confession brought the purging fire and he was made clean, ready to do service for Him.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

God's Call Imperative. The work of the Lord is more important and pressing than any material pursuit. Therefore, there was no hesitation on the part of Elisha when the mantle of the prophet fell upon him. He realized the imperative nature of the call and obeyed immediately. Giving no further thought to the unturned furrows in his father's fields, he lingered "only to bid farewell to his parents and to celebrate the sacred occasion with a parting feast, then left his plow and hurried after the great master, never to leave him until that mantle should fall a second time with a double portion of the spirit from the hand of the ascending hero". Arnold's Practical Commentary.

God's Call is Without Respect of Persons. "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons". Acts 10:34. Elisha was the son of a wealthy and, no doubt, influential man; Amos was an unknown, unpretentious hired herdsman; Isaiah was a prominent citizen of Jerusalem, an able statesman and patriot, the honored friend and confidant of kings. Yet God made no distinction between them. He recognized them as equally necessary to the forwarding of His work. Each was assigned his distinctive duty, but the final end of all was the same, the accomplishment of the divine purposes. In the economy of God today, as in the past, there is a position of equal importance for every individual who has been "called according to His purpose".—G. E. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Answering a call.

When the opportunity for service as a prophet of God came, Elisha left his oxen, his farm, his familiar surroundings and went. Instead of doing it reluctantly, he actually proclaimed a feast and rejoiced at the privilege.

Amos, raised as a humble shepherd, did not shrink when the call came to enter even the royal palace and to rebuke sin in high places.

Isaiah, a man of highest position and standing, a statesman and counselor of kings, quickly and gladly stepped into the opportunity to serve and counsel for Jehovah.

God does not use miraculous means for calling each different person who can serve. A man's true worth and greatness are shown by his ability to recognize opportunity for serving. And such opportunity really constitutes a call. God expects us to do the thing which He furnishes the opening for, and He gives us the ability to perform it.

Which is the higher motive of service, a feeling of duty to God, or a sense of appreciation for what God has done? Can you think of some actually urgent need which you can fill?—F. E. S.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING

October twenty-eighth will be the first anniversary of the dedication of the church at Grand Rapids Mich. Special services and program and a pot-luck dinner are planned for the day. A hearty welcome is extended to all.

FROM NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

Bro. Bruce Lent, formerly of Niagara Falls, for some years a resident of Philadelphia, has been spending a few weeks at the home of his aunts, the Misses Lent of that city.

Pastor G. E. Marsh of the Blessed Hope Church is now engaged in presenting a series of prophetic and practical studies based on "The Forgotten Dream of Nebuchadnezzar". The sermons are illustrat-

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF BRO. AND SR. A. K. RICHARDSON

About fifty of the close relatives and old friends gathered at the home of Bro. and Sr. A. K. Richardson at their home in Wayland, Mich., on Tuesday evening, September 20, to help celebrate their Golden Wedding anniversary. The evening was largely spent in visiting.

A few well-chosen remarks were made by their pastor, Bro. Jas. A. Patrick, concerning so joyful, yet rare an event as a Golden Wedding day, and why there would be so few such anniversaries in the future in this day of quick marriages and speedy divorce. He stressed the points of their happiness in service together during the past fifty years and that the family of five children were as yet unbroken by death.

In the early part of the evening, as soon as the guests were assembled, the parents were presented with a cabinet radio, a gift from their five children and their families.

After opening and exhibiting the beautiful and appropriate gifts, Sr. Richardson gave a delightful talk of thanks for the gifts, of her wedding day, and reminiscences through the years. Their first year of marriage was spent at Jamestown, after which they moved onto her father's farm near Hastings, where they resided for nearly forty-four years, until moving to Wayland five years ago. Bro. Richardson then gallantly presented his wife with a wedding ring to replace the one lost a few years ago.

The above information and the cut for the accompanying picture were obtained from the Wayland Globe, of which Bro. Rollo Mosher is Editor.

Every acquaintance of Bro. and Sr. Richardson, from Maine to California, will unite with The Herald in congratulating them, the recipients of the Father's blessing of long life and loving companionship. May He be a God of grace and mercy to them so long as they can honor Him and His work.—Editor,

On the last Sunday in October the Niagara Falls congregation will hold their annual all-day meeting, the program for which will be submitted later.

TITHING

For a quarter of a century the writer has been a believer in tithing. It is not until recently that he has been made to feel that it is his duty to teach regarding this subject, even as he does regarding other subjects.

He has therefore arranged to furnish a series of tracts on this subject, one to every family where it will be read and studied. In accordance with this, the following offer is made:

He will send enough copies of each title of tract to allow one for every family in which there is a member of the Church of God, provided someone in each locality or church will volunteer to promptly and regularly distribute these tracts to those for whom they are sent. To those who are isolated, he will, on request, mail tracts direct.

This is a personal work undertaken at personal expense, not in any degree drawing upon the treasury of the N. B. I. Those who wish to use this literature as per above please address, F. L. Austin, (Personal), Oregon, Illinois.

MICHIGAN QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The quarterly conference at Blanchard, which was held from September 30 to October 2, is recorded as a pleasant success. Bro. Patrick was there to speak for us on Friday evening, and although there was not a conference officer present, everything moved along with speed and pleasure. The writer opened each service. Special music was furnished by our local talent. The dear, little Sunday School children did their part of the singing very nicely. Bro. Patrick filled the two days with splendid Bible lessons and sermons until Sunday evening, when he had to be at West Bowne to fill his appointment. So immediately after the afternoon sermon and communion, at which the writer presided, he, with the Grand Rapids and Wayland brethren, started for their homes. All were satisfied that it had been well for them to be present and to enjoy meeting the friends and brethren in Blanchard. The writer spoke to a well-filled house on Sunday evening on the topic of "Christ's Second Coming". Brethren came from St. Louis, Alma, Lansing, Battle Creek, Remus, Wayland and Grand Rapids.

Everyone seemed happy, and if good food tends to happiness, there was nothing lacking, for in the basement the tables fairly groaned with good things.

Blanchard wants you all to come again. M. A. Woodward,

A COMMUNICATION

The Restitution Herald: Dear Brother, Permit me, through the beloved Herald, to thank the one who suggested, and the many who responded in sending cheerful greetings and well-wishes on the occasion of the sixty-fifth anniversary of my birth—September 28. Twenty-eight in all, from coast to coast and the gulf to Wisconsin, responded.

My wife and self are greatly rejoiced in that our son has entered the Bible Training School.

Yours in the glorious hope, J. E. Hatch.

MICHIGAN

September 25 there were 133 at the Grand Rapids Sunday School. There were 111 present October 2 although several of our folks were away at the Blanchard conference. October 9 is Mother's day for the Sunday School, and October 16 is Father's day. A special effort will be made to get the fathers and mothers to attend.

Sister Woodward preached at Dutton Sept. 25. A misunderstanding as to time made some late. This time changing business is a nuisance. It rained quite hard too, and yet the faithful ones were there.

There was no preaching at Grand Rapids Sunday Oct. 2, as Bro. Patrick was in attendance at the conference at Blanchard. Brother Patrick expects to baptize at least three of the West Bowne folks in the near future. Full notice will be given later.

A large number were in attendance at the Berean meeting at Grand Rapids Thursday evening October 14. A large majority were young people.

THE CALL OF THE PROPHET

HOW does God tell us today what He wants us to know? The surest way is by His Word—the Bible. In olden days, before the Bible was compiled, how did God send His messages? Why, He chose some man and called him to carry these messages. The man was then called a prophet. Such a one was Elijah. Then followed Elisha, Amos, Isaiah, Hosea, Micah and others. Let us see how the call came to three of them.

1. The Call of Elisha.

Elijah had been traveling about telling the people of Israel what God wanted them to know. But one day God told Elijah to choose a younger man, Elisha, to be prophet in his place.

Elisha lived with his father and mother in a valley not far from the river Jordan. He was out in the field plowing when Elijah found him. Twelve yoke of oxen were used for the plowing and Elisha himself was driving the twelfth pair.

Elijah crossed the field to Elisha and threw his mantle or coat over Elisha. By this Elisha knew that he had been chosen by God for a special work, so he left the plowing at once and ran after Elijah, saying, "Let me kiss my father and mother good bye, and then I'll follow you." Thus Elisha became prophet of God and afterward performed many miracles.

2. The Call of Amos.

Amos lived in Judah, in the village of Tekoa, a few miles south of Jerusalem. He was a herdsman, having charge of sheep and goats which he led from pasture to pasture among the hills. He, also, at the proper season, was employed in caring for the fruit of the sycamore trees, a coarse food used by the poor.

As he went quietly about his work he must have thought very often of the disturbing conditions in his country, Palestine. The land had been divided, and the northern kingdom had become very wicked. The rich built beautiful palaces and made great feasts for which the poor had to pay. Many other evil things were done. Sacrifices were made to God, but that was only a form of worship. They did not love God.

Amos thought some terrible trouble would surely come to these sinful people, and wondered why God did not send someone to warn them of their danger. At last, as Amos was tending his flock, the Lord spoke to him and said, "Go prophesy unto my people Israel."

To be sure, Amos left his flock, his own country, Judah and went north to Bethel in Israel. He was not a great orator but God helped him to plan his sermons, which he boldly declared unto the Israelites. He pictured to them the many disasters soon to befall them.

3. The Call of Isaiah.

Young Isaiah belonged to a noble family of the city of Jerusalem at a time when King Uzziah was enjoying the most prosperous reign that had been known in Judah since the days of Solomon.

Isaiah saw how his country, Judah, was growing very wicked like the northern kingdom, and he feared destruction for his people. How he wished God would warn the people of Jerusalem!

One day Isaiah had a vision, or kind of a dream. He thought he was in the temple, and in the Most Holy Place. As he well knew, the Holy Place was absolutely dark and contained nothing but the sacred box called the Ark with two winged figures above it.

But in the vision Isaiah saw a lofty throne and the Lord sitting upon it clad in a regal robe, whose long skirts filled the building. Above Him were wondrous creatures ablaze with light whom he called seraphim, or burning ones. They were six-winged, two wings covered the face in token of unworthiness to look upon Jehovah, two wings covered the body in token of unworthiness to be seen by Jehovah, and two wings were used in service.

One cried unto another and said, "Holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory." The temple shook to its foundations at this seraphic song and smoke filled the building.

Isaiah was humbled by the sight. He thought that if these heavenly creatures were unworthy to see God that he, indeed, was still less worthy. He cried out, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips, for mine eyes have seen the King, Jehovah of hosts."

Then one of the wondrous creatures flew to the golden altar of incense that was ever burning in the temple and with tongs took a white-hot stone and touched the young man's mouth with it and said, "Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thy iniquity is taken away, and thy sin forgiven."

Then Isaiah felt forgiven and purified, ready to hear the word of the Lord. The voice of the Lord said, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?"

It was a moment of consecration for Isaiah and out of a full heart he cried, "Here am I, send me." Then the Lord gave him his commission.

The vision passed away and left the young man with a new meaning in his life. He saw that he must be to Jerusalem what Amos and Hosea had been to Israel. He must denounce the wickedness that was ruining his people. He must show them the doom that was surely coming upon them. He must try to win them back to their Cod, who loved them still and would save them. It was a heavy task, but he was commissioned by the Lord and would not flinch!

The above was selected from "Lessons from Great Teachers".

Are we ready to answer God's call?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read about Elijah and Elisha in 2 Kings 2.
2. Trace on your map the journey of Amos from Judah to Israel.
3. Tell the story about Isaiah to someone else.
4. Be a prophet, too, and invite your chum, or another friend to attend your Rally Day with you and encourage others to attend Sunday School and Berean regularly.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE

4. The word "and" occurs 35,543 times in the Old Testament.

BOOKS OF THE BIBLE

4. The Five Greater Prophets.
Isaiah tells of the Messiah,
 While wails of woe mark Jeremiah.
 In Lamentations he mourns the fall
 Of the Hebrew nation—city and all.
Ezekiel then with mystery rings,
 And Daniel speaks of prophetic things.
 By the greater prophets these five were written,
 Who for their faithfulness were smitten.

THE MAN OF SIN

By James Browning

My second proposition is that the temple of God in which the man of sin is seated is to be located at Jerusalem—not Rome. The evidence already given might be regarded as conclusive, but let us look more particularly at Paul's prophecy. We are induced to do this because it has been urged by some that the temple here is explained by 1 Cor. 3:16. The facts are that at the time the epistle was written the temple was still standing, and the minds of Paul's readers must have reverted at once to Jerusalem. They knew nothing of any other temple, for, as far as the record shows, the company of believers was not called the "temple of God" till some five years later; and then the reason is assigned as being "the spirit of God dwelleth in you."

Reader! are you prepared to believe that the temple of God is at Rome; that the Spirit of God dwells there? That Paul could have so stultified himself and his mission as to speak of that den of deception, of hypocrisy and blasphemy as the temple of God! Surely no exposition of this prophecy can be correct that assumes a position so repellent to the spiritual sensibilities of true protestants! That the temple is to be rebuilt is evident from Rev. 11, which as we know was written some years after its destruction by Titus. Here John was told to "rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court that is without the temple leave out, and measure it not; for it is given to the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months." The fact that this treading down follows the measuring is sufficient to show that the prophecy pertains to the future and can have no possible application to the present.

Our third proposition is that the duration of his career (1260 days) is literal. We are doubtless all familiar with the various forms in which this period of time is stated, time, times and a half, 40 and 2 months, and 1260 days. The question is, are these days to be understood symbolically as meaning 1260 years, or literally? Now it is a well recognized rule that symbols are always seen, naturally, in vision, or in dreams. As durations of time cannot well be seen they must be represented by objects. Thus, the seven fatted kine seen by Pharaoh represented seven years. The three baskets on the head of the chief baker represented three days, Gen. 40:18. Had the chief baker imagined, when told the interpretation, that these days meant years, his delusion was quickly broken for on the third day he was hanged on a tree. Doubtless our year day friends will likewise discover (though it is hoped not in the same way) that it is both unwise and unsafe to re-interpret an interpretation. Here then are two instances where durations of time were represented by objects, but where are the objects symbolizing these 1260 days? They cannot be found, there are none, for the simple reason that they form no part of the vision proper, but are mentioned by the angel in his interpretation of the vision. Brother! Sister! In response to the question, "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?" the angel is seen to raise both hands to heaven, and to swear by Him that liveth for ever and ever, that it shall be for a time, times and a half. Is it, think you, a mark of fidelity to the truth to insist that it shall be for 1260 years? Let us strive against the influence of Rome, strive lawfully and avoid the use of methods which may be used by them against ourselves. Some have thought that we have in the seventy weeks of Dan. 11:24 a justification of this year day notion. I submit, however, that even here we have a most literal statement. Bishop Chandler says: "There are but two sorts of weeks in Scripture; weeks of days, and weeks of years. Daniel when he speaks of the ordinary weeks, calls them weeks of days, 10:3, as if he had a mind it should be observed. Where he makes no such distinction in his prophecy, he is to be understood as meaning weeks of years."

An enumeration of all the occurrences of the word "Shabua" (Heb.) discloses the fact that whenever it is used it is so indicated by the immediate context. This shows that primarily, the word is used of years. This is more clearly seen by a reference to Gen. 29:27. Jacob as we learn had served seven years for Rachel, but as it was contrary to the custom to give the younger daughter before the elder, Laban by a trick gave him Leah. Jacob awakening to the fact that he had been deceived, naturally protested. To this Laban replied, "Fulfill her week, (Shabua) and we will give thee this also for the service."

Here was a proposition in simple terms, a proposition which was embraced by Jacob; hence we read "he served yet another seven years." Had the lessons therefore of the Old Testament been learned in their order, Dan. 9:24 would readily have been understood, naturally and literally, as meaning 490 years! Sixty-nine of those weeks expired with the cutting off of the Messiah. That we are now living in the interval between these and the seventieth week, can readily be shown by noting the events that are destined to transpire at "the time of the end." A covenant is made with Israel for "one week" but in the midst of the week, he (the prince) shall cause the sacrifice and oblation to cease. Dan. 9:27. The margin reads, "and upon the battlements shall be the idols of the desolator." The destruction continues to the consummation, or agreeing with Rev. 11:2 and 13:5.

Brethren, time rolls rapidly on and the shadows of the great apostacy are falling thick on every hand. The apostacy alas is not confined to the Papacy, for this is but one of the many delusions by which the children of men are ensnared. The spirit of antichrist permeates the whole of Christendom. Wherever the imaginations of men are exalted to the rank and dignity of God's word, there it may be seen. Under the banner of "Education" the minds of men are being prepared for the reception of a philosophy, infidelic in its nature and subversive of the truths of the Bible, and this is as plainly apparent among the protestants as among the devotees of Rome. Indeed, if the latter could be prevailed upon to beat their beads into powder and tear their scapulars into shreds; the apostacy would nevertheless continue till brought to a head in the person of the "man of sin."

THE RIGHTS OF WOMAN

IN THESE days it is well to remind ourselves of the high and noble calling of womanhood, as set forth in the following lines:

*The Rights of Woman—what are they?
 The right to labor and to pray
 The right to watch while others sleep.
 The right o'er others' woes to weep.
 The right to succor in reverse.
 The right to bless while others curse.
 The right to love whom others scorn.
 The right to comfort all who mourn.
 The right to lead the soul to God
 Along the path the Savior trod—
 The path of meekness and of love;
 The path of faith that leads above;
 The path of patience under wrong;
 The path in which the weak grow strong.
 Such are her Rights—and God will bless
 And crown their champions with success.*

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

By George Johnston

PART 14

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE EASTERN EMPIRE

Daniel 8

DANIEL'S VISION of the four great beasts was chiefly concerned with the Holy Roman empire. That of the Ram and He-goat, now to be considered, deals with another empire of a similar nature, the Eastern or Byzantine, which was founded by Constantine the Great in the fourth century A. D.

"In the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me at the first. And I saw in a vision; and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam; and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai. Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high; but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his will, and became great. And as I was considering, behold, an he goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground: and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes. And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen . . . before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power. And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns: and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him: and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand. Therefore the he goat waxed very great: and when he was strong the great horn was broken, and for it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven."

The ram, as the angel explained, represented the Medo-Persian empire, and the he goat the Grecian nation under the command of the great "horn" Alexander the Great. The incidents connected with the fall of the Medo-Persian empire and the rise of the Grecian are dealt with elsewhere, so let us pass on to the "little horn" which arose out of one of the kingdoms into which Alexander's empire was later divided.

"And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land." During the many centuries which have passed since the empire of Alexander was divided into four parts, there has arisen but one great organization which extended its power in the directions named in the prophecy—"toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land.' That organization was the Eastern or Byzantine empire, which attained power in the western division, formerly allotted to Cassander, and extended its rule from thence eastward in Western Asia, and southward through the 'Pleasant Land' or Palestine, into Egypt. In their actions, and in the motives which inspired those actions, the Catholic hierarchy of the Eastern empire, and the monarchs, over whose consciences they obtained the ascendancy, followed the example of the Syrian king, Antiochus Epiphanes, (B. C. 175—164) and in consequence it is very generally assumed that the prophecies relate solely to that king. The prophet, however, tells us plainly that the 'last end of the indignation' would not take place until 2300 lunar-solar years from the battle of Granicus fought between the Medo-Persians and the Greeks in B. C. 334. The end of that period has not yet been reached, and Antiochus Epiphanes is certainly not in the flesh today. It is quite clear, therefore, that the little horn represented an organization which exists at the present time, and not an individual who passed out of this life more than two thousand years ago.

RULES GOVERNING ZIONIST SETTLERS IN PALESTINE

A writer in The Atlantic Monthly describes in an article entitled "The New Zion" the main principles of the Zionist's settlement as follows:

"1. That each family should receive no more than twenty-five acres of land, which is on lease for forty-nine years.

"2. That all the work should be done by the settler and his family, hired help being forbidden.

"3. That the cultivation should be mixed farming, each settlement providing first its own provisions; outside, if any, coming second.

"4. That the land should be prepared beforehand by the drainage of swamps, a supply of water, and the construction of roads.

"5. That the settlers should have full liberty to use their own social system, whether individual or collective.

"Those are the chief rules to be observed, and a good many training schools have been established to teach the young settlers agriculture of various kinds and to accustom them to country life. For as it is well known, the Jews as a whole have long ceased to be an agricultural people, chiefly owing to the legal restrictions passed against them in many countries. None the less, there are a good many Jewish settlers who have practiced before they arrived. The total of the Jewish population in Palestine is now about 150,000 as against 700,000 or 800,000 Arabs, and only about one-tenth of the cultivatable land is owned by the Jewish race, while it is estimated that something like 4,000,000 population could find a good livelihood in Palestine if the land were properly developed."—Sel.

REGARDING THE WORD "DAY"

TO THE EDITOR of The Restitution Herald: I notice in your editorial of September twelfth, that you advocate a theory regarding the word "day" in Genesis 2:17, which has had in time past wide acceptance among conditionalists, and which I myself for a considerable period believed to be sound. However, such is not my opinion now, and I feel assured that many of your readers will agree with my changed viewpoint of this subject. I am glad to be able to state that many thoughtful students of the Word are seeing that the interpretation alluded to is weak and unnatural, and comes under the heading of those doubtful interpretations of Scripture which do so much harm to enquiring minds. The following are some of my reasons for discarding the theory that the word "day" has in this instance any other sense than the common one.

First, Adam himself could scarcely have knowledge of any other use of the word than the natural one.

Second, The absurdity of telling a man "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die", and giving it the elastic meaning of 1000 years of life must be apparent to all. With such an interpretation the questions may well be asked, "How many 'days' did Adam live?"

Third, If in the one verse we can thus fritter away the force of the threatened penalty (for its force would be lost long before the time expired) can we with reason blame our "orthodox" friends for their interpretation of the word "die" in the selfsame passage? No, we cannot. With reference to the marginal reading—"dying thou shalt die", many have the idea that the phrase represents a prolongation of the death issue, but in fact it expresses the Hebrew idiom of intensifying the verb by repetition, which literally translated would not be good English, and the translators evidently thought that they could best express that by the adverb "surely". It is not necessary to know anything of Hebrew to realize that they were right. Numerous similar expressions occur in the Scriptures, as for instance in the margin of Gen. 2:16—"eating thou shalt eat". Here the translators have grasped the beautiful idea of God's bountiful goodness in freely giving to mankind the boundless supplies of nature, and the pleasure of the giving.

In one form or another the emphatic threat of punishment by death occurs in the Old Testament forty times at least, and in most, if not all of these emphasis is expressed in the Hebrew by repeating the principal term, and in English by the adverb "surely". If here the term indicates a lengthened period, then of course the other instances carry the same meaning.

That Adam did not die in the day is proof of the abundant mercy of God in recognizing circumstances which admitted of forgiveness under altered conditions, and provided a means for future deliverance. See Jer. 18:7-10.

"The wisdom of the world is foolishness with God." There are many wise fools.

GOD'S BUILDING

There are three ways of looking at life:

I am just cutting the stone;

I am only earning a living;

I am doing a small part of a great plan.—Dr. Bishop.

I have not seen the Architect and do not altogether understand the plan. But I believe there is a plan, so I work with good spirit in which is no fear.—Bruce Barton.

How many there are, just cutting the stone; and satisfied with that, they never care to get farther than the stone-quarry. Baptized, joined the church, that is enough. How often I have heard people say, "If I can only get into the kingdom I will be satisfied!"

Some are just earning a living, not paying much attention to the plan, hardly realizing there is one to work by, yet God has been so careful to give all necessary directions concerning His building. If we could remember that this work is not just for today, but that it reaches out into God's beautiful future; a perfect building, with the promise of a prize to every faithful worker. We hear the beloved Paul saying: "If any man's work abide, which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward." God has sent the Master Workman on ahead, and He tells us just what we must learn in order to do our work well. Here are His instructions: "Abide in me, and I in you." This is the first requisite for perfect work, the union of the two, I and you, as "The branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me."

O child of God, called to work with Him, and be a part of His divine plan, are you thoughtlessly spoiling that plan, as the Israelites did of old, or have you faith in the Architect, and though not understanding it all, can you work with perfect faith that He understands and all is well?

We all realize how much it means to finish a well planned house, and the one we are building is no exception to the general rule. Its finishing must be love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness, temperance. If we find these gifts gracing the building of God's planning, we know then we have been abiding in and with the Master-builder, even the Christ.

The greatest asset of our spiritual life is the consciousness of the actual presence of Jesus, independent of our own notions or feelings.

Just rest upon this fact—this fact mind you—that the Lord Jesus Christ is with you, personally, actually. Always make Him the "home of your thoughts" that in any perplexed hours, you will know you have One to whom you can go to tell your troubles and receive encouragement and peace. I tell you, beloveds, we all need a deeper conception of Christ than we ever have had. Hear Him crying out in His very agony of desire to make His hearers understand: In that last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, "If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink." Could we but realize His desire to help us we would not need to be hungering and thirsting for righteousness, for He stands ready always to satisfy us. Come and drink, the fountain is ready for all, to satisfy their thirst.

Let us then work with the plan with no fear, for perfect love casteth out all fear.

BE STRONG IN THE LORD

from their Egyptian bondage, He chose Moses, who "was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth", Num. 12:3. And despite Pharaoh's obstinacy the undertaking proved a success: "And it came to pass, at the end of four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the Lord went out from the land of Egypt", Ex. 12:41, on scheduled time.

Saul has not been the only one whose dross and alloy the Lord has found necessary to burn out that the saint might have "meat to eat that the world knows not of"; and to become of the class to whom the Lord refers, "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods." Matt. 24:45-47.

It required much lashing, and "visions and revelations" to transform Gamaliel's protegee—the Saul of Tarsus—into the great apostle Paul, who as teacher, and usher of the Gospel dispensation, was second only to Christ Himself.

In these days of the survival of the fittest, when the dollar is the god on whom the world and the average Christian are trusting, a man with a hundred thousand dollar bank account is not likely to have as much faith in God as he has in his money. Wealth, like self-centeredness, pride and vanity, tends to disqualify one to a seat at the Lord's banqueting board, and renders one an inefficient workman in the Lord's vineyard. Such a one is more likely to be a scatterer than a gatherer.

The phrase, "When I am weak, then am I strong", does not mean physical weakness; for such a condition would incapacitate one for efficient mental work. General body weakness affects the whole organic system, including the brain. But we have that weakness that begets strength when we realize our inability to accomplish anything of ourselves for the Lord and His brethren. We can then hear the Holy Spirit saying, "Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompence; he will come and save you." Isa. 35:3, 4. Paul echoes the thought, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let every one of us please his neighbour (fellow-Christian, Weymouth) for his good to edification." Rom. 15:1, 2.

FAITH RECKONED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS

Abraham believed God and it was counted unto him for righteousness.—Rom. 4:3.

MUCH IS SAID about faith. It is a subject of great importance. Our lives are mostly prompted and lived on what is called faith. Much, however, that is so-called is in reality pseudo-faith.

At this time we wish to bring forward a thought about the standard of faith as revealed in Bible usage. The meaning of the word—adapting for use here the definition, given by the Standard Dictionary—is, a firm conviction of the truth of what is declared by God, simply on the ground of His truth or faithfulness. This is evidently the deep meaning of the statement of Gen. 15:6, "And he believed in the Lord; and he counted it to him for righteousness." Paul quoted in Rom. 4:3, this statement by Moses and in commenting on its great truth he says in verse 19 and following: "And being not weak in faith He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith". This inspired commentator assures us that Abram's deep belief in the truth of God's spoken word was faith.

This faith controlled Abram's plans and conduct of life. He lived and acted in harmony with his faith. God had made promise that Abram himself should yet have a son; that his steward Eliezer should not be his heir. Abram could not understand how it was possible for a son to be born to him, nevertheless, he had absolute confidence—faith—that God was both truthful and competent. Therefore he "staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief".

This same faith in God and His word motivated Abram throughout his life.

Witness him as recorded in Gen. 22:2: "Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, . . . and offer him there for a burnt offering." But that son was he of whom God had said, "I will establish my covenant with him for an everlasting covenant", Gen. 17:19. How could God establish His covenant with Isaac if Isaac should be made a burnt offering? is the question of human reason. But Abraham questioned not. His faith moved him to prompt action. "Early in the morning" Abraham arose "and took . . . Isaac, . . . and went unto the place of which God had told him". It was his faith that moved him. God had spoken, therefore Abraham moved; for Abraham believed God. It was his faith that motivated him to finish this work and actually bind Isaac and place him upon the altar. He had firm conviction of the truth of what God had declared. His was not to question. His was to do—to cooperate with God according to God's directions.

It was upon his faith that he erected those works. The actions or works revealed the prompting faith—revealed it to Abraham himself, and increased it—but the actions were not rewarded. It was the prompting faith that "counted unto him for righteousness". Abraham had firm conviction that God was true, that He was able, and that He would do; therefore Abraham lived true toward God. It was such faith, such truth toward God, that was righteous.

But faith as per a certain creed, or as per a given article of faith is something wholly different. Such faith is merely an expression of one's construction of God's word. It is known as the Baptist faith; The Methodist faith; the Church of God faith. The Bible nowhere says that such faith is reckoned for righteousness. Such is not the faith that saves.

God's word is, "He that believeth (the gospel) and is baptized shall be saved."—Mark 16:16. According to this, belief of the Gospel will show itself by the work of baptism. Do we believe? Our work reveals the answer.

God's word says, "Come out from among them, . . . and I . . . will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty"—2 Cor. 6:17, 18. Do we believe this? Our works tell the story.

God's word says, "If ye then be raised with Christ, . . . set your affection on things above, . . . mortify . . . your members which are upon the earth".—Col. 3:1-8. He who has faith in this, God's word, will endeavor to live true to his injunctions, and his faith—not the work prompted thereby—will be reckoned for righteousness.

Faith in God's given word does not halt to reason, prompted thereby—will be reckoned for righteousness.

For lack of faith the world is rapidly becoming false to God.

EDITORIAL

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

F. A. STILSON, Ass't Editor.

God's revealed method of converting man to Himself and His Son is by the proclamation of the Gospel. To Christians He assigned this task of love.

* * * *

ANOTHER Christian labor is to bear one another's burdens—in love. There are "babes in Christ" and "members of the body which seem to be more feeble". All such the stronger ones must aid. Christ requires it.

* * * *

God has taught that all Christians are by Him esteemed to be a distinct and separate company of people. His inspired Word names them "the Church of God". His Church is a distinct body of people, separate from His chosen nation. Each has been chosen unto eternity. Man is powerless to stop God's work or alter His plan. The Church is chosen for eternity.

* * * *

God Himself has given the laws governing the Church in all of its activities. These laws are equally binding upon the Church in this Christian age as were the national laws binding upon Israel in the Mosaic age. In both instances His laws are expressions of His wisdom for the proper growth and strength of His people. He has crowned Christ over both, each to occupy, under Christ, the respective standing and position designed by the God of heaven.

* * * *

ISRAEL'S day of preparation is largely in the past. A day of regathering and reshaping under a short period known as "the time of Jacob's trouble", awaits her in the probable near future, but her years of trial and national expression without the presence of her God-assigned "King of kings" is in the sin-stained past. Her history is indelibly engraven. Only by the mercies of God can it be rectified.

* * * *

BUT the Church is today, right now, inscribing its record upon life's pages. You and I, Christian brother, are this day being held responsible by God for a given portion of growth and development. Today, the Church of God is the one mighty and momentous work of God which is being stressed by Him. This is the Christian age, the age of the preparation of the Church. The activity of the nation is largely in abeyance. The Church occupies today the front of the stage, drilling under the matchless guidance of God's Son.

* * * *

LIKE the chosen nation of God, so the Church is one united whole. It is "one body", one helpmeet; one temple. It is not many, but one.

But, again, like the nation of old, so the Church of today. The nation was by God divided into twelve several tribes. Each several tribe, though an integral part of the nation as a whole, had its own tribal life to live, its own responsible position for which it must give account to God. So the Church. While it is and always will be one single Church, yet it is by God separated into local units or parts. The inspired Word reads: "unto the Church of God which is at Corinth"; "the Church of God", at Ephesus, "which he hath purchased with his own blood", Acts 20:28, 17; "the churches of Judaea, which were in Christ". Thus the Church—which is but one—is by God designed to be made up of many local bodies, each of which is responsible to God as though it were complete in itself.

BROTHER, Sister—if the local Church of which you are a local member is recognized by God as being truly His, then it has a most responsible work. If it is not His, withdraw from it. If it is His, then ever remember that that Church holds a place in your community of greater responsibility than any other organization therein. And your duty before God is plain. Do you meet it?

* * * *

EACH local Church discharges its responsibilities through those who are faithful in service. The listless, indifferent, inactive, member never imparts strength to REGULAR religious services for study of God's Word, for prayer, for fellowship, are as necessary to the Christian life as are meals to the natural life. Such services should afford Christian edification to all Christians, they should proclaim the Gospel to the world.

Such services are made possible and maintained by the steady, faithful, always-present member. HOW READEST THOU?

By. M. A. Woodward

HERE are very few families, however poor they may think they are, but who have within the hallowed circle of the home the most precious treasure known to man—The Holy Bible, God's best Gift to the world. And how little it is appreciated! Our homes are filled with daily papers, their pages full of the sins and crimes of men and women, and suggestions of how to remedy each evil, suggestions which fail to cure; while the Book lying close by is full of remedies that never have failed. But that Book lies there untouched, unread. We can rehearse the daily tragedies, but if we were asked to repeat Christ's sermon on the mount, or any part of it, how many could do it?

How many of us, if we were asked at the dinner hour to repeat a verse from the Bible and give the book, chapter and verse, could do it? We are told to let the word of God dwell in us richly; and it is not dwelling there even poorly. Why are we filling our minds with everything but God's Word? If we devoured this most precious gift to us, as we do the morning papers, we would be ready to answer when asked for a portion of God's Word.

Dr. Davidson asks the pertinent question: "Should the Bible be blotted out by some unimaginable catastrophe, how many of us could produce from memory the stories of the Pentateuch, the laws of Deuteronomy, the annals of the chosen race, the hymns of the Psalter, the maxims of the wisdom literature, the oratories of the prophets, the parables of Jesus, the letters of His apostles, the Ten Commandments, the epistle to the Ephesians, or that to the Hebrews? We find time to eat, drink, dress, amuse ourselves and seek social recreation. How much time do we give to this Friend and Counselor, the entrance of whose words brings light?"

There is nothing with which the soul is nourished when read merely as a subject for discussion or debate. "It is when we lay aside the weight of controversy and approach God's Book as a hungry man would his meal, that we gain spiritual satisfaction. Not until we take that Book as our daily food, will we learn its real value to us, or know how much God has put there for our daily benefit."

We hear so much complaint in every church that modern Christianity lacks fidelity to its causes, energy of action, and spiritual force, all of which should be felt by those who meet the professed followers of God. What is the cause of all this? It is because of a neglect of reading and applying God's Word to our lives. A sick man called his physician to diagnose his case. The physician handed him a list on which was listed the foods which he wanted him to eat. After looking it over the sick man said, "But there is nothing there I like." "That may be," said the doctor, "but you must eat that or die." So it is with reading God's directions to us. If we devour it daily, as we should, our lives will grow strong for Him; by neglecting it, and filling our minds with the unhealthful news of the day, we die spiritually and lose eternal life at last, because we have neglected the great Physician's orders.

Rev. S. Parks says, "What can compare with the Bible, full of love and blessings as the mother that bore you? The man who has lost God can here find Him again, and he who has never known Him, is here illuminated by the divine Word."

However well armed in other respects our churches may be, there can never be any growth unless they are armed with "the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God." "The worst evil she has to fear is not bigotry or superstition, but pious secularism, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."

After reading "The Bible's Pre-eminence", in the Christian Herald of October 1, by Rev. S. Park Cadman, I was stirred by its truthfulness and immediately sat down and wrote this. His article is well worth reading. It touches the vital point—for all men, whether Christian or not. Our paper, THE HERALD, would double its subscription list in one year, if we would take the Bible for our daily diet.

WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES IT MAKE WHAT I BELIEVE?

By Jas. A. Patrick

WHILE IN Minnesota this fall, an old friend said to me, "It doesn't make a bit of difference what you believe." We were discussing the nature of man. Although not a member of any church he is a stout defendant of that church to which most of his family belong. That church believes that man is immortal and that the righteous go to heaven at death. So he said, "What difference does it make whether I believe that one lies in the grave from death to the resurrection or goes at once to heaven at death?"

In 1 John 5:10 it is said, "He that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son." In this case if one fails to believe the record God gave of His Son, he makes God a liar according to John's reasoning. What is the record? "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." v. 11-12. But our friends who believe in the immortality of the soul, believe that the sinner has eternal life, for John here is talking of eternal life, for we have the Adamic life regardless of Christ. They tell us that the sinner will live forever in torment. If so he has eternal life. But he has not the Son, and God has said only those that have the Son have eternal life. Isn't this denying the truth of God's statement? I know, that to avoid the force of John's argument, it is said that life doesn't mean just existence, but continuation of joy and happiness on the one hand or misery or suffering on the other.

We need not take man's word for this for God has clearly defined eternal life, and according to His definition it means, simply, continued animated existence without regard to joy or happiness or misery and suffering. "He (Christ) asked life of thee (God), and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever." Psa. 21:4. So then, eternal life is "length of days for ever and ever." If the sinner has length of days for ever and ever, he has eternal life according to God's definition. Our friends of the immortal soul persuasion tell us that he has length of days for ever and ever in hell and yet they will have to admit that he hasn't the Son. Only he that hath the Son hath life. How about it? Does it make any difference whether or not we make God a liar?

Again, does it make any difference whether we believe a person lies in the grave from death till the resurrection or goes to heaven at death? What does God say?

"Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon his son, saying, I go the way of all the earth:" 1 Kings 2:1, 2. If we can find the way David went in death, we can find the way all the earth goes. In Acts 2:29, 34; 13:36 we read as follows: "Men and brethren, let me speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day." "For David is not ascended into the heavens"

"For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers and saw corruption". This makes it very clear where David went in death. What does John say about failing to believe God?

Again, "Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it came to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." Acts 3:22, 23. It will be noticed that that prophet is to be heard in all things, and every soul that doesn't hear is to be destroyed from among the people.

Listen: "Then said Jesus (that prophet) unto them (the Jews), Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him (God) that sent me. Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come." "Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come; so now I say to you." John 7:33, 34; 13:33.

In a book of instruction published for use by its officers, by one of the largest denominations of the United States, the following occurs: "The righteous go immediately to heaven at death and are at once perfected in glory." Most so called orthodox people believe and teach this, but "That Prophet" said that such could not be the case, and every one that does not hear "That Prophet" will be destroyed from among the people. Does it make any difference whether or not we believe what He says?

"That Prophet" said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." But some say that baptism isn't essential to salvation. Are they believing "That Prophet"?

Paul said, "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. 1:8. Paul thought this statement of so much importance that he repeats the thought in the next verse. Paul calls it a perverted gospel in the 7th verse. Well, if the preacher preaches a perverted gospel and is accursed, how about the one that hears it and believes it? "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch", are the words of "That Prophet" in Matt. 15:14.

God said through Hosea, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee." Hosea 4:6.

Again, "Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel: for the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land." Hosea 4:1.

It is very often said, "Yes, I believe all these things regarding the nature of man and the kingdom of God as revealed in the Scriptures, but I don't live near any of our churches. What am I to do? I have children, and if I don't provide some place of good influence for them to go, they are very liable to go to places of bad influence." This is the problem that confronts many of our people, and is so hard of solution. Let me quote you what John says in 2 John 9, 10, 11, and then each must work out his individual problem for himself.

"Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." Bringing another doctrine than the doctrine of Christ is an evil deed, and those that give God speed to such are partakers of the evil deed. Can you go to another Church where they preach another gospel and aid in their services without giving them God speed?

NO OTHER NAME

By Nancy B. Robison

THE APOSTLE PAUL informs us, "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner"—Acts 4:11, 12. We are led to ask, "How far back does that name reach?"

In Genesis 3:15, a promise is made of one who would bruise the serpent's head, one who would do what the first Adam failed to do. The first pair were put on trial and failed and God passed sentence upon them. Then we read in Gen. 3:21, "Unto Adam also, and to his wife, did the Lord God make coats of skins, and clothed them." Evidently this pointed to the great sacrifice which would develop, to the one who would do what the first Adam failed to do. The prophet says, "When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hands."—Isa. 53:10.

God promised that the seed of the woman should do this. When their first son was born she called his name Cain, meaning possession, for she said, "I have gotten a man from the Lord." Scholars tell us that the original reads, "a man, the Lord." The next son she named Abel, which means vanity. In process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. Abel brought of the firstlings of the flock. The Lord had respect unto his offering. Why? Paul tells us, Heb. 11:4, that "By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness he was righteous". Notice, Cain filled with wrath, slew his brother.

The next son she called, "Seth", which means appointed. "God," she said, "hath appointed me a seed instead of Able whom Cain slew." To Seth was born a son, and he called his name Enos. "Then began men to call upon the name of the Lord." The margin says, "to call upon themselves the name of the Lord." Young says, "Then a beginning was made of preaching the name of the Lord." Gen. 4:26.

From that day to this we have the Cain seed, and the Seth seed. In Gen. 5:1 we read, "In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God created he him".

Notice in verse three that he begins with Seth: "And Adam lived an hundred and thirty years, and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image, and called his name Seth." In verse 28 we read, "Lamech lived an hundred and eighty and two years, and begat a son, and called his name Noah (which means rest or comfort), saying, This same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands, because of the ground which the Lord hath cursed."

"The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose." Man is as prone to do evil as the sparks are to fly upward. "The Lord said, I will destroy man . . . from the face of the earth". "But Noah found grace (or favor) in the eyes of the Lord." Why was Noah different from the rest? Again we turn to Paul, in Heb. 11:7, "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." What is this I am reading? By grace Noah was saved, and the world condemned. Modern preaching says they are not condemned. Whom shall we believe?

"God spake unto Noah, saying, Go forth out of the ark, . . . and Noah went forth, and his sons, and his wife, and his sons wives . . . , and Noah built an altar unto the Lord; and took of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and offered burnt offerings on the altar." After the flood, the directions to the few saved by faith were much the same as given to Adam, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth".

"It came to pass, as they journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar; . . . and they said one to another, Go to, let us make brick, and burn them thoroughly. And they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar. And they said, Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth." The very things they built the tower and the city for, namely, to make themselves a name, was not God's appointed way. God confounded their language and scattered them abroad. He then called Abram and promised to make him the father of many nations, and to give him an everlasting possession. "In thee and thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Paul tells us this is the gospel.

The Lord appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land. . . . And there builded he an altar unto the Lord, and called upon the name of the Lord." When God covenanted with Abraham, Paul tells us that it was not unto Abraham's numerical seed, or "seeds as of many", but unto "thy seed, which is Christ". These promises were renewed to Isaac and Jacob.

After the death of Joseph, the children of Israel were brought into bondage by a king that knew not Joseph. The children of Israel sighed by reason of the bondage, and God heard their groanings, and remembered His cov-

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

By Lillie H. Willis

SOME THINK in the life eternal all will be equal, but I think, as a people we agree that the saved consist of companies, some holding higher positions than others, not because God has favorites, but because they are worthy to be so honored. As our works have been, so also shall our reward be.

In 1 Cor. 3:13, we read that everyone's work shall be tried by fire, and if our works abide we shall receive reward; but if our works shall be burned we shall suffer loss: yet we ourselves shall be saved: yet so as by fire.

The Kingdom of God, as I understand it, is like an earthly kingdom—there are the royal family, the nobility, the servants, and the subjects.

In Luke 1:31-33, the angel told Mary that her Son should be a great King, the Messiah for whom the Jews were looking; that His Kingdom should have no end.

He is described again in Psalm 45, and what a wonderful King He will be! At His right hand stands the queen, clothed in royal robes. In Rev. 4, she is mentioned again as the four beasts, and four and twenty elders, who will rule with Christ as kings and priests. This is the smallest company of the saved, that Jesus calls a "little flock". They are the ten thousand. Jesus is spoken of as chief among ten thousand. "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints." These are the royal family of the Kingdom of God.

Who are the nobility? I think they are the virgins mentioned in Psalm 45:14-15, and the 144,000 of Rev. 7. There is but one nation, that God has called virgin, and that is Israel. The 144,000 are Israelites only, all other companies being composed of all nations.

In Rev. 14:1-5 the 144,000 are called virgins. They are not the bride, but her companions, who will be brought unto the King with great rejoicing. They must be the nobility of the Kingdom of God.

As no king's household is complete without servants, who are the servants in the Kingdom? I think the answer is found in Rev. 7:9-17—a great company that no one could number, out of all nations. They are immortal beings, as only immortals wear white robes, which represent righteousness. The palms in their hands signify victory over sin and death. In verse 15 we are told that they serve God day and night, in His temple, therefore they must be the servants of the King. These, I think, are all that will be saved up to the time when Jesus begins to reign.

But a king must have subjects. Who are they? In Acts 15:16, 17 we read that when Jesus returns and rebuilds the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, "the residue of men may seek the Lord." These, I think, will be the subjects over whom Jesus will rule. And as even among subjects one holds a higher position than another, so it will be there, each will be in the class to which he belongs.

Personally, I believe in a complete restitution. I am not holding a quarrel or an argument with any who differ with me. Now we see through a glass darkly, but the Bible says, "The watchmen shall see eye to eye when the Lord shall bring again Zion." When Jesus reigns He will speak peace to the nations, and will make wars to cease to the ends of the earth. The people shall all be righteous. He will hear when the poor crieth. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree; instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree. The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad, and the desert shall bud and blossom as the rose, and the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of God. For that time we wait!

MY BOAST IS IN THE GLORIOUS CROSS OF CHRIST

The following is one of the most remarkable compositions ever known. It evidences an ingenuity peculiarly its own. The initial letters spell "My boast is in the glorious cross of Christ." The words in capital letters at the left hand side, when read from top to bottom, and the words in capital letters on the right hand side, when read from bottom to top form the Lord's prayer complete.

M-ake known the gospel truth, OUR Father King.
Y-ield up thy grace, dear FATHER from above.

B-less us with hearts WHICH feelingly can sing:
O-ur life thou ART or EVER God of love.
A-ssuage our grief, IN love FOR Christ we pray;
S-ince the Prince of HEAVEN in GLORY died,
T-ook all my sins and HALLOWED THE display;

I-nfant BE-ing, first a man AND then was crucified.
S-tupenduous God! THY grace and POWER make known;

I-n Jesus' NAME let all THE world rejoice;
N-ow labor in THY heavenly KINGDOM own—
T-hy blessed KINGDOM for thy saints THE choice.
H-ow vile to COME to thee IS all the cry,
E-nemies to THY-self and all that's THINE;

G-raceless our WILL, we live FOR vanity;
L-oathing the very BE-ing, EVIL in design.
O-h, God! thy will be DONE FROM earth to heaven,
R-eclining IN the gospel, let US live
I-n EARTH, from sin DELIVER and forgiven.
O-h AS thyself, BUT teach us to forgive;
U-seless IT'S power TEMPTATION doth destroy;
S-ure IS our fall INTO the depths of woe.

C-arnal IN mind, we have NOT a glimpse of joy
R-aised against HEAVEN; in US no hope we know.
O-h GIVE us grace, and LEAD us in the way:
S-hine on US with thy love, and give US peace!
S-elf, and THIS sin that rises AGAINST us, slay.

O-h grant each DAY our TRESPASSES may cease;
F-orgive OUR evil deeds THAT oft we do;

C-onvince us DAILY of THEM to our shame;
H-elp us with heavenly BREAD; FORGIVE us, too,
R-ecurrent lusts, AND WE'll adore thy name.
I-n thy FORGIV-ness, we AS saints can die.
S-ince for US, and our TRESPASSES so high,
T-hy Son, OUR Savior, djed on Calvary.

"TRUST IN THE LORD WITH ALL THINE HEART; AND LEAN NOT UNTO THINE OWN UNDERSTANDING."—PROVERBS 3:5.

ARE YOU SELF-DENYING ?

OCTOBER is more than half gone. How much have you really denied yourself this month, and how many quarters have accumulated thus far? Shall we be real earnest about it the rest of the month? All right, all together!

Illinois Bereans send their self-denial money to the State Treasurer, Bro. Paul C. Johnson, Oregon, Illinois.

Yes, it is our honest opinion that organization pays, and the more correctly organized a group of people can become the more they can accomplish.

Even where there is no individual who is qualified as an outstanding leader, if a group of Bible students will organize a regular Berean class, and each do his part, that group can accomplish much both for themselves and for others.

TWO NEW CLASSES

1. Senior

At the close of our meetings at the Eldorado, Illinois, church on October 9, a Senior Berean Class was organized with officers as follows: President, Walter Wiggins, Harrisburg, Ill., Rt. 2; Secretary-treasurer, Fred Shain, Eldorado, Rt. 3. The first meeting was called for last week, Tuesday, and we are hoping to hear some good reports from this class.

2. Junior

A Junior Class was also organized at Eldorado, with a fine group of young people. This class, averaging in age about sixteen, has selected Sr. Grace Wiggins for its Leader-president, and Bro. Emil Wiggins for Secretary-treasurer. They also are going to meet on Tuesday nights at the church, and we are praying for success in their work.

The Berean Editor has a "feeling" that at least two more senior societies will materialize between now and Christmas. We wish it were possible to inspire each State society to do its utmost toward getting an organization in every place where there are a few believers. Remember, that a very successful class can be conducted even where there are only two or three church members. One class organized about a year ago in a place where no church or Berean work had ever been attempted before has accomplished splendid work, even though only about four of those who have been able to work regularly with the class were members of the church. But several others who were not members took active part in the Berean class, and they have all increased wonderfully in the knowledge of God's Word and we anticipate that several will soon be brought into the Father's family. It is the inspiration of such examples as this which causes us to so strongly urge an organized class with regular meetings.

Read again the proverb printed at the head of this page. What a beautiful urge to humility! And this was spoken by the Wise Man, all of which goes to show that Solomon was wise because he did not lean on his own understanding in all things, eliminating God, but rather, he placed his trust in the Lord. He who does that has demonstrated wisdom supreme. How much more prosperous we might be in our work if we would place it all in God's hands and bow before Him, asking Him to point out the way. And how much happier we might be if we had faith enough to believe that He actually would lead us, and cause things to work out for the best.

The little child does not worry when he knows mother is working out the matter properly for him. We need more trust in our Father, and less dependence on our own wisdom or strength—more humility and less pride.

DEAR Brethren and Friends of the Weekly Servant, The Restitution Herald: The issue of September 6 is brimful, so to speak, of good things for the "one new man", Eph. 2:15. The arch of prayer, binding, as it were, the messages together, "the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in the breaking of bread, and in prayers," Acts 2:42; "Great men have done it",—all these please verily. We read in Luke 18:13, the words, "God be merciful to me a sinner." May we all have Him say to us: "Thy sins be forgiven thee."

We heartily join Bro. Corbaley in his prayers to God for the four young men, and all others who have been or may be buried with Christ in baptism, to receive an incorruptible crown of life. "I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one," 1 John 2:13; the "wicked one" being the "old man" or the carnal mind. 1 Peter 5:2-6 and 1 Cor. 9:24-27.

Your brother,
R. A. Humphreys,

WAS JESUS CHRIST THE INSTRUMENT OF HIS OWN RESURRECTION?

John 10:17, 18 considered.

By R. H. Judd

HHEREFORE DOES my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father." John 10:17-18.

Several times within the past few months I have had occasion to point out to correspondents the oft repeated statement of Scripture that God raised Jesus Christ from the dead, and the self-evident fact that had God not so raised Him, He would still have remained dead. Some have disputed this, quoting the above verses in support of their belief that Jesus Christ is God; stating that "no person but God could raise Himself from the dead."

While giving our friends credit for the reverence of their belief in the omnipotence of God, the writer would with equal reverence give voice to the Scriptural fact that there are some things which God cannot do. God cannot lie, nor can He "deny Himself"; and more than once has Scripture stated the equivalent of the fact that God cannot die. His "years are throughout all generations" and Scripture informs us that they are also without end. God glories in the fact that He lives for ever. He delights in the name of "The Living God". From generation to generation He says, "I am the Lord, I change not." Here then, is settled, once and for ever, that if Jesus Christ died, He cannot be God.

But, for a moment, let us view the matter from another plane, lower it may be, but equally true in point of fact. It needs no great wisdom to grasp the certainty that intelligent action presupposes life, and that such action is itself positive evidence of the absence of death. The suggestion of our friends is, therefore, self-destructive, and its impossibility self-demonstrated; and the only conclusion available is the denial of the Scriptural statement that "CHRIST DIED".

Though these foregoing remarks logically and Scripturally settle the matter, an explanation of the verses quoted is desirable. Difficulties often vanish when squarely faced, and the actual aspects are honestly considered. Does the language of these verses necessarily imply that Jesus Christ was the instrument of His own resurrection? The answer is an emphatic, "No". It neither states it or implies it. The implication comes from the reader. All through Scripture the fact is recognized that before life eternal can be had, life temporary must be laid down. The 17th verse tells us that JESUS CHRIST was to lay down His life, that (in order that) He might take it again. Not only so, Scripture also recognizes that death is the wages of sin, and that upon Him "who did no sin" death had no real claim, and that He had "the right" (as the R. V. margin correctly puts it, for a dead man has no power) to take it again. The whole transaction was one of right, not power. He had the "right" to lay it down (and no other man has that) and He had the "right" to take it again. From whom then, did He take it? Not from Himself, He could not. Listen—"He asked life of thee and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever". To this Paul adds the testimony "he liveth (now) by the power of God."—2 Cor. 13:4.

FAITH

"If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed"
 Luke 17:6. "A grain of mustard seed which indeed is less than all seeds." Matt. 13:31, 32.

THIS challenge of our Lord to "have faith in God" was brought home to me with new force recently. We were sitting with our open Bible in the garden containing a rock-hewn tomb right near by the site of Calvary, just outside the city wall of Jerusalem, when the friend by me called my attention to a tree at my side which she said was a mustard plant. I immediately picked off several of the ripe seed pods and crushed them in my hand, only to find that which seemed little more than dust, the mustard seed.

As one looked at the tiny grain, and then at the plant that had left the herb family and graduated among trees, one could not but marvel at the miracle of a single season: the miracle of an atom of life contained in that dust-like organism, germinating, and then seizing hold of the forces in the earth beneath and in the heaven above to build up its living tree. The marvel is the smallness of its origin, the vigor of its activity, and the greatness of its accomplishment in the brevity of time.

Every Christian should have that germ of faith. The challenge of Christ is to its acknowledgement and its exercise: to the apprehension of the forces in heaven and on earth for the building up of the divine plans and purposes through us.

Heavenward, He places at our disposal the power of prayer to link us with the divine life and love, to bring into us the forces of spiritual grace and power to energize us for the daily spiritual ministry entrusted to every Christian.

Earthward, He has surrounded us with persons and providences, problems and perplexities, all of which can be seized to incorporate into the living structure of which we are to be builders.

Mustard seed faith linked on to God makes possible the impossible. God can thus accomplish through the feeblest instrument the greatest work.

That mustard tree is the result of the combination of the ethereal and the earthly through the life-link of a single seed.

Far greater will be the accomplishment in the human sphere if you and I become the medium of faith by which the forces of heaven become operative upon the earth through prayer.—Editorial in "The Evangelical Christian",

LESSON V.—October 30, 1927

AMOS DENOUNCES SIN

Amos 2:4—3:15

Devotional Reading: Psalm 15:1-5

GOLDEN TEXT

Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live: and so the Lord, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken. Amos 5:14.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Amos Denounces Sin. Amos was God's spokesman. God revealed to Judah and to Israel that which they may not have known by their own reasoning or their own philosophy, namely, that sin brings its own devastation. This is true of all kinds and classes of sin. True, there is certain dogmatic punishment which parent or state, or even God, pronounces upon the disobedient; but in addition to this, sin in any of its phases corrupts, debilitates, destroys. Amos, speaking for God, revealed not only in the lesson text but elsewhere these facts to God's chosen people.

Christianity and Sin. The true church of God cannot determine what is right or what is wrong merely by the voice of the world. The church is spiritual; the world is carnal. The church must recognize and avoid sin regardless of the world's voice. The church must of necessity stand ready to rise above the looseness, the indifference, or the standard of the world. Sin is sin. It is the Christian's place to discover it that he may avoid it. God has repeatedly cited the fact that all intemperate satisfaction of lust is sin. Carnality that goes beyond the just requirements of health and perfect development is sin.

It is human nature to rebel against restriction. Accordingly, it is human nature to rebel against law: written or moral law. Claims for self and for personal liberty to make decision prove this true. This is specially noted in this present day. Undreamed-of achievement and advancement have all but intoxicated the human mind and carried humanity beyond the ability for self-control. One result is being seen and felt in the increasing latitude and condonement for moral depravity. The present crime wave is made up not only of murder, robbery, train-wrecking, but also of such equally major crimes as trial marriage, free love, condoned adulteries—not only among the adult but, most injurious, among those approaching maturity and majority. Here are crimes that are more emphatically denounced by the God of heaven than are the crimes of murder, etc. These things eat at the very vitals of life.

Liquor. Is it not astonishing that intoxicating liquors are the more freely used by each and every participant of the aforementioned and other deep-dyed sins? Liquors are much used to deaden the higher ideals and to open the gates of lust preparatory to the perpetration of acts of degradation and crime,

This all but universal fact should of itself be sufficient to deny the nation the right of liquor. Especially should the Christian deny himself the privilege of using it or of perpetrating other crime.

Questions. Is our lesson text the word of man or of Jehovah? Is it authentic? Was God unwilling to forgive Judah or Israel? Had they proven their bent to use God-given strength and blessing intemperately and criminally for self-pleasure? Was God justified in withholding further blessing and further helps? Is it a crime before God to deaden one's God-given sensibilities? Is it a crime to excite to abnormal action one's lusts? Does intoxicating liquor do these things? Is the use of intoxicating liquor a crime before God? Is it a crime before God to intentionally break the laws of the land which are in agreement with God's voice? Can a Christian rightly break, either in spirit or in fact, the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead Act?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Seek ye right, not wrong, that ye may live,—that Yahweh God of hosts may be with you as ye have said." Amos 5:14. Roth.

To Israel the warning was, "Woe unto you that desire the day of the Lord! to what end is it for you?" Amos 5:18. Unless there is a change of heart the day of the Lord will come to bring judgment upon Israel themselves and not only to their enemies and the heathen round about them. So with the Christian. The day of Christ is at hand and will bring vengeance upon them that know not God. God cannot be flattered by a make-believe form of Christianity.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Temperance Develops Character. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." Proverbs 16:32. Temperance is but another name for self-control. Primarily, temperance does not have to do with the use of those things which are essentially harmful; but with the proper use of that which is good. Everything that God has made is "very good", Gen. 1:31, "and to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth", 1 Tim. 4:3. But over-indulgence in them changes that which is good in itself into "foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition", 1 Tim. 6:9. "Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues".—Fuller.

Intemperance Leads to Weakness.

If we would enjoy the full possibilities of all our faculties, spiritual and physical, we must bring our bodies into subjection to our wills, and our wills into subjection to God's will. Intemperance deadens the sense of proportion, and draws us gradually, and almost imperceptibly, away from God, until we lose interest in divine things, and at last sink back into the hopelessness and degradation of the world.—G. E. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Intemperance and its results.

In this lesson the humble prophet, raised in the open air, is shown rebuking Israel and warning of impending disasters because of intemperance. This very thing eventually brought the downfall of that nation, and of every other people who have risen and gone down. Our own loved country, with its wealth and luxury, stands in grave danger today. Intemperance may be either an act or an attitude. It leads to extremes in various respects. It may be the drinking of intoxicating liquor which floods reason and causes one to go to ridiculous extremes; it may be the habit of over-exertion which saps one physically, or of over-eating, which brings on ill health and hastens death. Intemperance not only injures one physically, but it blinds men to God and to the spiritual values of life.

Name several common ways in which people in general are intemperate. What did Paul mean by keeping under his body, 1 Cor. 9:26,27?—F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Knowing God: What does it mean? Is it merely an abstract intellectual concept, or does it involve absorbing God's thoughts, feelings, understanding and attitude?

The sins of society and government: What are they and what is their effect upon the masses? God's attitude toward them. The bearing of His kingdom under Christ on His attitude.

Sins of the flesh: clearly discerned in the contrast between a natural desire for food and a glutton's desire for food, and between natural thirst and a drunkard's thirst.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

MRS. GLENDORA MUSSELMAN DIES

Former Matron of Golden Rule Home

The sudden death of Sr. Glendora Musselman is another testimony of the truth that life is but "a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away". For years she had been a sufferer because of different troubles. It was on account of these that she felt compelled, two years ago, to resign as matron of the Golden Rule Home—this after she had endeared herself to all by her constant self-sacrificing labors for others. Since moving from Oregon she made her home with the family of her youngest daughter, Bro. and Sr. E. Cedric Pope, at and near DeKalb, Illinois, which daughter was her assistant at Golden Rule Home.

With her characteristic energy Sr. Musselman had continued to do no little work, till, health constantly failing her more and more, she wearied of the prospect of enforced inactivity and, reversing her decision of years, requested a surgical operation as a possible prolongation of health and life. The operation resulted in death, just as she had been advised by every consulted physician, excepting those who attended her at the last.

Glendora was born to Gideon and Catharine Alspach, July 9, 1862, in Perry Township, Miami County, Indiana. She died at Rochelle, Illinois, October 13, 1927. She was united in marriage with James Musselman, May 27, 1887, who, in 1912, preceded her in death. To them were born five daughters: Catharine, now Mrs. P. C. Landis, Macy, Indiana; Laura, now Mrs. Russel Harmon; Bertha, now Mrs. M. V. Mowrey; Mary, now Mrs. S. D. Berger, all three of Columbia City, Indiana; and Martha, now Mrs. E. Cedric Pope, Cortland, Illinois. These and their five children survive. There also survive the deceased, three brothers and one sister; Ambrose, Miami, Ohio; Abner, Deedsville, Indiana; Albert, Denver, Indiana; and Mrs. Laura Lukenbill, Columbia City, Indiana. Numerous other relatives and friends unite to mourn her loss.

As soon as word was received of the decision to operate the daughters and sister in Indiana, sensing the danger and probable fatality, hastened to be at her side in the trying hour, thus continuing to the end that constant family devotion.

Burial was made from the home of her daughter, Catharine, to the side of her late husband, the writer, assisted by Bro. L. E. Conner, officiating. The large attendance of relatives and friends was vivid testimony of the noble Christian life with which she had endeared herself to those about her.

Sr. Musselman was one who fully believed that her "Redeemer liveth". She lived unto Him. She was laid to rest in the glad hope that, being among the sleeping ones, she will be among the first to hear the call of our returning Lord to awaken and meet Him in the air.

ADVANCEMENT AT MORA

The congregation at Mora, Minnesota, has purchased a church from the Baptist people and they are looking forward to the time when they can get into their new home. The building is located in the country, but will be moved onto the lots in town, which the Ladies' Aid purchased some time ago. The building will compare very favorably with those of other denominations. At the side of the main auditorium is an annex, with sliding doors between the two. This permits its use in case of emergency. Dove-tailing into these rooms is a large vestibule, with doors leading into both rooms. The bell-fry is over this part of the building.

The expense is being met by the local church, but any outside help will be appreciated. The same may be sent to Joe Irene, Mora, Minnesota.

FROM LOS ANGELES

The work is being carried on here as usual. Several of our members are well qualified to conduct the services, which are held every Sunday. Bro. J. E. Hammond is one of our faithful workers. Some of our members are away temporarily on account of their work. Bro. Geo. Rahn and family are at Sacramento, and Bro. and Sr. McLeod are at Strathmore. They meet with us the first Sunday of each month, when Bro. McLeod speaks for us. Sr. Railsback is busy, not only with the work connected with the church, but in visiting those who are unable to attend services and is doing many kindnesses for the alone ones. The Berean work is producing good results, as the young people are encouraged to take an active part. We wish to extend a cordial invitation to any who may be coming to Los Angeles, to meet with us at 1359½ West 24th St.

For any information write or call, E. C. Railsback, 1020 S. Burlington Avenue, phone number, 558942; or J. E. Hammond, 735 Zeyn St., Anaheim, Calif.

THE ELDORADO MEETING

Our meeting of two weeks at the Eldorado church came to a close on Sunday, October 9, with full attendance. Throughout the period, in spite of rain and bad roads, there was very regular attendance and deep interest manifested. In fact, it is easy to see that regular pastoral work conducted at this church could soon build up a fine organization. This is one strong evidence of the value of our state system of evangelistic work. When our first meeting was held there in 1921, there were only three members of the church in the neighborhood, and we had to conduct services in a rural school house. Now we have a good congregation and a fine new church building. The first two meetings there had to be largely financed out of the State Conference treasury, but since then they have taken care of their end of the expenses and built up a good work.

On Sunday afternoon we gathered at the water and baptized Mrs. Walter (Grace) Wiggins, a young wife of about a year, and Emil Wiggins, youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Jesse Wiggins. On the same afternoon these two were chosen as officers in the Berean work, and we predict that they will make good workers.

We are hoping that arrangements can be made before long for more frequent and regular preaching at Eldorado.

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS, MEETING

On Saturday night, October 29, Bro. C. E. Randall expects to start a two weeks' meeting at the Salem Church near Marshall and Martinsville, Illinois. The State Conference is arranging to get Bro. Randall to help in the evangelistic work for a few weeks this fall, as it is physically impossible for Bro. Siple to reach all the places where there ought to be meetings. We are urging everyone who possibly can to boost this Salem meeting and help make it a success.

BLESSINGS

Meadows sweet with new-mown hay
A blade of grass, a way-side flower,
A butterfly on light wing gay,
A fragrant, leafy bower;
The glow-worm and the fire-fly,
Birds, hills and towering trees,
The shady spots, and sunny sky,
And soft, refreshing breeze;
The ocean waves, with snowy crest,
Wild sea-gulls circling high,
The glorious sunset in the west,
Fleecy clouds fitting by—
Are just a few of many things
God gives to show the way
To the path of joy the daylight brings,
And the blessings of to-day.

THE RIGHT TIME

The rebuke of wrong must be guided by the Holy Spirit, must be tactful, without display of conceit or harshness, and in the true spirit of helpfulness. Sometimes the gentle tone is best, as Christ spoke to the woman at the well. Sometimes we may follow Christ's example when He scathingly condemned the scribes and Pharisees. Sometimes the rebuke had better be deferred. Sometimes the very abruptness of it adds weight. Sometimes the rebuke may be put into words and at other times, only a look will suffice, as Christ turned and looked at Peter who denied Him. It is a necessary, though painful service, this of the spiritual surgeon, and all Christians may be called on to render it. May it be given in the spirit and power of Elijah! —Selected from Peloubet's Notes.

DON'T BE HALF AND HALF

In South Africa, in looking for diamonds, they often find a substance that is half charcoal and half diamond. It was intended to be a diamond, but it stopped short, and it is only diamondiferous; it is partly a cinder and partly a jewel. It stopped short, and will never get into the king's crown. Don't be content to be sprinkled on one part with diamond and the other part with slag. —Selected.

AMOS DENOUNCES SIN

IF YOU heard another boy or girl making fun of God, or Sunday School, or Church, would you care enough to tell them how wrong it was to do that? Or if you saw someone taking things that did not belong to him or hurting another, would you be brave enough to tell him to stop doing wrong?

Such was the task God set for the prophet Amos. He lived in Judah, but God sent him north into Israel to warn the Israelites of their wicked deeds.

Some of the Israelites pretended to worship God, and made great show in their sacrifices. They were feasting and drinking and doing all manner of evil things. The rich people made the poor work very hard for them; put them in prison if they could not pay their debts, and took their land away from them if they failed to pay their taxes.

One day a stranger appeared in their midst. When he reached the center of a large throng of people near the place of sacrifice he suddenly turned toward the crowd. He raised his voice and shouted, "Jehovah will roar from Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem and the habitations of the shepherd's shall mourn, and the top of Carmel shall wither."

The stranger was Amos, and he was telling the Israelites that God would speak with a loud voice and that there would be trouble in the land.

The people were surprised at the appearance and threatening message of this stern speaker, and more so as he continued.

First Amos told of the sins of the people of Damascus; then of the sins of the people of Gaza, of Tyre, of Moab and how God would punish these people. This delighted the listeners because the people mentioned were all enemies of Israel.

But when he mentioned the sins of Judah in the same manner, the audience became somewhat worried, for Judah was related to Israel, you might say, even though they were jealous of one another. And they thought it curious that Amos should condemn his own country. For he told them that God would send fire upon Judah and it should destroy the palaces in Jerusalem, because they had despised His law, had failed to keep His commandments, and had told great lies.

And then Amos spoke to them. "Thus saith the Lord; for three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes." "Sold the righteous for silver" meant they sold one another to be slaves if they could not pay a debt. And the pair of shoes was given where they received land from another.

Amos continued, "You are unjust to the poor, try to lead others into wrong, pretend to worship, but do not even listen to my prophets. You drink wine and tempt others to do so.

"I destroyed the Ammonites and all their possessions for you after I led you out of Egypt, and through the Wilderness for forty years, that you might possess the land of the Ammonites."

Then Amos pronounced the promise of punishment, "Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver himself: neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself: neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself."

"You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities."

It was a bold sermon, and should have made the people stop and think about their guilt and punishment.

But do people today listen to God's warnings? Are you trying to really please God? Are you living soberly, righteously, avoiding all appearances of evil? Are you skipping classes, are you living temperately in all things? Think!

By Samuel E. Haney

Through oversight the author's name was omitted last week when the former part of this article was printed.—Editor.

INSTINCTIVELY associate Eph. 6:10, "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might", with a small, shriveled old man I met in Texas, twenty miles from any church. Not being a Christian at the time I thought the old gentleman was a weakling from every viewpoint. But now I visualize the dear old saint as having been one of the very few truly strong men I have ever met. He and his sons, with hemlock boards, erected a twelve by fifteen feet building with stationary benches on the sides. Every Sunday morning and afternoon this valiant man of God preached and conducted Sunday School. He surely was, "A lily among thorns". The Lord only knows the outcome of this humble servant's work. He was a mighty power in God's hands. "Then said he, here am I; send me", seems to have been the thought that actuated him.

Paul says, "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh"—not because of physical, but moral weakness—unwillingness to make a stand for righteousness: as most Christians are today, e.g., "That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, (as Israel did) but after the Spirit". Rom. 8:3, 4.

There were many strong saints the other side of Calvary. Abraham was one, he was strong in faith, giving glory to God, Rom. 4:19-21. Some are referred to in Hebrews 11. A sample, "Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens. Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection." 33-35.

That it is "not by might, nor by power", but by the Holy Spirit that the battle for life is won, we read, "He will keep the feet of his saints, and the wicked shall be silent in darkness; for by strength shall no man prevail". 1 Sam. 2:9. "I returned, and saw under the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all." Eccl. 9:11. Paul says, "God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty. . . . We are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honorable, but we are despised", 1 Cor. 1:27; 4:10. "The way of the Lord is strength to the upright: but destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity." Prov. 10:29.

David voices the Christian's sentiment, "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength. The Lord will give strength unto his people. The Lord is their strength in the time of trouble. God is our refuge and strength. Sing aloud unto God our strength. My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever. They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God."

Any wonder Paul advised Timothy to be "strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus"?

No one can live right in his own strength. Like water that collects on low lands and becomes stagnant, unregenerate man astray from his Creator gravitates to a common level spiritually, morally, mentally and physically:—inert—stagnant—dead!

"Be strong, ye valiant soldiers of the Lord,

Who wear the gospel armor and march with one accord;

Well shod with peaceful tidings a hostile land we tread;

Unsnared by cruel errors along our pathway spread.

Be strong ye Christian soldiers the hottest fight is near;

Sin's blinded host shall tremble our final shout to hear;

The Spirit's sword is piercing all errors through and through,

The word of God, resistless, all nations will subdue.

Be strong, ye Christian soldiers, your gospel weapons wield,

Jehovah's armor wins us success on every field.—By

G. M. Bills (Eph. 6:10)

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 15

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE EASTERN EMPIRE

Daniel 8

AND IT waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground and stamped upon them." The "host of heaven" or literally, the ruling religious body during the early years of the Eastern empire, was that known as the Arian. From the days of Constantine the Great, by whom the foundations of the Eastern empire were laid, down to those of Theodosius the Great (A. D. 379-395) a fierce struggle was carried on between the Arians and the Catholics, in which the former gradually lost their power, and in the beginning of the reign of Theodosius all who professed that faith were by reason of a decree issued by him, classed as "heretics", and Catholicism proclaimed as the religion of the state. "Theodosius was the first of the emperors baptized in the true faith of the Trinity. Although he was born of a Christian family, the maxims, or at least the practice, of the age encouraged him to delay the ceremony of his initiation till he was admonished of the danger of delay by the serious illness which threatened his life towards the end of the first year of his reign. Before he again took the field against the Goths, he received the sacrament of baptism from Acholius, the orthodox bishop of Thessalonica; and as the emperor ascended from the holy font, still glowing with the warm feelings of regeneration, he dictated a solemn edict, which proclaimed his own faith, and prescribed the religion of his subjects. "It is our pleasure (such is the imperial style) that all the nations which are governed by our clemency and moderation should steadfastly adhere to the religion which was taught by St. Peter to the Romans, which faithful tradition has preserved, and which is now professed by the pontiff Damasus, and by Peter, bishop of Alexandria, a man of apostolic holiness. According to the discipline of the apostles, and the doctrine of the Gospel, let us believe the sole deity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, under an equal majesty and a pious Trinity. We authorize the followers of this doctrine to assume the title of Catholic Christians; and as we judge that all others are extravagant madmen, we brand them with the infamous name of Heretics, and declare that their conventicles shall no longer usurp the respectable appellation of churches. Besides the condemnation of Divine justice, they must expect to suffer the severe penalties which our authority, guided by heavenly wisdom shall think proper to inflict upon them."—Gibbon: Chap. 27.

Hitherto Catholicism had been confined almost entirely to the lower classes of the population. Most of the successors of Constantine the Great professed the Arian faith, and the nobility adopted the same creed, not, perhaps, because they had any preference for it, but as a matter of policy. Now, however, it had "magnified itself even to the prince of the host", the emperor Theodosius, "and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary cast down." The "daily sacrifice" is the sacrifice of Christ on the cross, a sacrifice which was sufficient to atone for the sins of the whole world. But by the introduction of the doctrine of the Eucharist, and the worship of saints, the power and sufficiency of the Crucifixion were discredited, and the real and only Mediator between God and man was replaced by a multitude of man-made saints.

"Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground, and it practiced and prospered." "The Catholics of Constantinople were animated with joyful confidence by the baptism and edict of Theodosius; and they impatiently waited the effects of his gracious promise. Their hopes were speedily accomplished; and the emperor, as soon as he had finished the operations of the Gothic campaign, made his public entry into the capital at the head of a victorious army. The next day after his arrival he summoned Damophilus to his presence, and offered that Arian prelate the hard alternative of subscribing the Nicene creed, or of instantly resigning, to the orthodox believers, the use and possession of the episcopal palace, the cathedral of St. Sophia, and all the churches of Constantinople. The zeal of Damophilus, which in a Catholic saint would have been justly applauded, embraced, without hesitation a life of poverty and exile, and his removal was immediately followed by the purification of the Imperial city. The Arians might complain, with some appearance of justice, that an inconsiderable congregation of sectaries should usurp the hundred churches which they were insufficient to fill, whilst the far greater part of the people was cruelly excluded from every place of religious worship About six weeks afterwards, Theodosius declared his resolution of expelling from all the churches of his dominions the bishops and their clergy who should obstinately refuse to believe, or at least to profess, the doctrine of the Council of Nice. His lieutenant Sapor was armed with the ample powers of a general law, a special commission, and a military force; and this ecclesiastical revolution was conducted with so much discretion and vigor, that the religion of the emperor was established, without tumult or bloodshed, in all the provinces of the East."—Gibbon: Chap. 27.

From the foregoing it will be seen that the motives and actions of Nebuchadnezzar, of Antiochus Epiphanes, and of Theodocius were identical in every respect. Each desired, not only that those under them should unitedly obey the civil laws, but that they should be bound together in one religious body. The same motive later actuated the rulers of the Holy Roman empire; but the object desired has never yet been, and never shall be, achieved. In much earlier times the efforts of Jezebel in the same direction appeared to be so successful that Elijah lamented the fact, as he believed, that he was the last remaining who worshiped the true God. We can imagine his surprise when he learned that there were seven thousand others who had not bowed the knee to Baal; and it is equally surprising to ourselves to learn from the Revelation that in the darkest days of Europe there were still 144,000 persons who followed the teachings of Christ, and who were in no way deceived by the false doctrines of Catholicism or any other religion.

"REACHING FORTH"

HOW few of us know anything about this "reaching forth", spoken of in Philippians 3:13. The most of us are contented to live on the horizontal. To reach forth is a painful thing. To stretch means to tear apart the things that have grown together through our settling down.

Big things in every realm are the things reached for, striven after. Growing pains are an indication that the lad is reaching out after greater stature. The pain and pressure of study means that there is a reaching after greater knowledge. Time and effort given to prayer and Bible study indicate a desire after God and greater spirituality.

But most of us settle down to small things, small talk, small actions, small desires, small hopes and aspirations, small faith. What does the most of what we are to do amount to anyway?

The Bible we profess to believe is a tremendous Book, discussing big themes, attempting to implant great hopes, urging men and women to reach out after a great, big, holy life.

The God we claim to honor is a Great Being. There is nothing small about what He does. When He makes a sparrow or a robin He takes the same painful care as if He were creating an archangel. When He puts the colors on the pansy or rose He devotes His best, just as if He were putting the colors in the heavens or in the rainbow. God does little things in a big way.

The Christ we love did His work in the self-same way that the Father did His. He never did a mean, unworthy, little, wasteful thing. He was forever teaching men by His words and actions and prayers to "reach forth". He turned the eyes of men from the dull, cold earth beneath their feet to see God and heaven and all the wonders and beauties thereof.

Men show their greatness in their incapacity to stoop to things little. We lack greatness because we lack magnitude, immensity, infinity, superiority. Much that we dabble with will pass away. The things of God and Christ abide and all these things are to be reached after.

It is the ruggedness of the heights the most of us lack. "Lift up your eyes unto the hills". It is the altitudes, the magnitudes, the infinitudes that we all need. There need be no fear that we are ever in danger of getting too much of these things. God help us to do more "reaching forth".
—"The Evangelical Christian".

enant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob.

Moses came to the mount of God, "and the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the bush . . . , and he said, . . . I am the Lord God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob"

What does this mean? He is not only able to deliver from Egyptian bondage, but He can raise them from the dead, and make them equal unto the angels which are in heaven. God assured Moses that He would be with him. "And Moses said unto God, Behold, when I come unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, The God of your fathers hath sent me unto you; and they shall say to me, What is his name? what shall I say unto them? And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: . . . thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you." Scholars say, "I will be what I will be", evidently the one promised in the covenants. Moreover, God said unto Moses, "Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations." Truly, there is no other name given among men whereby we must be saved.

When those who denied the resurrection came to Jesus with what they thought could not be answered, Jesus said, "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God, for in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven. But as touching the dead have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, I am the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?" Why? His name is in the powerful One. Thou shalt call His name, Jesus, the powerful One.

Paul says that Jesus Christ is the minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers. Faith in these promises is the reason Abraham was willing to sacrifice his son. Paul says these things were written, not "for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead." Rom. 4:25.

We have traced the Name back to Seth. It is that promised Name all the way down. Paul says, "I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; . . . and did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ."

Patient: I have a terrible rumbling in my stomach, like a wagon going over a bridge.

Doctor: Very likely that truck you ate for dinner last night.

THIRTY YEARS ZIONISM

THE END of the nineteenth century witnessed the greatest crisis in the life of the Jewish people. The rise of a machine civilization which resulted in the industrialization of Central and Western Europe and, subsequently, in the emancipation of the Jew in the West, was instrumental in dividing the Jewish people in two, one half tending toward assimilation with the people sheltering them, and the other toward national revitalization. In the West, the Jews were busy destroying the Jewish tradition and devitalizing Jewish life, while in the East they clung to national hopes and made frantic efforts to survive as a national group. The progressive nationalization of Jewish life in the East corresponded with its denationalization in the West. While Hebrew was forgotten in the West, it was revived in the East. This unequal development of the historic process in the East and in the West was instrumental in driving a wedge between the two sections of Jewry. In this moment of despair, there arose in the center—in Austria—Theodor Herzl with his gospel of Zionism. Vienna in the nineties was the threshold of two worlds, the Eastern and the Western, and the meeting place of Eastern and Western Jewry. There is historical logic in the fact that the founder of Zionism appeared neither in the West nor the East of Europe, but in its center, Vienna. The Austrian Jew of the nineties was sufficiently de-ghettoized to understand the political fabric of modern life and not sufficiently de-judaized to have lost all Jewish sentiment. Theodor Herzl was a Western Jew with an Eastern background; he was a modern man with a sense for legend and adventure. His appearance upon the Jewish horizon caused a sensation in the East and a terror in the West. To the Eastern Jew, his arrival was nothing short of Messianic; to the Western Jew, nothing short of treachery. No sooner did he make his appearance than the rabbis in the West, the agents of assimilation, published the famous protest against Zionism. In the East, however, he was acclaimed by rabbis and free thinkers alike.

Zionism, as Herzl understood it, meant two things: the will to a Jewish national life and the will to Jewish statehood on the national soil of the Jewish people. To achieve this end, a strong organization, representing the Jewish people, and financial means to carry out the plans were necessary. The organization was created by the First Zionist Congress and the rudimentary agency—the Colonial Bank, by the Second Zionist Congress. Before the Fifth Zionist Congress disbanded in December, 1900, the Jewish National Fund was already in existence.

The second Zionist generation has a very vague picture of Zionist history of the first decade. Although Eastern Jewry was nationalistic to the core, it was not politically minded. Western Jewry, which was politically minded, was not nationalistically inclined, with the result that Theodor Herzl had to wage war against two fronts. In the East, the stronghold of Jewish nationalism, he had to fight for political Zionism and in the West, for the Jewish nation. His main adversaries in the East were Achad Ha'am and his group in Odessa. In the West, his adversaries were the upper Jewish classes and the Jewish clergy. It was easy for Herzl to wage a successful fight against his opponents in the West, for their attitude toward anything Jewish was negative, while his own was positive. As a Jew, he was stronger than his opponents, and the stronger emerges victor; but quite different was the situation in the East where Jewish tradition was entrenched.

Theodor Herzl was no match for a dialectician like Achad-Ha'am. In comparison to substantial Eastern Judaism, Herzl's Jewishness was weak and anemic. Was he not a newcomer in the field? But Herzl recognized at once that to effect a change it was necessary to concentrate the fight in the East. Since he, himself, was not alive to this task, he engaged the good services of Max Nordau to help him; while Herzl was busy consolidating the Zionist organization and making the Zionist movement a strong factor in Jewish life, Max Nordau was fighting the war of political Zionism in the East. Just as Herzl was no match for Achad-Ha'am, so Achad-Ha'am was no match for Nordau. The latter was a better dialectician and a more powerful publicist. In the fight between Herzlism and Achad-Ha'amism, which Nordau fought, Nordau emerged victor. Eastern Jewry whose only strength was the Book, and accustomed to think in spiritual terms alone, accepted political Zionism. In 1906, political Zionism was so strongly entrenched in the East and the figure of Herzl so outstanding, that he dared submit the Uganda proposition to a Sixth Zionist Congress at Basle.—By Dr. S. M. Melamed, in The New Palestine.

FULL SURRENDER BRINGS GREAT REWARD

"AND HE SAID, CERTAINLY I WILL BE WITH THEE."—EXODUS 3:12.

By Samuel E. Haney

HISTORICALLY and typically Moses is the Old Testament's great character. Besides being God's medium of the law's delivery to Israel, he typifies Christ in person and acts.

Let us try to get a few lessons from the life of this great servant of God's by observing a few Biblical high-lights. No other descendant of Adam's has ever been given so great a task as that given Moses in contending with Pharaoh in the delivery of God's people (between two and three million) from their Egyptian bondage. A previous deterrent experience had its effect upon his naturally placid temperament at this crucial period of his life, namely, "And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand. And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? intendest thou to kill me, as thou killedest the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known. Now when Pharaoh heard this thing he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well." Exodus 2:11-15.

We next find Moses on a desert keeping his father-in-law's flock, where God attracted his attention by a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush. Here God informed him of the affliction of His people in Egypt; and that He had come down to deliver them; and to take them to a good land, flowing with milk and honey. Then came the command, "Come now therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt."

With what diffidence and trepidation Moses replied, "Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" But would not such a stupendous undertaking have bewildered us? And would not we have needed just such encouragement as was given the great emancipator? "Certainly I will be with thee (and the added certainty of success); and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee:

When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain," Exodus 3:12, said God.

Moses, like everyone that takes the Lord's word seriously, was strengthened in spirit, body and mind by his interview with God. At the age of an hundred and twen-

I Surrender All

All to Jesus I surrender,
All to Him I freely give;
I will ever love and trust Him,
In His presence daily live.

All to Jesus I surrender,
Humbly at His feet I bow;
Worldly pleasure all forsaken,
Take me, Jesus, take me now.

All to Jesus I surrender,
Make me, Savior, wholly Thine,
Let me feel the Holy Spirit,
Truly know that Thou art mine.

HOW CAN WE BUILD?

A LETTER late Saturday afternoon asks for advice, and so-forth, relative to local church activity. Nine families in a city of a few thousand have for several years been holding Sunday School and meeting from house to house. But the disadvantage of "house" meetings creates longings for a Church house.

I believe you are on the right track, Sister. Just a suggestion to you, to the brethren in nearby communities, and to the brotherhood everywhere:

If one and all—young, middle-aged, and old—will tithe their "increase", that is, their earnings, the people of the Church of God can maintain double the service and, besides, build several church buildings annually.—Editor.

* * * *

CHRISTIANS are different. They are followers of Christ.

* * * *

CHRISTIANITY is a fruit of faith. It is impossible, as a fruit of good works or of morality.

* * * *

CHRISTIANS are God's real workers. Their faith impels them. Idleness would make them unlike Christ.

* * * *

CHRIST's call to repentance is not alone a call away from sin-activity; it is a call unto fervid activity in the ways of Him who calls.

* * * *

EARNEST work for the Master makes the worker "temperate in all things". Such a worker strives to regard every beneficial law, especially laws in the interest of others.

* * * *

"LOVE is blind" may be wholly true; but it can be seen by him who is not blind. It is seen and known by its works. True love for God works for God. It seeks to serve Him whom it loves.

* * * *

NEXT Sunday is set aside by the International Sunday School Committee as Temperance Sunday. The Christian needs to be "temperate in all things". There is one way in which intemperance is increasing by leaps and bounds. That is in studied disobedience of the laws of God and of the land.

* * * *

CHRISTIANS have no Scriptural right to disregard the laws of the land any more than they have a right to disregard the laws of God's Word. Merely because the government establishes an unpopular law is no excuse for one to evade and break the law. There is surely a great increase in crime simply because so-called respectable citizens publicly make light of, ignore and break laws that are calculated to protect society.

* * * *

ON ANOTHER page is an article purporting to be the words of United States Attorney General John G. Sargent, under the title, "Flayer for Abuse of Law." In it he very properly calls attention to the fact that much of the deplorable criminal condition can be justly traced to persons who make a business of abusing the law for their own personal service, and to others who, for gain, assist the lawbreakers to escape the penalties of the law. It does not require a Bible student to discern that the social condition of the world is worse than it was but a few years back. The very freedom from tyranny which democracy is supposed to have vouchsafed is apparently creating a different form of tyranny, one that is beyond the power of democracy to control, one which is more devastating than monarchy itself. Here is reason for the direction toward "worse and worse".

LET'S STAND FOR SOMETHING

LET'S STAND for something! Let's stand for real, tangible Christianity! for a Christianity that reveals to the world that Christ's ways mean something! Let's worship God "in spirit and in truth"—not simply at an occasional hour appointed for prayer and lecture, but every hour: in our business plans and dealings, in our employment, in our daily plans of life! Let's live for God!

Let's Stand for God's Church

Let's stand for God's Church! Let's exalt the Church above every man-made order or body! God has thus exalted it. He has placed it next unto Christ; and He has exalted Christ "far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all."—Eph. 1:21. He hath exalted Christ above every other name, including, of course, the Church, and He hath placed the Church next unto Christ—even as His body. The people who make up the Church are by God exalted above every other people! They compose God's own "called-out-ones. Let's exalt it above every other organization of people! Let's make its labors and duties of first importance! Let's count its gatherings for prayer and study as holding precedence over every other appointment! Let's not belittle the Church, nor bedraggle God's Name by absenting ourselves from Church services to patronize commercialized pleasure, to joy-ride, to swell family reunions, to serve self! If Christians, let's stand for God's Church.

Let's Stand for Sunday

Let's stand for Sunday! Let's make Sunday a day in which to really commemorate the Resurrection of Christ! Some may say that Sunday is not the day of resurrection. That makes little difference. The day has been set aside by different nations as a day commemorating that greatest of all past events. Let's do in fact what the worldly powers pretend to do! In these days when everything and everybody is reeling in the drunkenness of pleasure or of avarice, let us, as Christians, stand for Christ and His Name! To this end let's stand for Him on that every seventh day which is legally set apart to worship God and serve the Name of His Son! Let's make Sunday a day of real commemoration!

* * * *

Let's stand for a Christianity that shows results upon our lives, upon our characters, upon our doings! If in anything we as Christians become intemperate, let it be in Christian service and in Christianity!

In these closing days of Gentile times let's stand for God! for Christ! for God's Church! and for that day which has been legally sanctified, in which to worship, honor and exalt God and all that is His!

Let's stand for something!

Singing a lie—teaching a lie—living a lie are all the same. They all come from the same source—a liar. "And all liars, shall have their part in the lake of fire which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death." Rev. 21:8. Let us quit singing lies, by using Our Own song books; stop teaching lies, by getting Our Own literature; and if we have been living a lie, cease by being what we really are.—C. E. Randall

EVERLASTING—PERPETUAL

By C. E. Randall

THE words "everlasting", "forever", "perpetual", etc., are words which vary in length of duration of time. The subject matter determines the span of time over which they spread. In some instances they are used of unending time, while in other cases they merely cover a short period of time. This difference of usage must be carefully noted in order to arrive at the true meaning of the author.

In Exodus 40:15 the Aaronic priesthood is spoken of as an everlasting priesthood. It is evident from Scripture that this priesthood was only to continue until Christ came, who was made a Priest forever after the order of Melchisedec.

The yearly sacrifice under the Old Covenant was given Israel as an everlasting statute, Lev. 16:34. This was an ordinance that could not take away sin, Heb. 10:34. No one would say that this statute is still operative. Yet it was an everlasting statute. The duration of the Covenant of which it was a part determined the period of time covered by the word "everlasting".

"Forever"

This word does not always mean the perpetuity of time, although in the majority of instances it is so used. There are places where it denotes a very brief period of time. Such is true of its usage in Jonah 2:6. Jonah, in speaking of his plight in the whale's belly, says, "The earth with her bars was about me for ever." The extent of this span of time was three days and nights.

In Isa. 34:10, the terms "for ever" and "for ever and ever" are applied to the troublous times and conditions coming upon the land of Palestine during the time of trouble coming upon Israel. These statements cannot extend over more than a few years of time.

"Perpetual"

"Why is my pain perpetual, and my wound incurable . . . ?"—Jer. 15:18. Jeremiah, in this part of his prayer, speaks of his pain as being "perpetual". This pain as mentioned here appears to be the persecution heaped upon him by the wicked Jews. It was a perpetual pain, yet in the extreme it could not last longer than the few remaining years of his life. His persecution determined the time limit of "perpetual".

The peace offering was required of Israel and given as a "perpetual" statute throughout their generations. Lev. 3:16, 17. Like the yearly sacrifice it passed away with the Covenant of which it was a part. It was a part of the "shadow of good things to come". Thus the time limit of "perpetual" as here used extended to the time when these good things of the New Covenant established on better promises came into operation.

GIANTS

By Lottie E. Young

I CAN remember as a small girl asking my father which he liked to read the better, the Old or the New Testament, and how astonished I was when he answered, The latter, as I found the stories in the older part of the Bible more to my liking. Since then I have learned to see more as he did, and to understand better "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ" and to exclaim with the Apostle Paul, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God". But I have never lost my interest in the more ancient part of God's Word, finding in the accounts of the struggles and victories of the worthies there mentioned, many things which apply to us so much farther down the stream of time.

From beginning to end, the life of David, the author of the Psalms, is so full of trust in God, and yet his faults and failings are so utterly human. Always more ready to confess these faults and failings and to ask for forgiveness from the Heavenly Father than most of us are, it is most interesting reading. I am sure no boy or girl who has had any religious education at all but has been thrilled by the graphic description of David's encounter with Goliath. And perhaps we children of a larger growth may find something in this recital which will appeal to us.

In the first place, let our imaginations picture the young boy as he runs forward to meet the giant, not dressed in any of the cumbersome armor which Saul had offered him, but with the few stones in the sling which he knew how to use so well. He was not disturbed by the great sword or spear of Goliath. Why? Because the giant had nothing but himself and his weapons to depend on, while David had an Almighty Ally to help him. Hear his, "I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied." And so may we, when surrounded by troubles we cannot understand or see our way through, say, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Goliath was truly a huge figure. But we often have things in our lives which, beginning as trifles, turn out to be giants before we are through with them.

Giant Appetite is a terrible enemy to some. How often we yield to the eating or drinking of something because "it tastes so good," knowing full well we will suffer for it ultimately! Unless we fight hard, we will come to the place where we will say, "I just can't get along without it"—be it tobacco or candy, drink or dress.

Giant Selfishness has overcome many who forget, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." They think they are clever if they get ahead of the other fellow in some business transaction, or social event, not heeding the Apostle's, "in honour preferring one another." The world would be a beautiful place if this giant, which lives in every home to a certain extent, would get a black eye every time we are in conflict with the question of lov-

Giant Temper comes into existence with every child born, and unless a firm hold is kept on this tyrant he very soon assumes huge proportions. We have all seen tiny children throw themselves on the ground, screaming at the top of their lungs, while a mother sits by and helplessly says, "I can't do anything with him when he gets such spells." Unless this giant is soundly thrashed times without number the end of its victim is self-destruction.

Giants Despair and Worry often go hand in hand and are so hard to overcome when things combine to make us feel "blue". But let us remember that there is nothing so bad but it might be worse, and that fretting over troubles never helped a particle. Remember our Savior's words, "I have overcome the world"; but to many living at the same time as He walked in Jerusalem, the world would have seemed to finish His career by the cruel death of the cross. We know He was tempted and tried in all points as we are, and, in addition to the daily thorns in His earthly career, He had the treachery of one of His chosen to bear. Finally He suffered the loss of His dearest friends, as we read on the last night of His life here, when friends could have assuaged the agony so much, "they all forsook Him and fled." So when "blue" Monday or Tuesday, or any other day, comes along, let us sing, "Count your blessings", and put the song into practice by finding and helping someone who has even heavier trials than you to bear. Such can always be found.

How can we overcome these monster enemies that are daily disputing our passage through life? Let us learn the secret of David, the great giant-killer. Two things you will notice helped him in his fight. First, he called to mind his former deliverances. Goliath was a dreadful monster, but God had delivered him from the paws of the bear and lion who had come to devour his flock. If He had delivered him from them He would from a man who had defied the armies of the living God. We are very happy when God delivers us from some heavy trial, although we do not often thank Him, thinking it would have happened anyhow. But we worry just as much when the next "lion" comes our way. If God has helped us in the past, it is the best evidence in the world He will help us again. Second, in the fight David made the most of his talents. We all realize the power of prayer, and how faith in God is a necessity if a life is to amount to anything. The Apostle James tells us, "faith without works is dead". Suppose David had prayed God to strike Goliath down with a thunderbolt and had done nothing else. It is very likely his prayer would not have been answered. But he used his hands and brains as well as his tongue and won a great victory through God's help. We cannot pray too much, providing we are not so foolish as to imagine God will accept our praying as a substitute for fighting. We must put on the Christian armor from head to foot. We must wield valiantly the sword of the spirit, "which is the word of God", and before which every giant temptaion goes down. Then can we merit the gracious word, "Overcomer", and receive the blessing promised to such.

PLAYED FOR ABUSE OF LAW

VILLIFICATION of the laws by the intelligent, and the constant reviling of men sworn to uphold the rules of society were declared by United States Attorney General John G. Sargent, as mischievous propaganda which threatened the very structure of National safety.

Attorney General Sargent was the guest of honor and speaker of the thirty-third annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Bar Association. More than three hundred members, their wives and families, were in attendance at the three-day convention held at Bedford, Pennsylvania, in the latter part of last June.

Observance of the law as a private as well as public duty, a private, individual duty of which each individual and he alone can make performance absolutely sure, was the keynote of the message delivered by the Attorney General, to be imparted through the representatives of the legal arm of the State's Government to its citizenry.

The Attorney General minced no words nor did he employ fanciful flights of oratory to drive home his personal view that the "enforcement of the law was a public duty, imposed by the people upon their servants, which may or may not be discharged, depending upon the integrity, ability and industry of the servants, as well as the cunning and intelligence of violators and the support they get from their sympathizers."

Self-respecting women who wear smuggled diamonds were placed by Attorney General Sargent in the same category as users of smuggled narcotics. He made no reference in his address to any specific law, but urged his attentive listeners to lend their support and cooperation to the enforcement and observance of all laws.

"To my way of thinking one of the most mischievous forms of propaganda in circulation is the flippant, jeering attitude of certain public prints, journals and other periodicals, toward the law and the officers of the law striving to secure its enforcement," he said.

"You cannot constantly, day after day, treat the antics and predicaments of the opium users as a funny spectacle, the smuggler who provides him his ruinous poison as a hero, and the officers who undertake to ferret out and punish and prevent smuggling as snoopers, smellers and gum shoe artists. To do so is to cultivate and raise in the minds of the thoughtless and the thinking who want to take that view the impression that the man who robs a mail car, kills a guard defending the mail, is a hero, too.

"When intelligent, educated men hold up to ridicule the rules for its conduct which society makes; imitate and by suggestion advise that such rules ought to be violated; ridicule and revile, as undesirable members of the community, men sworn to defend and enforce its rules; devote their intelligence, wit and resources to making crime and criminals interesting and attractive, why is it not to be expected the thoughtless, the unfortunate, the ignorant, the vicious, will try and get rid of the oppressors of the criminal, in any way, by any means, any violence that will be most effective?"

"Day by day, because someone pays for the doing of it, and because the great body of law-abiding citizens is complaisant and says nothing to show its disapproval, flippant, jeering writers, publishers, soap-box orators and cabaret performers sow the wind and society reaps it all in whirlwinds which blast and destroy."—The Philadelphia Inquirer.

HOW TO CHECK CRIME

A WRITER, Mr. Netley Lucas, a young criminologist of Britain, says that fear, alone, can safeguard society. He suggests that the United States resort to corporal punishment: that it will reduce crime. Yes, in the middle ages physical pain was said to be a deterrent to crime. The rack was used, the boot, the cat-o'-nine-tails, etc., etc. Thus they thought violence would cure violence. And possibly it did, at least to some extent. But, punishment must not be used as a matter of vengeance.

Would this suggestion help? Let us get back to the good old days when the Bible was read in the schools and studied by the fireside, when all the family were familiar with its story of sin and its awful consequences. Let us teach our children the WORD of the living God, and teach them to respect God's Word. The State should punish crime swiftly. This thing of dragging things out in court because someone has money is all wrong.

The wave of crime that is sweeping over this nation is vaulting, and growing in momentum. To pussyfoot with it will not help. Apply law and punishment, and do so quickly, we suggest. The signs of our times do not promise much in the future that looks better, but the Word promises the kingdom, and it is near at hand. Amen.

SEVEN HUNDRED PER CAPITA

IN 1926 the American people smoked more than 88,000,000,000 cigarettes! Taking our population from the cradle to the grave, this figures out more than seven hundred a year per capita. We may well assume that one-third of our population is either too young to smoke or too sensible. Therefore, the cigarette consumers themselves use well over one thousand a year each, or more than three a day. Of course, these are conservative estimates; there are many who smoke three cigarettes by the time they reach work in the morning.

Everywhere one goes today,—in hotels, restaurants, trains, offices,—he finds nearly every man puffing away incessantly at a cigarette; and, sad to say, many women are now brazen enough to smoke in public too.

Cigarettes retail at an average price of one cent each. As a nation, therefore, we spent $880,000,000 for these little white slavers. And this stupendous total takes no account of the hundreds of millions of dollars spent for tobacco in other forms.—Selected,

SORROW NOT

1 Thess. 4:13

By E. Cedric Pope

IN EARLY days when Christianity was just beginning, there was a great cry for leaders. Leaders were more precious then than they are today, or ever will be again. Throughout the life of Christ, He was the one great Leader of all. Upon His shoulders was the responsibility of the New Covenant which God was presenting to man. To Christ all people came with their questions, placing all their faith in Him. He was as a mother of a family of twelve in His dealing with the apostles. For even as a mother has power to wipe away all pain, and with a tender kiss convert the tear-stained face to one beaming with joy, so Christ with a few soft words healed all the apostles' wounds.

The time came too soon when Christ could no longer carry this responsibility. With parting words of a Comforter to be sent by the Father, He placed the burden upon the few faithful ones who were yet with Him. Think, if you can, of how dear those few leaders must have been to their various communities which they served!

What a sad scene it must have been when one of these lay dying. The church which he had led would realize how much it had relied upon him. Its worshipers could see that should he pass away their pillar would be gone. They no longer would have one to whom they might take their trials, and be soothed back to happiness. These thoughts, with many others, perhaps prompted them to seek some quiet place where they could go to Him who had the power to give or take. Their prayer went up sincerely from grieved hearts. Oh! that he might be saved! Still, even as the apostles could not cast out the devil from a certain young man, they could not save his life. He had to die. But, oh, for that soothing voice of Paul! That it might sound in their ears again and again! "Sorrow not, even as others, which have no hope."

This same thing is occurring all over this old world of ours. All people are experiencing the pains of sorrow. China of today is a peculiar example of this very thing. She has been built up in Christianity by the western civilization. The people over there have become almost reliant upon us. But now they are to be deserted because of a trouble within the nation. They are very much depressed and have formed groups that they may ask God's help. Yet there seems no relief, so they trudge on along their way with broken hearts. If they could only listen to the rustling leaves whispering, Sorrow not as those without hope.

Not only large organizations have responsibilities and efficient leaders. There is an organization which has both and which is far closer to all of us. We often acclaim father to be the head of the family, but, oh, how much leading, silent though it be, mother does. To her we go with sorrow and with joy, and she receives both with patient soothing ways. None can replace her, yet her call, too, must come. In our distress we call ourselves together, and earnestly we petition our Father for her life. Yet in our earnestness we never forget that even Christ asked, "Not my will, but thine". So we, as Christ, ask, but even as we ask she passes on. We are left gazing into darkness, even as the apostles were left gazing into heaven at our Lord's ascension. God, send the angels that they may stand by us, and while they say, "Fear not, thou", Lord whisper, "Sorrow not, for yours is a glorious hope."

WOMEN AND CIGARETTES

MR. JOHN SNAPE, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Cleveland, Ohio, has some wholesome things to say about women smoking cigarettes. He broadcasts over station WJAY. Note the following:

"What do you think of women smoking cigarettes?"

Anything that decreases the womanliness of woman decreases her charm and deteriorates the race. Feminine cigarette smoking is an unbeautiful aftermath of the World War, invented by the devil, capitalized by the Tobacco Trust, and billboarded only by the theatre. I speak these stinging words against it for three reasons:

1. It brings woman down to the level of man. There is, to me, a pathos as well as sarcasm in a toast recently proposed by someone to woman: "Here's to Woman—once our superior, now our equal."

There can be no doubt that woman has a moral right to the use of tobacco, if man has; but the use of it, on the part of woman, never increases man's respect for her, and often lessens it.

2. Not one woman in one hundred smokes cigarettes for the sheer enjoyment of it. Why, then, does she do it? It is a part of the moral let-down that accompanies and follows war. It brings us a little nearer to the jungle. It is a part of the return to savagery. It shows that the female dares to be as deadly, and as unfragrant, as the male. It drops the beauty of femininity to the lower level of comradeship with masculinity, and exchanges good taste for good fellowship. Somehow, it hurts us to admit that the smoking woman is no better than a man.

3. It is a principle of Scripture that a thing, though innocent in itself, becomes harmful and wrong if indulged to the moral disadvantage of another. That is what Paul meant by saying, "If eating of meat makes my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world stands." Now, sister, cigarette smoking makes a good many brothers to offend—your own little brother, for instance, who justifies his indulgence to the menace of his health on the strength of your example.

As one of your brothers who still loves you, I ask you to give it up. Is there one good reason why you shouldn't? It decreases your femininity, roughens your beauty, dulls your conversation, befouls your breath, endangers your health, beclouds your mental discrimination, and weakens your influence. Be different from us—therein lies your greatest charm.—The Shield.

THE PATH OF THE JUST IS AS A SHINING LIGHT THAT SHINETH MORE AND MORE UNTO THE PERFECT DAY.—PROVERBS 4:18.

Word from Eldorado, Illinois, is to the effect that the new Berean classes there have started off nicely and that the officers are doing splendid work. Arrangements have been made for heating the church, and also for better lights. Keep it up, Eldorado, and don't get discouraged.

* * * * *

The Young People's class at Cleveland, Ohio, which was made into a Berean class affiliating with the National Berean Society on August first, is progressing nicely, with meetings every two weeks. There are around fifteen of these young people, and they are doing a good work, which will fit them to shoulder the responsibility of the church in the coming years.

SELF-DENIAL MONEY

October, the self-denial month, will soon be gone. Let's remember it every day until the month closes, and then send the money to the state treasurer, Paul C. Johnson, Oregon, Illinois. We trust that those who are cooperating with the Illinois Berean Society in this will make it the greatest self-denial month the society has known.

OREGON BEREAN SOCIETY

* * * * *

The annual business meeting of the Oregon Berean Society was held October 23, 1927, with the following elections to office: Paul Johnson, President; Azalia Winfrey, Vice-president; Paul Hatch, Secretary-Treasurer. Ways and means were discussed in view of increasing the Berean Society interest and arranging for a more unified effort in the various branches to the end that the church may be built up. In all, it was as interesting a meeting as the secretary has ever had the privilege to attend. Oregon and vicinity have a good prospect of building up a strong and active society, and we would that all who have the interest of the Church at heart would avail themselves of this opportunity of activity and service.

Secretary.

* * * * *

David made the statement in Psalm 119:105, that God's Word was a light whose rays shone upon life's pathway to keep his feet from going astray. We ask you now to meditate a little while on the proverb of Solomon, reproduced at the head of this page. How differently expressed from David's Psalm, and yet how admirably the two thoughts go together!

* * * * *

It is God's Word that describes the times in which we live, and points out the future, hence there indeed is the light. But that light is observed and made use of only by those who come to the Bible and study it as a book. So Solomon, in this proverb, brings out how those who have not come to appreciate or study the Bible may be influenced by the light.

* * * * *

His reasoning is both logical and beautiful. If the Book itself is a lamp, whose rays of light illuminate the pathway of those who accept and use it, then very naturally the pathway or course of life of those who abide in the Bible's teachings is a light and inspiration to others.

* * * * *

Thus is brought out the heavy responsibility that rests upon the believer. One's actions and methods of life are constantly observed by others, and a very far-reaching effect is exerted upon their lives. Here, again, then, one finds an answer to the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Since your individual life is influencing so strongly the lives of some others, and hence the eternal destiny of those persons, you should never forget to remember that not only is your own welfare and salvation concerned in your decisions and actions, but there is a certain extent to which you are held responsible for others. Each boy has his hero—and many times the "hero" is unaware that some boy so regards him and tries to pattern after him in all things. Every girl has her ideal, and very frequently the one who is thus looked to and copied does not realize the effect that life's actions are having upon another. It is a heavy responsibility, and those of us who have come to understand a portion of God's truth and plan should so live and conduct ourselves as to cause that truth to lead others to the harbor of safety, the City of Salvation.

* * * * *

However, while responsibility should be recognized, yet we feel that a Christian should look upon this from the standpoint of a privilege. One should not do right because it is his duty, but because it is his privilege to serve God and bring blessing to fellow man. To be able to radiate God's truth in life so that the paths of others will be brightened and made clearer is the highest opportunity for service to which anyone can attain. But Solomon knew whereof he spoke, and it will be well for us to remember that, "The path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day,"

CHURCH ADVANCEMENT

THANKSGIVING

THANKSGIVING—a day set aside by the Nation for solemn Thanksgiving to the Giver of every good and perfect gift—will soon be here again. The Nation sets this day aside as a National Holiday in which to honor God for His ever and constant watchcare and for His ever-continued providence. The custom originated with us in 1621 when Governor Bradford made provision that the New England colonists could unite in special praise and prayer for their bountiful provision and protection. The custom has been continued.

For this—one of the very few really Christian, or religious, holidays (in distinction from the several political or patriotic holidays)—many are already busily engaged in making preparation for a great “harvest” of sport and of commercial advancement. A few may be making preparation for true and hearty thanksgiving to God in praise and prayer to Him. This day affords to the Christian portion of the Nation an opportunity of service before the face of the non-christian that would reveal, honor and exalt Him before all. As a means to this end it is hereby suggested and urged that the people of the Church of God, everywhere, shall make special effort to exalt God before the Nation upon the Thanksgiving Day which is coming soon. As Christians may the Church of God “set aside” this day in spirit and in truth, even as the Nation sets it aside in fact. May we advance the cause of Christianity by advancing ourselves as Christians. May we render unto God the Thanksgivings of true hearts and lives. To this end it is suggested that every local church or group will at once plan, and that each individual will determine to exalt the God of Heaven on that day rather than to enter into the excess of self-pleasure that is so customary for that particular day.

THANKSGIVING HERALD

The Readers of The Herald are one and all requested to assist to make the issue of November 22 a true Thanksgiving Number. Brief letters of Thanksgiving are solicited from readers old and young. Also special, short Thanksgiving articles are asked for. These letters and articles should be sent to The Herald at the earliest convenience—at once, if possible. Breathe forth your Thanksgiving to God and the reason therefor, and publish to all who read. In so doing honor God before all and encourage all who read to honor Him the more.

May this Thanksgiving Number of The Herald be true to name in that it may carry to all true and heartfelt praise and prayer to God.

THANK GOD WITH YOUR SUBSTANCE ALSO

Not only with word but also with substance, let us unite in our Thanksgiving. Just as Jehovah was daily mindful of all of Israel's needs as she journeyed through the barren wastes of Sinai's deserts, and gave her a daily ration of “Angel's food”, even of Manna from Heaven, so the same unchanging God is watchful over each of us in all our journeyings through the world's rough wilderness today. Every harvest that has been ours—whether gleaned from the field, the counter, the desk, the road, the rostrum—from whatever soil of productivity—every harvest reveals the provident hand of the Almighty. In ancient days God required of Israel that her people should bring Thank Offerings to Him in return for His Providence to them. Not that God was in need of any of their contributed assistance, but rather that such offerings kept them that much nearer to Him who was their only Provider. He has always assured provision to those who walk before Him in very deed and in truth. His ability is way above and beyond the power of man to think, or even to ask. But that ability has been specially devoted to the aid of those only who truly regard Him as the Author and Giver of every good and perfect gift. The Thank Offerings which they gave to Him were, with many other offerings, presented before His holy tabernacle and were used to further His tabernacle services in the midst of the people. Thus their offerings reverted back to them in the form of blessings flowing forth from God and His Tabernacle.

Today we have no tabernacle as such, nor temple. But God has expressly named His Church as “the temple of God”. See Eph. 1:21, 22; 1 Cor. 3:16; 2 Cor. 6:16. The Church of God, that is, this Church of which you and I are here and now active members, claims to be a part, at least, of that which God's Word names as His temple.

A FAR-REACHING PROGRAM

This Church of God, through its recent General Conference, has undertaken to serve God more largely than ever before. Here are some items of its program of effort:

Continue publication of The Restitution Herald—the subscription price of which never has covered the cost of printing. (All editorial work is extra.)

The publication of the Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly. The circulation of this is yet insufficient to cover costs of printing—editing of same is extra. (A Primary Quarterly is being asked for also.)

The publication of more tracts and books.

The operation of a Bible Training Class.

Besides these there is the routine office service in the interest of the work in every place and every locality.

To assist in realizing as much as possible of this program it is suggested that all contribute, heartily,

A Thank Offering.

To accomplish this work year after year some are con-

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

Amos, Chapters 5 and 7

Devotional Reading: Prov. 21:1-7

GOLDEN TEXT

But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream. Amos 5:24.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

God Pleads for Justice. The long forbearance and tenderness of God toward His people is strikingly testified in these prophecies of Amos and others. It is not God's pleasure that any should perish, or that any should fail of the greatest of reward. He, nevertheless, placed the matter frankly before the northern kingdom.

He revealed to them their sins and the awful results that should come from them. He recalled His past helps and benefits unto them. He showed to them the brevity of their apparent joys in sin, and the long extended sorrow that should result. He pleaded with them to voluntarily correct their ways and return to Him, and assured them the fullness of His blessings to their own good.

Fallen. They broke their covenant with God. God was automatically released from His conditional promises. The house fell, completely. Nevertheless God assured that He will yet raise them up, perfect them with a new covenant, Jer. 31:31-33, through which and under which great blessings shall yet accrue to them—this in agreement with God's unconditional covenant and promise to Abraham that the nation of his loins should enjoy eternal inheritance and stand for eternal blessing.

Questions. When did the northern kingdom draw away from the nation Israel? Read 1 Kings 12, especially verse 16. What idols did they first build? See vv. 28, 29. What was the avowed purpose of this idolatry? See v. 27. Had aloofness from God during the century and a half intervening proven beneficial to Israel? Had she in idolatry lowered her moral standing? Why did God present a lamentation? Did God regret, for Israel's sake, her position? Was God pleased for Israel's sake that she should repent and return to God? What is force of term "virgin of Israel"? What is force of term "husband" in margin of Hos. 2:16? Will Israel survive her punishment? Is she yet to return to covenant relation with God? What effect does idolatry have upon the coming overthrow of Gentile nations as revealed in Rev. 9:20, 21?—F. I. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"But let justice roll along like water, and righteousness as a torrent ever flowing." Amos 5:24. Roth.

Despicable to God is a form of worship which does not flow out of the heart. In the preceding verses God said, "I hate, I despise your feast days,neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs."

Paul speaks of those who have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof. But justice and righteousness are always pleasing to God.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Letter Kills. "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life". 2 Cor. 3:6. Amos calls attention to the fact that Israel observed scrupulously the law pertaining to "feast days", "solemn assemblies", and "offerings". They sang "songs" and engaged in all the prescribed forms of devotion. Yet their outward manifestation of piety was unacceptable to God, because it did not emanate from an inward and spiritual purity of heart. In the days of Amos, as in the time of Christ, Israel depended upon their tithes and offerings, and upon their careful keeping of the law, for their acceptance before Jehovah. They had "a form of godliness" but denied its power, 2 Tim. 3:5. Jesus made the distinction plain between mere formality and the practical application of the principles of righteousness, when He said to the Pharisees, "Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone". Luke 11:42.

The Spirit Gives Life. "Our debt to God is made payable to man", and it is only when we consider, sympathetically and helpfully, the needs of humanity, that God accepts our profession of allegiance to Him. "For in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love". Gal. 5:6.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Making God known to Israel.

In any group of people there are invariably two classes: the leadership class and the followers, and this classification is based on natural qualifications. The central theme of message after message sent to Israel to make God known to them is the misuse of talents entrusted to the leadership class in the oppression of the followers. In the words of Amos they "turn judgment to wormwood they hate him that rebuketh in the gate, (court) and abhor him that speaketh uprightly; they tread upon the poor and take from him burdens of wheat."

By superior mentality, personality, personal influence and control over the material means of life, the leadership class is the heart of any government and it makes the government serve its own needs chiefly. This abuse of leadership talent is the burden of many of God's messages to His people. And the reason is clear. Such abuse means the oppression and therefore retardation mentally, physically, and spiritually of thousands of God's creatures whom he has designed, should be blessed through His chosen people.

Good government, acting not only as a police force, but also as a positive constructive force in the lives of people, is a fundamental necessity to the salvation of mankind, and the salvation of the vast majority cannot be accomplished without it. To develop and accomplish such a government, Israel and the church are being trained. And yet Christianity, including adventists, advocate the possibility of the salvation of any and all by the preaching of the gospel. Jesus did more than preach the gospel when He worked among the masses. Jesus' life among people was a foretaste of the kingdom and an evidence of its necessity to the working out of His mission. Let us grant to Christ's kingdom its full glory.—A. K.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Take a survey of conditions in the world; discern those that are the result of centuries of the selfish misrule of those gifted with leadership and power. What counteraction does God's plan of salvation provide? What connection is there between this and God's many pleas to Israel for the rights of the poor and needy and weaker peoples?—A. K.

RALLY DAY REPORTS

If you want some pointers on "getting along", call up Blair, Nebraska—on the wireless. A private letter to the editor says that they announced Rally Day for October 16. Dr. Prime of Omaha got the word over the ——. Anyway, he was there and was drafted and "gave a wonderful talk on Organization and Cooperation". Bro. Banning of South Omaha also picked up the announcement —, well, some way (It pays to advertize.) and was present. He, too, was drafted and "gave a splendid talk pretty much along the same lines, and gave a great big boost for our N. B. I., and urged all to cooperate." After an all-day meeting "all turned homeward feeling the day had been filled to overflowing with both temporal and spiritual blessings."

"This is not for publication. Our Sunday School Secretary will send a report", reads the letter. But the Secretary's report, not having yet arrived, the editor asks forbearance of his correspondent and of the secretary for quoting the foregoing. The Secretary's report will be given space when it arrives.

Rally Day was a benefit to the Blair Church.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

Rally Day was a benefit to the Oregon Church. In spite of the fact that four families were detained by sickness and that visiting appointments held precedence with others, still every service of the day was more largely attended. The increase at Sunday School was about thirty percent and that of the Berean service was probably one hundred percent.

Not only was there an increased attendance but apparently new interest was awakened and new faces were added.

Oregon will certainly want to repeat Rally Day in the future.

RIPLEY RALLY DAY

October sixteenth had not been very extensively advertized as a special Rally Day by the Ripley, Illinois, Church, but it turned out to be a genuine Rally Day just the same. Quite a number of the brothers and sisters from over Camden way were present, and Sisters Emma Swan and Mauvine Green were there, all the way from Quincy. At the close of the morning service an invitation was given, and three came forward to consecrate their lives to their Lord. In the afternoon we went to the water where Mrs. Jesse Robins and Leonard Robins, Mt. Sterling, Ill., Rfd., and Leland McDaniels, Timewell, Ill., were buried with Christ in baptism. This brought rejoicing to the hearts of all, and we are praying God's richest blessing on these new members of the family. The night service brought a full house.

We are expecting to have a two weeks' series of meetings at the Ripley Church the last half of November, beginning on November 15th, conducted by Bro. Randall and the writer.

F. E. Siple.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO, DEDICATION

The brethren of the Brush Creek Church of God near Dayton, Ohio, have just completed a very extensive task of enlarging and remodeling their Church Home. They now have one of the most modern and fully equipped churches to be found in any rural district. At the present time a series of meetings is being conducted there by Brothers Siple and Lyon. On October 30, the closing day of these meetings, a dedication service will be held, with an all-day meeting and dinner to be served in the basement.

A cordial invitation is extended to any and all who can to come and cooperate in this work.

SOME ITEMS FROM MINNESOTA

Bro. Frank Noyes, of the St. Cloud Church, is in the hospital suffering from carbuncles. He was slightly improved at last report.

A brief line from Bro. C. E. Randall, of Mora, reports the death on Thursday evening, the twentieth, of his youngest son, Myron. Bloodpoisoning was the cause. The funeral was at two o'clock, Sunday, the twenty-third.

Bro. and Sr. Randall have the heartfelt sympathy of the brethren in this sad hour. Bro. Randall was conducting meetings at the Clear Lake Church in Wisconsin, and reached the bedside of his child only after death had taken place.

A recent letter from Sr. Randall requests the prayers of all the brethren in her behalf. She is nearly helpless as a result of continued rheumatism.

The Herald asks the prayers of all in their behalf.

THE MINNESOTA CONFERENCE

By Jas. A. Patrick

(This report is late only because it became separated before first mailed. Finally, after mails crossed back and forth between The Herald and Bro. Patrick and a delayed letter arrived, the report is again assembled for publication.—Ed.)

I would like to tell The Herald readers about every bit of our trip to Minnesota, but time and space forbid. I know that there are many deeper things than mere trips that need to occupy the space in our paper. What I would like to do is to give my impression of the work, after having been away from it for five years.

One thing I noticed with much regret: there were some divisions and contentions among our people there, the same as Paul found in the early church. It is too bad that a people that are so small—yes, far too small for our own good—cannot show an unbroken front to the enemy. However, division was not what I started out to write about. While there are always things to discourage, I am wondering if it isn't because we are always looking for those things and not for the things that would give us courage.

However, it seems to me that Minnesota has some things to encourage her so far as the Conference work is concerned. The gathering at Eden Valley was one of the most enthusiastic and interesting that I have seen at a conference for a long time. The attendance was the largest that I remember in years in Minnesota; in fact, since the good old days, which are probably gone for all time.

Another thing spoken of by so many was that the attendance was the best from beginning to end that they had ever seen. The house was full the first night. On the last night there were a number that were unable to get in and the church is not a small building—40 x 60, if my memory serves me rightly.

There were people in attendance from St. Cloud, Mora, Pequot, Lester Prairie, Foley, Sylvan, Ft. Ripley, Litchfield, Darwin, Paynesville, Kimball, Hector, Austin, Mannannah, Brainerd, Minneapolis, and from Superior, Wis. Besides, I remember that Bro. Leo Behrends was there from the southern part of the state, but cannot remember the name of his town. There may have been other places represented that I cannot remember just now, having just recalled them from memory. Besides Eden Valley, where the Conference was held, the largest delegations were from Mora, St. Cloud and Lester Prairie, or, in other words, those that are members of the Bergen Church which is out in the country a few miles from Lester Prairie.

I had a fine time at Mora from Thursday evening till Saturday morning. Thursday evening I attended the Berean class. Friday there was a pot-luck dinner at the Randall home, which has always been a refuge for the weary preacher, even if Bro. George, when sleeping with a fellow, does take his half of the middle of the bed. In the afternoon I spoke to the brethren gathered there. In the evening the meeting was held at the McKinley schoolhouse.

The folks at Mora have purchased two lots in town and are now trying to buy a neat little church out in the country and move it onto the lots so they can have their work in town. This is certainly a wise move if it can be accomplished, for the country churches are doomed in this day of the automobile. The Methodist people in our part of Michigan, and probably in other parts of the country, are centering their efforts largely in the towns and leaving fine buildings in the country vacant.

The work at Mora has been kept up through the efforts of Bro. Clyde Randall who preaches to them. Bro. Emil Fredlund has been doing some preaching lately and is a very material factor in the progress of the work.

The time spent with the St. Cloud brethren was very enjoyable, although it was just during the evening service, except for a pleasant hour spent in the Savage home. The house of worship was well-filled and the listeners were very attentive. The St. Cloud work has been kept up largely through the efforts of Brothers Fred Daubanton and Thos. Savage, both of whom are working men, but spend their spare time in preaching the gospel. Bro. Fred is an engineer on the Great Northern Railroad, and Bro. Tom is a state factory inspector.

Scattered through eastern Minnesota are many who are more or less interested in the work of the Church of God. If this interest could be centralized and capitalized, what a power for good it would be. But this is the problem that confronts our work everywhere. Will someone suggest a solution?

CORRESPONDENCE

To The Restitution Herald: I am now sending in my overdue subscription, and am sorry I could not do so before, as I would miss the paper very much, for in a way I seem to be acquainted, through it, with its writers. There are so many articles which I enjoy, and it builds us up in the most holy faith to read the thoughts and expositions of the brothers and sisters who are trying to hold up the banner of Christ before an indifferent and selfish world. I especially enjoy Bro. Haney's articles, having read his sermons before when he wrote for the Last Days. I admire the way he urges us to stick close to the Word, turning neither to the right nor left. And truly, if we should climb up any other way we would be "a thief and a robber", as our Lord expressed it in the parable of the sheepfold. Space would forbid my mentioning all the names whose writings I appreciate and enjoy.

We were so glad to have Bro. Austin with us at our Conference in June at Wenatchee. Judging by his sermons, I would liken him to the bold soldier which Paul urges us all to be.

I often think of how good it would be if all the Household of Faith could meet together and get acquainted with each other and talk of the Hope that is set before us—for that truly is the tie that binds.

Let us live such lives that we may be epistles known and read of all men. After that is done and we hear the Master's call we may meet in that glorious kingdom which is fast approaching.

Mrs. Cora Foster.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: The soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final destruction of the wicked, 2 Thess. 1:9; the restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation,

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

Amos, the prophet from Tekoa, was not afraid to tell the Israelites how sinful they were. Why should he have been afraid? He was doing right; and no one ever needs to be afraid when he does right. God had sent Amos into Israel for this very purpose.

God was with Amos, and directing his efforts. And the prophet spoke to the leaders and priests, for they were the ones who led the others into sin.

"Amos continued to preach at Bethel for some time and always with serious threatening. He had many ways of attracting the attention of the people and compelling them to hear him. One day he began in a low wailing tone like one in deep sorrow. Everyone was very quiet in order to learn what strange thing Amos had to say that day. He began, 'Hear ye this word which I take up for a lamentation over you, O house of Israel. The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall no more rise; she is cast down upon her land; there is none to raise her up. For thus saith the Lord Jehovah: The city that went forth a thousand shall have a hundred left, and that which went forth a hundred shall have ten left, to the house of Israel.'

"And then again he told them of their sins. He pointed out that the courts would not give justice to the poor man, and that bribes were taken by the judges. If a man spoke publicly against these wrongs he was despised. Again, Amos denounced the heavy taxes, which would take from a poor farmer so large a part of his crop that it would scarcely pay for the harvesting.

"But the prophet did not speak simply words of doom. He still hoped that the people might repent. Changing his tone to one of cheer and encouragement he said to them, 'Seek good, and not evil that ye may live; and so Jehovah, the God of hosts, will be with you, as ye say. Hate the evil and love the good, and establish justice in the gate: it may be that Jehovah, the God of hosts, will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph.'—Lessons from Great Teachers.

God wanted them to set up a better government, under which all should be justly treated.

Now, the Israelites kept their feast days very carefully in accordance with the law, and as if they really worshipped God; but they could not love God and do the wrong things, so God did not care for their sacrifices and offerings. He knew they did not live up to what they pretended. He did not even want to hear their false songs.

Yet, God did not want them to die in sin. Amos pleaded with them to be just and righteous—He said, "But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." However, the people would not listen to Amos. They continued to do wrong and many, many unhappy things befell them.

Now we must not be like these head-strong Israelites. We must listen to the advice of older and wiser people, and try to be fair and square in everything we do, even the very smallest thing.

A PLEASANT FACE

*You owe it to your family,
You owe it to your town;
No one should be compelled to see
Your face have on a frown.
And then—when you grow older,
Your friends look at your face
And see in it your character,
They read your growth in grace.
God gives most children faces
It is a joy to see,
But you'll have one you made yourself
When you are fifty-three.
As sure as eyes are windows
Through which the soul looks out,
Your face will tell to strangers
What you have been about.*

FULL SURRENDER BRINGS REWARD

ty years, knowing he could not go over this Jordan, he addressed all Israel, "The LORD thy God, He will go over before thee". He encouraged them by citing coming successes. Then he encouraged Joshua in sight of all Israel. Read Deuteronomy 31:1-8.

Later on we find God encouraging Joshua: "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life: as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee. . . . Only be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever thou goest. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success."—Joshua 1:1-8.

The fact that the whole of Moses' and Joshua's careers were recorded for our benefit (1 Cor. 10:11) makes the above excerpts pungent to live Christians; and reveals a source of inspiration and strength. We do well to study the lives of these great men; for God has a similar work for every consecrated Christian. There are myriads of precious souls in "Egypt" for whom Christ died, whose taskmaster (the devil) is as much greater than Pharaoh as Christ is greater than Moses. Making bricks without straw (Ex. 5:7-11) was a picnic compared with the vassal, idolatrous enthrallment of our brethren down in modern "Egypt", suffering under the diabolical spirit of this world. History is repeating itself; The words of Jesus, the Great Emancipator, are as pertinent as ever, "And beholding the crowds, He deeply pitied them, because they were being harrassed and dispersed, as Sheep having no Shepherd. Then he says to his disciples, The harvest indeed is great, but the reapers are few; beseech, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send Laborers to reap it".—Matt. 9:36-38, Emphatic Diaglott.

The demand for preachers and teachers greatly exceeds the supply. What a privilege this affords young men and women to promulgate the Word of Life! Jesus' reply to Peter's allusion to compensation shows the remuneration to be inestimable: "Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life".—Mark 10:28 to 30.

In worldly callings one is required to go in his own strength. But the career of Moses proves such not to be the case in the Lord's service. It would be too hazardous and harassing for poor, frail man, alone. Moses tried it alone; and what a calling down he got—"Who made thee a prince and a judge over us?" "And he feared; and fled from the face of Pharaoh", Exodus 2:14, 15.

What wonders God finally wrought through Moses! It was then Pharaoh's turn to "fear": "And he (Pharaoh) called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel; and go serve the LORD, as ye have said." This transposition was wrought by the coordination of God and man. Those doing the modern work of Moses can be strengthened by similar means. Further note: "And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, Be strong and of a good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the LORD hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it. And the LORD, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed".—Deut. 31:7, 8. Paul epitomizes the thought, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." And Jesus, the greater than Moses, having all power, says, "I am the vine, ye are the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing. . . . If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you", John 15:5, 7. It should seem sacrilegious to ask for more encouragement than this.

Young brethren, the Lord has work for you in His vineyard. You say, "I haven't the opportunities or potential qualifications. I was 'cut out' for a farmer, or merchant, or something else." Just leave all that to the Lord, and get busy; and you will be surprised what He can do with you. Your part is to make an unqualified surrender of self to Him; and furnish the ambition, determination and pluck. God, in His own way (Isa. 55: 8, 9), "shall supply all you need" (Phil. 4:19), and ways and means. Many have felt God's heavy hand by waiting for Him to make the initiative. Moses was transformed from a royal palace to a desert. Paul was stricken to the ground, blind; a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of satan to buffet him. And, if I may be pardoned for my presumptuousness, I shall, for the benefit of others, humbly cite my little experience: For twelve years following consecration "I" was very objective. Then, eighteen years ago, something happened. My wife's tragic death, the shock of which wrecked my son's life, so shattered my health as to disable me for work. Home was broken up; and I thrown out upon a cold world. I thought of Paul's words, "We have no certain dwelling-place" ("home we have none",—Weymouth), 1 Cor. 4:11. Nevertheless, I could see God working out a purpose: the lashing producing the real start of my life. But through it all, God has kept His word—"supplying all my need"—abundantly. And He promises never to leave me, nor forsake me, Heb. 13:5; and to finally give me a crown of immortality, divine life, and a triple office in His kingdom: king, priest and judge. The world and the devil have no such consideration and compensation to offer us.

"Certainly," He says, "I will be with thee. Fear not." Halleluiah!

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

By George Johnston

PART 16

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE EASTERN EMPIRE

WHEN I HEARD one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days (Hebrew, evening-morning); then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." The question asked the first saint had no reference to the period during which the Eastern empire was to continue, but to that during which the pure doctrines of Christianity were to be trodden under foot within the territories forming that empire: and it is quite evident therefore, that the period of 2300 lunar-solar years has not yet expired.

Daniel's attention in the vision was chiefly concentrated on the Ram and the He-goat as they stood on the banks of the river. And as the great battle fought between the Greeks and Persians on the borders of the river Granicus (B. C. 334) marks the downfall of the Medo-Persian empire and the rise of the Grecian, it would appear that the period of 2300 "evening-mornings" began with that event. If such should prove to be the fact, the period will end in 1933.

"And it came to pass, when I, even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then behold, there stood before me as the appearance of a man. And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision. Now as he was speaking with me I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground: but he touched me, and set me upright. And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be." The word "end" occurs in various prophecies of Daniel, and many commentators are of the opinion that it has reference to the last days of the present age. Such is not the fact, however, except in the final prediction in Chapter 12. The "end" here spoken of was that of the particular empire with which the prophet was dealing—the Eastern—and, as we shall presently see, the predictions were fulfilled in the days of the Turkish sultan, Mohammed II, by whom the Eastern empire was destroyed.

"And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressions are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people. And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace shall destroy man: he shall also stand up against the prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand." (Ver. 23-25.)

Gibbon devotes the whole of the sixty-eighth chapter of the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" to the destruction of the Eastern empire by Mohammed II, and his words are in perfect agreement with the revelation of the angel. The latter described the character and actions of that sultan so accurately that we might almost imagine that his words were uttered after, and not many centuries before, the reign of the "Great Destroyer", a title applied by various historians to the monarch named.

"The siege of Constantinople by the Turks attracts our first attention to the person and character of the great destroyer. Mohammed the Second was the son of the second Amurath . . . Under the tuition of the most skilful masters Mohammed advanced with an early and rapid progress in the paths of knowledge; and besides his native tongue it is affirmed that he spoke or understood five languages, the Arabic, the Persian, the Chaldean or Hebrew, the Latin, and the Greek. . . The history and geography of the world were familiar to his memory; the lives of the heroes of the East, perhaps of the West, excited his emulation; his skill in astrology is excused by the folly of the times, and supposes some rudiments of mathematical science; and a profane taste for the arts is betrayed in his liberal invitation and reward of the painters of Italy. But the influence of religion and learning were employed without effect on his savage and licentious nature. I will not transcribe, nor do I firmly believe, the stories of his fourteen pages whose bellies were ripped open in search of a stolen melon, or of the beauteous slave whose head he severed from her body to convince the Janizaries that their master was not the votary of love. His sobriety is attested by the silence of the Turkish annals, which accuse three, and only three, of the Ottoman line of the vice of drunkenness. But it cannot be denied that his passions were at once furious and inexorable; that in the palace, as in the field, a torrent of blood was spilt on the slightest provocation; and that the noblest of the captive youth were often dishonored by his unnatural lust."

The angel directed attention to the fierceness of the destroyer who would arise, and Gibbon shows that this characteristic was notable in Mohammed. He was also skilled in astrology, and spoke many "dark sentences", even going so far as to predict correctly the date on which the city of Constantinople would fall into his hands.

The power of Mohammed was mighty, "but not by his own power". The flower of his army was the corps of Janizaries, men of European parentage, who were taken as hostages in their youth, and trained in all the arts of war by their Turkish masters. It was to these that Mohammed committed the grand and final assault of Constantinople, and they executed with the utmost fidelity the orders of the sultan. The army of Mohammed was also greatly augmented by hordes of adventurers out of every nation of the East, who, animated by promises of rich soil, fought with the utmost courage and ferocity.

"SCRAP" TOBACCO IS FILTHY

A SOUTHERN correspondent writes us that a farmer who raises tobacco recently sent to his State Board of Health a protest against the use of "scrap" tobacco, because of the germs and horrible filth of various sorts with which it is loaded. As the term "scrap" tobacco is doubtless new to most of our readers, we will quote verbatim the writer's description of this particularly choice variety of the weed.

"The farmer goes out into the strip room with his crew of hands and they commence to work; some of them having tuberculosis and many other dangerous diseases that carry germs. Some of them smoke, some chew, and some dip snuff; and they all cough, hawk, and spit on the scrap pile in the corner of the house. They work on for several weeks or months until the farmer says, 'I guess I had better stir up my scrap tobacco, for I am afraid it will rot we have all spit so much on it.' In the afternoon he gets his pitchfork and stirs it up. He finds some caked together and some rotten. He shakes it all up together. On they work until the crop is finished. After a few days he says to his wife, 'I believe I will carry off my scrap tobacco today, for it might rot lying there. We all tramped and spit on it so much.'"

So the grower markets his "scrap" for which he receives about three cents per pound. The scrap is manufactured into cigarettes, cigars, pipe and chewing tobacco and the residues that cannot be used for such purposes are ground up into snuff. These articles are sold in small packages to consumers who pay around seventy to eighty cents per pound for the same filthy scrap tobacco for which the grower received three cents per pound at the warehouse. A package of the manufactured scrap goes from the retail dealer into the home, where some smoke, some chew and others dip snuff. To quote further from our correspondent:

"A lad said, 'Papa, what makes snuff so bitter?' 'Oh! it is made of scrap tobacco, like you saw in the corner of the strip room, where we all coughed and spit on it.' 'Well, then,' said the lad, 'if it is that dirty I shall never use any more snuff.'"

"Later the same boy became very ill. The doctor who was called to examine him pronounced the case one of tuberculosis and at the same time lighted a cigar, whereupon the boy said,

"'Doctor, aren't you afraid to smoke?' 'No,' replied the doctor. 'But there might be germs in it,' said the lad. 'Oh! but if there are germs in this cigar I will burn them. Don't you see the fire on the end?' 'Yes,' said the lad, 'but I don't see any fire on the end that is in your mouth, and that is the dangerous end.' 'Well, Buddy, I see where you're right,' said the doctor as he slipped the cigar out of his mouth and threw it out into the yard."

According to this grower the cigar is dangerous because it contains germs from the scrap heap. Every cigar or cigarette, every pipeful and every chew of tobacco and every dip of snuff may be a means of communicating the germs of disease in spite of the long-prevalent popular notion that tobacco kills germs. Every intelligent person nowadays knows that tobacco is always a poison and, as our correspondent so well shows, some of it is filthy beyond belief.—From Good Health Magazine.

DEFINITIONS OF ETERNAL LIFE

By R. H. Judd

A RECENT letter by one of my correspondents made reference to John 17:3, "This is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent," giving it as a definition of eternal life. This is a very common mistake. While it is perfectly correct that one cannot have eternal life without the knowledge of "both the Father and the Son", it must be a self-evident fact that the knowledge spoken of cannot itself be eternal life, for eternal knowledge could not exist apart from its fundamental, eternal life.

The real force of the passage is centered on the word "that", which, strictly speaking, has the meaning of "in-order-that", thus signifying that the knowledge of God and His Son Jesus Christ, is the objective purpose of eternal life. Ask ninety-nine out of every hundred Christians what they will do with eternal life when they get it. How many of them can give a reasonable reply thereto? Not many. But in this verse our Savior gives a truly sublime answer—one that is fully commensurate with the greatness of the gift of life for evermore. Our knowledge of God in this present life has an ever-expanding horizon. What, then, must it be in the life "which is to come"? My readers will find the proving truth of these statements in verses 11, 12, 13, 15, 19, 21, 23, 24 and 26 of this same chapter, for in all these verses "that" carries with it the meaning of "in-order-that", thereby expressing a purpose or objective. There are several definitions of eternal life in the Scriptures, Psalm 21:4 being one of them.

JEWISH PEOPLE LOOK FOR A MESSIAH

WILL BE THE WORLD SAVIOR FROM WAR

By Samuel J. Williams

The following United Press article has been sent to The Herald by different readers, clipped from different papers. As straws show which way the wind blows, so public interest in this type of article shows that no small part of the thinking world anticipates the fulfillment of prophetic announcements yet due to Jerusalem's land and people.—Editor.

A NEW Messiah who will become king of the Jewish nation and whose appearance will put to an end the next world war is predicted by the orthodox Jews of Palestine.

They declare that He will be a superman and that His kingdom will be a great center from which will radiate peace and brotherhood extending throughout the entire world.

The revelation of the Messiah will be preceded by the rebuilding of the temple, they say, adding that this will cause the enmity of many nations, especially those of the Moslem world. The last world war will focus itself in Palestine, and at the critical moment, when all appears lost, the Messiah coming from heaven will gain a decisive victory, according to the predictions. It is said He will immediately be proclaimed King, the first king of the Jewish nation in twenty centuries.

Of the 150,000 Jews in Palestine, most of whom have returned there from the four corners of the earth since the war, at least 50,000 are expecting developments to rapidly transpire until at an unexpected moment the Messiah will be revealed.

"The Jews are praying every day for the coming of the Messiah," declared the president of the town council of Peta Tikva, the largest Jewish agricultural colony in Palestine.

UNIVERSAL GOOD

"The Jews believe that sometime a Messiah will come who will bring good not only to the Jews but to the whole world," remarked D. Smithson, who was decorated for distinguished service in Palestine during the war. "This idea is spreading throughout the country," he continued.

"The movement to Palestine, the settling of the land and the building of the Jewish national home is the forerunner of the Messiah," declared Ephraim Sacks, formerly of Chicago, now president of the town council of the beautiful orange producing colony, Rehovoth.

The idea of the restoration of the temple just prior to the coming of the Messiah is soon to be realized they hope. Ever since the destruction of their last temple in 70 A. D., by the Roman emperor Titus, the Jews have gathered daily at the famous "wailing wall" in Jerusalem, praying for the rebuilding of the temple. The invasion of the Moslems in the seventh century resulted in the erection of the Mosque of Omar.

"The Mosque of Omar will be torn down soon and a wonderful temple like Solomon's shall be built there," happily proclaimed a rabbi as he was looking out over the temple area from the window of his synagogue.

Rumors are widespread that the specified parts of the temple have already been prepared in various countries, ready to be transported to Palestine and assembled at a moment's notice.

A group of Jerusalem Jews have actually sent a petition to the League of Nations, asking for a portion of the old temple site to be awarded the Jewish nation. The tabling of this petition by the League has not daunted their hopes for a restored temple. So sincerely are they expecting it that a class of prospective priests are being taught the performance of the sacred rites of the temple sacrifices.

The restoration of the temple will create an intense animosity among the surrounding nations, they fear. "The nations of the world will fight against Jerusalem in the near future," declared one of the largest manufacturers in Jerusalem. "The leaders of the Jews sense the situation but they are afraid to express their opinions publicly," he remarked.

PROPHECY FULFILLED

The circumstances making possible a war in Palestine will be the withdrawal of the British administration it is believed. The secretary of a synagogue in Jerusalem said to me: "The Jews have been waiting 2,000 years for England's help, but the English won't always remain here. A certain rabbi making a prophecy 700 years ago stated they would come into Palestine in 1916, but he also stated that they would leave Palestine before the expiration of a quarter of a century. This is yet to be fulfilled. Then, he says that there will be a big war here. The last world war will focus itself in Palestine. The king of the earth shall fight against the Jews in Palestine, but the Messiah will come and cause the enemy to be utterly defeated.

"The Messiah will be recognized as the great world leader, the law of the Lord shall flow out of Zion and nations will learn of war no more," the rabbis firmly maintain.

BIBLE TRUTHS ABOUT SHEOL AND HADES

By Jas. A. Patrick

IT IS STRANGE that people will not apply to themselves the rule they try to apply to others. Mr. Geo. Johnston's questions, which he asks Mr. A. Robinson, might well be turned on himself with more force than they apply to Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Johnston quotes Matt. 13:34, 35 to show that Jesus spoke in parables to "Utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world." By referring to Scripture it is easy to see what the secret is. If Rom. 16:25, 26; 1 Cor. 2:7-10; and Col. 1:26 are read it will be easy to see that the mystery or secret is "Christ in you (Gentiles) the hope of glory." The mystery is that the Gentiles should be made partakers of this glory with the Jews, which thing was and is so hard for the Jews to understand. This is the lesson to be taught in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus and not the literal history of two men.

Just here I might pause to ask a question: I wonder why Mr. Johnston uses the proper noun "Dives" as the name of the rich man, when nothing of the kind occurs in any translation of which I have any knowledge, and surely not in the original. Is it to make the narrative appear more personal, as if it were the literal history of two men?

Now let us notice the terms "sheol" and "hades", terms with which Mr. Johnston heads his article. As Bro. Judd says, "By his own heading of the letter the author admits "sheol" and "hades" to be equivalent—that what is true of one is true of the other."

This is the strange part of it and it is true of so many who use this parable as literal history, knowing that "sheol" and "hades" are identical in meaning.

The rich man is represented as being in hades or sheol and in that condition is made to see, talk, devise, ways of relieving his suffering and ways of keeping his brethren from coming to the same place, all of which indicates knowledge and mental activity. If we turn to Eccl. 9:10, we find this said of sheol, or hades: "Whatever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol, hades), whither thou goest." Also Psa. 6:5, "For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" Here death and sheol are made synonymous expressions; what is true of one is true of the other.

Now I would like to ask, if Christ were revealing mysteries hidden from the foundation of the world, is it reasonable to suppose that the things revealed would flatly contradict plain, positive statements already made in other parts of the Scriptures about the very places and things of which He speaks in His teachings? In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, the rich man is given knowledge and made to devise means of relieving himself and ways to prevent his

CHURCH LEASED OUT—99 YEARS

In conversing recently about a certain local church property of the Church of God it was revealed that the property has been leased for 99 years to another denomination. This is said to have been accomplished through the efforts of one P. L. Sweaney, evangelist, who coming in from a distant state, seems to have ingratiated himself into the good will of several members of the local church. But, instead of working for the advancement of gospel truth as understood by the Church of God, and for which many had devoted of their strength and means to erect the church and carry its work forward, this evangelist, though presuming to believe as the Church of God, proceeded at once to transfer control of the property of the church to the control of his own denomination, which denomination diligently contends for doctrine which probably every member of the Church of God earnestly believes is diametrically opposed to fundamental Bible truth. It is also known that he tried to have yet another church organize under his denomination. The chagrin of all this is this same evangelist is reported at this writing to be holding evangelistic meetings for one of our churches in still another state.

What will be the result?

Brethren, let us not set church above Truth; let us not exalt property above Gospel; but, let us remember that the members of a church are striving toward Salvation. If the understanding of the Church of God is regarded as Biblical, then it is the bounden duty of one and all to maintain said Church as a means to aid individuals toward salvation in Christ at His coming. And, as church property is one of the means by which the Church is enabled to carry on its work, the Church should protect its properties to the largest possible service to God and to His people.

I have not one derogatory word to offer about any other denomination. Christ must be the one only judge as to these matters. But I stand for the Church of God because of its stand on Bible teachings, for the support and proclamation of which teachings all have united to organize the church and maintain it. Let us preserve and protect our strength and power of service to God.

Guard your Church! Guard your church property!

If any of us have special views which we wish to present to the people let's present them at our own expense of means and strength; and if any of our kind, God-free neighbors have things they wish to accomplish for their denominations let us request of them to be Christian enough to do their work in their own name and strength and not to mask-parade while filching members and properties from us as a Church.

LIFE

Life was what God breathed into Adam. Adam must have life before Adam could possibly breathe of himself. Not air, but Life, God gave him.

Life is not a part of man, it is a property enabling him to function according as God designed him. Without Life man can not even think. It requires Life before the heart can beat. Life sets the machinery of God's forming into motion; with it the organs begin to function.

Death is the opposite of Life, that is, it is the absence of Life. Because of it the organs cease to function: the lung stops breathing; the heart stops beating; the brain stops thinking; cessation interrupts action.

THANKSGIVING METHODS

THE PRESIDENT has again issued Thanksgiving Proclamation. From the standpoint of the nation and the people as people many feel the propriety of setting aside a special day for the giving of thanks by festivity and sport, to the Giver of every good and perfect gift of another year.

How many are the benefits strewn around us. Everywhere the bounties of the Almighty adorn nature. Not only has He provided us with the necessities of life, but He has also decorated our pathway with luxuries untold and unnumbered: the beautiful glories of Autumn; the grandeur of the setting sun; the majesty of the varicolored mountain; the silvered cords of the throat with which to sing life's songs; friends, pleasant surroundings,—manifold are the luxuries—the unnecessary things—which the gracious Giver has added to the essentials for life's advancement.

To the people of the Church of God—and any others—it is suggested that a recognition of God's bounties be made manifest by a Thanksgiving presentation for the spread of His Gospel before man. The Gospel is the greatest necessary luxury of God to man.

The National Bible Institution is using every dollar at its command for the furtherance of the Gospel message to man. The Bible Training Class is for no other purpose. The calls for pastoral help are more than can be satisfied. The Bible Training Class is needed. It has but one way of support, namely, The freewill contribution of the many. Express your gratitude for God's bounty by a cooperation with the National Bible Institution in the furtherance of this work.

The publishing of literature in our publishing house is for the purpose of proclaiming the Gospel. There is no other object in view. The demands for literature are far beyond our ability to provide. Express your Thanks to the Almighty for His lavish provision to you by a substantial contribution to the National Bible Institution with which to maintain and extend this work.

All departments of the National Bible Institution are strictly laboring to further Christian work. The labor is made possible by the continued contribution of the many. The amount that can be done is measured wholly by the degree of cooperation that is rendered.

For strictly current expenses for carrying forward this great labor of service we solicit Thanksgiving contributions from all, each one contributing in proportion to his ability. Make November a Thanksgiving Month. Make remittances to the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

It is a greater Feast and Sport to engage in the work of the Master in hunting out people for His name, through the Gospel, than it is to engage in the customary programs of the day. It is sport to satisfy the longings of one's heart. Make that longing to be the same as was the Master's.

GOD'S WARNING TO THE JEW

Deuteronomy 28

By J. T. Auld

In the following, as in all Scriptural interpretation, the reader is responsible to "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—Ed.

GOD SAID, "And it shall come to pass, if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to observe and to do all his commandments . . . the Lord thy God will set thee on high above all nations of the earth. And the Lord shall make thee the head and not the tail: and thou shalt be above only, and thou shalt not be beneath; if thou hearken unto the commandments of the Lord thy God, which I will command thee this day, to observe and to do them." Read 1 to 14 for God's warnings. Then Moses begins in verse 15, to warn them of the result if they do not observe: "But it shall come to pass, if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to observe to do all his commandments . . . which I command thee this day; that all these curses shall come upon thee and overtake thee." We are told of "A nation (the Romans) of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old, nor shew favour to the young." They were to eat the fruit of their own body in the siege. v. 53-57. Read all the chapter.

Now let prophecy prove itself and see if this has been fulfilled to the letter.

"The Lord hath done that which he had devised; he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old: he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied: and he hath caused thine enemy to rejoice over thee, he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries. Behold, O Lord, and consider to whom thou hast done this. Shall the women eat their fruit, and children of a span long? Shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord?" Lam. 2:17-21.

"The hands of the pitiful women have sodden their own children: they were their meat in the destruction of the daughter of my (God's) people. The Lord hath accomplished his fury; he hath poured out his fierce anger, and hath kindled a fire in Zion (Jerusalem) and it hath devoured the foundations thereof. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of the Lord, was taken in their pits, of whom we said, Under his shadow we shall live among the heathen." Lam. 4:10-20.

After God's judgment on His people at Jerusalem, by Titus and the Roman army, the Jews were scattered among all nations of the earth, from that day unto now.

The next prophecy is Daniel's prayer that God might avert the calamity Moses predicted in Deut. 28. Read Daniel's prayer found in Dan. 9:3-19. Next see Jer. 6:22-23. "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, a people (Titus and his army) cometh from the north country (Italy), and a great nation shall be raised from the sides of the earth. They shall lay hold on bow and spear; they are cruel, and have no mercy; their voice roareth like the sea; and they ride upon horses, set in array (in battle) as men for

ANCIENT SODOM IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE

By Melvin G. Kyle

VERY important explorations and discoveries on the plain at the lower end of the Dead Sea have recently been made. The Xenia Seminary Expedition to the cities of the plain in cooperation with the American School of Oriental Research at Jerusalem, 1924, contributed the first scientific and thorough investigation of the location of Sodom and Gomorrah and examination of the record of the destruction of these cities. The researches of the expedition determined very exactly the following:

1. That the civilization which Biblical narrative represents to have been upon the plain in the days of Abraham and of Lot and the cities of the plain was actually there. This is conclusively shown by pottery from graves opened by the Arabs searching for treasure. The pottery was unmistakably of the early bronze age; thus the Canaanite civilization of that age was actually on the plain at that time. Moreover, a long careful search from one end of the plain to the other failed to reveal a trace of civilization of any kind on the plain from that time onward until Byzantine times, six hundred years after Christ. This is in exact accord with the silence of the Scriptures concerning any history of the plain from the destruction of the cities to the end of Biblical history. The region was so destroyed that it took twenty-five hundred years of climatic influences to bring it again to a condition fit for inhabitation.

2. The only correct description of the natural conditions of life on the plain ever given is that found in Genesis, "like the garden of the Lord before the Lord destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah". Notwithstanding the dubious accounts of conditions of life on the plain given by travelers we found most beautiful, clear, sweet water coming in from the red sandstone mountains of Moab. Better water I never drank. Three little rivers of such water came into the lower end of the sea. Much irrigating was done in Byzantine and Arabic and Crusader times; the remains of aqueducts and reservoirs are abundant. With proper irrigation, ten thousand acres could be turned into a tropical garden in which five crops a year could be raised and this region would then be again a veritable "garden of the Lord."

3. It is now fully established also that the catastrophe did take place exactly as recorded in Genesis. This was determined by the geologists in the past quarter century, and now confirmed by observation of this expedition in 1924. The Biblical account draws aside the curtain that we may see what God was doing, it gives the miraculous events connected with the catastrophe; it does not tell us whence the material used in the destruction of the cities came. The Geologists know only what was actually done in the region and the remains of the catastrophe now to be seen.

This is a burned out region of oil and asphalt. There is also a great stratum of rock salt underneath Jebel Usdum on the west shore of the sea. It is 150 feet thick and exposed for six miles; how much may be under the ground no one knows. This stratum of salt is overlaid with a stratum of marl through which is mingled free sulphur in a very pure state. At sometime the geologists say something kindled the gases which accumulate with oil and asphalt and there was an explosion; the salt and sulphur were carried up into the heavens red hot, whence it literally rained fire and brimstone and utterly destroyed the cities and the whole plain and everything that grew out of the ground. The incrustation of Lot's wife with salt when she turned back, and was caught in the deluge shows that "Greatness is to take the common things of life and walk truly among them."

THE DAY OF MANY ROADS

ROAD-MAKING IS ONE of the achievements of our age", reads an editorial in the Toronto Globe of October 12. "It is not new", continues the writer; "the Roman roads were famous two thousand years ago. But the automobile revolutionized roads in a single generation, and today the world is a new place because of them. In contrast with these earthly roads, what about the Heavenly? How many roads are there to God?"

"With the multiplying of roadways on the surface of the earth, there has come a multiplying of spiritual roads." Rather there has come to be an ambition to multiply "spiritual roads", as the article very aptly shows, but challenges. It continues: "A religious magazine in the United States has just published an address by a well-known minister delivered at a summer conference known the world over which gives expression to this popular view. He tells of a college student who came to him for spiritual help. The young man said, 'Way down below the surface of my heart there is a desire to find God.' He also spoke of his love for music; and he asked how he could gain a consciousness of God's presence.

"The minister asked: 'Is there anything in your life that gives you, if only for an instant, the sense of God's presence?'"

"Said the student: 'Well, I never get it in searching. I never get it in one of your lectures. I never get it from any book.'

" 'You obviously get it from somewhere?'"

" 'Yes.'"

" 'Well, where do you get it?'"

"And the student answered: 'Give me ten minutes of great music, and I leave this whole world behind!'"

"Here is the minister's comment: 'He had found his road to God. There are as many roads to God as there are people trying to find them. There is not only one road. The road to God is manifold. There is the road of music, and another road is the road of poetry, another road is the road of the beautiful in nature, another road is the one that thousands of young people have found, which is the road of absolute surrender to the will of Christ.'

"Take your choice! Music, poetry, nature, or Christ.

All are good, all are safe, all will lead you home to God—that is the popular message of today.”

Here is revealed one of the saddening facts that prevail so much in these days of intellectual effort. Man has studied out so many improvements of his own ways that he feels supremely confident of his abilities to improve God's ways, even God's roads unto Himself. It is certainly refreshing to witness one of Canada's leading dailies stand so firmly on Bible truth in refuting this false notion of the day. The answer cites God's sure Word to show that there is just one road for man to travel to find God and His bounteous provisions for man. It reads: “But the Lord Jesus Christ gave us a very different message. Here was His ringing declaration, His uncompromising and unequivocal claim:

I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.

“The message of the whole Bible, which is God's own Word, is that there are not many roads, but only one road, to God. Our Lord said: ‘Narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.’ Again: ‘Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door . . . by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved.’

“The Scriptures make plain the reason for this. Sin separates men from God; and all men are sinners. Christ died to pay the penalty of our sins; having done this, God raised Him from the dead, and all who believe in Him, accepting His sacrifice in their behalf, are saved and brought into fellowship with God. To them is addressed the word: ‘Now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.’ They have found the only road to God.

“That is the reason for another inescapably clear word of Scripture about Christ as Savior: ‘Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved.’ Indeed, God is so jealous for the safety and salvation of those whom He longs to have pass from death to life and become His children that He spoke through Paul a word that would otherwise seem strange and harsh. Paul, writing to the Galatians, expresses amazement that they should be turning away from ‘the grace of Christ’ to other spurious ways of salvation, or ‘another Gospel,’ and he says: ‘But though we, or an angel from Heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.’ God's condemnation is necessarily upon those who offer men death as though it were life.

“The story is told of a stranger on a country road who stopped and asked a boy how to reach a certain place. The boy gave him careful directions, explaining the turns and crossroads. ‘I understand,’ said the stranger; ‘that is the best way to get there, is it?’

“‘It is not only the best way,’ answered the boy, ‘it is the only way.’”

“Remember, no effort that we make to attain something beautiful is ever lost. Sometime, somewhere, somehow we shall find that which we seek.”

DAN AND EPHRAIM

By C. E. Randall

THE HISTORY of Israel—God's chosen people—is given much space in the Bible. It is interesting, educational and has been written for our admonition, “that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope.” Rom. 15:4. From the time they left Egypt until the present, the Israelites have been blessed and punished as no other people. Their attitude toward the Father has regulated all of these blessings and punishments.

After being proved in the wilderness for forty years, they marched into the promised land. The country was divided among the several tribes by apportionment, the division being made by lot. The Urim and Thummim were used to determine the choice. Each tribe received their portion, excepting the tribe of Levi. This tribe had been set apart for the priesthood and had no inheritance in the land. God was their inheritance. Josh. 13:33.

Prior to their entrance into the promised land, God had instructed them to the effect that any man, woman, family or tribe that turned their heart from Him to serve idols and became partakers of the abominations of the other nations should receive the curses of the law upon them and their name should be blotted out from under heaven. Deut. 29:17-29. Even all nations shall say, “Wherefore hath the Lord done this unto this land? What meaneth the heat of this great anger? Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the Lord God . . . For they went and served other gods, and worshipped them.” This prohibited idolatry among the Children of Israel under penalty of being blotted out if they even introduced it among the people.

Dan and Ephraim were the first tribes to introduce idolatry in Israel. Lev. 24:10-16. Jeroboam, first king of Israel after the division of the kingdom, feared the people would turn back to the House of David should they continue going up to Jerusalem to worship and offer their sacrifices. To forestall this possibility he made two calves of gold and placed one in Bethel and the other in Dan. 1 Kings 12:25-33. Thus these two tribes blotted out a glorious future by disobeying God and introducing idolatry among God's chosen people.

In Revelation where we find the account of the sealing of the 144,000 of the Children of Israel—12,000 of each tribe—it will be noted that Dan and Ephraim are omitted and the tribes of Levi and Joseph substituted. Why? That the Scripture might be fulfilled concerning the tribes that first started idolatrous worship. While they will again come in when the land is divided as spoken in Ezek. 48, yet their cup of sorrow and suffering will be full during the time of trouble such as never was, when the others are being sealed. In failing to heed the warning of God, they ruined much of their own future.

Like Dan and Ephraim, many individuals are today blotting out their own future by intimate friendship with the world. James 4:4. The Father is faithful in fulfilling His word whether it be in blessing or in punishment, war against thee, O daughter of Zion (Jerusalem)." Jer. 6:22, 23; 5:10-19. And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, Wherefore doeth the Lord our God all these things unto us? Then thou shalt answer them, Like as ye have forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land, so shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours."

They, God's people, permitted other gods to be worshiped in their land so the Jews are now scattered all over the face of the earth since the great battle by Titus in Jerusalem.

The abomination will rest on them until Jesus comes. Then it will be lifted. Then all Israel shall be saved, all that call on the name of the Lord. (I mean those that are living when He comes. Acts 15:13-18.)

Dear reader, turn to Deut. 28:50 and notice the same nation spoken of by Daniel in Dan. 8:23-24. "And in the latter time (A. D. 70) of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power (but God's power): and he (Titus) shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper and practise, and shall destroy the mighty, and the holy people", the Jews. This same man-power, General Titus of the Roman army, a man and a nation of fierce countenance was the power in God's hand, that dispersed them, and now they have no certain dwelling place called their own; until Messiah comes, and restores them to their own land, Palestine.

The fulfillment of all the prophets, concerning the Jews you will find recorded in Matt. 24. "And Jesus went out and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to shew him the buildings of the temple. And Jesus said unto them, see ye not all these things? Verily I say unto you, there shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And as He sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came to him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand)." Matt. 24:1, 2, 3, 15. We are admonished, to understand these prophecies of Jesus, Amos, Jeremiah, Daniel and Moses. Will the reader take heed? Did women eat their own children in this seige at Jerusalem? Let Josephus speak. He was taken prisoner in the war by Titus, and declares the following history. "I am going to relate a matter of fact, the like of which no history relates, either among the Greeks or Barbarians. There was a certain woman that dwelt beyond Jordan, her name was Mary, . . . She then attempted a most unnatural thing; and snatching up her son, who was a child sucking at her breast, she said, "O thou miserable infant! for whom shall I preserve thee in this war, this famine, and this sedition? . . . As soon as she had said this she slew her son, and then roasted him, and ate the one half of him, and kept the other half by her concealed."—Josephus pp. 748-749.

So Jesus relating this judgment upon His people, said in His answer to His disciples, "For then shall be great tribulation (on the Jews) such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." Matt. 24:21.

Thus ends the first and last great destruction of God's people as a body of fleshly Israel.

THE LOVE OF LUXURY

ACCORDING TO the 1926 figures, 90 per cent of the automobiles, pianos and phonographs sold in the United States are sold on the installment plan. Cabinet radios to the amount of 85 per cent are sold on this plan, and 75 per cent of the washing machines, vacuum cleaners, kitchen cabinets and similar articles.

When statesmen become alarmed over this situation, and for business reasons, as well as for reasons of sound character influence, call upon the people to put the brake on, it is certainly time for Christian people to be concerned. Installment buying as a habit is not only enervating to character, but is leading hundreds of church people to assume greater burdens than they should carry, forcing them into a mad rush to make payments and keep up appearances. The result is that it is little indeed that God gets out of them, and they in turn are deprived of the blessings of heaven which are poured out upon those who bring their tithes into the storehouse. Mal. 3:10.

Few people realize that merchandise sold in this way is usually extravagantly priced to begin with. A famous manufacturer has admitted that he would rather make a sale on installment than for cash. He can get 24 per cent from the installment buyer for the credit accommodation, and can borrow money at 3½ or 4 per cent to carry the load. Even after deducting collection costs, he can make 12 to 15 per cent clear. He argues that if the American people are so ridiculously foolish as to be willing to pay such usury, why not let them?

If the orgy of installment buying was confined to necessities, it would not be so serious, but it is largely confined to luxuries. This means that in many cases the purchasing is done in order to keep pace with neighbors who perhaps are in better condition to have these luxuries. As one put it recently: "In these days there is no disgrace in poverty—unless your neighbors find it out."

It is a sad fact that many who make high professions of Christianity are in debt on all hands, and distracted with care because of a desire to make as good a showing as some other person. One man admitted that he was a human dynamo—everything on him was charged.

It is well to remember that the poor as well as the rich may be caught in the toils of the love of luxury. The would-be rich, as well as the rich, have little place in their thoughts for Christ. Bishop Mann said: "The love of the penny may create as much impediment as the love of the pound."—King's Business.

THEN SHALL TWO BE IN THE FIELD; THE ONE SHALL BE TAKEN, AND THE OTHER LEFT. MATT. 24:40

WE ARE still patiently waiting for news items and short articles from the different societies and individual Bereans over the country. Help us to make this a Berean family page.

* * * * *
The words across the head of this page were spoken by the Master at the conclusion of a sermon on signs of the times, and draw a very dramatic picture of a day of separation, of the highest joy and the deepest sorrow.

* * * * *
The time under consideration is the coming of the Lord, and in the preceding verses is pictured the time of trouble, war and distress that shall cover the earth previous to the establishment of the kingdom and the bringing in of everlasting peace. The picture of that period is dark, indeed. Though brief in its duration, it shall be world wide in its scope, and intense shall be the sufferings of that dark day.

* * * * *
The beauty of the opportunity offered to the Christian is very outstanding—the opportunity not only of escaping the time of trouble, but of being in the presence of the Lord. To escape trouble or persecution is simply a negative favor, but to be ushered into the presence of Christ and to enjoy the honor and happiness of such association, that is a positive blessing beyond compare.

* * * * *
"The one shall be taken",—other texts speak of the joy of that event, when the Master shall call His faithful ones to meet Him in the air. It matters not whether they shall be among the living, working in the field, or whether they shall be lying quietly sleeping in the dust when the voice of the archangel rings out, the dead in Christ shall rise and the living faithful shall be gathered with them into the presence of the Lord. 1 Thess. 4:16-18. Revelation, chapters four and five, also pictures this event showing the redeemed ones with Christ before the Father's throne, singing the song of redemption and praise. This precedes the time of trouble, introduced by the opening of the seals and pouring out of the viols of wrath, as described in chapters six and on.

* * * * *
The same thought is evidently pictured by Jesus in Luke 21:36, "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." He that is worthy shall not have to pass through the time of trouble, but will be accorded the opportunity of escaping it and standing in the presence of Christ,

Here, then, is the highest joy of the ages,—“The one shall be taken.” To be with Christ, to know as we are known, to be like Him and see Him as He is.

* * * * *
What a sad contrast the rest of the sentence leaves, “And the other left.” Not having qualified for the Master's call, this one cannot be taken, cannot be used. Left behind when loved ones are lifted up, this class shall face the troubles that are coming in the world. Sorrow and regret beyond description shall be theirs as they confront the real facts and conditions. No wonder that “there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.”

* * * * *
Consider carefully the contrast. God's love reaches out to us, showing us the joy that may be ours, and warning us of the sorrow we may bring ourselves into. Will we heed His warning, and answer His loving call? “The one shall be taken”,—may that joy be yours and mine!

GOD'S CARE

By Beatrice Walter

Jesus said unto His disciples, “I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on. The life is more than meat; and the body is more than raiment. Consider the ravens: for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls? And which of you with taking thought can add to his stature one cubit? If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest? Consider the lilies how they grow; they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. If then God so clotheth the grass, which is to day in the field, and to morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith? And seek not ye what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind. For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of these things. But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you. Fear not, little Flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth, for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.”

CHURCH ADVANCEMENT

ZEALOUS OF GOD'S WORKS

"For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope; and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."—Titus 2:11-14.

ZEAL" IS ONE THING essential unto success in any enterprise. It is but a small percentage of man's undertakings that succeed, even in his own estimation. Less than ten out of one hundred people make a special mark in the world. The majority—the great majority—are failures, as compared with the worldly successes of the few.

There are at least two secrets to success.

One is a proper vision or judgment of the goal in view, and the best method to pursue in order to attain it, and another is proper zeal and concentration unto realization.

As to the vision of the Christian and the church, God has most graciously provided that in His most wonderful Book of revelation. The vision is the mark "of the high calling in Christ Jesus". This vision includes all that together makes that calling what it is in its completeness: "Fashioned like unto his (Christ's) glorious body"; "this mortal shall be made immortal"; "heirs of God and joint-heirs of Christ"; "his body"—that is (is it?), the members and organs which will then be the doers of the work prompted and directed by the Head, the most wonderful working position ever revealed among God's wonders of wonders.

Here is vision for individual or church. It is certain of becoming real—for God Himself has conceived it and has assured its ultimate accomplishment.

As to method for realizing this unspeakable end He has also revealed that. Christ is the one only "way" thereunto. He is "the Captain and Finisher". As the blood sprinkled upon the door post was assurance to Israel that God's death angel would pass over the house thus marked by God's command, so the sure word of the resurrected Lamb of God received and given right of way within the life of any person today is assurance that He, who gave His own dear Son new life, will also give new life and standing to whomsoever He finds thus marked with the new life of His Son. Here is God's method for man's procedure toward realization of His revealed vision of man. It does not reveal man's accomplishment, but God's gracious mercy responding to man's manifest faith.

And the realization of this wonderful grandeur necessitates "zeal". Zeal is not expressed necessarily by great bodily activity. Zeal means more the deep earnest longing desire toward an end manifested by constant and faithful effort toward the realization thereof. This rests with the choice and devotion of the individual or of the group of individuals constituting the Church of any locality.

It requires zeal—earnest, continuous, persevering devotion—of the Christian toward Christ and His Father if he is entitled to hope to realize the mark "of the high calling". It is for this end that the writer so anxiously urges the churches everywhere to advance church activity with all possible strength. The Christian, as others, has but this one day in which to thus "press toward the mark"; he has but one source of service-strength—the strength entrusted him by God. The whole problem resolves itself into the answer of one only question, namely:

Will I honor God by zealously devoting unto Him the life and its strength with which He has graciously supplied me?

It is a simple question. Its affirmative answer determines that life's ability, of whatever character, will be zealously devoted to the service of the ever faithful and loving God.

WHY STUDY THE BIBLE?

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

IT APPEARS recently that some people are awakening to see their lack of the knowledge of the Bible. They see their need because they are not even living up to the knowledge that they do have of the Blessed Book. Hence many confess their need as they realize that by reading and living the Bible, great changes may be wrought in the lives of those who follow the teachings of the Book of books. And these are days when men need God.

Then too, many are awakening because of the unusual world conditions that are taking place everywhere. Some people would like to have their children have a better Christian training than they seem to be getting. For, much of what is taught today in the common schools is taught from a material standpoint, much of which will soon be proven to be of a sandy foundation. Many have been asleep and will some day realize the mistakes they have made by being absorbed in the cares of life, so that they neglected to give the Bible its proper place in their home and life. For, unless it is read and studied in the home during the growing years, a child of today stands very little chance of getting much elsewhere that will help him to build a Christian character, unless he is fortunate enough to go to an institution where the Bible is taught in its truth and purity.

The Bible is the most wonderful book that has ever

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE

Hosea, Chapters 6, 11, 14

Devotional Reading: Psalm 36:5-10

GOLDEN TEXT

For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings. Hosea 6:6.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

The God of Love. If kindness, goodness and mercy characterize love in the giver, then the promised future doings of almighty God in the face of Israel's record of the past, establish beyond comprehension of mortal mind the great unbounded love of Jehovah. Both Israel and Judah in their rebellion against God, in revolting personal immoralities, in national subservience to the most degraded conception of idolatry, have persisted in such reproaches and insult as would, if possible, obliterate the love of the Creator for them. Yet, regardless of all this, God assures that in the event of their free and hearty choice to return to Him, He will receive them as the prodigal son, with outstretched arm, with tender heart, and with the fattened calf.

Questions. Whose are the words of 6:1? Has Israel yet proclaimed them? Will she? What will be the result? When was Israel a child? In what sense did this pertain in Matt. 2:15? How did God teach Ephraim, Israel? What bands of love did God use? What is force of the pleading in 11:8? Analyze and associate the thought of God's anger with the decision that He will not destroy. What conclusion is to be derived from last half of 11:9? By whose iniquity did Israel fall? By whose strength may she arise? What is meant by "I will heal", 14:4? What is meant by the series of statements of blessing, 14:5,6,7? What is conclusion of whole matter 14:8? How will such conclusion affect the mind of the nations?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"For lovingkindness I desired and not sacrifice,—

And the knowledge of God more than ascending offerings." Hosea 6:6. Roth.

The thought of the two preceding golden texts is still carried here. They offered sacrifices but their hearts were not right with God. "Therefore they shall be as the morning cloud, and as the early dew that passeth away." Hosea 13:3.

"There are many in the church as well as out of it, who need to learn that Christianity is neither a creed nor a ceremonial, but a life vitally connected with a living Christ." Josiah Strong.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Ignorant of God's Love, Knowledge of God's goodness is possible to all men, "because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath showed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse", Romans 1:19-20. But, in spite of the fact that "he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust", Matt. 5:45, few acknowledge His grace and faithfulness. Still God's love and care reaches them. "God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us". Rom. 5:8.

Love Prompts to Action. It was because "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life", John 3:16. When we recognize God's wonderful love for us, a spirit of reciprocation is developed within our own hearts, and we are moved by a desire to show our appreciation of His goodness in practical acts of service and obedience. "If a man love me, he will keep my words". John 14:23.

Love, The Strongest Emotion. "No cord or cable can draw so forcibly, or bind so fast, as love can do with only a single thread".—Burton. Of all the emotions, love is by far the deepest and most powerful, as well as the most lasting in its nature. Fear of punishment, a sense of duty, or even hope, will never produce the fervent, self-sacrificing service induced by love.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Making God known to Israel.

The ultimate purpose of all God's dealings with Israel is to make Himself known to her. The chief medium through which these dealings reached Israel (before Christ) was the prophets. A large part of their work was condemnation of sin that Israel might be made to know God's attitude toward sin and to gradually absorb this same attitude and with it, God's righteousness.

But parallel with this work of condemnation the prophets carried a message of love that Israel might know God not only as a hater of sin, but also as a lover of man.

Hosea, speaking out of the experience of his own unfaithful wife and children, makes his message ring with God's hatred of Israel's unfaithfulness and with God's love should draw her into the faithfulness of a responding love. Speaking through Hosea, God says, "I drew them with cords of man, with bands of love." God's attitude toward sin and His love for man is what John has reference to when he says, "In him was life, and the life was the light of men." But when this light shone through the prophets for Israel but few absorbed it, so few that John says, "And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not." Only as that light shines through the living presence of Jesus among men, can it pierce into man's inner conscience and make him to know God in deed and in truth. As it shone through the prophets it could only restrain, or at best, produce temporary reform and loyalty as fleeting as its comprehension was on the surface only. Nevertheless it paved the way for the work of the Christ through whom alone man may know the Father.—A. K.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Hosea: His work and his special fitness for it; the effectiveness of his work. His work as "life that is the light of men". The one fully effective medium of such light.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: God's unchanging love.

In marked contrast to the preceding prophets who urged the law of God, comes forward Hosea with the beautiful proclamation of the love and mercy of Jehovah. He paints a dark picture of the sins of Israel, but instead of discouraging the people, he proclaims the love and forgiveness of God, who will blot out their transgressions if they will turn and follow Him.

Love is the strongest of all forces. Obedience may be commanded by law, or demanded by threats, but there is no service rendered, through law or through fear, which can compare to the service of love. God loved us and gave His Son for us. Fear could not possibly drive us as close to the Father's side as love will draw and bind us.

What is it that makes a child love his parent? Apply the thought to God and His children. If one endeavors to serve God from fear of punishment or torture, can such service possibly be tempered with love?—F. E. S.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

A nice little gathering was present at the Cottage services at the home of Sr. Martha Walls, 1016 North Ave., Rockford, Ill., last Friday evening. Sr. Dorothy Lyon was leader of the Berean lesson, following which Bro. F. L. Austin spoke for a short time.

We are glad to announce that Bro. McGraw was able to visit his family over the last week end and celebrate his eighth wedding anniversary. Bro. McGraw is gaining very satisfactorily. He has gained in weight until he weighs more than ever before. All confidently look for him to fully regain his health and be back to work as usual.

The Bible Training Class work has started most satisfactorily. One hour per day is devoted to an analytical study of the Bible. An hour on Wednesdays and Fridays is given to the study of the Biblical usages of the English language. This calls for all of the study that the Class members have time to give.

Part-time work is being furnished each member of the Class with which to defray living costs.

The Oregon people were pleasantly surprised on the 27th of October when Bro. and Sr. C. E. Randall and their son, Celine, drove in. Bro. Randall was on his way to an appointment at Marshall, Ill., where he is now conducting an evangelistic meeting. It was the plan that Sr. Randall and son should accompany him, but upon invitation Sr. Randall remained at the Golden Rule Home and is taking treatment to overcome the rheumatic condition that so debilitates her. Her health has improved considerably of late. She earnestly petitions the prayers of all in her behalf.

GOLDEN RULE HOME

A large bag of prunes recently arrived from the orchard of Bro. and Sr. M. W. Woolf, of Vancouver, Washington. Sr. Thayer and the Home members are very grateful. Thanks, Bro. and Sr. Woolf.

Mrs. Martha Bausman has just added her membership to the Home family. Mrs. Bausman is a widow lady formerly of Calico Rock, Arkansas. For a year past she has been a resident in and about Oregon. A little over a year ago her eyesight began to fail her and has since completely left her. Though not a member of the Church of God she is devotedly religious and very amiable, liked by all. She has paid into the Home fund the maximum amount required, after having been a boarder at the Home since the first of September.

The Golden Rule Greenhouse has been harvesting an extra good crop of Chrysanthemums. Many have been wholesaled to florists in Dixon and Rockford and very many more might have been supplied them had the crop been sufficient. All other plants and flowers are looking and doing fine. The profits from this industry help the Golden Rule Home, making it desirable that they shall be as large as possible.

A WARNING CORRECTION

The following article is taken from the September issue of "Words of Life". It certainly is news to the writer. "Words of Life" can in no way be responsible for the false representations made therein. That responsibility, of necessity, rests wholly upon the author of the article, which follows.—

"THE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA."

"We are glad to send greetings from America for the September Words of Life, a press of other matters and many miles of travel has made it impossible to send the letter each month.

"The 'June Meeting' of Argos, Ind., attracted a goodly number of visitors from the town and some from outside. The writer delivered the evening addresses from a series of charts. There were seventeen members received into the Church, fifteen were by baptism, the evening services being evangelistic, this making thirty-six members received into this congregation for the year. The brethren in the different States conduct Annual Conferences and Conventions from this time on until about the first of September.

"We would like to recommend the work of Sister Orpha Sanford, 2934 West Jackson Blvd., Chicago. This work is "relief for the poor in the families of Life Believers." This good sister collects and distributes funds and clothing in a most helpful way, and should have a large support in what she is doing.

"The editor of the Restitution Herald has finished a trip to California, visiting the churches and isolated believers along the way.

"The writer expects to visit the gatherings of the congregations in the North-Western Conference, including Washington and Oregon. He will be the speaker at the Annual Meeting of the organization to be held at Vancouver.

"We have received several letters from England regarding our publications. We do not have any regular publication except the "Voice of Prophecy." This is published from time to time to put tracts into print that have been in circulation here in past years. We also have a small song book, "Hymns of the Faith."

"Elder E. D. Gifford, W. 1129 Jackson Ave., Spokane, Wash., is not only pastor of the church there of Life Believers, but is also editor of a neat little publication which appears monthly. The paper is devoted largely to Bible study. Address him as above.

"Yours in the Blessed Hope,
"C. C. Maple,
"1433 Addison Street, Chicago, Ill."

It is with reluctance that the above has to be made public in an effort to correct its misleading statements. But the proverbial "last straw" still breaks the camel's back. It is wished merely to assure both the English and the American readers of "Words of Life"—and "The Herald"—that the "churches" referred to in the above article are of the denomination known as "The Church of God"; that "The Restitution Herald", its editor's trip, the North-West Conference, each have to do with the same church; and that every assumption that these works and interests are the works of "The Christian Association of America" are untrue and misleading.

F. L. Austin,
Executive-Secretary of the General Conference of the Church of God.

THE WATERLOO-CEDAR FALLS SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

The Waterloo and Cedar Falls, Iowa, Sunday School class, which was organized on September 25, 1927, is held at the home of Bro. and Sr. Starbuck in Cedar Falls. Our fine average attendance is 19. We are using the N. B. I. Quarterlies.

Hurrah for Waterloo and Cedar Falls! Having now started this work, let nothing interfere to detract from its faithful continuance.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

On October twenty-third we had our anniversary meeting at our Grand Rapids church. It was one year old. At Sunday School there were 170. 54 were in the adult class. The collection was $7.74. This broke the attendance record for Sunday School by one. A ten-piece band played sacred music for our church services. After the morning services dinner was served in the basement, 160 were fed at this time. At 2:30 o'clock Bro. Patrick gave another good sermon, with more good, sacred music by the band. We had one of our best meetings. It was a good spiritual meeting. All the services were very much enjoyed.

RALLY DAY AT BLAIR, NEBRASKA

On Sunday, October 16, the Church of God Sunday School at Blair held a very successful rally. The morning was devoted to the regular Sunday School, with 60 present. A basket dinner followed. Brethren and friends from Florence, Omaha, Avery, Bennington, Benson, Kenard and Arlington, Nebraska, and from Little Sioux, Iowa, were present.

At about 2:00 o'clock a fine program was given by the children, intermingled with some very good talks by some of the older ones.

Bro. Arthur Mehrens of Little Sioux, Iowa, gave us a short, instructive talk on cooperation in the church, of the parents, teachers, and children, in the Sunday School and what a power for Christ perfect harmony could be.

Bro. Dr. Prime of Omaha spoke on what Cooperation and Organization has done for the dental and medical professions; likewise what it could do for the church.

Bro. Banning of Avery told us of the good he had received from the day with us and urged cooperation with the National Bible Institution.

Bro. John Mehrens of Little Sioux, Iowa, gave us some thoughts along the same line.

Dr. Prime told us about Bro. Charles Crowe being in the Swedish Immanuel Hospital at Omaha and suggested drawing up a resolution sending him greetings and best wishes from those present at the meeting, which suggestion was carried out and Bro. Prime carried a copy of the resolution to him that evening along with a large bouquet of beautiful flowers which had been brought to the church for decoration by Sr. M. D. Newell.

The program closed with the pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross", by the following girls: Clarabelle Mehrens, Ruth Jenkins, Opal and Doris White, Grace Swihart, and Dorothy and Clara Krogh. The singing for the pageant was by Edward Jenkins. A great deal of credit is due Sr. M. D. Newell and Sr. Ruth Jenkins, teachers of the Junior and Primary classes, for their efforts toward making the program a success.

Birdie Krogh.

MYRON ELROY RANDALL

Was born at Eden Valley, Minnesota, on February 7, 1924, and died at Mora, Minnesota, on Thursday evening, October 20, 1927.

He leaves his parents, Elder and Sister Clyde E. Randall, and one brother, Celine, to mourn his passing, and many other relatives and friends.

The little fellow had been healthy, and word of his death was a shock to all, as he fell victim to blood-poisoning and only a few knew that he had been ill. A large number of relatives and friends met at the home of Bro. George Randall on Sunday, October 23, where a short funeral sermon was given, largely in favor of Grandma Randall, who was unable to go to the church because of old age. Little Myron had spent much of his time with his great-grandmother. Following this service adjournment was made to the Methodist church, where an audience of some three hundred showed their respect for the deceased.

May God bless the sorrowing father and mother and brother and help them in seeing a future so glorious as to make their burden easier to bear, is our prayer.

Sydney E. Magaw.

MRS. JEROME BURROUGHS

The Oregon Church and community were startled on the morning of October the twenty-sixth, to hear of the sudden and unexpected death of Sr. Jerome Burroughs. She had been in poor health for several months and for a few weeks had been confined to her bed apparently for a needed rest. All supposed that she was getting along nicely, till the announcement of her death. Even her husband and sister were absent from her bed at the moment of death, none but the nurse being present, so wholly unexpected did it come.

Mrs. Emma L. Burroughs, nee Chaney, was born August 1, 1857. On December 11, 1879, she was united in marriage with Jerome Burroughs. To them was born one son, Guy, now of Cincinnati, Ohio. Her whole life was lived near and in Oregon, Illinois. Besides her faithful and devoted husband she leaves to mourn her sad loss, one sister, Ella B. Chaney, and one brother, John, of Oakland, California.

Sr. Burroughs had been a hard and active worker in the Church of God for several years, where she will be missed very much. The esteem in which she was held by the community was attested when an overflowing audience of neighbors and friends filled the church at the funeral services.

She was laid to rest in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, near Oregon, to await the joyful summons of the coming Lord—we all trust—to arise unto new and everlasting life.

F. L. Austin.

HOSEA PREACHES GOD'S LOVE

*"God is love! for us He careth,
While upon the earth we move;
Every work of His declareth
The Almighty God is love."*

THAT was what God wanted the Israelites to feel, and why He sent Hosea to them.

Hosea had been very unhappy and disappointed in his own home life; but he loved his family so, that he understood how a father feels toward wayward children. God was the loving Father, and Israel the bad child which needed punishing to make it do right.

Amos and Isaiah had tried to reform the Israelites, but they grew worse, instead of better.

Hosea, now, tried to make them repent and follow God in the true way. They would be sorry for their wrongdoing for a little while and obey God; but, before long they would be bad as ever—worshiping idols and indulging in all manner of evil.

Yet, God refused to cast His Chosen People off entirely. He said, "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and brought him out of Egypt."

Israel is sometimes called Ephraim, too. God then said He had taught Ephraim how to go, and helped and healed him, although Ephraim did not realize it.

God continued, "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? I will not punish you as severely as you deserve; I will not entirely destroy you, for I am God, and not man. I am the Holy One in the midst of thee."

God is so much greater than man that He can love and forgive even the greatest of sins. He promised to love the Israelites, freely, and not be angry with them. He would be like the dew to Israel—giving them the best of everything, so they would be lovely and pure as the lily, as beautiful as the olive tree; and grow and flourish even to the countries round about them.

God promises to so completely surround the chosen ones with His love that they will sincerely say, "What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard Him and observed Him: I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found." That time has not yet come, but we believe it will come before long.

Now, if God loved unfaithful Israel so truly, how much more sure are we, who are trying to live as He wants us to live, that He loves us. We see God's love in everything about us. He gave His beloved Son for us. He watches over us, and guides us aright, if we but let Him.

And since God has proved His love for us in so many ways, how can we show our love for Him in return?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Make a list of the ways in which God shows His love for us.
2. Make a list of the ways in which we are showing our love for God.
3. Which is the longer list?

WHICH IS YOUR CLASS?

Do you belong to the jawbone class, the class of folks who talk

About the many things they'll do, the paths of fame they'll walk,

Who boast about their conquered worlds and deeds right nobly done,

While yet their efforts end with words, no task is e'er begun?

Do you belong to the wishbone class, the class of folks who long

That wealth and fame might flow to them for just a little song,

Who wish that ease would be their lot and praise their fortune, too,

While all the while they nod and smile and naught but nothing do?

Do you belong to the backbone class, the class of folks who work

From early morn till late at night and never duty shirk,

Who dig right in and fight their way toward the grand success

That waits ahead for folks who give and always do their best?

EVOLUTION AND CHRIST

MANY HAVE read with dismay and alarm the recent statements of the Bishop of Birmingham, Dr. Norwood and others as published in the press. When men of their position say: "The stories of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden have become folklore," "Man is not a being who has fallen, but an animal who slowly gained spiritual understanding," it surely is time for the Christian Church to declare what has been the "faith of our fathers" for nineteen hundred years and upon which facts our present civilization stands. There is one thing absolutely sure and patent to any reading man, that the Church was never founded on such views or interpretations. The lofty reach of the twentieth century came through the acceptance of mighty truths uttered by Jesus Christ, His apostles and their worthy successors. The civilized world differs from the uncivilized because of those simple yet powerful teachings preserved for us in the Holy Scriptures. Had the apostles Peter and Paul taught as these gentlemen are now teaching, the Church would never have been "built". America and Europe would have been no better than Asia and Africa, and the human race would be still dwelling in a darkness, deeper than the Middle Ages. The Bible, accepted, believed and preached, is, under the power of God, the great foundation stone upon which our civilization has been raised and the Church of God built. Undermine the Bible and civilization totters and the Church decays.

One must admire the courage and sincerity of men who claim to have attacked "a timid and most obscure attitude of the Church", but sincerity never establishes a fact. Paul was sincere when he sought to destroy the early Church by imprisonment and slaughter. Throwing aside the sophistries of language, what is the real issue involved, confronting every thinking man? Is it not, "What is the Bible?" Is it the word of man or the word of God? Is it human speculation or Divine revelation? Is its author man or God? If we ask the Bible itself it will claim from Genesis to Revelation that its author is God, and it is His message to man. Shall its statements be declared untrue, or set aside by the views, investigations or the deductions of man, no matter how learned or sincere? Are we to believe the Scripture which says, "The Word of God will stand for ever", "Thy Word is truth", "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words (Jesus is speaking) shall not pass away"? Science and philosophy have frequently changed their positions, but not so the Word of God. Shall we give up the unchangeable and eternal truths of the Creator of the Universe for mere opinions and views of men, which, like the shadows, ever come and go?

Let it be clear, that the Word of God can never be affected by any criticisms of man. It is as abiding as the rules of arithmetic and the laws of gravitation. But these outbursts of rationalism do seriously injure the faith of men and women in the Eternal God and His Word. As their faith is undermined their lives are blighted. While many who are established in the faith will read these statements and toss them aside unharmed, the most dangerous result is the effect on the plastic mind of the child. Epidemics and diseases usually take the largest toll of childlife. So, too, these epidemics in the religious world.

How the press of today is telling us of juvenile crime. How school teachers are lamenting over the difficulty to get their scholars to attempt serious study amidst a whirl of pleasure. How churches are puzzled at the few young people who are entering religious work, either as missionaries or ministers. What influence is so affecting the young life of today? I believe, with many others, that to a large extent these hurtful influences come directly from a loss of confidence in the verities of the Christian faith through the teaching of evolution, modernism and rationalism.

But is the issue of today clearly seen? It is not primarily a question of the interpretation of the first eleven chapters of Genesis, or whether the story of man's creation is literal. The real question which this theory of evolution finally and forcibly raises is, "Who is Jesus Christ?" Is He descended from an ape, or is He the Divine Son of God, miraculously and supernaturally created, being clothed with all authority and knowledge? The perfect, sinless, sweet life and voluntary death of Jesus of Nazareth cannot be explained on natural or evolutionary grounds. When He burst the barriers of the tomb He proved forever that He was not the product of some primordial germ. If evolution be a process, and Christ came by that process, we should have had, ere now, hundreds of Christs, each better than the last, since nineteen hundred years have intervened. The Son of God is the unique, supernatural, unexplainable, mysterious Being for which evolution cannot account. He is the "stone" (Matt. 21:44) which grinds to powder all impossible, unscriptural theories. His words, too, are authoritative, for when He said, "I am the truth", He declared that He was the essence and source of all truth, whether religious, scientific or philosophic. He is the world's greatest and final authority. Did He ever speak on this subject? He said, "Have you not read that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female?" (Matt. 19:4.)

Can this be taken to mean anything else than a confirmation of the story in Genesis? Surely, no one can say that Jesus looked upon the story of man's creation and fall as "folklore". Was He wrong? If so, He was not the Divine Son of God and therefore could not be the Savior of the world.

Here, then, is the crux of the whole matter: Does not the rejection of the simple story of creation inevitably involve the rejection of the Deity of Jesus Christ? The faith of every believer is inseparably linked with the truthfulness of Scripture and the veracity of our Savior. The Christian must take his choice. Evolution and Christian faith cannot dwell together, for they are opposite and antagonistic. It is either evolution or the Bible, Darwin or Christ.

Some would make us think that it is simply a question of interpretation, but it is more vital. It is a life-and-death struggle, in which the Christian Church is now battling for her very existence. The foundation stones upon which she was built and has stood for nineteen hundred years are now being shattered. In consequence, faith in the Divine and supernatural is receding. Evolution and its twin sister, modernism, are quietly but certainly splitting the Protestant branch of the Christian Church. Formerly the enemy was without the Church's walls, but today he has gained entrance and usurps the very citadel.

Jesus, when on earth, said, "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Here He foretold the ceaseless conflict that the Church was to face. Will she live or die in the present struggle? While the faith of many is being undermined, the true Church can never be destroyed, for her Founder has said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Out of the coming battle the true Church will emerge, scarred but glorious, purged, but purified, without "spot or wrinkle or any such thing."—Selected.

PART 17

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE EASTERN EMPIRE

Daniel 8

THE ANGEL predicted that "through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand", a statement which means that Mohammed II should utilize uncommon mechanical tools in the execution of his project; and it is remarkable that he was the first commander to use great guns and gunpowder to batter down fortifications.

"Among the instruments of destruction, Mohammed studied with peculiar care the recent and tremendous discovery of the Latins; and his artillery surpassed whatever had yet appeared in the world. A founder of cannon, a Dane or Hungarian, who had been almost starved in the Greek service, deserted to the Moslems, and was liberally entertained by the Turkish sultan. Mohammed was satisfied with the answer to his first question, which he eagerly pressed on the artist. "Am I able to cast a cannon capable of throwing a ball or stone of sufficient size to batter the walls of Constantinople? I am not ignorant of their strength, but were they more solid than those of Babylon, I could oppose an engine of superior power; the position and management of that engine must be left to your engineers." On this assurance a foundry was established at Adrianople: the metal was prepared; and at the end of three months Urban produced a piece of brass ordnance of stupendous and almost incredible magnitude; a measure of twelve palms is assigned to the bore; and the stone bullet weighed above six hundred pounds. A vacant place before the new palace was chosen for the first experiment; but to prevent the sudden and mischievous effects of astonishment and fear, a proclamation was issued that the cannon would be discharged the ensuing day. The explosion was felt or heard in a circuit of a hundred furlongs: the ball, by the force of gunpowder, was driven above a mile; and on the spot where it fell, it buried itself a fathom deep in the ground. For the convenience of this destructive engine, a frame or carriage of thirty wagons was linked together and drawn along by a team of sixty oxen: two hundred men on both sides were stationed to poise and support the rolling weight; two hundred and fifty workmen marched before to smooth the way and repair the bridges; and near two months were employed in a laborious journey of one hundred and fifty miles."

The "prince of princes" against whom Mohammed II stood up was Constantine XI, who, as emperor of the Eastern empire, was literal "prince of princes" within the bounds of that empire. The siege of Constantinople began in the month of April, 1453, and lasted until the 29th of May in the same year, when the city fell into the hands of the Turks. During this period Mohammed had made strenuous efforts to achieve his purpose, and many thousands of men were slain on both sides. With the fall of Constantinople the power of "the mighty and holy people" was permanently destroyed, and the blood of the martyrs who suffered death rather than accept the doctrines of the Greek hierarchy amply avenged.

"The profanation and plunder of the monasteries and churches excited the most tragic complaints. The dome of St. Sophia itself, the earthly heaven, the second firmament, the vehicle of the cherubim, the throne of the glory of God, was despoiled of the oblations of ages; and the gold and silver, the pearls and jewels, the vases and sacerdotal ornaments, were most wickedly converted to the service of mankind. After the divine images had been stripped of all that could be valuable to a profane eye, the canvas, or the wood, was torn, or broken, or burnt, or trod under foot, or applied, in the stables or the kitchen, to the vilest uses. The example of sacrilege was imitated, however, from the Latin conquerors of Constantinople; and the treatment which Christ, the Virgin, and the saints had sustained from the guilty Catholic, might be inflicted by the zealous Mussulman on the monuments of idolatry.

"By command of the Turkish sultan the metropolis of the Eastern church was transformed into a mosque; the rich and portable instruments of superstition had been removed; the crosses were thrown down; and the walls, which were covered with images and mosaics, were washed and purified, and restored to a state of naked simplicity. On the same day, or on the ensuing Friday, the Muezin or crier, ascended the most lofty turret, and proclaimed the ezan, or public invitation, in the name of God and His prophet; the imam preached; and Mohammed the Second performed the namaz of prayer and thanksgiving on the great altar, where the Christian mysteries had so lately been celebrated before the last of the Cesars."

The devil takes great pleasure in the fact that he is on speaking terms with many good Christians.

been written, and the way it has been preserved through the ages seems even more wonderful. We have only to look back into Bible history to find how it transformed lives. There are few people in any age who appreciate it or who see God's great plans for His children. We get out of it just what we put into it. With the spirit that one approaches God in reading the Word, will God approach him. Psa. 18:24-27. Only eternity will fully reveal the Bible's hidden treasures to those who have accepted it as their guide. There is power, life and a glowing light in the pages of the Blessed Book that only the humble heart and the broken spirit can understand.

The Bible of God says, "Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away." Isn't that sufficient reason why we should study its sacred pages, if it will always remain and never be changed?

Critics say, "There are other books that are just as good and I prefer to read them." There is no book that has stood the test as the Bible has; and none ever will. We must read it, study it, and live it before we can appreciate its value and its power. But let us leave the critics alone. They have shown which path they have chosen by the choice they have made. It is God's business to judge them, not ours. Our words either condemn or justify ourselves.

The Word of God is able to put life and power into the lives of people, and transform them so that they are able to live under great pressure and to overcome the ever-increasing temptations which they may meet in these times. The truth of God upholds them when others go down under the power of sin. And those who continue in the Word will need strength from God, for there may be some severe testing times ahead of us soon.

Let us look at a few reasons why it is important that we should read the Bible and live it as far as we are able to understand it.

First, It is the word of the living God; and the only way that God has of talking directly to us.

Second, It will stand forever, because its Author is divine and everything that is not founded upon His Truth will go down. Christ said, "Every tree that my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up."

Third, It is the book that will guide us in our daily lives; it gives advice on every aspect of life. It is the only book that tells us plainly how to conduct ourselves in this present world of fads and fashions that will pass away some day.

Fourth, It tells the truth while all other books have some error in them. Besides, most books grow old in a few years; but the Bible never grows old to the Christian, as he can always find something new in it.

Fifth, It is a book that proves itself true, for we have as proof the lives of the best, the holiest and the purest individuals who have made the Bible their guide. We should be followers of those who through faith and patience inherit the promise.

Sixth, It is the only book that shows us how we may be free from the burden of our sins, and gives us freedom of life in walking with God, so that we may be in the world yet not of it.

Seventh, It has a great hope—that Jesus Christ is coming back to this sin-cursed earth as King, to make an end of sin, and of the sinner. It will then mean eternal life and immortality for those whose lives are in harmony with the Word of God.

brethren from coming to his condition. But it is plainly stated of his condition that there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the place where Christ places him. Psalms 6:5, makes death and sheol synonymous terms and says there is no remembrance of God therein. In Eccl. 9:5, it is said, "The dead know not anything". Is it reasonable to suppose that Christ contradicted these plain, positive statements?

Besides, if we examine the language Christ used, carefully, it is easy to see that it is not two individuals that He is talking about, but He is using figures of speech to explain something else. Take for instance the language in the sixteenth verse: "The beggar died and was carried"; "the rich man died and was buried".

What in the case of the beggar, died and was carried? A certain minister in my Bible class, a short time ago, said, "It was his spirit that was carried away." Then I asked, "What was it then that was buried?" He replied, "His body". Then I asked by what rule of language he made the man carried different from the man buried. The only reason he had to offer was that it was so and that was all there was to it. But he never came to Bible class again.

Just notice: The beggar is described as being full of sores, the rich man is described as being clothed in fine linen. If this is literal language, is the beggar that is described as being full of sores, the one that dies and is carried? If not why not? If he isn't then the language is not literal. Is the rich man that was clothed in fine linen, the one that dies and was buried? Every believer in the literality of the language is ready to reply, "YES" in capital letters. But why the difference? The language used in describing the two men is the same.

It isn't difficult to see that the very ones that insist that the language is a literal history of two men after death, by their own interpretation make it strongly figurative, and then condemn us because we call it—what it really is and what they make it by their own interpretation—a parable.

there was also salt mingled with the fire and brimstone. The great smoke of a furnace which Abraham saw from far off Hebron is explained when we remember the asphalt that is found in this region. What makes a greater smoke than boiling asphalt? Thus the remains in this region show that the catastrophe did take place exactly as narrated in Genesis.

4. The location of the cities, which are not now visible, is determined by several considerations.

(1) The catastrophe took place where the ruins of the catastrophe now are; ruins do not move around. The ruins of the tragedy are around Jebel Usdum as we have already seen. The great high place was discovered at Bad de Draa on the mountainside within easy reach of the cities located round and about the plain.

(2) When Lot became afraid to remain in Zoar after the destruction of Sodom, he went up into the mountains; it was the mountain of Moab on the east side of the plain. Sodom and Gomorrah from which he fled must have been then on the western side of this narrow valley, which again puts them immediately in front of Jebel Usdum.

(3) The rivers also converge on a point immediately in front of this mountain. The confluence of rivers is the natural location of a metropolis; just here then, we would expect to find the cities located.

(4) The water of this part of the sea is very shallow, from a few inches to thirty-five feet, while the main body of the sea is twelve hundred feet deep. There are submerged forests also on both the east side and the west side of this shallow part of the sea, showing that the sea has risen much here within the last hundred years. Many similar evidences all around the Dead Sea show that the waters have been rising. Personal observation for over thirty years has observed a rise of about fourteen feet. This rising of the sea caused it to overflow at the southern end and flood the plain and cover the ruins of the lost cities. There they lie hiding their shame in the mud at the bottom of the sea in front of Jebel Usdum.

5. The representation of the narrative in Genesis that Lot became the father of Moab, that is to say, the progenitor of Moabite civilization, is also subject to testing by scientific evidence. We may inquire whether or not the civilization of Moab began after the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. We found a great Moabite temple, the only one thus far discovered; it lay on the mountains above the plain at the lower end of the Dead Sea. The pottery found at this old temple was of a transition period from the early bronze age to the middle bronze age, thus exactly agreeing with the claim made in Genesis that Lot was "the father of Moab".

Thus every point in the narrative concerning the cities of the plain has received scientific confirmation, and the trustworthiness of this ancient portion of Scripture stands out clearly before us.—Moody Monthly.

GOD'S WORD—A LAMP

By F. E. Siple

DAVID, the sweet singer of Israel, had walked a long and winding pathway of life. Starting from his father's sheep cote he strode through the royal courts in musical service to his king, through bloody fields of battle in victory over the Philistines, through forests as a refuge from a jealous king's anger, through kingship for himself and the building up of a powerful nation. No man was probably ever more dearly loved or bitterly hated. No man ever saw greater triumph or darker hours of discouragement.

One cannot but marvel as he reads this life-history that a man could emerge from forests of darkness and conditions that would dishearten most persons, to plains of victory and triumphant success. But David tells why and how. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psa. 119:105.

What did it matter, then, how dark the forest was? What difference did it make as to the thickness of the clouds of adversity, or the blackness of the sky overhead? He had a light that shone along his path, and a light is more prominent and valuable when the night is dark. A lantern is of little value on a moonlight night. The thicker the darkness the more the light shines out to point the pathway.

When all goes well for a man he is likely to forget God's Word, or pay little heed, but when disappointments and sorrows thicken and his sky grows dark and the outlook black, then it is that one can turn with relief and satisfaction to the pure, bright rays of light that beam from God's Word onto life's pathway, marking its pitfalls and guiding to victory.

It was because David walked in this light of truth and righteousness that he was so successful, and we remember him as a wonderful man. Is your sky more clouded than his was? Have you more to contend with than he had? Why cannot you follow the same gleam and gain just as great victory in God's sight?

Peace Supplants Fear Where Faith Begins

"Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid".—John 14:27.

BY SAMUEL E. HANEY

TO CHRISTIANS, ESPECIALLY in these days, the latter clause of this verse—"let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid"—is as indispensable as it is opportune. Trouble, as the resultant effect of the fall, has become a natural heritage—no functional mind is immune.

Let us first consider the subject from a strictly worldly and human viewpoint. The old adage, "Never trouble till trouble troubles you", can be brought up to date by omitting "never" and "till", e.g., Trouble trouble, trouble troubles you. Nothing is so debilitating to our whole bodily organism as worry and fear—the natural product of trouble. Every atom of the body is effected by such venom. There is no permanent relief for any bodily ailment while trouble and its accessories are active. The victim is beyond the aid of science. Trouble has become so commonplace to the world that people accept it as a contingency of their lives. Some even have an awesome dread feeling when all is going well. Some when void of trouble go about with a chip on their shoulder hunting trouble. Others kick up trouble when they can't have their own way or have people subscribe to their ideas. Then there is a class of miserable creatures who make everybody feel miserable with whom they come in contact. Indeed it is a novelty these days to meet with a person who hasn't a "heap of trouble on his mind"; and, like a boy whistling as he passes a cemetery in the dark, he is bravely bearing it. The poor, sin-sick world thinks it has all the trouble it can possibly endure. But its troubles haven't fully started—a mere embryo now. Just as the world war affected, and still affects, directly and indirectly every person so it will be in the "time of trouble, such as never was" (Dan. 12:1) after Christ takes out, "Them that look for him" ("who are expecting him", E. Dia.). Heb. 9:28. Note, "The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness; for the sword of the LORD shall devour from the one end of the land even to the other end of the land: no flesh shall have peace". Jer. 12:12. "For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be earthquakes in divers places, and there shall be famines and troubles: these are the beginnings of sorrows", Mark 13:8. And all this is the result of sin alienating man from his Creator, and making him a stranger "from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: . . ." Eph. 2:12, 13.

Superfluous to say, the Lord's words of the text are not for the "blind" and "deaf"; but they are intended for all His disciples until He returns. So, like Mary, let us "sit at Jesus' feet, and hear His words". God's admonition about trouble and fear manifests His interest in our health. He also showed an interest in Israel's health by a prescribed regimen—swine, etc., being excluded.

Jesus' solacing preface of the text gives cheer and comfort—"Peace I leave with you," etc.; as He elsewhere says, "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world", John 16:33. "We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God", Paul.

"But," says one, "yes, I often get downhearted: but it's human."

"Down hearted? Pshaw! There's seldom seen

A lane without a turning!

Each desert has a spot of green

In spite of bright Sol's burning.

Your friends have failed you? Well, what then?

Remember changing Peter;

Sorrow has tried the best of men,

And life is all the sweeter.

What adds a zest to summer's joy?

Is it not winter weary?

Peace would be tame without alloy,

Past grief makes solace cheery.

All cannot win, though all must run,

When once life's race is started;

Yet all may hear the words 'Well done';

So never be down hearted."

The Christian's future eventualities are with the Lord.

SALVATION is the one principal thing for which the Gospel is sent. The Gospel of Christ "is the power of God unto salvation".

LIFE "is more than meat, and the body than raiment". Therefore salvation—"the gift of God" which "is everlasting life"—is more to man than any other service to a fellow-being.

HERALD OF THANKSGIVING

THAT IS what we wish to make The Herald of November 22. It needs your Thanksgiving letter or article to make it complete. Send it now—at once.

* * * *

PRAISE GOD WITH YOUR SUBSTANCE

THAT IS what God required of His chosen people Israel. Not prayer and song alone; but prayer and song and substance. The first fruit was to be a gift unto the Giver of the whole. Let us in this Thanksgiving month remember God with a gift for the proclamation of "the gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto salvation".

* * * *

THE CHURCH OF GOD

THIS is not a man-made institution. The Churches of Macedonia were not man-made. They were God-made. He sent Paul into Macedonia to work with His Churches. God used man in the establishment of the early churches. That was God's way. They were created by means of man for man.

So today; the Church is God's. Any man who presumes to establish in his own name and strength a church as unto God and in the name of God is presumptive indeed. But, though there may be such, God, too, has His Church today as of yore. It is His. IT is not a man-made institution. It is real. It is active. It is working the works of God. It is faithfully holding aloft the name of His Son before a sin-sick and dying world. It is heralding the Gospel of God's Son, the Gospel of salvation. Its members are members of Christ. They are devoted to Him. They are workers. They make sacrifices.

The Church is far more necessary to man's well-being than is any other organization that is known among men; this, just as salvation is far more to man than is all else.

If we are of the Church let us live for it, stand for it, work for it, yea, die for it. Let us be true and strong for Him who died "that he might present" us "to himself a glorious CHURCH, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing".

If we carry the name let us live the life.

PREACH THE GOSPEL

THE proclamation of the Gospel is the one great commission of the risen Christ to His followers. There are other labors that follow in the wake of the proclaimed Word. These, too, are necessary in their place and time, but there is no Christian work that takes precedence over the preaching of the Gospel.

The preaching of the Gospel is to create faith in the hearer, that by faith he may be saved by Christ our Lord. Christ died "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life". Salvation of man was His first and great labor. He served the sick and the needy—but He did not die for them because of their sickness or poverty. He died that they might be saved. This last was the greater work. It meant more in the great plans and purposes of God. As salvation was Christ's greatest labor so it is the greatest labor for Christians. All other Christian work is secondary to this one leading work of the age.

With the much perfected art of printing and the greatly increased means of transportation the printed page becomes one of the greatest and cheapest means of proclaiming the Gospel. Because of its comparative cheapness and thoroughness the printed page is being more and more extensively employed for the proclamation of every propaganda known to man. Commerce is increased by leaps and bounds by use of the printed page. Soaps, tooth pastes, national parks, tobaccos, theatres, resorts: all are made profitable to the promoters by extensive use of the printed page. That page is equally effective when wisely used for the proclamation of the gospel—God's power unto salvation.

True, the printed message is made much more effect-

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION INFORMATION

THE following is to acquaint our readers with the financial standing of our paper. We are very thankful for the response to our note concerning the subscriptions, which are being paid from the Helping Fund, for those whose circumstances would otherwise bar them from receiving this weekly “Herald” of things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of His dear Son.

We are, however, aware that the purpose of the “Helping Fund” is not understood by all our readers.

This name has been used from the beginning to name funds received to send the “Herald” to those unable to pay for themselves.

But, since our engagement in larger and broader religious efforts which must be supported by free will contributions, and funds so received may just as well be termed, “Helping Fund”, the following explanation is given:

Now, in order to designate the different uses, so that there may be no misunderstanding as to the place your funds shall be credited when sent in, we are suggesting the following names which, in themselves, will be self-explanatory: “Subscription Fund”, “Training Class Fund” “General Fund”, and “Wince Fund”.

If you give to the “General Fund” your contribution will be used where most needed. If, however, you prefer to designate where you wish your money used, for instance, if to help the “Herald”, designate it “Subscription Fund”; if for the credit of the Bible Training Class work, designate “Training Class Fund”; if for the maintenance of Golden Rule Home, designate, “Wince Fund”.

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?

By Sydney E. Magaw

WHEN MOSES was only a youth he "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." He saw two roads to travel, the right and the wrong, the narrow and the broad. He made a definite decision to serve God, which moulded his life and mission. Not only did he refuse to do wrong, but he chose to suffer affliction with the children of God. He was on the Lord's side.

While Moses was up on Mt. Sinai in communion with God, the people below made a golden calf, which they worshiped as their god. They were not on the Lord's side. Even Aaron was among them, and directed the work of making the idol. Then Moses came down, saw their idolatry, and called for a definite separation of those who would serve the true God from those who wished to continue to worship the calf. Standing alone in the gate of the camp, he said, "Who is on the Lord's side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him." They were on the Lord's side, and God used them in His service.

When ten spies returned to the camp of Israel in the wilderness with an untrue report of the Promised Land, there were two who chose to tell the truth. Caleb and Joshua were on the Lord's side. God used Joshua as a great leader of His people, and rewarded Caleb with Mt. Hebron. It paid them to be on the Lord's side.

Joshua chose the right, too. When many in Israel turned to false gods he cried, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve; . . . but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." His firm decision for God led many others to take a similar position. In the end God always blesses the righteous and exalts the truth.

There were four hundred fifty prophets of Baal, and Elijah alone for God. The crowd was indifferent, not choosing definitely either God or Baal. But Elijah was on the Lord's side, and called to the doubting mass, "How long halt ye between two opinions? if the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him." Let us stand for God, His people and His work.

Ruth chose to leave her native people, friends, relatives, customs and gods for God and God's people. Speaking to Naomi, one true to God, she said, "Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God, my God: where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried." What a remarkable decision and confession was Ruth's! From her descendants came Jesus of Nazareth. It is wonderful to be on the Lord's side.

Paul forsook a wrong life and became our greatest missionary of Gentile times. He died with the assurance that Christ would give him a crown when the kingdom of Heaven is set up, because he was on the Lord's side.

Christ exalts every time. He converted a sinning publican into a Matthew, a persecuting Saul, into a Paul, and a common fisherman called Simon, into a Peter. Thousands of lives have been made sweeter and more useful by accepting Christ as a Savior and pattern.

Too true it is that there are those that only profess, —hypocrites, wolves in sheep's clothing. But we are not to judge or condemn. The question is not, "What are they?" as much as, "What am I?" Pilate chose the wrong. Moses, Joshua, Elijah, Ruth, and Paul chose the right. With this cloud of witnesses, how shall we choose amiss?

We cannot fill the place of Moses now. That work is done. We can't brave the den of lions now. Daniel did that. But we can each be numbered with the people of God, and be members of the body of Christ, "the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."

Sunlight bursts through the tiniest crevices into our

A WORK FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

By F. L. Austin

YOUNG PEOPLE everywhere are visualizing life's aim and labor. To the Christian young man or young woman there is no higher work than that of the saving of his fellow-man through the proclamation of the Gospel. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you", is a truth that today, as always, is a living promise to young as well as old.

To the young people of the Church of God who are wage earners, clerks, school teachers, stenographers, laborers—I urge that you make it a rule, a promise to God, that you will use a set portion of all earning with which you are blessed for the maintenance and furtherance of labors necessary in the proclamation of the Gospel. The Gospel "is the power of God unto salvation".

Every young person earning an income can and should do his part in this great work. The earnest labors of his local Church, of his State Conference, of the General Conference, should receive his prayerful and earnest consideration and support.

homes of its own free will. We can't keep it out. Dampness will slowly penetrate stone walls, and be recorded by a barometer within. The air will press its way into the home with all doors and windows closed. We can't keep these powers out, but no person, unless a thief or a robber, comes in uninvited. Your Savior must be let in. He says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

When I have heard the call of my Lord and Master, when I have listened repeatedly to the rapping on my heart's door by the Savior and finally let Him in, then, and then only, are we on the same side. Then He is with me, I with Him, and I am on the Lord's Side.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

OUR anti-prohibition movements are only prying wedges used by the press at these gateways to open the floodgates of European vice. It is not light wines and beer that are at stake. It is morality and American decency and Christianity which is at stake.

We found poor, over-populated Italy using one-third of tillable land for production of wine. Ten times as much spent for wine as for education. A nation-wide propaganda being carried on against milk as a beverage. Babies were poor and scrawny looking.

In poor, dismembered Austria we found alcohol doing its worst. On Ottakringer Street, Vienna, we counted twenty-two saloons in one half-mile stretch. Steinhof, a clinic for alcoholism, has a daily grist of twenty-two delirium cases.

An American doctor from St. Louis, Dr. F. L. Stuever, president of the American Medical Association of Austria, now a practicing physician in Vienna, gave me a day of his time to show me Vienna. He said that while the Austrians did not guzzle liquor like some Americans did during saloon days they drink much more liquor per capita and the physiological effects are worse. He said the growing practice of drinking strong liquors in the morning with coffee or tea was ruining the health of the business men. He spoke of the large number of cases of "hob nail" kidneys and fatty hearts caused by the constant drinking of beer and wine.

The most astonishing thing to an American in England is the drinking of women. I saw more women than men in the public houses. England drinks 54 million gallons of absolute alcohol every year, or 1.29 gallons per capita. The annual drink bill is $1,575,000,000 which is six times the amount paid for bread and five times the amount spent for education. It is more than the gross receipts of the railroads of the country.

America is the only prosperous and happy nation on earth today. A hundred years of prohibition and temperance agitation has produced a type of clean and sober people that can not be matched on this earth.

American is not going to be Europeanized. The heart of America is set to go forward in achievements for civilization. Retreat is not in our moral vocabulary.—Selected, Publication and Author Unknown.

A NEWSPAPER MAN'S TESTIMONY

By Robert Quillen

Mr. Quillen is a well-known newspaper man whose writings have been syndicated and distributed very widely. He is a frequent contributor to popular magazines. The following was written at the request of the United Stewardship Council, the interdenominational organization for promotion of Christian stewardship.

GOD'S PLAN is the sensible and business-like plan. At the end of each month I know to a dollar the amount of my earnings, and one-tenth of that amount is set apart as God's share, to be used in His work. It isn't a large sum, but it has increased in size every year since I began to tithe, and I am old-fashioned enough to believe that God had much to do with the increase.

I was once asked in a meeting of tithers, if the payment of the tithe had not brought me a spiritual blessing, and I answered frankly that I did not know. I do not know how to define a spiritual blessing. It is a careless term, much misused. At any rate, I am content to consider the matter as a cold-blooded business proposition and leave the discussion of the spiritual side to those more competent to understand it.

Running God's business is much like running any other business. You cannot foot the bills unless the cash comes in. And the greater the amount of cash coming in, the more you can expand the business.

I think one great weakness of the church is too much sentiment and not enough sound business sense—too much joy in the fact of heaven and not enough sane effort to make earth a little more like heaven. My own opinion is that songs of praise cause much less rejoicing in heaven than an organized effort to relieve the sufferings of humanity.

Christ drew but one picture of the judgment, and there He pictured men condemned because they had not ministered to their fellows, and others rewarded, because in serving humanity they served Christ. It should be clear enough therefore, that man best serves God by serving his fellows.

If this be true, charities of every nature are the peculiar province of the church of Christ and not of secular organizations.

It will be answered at once that the church has not the money to handle these matters. Certainly it hasn't. And it never will have until it adopts God's reasonable plan. And it never will have the prestige it should have until it follows in Christ's footsteps and goes about doing good.

If every professing Christian paid a tenth of his earnings into the church, and the hungry, the sick, the maimed and the homeless could appeal to the church and be served at once in the name of Jesus, how long, think you, before the world would be won to a religion as vital and real as that?

—"A disciplined life bears lovely blossoms and yields delicious fruit."

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE PROGRAM

AT THE LAST session of the General Conference a definite program was laid out, to be put into effect by the board. This religious program consists of:

Encouraging the organization of the people of the Church of God into local church groups, in localities where the people are not now so organized, for mutual edification and strength;

Organizing local churches into State Conferences, where none now exist;

Discovering and helping isolated brethren;

Editing and publishing The Restitution Herald;

Editing and publishing Truth Seekers' Quarterly.

Editing and publishing a series of Tracts and Booklets covering the recognized understanding of the Church of God as to Bible instruction unto salvation;

Preparing and publishing printed Forms that may be used by our ministry and churches so as to render our work throughout the country more uniform; and,

Conducting a Bible Training Class, outlining the Courses with a view to a permanent and continuous program year after year.

The established work of the Golden Rule Home with its financial helper, the Golden Rule Greenhouse, was not to be overlooked, as were none of the other items of effort that have been established. This program was not the making of the Board, but the making of the General Conference in session.

For the continued furtherance of all General Conference labors, there have been a number of people who have faithfully contributed thereto, and that regularly. Some contribute every month, year after year. But where one contributes, three do not.

The execution of the foregoing program will require that one and all will cooperate in financing the work. While the program is sufficiently large to engage the time of three or four conscientious and able workers, yet not one regular helper has to date been employed to assist the secretary in preparing, editing, teaching, corresponding and handling of the many details incident to such work.

Now we request that through the country the "three" will cooperate with the "one" to aid in putting this program over. It is certainly a worthy program; one that has for its chief object the proclamation of the Gospel—God's power unto salvation. The various printed mediums are all Gospel sheets. They can be filled with carefully prepared Scriptural messages only if there be sufficient means to permit of the proper preparation thereof. The Bible Training Class is one of the best works that is on the program. But it needs and must have much more time for study and preparation of the outlines and studies.

It is urged that this work will be properly considered by all. Do not inject any added labors till this program is either executed or laid aside. Every part of this program is strictly religious, or gospel work. For such phases of our work as some might classify as bordering on Industrial, see another article rudely entitled National Bible Institution Business Program. But the above program is strictly religious. Its aim is to serve our Lord in helping one another to understand the Gospel of Christ, and to Herald that Gospel to others.

MAKE NOVEMBER A MONTH OF THANKSGIVING and GIVE OF THE MEANS OF WHICH GOD HAS BLESSED YOU FOR THE LARGER PROCLAMATION OF THE GOSPEL.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

N. B. I. BUSINESS PROGRAM

LEST BY READING the article entitled "General Conference Religious Program" some may not quite distinguish between the different phases of our work it may be well to state again that Bro. F. A. Stilson is managing the Golden Rule Greenhouse with its Floral and Gift Shop and is the one with whom Bro. and Sr. Thayer counsel and advise regarding the business activities of the Golden Rule Home. He also, with the assistance of Sr. Stilson, has charge of all the accounting of the National Bible Institution in all of its activities—checking all incomes and expenses and is chief detective on all business operations. Whenever the writer is called away he then takes full management of all National Bible Institution work.

Some new readers may not know that the Golden Rule Greenhouse with its Floral and Gift Shop are operated as aids to financing of Golden Rule Home, thus, while some might be inclined to call this Industrial work, yet its aim and end are religious. The effort is to provide greater comfort for some of our aged and alone ones.

It will be of interest to all to know that the sales from

"THE SACRIFICE OF THE WICKED IS AN ABOMINATION TO THE LORD: BUT THE PRAYER OF THE UPRIGHT IS HIS DELIGHT."—PROVERBS 15:8.

A NUMBER of different Berean classes are reporting, indirectly, increased interest and activity this fall, for which we are all thankful. Some are having an occasional social evening, which adds much to the tie of friendship and fellowship which binds them together. We would all appreciate a brief report from each class sent in occasionally, telling us how large your class is, how often it meets, whether or not there is any social work carried on, and any other points that might be of interest. If you are a member of a class somewhere and the secretary fails to attend to these matters, write it up yourself and send it in and we will publish it with or without your name, as you prefer.

Sometimes persons will hesitate to start a Berean class work because there are only a few with whom to start, and they fear the burden might be rather heavy to carry. Experience and observation, however, show that even though the number is very small, if a work of that kind is undertaken the blessings and comfort derived therefrom far outweigh the effort and sacrifice made.

* * * *

We have in mind now some places,—one in particular,—where there are so few members of the church that there was real hesitation in starting Berean work, for fear it could not be kept up properly. The few decided to do their best, however, and time has brought abundant blessings, with satisfaction in times of joy, and comfort in times of sorrow.

* * * *

Never hesitate to make a sacrifice for the cause of truth and right. Blessings eventually abound in proportion as we serve our Lord.

* * * *

At the head of this page we have quoted a proverb that is worthy of deep consideration. You will observe that the words "sacrifice" and "prayer" are used with practically the same meaning. The offering of lambs and bullocks was once the accepted custom of showing appreciation, or making petitions to God,—it was the method of prayer. But for a person whose heart was sinful and vile to go through the outward form of sacrifice so as to deceive others who might observe, was an abomination to the Lord,

If, however, one's heart was true, even though he made mistakes yet if he offered honest sacrifices and prayers, that was a matter of actual joy to Jehovah, and He stood ready and anxious to answer such prayers.

* * * *

The same principle is true yet today. An outward show of religion, or public manifestations of godliness on the part of one whose heart is untrue is the living of a lie. Such prayers or acts of worship are an abomination to God.

But if one is trying to be upright and true, and earnestly prays forgiveness for his sins and mistakes, thanking God the while for the daily blessings received, that person's prayers are a delight to the loving Father. Gladly, then, does He answer.

* * * *

The whole principle involved is one of hypocrisy. An hypocrite is one who claims or pretends to be that which he is not. The wicked person who claims to be nothing but wicked is more deserving of consideration than the one who pretends to be a Christian but secretly follows the paths of sin and vice. The former at least is honest, and if he later comes to accept Christ he will likely exercise that same honesty in service to his Lord.

* * * *

Be what you are, frankly, openly. God knows what you are, anyway, even while you try to deceive men. It is before Him you eventually must answer. Make your prayers acceptable unto Him then.

* * * *

"The power of money is something awful." It is the stored up energy of human toil and can be converted again into action in the work of many men. It can stretch out its arms of power around the world, and send light to the most remote and destitute. If now this vast potency for good be kept for self, when it might have been the means of bringing salvation to thousands, we can know the very words we shall hear before the throne of God, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of these least, ye did it not unto me." (Matt. 25:45.)—Sherwood Eddy.

RESPONSIBILITY PLACED UPON ALL

"Am I my brother's keeper?"

THE QUESTION IS AS old as the world. It was propounded by the first criminal, to God, his Maker, and asked as though God must certainly answer "No". Only sin in some of its forms could possibly presume such an answer.

From earliest infancy to oldest age there is responsibility. Some one must, of necessity, carry it. In every phase of life; in every portion of creation; in every undertaking: there is responsibility. Some one must assume it or, shirking, neglect it to the injury of another who is thereby wronged.

Everywhere God has arranged that the responsibilities of life should be distributed so that each one should bear his just portion. For any single one to fail is but to create confusion to the detriment of self and others.

Sin is but another name for the misuse of responsibility. From the beginning and throughout all time man the creature is responsible to God the Creator. The first man, who ignored that responsibility, thereby brought sin into the world. Through that sin death has fallen upon all mankind. He was responsible for his well-being; ignored responsibility; gratified self for the moment; stung the human race unto death.

Marriage at once introduces responsibility between those united in wedlock. Each one is responsible to the other for the performance of a proper part. Each one owes it to the other to faithfully discover self's proper duties with reference to the other and to home, and to then faithfully and joyfully discharge the same. Such procedure may require considerable self-sacrifice, but—if necessary—one is responsible to companion, to community, to God, to make that sacrifice in the discharge of bounden duty to the other. It is quite safe to say that all domestic breeches result from failure to accept and render normal and proper responsibility. "Husbands, love your wives", is but instruction in responsibility. And this love is the love manifested by faithful helpfulness and service. "Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands", is likewise Divine instruction in responsibility. God knows best ways. He has revealed them. Man thus is made responsible.

With the presence of every new-born infant there is new-born responsibility. At first the parents must consider themselves the responsible ones for the child's care. But soon, very soon, the child reaches the age when duty requires the parent to teach the child to begin to accept little responsibilities. These should be increased with the increase of childish life. The child should be made to know that his own comfort and enjoyment depends more and more upon his own conduct. As soon as a child is old enough to thoughtfully shirk duty or disobey rules or commands that child is old enough to receive positive correction for such disobedience; yes, the parent bears the responsible duty of training that child to regard and heed such duties and commands. Ignoring these responsibilities the parent may be justly presumed to apply Cain's question to self—"I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?"

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord", is God's own instruction to child life. And as age increases that life to youth, the young man and young woman become increasingly more responsible to God, home and country for the acceptance of responsibility and obedience thereto.

That child or adult who refuses to live true to responsibility is crime's most fertile ground. And he who presumes to make another responsible for self's proper duties to self and others, is a menace to the peace of all within his reach. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself", is God's "royal law" to man. He has made him responsible thus to do.

The Great Responsibility of the Church

The Church of God is most responsible of all. Its people are received nearer to God than are any others—they receive the best instruction; its members are proffered God's greatest gifts—they have greater ends in view; the Christian, the true one, has the cleanest and purest life—his abilities are the best: again, the Church of God is the most responsible of all people.

Every individual of the church has definite responsibility. He is responsible to God, to Christ, to the other members of the body of Christ, to the world of man. He is responsible for the proper discharge of his duty in behalf of the Church according to his best ability. That member who is "apt to teach" is responsible to properly teach; the one who is endowed with ability to cheer and encourage is responsible to thus serve; he who has ability to honestly accumulate wealth is responsible to make proper distribution thereof for the edifying of the church—just as responsible as is the one with ability to teach responsible to distribute his instruction to the others; he who has ability to serve and relieve the physical needs of the others is responsible for such service: each member is responsible according to his particular ability—and every member has responsibility. None can justly shirk.

This responsibility of the member of the Church begins at the time the person becomes a member. The youth, the adult, the aged,—all have responsibility.

There is little question but that the "falling away" that is sure to come upon the church, of man's vision, will result because that many, like Adam, like Cain, refuse to accept responsibility. They refuse to become their brother's keeper—their brother in Christ. Selfishness rules to the service of self's wants and whims while the neglected brother dies for lack of the help which an able one withholds to consume upon his lusts. It is the world-wide question answered in the world-old way: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Brother, Sister in Christ: As those who have accepted the one all-saving Name let us with Him accept the great responsibility vouchsafed us by the Father of love and enter upon our duties in the full strength of our respective abilities. As age and opportunity increase our ability let us increase our service. In every phase of life,—in youth, in the home, in matrimony, in rearing of chil-

MICAH CHAMPIONS THE OPPRESSED

Micah, Chapters 2, 3, 6, 7:1-6

Devotional Reading: James 1:23-27

GOLDEN TEXT

He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good: and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Micah 6:8.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Covetousness Leads to Sin. "Thou shalt not covet". Ex. 20:17. Covetousness leads to sin because it obscures the rights of others, and makes us impervious to their needs. It limits our viewpoint to ourselves, to our own desires and pleasures. Covetousness is declared by Paul to be idolatry, Col. 3:5, and Christ denounced it most earnestly. "Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth". Luke 12:15.

God Challenges Proof. "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts". Mal. 3:10. Jehovah calls upon Israel and His dealings with His people, in the court of public opinion. He suggests that they produce witnesses to testify as to the manner in which He led, delivered, and blessed His people in the past. He is assured that His works will be found to have been wholly righteous and most gracious. God challenges us today to test His goodness for ourselves. He is willing that we should compare His attitude toward us at the present. He knows the verdict will be an acknowledgment of His goodness and love.

Sin Revealed. "Be sure your sin will find you out". Num. 32:23. God points out the sins of men clearly, that realizing their mistakes and the dreadful results that follow, they may be induced to turn from them. "God is no respecter of persons", Acts 10:34, and His reproof of kings for their iniquity, Ezek. 21:24-25, is quite as plain and emphatic as it is for the peasant. "God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil". Eccl. 12:14.—G. E. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"He hath told thee, O son of earth, what is good,—

What then is Yahweh seeking of thee
But To do justice,
To delight in lovingkindness,
And humbly to walk with thy God"? Micah 6:8. Roth.

This text is reckoned as one of the great sayings of the Old Testament. It was a favorite verse of President Roosevelt. It was a lesson to Israel that their religion should not consist in creeds and forms, but in a way of life.—F. A. S.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Making God known to Israel. "Woe to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light they practise it, because it is in the power of their hand."—Micah 2:1.

"Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel; Is it not for you to know judgment? Who hate the good, and love the evil; who pluck off their skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones; who also eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from off them. . . . They build up Zion with blood, and Jerusalem with iniquity. The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire."—Micah 3:1-3, 10, 11.

The prophet Micah comes to God's chosen people with His oft repeated message against misuse of leadership power. His whole message is a ringing condemnation of this evil and a plea to the "mountains" and the "strong foundations" of the earth to hear God on this matter. The whole Book of Micah should be read to catch its spirit.

The emphasis which God has placed upon the training of leadership shows that this training is of prime importance in God's scheme of world salvation. It is this training that is the heart of kingdom development. It is this training that is the kingdom working as leaven in three measures of meal, and its result will finally leaven the whole lump.

David, the first of God's royal family, understood the need of this training when he said, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit. Then will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."—Psa. 51:12-13.

There are many qualities that go into the making of strong leadership, but Micah names the fundamentals: "to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."—Micah 6:8.

Until this leadership is perfected and organized into the kingdom, the world cannot be touched with that knowledge of God which saves.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Religion and justice.

This lesson deals with Micah pleading for justice and fairness in Israel. Very firmly he condemns all who devise iniquity and who take advantage of others that are defenseless. Israel had once been oppressed. God in love had delivered and prospered them, but they had no right to expect continuous love and mercy from God if they practiced injustice themselves. All that He asked was that they do justly, love mercy and walk humbly.

The religious person of today who accepts God's blessings selfishly and does not reflect the love of God is a detriment to the whole cause and will bring sorrow and reproach to himself and others. Pure religion requires unselfish service to those in need, and purity of life. Jas. 1:27.

In what practical ways can a Christian show that he appreciates what God has done for him? To how much of one's time does this apply?—F. E. S.

Questions. What is the meaning of woe? Because of possessing the power to do so, is it therefore in any sense righteous for one to do evil in oppressing another? Can one be evilly disposed to his fellow-man and yet be righteous at heart? Can one be righteously disposed unto God and yet plan evil against his neighbor? In the analysis of chapter 2:1, 2, 3 could any charge God with injustice in His plans to overthrow them? Was Jehovah seeking opportunity to chasten Judah or seeking that Judah repent and avoid chastening? Narrate the story of Balak and Balaam. What does it teach? Give the answer to the questions of 6:6, 7. What are God's requirements, 6:8? Are they just? Are they exorbitant? Which is best, temporary excess of lustful satisfaction, or that satisfaction which comes from the stability of wisdom? Does the possession of the implement of wickedness testify of the wickedness of heart of the possessor? Did God pronounce His chastisement, 6:13, to satisfy His pleasure or was it brought by Israel's conduct?—F. L. A.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

The world's need: What is the world's obvious need that her political, social, and economic problems may be solved? What is lacking in present leadership? When and how did God begin preparations to meet this need? When will it be completed? What is the relationship between this preparation of leadership and the development of Israel and the church? Between it and world salvation? The qualities of leadership emphasized by God.—A. K.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

In addition to the report which will undoubtedly be sent in from Ohio, the writer wishes to say just a few things with reference to the meeting just closed there. In the past seven years during which we have labored more or less with the Brush Creek brethren we have never enjoyed a meeting more, if as much, than this one. The sacrifice which the brethren had made in remodeling and modernizing their church home, had, no doubt, much to do with the beautiful spirit of cooperation which all were so ready to render.

Our one greatest regret was that conditions made it impossible to stay longer and complete the work which we feel could have accomplished much more if time had permitted. The ones who did obey, however, are of the most substantial type, and all rejoiced, in the beautiful spirit manifested.

We pray the Father's richest blessing to rest upon the members of this church in the conduct of His work, and upon its pastor, Bro. Lyon, as he labors earnestly to keep aloft the banner of truth.

F. E. Siple

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

One of the most successful meetings in years was held at Brush Creek from Oct. 18 to 30. It was in connection with the completion of our new church building, with a fourteen foot addition, making the church 36 by 50 feet, and a full basement and furnace beneath. With the inside newly papered and the floor covered with beautiful carpet, provided by the ladies' "Brush Creek Club", everything was in readiness for the meeting. A total of almost $3500 was spent in making these improvements.

Interest was good from the start, and increased steadily to the end. Indeed, the last few nights made it look almost as though the church is still too small. Bro. Siple, however, was a drawing card in more ways than one. Beside doing all of the speaking, he furnished a large share of the music for each service by playing upon his saw. This feature was very popular with the public.

Another favorable circumstance was the weather, which remained ideal throughout. Fair, and just cool enough for comfort, was the unchanging rule from the very first until the close, after which colder weather set in.

On the last Sunday the house was full all day. Dinner was served in the new basement to a large number of people. Bro. Siple spoke morning and night, and conducted the rededication service in the afternoon. Assisting in this program was Bro. Rufus A. Curtis, whom we are all glad to welcome back, with Sr. Curtis, to

At the close of the dedication service we gathered at the water's edge to witness the dedication of two lives to Christ in baptism. These two are Mr. Edgar Demmitt, Iola St., Dayton, Ohio, and Mrs. Perry Pearson, 607 W. Main St., Tippicanoe City, Ohio. Bro. Demmitt is a young man just starting out in life; realizing in youth his need of the great Leader, he has chosen wisely. Sr. Pearson is of mature years, and likewise is strong in her faith. Both will make earnest workers in the church. May they ever be faithful.

An unusual interest was noticeable within the church body as well as among the visitors, and many new faces were seen in each group. Thus the church itself was strengthened and the gospel message proclaimed to those outside the church. It is hoped that this good start will be but a forerunner of a larger work and more additions, both to the church and of the church, in the near future. To this end let us continue to cooperate.

LORENZO J. SWEET

On Oct. 21, Lorenzo J. Sweet passed into that land of rest with a hope of a resurrection to life through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

He fought a good fight and there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness that shall not fade away.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. L. J. Sweet, at the home in Parsons, Kansas, who, with others, left behind, grieves not as others do, for they know that their beloved one shall live again.

THE LAST SUPPER

Joaquin Miller

"And when they had sung a hymn they went out into the Mount of Olives."

What song sang the twelve with the Savior

When finished the Sacrament wine?
Were they bowed and subdued in behavior,

Or bold as made bold with a sign?

Were the hairy breasts strong and defiant?

Were the naked arms brawny and strong?
Were the bearded lips lifted reliant,
Thrust forth and full sturdy with song?

What sang they? What sweet song of Zion,

With Christ in their midst like a crown?
While here sat St. Peter the lion,
And there like a lamb, with head down,

Sat St. John, with his silken and raven
Rich hair on his shoulders, and eyes

Lifting up to the faces unshaven
Like a sensitive child's in surprise.

Was the song as strong fishermen swinging

Their nets full of hope to the sea,
Or low like the ripple wave singing
Sea-songs on their loved Gallilee?

Were they sad with foreshadow of sorrows,

Like the birds that sing low when the breeze

Is tip-toe with a tale of to-morrows—
With earthquakes and sinking of seas?

Ah! soft was their song as the waves are
That fell in low, musical moans;

And sad I should say as the winds are
That blow on the white gravestones.

And for the pleasant morning light,
For rest, and food, and loving care,

In all we do, in all we say,
To grow more loving every day."*

MICAH CHAMPIONS THE OPPRESSED

IT IS EASIER for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God," said Jesus. He hardly meant rich people who use their wealth to help others, or those who become wealthy without making others suffer. But so often people gain their riches at the expense of other people. At least, that was what was happening in Judah.

"The wealthy nobles of Jerusalem had used their money, in buying up the farms and pasture lands of Judah. They had taken advantage of the poverty of the peasants to lend them money at high interest and thus secure their lands upon mortgage. They had cheated them in paying for crops and cattle. And when lawsuits had arisen they had bribed the judges."—Lessons from Great Teachers.

But now arose a prophet in Western Judah, who felt the time had come to warn his countrymen of approaching danger. This prophet's name was Micah. He had seen a poor farmer work hard to raise a crop of grain and then had seen it taken for taxes, rent and what-not, until nothing was left for his family. Or he had seen a wealthy man deliberately claim and take land which belonged to a poor man. Then, if the poor took his trouble to a court, the judge would help the man who bribed him.

Micah simply could not keep still, and denounced these unjust rulers and leaders. They ordered him to be silent; but instead, he denounced them more violently. "Woe to them that plan evil. Their land shall pass into the hands of enemies, and they shall become slaves of other nations."

Then Micah planned a dialogue which represented a court scene. Jehovah was to be the plaintiff and the people were to be the defendant and the mountains to be the judge.

First, the plaintiff says He has done everything for the people, but now they must testify against Him wherein He has failed them.

The only reply Israel could make was that they did not know how to satisfy the Lord. They told of their many sacrifices. They asked if they should sacrifice their own children.

The answer came, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

However, these people were so deceitful with one another in business, in court, and even in their family life, that they did not need a verdict. They knew who was wrong and how wrong they were.

Micah hoped the people would reform, but they did not, and eventually were punished as the Israelites had been.

A VERSE A DAY

It is a good thing to read a verse of the Bible every day. It is a better thing to practice a verse a day. The important part of Bible knowledge is not how much one has in the head but how much is worked out in daily life.

TWO ROADS

Dear Brother Austin: I am herewith mailing some verses that were dictated by Sister Curtis for our beloved Restitution Herald. We have removed from Underwood, Indiana, to our daughter's residence at Dayton, Ohio, Route 1, Box 526.

The sickness of Sister Curtis made the change necessary. She is somewhat improved in health, but is confined to her bed most of the time yet. Any mail addressed to us at the above address, in care of Clarence Doll, will reach us.

Your brother in the blessed hope of the gospel,

Rufus A. Curtis.

*There are two roads, and only two, o'er which mankind must go,
And which is best for us to take, each one of us should know.
One is a wide and winding road, where careless people throng,
Where pleasure holds high carnival, with feasting, jest, and song.*

*The arch-deceiver is the guide upon this highway old,
He is an advertiser shrewd, unscrupulous and bold;
His clever signboards point the way to riches, fame and ease,
He is an adept in the art, the worldly mind to please.*

*With flattery and crafty words, their confidence to win,
He leads them in the downward path of error and of sin;
But it is true they find the way of the transgressor hard,
For there is nothing wayward feet from pitfalls there to guard.*

*And soon or late the end is reached of that forbidden road,
Where everyone who walks that way must bear sin's heavy load;*

*Then comes the day of recompense, a dark and fearful day
When for the evil deeds of life each one will have to pay.*

*To such the gates of life are closed, they may not enter in,
For it was written long ago, Death is the wage of sin;
And they are lost, forever lost, the second death their doom,*

For they who once were living souls, must into smoke consume.

The other road, narrow and straight, is God's appointed way,

*Though it is difficult at times, it leads to endless day;
And happy Christians walking there, oft lift their hearts in prayer*

To Him who safeguards all their way with love and tender care.

They have a Guide and Savior, who has gone the way before,

And with His life-blood marked the path that they must travel o'er;

*His people do not falter, for He will be their light,
His promises are ever true, His judgments always right.*

*There they may walk unfettered by any man-made creed,
For whom the Son of God makes free, he shall be free indeed.*

*They sit in heavenly places, the talk on wondrous themes,
They know the future glory shall exceed their fondest dreams.*

*And they are watching ever for signs that shall foretell
When their beloved Savior shall return with them to dwell;*

*Soon their vigil will be over, the signs fulfilled have been,
And it can be but a little while, until He comes again.*

"Until He comes", these are the words that span the long, long years,

The rainbow promise that shines through the lonely watcher's tears;

*Ever God's people journey on to New Jerusalem;
A city glorious and fair, He has prepared for them.*

*The gates of life are open wide that they may enter in Where there is no more trouble, no sorrow, death, or sin;
There they immortal, robed in white, shall walk its streets of gold,*

And join the glad redemption song, that never shall grow old.

AN INDIAN'S TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

The following is the Indian's phraseology of the 23rd Psalm.—

The Great Father above a Shepherd Chief is, I am
His, and with Him I want not.

He throws out to me a rope, and the name of the rope is Love, and He draws me, and He draws me, and He draws me to where the grass is green and the water not dangerous, and I eat and lie down satisfied.

Sometimes my heart is very weak and falls down, but He lifts it up again and draws me into a good road.
His name is Wonderful.

Some time, it may be very soon, it may be longer, it may be a long, long time, He will draw me into a place between mountains. It is dark there, but I'll draw back not. I'll be afraid not, for it is in there between those mountains that the Shepherd Chief will meet me, and the hunger I have felt in my heart all through this life will be satisfied. Sometimes He makes the love rope into a whip, but afterwards He gives me a staff to lean on.

He spreads a table before me with all kinds of food.
He puts His hands upon my head and all the "tired" is gone. My cup He fills till it runs over.

What I tell you is true, I lie not. These roads that are "away ahead" will stay with me through this life, and afterward I will go to live in the "Big Tepee" and sit down with the Shepherd Chief forever.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 18

By George Johnston

THE FOUNDING OF THE CHRISTIAN KINGDOM THE FALL OF JUDAISM THE PROPHECIES FROM THE SCRIPTURE OF TRUTH (DAN. 9.)

In Daniel 9:20-27, the founding of the spiritual kingdom of Christ, and the fall of Judaism are predicted. Up to the present, however, the members of the former are scattered throughout the world, but the day is not far distant when they shall be gathered into a great visible kingdom, governed by its Founder. This kingdom shall be established, with Jerusalem as its capital, on the same soil and in the same territories which formed the Roman empire; and we are told by Daniel and by other prophets, that it shall endure for ever.

"And whiles I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the Lord my God for the holy mountain of my God; yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation. And he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to show thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision."

Both Daniel and the archangel refer to the vision which the former had seen "at the beginning", and it is clear, therefore, that the first vision of Daniel—that of the four great beasts—is connected with the things which Gabriel proceeded to reveal to the prophet. A very slight examination of both prophecies is sufficient to show that the concluding words in the vision apply to both revelations, and supply a complete answer to Daniel's prayer.

"Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the Most Holy." "Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times. And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself: and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined. And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate."

These prophecies, which relate to the founding of the Christian church, and the downfall of Judaism, were, with the exception of that in the final words in the last verse, fulfilled in the early days of the Christian era. The explanation of the words "and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate" is to be found in Joel 2:28: "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit." "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. 7:27.

OUR HUMBLE PRAYER

By N. H. Geiselman

*Dear Lord, the mistakes of our lives are so many,
And we feel that our sins are still more;
And our eyes are so flooded with weeping
We scarce see that wide open door.*

*We still with deep gratitude love Thee,
With humility still do we pray;
We fall at Thy feet as we're bidden,
We know Thou'lt not turn us away.*

*Oh! what a God! who in heaven resides,
Who has washed our sins all away;
And the feet that were struggling and falt'ring
He is guiding toward that great day.*

*To Him our heart's love we will offer,
Our lives to His service we'll give.
Lord Jesus, still lead till we conquer,
Then with Thee, then with Thee let us live.*

the Greenhouse for the first ten months of 1927 exceed the sales of the twelve months of 1926.

This program is kept separate from the work called the Religious program. This phase of the work is always self-supporting—excepting when for reason, effort has been made to enlarge it.

While this Business Program is self-supporting, the work of the Religious Program must of necessity—as is similar work of other denominations—be supported by continuous unremitting contributions by those interested in its results. The measure of such cooperation determines the measure of accomplishment of the Religious Program.

Hence, a spirit of optimism ought to overpower every pessimistical thought. He should no more think of entertaining a doubt than to think of playing with an adder; both are venomous. The devil applies one to the spirit, the other to the body.

Humanly speaking, trouble generates worry and fear. Since neither non-christian nor Christian is exempt, the following remedy should be effectual for both: "Utilize as an antidote for fear and worry an appeal to the same great law to which the origin of fear is due, namely, the law of self-preservation. I have found that if an intelligent patient suffering from fear is made to see so plainly as to amount to a firm conviction that his brain, his various organs, indeed his whole being, was physically damaged by fear, this same instinct of self-preservation will, in proportion to his conviction, banish worry and fear."

An itinerant preacher recites the following incident: A brother at one of his appointments informed him he had but twelve hundred dollars left of a life's saving. Then at each following visit he found the brother's lamentation increased and his money decreased, until finally he tearfully said, "It's all gone but two hundred dollars!" "Well," replied the preacher, "I hope when I call again the two hundred dollars will have disappeared also, for then your troubles will be over."

What's the matter with most of us? Is it not a lack of courage of our conviction; and a partial spirit of the flesh that causes hesitancy to trust and obey God? And yet we know He sacrificed His dear Son that we might be saved to the uttermost. Heb. 7:25. And imagine a prospective bride worrying when she is in momentary expectancy of the bridegroom. Worry? She is one of the happiest mortals on earth. Matt. 9:15; John 3:29; 2 Cor. 11:2. Yet knowing the heavenly Bridegroom is about to return for His bride, is she making herself ready to meet Him? Or is she too busy about the affairs of this life and the fleshly man?

Paul says, "He that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:8. And Jesus says, "Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee." Rev. 3:3. Read Luke 21:36.

A chief difficulty lies in giving paramount thought to the "things" appertaining to this body and the Adamic spark of life. Read 1 John 2:15-17; Col. 3:1-5. In proportion as we take the Lord and His inspired apostles' words seriously, our troubles, worries and fears shall disappear. To this end, let us read prayerfully Rom. 8:5-14, inclusive.

"A knowledge of God's true character, plans, and purposes is an asset when associated with humility; but a liability when leagued with pride and vain-glory."

dren, in business career, in Christian fellowship: "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto man; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ."

"When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul."—Ezek. 3:18.

Here is responsibility. As in all other walks of life, it is placed on man by Him who knows the right way as man cannot know. He has placed no load too great to be borne. It is best. Let us accept it with willingness.

MY REFUGE

By Laura Slusser Glanton

*A little brown house at the top of a hill,
At the end of a crowded street,
Where the pavement ends and the fields begin
And the city and country meet.*

*A little brown house that stands back from the rest,
A relic of by-gone days;
When hearts were filled with rest and peace,
Unknown to our modern ways.*

*A quaint low stoop, has this little brown house
Where the vining roses climb;
The ivy creeps, in the casement peeps,
Unmindful of fleeting time.*

*Birds come and go at their own sweet will,
And build their nests in the eaves;
And the soft breeze whispers a song of love,
As it finds its way through the leaves.*

*An old-fashioned garden, a riot of bloom,
Is shared by the passer-by;
Here the bee is heard, and the humming bird Gaily chases a butterfly.*

*Oh! the golden glory of the noonday sun,
Oh, the joy of the morning light;
And the sunset's blush, in the evening hush,
Ere darkness folds in for the night.*

*A refuge to me, is this little brown house
At the end of a crowded street;
The theme of this poem, "It is my home",
Here my soul and the Infinite meet.*

SERVICE

By Verna C. Thayer

FOR AS we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering: or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, with cheerfulness."

No greater opportunities for service can be found in any activity, however large, than the opportunities for service in the religious activity. Neither can there be found a place where service is more needed than in religious service. You ask, "What is religious service? Is it simply performing some office in the church; or how far does such service reach?"

It seems to me that our religious service should begin in the home. "And, ye fathers (and I'm sure this includes mothers also), provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."—Eph. 6:4. Could there be greater service to Christ, and God, the Father, than the service of rearing children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord? But there is still another service that may be performed in the home. "Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honour thy father and mother, which is the first commandment with promise; that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth." Eph. 6:1-4.

Here is an opportunity for service for even the children. How much easier it is for a child, that has been loving and obedient to his earthly parents, to love and obey His heavenly Father, than one who has never known obedience. Therefore, "Children, obey your parents in all things; for this is well pleasing to the Lord", a loving service to Him.

These services, if well performed, will reach beyond the home, for a well-organized home cannot but have its influence on the neighborhood, or upon the friends who come in contact with such a home. We owe our neighbor the service of love. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor". So our service to our neighbor must be done in such a way as will bring no ill to him. Kind words, smiling faces, sunshiny greetings, a lift in time of need, encouragement in time of trouble—these work no ill to our neighbors.

From the service to the home, our neighbors and friends, we now go to the service we should render to the church. Each one has a talent for some special line of work: some may sing, others teach, others lead. Those that are best fitted for those services should recognize their abilities and use them to further the cause of Christ.

"I exhort therefore, that, first of all supplication, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men." Service? Yes. One of the best opportunities given to man is this. It is an opportunity for prayer to the Father, through Jesus the Son, not only for ourselves but all mankind as well.

But these services will count nought if not rendered in the right way. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Col. 3:17.

There will be a great reward for the right service. "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men: knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ." Col. 3:23, 24.

*"Do not wait until some deed of greatness you may do,
Do not wait to shed your light afar,
To the many duties ever near you now be true,
Brighten the corner where you are.*

*"Just above are clouded skies that you may help to clear,
Let not narrow self your way debar;
Tho' into one heart alone may fall your song of cheer,
Brighten the corner where you are.*

*"Here for all your talent you may surely find a need,
Here reflect the bright and Morning Star;
Even from your humble hand the bread of life may feed, Brighten the corner where you are."*

CHRIST—

- Is true and faithful at all times;
- Is always loving;
- Is willing to help the helpless;
- Does not condone any kind of sin;
- Can lighten any man's burden;
- Judges every man righteously.

God's Appointed Offerings

"And the Lord had respect unto Abel, and to his offering: but unto Cain, and to his offering, he had not respect."—Genesis 4:4, 5.

GOD APPOINTED various types of offerings for His ancient people, Israel, to observe. Each type seems to have had its own significance. Not only the type itself, but also the manner of the offering was usually defined by God. The variation of the offerings in a manner corresponded with the variation of conduct, which we usually define by the general term "sin". But sin covers a wide range of meaning. For instance, the Hebrew word, "chata", refers to an act which is openly at odds with the prescribed rule or regulation, while "asham", refers to sins or trespasses committed because of one's ignorance of what the law consisted, relative to the particular deed. "Aven" is sin that is especially connected with idolatry, while "avah" comes from the word which means to be bent or crooked, that is, sinful character that perseveres habitually in wrong. "Amal" is sin viewed in the light of the trouble which it causes, of the burden which it brings. There are no less than fifteen different Hebrew words used in the Bible to describe those things which are generally, today, included under the name "sin".

So likewise the offerings prescribed by God are varied and for different objects. All of them are to be considered more or less in the sense of sacrifices. Not all of them were to be burnt sacrifices. Some of the offerings were offerings of particular worship, while others may possibly bear a less exalted thought. Some were to act as a covering or atonement over the sins of the offerer, while others were for the purpose of declaring praise and honor to the "giver of every good and perfect gift".

The sacrifices and burnt offerings, for which the children of Israel petitioned of Pharaoh the privilege to leave the land of Egypt, were not offerings of sin so much as they were offerings of recognition and praise of Jehovah. They were to be burnt offerings, that is, ascending offerings—ascending by being burned, wholly, unto God. They differed thus from the offerings which were presented by Cain and Abel, whose offerings, according to the meaning of the word which God inspired Moses to use in Gen. 4:3, were offerings of presents, that is, gifts. Neither of these offerings were specifically for sin.

In Isaiah 53:10, "It pleased the LORD to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin. . . . This sin and the offering therefor is the sin of "asham". It is the sin of failure or error, brought about by one's ignorance. It is perhaps a breach of commandment owing to ignorance, but when the guilt is proven, it requires atonement. This is the sin mentioned by Isaiah as the one for Alas! And Did My Savior Die?

*Alas! and did my Savior bleed?
And did my Sovereign die?
Would He devote that sacred head
For such a worm as I?*

*Was it for crimes that I have done,
He groaned upon the tree?
Amazing pity! grace unknown!
And love beyond degree!*

*But drops of grief can ne'er repay
The debt of love I owe:
Here, Lord, I give myself away,—
'Tis all that I can do.*

THE SEED

"HE SAITH not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."—Gal. 3:16. This is Paul's inspired comment upon the promise of God unto Abraham, assuring him of a single Seed in and through whom the nations should receive a blessing, and the purposes of God should be fulfilled.

The single Seed, due centuries after the promise, included and necessitated a multitudinous seed, even the whole nation of Israel. This whole nation needed preservation unto God during the intervening centuries until the promised Seed should come.

The multitudinous seed or nation erred and strayed from God, and God added to them a law for guidance and preservation until the Seed, the promised Messiah should arrive. This law was made operative in connection with numerous tabernacle services and regulations. The regulations recognized the tendency toward and certainty of sin. Indeed, Abraham's promised Seed, who also is next of kin to Adam, was destined to become victor over all sin. But the multitudinous seed must also in a manner be preserved from its current transgressions.

The Sin Offering

Accordingly, many offerings were instituted. Some were for praise and adoration of God, while others were for the atonement of sin. Each one of them in one way or another illustrated one or more of the works and labors of Christ. Undoubtedly, the law of offerings was one of the "divers manners" which God in some of the "sundry times" spake unto the fathers. Not only did God speak unto the fathers through this system of offerings, but God has also through them spoken unto the Christians of today. For are they not always figures and examples of the more perfect offerings of the new covenant of which Paul, in the Hebrew epistle, speaks so much? These offerings in the book of Leviticus undoubtedly prophesied much of Christ, our Lord, and to understand Him better, one must become ever more familiar with the principles upon which the Levitical offerings were taught to that multitudinous seed while waiting for Him, which is Christ.

CHRISTIANITY

CHRISTIANITY is more than mere confession of belief in God and His Son, Christ. "The devils also believe and tremble." It was to Christians to whom Paul said, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Belief in Christ required a presentation of the whole being to work for Christ.

Nor does Christian work consist mainly in going about individually and independently doing work of kindness and charity. True, such works are Christian and should be performed, but not too independently. Christians "are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another". As such, they always cooperate with each other; do team work. This requires order and system; it requires a head, a leader, an elder: one who merits the confidence of all, one who has some ability for the position and, above all, one who is himself a faithful worker with and for the Master.

And, for efficiency of service, a faithful leader needs faithful Christian co-workers, brethren who, having undertaken some particular phase of the work, will always be in place and attend to that work which it has been theirs to do, doing it in that way and manner that has been outlined to best harmonize with other lines of work which the leader knows others to be doing: "not the same office", but with every worker faithfully performing.

This is Christian work—well worked—as God ordained. It feeds the poor, it visits the sick, it proclaims the Gospel, it bears one another's burdens, it cheers the faint, it honors God. It is order.

This is Church organization. It is God's established method. He knew best. He taught the best. Let us accept His way and contribute our several individual lives to the strength of His Church for Christianity.

"The Christ life is the character of the Christian."

VALUE OF CHARACTER

By C. E. Randall

Part of a Talk Given to High School Students at Kansas, Illinois

AN UNQUESTIONABLE character is the rock foundation upon which all true success is built. Its value cannot be estimated in dollars or cents, neither can it be weighed in the balances of existing sciences. Its wealth is unsearchable. It is the priceless possession of the pure in heart. Unlike most things of life, it cannot be borrowed or bought, but can be bartered and sold for a meager mess of fleshly corruption.

Pure character is a door to many opportunities. While you are training and equipping yourselves for life and its work, which is a noble and necessary undertaking, no preparation, regardless of how extensive, is complete that overlooks the development of character. Every worthwhile ambition is finally climaxed with failure if character is neglected in the undertaking.

Many promising lives have vanished within the circle of the mass because they attempted to run the course of life without the guiding of the star of upright character. Loeb and Leopold, two young men of your own state, are behind walls of stone and steel because they lacked in character. They feasted upon the teachings of Nietzsche, and the philosophy of Voltaire.

Character is not founded upon these faith-destroying theories. Its true development lies in patterning the life of the Son of God.

Before the last great World War broke out the officers of the German army were supplied with the teachings of Nietzsche, especially as they pertained to the "survival of the strongest" and the "superman". These teachings had their desired results. Germany practiced the theory of the "survival of the fittest" as being the road of human progress until the creeks and rivers of old Europe flowed with the blood of the innocent and pure.

Russia is reaping the fruitage of their sowing. They sold their national and individual characters for the passions of free love and trampled in dust the name of Jehovah, burning the Christ in effigy. The penalty for bartering their characters is being suffered by the 350,000 illegitimate, homeless boys and girls who must suffer the pangs of hunger until their life is wasted away in death. The scripture that says, "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people", is having its complete fulfillment in that nation today.

A nation is no greater than the individuals that compose it. Our own nation is reeling under the depraved condition of our social structure. Character is being forfeited for lust. Character should be built regardless of the cost. Nothing should be permitted to come in and prevent its development. Bad company is a certain destroyer of pure character, which is an attribute of the Almighty and not of the world.

Many are the evils that blast upright character, but one of the foremost is the cigarette. To the young lady it tends to rudeness, mars her visage, and blights her motherhood. The young man drives away opportunities in using it. It deadens the mental faculties, racks the nerves, weakens the physical, and destroys the spiritual life.

A large tobacco dealer in New York City had a brass monkey placed in a show window, that was so fixed mechanically that it would smoke cigarettes continually. One morning the manager noticed the brass monkey had stopped smoking. Upon taking it apart, they discovered that the nicotine had eaten the inside working parts so badly that new parts were required. If the cigarette will thus destroy a substance such as brass, what will it do to our boys and girls?

"Some professing Christians fight the Christian warfare with the strategy of the nations—behind a smoke screen."

CHRISTMAS CARDS

WE ARE SORRY TO disappoint many of our brethren over the country who have been looking forward to descriptive circulars advertising personal greeting cards.

We began in July to line up the Christmas Card Business with a St. Louis card concern but after unsatisfactory results in getting correspondence from them we turned to another firm in Chicago who promised their samples about Sept. 1, which really came Oct. 20.

We got figures on putting out an advertising circular but our financial conditions were such that we hesitated to add this expense. The shop has been busy with other work and now the quarterly is before us again. In view of all these conditions we are giving up the card business as far as advertising is concerned.

WILLINGLY

"SPEAK unto the children of Israel, that they bring me an offering: of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering."—Exodus 25:2. So directed God of the Israelites. Only willingness was acceptable to God.

We wish to thank the different ones who have already contributed to the Thanksgiving offering mentioned in previous papers. This is a work deemed to be unto God, and the offerings made thereto should by all means be made in willingness. In fact, only in such way can the one offering receive proper benefit.

The amount of work rendered by the National Bible Institution must of necessity be governed by the financial offerings which make it possible to conduct the work.

Again we thank all for the offerings made thus far.

"Brotherhood means living, sharing, helping."

IMPUTED RIGHTEOUSNESS

IT IS A distinctive item of Scriptural teaching that upon the fulfillment of certain specified conditions God imputes righteousness to men. Thus, for instance, it is written in both Old and New Testaments that Abraham "believed in the Lord; and he counted (or imputed) it to him for righteousness" (Gen. 15:6; Rom. 4:3; Gal. 3:6). We are informed that this was written not "for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead" (Rom. 4:23, 24).

To impute is to place to one's account. Hence to impute righteousness to anyone is to place righteousness to his account. It is to count him a righteous person.

Now the question obtrudes itself, Whose righteousness is imputed to such a believing one? If a friend pays a debt for his friend, the money paid on that debt is placed to the account of the debtor. The debt is discharged. The one paying the debt no longer has the money; it is no longer his, but is in the possession of the former creditor. When righteousness was imputed to Abraham, whose righteousness was imputed to him? Of whose righteousness did he partake? We say it with all confidence, There was no transfer of righteousness from anyone to Abraham. It will very much simplify matters to heed the Scriptural language dealing with this matter of imputing righteousness. Here it is repeatedly said with unmistakable clearness that "Abraham believed God, and it was counted (reckoned or imputed) to him for righteousness." That "it" in this case is the fact that he "believed God", or "believed in God", that is, he believed God's testimony. Before he believed he was not righteous; now he was counted as a righteous person.

It was not God's righteousness that was transmitted, communicated, or imparted to him; for God does not separate His righteousness from Himself, and transfer it to another; but on account of that other's implicit faith He counts him a righteous person.

Nor is it the righteousness of Christ that is imputed to the believer. To transfer the righteousness of Christ to the sinner, though a believing one, would be to take away from Christ that which is His, separate it from Him, and give it to another. As this would leave Christ without righteousness, and make Him unrighteous, we see that such a method of imputation would not be Scriptural.

It is no more Scriptural to say that one's righteousness is imputed to another than it would be to impute one's sin and consequent guilt to another, or to others. In either case it would be to impute to one what is not his, but properly belongs to another. But when we understand that God graciously imputes righteousness to persons, though sinners, upon the exercise of faith on their part, we at once perceive the beauty of the Scriptural doctrine of imputation.

Look at it again, more closely, more intently: "His faith (the believing one's faith) is counted to him for righteousness." There is not a single passage in Holy Writ that teaches that either God's righteousness or Christ's righteousness is transferred from God or Christ, and communicated to anyone. It is the believing one's faith, and that alone, that is counted, imputed or reckoned to him for righteousness. Works of righteousness he has none. But God has graciously instituted a plan whereby righteousness may be imputed to him, placed to his credit, as it were, and that is that he exercise confiding and submissive faith toward God. This makes him in the eyes of God a righteous person—one who is right—right as God would have him. What could be more beautiful than this, more divine, more suited to man's helpless condition, and more calculated to evoke sentiments of love on the part of the one made righteous, than this?

Another very vital and important matter entering into the Scriptural doctrine of imputation is the non-imputation of trespasses and sins to such as have committed such acts of transgression. It was testified by the Apostle Paul that the "ministry of reconciliation" aimed at this, "to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them" (2 Cor. 5:19). Here we see (a) that the "world" has "trespasses", and is in need of "reconciliation"; (b) that God reconciled the world to Himself, and (c) that this consists of "not imputing their trespasses unto them."

Four words are used in Scripture in speaking of imputing righteousness. These are "count" (Gen. 15:6; Rom. 4:3, 5); "account" (Gal. 3:6); "impute" (Rom. 4:6, 8, 11, 22, 24); and "reckon" (Rom. 4:4, 9, 10). Faith in God and His word is the condition of such imputation. It is man who must believe. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness" (Rom. 10:10). While God furnishes the word by which faith comes, man must do the believing, and such belief or faith is "unto righteousness". It is God who does the counting, imputing or reckoning.

The condition of non-imputation of trespasses and sins, and the imputation of righteousness being faith (Rom. 4:1-9), those trespasses and sins cease to be imputed to those who have committed them the moment they exercise such faith toward God. Thus the divine method of imputation extends (a) to the non-imputation of trespasses to such as have sinned, and (b) to the imputation of righteousness to such as are of faith.

The attentive reader will notice that the terms "not impute sin", "impute righteousness", "forgive iniquity", "cover sins", and "justify" are used synonymously in Rom. 4:1-9. Abraham was not justified by works, but by faith, as are also those who walk in the steps of his faith (vss. 11, 12). Abraham was the recipient of "this blessedness" of having his iniquities forgiven, his sins covered, and his sin not imputed to him—a blessedness which is not restricted to the circumcision of Israel, but comes also upon the uncircumcision, or the Gentiles, upon the condition of faith. These together constitute the "world" mentioned by the Apostle Paul in 2 Cor. 5:19. Both are justified, declared or made righteous, upon the exercise

AN APPEAL

I believe many of our people are familiar with the relief work I have been doing in the past few years, and that it is only among our church people; trying to do it in a systematic way which I feel sure has proved to be successful. The only unpleasant thing about the work is that I have to ask our people for funds to help me carry it on. I wish I didn't have to, but some times there are encouraging things about that. Such words as these I have received in letters from our people after having an appeal in the church papers: "I was glad to see your appeal in the paper. I have been wondering if you were still in the relief work for the church"; others, "glad to get your address. I had forgotten what it was and wanted to send you some help." Now, I am glad to tell all the people that I am still looking after our worthy ones who need assistance and I am making an earnest appeal for financial help.

I am taking the liberty to quote from letters recently received: "I suppose you will have many calls for help now that winter is approaching. I do hope that the brethren will come to your aid liberally for this work cannot be done without money." "Why won't the rich help our poor ones. Those who have always had plenty don't realize the needs, cares, worries, unpleasantness of the needy. They are the ones that touch my heart". "I think this is a very wonderful work and I am sure you are to be commended for your splendid services".

Winter will very soon be here and that will mean added expenses. It is only in the winter time when expenses are high that some of our people need help; families where there are children to feed and clothe, and in some cases payments coming due and an insufficient wage to meet these problems. I find upon investigation different ones, through no fault of their own, are in need of aid in times such as I have mentioned.

The ones I am looking after with the help of the brethren with very few exceptions, are isolated, living in a community where we have no church or brethren to look after their needs.

There have been a few faithful ones helping to carry on this work and to some I know it has been a sacrifice, but he that hath pity upon the poor lendeth to the Lord and that which he hath given will He pay him again, for God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love. It is said of a certain fraternal organization that a true member will give his time and thought and energy to dispel poverty and gloom. He knows no seasons for the exhibition of charity and love for while there may be special outbursts to gladden the hearts of childhood, yet he will be ever on the alert to relieve misery and distress; whether it be at noon or night, regardless of summer or winter or fall or spring he will be generous in giving. Can we say that of ourselves as Christians?

I am also helping families where there has been sickness and death; widows where the work they get to do isn't enough to provide for their children. Is there a worthier cause than this? We are taught by the Scriptures that pure religion is to help the widows and orphans and to relieve the oppressed.

I am sending monthly allowance into the homes of some of our aged ones and this allowance is according to their needs as near as possible with the funds sent me from our church people, and I assure you that the allowance they receive each month, which is their only income, has made them very happy. I think one of the most important duties of our church is to care for our worthy, unfortunate aged.

In this work I am making a special effort to find our worthy ones who are in need of care, and help them in a way approved by God. This is not an easy thing to do, as our worthy ones do not let their wants be known.

In the past year I have given aid, out of the funds sent me, to sixteen families living in twelve different states. I have done my best to serve all cases that have been reported to me and trust that I have done so in a manner that meets the approval of God.

Those wishing to respond to this appeal and help to bring the comfort that is needed in homes of our deserving ones, please send donations to my address—2934 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.—Mrs. Orpha Sanford.

LIFE AND DEATH ETERNAL

IF I BELIEVE in the hopeless doom of incorrigible sin, and also in the undimmed glory of a perfected kingdom, I must believe in the annihilation of the incorrigibly wicked. Fire, in the Bible, is generally an emblem of destruction, not of torment. The chaff, the tares, the fruitless tree, are not to be tortured but to be destroyed. The hell-fire spoken of in the New Testament is the fire of Gehenna kept burning outside the walls of Jerusalem, to destroy the offal of the city. Here was the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is unquenched; emblems of destruction, not of torment. I find nothing in the New Testament to warrant the terrible opinion that God sustains the life of His creatures throughout eternity only that they may continue in sin and misery. That immortality is the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ; that man is mortal, and must put on immortality; that only he can put it on who becomes, through Christ, a partaker of the divine nature, and so an inheritor of Him who only hath immortality; that eternal life is life eternal, and eternal death is death eternal, and everlasting destruction is destruction without remedy—this is the most natural, as it is the simplest reading of the New Testament.—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 19

By George Johnston

THE FOUNDING OF THE CHRISTIAN KINGDOM
 THE FALL OF JUDAISM
 THE PROPHECIES FROM THE SCRIPTURE OF TRUTH
 (DAN. 9.)

IT is sometimes exceedingly difficult to determine just when and where certain prophecies were destined to be fulfilled, and the reason why they were given, but no such difficulties present themselves in the case of the predictions which appear in the last two chapters of Daniel. Where and by whom the earlier events were to be enacted we are told in clear language, and the only difficulty is to follow the thread of the revelation. The object of this revelation was also clearly explained by the angel:— "Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days; for yet the vision is for many days." (Dan. 10:14.) This statement is perfectly plain and intelligible, and must be continually borne in mind if the true significance of the revelations from "The Scripture of Truth" is to be ascertained. There is another point which also must be remembered: that the words "thy people" do not apply solely to the tribe of Judah, but to the whole Hebrew nation, and therefore include those usually referred to as "the lost tribes". These people, though their identity has been hidden from the world for many centuries, have always been known to and watched over by the Almighty, and have never ceased to be His "chosen", notwithstanding that in order that the Divine plan might be fully realized the Israelites were carried and driven out of their own land and scattered over the face of the world. They were destined to perform a particular mission and, unwittingly, they have fulfilled and are still fulfilling that mission. We read in these prophecies of the Persian Empire, of that of Alexander the Great, of the Grecian kingdoms, of the Roman empire, and of the kingdoms into which the latter was divided, and we naturally wonder what connection the lost tribes of Israel had with the rise and fall of all these powers. But the secret is revealed in Jer. 51:19-23, which was not written until long after the ten tribes had been carried out of their own land into Assyrian territories:—"The Portion of Jacob is not like these; for he is the former of all things: and Israel is the rod of his inheritance; the Lord of hosts is his name. Thou art my battle axe and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms; and with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; with thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid; I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers." These predictions are given in clear and precise terms, and mean exactly what they say—that Israel was ordained to be the instrument of God in pulling down and destroying every kingdom and every nation offensive to Him throughout the whole period of the age. When we fully grasp this fact it becomes possible to understand other things which have hitherto been exceedingly puzzling. We find the Persian monarch, Cyrus, treating the Jews of the Babylonian captivity with great kindness and consideration, and we wonder why he did so. It is surmised that he was influenced by the prophecies of Isaiah concerning himself which Daniel is supposed to have shown him. But when we remember that thousands of Israelites resided in Media, a portion of his empire, and that the forefathers of those Israelites were noted warriors, we cease to wonder; for Cyrus must have been rejoiced to have such men in his armies, while they must have gladly welcomed the opportunity to aid in the destruction of the empire which held their brethren in subjection, and which had destroyed Jerusalem. It must be remembered that the lost tribes had not forgotten their real nationality at that time, nor did it pass from their memory until some three centuries later.

God has declared on several occasions that He would scatter the Israelites among the nations; and that many of them found their way into Macedonia was but natural. It was also natural that some of them fought in the armies of Alexander the Great and assisted him in breaking the power of the Persians. We can therefore easily understand why that monarch bestowed special favors on Jerusalem, while he ruined Tyre and other cities. We can also perceive why St. Paul was forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the Gospel in Asia and in Bithynia, and why he was led by a vision to go first into Macedonia. It had been ordained that the Gospel should first be preached to the people of Israel, and afterwards to the Gentiles.

Members of the lost tribes were very prominent in the armies of the Roman empire, even so early as the reign of Julius Caesar; while in its latter days, under the name of Goths, they were so numerous and powerful that they were able to make and unmake emperors just as they pleased. Ultimately western Europe passed almost completely into their hands, and they set up independent kingdoms and swept away Augustulus, the last Roman emperor. The kingdoms which they erected, however, were not destined to be of long continuance. In the course of a few centuries they had all disappeared, and the historians of those days are silent concerning the movements of their Gothic inhabitants. This, however, was entirely in accordance with the will of the Almighty, who had ordained that they should remain unrecognized until they had fully completed their mission. The day, however, is not far distant when the veil shall be lifted, and the identity of the hidden tribes revealed to the world, for almost all of Daniel's prophecies have now been fulfilled.

It has already been pointed out that the Book of Dan-

HAVE YOU PAID YOUR BEREAN DUES? THE NATIONAL TREASURY IS LOW, WITH SOME LARGE OBLIGATIONS AT HAND. DO WHAT YOU CAN.

THE Rockford, Illinois, Berean class has been showing real life lately. They put on a social evening on November fifth, and invited the Oregon Bereans up. The evening was very enjoyably and very profitably spent by a large gathering at the home of Bro. and Sr. Lewis Lindsay. Then on Friday, November eleventh, the Berean editor met with them in class at the home of Sr. Walls, and gave a short sermon after the class.

Don't overlook the value of social work in connection with your Berean class. It is our observation that there is an acquaintanceship and tie developed in this way, forming a basis for cooperation which can be built in no other way.

The following notice has just been received, and is worthy of every Berean's consideration:

Berean funds are low, printing bills are high.

Have you paid your annual TWENTY-FIVE cent dues?

If not, why not do it now, and help out the National Treasury?

Perhaps there are local societies who have a surplus in their treasury. If so, why not transfer it to the National treasury? It will be very much appreciated at this time.

Individual donations will also be very acceptable.

Look at the top of the page for our National Berean Treasurer's name and address.

CHILDREN'S BIBLE STORY AND STUDY BOOK

THE NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY has just published a book for children that is worthy of the interest of every Berean. It is a Story and Work book combined, for ages around six to nine, and the fact that its material was prepared by Sr. Verna Thayer is sufficient recommendation to all who are familiar with her ability in working with children.

This book is illustrated on the cover only, contains 64 pages, and will be mailed, postpaid, at the following prices: single copy, 35 cents; 5 to 24 copies, 30 cents each; 25 or more, 25 cents each.

If each Berean would see that one was bought and given to some child, think what it would mean. Order by addressing the National Berean Society, Oregon, Illinois.

Below is the cover design reproduced in miniature.

THE CHILDREN'S SERVICE

By Verna Thayer

IT was Sunday afternoon, and the twins, James and John, had decided to prepare the next Sunday's work that their Sunday School teacher had given them to do.

"Just what did she say we should do?" said James.

"Oh! we were to see how many things we could think of that we could do, that would be of service for our church," said John, "and I don't think there is one thing that boys like you and me could do. Just imagine, now what is there in the church that boys can do? We can't sing very well, or talk, or help do any of the work that the older ones do."

"Well, I agree with you," said James, "I guess it wasn't intended for us to do things for the church, and, do you know, John, I wonder sometimes if Jesus ever gave any attention to children when he was here on earth?"

Now, as the boys were earnestly talking, they did not know that their dear old Auntie was sitting in the next room, listening to their conversation. When she heard them wondering about what work they could do, and wondering about Jesus' love for children, she decided it was time for her to help them out.

"Boys," said Auntie, "will you tell me where you were and what you were doing last Saturday?"

"Why, Auntie dear," said John, "we went over to our pastor's house. He asked us to come over and get some posters, and pass them out over town."

"But what were these posters about?" said Auntie.

"They were to let people know about the special meeting that we are going to have at the church, and our pastor wanted us to pass them out over town, and put one in each automobile."

"Oh! yes," said Auntie, "I see. Where did you go immediately after school Monday evening, John?"

"I took some flowers over to Sister Jones' for mother. You know she has been sick for a long while, and cannot go to church any more," said John.

"What did you do, James, while John was over to Mrs. Jones'?" asked Auntie.

"Why, didn't you know, Auntie, that it was my time to go see Bobby, and tell him all about our Sunday School last Sunday? You see, Bobby has been sick for so long, and can't go to Sunday School, so when we found out how much he hated to miss, our class decided to take the Sunday School to him. And, of course, it happened to be my time Monday night," said James. "I guess I enjoyed it about as much as he did, too."

"All right," said Auntie, "Do you boys remember seeing a little boy at the window of that big white house on the corner?"

"Sure," said John, "we see him every morning and night, when we go and come from school. But, Auntie, why doesn't he go to school like other children?"

"Don't you know about that little boy?" asked Auntie. "He fell off his wagon when he was little, and hurt his back, and the doctors say he will never walk again; therefore he cannot go to school, or play like other children. And, boys, while I was calling on his mother the other day, she told me about two boys always waving their hands and smiling at Billy, and it pleased him so much."

"Yes, we do," said James. "But, Auntie, why are you asking us all these questions?"

"Ha," laughed Auntie. "I think, if I remember rightly, I heard two boys saying a while ago that there wasn't any work they could do. And here you have been telling me all kinds of things you have been doing. Let me read to you something from the Bible: 'And the king shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.' Matt. 25: 40.

"Now, my dears, you have been working faithfully, making others happy, which is as much a service as it is to preach, or sing, or do some work in the church, and, I'm sure if you keep on working as willingly and as cheerfully as you have been doing, that when Jesus comes again you will hear Him say the verse I just read to you. Remember, you are doing this work for Jesus."

"The closer our walk with God, the more fully does He reveal Himself to us."

"IN THE DAY"

THE PHRASE, "in the day", of Gen. 2:17, is a translation of the Hebrew word "beyom". The Companion Bible says of it, "It is the figure of synecdoche, by which a part is put for the whole or the whole for a part". What that part is must be determined by the context in each particular case. The same authority gives "when" as the meaning for the Hebrew word.

The word is translated "when" in Lev. 13:14; 14:57; Deut. 21:16; 2 Sam. 21:12; Ezek. 38:18 and Zech. 14:3.

In Gen. 2:4 "in the day" is put for the whole six days.

In Num. 7:84 it refers to the twelve days of the dedication of the altar.

In 1 Kings 2:37 it is rendered "on the day", but verse 41 shows that Shimei had been to Goth and back before Solomon executed the sentence assured in verse 37. See verse 42.

In Isa. 11:16 "in the day" apparently refers to the period of time during which Israel journeyed out from the land of Egypt. The same is the apparent thought of Jer. 11:4, 7.

In Ezek. 20:5, 6 "in the day" probably includes the whole time of God's choice of Israel.

And in Ezek. 36:33 "in the day" evidently includes the whole time required to rebuild the waste places of Israel during the period of the future restoration.

A similar use of the word is undoubtedly referred to in Gen. 2:17, thus conveying by the word in that place the same general thought as elsewhere.

ISAIAH TEACHES TRUE WORSHIP

Isaiah 1:1-20

Devotional Reading: John 4:21-24

GOLDEN TEXT

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? Or who shall stand in his holy place?

He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. Psalm 24:3, 4.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Intelligent Worship. "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you". Acts 17:23. True worship, while frequently manifested in forms and ceremonies, finds its most perfect expression in human lives. Formal religious observances are acceptable to God only when they are the out-growth of deep spiritual experience. "Thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it: thou delightest not in burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise". Psalm 51:16-17. Real worship is based upon an appreciative understanding of God's goodness. "The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him". John 4:23.

Worship of Service. "Learn to do well", verse 17. True worship is in doing, as well as in praying. Jesus worshiped the Father as He "went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil", Acts 10:38. We, too, should seek to "relieve the oppressed", not altogether from a sense of duty to be performed, but as an opportunity for us to express in a tangible way our love for the Father. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me". Matt. 25:40.

Worship of Humility. "Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin. For I acknowledge my transgressions: and my sin is ever before me". Psalm 51:2, 3. The book of Isaiah has sometimes been called "the gospel according to Isaiah". The promise of pardon, the assurance of complete cleansing of the sinner, is clearly set forth. Then, as now, it was conditioned upon faith in God, and a turning away from sin.—G. E. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart." Psa. 24:3, 4.

Without holiness none can see the Lord. Inward purity as well as outward cleanliness is required. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," and if there comes forth a dirty story, an unclean jest, a coarse word, such may have the approval of the crowd, the world, but that one bears the stamp of a moral liability to society as well as the church.—F. A. S.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

True Worship. Worship is the same in principle in every age and by all peoples. Its meaning is to do reverence, and as manifested before God it is to reverence Him. The manner of showing this differs with dispensation and people.

True worship can but reveal the pleasure and desire of the worshiper to reverently serve Jehovah. The benefit derived accrues to the worshiper, not to Jehovah; therefore God has kept spokesmen, prophets, always before the people, revealing His great purposes in such way as to draw and lift His chosen people out of and above self, out of and above the pleasure of false and impure worship, unto and into an appreciation of Himself. Israel's easy-going sacrificing was manifestly not of the heart. God was not fooled.

The same is true regarding Christian worship; God knows the true worshiper. Every true Christian takes delight in reverently serving God in the truest and fullest sense. Just as the Israelite must with earnest devotion enter into the service of offerings, so must the earnest Christian if he would be acceptable to God; he must engage in the true service of a new creature in Christ. It was revealed through Israel's usage of the law that carnality can scarcely worship God in spirit and in truth. In Christ, God provides for the change of man from the carnal to the spiritual, so that Paul states in Rom. 8:9, "Ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the spirit of God dwell in you"; and "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his". Here is an inspired standard for the one who would worship God in spirit and in truth. Like as the standard given to Israel could not be used to deceive God, so also may not the standard given to Christians be used to deceive Him who knows the thoughts and the intents of the heart,

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Formality and Spirituality.

The Mosaic law was replete with formal worship. These forms were beautifully symbolic if understood and entered into with the heart, but there could be no acceptable service in simply using empty forms. Isaiah could not leave the people unwarned that they were rendering unacceptable formality of worship because their lives did not correspond to the forms.

God does not care for our words or forms of service, unless those words and acts are the out-pouring of hearts atune with His great love and plan. To take an active part in church work on Sunday and then in business to sell by scant measure, or otherwise be dishonest or deceitful is an abomination to God.

What did the sacrifices of old indicate when properly offered? How is it possible today to show appreciation of God's gifts and love?—F. E. S.

Questions on the Subject. Who was Isaiah? To whom was he sent as prophet? In the days of what kings did he prophesy? V. 1. Was the development of Israel due to God? V. 2. Should Israel have recognized this fact? V. 3. Is the ascribed condition of their cities and land, v. 7, due to their condition of heart? Vv. 4-6. What had become of Sodom? Was the punishment God visited upon her over-harsh? Would a similar punishment have been unjust upon Judah? Would anything less indicate a graciousness and kindness of God toward Israel? Did God provide offerings as we do automobiles to be used for pleasure and personal satisfaction? Had there been no means provided for cancelling sin, and Israel, after endeavoring to faithfully serve God, had discovered sin, would she have been helpless to obtain remission of said sin? Did offerings afford this means? Define true worship.—F.L.A.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Worship: What? How expressed by natural man? Expression as required by God. The relationship between forms and ceremonies as permitted by God and true worship.

Worship as an indication of one's progress in knowledge of God and in leadership power.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. Calvin McGraw has returned from Oregon to her old home at Macomb, Ill.

Sr. Woodward is announced to speak at the Blanchard, Mich., Church, over Sunday, Nov. 20.

Bro. and Sr. A. J. Eichaner of Cedar Falls, Iowa, are spending the winter at 303 Zack St., Tampa, Florida.

Meetings are commencing at the Ripley Church tonight, Nov. 15, to continue over Sunday, Nov. 27. Let's all help in every way we can.

According to the latest word from Bro. Randall, the meetings at Marshall, Ill., were progressing nicely. We expect a complete report from him for the next issue.

Bro. and Sr. C. E. Randall wish the Herald to extend their heartfelt thanks to all who have so kindly extended sympathy and prayers in their hour of bereavement and sorrow.

Brother F. E. Siple expects to fill his regular appointments at Kewanee, Macomb and Ripley, Illinois from Nov. 16th to 22nd, assisting Bro. Randall at the services at Ripley three or four days.

Sr. Lilian Railton, of Fonthill, Ont., can be addressed at 23 Clinton Ave., Fredonia, New York, where she is spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Maurice Guest, who is gradually recovering from serious sickness.

A letter from Sr. Lou Himmelright of Attica, Indiana, announces that the Doctor has sent her home with the assurance that she will never again be troubled with a return of the dread disease for which she has been treating for several months.

We are planning to conduct a series of meetings with the brethren at and near Hammond, Louisiana, beginning right after Thanksgiving. We hope that all who are situated so that they can, will be ready to cooperate in this work.

—F. E. Siple

We are sorry to report that Sr. Hazel Logan of Plymouth, Ind., Church, has recently had to undergo another serious operation. But we are glad to say that at the last report she was recovering very nicely and would soon be home again. Her mother, Sr. Marshall Logan, has again been confined to her bed, at home.

Bro. and Sr. Logan and daughter have been faithful and continued laborers in the Master's work in Indiana, and The Herald deeply sympathizes with them because of their repeated attacks of serious sickness.

Sunday, Nov. 13, was a day of inspiration and encouragement for the brethren of the Church at Adeline, Ill. Several weeks ago Bro. Siple laid the plans for an all day meeting, and in the intervening time with the cooperation of the local members, they were carried forward with a result that will be far-reaching in its effect.

Bro. Siple spoke in the morning, and evening the general topic being the resurrection, bringing to our attention from God's Word the part we must perform to make us worthy of that highest calling, members of Christ's bride.

Bro. Sidney Jackson spoke in the afternoon on God's Call and Our Response.

Brothers and sisters and friends from all points of the compass were in attendance and partook of a basket dinner at noon. The Adeline brethren were glad to welcome those from Plum River, Lanark, Dixon, Rockford and Oregon, thus cementing the ties of friendship and brotherhood and lending encouragement to the few who are left to keep the work alive at one of the first Churches organized in the Illinois Conference. Come again, all of you!

WHEN WINTER COMES

How we love to go to conference at Oregon in August! What inspiration we receive when we hear the reports of work done! How enthusiastically we plan the work for the future! We do enjoy those business meetings, don't we? We take the inspiration home with us, and we feel its influence for several months in our local church work. But how about those who are left behind to carry out the program that we have made? Things look different in November. Take a look-in with us as we saw it last week. This is the view.

Our enthusiasm has been centered on Golden Rule Home ever since the organization of the N. B. I. We are justly proud of the Home, and are always glad to take visitors to see it. I wonder how many of us would be proud to take any one to see our Editor's sanctum, and the class room for the students.

This year at conference the Study Class was emphasized—we, the conference wanted it. We wanted our Secretary to edit the paper, prepare the quarterly, teach the class, preach, and look after a thousand and one details. We ordered these things in August and then went back home and left it at that.

Those who have been in Oregon know what a bleak, barn-like room is the place above the Herald office. No amount of fixing (which it hasn't had) would make it an inviting study. At one end of this room is our Editor's desk. Here in this atmosphere he is supposed to receive inspiration for his work—writing the thoughts that come to us through the paper and the quarterlies, and through teaching and preaching. He begins work after he has carried ashes and coal two flights, built the fire, and waited for the place to warm. One would think that inspiration would be slow in coming. The other end of the room is devoted to the Study Class. Here they not only recite, but study. There is no partition between the editor's desk and the class room to secure quiet while the editor works and the class study.

Down stairs The Herald work is being carried on.

Over in the office behind the Gift Shop are Bro. and Sr. Stilson who are working day and night for you and for me—to carry out our plans. They sacrificed home and position to take up this work at Oregon.

This is a different picture from the one seen at conference when we are all there. It is one of self-sacrifice, devotion, and patient endurance. Do we support by our letters of encouragement? Do we boost by voice and pen the work that they are doing? Do we aid financially all the time in carrying out the plans that we so cheerfully and enthusiastically laid out for them to do during the coming year? It is our work that they are doing, and the least we can do is to see that it is carried on under the most comfortable conditions possible.

Let's stand by through the winter as we did in the summer. Then November will seem like August and the inspiration of the conference will continue throughout the year.

CECILIA HESS HOBART

Cecilia Hess Hobart was born Dec. 18, 1842, near Mt. Morris, Illinois, and died at her home in Glendale, Cal., Nov. 4, 1927, at the ripe old age of 84 years, 9 months, and 16 days. She came of a large family and grew to young womanhood in the place of her birth, finishing her education at the Mt. Morris Seminary. Later the family moved to northwest Missouri, making the trip by covered wagon, and later on moved to Omaha, Neb., in 1881. Her father and mother came from Virginia. In 1869 she was married to John H. Hobart who preceded her in death March 4, 1924. To this union there were born three children, Harvey and Edna, who lived with their mother, and Mrs. Mary Specht, who lives in Los Angeles. The family left Omaha and came to Glendale to live in March, 1920.

The funeral was held from "The Little Church of The Flowers" in Forest Lawn Cemetery on Monday, Nov. 7th, where a large circle of friends and relatives met to pay her a last sad farewell until the Lord comes. Brethren from Los Angeles and Pasadena attended quite generally.

Little did we think when we visited Sr. Hobart on Tuesday before her death, that death would visit her so soon. She was hale and hearty to all appearances up to within three hours of her death. The work of the enemy was quick but very severe while it lasted. She was one of the old style folks we all like to meet. Her faith meant so much to her. She and her husband had embraced the gospel many years ago and this was indeed a comfort to her in her declining years. She sleeps in her dusty bed in Forest Lawn Cemetery awaiting the coming of the Lord. In her, the writer and Sr. Lindsay have lost a dear friend and sister. How she did enjoy our Bible studies together. May the Master soon come to put an end to earth's groaning multitudes and to give instead the oil of joy for mourning.

—S. J. Lindsay.

A COMMUNICATION

The following kindly expressed thoughts, though adverse to what The Herald affirms, and adverse to the honest understanding of the great majority of Herald readers, are, nevertheless, worthy of study. All Christians do well to often review God's Word in search of His one intention in His revelation to man.—Ed.

Dear Restitution Herald:

I wish to add a word of appreciation and thanks to all who are nobly engaged in the re-discovery and re-establishment of Apostolic faith, hope and practice thus making our dear weekly visitor both edifying and helpful. It is on the subject of Apostolic practice or conduct that I wish to write having courage to do so because in the Church of God is liberty of speech where even the simplest may be heard, the only provision being: "If anyone speak let him speak as the Oracles of God," (or in youth's parlance, "hand out the same kind of lingo").

Did our Lord refer back to those important portions of Scripture containing our rules of conduct which actually proceeded out of God's mouth and say they were just as essential to right living as bread? Matt. 4:4; Ex. 20:1;

Deut. 8:3; 5:22. This is the question on which I have pondered for years. In referring to the two great commandments on which both the law and the prophets hang or evolve does He not have the same rules in mind—the two being the ten, in condensed form? Matt. 22:40. "Commandment", according to Webster, is a mandate—command—to order—to rule. "Covenant"—agreement between two or more parties. Party of the first part issues mandates. Party of second part agrees to them. Does a covenant terminate on both sides if party of second part alone fails? What old commandment has John 2:7; 3:4, reference to? When writing those who had already entered the new covenant relation, through the blood of the everlasting covenant he still speaks of an old commandment that is to be kept in a new spirit or intent through a new motive power, love, because they had then, through the teaching and example of our Lord and the enlightenment of the Holy Spirit, come to a fuller and deeper understanding of God's plan, will and purpose. 1 John 2:8. Paul exhorts the brethren in Saloniki in the same thing, enumerating a few points found in the second table of the decalogue. 1 Thess. 4:1-13. Since God promises to show mercy unto many thousands of generations to those

It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation,

ISAIAH TEACHES TRUE WORSHIP

ISAIAH LIVED in Jerusalem, the chief city of Judah, the southern kingdom. He was a very bright man, and might have risen to a place of high esteem or authority among his townspeople. Instead, he preferred the esteem of God, and the privilege of being God's mouth-piece.

Isaiah was in a position to really know the evil conditions that existed among the very leaders and religious class. And it made him feel very badly to see his loved nation going down to certain destruction.

The two northern kingdoms, Israel and Syria, were planning to invade Judah, and would lay waste all the invaded territory. The southern people rather expected God would be on their side because of their splendor in sacrificing and temple "form-service". However, God sent Isaiah to them with a message of far different promise.

Through Isaiah God told these people of Judah that they were a sinful nation, unsound, unworthy, and that it was only through the goodness of God that these few were permitted to remain. Otherwise, they would have been as utterly destroyed as Sodom and Gomorrah.

The Lord said, "You make thousands of sacrifices to me, but what do I care for them? I am tired of them. Bring no more."

"I despise your incense-burning, your feast days, all your false worship."

"I will not answer your prayers because your hands are full of blood, and you are not sincere."

Then came a ray of hope—a different note.

"Wash you; make you clean; cease to do evil; learn to do well; help the oppressed, and then, though you have been very wicked, I will forgive you, and your sins shall be washed away."

"Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

Moreover, if they would continue willing and obedient, they were to have the best of everything; but if they refused—war and captivity would devour them,

Do you think they cleansed their temple service and worshiped God in their hearts?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn Psalm 24:3, 4.
2. Think! Are we trying to love God and His ways and serve Him acceptably? How are we made clean?
3. Sing the song, "Whiter than Snow".

THE VOICE THAT COUNTS

FATHER, I wish I could sing. Florence sang at the club today, and we all enjoyed it so much. She sings every night to her father, too. I'd give anything if I could, but there isn't any music in me. I wish I had a sweet voice."

"Is that so?" asked father, taking her wistful face between his hands. "Well, perhaps you can't sing, but don't tell me your voice has no music in it, sweetheart."

"Why, father, how can you say so?"

"Almost every evening," answered father, "when I come home, the first thing I hear is a merry laugh, and it rests me, no matter how tired I am. Yesterday I heard that voice saying, 'Don't cry, buddie; sister'll mend it for you.' Sometimes I hear it reading to grandmother. Last week I heard it telling Mary, 'I'm sorry your head aches. I'll do the dishes tonight.' That is the kind of music I like best. It cheers the whole household. Don't tell me my little daughter hasn't a sweet voice."—Watchman.

HERALD QUESTION CORNER

THE following question and answer has been received, with the requested quotation, "Please answer this in The Herald".

"QUESTION—In Romans 2:7, we read, in the King James' version: 'To them who by patient endurance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life.' Is not this translation decisive that immortality does not belong to man naturally, otherwise why should he be commanded to seek for that which he has already got?"

"ANSWER—If that were a good translation the question would be forever settled. But that translation is not correct. The Greek word translated 'immortality' is not 'ATHANASIA' but 'APTHARSIA'. Athanasia means immortality, but 'Aptharsia', means incorruptibility. Aptharsia is used fifteen times in the N. T. In 1 Cor. 15, it is used four times in connection with the resurrection body and is translated 'incorruption'. This same word aptharsia, is translated "sincerity" in Eph. 6:24 and Titus 2:6, carrying still the idea of unchangeableness and incorruption. When correctly translated, your question concerning this passage in Romans is answered correctly."

The above answer regarding Romans 2:7 is correct. "Aptharsia", which is the Greek word found in the text, means incorruption. Under the adjective "apthartos" the Critical Greek Lexicon gives the following definition: "Not liable to corruption. (A word never joined with the Hebrew or Greek words for "soul" or "spirit", etc. In Old Testament and New Testament, though they occur 1644 times Predicated of only one Being—God".) While the same authority, defining the word aptharsia, gives this meaning: Incorruption, immortality. (Not the inalienable possession of the human family since the fall. Now, it is restricted to "those who by patient continuance in well doing seek for" it, Rom. 2:7.)

It is this adjective, apthartos, that is found in 1 Tim. 1:17, where it reads, "Now unto the King eternal, immortal" It is also the noun, aptharsia, which is translated "immortality" in 2 Tim. 1:10. Both words occur in 1 Cor. 15:53, 54.

It would seem that while the word aptharsia is properly translated by the word incorruptible, yet said incorruptibility is that pertaining to immortality and it must be sought for today. The reward for such seeking, says Paul in Rom. 2:7, is "eternal life", and is "brought to light", writes Paul in 2 Tim. 1:10, "through the gospel". Thus, while the word incorruption or incorruptibility would be a more accurate translation, yet said incorruption or incorruptibility would pertain specifically to immortality.

COULD GIVE THAT CHEERFULLY

A SMALL boy was sent to church by his father with a nickel and a dollar bill.

"You are to put what you please in the offertory bag, my boy. Listen to the sermon and make your offering in accordance with the impression upon you."

The boy returned. "Well, what did you put in the bag?"

"The nickel. I was going to put in the other when I remembered what the clergyman said in his sermon."

"What was that?"

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—Selected.

which God presented His Son an offering. This sin, or "asham", and the offering therefor, or "asam", are peculiarly Levitical in character. It is suggested that this sin refers to a lack of due and proper service of worship and homage to the Father. It does not especially, so far as the word itself may indicate, refer to that determined character of crookedness, or to the failure in act or thought to attain the ideal—the mark set by God.

Nor does this even suggest that our Lord did not become an offering for sin other than that described by "asham". His was to correct the sin of the world, to bring the earth into righteousness, righteousness approved by God, Himself.

Concerning the church, Christ "gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish."

of implicit faith toward God. They are both reconciled to God in one body by the cross of Christ (Eph. 2:16), and both have access by one Spirit to the Father (vs. 18). They are fellow-heirs, of the same body, and partakers of God's promise in Christ by the gospel (Eph. 3:6). There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek (Rom. 10:12); "for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time, his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus" (Rom. 3:23-26).—Editorial in "The Faith".

HELL— What Is It?

"He, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption."—Acts 2:31.

The subject of "Hell", as understood by the majority of people called Christians, is one that deserves prayerful study by every person. It seems quite certain that the usually accepted view of this subject is wholly contrary to God's teachings regarding it. And, as any such contrary view gives one a false vision of the Creator, Himself, the reader is urged to carefully study every Bible text using this word, either in the original languages or in the English.

The English reader reads the English word "hell" with the usual thought that custom has associated with the word, but the Bible was written in ancient language—the Old Testament largely in Hebrew and the New Testament in Greek—and it is the thought conveyed by those original words that were chosen by inspiration that all readers should seek. By the use of any good concordance—Young's, for instance—the reader will see that the word "hell" in the Old Testament is always, 31 times, translated from the Hebrew word "sheol". He will also learn that the same Hebrew word "sheol" is in 31 instances translated by the English words "the grave", and in 3 instances by the English word "pit". Thus if "sheol" means the one and same thing throughout, then "pit", "hell" and "the grave", when translated from "sheol", mean one and the same thing.

That the reader may have all these texts grouped before his eye, they are printed herewith. He is asked to study the texts with a view to discover the Bible meaning in the use of the words.

The word "HELL", Hebrew, "sheol", is printed in capital letters; "the grave", Hebrew, "sheol", is printed in black-faced type; and "pit", Hebrew, "sheol", is printed in plain-faced type. Together these are all the occurrences of the Hebrew word "sheol" and are as follows:

1. Gen. 37:35, I will go down into the grave.
2. Gen. 42:38, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

64. Jonah 2:2, out of the belly of HELL cried I. (A. V., margin, the grave.)
65. Hab. 2:5, who enlargeth his desire as HELL.

On careful examination of the above list, a few facts stand out very clearly:

1. It will be observed that in a majority of cases Sheol is rendered the grave. The grave, therefore, stands out in the face of the above list as the best and commonest rendering.

2. With regard to the word pit, it will be observed that in each of these cases, the grave is so evidently meant, that we may at once substitute that word, and banish pit from our consideration as a rendering of Sheol.

3. As to the rendering hell it does not represent Sheol, because by colloquial usage hell means the place of punishment. Sheol has no such meaning, but denotes the present state of death.

4. The student will find that the grave, taken literally as well as figuratively, will meet all the requirements of the Hebrew sheol.

5. If we enquire of it in the above list of the occurrences of the word Sheol, it will teach:

- (a) As to direction, it is down.
- (b) As to place, it is in the earth.
- (c) As to nature, it is the state of death, or the state of the dead, of which the grave is a tangible evidence.
- (d) As to relation, it is in contrast with the state of the living. It is never once connected with the living, except by contrast.
- (e) As to duration, the dominion of Sheol, or the grave, or hell, will continue until, and end only with, resurrection. Hosea 13:14. Compare Psa. 16:10 with Acts 2:27, 31 and Acts 13:35.

Hell in the New Testament

The word, Hades, is found eleven times in the New Testament. It is the equivalent of the Hebrew, Sheol, and is invariably connected with death, never with life. All in Hades will "NOT LIVE AGAIN" until they are raised from the dead, Rev. 20:5. The English word hell by no means represents the Greek, Hades; as we have seen it does not give a correct idea of its Hebrew equivalent, Sheol.

Hades can mean only and exactly what Sheol means, viz., the place where corruption is, Acts 2:31 (Compare Acts 13:34-37), and from which resurrection is the only exit.

All the occurrences of the Greek word Hades are as follows. In each instance the word is rendered hell, excepting in 1 Cor. 15:55, where it is the grave.

- | | |
|-----------------|------------------|
| 1. Matt. 11:23. | 7. 1 Cor. 15:55. |
| 2. Matt. 16:18. | 8. Rev. 1:18. |
| 3. Luke 10:15. | 9. Rev. 6:8. |
| 4. Luke 16:23. | 10. Rev. 20:13. |
| 5. Acts 2:27. | 11. Rev. 20:14. |
| 6. Acts 2:31. | |

The English word Gehenna, is the equivalent of the Greek, Ghi-Hinnom, or valley of Hinnom, Josh. 15:8, where was the scene of Moloch worship. The name was not derived from that worship, but from the later use of the burning of carrion, by means of ever-burning fire. Jer. 31:40; Isa. 66:24. The English words, hell fire, equivalent to Gehenna, are found in three instances, Matt. 5:22, Matt. 18:9, and Mark

9:47. All of the occurrences of the word Gehenna are as follows:

- | | |
|---------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Matt. 5:29, 30. | 4. Mark 9:43, 45. |
| 2. Matt. 10:28. | 5. Luke 12:5. |
| 3. Matt. 23:15, 32. | 6. James 3:6. |

The word hell,—Greek, tartaros—as found in 2 Peter 2:4, is not Sheol or Hades, where all men go in death, nor is it where the wicked are to be consumed or destroyed, which is Gehenna. It is used only here, and here only of “the angels that sinned.” Jude 6.—Adapted from the Critical Lexicon and Concordance.

It will be seen from the foregoing that, throughout the Bible, excepting in twelve instances, hell has reference to, and is one and the same thing as the grave condition. It is not a place of excruciating and unending torture as is so commonly taught. Nor is there any other word or phrase in the Bible that presents the thought usually understood by the use of the word, “hell”.

In eleven instances the word “hell” originates from the Greek word “gehenna” which referred to a fire outside the wall of Jerusalem that was kept burning continually for the consuming of carcasses and all kinds of refuse.

God has ordained that “the wages of sin is death”, and that this death is a cessation of life. This death condition, sometimes called, hell, will yield to the call of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life. God is not a God of endless torment, and he does ill who so pictures the God of truth, and righteousness, and love.

SING TO GOD

By Auntie Wince.

*Sing to God, O little ones,
Standing at your mother's knee.
He loves the songs of youthful tongues,
Loves youth's tender melody.*

*Sing the sweet and rapturous strains
That your dear old grandsires loved;
Songs that tell of coming days,
Songs that countless hearts have moved.*

*Sing of Jesus' coming reign,
When all men shall happy be;
And sin at last, and gruesome death,
Shall from this earth forever flee.*

*Come, O Master, quickly come,
Linger not another year;
We who love and watch for thee
Surely need Thy presence here.*

that show their love to Him by keeping His commandments, it isn't likely that the first four have run out by time limitation, only they were not, like our duty to our fellowman, “written” in the moral man's conscience. Ex. 20:6; Rom. 2:15. To love God truly, with all heart, all soul, all strength, all mind, the motive power has to be solely a desire to please Him above everything else. Luke 10:27; 17:10; Rom. 12:1. Hence those actuated by such desire will unconsciously fulfill the second table of the decalogue: Love thy neighbor as thyself. “Do we then nullify the law through faith? God forbid: Yea, we establish the law.” Rom. 3:31. “If ye keep my commandments—abide in my love—even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in His love.” John 15:10. “I and my Father are one”—in unity.

Now, these rules of conduct pertain to this life only, as no law is given that can give life after death. Nor can life be earned. But: “As the Father hath life in Himself (is self existing); so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself; and hath given him authority to execute judgment also.” And the time “is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth;” some to life, even eternal life which is the gift of God “through Jesus Christ our Lord.” John 6:26, 27; Rom. 6:23.—Mrs. Hannah Michaelson.

iel is chiefly concerned with the rise and fall of governments and nations. The prophecies now to be considered deal exclusively with these matters, and point out with great clearness the particular action or actions which caused the rise or fall of each. The event which marks the period when each of the empires was at the height of its power and glory is also clearly predicted; and it is a strange fact that the particular action which marked this period in the history of each was the same which ultimately caused its downfall.

The importance of these prophecies and the fact that conflicting views are held concerning their application and fulfillment, render it expedient that they should be explained in the clearest manner possible. This can best be accomplished by permitting the historians to describe in their own words the events foretold by the prophet. These cannot have had the slightest knowledge that their writings would be used for such a purpose, and their statements were therefore absolutely unbiased, in so far as the predictions of Daniel, or of any other prophet, were concerned.

TEN YEARS AFTER THE DECLARATION

London, October 26, 1927,

Editor, The New Palestine:

TESTED by the events of the past ten years the policy embodied in the Balfour Declaration of 1917 has been amply justified. A regenerated Palestine is in the making, and the Jews are playing their full part in the work of reconstruction. The difficulties have been and will continue to be encountered, difficulties which are inherent in this task which the Jews have undertaken. But what has already been accomplished in Palestine is sufficient to show that they can be and will be surmounted. Under the wise and statesmanlike guidance of Dr. Weizmann, the Zionist Movement has already succeeded in laying the foundations of the Jewish National Home. I am convinced that Jews will not falter in the work to which they have set their hands, and that in the fullness of time their aspirations in Palestine will be realized. The Balfour Declaration, now incorporated in the Mandate for Palestine, is a pledge of British sympathy and goodwill. It is a pledge which will be strictly honored. The Declaration is accepted as binding by every party in the State, and no matter what Government may be in power, Great Britain will stand by her word. Let the Jews do their part and Great Britain can be relied upon to do hers.

Editor, The New Palestine:

THE Balfour Declaration is one of the notable events in history, and its true importance will be realized more and more in the decades to come, when much else that occurred in the Great War will have become but a dim memory, for though it is not as spectacular as some of the other peace settlements, neither is it like many of them vitiated by injustice and war passion. On the contrary, it is based on a sense of historic justice, and constitutes a great act of historic reparation and renews once more the promise which is basic to Jewish history. But throughout the long centuries Palestine remained for the Jews a foreign land and the promise remained in abeyance. Then came the Great War in which their historic oppressors suffered crushing defeat, even to the verge of extinction. And from that awful judgment seat of history came at last the pronouncement known as the Balfour Declaration. It was apparently a minor incident in the midst of a world of shaking events, but in reality it was one of the remarkable events of history, for it was a renewal and fulfillment of the promise, and it showed historic justice triumphant at last across the long stretch of centuries. From the human point of view, and from the high spiritual point of view there is nothing more dramatic or more significant in history. What an argument Job would have founded on this great act of fulfillment after almost two thousand years of doubt and denial. View it as we will, the Balfour Declaration, in its great setting of history, is one of the most wonderful confirmations of the moral and spiritual principle operating in human affairs.

General Jan Smuts.

—In The New Palestine.

Surely, God, in the light of the above cablegrams, as in the light of all that is being done today, is directing men and nations in the high vision of the restitution of His chosen people to the chosen land. Prophecy is visibly in fulfillment. True, there are severe and galling experiences through which Israel must yet pass, but her final destiny is plainly revealed:—"Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."

It may interest some of THE HERALD readers to know that The New Palestine, 114 Fifth Ave., New York, which is the official organ of the Zionist Organization, has merged with Palestine Pictorial, and should henceforth be even more informative than heretofore.—Editor.

GOD'S OATH

DAVID BARON, the distinguished Jew, who was led by the Spirit through the unanswerable logic of Scripture to accept Jesus as the Messiah, is reported to have said in one of his addresses on prophecy that, if the claim of Jesus to the throne of David had not been known in Jerusalem to be absolutely without flaw, the Jews would never have driven Him to the Cross. They would need only—on the day He entered Jerusalem and was received with royal acclamation as the Son of David—to have denounced Him as an imposter and pretender, to silence forever any righteous claim He might make as leader or teacher; but neither on that day, nor on the day He put the solemn challenge to them as to the meaning of David's calling Him, Lord, was a voice raised to dispute His legal title.

Mr. Baron is also reported to have said that, up to Christ's rejection as King, all genealogical records were preserved in the temple, and easily accessible to all the people; but when Titus destroyed the city and the temple, these records were also destroyed; and since that day the genealogical tables of Matthew and Luke alone remain to give the lineal descent from David. Whatever may be the traditional belief of a Jew as to his family and his tribe, no man can bring legal documentary proof that he is of the tribe of Judah and lineage of David and rightful heir to David's throne.

Therefore the only living man who today can bring an unbroken genealogy, directly and incontrovertibly from David is Jesus of Nazareth, born King of the Jews, crucified King of the Jews, and to come again King of the Jews.—Ottman.

Give Thanks unto the Lord

"Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad."

O SING unto the LORD a new song: sing unto the LORD, all the earth. Sing unto the LORD, bless His name; shew forth His salvation from day to day. Declare His glory among the heathen, His wonders among all people.

For the LORD is great, and greatly to be praised: He is to be feared above all gods. For all the gods of the nations are idols: but the LORD made the heavens. Honour and majesty are before Him: strength and beauty are in His sanctuary.

Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and strength. Give unto the LORD the glory due unto His name: bring an offering, and come into His courts.

O worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness: fear before Him, all the earth. Say among the heathen that the LORD reigneth: the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved: He shall judge the people righteously.

Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the LORD: for He cometh, for He cometh to judge the earth: He shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with His truth.

THANKSGIVING

"But let the righteous be glad: let them rejoice before God; Yea, let them exceedingly rejoice."—Psalm 68:3.

THE DAY OF THANKSGIVING was set aside by the early Pilgrim fathers as a day in which the nation might formally and heartily give thanks to God for all of His protecting and providing care.

This is well.

No person and no nation can formally and heartily bow in grateful recognition to the Giver of all life and of all good things without being drawn even more closely and truly unto Him, who is Lord over all.

In addition to all this, there is reason for giving of thanks, that reaches deeper and farther into the ages than the mere reason for personal provision, proper and good though they also may be.

The book of Psalms is frequently interspersed with bursts of thanksgiving for the marvelous works and words of Jehovah. The climax of all these may be said to be reached in Psalms 145, when David, apparently prefiguring Him whom we might call the great and eternal David praises Jehovah most marvelously. The first verse of this beautiful psalm begins with the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, and each succeeding verse begins with the following consecutive letters of the Hebrew alphabet unto its end.

(Praise Promised—For Jehovah)

1. I will extol Thee, my God, O king;
And I will bless Thy name for ever and ever.
2. Every day will I bless Thee;
And I will praise Thy name for ever and ever.

(This Praise Offered)

3. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised;
And His greatness is unsearchable.

(Praise Promised—For His Works)

4. One generation shall praise Thy works to another,
And shall declare Thy mighty acts.
5. I will speak of the glorious honour of Thy majesty,
And of thy wondrous works.
6. And men shall speak of the might of Thy terrible acts;
And I will declare Thy greatness.
7. They shall abundantly utter the memory of Thy great goodness,
And shall sing of Thy righteousness.

(The Praise Offered)

8. The Lord is gracious, and full of compassion;
Slow to anger, and of great mercy.
9. The Lord is good to all:
And His tender mercies are over all His works.
(Praise Promised—For His Kingdom)
10. All Thy works shall praise Thee, O Lord;
And Thy saints shall bless Thee.
11. They shall speak of the glory of Thy kingdom,
And talk of Thy power;
12. To make known to the sons of men His mighty acts,
And the glorious majesty of His kingdom.

(The Praise Offered)

13. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom,
And Thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.
14. The Lord upholdeth all that fall,
And raiseth up all those that be bowed down.
15. The eyes of all wait upon Thee;
And Thou givest them their meat in due season.
16. Thou openest Thine hand,
And satisfiest the desire of every living thing.
17. The Lord is righteous in all His ways,
And holy in all His works.
18. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon Him,
To all that call upon Him in truth.
19. He will fulfil the desire of them that fear Him:
He also will hear their cry, and will save them.
20. The Lord preserveth all them that love Him:

(Praise Promised)

21. My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord:

And let all flesh bless His holy name for ever and ever.

—(From Companion Bible.)

This Psalm of thankful praise is then followed by five concluding Psalms of Praise, each of which Psalm begins and ends with "Praise ye the Lord".

It will be noticed that the reason for this thanksgiving of David is not to be found so much in the things which he has personally and selfishly enjoyed in life, but rather for the great, broad works of God, which extend over His marvelous creation and His wonderful plans therefor.

Surrounded with the atmosphere of such gratitude in response to his Father's work; of such appreciation of the various phases of the plans of the Almighty; what encouragement that we too should continuously revolve faith's search-light and peer into all the ways of Jehovah, that our hearts at all times may be filled to overflowing with gratitude, as we recognize everywhere His marvelous goodness and kindness to the children of men.

FOR DAILY BREAD

By F. E. Siple

THE commonplace things of life, the blessings we have and use every day, we get in the habit of accepting as a matter of fact, with little expression, or even feeling of appreciation. The special blessings we notice, and we give thanks for them.

But were it not for the free, open air which God gives to us, and the daily bread provided, we could not even exist to enjoy the special gifts. The common things are the most worthwhile after all.

Our Savior taught His disciples to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread." The thought contained in those words is a petition for the Father to give us each day just the sustenance and provision which we need for that day. What a trust in God is implied in such a prayer!

So when we come to this Thanksgiving time of the year, and we look around to count some of the blessings of life for which we should be thankful, let us not forget the regular, daily help, comfort and cheer which have been ours. Thank God for loved ones and friends, tried and true, that have stood by us through all of life's turmoil,—who know our weaknesses and faults, but who love us in spite of them and who help us to be stronger. Thank God for the food that we eat and the air that we breathe.

Thank God for life today, and for the hope of life tomorrow.

HIS GATES

By R. H. Judd

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name."—Psalm 100:4.

SCRIPTURAL language abounds with matters of human interest. It takes up the common things of life and weaves around them a message that appeals directly to the heart of the individual. Thus we get in the verse before us the uniquely suggestive thought of "the gates of God"—"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving."

Many and varied were the uses of the gate in Eastern lands, and from them many correspondingly beautiful lessons may be gleaned. One outstanding feature characteristic of them all is that they stand at the dividing of the ways: behind, the memories of experience, and before, the ever-expanding horizon of hope and endeavor.

Still another feature of the gate is that it compels us to "stand still" and "remember all the way which the Lord thy God hath led thee, these forty years," and though we may not see it now, we shall realize in later years that "he led them forth by a right way." "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

It is not difficult to see from Psalm 118:19, 20 that King David had evidently come to a "gate" at the dividing of the ways; a "gate" that compelled him to look back and exclaim that "the Lord hath chastened me sore." Then, as he looked forward, he realized that "the voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous," and he burst forth with the cry: "Open to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the Lord; this gate of the Lord, into which the righteous shall enter."

May this THANKS-GIVING DAY be to each one of us a "gate"—yes, even one of "his gates", where we shall not only consider how "great things he hath done", but pass through "into his courts with praise," and "be thankful unto him, and bless his name,"—yea, even His memorial name forever.

*O, enter then His gates with praise,
Approach with joy His courts unto;
Praise, laud and bless His name always,
For it is seemly so to do.*

*For why? The Lord our God is good,
His mercy is forever sure;
His truth at all times firmly stood,
And shall from age to age endure.*

GREATEST CAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING SAVED BY GRACE

By Samuel E. Haney

Let us call a spade a spade, and a hoe a hoe.

EVEN though Christendom is inebriated by "the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath"; and her gratitude emanates from a mind that is influenced by a gormandizing palate, it is but charitable to concede her farcical actions as a token of sincerity. About one Christian in ten thousand adequately and heartily appreciates God's boundless love, that is so copiously and ubiquitously manifested every day in the year.

Were it possible to broadcast the conversations and actions from every symposium board in Christendom on Thanksgiving Day what a heterogeneous mass of nonsense could be heard and seen. About everything under the heavens could be heard—the things that appeal to the proud, vain, idolatrous, hypocritical, Adamic mind—and rarely a word of gratitude for all of God's goodness.

The few isolated "spiritually-minded" (Rom. 8:6; 1 Cor. 2:16) saints' acclamations of true Thanksgiving would be drowned out by the spirit of Babylon's orgies.

On the other hand, supposing all God's children who, with confidence and ecstatic joy are looking for the return of their Lord, were congregated at a banqueting board with a broadcasting outfit, what melody could be heard! Imagine the effect of such a mighty outburst as:

*All hail the power of Jesus' name!
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown Him Lord of all.*

*Ye chosen seed of Israel's race,
Ye ransomed from the fall,
Hail Him who saves you by His grace,
And crown Him Lord of all.*

Methinks the angels that sang at our Lord's nativity would join in and silence Babylon's harangue!

To individualize the subject, what a privilege and help it is to give testimony to what the Lord has done for us! Every one of us has had a different experience, due to his different needs, hence, a different story to tell, to the honor and glory of God, and to the mutual edification of all. Personally, I am a sinner saved by grace. I can now understand how and why God has led me through so many different and strange paths in bringing me to a comprehensive knowledge of the "Old Rugged Cross" where I can see Jesus, "who loved me (while yet a rebel), and gave himself for me", Gal. 2:20. Yes, glory to His name! The precious blood that flowed on Calvary washed all my sins away, and started me toward His kingdom with a "clean slate"; with instructions as to how to keep it clean (1 John 1:9); and to be always ready to "sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare his works with rejoicing."

"And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof." Here we have the Great Magna Charta revealed to us, which makes accessible heavenly knowledge, liberty and peace, culminating in immortality: something well worthy of Thanksgiving every day.

Isaiah writes about it: "For the LORD shall comfort Zion: he will comfort all her waste places, and he will make her wilderness like Eden, and her desert like the garden of the LORD; joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving, and the voice of melody", 51:3.

And John saw and heard things yet to come: "After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." Then all heaven seemed to cry out, "Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen." Rev. 7:9-12.

THE SPIRIT OF THANKFULNESS

By C. E. Randall

THE LAST THURSDAY in November is yearly set aside by Presidential proclamation as a day of Thanksgiving. It is wonderful that our government should recognize and honor our heavenly Father to the extent of asking all peoples of the nation to use this day as a day of thanking God for the many, many blessings received individually and nationally. We should be thankful that we have a government that so honors our God.

It would be well for the Christian people of this nation to heed Paul's exhortation to Timothy (1 Tim. 2:1, 2) and pray for those in authority. It would be much better to pray for those to whom the leadership of the nation is entrusted, than be continually finding fault and sowing seeds of discontent.

To the true child of God every day should be a day of Thanksgiving. Little do we realize that every blessing comes from the "Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." In Him we live, and move, and have our being. Apart from His blessing there is no life. We are momentarily dependent upon Him, whether Christian or non-Christian. Daily all seek His tender, life-sustaining mercies. Daily should all thank Him.

The very spirit of Christianity demands that we thank the Father for all His blessings. "In every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."—1 Thess. 5:18. The letter of His Word requires it; the spirit willingly and freely complies. One and all should cultivate and practice thankfulness more and more towards man and to God.

GOD'S GIFT TO US WHAT DO WE GIVE TO HIM?

By M. A. Woodward

I AM OFFERING a prayer of thanks now and every day because of a Christ who helps you and me to solve the hard problems that are constantly confronting us. Home problems, where there is a poor, sick mother, with her fatherless brood of children looking to her for the comforts of life; homes where the wife is alone in her struggle to maintain her spiritual life, with a kind husband but one far from God. Do not despair, tired heart; for God hears, and if you keep faith with Him your prayers will yet be answered.

I am glad for a Christ who Himself depended upon the help of His Father to strengthen Him over the trying places in life. This very thing appeals to us when we have the hard things to solve, and we are almost ready to cry out in our weakness, "O God, it is too hard for me to solve! The burden is too heavy." Immediately the cry is answered with David's words of cheer, "The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles." Do we believe these words? If we do not, we are not getting the help from God's words that was meant for us. We feel like urging God's children to apply these words to their lives, "O, taste and see that the Lord is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him."

I am so thankful for a Christ who has told us to cast our burdens upon Him, for we can ask Him about all our church problems: deciding on a minister for another year; money to pay for the new church; teachers for certain classes. O, beloveds, God and the blessed Christ know all about these hard problems you are trying to solve alone. Do not allow yourself to do that, but let God solve them for you. You act as His helper.

Listen to the Psalmist again, "Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High: and call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." O, how thankful we should be for this divine help! We should take every opportunity of using it. But we must remember that God requires sacrifice from us, sacrifice of self for Him. Giving our tenth is not sufficient, as long as we know it takes more than our tenth to carry on the Lord's work. We should gladly, willingly, make a sacrifice to that end.

We may not receive even the interest on the money we use for the Lord's work, but some unsaved person may hear the "words of life" and be saved. You may not know who it is, but God knows, and some day bright jewels will shine in your crown of rejoicing. Give, give, with thanksgiving to God; for He has loaned it to you, and we do not want to rob Him.

Christ paid the price of our redemption with His own life. O God, help us all to be truly thankful for Thy Gift to us!

REAL CAUSE FOR REJOICING

By H. H. Hawkins

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord.—Psa. 92:1.

AS THE LAST Thursday in November rolls round again, we are reminded of "Thanksgiving Day". The annual festival of Thanksgiving was first introduced in America in 1621 by the Pilgrims who, a few months before, had settled at Plymouth, Massachusetts. Their first harvest was a failure. A pint of corn was all they had at their "starving time", yet they were cheerful and praised God for all His manifold blessings. This custom prevailed among the early colonies, and later spread among the states. President Lincoln in 1863 issued a proclamation setting aside the last Thursday in November as a national observance, which example has been followed by all succeeding presidents.

The custom of "Thanksgiving", that is preserved and observed by man, is of ancient origin. We first read of the giving of thanks in Leviticus 7:12, in connection with the law of the sacrifice of peace offerings under the Mosaic dispensation of God's laws.

The Psalmist David, in the one hundred third Psalm, realizes his many mercies and benefits, which he recounts in verses one and two: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." In this Psalm we believe that David recognized his weakness and frailty, and his entire indebtedness to Jehovah, and his cause for gratitude.

In the one hundred fifth Psalm he encourages men to give God thanks: "O give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name; make known his deeds among the people. Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works."

In Psalm one hundred seven, verses eight, fifteen, twenty-one and thirty-one, notice how he repeats: "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!"

We who have come to a knowledge of the truth should heed David's invitation to praise and bless Jehovah's name, especially in these "last days" when we see so many turning away with indifference, unmindful of the many things for which they should be thankful.

May we be reminded not only to consider "Thanksgiving" an annual event, but, as Paul says in Ephesians 5:20, "Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

DEAR RESTITUTION HERALD: As Thanksgiving is almost here, I want to say how thankful I am for all of the blessings God has given us in the past year. I cannot express my thanks as many can, but my heavenly Father knows how I feel, above all for the gift of His dear Son, Jesus Christ.

Yours in the faith,

THANKSGIVING

By Lottie E. Young

WE ARE apt to think that Thanksgiving Day originated in Massachusetts in the early days of that colony, but I believe that after the children of Israel entered the promised land and conquered Jericho, under God's guidance, they truly had a real feast of thanksgiving. They praised God as they ate the products grown in the "land which flowed with milk and honey", after their long journey through the wilderness. Jehovah knew the weakness of mankind, though, and so He warns the Israelites in the sixth chapter of Deuteronomy, that after they are comfortably settled in the land, with houses and cisterns which they have not built, vineyards and olive trees which they have not planted: When "thou shalt have eaten, and be full; then BEWARE lest thou forget Jehovah."

The material prosperity of the United States has reached today the highest peak in its history. This should be cause for humblest gratitude rather than for pride and satisfaction. But to the majority of American citizens the "beware" of ancient days applies equally as with the Israelites. God is not taken into account. Thanksgiving used to be a day of rejoicing over bountiful harvests and for the prosperity of the nation during the year which had passed; a day of home-coming, looked forward to for months, when those who had been separated came together to talk over things in a sociable way. But now it is an occasion for a specially good dinner; then perhaps an automobile ride, a seat at a football or base ball game, and a "movie" in the evening, without one thought of real thankfulness for our manifold blessings to the Giver of All.

May every member of the Church of God be in the minority, and while we enjoy our temporal mercies, may we not close Thanksgiving Day without a hymn of praise to Him from whom all blessings flow for His loving-kindness.

A SONG OF THANKSGIVING

"Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation". Psalms. 68:19.

"Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms." Psalms. 95:2.

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name, O, Most High." Psalms. 92:1.

"Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" Psalms. 107:15.

"Who is like unto the Lord our God, who dwelleth on high." Psalms. 113:5.

"Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord." Psalms. 150:6.

WAITING FOR THE SUNRISE

*We are waiting for the sunrise,
For our Bridegroom to appear;
For we know He's surely coming,
And the time is drawing near.
Earth's dark night will soon be over,
Sin and pain forever cease,
And from all earth's cruel bondage
We shall then find sweet release.*

*We are waiting for the sunrise,
Though the shades of night close in,
Rays of sunlight in the valley
Cause our hearts to glow within.
Some may go through life's last sunset
And in death find sweet repose,
But they'll rise first in the morning,
Triumph o'er the King of foes!*

*We are waiting for the sunrise,
And our hearts exultant sing,
Sun of Righteousness arising,
Blessed healing in His wings!
Day of days with light unceasing!
Glorious Sun—'twill ne'er grow dim!
Jesus, Light of all the ages!
We shall shine for aye with Him.*

SHALL WE ACCEPT CHRIST? WHY?

By Frances Byers

IN EZEKIEL 7:1-2 we read, "Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Also, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God unto the land of Israel, An end, the end is come upon the four corners of the land." And in the 10th verse, "Behold the day, behold, it is come; the morning is gone forth; the rod hath blossomed; pride hath budded." Do we realize that God scattered Israel to the four corners of the earth until the day of Judgment when they shall be regathered? We read on in the 7th chapter, where wickedness shall prevail; they shall reject God; horror shall come over them; their hands shall be feeble and their knees be as weak as water. Destruction shall come and they shall seek peace, when there shall be no peace. Do we want to be among those who think they are enjoying themselves by wickedness in this life but who are not really satisfied with their own souls or would we rather be among those who shall ascend in the air to meet Christ when He comes? "So shall we ever be with the Lord."

Rev. 21:3-4 "And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and there shall be no more death, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Without a doubt we would choose the last for we know that there shall be no wickedness, nothing but righteousness in God's kingdom, therefore, the wicked must die. Again we choose to reign with Christ and again we ask, "What must I do to be saved?" Acts 2:38 "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

Mark 16:16, "He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." We are to believe the gospel which Christ told His disciples to preach to every living creature. Ephesians 4:5, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." Galatians 3:27 "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." After we have repented of our sins and taken on Christ by baptism, we shall be forgiven of our sins if we pray for forgiveness, if we remain ever faithful.

Dear reader, think your life over seriously then; decide your future for yourself; no one can do that for you. Ask yourself the question, "Shall I be one of the world and die to live no more or overcome the temptations of this life and reign with Christ forever?" "His yoke is easy, his burden is light." May we pray to reign together in the Kingdom which is to come, not so far away.

Let Everyone Give Thanks unto the Lord

BLESS THE LORD IN ALL PLACES OF HIS DOMINION

EVERY DAY A THANKSGIVING DAY

By Lyman Booth

THANKSGIVING DAY has come again; but why give thanks only one day in the year? Why not sing our grateful songs of praise throughout the year to Him who fills with blessings all our days? Surely one day alone is not enough of prayer and praise His gracious bounty to repay.

If the sun should shine only on Thanksgiving Day, and then in darkness disappear, from whence would come the blessings that continually fall at our feet? Would our homes be as bright and gay on all the other days? Where would be the silver rye or the golden wheat; the purple cluster of the vine; the drooping ears of yellow corn; the fragrance of the new-mown hay? Where would be the plenty that now burdens our festal board?

Now since the Lord is good and true,

*Let sacred hymns from lips of men ascend;
And daily let our thankful praise arise,*

And surround His throne of mercy in the skies.

THE TRUE MEANING OF THE DAY

By Sarah Mamwal

NOVEMBER is the month when our hearts are turned to God in thanks for the bountiful supply which we receive from His great storehouse. But with all this to supply our bodily needs, we are prone to forget the One who said, "I am the bread of life." Thanksgiving is a duty of which gratitude is the chief grace. This obligation of godliness is acknowledged by the universal sentiment of mankind. As a Christian grace, it has many blessings. It consists of gratitude for all the benefits of divine providence, especially for the general and personal gifts of redemption.

The ethical gratitude of Christianity connects every good gift and every perfect gift with the gift of Christ. "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift." Moreover, it is a virtue in Christian economy, and in it alone, which redounds to God for all things. "In every thing give thanks."

The rejoicing we have in the Lord, and the everlasting consolation we possess in Him, makes every possible variety of divine dispensation a token for good. It must be remembered that through the Patriarchal, Jewish, and Christian dispensations, the virtue of the one covenant of grace flowed. Ephesians 1:10: "That in the dispensation of the fulness of times, he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him."

Bremen, Indiana.

A GREAT PRIVILEGE

OUR EDITOR has asked us to write a Thanksgiving letter, so I want to tell every one that I am so glad and thankful for so many things in the past year, I hardly know where to begin. I will begin by saying that I was so thankful to be permitted to attend the General Conference at Oregon. There I met so many whom I had known through our paper, The Herald, for years, but whose faces I had never seen—dear Sr. Woodward, that old faithful soldier of the cross, Sisters Drew, Wilson, Sanford, Young, Underwood, Siple, besides many others, and many of our ministers. Especially was I pleased to meet those whom I had met years ago: Bro. Conner, Bro. Austin, and Bro. Siple. To see them still working hard in the Master's vineyard was an inspiration to press on. Then, too, there was our beloved Bro. Stilson, who is laboring so hard to make our paper what it should be. And then there was our Home for the alone ones at Oregon.

This, and much more, I can say fills my heart with Thanksgiving, for I was so unexpectedly permitted to be there and meet with all those dear people who are also striving for the Prize.

Mrs. A. J. Chaplin,
Arkansas City, Kansas.

"And must I keep giving again and again?"

My selfish and querulous question came.

"Ah, No!" said the Angel, piercing me through,

"Just give till the Master stops giving to you."

THANKS TO THE ONE WHO HELPS

EDITOR RESTITUTION HERALD: I am enclosing a little "thank" offering. It would be difficult for me to express in mere words the gratitude which I have for the Father. His "everlasting arm" has lifted me over the great black walls of persecution and despair many times.

When trials and sorrow overpower us, His great, divinely-inspired Book always contains a message of hope and relief. Once, when all seemed dark and hopeless and I really thought that my troubles were greater than all, that blessed Book gave me this message, "You have never yet worn a crown of thorns." I was indeed ashamed.

I cannot count all of my many blessings, yet the thing that I am most grateful for is the knowledge of things to come. Without that, life would be empty.

And so, let us all stop a moment, relinquish our hold upon things material, and be grateful to a loving God for all His many kindnesses,

LESSON X.—December 4, 1927

Isaiah 3:1—5:30

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 55:6-13

GOLDEN TEXT

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. James 1:27.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Right Living. While the text here used for this subject was given specifically as pertaining to the conduct of the nation of Judah and its capital city Jerusalem, yet it emphasizes the outstanding fact that God attributes to the nation the character of the individuals making up the nation. The manner of life of the king indicates the manner of his rule; the manner of life of the subject indicates the prevailing character of the nation. Therefore, right living by the individual is at the foundation of all of God's requirements looking to God's rewards.

But the church of this dispensation is placed upon an entirely different basis than the kingdom. The kingdom was organized after the carnal man; the church after the new man, the spiritual. Therefore, the Christian who makes up the church must live after the spiritual, not after the carnal. His conduct and behavior must be according to the law of the spiritual.

Like the nation, so the church. Its character is determined by the character of the individuals composing it. Right living is even a greater necessity for the Christian; his conduct must be the overflow of his heart's intent. That heart to be spiritual like unto God who is Spirit. John 4:24, must be governed by the thought of God. Right living is the training of the heart, the intent, to be God-like. Failures are taken care of by God, but intentional disregard of God causes the overthrow of the Christian as it caused the overthrow of the people of the nation.

"An eye for an eye" was right living in the nation; but in the church it is required that the Christian will forgive. "Thou shalt not steal" was sufficient for right living in Israel; but in the church it requires "thou shalt not covet". Right living in the nation was heeded when one refrained from injuring his enemy; but in the church, the spiritual, it requires that one shall love the enemy by good works, kind deeds, helps.—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Religious observance, pure and unde-filed with our God and Father, is this: To be visiting orphans and widows in their tribulation; unspotted to be keeping himself from the world." James 1:27. Roth.

James was writing to the twelve tribes who, in their religious life, laid practically all emphasis on the ceremonies of their worship and the keeping of the law. This was the letter of the law. They omitted the righteous, beneficent life of service which would make their worship pure and undefiled before God. There is the same danger of Christians today doing many things with an outward expression of a deep religious devotion and omitting the spirit of Christ which should animate the life of everyone made alive in Him.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

God's Goodness. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning". James 1:17. From the day in which the Creator placed Adam in the Garden of Eden, and gave him "every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food". Gen. 2:9, mankind has been surrounded by blessings of divine bestowal. Unappreciative of His goodness, our first parents sinned against God and forfeited the rich heritage of His favor. In this, they foreshadowed the conduct of practically all that would come after them.

God's Blessing to Israel. "What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it"? v. 4. Delivered from bondage by the outstretched hand of Jehovah, throughout history Israel experienced the protection and the guidance of the Almighty. From the degradation of slavery, they were lifted to a place of glory and honor among the nations. Encompassed by His mighty power, they had no occasion to fear their enemies or to shrink from pestilence and famine. Yet in spite of all this, where God "looked for justice", He "beheld oppression"; when He sought for righteousness, He heard a cry!

God's Promised Blessing to the Gentiles. "Salvation is come unto the Gentiles".

Romans 11:11. The peculiar favor of Jehovah, once restricted to the house of Israel, is now freely offered to the "Gentiles through Jesus Christ". Gal. 3:14. As Adam was showered with blessings, and then asked to obey; as Israel was delivered from bondage, and afterwards invited to serve God; so the Gentiles are offered the gift of divine favor, together with a call to spiritual service. What will be our response to the Father's gracious invitation? Will His boundless love induce us to live lives of obedience and faith?

Results. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be His God, and he shall be my son". Rev. 21:7. On the other hand, they "that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, . . . shall be punished with everlasting destruction". 2 Thess. 1:8, 9. —G. M. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Tame or Wild Grapes?

Israel had been a favored vineyard, indeed! Selected of God, fenced from all evil, with every care and protection of the Husbandman, planted with the true vine, and Jehovah Himself as a tower of defense, yet only wild grapes were being produced.

Likewise has God chosen us. Given every advantage and kindness, yet how often we bear only wild grapes! Jesus gave the essence of true religion as love of God and of fellow man. But love of God is manifested in service to man, and hence our dealings with others demonstrate the kind of fruit that is being produced. Selfishness, greed and pride are wild grapes, the results of our Adam nature. Mercy, kindness and love are the products of the spirit of God.

Discuss fully the results now and hereafter of both right living and wrong living.—F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Israel, God's vineyard: The desired fruitage. Definition of judgment and righteousness from the viewpoint of Isa. 5:7-17. God's final success with His vineyard. See Isaiah 52. Discern from this also God's large purpose in tending a vineyard during so many centuries,

On Friday last, following the advice of an ear specialist of Dixon, Illinois, Bro. Thayer, of Golden Rule Home, hurried Sr. Thayer to South Bend, Indiana, that the surgeon who performed the mastoid operation for her in August last, could again examine her for what appeared to be a recurrence of the trouble. The Herald is glad to report that a telegram states that the South Bend doctor diagnoses the present trouble as not mastoid. At the time of going to press we are still waiting for further information.

Our Father is humbly petitioned to spare her of any further ordeals like the past and to grant her health and power for service.

MEETINGS AT BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Bro. E. E. Geisler, of Houston, Texas, arrived in Blair, Saturday, November 5, and began meeting on Sunday morning, November 6. An all-day meeting was held, with good attendance at every service. Quite a number of the brethren from a distance were with us.

These meetings continued throughout the week, with fair attendance, and closed on November 13 with another all-day meeting.

We all enjoyed Bro. Geisler's stay among us and hope to have the opportunity of having him with us again at some future time.

Yours in the Master's service,
Laura Bates,
Local Church Secretary.

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

The meetings at Marshall came to a close on Sunday evening, Nov. 13, with a regret that we couldn't continue for another week. The first week the attendance increased each night and a splendid interest was manifested. The second week was a rainy period, making the roads nearly impassible. The latter part of the week was fair and the interest soon revived.

Sunday afternoon two girls of high-school age obeyed the Christ in baptism. They are, Ruby Hendrix and Ina Newman. Several others are seriously considering this all important step, and had not the meeting been divided by inclement weather, we believe they would have put on Christ in baptism. We are very thankful for these two young ladies and pray the Father's richest blessing to abide with them and keep them in the holy way.

These meetings were the most interesting the writer has ever conducted. In Christian hospitality the Salem Church is not excelled. The young people are unusually willing in assisting through the meetings. They are not the back-seat kind. As soon as they enter the building they go to the choir loft and need never to be asked to help with the singing. Keep it up Salem Young Folks! All of the members did their very best to make the meetings a success. To them goes much credit. Bro. Siple was present and spoke two nights. Both sermons were appreciated.

Meetings are now in progress at Ripley. A goodly number were present for the first meeting. Pray for the Father's blessing upon this series.

Clyde Randall.

It is encouraging to get the various reports to the effect that different churches are steadily advancing in the amount of work which they are doing. Different ones are reporting steadily increased attendance in Sunday School and Church service. This is not only encouraging to the workers of the localities where these Churches labor, but it also indicates to the Brethren of other localities what can be done when the Brethren give themselves to the labors of the Lord. Grand Rapids and other places have not taken out patent papers on their method nor on their activity.

Bro. Jas. A. Patrick and others continually make very encouraging mention of the work which Bro. Patrick initiated and is conducting at Bowen, near Caledonia, Mich. Interesting work and progress are reported.

The Dixon, Ill. work continues to advance in interest and effort. It requires time after sowing the seed before one can expect to reap the harvest. It is the carrying of the burden during the intervening time between the sowing and reaping that taxes the strength of the workers. This principle is true in every line of effort and in every community in Church work.

There are some faithful workers in the Blair, Neb. Church. This Church is working under greater disadvantage than are some others. They are seeking diligently to devise some means whereby much greater progress can be made. Those who have visited this field are anticipating encouraging results in this location,

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Brother Editor: Please find enclosed my Thanksgiving offering. It is part of the tenth I promised for the Lord's work, to use as you see fit. You know where it is most needed better than I do. Hope everything is going along all right.

We had a fine attendance at every service on our annual gathering last Sunday; the church being nearly full at all three services.

Brother Clark, of Fontheil died Saturday, 83 years old.

Sister Elsie Moore has been confined to her bed for the past week, but is beginning to improve.

Yours in Christ,
George Rennard.

Dear Brethren: Enclosed please find check for our thank offering. If we stop and think of what we have to be thankful for, it surely would surprise us to see what the Lord has done. All to Him we owe though, I've heard some people say, "All I possess I made myself", not even giving credit to their helpmeet (if they had one) and none whatever to the Lord, who really deserves all the credit, for without His aid we can accomplish nothing. It is easier to tell what we have not to be thankful for, as that can be put down in one word "Nothing".

With Christian love to all in like precious faith,
Enos E. and Carrie Elton.

Brother Austin:
I would like to offer a word of commendation in behalf of your effort to impress on the brethren the importance of the Church of God. Paul says the Church is "the pillar and ground of the truth".

There can be no success in the proclamation of the Gospel unless there is a united effort, and that requires organization and systematic work. While all cannot give money, all can give their voices in support,

EARLIER LIFE-TRUTH EXPONENTS

IN THE FOREWORD by the editor of Words of Life introducing the booklet entitled, "Earlier Life-truth Exponents" by A. J. Mills, we find these words:

"There are many today who have never heard anything of Conditional Immortality or, Life only in Christ and there are many others who set the doctrine down as one of many modern religious conceptions. To these this booklet will come as a surprise, showing that from the very days of the apostles it has been a doctrine, earnestly advocated in all the Christian Centuries, and strenuously upheld even to the loss of life. We trust the pamphlet will serve the double purpose of confirming believers and opening the eyes of many to the serious aspects of the question as a great fundamental divine truth, handed down to us by the Lord Himself and His apostles." Among the prominent men of the earlier centuries is the name of John Milton, greatest of English Sacred poets. The following extracts are taken from his 'Treatise of Christian Doctrine', chapter 13, 'Of the death of the body?' The death of the body is the loss or extinction of life. Here then arises an important question, which, owing to the prejudice of Divines in behalf of their pre-conceived opinions, has usually been dismissed without examination, instead of being treated with the attention it deserves. Is it the whole man, or his body alone, that is deprived of vitality? And as this is a subject which may be discussed without endangering our faith or devotion, whichever side of the controversy we espouse, I shall declare freely what seems to me the true doctrine, as collected from numberless passages of Scripture, without regarding the opinion of those who think that truth is to be sought in the schools of philosophy rather than in the sacred writings.

Inasmuch then as the whole man is uniformly said to consist of body, spirit and soul, I will show that in death the whole man and each component part suffer privation of life." A very large number of Scripture passages were examined, the author showing the absolute necessity of resurrection to eternal life and reward for the righteous at the appearing of Christ. In his chapter on "The Gospel and Christian Liberty", Milton says, "The gospel is the new dispensation of the covenant of grace, far more excellent and perfect than the law, . . . ordained to continue even to the end of the world, containing a promise of Eternal Life to all in all nations who shall believe in Christ when revealed to them, and eternal death to such as shall not believe."

GOD'S OTHER RAVEN

A DEAR white-haired missionary, who has been long, long years in India, tells us this incident of her work there.

She and her native helper, a Bible woman, were out on a tour among the needy ones and, becoming weary, they sat down in a sheltered place to eat their lunch. The missionary had her bit of bread and her tea; the other proceeded to make her chepotie (maybe that isn't spelled right) after the native fashion. It was a good-sized one and looked so appetizing to the hungry worker. But she never ate a crumb of it, for just as she was ready to eat, after bowing her head silently for a moment in thanks, a large crow circled out from a passing overhead flock and swooping down lower and lower, it fastened its claws, one on each side of the chepotie, and rising higher and higher in the air, soared far away before the astonished eyes of the workers.

Farther and farther it went until it was only a dot against the sky, then lost to sight completely. They wondered over this strange occurrence, then went on their way still "pondering in their hearts."

Several days later they saw a thin, gaunt woman with a starved looking babe in her arms and another clinging to her skirts, in the midst of a crowd of natives. She seemed to be telling them something strange, and there was a bewildered look on the listeners' faces.

The missionary drew near and found the woman was telling of how a few days ago as she and her children were on the road to some relatives, they became so famished they could not go farther, so they sank down by the dusty road. She began to pray earnestly to first one heathen god, then to another. But no help came from any of them. At last the thought came: "I will pray to the white missionary's God; maybe He will hear and help me as she says He does her." So she began to voice her prayer to the "unknown God", when, to her great surprise, a crow flew down out of the sky and dropped at her feet a large chepotie. She and the famished children quickly made a meal of it, then in the strength of it went on to the nearest village.

She told her story there, but soon saw their chepoties were not so large and good as the one the crow had brought her. Someone suggested that maybe it had come from someone in the missionary's village, so she passed on with a crowd of followers after her, and there it was that she found what she wanted. The missionary and her Bible woman soon told their side of the story; it so impressed the woman that she cried out: "Teach me to know your God who listens when His children cry in sorrow for bread. I'll pray to none but Him after this." This, of course, the dear missionary was only too glad to do.

The story spread far and wide and many who had held out against the white teacher were compelled to see that hers was indeed a wonder-working God and they must now let their children come to her school to learn about Him.

Doesn't it seem that even yet, especially when our God says, "Prove me now herewith", that He may have some sort of raven to answer our cry, too?

Grateful Hearts from Here and There

COME BEFORE HIS PRESENCE WITH THANKSGIVING

DEAR BRETHREN: Thanksgiving is only a farce with many—yes, the majority. It is a day of general pleasure, football, horse racing, dancing, and not the least trying to see how much one can eat; and all this with seemingly no thought of giving thanks for well-provided tables.

We are thankful for the many good articles published in The Restitution Herald, many of which show in what perilous times we are now living. We are thankful for general good health, plenty to eat and wear. We are thankful we are living in peace with all persons. While we see so very many separations of husbands and wives, we are very thankful we live together in peace and harmony. We are thankful that these times are near an end, and that we have God's help in trying to live as we should in these trying times.

With Christian love to all of like precious Faith,

Enos E. and Carrie Elton,

Tustin, California.

O GIVE THANKS unto the Lord; for he is good; because his mercy endureth for ever." Yes, give thanks unto the Lord for all His benefits: for sunshine and for rain; for life and health; and, in sickness, for the comfort we get from the great and precious promise that if we prove faithful unto the end we will receive a crown of life that fadeth not away.

"O praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people; for his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord."

DEAR ONES of like Precious Faith: As it is nearing Thanksgiving Day I feel I must not forget to send a little offering to help along the good work. God has blessed me in so many ways: one so recently in my visit to Iowa. Sisters Margaret and Ferne Moore made me so welcome. They are doing a good work for the Master in a small way. Sr. Moore has the Berean society at her home on Wednesday evening of each week. I enjoyed these meetings so much and there was quite an interest shown, an increase in number each week. The Sunday School is held at the Starbucks' home in Cedar Falls, every Sunday morning. Bro. Eychaner is an able leader, we got so much out of his teachings. Then the best of all to me was Bro. Williams' two wonderful sermons, and as he finished tears of joy flowed down my cheeks and I thanked my heavenly Father that I had the opportunity to listen to words of comfort given so plainly that a child could have understood and comprehended. God bless the Iowa people in their work and for their loving kindness to me.

Sr. Moore and I entertained the Dorcas Society, of which Sr. Eychaner is president. They will miss her this winter during Bro. and Sr. Eychaner's stay in Florida. The Dorcas members are working hard for the building of a new church. I trust it will not be long before the foundation is started and by next Conference there will be a church built on their beautiful site.

Wishing you all, as a big family, a happy Thanksgiving, and God's blessing in your work for the Master, I am your sister, looking for the coming King,

Sr. Robinson,

Alexandria, Minnesota.

DEAR RESTITUTION HERALD: I feel as if I wanted the readers of The Restitution Herald to know that God has been good to me; that through my dark hours this life would be past living if I didn't know the loving, heavenly Father was over all. My every prayer and hope is that I may so live that when the last trumpet sounds, I'll be among those called.

"From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher than I."

Mary Edith Fike,

DEAR HERALD: I want to say, even if I am old and poor, that I have lots to be thankful for. The dear Father in heaven is surely good to me. I received some tracts from California, which is something to be thankful for; also for The Herald. I am trying to live a useful life and am looking for the coming of Jesus Christ.

Your friend,

Mrs. O. Morse,

Allegan, Michigan.

DEAR BROTHER EDITOR: As another Thanksgiving is almost here, I, too, feel like praising my heavenly Father for all the blessings He surely has and is bestowing upon me every moment of my life. Just let us count our blessings and realize that it is through Him and by Him that we live, move, and have our being. Although I am ailing and old, yet Jesus is so precious to me, caring and aiding and guiding me through all my walks of life. O, that we all may praise Him! Let all nations praise Him for all His benefits! O, that men would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men! Praise ye the Lord!

By George Johnston

THE EMPIRES OF PERSIA AND GREECE (Daniel 11)

AND now will I shew thee the truth. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than they all: and by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia." At the time when these prophecies were given the Babylonian empire had passed away and the Medo-Persian had taken its place. It follows, therefore, that the predictions quoted related to Xerxes, who was the fourth Persian monarch, and whose reign marks the period when the power of the Medo-Persian empire was at its greatest. Xerxes is especially noted in history for his great wealth and for his invasion of Greece, the particular points to which the prophecy refers.

"If you consider this king," says Justin, "you may praise his riches, not the general; of which there was so great abundance in his kingdom that when rivers were dried up by his army, yet his wealth remained unexhausted."

At that time Pythias, a native of Lydia, was supposed to be the wealthiest man living, and he, after entertaining Xerxes and his army, tendered the king the huge sum of two thousand talents of silver, and three million nine hundred ninety-three pieces of gold, towards defraying the cost of the war against Greece. But Xerxes was so rich that he not only refused the offer, but he presented Pythias with seven thousand pieces of gold in order to make up the round sum of four million. As a gold piece equalled five dollars of our money some idea may be formed of the wealth of Xerxes, who had to feed and pay an army estimated at more than five million men. His invasion of Greece, while it marked the period of Persia's greatest glory, ended disastrously, and led, in the course of time, to the destruction of the Medo-Persian empire by those whom he had hoped to conquer.

"And a mighty king shall stand up, and shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will." This mighty king was Alexander the Great (B. C. 336-323) who, in a reign of less than thirteen years, conquered Greece, Persia, and all the countries as far as India, in which he also made some conquests. In the battle of Arbela he completely routed the Persians, whose empire thereupon came to an end.

"And when he shall stand up, his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven; and not to his posterity, nor according to his dominion which he ruled: for his kingdom shall be plucked up, even for others beside those." Immediately after the death of Alexander the various provincial governors began to act as though they were the supreme rulers of the territories committed to their charge. Within a period of twenty years, owing to the incessant warfare, most of these petty rulers had been removed by death, the whole family of Alexander had been murdered, and only five of the original governors remained. These were Cassander, Lysimachus, Seleucus, Ptolemy, and Antigonus, all of whom had been generals in Alexander's armies. The whole of the empire had fallen into the hands of these five men, of whom the first-named four were fairly content with the particular portions over which they ruled. This was not the case, however, with Antigonus, who desired to add the territories adjoining the eastern shores of the Mediterranean Sea to his kingdom, and in consequence was continually at war with the others. Finally the others united their forces against him, and at the battle of Ipsus (B. C. 301) he was defeated and slain. Thereupon the victors divided the empire between them, in which division Cassander was given Macedonia, Greece, and the western lands; Lysimachus received Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern parts; Seleucus had Syria, and the eastern provinces; and Ptolemy retained his original kingdom which consisted of Egypt and the southern countries.

"And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes; and he shall be strong above him, and have dominion: his dominion shall be a great dominion." Between Ptolemy "the king of the south" and Antigonus, "one of his (Alexander's) princes", many fierce battles were waged, for possession of Palestine and the adjacent lands. During the struggle between these two princes the Jews suffered great hardships; thousands of them were carried into Egypt on the occasions when Ptolemy was victorious, while Antigonus treated them with the greatest cruelty.

The object of these prophecies was to set forth the complete destruction of Alexander's empire, though, as has been pointed out before, all its territories were united in later times under the title of "The Eastern Empire".

The predictions from this point to the end of the nineteenth verse are concerned with the fall, one after the other, of the four kingdoms into which Alexander's empire had been divided. The first of these to disappear was the northern, ruled by Lysimachus.

THANKFUL FOR THE HERALD

DEAR Brothers and Sisters in Christ, Greeting: One more year has almost gone, never to return, and we have been asked to write short Thanksgiving letters. I have a great deal to be thankful for, and one is that I get my Herald every week. Though I can't go to hear sermons, I thank every one for the good sermons in our paper.

To those who have lost dear ones, let me say that God has promised some day they shall all come from their graves and live for evermore. May we all be ready for that glad day when all tears shall be wiped away, and we shall meet to part no more. I wish you all a thankful Thanksgiving.

SWEET SLEEP

By Abbie C. Morrow Brown

"Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep."—Young.

*"He guides our feet, He guards our way,
His morning smiles bless all the day,
He spreads the evening veil to keep
The silent hours, and give sweet sleep."*

IN THESE last days of strenuous labor and the bearing of the burdens of those in deep distress, one trick of the enemy is to keep the saints from "balmy sleep".

"The God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God."—2 Cor. 1:3, 4.

So I will give some of the scriptures that have comforted me and others.

"Thou shalt lie down, and thy sleep shall be sweet."—Proverbs 3:24.

"I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me."—Jeremiah 31:26.

The promises are conditional. The more perfectly we obey spiritual law, mental law and physical law, the more perfectly God can fulfil His promises of sweet sleep.

To sleep sweetly and soundly, and to awake refreshed, we must obey:

I. The Peace-Spiritual Laws.

1. "Seek peace."—1 Peter 3:11.
2. "Follow peace."—Hebrews 12:14.
3. "Be at peace."—1 Thessalonians 5:13.
4. "Live in peace."—2 Corinthians 13:11.
5. "Let . . . peace . . . rule,"—Colossians 3:15
6. Hold your "peace".—Mark 14:61.
7. Preach "peace".—Acts 10:36.

Obedience leads to resolution and faith. With the Psalmist we can say,

*"I laid me down and slept;
I awaked: for the Lord sustained me.
I will not be afraid."—Psalm 3:5, 6.*

God's order is, "Desire, pray, believe, receive, have."—Mark 11:24.

A lady, weak, frail and nervous, was about to be left alone for three nights. She and her husband prayed that she might be able to sleep. At dusk each night the neighbor's big watch dog came and curled down on her mat. She slept "in perfect peace". Isaiah 26:3.

II. The Love-Mental Laws.

Whatever is true,
Whatever is honorable,
Whatever is righteous,
Whatever is chaste,
Whatever is lovable,
If there be any virtue,
Anything worthy of praise,
"Think on these things."—Philippians 4:8.

Is there anything more true, more lovable, more worthy of praise than the Word of God? It pleases me to commit to memory perfectly, each morning in my early quiet hour, seven verse from the Sacred Scriptures. And every evening, just before retiring, we have family prayer. Usually I lose consciousness quickly, and sleep refreshingly. If tempted to wakefulness, because of the many requests for prayer, I begin mentally to repeat the first chapter of the book I am committing to memory, and sometimes I do not recall three verses before sleep comes. But if my mind is diverted, I offer a petition and persevere with the texts until sweet sleep comes.

A missionary, in the wilds of Africa, coming to an inn, was told that they could only give him a cot under the trees, but there was danger from beasts and bandits. I do not know that he was familiar with the promise, "I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods."—Ezekiel 34:25. But God fulfilled it to him; for, as he lay down in a terror of fear, this promise was given, "He that keepeth thee will not slumber . . . nor sleep."—Psalm 121:3, 4. He said, "Lord, there is no use in our both keeping awake."

He slept soundly until morning and then saw a black man close beside him, holding a revolver.

III. The Essential Physical Laws.

Pure air. Ezekiel 37:9.

Pleasant exercise. 1 Timothy 4:8.

Proper eating. 1 Corinthians 10:31; 9:27.

Precious saints are laid in early graves for lack of attention to the wise man's words,

"When thou sittest to eat with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee; and put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite."—Proverbs 23:1, 2.

The warning is to "consider diligently" the quantity and the quality of the food before us, and use moderation as to quantity, and wisdom as to quality; and do this as we would if a drawn sword were waiting to smite us.

One of my dearest friends, a godly Bible teacher, had a serious heart trouble. His physician said to him, "Never eat a hearty meal. It will mean sure death."

Soon afterward, for lack of money, he fasted several days. When money came he was in a hotel and ate a hearty dinner. He went to his room and immediately passed away. The sword was there.

Beloved, Let us live becomingly, not in revellings, but put on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for gratifying our earthly cravings. Romans 13:13, 14.

"If the soul is immortal and is the conscious, knowing entity in man and is a part of God—why are some people idiotic, insane etc.?"

"One reason so few enjoy the sweet communion and fellowship of the Holy Spirit, the serenity of a confident hope in God, and an unwavering faith in the Ransom is the unwillingness to mentally exchange the things attractive to the natural, for the things that appeal to the Spiritual. To get the cake one must surrender the penny."

1897—

FROM OPENING ADDRESS AT FIRST ZIONIST CONGRESS

By Theodor HerzlBasle, August 29th, 1897

AS ONE OF THOSE who called this Congress into being, I have been granted the privilege of welcoming you. We want to lay the cornerstone of the edifice which is one day to house the Jewish nation. The homogeneity of our destiny has suffered a long interruption, although the scattered fragments of the Jewish people have everywhere undergone similar ills. In these times, so progressive in most respects, we know ourselves to be surrounded by the old, old hatred.

From times immemorial the world has been misinformed about us. The sentiment of solidarity with which we have been reproached so frequently and so acrimoniously was in process of disintegration at the period when we were attacked by anti-Semitism. And anti-Semitism served to strengthen it anew. We returned home, as it were. For Zionism is a home-coming to the Jewish fold even before it becomes a home-coming to the Jewish land.

We Zionists desire not so much an international league but international discussion. One of the first results of our movement, even now to be perceived in its larger outlines, will be the transformation of the Jewish question into a question of Zion. Congress will concern itself with the spiritual means to be employed for reviving and fostering the national consciousness of the Jews. . . . It was because the practical forerunners of Zionism realized this that they inaugurated agricultural work for the Jews. The result of colonization as it has been carried on hitherto was as satisfactory as its scope permitted. It confirmed the much-disputed fitness of the Jews for agricultural work. But colonization in its present form is not and cannot be the solution of the Jewish question. . . .

On the other hand, you know that to count on ten thousand settlers a year under existing circumstances is nothing short of fantastic. If one thinks that the Jews can steal into the land of their fathers, he is deceiving himself. Nowhere is the coming of Jews so promptly noted as in the historic home of the race. The immigration of Jews signifies an un hoped-for accession of strength for the land which is now so poor. . . .

In some lands the Jewish problem has come to mean calamity for the government. If it sides with the Jews, it is confronted by the ire of the masses; if it sides against the Jews, it may call disagreeable economic consequences down upon its head because of the peculiar influence of the Jews upon the business affairs of the world. Examples of the latter may be met with in Russia. But if the government maintains a neutral attitude the Jews find themselves unprotected by the established regime and rush into the arms of the revolutionaries. Zionism, or self-help for the Jews, points a way out of these numerous and extraordinary difficulties. Zionism is simply a peacemaker. . . . When once a satisfactory agreement is concluded with the various political units involved and a systematic Jewish migration begins, it will last only so long in each country as that country desires to be rid of its Jews. How will the current be stopped? Simply by the gradual cessation of anti-Semitism. It is thus we understand and anticipate the solution of the Jewish problem.

GOD'S PROPHETIC WORD BEING RAPIDLY FULFILLED

THIRTY YEARS AGO an epoch in Jewish history began here," was the introduction of Dr. Weizmann's address, as he opened the fifteenth bi-ennial Zionist Congress August 30th. He briefly pictured Dr. Herzl's vision and then at length summarized the accomplishments, which prove to all the presence of an unseen Omnipotent Hand in the returning movements of Israel.

He stated that "broken pieces of the Jewish people were brought to Palestine that they might gradually merge into an economic and spiritual entity", and then referred to achievements revealing mastery over many and great difficulties and obstructions. He continued, "the Jewish problem is a different one from that which faced Herzl. The world now understands this problem; it can and must find its natural solution." "At the end of these thirty years we stand in the midst of great creative work and a mighty reconstruction. The national home which was spoken of and which was viewed as a fantastic dream, is now being transformed into a historic reality."

The Zionists are deeply cognizant of Israel being God's chosen nation and if present manifest fulfillment of prophecy evidences the truth of God's inspired word, we are rapidly approaching that day when she will recognize Him, who is by God's appointment, to be their true God-given Savior. Then the world will know as never before the greatness of God's truth through His people.

THE FAITH THAT SAVES

By Robert Ashcroft

THE SALVATION REVEALED in the Scriptures is not made known elsewhere. It is to them we are indebted for all reliable information upon the subject. At no stage of the world's mental development have its foremost thinkers managed to hit upon an analogous scheme. To the oracles of God, therefore, do we turn for the one true solution of the problem which meets us at the earliest dawn of reason. In them alone do we read of a solution that meets our deepest needs.

It is therein connected with, and made conditional upon, a certain attitude of the mind which is described by the word "faith". The house of Israel is spoken of in Deut. 32:20, as "children in whom is no faith." This accusation is borne out in the Epistle to the Hebrews, where is a reference to those who fell in the wilderness, of whom it is said, "The word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." In the same Epistle it is broadly stated that "without faith it is impossible to please God." This being the case, it is clearly of the utmost consequence that we be well informed as to the nature of faith—what it rests upon, how it is produced and sustained, and in what it will end.

It is the peculiar province of faith to deal with the future. In this respect it may be said to differ from belief. The latter is concerned with what is past—with the things God has already done upon the earth. He has chosen the nation of Israel, dispersed them among the Gentiles, promised of old to restore them unto their land, and place them under the care of a King and Shepherd of His own. He has raised His Son, Jesus Christ, from the dead in view of this, and has committed to Him the jurisdiction of the whole earth. No erudition is needed to enable one to know and understand the promises of God, which are the foundation of saving faith. He has simply to turn to his English Bible and search them out. There they are, couched in no ambiguous terms; and no one need make them one whit plainer.

What was it on which rested the faith of God's saints in ancient times? Surely there ought to be no great difficulty in answering a simple question like that! "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness . . . They which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham."

In order then to share the blessing of Abraham, we must have his faith, and this we can not have unless we know and believe what was promised to him. If our faith is to be of any advantage to us, must it not rest upon that ancient foundation? Righteousness is to be imputed to all who walk in the steps of his faith. They are required to believe what He believed, to look for the things which were objects of faith and hope to Him.

Then comes the question, what sort of promise did God make to Abraham? Whatever it was, Paul regarded it as lying at the very foundation of the gospel which he preached. It is abundantly manifest that the very gospel itself, which we are required to believe, finds its germ and significance in that which God covenanted to Abraham.

In Rom. 4:13, Paul defines the promise as a guarantee that Abraham should be "the heir of the world". In Gal. 3:18, he says that God gave him the inheritance of the land, which his fleshly seed afterwards possessed under the law, by promise. In Heb. 11:8, we read that he "was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance". Turning to Gen. 13:15, we find that this inheritance of land was on no limited tenure, but on one that should be permanent. "All the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever." Paul shows the "seed" in this case is Christ, Gal. 3:16, and as many as have been baptized in Him.

One can see what such a promise as this involved. Mortal man can inherit nothing forever, only for his natural term of life. Abraham did not even have his inheritance for this limited period, and he quite understood that such was to be the case. He was content that it should be so, in sure trust and confidence that the whole territory would one day be his as perpetual owner.

He must, therefore, have been a believer in the resurrection of the dead. His must have been the conviction that God would bring him back to life, and give him a nature that would last as long as his everlasting inheritance. Deliverance from the power of the grave and a permanent inheritance in the earth, are the things to which we must ever and exclusively point. This is real, Scriptural belief on the Lord Jesus Christ, who has been con-

ELDERS

THE ELDER is to the Church as the parent is to the home. He should in the interest of all, shapen its activity; ennoble, purify, develop the members in Christian growth. In truth, the elder should be the head of the Church. Likewise, the president or leader of any religious order should properly have the qualifications of an elder. He should not preside or direct in any spirit of self-rule or authority, but should preside for the earnest purpose of strengthening and benefiting those for and over whom he is thus made responsible.

EVANGELIZING

THIS IS THE season of the year when many of the Churches contemplate evangelistic meetings. A lesson in advertising was brought very forcibly to the Editor's notice not long ago in a private letter from Dutton, Michigan, in which was stated that someone had assumed the responsibility and announced a certain Sunday meeting in the column of several weekly papers. The result was that a very large attendance for that Church turned out on Sunday morning, different families driving long distances from various directions to attend the meetings. Would it not be well to widely publish the announcement of meetings than to so fully report the results? True, both features should be announced, but if one is neglected, better neglect the report. Advertise, bring together the congregation for the evangelist to speak to. He is more likely to convert people who come to hear, than if he were talking to empty walls. If any Church contemplates an evangelistic meeting, see that every person within the proper radius of the place of the meeting is properly informed about the meetings. Advertise!

DENOMINATIONALISM

WEBSTER'S definition of "denomination" as related to religion, is, "A class, or society of individuals called by the same name; a sect; as, a denomination of Christians". There are a number of people here and there that deplore the idea of denominationalism in Christianity. And yet, though they would like to see but one people of Christians, they feel that they can not conscientiously confirm all that all other professed Christians believe, nor approve of all that others choose as methods of procedure. They are, therefore, constrained to depart from affiliation with others and to establish a modest and simple procedure of their own making. The moment this is done, according to the definition of the dictionaries, a new denomination is added to the already too long list. Even a single, one-locality church, unaffiliated with any other church group, becomes a denomination all of its own the moment it is brought into existence.

More than that: any such established group or groups of Christian people can but be human, man-made, just as truly as are any others that may have been organized after the order that has been directed by the Bible itself.

It is undoubtedly true that there are great differences in the super-numerous denominations existing today. It can but be right and proper that each one should be conscientious in his Christian communion. But he who would create a new Class so as to avoid a man-made organization must needs absent himself from his own newly-made class.

Again, he who in his great burning anxiety to be undenominational goes about the nation drawing one from this and another from that denomination, to remould them all into another named Christian Association—organized, officered, financed, executed—most likely has some other motive in view than merely undenominationalizing himself and others. His organized body is a denomination, equally with those from which he has drawn to build his own.

Altogether too many sects of today can probably trace their excuse for existence more to the fact that some man has craved a following than to any sufficient or competent reason of Scripture necessitating a separate organic denomination.

"THE BREAD WHICH WE BREAK"

"As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."—1 Cor. 11:26.

There seems to be no biblical statement as to the time of day, or of week, or of year that the apostles were to assemble for the breaking of bread. Different ones have chosen different hours and days as more or less preferable for this commemoration. True, the Savior established the memorial in the evening time, but it is quite probable that the early church observed the commemoration largely upon the day time of the first day of the week.

To eat and drink worthily is the one thing emphasized by the Apostle in 1 Corinthians 10 and 11.

THE PREDICTED APOSTASY

A FACTOR TO BE considered in this connection is the widespread and disastrous apostasy, predicted by the apostles, notably the apostle Paul. We are informed in 2 Thess. chapter 2: (a) that the beginnings of this apostasy were already manifest in the days of the apostles (v. 7); (b) that it would precede the day of Christ (vss.) 2, 3); and (c) that its effects would continue until terminated by the appearing of Christ (v.8). It is testified that because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved, therefore God would send them strong delusion that they might believe a lie, that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness (vv. 1-12). The Apostle Peter added to this the information that many would "follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth would be evil spoken of" (2 Peter 2:2). This apostasy would proceed from within by having false teachers among the believers who would bring in "destructive heresies". What the apostles had wrought they would undo, and the entire dispensation would be occupied with the effects of this departure from apostolic teaching. It was said by the Spirit to the church at Ephesus that unless they repented of their departure from the divine standard, their candlestick would be removed out of its place (Rev. 2:5); and this was applicable to the other churches as well. Who knows not of the apostasy that took place in the very cradle of Christianity, so that within a few centuries there was scarcely a trace left in those parts of the doctrine taught by Christ and His apostles? Who was responsible for the appearance of this apostasy, and the corruptions it wrought? Did not faithful teachers, under the guidance of the Spirit, constantly warn against it, and exhort the believers to watchfulness and purity in doctrine as well as practice? Throughout their entire lives they gave the church no rest, but warned incessantly against departure from the living God in any particular. Nor did they content themselves with verbal warnings, which might soon be forgotten: they placed their warnings upon record in accessible form, so that after their decease the believers might have those things always in remembrance (2 Peter 1:12). What could have been done that was not done to keep those matters constantly before the minds of those who were entrusted with the care of the church of God? Note those solemn words of exhortation from the apostle Peter to the elders to feed or shepherd the flock of God, and the minute instructions as to how to go about this (1 Peter 5:1-4). Hear the words of warning addressed by the apostle Paul to the elders or bishops of the church at Ephesus, "I have kept back nothing that was profitable unto you"; and, "Take heed to yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers to feed the church of God, which He hath purchased with the blood of His own," and the warning which should never be forgotten, that after his departure grievous wolves would enter in among them, not sparing the flock. And of their own selves would men arise of perverse minds who would draw away disciples after them (Acts 20:20-31). One would think that such warnings "night and day with tears" could not fail to impress and stimulate the most earnest endeavor to maintain the standard of teaching and conduct established by the apostles; but no sooner had those faithful teachers departed, than their warnings were neglected and forgotten, and the sheep became the prey of ravenous wolves. The predicted apostasy became a fact, the love of the truth in vast numbers grew cold; the way of truth was evil spoken of; the strong delusion came, whose corrupting influence is still at work in the world; and this state of things will continue until it is terminated by the brightness of the Lord's coming.

RECEIVED BY POPE AND ITALIAN KING

KING Victor Emanuel of Italy received Nahum Sokolow, Chairman of the London Zionist Executive, at the Royal palace at San Rossore, on Saturday, October 29. In the interview, the King said that he watched the disintegration of Jewish communal life in the smaller towns of Italy with regret. "I sign very unwillingly orders for the dissolution of the small Kehlillahs in my country," he said. "The dissolution of the small Kehlillahs is due to the migration of the Jewish population from the smaller towns to the cities."

The King praised the war record of Italian Jews, stating that although the Jewish population of the country amounts to only 40,000 there were eleven Jewish generals in the Italian army. The King also spoke favorably of the achievements of Italian Jews in the colonies, like Rhodes and Tripoli.

He expressed his sympathy with the Zionist movement and showed himself conversant with Jewish matters and the situation in Palestine. He recalled distinctly the visit of Theodor Herzl, he said.

Preceding his visit to the King, Mr. Sokolow was received by Pope Pius XI. in an audience which lasted half an hour, states a despatch to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. It was stated that the Pope displayed great interest in the activities of the Zionist Organization in Palestine and expressed his admiration for the revival of the Hebrew language. An assurance was given by the Pontiff that the Vatican will defend the Jews against persecutions.

A report from Rome to the Palestine Arab paper, Falastin, states that the Italian Crown Prince, Umberto, will visit Palestine during the spring.

A RUNAWAY SLAVE

By Lottie E. Young

AMONG THE books of the Bible that of Philemon is the shortest, and is just the story of a slave, Onesimus, who ran away from his master, Philemon, while Paul was a prisoner in Rome. It would seem that Onesimus had stolen something from his owner, that he escaped from him, in some way meeting Paul in Rome. He was converted to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Then, to prove his regret for what he had done, he was ready to go back to Philemon, confess his fault and take whatever punishment might be meted out to him. Masters in those days had absolute power over the lives of their slaves, and the cruelest form of death was visited on those who had run away. So to make this hard task a little easier Paul wrote this letter to Philemon, a convert of Paul's and evidently a man of considerable standing in the city of Colosse.

We are apt to think of the great Apostle to the Gentiles as a profound thinker, a deep reasoner, and one who could and did denounce sin in no uncertain terms, but a study of this personal letter shows tenderness and love as dominant characteristics. First we will note the earnest plea he makes for the poor slave, who must have been lovable as verse ten calls him "my child" and verse thirteen says "whom I would fain have kept with me". Paul must have felt that he had the right to command Philemon to receive Onesimus, seeing how great a debtor he was to the one who had shown him that it is only through the blood of the Savior he can escape the punishment of eternal death. Instead he pleads: "I, Paul, the aged, do beseech you to take back this one who was unprofitable to you, but now through his acceptance of Christ he is profitable both to you and me; he is really your brother in the Lord, even though he may be your slave in the world." Then he generously tells Philemon that if Onesimus has stolen anything from him, it can be charged to his (Paul's) account, and he will pay for it. In this canceling of the debt how like to the Savior, of whom we sing, "Jesus paid it all; all to Him I owe".

Paul believed in the power of human prayer, and in the answer to the same, for whereas he was in prison with little human hope of escape, he writes "prepare me also a lodging for I hope that through your prayers I shall be granted unto you." If Christians of today had the firm belief in the efficacy of prayer those who lived in the days of Paul had, what a different world this would be!

Paul remembered in this letter those men and women with whom he had worked, and how proud Apphia must have been to be termed "our sister", while Archippus' title was "fellow soldier", not in the wars of kings, but as one who had put on "the whole armor of God" and used "the sword of the spirit" valiantly. If Paul in a prison cell, with the shadow of a cruel death hanging over him could write such a loving, cheerful letter to help a friend, should not we take a little more time to let our friends know they are ever in our minds, and so comfort and strengthen those who are afflicted in body, or bereaved of dear ones? Remember Jesus said "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these, ye did it unto me." Some day the excuses "I just hate to write letters", or "I did not have time" will not count. May we each and every one strive to live the following verse:—

*"If any little love of ours
Can make one life the sweeter;
If any little care of ours
Can make one step the fleeter;
If any little help may ease
The burdens of another;
God give us love and care and strength
To help our weary brother."*

A MODERN MIRACLE

Thoughts from the Detroit Free Press

The Dead Sea, which for 5000 years has born the most evil reputation of any spot on the earth's surface, is to be reclaimed at last by modern science, for the good of humanity. On its northern shores, where once stood Sodom and Gomorrah, immense factory laboratories will soon be built, to turn the chemical salts from its pestilential waters into road building material, fertilizers and useful drugs.

Dr. Elsworth Huntington, of Yale University, a few months ago took a boat out on the Dead Sea, which lies twelve thousand feet below the sea level, among the arid mountains and deserts of central Palestine. He nearly paid for that temerity with his life—not because of shipwreck, but because of noxious, feverish exhalations. The only two other men who ever set sail upon it in modern times, Costigan and Molineux, failed to survive the adventure.

Dr. Huntington, however, and other scientists who were content to carry their analyses and explorations near its shores, have estimated that there are more than forty million tons of useful chemicals in the Dead Sea's water, and that by the establishment of laboratories and factories at its northern end—the very spot where the Lord rained down fire and brimstone on Sodom and Gomorrah and where Lot's wife, looking back, was turned into a pillar of salt—this enormous treasure can be reclaimed.

In modern times, until the world war, the Dead Sea together with the whole Jericho valley, was a part of the Ottoman Empire and was also considered part of the personal belongings of the sultan. Various Sultans including Mohammed VI and Abdul Hamid, the Red Sultan, had schemes for using the waters of the river Jordan in gigantic impractical irrigation projects, but nothing ever came of it and the land remained as desolate as it was in the days of Abraham. At the conclusion of the World War, however, the British took over both Palestine and Transjordan, and this territory is gradually being opened up. Motor cars now travel where only camel caravans journeyed before, and Zionist colony farms are springing up on desert edges where even goats and camels starved. Government negotiations are in progress in London for reclamation of the Dead Sea, as well as a part of the general economic reclamation of Palestine.

One of the chief constituents of the Dead Sea water is potash, an important chemical base of fertilizers; but other salts are present too—magnesium compounds used in cements; calcium salts used in road making; bromide used in medicine; and a dozen others. Their extraction will be undertaken by the same evaporation method now successfully used on a smaller scale in America, at Searles Lake, California.

The idea of most people that the Dead Sea is simply an inland lake, somewhat more salty than the Ocean, does not begin to approximate the extraordinary reality. The Dead Sea is literally dead, deader than any desert, mountain craig or cave. No fish of any sort swim in its turgid waters; no shell-fish, worms, or any living creatures inhabit its oozy beds; even the hardy weeds that grow in salt marshes elsewhere, shun the desolation of its shores. No life of any sort, either animal or vegetable, can survive its acrid qualities. The waters of the ocean, which actually taste like brine, as well as being called the briny deep by poets, contain only four and a half per cent of the salts; but the waters of the Dead Sea contain twenty five per cent of the salts, which means that the liquid is one-fourth solid, thicker than any sort of soup. A stick of wood lies almost entirely submerged on the surface, as if the water were the top of the table. With a human being it is not a matter of being able to float; it is impossible to sink. The water of the Dead Sea has a heavy, oily, disagreeable feeling, due to the presence of chloride of calcium; and a most disagreeable taste, caused by the chloride of magnesium. It is chiefly this latter chemical which makes it impossible for any fish to live in it. No land animals will go near it, and even to this day, when surrounding territory is being reclaimed rapidly by the British and Zionist colonists, the only human beings who venture near, unless drawn there as Dr. Huntington was for scientific reasons, are occasional tribes of nomad Bedoins.

But now that modern scientists are making a thorough exploration of this desolate locality, many strange tales and legends brought back by medieval travelers are proving to be partially true. For instance, there was a story told by Josephus that not only was it fatal to venture on the Dead Sea in boats, but that not even birds dared fly over it, because of the noxious and poisonous vapors. Dr. Huntington found that today, after more than two thousand years when Josephus made his observations, there are no birds of any sort above the surface of the Dead Sea; but he suggests that it is not so much due to the vapors as to the fact that there are no fish to attract the birds. As for the poisonous air which broods over the sea and which caused the death of Costigan and Molineux, it seems not to be a poison actually exhaled by chemicals in the black and evil smelling water but rather a miasmatic mist, Scientific explorers have also discovered another extraordinary and significant fact about the Dead Sea, which rationalists, and even some modernists of extremely advanced views, suspect may offer a natural explanation of the fiery destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. They have discovered that at certain seasons of the year thick, oily coatings of highly inflammable bitumen, almost as inflammable as naphtha and a close cousin to petroleum, float close to the shore. They are supposed to come from under-water stratum of bituminous marl. Now Sodom and Gomorrah, reputed the wickedest cities of all antiquity, were known as "the cities of the plain"; and stood side by side on low ground close to the water's edge. The Bible tells how Abraham, shocked at the dreadful wickedness of these cities, prayed to the Lord not to destroy them saying that he could find fifty righteous men perhaps in them. For their sakes the cities might be spared. But the Lord sent angels to investigate and found only one righteous man, Lot. Lot knew that the cities were to be destroyed by fire, and tried to persuade his sons-in law to repent and flee with him; but they mocked him. Lot fled, with his wife and daughters, and as they raced up the mountain side there was a great conflagration and the cities were burned.

Now at last after five thousand years, this desolate spot, certainly cursed by nature and perhaps by divine wrath, is to be transformed by science into a treasure house of material, reclaimed for modern civilization.

NEW PALESTINE CURRENCY INTRODUCED

THE POPULATION of Palestine went through a feverish day of transaction on Tuesday, November 1, when the amount of one million Egyptian pounds was withdrawn from circulation and the Palestine currency substituted. The new currency, the Palestinian pound, was officially introduced on Tuesday. Throughout the day banks were busy handing out the new currency in exchange for the old.

THE INSPIRATION AND THE INTEGRITY OF HOLY SCRIPTURE

THE FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY A PROOF OF DIVINE INSPIRATION

TO THE informed and unbiased reader the fulfillment of prophecy affords an overpowering proof of its inspired character. "Come, see a man who told me all that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" said the woman of Samaria. But here is something far more wonderful. Come, read the Book which told the world all that it ever would do. Is not this the Word of God? God, by the mouth of Isaiah, challenges the idolaters of his day along this very line. "Let them (the idols) bring forth, and shew us what will happen," says He to whom the end is known from the beginning. Isa. 41:22.

Said the Emperor Frederick of Prussia to one of his generals: "Give me—in a word—a reason for your belief that the Bible is the Word of God." "Jews, Your Majesty," was the brief reply.

The foretold and fulfilled history of this race, Israel,—for the Jews are but one-twelfth of this Divinely-selected people—affords such a proof of supernatural foreknowledge that nothing but crass ignorance, or malignant contradiction, could possibly call the same in question. Not only during the Old Testament dispensation, but also during these New Testament times, the history of this people, in both sections of its divided condition, has so agreed with the forecast of Holy Scripture that the man who can only see coincidence instead of correspondence may be dismissed as one who—in the scathing words of Dr. Johnson—"can set an impossible hypothesis against demonstrable certainty, and is not to be reckoned amongst reasonable men."

In the second and seventh chapters of Daniel we have such a telescopic and microscopical foreview of the great world-empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome, in both secular and moral conditions, that even the stubborn mind of the skeptic Gibbon could only get out of difficulty of Divine inspiration by saying that the prophecies were written after the events. The derisive condition to which an unscholarly, and largely malignant, so-called Modernism is reduced, when it places the date of the authorship of Daniel at about 167 B. C., even then leaving the prophecy of the fall of Jerusalem, and the rise of the Mohammedan power as a proof of Divine foreknowledge!

ERROR

BY LYMAN BOOTH

ERROR, LIKE A SORE, is touchy. Our carnal affections are slow, very slow to have the judgment informed. They take away the sense or light of reason, and leave us with only the pride or pretense of reason. For this reason none are so angry as they who are beguiled into an erroneous opinion by some trivial interest; their sore spot must not be touched; it hurts. Conviction of a wrong or reproof of it will beget hatred. He who offers a word of reproof will generally be made to realize the meaning of the saying, "Am I become your enemy because I tell you the truth?" This should not be so. David counted the smiting of the righteous as an "excellent oil".

We may liken faithful reproof and kindly counsel unto a sword anointed with balsam that inflicts a wound and heals it at the same time. Many very unpleasant things must be said to sustain the plain truth. Self-love, the most tender and constant of all feelings, is painfully hurt by even mild censure. How many would dare say in what respect the full application of truth would not be a censure? Who would dare say in what respect the truth, unreservedly expressed by a friend, might not inflict a lasting injury? Hence the disposition to forever regard him as an enemy.

Is it a wise disposition to draw a protective line round every thing that is ours; round all our defects and faults which we may consciously possess, which, in fact, are our closest and most dangerous enemies? The right disposition of mind is that which most earnestly desires the truth, the whole truth in whatever manner it may come. The truth has its intrinsic and eternal value regardless of how it may be presented to us, even when told to us by an avowed enemy, for it has often been said we should be willing to learn, but more especially from a friend, and that friend a Christian.

A self-avowed, self-willed, self-indulgent Christian is nowhere to be found. Self-gratification is a curse rather than a blessing. A Christian must not expect anything of the kind in this life; but must wait till he awakens at the sound of the trumpet. We must bridle our desires and bind them with strong fetters.

Self-denial is our duty, yet it alone is not our hope. It is not our only safety. We may do all in our power to "crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts", but we must not expect to slay those monsters without the aid of Jesus, for if we give Him the glory He will give us the victory.

A little bit of glistening ore dug out of the ground, refined, and stamped with a national insigma—that's Money.

A nine-day racket of tongues, a few hollow flatteries—that's Fame.

A train of favor-seekers, feet kissed by a herd of obsequious grovellers—that's Power.

And that some men should sell their souls for such as these!—Anon.

THEY THAT ARE WHOLE HAVE NO NEED OF THE PHYSICIAN, BUT THEY THAT ARE SICK.—MARK 2:17.

THE words of our Savior quoted above are a beautiful expression of His attitude toward sin and also toward sinners.

* * * *

The fact that He referred to the sinner as being sick, and needing a physician to remove his malady, shows plainly that Jesus did not compromise right with wrong, or look with favor upon sin. It was an enemy, and He was there to fight it.

* * * *

But, being definitely opposed to sin did not cause Him to be unkind, or even unfriendly, to sinners. He could serve them best by being their friend.

* * * *

The doctor does not shun you, or treat you coldly when he finds you have typhoid fever. In fact, he knows he can do more to help cure you if he keeps you cheerful and friendly and courageous. Therefore he is very nice to you, and you learn to like him and to trust him, and are glad to do as he requests.

* * * *

You are the doctor. Your sinner friend is the patient, and his sins constitute the disease. If you treat him coldly because he has sinned, you have lost the opportunity to help him. You do not need to encourage the disease simply because you are nice to the sick man.

* * * *

As Bereans let us be better doctors. Let us remember that Jesus was the perfect example and that He associated with and was kind to sinners that He might help them. Let your influence be pure, but let it reach into the hearts where it is needed.

"LET YOUR LIGHT SO SHINE"

By Verna Himmelright

A CONVERTED Jew has been holding a series of meetings in one of the town churches. In one sermon he told of his early life in Russia, where his people were persecuted, babies killed, and homes destroyed by those who professed to be Christians and who did their evil deeds in the name of Christ, thinking, apparently, it was their religious duty to punish the people of the race who had once rejected our Savior. He asked the question: "Is it any wonder the Jews refuse to accept Christ, when He is depicted as One who allows these things to happen and in whose name these outrages are committed?"

These Russians who did this were misrepresenting Christ; they had not found His true character. Christ does not command to kill, nor does He desire revenge. Matt. 26:52; Luke 23:34. Jesus does not cause suffering. The Christ we serve is not a Christ who seeks revenge; He is a Christ of love and forgiveness.

I wonder if we show every day by our actions the Christ we serve? Our deeds and our words should portray our Master in such a way that people will be drawn to Him instead of being driven from Him. We should guard against doing or saying things which might misrepresent our Master and thus bring reproach to Him.

Current topics of the day are, "What are you giving for Christmas this year?" "Have you started your Christmas shopping yet?" Do you know that our new Children's Bible Story Books will make excellent gifts to little friends of your acquaintances? They will be fine for teachers of Sunday School classes to give to their pupils.

REGARDING THE WORD "DAY"

Genesis 2:17

By R. H. Judd

IN THE issue of "The Restitution Herald" of November fifteenth, appears an article relative to the above subject. The writer, presumably our beloved Editor, in his two closing paragraphs makes reference to Ezek. 36:33, saying, "in the day," evidently includes the whole time required to rebuild the waste places of Israel during the period of the future restoration." Then he adds, "A similar use of the word is undoubtedly (italics, mine) referred to in Gen. 2:17, thus conveying by the word in that place the same general thought as elsewhere."

I am sorry to find myself at variance with the Editor in these remarks. Were his opinion of this passage "undoubtedly" correct there could then be no room for difference, nor can I quite agree with him that all the instances quoted have "the same general thought". To my mind they are divided into two classes easily distinguishable, the six references first mentioned belonging to one class denoting a specific time, the remainder having a wider application, or, as the writer says, "a general thought".

It is to be regretted that my recent article in the issue of October eleventh had a whole sentence of considerable importance omitted. How this came about I do not know, but it will be noticed that the word "question" is in the plural, but only one question appears in the paragraph containing my second reason advanced. The question, in effect, was, If, as suggested by the Editor, "in the day" had reference to an extended period of 1000 years, how could the day in which he ate be distinguished from another as the threat most assuredly implies? It could not for various and obvious reasons.

But to return to our brother's article, quoting the Companion Bible he says, "It is the figure of synecdoche, by which a part is put for the whole or the whole for a part." Without commenting on Dr. Bullinger's remarks just quoted, I might say that not all who had a hand in producing the Companion Bible are of the same opinion regarding Gen. 2:17. He says, "What that part is must be determined by the context in each particular case" (italics mine). This I frankly admit, and it is the context that makes his comment on Ezek. 36:33, correct. The pertinent question then is, What is the context in the case of Genesis 2:17?

Let me quote: "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." There is no generalizing here. There is a definite act and a definite time mentioned in connection with it. "The day in which thou eatest" automatically distinguishes it from every other day, undoubtedly so. Our author's next statement is that the Companion Bible "gives 'when' as the meaning for the Hebrew word." The remark is apt, and applicable, I think, to every instance where the phrase occurs.

"In", "after", and "against" also have their advocates, and the word is said to be translated thirteen different ways. If the reader will carefully examine the first six references given, he will find on reference to the margins that "in the day" is the more literal translation, "when" being used as the better expression of English idiom, and that in each instance they have definite reference to specific occasion.

That Adam did not die in the day in which he ate the fruit is a matter of history, and Scripture records his death many centuries later. Clearly, to my mind, the threat involved penal death—an inflicted death—in contradiction to natural death, for Adam was already mortal by nature. Such a death did not take place, and if the whole incident is carefully reviewed the reasons will be abundantly manifest.

Fuller discussion of this phase of the subject will be found in "The Herald" of 1924, March 11th, April 8th, and June 17th, pages 196, 228 and 314.

The writer is strongly of the opinion that those who suffer what the Scriptures term the "second death", will suffer an inflicted death. There is one significant fact, which as yet I have not seen comment upon, and that is, with all the various suggestions put forward with reference to the phrase "in the day", such as "in", "after", "against", "when", so far as I know, not a single translation has seen fit to in any way alter the words as they stand in the Authorized Version. This would seem to be fairly good inferential evidence that they cannot be improved upon.

Let me close with a few words of kindly remark. Discussions such as these are not harmful, but helpful, if a brotherly spirit is maintained. They draw out thoughts from others as well as ourselves, and incite us to search the Scriptures as nothing else will do. The writer has found them helpful in the past, as doubtless have many others. None of us have all the truth, though we may all have some. The writer has more than once had to change his attitude toward various Bible themes. Let us each one seek to hold ourselves willing (and it is not by any means easy) to be convinced when that conviction comes, as it should always do, from the word of the Living God. Ephesians 4:13 and 14 is surely a helpful message for us each one to consider and reconsider.

LESSON XI.—December 11, 1927

ISAIAH COUNSELS RULERS

Isaiah, Chapters 7, 31, 36, 37

Devotional Reading: Psalm 21:1-7

GOLDEN TEXT

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee. Isaiah 26:3.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Isaiah Counsels Rulers. It would be erroneous to infer that Isaiah's counsels to Hezekiah were applicable to any other ruler of any time. These words of God spoken through the prophet were of particular application to Hezekiah under the peculiar circumstances of the time. The lesson is evidence that God is concerned with the conduct of individuals in the world. It is evident that God gives attention to such individual conduct. He blesses one; He obstructs the other. He strengthens one nation; He weakens another. He gives life and direction to one; He breathes and death envelops the hosts of the other. God's sovereignty is supreme. He exercises it, where needful, at His will.

Rulers. God "removeth kings and setteth up kings; he giveth wisdom unto the wise." Dan. 2:21. See Job 12:18; Psa. 75:6, 7; Jer. 27:5. Not only does Jehovah have to do with the establishment of rulers but also in the kingdom of men, Dan. 4:32. It cannot be true that His counsel to Hezekiah is a counsel to non-God-serving rulers.

The fact that God distributes kingdoms to different kings does not suggest that therefore such kings are executing God's bidding. Nebuchadnezzar wanted to conquer Jerusalem; God granted him permission and thus used him to punish Jerusalem, His own untrue people. The man of sin rejoices in opposition to God; therefore God promises His devastating entrance amidst the professed faithful, for the reason that they "received not the love of the truth". 2 Thess. 2:8, 10, 11. The combined result of all such rulers redounds to the glory of God as per Isa. 37:20.

God's Favors. Kings, like others, enjoy the powers of God's favors only as they seek to walk within paths of God's declared righteousness. Neither individual, nor ruler, nor nation can seek counsel from God for the execution of any self-designed plan or purpose. No nation in war can expect God's favorable assistance further than such favor would build up and execute God's own righteous plan and purpose. The privilege of prayer is in no sense a privilege to petition Jehovah to assist in any and every self-designed, self-centered, and probably unjust scheme. Hezekiah enjoyed much his opportunity of living and ruling in the name of and for Jehovah. He was thus able to secure counsel through Isaiah.

Questions on the Subject. Does God influence the establishment of various kings? Having assured Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 2:37, that He was King of kings, did God then counsel him to war against Jerusalem? Did Nebuchadnezzar execute the desires of his own mind? Do kings with wicked aims obtain righteous counsel from God in the execution of their purposes? Just how could Isaiah's counsel to Hezekiah be applied to rulers having different and adverse ideals?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"A purpose sustained thou wilt guard saying, prosper! prosper!

Because in thee hath he been led to trust." Isaiah 26:3. Roth.

The one who has been led to trust the Father has a living hope in the mercy and grace of God. The blessing arising out of this hope gives one that peace of mind, that peace of conscience, and that peace with our fellow men which the finite mind cannot comprehend.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Value of Prayer. Trust ye in the Lord forever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength". Isaiah 26:4. It is only when we recognize the omnipotence of the heavenly Father, and, at the same time, our own helplessness, that we can kneel before the throne of grace in the spirit of humility shown by the Savior. Forever trusting in the Lord implies that we realize His power to guide and protect us at all times; and, like Hezekiah, we will do nothing until we have "prayed unto the Lord." And we know that against all odds, with God as our Leader, we shall prevail; for in Him is everlasting strength.

Prayer For Those in Authority. "I exhort, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty". 1 Tim. 2:1-2. To those who administer government in any of its forms, from the home to the nation, the "prayer of faith" is a refuge and strength. Many are the perplexities of the present day that need to be carried to the foot of the throne; for the human mind is unable to solve the problems which the complex conditions of modern life have called forth. Let us then, like Hezekiah, carry all matters of moment to the heavenly Father for His guidance and help.—G. M. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: God Rules.

Isaiah, the man of wisdom and servant of God, consistently counseled kings to put their trust in the living God. Though smaller and inferior in a military way to their neighboring nations, yet their identity and independence could be held if they trusted the divine arm instead of the sword. The eventual results and Israel's condition today are dramatic reminders that it does not pay to forget the God who rules.

But Jehovah rules in our homes and in our individual lives just as truly as in national affairs. Happy is the man who in reality learns this lesson. His home will be ruled in accordance with divine principles and his children will grow up to reverence the God of heaven. In his life he will recognize that all things work together for good, and his trust and peace of mind will reach deeply into the lives of others.

Name some evidences that God actually rules in nations, in homes, in lives. —F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Action: Definition. (Manifestation of power); Two sources from which the prompting and control of activity may come; Contrast instinct control, flesh-mindedness, with mind control, spiritual-mindedness, in their results.

Are instincts in themselves wrong, or do the instincts in control lead to wrong? What is wrong? Can the instincts conceive of and appreciate God's purposes? How is mind developed in man? When did God begin the process?

We are very glad to report that Sr. Priscilla Clark, of Fonthill, Ont., who has been very sick with bronchial pneumonia, is slowly improving; also, that Sr. C. B. Elliot, of the same place, has returned home from the hospital much improved.

Srs. Rilla and Anna Drew of the Dixon, Illinois, church, have been ill the past two weeks with bronchitis. The last report was that they were convalescing. We pray for their full restoration to health in the near future. Sr. Anna Drew has been the mainstay of the Illinois Conference for a quarter of a century.

Large and appreciative audiences have been listening to a series of Sunday evening sermons by Bro. Austin in the church at Oregon, Illinois. His subject is "Life", dealing with it in its several phases: "What is Life"; "What is Death"; "How to Obtain Eternal Life"; "The Thief's Request", and kindred topics. His subject for Sunday evening, Dec. 4th, will be, "What Must the Non-Christian Do To Obtain Eternal Life?"

All are cordially invited to attend these services.

Bro. Arthur Johnson, who has been attending the Moody Bible Institute since September, has returned to Oregon. He had not been there many weeks till the authorities of the Institute discovered that his Biblical views were different from those put forth by those Church bodies known as being of the Evangelical Faith. Some little time was consumed in endeavoring to sufficiently harmonize his activities with the policy of the Institute. Finding that this could not be accomplished, it was deemed best to discontinue his studies with them.

Bro. Earl Thayer has returned to Oregon from South Bend, Indiana, having left Sr. Thayer with relatives near Plymouth, Indiana, for a period of rest and further observation by her old family physician. After three hospital doctors had examined her, it was the decision that her ailment was largely that of a nervous breakdown, that the difficulty was not in itself mastoid. Complete rest for four to six weeks, is the prescription. The last report was that she was feeling slightly improved, for which all are glad. She will be glad to hear from all at Rt. 1, care of A. J. Thayer, Plymouth, Indiana, but she can reply only as health permits.

"I wish to thank you for the paper," writes Mrs. Eli Abney, of 1594 S. Eighth St., Noblesville, Ind. She continues, "It gives me so much comfort to read."

This is but one of many similar letters which The Herald office receives from its readers. A number of such letters are received from those receiving The Herald from the Helping Fund.

Sr. Abney further writes that she is in poor health as she approaches her seventy-sixth birthday anniversary on December eighteenth.

WATERLOO and CEDAR FALLS

Our Sunday School is growing slowly, but surely. We had an attendance of 19 Sunday, Nov. 20, the smallest attendance for 4 or 5 Sundays past. Our average attendance has increased from 19 to 21.

We miss Bro. and Sr. Eychaner, two of our very faithful attendants, but we know they are with us in silent prayer.

Mrs. Clara Young, Sec. It might be added that next Sunday, Dec. 4th, marks the beginning of two contests in the Sunday School. The first is an attendance contest in the junior department, which is being taught by Sr. Dorothy Starbuck. The second is a new member contest which is open to the entire Sunday School. These contests are scheduled to last through the last Sunday in May and very suitable prizes are in store for the winners. The Herald is expecting glowing reports from the work in this school.

SWEETWATER, TEXAS

Dear Ones of the Faith: We have only about ten members now who attend regularly, some from a distance occasionally. Several have moved away recently. We meet each Sunday morning at a private home for Sunday School and Communion Service, with a total of 15 to 30 for Sunday School. Last Sunday morning the Junior Class rendered a very much appreciated musical number.

We always have a very interesting sermon each Sunday morning and evening when Bro. Stewart is home to deliver same, also an interesting Bible lesson each Wednesday.

In Christian love,

Trudie B. Stone.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

A two weeks' meeting came to a close here on the night before Thanksgiving. Rolly Chambers, who was one of my friends at Aurora College and now pastor of the Advent Christian Church at Annandale, Minn., did the speaking the first week, and Almus Adams, of Omaha, completed the meeting. The messages of both speakers were enjoyed by all who were able to attend, but very few could attend regularly due to an unusual snow storm.

Plans are now being made to hold a Christmas program, and to have a few surprises for the children in connection.

HENRY AUGUSTUS KRIEDER

Was born in Marshall County, Indiana, on May, 19, 1856, and died at his home near Paynesville, Minnesota, on November 22, 1927. In 1880 he was united in marriage at Rochester, Indiana, to Christina Gerhing. To this union was born one child, Charles, who died at the age of eight years.

Besides his wife he leaves to mourn his loss two sisters, Mrs. Emma Staffer, of Argos, Indiana, and Mrs. Etta Metzger, of Rochester, Indiana. Our prayer for the bereaved is that God might comfort them through His Word with the hope of the resurrection.

Sydney E. Magaw.

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear N. B. I.: I am sending a Thank-giving offering and wish to tell you that I certainly enjoyed the conference at Oregon, and my three days' visit at Golden Rule Home. It was much better than I expected. I have been spreading the news that there is no better place for old people who have no homes, and who are of the household of faith; for they are close to church where they have preaching every Sunday. They have family worship every evening after supper, nice clean beds and plenty to eat. Best of all is the love and Christian fellowship they have towards each other. We should be careful how we judge before we investigate for ourselves. So, brothers and sisters who have not investigated, do not find fault, but be pleased and rejoice that we have a place for the aged and alone ones of the Church of God.

Mrs. H. B. Cramer,
Gresham, Oregon.

Dear Restitution Herald: Enclosed find $10.00 to pay for my subscription to July, 1928. I know it is far past due, but think the amount will pay for it. I hope to be able to do better and do more to help you in the future. We are blessed with a crop this year, the first in three years.

Now isn't that the right spirit? And are we not all glad to have been able to keep The Herald going forward to these appreciative readers during the years of their scarcity? All have been co-workers in this. It is another example of bearing one another's burdens.

Thanks for the appreciation and for the remittance.

It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

By Mrs. Lydia Railsback

IN THE time of Isaiah, God compared His people, Israel, to a vineyard. Do you know what a vineyard is? It is a garden where grapes grow. The grape vines must be planted and cared for, by cultivating and pruning, so that they will grow strong, and bear large bunches of sweet, delicious grapes. Without this care the grapes would be little and sour, perhaps so much so that they would be of no use to the owner of the vineyard.

God called Israel His vineyard and Judah His pleasant vine. God loved Israel and Judah and did much for them to teach them the way they should live and do as He said they should do; but Israel, with all the love and care that God gave them, would not do as He said. They worshiped idols instead of the true God.

If one should plant a vineyard and after giving it good care, the vine would not grow nor bear fruit, the owner no doubt in course of time would quit taking care of it, and perhaps take the fence away so that thorns and weeds would grow up among the vines.

This is just what God did to Israel. After He had loved and cared for them for a long time and they would not do to please Him, He took away His love and care. Had Israel done what God wanted them to do, and lived good, pure lives and worshiped Him instead of idols, God would still have protected and loved them, but they would not; they were naughty, so God punished them for it.

If little boys and girls want God to love them and care for them so that some day they may see Jesus and live with Him, they must study and learn what God has told them and then do the things He wants them to do.

ISAIAH COUNSELS RULERS

By Mrs. Dessie Fox

HEZEKIAH was king of Judah, and a very good king he was. He rid the country of idol worship and "did that which was right in the sight of the Lord." "He trusted in the Lord God of Israel."

During the fourteenth year of Hezekiah's reign, Sennacherib, king of Assyria, invaded and captured the walled cities of Judah. The Assyrian king sent three men with armies against the cities of Judah, and Rabshakeh carried a message to king Hezekiah and other men of the household, saying, "Let not Hezekiah deceive you, for he shall not be able to deliver you. Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the Lord."

After Hezekiah received the message, he rent his clothes and went to the house of the Lord. He sent his servants to Isaiah, the prophet, for advice and comfort. When these servants reached Isaiah, he told them not to be afraid of the words that they had heard from the servants of the king of Assyria.

Isaiah told these men the Assyrian king would not invade their city, but would return to his own land and fall by the sword. Rabshakeh returned, and surely, as had been prophesied, the king of Assyria returned home and later was slain by the hands of his own sons.

Again messengers were sent to Hezekiah, saying to him, "Let not thy God in whom thou trusteth, deceive thee, saying Jerusalem shall not be given into the hands of the king of Assyria."

When Hezekiah read the letter, he went into the house of the Lord and prayed, asking God to save him from the hand of the Assyrian king, "that all kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the Lord, even thou, only." The Lord granted his request.

OUR CONVERSATION

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

WE READ in Second Peter 2:7, of Lot, who was a just man; one who feared God and lived uprightly in His presence. Lot dwelt among a people who carried on so much filthy conversation, it is said, that seeing and hearing this vexed his righteous soul from day to day. The Lord had pity on Lot and delivered him out of it all.

I wondered as I read this statement if there were any professed followers of God among these people who were indulging and finding pleasure in filthy conversation. And I found in reading on that in verses 9 and 10 they are called unjust ones, those who were walking after the flesh in the lust thereof. So if the thought is carried that the unjust are prodigal followers of God, here we find this class, or some of them, located in Sodom at the time of its overthrow.

The thought here presents itself: If righteous Lot is an example of godliness, can one who has been enlightened and purified by obeying the truth in the act of baptism, indulge in the filthy conversation of which these Sodomites were guilty? We are told to shun the very appearance of evil, for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. When our mind dwells upon these things, and we allow them to dominate us, this is sinful, and they which do those things are under condemnation for so doing.

The Apostle Paul says in Phil. 3:12-14, that he did not claim to be perfect, but he says, "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus". Do we forget the things that are behind? No doubt, in Paul's life, before he obeyed the truth, there were many things of which he was ashamed. But we never hear of him repeating many of those sins. He said that he forgot those things which were in the past and pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. He was not proud of his past life, neither did he try to justify himself for any evil thing he may have done. He kept silent on those things, and put his mind on things pure and holy.

So let it be with us who believe that our Savior will return soon. 2 Peter 3:11 says, "What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" Therefore, put off concerning the former conversation the old man. Is it possible that any of those who are supposed to know God are contaminated with the old man? Paul says there were such in his day, and he tells us a little more about it, that they which do those things are corrupt according to the deceitful lust. Eph. 4:29, says, "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth". One definition for "corrupt" in Webster is "To lose purity". It would seem that the Apostle Paul dwelt on this question of corrupt conversation, and the reason given was that if it were indulged in, purity would finally be lost.

Ephesians 5:4, 8, 11, 12, read, "Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, . . . walk as children of light; and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." If we ever expect an entrance into the kingdom of God, here are some of the things that will bar us from it if we allow ourselves to participate in them. To come up to the standard, we must cleanse ourselves from all these things, perfecting a life pleasing in God's sight. The Apostle Paul gives us a list of things to think about, things that are true, that are honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report. If there be any virtue, any praise, think on these things! Then the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your mind and heart through Jesus Christ.

HOPE

By Mrs. Cora Foster

*Oh, could I fly on angel's wing,
And tell the earth of Messiah King,
My heart would sing of wondrous love
And mercy, from the Prince above!*

*To suff'ring people would I fly,
And tell of One who came to die:
To die, that they might live once more,
And sound His praise on Eden's shore.*

*To earth's dark dungeons would I go;
To captives bound in chains of woe;
I'd tell them that the Savior kind
Forgives their sins—gives peace of mind.*

*Dark-hearted scoffers would I tell;
And each misguided soul who fell,
Of One whom Lazarus and Mary loved,
And Martha, too, as her service proved.*

*To all those held in sin's vile clutch,
How I would hasten with love so much!
But first, oh child of God! to thee
I'd cry, "Oh, you must ready be!"*

*Oh, Church! Think of the Lord who gave His life, that you might all be saved;
As the dear Lamb's wife, to be His bride,
And live forever by His side.*

*Then let us rise, put strife to rout,
Gird on His armor, His work be about;
Put self aside, to our Savior bow;
For He gives us rest, evermore and now.*

"Something to please Thee, Father, we would learn;
some little deed to thank Thee with, instead of words;
some little prayer to do instead of say."

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 21

By George Johnston

THE EMPIRES OF PERSIA AND GREECE
(Daniel 11)

AND IN THE END of years they shall join themselves together; for the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make an agreement." The fulfillment of all these prophecies is very fully described in "Rollin's Ancient History" from which the following remarks are taken. "Lysimachus, in order to strengthen himself in his dominions entered into a particular treaty with Ptolemy, king of Egypt, and strengthened the alliance between them by espousing one of his daughters, named Arsinoe; shortly after his son Agathocles married another called Lysandra."

"But she shall not retain the power of the arm; neither shall he stand, nor his arm." "The different interests of these two sisters led them into all sorts of intrigues, to form a powerful party in their favor upon the death of Lysimachus The arrival of Ceraunus, the brother of Philadelphus, (king of Egypt who succeeded his father, Ptolemy Soter) at this court made Arsinoe apprehensive that his interest would strengthen too much the party of Lysandra, who was his sister by the same mother; and that they would accomplish the destruction of herself and her two children at the death of Lysimachus. This calamity she was determined to prevent by sacrificing Agathocles to her suspicions; and she succeeded in her design by representing him to her husband as one who had formed a conspiracy against his life and crown, by which she so much incensed him against his own son that he caused him to be imprisoned and put to death. Lysandra and her children, with her brother Ceraunus and Alexander, another son of Lysimachus, took sanctuary in the court of Seleucus, king of Syria, and prevailed upon him to declare war against Lysimachus. . . . Seleucus was easily induced to undertake this war, for which he was already sufficiently disposed by views of interest. . . . He thought of nothing but marching against Lysimachus. He therefore put himself at the head of a fine army, and advanced into Asia Minor. All the country submitted to him as far as Sardis, which he besieged and took; by means of which he became master of all the treasures of Lysimachus. This last, having passed the Hellespont, in order to check the progress of Seleucus, gave him battle in Phrygia, but was defeated and slain; in consequence of which Seleucus rendered himself master of all his dominions."

"But she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times." The triumph of Seleucus on this occasion was of no long continuance, for when he went seven months after his victory (B. C. 281) to take possession of Macedonia, where he proposed to pass the remainder of his days in the bosom of his native country, he was basely assassinated by Ceraunus, on whom he had conferred innumerable honors and obligations. . . . The friends of Lysimachus, with those who had served under that prince, at first considered Ceraunus as the avenger of his death, and acknowledged him as their king; but his conduct soon caused them to change their sentiments."

Shortly after Ceraunus ascended the throne he persuaded his sister, the widow of Lysimachus, to marry him, in order to strengthen his position. No sooner, however, had she done so when he caused her two sons to be murdered in their mother's arms. Immediately afterwards she was dragged out of the city, with her hair dishevelled and her robes torn, and banished into Samothrace with only two of her Egyptian servants to attend her. A little later Ceraunus himself was slain in a battle fought against the invading Gauls, and the kingdom passed into possession of the Syrian monarch who in the remaining prophecies concerning the Grecian kingdoms is called "the king of the north".

"But out of the branch of her roots shall one stand up in his estate, which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and shall prevail: and shall also carry captives into Egypt their gods, with their princes, and with their precious vessels of silver and gold; and he shall continue more years than the king of the north." Arsinoe, the widow of Lysimachus and of Ceraunus, escaped into Egypt after the death of the latter, where she married again. Her third husband was Ptolemy II of Egypt, who was also her brother. This king had already been married to a daughter of Lysimachus, also called Arsinoe, but whom he had banished to the island of Coptos for conspiring against him. The son of this Arsinoe, however, later became king of Egypt, and it was by him, Ptolemy Euergetes, that the events here foretold were fulfilled. The peculiarity of the sentence "out of a branch of her roots" is explained by the fact that the elder Arsinoe was the widow of Lysimachus the grandfather of Euergetes; also widow of his full uncle, Ceraunus; half-sister of his mother; full sister, and also wife, of his father; besides other relationships which it is unnecessary to define.

"Ptolemy Euergetes no sooner succeeded his father, Ptolemy Philadelphus, in the kingdom than he came with a great army and entered into the provinces of the king of the north, that is, of Seleucus Callinicus, who with his mother Laodice reigned in Syria: and he acted against them and prevailed so far that he took Syria and Cilicia, and the upper parts beyond Euphrates, and almost all Asia.

"And when he had heard that a sedition was raised in Egypt, he plundered the kingdom of Seleucus, and took forty thousand talents of silver, and precious vessels, and images of the gods, two thousand and five hundred; among them those which Cambysses, after he had taken Egypt, had carried into Persia (B. C. 523). And for thus restoring their gods after many years, the Egyptians, who were a nation much addicted to idolatry, complimented him with the title of Euergetes, or benefactor." (Jerome)

From Polybius we learn that Euergetes being greatly incensed at the cruel treatment of his sister, Berenice, marched with an army into Syria, and took the city of Selucia, which was kept for some years afterwards by the garrisons of the kings of Egypt. Thus he "entered into the fortress of the king of the north", and performed all the actions which the prophet had foretold. He also continued more years than the king of the north, for the latter was killed by a fall from his horse long before the death of Euergetes took place.

"But his sons shall be stirred up, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces; and one shall certainly come, and overflow, and pass through; then shall he return, and be stirred up, even to his fortress." The sons of Seleucus were Ceraunus and Antiochus, who was later on surnamed "Magnus" or "The Great". Ceraunus succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, and at once raised a large army in order to recover those portions of the kingdom which were held by the Egyptians, but owing to the want of money, and the disobedience of his soldiers, he had little success. He was murdered by some of his officers after a reign of a few years. The prophet stated that "one shall certainly come, and overflow", and this one was Antiochus the Great, who ascended the throne after murder of his brother. He advanced against the Egyptians, whom he defeated, retook Seleucia, and recovered Syria.

THE BETTER WAY

*It is better to lose with a conscience clean
Than to win with a trick unfair;
It is better to fail and to know you've been,
Whatever the prize was, square
Than to claim the joy of a far-off goal
And the cheers of the standers by,
And to know down deep in your inmost soul
A cheat you must live and die.*

*Who wins by trick may take the prize,
And at first he may think it sweet,
But many a day in the future lies
When he'll wish he had met defeat.
For the man who lost shall be glad at heart
And walk with his head up high,
While his conqueror knows he must play the part
Of a cheat and a living lie.*

*The prize seems fair when the fight is on,
But save it is truly won
You will hate the thing when the crowd is gone,
For it stands for a false deed done.
And it's better you never should reach your goal
Than ever success to buy
At the price of knowing down in your soul
That your glory is all a lie.*

stituted the name of salvation. God has deposited salvation in Him, who by delivering over to the claims of death the nature inherited from Adam, has become free from its dominion, and by His resurrection, has opened the gates of death, and has prepared the way for the fulfillment, in due time of all that was promised to the fathers. To Him has been committed the honor of calling them from the grave and of endowing them with that immortality which will qualify them for their everlasting inheritance in the glorious land. All of this is wrapped up in the covenant made with Abraham.

The possession of a saving faith will work wonders for us even now. It will do for us what it did for Abraham. It reconciled him to his lot as a stranger and pilgrim on the earth. His faith saved him from perpetual fret; his worldly affairs might prosper or they might not. "The fashion of this world passeth away." "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever." Life is lighted up with the glorious hope of the Gospel.

There are issues to faith of a certain character. Its roots stretch far out into the historic past, and entwine themselves around facts which are among the best accredited of all that appertain to the human race. And it will culminate in such blessedness as hath not entered into the heart of the natural man. To be accounted worthy of recognition by Him to whom God has given all power in heaven and in earth; to be called to His side, invited to follow and assist Him in the great work which the Father has given Him to do; to wield authority over the cities of the nations, with unlimited resources of wealth, wisdom, beneficence, and strength at instantaneous command! These are the prominent characteristics of a future that will be crowded with transcendent glory—"an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled that fadeth not away."

GOD'S WAGES

*"Who does God's work will get God's pay,
However long may seem the day.
However weary be the way.
Though powers and princes thunder "Nay",
No human hand God's hand can stay.
Who does God's work will get God's pay.
He does not pay as others pay,
In gold, or land, or raiment gay,
In goods that perish and decay.
But God's high wisdom knows a way;
And that is sure, let come what may.
Who does God's work will get God's pay."*

A STATEMENT BY THE NEW ZIONIST EXECUTIVE

APPEALS TO WORLD JEWRY FOR GENEROUS SUPPORT IN DIFFICULT TASK—WILL INSTITUTE BALANCED BUDGET

THE POLICY of the Zionist Executive elected recently at the Fifteenth Zionist Congress held in Basle the latter part of August is set forth in an official statement issued in London, on October 3rd, by the members of the new Executive. The statement is signed by Chaim Weizmann, Nahum Sokolow, Dr. M. D. Eder, Col. F. H. Kisch, Louis Lipsky, Felix Rosenbluth, Harry Sacher and Henrietta Szold, and reads as follows:

"The new Executive elected by the Fifteenth Congress takes office in difficult circumstances. It is confident, however, that the task imposed upon it by Zionists throughout the world and by the Jewish people can be successfully performed if the Executive has the steady and determined support of all to whom the building up of Jewish Palestine is a vital matter. The task of the new Executive is one of consolidation and extension, and if consolidation must take precedence in time, it is always subject to the condition that consolidation prepares the way and lays the foundations for the extension of Zionist work. The new Executive has assumed as its first obligation that of balancing the budget, introducing such changes and such economies as are necessitated by present financial conditions of the Organization and by the dictates of efficiency. In carrying out this task, the new Executive, which represents no party, no interest and no purpose but the welfare of a Jewish Palestine as a whole, will be governed by no prepossessions, but will consider each problem on its merits and seek to arrive at a solution which will further the growth of the Jewish National Home. The new Executive is free from any bias and therefore confidently expects the generous co-operation of all the elements which make up the Zionist Movement. If decisions made from time to time have to be taken which call for sacrifices, the new Executive is entitled to ask for the counsel, the support and co-operation of all, including those from whom the sacrifice is required. It is in Palestine that the most difficult tasks arise, and Palestine which must, in the first instance, be called upon for self-abnegation. But it is precisely because Palestine will ultimately enjoy the fruits of these labors and of these sacrifices, and because the record of Palestine is one of high courage and selfless devotion to the cause of Zion, that the Executive looks with confidence to Palestine for the same generous measure of advice and assistance as its predecessors have always received in the past. The problems arising out of unemployment are grave and urgent, and although the Executive does not claim to have any ready-made solution, they will, of necessity, occupy a large part of its mind. Special financial efforts are being made and will continue to be made, and nothing will be spared within the limits of financial stability to mitigate the sufferings arising from unemployment and to provide remedies. It goes without saying the spiritual values of the Jewish National Home are as dear to the new Executive as to any of its predecessors, and that no effort will be spared to preserve them inviolate.

"Zionists in the Diaspora have a not less important, though a less difficult, duty to perform than that which falls upon the Jews of Palestine. They especially must undertake the responsibility of providing the means for carrying out the task with which they entrusted the Executive. The financial undertaking upon which they have entered constitutes the minimum of what they must perform. It is manifest that unless that minimum is substantially exceeded the Executive will be gravely hampered in dealing with the most urgent and serious of its duties, that of grappling with unemployment. The Executive is confident that Jews in the Diaspora will rise to the full height of their responsibility. But in order that that shall be done, they must apply themselves to their task forthwith and must continue their efforts without relaxation.

"The Executive, while it invites the co-operation of every element of the Jewish people, will strive towards a like understanding and like co-operation with the administrative authorities in Palestine and outside Palestine who are responsible under the Mandate for the government of the country and for promoting the establishment of the Jewish National Home. The Executive believes that it is assured of such sympathetic support and understanding from His Majesty's Government and the Government of Palestine."

JERUSALEM POLISH CONSUL ON PALESTINE

IN AN INTERVIEW with the correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency in Moscow, the Polish Consul General in Jerusalem, M. Zbyszewski, now on a visit in Moscow, expressed the opinion that the relations between the Jews and the Arabs in Palestine are satisfactory and that single points of friction are of a temporary nature. He further asserted that there is no danger of Communism spreading in Palestine. Even the extreme labor elements of the Jewish population in Palestine stand on the ground of the Jewish National Home idea which has nothing in common with Communism. The work of the Palestine administration is conducted for the welfare of the country and is obviously in correspondence with the Balfour Declaration. The economic crisis is of a temporary nature and does not contain a danger for the future of the country. The Polish Jews in Palestine are a great factor for the expansion of the influence of Polish commerce in industry in the Near East. Direct steamship communication between Poland and Palestine will shortly be established. Zionism is a historic movement and though it is now living through temporary mishaps which are unavoidable the main thing is to continue the work with persistence, he declared.

The God of All Grace

By Lyman Booth

"God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, . . . hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; that in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace."

GRACE means favor, and hence our God is a God of all favors. His hands are very strong and very full and to such we can go for our supplies, confident of receiving of His bounty. Our many weaknesses and our many wants are sufficient reasons why our God should be so abundantly able to minister to us. Our Father is the God of all grace, a fountain overflowing with blessings; one that cannot be drained dry, no, nor not so much as diminished. The work of salvation is all grace from its beginning to its completion. Free grace in its plan was designed in the wise counsel of God and performed in love by His own hand. His Son, sent in the flesh, and His Spirit, sent into the hearts of His chosen to apply Christ's teaching, are the agents He has employed to dispense His blessings.

All grace is in Him, and flows from Him. He is the God of pardoning grace, because He cleanses every stain of His children's transgressions, for His own name's sake. He is also the God of sanctifying grace. All whom He would make up into vessels of glory He refines and purifies. He holds in His hands all the means necessary for doing this mysterious work. He purges them by trials and afflictions, many and devious. His abundant riches are expressed in the title, "The God of all grace." Nothing need be added thereto, for it includes all favors. In it we have the beginning and the end of the work of salvation coupled together; the beginning of His work of grace upon us is the effectual calling; and the end, the entrance into His eternal glory.

"Who hath called us to his eternal glory." Consider what that means to the earnest heart and the fixed look of an heir to His glory! He who has his affections firmly fixed upon such an end has nothing to fear. Who would refuse to suffer awhile, just a few years, either inwardly or outwardly, mentally or physically, to obtain such a glorious result? Who would not say, "The suffering will soon be overpast, then I shall be 'overpaid' in the entry of that glory that shall never end? I know I should never reach that happy goal if I depended upon my own strength alone. Only through God's free grace can I hope to reach it. I build my hope of salvation upon God's promise that He will 'perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle' me."

The voice that called Moses to service spoke from a burning bush, and 'mid the thunders of a dark cloud. The same voice speaks gracious words of life through His Son. I try to walk beside Him. I may fail at times. I may lay wise plans only to have them miscarry. If I commit blunders, He may overrule them for my good. When I think the way seems dark, behold, I find it light. What shall befall me I know not; only this I know, that God would shape me to Himself either by discipline of sorrow or of joy. It is His choice to make me perfect as He is perfect, which is the end of His work of grace. Everything not helpful to my eternal good, He has wisely hid from me.

At every step as I follow Him, I take my reward in the pleasure of His service. I know that the charity that suffereth long and thinketh no evil, will be given a power of love that will last till tongues shall cease, and till that which is perfect is come. The struggles of patience will be given that degree of endurance that smiles on bitter pain; for faith, simple, child-like faith, looks beyond the dark clouds, to the sunlit hills of glory, where no doubts ever cast a shadow, but where the vision will be ever-brightening. Its glories will not be seen "as through a glass darkly," but as face to face. Therefore, let none of us seek our own glory, or boast in our own might; but let us all put our trust in God, live in this age as lonely pilgrims, and wait patiently for Christ; and, "To him, the God of all grace, be glory and might to the ages of ages. Amen."

PARADISE

PARADISE was a much more common word in eastern countries in ancient times than it is with us today. Paradises were built by eastern monarchs much the same as home parks and landscapes are built today, by those having ability.

It is said that in the British Museum are inscriptions, dating as far back as 2500 B. C., describing these paradises. "Assur-nazer-pal, king of Assyria, founded such a paradise and describes how he stocked it." Botanical and zoological specimens were given position in these paradises. They were mostly the kings, the royalties, who indulged in these creations.

How pertinent that the Savior answered the question of the crucified thief, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom," by assuring him that "Thou shalt be with me in paradise." If the Savior was to be King, nothing would be more appropriate than that He should construct a beautiful garden, paradise.

* * * *

"I MADE ME GARDENS AND ORCHARDS"

Ecclesiastes 2:5

IT IS Solomon, the great king of Israel, speaking. The word "gardens", which he here uses, is the word naming the cultivated portions for vegetables, fruits, etc., even as the word is used in this present day. But the word "orchard" is the Hebrew word "pardesin", which is the equivalent of the English word "paradise".

His description of these in the following verses suggests something of the beauty and pleasure that his paradise placed before the eye, and something of the comfort and leisure that was afforded those having access thereto.

* * * *

THE TREE OF LIFE

IN THAT marvelous book of Revelation, a reward is offered to the overcomers of the church at Ephesus; namely, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."—Rev. 2:7. One of the trees, which will be abundant in His paradise, is named. That tree is the same species as was in the garden (paradise) of Eden, to which also Adam and Eve were given access. But as soon as they had transgressed and God's curse was pronounced upon the earth, the tree of life was guarded lest they should eat thereof and live forever.

While John assures this reward, he does not announce any location for paradise, or time for the bestowal of the announced reward.

THE THIRD HEAVEN

PAUL, in Second Corinthians twelve, rather than to boast of his position or his labor, refers to visions or revelations of God. It should be noted that these revelations were afforded him by the Father.

He "knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago . . . caught up to the third heaven." He "knew such a man, . . . how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, . . ." These words have force and beauty when we realize that the word "up", here used, conveys the thought of the word "away", in fact, the Greek word is very properly so translated in different places. This man was caught away into the third heaven, into paradise.

Peter, in his second epistle, 3:5-13, speaks of the heaven and the earth which then were, how that they having been overflowed with water, perished. He then speaks of the heaven and the earth which are now; these would be number two. Of these, he says they are reserved unto fire. Then at verse 13, he declares, "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." Such heaven and earth are assuredly number three and are yet future. They are not due until after the overthrow of the present order; until it is time for the establishment of the new and better order, the order eternal.

Therefore, if the revelation to Paul revealed a man caught away to the third heaven, they revealed one caught away in spirit to a yet future day, a day of righteousness.

"GOD HIMSELF SHALL BE WITH THEM"

THESE words, Rev. 21:1-7, are spoken by John the Revelator and are timed of that day when there shall be a new heaven and a new earth. God will then dwell with men. He dwelt with man once—in the garden of Eden. It was from God that Adam hid himself in the cool of the day. Since that time, God has, for the most part, been hidden from man.

In that day, when God will again dwell with man, no tears, no death, no sorrow, no pain will fall on man. God will remove all such. It is of that day that John writes, Rev. 22:1-7, that the tree of life will bloom once more; its ripened fruits will be suspended every month; its healing leaves will be for the nations. How touchingly the revelator presents the beautiful thought, "there shall be no more curse."

Previous to the curse in Adam's day, the tree of life was afforded. Throughout the long, dark centuries intervening between Adam's sin and the future day, when the curse will be removed, the tree of life is never made accessible to man. It will again be present in the beautiful garden, paradise, of the Lord before His throne, within the royal domain of His Son in that glad day coming.

This is the tree of life in paradise promised to the overcomer of Rev. 2:7. This is the paradise, even the third earth and its heaven, concerning which Paul received his revelation, 2 Cor. 12:1-4. This is the paradise of the kingdom of God's dear Son; the paradise of which He assured the thief, Luke 23:43, "thou shalt be with me."

THOUGHTS ON LIFE AND DEATH

"In fact, no such doctrine is revealed to us." "The wicked are never spoken of as being kept alive, but as forfeiting life."—Archbishop Whately.

"Hope in death can only spring from the principle of Immortality, and this principle has no root save in Christ."—Principal Tulloch.

"For not far short of a quarter of a century now I have lived in the belief that the view which has been designated 'Life in Christ' is the real teaching of Scripture. That view is expressed in the words, taken not metaphorically but in a straightforward manner, 'The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through our Lord Jesus Christ' The more I think of it the more vain appear to me to be all attempts to establish man's immortality on a physical or metaphysical basis."—Professor Sir G. G. Stokes, Bart.

"I wish with the greatest possible emphasis to state that, in my own experience, the reception of this doctrine (Conditional Immortality) has not only enfeebled my belief in the great doctrines of the Evangelical faith, and especially in the doctrines of Incarnation, the Atonement, and Regeneration, but has given to all these doctrines a firmer hold on my intellect, my conscience, and my heart."—R. W. Dale, D.D.

"The advocates of what they call 'Conditional Immortality' have done great service by exposing the baselessness of the popular doctrine of the intrinsic and endless permanence of the human soul. They have also done good service by demanding a reconsideration of the whole matter, and by protesting against a theory long dominant in the Christian pulpit, which as I believe goes far beyond the teaching of Holy Scripture."—Professor J. Agar Beet.

BIBLE TRAINING CLASS

WE ARE glad to say a word to the different ones who are contributing to the support of our Bible Training Class movement. This work is moving along better than it ever has before. Why should it not? The experience of the past is at least worthwhile, and the present opportunity has a trifle better setting of circumstances than has our former work.

It is with pleasure that we announce that some of the students are indicating much better spiritual grasp, and much clearer vision of Christian truth and opportunity than was expected.

In the light of much that is taking place in the world of today, too much cannot be said by way of exhorting the Church of today to devote strong and ample means for the Bible training of our homes. When it is realized that education is stressed and emphasized more and more as the years roll by, and that youth is afforded greatly improved methods and means for attaining education along practically any desired line, it should be realized by Christian enthusiasts that carefully prepared courses should be afforded every youth inquiring for Bible knowledge, and that the youth should be ever more urged to study the ways of God.

It is an earnest hope that the little beginning, now active, may be developed and increased until this Bible Training Class can be a great influence in the nation for true Biblical and Christian development.

IMITATORS

By Lottie E. Young

PAUL'S LETTER to the Ephesian church is regarded by many as the most spiritual of all the writings of this great apostle. The first chapters tell of thanksgiving that some of the inhabitants of the rich and licentious city of Ephesus in Asia, where the worship of Diana, and the practice of magical arts had made it truly "wicked" in all the name means, had taken upon themselves the Name of Jesus. They also enumerate Christian privileges and tell of the mystical union between Christ and His church. Toward the end of the fourth chapter, however, he talks more simply of the daily life of the follower of the Great Example, how that "bitterness, and wrath, and anger", should put away, summing it all up in the first verse of the fifth chapter in the words, "Be ye therefore imitators (R. V.) of God."

We all know the meaning of the word "imitation". Children begin early in life to practice it, first by copying the words of the older ones. Then the little girl is putting on an apron and taking a dust cloth in imitation of mother; while the boy would rather watch father as he handles the saw or plow. Not so many years ago, "copy" books were used in schools, where examples of beautiful penmanship stood at the heads of pages and the scholar had to try to imitate those perfect characters. Perhaps some of you who read this may recall the fact that the first one or two trials you made were pretty good, then, further down the page, you either grew careless or, looking at your own attempts, began to imitate them instead of the "copy" which had been set for you.

Is this not true in our spiritual life also? When we first begin "to run the race" which is set before us, are not our eyes fixed on our Great Example, and we resolve to let others see what a Christian should be? Later on we are apt to think our own lives are a little bit better than the majority of those around us, and we say, "What's the use of trying to measure up to our Divine Pattern?" We are like Peter who, when he kept his eyes fixed on Jesus, could tread the sea, but when he looked at himself and his surroundings, he sank into the tossing water. So, instead of "looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith", we are content with our own actions.

We know we cannot possess the omniscience or omnipresence of our Heavenly Father, but is it not possible for the oldest and the youngest Christian to heed the words, "Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another," and "Walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering", and in this way be "imitators of God"? Let us all remember the warning James gives in the third chapter of his epistle and daily say the prayer of David, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."

LOVE is the outstanding virtue of every true child of God, the basis of every worth-while deed.—C. E. Randall.

THE LETTER AND THE SPIRIT

By Samuel E. Haney

DON'T YOU think the Lord's children are suffering, and being severely tried these days?" The speaker was a Christian in modern circumstances, possessing an enviable knowledge of the Bible, well groomed, dressed in the elite of society, with conventional skirt hovering about knees. The incongruity of the whole affair started the writer to thinking—this article being the outcome. Doubtless the sister really believes her sufferings and trials are the natural result of following Christ's teachings. Johnny Brown was sent out with five dollars to purchase provisions. Seeing a gaudy hat just like Johnny Jones, he gave the money for it, but suffered a severe spanking on his return. Get the simile?

The sister's mistaken premise of cause and effect is unconsciously shared by most Christians, whose sufferings and trials are discreditable in the Lord's sight. All the while these dear deluded souls imagine they are suffering "for righteousness' sake", "for the Lord Jesus' sake", and "for the gospel's sake"; whereas their sufferings and trials are engendered and fostered by the evil one who preys upon the minds of his too credulous and inadvertent victims. Primarily, they suffer for the devil's sake; secondarily, to satisfy the proud, vain cravings of omnivorous self: food for the old Adamic man's sake.

The thing that most worries many enlightened Christians these days is not so much a fear that God will fail to supply their need, as the probability of not having their omnivorous wants supplied. Want, by the way, is motivated by cruel habit's tenacious grip on fallen man. The Holy Spirit is the only power that can master these Gargantua monsters, want and habit, which, if allowed free course, are likely to cause many dear ones to be "left" when He comes for His "overcoming" saints, Rev. 2:7, 26; 3:21; 21:7.

How often do we hear God's children saying, "They are wearing them so and so," and, "Such and such are popular colors," etc.! They are oblivious of the fact that by following the "they" class and the customs of this world, they are doing the things that are most inimical to their spiritual progress that can be conceived of, and that may eventually nullify their heirship with God and His Son, Rom. 8:17.

True, the battle for life, involving all its phases: spiritual, physical, mental, moral, and intellectual—is becoming more arduous and poignant every day. The enchantment of weak flesh keeps apace with the increasing illusions of this sinful world, but the promise is, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Yet, knowing this, many Christians allow themselves to be carried away by things appealing to their pride and vanity. Sooner or later, they will learn that wants beyond actual "need"; habits that are inimical to spiritual growth; aping society: all must be eradicated to "receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away"; and to "escape" the impending trouble "such as never was."

Oh, if Christians were as thorough about religious activities as they are about secular affairs, what sufferings and trials might be averted! Every day we see Christians, with seeming impunity, ignoring objectionable commandments to avoid mortification and vexation—aversions of proud, repellent flesh. Like children learning to read, they skip the hard words. Then, many do not like to be called "peculiar" and old-fashioned, and illogical! In worldly enterprises one gets nowhere unless he concentrates his mind on the matter in hand, and zealously utilizes that knowledge. The same rule applies to Christians striving for life in this sin-cursed world. In trifling with heavenly knowledge, one is trifling with God. How rarely do we meet with Christians who are on good terms, even speaking acquaintance, with God and His Son Jesus Christ!

Often the difference between the letter and the spirit of the Word is not understood. Paul says, "Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the spirit: for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life," 2 Cor. 3:6. God's message is spirit; and is efficacious, "giveth life", when associated with a spirit-begotten soul. But, "the letter killeth", makes one heady, self-important, self-sufficient, alienating man from God, and godliness. A closer walk with God, and a baptism of the Holy Spirit are the deficiencies.

Were Christians to be honest with God and with themselves, and obey His Word, as Paul and Isaiah express it, by setting their "affections on things above, not on things on the earth" (idolizing); and keeping their minds "stayed" on God, Col. 3:2-3; Isa. 26:3, they might have "perfect peace". They might be able to discriminate between suffering for the Devil's and the old man's sake, and suffering for righteousness, the Lord, and the Gospel's sake.

The acid test for creditable suffering: "Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you." "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." "Woe unto you, when all men (the world) shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets."—1 John 3:13; John 15:18, 19; Luke 6:26. If the world gives us a "ZO" rating, our recording angel is likely to rate us "A-1". So, Peter warns us, "Neither be troubled."

Note Paul and Peter: "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake." "Living godly", and "believing on him" imply obedience to ALL His teachings, both the sweet and the bitter. Peter says, "If ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled . . . for it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing." Paul suffered the loss of all things that he might win Christ. He was "troubled on every side, yet not distressed; . . . perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed."—2 Cor. 4:8-9. Can we accomplish such feats? Yes, if from our hearts, we can say with Paul, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together. For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."—Rom. 8:16-18.

POVERTY AND CRIME

GRANTING that Jehovah understood best how to rule and build a nation for its own good, it is a crime for any nation to so frame its laws and conduct its national affairs, as to encourage such mastery of one citizen over another as to cause the poverty and utter need of that other.

Hunger, accompanied by inability to be satisfied, craving for the higher and nobler ideals of life with inability to rise out of the lowest and filthiest of surroundings; these fruits of poverty always have been used as excuses for crime and immorality. God, in His law, has provided against this.

ATHEISM

IT SHOULD be noted in the Reader's personal column of "Who's Who," that Mr. Haldeman-Julius, who has been so much heralded throughout the United States in the past two weeks, because that he has publicly approved of the companionate marriage by his daughter, is reported to be an atheist of long standing. He has no reverence for the Word of the eternal God, whose Word has proven even in the very matters concerning which he now upholds, that God knew best and is, in spite of all argument, the omniscient One, who only is able to direct man unto greater good.

The looseness of the marriage vow, which this reported atheist upholds, has been cause of some of the greatest evil and injury to the human race. His statement that "there is no disgrace in a divorce" must be understood as true only from the standpoint of him who, in his own little vision, thus discerns no disgrace to the great world at large or to the nobler element of the race.

To those who seek growth and advancement toward the ideal of Jehovah, there is nought but greater or less disgrace resultant from every divorce, excepting that divorce be for the one only cause permitted in Scripture. In this case the disgrace precedes the divorce and the divorce seems by God to be granted in order to discontinue such disgrace.

THE CHURCH OF GOD'S CALLING

By N. H. Geiselman

IT SEEMS throughout the world, people are becoming more and more discouraged, and justly, too, for they are more and more distressed. The cost of living according to statistics, has advanced 78 per cent and crime, 400 per cent since 1910. These conditions prevail despite efforts on the part of governments to adjust and control the situation.

During the world war the people of this country were stimulated with the idea of winning the war, thus putting down autocracy. The hope of the common people was engendered with the thought of establishing a democracy such as would make the world a safe place to live in, and thus establish upon principles of peace and good will governments whose differences might be settled by arbitration, rather than autocratic power. Hence, the "League of Nations as a peace pact", and as an aftermath of the war.

Let this be as it may, it acted as a great stimulant and led up to great sacrifice on the part of the people; so much so, that many offered up the supreme gift, namely, their lives. And what is the result? Many so-called leaders have felt the necessity of riveting chains, so to speak, upon the people, to arrest, if possible, the spirit of discontent forced upon them by the burdens of taxation and high living, of which we have made mention. Governments cannot patron wars without disaster, for bonds issued for which they are security, must be paid and that with interest. The poor and industrial classes feel the chilly hands of uncertainty in everything, and the hardships forced upon them day by day are fostering more and more the spirit of unrest.

Now, since wars have failed and political economy is so weak, we see an inter-church movement taking upon itself the salvation of the world from ruin and disaster. Some four or five years ago the Editor of Manufacturer's Record mapped out a program of prayer, mentioning specifically each article of importance to be observed with contrition and faith as in former days, when people were more sincere in their devotions. In his judgment it would bring the world back to a condition where peace and good will would be supreme. That the church is the chosen factor, under divine leadership, to do the work so much needed by the world, we verily believe and to this end do we hope and pray. But we would like to ask, "Who is the church, and which one of the denominations is to be the chosen vessel to lead the world out of Egypt?"

Jesus, while on earth, founded a church and declared that the bars of death should not prevail against it. It was said of that church in Acts 4:32 that "the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul." We believe that that church exists to-day, as a divine institution, although it may be in a dismembered condition, so to speak, nevertheless God-ordained and recognized on the heavenly roll, its sacred mission will be fulfilled in the deliverance of the world from the thralldom of sin and death in due time.

The development of the church is stage-matic, as is indicated in Mark 4:28: first the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear. So when the harvest is come, He putteth in the sickle and reapeth His firstfruits, which will constitute His royal priesthood after the order of Melchizedek; which priestly office is an office of gifts and blessings. Jesus says in John 6:44, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day." 1 John 3:2 reads, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." (Embryonic, though we be), "and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." Thus when the church is exalted to the divine nature and endowed with divine power, we will soon understand who the church is, and which one of the churches will be the chosen factor to lead the world out of Egyptian darkness.

Who is the church? Let us see if we can find any Scripture for the answer. In Eph. 1:22, 23, God says He "hath put all things under his (Christ's) feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body". In Eph. 5, Paul refers us to the sacred ties of matrimony, to show the relation of the church to its espoused Head, describing the intimate relation that should exist between them—"members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones." And "for this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church."

Sectarianism has nothing whatsoever to do with the founding, naming, or organization of this church. Jesus, the Christ, founded it upon His own character and His divine origin and told Peter, that upon this rock, namely, that He is the Christ, would He build His church, and the gates of hell would not prevail against it. As to the name, God saw fit to call it after His own name, as I will direct you to read: Acts 20:28; 1 Cor. 1:2; 10:32; 11:22; 15:9; Gal. 1:13; 1 Tim. 3:5.

In the divine economy the church in this age is after the order of the Aaronic priesthood, which priestly office was an office of sacrifice and offerings. The church as footstep followers of our Lord, must finish their course and keep the faith, as did Jesus, and as did Paul, and all the faithful of God. As Jesus in the resurrection changed His nature to that of a full and completely divine one, and entered upon His Melchizedek order of priesthood, so the church will be called to that high and lofty position in the kingdom as associate rulers with Him.

When we contemplate the promise of God to the church, we can only exclaim as did Paul, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Our hearts cry out from the very depths of our beings and say, "Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly! Take up thine unlimited scepter, which the Almighty Father hath bequeathed Thee, for all nature sighs to be released!"

DANIEL

By Bernice Sealine

WHEN Nebuchadnezzar was king of Babylon and had captured many countries and people, he asked Ashpenaz, the master of the eunuchs, to send certain children of Israel of the king's seed, princes, in whom were no blemishes, but well-favored, skillful in wisdom and cunning in knowledge. Those who had ability he stood before the king's palace, to teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans. Among these were the children of Judah: Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. Daniel was named Belteshazzar, Hananiah was named Shadrach, Mishael, Meshach, and Azariah, Abednego. Daniel was the most favored of this group. God gave them great wisdom, knowledge and skill.

In the second year of his reign, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams and called some of his men in and offered great riches for the meaning of these dreams. He dreamed a dream which troubled him because he couldn't remember what he had dreamed. He called in the magicians, astrologers, sorcerers and the Chaldeans, and told them to tell him what he had dreamed. They couldn't do this and Nebuchadnezzar got angry and ordered all the wise men to be destroyed.

They sought for Daniel and his men to slay them, but the secret of the dream was revealed to Daniel, and Daniel praised God. He went to King Nebuchadnezzar and told him that God had told him the dream.

This is the interpretation which Daniel gave: "Thou, O king, art a king of kings. . . . Thou art this head of gold. And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise. And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes part of potters' clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; . . . so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken."

The king fell on his face to Daniel and ordered great favors unto him. He decided that Daniel's God was the right God and that every one should worship Him.

Then King Nebuchadnezzar made an image of gold and called all the great men of his rule to the dedication of the image. He commanded them to fall on their faces when they had heard the music, and anyone who didn't fall down and worship it would be thrown into a fiery furnace.

Everybody but Daniel's three companions fell down. Daniel was not there. These three men: Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, were brought before the king. He said he would give them another chance, but if they didn't fall down before the image this time, the furnace would be made seven times hotter. They didn't do it and they were bound and thrown into the fire. The fire was so hot that it killed the men that had bound them.

When they looked into the furnace they saw four men, one like the Son of God, unhurt by the fire.

Nebuchadnezzar then went to the furnace and called to them. He said, "Ye servants of the most high God, come forth." They came forth from the midst of the fire, which had had no power upon them, nor did they smell of fire. Then Nebuchadnezzar worshiped their God,

A PURIFYING HOPE

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he (Christ) is pure." 1 John 3:1-4.

It seems to me that as a church we have stressed our teaching too much along doctrinal lines, to the detriment of the church life and have not said enough about living the Christ-life. Knowledge alone will never admit a single person into the kingdom of God. It is one step, just one, and like any other of the requirements of the Gospel. If we stop after we have obtained a knowledge of the truth, it will never profit us anything. I am fully aware that it takes a knowledge of God's will concerning us, as revealed in His Word, and a faith that reaches out and embraces these promises. But after we have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto us, and have in so doing become the servants of righteousness, being made free from sin, purified, what then is required of us? 1 John 3:3 says, "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he (Christ) is pure."

So we find the purifying process should begin at baptism, and keep on until the coming of the Lord, or until we lay our armor down. Do we ever seriously think about just what it means to live a pure life? We are over and over admonished to come out from the world and be a separate people, and Christ will receive us when He comes. We are told to love not the world, neither the things of the world; for if we love the world the love of the Father is not in us. 1 Peter 1:13-15 says, "Wherefore, gird up the loins of your mind, . . . not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts: . . . but as he is holy . . . so be ye holy, in all manner of conversation."

Be not conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of our minds, to prove what is that good and acceptable will of God. We say that straight is the gate and narrow the way, yet we follow many crooked paths. But the command is to make straight paths for your feet. Why? Lest the lame be turned out of the way. Each one has a personal influence. The world is looking at our life. If we are reflecting Christ, they see it and know it. Often you will hear this expression made, "There is a good Christian man, or woman; their life and conduct is upright." Or, on the contrary, "I would not give much for that man's or woman's religion." Why?

There are just two paths—one a straight path and the other, a crooked one: one leads the lame aright, and the other leads out of the way.

The hope we have, which is sure and steadfast and reaches to that within the veil, is so pure of itself and so holy, that it will take only those who are tested and tried here, those who have gone through the refining process and have come out pure gold, to reach the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus.

Hence we are told of the great love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Then the Apostle John says, "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he (Christ) is pure." Are we purifying ourselves in thought, in words, in actions, that we may receive the prize, and be accounted worthy to rule and reign with Christ when He comes to execute justice, mercy and judgment in the earth?

Let us make ourselves fit for the Master's use.

YOUTH—

- Is a character forming period;
- Is the time to remember the Creator;
- Can be trained in righteousness;
- Has purity, and needs only development;
- Should be led and not driven;
- Must be recognized in Church effort.

BE NOT ASHAMED

*Be not ashamed of Christ your Lord,
In word, in deed, or thought;
But show to all the world around
The doctrines which He taught.*

*Be not ashamed, because your Lord
Is not ashamed of you;
He counts as brethren all who love
And keep His precepts, too.*

*Be not ashamed of Him in word,
But boldly speak His name;
And never give the world a cause
To couple it with shame.*

*Be not ashamed of Him in deed,
But firmly do His will;
Care not for what His foes may say,
Keep His commandments still.*

*Be not ashamed of Him in thought,
But treasure in your heart
The thought of all His love to you,
And bravely do your part.*

*Be not ashamed of Christ your Lord,
Be not ashamed at all;
God calls Himself the God of those Who on His great name call.*

LESSON XII.—December 18, 1927

REVIEW: THE EARLY PROPHETS OF ISRAEL

Devotional Reading: Psalm 67

GOLDEN TEXT

God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. Heb. 1:1, 2.

INTRODUCTION

Covering a period of practically two hundred years, the quarter's studies bring permanently to view the repeated and varied means which God used to awaken both Israel and Judah to a sense of their constant and increasing falling-away from their covenant with God. They reveal manifold evidences that God is strong to bless the right and to destroy the wrong in whatever field these may be found. They reveal that God requires the individual to choose his course. So also He requires the nation. See Ex. 19:5, "If ye will". They further reveal God's constant love even in the face of the most persistent and revolting blasphemy and repudiation of Himself. Again, they reveal that God never allows His love to ignore and sanction the unrighteousness of those whom He loves.

While the kings are God's anointed servants to execute the will of God in the nation, the prophets are His anointed ones to speak the word of God. Both done in truth, not in falsehood, reveal God in word and in action.

SUMMARY

Lesson 1. Elijah on Mount Carmel. God's lone prophet faced the 450 prophets of Baal. Elijah stood for and represented God; the 450 stood for Baal. Elijah counted not the human opposers; he rested and trusted all unto Jehovah. Samaria, Tyre, idolatry, and the multitude were vanquished by God through the lone and single man Elijah.

Lesson 2. Elijah Hears God's Voice. After having personally experienced God's greatness and certainty, Elijah later permitted the tempests and waves of human influence to momentarily shatter his faith. God sustained him, again revealed Himself; Elijah's faith returned; his active, faithful service was renewed.

Lesson 3. Elijah in Naboth's Vineyard. Wicked Jezebel, a most ferocious opposer of God and Elijah, slew Naboth in order to secure his pitiful inheritance with which to increase the king's lustful pleasure. Elijah repudiated the queen and king and pronounced God's righteous death warrant for the unrighteousness resultant from the night of their power.

Lesson 4. The Call of the Prophet. The prophet is the spokesman of Jehovah. He is the most important messenger from on high. Through him God reveals His secrets, conveys His instructions, pronounces His warnings, foretells His plans. Without God's spokesman man would be ignorant of God, of His ways, His purposes. With that spokesman finite man is brought into mental concept of the things and ways of God. Because of this, man has opportunity to intelligently choose to follow the Creator and His methods and is made responsible for his choice.

Lesson 5. Amos Denounces Sin. Amos, loved of God, was His spokesman sent to Israel. The fact of God's love did not excuse the vileness of Israel's sin. Amos, for God, recounted to Israel their numerous transgressions; he revealed the natural end of those wrongs, and urgently warned Israel to heartily renounce their sins and lay firm and hearty hold upon the ways of God. Likewise, inebriety is a choice morsel which sin craves to dull its sense of self-condemnation and to open the flood-gate of lust generally.

Lesson 6. Amos Pleads for Justice. Revealing plainly to Israel their own fallen condition in sin, Amos pleaded for God that Israel should recognize their utter injustice toward self and toward God and would in their own interest forsake the cravings of their sinful lusts and recognize and support justice toward their Maker, themselves, and their children.

Lesson 7. Hosea Preaches God's Love. Hosea, too, was God's spokesman. Citing the history of the past, he forcibly reasoned of the great love wherewith God had brought up, led, protected, and enriched Israel. The ardor of this love was not cooled by the repeated and indifferent slights and renunciations of Israel. After frequent enslavement, resulting from their sins, God's love had loosened their bondage, renewed their provisions, and reinstated their strength. It could not be said that God's righteous judgments were motivated by insufficient love.

Lesson 8. Micah Champions the Oppressed. Through Micah, another one called to serve as God's spokesman, Jehovah pleaded with His failing people whom He chose. Micah, rather, Jehovah, championed the people even under their oppression. He had repeatedly thrown into their faces the fact that the cause of their wickednesses, failures, poverties, was in their own hands. Not only had they violated God's truths, they had renounced His instructions, had loved and done obeisance to gods which were no gods. On top of all this Jehovah was their champion helper, their only salvation. Micah presented their cause and opportunities to them anew.

Lesson 9. Isaiah Teaches True Worship. By the mouth and visage of still another spokesman God revealed to Israel their status and their own inexcusable cause therefor. What God had provided as atonement for their misdeeds done in weakness they had used as excuse for constant and purposeful misconduct. Isaiah unfolded to them that burnt offerings, sacrifices, and such were not even desired by Jehovah; they were only provided for Israel's use unto redemption from those sins resulting in spite of their honest devotion to God. True worship could only result from the out-pourings of the honest heart.

The same is true in Christian worship. Formality can hardly be avoided; but it should always be a means for manifesting the deeper worship from the heart. It is no substitute by which the worshipper can procure remission of sin and salvation.

Lesson 10. Isaiah Teaches Right Living. Like the vineyard well planted and well tended by the faithful husbandman, so Israel well nurtured and well provided by Jehovah, should in all righteousness and justice return unto God, the Giver and Provider, equitable, proper, and just fruitage. Right living in Israel's day consisted in proper and right service unto Him who in His omniscient way comprehended and provided for the highest needs of Israel. The same is true of the church. It is God's creation, God's tending, and God rightly expects and requires just returns. Right living for the Christian is that which brings the Christian unto the largest fruitage and harvest of that kind required by Jehovah, the Maker and Tender.

Lesson 11. Isaiah Counsels Rulers. Hezekiah, king of Judah, was conspicuous in that he endeavored to return to Jehovah proper and just development of the nation over whom God placed him. The people were God's; the rule must be for God. Proper rule would be with reference to God. Isaiah responds to Hezekiah's request for counsel and direction under the emergency brought about by the invasion of the Assyrians.

Questions. Name a leading and conspicuous truth in each lesson. Do the centuries reveal justice of God in building, guiding, and tending Israel? Could Israel have justly required more of Jehovah? Why did Jehovah permit Israel the privilege to reject Him and fail to enjoy His rewards? Name the outstanding facts in the characters of the several prophets and kings of the lessons of the past six months.

Members of the Oregon Church are always in search of new ideas and so some of them go visiting occasionally. Two or three of them motored to Dixon Wednesday evening last and attended the Bible Study there. They found a real, live class in the Dixon Church with choir practice following. Two or three attended the Rockford Berean Class on Friday night and here, too, they found a wide-awake group of young folks, searching the Scriptures and exchanging thoughts. When it doesn't conflict with our own home church duties, let's visit neighboring groups and encourage them and receive enthusiasm ourselves.

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER

By Mary Carolyn Davis

We thank You, God, for all the stings
This year brought, and the power to bear them,

Our crosses changed to lighter things,
Since loved ones help to share them.

We thank You for the strength we won,
From frustrate plans and hopes denied;
And longed-for, prideful deeds undone,
And dreams unsatisfied.

For these have taught us sympathy,
Lost fights and goals we did not win.
The stricken by our side we see,
At last to be our kin.

Not for the bounteous gifts alone,
Not for the pleasures and the sweet,
Not for these only, God, your own
Kneel grateful at your feet;

But Oh, our thanks we humbly voice,
To You this blessed year again;
And in your wisdom we rejoice,
Who knew we needed pain.

A SILENT WITNESS

A fine illustration of the worth of Christian character was seen in a teacher of one of the Government schools of Japan. His contract was that he was not to teach Christianity—not to proselyte—and, so far as words were concerned, he kept it faithfully. But all the while his life was so blameless and beautiful that it did the work without words. As evidence of this, forty of the students, without his knowledge, met in a grove secretly, and signed a covenant to forsake idolatry—for the religion of their teacher. And some of them are now preaching the Gospel in their native land.—Sel. by Madeline Gardiner.

MOTHER'S REWARD

OH THE satisfaction of Hannah in seeing Samuel serving at the altar! Of Mother Eunice in seeing her Timothy learned in the Scriptures! That is the mother's recompense—to see her children growing up useful in the world; pitying the ignorant, earnest and helpful in every sphere. It throws a new light on the old familiar Bible whenever she reads it, and is an ointment to soothe the aching limbs of decrepitude and light up the closing hours of life's day with the glories of an autumnal sunset.—Talmage.

The one who denies himself, and takes up his cross daily, and follows Christ, can appreciate the sad plight of Lot, and why Peter wrote the following: "But when righteous Lot was sore distressed by the gross misconduct of immoral men He rescued him. (For their lawless deeds were torture, day after day, to the pure soul of that righteous man—all that he saw and heard whilst living in their midst.) Since all this is so, the Lord knows how to rescue godly men from temptation, and on the other hand how to keep the unrighteous under punishment in readiness for the Day of Judgment, and especially those who are abandoned to sensuality—craving, as they do, for polluted things, and scorning control."—2 Peter 2:7-10, Weymouth.

REVIEW: EARLY PROPHETS OF ISRAEL

THE stories of these three months have not been at all happy, pleasant stories. They have shown God's goodness to an ungrateful nation, and the many kinds of evil in which Israel indulged. God sent His prophets again and again to warn the people of punishment if they did not repent and do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with Him. Each prophet brought a little different kind of message.

Elijah showed the Israelites God's power, and warned the rulers. Amos reasoned with the people and recommended temperance and justice. Hosea taught them that God loved them as a father. Micah tried to help the poor. Isaiah preached heart-worship and clean living, and foretold the coming of Jesus.

SOMETHING TO DO

THE BIBLE

The Bible is the Book of truth (John 1:17; 17:17);
The Staff of Age (Eccl. 12:1-7),
The Guide of Youth (2 Tim. 3:14-17).
And we may from its pages learn
The Way (John 14:6) that leads beyond the storm (Job 3:17)—
The storm of life in mortal state,
And enter at the Golden Gate
Where blessed angels wait (Rev. 21:7-27; 22:14-16).
—R. A. Humphreys.

How many of these questions can you answer correctly?

1. What did Elijah do on Mt. Carmel?
2. What did Elijah do on Mt. Horeb?
3. Who received Elijah's mantle?
4. Who was Amos?
5. Who dreamed that a hot coal touched his lips?
6. What was the message of Amos?
7. What was Hosea's message?
8. Whom did Micah try to help?
9. What kind of worship does God want?
10. What were Isaiah's teachings?

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE

11. The middle chapter of the entire Bible is also the shortest—the 117th Psalm.

12. The middle verse of the entire Bible is the eighth of the 118th Psalm.

BAPTISM

THEN PETER said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2:38. In this verse we are told what we should do by Peter, one of the apostles; why we should be baptized: for the remission of sins; and into whose name—the name of Jesus Christ. Then later we will receive our reward.

Rom. 6:4, "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

Col. 2:12, "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

Here in these verses we are very plainly told how to be baptized—buried in water.

Rom. 6:5, "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." We are here promised to rise in the likeness of His resurrection, if we have been buried in the likeness of His death.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

Part 22

By George Johnston

IT MUST be remembered that while these prophecies deal with the rise and fall of kingdoms, they also fulfill the promise made by the angel to Daniel, "I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days." During the incessant war between Syria and Egypt the Jews suffered great hardships. Their country was crossed and recrossed by contending armies; their towns and villages were almost continually occupied by hostile soldiers; their houses rifled, and torn or burned down; their crops were seized or trampled under foot; and they themselves were forced to support with arms the king who chanced to be victorious. All these trials were visited upon them by the Almighty to punish them for their neglect of Him; for though they no longer worshipped the false gods of their neighbors, their religion had deteriorated into a mere performance of certain formalities; and only by such measures as God adopts can the hearts of the majority of human beings be turned to Him. When, a little later on, their temple was devastated, and their religion attacked by Antiochus Epiphanes, many of the Jews were truly aroused, and for a time the flame of pure and earnest religion burned brightly again.

"And the king of the south shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north: and he shall set forth a great multitude; but the multitude shall be given into his hand. And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up; and he shall cast down many ten thousands: but he shall not be strengthened by it." The king of Egypt at this time was Ptolemy Philopater, who succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, Euergetes (B. C. 222). Philopater was a most licentious and vicious monarch, with very little ambition; but angered at the intelligence that Antiochus the Great had obtained possession of Galilee and the country east of the Jordan, he raised a formidable army and marched against him. The army of Antiochus was much greater than that of Philopater, but nevertheless at Raphia, where they encountered each other, the former was defeated, many thousands of his men were either slain or captured by the Egyptians, and Antiochus was compelled to enter into a treaty of peace. Philopater returned to Egypt and, elated with his success, gave himself up to a life of feasting and debauchery. Thus, although he had defeated the Syrians, he was in no way strengthened thereby.

"For the king of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come after certain years with a great army and with much riches. And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south: also the robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall fall." Peace between Syria and Egypt lasted about fourteen years, during which period Antiochus the Great accumulated much wealth, and built up a formidable army. In the meantime Ptolemy Philopater had died (B. C. 205) and his son Epiphanes, a child of five years old, had succeeded to the throne. This boy had been placed under the guardianship of the Roman senate, and that body was fully determined to protect his interests. Consequently war against Egypt meant also war against Rome. Antiochus, however, considered this a favorable time to attack the Egyptians, and he entered into an agreement with Philip, king of Macedonia that, in return for his assistance in seizing the Egyptian kingdom, its territories would be equally divided between them. After some delay, occasioned by warfare in various localities, Antiochus succeeded in regaining possession of Palestine and part of Syria, and on his entry into Jerusalem (B. C. 198) he was received with great joy by the Jews, who had suffered great hardships under the rule of the Egyptians. After granting them certain favors, he proceeded with a powerful fleet around the coast of Asia Minor, and took possession of the Thracian Chersonese. In the meantime war had been in progress between Philip of Macedonia and the Romans, in which the former was defeated, and forced to accept the terms laid down by his conquerors. The latter then sent to Antiochus and demanded that he should restore all that he had taken, not only from the young king of Egypt, but also from Philip. This Antiochus refused to do, and war ensued. A battle was fought at Thermopylae (B. C. 181), in which Antiochus was worsted, and forced to retire into Asia. In the following year the Romans crossed the Hellespont, and near Magnesia, the army of Antiochus was decisively beaten, and he was condemned to pay all the expenses of the war, which amounted to eighteen thousand talents. In hope of obtaining this huge sum, Antiochus attempted to plunder a temple in Elymais in which great riches were said to be stored, but the inhabitants, enraged at the desecration, rose in a body and slew him and his attendants (B. C. 187).

"Also the robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall fall." The people referred to as "the robbers of the people" were the Macedonians, of which nation Alexander the Great and the kings who seized his territories were members. Reference has already been made to the defeat of that nation by the Romans, and to the acceptance by Philip of the terms laid down by them. During the lifetime of Philip those terms were fully observed, but after his death in B. C. 179, his son and successor, Perseus, attempted to shake off the Roman yoke. He was extremely popular with his subjects, and soon became so powerful that the Romans were forced to take steps to curb his ambition. After some negotiations, which proved futile, they sent an army into Thessaly, and after a war of four years' duration the Macedonians were decisively defeated at the battle of Pydna (B. C. 168), and their kingdom was transformed into a Roman province. Thus the second of the kingdoms into which Alexander's empire was divided, was brought to an end. In the same year the remaining two—Syria and Egypt—met with the same fate.

WHAT IS EFFICIENCY?

"After the battles are all over and we are safe in His Kingdom," writes Samuel E. Haney, "we shall wish that we had exercised just such "efficiency" as this in His service." He then refers to the following statements under the above caption by Dr. Frank Crane.

"What is efficiency?

It is doing things, not wishing you could do them, dreaming about doing them, or wondering if you can do them.

It is the power to learn how to do things by doing them, as learning to walk by walking, or learning to sell goods by selling them.

It is knowing how to apply theory to practice.

It is the trick of turning defeat into experience and using it to achieve success.

It is the ability to mass one's personality at any given time or place: it is skill in quick mobilization of one's resources.

It is making everything that is past minister to the future.

It is the elimination of the three microbes of weakness, regret, worry, and fear.

It is self-reliance clothed with modesty.

It is persistence plus politeness.

It is self-mastery, concentration, vision, and common sense.

It is the sum total of all that's in a man."

Dr. Frank Crane.

OUTRAGE AGAINST GOD

"Denouncing certain ministers, university professors and women, heralded as moral leaders and preachers", The Philadelphia Inquirer of Nov. 7, reports some very pertinent statements in a recent address in New York City, delivered by Bishop William T. Manning, as to the sanctity of marriage.

Bishop Manning is reported to have assailed the advisors of youth who commend "free love, thinly disguised under the name of 'trial marriage'." The report continues:

"Surely it is time for the Christian church to speak out and strip the mask off such teachings and tell these apostles of libertinism, both male and female, in words which no one can misunderstand that their proposals are an outrage against God, a shame and dishonor to the time in which they live, and an insult to all decent manhood and womanhood."

And is he not right? Is it not a fact that all of this discussion and deciphering of the great problem of marriage and divorce is an effort, after all, to rid man and society of those fundamental truths announced by God, which truths are truths not for sectionalism or particular periods of time or of ages, but are fundamental truths for all time, for all classes, for all society.

WHEN THINGS SWAY

A gunner, describing the intense moment just before the new recruits came up under Blucher that turned that decisive battle of modern times, said that moment seemed like ages, and the dust and smoke of the battle were so thick and intense that the gunner as he stood on the height on which he had been placed by the commanding officer, could not see five yards in front of him. He felt the swaying tides of the battle move this way and that, and he did not know at one time whether he was among friend or foe. Someone asked him: "Well my friend, what did you do in that supreme hour of darkness and solitude?" "I stood by my guns," said he. That is all you and I have to do. We are not responsible for the swaying tides of battle: we are not responsible for apparent defeat or failure. The question is: Am I where God put me, and do I do as God would have me do?—A. T. Pierson.

THE BIBLE and BUSINESS

Bruce Barton says in "Printer's Ink": "The Bible is the greatest one-volume text-book of modern business ever written. For two centuries a sentence lay buried in the pages of that great business manual. We passed it by as merely a bit of rhetoric. It reads thus: And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant. A very pretty sentiment, men thought, but wholly impractical in the hard, practical world. Impractical? Turn over the pages of any national magazine today and what do you find? Almost every advertisement is written about that thought. We have all come at last to understand that nothing but honesty pays. To endure, an institution must rest upon the solid foundation of justice to customer and employee alike; of service and of vision that can look beyond this year's material rewards."

WHEN TROUBLE COMES

When trouble comes it seems to bring strength with it. We are often surprised by the courage with which people meet disaster. The reason that worry wears us out faster than misfortune does is that we are not given strength to meet difficulties in advance. If we are sensible enough to wait for trouble to overtake us, instead of running to meet it, we will find ourselves equal to it, no matter what it is.—Sel.

BEGGAR OR PRINCE?

Some one has said: "If you come to God as a prince, you go away as a beggar; if you come as a beggar you go away as a prince." It is to the needy that God opens the wardrobe of heaven, and brings out the robe of righteousness.—Sovereign Grace.

DAM THE DIVORCE CANYON

Deeper and deeper is the rushing stream of the divorce evil washing out the very rock foundation of society, and is evidently having no little ill effect upon the morals and the crime of society in general and upon the integrity of Christianity.

According to quotations of the Philadelphia Inquirer of Nov. 14, Dr. Macartney would eliminate every cause for divorce excepting the one sole reason announced by God in His inspired word. In this way he would have the church build a strong religious dam against the onflow of this undermining evil.

Dr. Macartney is a member of a special committee in the educational department of the church, assigned to the divorce problem. His letter is in preparation of the minds of his people with a view to action at the coming General Assembly next May.

"Divorce is now competing with death as a dissolver of marriages in the United States," Dr. Macartney declares. "One out of every six marriages ends in the divorce courts. It is easy to demonstrate from history that the increase in divorce, the thawing of family morality and the breakdown of the sanctity of the home, have been the heralds of national decline and decay.

"The attitude of the Church of Christ towards divorce," says the Philadelphia Inquirer in reporting further Dr. Macartney's declarations, "is not a matter of expediency, or of particular application to conditions as they may exist in this or that society or community of men, but loyalty to the spirit and teaching of her divine Founder, Jesus Christ.

"On many of the social questions Christ was almost strangely noncommittal. But on the subject of divorce His attitude was quite the reverse. Some of the most explicit legislation and teaching in the Gospels is that of Jesus on divorce.

"Jesus lays down as truth that monogamy, one man living together with one woman, is the divine and original plan of marriage. Jesus declares that the race started in a monogamous relationship, but through sin fell away from it into polygamy, and divorce, and kindred corruptions.

"Our conclusion is that the New Testament, as revealing the mind of Christ, recognizes but one cause as ground for divorce, adultery. When we're beyond that ground and sanction divorce and remarriage upon other grounds, we have parted company with Christ. If a strict adherence to the deliverance of Christ on marriage and divorce seems a severe course to follow when dealing with particular cases, let it be remembered that loyalty to the command of Christ can work but good to mankind in general."

DIVORCE MILLS

One of our correspondents, who is an extensive reader of the statistics of the day and a deep student of the Scripture, has the following caustic remarks to make and feels justified therefore by the facts of Scripture and his implicit faith therein. This correspondent, whose name was not signed to this particular note to the Editor, has this to say:

"Macartney and others need not worry about this little matter of divorce mills.

Divorces cost $300.00; and this bunch of apes need the money for pleasure, clothes and make-ups.

It is a matter of months only, when these human immortal vultures will be mating up, for a season, like the birds.

It is written, "And it grieved Yahweh that He had made man in the earth. And He took scrow unto His heart"—Gen. 6:6.

Soon—very soon—there will be cause for God to again be grieved and sorry that He made man in the earth. (Luke 17:28-30)"

CHRIST—WHO IS HE?

IN THE Who's Who Column it is more than proper for the Christian or for him who would consider Christ, to ascertain who Christ is from God's point of view. In this world filled with its teeming millions of God's creation, there are now, as there have been in all past time, particular persons, ones whom the Father uses more specifically toward some given end than He uses others. For instance, Abram was especially set aside by Jehovah for a work peculiar unto himself, a work never offered to any other; David was assigned by the Director of the universe to a position unsought by himself, if not undreamed of; Nebuchadnezzar was pointed out for a special labor. And who shall say that Luther, Napoleon, Washington, Herzl, Wilson and scores of others, were not likewise given over by Jehovah to the accomplishment of certain labors? Every such one evidently had his position in God's great record of Who's Who.

Who, then, is Jesus? That He was pointed out from ancient days is unquestioned: that Jehovah saw Him to be the One in whom all the various and momentous needs of man could be centered, is likewise evident: that these various needs originated from various directions and were realized by following out several respective lines of procedure is to be seen by the reading of Scripture. Let us briefly look at a few scriptures indicative of some of these lines.

The New Testament is introduced by four several delineations of the life of Christ. The gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, while they differ each from the others, are biographical of the ministerial life of Christ. That they differ, does not say that they contradict each other: that they severally depict our Savior's life, does not say that they must necessarily narrate the same things: that they are four several statements, each from a respective point of view, is, to say the least, in accordance with prophetic foreview of the Savior.

UNTO DAVID A RIGHTEOUS BRANCH

Jeremiah 23:5-6 reveals that He (Jehovah) "will raise unto David a righteous Branch," even a King. This word "Branch" is from the Hebrew word "Zemach". It does not mean a limb or twig shooting out from the trunk of a tree, but rather, a shoot or sprout growing up out of the ground from the roots of a tree. This root-shoot is a Branch of David. But David was God's appointed King over His kingdom. He, who should grow from his roots, must naturally become King in David's stead, and such is the prophetic utterance repeatedly stated. Thus, as God looked upon the new born Babe in Bethlehem, He saw Him who was the Son of David.

Matthew, by inspiration, portrays Him in the gospel narrative as that kingly Son. His genealogy is revealed by this inspired writer, who goes back to the very beginning and recites His line of ancestry down to the Babe Himself. Matthew then takes up the ministry of the Master and proclaims the kingdom and reveals Him as King; after which he shows how the Jews first rejected Him who is God's foreseen "root and offspring of David", and then he shows how the Jews rejected such kingdom. Rev. 22:16. Compare Isa. 11:1; 53:2; Jer. 33:15.

MY SERVANT THE BRANCH

Zechariah 3:8 records Jehovah's words thus: "Behold, I will bring forth my servant, THE BRANCH." Compare Isa. 42:1-4—"Behold my servant, whom I uphold." It is Jehovah speaking. He has a Servant; One who is upheld by the Creator's hand. Like David, who was servant as well as king, Isa. 37:35, so Jesus, though God saw in Him the One who was King of mankind, He also saw in Him the One who was Servant of the Most High, and that in the truest, most loyal and complete sense. How strikingly Mark in his gospel thus reveals the Master. It is never customary to trace the genealogy of a servant. He is picked up even as he is, whosoever he may be. Family ties are of little consequences. Mark omits all ancestral data and launches "immediately" into narration of the service that Christ rendered unto God's men, and that service performed was always "immediately" the opportunity was presented.

THE MAN WHOSE NAME IS THE BRANCH

Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord: even he shall build the temple of the Lord; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his

"THUS saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."—Ezekiel 21:26, 27.

GOVERNMENT HAS been the underlying truth of all God's work. By it He has revealed and declared Himself to be the Ruler of the universe.

* * * *

God directed Adam to have dominion over the earth. He then instructed him as to the way in which he could enter into the greatness of his God-given opportunity. Discovery of God's ways and obedience to the truth thereof, would constitute him equal to his task of exercising dominion.

* * * *

God continued to hold supreme rulership, even though He committed to Adam the subordinated task of ruling over man and the creatures of earth. When Adam undertook to rule in the strength of his own wisdom, Jehovah at once revealed His superior rulership by overruling Adam and surrounding him with the condition of death, over which Jehovah had given him no authority.

* * * *

At Babel, following the flood, men apparently undertook to gain such mastery as would assure them protection, even though they might not follow in the ways of Jehovah. In a moment of time, by a single word, God revealed His surpassing rulership in that He confounded their language and reduced them to that weakness which obtains by inability of men to cooperate with each other.

* * * *

Egypt came to be the pride of the nations. All commerce and learning was centered therein. The wee small nation of Israel was apparently swallowed up thereby. Though reduced to serfdom, the Israelites greatly multiplied in numbers. In a most unreasonable, unpromising manner, Jehovah commissioned one only man with his brother to journey from the wilderness of Sinai to the land of Egypt and lead out the oppressed, enslaved Israelites from the "iron furnace of Egypt". Through plagues, through opened sea, through sweetened waters, through daily provisions of manna, Jehovah revealed His mighty power to rule over that oppressed people to her own good.

* * * *

To-Israed God offered the headship, even the rulership of the nations.—Deut. 14:2; 26:18, 19. He surrounded her with the greatest of blessings; He surrounded her with laws of direction and conduct from heaven, itself; He positioned her in the hill of His holiness; He attended her with the manifestation of His own divine presence. But Israed refused divine supervision over her headship of the nations, refused divine supervision over the laws of her own people. As with others, so with Israel, God overturned the throne "until he come whose right it is".

* * * *

Babylon, a foreign people without fear of God, was advanced to temporary headship of the nations. "And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all," Dan. 2:38, were the words to Nebuchadnezzar by Daniel, who spoke in the name of Jehovah. Neither did Nebuchadnezzar and Babylon regard the rightful authority and rulership of the Creator of the universe. He, too, was "weighed in the balances and found wanting."

* * * *

Today, as in times past, nations are check-mating other nations in common strife for national position with a view to advancement to headship, each seeking earth-wide dominion over the nations of earth. Not one is asking the Father's advice, nor His consent. Each is laboring in his own unrestrained ambition to be chief in the king-row of the nations. To this end also, tends all the advancement of our times. Man, as a whole, is striving in the strength of man, and man alone, to attain to the height of the goal portrayed by Jehovah. Like all past similar efforts, this, too, is doomed to disappointment and utter failure.

* * * *

God is the master of all authority over man. Though He, on occasions innumerable, has delegated limited power to individuals and to nations, yet history is replete with evidences that Jehovah is supreme Monarch, even over those thus delegated.

"The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David". This angelic utterance was made concerning Jesus, who was soon to be born to Jerusalem, the city of our God. In Him was to be found One who, though appointed to reign "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth", would, nevertheless, accord to the God of all, that authority which He alone may ever possess: One who at the same time would reign in righteous zeal for the good of man, for the ennoblement of the race, for the honor of Jehovah from whom He would receive His appointment. Though King of kings, yet He, Himself, will honor Him who occupies the throne of the universe.

SOON HE THAT IS TO COME WILL COME

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

EVERYONE recognizes that there is a wonderful change in living conditions in the last few years. Were this change in a single locality only, or in some particular state or nation, or even in some particular continent only, it might be worthy of only local notice. But the public press reveals to all that such change is well nigh universal throughout the civilized portions of the earth.

cleavers, knives and beer bottles served as weapons, a squad of Federal prohibition agents early yesterday closed three resorts at Rockaway Beach, fourteen miles south of San Francisco. . . The raids were caused by an Oakland man, whose seventeen-year-old daughter had been rendered half unconscious by liquor in a Rockaway Beach resort; dragged from her drunken escort to an inner room and assaulted, . . .

He, whose ideal is noble manhood, pure womanhood, exalted morality, looks upon these rapidly shifting conditions with amazement, and quickens his step in an effort to thwart the increasing tendency toward wrong and to build the ideals of moral righteousness unto stronger and sturdier establishment. He, whose ideal is high and exalted patriotism for his municipality, his local state or nation, looks upon the reeking conditions of vice and wrong as being inimical to the best interests of state and at once seeks legislation and executive activity for the overthrow of all these things and for the advancement of constitutional honor and purity in the society of the state. But he, who visualizes these things through the inspired word of God, sees not only decline in the nobleness of the individual, decline in the conditions of state and society in general, but he sees the fulfillment of prophetic statement long ago registered, so to speak, across the very dome of the illuminated heavens. In connection with these conditions, inspired writ announces that it is the day of increasing darkness that is sure to precede the morning light of that day to be ushered in by the rising of Him, who is the Sun of righteousness.

"In all three places they met with stiff resistance and arrested Herbert Basonetti, Charles Gust, and Jim Karkalos, proprietors, only after a fight. Karkalos grabbed a meat cleaver and launched an attack on the officers. He threw the cleaver into a group of them. It narrowly missed one of the agents and imbedded itself in the wall. Karkalos then drew a gun, but one of the officers struck it from his hand with a beer bottle before he could fire.

"In Gust's place the agents were confronted with a revolver in the hand of the proprietor. Gust was subdued after his barroom was virtually wrecked in a battle waged against the officers. . . Basonetti, who was named as the man who attacked the Oakland girl, submitted without resistance. The fight in Gust's barroom was carried on to the accompaniment of screams and hysterical laughter from an adjoining room, where hilarious drinking parties were in progress. The parties were made up almost exclusively of girls and boys of college and high school age, the officers said. All were intoxicated, and many of the girls were partially disrobed."

CURRENT FACTS CONFIRM GOD'S WORD

The purpose of the above item, together with other similar items received, seems to be to indicate that the old Americanized stock of these United States of America is being displaced by a Latin stock of largely reversed ideals, many individuals of which are set forth as having tendencies toward degradation. POPE INSPIRED FUTILE MEXICAN REVOLT

HOW LITTLE is the general public aware of the controlling activity of the Sovereign Pontiff in moving Gomez and Serrano to the violent treason in Mexico for which the latter so quickly paid the penalty with his life. But there appears little doubt that the rebellion was inspired in Rome.

With feverish eagerness has the Roman press in this country exploited with much exaggeration the frequent outbreaks of sedition and bloodshed in Mexico. In some instances those outbreaks were actively led by Roman priests. The boycott incited by the hierarchy has been pressed with great industry in every part of Mexico for more than a year in order to aggravate the unrest and if possible overturn the government.

Prelates banished from that country for disloyalty hastened to Rome after brief sojourn here to encourage the plotting against Mexico. Their visits at the Vatican provided the occasion for the Pontifical throne to thunder its vitriolic anathemas against President Calles. Finally the Secretary of State in the papal government handed to Michael Williams, a press correspondent, for the widest possible exploitation this avalanche of rage, which appeared October 2 in The New York Times:

Again and again the voice of the Pope has been raised both in solemn allocutions and encyclical letters to tell the truth about Mexico to the world, but the carefully laid plans of the persecutors of the Church have prevented it being heard by all in its entirety; indeed, sometimes it has hardly been understood at all, especially where such understanding would have been most useful.

The press of America is in a position above all others to remedy this wrong. The gratitude of the Holy Father will therefore go out to all who will help him to make the truth known to the civilized nations and thus alleviate the miseries of an immense region, and of a whole nation borne down by the hardest and most unjust of religious persecutions.

Nothing like this persecution has ever been known in history, not even in the first centuries of the Church. For then, even under Nero, Caligula and Domitian, there was no general persecutions of private religious homes, the catacombs or the cemeteries.

But now in Mexico nothing that is Catholic is tolerated, not even the private celebration of the mass and the administration of the sacraments, punishment for which has in many cases been the death penalty, and always fines, imprisonment and murderous outrages. Massacres are of daily occurrence. Every sort of brutal attack on Catholics is committed with impunity. The most criminal violence is employed to force them to apostatize from the faith into corruption and civil and moral anarchy.

Notwithstanding their noble resistance—the admiration of ourselves, and of the whole world that knows the fact—this people of confessors and martyrs find hardly a soul to respond to their cry for aid to save them from utter ruin, and to save all civilized nations, and indeed the whole human race, from the infamy of a savage persecution now being tolerated in this twentieth century, the boasted era of civilization and progress.

If the whole press, the whole nation, of the United States can find an opportune remedy for this disastrous social catastrophe, it will merit undying glory in the history of civilization and religion.

Mexico City press reports September 29 said Father Sedano, a Roman priest, had been captured, tried, convicted and executed for leading a band of rebels against the government. The Vatican statement was designed to encourage hostilities against the government with a view to its overthrow by conquest from without or by bloody revolution within.

No law of Mexico discriminates against Roman Catholic priests or people. All constitutional and statutory provisions in relation to churches apply with perfect equality to every denomination. The administration of all such provisions is apparently impartial. Other communions recognize the righteous efforts of the Calles government to free the country from alien domination and they sympathize with that effort.

But it is not equality which the Vatican and its hierarchy enthroned here and in Mexico demand. Just and equal treatment is the last thing they are willing to accept. Their demand is for exclusive right to plunder the nation and debauch its schools and suppress all dissenting faiths. Such is their attitude and policy in every country under their control. There is no pretense of religious liberty in any papal land.

While fuming with rage because Protestants here decline to help them whip Mexico to her knees and again fasten the papal yoke on her, papists are demanding suppression of Protestant activities in Italy. The foregoing utterance of the Sovereign Pontiff against Mexico was set in ten point type in three-column form and run as a streamer heavily leaded in six columns at the top of the third page of The New York Times. Nearly all the rest of the page was occupied by an extremely favorable account of the alleged Vatican program in the world politics, the whole set off with a flattering four-column portrait of Pope Pius XI.

Soon after the sulphurous papal utterance was given out and the same day that it was published in the United States, the two political favorites whom Vatican influence and the controlled press were apparently grooming for the presidency of Mexico headed a mutiny and rebellion of several companies of Mexican soldiers.

Controlled newspapers here paraded the rebellion in the obvious hope that it presaged the end of the Calles administration and the setting up of a military dictator acceptable to the Pope as in Italy, Spain, and Poland. But the mutiny was crushed and one of its leaders tried by court martial, convicted and executed within forty-eight hours. The other leader was a fugitive in hiding as this statement was written.

The danger of attempting to carry out in Mexico treasonable plots hatched in the Vatican has been demonstrated. It seems unfortunate that those primarily responsible for the mutiny and rebellion are beyond the reach of justice. But the incident may help the world take their measure. The mills of the gods appear to grind very slowly, but their ultimate product is fine. The guilty will not always escape.—The Protestant.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD

By R. H. Judd

(In Bro. Judd's article in The Herald of October 4, Page 16, 14th line from close, the word "not" was omitted from the sentence reading, "Some will experience the second death." This sentence should have read, "Some will not experience the second death.")

The nature of the following article requires that it should have been published when received. We regret its omission from the issue of August 9, for which it was assigned.—Ed.)

IT SEEMS to me that Bro. Johnston's article which appears in The Herald of June 28 calls for some additional comments to those already made to his first two contributions on the above subject.

I would point out in the first place that he does not give definite reply to the specific questions asked in mine of May 17th, but seeks to prove that my interpretation of Psalm 9:17 is incorrect. For the sake of clearness it may be well to restate. In the May 17 issue I contended that as individuals are, in Scripture, said to return to the ground from whence they are taken, so in Psalm 9:17, Scripture affirms the same thing with reference to nations, which are, of course, composed of individuals. Bro. Johnston disputes the correctness of this, and says, "According to this view the punishment which shall be inflicted on 'all the nations which forget God' shall be DEATH (caps mine): they shall go to 'the grave' and become extinct." He then immediately adds, "Many Bible passages might be quoted in refutation of this view, but perhaps it will be sufficient to refer to a few that deal with a particular nation." Our Bro. here seems to imply that he has in reserve a host of Scripture passages to support him in his assertion that Scripture refutes the idea that the punishment of "the wicked" and "all the nations that forget GOD" shall be death, but so far he has failed to give, as asked, "One Old Testament instance (other than Psalm 9:17) where the meaning he assigns to Sheol with reference to outside nations, is definitely indicated by the context." It is easy to imply that Scripture supports any given view, and comparatively easy to produce passages into which and from which the view contended for may be imparted or extracted, but such exegesis cannot be regarded as proof. Proof must be founded on direct statement and be irrefutable. Has Bro. Johnston, in his article of June 28, thus proved by direct Scripture statement that "death" (italics mine) is not, as he says, the punishment of which "the wicked" and "all the nations that forget God" are destined? Ezekiel 32:26 is quoted as proof that the hosts of Gog are not subject to death, yet this very verse states that they are "slain by the sword though they caused their terror in the land of the living." A more complete picture of death and destruction could hardly be imagined. That a whole nation is not destroyed in one generation is by no means disproof of its ultimate destruction. If, as Bro. Johnston says, "Many Scriptures might be quoted in refutation of the view that death is the punishment of the 'wicked' and 'the nations that forget God' (for he cannot separate one from the other) then for once Scripture is proved self-contradictory and therefore untrue; for passages which positively declare in various ways that "the wicked shall perish" and that Jehovah will make a "full end" of certain nations are too numerous to mention in a short article like this. We, however, note a few. "For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and he shall not be."—Psa. 37:10, R. V. "But the wicked shall perish . . . in smoke shall they consume away."—Psa. 37:20, R. V. Our contributor will surely concede that when Jehovah says he will "cut off" certain nations he means their destruction. For proof, compare Deut. 19:1 and 31:3-4. See also Psalm 34:16; Prov. 10:25; Isa. 60:12. The unalterable Scripture declaration that "Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death", James 1:15, is as true of nations as of individuals, both now and in the future. Where to-day are Sodom and Gomorrah (see Jude), and where to-day are the nations of the Amalekites and others, who as nations have long since gone into oblivion? Surely the words of Jehovah in Jer. 12:17, "But if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the Lord," also in Jer. 18:7-10, and Ezek. 18, are sufficient evidence that "the wages of sin", whether of the individual or of the nation, "is death."

Bro. Johnston may, or may not, be correct in his positively stated conjectures relative to the "east sea" and the "utmost sea". Young, in his concordance, specifies the former to be that sea into which the Jordan flows, and the latter to be the Mediterranean or the sea of the Philistines, and there would seem to be Scriptural basis for his belief. Both arguments of Bro. Johnston, viz., that relating to Gog and Magog, and that to the distinctive seas, are plausible and merit distinctive novelty and originality, but as for proof, well, his proof itself requires proof.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best will breed in you a hundred virtues which the idle never know.—Kingsley.

SOON HE THAT IS TO COME WILL COME

the thought thus intended, the purpose of the quotation here is to draw attention to the fact that no longer are the races divided as definitely as they once were within their respective boundaries, but that the world is coming to be as ONE and is giving itself freely to activities prompted by carnality. Naturally unrestrained carnality must gain in physical mastery over higher ideals and efforts. The facts in action prove the truthfulness of inspired writ that in the last days "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."—2 Tim. 3:13.

From the "Chicago Herald and Examiner", under date of December 9, we quote the following from a front page, first column article. The writer, Mr. Dunn, must be lauded for his righteous attitude and his work. After appropriate introduction, the article continues:

"Mr. Dunn describes certain conditions in some of the courts as 'reeking.'

"FIGHT FOR ELECTION"

"Mr. Dunn's letter follows:

"The courageous statement of my good friend, Judge Edgar Jonas, in The Herald and Examiner this morning is a clarion call to the lawyers to battle. It moves me to urge upon the Chicago Bar Association an affirmative answer to the inquiry recently to the members asking whether we should go farther than a mere vote upon which of the sitting judges are entitled to re-election.

"The question was whether the Bar Association members should take a vote upon candidates for judge to take the place of such of the sitting judges as are voted unfit.

"Most emphatically I vote, "Yes," on that question. But let us not stop there. Let us lay our plans to elect our nominees. Let us raise a campaign fund of ample proportions. Then let us ask every member of our association to volunteer as a speaker and worker to give as much of his time—all of it if necessary—during the campaign to elect our candidates.'"

"CHALLENGES JUDGES"

"What a travesty it is to see the Bar Association vote upon judicial candidates year after year in an advisory way and then see the politicians go out and select and elect the men they want on the bench who "can be seen," as the ward workers so naively put it.

"How many judges now on the bench could hold up their right hands and swear they have never "been approached" in litigation before them? Not one! Thank God there are some of them who cannot successfully "be seen". But you and I—and every lawyer of long practice at the bar—know that "seeing the judge" is a matter of daily occurrence in Chicago.

"As Judge Jonas says, why should honest policemen risk their lives to arrest criminals when they know that it is a futile thing? I confess I am surprised they take as many chances as they do.

"Have you heard, as I have, that it was suggested that a cash register be installed at the Harrison st. court while a certain judge recently was sitting there? What are we lawyers going to do about seeing that that judge and others like him are not re-elected? And what are we going to do to see that the men who are elected to take their places are men who cannot "be seen"?"

"Isn't this our particular business as lawyers? I recognize the power of the politicians. But we all know the power of public opinion when properly aroused. The situation is rotten, reeking, filthy. The spring of justice is polluted at its source. The good people of Chicago look to the lawyers to cleanse the courts. The lawyers look to you and the other officers of our bar association to lead us. I believe the rank and file are ready.

"The Herald and Examiner and every other newspaper knows that what Judge Jonas says is true. Now is the time to lead a crusade to cleanse the halls of justice. Single-handed it is hopeless. In a body we can do it. Will you lead us?"

The above refers distinctly to the very basic corner stone in the structure of true nationality. It charges the judicial department, than which there is none greater or more important, with "reeking" corruption. There are evidences that such conditions exist elsewhere than in Chicago, and that far too commonly. Did such exist in one city or country only, perchance the Bible student would not be justified in suggesting that the conditions were in harmony with inspired prophecy, but the press agencies, which search out every nook and cranny of the universe of earth, force their readers to conclude that such like conditions are also more or less common in other nations and continents, that is, that they are more or less world wide.

The fact that crime kings and their lieutenants can depend, even to a small degree, upon the cooperation of the judicial department of any state, large or small, for protection and for aid to avoid due and proper conviction and punishment, is in itself an evidence that any such state or municipality is in a corresponding degree governed and ruled by "evil men and seducers", and is being "farmed" by such for their own greed or immoral or lustful, iniquitous gain.

Such conditions have been on the rapid increase for some time past. Such conditions portend that man's ability to govern is now being "weighed in the balances and found wanting". These conditions do, in themselves, show the fulfillment of certain prophecy. The same prophetic word, which prophesied such like condition, also announces that they should be followed by Him who will reign in righteousness, who will overthrow wickedness, who will establish justice, who will come to reign from "sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth."

The signs of our day indicate the approach of the King of kings.

"The doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the name, are alike unknown to the entire Bible."—Olshausen,

THE above words show very plainly wherein strength lies. He who knows is eventually the one sought after, and this is true of biblical matters as well as in worldly affairs.

Therein lies the great value of Berean work. It encourages different ones to study, and thus to know God's plan. Avail yourselves of the opportunity, and become strong.

Again, some will be pleased, and perhaps some will be disappointed, but it is going to be a good book, and will register the largest sale of any Berean book ever published.

DEAR BEREANS:—I had the pleasure of having church service and Berean meeting at my home on November 20th. The Berean lesson was, "Steadfastness", Bro. Arthur Johnson, the leader. The following are a few thoughts brought out in the lesson.

To be steadfast means to be established, standing firm, unchanging; steadfast in what is right and in God's laws. We are not to be a stubborn and rebellious generation as the Israelites were, "that prepared not their heart aright and whose spirit was not steadfast with God."

We turn to Heb. 6:18-20, and see what God has promised for us, "That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us: which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec." Jesus is our Rock, our hope of salvation. He gave His life and passed through the valley of the shadow of death, that through Him we should have hope of eternal life. Our hope is anchor grounded upon the rock, Jesus, which is steadfast and sure.

Paul said in Heb. 3:6, 14, "But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end." If we have faith, we must have works, for faith without works is dead.

Paul admonishes us in 1 Cor. 15:58, "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." Let us take heed to this wonderful admonition and be like Paul, steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Why? Because our labor is not in vain in the Lord. Let us be able to say as Paul said in 2 Tim. 4:7, 8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

DANIEL

By Bernice Sealine

He had another dream, and called the magicians to him, but they could not tell him the meaning of it. Then Daniel came and King Nebuchadnezzar told him his dream.

He said, "I saw, and, behold, a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great." He told the

IS MAN IMMATERIAL AND IMMORTAL?

By Rufus A. Curtis

THOSE who hold to the inherent immortality of the race of Adam, and to the thought that personality inheres in an intangible, deathless something, variously styled "immortal soul" or "never dying spirit" that inhabits the body during natural life, and vacates it at death are not consistent in their reasoning. They quote the words of Jesus, in His colloquy with the penitent thief, as recorded in Luke 23:43, "Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise;" and earnestly argue that the pronoun "thou" was addressed to an immaterial, immortal personality that occupied the body, as a tenant occupies a house.

Now, if that view is in harmony with facts, common sense, and the Bible in this case, will it not be true in other occurrences in the Bible where the pronoun "thou" is used? Let us see. In Genesis 3:17-19, we will have to change our views somewhat concerning this immaterial and imaginary man that is supposed to be all on the inside, and get him on the outside where we can view him, and have some concrete idea as to his tangibility. After Adam had eaten of the forbidden fruit in the garden of Eden, the following penalty was pronounced upon him by his Maker, "And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field: in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

From the biblical usage of the pronoun "thou" we are irresistibly drawn to the conclusion that the person addressed by this pronoun was a material being that had a "face" that could actually "sweat" from physical exercise; and could eat literal fruit, herbs and bread. Man that the Lord God formed had nostrils through which to breath into his lungs the vitalizing properties of oxygen contained in the atmosphere, Gen. 2:7. This man that God created and recognized "is of the earth, earthy", 1 Cor. 15:47; Psalm 103:13-16. So far from being a deathless creature, he is mortal and corruptible, Job. 4:17; Rom. 1:23. Being "of few days", "he cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." His race is soon run, and he "dieth, and wasteth away." Job. 14:1, 2, 10; James 4:14.

Of the federal head of the human race, it is recorded, "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thiry years: and he died."—Gen. 5:5. God's threatened penalty of death for disobedience was carried out, and His word vindicated, Num. 23:19. Adam could not transmit to his posterity what he did not himself possess. Mortality was entailed upon the race by Adam's disobedience. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin: and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."—Rom. 5:12, 18. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—1 Cor. 15:22. The theory of natural immortality for the race is not only without evidence from the Bible, but it is positively contradicted by its unanimous testimony. God does not desire that any one in open rebellion to His righteous government should live forever. That point has been well guarded from the beginning of the race, Gen. 3:22-24. "What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?"—Psa. 89:48; 48:6-12.

Take another illustration from the Bible usage of the pronoun, "thou". In Isaiah 38:1 the following language occurs: "Thus saith the Lord; Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live." The above language is the Lord's message to Hezekiah, king of Judah, delivered by Isaiah the prophet. It throws a flood of light upon the question under consideration. It clearly reveals the fact, that the ego, the selfhood or personality of Hezekiah consisted in a material body that could be afflicted with pining sickness and boils that could terminate his existence as a sentient being, verse 9 to 19, inclusive. No lexicographer can give a truer definition of what it is to die than the Lord gave to Hezekiah, when He said, "Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live." In death man's thoughts perish, Psa. 146:3-4. "When man can see without eyes, hear without ears, feel without nerves, and breathe without lungs, then may it be assumed that he can think without a brain." Divine theology and modern ghostology cannot be made to harmonize.

THE JOY SET BEFORE CHRIST

IT WAS because of anticipated joy that our Lord endured the cross, and despised the shame. What exceeding great and unspeakable joy must that be which enabled Him to endure therefor so much! And what was this joy? Was it the mere anticipation of being honored above others, sitting over them? Rather, the whole history of our Lord's doings forces upon us the conclusion that the greatest joy of our Savior was the joy realized from service unto others—others weaker than He, needing His strength. It seems most true that the joy anticipated by Christ was the joy of the larger service to be rendered by Him when He, as perfected High Priest in the holiest abode with God, should come to be able to serve His brethren with a fullness and greatness as yet impossible for Him to serve. But, reaching the exalted position and authority in God's holiest place, He would be able to issue forth the greatest blessings of complete atonement, complete reconciliation, complete forgiveness to those who should come to God through Him. This great, unspeakable joy was sufficient to cause Him to endure the cross and despise all shame that could be heaped upon Him by poor, erring sinful man.—Selected.

CHRISTMAS LESSON

Luke 2:1-20

Devotional Reading: Luke 2:8-20

GOLDEN TEXT

Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins. Matt. 1:21.

A STUDY OF THE LESSON TEXT

Luke 2:1. It came to pass in those days. This is the seventh and last occurrence of this phrase in the Scriptures. It always marks a time of trouble ending in blessing. Cf. Gen. 14:1; Ruth 1:1; Isa. 7:1; Jer. 1:3; Esther 1:1; 2 Sam. 21:1. A decree. An edict, a command. Caesar. The ruler at Rome. All taxed. To be enrolled or registered with payment of poll tax.

3. All. Figure of synecdoche. His own city. Every person must needs go to the home city of his ancestry.

4. From Galilee. Joseph's present residence. City of David. The city of Joseph's ancestry. Bethlehem. The city of David.

5. Espoused. Married, not merely betrothed.

7. Swaddling. A medical term meaning bandage; used only by Luke the physician.

8. Same country. Region of City of David. David here fed his father's sheep. Abiding. Continuing through the night; still there. Keeping watch. Awake, not dreaming.

9. Lo. A word drawing attention. The angel. No article in Greek. An angel.—Diag. Of the Lord. Jehovah; His messenger. Came upon them. Stood by them.—Diag. They were awake; the angel was present. It was a fact. The glory of the Lord. The shekinah in which God had frequently manifested Himself to Israel. See Ex. 24:16; 40:34. Shone round about them. This shekinah had often been a pillar of fire by night; it illuminated Israel in the Red Sea, blinded Egypt. It "shone round about" them, the shepherds. Were sore afraid. Centuries had transpired since the frequency of this shekinah had been customary to Israel. They were afraid.

10. The angel said. He was God's messenger, spokesman, prophet, to them. Fear not. The shepherds were apparently of God's faithful ones. They were readily calmed by the angelic assurance. Being calmed, the angels proceeded. Behold. Another word to attract. I. In the singular; only one. Bring you good tidings of great joy. Greek, "evangelizomai".—Diag. and Comp. Bible. Meaning, I evangelize you great joy. Which. Which joy. At first 't was to the shepherds only. Shall be unto all people. The joy should extend. All. Figure, synecdoche.

11. For. Greek "hoti", meaning that the evangel was "that unto you is born today". Unto you. The shepherds. Is born. This spokesman revealed what had already occurred. A Saviour. One who acts for lost ones. Cf. Judges 2:16, margin; 2:18. Which is Christ. The Messiah, God's anointed. The Lord. Not only Savior and anointed, but the appointed Lord, head, of Israel. This evangel announced the good news of a God-anointed Savior who shall be Lord to restore Israel unto the unspeakable promises and benefits of God.

12. A sign. Not a marvel, but a condition mentioned by which they could recognize the Babe.

13. Suddenly. Without warning or announcement. A multitude. The angel was no longer alone; a great multitude like him stood with him. Of the heavenly host. This word "host" is the same word as the Greek translation uses in 2 Sam. 3:23, speaking of Joab's army. Also used the same in 1 Kings 11:15. In both these references the Hebrew word is the one regularly used of the host when referring to army. Is it this heavenly host which is referred to in Rev. 19:14, where the army of heaven comes forth with Christ?

14. Glory. God's heavenly host is always an army of peace. In this instance it ascribes glory, honor, to God because of the birth of the Prince of Peace. To God. To God, not to men, must be attributed this honor. In the highest. Either in the highest heaven or in the highest way, or both. And on earth. Their joy for earth is of another nature. It is because of peace. Good will toward men. Both these must be the result of the life of this anointed Savior, the Lord.

The testimony of this host of heaven, these warriors of God, soldiers of peace, has now been written. The heavenly host is for and behind this anointed Messiah. One appeared in testimony relative to His begetting; a company were here in testimony of His birth; they ministered unto Him on the occasion of His temptation; they strengthened Him in the garden; they watched over Him at the sepulchre; they stood by Him at His ascension; they will come forth in multitudinous strength at His return. Truly, God's host testified to the fact of God's Son.

15. As the angels were gone . . . the shepherds said, etc. Surely after such unmistakable testimony they could but recognize the momentousness of the message and of the event. They were surely chosen of God to announce these facts to others. They must go unto Bethlehem, the City of David, v. 11, announced by the angel. And see. Discern, recognize for announcement. Is come to pass. It already existed. Which the Lord hath made known. No man-made record could have revealed or made satisfactory announcement of this most marvelous, humanly unexplainable event. Not one angel, but a host had stood by in witness, testimony, and verification of the fact—heralded for God. These all were God's spokesmen to the shepherds.

16. Came with haste. Notice the interest and concern. Found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. As it had been told of them; the fact, therefore, signified the Babe which was the Messiah.

17. They made known abroad, etc. That which had been reported to them was by them disseminated to the world.

18. All they that heard it wondered. They marveled. It was all but incomprehensible. More evidence and sign would soon be forthcoming to corroborate the shepherds' words.

19. Mary kept all these things. It was no longer new unto her. She had been pondering these things for months, for earlier she had been likewise instructed by one of the host of heaven.

20. The shepherds returned. Their duty done, they hastened back to their shepherdless flocks. Glorifying and praising God. It was a change in the management of the universe second only to that change which shall occur when this Messiah shall again appear in Bethlehem, not as a Babe but as the King of kings, and Lord of lords, with the armies of heaven supporting Him in His mighty stroke against the wickedness of Israel and of the world.—F. It is not yet too late to make a Christmas gift of a subscription to The Restitution Herald for the year 1928. A neat announcement of gift will accompany each such subscription by The Herald to the recipient. This will include Christmas number and the balance of the year's subscription, beginning January, 1928.

A pleasant surprise was presented to all the Oregon Church on Sunday morning when Sr. Verna Thayer entered the services. Without announcement she returned to Oregon on Saturday evening. She is feeling much improved. Her physician warns her to discontinue much of her writing and primary work for at least a year.

Elsewhere is a line from Sr. Rahn, Sacramento, California, requesting information regarding members located at or near that place. Would that all the isolated members everywhere would busy themselves in like manner. Two or three are sufficient to organize Berean class work, awaken an interest and make it opportune that services be held for the public. Some call this Home Missionary Work, others call it Evangelistic Labor; whatever it is called, it is worthy of hearty commendation and earnest encouragement.

Word has been received from Bro. L. E. Conner that immediately following the family Christmas in Cleveland, he will leave for California, where he expects to spend several weeks. By personal request of the Editor, he has consented that The Herald may announce his trip and may say that if there are those near Los Angeles, who would care for him to visit them in a ministerial capacity, he will be pleased to do so, in so far as his appointments already arranged for will permit. Plans already made will not allow him to go far from Los Angeles or often in such capacity. However, on his way homeward, he expects to return by a northern route and has consented to consider stopping once or twice along the way, should his services be sought. Until further notice, correspondence may be addressed to him in care of The Restitution Herald, Oregon, Illinois.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

We expect Bro. Conner to be with us early in January. He will speak for us each Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Bro. Conner has been pastor of the church in Cleveland, Ohio, for nineteen years. He is well known among our people, and considered one of our most able speakers. We extend a cordial invitation to all lovers of truth wherever they may be, to meet with us and enjoy these services. Bro. Conner has several children in California, and he will visit them while here. The first service will be held on Sunday, January 8, at 1359½ West 24th Street.

THE RIPLEY MEETING

Our meeting of twelve days at the Ripley Church closed Sunday, Nov. 27, Bro. C. E. Randall being with us the full time, and Bro. F. E. Siple, three days. This was one of the best meetings we have had for some years. There was deep interest manifested and very regular attendance; large crowds, sometimes the house being filled to its capacity.

Beginning on the third evening of the series Bible class was conducted just before the evening sermon. Very much benefit was received during class period. Weather was good with the exception of two nights, which made it favorable for our Camden brethren and others who live some distance away to be with us most of the time. We also were very glad to have Sr. Leota Hanson from St. Louis, present during the last four days.

Although no additions were made to the body, we feel the seed has been sown from which good may be manifested later. May the Bible truths which were so earnestly presented to us sink deeply into our hearts and cause each to strive harder than ever before to put into service the knowledge we have concerning these truths and our church duties, that we may be worthy in God's sight, is our prayer.

EDWARD WILLIAM CLARK

In the death of Bro. Edward William Clark, of Fonthill, Ontario, the Church of God suffered the loss of a most faithful member, and the community a splendid citizen, neighbor and friend. Through his long residence in the village he had earned both the respect and love of all.

Edward W. Clark, son of Thomas and Isabelle Clark, was born in Ontario, Canada, October 21, 1844; and gently fell asleep in death November 5, 1927. He was a member of the Church of God for thirty years. He is survived by his widow, Sr. Priscella Clark, and four nephews.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, pastor of the Fonthill Church of God, and he was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery on the hill near his home, where he awaits in dreamless slumber the dawn of the new day and the coming of his Lord.

Sr. Clark was confined to her bed at the time of her husband's death with an attack of bronchial pneumonia; but is now slowly recovering at the home of her niece, Mrs. Wm. Matthews.

Dear Brethren: We have moved temporarily from active service to a place where there is no church body and would like to know if any of the readers of The Herald know of any brethren living in Sacramento or nearby. Or do any of you have relatives or know of some one who might be interested in joining a Berean Class?

Address me at 3231 San Jose Way, Sacramento, California.

A WORD OF ENCOURAGEMENT

I am sending my Christmas contribution now, so that it may be used in the department of the General Conference work most needed by the time the holiday season arrives. The undertaking of giving instruction to the young, so that they may be better fitted to present the gospel to the world seems a most worthy endeavor.

The Restitution Herald, too, is doing a good service, especially among the scattered members of the Church of God. How we miss this weekly visitor when it is delayed one day in arriving! Hearty and deserving words of praise for the unselfish efforts of Bros. Austin and Stilson will help to lighten the burden of their labors. Bro. Siple's arms, too, should be held up in the Berean work, and the various contributors to The Herald, as well as the General Conference work, need the encouragement of all. We must look beyond the agency of mortality for perfection, yet God has purposely chosen frail humanity as a means to carry forward His work.

There are at least two purposes in criticism: to weaken a cause; or to strengthen it by constructive suggestion. We are living in a time also, when hewing to the line of righteousness and standing for the truth without compromise, will often make enemies, but we must strive to adhere to this policy if we in the end become victorious. Jesus is coming soon to fill the God-given position the Father planned, and for which He has been faithfully building through all the centuries, even from the foundation of the world. Let us not make the mistake of thinking that all who profess Christ are to be chosen at His coming. It will be a time when sincerity in action, obedience and faithfulness to truth, and striving to walk humbly before God will be of weight in the balances. May 1928 have in store many rich blessings for those to whom these lines are written to encourage, and for each one, also, who may read them.

Then King Nebuchadnezzar said, "Now tell me the meaning of this dream." Then Daniel's thoughts troubled him. Finally he said, "The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth, . . . It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth. And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew that tree down, . . . , this is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the Most High, which is come upon my lord the king: that they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will. . . . All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar."

THE MESSAGE OF THE ANGELS

THIS WEEK we have the most wonderful story in the Bible, the one we all love, and are always glad to hear over and over again.

What more beautiful beginning to any story,—“And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.” Is it not a restful, peaceful picture? All quiet—the sheep resting, the shepherds taking turns at watching against enemies, the dogs quiet but alert at the slightest stir.

Then all at once an angel was with them and the very brightest light shone all about them. It was so sudden and unusual that the shepherds were afraid, until the angel said, “Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.”

Their fear must have changed to great joy; for they had long been watching and waiting for this very message, and now, this day, the longed-for One had really come. He was only a Baby—the dear Baby Jesus, but He was to be their Savior—God’s messenger had said so.

The angel also told them where they could go to find the new Baby King—the queerest place for a baby to be lying—in a lowly manger. Then suddenly a whole host of angels began to sing, “Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.” When the song was finished and the angels had gone from them into the heavens, the shepherds said, “Let us go down to Bethlehem and see what the Lord has told us about.” Sometimes I have wondered if they took a pure, little, white lamb along for a gift to the new baby; although the Bible does not say so. But the Bible does say that they hurried to the manger and found Mary and Joseph and the Baby Jesus. Then they told all the others that they met what they had seen and heard; and the people were amazed at the wonderful news. Even Mary pondered over these thoughts in her heart. And the shepherds were so pleased and happy that they returned, glorifying and praising God.

Now, at each Christmas time we, too, sing praises and happy songs of rejoicing; for that same Baby Jesus is our Savior, too.

Of which are you thinking the most—what you will receive, or what you will give?

SOMETHING TO DO

MY GIFT

*“What can I give Him,
Poor as I am?
If I were a shepherd,
I would bring a lamb;
If I were a Wise Man,
I would do my part:—
Yet, what can I give Him?
I’ll give Him my heart.”*

—Christina Rossetti.

CRADLE HYMN

*Away in a manger,
No crib for His bed,
The little Lord Jesus
Laid down His sweet head.
The stars in the sky
Looked down where He lay,
The little Lord Jesus,
Asleep on the hay.*

*The cattle are lowing,
The poor Baby wakes,
But little Lord Jesus
No crying He makes.
I love Thee, Lord Jesus,
Look down from the sky,
And stay by my cradle
Till morning is nigh.*

—Martin Luther.

MY WISH TO YOU ALL

The very happiest Christmas, and the most worthwhile, Christ-like New Year.

BEAUTY

*Health is beauty, prophets tell;
Precious jewel, guard it well.
Wholesome food and exercise
Put the brightness in your eyes.
Give to sleep and work and play,
Each its fair share of the day.
When right living you attain,
Beauty follows in its train.*

WHY NOT?

By M. A. Woodward

BROTHER ministers, laymen, every one related to the Christ: Why not everyone of us, send to the N. B. I. one-tenth of the money we spend for Christmas gifts for our friends and children? We can make a very close estimate of what we spend. Some one says, "Well, it would not be much I have spent." I would be much surprised if it is not two or three times as much as you think it is. Now come on. Let us be real honest with ourselves and with God, and cheer the hearts of those who are working so hard to give us our good paper. Suppose you spend $30 this year. That would mean $3 as a tithe, and if we all would send that, what cheer would be felt in the printing press room! They could almost see the new press doing its fine work. Do we want to see our beloved paper growing dim in its work? Only the other day a sister said to me, "What splendid print The Herald has; one can almost read it without glasses." Another said, "What a splendid paper they are giving us! One page almost pays for the price of the paper." Another sister, 81 years old (or young) said, "I save my paper until Sunday, then get my Bible and study the Sunday School Lesson first; then look at 'Doings among the Churches'; after that, the rest of the paper."

What shall we offer in return for these blessings? Unless new machinery is soon installed the print will be growing dim, the paper smaller, and then what fault finding we will hear. With all our little offerings now, what a help it will be toward that new machinery! Is it a sacrifice on our part? God will be just that much more pleased with our little mites, if it has cost us something to give them. Brother minister, is He worth your tenth? What would you have done when you last stood before your congregation if this same Christ had not lifted you up above yourself, and shown Himself to you in such a way that the picture you gave of His love, mercy, and patience with this old world, had not touched the hearts of your listeners and made them see His love? If He had not given them a strong desire to turn from self to Him, who bought us with His precious blood, what would have been the result of your day's work? For remember, beloved workers, it is not you, that is drawing the sinner to God, but the dear God Himself. Have you thanked Him for the influence of His blessed Spirit in your work? What can we offer Him in return for all His benefits? A WILLING HEART TO SERVE HIM WITH OUR INCREASE. Oh, it is so little any of us can do, for the most of us are poor in this world's goods. But if the offering is only ten cents, coming from a glad heart, it is most acceptable, in His sight. No time better than now to help His work, on the dear Christ's birthday. Let us set the example this year and send a birthday present to the Christ.

Hark! what did I hear you say, Brother? The money sent to the N. B. I. is not used discreetly? How do you know? Heard so? Well, we hear many things. Were you there to see and feel the anxiety felt by that committee as to where was the best place to spend or use the money sent there? No. Well, do you ever make mistakes, financial errors? How would you have felt if your dearest friends, those you had depended on for advice and assistance, left you to bear all the weight of that mistake alone? Was that like the Master? When Peter cursed and swore that he never knew Him, did Christ desert him, leave him to bear the sting of his mistake alone? Oh, no, we hear him saying after His resurrection, "Go tell my disciples, and Peter, I go before them into Galilee."

Christ knew what Peter had suffered since He left him, and especially wanted them not to forget PETER. O, brethren, may God help us to be more like the Christ. My little birthday gift is on the way. Is yours?

FORBEARANCE

- Is a Christian virtue;
- Will prevent many hard feelings;
- Should be freely practiced in the church;
- Is not a condoning of continued sin;
- When over used, ceases to be a virtue.

AGAINST SPIRITUAL WICKEDNESS IN HIGH PLACES

The American Issue suggests one possible reason for the zealous activity of the "wets" with reference to the character of him who shall be next president of the United States. This organ states:

THE WETS' real objective in their effort to put one of their own number in the White House is the capture of the Supreme Court of the United States. At least, that is the inference drawn from a statement credited by the New York Times of October 21 to Captain William H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition amendment.

In this statement is clearly seen a warning to Smith, Reed, and Ritchie.

The New York Times quotes Stayton as saying: "The idea that thirty-six states are necessary to upset the Eighteenth Amendment is a fallacy. What is needed is one more member of the United States Supreme Court to be a 'liberal'."

The article continues:

However, Captain Stayton's unguarded statement reveals the true purpose of the wets in their frantic effort to elect a president. The president appoints the members of the Supreme Court, and apparently this is the stake for which they are playing. And then is added,

We need and must have a President who, if called upon to fill any vacancies in the court, will consider judicial character and capacity rather than "liberalism" on the question of liquor in the matter of making appointments.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 23

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF SYRIA

(Daniel 11:15-19)

THE PROPHECIES now to be considered relate to the Syrian king, Antiochus Epiphanes, during whose reign the last of the four Grecian kingdoms was added to the Roman Empire. This king was particularly anxious to establish the religion of the Greeks in all of his realm, and his efforts were everywhere successful except in Judea. There he found it necessary to employ force to carry out his design, and as his actions in this respect much resembled those of the rulers of the Holy Roman Empire in later days, some commentators have concluded that all the remaining prophecies in the Book of Daniel refer to him. It is in no way surprising, therefore, that they are unable to reconcile the words of the prophet with the events of the Syrian king's reign. Under these circumstances one would imagine that they would recognize and admit that their conclusions are erroneous, but instead of doing so, they place the blame on Daniel, and declare that his book is not authentic. But, as the Jewish youth declared to the Persian king, Darius Hystaspis: "Truth is great, and mighty above all things." No matter how or by whom it may be attacked it is bound to be triumphant.

"So the king of the north shall come, and cast up a mount, and take the most fenced cities: and the arms of the south shall not withstand. . . . But he that cometh against him shall do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him." "Now when the kingdom was established before Antiochus, he thought to reign over Egypt, that he might have the dominion over two realms. Wherefore he entered into Egypt with a great multitude, with chariots, and elephants, and horsemen, and a great navy, and made war with Ptolemy, king of Egypt: but Ptolemy was afraid of him, and fled; and many were wounded to death."—1 Macc. 1:16-19.

"And he shall stand in the glorious land, which by his hand shall be consumed. He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and upright ones with him; thus shall he do." "And after Antiochus had smitten Egypt, he returned again in the hundred and forty and third year; and went up against Israel and Jerusalem with a great multitude; and entered proudly into the sanctuary; and took away the golden altar, and the candlestick of light, and all the vessels thereof, and the table of the shewbread, and the pouring vessels, and the vials, and the censers of gold, and the veil, and the crowns, and the golden ornaments that were before the temple, all of which he pulled off. He took also the silver and the gold, and the precious vessels: also he took the hidden treasures which he found. And when he had taken all away, he went into his own land, having made a great massacre, and spoken very proudly. Therefore there was great mourning in Israel, in every place they went; so that the princes and the elders mourned, the virgins and the young men were made feeble, and the beauty of women was changed. Every bridegroom took up lamentation, and she that sat in the marriage chamber was in heaviness. The land also was moved for the inhabitants thereof, and all the house of Jacob was covered with confusion.

"And after two years fully expired, the king sent his chief officer of tribute into the cities of Judah, who came into Jerusalem with a great multitude, and spake peaceable words unto them. But all was deceit; for when they had given him credence, he fell suddenly upon the city, and smote it very sore, and destroyed much people of Israel. And when he had taken the spoils of the city, he set it on fire, and pulled down the houses and walls on every side. But the women and children took they captive, and possessed the cattle."—1 Macc. 1.

"And he shall give him the daughter of women, corrupting her." The symbolic expression "daughter of women" denotes the Jewish nation as a religious body. In Ezekiel 16 Judah and Israel are spoken of as the daughters of women throughout the whole chapter; and terms of a similar nature are applied to them in various parts of the Bible. This prediction refers to the treacherous actions of Jason, the brother of the Jewish high priest, who, from motives of self-interest, agreed to further the designs of the Syrian monarch.

"But after the death of Seleucus, when Antiochus, called Epiphanes, took the kingdom, Jason the brother of Onias, labored underhanded to be high priest, promising unto the king by intercession, three hundred and threescore talents of silver, and of another revenue eighty talents: beside this, he promised to assign an hundred and fifty more, if he might have licence to set him up a place of exercise, and for the training of youth in the fashions of the heathen, and to write them of Jerusalem by the name of Antiochians. Which, when the king had granted, and he gotten into his hand the rule, he forthwith brought his own nation to the Greekish fashion."—2 Macc. 4.

"Moreover king Antiochus wrote to his whole kingdom that all should be one people, and every one should leave his laws: so all the heathen agreed according to the commandment of the king. Yea, also many of the Israelites consented to his religion, and sacrificed unto idols, and profaned the sabbath. For the king had sent letters by messengers unto Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, that they should follow the strange laws of the land, and forbid burnt offerings, and sacrifices, and drink offerings in the temple; and that they should profane the sabbath and festival days; and pollute the sanctuary and holy place; set up altars and temples, and chapels of idols, and sacrifice swine's flesh, and unclean beasts; that they should also leave their children uncircumcised, and make their souls abominable with all manner of uncleanness and profanation: to the end they might forget the law, and change all ordinances. And whomsoever would not do according to the commandment of the king, he said he should die."—1 Macc. 1.

CHRIST—WHO IS HE?

throne: and the counsel of peace shall be between them both."—Zech. 6:12-13. There is little question but what this prophecy is a foreview of the Savior—but it is not a foreview of Him as of royal descent, not a foreview of Him as Servant of God—it is the foreview of One who is a "man"; One who grows out of the very root of man himself; One who grows from this lowly estate to be the Builder of God's Temple, to bear its glory and to ultimately rule.

Such, also, is the picture painted of the Master in gospel narrative by Luke. Not only does he give special narration as to the apparent lowly birth of Jesus, but he also gives the genealogy step by step clear back unto the first man of God's creation, even back to God Himself. Luke reveals the upbuilding, the upgrowing of the lowly Nazarene. He pictures Him not so much as the royal Heir of David, but, after throwing the searchlight upon His lowly birth, he follows Him in His ascendance, and reveals Him in His masterful, mighty attainments under God's appointment. Not only does Luke place the threefold motto above His head upon the cross, "This is the King of the Jews," but he gives that tender touch to the heart-stained, body-wounded thief by His side, when he reveals the Savior's tender words to a brother-man, "Thou shalt be with me in paradise."

THE BRANCH OF JEHOVAH

But it remains for John, the apostle of special and tender love who pillows his head upon the bosom of his Lord, to reveal the Savior from a viewpoint different from any of his brother-writers. Once the would-be critic or skeptic will see the beautiful harmony in the four several gospel narratives, each revealing the Master as He who peculiarly fulfills a particular position in the economy of the Creator, he will then, like Thomas in the upper room, exclaim at heart, "My Lord and my God."

Isaiah 4:2 speaks of the Messiah thus: "In that day shall the branch of the Lord be beautiful and glorious." The result of this is shown in the following verses, but notice He is here "branch of the LORD," branch of Jehovah, a root-shoot, not of a kingly house of man, not as a Servant, nor as a Son of man, but a shoot, a "branch of the LORD," of Jehovah, Himself. What startling contrast of the Branch here from what it is in the other scriptures cited above! It is the same Hebrew word "zemach", but Isaiah here portrays Him as altogether another personage. It would not be difficult for those who listened to the God-prompted words of Isaiah to feel that Isaiah spoke of one person in 4:2, but of a different person in 42:1. Not so. Mark reveals that 42:1 was fulfilled in Christ, the Servant of God, while John's beautiful gospel of love reveals that Jesus was the very root and offspring of Jehovah Himself. "The word", God's word, "was made flesh, and dwelt among us."

It was left for John alone to tell this wonder-truth, and throughout his gospel narrative he reveals the Savior in such different light than do the other gospel writers. He uses much of the same history he reveals some of the parables, he recites miracles, but all these records are made in revelation of Jesus, as the One divinely appointed, divinely commissioned, God-sent. No genealogy is needed. Like Adam of old, who was the son of God by God's command, so too was Jesus. Though born of woman, as depicted by Luke, though Branch of King David, as narrated by Matthew, though Servant without any interesting genealogy, as viewed by Mark, He is, nevertheless, God's Son "That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This is John's picture, and by John's narration the reader is enabled to get this added vision and understanding of the Master.

THE HEAVEN ILLUMINED BRANCH

Who is Jesus? He is the All and in all in God's plan. He is the Chief of the royal house; He is the Chief of all servants; He is the Chief of mankind; He is God's Son. He is God's Son even though He is David's, though Adam's, though, also, the Servant of all. Not only is all this recorded, and that so beautifully and touchingly upon the pages of sacred writ, but, like Bible cross references, this same "Branch", "zemach", is the name of the brightest star of the constellation called Virgo. This constellation, Virgo, has from days immemorial been accepted as the zodiacal sign of the coming Messiah. It is portrayed as the woman with a manchild in her arms. This, even in the starry firmaments of heaven, has emblazoned the "Branch", zemach, unto all generations of man, as the divinely promised, surely coming One, who shall reveal Himself to all phases of God's prophesied work and shall fill all positions of leadership—royal Heir, Servant, Son of man, Son of God, which God has assigned and ordained to be focused in, centered upon, and allotted to Him who is the Son of the Highest.

This, in part, is Christ. Who is He? Jesus our Savior, Israel's Redeemer, the world's King, God's Servant and Son.

HEBREW SCHOOLS IN PALESTINE REOPENED

"All the Hebrew schools in Palestine cities and colonies were opened on Sunday, November 27th, according to a despatch from Jerusalem to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. An exception was made with the schools in Tel Aviv and Haifa, due to the pending negotiations between the Jerusalem Zionist Executive and the municipalities. The Zionist Executive insists that the municipalities sign an agreement taking a formal obligation concerning their contribution toward the education budget."

DEPARTURE OF ZIONIST EXILES FROM RUSSIA

Russian Zionists in exile lost their permission to go to Palestine if they did not exercise it before December 1, so a despatch from Moscom to the Davar, a Hebrew daily in Palestine, stated. According to the despatch, the exiled Zionists were informed by Ogpu, the Soviet political police, to hasten their departure before the permission expired.

A VISION OF THAT WHICH IS NOT

IT TAKES vision of that which does not yet exist, of that which will be, to turn the wilderness into a garden; to turn the forest into a waving field; to convert an idea into a structure. There are scores of disappointments lurking ahead for the trail-blazer; failure after failure attends him who dares to seize the opportunity of possibility and persevere till there begins to be realized sufficient to encourage others to unite forces unto greater realization and efficiency.

Zionism is no exception. With one of the greatest visions of national attainment on record a few men of heart-hunger for Nationality, with Dr. Herzl as captain of their visionary Ship of State, pointed their prow in 1897 toward the Holy Land. Startling results, all but miraculous in nature, have resulted in the thirty intervening years. Those who, in spite of failure on top of failure; in spite of the fact that the majority have never warmed up to Israel's opportunity; in spite of the discourager, the opposer, the disloyalist;—those, I say, who, in spite of all hindrances and discouragements have persevered, counting not their own lives and comforts, are able to present to the Father of all some very happy results of achievement. The New Palestine gives its readers many interesting reviews of the development of the country and of the advantages accorded many of Israel's people. We quote extracts from these as follows:

PIPE LINE ROUTE FOR MESOPOTAMIA OIL

"American interests will have the final decision in determining the route for the projected pipe line to carry the oil from Mesopotamia to the Mediterranean ports, according to information received from reliable sources in London by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. The matter rests with the Anglo-Persian Oil Company and the Turkish Petroleum Company, which have the concessions on the export of the output of the Mesopotamian oil wells. In order to bring the oil to the world's markets, a pipe line from Iraq to the Mediterranean seaboard is planned. Keen competition over the route of the pipe line is now going on between Palestine and Syria. While Palestine is interested to have the line laid to Haifa, the French shareholders in the two companies insist that the line be laid to Alexandretta, Syria. The correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency learns that King Feisul of Mesopotamia, who is now a visitor in London, is anxious to have the pipe and rail lines go from Iraq to Haifa. American capital is strongly represented in the two companies and the final decision will rest with the Americans."

OUTLINE PLAN OF PALESTINE MUSEUM

"Additional facts with regard to plans for the archaeological museum, to be erected in Jerusalem through the gift of $2,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to the Palestine government, were made public by Professor James Breasted of Chicago, director of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago and famous Egyptologist. Negotiations preliminary to the making of the gift by Mr.

Rockefeller were carried on by Professor Breasted with Lord Plumer, High Commissioner for Palestine, while Professor Breasted was in Egypt directing work of the Oriental Institute early this year.

"Since the Great War, the Palestine Government, under a British mandate, has been courageously meeting its economic problems with a regime of strict economy," said Professor Breasted in a press interview. "Yet from an already burdened treasury it has annually appropriated 16,000 pounds sterling to the administration of the Antiquities Department. As a result of the wise application of these funds and the steady accumulation of newly discovered monuments, the Department has greatly expanded the already existent collection of antiquities. Palestine has never possessed a museum building and the funds required for an adequate building to house the collection have heretofore exceeded the Government's available means. The present gift is further expression of appreciation of this and other problems in the Near East, and of her desire to cooperate in meeting them.

"The Palestine Government has agreed to contribute as the site for the new museum a plot of land called in Arabic, Karm-el-Sheikk, which means, "vineyard of the Sheik." Professor Breasted declared. "It is situated outside and immediately north of the northeast corner of the wall of Jerusalem in a slightly position, commanding a view of the Mount of Olives eastward and an impressive prospect of the Temple Mount on the south. This plot of land was early appropriated by the Crusaders and on it still stands a picturesque and massive tower of one of their early castles which it is hoped can be permanently preserved in connection with the new museum building. Overshadowing this Crusader's Castle stands one of the finest cedars in Palestine and looks down upon an ancient olive grove which covers much of the seven and a half acre site. It is hoped to preserve the venerable cedar also. The new development of the site and the museum building will form part of the so-called Jerusalem Town Planning Scheme now being carried out with great energy by the Palestine Government.

"The new museum building will not only provide ample facilities for displaying the collection now in hand but also for an anticipated expansion in the future as a result of discoveries being made each season by the numerous archaeological expeditions now excavating in Palestine. Mr. Austen St. B. Harrison, the able English architect at present attached to the Public Works Department of Jerusalem and previously associated with Sir Arthur Lutyens, the architect of the great Delhi group of British Government buildings in India and of the new British Embassy in Washington, has already submitted preliminary sketches for the museum. He proposes a building in the Romanesque style, characteristic of the Mediterranean from Sicily eastward and therefore entirely appropriate for Palestine. The building material to be used will be local limestone which will blend harmoniously with both the ancient and modern structures of Jerusalem," Professor Breasted said."

Christmas

By Alice B. Curtis

Oh! Bethlehem seems far away, and long ago the day,
When in that quiet, little town the infant Savior lay.
The wise men and the shepherds now sleep beneath the hill,
And the sweet song the angels sang long, long ago is still.

We need not go to Bethlehem to seek the Lord to-day;
For we can find Him in our homes and to Him homage pay.
And we can see the heavenly light, as shepherds did of old,
And the words the angel told to them have unto us been told.

But far and wide upon the earth these words still wing their way,
"Unto all men there has been born a Savior, Christ, to-day."
And rich and poor alike are glad the little Christ-child came;
For all who trust in Him shall find salvation in His name.

And some sweet day the future shall the angels' song fulfill,
When peace shall be upon the earth and to all men, good will.
Then shall the hills break forth in song; the floods shall clap their hands;
The fir and myrtle trees shall grow where now the briar stands.

The beasts of prey shall peaceful grow, and by a child be led;
And Israel to Zion come with blessings on her head.
Then Christ shall sit on David's throne, and reign from sea to sea;
Lost Paradise shall be restored, and men shall righteous be.

While we still wait for Christ to come to beautify the earth,
We keep as hallowed the day that marks this Christ-child's birth.
And on this blessed Christmas day we grateful hearts uplift
To God, who has bestowed on us our Savior—man's best gift.

GIFTS OF GOD

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3: 16.

THE GIFT OF A KING

TO THE down-trodden, disconsolate nation of God's early choosing, the angels proclaimed upon midnight air the birth of One, who "shall rule my people Israel," Matt. 2:6. No greater gift had ever formerly been presented to that nation. Saul, Solomon, David, numbers had occupied the throne, each one only to verify his utter inability to properly rule a people as God would have it ruled. Not one from among those of mighty stature; nor the humble lad of the sheep fold; nor a man of wisdom; nor one of military prowess; but One, who was yet unborn, untried, unheralded, was this time chosen by Jehovah and set before His people Israel to be their victorious King, restoring them to the fullness of God's promises to His faithful followers.

Such was God's gift to Israel upon that first Christmas.

A GIFT TO MANKIND

JOHN, upon the Isle of Patmos, in vision beholds the four living creatures, Rev. 4:8, crying night and day: "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come." And when those living ones acclaimed such glory, John saw the four and twenty elders worshipping "him that liveth for ever and ever". They, too, joined in the glad song of praise: "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created."

Marvelous as this grand picture must have been to the vision of John, yet it could not have been more marvelous than the picture painted across the dome of heaven before the eyes of angels, who were caused to exultantly sing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." It was caused by the birth of our Savior, not alone that a child was born, but a Child who later should be "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."

True, in Him Israel was to find a King. Yea, He was to be "King of kings and Lord of lords", but also was He to be the Savior of man from sin, from death, from that low estate in which man was then found.

This, too, was a gift of God to man upon the first Christmas day.

THE UNSPEAKABLE GIFT OF GOD

JOHN TELLS US in 1:14 of Jesus possessed with "glory as of the only begotten of the Father". Rendered more literally, this might read: The glory of a Son who, being beside the Father, participates in the Father's glory. His was not the glory, the exultation, the standing merely of a man among men, but His was the glory and the standing of One who enjoyed, by the side of the Father, the Father's position, honor, glory. He was truly of His Father's family. His was the glory of the Father's name. It was such that inspiration visioned upon the mind of John the Apostle, and this was the One whom the Father recognized as worthy and able to consummate all things unto the Father's liking and to stand one with the Father Himself.

This was the One whom the Father "gave"; even His "only begotten Son". He gave that Son to man; not to man of high and royal standing, nor man of unique social position, nor particularly, man of humble station, but to man as a whole—to each one whomsoever he might be. To such, God gave that Son. He gave Him that "whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

This, too, the greatest of all God's gifts, was the gift in preparation, presented upon that first Christmas day.

THIS IS HIS NAME

"Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."

—Jer. 23:5-6.

THIS BRANCH, of which Jeremiah speaks, is the Branch or Shoot that grows out of the root. The root, which God Himself planted, established, was David. Of him God said, "I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever. . . . And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever."—2 Sam. 7:12-16.

In announcing the birth of Jesus, Matthew very strikingly and emphatically refers to Jesus as of the generation of David: "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham."—Matt 1:1. He does not question the fact that Jesus rightly and properly had other relationships to God, other purposes in the economy of God, but he does emphatically assure his readers that Jesus was manifestly presented to mankind as of the house of David. He is, therefore, heir apparent to the throne of David over the house of Israel. He is, therefore, one whom the ruling Romans feared, of whom Herod, the appointed governor of conquered Palestine, must rid himself for the protection of the sovereign Roman kingdom.

Thus, "when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, . . ." Herod heard and demanded of the wise men where Christ should be born. But before Herod came to know and was able to send messengers of death after this new-born King, the King of heaven had sent His messengers under angelic appointment to search Him out and to announce the arrival of the Joy of David, the Joy of Israel. Not only shepherds from their midnight watch were hastened to greet the new-born Prince, but wise men with wisdom not of this world, but with wisdom from on High, were also heralded to hasten to Bethlehem with gifts of "gold, and frankincense, and myrrh".

The root, which God had planted in Israel-ground, though its trunk and top had long since been cut off, had now sent forth a Shoot, a Branch, which was to rule "my people Israel". Two master crowns strove concerning this Branch, the new-born Child. One was the Crown of heaven, the Crown of the universe, itself, announcing, assuring, yea, guaranteeing not only to Israel and to Rome, but to the world of man, that He, who should be King of the Jews in deed and in truth, was born and that no power of man was able to thwart the Creator in the consummation of the plan as foreseen by His Omniscient mind. The other was the crown of Rome, the dominant empire of the earth.

Matthew, so faithfully, so beautifully, so convincingly, reveals in God-given words the coming to light of this Branch of God's house of David. He not only announces the birth of this King, but he also continues and depicts His life-work, evidencing so fully the fact that with Kingly power from on High, He has authority over His fellow-men under most astonishing circumstances, in most comprehending and absolute manner. Power also over the very earth, itself, over sea, over air; power over the lifeless, sleeping dead about Him; and power from the great, from the mighty God of the universe, breaking His own stone-sealed tomb, vanquishing mortality and death and lifting Him to the triumphant glory of the immortal God.

Such an One is the King whom Matthew announces as having been born in Bethlehem of Judea, whom the wise men sought and glorified, whom Herod sought and feared to molest.

In the light of all this, how strikingly beautiful are the words of David, as he by inspiration records God's announcement in 2 Samuel 7:12-29, where at verse 19 he says, "And is this the manner of man, O Lord GOD?" or, as the more literal rendering of the Hebrew words has it, "And this is a law of humanity."

This word plan, of God extends to all mankind; all are affected thereby. David's house was exalted by the Father above all others, and Jesus, the Branch, the Shoot, is He of whom the Father thus spoke.

MY SERVANT

"Behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH."—Zech. 3:8.

NO BIRTH record was needed of the Servant. Little matter from whence He came, who His parentage, what His destiny. No prophetic statement, announcing the Branch as being the Servant of God, cites any of these important points. Mark stands forth among the gospel narrators, conspicuous for the fact that he not even refers to the birth or lineage of our Master. So far as we might judge from Mark's gospel, the birth of our Savior was of little or no moment; nothing of anniversary thought was revealed therein.

Nevertheless, Mark's gospel wonderfully emphasizes how that even as the humblest of men—as Servant of servants, Servant of sinners, Servant of downtrodden Israel, Servant of the mighty God of heaven—Jesus was faithful even unto death. Even as Servant, Mark, in carrying out the truth and greatness of His life, portrays the climax of the Savior's work and the resurrection greatness to which He was born.

Like Matthew portraying the King, so Mark, portraying the Servant, speaks also of His parting works, as though to cite servants to their labors after His departure: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

BEHOLD THE MAN

"Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the LORD; even he shall build the temple of the LORD; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne: and the counsel of peace shall be between them both."—Zech. 6:12-13.

THE DAY of the birth of this "man whose name is The BRANCH" was a day of glad joy. Long since, even in the very garden of Eden itself, the glory of man had been blighted. Sin had so marred his visage, dethroned his power, wrecked his opportunity, that though man multiplied and filled the earth, yet his exalted position, offered him in the beginning, had been completely lost and there was no man to restore conditions fitting for man to occupy in agreement with God's first preparation for man.

Luke has presented to the world the glad news of the birth of a Man. No other writer of the Bible reveals Jesus to mankind in just the same light or with the same apparent objective in view, as does Luke. When he acclaims the birth of our Lord, he does so with the glad words of the angel who said unto them, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." He is not only "the glory of thy people Israel," but as well, "a light to lighten the Gentiles".

Luke is not emphasizing His kingly ancestry, he is not referring to Him as the Servant of the Almighty, nor as a Servant particularly of man, but he refers to Him as a Branch shooting forth out of the very root and stock of mankind and growing up into a beauty and grandeur that becomes beneficial and powerful in behalf of man as man. He does not refer to Him as especially and altogether of Israelitish importance, but as important and wholly necessary to multitudes other than Israel.

True, Luke in his glad gospel of the Lord is in perfect agreement with the other gospel writers, that the Lord is King of God's kingdom, even King of Israel, and that the same Lord is crowned and magnified by the God of heaven. But this kingship develops out of His position among men growing into the kingdom of the Lord. Jesus is to rule from "sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth." Gentiles will bring their honor into that glad kingdom. One nation shall say unto another nation, "Let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."—Isa. 2:3-4.

But notice, these nations, thus entering and obeying that kingdom, are nations of mankind other than Israel. Truly, in agreement with Zechariah 6:12-13, Jesus "the Man", grew up out of His place and came to be in Himself a Temple, a Building for the indwelling of the Lord. And further, by gathering together unto Himself a church—individuals not only of Israel's blood but also of all nations—He still continues the construction and erection of a "temple of the Lord": for, does not Paul, by inspiration, say of the Church, "Ye are the temple of the living God."

Little wonder in the light of such entrancing revelation since recorded, that at the birth of such a One who should grow up to such greatness, grandeur, holiness, that "suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."—Luke 2:13-14.

May men ever recognize and appreciate this Branch who has already grown so majestically and divinely, and who is welcoming unto Himself all those of men, who will forsake the way that leads downward and will journey with Him on the upward way to "bear the glory" of the temple He is building—the abiding place of Jehovah Himself.

THE BRANCH OF THE LORD

"In that day shall the branch of the LORD be beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel."—Isa. 4:2.

IF AT FIRST it seems out of place to think of Jehovah as having a Branch to shoot out of the very roots of Himself, let the reader smother that feeling temporarily and read inspired writ relative to that wonder-truth. Was not Jesus the production of Jehovah, and in that sense His offspring, more than He was the production of David's royal family or than He was the production of the Adam race? Is it not literal fact that fresh water could not issue from a salt spring; that a guiltless, untarnished, unstained man could only by miracle be born from a genealogy that coursed through sin?

How marvelously, wonderfully true are the words of John, as he opens his gospel, not with royal genealogical record, not with happy announcement of a Savior born, not with words to spread joy over the face of Israel or the face of man, but with that deep wonder-meaning statement, "In the beginning was the word", and "the word was made flesh and dwelt among us." No ancestry revealed here. Like Adam of old, Christ was made by God. He had no predecessors. As with Adam, so with Jesus, there were none who preceded Him in the position, the standing, He enjoyed before God. His was "the glory as of the only begotten of the Father", that is, His glory was as the glory of the Son standing beside His glorified Father.

None other had ever been placed thus beside almighty God, and John, who learned his lessons with his head upon the Savior's bosom, reveals as does no other sacred writer, this wonder-truth—that Jesus from whatever source He came according to man's analysis, was, nevertheless, the creation of God, even as Adam, His older brother.

As such, He was God's wonder-gift to man. God "gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." No other gift like this. He was Son of God, "Bread of life," Water of life. He was God's own well beloved Son, made as had been no other; given, as none other could have been; Savior, as only He could be; King, different from any former in earth; Servant, even the Appointed of Jehovah; God's beloved Son in whom He was "well pleased", the glorified, Shining-one, uplifted.

PREPOSITIONS IN SECOND PETER

By R. H. Judd

MUCH IS being said and written these days relative to Bible inspiration, some contending earnestly that every word as it is rendered in the Authorized Version of the Scriptures is the GOD-chosen vehicle of interpreting His message. Were such an idea logically correct, it would then necessarily follow that in translating the Scriptures into other languages than English which are foreign to the Hebrew and Greek, there must be in them, also, a recognized translation divinely inspired in every particular. There are few, if any, who would accept such a conclusion. While it may be quite true that the original Scriptures were verbally inspired, it should not be forgotten that a richness of meaning often lay dormant in the Hebrew and Greek, not found in any other tongues. In some instances words have been chosen which in all fairness may be variously translated, and it would sometimes seem that the shades of meaning thus brought out were intended by the Divine Author.

We have in 2 Peter some excellent examples of these thoughts. In some of the prepositions used, the Revised Version translates the same Greek words differently from that given in the Authorized Version—both being true, and, therefore, both being instructive and helpful in application. For instance, in verse 2 in the Authorized Version Peter desires that "grace and truth be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of GOD." The Revised Version gives "in the knowledge of GOD". Probably, in this instance, the difference is not of great moment, though the former expression does not appear to convey the intimate closeness of the latter. "Knowledge" in the latter case seems to indicate personal contact rather than merely outward acquaintance—internal (in contrast to mere external knowledge) knowledge of the heart. But let us go back to verse 1. There we find the prepositions "through" and "in" variously translated by the Authorized Version and the Revised Version, conveying in each case a distinct and different thought. Those to whom Peter was writing are said (in the A. V.) to "have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of GOD." There is no occasion whatever to dispute the accuracy of the thought conveyed by the translation quoted, but now turn to the Revised Version and note carefully that another thought is begotten by the simple change of the English preposition, both being legitimate translations of the original Greek. "To them that have obtained like precious faith (or as the Greek says, "equally precious faith") in the righteousness of GOD." There are two points in this translation that seem to bring out the thought that I wish to make clear. Notice the words "have obtained". Do they not suggest a process of experience, and do not the words "equally precious faith", (said in the margin to be the literal translation of the Greek) corroborate and intensify the thought? Peter's faith in the righteousness of GOD was "precious" because it was not given only, but "obtained". How was it obtained? The reader has but to review the life history of Peter, and his witness to those whose faith in the righteousness of GOD was "equally precious", because they, too, had passed through similar experiences, and their faith was also both "through" and "in" GOD.

Thus, if we carefully examine the various renderings of well known responsible translators, we shall find our viewpoint of Scripture study greatly enlarged; just as our conception of the beauty of a building is enhanced by a knowledge of its various aspects obtained from different standpoints, each adding to the beauty of the whole in harmonious completeness.

HAVE YOU EVER?

*Have you ever heard the story
Of the Babe of Bethlehem,
Who was worshiped by the angels
And the wise and holy men?
How He taught the learned doctors
In the temple far away?
Oh, I'm glad, so glad, to tell you,
He is just the same to-day!*

*Have you ever heard the story
How He walked upon the sea,
To His dear disciples, tossing
On the waves of Galilee?
How the waves in angry motion
Quickly did His will obey?
Oh, I'm glad, so glad, to tell you,
He is just the same to-day!*

*Have you ever heard of Jesus,
Praying in Gethsemane,
And the ever-thrilling story,
How He died upon the tree,
Cruel thorns His forehead piercing
As His spirit passed away?
This He did for you, my brother,
And He's just the same to-day!*

—Selected.

THE BIRTH OF OUR LORD

AT THIS time when the whole Christian world pauses in consideration of the birth of Jesus Christ, it should be realized by all, that while the existence of Christ means much and after all is the real fact for consideration, nevertheless, the manner of Christ's life affects so much our understanding of God's plans and purposes that it seems very important that we should carefully and kindly study this immense subject in the hope of aiding ourselves in a clearer and more complete comprehension of God's whole revelation to man. One's understanding of the record of Christ's temptation in the wilderness must of necessity be modified by his understanding of Christ Himself. One's comprehension of Christ's death is, likewise, affected by his understanding of Christ's life. The manner in which Christ became the "sin of the world" can be properly understood only with a proper understanding regarding Christ—Who is He?

Was Christ of dual nature? Was He part God and part human? If such, was He partly tempted and partly not tempted? Did He partly die and partly live? Was He only in part a sacrifice? These, to the writer, are very important questions. They are important because the proper understanding of them must be obtained if one is to properly understand and comprehend God in His dealings with, and cultivation of man.

The Bible declares that Christ's birth was unnatural and as such was miraculous. To accept this fact confounds generally the rest of Scripture regarding Him as usually understood by man. It is stated in Genesis 1 and 2 that God made man. The scientist and the evolutionist question sometimes God's method, and undertake to presume that, after all, God did not make him, but rather that he was the natural outcome of natural means in process of development through previous ages. But the biblical student who is a believer in God feels that he has abundant proof to accept the assurances that Adam was the creature of God's Hand. It is said that God made him of the dust of the ground. This put God in position of fully creating Adam at that particular time. Adam had never before existed, in person or in ancestry. God gave to him that nature and life and condition, which in His great wisdom He knew was best.

Really, the same truth is stated with reference to Christ. It is true that His genealogy is scripturally traced back to David, Abraham, and Adam. It seems only good to think that God would thus establish Him as one of the same race and of like nature as is Adam's family. But, on the other hand, it is taught definitely that God made Him. If God used such agency as would associate Him with Adamic generations, that does not at all affect the value of the instruction that He was the handiwork of God. It neither lessens nor hinders God's ability when we are assured that He "was made of woman," "made under the law," "made like unto His brethren." God was equally able to make Him through such agencies as He was able to make Adam of the dust of the ground—yes, to make both of like nature, one race—brothers. Nor was it any more necessary for God to permit Christ to inherit from the race through which He made Him, than it was necessary for Him to give to Adam inheritance from the dust because that Adam was made thereof. It seems beautifully true that God's creation of Christ placed Him in that same state of newness of creation as was Adam when he first "became a living soul." Jesus was God's creature. By miracle of God He was made sinless, spotless, pure, clean. He was untainted, untarnished, unspotted by any inheritance from ancestry. In respect to sin He had no inheritance, either from Adam, Abraham, David, Mary, or any other. He was miraculously God's own creature after the fashion and nature of Adam. He had the problems of Adam, the problems of Abraham, David, and of the human race, to solve; but these He received, not from any human inheritance, but because it was given Him of God to solve them in behalf of His brethren. He was free from death, but capable of dying; free from sin, but capable of sinning; free from righteousness, but capable of doing right—free, wholly free, like Adam in every sense of the word, as He came forth from the creative hand of God, to enter upon the great duty of life and of responsibility to His Maker. As such, He was tempted, tried, tested, proved; in every sense did God develop Him for the marvelous positions which He had for Him to occupy. When tempted, He was tempted not because of any inherited bad disposition, but tempted by outer environments. When He died, He died not because of any inherited sin, or of any committed sin, but because of being wholly and entirely capable of dying, and, refusing to resist the wicked onslaughts of man, He suffered death as caused from without, but in no sense as caused from within. Through this process, having been proven true and loyal to God in every particular, even unto death, He was raised by the same God who had given Him existence. God enlarged His power, enlarged His life, heightened His position over man. He was now God's Son in power. It necessitated death, death of the old, mortal, fleshly, Adam-like nature, before God could give unto Him, in its place, the larger, higher, new nature for service. In both natures He was the Creature of God.

He was the gift of God by God's own creating Hand. His existence was miraculous; even more so than was Adam's. One great, outstanding truth of Scripture seems to be that Jesus was of God, possessing nature, not like unto God, but such as God gave to Him in His creative work.

AS FAITHFUL BEREANS, LET US ALL AT THIS CHRISTMAS TIME FERVENTLY THANK GOD FOR THE GIFT OF HIS DEAR SON TO MAN.

BEREAN work in Waterloo has taken a new step forward with the organization of a Junior class. The Juniors organized and elected officers Wednesday evening, November 23. We now have a membership of ten, which we hope to increase. Perhaps we can make our class bigger than the Seniors. At least we can try.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER

THIS BOOK is found at the end of the historical books of the Old Testament. Its place in the English Bible has, no doubt, been determined by a desire to bring together the whole of the historical books. It is not in its chronological order as that order stands, (1) Daniel, (2) Esther, (3) Nehemiah, (4) Ezra. The time of the events of this book is during the Medo-Persian kingdom as depicted by the great image in Daniel 2. Ahasuerus is thought to be a title rather than a name, and that the king at this time is believed to be Xerxes I. of ancient history.

At this time, God's people, the Jews, were in exile, having been taken captives during the Babylonian kingdom under the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. They were scattered abroad throughout every province of the Medo-Persian kingdom.

Esther is the only book in the entire Bible in which the Divine Name is not found: but notes in Companion Bible tell us that the Divine name really occurs in the Hebrew, though it is hidden in Acrostics.

Companion Bible notes also say, "Jehovah had declared, Deut. 31:16-18, that if His people forsook Him, He would hide His face from them. Here this threatening was fulfilled. But, though He was hidden from them, He was working for them. Though the book reveals Him as overruling all, His Name is hidden. It is there for His people to see, not for His enemies to see or hear. His working was secret and hidden: hence, the name of Jehovah is hidden secretly four times in this book, and the name, Ehyeh, (I AM THAT I AM) once."

"In these five Acrostics we have something far beyond a mere coincidence; we have design. When we read the denunciation in Deut. 31:16-18, and see it carried out in Persia, we learn that though God was not among His people there, He was FOR them. Though He was not acting as Jehovah, "That dwelleth between the Cherubims," He was 'The God of Heaven' ruling and over-ruling all in the heavens above and in the Earth beneath for the fulfillment of His purposes, and in the deliverance of His people. Hence, though His name, as well as His presence, is HIDDEN, yet it is there, in the Word; and so wonderfully interwoven that no enemy will ever know how to put it out."

Lydia Railsback.

GOD'S DWELLING PLACE

"WHAT! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?"—1 Cor. 6:19. Again, "Ye are the temple of the living God."—2 Cor. 6:16.

We learn that in former times a house or dwelling for God was a temple erected and set apart for the worship of the true God. Now, through the Scriptures, we learn that we are God's temple. What greater thing could we desire to be? Of the erection and shape of our temple for God we have no choice, but in the preparation and keeping, we have charge, a privilege too often let go undone, or done in a careless way.

"Then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." We hear of God and as we hear we believe in His promises. We want Him to dwell in our temple. But already sin is in the temple, "for whatsoever is not of faith is sin", Rom. 14:23. The first thing we are to do is to "repent", then be "baptized"; that is, turn out and away from sin, then cleanse the temple. Now you are Christ's temple. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

The next thing is to so fill this temple with Christ-like things that there will be no room for sin. What things shall we put in? Peter tells us to begin with virtue; commendable practices; add knowledge; temperance; endurance, without murmuring; godliness; brotherly love and charity. "For if these things be in you, and abound, make you that ye shall be neither barren nor in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

OUR MORNING PRAYER

By N. H. Geiselman

OUR FATHER which art in heaven, we thank Thee for the day when life and immortality were brought to light through the gospel. We thank Thee, O God, for the confirmation of that gospel by the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ from the dead.

O Lord God, we sorrow for the sufferings of Thine only Son upon the cross. By that suffering Thou hast blotted out for ever our iniquities and our sins, and it is with deepest gratitude that we remember those crimson footsteps to the cross, the platted crown of thorns upon His brow; the bleeding hands and feet as, hanging between malefactors, His life's blood ebbed away: all this for the sins of the world! Father, help us while we live, that we may not be guilty of bringing an unhallowed offering, as a shadow over Thy commended love.

We thank Thee, dear Father, for the Spirit's power, by which the grave was robbed of its treasure; that Thou hast made it possible for us to have a living Christ to cheer us on our way. Help us, dear Father, to live upon the earth as those that are in touch with Thee. May we sit in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, looking for that blessed hope, and Thy transforming power, which shall change our bodies that they may be fashioned like unto His glorious body.

O our Father, may the light of Thy countenance shine deeply into our very souls day by day, comforting us and healing us from all sin. We ask it all in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

WILLIAM B. BLUMENTHAL ON PALESTINE

"The following is an extract from a letter to Mr. Bernard Stone from Mr. William B. Blumenthal of New York who is now in Palestine.

"THE FIRST day of our arrival (November 1) was the date of issue of the first Hebrew-inscribed currency since Bar Kochba—1800 years. What romance on Herzl and Nachlat Benjamin Streets in Tel Aviv as the shops and stores handed out the new money! The next day was celebrated as the tenth anniversary of the Balfour Declaration. We were of the 8,000 at the Bet Am in Tel Aviv and had the honor of being seated on the stage next to Bialik. We followed a torch procession up Allenby Street and then took tea with Bialik. Great Bialik!

"But Tel Aviv gave us heart pangs. The sight of Jewish University girls with thick eye-glasses and bandaged bare feet hammering unweildy stones for paving stones in the glare of the burning sun made us shiver. What waste of precious flowers, what poor economy! Hunger stalks in the eyes of the populace in the poorer section of the city and especially of Nordia, situated on the N. F. land. The courage of these people, who walk proud and erect, their confidence, is amazing."

AN APPEAL TO MY BOYS

By M. A. Woodward

I THANK GOD that there are several of them here and there: some have fallen asleep; others are preaching the blessed gospel; a few are preaching another gospel; and some have fallen by the wayside and are wounded—the world promised them much pleasure, but has disappointed them.

May I ask these a question? If I should stand quietly by and see a friend approaching a very dangerous precipice, and should not hurry to warn him of his danger, would he ever have any confidence in my love again? No. No matter how often I said that I loved him he would not believe me. I know, boys, that the wound you received is very serious: it has left serious scars. I know of a remedy that will even efface the scars. It is for all who will apply for it. Would I be kind or prove my love for you, if I did not urge you to use this wonderful remedy? You are not satisfied with what the world gave you, for it left all hope for anything but present pleasures out of its promises, with no warning of the terrible sting it was sure to leave. The world has left its scar upon you in the shape of doubts. You doubt your own strength to prove true, even if you apply the remedy. You are sick, or you would trust and accept. The wounds you received are not healed, and there are indications of blood poisoning.

I have a sure remedy: it has never failed; it is advertised by only one Physician; it is patented, only the Teacher knows the formula. I hear Him say, "They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick." What, to the sick and wounded ones? So simple you dread to stop at His office. He sees you passing by, and the cry comes down to you, "Turn ye, turn ye, . . . ; for why will ye die?" Listen! "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." "Be ye reconciled to God."

Are your burdens heavy? Cast them upon the Lord. What more can be done for the sick and weary? God has provided the remedy. Are you afraid to try because of your own weakness? Listen to Paul. To Timothy he said, "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." To the Ephesians he said, I am "the least of all saints." So willing to acknowledge his weakness, but so glad to tell of his power and willingness to receive all who will come. Paul did not wait a moment after he found the remedy. He applied it to his needs and immediately began to tell others how this great Physician came to heal and save all who would come to Him. He is the best friend you have ever had; for He has such patience with us all.

I am praying for you. Will you help God to answer my prayers? They cannot be answered unless you come back to God.

Yours, waiting to meet you when Christ comes.

JOHN THE BAPTIST AND JESUS

Mark 1:1-13

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 40:3-11

GOLDEN TEXT

He must increase, but I must decrease.—John 3:30.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

John Prepares the Way for Jesus. It had been four hundred years since the voice of Judah's last prophet, Malachi. The Jews, though professedly believing the law and the prophets, were reluctant to accept its fulfillment in their immediate present. Throughout Judea, John the cousin of Jesus, endowed with the spirit of God, had been sent out to announce the ripe time for the appearing of the prophesied Messiah. He had aroused the attention of the whole populace promiscuously. All classes and all ages went out to hear him. Promiscuously, he prepared their minds for the coming event.

Repentance. The same prophetic word upon which John relied for authority to herald the approach of the Messiah is the authority for announcing the return of that same Christ to finish the work which He had begun. The Bible conveys God's own word to man to instruct him of the approaching events and fulfillment of the divine purpose more, even, than in John's day. It is necessary that he who would profit by the soon-coming Lord should repent, that is, change over his line of thought to the thought presented by God's word, and confessing, that is, acclaiming the correctness thereof: should follow the Messiah with all those who would share in the joy and the glory of God's completed purpose.

Questions on the Subject. What was the sense in which the way needed to be prepared for the approach of Jesus? Did John have any special authority for presuming to make this special preparation? What was it? Just what was done by John the Baptist by way of accomplishing the preparation for the Messiah?

Was the repentance of the people in John's day any different in principle than the repentance that should prevail relative to God's word?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

That one must needs be increasing; but I, be decreasing.—John 3:30, Roth.

Exalt Christ, not self. Conversions should be to Christ, not to the one who proclaims the gospel.

The individual worker should sink into insignificance before Christ when He is lifted up. "And I, if I be lifted up, . . . will draw all men unto me," said the Christ. It is the work of the Christian to lift Him up and keep self in the background. John said, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Unity of the Word of God. "The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God; as it is written in the prophets . . ." To rightly understand the Scriptures it is necessary that we should recognize their unity of authorship and purpose. Neither the Old nor the New Testament was intended to be complete in itself. The Old Testament forms the foundation of the New, and the New Testament complements the Old. The principles of truth, and of righteousness, presented in the Old Testament, are fully developed and completed in the New. The links, which bind the teachings of Moses and the prophets with those of Jesus and the apostles, cannot be broken without losing the continuity of thought presented in both Testaments, which, in turn, would prohibit a clear comprehension of the harmony of God's entire plan as revealed in the Bible.

Preparation. Successful leadership in any vocation must be preceded by careful personal preparation on the part of the would-be leader. Before John could "prepare the way of the Lord", by leading the back-slidden Jews to repentance and faith, he first spent years in the desert, where, no doubt, he devoted himself to prayerful meditation and to the study of the sacred writings. The young person who is moved by a fervent desire to lead sinners out of darkness and into the glorious light of the gospel of Christ, would do well to consider the example of Jesus, who spent years in study and long nights in prayer; of John the Baptist, and his period of preparation in the desert; and of Paul, a student from early youth, who became thoroughly educated in the philosophy of the Greeks, the learning of the Romans and the Law and Prophets of the Hebrews, and who, "immediately after his conversion to Christianity seems to have gone into Arabia, where he remained three years, Gal. 1:11-17; and where he, in all probability, was chiefly occupied, by meditation and study, in preparing himself for the great work to which he had been called."—Pop. and Crit. Bib. Ency.—G. E. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: John prepares the way for Jesus.

He who properly prepares the way for that which is worth while is a very important factor in the whole development.

Jesus Himself was to tread the earth for only a short time. Each day, therefore, was important. And so it was that John came as a forerunner, proclaiming the message of a coming Messiah, preparing the hearts of many to receive the coming One, and selecting and developing a few individuals to be ready to help the Master in His work.

The simplicity and earnestness of John's life and work were abundant evidence of his sincerity, and that he recognized the great importance of his task. He gave the best that he had, and even died as a result of his firm stand for right.

Our Savior is coming again. To us the message is given, and some must proclaim that good news as forerunners of their Lord. A group must be called out and trained to assist Christ when He appears.

Is it just as important to bear the message of the coming Lord to-day as it was then? Tell some ways in which the Christian can impress the coming of Christ upon others.—F. E. S.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: John preparing the way for Jesus.

In this lesson Mark tells us a very interesting story of John the Baptist and his preaching of the kingdom news. What a strange looking preacher he was—clothed with camel's hair with a belt of skin.

One day while John was at the Jordan River he looked up and saw Jesus coming. He said, "Behold the Lamb of God". Jesus told him that He Himself wanted to be baptized. John did not feel worthy to do it. But Jesus said, "Suffer it to be so now". And John baptized Him. As Jesus came up out of the water the Spirit of God lighted upon Him in the form of a dove, and a voice said, "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased".

How happy John must have been to know he was honored in this way. John was God's messenger to prepare the way of the Lord; and God is using men and women today to prepare the way of the second coming of our blessed Christ. Are we helping or hindering?—M. A. W.

Sr. Alta King reports interesting and instructive meetings conducted by Bros. Williams and Cowles at Lincoln, Nebr.

Good meetings at Kewanee Friday evening and at Ripley over Sunday, the 18th, were reported by Bro. C. E. Randall.

Bro. Randall will begin work at Eldorado, Illinois, on Christmas Sunday. Let everybody cooperate in the work.

MICHIGAN

Mild weather and thunder showers are cutting off many of old man Winter's days; no matter how hard he may take hold now, he cannot bring as much discomfort as if he had gotten a good hold earlier in the season.

Twenty-eight adults were in attendance at the West Bowne Bible class on the evening of the 14th. Several new ones have been attending lately.

Some time ago Bro. Patrick assisted Mrs. Ira Johnston, of Alto, to put on Christ in baptism. Three others had planned on being baptized, but sickness prevented.

The interest in the Grand Rapids work is growing. One hundred fifty were in attendance at Sunday School on the 4th, and one hundred fifty-one on the 11th. The preaching services are well attended.

Bro. Patrick has resigned as state worker for Michigan to take effect the first of April. Much pressure is being brought to bear to have him change his decision. The people living in the vicinity of the church; and who have attended the services more or less regularly, circulated a petition praying that he remain. Sixty-three names were affixed thereto. This did not include any of the church membership.

Bro. Merle Patrick of Fort Wayne, Indiana, is visiting his parents, Bro. and Sr. Jas. A. Patrick of Caledonia, Michigan, during the holiday season.

PLUM RIVER, ILLINOIS

Meetings on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday were well attended and good interest was manifest. There is a promising field at Plum River, if time can be found when weather and road condition will permit. Two were to be baptized, but sickness prevented. Others were considering the same.

HAMMOND, LOUISIANA

We have just completed an interesting series of meetings at the Happy Woods school house, near Hammond, Louisiana. There are different emotions which combine to make this always a pleasant work, as it is the old boyhood home and our aged mother as well as other relatives and friends are still located here.

The attendance throughout the meeting was exceptionally good, with faithful interest, and we are thankful to be able to introduce to the brotherhood Sr. (Mrs.) Martin Bankston, Springfield, Louisiana, who was baptized December 12. Sr. Bankston, a highly respected young wife and mother, has carefully considered this step, and we all rejoiced in her decision. Others are also considering, and we trust they will come also to present themselves before it is too late.

COME OVER TO OUR CHURCH

Have you heard that a Christmas program is to be given at the Oregon church on Saturday night, December 24? This is really going to happen. Let's all come out to hear the children and young people pay tribute to our Lord and Savior.

On Christmas night the Choir will give a musical program. The choir is increasing in number and enthusiasm.

Let's have a full attendance in each class Sunday morning, December, 25. Now, this doesn't mean only Christmas morning, but every Sunday after. Should we older ones sit back and see the smaller classes burst the church walls? Let the children burst the walls, but let the rest of us do more than that. Some of us do not realize how inspiring it is to see the children march in and recite their verses and sing their songs. Let's push the work!

Ruth Gesin, S. S. Sec'y.

SAC CITY, IOWA

Dear Sisters and Brothers in the Household of faith: It is nearing the time when, in the long ago, our heavenly Father set the Star of Bethlehem to guide the wise men to the birth manger of His dear Son. There they presented Him with gifts of appreciation to the Father who sent His only Begotten, that through our faith in Him, we might receive eternal life.

Our Sac City Berean Society would like to carry this thought of our heavenly Father on through the years to come, and so we are sending a small gift (as this is all we can do at present) in appreciation of your efforts there in Oregon for our good Restitution Herald, for which we wait anxiously every week; also in appreciation of the home you are giving to our alone ones; and last and of great importance, the aid you are giving to our young men, preparing them that they may be guided by our heavenly Father to go out into the world and proclaim the gospel of the kingdom and the return of His dear Son, our Savior.

Our Berean Society has been organized two years and four months. We have sixteen members at present; we lost two members, but two new ones have been added of late. We meet on Wednesday evening of each week. Our members are scattered, and many times there are just two or three in attendance, but we feel that by keeping our dues paid we can help a little with state dues and with the balance of our money we can help in a small way with other things. We study from the Berean Lesson Books and find them very interesting.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year, and may all your work be blessed.

Yours in the Master's service,
Mrs. W. W. Cooper, Sec'y and Treas.

FROM DARKNESS TO LIGHT

Topic: John's ministry.

The ministry of John the Baptist is the beginning of a marked advance in man's relationship to God. His mission was to bear witness of The Light. By John 1:1-4 we know (1) that The Light is God's life—not mere physical life that results in physical activity, but life that is light, that is conscious intelligence; (2) that this life (light) was in God, not in man; (3) that this life was the light of men and had shone from the beginning into the darkness of man's ignorance, but was not itself comprehended by that darkness. And how truly Bible records bear out this brief statement of the Apostle John concerning man's evolution out of ignorance into light, up to the time of Christ. From the beginning God's life, in its complete, highest form, designated as word, light (mind, conscious intelligence in full perfection) had been manifesting itself in creative works, in special miracles, and in spoken law and teachings; and there had been evolving in man by reason of his contacts with these manifestations, that intelligence which distinguishes man from the rest of the animal kingdom, in fulfillment of God's design to make man in His own likeness. But intelligence thus developed in man was only partial, for it totally lacked comprehension of the light itself, of the word of God Himself. This fact is demonstrated in a small way by man's intelligence concerning electricity, evolved through man's contacts with electricity in action, an intelligence completely devoid of comprehension of electricity itself.

However, the time came when God saw fit to manifest life, His life, in such manner that man could comprehend it; that is, comprehend the light, the word, God Himself. And He sent John to bear witness of this manifestation of the light, His life, which manifestation is the word made flesh—God's perfect and full intelligence (which fullness is grace and truth) embodied in Christ Jesus. Through this manifestation alone can the light dispel ignorance so that man may comprehend God's fullness—grace and truth. No man can come to, (comprehend), the Father, except through the Christ.

And this wondrous manifestation of the light, which made possible and began, in a concrete way, man's fellowship with God, was introduced by John the Baptist. As yet the world little realizes the advancement made in man's development into God's likeness when John began his preaching.—A. K.

IT DOES NOT PAY—

To do less than the best we can.

To fool ourselves by thinking that we are fooling others.

To try to get something for nothing—or anything for less than it's worth.

To lose our temper, and with it the respect of one we love.

To make an enemy, when it is so much easier and pleasanter to make a friend.

To advertise our stupidity by being cynical, irreverent, vulgar and discourteous.

To worship God in the morning and play the devil in the evening.

To "have a good time" at the expense of a bad headache and a painful conscience.

To sow wild oats and have to harvest the crop and live on the stuff ever after.

To spend the last half of one's life regretting the first half.

There are many other things that do not pay, but with due heed to the above we are not likely to be "stung" by the other unprofitable transactions of life.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: The soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final destruction of the wicked, 2 Thess. 1:9; the restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

JOHN THE BAPTIST AND JESUS

(Mark 1:1-13)

YEARS AGO, in the land of Judea, lived a good woman, named Elizabeth and her husband, Zacharias, who was a priest. They had no children, although they wanted them very much. But one day an angel appeared in the temple before Zacharias, and told him that they were to be given a son, whom they should name John. This son was to be very great, with a special mission, and a most wonderful privilege. He was to bring many Israelites back to their Lord; he was to be filled with the Holy Spirit from his birth; and greatest of all, he was to prepare the way for the promised Savior.

Accordingly, in due time, John was born, and a few months later the baby Jesus came into the world. Mary, the mother of Jesus, and Elizabeth were cousins so the two boys must have known one another. The Bible tells us very little of their boyhood. It does say that John was to touch no wine nor strong drink and that he "was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel." So we are most sure that both boys were kind, thoughtful, obedient, and helpful wherever they were.

Several years passed by, when all at once John appeared, coming from the wilderness preaching a new doctrine. He lived very simply, eating very plain food and wearing very plain clothing, but his message attracted the attention of all Judea, even Jerusalem, and many came to hear him.

What was this message? "There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost."

And who was the One mightier? Jesus. John was not one bit jealous of Jesus. Instead, he felt very humble and unworthy in comparison.

And what did John mean by, "I have baptized you with water"? Why he told the people that if they were sorry for the wrong things they had done, they could go down into the water and be baptized. Thus, they were clean again, as if their sins had been washed away, and then they were ready to start out in a new life. In this way, in their faith, the people were being prepared to receive Jesus, when He should appear.

The prophets had foretold all this just as it had worked out: "Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

One day Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee to John and insisted that John baptize Him as he had many others. Of course Jesus had no sins to wash away, but He wanted to fulfill all righteousness.

And what do you think happened as Jesus came up out of the Jordan River. The Spirit, in the form of a dove, came from Heaven and alighted on Jesus, and a voice said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Then Jesus went into the wilderness, too.

SOME THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

1. Why was John called, "the Baptist"?
2. Are we trying to prepare the way for the Second Coming of Christ?
3. Are we living as simply as John lived?
4. If Jesus had been merely sprinkled, would the Bible have said, "coming up out of the water"?
5. Have you been baptized?
6. When will you be baptized?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Luke 3:1-23.
2. Read again the article on Baptism in The Herald of December 6, by Given W. Cleek.

TINY TOTS

John the Baptist was a great preacher. He told people that a great, good Man was to come and save them. This great, good Man was Jesus.

One day Jesus came to see John. He told John He wanted to be baptized. So John took Jesus down into the River Jordan and baptized Him. Then God said to Jesus, "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

NEW YEAR PRAYER

*"Father, lead me day by day,
Ever in Thine own sweet way:
Teach me to be pure and true,
Show me what I ought to do.*

*"When in danger make me brave;
Make me know that Thou canst save:
Keep me safe by Thy dear side;
Let me in Thy love abide. Amen."*

IF YE KNOW THESE THINGS

By Samuel E. Haney

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."
—John 13:17.

TO UNDERSTAND the full significance of the text, one must read the preceding verses of the chapter. Note: "Now just before the Feast of the Passover this incident took place."—V. 1, Weymouth. The incident, menial act, was a practical demonstration of humility, not the introduction of a new ritualistic form of worship. The Lord often made use of contemporaneous customs and things to illustrate His teachings. Walking was the principal mode of travel, and sandals were the only protection to the feet; hence, a foot bath after a long journey was salutary and refreshing. The Master taught the same lesson verbally: "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven. For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Matt. 18:1-4; Luke 14:11.

As the writer sees it, feet washing, in this case, was but a means to an end; the text, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them," being the apex of the whole incident, "these things" referring to His and His apostles' teachings in particular, and the whole of God's Word in general. Conversely, if we know these things, and do not do them, we shall be unhappy. The writer believes this explains the cause of so many enlightened Christians being out of harmony with the spirit that actuated Paul, that is, "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things."—2 Cor. 6:4-10. "Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice. Rejoice evermore."

The difficulty with many of us is that we fail to perceive the import of the scriptural expression, "Word of God." Jesus said, "It is the spirit that quickeneth (giveth life, R. V.); the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."—John 6:63. John saw Jesus symbolically: "And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called The Word of God."—Rev. 19:13. The beloved John began his general epistle by referring to the Redeemer as the "Word was God"—"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." With these facts in mind, how momentous Paul's words become: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom."—Col. 3:16.

The Word of God being Spirit, it is enforced by omnipotence; hence we read: "For the word of God is quick and powerful (living and active, R. V.), and sharper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."—Heb. 4:12. Nothing so grave as dealing with the Word of God intelligently. Ananias and his wife lied "to the Holy Spirit", not "unto (mere) men", as they supposed, . . . Then there were two funerals.

The crux of the subject is obedience to the Word of God regardless of personal consideration, without a choice of our own. Let us be in accord with the "remnant of Judah", "that the LORD thy God may shew us the way wherein ye may (should, R. V.) walk, and the thing that we may (should, R. V.) do. . . . That it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God."—Jer. 42:3-6. Stephen stigmatized the Jews as having the antithesis of this spirit: "Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your father did, so do ye."—Acts 7:51. It is a fearful thing to "resist" the word of God, which is tantamount to resisting the Holy Spirit; and yet we frequently see such conduct.

The principle underlying the Christian's fear and distress is a disregard of the first commandment, i. e., "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Most Christians are making "gods" of themselves. Their mirrors, which reflect their imaginary Shekinah, are venerated. Break their mirrors, and you break their heart! But the "name" of the "gods" of Christendom is Legion, "for they are many".

Little Johnny well illustrates some good folk's flippant idea of the Word of God. All were seated about the Thanksgiving Day feast. Preacher—Johnny, can you tell me what other thing we ought to think of on Thanksgiving Day besides turkey? Johnny—"Yes Sir: cranberry sauce." Again, many who are disregarding and misapplying the Word of God will, in the near future, have about the same conception of the Bible as Johnny had of salt. Teacher—"Johnny, what is salt?" Johnny—"Salt is that stuff what makes eggs taste nasty when you don't put it on."

Probably the "thing" (commandment) next in order that we all "know", but most of us do not "do" (obey) is "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."—2 Cor. 6:17-18. "Happy are ye if ye do them"—(this). To be "sons and daughters" ought to make us "happy". It did me, when I left Catholicism, though it cost me the love and good-will of many relatives and friends: but I have been compensated an hundred-fold by the love of many brethren who have "the love of God shed abroad in their hearts" by the Holy Spirit, the Word of God. "Blood is thicker than water", but the Holy Spirit is much thicker than blood. It is impossible to rise above the water in which one swims.

The stability of this world's love is as unreliable as smoke. Wisdom expresses one cause: "Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil."—Ecl. 8:11. Godly love does not emanate from a heart that "is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked".

Oh! it costs much these days to do "these things"—obey the Word of God—and the price is advancing, while the resisting power is weakening rapidly. The followers of Christ are daily becoming more lonesome, and finding the path kingdomward narrowing. Is John 6:66-67 being repeated?—"From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him. Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?"

The alloy is being burned out of us: we are in the "seven times" crucial testing period, "And who may stand in thy sight when once thou art angry?"—Psa. 76:7.

Esau made a bad birthright deal, but we can make one a thousand times worse.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 24

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF SYRIA

(Daniel 11:15-19)

BUT SHE shall not stand on his side, neither be for him." Far from standing on his side, the Jews, led by Judas Maccabæus, fought strenuously against the imposition of the Syrian laws and forms of worship; and the books of the Maccabees contain detailed descriptions of the many battles which they fought against the armies of Epiphanes, and the wonderful victories which they gained. "So he (Judas) gat his people great honor, and put on a breastplate as a giant, and girt his warlike harness about him, and he made battles, protecting the host with his sword. In his acts he was like a lion, and like a lion's whelp roaring for his prey. For he pursued the wicked, and sought them out, and burnt up those that vexed his people. Wherefore the wicked shrunk for fear of him, and all the workers of iniquity were troubled, because salvation prospered in his hand. He grieved also many kings, and made Jacob glad with his acts, and his memorial is blessed for ever. Moreover, he went through the cities of Judah, destroying the ungodly out of them and turning away the wrath from Israel; so that he was renowned unto the utmost part of the land, and he received unto him such as were ready to perish." —1 Macc. 3.

"After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many; but a prince for his own behalf shall cause the reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him." In the year B. C. 168, Antiochus again invaded Egypt, which had passed almost entirely out of his control, owing to the reconciliation of the two Egyptian princes, the elder of whom had been raised to the throne contrary to the wishes of Antiochus. He proceeded thence by land at the head of his army, and advanced directly toward Alexandria, which had so far successfully desisted his efforts to capture it. Meanwhile his fleet took possession of Cyprus; and the defeat of the Egyptian navy near Pelusian rendered him master of the whole seacoast. These actions on his part were most insulting to the Roman Senate, to whose care the youthful Egyptian king had been committed by his guardians, and an envoy was immediately despatched from Rome to Antiochus to demand restitution of all that he had taken and the withdrawal of himself and his armies from all the territories of the Egyptian king.

The following extracts from Mommsen's History of Rome, Book 3, chapter 10, explain how the predictions of the prophet were fulfilled in every detail:

"Just as Antiochus Epiphanes lay before Alexandria, not long after the battle of Pydna, the Roman envoy, Gaius Popillius, a harsh, rude man arrived, and intimated to him the command of the senate that he should restore all that he had conquered, and should evacuate Egypt within a set time. Antiochus asked time for consideration; but the consular drew with his staff a circle around the king, and bade him declare his intentions before he stepped beyond the circle."

"Then he shall turn his face toward the fort of his own land." "Antiochus replied that he would comply; and marched off to his capital." Thus he turned his face toward the fort of his own land, no longer an independent sovereign, but a mere vassal of the Romans, into whose hands his territories had passed, not through battle or force of arms, but through the threat of a prince for his own behalf, a prince who desired to please those whom he represented, and succeeded in adding a province to the Roman Empire, without a battle, and without the loss of a single life.

"Egypt voluntarily submitted to the Roman protectorate; and thereupon the kings of Syria also desisted from the last effort to maintain their independence against Rome. Like Macedonia in the war waged by Perseus, the Seleucidæ in the war regarding Colesyria had made a final effort to recover their earlier power; but it is a significant indication of the difference between the two kingdoms, that in the former case the legions, in the latter the abrupt language of a diplomatist, decided the controversy. . . .

"All the Hellenistic states had thus been completely subjected to the protectorate of Rome, and the whole empire of Alexander the Great had fallen to the Roman Commonwealth, just as if the city had inherited it from his heirs. . . .

"Polybius dates from the battle of Pydna the full establishment of the universal empire of Rome. It was in fact the last battle in which a civilized state confronted Rome in the field on a footing of equality with her as a power; all subsequent struggles were rebellions or wars with peoples beyond the pale of the Romano-Greek civilization—the barbarians, as they were called."

"But he shall stumble and fall, and not be found." Shortly after the foregoing events occurred Antiochus, while engaged in quelling a revolt in Persia, received intelligence of the disasters which had befallen his armies in Palestine, and, enraged beyond measure, he immediately hastened homewards with the intention of utterly destroying the Jewish nation. On the way, however, he was seized with a loathsome disease, and died in great agony.

At this point the prophecies concerning the Grecian kingdoms come to an end. One by one those kingdoms had fallen, and passed into the hands of the Romans, though it was destined that in later times they should again be united in a single empire—the Eastern.

To the Jews the fall of Grecian power was of great benefit. They were no longer persecuted on account of their religion, and for many years their rulers were men of their own blood.

CHRISTMAS FROM THE BELIEVERS' VIEWPOINT

Adapted from an address by the late Robert McLaughlan

THE ECHOES of Christmas anthems and sweet Christmas greetings are sounding in our ears. Let us speak on God's great gift to the world in the person of His Son, Christ Jesus.

The reason of that gift, as stated by Christ Himself in His memorable conversation with Nicodemus, was that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16. How great the gift that made everlasting life available to the children of a mortal race! This gift overshadows and far surpasses all other gifts because, without everlasting life, the best of Heaven's gifts could not be enjoyed.

In order to understand the condition on which eternal life is to be conferred on man, you must study the Divine Records. Briefly they are: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son."—1 John 5:11. Whosoever sets this testimony aside destroys the teachings of the Old and New Testaments.

This invests the birth of Christ with a new and deeper interest to us and to all mankind, if they could only be brought to see it.

But we come to the biblical narrative itself.

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him."—Matt. 2:1-2.

The historic facts of the Bible, which infidels are ever trying to disparage, are so many bulwarks around the citadel of truth, and any attempt to discredit them ought to be resented. Think of the innumerable prophecies verified in the birth of Christ. Truly, "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy", Rev. 19:10. "To him gave all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins."—Acts 10:43.

A bright morning dawned upon the world when the angel of the Lord appeared to the shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem and made the glad announcement, "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2:10.

No wonder that on the occurrence of an event of such world-wide importance, affecting not only time but eternity, there should suddenly be with the angel "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Neither was it any wonder that old Simeon, that just and devout man who was waiting for the consolation of Israel, to whom the Holy Spirit had revealed that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ, took the child "up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." Nor was it any wonder that Anna the prophetess gave thanks unto the Lord, and spake of Him to all that looked for redemption in Jerusalem, Luke 2:27-38.

O STAR OF THE EAST!

By Frances Byers

*O Star of the East, Let Thy light clearly shine
On the men of the world, who think not of time;
Their knowledge increases, they run to and fro;
They think not of Christ, our Savior, who'll go
For ever before us, preparing life's way;
Nor do they e'er think of the great Judgment Day.*

*I think of the life on the cross which He gave
For you and for me, for all sinners, to save;
I trust then that we in this life shall go on Until we may say, "Temptation, I've won."
God, help us stand fast and teach us to pray:
O Star of the East, thou true Light, guide our way.*

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 17

OREGON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 27, 1927

NUMBER 13

What Did You Do in 1927?

*Did you give him a lift? He's a brother of man,
And bearing about all the burden he can.
Did you give him a smile? He was downcast and blue,
And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.
Did you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill,
And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill.
Did you give him a word? Did you show him the road?
Or did you just let him go on with his load?*

*Did you help him along? He's a sinner like you,
But the grasp of your hand might have carried him through.
Did you bid him good cheer? Just a word and a smile
Were what he most needed that last weary mile.
Do you know what he bore in that burden of cares,
That is every man's load, and that sympathy shares?
Did you try to find out what he needed from you,
Or did you just leave him to battle it through?*

*Do you know what it means to be losing the fight,
When a lift just in time might set everything right?
Do you know what it means—just the clasp of a hand
When a man's borne about all a man ought to stand?
Did you ask what it was—why the quivering lip,
And the glistening tears down the pale cheek that slip?
Were you a brother of his when the time came to be?
Did you offer to help him, or didn't you see?*

*Don't you know it's the part of a brother of man,
To find what the grief is and help when you can?
Did you stop when he asked you to give him a lift,
Or were you so busy you left him to shift?
Oh! I know what you meant—what you say may be true—
But the test of your manhood is, What did you do?
Did you reach out a hand? Did you find him the road?
Or did you just let him go by with his load?—Selected.*

GREETINGS

AT THIS SEASON of the year, when the old is passing out and the new is coming in all enriched with the recurrent joys of the new-born King, we wish to express to one and all of The Herald Family our sincere appreciation for every manifestation of loyalty to and cooperation in our mutual services in His name. Loyalty of faith in God and Christ, and cooperation in service thereunto are the greatest assets afforded the church by its members. Without them, little could be accomplished; with them, the Master's work can be carried forward to the full of the Master's pleasure in us.

Life is service: service to Him whose we are. Success is faithfulness in that service. There is no other ideal worthy of man. As we enter the new year, may it be the glad privilege of all to behold, as under the light of Him who is the ever-radiant Star of Bethlehem, the true opportunity that beckons each life to share in the Master's work; and may each one give that energy of loyalty that is becoming to every true-hearted Christian worker.

The Babe of Bethlehem has long been absent. The reverberation of Heaven's joys over His birth and of the soulful ecstasies of the groaning multitudes, because of the Glad News revealed in His words and works, now fill the whole round earth. Yes, more! The evidences of His soon return, as King indeed, mount higher and higher in the Eastern dawning.

Compelled by the urge of such inspiring vision, let us fill the coming year with the greatness of faith-wrought service that will enable workers all at the year's closing to exclaim with Paul of old: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: . . ."

APPEALS

SEVERAL YEARS ago the frequent publishing in The Herald of appeals for aid made it seem neccessary to wholly discontinue the practice. The reason was because different appeals were made by persons who were afterward found to be apparently able people who appeared to be literally living, in whole or in part, upon the gifts of others, some of whom seemed far less able to give than was the one making the appeal to go without the gift. Therefore, in order that God's people might still enjoy the privilege of aiding those in real need Sr. Orpha Sanford, 2934 W. Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Illinois, was designated as one to whom appeals could be made and to whom gifts could be made with an assurance that care would be taken to ascertain, in every instance, the needs of those soliciting help.

This system is in constant operation and Sr. Sanford is the one to whom all appeals reaching The Herald, or the National Bible Institution, have been sent. The system has proven to be better for all concerned than was the former way of each one sending directly, which resulted in some receiving much, while others received little. This present system The Herald recommends to all. But—Without establishing a precedent, and without opening the door for other appeals to follow later, we desire to publish the following appeal by Bro. E. O. Stewart. In doing so the writer wishes to personally assume the responsibility of soliciting some of the brethren who have been blessed with large and overabundant incomes from oil wells or other large enterprises—and especially to such brethren resident in Texas—to see to it that this brother who has been laboring for the welfare and salvation of many shall not need for the comforts of life.

We repeat that the publication of this appeal does not indicate that others will follow. We have no expectation of printing others from whatever source.

AN APPEAL

By E. O. Stewart

DEAR BRETHREN AND READERS OF THE HERALD: On account of my wife's illness for the last four or five years, and the low price of cotton last year, cotton being the money crop of this state, and having been out so much expenses during my wife's afflictions, I am asking the readers of The Restitution Herald, if they can without any ill convenience, to each help us as he feels best. The Bible says to "make your wants known", and I am making this appeal as a privilege which the Bible allows; so I do not feel as badly in doing this as I would if I did not realize that God grants me this privilege. Just a small donation from as many as can conveniently give such will be appreciated.

Yours in His service,

E. O. Stewart,

Box 485, Sweetwater, Texas.

GREETINGS

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH OF GOD:

We hereby extend heartiest greetings at this festival season to one and all of our Christian Brethren for their every evidence of loyalty to Him, whose we are, and for their cooperation in the common effort to provoke one another unto love and good works in His name. The spirit of loyalty, which carries with it earnestness of cooperation, is by far the greatest asset any body of people can compute. Its value is more than that of gold; its power greater than can be measured. From these spring forth the efforts of the several workers, each diligently striving to perform such part as he deems ability and training in Christ to make him to be most fitted.

Our greetings to one and all are made more fervent as a result of the continuous evidences of support and cooperation which throughout the year have been daily reaching our Headquarters' Office from all parts of the country. May the Father's blessing reward each one in just such measure as the Father alone knows proper and best; and may each one hold more firmly the hand of Him, who is our Guide, and be led in the strait and narrow path throughout the coming year—path that leads eventually to the radiant glory announcing His return.

Looking backward over the year now closing, we are reminded of no little progress of achievement in the Master's name. Anticipating a fuller statement to appear later, we call attention to the introduction and development of the Truth Seekers' Quarterly. Judging from the written testimony of many, this Quarterly is appreciated and valued far beyond the most sanguine expectations of those responsible for it. It is reported that different Sunday Schools have been strengthened and made more efficient by the use of this medium of help. It may be beneficial to some to be informed that this Quarterly is already used by individuals of other denominations to assist them as teachers in the preparation of the lessons for their respective Sunday School classes.

The Brotherhood, by cooperating to publish this Quarterly, has made it possible to benefit and strengthen our churches everywhere. Not only has this proffered aid reached and aided the adult Christian, but it has also already had its influence upon the children of our respective homes and upon the children of other homes in shapening and determining their faith toward God. As it is through the determination of faith that one comes to realize salvation, we are therefore warranted in hoping the Truth Seekers' Quarterlies are an aid that will assist many to come to be glorified with Christ in the fullness of salvation. For cooperation to bring this work about it must be that He who knows will here, too, compute faith to be righteousness, and will clothe the worker with just and proper reward.

Another effort that has been reestablished during the past year is our Bible Training Class. Though small, very small in its present status, nevertheless, testimony has already been given that the work presented in the Bible Training Class is in some important respects equal to or surpassing that that has been afforded in similar courses by larger institutions. Whatever results from this labor, whatever church or department of religious work may be benefited by the services of any who may go forth from this effort, such benefits must be assigned to those who, by their faithfulness of cooperation, have made it possible that this work, too, though tiny in its scope, should be performed.

And so, to one and all, without further reference to the results of common effort, we again extend heartiest thanks at this joyful season of the year and bid that He who judges righteously will look intently upon the heart of each cooperating one and reward him in full measure for his every faith in Christ and every labor in His name in our mutual labors.

F. L. Austin, Executive Secretary.

AS WE PAUSE before the threshold and gaze through the portal upon the incoming year, our hearts are filled with gratitude to God and His people for the joy and gladness that comes through common and constant service to Him.

When we stop to consider the goodness of God, how that it is abused and perverted by the majority of mankind, we almost agree that, "The greatest miracle in the world is God's patience and bounty to an ungrateful world." Let us look forward to the New Year without sorrow or regret of the year gone by, but stand forth free from the past, and ready for the labor that awaits every follower of the lowly Nazarene.

In the name of our Lord and Master we desire to thank one and all who, in so many different ways, have contributed to whatever measure of success and accomplishment we have attained unto in the year that has now become history.

Take courage! the waiting time will not be long and He who is to come will not tarry.

F. A. Stilson.

THE EARLS of Lincoln held their title and estates from the throne on the condition that they gave to the king annually one white rose in the time of roses. Now, that was not much to give, white roses are abundant and cheap enough in the time of roses, yet it was enough. It was a lovely sign of loyalty; it signified that these nobles held all from the throne and for the throne, and that they would be found by the king's side whenever they were summoned. So God is not ever asking from us the great, the costly, the difficult, but rather the easy, the simple, the practicable—the one white rose in the time of roses; and if we cheerfully, lovingly, loyally render that modest service, it is enough in His reckoning to whom things are neither great nor small. If the smallest thing is the only possible thing, it is a king's ransom.—Selected.

DEAD TO LAW

By C. E. Randall

WHEREFORE, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God."—Romans 7:4.

Death brings cessation of operation. The law became inoperative through the death of Christ, thereby justifying all to be married to another, even Christ. Being married or bound to the law prevents those thus united from bringing "forth fruit unto God". There is no fruit-bearing under law. The righteous are the fruit-bearing class. "The law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners." 1 Tim. 1:9,10.

The law "was added (to the promises) because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator." Gal. 3:19. "He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." If the law was given only until Christ came, wherefore then serve the law? Has Christ come? If we keep the law, do we not by that very act deny that Christ has come?

Paul tells us in Heb. 10:1 that the law was a shadow of good things to come and not the very image. Hence, in keeping the shadow we are thereby precluding ourselves from the blessings proceeding from the image. It seems evident that this is the reason why Paul says in Col. 2:16, 17, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days. Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ".

It has been argued that we are duty bound to keep the ten commandments. Their existence is useless as far as living the Christ-life is concerned. Under the New Covenant a man is judged guilty before he ever commits the overt act, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: but I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." Matt. 5:27, 28. The same is true of the command, "Thou shalt not kill". Christ judges a man a "murderer" when he hates a brother without a cause. Matt. 5:21, 22.

The law of the New Covenant written in the fleshly tables of the heart convicts and judges a man guilty when the letter of the Mosaic law would justify him. The New Covenant is not according to the Old Covenant. Heb. 8:8-13. If the ten commandments were a part of the New Covenant, it would be according to the Old Covenant. It is a better covenant; established upon better promises; ratified by the precious blood of Christ; providing redemption for the transgressions that were under the first testament and opening a door to the Gentiles that they might share in the covenants of promise. Heb. 8:6; 9:14, 15; Eph. 2:12-16.

There is a veil over the minds of many today because, like the persecutors of Christ, they can not steadfastly look to the end of that which was abolished. 2 Cor. 3. "If righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain. But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, The just shall live by faith." Gal. 2:21; 3:11.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."—Ecclesiastes 9:10.

WORK

By Emma C. Railsback

THE SAVIOR said, "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." The Apostle James asked the pointed question: "Wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" The great Apostle to the Gentiles exhorted: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

He that has strong faith in the promises of God is impelled by that faith to work in the Master's vineyard. Each one is exhorted to work according to his ability. Some may think they have no ability, but everyone has some ability, and it will grow and develop in proportion as it is made use of. To be "steadfast, unmoveable", and "always abounding in the work of the Lord" requires strong faith, particularly in these last days, when true faith is so scarce among the masses of humanity, and many are departing therefrom. The Scriptures are being ridiculed because of the many false theories advanced. Truly, "the night cometh, when no man can work."

How can professed followers of the Savior sit idly by and manifest indifference to the cause of truth and righteousness, when the signs reveal so clearly the very near approach of the Savior? The harvest is ripe, but the laborers are few. No one should become discouraged because jealousies arise on account of their activities and success, and because of being falsely accused; for as long as man is mortal, these conditions will exist, and they will develop in us if we are not rightly exercised by that qualification so conspicuous for its absence, viz, "Patience".

Every follower of the Lord can invite someone to come and hear the gospel preached: he can be friendly when the stranger comes to hear: he can have a well prepared Sunday School lesson: he can be faithful and punctual at all services.

Yes, opportunities for service are numerous, and if we are to abound in the work of the Lord we must recognize and take hold of each one of them. What blessing and rejoicing there will be to all the faithful when the Sun of Righteousness arises; but what disappointment and sorrow to those who are left to go through the great tribulation!

BABE AND SAVIOR

By R. H. Judd

For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.
—Luke 2:32.

To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death; to guide our feet into the way of peace.
—Luke 1:79.

THE MARVELOUS beauty of God's Word grows upon us as we contemplate the wondrous unity of thought expressed in spontaneous utterance by the people of God. In all the wonders of this present age, which almost daily vie with each other to stretch the imaginative powers of mankind to the limit, little is as yet known of that ever present power which we call light.

That the Almighty Creator of heaven and earth called it first into existence as the supreme necessity in the preparation of the earth for the habitation of man, is beyond dispute to all reverent believers of the Word of God; and it should be, if it is not already, demonstrative evidence, in some degree, of the estimate which He places upon it.

With these few thoughts in mind, we begin to understand somewhat why Old Testament prophecy and New Testament record unite in frequent testimony to the Messiah as the Light.

Four times, at least, does Isaiah, that prince of prophets, in the sublimity of his language, make reference to this fact; and Simeon, as he stands upon the threshold of old and new dispensations, bears witness to the same great truth. Then we have Zacharias, Matthew, Luke John, and Paul, each, according to the intensity of his sanctified personality, proclaiming in his own way that JESUS CHRIST is the "light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."

There is one beautiful thought brought out by the Revised Version in the testimony of Zacharias in Luke 1:79. Instead of the words, "to give light to" we have the words, "to shine upon them that sit in darkness, and the shadow of death." To a casual reader, perhaps there is small difference in the two versions and wonder may be expressed as to the need. But difference there certainly is. By the first rendering, the language employed does not necessitate that the light be one's own—it may be another's which is carried and conveyed—but in the Revised Version the underlying thought surely is that the Dayspring from on high is Himself the source of light and power to those who sit in darkness, and it is He who is "the light to lighten the Gentiles," and who will be "the glory of thy people Israel."

Then surely, as we review the whole sacred history of the nativity of our Savior and endeavor to comprehend the wonderful predictions spontaneously made concerning that Babe in arms, and the human possibilities of such predictions coming to pass, we cannot be less than amazed.

What then, if after a lapse of eighteen hundred years, as our eyes scan the historic past and the present now? We find these very predictions fulfilled and being fulfilled, to the letter: find that "this same Jesus" who once was Bethlehem's Babe, is now in actual fact a "light to lighten the Gentiles" throughout the whole wide world.

If those who scoff at Christianity will but quietly consider this tremendously remarkable fact, they cannot but realize that a greater than human power and wisdom controls the destinies of individuals and of nations.

Of this same Babe of Bethlehem is the promise made that He shall be "the glory of thy people Israel." Is not the horizon of that glorious day even now shedding its glimpses of dawn, as the streamers of the Sun of Righteousness—the forerunners of His glory—proclaim the fact that the kingdom is preparing and the KING already lives?

To-day, this Christmas day, we celebrate the fact that "unto us a child is born"; to-morrow them that sleep in Jesus, and those that are alive and remain, may hear the joyful trump of Him who comes not as a humble Babe, not as the Man of sorrows, not as the Bearer of sin, but "unto them that look (wait, R. V.) for him shall he appear the second time apart from sin unto salvation." Yes, UNTO SALVATION! God speed the day.

We regret that the above Christmas article did not reach "The Herald" office until after the Christmas Number had been mailed out.—Editor.

THOUGHTS ON GENESIS 2:17

By Dr. A. W. Taylor

THE READING of the article by Bro. Judd, in The Herald of November 29, leads me to make the following suggestion as to what application we give to what God told Adam was to be the penalty of partaking of the forbidden fruit. My understanding is that the death penalty was executed that very day, namely, upon the innocent substitutes for Adam and Eve. This fact is told where we read, "Unto Adam also and to his wife did the LORD God make coats of skins, and clothed them." These coats with which they were clothed must have been taken from the slain lambs upon which, as substitutes for Adam and Eve, the death penalty had been executed. These were slain in symbol of the "Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," even of "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world".—Rev. 13:8.

This same substitutional truth is symbolized by the lamb which God provided, Gen. 22:8, as a substitute in place of Isaac. It was in this same mount that, centuries after this lamb offered by Abraham in place of Isaac, the Lamb of God was for sinners slain, "the just for the unjust", that we through his death and living again, might have life and have it more abundantly, "even life for evermore". So now repentance and remission of sin is preached in His name to all nations, "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Amen and amen,

PARABLES OF JESUS

(Matt. 13:31-33)

Selected by Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

IN AN OLD quarterly magazine published at Glasgow, Scotland, in 1883, edited by Thomas Nesbit, I found what to me was a beautiful explanation of the parables of Matt. 13:31-33, and am sending it to our paper. The explanation was asked for, and was given by C. F. Smith with the following:

"WHAT IS to be understood by the parable of the mustard seed, Matt. 13:31-32, and that of the leaven, v. 33? To begin with, a parable is a word picture. As in a painting, the accessories surround and give prominence to one or more leading figures in it, there are points or ideas to be deeply impressed on the hearers.

"In turning to Matt. 13:33, we read this parable, 'The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.' In order to ascertain the chief point desired to be imparted, we inquire, 'What is the kingdom of heaven like?' It is not likened here to leaven (leaven by itself), but to leaven hid in meal. The likeness, then, is to the operation going on in the meal, and which goes on until the whole mass is leavened. Having found the exact point desired to be implanted in the mind, we next inquire, 'Where is the likeness when we come to the literal which is thus hidden in the parable?' The likeness is very perfect. The message of Jesus to Israel was the word of the kingdom; not the history of its past weak, earthly state, but the good news of its glorified, spiritual condition.

"The kingdom, then, was the import of the word: sowing the word was sowing the kingdom, concerning its King, and its doctrines. This great truth was hid in the mass of people, (the world). Some received it without noise or outward show. This apparently silent and imperceptible process has been going on through all the ages, unobserved by the world. Although the world will ultimately be leavened by it, when the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

"The parable of the mustard seed is similar. The particular point desired to be fixed on the mind is the exceeding smallness of the Christ kingdom in its beginning, but the certainty of its growth; so that in the end, it will fill the whole earth. All nations will dwell under the shadow of the King. Compared in its beginning with the great world system, it was as small as a mustard seed."

PAUL writes of being constrained by the love of Christ. Occasionally we meet Christians who are constrained by torture of body and mind; the greater the suffering, the nearer they are being drawn to the throne of grace. They can't withstand physical and mental prosperity which create an appetite for more of Babylon's "wine". Then the old, evil physical nature again has a hilarious time with the world and the devil.—Haney,

NEW YEAR'S GREETING

The following poem was clipped from "Gospel Banner and Millennial Advocate", of 1866, by L. Booth.

It is so much nicer than anything I might write that I have concluded to send it to the paper.

Rejoice, my fellow-servant! another year is past:
The heat and burden of the day will not forever last;
And yet the work is pleasant now, and sweet the Master's smile,
And well may we be diligent through all our "little while",
We serve a faithful Ruler—the ever-gracious Lord—
So let us help each other with a hearty hand and word.

Rejoice, my comrad soldier! for in this long campaign
Another march is ended now, and we must rest again.
What if to-morrow's dawning renews the march of fight,
Thus far the war has shown that we may trust our Captain's night;
Some enemies are driven back, some ramparts overthrown,
Some earnest giv'n that victory at length shall be our own.

Rejoice, my called brother! the race is nearer run,
The goal is drawing nearer with each now revolving sun;
The trumpet sounds yet loud and clear—"Redemption draweth nigh;"
The victor's wreath—the crown of life—see, there it greets our eye!
Now, we must not, no! will not, faint, but brace our loins,
 and on;
A short sharp struggle, and the prize of our high calling's won!

Rejoice, dear fellow-pilgrim! another stage is o'er,
Of weary homeward journey to be traveled through no more.
The work of our Forerunner is finished, and our home
Is ready built and furnished, to meet us He will come;
Then no more clouds and shadows shall darken all our sky;
No more these snares and stumbling-blocks across our path shall lie.

The light which shone through all the past will still our steps attend,
The Guide who led us hitherto will lead us to the end;
The distant view is bright'ning,—with fewer clouds to hide;
And faith's fair vision now doth see the wondrous, glorious Bride,
God's own majestic city—home of the white-robed kings—
The hope of which across our path a radiance now flings.

But nearer e'en than this, gleams the dawning of the day,
When our long expected Savior will His majesty display;
When forever with the Lord and the loved ones dead before,
We shall meet and reign in glory, in life for evermore!
New mercies from the Father's hand with each new year may come,

But that will be the best of all, a blissful, welcome home!

THE PUDDING

Take some human nature as we find it,
The commonest variety will do;
Put a little graciousness behind it,
Add a lump of charity, or two.

Squeeze in just a drop of moderation,
Half as much frugality, or less,
Add some very fine consideration,
Strain off all of poverty's distress.

Pour some milk of human kindness in it,
Put in all the happiness you can;
Stir it up with laughter every minute,
Season with good will toward every man.

Set it on the fire of heart's affection,
Leave it till the jolly bubbles rise;
Sprinkle with kisses, for confection,
Sweeten with a look of loving eyes.

Flavor it with children's merry chatter,
Frost it with the snow of wintry dells,
Place it on a service-garnished platter,
And serve it with the song of New Year bells.

THE WORLD OVERCOME

AS CHRIST hath suffered for us in the flesh, so likewise we must suffer, and cease from the sinful ways of the world; and submit ourselves unto God, that He may cleanse us and make us pure. Whereby the world judges us for not partaking of their riotous living and speaks evil against us. But God alone can judge the quick and the dead. Therefore, "think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you."

Rejoice that "ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." And "if ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: on their part he is evil spoken of; but on your part he is glorified. But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters. Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf." "Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their souls to him", casting all cares upon Him. Be sober and vigilant. Stand steadfast in the faith, that through suffering we shall be made perfect.

Beatrice Walters.

DANIEL

By Bernice Sealine

Number Three

Then Belshazzar took the throne. He brought gold and silver vessels from the Lord's temple and had a feast. They drank wine from these vessels and worshiped idols. Then a hand came and wrote on the wall.

The king called his magicians to tell him the writing and the meaning. They couldn't, and then Daniel was called. He said that writing which was, Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin, meant thus: "Mene: God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. Tekel: Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. Peres: Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." Belshazzar was slain and Darius took his place.

Daniel prayed to God all of the time and the people of this country did not like this. So they came to Darius and asked him to make a law, saying that for thirty days no one should worship any but him, and if they did they should be thrown into a den of lions.

Darius was pleased at this thought and so he made it a law. Daniel kept on praying to his God, and soon was brought before the king. Darius was sorry for what he had done, but as the law of the Medes and Persians could not be changed, he had to have Daniel thrown into the den of lions. Darius fasted and did not sleep all night.

An angel had come to the den and shut all the lions' mouths. When King Darius came out in the morning, he called into the den of lions, and when he found that Daniel was still alive and unhurt, he had him taken out.

RENOVATION OF THE EARTH

By C. E. Weaver

IMEDIATELY after the destruction of Satan, that is, after the millennium is over, John says: "I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven (atmosphere of the earth) fled away, and there was found no place for them."—Rev. 20:11.

John then describes the judgment of the "great white throne" and then adds, "I saw a new heaven, and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea."—Rev. 21:1.

Of such a change in this earth, we are not ignorant. John does not tell us how it is to come to pass, but the Apostle Peter does: "But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men, (the great white throne judgment). The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—2 Peter 3:7, 10, 13.

It is clear that Peter is referring to the same event as John, for he says it is to be at the "day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men", and that is the great white throne judgment of the wicked dead.

A surface reading of the above passage would lead one to believe that the earth, as a planet, and the sidereal heavens, are to be destroyed by fire and pass away, but a careful study of the Scriptures will show us that this is not so; that what is to happen is that this present earth, and the atmosphere surrounding it, are to be renovated by fire, so that the exterior surface shall be completely changed; all that sin has brought into existence, such as thorns and thistles, disease germs, insect pests, etc., shall be destroyed; and the atmosphere purified and forever freed from evil spirits and destructive agencies. That this is the correct view of the passage is clear from Peter's words in verses 5 and 6—"By the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water: whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished."

The world that the apostle is referring to here, was not the "antediluvian world" that was changed by the flood, but to the "primeval world" mentioned in Gen. 1:1, and which was made waste and void by a flood that completely submerged it, Gen. 1:2. The Apostle Peter divided the history of the earth into three periods: the period before the earth was made "formless and void", or the "primeval earth", which he calls "the world that then was"; the present period which he calls "the heavens and the earth which are now", and in which there has been one great change since the restoration of the earth described in Gen. 1:3; 2:1; and new heaven and earth, which is yet future, 2 Peter 3:5, 7, 13.

Now, as the framework of the "primeval earth" was not destroyed by its "watery bath", so the framework of the "present earth" is not to be destroyed by its "baptism of fire".

This is confirmed by the Apostle's use of the Greek word kosmos, which means the land surface, the habitable part of the earth, and not the earth as a planet; it is the exterior surface of the earth that is to "melt with fervent heat", and the works therein burnt up. The intense heat will cause the gases in the atmosphere to explode, which the Apostle describes as the "heaven (the atmosphere) passing away with a great noise". The result will be the destruction of all animal and vegetable life, and the alteration of the earth's surface.

The Greek work Parerehomai, translated "pass away", does not mean "termination of existence", or "annihilation", but it means "to pass from one condition of existence to another". The Apostle Paul, in his letter to Titus (Titus 3:12), speaking of the "regeneration of men", used the same word that Jesus used when, in Matt. 19:28, He promised His disciples that in the "regeneration" they should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. Now, no one supposes that the regeneration of a man is his annihilation; it is simply a renewing process by which he is brought back to the condition of man as before the fall. The word "restitution" in Acts 3:21, means the same thing. The dissolving of which Peter speaks, 2 Peter 3:11, is the same word that Jesus used when He said of the colt, "Loose him and let him go." The teaching of the Scriptures is that creation is at present in a state of captivity, waiting to be loosed from the bondage that sin has caused, Rom. 8:19-23.

The Holy Spirit by Solomon said, "The earth abideth forever."—Eccl. 1:4. It is specifically promised that the "meek shall inherit the earth," Matt. 5:5, and that the children of Israel shall dwell in it forever, Isa. 60:21; 66:22. And if God's people are to inhabit it forever, it must exist forever. It is clear, then, that this earth, as a planet, is not to be annihilated, but is to be cleansed and purified by fire and made fit for the home of those peoples and nations that are to occupy it after its renovation.

This earth that has been consecrated by the presence of the Son of God, where the costliest sacrifice that the universe could furnish was offered up on Calvary to redeem a race, and for which God had a great future is too sacred a place to be ever blotted out, or cease to exist; for it is the most cherished orb in the mind of God of all His great creation.

*Oh, what a glorious earth!
When purged from sin and crime:
Beauty surpassing all the worth,
And glory of our time.*

*Our thirsty spirits faint,
To reach the home we love;
The bright inheritance of saints—
Jerusalem above.*

JESUS AND THE SICK

Mark 1:21-45

Devotional Reading: Psalm 103:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.—Mark 7:37.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Jesus' Relation to Their Sickness. "The LORD is our judge, the LORD is our law-giver, the Lord is our king; he will save us . . . and the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick; the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity."—Isa. 33:22-24.

Jesus had just been introduced to the people of Judah as God's Messiah. Marvelously wonderful things are required in God's name. Jesus, about His "Father's business", accepted the responsibilities of such a work. By His labors He showed the mighty power of Jehovah for good.

Jesus' Service Toward Sickness. There was uncleanness of character and uncleanness of physique in the people then as now. To redeem man from one and not from the other, would have been but partial restoration. The man who had a spirit of uncleanness, rebelling against the Messiah, calling for permission to continue in his old way, Mark 1:23, needed healing as much as the woman who was physically prostrated, Mark 1:30. As Servant of God, the Master's work was to serve the people in such a way as would restore them to become recipients of the blessings of God.

His service not only gave health and strength to the people, but also assured them that He was performing a much prophesied work, and, therefore, was working the works of God. As His teachings would increasingly assure them of His standing before God, His instructions to them would have deeper meaning and would be heeded with truer obedience.

Jesus' Approach to the People. In approaching the multitude with the mighty gospel of salvation, Jesus did not begin by narrating His genealogy; outlining God's plan of salvation; drawing word-pictures of the grandeur of the age to come; but He approached the people by proving to them that first of all He was a friend in their need. He touched the life of the individual in those places where the touch would bring the heartiest rebound. He was thus, first of all, their friend. He was concerned with their interests.

True, the greater the heights which the servant of God scales, the greater the physical blessings, but these blessings are not always realized until the heights may have been reached; so, for their good and for the accomplishment of His larger work, as their servant, He first appealed to them most of all by touching their wounded bodies and their bleeding hearts.

Questions on the Subject. Is sickness a normal condition for man? Needed the prophesied Messiah ability to overpower sickness? Did Jesus confirm His Messiahship in His treatment of uncleanness and sickness?

Is man easier interested in present temporal realized conditions, or in future spiritual expectations? How did Jesus most directly appeal to the people; through their present physical needs, or through their anticipated blessings from God? Did He gain confidence of the people by serving them in their ailments?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

And superabundantly were they being struck with astonishment, saying, Well, all things has he done! Both the deaf is he causing to hear, and the dumb to speak!—Mark 7:37, Roth.

Christ's miracles of opening blind eyes and unstopping deaf ears are but signs of His wonderful power to bless mankind. The few instances of healing given us in the Word are only examples of that power which shall be made manifest in the day when He shall exercise His authority as King of kings over the nations.

In this present time there are many with eyes that see not and ears that hear not. It will not be thus when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Israel is now blind and deaf. "This is a hard saying; who can hear it?" The time will come when the veil of blindness will be lifted and they shall hear also and understand.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Authority. "They were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes." V. 22. It was not so much the things that Jesus taught that aroused the astonishment of the multitude, as it was the manner in which He delivered His message. He spoke as One having a divinely-given right to instruct and to command. In the tones of His voice, as well as in the words He uttered, He indicated that He knew Himself to be the Son of God, possessed of both the authority and power of the Father.

That same authority is conferred today upon all those who are "called according to his purpose." One who knows the truth is authorized to proclaim it with the power and assurance born of his definite knowledge and belief in its unmistakable veracity.

Confirmation. "They went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following." Mark 16:20. The primary purpose of miracles, as they were wrought by Christ and His apostles, was to establish the truth of the gospel they taught. The people recognized in the power to perform miracles, an evidence of supernal authority. Nicodemus was not alone in realizing the truth that "no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him." John 3:1-2. And because God was so evidently with the Master in His works, they also believed His words to be inspired.

Miraculous manifestation of the power of the gospel to transform and glorify the lives of men and women who come under its influence to-day is the strongest evidence that can be adduced to prove to the sceptic that it is indeed the "power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—G. E. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus manifests sympathy and power.

The very opening scene of our Savior's work and ministry portray His outstanding characteristics, and also the purpose and character of the kingdom which He was proclaiming. Sympathy was evident, always, with sufficient power to reach the cases of need.

Whether the case was one of mental sickness such as the first one in to-day's lesson, or one of physical disease, the Master's sympathy was at once evident. What a wonderful man He was, possessing limitless power, but looking with tenderest consideration down into the lives of the humblest persons! Perhaps we can understand this better by remembering that Mark 1:14, 15 show that His message was the proclamation of the kingdom of God. He was to be its King, and these were samples of the condition that will prevail when that kingdom is literally established.

Is it natural and common for persons to increase in sympathy as they increase in power, or are they more likely to become less sympathetic? Was Christ's example one in accordance with human nature, or one to lead us to overcome the natural tendencies of the flesh?—F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Jesus' power to heal: What are the mediums through which man's mental development and therefore comprehension of God take place?

What is the Christ's all-pervasive mission as regards life? What does "life more abundantly" mean? Why is Jesus given the power to cure physical ills?

To The Household of Faith:

We were truly gratified when we read in the Restitution Herald that Bro. J. Arthur Johnson, who has been attending the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago, had "graduated" therefrom, for we could conceive of no grander diploma than the fact that they had discharged him because they could not harmonize his views with those of the Institute.

This proves conclusively:

1st That he is sound in the faith,

2nd That he was not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ.

3rd That he was not afraid to let his light shine.

We certainly would recommend him to the Household of faith as a minister, sound in doctrine and fearless in the teaching of it.

Wm. A. Hanson, Secretary, asks The Herald to announce that Bro. Jas. A. Patrick, assisted by Bro. E. Cedric Pope, of Cortland, Ill., will hold a special evangelistic meeting at the Grand Rapids, Mich., church from Jan. 15 to 29, 1928. Bro. Pope will assist through the last week.

As with all other such meetings, the success of these meetings will rest as much with the faithful cooperation of the membership as it will with the speakers. Team work—all "on the bit", ready and willing at the word of the teamster, the PASTOR—is just as helpful to success in Church work as in any other effort of life. Hearty, earnest, personal talks with neighbors and friends by devoted brethren help more than words can tell.

Let none be fearful about being overenthusiastic.

May God bless and prosper this effort also.

A FULL EXPRESSION

In Jesus the Christ God gave full expression to His life—life in its fullness and perfection. He thus expressed His life in Jesus because He designed that man should comprehend and receive His life and thus come into fellowship with Him.

But as Jesus went about among men He found many physical defects that hindered the entrance of God's life into their beings. Among the chief of these were deafness and blindness. Hence Jesus, to bring God's life more fully within the comprehension of man, healed such defects.

But physical blindness and deafness are not the worst form of such defects. There is a mental blindness and deafness in which the sound and optic picture are received by the brain, but the mind is incapable of interpreting and comprehending what is heard and seen. This blindness and deafness the Christ must and will cure in order to fulfill His mission of giving God's life to mankind.

But there is a still worse form of blindness and deafness with which the Life-giver must deal—the blindness and deafness of a self-centered mind. The cure of this blindness and deafness is most painful, as Paul and Peter found, and as we find as soon as we honestly put ourselves into God's hands to receive of His life, His way, and His thinking. But, as the cure takes place, there is gratefulness for the light and beauty that come in, and thankfulness that the Christ is equal to this most difficult and painful phase of His mission.—A. K.

SIX THOUSAND YEARS AGO

In Eden's bowers a sinless pair
Was placed by God below,
Monarchs of earth and sea and air
Six thousand years ago.

And fadeless groves of fruitage fair
Through Paradise did grow:
The tree of life was blooming there
Six thousand years ago.

No pestilence at noonday stalked
With poisoned shaft and bow,
Nor fell disease in darkness walked
Six thousand years ago.

No winter frost, no summer blight,
Laid withering herbage low;
No tempest cloud obscured the light
Six thousand years ago.

No sickness, sorrow, death, nor pain
Caused tears of grief to flow;
No graves were heaped above the slain
Six thousand years ago.

'Twas sin that palled the world in gloom,
Made earth a wild of woe,
And ope'd for man the grave and tomb,
Six thousand years ago.

But Christ will come—in Him we trust,
And crowns of life bestow;
Regain the Eden that was lost
Six thousand years ago.

God's Paradise shall bloom once more,
And cloudless skies shall glow
O'er heaven-blest scenes, as once before,
Six thousand years ago.

For Restitution, Lord, we wait,
Though circling years move slow,
Since exiled from our blest estate
Six thousand years ago.

NEARER HOME

O'er the hill the sun is setting,
And the eve is drawing on;
Slowly droops the gentle twilight,
For another day is gone.
Gone for aye—its race is over,
Soon the darker shades will come;
Still it's sweet to know at even
We are one day nearer home.

One day nearer—sings the mariner,
As he glides the water o'er,
While the light is softly dying
On his distant native shore.
Thus the Christian on life's ocean,
As his life-boat cuts the foam,
In the evening cries with rapture—
I am one day nearer home.

Worn and weary, oft the pilgrim,
Hails the setting of the sun,
For his goal is one day nearer,
And his journey nearly done;
Thus we feel when o'er life's desert,
Heart and sandal-sore we roam,
As the twilight gathers o'er us,
We are one day nearer home.

Nearer home? Yes, one day nearer
To our Father's house so bright—
To the green fields and the fountains
In the land of pure delight;
For the heavens grow brighter o'er us,
And the lamps hang in the dome,
And our tents are pitched still closer,
For we're one day nearer home.

TO CONTRIBUTORS

Here are a few rules for contributors. Jot them down.

1. Use either typewriter or pen and ink, never pencil. Pencil-written articles generally must be written over "before taking". We are too busy to do that.
2. If you quote from the Bible, please quote and punctuate correctly.
3. Write constructively. There is too much of the destructive already. Use positives, not negatives.
4. Don't tell us what others should not teach, and what you do not believe. Tell us what you do believe.
5. Use one side of the paper only.
6. Leave out much of your emphasis. It makes the article stronger.
7. Don't worry the editor with unexplainable hieroglyphics! He has all he can do to make out plain-written English.
8. Start and finish each line at least one inch back from the edge of the sheet.

JESUS AND THE SICK

(Mark 1:21-45)

WHEN YOU are not well what does Mother do? First try home remedies, and then, if you are not better, send for the doctor? And I am most sure she adds a little prayer.

How splendid it would be if Jesus were on earth, and we could have Him come and cure us so quickly! I wonder if the people long ago really appreciated this wonderful privilege; for Jesus really did heal many of them.

You remember, when the dove alighted on Jesus at His baptism, that God proclaimed Jesus as His Son, and gave Him power to do many wonderful things. Very soon Jesus began His teaching and preaching. He and His newly chosen helpers went into Capernaum—a well-known city near the Sea of Galilee. On the Sabbath day Jesus went into the church, or synagogue, and when He began to teach, the people were astonished, for His preaching was so much better than that of the scribes. He was so sure of what He was telling them. He knew whereof He spoke.

All at once a voice cried out, "Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God."

Jesus rebuked the voice, saying, "Hold thy peace, and come out of him." You see, there was a man in the synagogue with an unclean spirit—we sometimes say, with a troubled mind; but when Jesus spoke the unclean spirit cried with a loud voice and came out of the man. Then the man's mind became whole, and at peace.

This amazed the people even more, and they said, "What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him." And of course they told their friends until all the people in Galilee heard about the wonderful new Leader and Preacher.

After the man with the unclean spirit had been relieved of his trouble, Jesus and four of His disciples went into Simon Peter's house where Simon's mother-in-law was very sick with a fever. When Jesus was told about her illness, He took her by the hand and lifted her up, and she became so well that at once she ministered unto them.

When people heard of these miracles, is it any wonder that they came to Jesus for help? By evening a great crowd had gathered, and Jesus healed many other sick people. Was not that a busy day—a busy Sabbath?

The next morning Jesus arose early and went out into a quiet place that He might pray without being disturbed. However, so many sought Jesus that Simon and other helpers finally found Him and said, "All men seek for thee."

Then Jesus answered, "Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth." And they did go on into all the other towns of Galilee, preaching and healing.

At one place a leper came to Jesus, begging that he be made clean. Leprosy was such a terrible and contagious disease that anyone afflicted with it had to live away from other people. Just imagine having to go away sick and alone! Jesus always felt sorry for others who were in trouble, so He naturally felt sorry for this poor leper, and cleanse him from the dreadful disease. He told him to show himself to the priest and make sacrifices, as the law required, but not to tell other people. But as soon as the man saw that he was healed he was so happy and grateful that he told everybody.

Soon it became impossible for Jesus to walk on the streets because of the crowds that followed Him. Then Jesus went out into the country, but still the needy continued to come.

What a wonderful Savior! And what a wonderful time there will be when He returns and there is no more sickness and no more sorrow!

MAN'S INFALLIBLE GUIDE BOOK

THIS BOOK reveals the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners, and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter. Here Paradise is restored, and the gates of hell are disclosed. Christ is its grand subject, our good, its design, and the glory of God, its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be opened in the judgment, and be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor, and condemn all who trifle with its sacred contents."—Selected.

While jogging along life's road
Help someone to carry his burden
And lighter will grow your load.*

Cheer up with a little song.*

*Do something for somebody, always;
Whatever may be your creed,
There's nothing on earth can help you
So much as a Kindly Deed.*

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 25

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF JERUSALEM AND OF ROME (Daniel 11)

AS WE HAVE already stated, the prophet, in the case of the various empires, points out three distinct periods in the history of each: that when it first became powerful; that when its power and glory were at their highest; and that when it fell. The Roman empire had been founded long before the days of the prophet; and it therefore follows that the predictions concerning it which we shall now consider, can only relate to the period when its power and glory were greatest. This period is clearly indicated in Mommsen's History of Rome, from which our quotations are taken, Book IV., chapter 3.

"For a whole generation after the battle of Pydna the Roman state enjoyed a profound calm, scarcely varied by a ripple here and there on the surface. Its dominion extended over the three continents; the lustre of the Roman power and the glory of the Roman name were constantly on the increase; all eyes rested on Italy, all talents and all riches flowed thither; it seemed as if a golden age of peaceful prosperity and intellectual enjoyment of life could not but there begin. The Orientals of this period told each other with astonishment of the mighty republic of the West, 'which subdued kingdoms far and near, so that every one who heard its name trembled; but which kept good faith with its friends and clients. Such was the glory of the Romans, and yet no one usurped the crown and no one glittered in purple dress; but they obeyed whomsoever from year to year they made their master, and there was among them neither envy nor discord'."

Such was the condition of the Roman state when Gaius Sempronius Gracchus was elected tribune of Rome on the tenth of December, B. C. 124. This was the individual to whom the prophet referred, and by whom the predictions were faithfully fulfilled.

"Then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom."

One of the most important actions of Tiberius Gracchus, who was tribune during the year B. C. 134, was the introduction of an agrarian law which benefited the lower classes very considerably, but which gave great offence to the aristocratic members of the senate, who, in consequence, on the termination of his year of office caused him to be murdered. Ten years later his brother Gaius was raised to the position of tribune, and, determined to punish the aristocrats for causing the death of Tiberius, he introduced several laws designed to curtail their power and insolence. Hitherto a tribune could only hold office for a period of one year, but realizing that he could not carry out his plans within that limited period, Gaius proposed that a tribune at the termination of his term should be at liberty to seek re-election for a second period. Having carried this proposal into law, it was necessary, in order to insure his re-election, that he should obtain the hearty support of the proletariat or lower classes, and with this object in view he enacted that every citizen of Rome should be supplied monthly with a certain quantity of corn at less than half price. The immediate consequence of this law was the influx of a large number of the poorer class from the surrounding country into Rome, upon whose votes Gracchus could reasonably count. But in Rome, as everywhere else, there existed another great class—those who had acquired wealth by trade, but whose plebian birth excluded them from senatorial positions. These people could not be influenced by the Corn laws; but Gracchus quickly introduced other laws calculated to bring them also to his support, and it is to one of these laws that the prediction under consideration alludes.

THE RESURRECTION

By Mrs. Hannah Michaelson

IN THE HERALD of October 11, we find the admonition: "Honor God by making Sunday a day to commemorate the resurrection of His Son, our Lord and Savior." Please allow the presentation of facts as found by a brother concerning the resurrection of our Lord.

"The testimony that Jesus was in the tomb three days and three nights, as He had foretold, and that He rose on the sabbath, and was already risen on the first day of the week is so plainly given in the four Gospels that it brands all those hundreds of Gentile writers who denied it, from Justin Martyr, A. D. 140, down to our time, as dull and seduced in this matter.

"Should not every Bible reader know that Jesus was crucified and buried on the preparation day, the day preceding the Jewish feast sabbath of unleavened bread? Mark 15:42. Leviticus 23 shows that no servile work should be done on that day, Paschal Sabbath, so the women could not anoint Jesus during the first day after the burial. But when that passover sabbath was past, Mark 16:1 tells us that then the women bought and prepared the spices. This was the second day after Christ's burial, and could not have been any other day but Friday. Now comes Luke 23:56, telling us that after the women had prepared the spices and ointments, they rested on the sabbath according to the commandment. So they could do no anointing before Sunday, Mark 16:2. But on Sunday Jesus had already risen, Matt. 28:1. Thus, we have the testimony that Jesus had been buried three days and three nights, even as He said, Matt. 12:40; 28:6, and that He rose on the sabbath; for He was risen before the women came to the tomb, Matt. 28:6. Even as Jesus was buried just before sunset on Wednesday, so He rose just before sunset on the sabbath and this was in precise fulfilment of His prophecy.

"Jesus was buried in the end of Wednesday as the passover sabbath drew on, and He rose in the end of the weekly sabbath or seventh day, at the time when the first day of the week 'drew on'. In both passages, Luke 23:54 and Matt. 28:1, is the same word, which means to 'draw on' or to appear (not 'dawn'). Jesus did not rise on Sunday, but on it He was already risen.

"Scriptural days count from sunset to sunset. The night is the first part of the day. Jesus was buried Wednesday just before sunset, and He rose on the sabbath just before sunset. The two Marys bringing no ointments, came to the tomb early the first day of the week, that is, in the evening after the sabbath sunset, and then, twelve hours later, that is, early in the morning of that day they went back with other women who did not believe them that Jesus was already risen, Matt. 24:11.

"The moon also is a true witness of Christ's resurrection on the sabbath day. Natural or Bible days extend from sunset to sunset. The night is the first part of a natural or Bible day. Likewise, every natural or Bible month is no more than a lunation, or course, of a moon. Thus every month begins with the day of the new moon, and therefore the 14th day of a Bible month is always about full moon. Notice, therefore, that the moon was on the decrease while Jesus was in tomb. In the fourth night after His burial, after the two Marys had come, and after the end of the Sabbath, Matt. 28:1, there was darkness a good while before the morn rose, John 20:1. John's testimony is in harmony with Matt. 28:1. Bible days end at sunset.

"Mark, as he mentions a company of women that went to the sepulchre in the morning, does not speak of the same visit as John did, although the two Marys went with them. He does not say it was dark early in the morning when the women came. This would have been impossible; for the moon, being yet half full, shone brightly all of the second half of the night. First the two Marys alone were at the sepulchre in the evening, that is, 'early the first day'. This was not early in the morning of the first day. It was about twelve hours before, namely, in the evening: the beginning of the first day of the week.

"It was dark before Peter and John came to the tomb; but when they arrived the moon was risen; they could see everything in it, John 20:1-7. The great sign of the Messiahship of Jesus was that He should be in the heart of the earth three days and three nights.

"The Bible calls the seventh day the 'Lord's day'. On it John was in the Spirit. But nearly all teach that that was Sunday, and that Jesus was crucified on Friday and rose on Sunday, and that we should sanctify Sunday and call it the Lord's Day. Whereas they do not understand such plain testimony as the Bible gives in this line, it is not strange that they are also wrong in other things, especially in prophecies that are clothed in symbolic language. Paul tells us to judge no one for keeping sabbath days which are a shadow of things to come (that signifies, let him keep festival days if he desires). But he never spoke such words concerning the sabbath which is the memorial of the Almighty Creator. Jesus and His apostles and the early Christians kept the sabbath; but the Roman church set it aside."

THE EFFICACY OF PRAYER

ALLOW ME to offer a few remarks upon the above subject. I will, first, refer to a letter that appeared in this section of your estimable paper about October 12, last. It mentioned the unfavorable weather in the West, and asked for prayer for better harvesting weather to be offered on the following Sunday (October 16), so that the abundant crop could be saved and marketed," writes S. Ballachey in The Toronto Globe, of Toronto, Ontario. The writer then continues,

"I know not who, nor how many, accepted the invitation to thus pray, but I for one did, and I watched for an answer, which came very soon through The Globe, that reported on Monday, October 17, that the weather in the West had changed, it then being 'Warm and dry'. With much thankfulness I continued to pray and watch The Globe, the daily report of which was practically the same viz.: 'Warm and dry. Not much change in temperature'. This continued until the large crop, I believe, was nearly, if not wholly, secured. Surely every soul in Canada, and especially in Western Canada, on the public Thanksgiving Day, offered unto Almighty God special and hearty thanks for splendid crops and for supplying favorable weather for harvesting them, and right on the dot, when He was besought for it."

Mr. Ballachey seems to be one of those men of faith in God who can take Him at His word. He not only acted upon faith, but later bore testimony to all the world that the God who provided manna, quails, water and necessities to Israel, still lives and listens to pleading hearts to-day. He says further:

"The caption of your editorial of November 23 was in the negative form, viz., 'Is Prayer Unnecessary?' God answers in the affirmative. In Ezekiel, chapter 36, He promises wonderful blessings to Israel, and in the thirty-seventh verse He says, 'I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them.' Please read the foregoing context.

"A question arising out of this subject is: Who will have their prayer answered? Jesus answers in John 15:7, viz., 'If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.' Please lay your whole soul open before God, and by the aid of His Holy Spirit realize, if you can, the full import of this text. Some one may ask: Will God hear the prayer of no one except the wholly consecrated child of God? Yes, surely, the cry of the penitent sinner, who is feeling after God, will be heard by Him, and He will see to it that such an one will be taught the way of the Cross, which is the only channel through which the penitent sinner may approach the great Jehovah, even as He sent Peter to teach and enlighten Cornelius."

The efficacy of prayer is a matter that should receive far more study and prayer than is customary. God is more willing to give and grant than many people realize. Let us increase our knowledge of and our communion with God.

THE ZIONIST WEEK

PALESTINE and EUROPE

COMMONS ASKS TERMS OF DEAD SEA CONCESSION

THE DEMAND that the Dead Sea concession should not be granted without previous consultation with the House of Commons as to the terms was voiced in the House on December 5th by Col. Bury.

Replying to Col. Bury, Major Ormsby-Gore declared that there is no question of giving away the concession. Negotiations are proceeding on behalf of the Palestine and Transjordanian governments. To safeguard their interests it is impracticable to publish the terms of the concession before the signatures are affixed. "The concession is not mine to give," the Under Secretary for the Colonies declared. "We must respect Article 18 of the Mandate."

The lively debate on the Dead Sea concession recalled the discussions in Parliament preceding the granting of the electric concessions to Engineer Pinhas Rutenberg. Col. Bury said that the official negotiations were being conducted exclusively with the Jewish engineer, Novomeysky, while Tulloch was taking no part in them. Major Ormsby-Gore denied this statement, declaring that the meetings of the Crown Agents acting for the Palestine government were attended by both Novomeysky and Tulloch.

Col. Bury asked what were the qualifications upon which Novomeysky should be awarded the concession. Major Ormsby-Gore replied that Novomeysky was an engineer with Palestine experience. He is also experienced in the separation of mineral salts by evaporation and he has conducted experimental work at the Dead Sea for some time. Novomeysky is also a Palestinian subject.

Wardlaw Milne pointed out that the real anxiety was that the concession be retained entirely in British hands. Ormsby-Gore replied that Tulloch is a Scotchman.

Replying to a question of Col. Josiah Wedgwood with regard to the Transjordanian government, the Secretary stated that Transjordan is a mandated territory, and the frontier between Palestine and Transjordan is somewhere in the middle of the Dead Sea.

Winston Churchill declined to reply to Col. Bury's question as to whether the British government will obtain the control over the Dead Sea concession.

ROUMANIAN RULERS RECEIVE WEIZMANN

THE COUNCIL of the Regency in Roumania, consisting of Metropolit Miron and Supreme Court President Buzdugan, received Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, in audience in Bucharest on December 6th. During the interview the regents expressed their favorable attitude toward the Zionist movement.

The national convention of Roumanian Zionists was held in Bucharest on December 6th and 7th. The British Ambassador attended the opening session and offered the greetings of his government. Minister of the Interior

Duca was also present. He reiterated the statements previously made that the Roumanian government is in full accord with the aims of the Zionist movement and seeks peaceful cooperation with the Jewish population. Dr. Weizmann was present at the sessions on both days.

The convention elected Adolph Bernhardt president of the Federation and an Executive of four, composed of two representatives of the Central Party and two Radical Zionists.

BEZALEL ART SCHOOL IN JERUSALEM CLOSED

THE BEZALEL Art School, established by Professor Boris Schatz in 1905, was closed on December 6th because of lack of funds, according to a despatch to the Jewish Telegraphic Agency. The school found itself in a critical financial position since the Zionist Executive discontinued its subsidy following the decision of the Fifteenth Zionist Congress to curtail the budget.

At one time the Bezalel School had an enrollment of 450 students in drawing, sculpture and handicrafts. A declaration protesting against the withdrawal by the Executive of its subsidy to the Bezalel School was sent to the Executive. The signatories to the protest included both Chief Rabbis, representatives of the Hebrew Writers' Organization, the Jewish Archæological Society, the Jewish Medical Society, the Jewish Artists' Club, the Jewish Musicians' Association, the Hebrew Teachers' Organization, and the editors of the daily papers in Palestine.

ENGINEERS SURVEY HAIFA PORT

A PARTY of British engineers arrived in Haifa to examine the plans for the Haifa port construction, states a Jewish Telegraphic Agency report. It is expected that the engineers will soon complete their work and that the plan will be finally approved.

PALESTINE LOAN BONDS TAX-EXEMPT

FOREIGN investors in the Palestine loan are entitled to exemption from income tax on the Palestine loan bonds, Winston Churchill stated on December 6th, speaking in the house of Commons, on the loan.—The New Palestine.

OUR MOTTO—"EXCELSUS"

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before,

I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—Phil. 3:13, 14.

FOR 1928, ONE OF the best mottoes for both Christian and non-Christian is the motto—"EXCELSUS". Not with the thought of excelling some other pupil in the class, or of excelling a neighbor farmer, or merchant, or preacher, or of excelling even a neighbor brother on life's common pathway, should this motto be kept before one's eye; but with the thought of excelling one's self of yesterday. For one to live the day's life; to fight the day's battle; to surmount the day's obstacle; to do these and all other things better than he did them yesterday is one of the high ideals of life.

For the Christian to excell himself in his Christianity of 1927 means that he must and will watch and pray to keep himself ever closer to his Lord, truer, more devoted, more consecrated.

For a church in 1928 to excell itself of 1927 necessitates that it will be of greater service to its members, its children, its neighbors, and that it will honor more truly its Lord.

May one of our mottoes be "EXCELSUS".

EDITORIAL

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

F. A. STILSON, Ass't Editor.

Now for the beginning of another circuit around the calendar.

How many of those who with us started the 1927 circuit, have fallen by the wayside?

Not all starting 1928 will be able to finish it. How about us?

* * * *

It is not the overactive life, the one that wrecks itself in the effort, that necessarily succeeds: rather it is the life that so runs, so fights, so perseveres, as to assist it that, while completing its task—its task in Christ—it will also be accumulating strength and wisdom with which to complete its yearly circuit—and others to follow.

* * * *

THESE recorded years register the time since the birth of our Lord. Nineteen hundred and twenty-seven of them have already been scored since the angels of the Lord called earth to witness that its Savior was then born. Nineteen hundred and twenty-seven times has the mighty clock of the starry heavens struck the completion of another cycle of the earth to the memory and honor of Him whom God acclaimed, and whom men bow to worship.

* * * *

WHAT unceasing acclamation is this! Every dated paper of the Christian world issued by thrones, legislatures, or courts; by the office, the counter, the school-room; by parent, or child, or lover: every inscribed date acclaim anew the birth of Him whom all adore and through whom all have been proffered life forever more.

* * * *

How many times in 1928 will we—you and I—give testimony to the world that the “root and offspring of David” is the One upon whom all Christian work is based?

* * * *

THESE years on the dial of heaven's clock are not so long, proportionately, to God as are the seconds that are ticked rapidly off on the dial of man's making. Each of man's seconds is one of the whole number that, together, measure the individual life of man; but God's life has no measure of total duration. It is eternal; it has no end; therefore, the numerating of the years gives no indication to Him of an approaching end.

* * * *

IF years are to God similar to seconds to man, then the ages before the face of the Creator may easily be like years before man.

WHAT a happy New Year it will be when the New Year becomes the entering of the New Age.

* * * *

WE have abundant testimony that the coming New Age will be the coming again of Him whose birth introduced this age.

THE coming of the New Age will quickly follow His call and His resurrection of those who sleep in Him.

What a happy Age that will be!

THE New Age will be the date when all those “in Christ” “shall be caught up together with them (the dead in Christ) in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.” That is the end toward which the Christian is laboring throughout the repetition of these present years.

* * * *

LET this new calendar circuit be used in earnest, faithful aspiration to enter, at the return of the Savior, upon the circuit of the Ages of the ages with Him.

* * * *

SUCH is possible—Scripture so relates—and it beseeches us to apprehend that for which we have been apprehended by Him whom we honor every time we write or speak 1928 A. D.

* * * *

THE great New Year toward which all are anxiously looking is the one that will introduce the Year, and Age, and Moment when the heavens and the earth will have been made new: when God will dwell with men; when He shall be their God, and they shall be His people; when “there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away”. In that New Year “God shall wipe away all tears” from the eyes of men, the curse will roll back for all time, and the Paradise of God will envelop man with the mantle of God's righteousness and love.

REPORT OF STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING

Pursuant to the call of the President, the stockholders of The Restitution Publishing Company met at their principal office, 131 N. 3rd St., Oregon, Illinois, at 2 P. M., Thursday, Dec. 29, 1927.

Of 250 total outstanding shares, 168 were present either in person or by proxy, and were voted as follows:

Mrs. Julia Ordnung, 34; J. H. Williams, 10; F. E. Siple, 3; F. H. Knodle, 52; Mrs. Nellie Cross, 15; Paul C. Johnson, 11; Wm. Hardesty, 3; F. L. Austin, 35½; Leota B. Hanson, 2½; Chas. Gesin, 2; total, 168.

More than two-thirds of the total number of shares were thus represented. Proxies were present for six more shares, but the appointees were not present, hence the proxies were not used nor the shares counted as being represented.

Sister Leota B. Hanson was chosen as chairman, due to the unavoidable absence of the President, L. E. Conner.

The secretary having read the call and purpose of the meeting, opportunity was given for the presentation of any business which might properly be brought up.

J. H. Williams then presented the following motion:

Inasmuch as it was the expressed intention of the promoters of The Restitution Publishing Company at the time of promoting the same, that the said The Restitution Publishing Company, when incorporated, would publish a Church paper and such other printing as possible in the interest of the Church of God until such a time as the Church might organize in such a manner as to take over in its own name and operate such publishing interests; and,

Inasmuch as the Church of God did in August 1921 perfect an organization and also authorize the incorporation of the National Bible Institution for the purpose of conducting the business affairs for the General Conference of the Church of God; and,

Inasmuch as said General Conference and said National Bible Institution have since been functioning and the National Bible Institution has proven itself competent to operate the publishing plant in the common interests of the Church of God as a whole; therefore,

Be it hereby resolved that we, the stockholders of The Restitution Publishing Company, assembled in special meeting at Oregon, Illinois, on this 29th day of December, 1927, as per call of President dated December 9, 1927, do hereby authorize and direct its Board of Directors, in consideration of One dollar and other good and valuable considerations in hand received from the National Bible Institution, an Incorporation of Oregon, Illinois, to sell, convey and give title of all real estate, machinery, good will and all other business effects and interests belonging to said The Restitution Publishing Company to the said National Bible Institution.

Jos. H. Williams

Nellie I. Cross

Paul C. Johnson

This motion having been properly seconded by Sister Cross, was discussed, and then passed by 168 votes for and none against.

A motion was then presented by F. H. Knodle as follows:

Inasmuch as The Restitution Publishing Company, having authorized the transference of its property and business to the National Bible Institution; and,

Inasmuch as The Restitution Publishing Company has therefore no reason for continuing its operations; therefore,

Be it hereby resolved that we, the stockholders of said The Restitution Publishing Company in meeting assembled at Oregon, Illinois on this 29th day of December, 1927, do hereby instruct its Board of Directors that, when said Board shall have properly transferred to said National Bible Institution the property and business of said The Restitution Publishing Company, as per resolution authorizing and directing the same, and when the said Board of Directors shall have properly closed up all the business affairs of this said The Restitution Publishing Company, that then said Board of Directors shall take proper and legal steps for the dissolution of said The Restitution Publishing Company of Oregon, Illinois.

Fred H. Knodle

Julia A. Ordnung

Chas. F. Gesin

This motion was seconded by Sister Ordnung, and then after discussion was passed with 168 votes for and none against.

In order to be in position to take care of any unforeseen emergency that might arise, it was deemed best to adjourn the meeting to an early date.

Motion was then made by F. L. Austin to adjourn until 2 P. M., Thursday, January 26, 1928.

Passed, 168 for, none against.

A WORD OF EXPLANATION

By way of information to all as to the meaning of this meeting, attention is called to the understanding of The Restitution Publishing Company and the National Bible Institution as of August 9-11, 1923. At that time The Restitution Publishing Company turned over to the National Bible Institution the use of its property for publishing purposes. Previous to that date, the Publishing Company, made up of a few individuals of the Church of God, had assumed the burden of providing publishing fa-

THE MERCY OF GOD

THE FOLLOWING article from the Editorial column of The Toronto Globe is not only extraordinary, as compared with the articles usually found in the secular dailies, but is also much above the ordinary expressions of Biblical truths as published in the religious press.

How much stronger and more wholesome would be our thoughts of God, if one and all could realize the great truth, that none of God's great love, none of His unbounded mercy, none of His far-reaching forgiveness are ever wrought, excepting that they are based upon the rock foundation of righteousness.

More than all else it would seem that God is righteous. Truly, it was to this end, namely, that He might be righteous, even while making righteous some not righteous of themselves, that His marvelous plan of redemption was established as mentioned by Paul in Romans 3:26.

The article follows:

MAN'S IDEA of mercy, and God's are as different as the mind of man and the mind of God. "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord." That word of sharp cleavage between the creature and the Creator immediately follows another word from God, which is His plea to the sinner to be saved. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Then this Scripture passage goes on to show that the mercy of God toward the sinner who turns to Him in trust and repentance is not merely the sort of mercy that man would show if he were in God's place. For the offer of divine mercy is illuminated by the proviso: "For my thoughts are not your thoughts."

What, then, is the mercy of God? How does God show mercy toward sinners who deserve anything but that?

Man's idea of mercy is simply the overlooking of sin. Here is one who has done wrong; by strict justice he ought to be punished for it; but the merciful man says he is willing to let the wrong-doer go, he will act as though no wrong had been done. Instead of justice, he will show mercy. The offender gratefully accepts this leniency, and goes free.

God's mercy is never exercised in that way. God is necessarily a God of unswerving righteousness, of scrupulous and unvarying justice. If for an instant of time He were otherwise the universe would collapse; chaos would replace order; there would be darkness instead of light in Heaven as well as on earth, moral and spiritual anarchy everywhere instead of righteous government at the heart of things.

The unique thing about God's mercy is that it is never offered to sinful men instead of justice, or in contrast with strict justice: on the contrary, it is the logical and inevitable result of rigid justice. This is not recognized as generally as it would be if men were more familiar with the teaching of the Scriptures. The Gospel, or Good News of God's mercy toward a lost world and a lost race, is shown from Genesis to Revelation to have been made possible only by a just and righteous God.

Certain passages of Scripture are frequently quoted as though God's mercy were of the ordinary, man-made sort. The prayer of the publican, "God be merciful to me a sinner," is one. Another is the word of Jesus to the woman who had been taken in adultery, and for whom the scribes and Pharisees were about to prescribe the law of Moses, that she should be stoned. Christ asked some searching questions, which caused them to lose their enthusiasm for taking her life; then He said to the guilty one: "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more."

What do such passages mean? They do not mean that God and His Christ were indifferent to sin, or that they could ever be lenient toward sin. They do mean that God and His Son had found a way of forgiving sin. But God's forgiveness of sin never means His overlooking sin.

When the Lord Jesus said to a guilty sinner, "Neither do I condemn thee," He was but expressing the truth stated elsewhere in John's Gospel: "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." How was that done? By the Son of God taking upon Himself the condemnation that God's justice must show toward sin. Christ took the sinner's place, paid the penalty of the sin of the publican and the adulterous woman and all the rest of us, in order that, without swerving from inviolable justice, a righteous God might show mercy toward the sinner.

Bible commentators have called attention to the striking fact that when the publican cried out, "God be merciful to me a sinner," he used the Greek word hilaskomai for "be merciful," and that this is the word used in the Greek version of the Old Testament, also in the New Testament, in connection with the mercy seat in the tabernacle. God directed that when the high priest went into the holy place in the tabernacle to make atonement, he was to sprinkle the blood of a slain animal upon the mercy seat. The Old Testament animal sacrifices typified the shed blood of Christ, "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." A Jewish publican would know the law, and his prayer might be paraphrased: "God be toward me as Thou art when Thou lookest upon the atoning blood."

Over and over again the Scriptures teach that God can forgive sin only after the wages of sin, which is death, has been paid. The Son of God by His shed blood and death on the cross paid the wages of sin—not for Himself, for He was sinless, but for sinners. So we read of Christ: "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins." It is interesting to note that the Greek word here for "propitiation" is the same word that the publican used for "be merciful." "Without shedding of blood is no remission," the Word tells us; and God Himself could not forgive sins apart from the shedding of the blood of the sinless (One—Ed.), Christ the Savior.

So God's mercy is not in contrast with His justice, but is the result of His justice. It would be unjust not to forgive a debt that has been paid.

The mercy of God means that He is able "to declare . . . his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus."

LIFE AFTER DEATH

By Emma C. Railsback

AN esteemed brother has requested me to give a review in The Restitution Herald of an article appearing in The Los Angeles Evening Herald of Dec. 10th by Dr. Frank Crane, which was an answer to an inquiry of a sorrowing man who had lost his wife through the work of the enemy—death.

The article runs as follows:

"A gentleman writes me a letter from which quotations are as follows:

"The other day my wife died. She was 39 years old. She was a martyr to her duties and to her children. After 19 years of marriage and hard work this wonderful wife and wonderful mother, who never complained, was taken from us.

"Now is the time when she could have taken life more easily and could have enjoyed the growing up of her children while preparing herself for old age. In two days she is gone. My duty toward the children will keep me going and going strong, but I feel the need for something that shall keep me going on myself.

"I would like to know if there is a reason for such happenings and furthermore that the deceased one is happy in another life. Please hear the cry of a spiritual man left in the middle of life (I am not yet 41), deprived of the only one faithful companion and with nine children, from eighteen to two and one-half years. I have the feeling that no other woman can ever enter my life."

"There is no certainty of the life after death. That is a matter that must be taken on faith and hope. Of it we have a reasonable hope. Those who live the higher life, that is above the animal, all have a feeling of another life.

"While the Scriptures do not positively teach another life they assume it, as Christ says, "If it were not so I would have told you." Honor, patriotism, self-sacrifice and devotion reach out into another life. In this life they are often thwarted.

"What the Almighty's reasons were for taking this mother we cannot say. No one knows. The best plan from any point of view is to go on assuming that He had a good reason. Nothing can be gained by giving up.

"If we believe in the high purposes and devoted life of the deceased we shall ourselves participate in them. If there is another life and the deceased is cognizant of our doings here, she cannot but be gratified to know that we are living up to our ideals.

"The life of this mother has faded into a memory, but that memory will continue to inspire and bless her children and her husband."

Dr. Crane says, "There is no certainty of life after death." It is quite evident that he bases his reply to the inquiry of this man, who is in darkness and deep sorrow, on the popular theory of the immortality of the soul and a conscious existence after death, and his reply is probably as satisfying as anyone could give when based upon this erroneous theory.

But, what saith the Scriptures? "To the law and to the testimony:" saith the prophet—Isaiah. "if they speak not according to this WORD, it is because there is no light in them." Has Dr. Crane spoken according to the word of God? No! Emphatically no! The Scriptures tell us that when the blind lead the blind, all fall into the ditch.

The prophet—Job could speak with emphatic certainty concerning the future life, for he said, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another." And yet this prophet, when suffering bodily affliction, further explained his faith in the future life in these words: "O that thou wouldest hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldest appoint me a set time, and remember me!"

He then proceeds to propound the question which is so often asked and which Dr. Crane was not able to answer, viz.—"If a man die, shall he live again?" And hear Job's answer—no uncertainty here. "All the days of my appointed time will I wait, (in the grave) till my change come. Thou (God) shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands."

The prophet—Isaiah states: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." This same prophet was sent by God to the good King Hezekiah with the message—"Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live". When Jehovah says that to die is not to live, can there be any doubt left in our minds?

The Psalmist utters his faith in the word of God in the following language: "In death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." "The dead praise not the LORD, neither any that go down into silence." Yes, David knew there is no consciousness in death, but he could look forward to the awakening with the full assurance of faith and say to the Lord, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."

Yes, and the wiseman said, "The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything, . . . whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."

So we assert that the Scriptures DO positively teach another life; that Christ Himself said, "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, And shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." The Apostle Paul tells us that Christ is to judge the living and the dead at His appearing and His kingdom. The Scriptures abound with just such positive evidence that there is another life and there is no reasonable excuse for any uncertainty about the matter except ignorance of the word of God.

Then further—Why blame the Almighty (as the Dr. says) for taking this mother? The Scriptures tell us that "by one man (Adam) sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Yes, through the disobedience of one, the curse came and sickness, pain and death are a part of the curse. But, by the obedience of One, even Christ our Savior, shall many be made righteous, and He shall "reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

But when shall this reign begin? When He shall "appear the second time without sin unto salvation": to "judge the quick and the dead": when He comes in His glory to sit upon the throne of His glory: "when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; And he shall send Jesus Christ,----whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began": when He shall "descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God": when He "shall so come in like manner" as the apostles saw Him go into heaven: when He shall come "in a cloud with power and great glory": when He shall come to "change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body": when He shall come to "reward every man according to his works": to bring the reward which is in heaven, "the house not made with hands": to clothe the mortal with immortality, the corruptible with incorruption: to assemble His joint-heirs, who shall reign with Him a thousand years. "Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" We must either admit the truth of all these scriptural statements or else deny the Scriptures altogether.

Christ was not speaking of "the future life" when He said, "If it were not so, I would have told you." What He said was, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you." The Father's house or house of God is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth, and the word translated "mansion" here is elsewhere translated "abode", meaning dwelling place or position. So when transposed, Christ said to His apostles, if there were not many positions in the Church of God, I would have told you, which is similar to Paul's statement, "There are many members in one body."

Pride and conceit cause many truths to be hidden from the "wise and prudent", which are revealed unto babes.

THIS IS 1928. OUR LORD IS COMING SOON, BUT IF EACH ONE WILL DO HIS BEST WE CAN MAKE THIS A BANNER YEAR IN PREPARATION FOR THAT EVENT

DON'T forget the Rockford (Ill.) Berean Rally Day next Saturday. Special music is being prepared, and all are looking forward to a splendid evening. A short model Berean Class, a short sermon, with quartets, duets and other special music will be features of interest. The meeting will be called at the home of Mrs. Martha Walls, 1016 North Ave., at 7:30, promptly.

We wish to urge the different societies and Bereans to communicate freely with the Berean Page this year, and send in news items and brief thoughts frequently. Please send all communications and copy directly to Berean Editor, whose address appears at the head of this page. Do not mail to the National Bible Institution or to The Restitution Herald, as that causes unnecessary delay, as well as extra labor and trouble for all.

DEAR BEREANS: I am forwarding Bro. Howard Moore's thoughts he gathered from a lesson on the subject of "Trust", presented by Bro. Walter Grey as leader. Our class is memorizing the names, themes, and divisions of the Books of the Bible given in verse as published in The Herald. Each member has a note book in which the impressive thoughts of the lessons are kept. This helps to fix them in the mind now and may be of help in presenting lessons to others later.

By the Secretary.

BEREAN LESSON FORTY-THREE—TRUST

THIS lesson on trust we believe is exceptionally helpful to us all, because it deals with all who have tried and are trying harder to become trustworthies in the sight of our Lord. He is willing to trust any and all of us if we will only give Him the opportunity.

It would be hard for any of us to visualize life if it were not for the fact that trust of our fellow-man prevails in our minds. In daily life this would pertain to our business relations and dealings with people. In order to reach the top of success, gain and hold the confidence of our business and daily associates, we are really compelled to travel one and only one road, and that is the road of honesty and faith. This is accomplished by meeting the obligations which we undertake.

We should all strive to live before God in such manner that we may trust Him for help and guidance in every time of trouble. This has been accomplished by Christians of wide experience, but sometimes "babes in Christ" are not able to exercise this abiding trust but are filled with doubt.

The words, "faith" and "trust" are of similar meaning. All true Christians should have implicit trust in God and if we trust Him we certainly have faith in Him. This standing credit with God would be needless if we were all perfect or if any one of us were perfect, but such a condition does not exist. Most of us realize more as each and every day goes by that we must recognize the fact that we all will sooner or later have to rely on a central being for help—One who has the power to make the final adjustments and establish immortality for those who have really tried.

Howard H. Moore,

THE CHARACTER OF JESUS

By Esther Sealine

THE CHARACTER of Jesus is interesting to study because He was perfect in the sight of God. He was holy, for He was the Son of God. He was righteous, because He loved righteousness and hated iniquity. He was true, for He spake not of Himself, seeking His own glory, but seeking the glory of the Father who sent Him. He was just, He could do nothing of Himself. He said, "As I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just." He sought not His own will, but the will of the Father which sent Him. He was sinless, for He was an high priest which was touched with the feelings of our infirmities, tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin.

He was loving and humbled Himself as a servant and became obedient unto death, even unto the death of the cross. He obeyed the Father, for He said, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John 15:10, 12, 13. He was forgiving, for when He was crucified He said, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Luke 23:34.

"I WILL SEND YOU ELIJAH"

By T. A. Drinkard

BEHOLD, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." Mal. 4: 5, 6.

The above words constitute a part of "The burden of the word of the LORD to Israel by Malachi" the prophet. Mal. 1:1. In the time of the personal ministry of Jesus Christ, the scribes were contending that Elijah would come and perform the work assigned to him, but the apostles were at a loss to answer their claim; hence, they brought the question to the Master for His opinion, as, "Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?" They (the scribes) believed that Elias would come, and were still looking for him, but Jesus explained the matter as He saw it: "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things."

Let us stop here just a moment and enjoy the full meaning of this statement before reading its companion verse. Jesus Christ seeks to show them that it had been prophesied that such a man would come into the world in order to fulfill prophecy, and if we would remain at this verse we would have some reason for looking forward to a future coming of Elijah, but the following verse forbids such a view. Let us read: "But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed." Matt. 17:10-12. By this explanation "the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist." Ch. 17:13. You will find a repetition of this account in Mark 9:11-13, which confirms our views of the previous references given.

In connection with these scriptures you will please read Matt. 11:7-14. Special attention should rest upon the 14th verse: "And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come." True it is, that Elias was to appear "before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord". Mal. 4:5. He did this very thing. The prophecy does not indicate that the day of the Lord would immediately follow Elias' work.

Take for instance another prophecy such as Isa. 61:2. Note that in the New Testament, when Christ reads the first and second verses, He stops at the middle of the second verse. Did He mar the intent of the verse? I would not make effort here to mislead, but only seek to point out that Christ shows that John the Baptist was the Elias of prophecy that was to come.

Let us turn to the message that he was to carry to Israel. Mal. 4:6, shows his mission was one of preparing the hearts of Israel for the reception of the Master. Discussing the question Jesus says, "For this is he, of whom it is written (Isa. 40:3), Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee." Matt. 11:10. Again, John the Baptist refers to himself as being the man of prophecy. Matt. 3:1-3.

In Luke 1:76 we may obtain another statement that only confirms the scriptures given above: "And thou, child (John the Baptist), shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways."

The Elias of Scripture has already come and performed the work assigned to him, and we are not justified in taking Scripture meaning and revising it so it will seem to teach something else. Let each one so live that the Master will be able to use him in His kingdom.

THE LAST DAYS

By Frances Byers

AND JESUS answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you," Matt. 24:4. Read on including the 24th verse, "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." Are there any of these false prophets in this day? Do we believe everything anyone and everyone tells us? No, we recognize them to be false and not in accordance with God's word. Are there not people of this day and age of the world who are traveling throughout the universe showing great signs and wonders? Just last summer a very noted woman was in a town a few miles from here preaching divine healing, (not the Gospel of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior) healing the sick and afflicted. Thousands flocked to the tent to hear her and see her miracles and many walked away without their crutches. Those who have seen her think she is wonderful, but to me it is a fulfillment of prophecy, the showing of signs and wonders that we are warned not to be deceived by.

"And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences and earthquakes, in divers places," Matt. 24:6, 7. We are living in the time of war: national and civil wars are being waged continually. We are living in the time of trouble and sorrows: kingdoms have risen against kingdoms until most of them have crumbled; famines and pestilences are not new, and there has been a greater record of earthquakes in the past few years than ever before.

Are we not living in the time of the end? "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." As prophecy is being fulfilled, we are nearing the time when the trumpet shall sound, when the dead, in Christ, shall rise first and those which are alive, in Christ, shall ascend to meet Him in the air as He comes back to set up His kingdom upon this earth. We know we are in the last days, but we do not know how much time we have left to prepare for His coming. "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." Matt. 24:36. "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." Matt. 24:44.

JESUS AND SINNERS

Mark 2:1-17

Devotional Reading: Psalm 32:1, 2, 5-7, 10, 11

GOLDEN TEXT

I came not to call the righteous, but sinners.—Mark 2:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Jesus and Sinners. Sinners are those who are in or under sin. This includes all people. "All have sinned."—Rom. 3: 10, 23. In service to God and man, Jesus came to call "sinners to repentance," v. 17. Repentance requires the one repenting to recognize the truthfulness of the way presented unto him and that he will at heart take up that way and follow diligently, having turned from any and all opposing ways.

Jesus' teachings emphasized that merely ceremonially clean persons were still unrighteous; that it required the depth of heart cleansing to efface sin from Jew or Gentile. This heart cleansing could be accomplished only by certain and sure forgiveness of the sin.

Forgiveness Indicates God's Authorization of Christ. The scribes, the lawyers, of Mosaic law, sensed the fact that none but God could forgive sin. The priestly ritual service only presented the sinner before the "Mercy Seat" of God, and supplicated His forgiveness. Jesus taught that He, Himself, had been authorized to forgive sins and restore the sinner to the health of righteousness.

It was no different to Jesus whether He announced, "Thy sins be forgiven thee", or whether He should say, "Take up thy bed and walk." The two facts, according to the Savior's analysis, were inter-related. With the forgiveness of sin, the healing followed.

Faith. Faith underlies all Christian achievements. From the beginning, faith had been "the substance of things hoped for."—Heb. 11:1. Faith has been, and is, the only evidence, the only reasoning by which to lay hold on "things not seen". The palsied man had no evidence that his sins were forgiven; that his palsy had been stricken; that strength had been restored. He merely heard the Master's word, "Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house."—Matt. 9:6. Faith required immediate action. He arose. The strength came as the effort progressed. Faith was the only evidence he held that he would be able to arise. The same Master had just told him, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." It was the faith of the palsied one that accepted the Savior's assurance as fact.

In all this, faith was made perfect, complete, "by works".

Questions. Did Jesus send a bugler to announce His return into Capernaum? How did the people know? Why did they gather into the house? Why was the palsied man brought? What is the meaning of "uncover the roof"? How could this be done? What kind of bed was this? How could Jesus see faith, v. 5? Define the meaning of forgiveness in the statement, "Thy sins be forgiven thee." Who were the scribes, v. 6? What is the meaning of "reasoning in their hearts"? Define blasphemies, v. 7. Was it true that God, only, could forgive sins? What is the meaning of, "Jesus perceived in his spirit," v. 8? Define "reasoned within themselves". Did forgiveness of sin and strength to walk, v. 9, mean the same thing in Jesus' analysis? From whence did Jesus receive power, that is, authority, to forgive sins? From whence did the palsied man receive strength to arise and carry his bed? Did his act prove anything to the people? Why did they glorify God? Why did Jesus sit with publicans and sinners? Why did sinners follow Him? Why would the scribes and Pharisees wish to repudiate Jesus, when His works were all commendable? What is the meaning of Jesus' statement that the "whole have no need of the physician"?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Jesus says to them, No need have the strong of a physician, but those who are ill: I came not to call righteous ones, but sinners.—Mark 2:17, Roth.

"There is none righteous, no not one", are the words of our Lord and Master. The righteous ones in the text above are the self-righteous, the just who need no repentance. Christ can do nothing for them until they are brought to realize their need for Him as their great Physician. They must call upon Him before He can say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee."—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Perseverance. The physician who has become famous is a magnet, as it were, toward which are drawn the ill and infirm. For the sake of the cure they believe he can effect, they will make any sacrifice and surmount any obstacle in order to gain admittance to the place of relief.

Forgiveness. The Great Physician controls the cure for the sinsick world. Forgiveness awaits all who come to Him in true humility, and implore the bestowal of this great gift. But until the sinner has realized the hopelessness of his condition, and comes to Jesus in sack cloth and ashes of mind, ready to place himself wholly in the Master's control, no part of the cure can be effected. But, oh, how ready and generous are the outpourings of forgiveness if we but call upon Him in faith! "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him in truth."—Psa. 145:18.

Sinners called. "But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice."—Matthew 9:13. The Lord in His infinite mercy and love has called the sinner to repentance. Forgiveness waits; and He who sees clearly into the hearts of men, judges in mercy, asking of those who come to Him submission and not sacrifice, obedience and not burnt offerings. Always He is waiting—waiting for the sinner to come to Him for the pardon which He stands ever ready to extend. "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance," v. 17.—G. M. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus the friend of sinners.

Where benefit would be rendered, almost invariably friendship must be cultivated. Kindness and love open an approach to hearts that can be entered in no other way.

Our Savior's philosophy that they that are well need not a physician, but they that are sick, is worthy of the Christian's deepest consideration. The sinner was sick. He needed forgiveness. Therefore the Master was willing to associate with publicans and sinners, to eat with them, that He might gain their confidence and be in position to bring them to repentance and grant them the needed blessing.

Herein lies our great opportunity: not to spurn and be distant to the wrong-doer, but to approach him with a life and a message that will manifest the great Physician.

Should a Christian leave the impression on the sinner's mind that it does not matter much even if he does sin? Can one be kind and friendly to a sinner and still show disapproval of wrong doing?—F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

The sin of the world: What is sin? What is the relationship between transgression and unbelief? Discern various causes of unbelief and its prevalency. What is the sin of the world?

Jesus versus the sin of the world: What concept of God do life's activities and nature build up? What concept of God does the life of Jesus give to man? Which concept begets love and faith? What effect does it have on transgression of God's law?

How does the Lamb of God take away the sin of the world?—A. K.

A PLEASANT STAY

By C. E. Randall

During the months that the writer was working for the Illinois State Conference, Oregon was headquarters. While I was there only a few days, yet Sr. Randall spent the entire time at Golden Rule Home. To her, this was a haven of rest, as we had only a few days before laid one of our boys in death's embrace. It would have been impossible for any one to have shown more hospitality and kindness than was showered upon us while there.

This stay gave ample opportunity to get first hand information concerning the General Conference and see the daily routine of the work as it is carried on at headquarters.

The Home is true to its name, "Golden Rule Home." One cannot help but be impressed with the Christian spirit that pervades the Home. Christian courtesy and brotherly and sisterly kindness are very noticeable. The members have a home of which any man or woman can be justly proud.

One fact should be kept in mind, that is, a home such as Golden Rule Home cannot be operated on "Faith". It takes money! Without first counting the cost, we cannot open our hearts, and say to our needy ones, "Come to Golden Rule Home and spend the balance of your life with us, and enjoy the warmth of our fireside; the bounties of our table; and we will fully care for you in health, in sickness, and in death." And again I say, It takes money! Unless, as individuals, we are willing and able to assume this financial obligation, let us refrain from criticizing those who are at the head of the General movement, because they are not willing to undertake heavy financial obligation without the money to assure proper care to the member. Golden Rule Home will gladly take in as many needy ones as we provide funds for guaranteeing their care and maintenance.

The Bible Training Class work is progressing very favorably. The greater part of the study deals with a structural analogy of the Bible. Two hours each week is given to a study of the grammatical construction of Bible language. This class work is bound to affect our future church work. These studies could be put in the form of correspondence lessons if sufficient office help could be afforded. Personally, I hope the time is not far distant when those of us who are not able to take the class work at Oregon, can carry the course through correspondence. The Bible Training Class is a big factor in our development, let us push it.

Our greatest field of opportunity lies in the printing business. If we are to grow we must develop our literary activities. More will be said a little later about this phase of our work.

Those who are working at headquarters are working hard and above all are working harmoniously together. It will be a glad day when the entire membership will do likewise.

The Restitution Herald: New Year's greetings to all and especially to those I met at North Salem, Ind., and Oregon, Ill., who were so nice to me while there.

I surely appreciated the Bible lessons on the Jews, and can now see the reason why they are the chosen nation—to bless all other nations.

I stayed two weeks at Attica, Ind., with Sr. Himmelright and daughter, and then they accompanied me to Oregon, to attend the General Conference. I would advise all that can possibly do so, to attend and help boost the work. Here, I met so many more of the precious faith, and so many ministers, some of whom I had met before. Every one seemed so nice and thoughtful for others, and willing to be helpful in every way. The Bible lessons were carried on, and made so plain that I think anyone could understand them.

There were several that joined the church at the Indiana State Conference, and also at Oregon.

I was blessed to visit and spend one night at the Golden Rule Home. It is just the home one would be interested in, who wished to get in touch with church services, and who wished to be well treated. I could not see how anyone could wish for a better home.

Enclosed you will find $2 to pay for the paper another year. I will close wishing you all a Happy New Year,

Your sister,

Mary F. Cooke,

Bentonville, Virginia.

A NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION

By J. H. Anderson

"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me", John 10:27.

"Come and follow me", Matt. 19:21.

"As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read", Luke 4:16.

A good resolution to make for the New Year: Go to church and Sunday school every Sunday to read and study God's Word, Mal. 3:16; Heb. 10:25.

REVEAL CHRIST THROUGH THE ANNUAL CHURCH MEETING

The New Year brings many of our Churches once more to the time of their annual business meetings. Too much emphasis can hardly be given to the importance of every such session. These gatherings should more and more be made the occasion for the assembling of every member of the Church. Too careful consideration of the activities of the Church cannot be made.

The Church should watch its constant influence in the community; it should watch its opportunity for service; it should watch its method and manner of service; and it should check the results of that service. Truly, the Church, in spite of itself, is a light before the community.

It is not true that the Church should consider only its own interests, that is, the interests of the individual members; it is not true that its one sole purpose is toward the ultimate salvation of its members: it is true that such salvation should be stressed and emphasized, but it is likewise true that the Church has a great responsibility before the Father in the matter of properly, thoroughly and persistently revealing God and His word to the world. In the annual Church meetings, these and many other things should be faithfully emphasized by all who, having vision of Christian labor, have the Church at heart.

Perhaps, one of the most important matters of consideration is the eldership. The Scriptures are very definite in describing the qualifications for such position. 1 Timothy 3 and Titus 1, taken into consideration with Acts 20:17 to the close and several other scriptures, define very fully God's own revealed mind concerning eldership. God knows best. The most that man can do is to accept His work.

In honor to the Father in heaven, and to His Son, our Lord and Savior, may it be that every Christian gathered in business session at the annual meetings shall most faithfully and prayerfully consider Christian duty and responsibility.

HIRAM JACKSON ANDREWS

Was born, September 17, 1856, and died, December 21, 1927; aged 71 years, 3 months, and 4 days.

Bro. Andrews may be best described as "the salt of the earth." He retained his savor until the last, living that Blessed Hope that he had accepted some years ago.

His great and implicit faith was a source of strength to all around him. He went to sleep with full assurance of resurrection. He wanted to live to see the second coming of our Savior, but such was denied.

The writer spoke words of comfort from Job 19:23-27 and John 11:25. These were two of Bro. Andrews' favorite texts. He quoted them often as he neared life's end. May those promises be realized by him at the first resurrection is our prayer.

GOLDEN RULE HOME ON CHRISTMAS

WOULD'N'T YOU like to know how Golden Rule Home looked at Christmas and what we did here? All had a very pleasant day and we are glad to tell you about it, and especially to thank those who helped to make this a day of cheer for all. A Christmas tree (one of our gifts from a friend) was placed in front of the living room fireplace. This was dressed in usual holiday dress. Underneath the tree were packages for all, packages sent to us from Iowa, Missouri, New York, Illinois, etc., from dear ones, who had labored hard to make us happy on Christmas.

Christmas came on Sunday you know, so we had our program immediately following the dinner. Yes, we had a good dinner, three fried chickens, (a gift) with cake (a gift also), pumpkin pie, cranberries, and all the rest that goes with that kind of dinner, mixed with some apples (another gift) and candy (sent to us also). The program was short: Lyle Thayer spoke a piece and sang a song, Paul Johnson gave us a good Scripture lesson from Rom. 12, after which prayer was offered by Sidney Jackson, others following. And truly, we all had much to be thankful for. Then we opened our packages.

THANKS to one and all who helped to make Christmas a pleasant time for us, and may God's blessing rest upon each one, for your kindness to us.

AUTO DEATH FORECAST FOR 1928

TWENTY-THREE THOUSAND persons will be killed and 700,000 injured in automobile accidents in this country next year unless the accident rate shows an unexpected improvement, the Traveler's Insurance Company predicted today", says a press report from New York City.

"The estimate is based on statistics of 1926 and 1925, which show that someone is either killed or injured in automobile accidents in this country every fourteen seconds. For each fatality the records show 100 injuries."

And the auto driver is not responsible for nearly all these accidents. Many, very many, are due to pedestrians and others.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: The soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final destruction of the wicked, 2 Thess. 1:9; the restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

JESUS AND SINNERS

Mark 2: 1-17

JESUS AND A SICK MAN

JESUS returned to Capernaum, and when people heard of His return they flocked to hear Him. They filled the house where He was preaching. They crowded about the doorway, and stood crowded together in the street.

While Jesus was talking, four men came to the house and tried to get to the doorway. They were carrying a bed. It was like a rug or mattress. On it lay a man that was ill with a sickness that made him unable to move. Now do you suppose these four men gave up when they saw the crowd, and said, "It is no use. We cannot reach Him?" No, indeed. They said, "We will find a way." And find a way they did. They went up on the roof. That was easy to do because the house had a flat roof and an outside stairs.

Upon reaching the roof the four men opened the roof above where Jesus was speaking and let the bed right down in front of where Jesus stood. Jesus looked at the poor sick man, and must have known what was in his heart, must have seen how sure the man was that Jesus could heal him if He would. At least Jesus said, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."

This was not what the people had expected to hear Him say. Some wondered why He said that. Others said, "Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God only?" These were the scribes who had come to find fault with Jesus and His teaching.

But, as always, Jesus saw what was in their hearts and asked them, "Why reason ye these things in your hearts? Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise and take up thy bed and walk?"

Then Jesus said He would show them that He did have power to forgive sins. So, He said to the sick man, "I say unto thee, Arise and take up thy bed and go thy way unto thine house."

And immediately the sick man arose, picked up the mattress bed and the crowd made way for him to walk out the door.

No wonder the people were all amazed and said, "We never saw it on this fashion."

THE CALL OF LEVI—MATTHEW

Capernaum was along the route where caravans passed from the East to Egypt and from Egypt to the great East.

The traffic that passed through or was landed there, or shipped out, had to pay dues as all who came out or went into the city had to pay toll on the bridges and on the main traveled roads. The high Roman officials farmed out the work to humble grades of men, but from highest to lowest, they all had a name for covetousness and greed.

False entries, illegal duties, and grinding of the people made the whole class of publicans stand, in the sight of the Jews with murderers, highway robbers, and common thieves. They were not allowed to testify in their courts, and the whole family was disgraced if one member of it did this work for the Roman rulers. Why, the poorest Jew would almost starve before he would accept alms from a publican, and would actually starve before he would sit at table with him.

Such a man was Levi Matthew, a publican, but a Hebrew of the Hebrews. He knew of the writings, the history, the law and prophecy of his race. But Levi was a good man as well as a good business man. He not only had to examine people and goods, but he had to keep official records. He had to be secretary, book-keeper, and treasurer for some high official. His business was full of temptations, but they did not appeal to Matthew.

He belonged to the old priestly tribe. He was moderately rich, had good business habits, was unselfish and poor in spirit.

One day as Jesus passed Matthew's office He saw Matthew sitting at his work. The Savior must have recognized Matthew's goodness for He said to him, "Follow me."

Just as if he had been waiting for this invitation, Matthew arose and followed Jesus. Do you see what this distinction meant to the conscientious publican?

He was so pleased that he gave a big feast that evening to celebrate this wonderful privilege that had come to him. He invited a number of his own friends, honest men most likely, but looked down upon by Jews as "sinners".

How do you suppose Jesus felt when He looked around on that company? There are people in this age who would not accept an invitation to a dinner if only one "sinner" had been invited, and here was the great Rabbi (Jesus) invited to eat with a room full of them. But Jesus came to call sinners to repentance. He told Matthew He would come to the feast and He went and enjoyed the whole evening with these friends of His new, chosen disciple.

Now, when the Scribes and Pharisees saw Jesus eating with this disliked crowd, they said to His disciples, "How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?"

And when Jesus heard of their questioning He said, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." (Parts selected from "The Wonderful Story of Jesus".)

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Jesus will forgive us if we have done wrong, and help us to start all over again.

MEMORY VERSE

II Timothy 3:16.

TINY TOTS

Jesus was preaching in a house. Four men carried a mattress on which lay a poor man who was sick and could not walk. They wanted Jesus to make the man well. But they could not get through the crowd to Jesus. So they cut a hole in the flat roof and let the man down through the roof—down in front of Jesus. He looked at the man and told him to get up, take up his bed and go home. And the man stood right up, and walked out.

Levi was a publican. He was called a sinner because he collected money from traders, and some collectors were not honest. But Levi was a good man. And when Jesus saw him at his work Jesus called him to be one of His helpers. Levi was so happy he gave a big dinner and asked Jesus to come.

Jesus said He had come to help sinners too.

Levi was also called Matthew.

LIVING EPISTLES FOR CHRIST

By Samuel E. Haney

YE ARE OUR epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men. Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not in tables of stone, but in fleshly tables of the heart." 2 Cor. 3:2, 3.

These words start an attentive Christian thinking. They are manifestly the epistle of Christ—written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God, and read of all men—the world.

I wonder if we fully grasp what this means. Epistle means a letter. Get the thought! We are open letters (no secrecy), read by all with whom we meet. Personally, am I really one of the "ye are" coterie to whom Paul refers, or is my religion based upon self-sufficiency and self-esteem? A prayerful examination convinces me that I am a Christian. Then, as a walking "epistle", is my writing legible? Some letters we get are undecipherable. Is this the kind of "epistle" I am? Something here to think about, dear ones.

The heart-searching words of the poet's reverie should be a translation of the doubting Christian's spiritual status:—

"Lord, I care not for riches, neither silver nor gold;
I would make sure of eden, I would enter the fold,
In the book of Thy kingdom, with its pages so fair,
Tell me, Jesus, my Savior, Is my name written there?"

"Lord, my sins they are many, like the sands of the sea,
But Thy blood, O my Savior, is sufficient for me;
For Thy promise is written in bright letters that glow,
Tho' your sins be as scarlet, I will make them like snow.

"Oh! that beautiful city, with mansions of light,
With its glorified beings, in pure garments of white;
Where no evil thing cometh to despoil what is fair;
Where the angels are watching, is my name written there?"

But the Holy Spirit and the Word give us a definite answer—Yes, my name is written there. "But ye (Christians) are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect," . . . Heb. 12:22, 23. This should be sufficient, but our heavenly Father is very considerate, knowing our proneness to doubt and wander from the fold. "Like the compassion of a father for his children, is the compassion of Yahweh for them who revere Him; for He knoweth how we are formed, He is mindful that dust we are," Psa. 103:13, 14—Rotherham: so He testifies and confirms His Word by His Spirit: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God," Rom. 8:16. "Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." 2 Cor. 1:22. "Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of His Spirit." 1 John 4:13.

To economize in space I shall ask my readers to please read the entire texts, from which I quote a few words.

First, let the Word of God explain why some Christians are in doubt and fear; and why, in these grossly dark days (Isa. 60:1) "fools seek to rush in where angels fear to tread": "for he that walketh in darkness knoweth not whither he goeth," John 12:35. "He that hateth his brother is in darkness . . . and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes." 1 John 2:11. "If a man walk in the night, he stumbleth, because there is no light in him." "Scoffers, walking after their own lusts", "murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts", 2 Pet. 3:3; Jude 16. It so grieved Paul to see certain ones ("antinomian reactionists"—Lightfoot) choosing darkness rather than light, and being so engrossed with earthly things that he wept: "Brethren, become Joint-Imitators of me, and watch THOSE who are thus WALKING, as you have us for a pattern. (For often I told you, and now even weeping I say, many walk as the ENEMIES of the CROSS of ANOINTED one; whose END will be DESTRUCTION, whose GOD is the STOMACH, and their GLORY in their SHAME; THEY who are engrossed with EARTHLY things"), Phil. 3:17-19, Emp. Dia.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

(PART 26)

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF JERUSALEM AND OF ROME

(Daniel 11)

THE SYSTEM of Roman financial administration under which the indirect taxes as well as the domain-revenues were levied by means of middlemen, in itself granted to the Roman capitalist class the most extensive advantages at the expense of those liable to taxation. But the direct taxes consisted either, as in most provinces, of fixed sums of money payable by the communities—which of itself excluded the intervention of Roman capitalists—or, as in Sicily and Sardinia, of a ground-tenth, the levying of which for each particular community was leased in the provinces themselves, so that wealthy provincials regularly, and the tributary communities themselves very frequently, farmed the tenth of their districts and thereby kept at a distance the dangerous Roman middlemen. Six years ago, when the province of Asia had fallen to the Romans, the senate had organized it substantially according to the first system. Gaius Gracchus overturned this arrangement by a decree of the people, and not only burdened the province, which had hitherto been almost free from taxation, with the most extensive indirect and direct taxes, particularly the ground-tenth, but also enacted that these taxes should be exposed to auction for the province as a whole and in Rome, a rule which practically excluded the provincials from participation, and called into existence in the body of middlemen for the decumae, sciptura, and vectigalia of the province of Asia an association of capitalists of colossal magnitude. . . .

"While a gold mine was thus opened for the mercantile class, and the members of the new partnership constituted a great financial power imposing even for the government—a "senate of merchants"—a definite sphere of public action was at the same time assigned to them in the jury courts. The field of the criminal procedure which by right fell to be conducted before the burgesses was among the Romans from the first very narrow, and was, as we have already stated, still further narrowed by Gracchus. Most processes—both such as related to public crimes and civil causes—were decided either by single jurymen, or by commissions partly permanent, partly extraordinary. Hitherto both the former and the latter had been exclusively taken from the senate; Gracchus transferred the functions of jurymen—both in strictly civil processes, and in the case of the standing and temporary commissions—to the mercantile order, directing a new list of jurymen to be annually formed after the analogy of the equestrian centuries from all persons of equestrian rating, and excluding the senators directly, and the young men of senatorial families by fixing of a certain limit of age, from judicial functions. . . .

"Gracchus earnestly labored to find a remedy for social evils, and to check the spread of pauperism; yet he at the same time intentionally reared up a street proleariat of the worst kind in the capital by his distributions of corn, which were designed to be, and became, a premium to all the lazy and hungry civic rabble. . . . Gracchus censured in the bitterest terms the venality of the senate, and in particular laid bare with unsparing and just severity the scandalous traffic which Manius Aquillius had driven with the provinces of Asia Minor; yet it was through the efforts of the same man that the sovereign populace of the capital got itself aliminated in return for its cares of government by the body of its subjects. Gracchus warmly disapproved the disgraceful spoliation of the provinces, and not only instituted proceedings of wholesome severity in particular cases, but also procured the abolition of the thoroughly insufficient senatorial courts, before which even Scipio Aemilianus had vainly staked his whole influence to bring the most decided criminals to punishment; yet he at the same time by the introduction of courts composed of merchants, sur-rendered the provincials with their hands fettered to the party of material interests and thereby to a despotism still more unscrupulous than that of the aristocracy had been, and he introduced into Asia a taxation compared with which even the form of taxation established after the Carthaginian model in Sicily might be called mild and humane—just because on the one hand he needed the party of moneyed men, and on the other hand required new and comprehensive resources to meet his distributions of grain and the other burdens newly imposed on the finances."

cilities for the Church. Since August 1923, the National Bible Institution, having had free use of the property, has assumed all current responsibility for the publishing work.

It was made plain at the meeting of August 1923 that it was altogether probable that in a short time, should the National Bible Institution prove efficient in the publishing work, The Restitution Publishing Company would transfer the property itself to the National Bible Institution in the interests of the Church of God. The meeting above reported has taken steps for such transfer. Proper steps will at once be taken to put into force the decision of the meeting.

While different items of equipment have been gradually added to the printing plant during the past, and thus the printing plant has been constantly enhanced in value, it should be remembered by all that certain pieces of the machinery, after sixteen years of use, have suffered considerable wear; indeed, the linograph, which was a second in the very near future.

The Secretary feels that he is expressing the mind of the great majority, if not all of the stockholders of The Restitution Publishing Company, when he wishes the National Bible Institution every blessing from the Father in its effort to proclaim the gospel through increased use of the printing plant, perhaps the best known medium today for the presentation of thought to the world.

The Secretary further feels that the above is in full accord with the mind of the President, L. E. Conner, and of the Board of Directors.

F. H. Knodle, Sec.

THE PRINTING PLANT TRANSFER

In consideration of the decision of The Restitution Publishing Company to convey its property to the National Bible Institution, as reported elsewhere in this paper, I wish hereby, in behalf of the Church of God everywhere, as represented by the General Conference and the National Bible Institution, to extend thanks to the stockholders of The Restitution Publishing Company, who have so faithfully sought to accomplish its high ideal in the matter of providing and maintaining for over sixteen years publishing facilities in the interest of the Church of God, and who have now offered this property to the Church through its organization—the National Bible Institution. It is most certain that as a whole, the one earnest effort has been to labor in the service of our Lord for the good of all. Whatever may have occurred otherwise has been because of the weakness of finite man rather than the results of any desire or intent.

The Secretary will take immediate steps to present this proposition for the action of the Advisory and Executive Boards of the National Bible Institution and will keep the Church informed through The Herald as to the progress of this matter.

The transfer of the property will not affect in any manner the present management or method for conducting the work. For four years, the publishing work has been managed by the National Bible Institution. This conveyance merely changes the title of the property, so that now, upon accepting this transfer, the Church of God, as a whole, becomes responsible for the operation of the publishing work and for the maintenance and enlargement of the plant to execute the decisions of the Church, as may be made annually in General Conference assembled.

Again, in behalf of all, I express heartiest appreciation to the members of The Restitution Publishing Company, and especially to those who have carried the brunt of the burden.

F. L. Austin,

Secretary of the General Conference of the Church of God the Church of God and its National Bible and its National Bible Institution.

If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit." Gal. 5:16, 25. John "rejoiced greatly" to find God's children "walking in truth", 2 John 4. Still in doubt? Let the doubting Thomas appeal to Jesus:

"Tell me, Jesus, my Savior, Is my name written there?
Is my name written there, On the page white and fair?"

To the honest, faithful child of God, Jesus leaves no room for doubting: "Thou hast a few names even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me in white: for they are worthy. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels", Rev. 3:4, 5.

Let us learn to trust Him even where we cannot trace Him:

"Simply trusting every day,
Trusting through a stormy way;
Even when my faith is small,
Trusting Jesus, that is all.

"Brightly doth His Spirit shine
Into this poor heart of mine;
While He leads I cannot fall,
Trusting Jesus, that is all.

"Trusting as the moments fly,
Trusting as the days go by;
Trusting Him whate'er befall,
Trusting Jesus, that is all.

The Lord first tries lovingly to wean us from the world and its ways; but, if this doesn't work, He tries other means that are not so pleasant and loving.—S. E. H.

BIBLE NUMBERS

By Abbie C. Morrow Brown

ONE, THE JUDGMENT NUMBER

"ONE shall be called, The city of destruction." Isa. 19:18.

Almost without exception, God's judgments are single, solitary, separate. Judgment is "his strange work; . . . his strange act," Isa. 28:21.

1. There was only ONE flood. God's covenant with Noah was, "the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh," Gen. 9:15. This is God's great principle concerning judgments.

2. Only ONCE were cities destroyed by fire from heaven, and ONE was spared through Lot's prayer, Gen. 19:20-24.

3. Only ONE woman became a pillar of salt, Gen. 19:26.

4. Only ONE company of rebels was drowned, Exod. 14:26-28.

5. Only ONE congregation did the earth swallow up, Num. 16:32.

6. Only ONE king ate grass seven years, Dan. 4:32.

7. Only ONE lying couple fell dead, Acts 5:10.

8. Only ONE blasphemous king was eaten of worms, Acts 12:23.

This rule of judgment is found from Cain, in Genesis to Babylon, in Revelation, Gen. 4:9-12; Rev. 18:10.

And all judgment is righteous, 2 Thess. 1:5;

"Judgment . . . according to truth," Rom. 2:2;

"Judgment unto victory," Matt. 12:20.

*"God's justice is the gladdest thing
Creation can behold,
His tenderness so meek, it wins
The guilty to be bold.*

*"All these may draw upon His love,
His mercy may command,
And still outflows His silent sea,
Immutable and grand.*

*"O little heart of mine, shall pain
Or sorrow make thee moan
When ALL this GOD is ALL for thee,
A Father ALL thine own?"*

1. God's wrath is but for ONE moment. Three times this is stated, Psa. 30:5; Isa. 54:7, 8. "His mercy endureth for ever." 1 Chron. 16:34 This is stated 42 times, 6 x 7, Divine labor multiplied by Divine perfection.

2. God punishes "unto the third and fourth generation." He shows "mercy unto thousands" of generations, Ex. 20:5-6.

3. "He retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy," Micah 7:18.

4. "The LORD taketh pleasure in them . . . that hope in his mercy," Psa. 147:11.

5. His love is "exceeding abundantly above" the possibility of our thought, Eph. 3:17-21.

6. His blessings are "innumerable", Heb. 11:12; 12:22.

7. God's "lovingkindnesses" are a "multitude", Isaiah 63:7

8. We read seven times of "the multitude of his mercies," Lam. 3:32; Psa. 5:7; 51:1; 69:13-16; 106:7, 45.

*"There's a wideness in God's mercy,
Like the wideness of the sea;
There's a kindness in His justice,
Manifest on Calvary.*

*"For the love of God is broader Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."*

A cynic is a man who must be unhappy in order to appear happy.—S. E. H.

RECORDS SHOW GAIN IN CRIME

A GENERAL INCREASE in crime in Chicago was shown in the annual report of James A. Kearns, clerk of the Municipal Court, made yesterday to Chief Justice Harry Olson", reads the Herald and Examiner.

"Increase of 21 per cent in charges of murder was shown in comparison of the 176 cases in 1926 to 213 in 1927. Other comparative figures on prosecutions are as follows:

	1926	1927
Larceny -----	8,629	10,443
Robbery -----	2,658	3,527
Burglary -----	2,185	1,505

The figures show a notable increase in manslaughter cases, with 198 in 1926 to 314 in 1927.

Statistics showing decrease in prosecution of cases are as follows:

	1926	1927
Wife abandonment..	4,929	3,728
Disorderly house----	21,685	12,220
Gambling-----	5,255	3,884
Motor Vehicle-----	120,023	107,272

Figures on prosecution of felonies disclosed that 33.9 per cent were dismissed for want of prosecution, 9.9 per cent were nolle prossed, 17.7 per cent were discharged, and 38.5 per cent were held to the Criminal Court.

An indication of the volume of work handled in the Municipal Court was provided in Mr. Kearns' report by figures showing a total of 303,145 criminal suits filed, and 131,688 civil suits, a grand total of 434,813, of which 427,366 were disposed of. Money judgments totaled $21,648,591.

These figures are computed on actual moral evils. They are not merely legal wrongs. There is a very strong suggestion here that "evil men and seducers are growing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived".

Love—One of Life's Most Expensive Affairs

A FEW DAYS ago a statistician, reviewing the year 1927, stated that "misunderstandings" were the cause of the greatest expenses in life. The statement, as read, made lasting impression. Repeated meditation followed. Then, in the course of reading the book entitled Modern Money Methods, by F. A. Agar, the statement was found which read: "Love is the most expensive thing in the world." Days of intermittent meditation followed that statement.

The greatness of the expense upon life caused by love is marvelous. I will not undertake to indicate which incites the greater expense—love or misunderstanding. Suffice for the present that we briefly consider love's expenses.

Love causes the expenditure of the full of one's ability in strength, time, devotion, finances—in everything. Love voluntarily and gladly buys diamonds, pearls, rubies; it builds homes with the best of furnishings commensurate with ability; it affords social activities: anything, everything to please, to serve, to benefit the one unto whom love goes forth. Love provides doctors, nurses, assistants, even beyond the needs of one's better judgment. It watches over the sick-bed throughout the midnight hours; it stands at the window waiting, till the wee hours of the morning; it banishes sleep from the pillowed head, while waiting in anxiety for the incoming one; it devotes estates, kingdoms, everything—all largely in its anxious, voluntary effort to satisfy the love impulse from within. In all this, either directly or indirectly, this love impulse, nestled so tenderly within life's heart by the great Maker who knows best regarding all things, can be summed up in terms of money valuation. The diamonds, the mansions, the kingdoms, the labors, whatever has resulted from love, has a money value. The cost of love is the sum total of all this.

Reckoning this cost in the terms of money, it may well be said that money is the thermometer indicating the temperature of one's love. Just what the grand total of valuation of this love expense would compute is questionable. It is not the purpose here to estimate. The thought that sinks deeply in the mind of the writer is that love expresses itself ultimately only through some visible channel, and that that channel is service which in the last analysis is largely computed in terms of valuation.

GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD

IN THE LIGHT of the foregoing, let us endeavor to visualize that love which the Father had for man. It was deep, true love. God expressed that love, yea, has continually expressed that love from the beginning of man's existence. He has provided every possible advantage and opportunity for man. His hand has never been stayed. Not only constantly growing vegetation for life's food and raiment; not only the great beautiful sunlight; not only dazzling nature scenery of the awe-inspiring mountain side; not only all these things that go together to make up the comforts and enjoyments of human life; but also, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, . . ." What expense! What a cost! And all this service manifests a depth of love within the Father's heart for the creatures of His handiwork. Long, tedious years to man has the Father stood at the windows of heaven through the dark centuries, awaiting man's return from his midnight revelries to the comforts provided by the God of love.

The cost of love? Not only has it cost the wee little bits, which man has paid for diamonds, mansions and such like, but it has also cost the astounding measurement of devotion and service of Almighty God to you, to me, and to all our brethren.

THOU SHALT LOVE THE LORD THY GOD

THIS IS the commandment of God to man. It has been put in the form of a law, of a requirement. Well might man inquire as to why God has so required. Is it because God would be served by a compelled love? Let us reflect. Is love of the mother compelled by the child, or is it an outflow, spontaneous, and voluntary, on her part? Is it compelled love of the boy or girl that brings forth the devotion and concern of one toward and for the other, or is it the yearnings and reachings of the one stretching forth for recognition by the other? These yearnings, love-longings, increase voluntarily as each habituates self in manifestation toward the other. These manifestations develop in self one of the richest, most treasured characteristics of life. Though expensive in FORMALITY OR SERVICE—WHICH?

"In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."—1 Thess. 5:18.

From the beginning of God's instructions to man, throughout each and every dispensation, God has assigned and required certain customs of practice. The 20th century man with his super-mentality analyzes that many such customs are but formality without corresponding benefits. To him in his cold dollar-and-cent analysis all such things tend to outward form without inner heart, and return but sham compensation for the service rendered.

God reveals otherwise. Man develops increased appreciation and loyalty of and for that which he, by frequent thought and service, honors and supports. With few exceptions man becomes increasingly enthusiastic concerning that line and life of society to which he habitually gives his time and strength and means. The same law applies to man with reference to his relation to God.

Thanksgiving for everything received has no need whatsoever of making the thanksgiving cold, or formal, or heartless. Such is not true between man and man, unless it be the fact that the heart itself is cold and that the word spoken but reveals that fact; rather, as man increasingly regards his fellow-man, he more and more, by natural and ardent impulse, expresses thanks, even for things of less and less importance.

The training of a child or of a new convert to recognize that every good and perfect gift comes from the Father and that the same should be recognized in heartfelt thanks, only increases the ardor of that child or of that convert in recognizing God in all things. Thus, habit, constantly repeated action, instead of producing formality, produces fervency, loyalty, devotion, constant interest in and for the God of heaven; in and for His Son.

Not only is this true with reference to the giving of thanks, it is equally true regarding all man's relations toward God. Baptism, in and of itself, has no purification of life for presentation to the Master. Peter answers that subject by saying, it is "the answer of a good conscience toward God." The answering of a conscience can but advance that conscience God-ward. God has made this requirement, it is for man's good. Shall he accept it, or will he amend it by one of his advanced ideas?

* * * *

Frequent gatherings for religious services are in accordance with God's instruction for many centuries. True, the heart may be disinterested in such gatherings. It is equally true that it is not the fact of the gatherings that has produced the indifference, but rather, it is the indifference that hinders the gatherings from producing the rich benefits possible. God's instruction is: forsake not "the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."—Heb. 10:25.

The same principle is applied to practically every phase of man's relation toward God. Paul's instruction to the Corinthian brethren was: "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16:2. Here is constant recognition of God in all of man's earnings and gatherings; and accordingly, as he has been prospered, he is requested to lay by in store week after week for the Lord. Taking this in connection with other teachings, this laying by for Jehovah should be first done before assigning the balance for man's use. It is a first fruit. Does one say that such is arbitrariness on the part of God? Not at all, in the sense in which the question is asked. It is merely education of man given by God, the Teacher of all teachers, to educate the Christian man, that, in every circumstance of life, God should be first in man's thought, first in man's service, first in man's devotion—first in all things. To aid man in reaching this most helpful attitude toward the Father, God has in all things taught man to habituate himself in service to God.

No cold formality here; no heartless sham of service; but rather, that constant repetition of thanksgiving, worship, devotion—daily and continually—which in every way develops in man the highest of all high ideals.

"In every thing give thanks" to God.

Let us unite in making the church, insofar as our personal influence can help, brighter, stronger, and truer in its testimony for Christ. Let each one disabuse his mind of the thought that the church, to-day, must be man-made. Only as the church is directed and strengthened by our Lord, is it of use in Christian development.

NEW WINE IN OLD BOTTLES

THERE IS still another truth in all the Savior's teachings. His teachings were in a sense like new cloth and like new wine. They were in a manner unsuited to the old garments or old bottles of carnal laws and ordinances. Though His teachings broke none of those laws or ordinances, they went so far beyond them that the old were not capable of containing them.

Christ's teachings, Christianity of to-day, could not or cannot be contained or encompassed by the laws of man, governing carnal life. The Christian is a new creature in Christ, 2 Cor. 5:17. As such, he is free in Christ; as such, he is exhorted to "stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free," Gal. 5:1. No old garment of legality can contain or hold such liberty. Christianity would burst any such garment or bottle, if one would undertake to confine it therein.

THE SABBATH DAY

MUCH OF THE accusation of the Pharisees was made relative to Jesus' activities on the sabbath day. Jesus taught that man was not made for the purpose of fitting the sabbath, but that the sabbath was set aside for the purpose of fitting and benefiting man, Mark 2:27. Seven of His miracles were wrought upon the sabbath day: the man with the unclean spirit at Capernaum was healed, Mark 1:21; Simon's mother-in-law was healed, Mark 1:29; the withered hand was restored, Mark 3:5; the impotent man entered the pool of Bethesda, John 5:9; the woman was healed of an infirmity, Luke 13:14; the man was recovered from dropsy, Luke 14:1; the man born blind was given sight, John 9:14. But in no case did He break the sabbath. His was more than to lift the sheep from the pit. It was more than to feed the hungry. It was to lift man out of sin; it was to bestow upon man greater rest; it was to ennoble and beautify.

TITHES AND OFFERINGS

TITHING must be considered as a life principle rather than as a law operating on life from the outside. The tithe is the least that love can give. But love must find further expression, hence the offerings spoken of in the Word of God.

To illustrate the difference between tithes and offerings, remember that a father and husband can do no less than meet the cost of necessities, such as shelter, clothing, and food, needed by those he loves; but provision for such necessities does not furnish very much of the joy of the home. A real joy, a higher joy, comes when, having met the need of his loved ones for the common things called for in the home life, by sacrifice or extra effort he then furnishes comforts and luxuries beyond necessities. So God has put into our relations with him a minimum of expectation, and then offers every child of His a chance to offer more, to make an offering if he pleases to do so, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver who adds to the minimum an offering which approximates the maximum.—From "Modern Money Methods", by F. A. Agar.

THEN AND NOW

"EIGHT YEARS ago the number of Jewish residents in Palestine was fifty-five thousand; to-day we number one hundred and sixty thousand. Eight years ago we owned 450,000 dunams of land; to-day we possess 1,200,000 dunams. Eight years ago our vegetables and milk were supplied by our neighbors; to-day we grow vegetables even for foreign markets, while the milk and butter for our consumption is produced mainly by ourselves. Eight years ago our workmen knew nothing of building trades; to-day Jewish towns and urban suburbs are established in various parts of the country—all built by Jewish hands. And finally, we have now trained a body of skilled workers second to none in their devotion, determination, idealism, and culture of heart.

"We hold the keys of industry: the Rutenberg and the Dead Sea concessions. Large industrial enterprises have already been established, the 'Nesher' Cement Factory of Yajour, the 'Grand Moulins' of Haifa, the Atlith Salt Factory, the Silicate Brick Factory of Tel Aviv. Even the Fourth Aliyah, which ended so dismally both to itself and to the Yishub at large, is not the perfect fiasco it is assumed by some to be. It can show a positive and bright side: it has redeemed thousands of dunams of plantation land, and it has introduced also thousands of agricultural settlers to the north of Tel Aviv and in the Chassidic settlements. The economic management of our affairs is becoming stabilized and healthier. One pound to-day in the lean period can do more than three pounds in the first post-war period and than two pounds during the boom two-and-a-half years ago. And last but not least, our rural settlements now, in the midst of the crisis, flourish as they never have done before.

"And all this has been accomplished by shattered Jewry after the War, and after the entire destruction of the Jewish centre in Russia! Wonderful and exemplary, indeed, has been the work achieved. And Herbert Samuel is right when he says—in The New Palestine Balfour number: 'Let us express the hope, and register the resolve that the second decade shall win results as great as the first. It is a high standard to reach. Unflinching effort can attain it.'—Dr. Eliezer Rieger, in The New Palestine.

"IF WE FIND but one to whom we can speak out our hearts freely, with whom we can walk in love and simplicity without dissimulation, we have no ground for quarrels with the world or God."—Stevenson.

QUESTIONS RELATIVE TO BAPTISM

"Can you or anyone of The Restitution Family prove by history or any other way what was the mode of baptism by the apostles or within one hundred years thereafter?"

MOSHEIM'S HISTORY, by Murdock, Vol. I., page 87, in relating the history of the church during the first century, reads: "In this century baptism was administered . . . by immersing the candidates wholly in water." Of the second century, the same volume, page 137, reads: "Baptism was publicly administered by the Bishop . . . the candidates for it were immersed wholly in water."

Hasting's Dictionary of the Bible, Vol. I., page 238, subject, "Baptism," reads: "In the Septuagint (the Greek version of the Old Testament) the simple verb baptein is frequent in the sense of 'dip' (Exod. 12:22; Lev. 4:6, 17; 9:9; 14:6, 16, 51, etc.) or immerse (Job 9:31); the intensive baptizein occurs four times: twice literally, of Naaman dipping in the Jordan (2 Kings 5:14) and of Judith bathing (12:7); once metaphorically (Isa. 21:4) and once of ceremonial washing after pollution, (Ecclesiasticus 31:25).

"In the New Testament the use of baptein is the same as in the Septuagint . . . ; but the use of baptizein undergoes a great change. As in Ecclesiasticus 31:25 it is used of ceremonial purification (Luke 11:38, and perhaps Mark 7:4, where the reading is again uncertain); and, as in Isa. 21:4, it is used metaphorically, viz., by Christ of His sufferings (Mark 10:38, 39; Luke 12:50). But, with these few exceptions, baptizo always refers to washing for a religious purpose, the administration for the sacred rite of ablution, baptizing in the technical sense; . . . It is plain from Luke 11:38 that in itself baptizo does not necessarily mean immersion, as Calvin and others assert. This is the usual meaning, however; Polybius uses it of sinking ships."

On page 243 the same work reads:

"The rite is nowhere described in detail; but the element was always water, and the mode of using it was commonly immersion."

In Hasting's Dictionary of Christ and the Gospels, page 168, is found this language under the topic of "Baptism": "A rite wherein, by immersion in water, the participant symbolized and signalized his transition from an impure to a pure life, his death to a past he abandons, and his new birth to a future he desires."

From the Encyclopedia Britannica, Ninth Edition, Vol. III., page 351, we quote the following: "Baptism, Tertullian said, had special reference to the death and rising again of our Lord and also of the mission of the Holy Ghost." Again: "The Council of Ravenna in 1311 was the first council of the Church (Roman) which legalized baptism by sprinkling, but leaving it to the choice of the officiating minister. The custom was to immerse three times, once at the name of each of the persons in the Trinity, but latterly the three-fold immersion was abolished because it was thought to go against the unity of the Trinity."

The above quotations include some other points beside that of baptism in order to get the full thought with reference to baptism itself. From the foregoing and other citations that might be made, it is evident that the early church, from the very first, understood that Christ's instruction regarding the mode of baptism was immersion. Dean Stanley is reported to have said that the apostles of the early church practiced it, but we, of the later times and northern country, have changed the mode to that of sprinkling; "indeed, we have changed the very meaning of the word."

HOW TO TITHE AND WHY

By A Layman

"When should I commence tithing my income?"

Now—to-day. Count what income you have on hand and put aside one-tenth of it. Add to this one-tenth of all you receive from day to day, week to week, or month to month and draw from this fund as you have calls for aid in behalf of Christian work.

"Do you recommend this as the best method?"

Yes, for most people; especially farmers, men and women of salaries, wage workers and all persons who are not accustomed to keeping accounts. Professional men, tradesmen and business men who keep a record of their income and expense prefer, as a rule, to open a "Tenth" or "Tithing Account", crediting this account with one-tenth of their entire net income and charging it with all sums paid out for Christian work.

"How can a business man know his net income until he takes his annual or semi-annual inventory?"

Estimate as closely as you can what it will probably be and give on that basis until you know your net profits. If you have overgiven and can afford it charge the difference to Free Will Offering Account, otherwise carry forward the balance to the credit of Tithing Account.

"What constitutes my net income?"

If you are a farmer, it is all the money you receive for the products of your farm and the cash value of all your family consumes. From this gross amount it is right to deduct, before tithing, all money paid for hired help, seed, feed, taxes, insurance, etc.; also the cash outlay for repairs on buildings, farm implements, etc.

If you are a physician your net income is your entire income less your professional expenses, such as office rent, medicines, cost of keeping a horse or a machine, etc.

If you are a lawyer, substantially the same rules apply as to a physician.

If you are a minister, it is the total amount you receive less traveling and other expenses connected with your parish and ministerial duties.

If you are a merchant or a manufacturer or a banker of course you keep accurate accounts. Your net income is the gross profits of your business less strictly business, but not family or personal expenses.

If you are a mechanic, or employee and wage-worker in any capacity, whether by the day, month or year, your net income is your total income less legitimate business expenses connected with your work, such as car fare, etc.

AN UNFORESEEN OUTCOME

IT WAS IN the large parlors of a mansion in C—, Missouri, where, on a pleasant October evening, some ten or twelve young people were gathered from the wealthiest homes of the elite of the city. Among them was a young lady who, although always social with the young, was clad in mourning garb, and bore the name of Mara, chosen by herself to express the grief on her life. Some seven years before she had been bereft of all her family.

The pleasant hours flew fast with mirth till about half-past ten in the evening, when, worried with their trivial talk, one of the company pulled out a pack of cards and flung it on the table where Mara Moore was sitting. The effect was startling. Her face took on a deadly pallor; she began trembling, arose from her seat, staggered across the room, and took a chair in the remotest corner of the room. So great was her agitation that everyone saw it, but none were aware of the cause.

One of the party who had been reading law for some time, not imagining the seriousness of her anguish, went to her, and in a bantering way threatened her with a legal prosecution before an impaneled jury in case she refused to return to her place at the table. While the lawyer was urging her to do this, a thoughtless young man of the company stepped up to them and placed a few cards in her hand as it was laying across her back. She jerked her hand away and gave it a sling as if to rid it of the contaminating filth of the cards, and with an agonizing scream, she began weeping and sobbing as if her heart would break.

Surprised at this new outburst, the lawyer sought to soothe the wounded spirit; and when she had become somewhat quiet he, with the rest, began to entreat her to give them the reason for her terrible agitation. This she at first refused to do; but being urged very strongly by all the company, she at last consented. At the first word a shudder passed over her whole frame; but after a pause she began:

"When I was nineteen years old I was living in an eastern city, in one of the happiest homes. A rich and tender father, with a loving mother, and as bright a brother as a sister could want, were my companions in that delightful home. Wealth and comfort smiled upon us, and prophesied of future happiness, until, with my own hand, I plucked down upon us the greatest curse imaginable.

"Two of our cousins came to visit us. We spent the evening in pleasant conversation as we did this evening; and just as those cards were thrown upon the table, and about the same hour, my parents having retired, our cousin threw a deck upon the table. They two and I sat down to play, while my dear brother, not liking the idea of playing cards, turned to his music which he was composing as a graduating exercise for examination day. We three needed a fourth to make the game go properly, and we began trying to persuade my brother to take part with us. He declared he thought it was not right to spend time in card-playing—that it was an amusement of the lowest character, and belonged to them—and he didn't want to get into it.

"After using all our arguments to induce him to assist us, but to no purpose, I went to him, put my arm around his neck and told him that I was a Christian, and thought it no harm to play cards just for amusement, and that I thought he ought to lay aside his scruples, and come and help us, as we could have no fun without his help; that he was too fastidious anyway. With this he arose from his seat very reluctantly, and came, protesting that he knew nothing about the business. We told him he could soon learn; and he did, only too quickly, for in a little time he was enough for either of us; and when we three had become tired of the sport, he was so delighted with it that he sat for an hour studying the cards and shuffling them.

"We laughed heartily at him for his interest in the matter, and finally retired for the night, leaving him with the cards. Next morning he took them up again and tried to induce us to play with him; but our cousins must go home, taking the deck of cards with them. But the fatal act had been done. That night my brother was out in the city until a late hour, which was a thing that never occurred before; and when he came home he seemed quite morose; and to our inquiries for the cause, his replies were all evasive.

"The next night he was out again; and this continued for some nights until all his money—some two hundred dollars—was all gone. He then went to father for more, and as he had an unbounded confidence in my brother, he very readily gave him quite a little sum, and without asking him what he was going to do with it. This was soon gone, and when he asked for more, father desired him to tell what he was going to do with so much money. Not giving a direct answer, father gave him a small sum, and told him he could get no more unless he would give a clear report of the use he had made of his money. This was soon spent, and when he went for more, unwilling to account for what he had received, father refused to give him more. With this refusal he became angry and told father he would make him willing to let him have the money. My brother went into the city again, and as usual went into a gambling den where he managed to get the money for gambling, or he would sit and look on. He was absent for nearly a week.

"During this time my mother neither ate nor slept, as I might say; and when my brother was brought home drunk, my mother took her bed, and never got up again; but died of a broken heart. We hoped this would stop my brother's course. He soon began his gambling and drinking again; and being young and rather delicate, it was not long until he was brought home in delirium tremens. Upon this, father took his bed and died, leaving my brother and me alone in the world. Oh, how I wished I could die, too! It seemed that God was determined that I should see the end of my work in wrecking our family.

"Every influence that could be brought to bear upon my poor brother I made use of, but to no avail; and oh, how I prayed for him! He went more rapidly down the way of ruin now that father was dead. After a few weeks my brother was brought home with delirium tremens again, and after suffering a short time in the most terrible agony, the poor boy died and was laid in a drunkard's grave. Oh, my God! Why was I ever born? Why can't I die too? What will my eternity be for having ruined my brother, the bright and beautiful boy? This is why I spell my name Mara."

Soon after the lady had begun telling her sad story, the ladies in the company began to weep, and when it was finished they were all sobbing as if their hearts would break, the men weeping with them. The cards had disappeared, and vows were solemnly expressed by the entire company that never again would any of them be guilty of engaging in that sport, but would ever endeavor to put the practice out of good society.—Selected.

IN DOING relief work for our church I have been told at different times by our southern brethren that they would take care of their own needy ones in the South. Now that Brother Stewart has made his wants known I feel sure he will receive assistance.

I am sorry I did not know the family was in need, and thus save them the necessity of asking publicly for help, as I am sure that isn't a pleasant thing to do.

As Brother Stewart's appeal was not confined to the South, but a general one, I want to say for the benefit of our people who send me donations from the different states to help our families who are in need in times of sickness and misfortune, that I was glad to be able to send Brother Stewart's family a donation, as soon as I read the appeal in The Herald, thus joining with the southern brethren in helping to relieve some of the burdens and anxiety of this worthy family.

Brethren everywhere, when we are striving to do the big things in life, let us add to the salaries of our poorly paid ministers, so they can support their families.

Yours in the Master's service,

Mrs. Orpha Sanford.

BEAUTIFUL RESURRECTION

By M. A. Woodward

IN THE course of his wanderings among the pyramids of Egypt, Lord Lindsay, the celebrated English traveler, accidentally came across a mummy, the inscription upon which proved to be at least two thousand years old. In examining the mummy after it was carefully unwrapped, he found in one of its enclosed hands a small round root. Wondering how long vegetable life could last, he took the little bulb, planted it in sunny soil, allowed the dews and rains of heaven to fall upon it, and in a few weeks to his joy, that root burst forth and bloomed into a beautiful flower. From this incident, Mrs. S. H. Bradford penned the following lines:

Two thousand years ago a flower
Bloomed lightly in a far off land;
Two thousand years ago its seed
Was placed within a dead man's hand.

Before the Savior came to earth,
That man had lived and loved and died;
And even in that far off time,
The flower had spread its perfume wide.

Suns rose and set, years came and went;
The dead hand kept its treasure well.
Nations were born and turned to dust,
While life was hidden in that shell.

The shriveled hand is robbed at last;
The seed is buried in the earth;
When lo! the life, long hidden there,
Into a glorious flower burst forth.

Just such a plant as that which grew
From such a seed when buried low,
Just such a flower in Egypt bloomed,
And died, two thousand years ago.

And will not He who watched the seed,
And kept the life within the shell,
When those He loves are laid to rest,
Watch o'er their buried dust as well?

And will not He from neath the sod
Cause something glorious to rise?
Aye! though it sleep two thousand years,
Yet all that buried dust shall rise.

Then will I lay me down in peace
When called to leave this vale of tears;
For in my flesh shall I see God,
E'en though it be two thousand years.

In looking over old books, I found this in a scrap-book of Bro. Woodward's. How often he quoted this poem, for he believed every word of it!

"And the dead in Christ shall rise first."

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

THE NEW SENIOR BEREAN BOOK WILL SOON BE FINISHED. AS A STEP IN GETTING READY FOR IT PLEASE READ CAREFULLY THE ANNOUNCEMENT GIVEN BELOW BY THE COMMITTEE

ANNOUNCING

THE NEW BEREAN BOOK

THE new senior lesson book which will soon be placed on sale is the result of an important change in the publishing policy of the National Berean Society. It might be more accurately said that it is the result of a newly instituted publishing policy; we have not had one in the past. For years we have been printing just lesson books, with no definite plan in their preparation, and while they have done much good in the lack of something better, yet they have been full of error, both of reference and of teaching, and have fallen far short of supplying a satisfactory literature for our young people.

The time has now come when announcement can be made of a constructive publishing program which aims to set a new standard in lesson books, and point to new ideals of service. To this end there has been planned a graded series of study courses which will embrace every great theme of the Bible. When this program is completed there will be no age of youth from 6 to 25 which will lack for appropriate, sound and constructive study material. Thereafter no more books of this nature will be published, except revisions and reprintings where necessary. The series will be permanent, and each book will continue to be used year after year by successive classes of students graduated from the preceding books. It will be the aim in all of these books to make them of such nature that their sale need not be limited to our own society, but extend to others throughout the land wherever opportunity affords. We do not conceive the possibilities that lie open to us in this direction.

It can easily be seen that such a drastic departure from former procedure must necessarily involve problems and difficulties never before encountered. To this fact is due the delay in the completion of this first book. The high standard of perfection we have tried to raise and follow in its construction has demanded an enormous amount of detail work as well as organization of personnel. There have been, of necessity, many mistakes, and faults may still be found with the work; but we believe that this book now presented, "The Gospel Plan", is as far superior to its predecessors as the new Ford car is superior to the old one.

We call your attention to a few of its outstanding features.

SYSTEMATIC CONSTRUCTION. Not only the book as a whole, but each lesson, has been carefully outlined and organized. No subject is presented twice in the same way. Each lesson is a unit of the book; the book itself a unit of the series. Because of their unity, clearness, and force, these lessons will prove more interesting and far more instructive.

ACCURACY. The editorial committee has painstakingly checked every statement, every reference. We believe there will not be found one misquoted or misapplied reference in the whole book, and also, that it will be found free from inaccuracies of statement.

COMPREHENSIVENESS. So far as possible, this book has been made representative of the best thought of the church as a whole. Private opinions of individuals not representative of our church body have been rigidly eliminated. No one man alone is responsible for any lesson or even statement. Every word was required to be edited and approved before going to the printer. In this first book we have laid the foundation for those to follow. Only fundamentals have been considered. Yet, in skeleton, every great fundamental truth of Scripture is touched on. In this book you will find all the material needed for a pre-baptismal course of study. It is distinctly evangelistic, and will be invaluable as a textbook in teaching the foundation truths of the gospel.

Inasmuch as these books are to be used indefinitely, they will bear no date. They will be numbered in series, and each new class organized from now on will be expected to begin with Book One. Each book will provide a one-year course of study, but, regardless of time, each book should be completed before beginning on the next one.

This lesson book program is one of the most far-reaching efforts ever undertaken by our people. It will fill a need of long standing. But we have only taken a few of the first steps. It is a great responsibility. We need your sober, conservative judgment of this first book. We want you to criticize. We want you to suggest. Tell us wherein we have succeeded, and wherein we have failed, that the initial mistakes may be rectified in succeeding books. And if you like the book, use it and boost it, and advertise it as much as you can.

PAUL'S MISSIONARY WORK

No. 1.

By Lyman Booth

FIRST JOURNEY WITH BARNABAS AND JOHN MARK

Acts 13 and 14

TIME

According to Lewin, A. D. 45

According to Conybeare & Howson, A. D. 48

ANTIOCH, a city on the River Orontes, the capital of the Roman Imperial Province of Syria, was the starting point of the first missionary journey. Acts 13:1. Barnabas and Saul, having been specially called by the Holy Spirit, and taking with them John Mark, Acts 13:5, departed from Antioch, after the church, in connection with a service of prayer and fasting, laid hands on Barnabas and Saul and sent them forth on their first Divinely appointed mission to the Gentiles, and they proceeded to

SELEUCIA,

The port of Antioch, which was called Seleucia "by the Sea", to distinguish it from other cities of the same name. It was but 15 miles from Antioch. From this point they sailed to the Island of

CYPRUS.

This island is about 140 miles long and 40 miles across in its widest part. It lies in a direct route to Asia Minor. Cyprus itself had long before received the gospel message, perhaps soon after Pentecost, for there were Christian disciples there. It was the place of Barnabas' nativity. Acts 4:36. They sailed from Seleucia to Cyprus and landed at the city of

SALAMIS,

A populous mercantile port on the eastern portion of the Island. Here, the apostle preached the gospel in the Jewish synagogue, and after traveling through the length of the island they arrived at

PAPHOS,

The capital, where the Roman, Sergius Paulus, was converted, and Elymas (Bar-jesus) a magician who tried to frustrate the apostle, was struck blind. Acts 13:11.

Under the Roman government there were two classes of provinces. The Senatorial and the Imperial. The first were governed by Proconsuls, who were appointed by lot and held office for a year, but had no military powers. Imperial provinces were governed by Propretors, appointed by the Emperor, and who held office as long as the latter wished, and had all the pomp of a military commander. Syria was an Imperial Province. From this capital city, Paphos, of Cyprus, Paul and his companions crossed to the southern shore of Asia Minor and landed at

PERGA

The ancient port of Pamphylia, Acts 13:13, on the River Cestros. At this place John Mark left them and returned home to Jerusalem, leaving the apostles to journey alone. They made their way across the Taurus Range of mountains to

ANTIOCH

Of Pisidia (or Antiochia Cæsarea), a flourishing commercial town on the main-traveled road from Ephesus into Asia. Its coins, which had become extant, were such as to give prominence to its privileges as a Roman colony, which colonies were distinct from those of ancient Greece or of modern Europe. They were virtually converted into garrison towns, governed by Roman laws and endowed with Roman rights and privileges. On the first sabbath day after his arrival here Paul preached his first recorded sermon, Acts 13:16-41, to Jews, and on the following sabbath he preached to the Gentiles. Acts 13:46, 48. Being driven out of the city, they followed the great road to

ICONIUM,

A populous city on the western border of Lycaonia, on the main road between the East and West. Here the apostles tarried quite a while, "as at Antioch". Only at Iconium, and some years later at Ephesus, was Paul given special confirmation of his preaching by performing miracles. Acts 14:3. Here they made many converts, but at length a mob of Jews and Gentiles set upon them to stone them, and they escaped by going to a small town of plain, simple, heathen people, south-east of Iconium called

LYSTRA

Here lived plain, simple, heathen people. At this place Paul healed a cripple, and the people, taking them for the gods, Jupiter and Mercury, were on the point of offering sacrifices to them when Paul prevented them, and by arguments drawn from nature, prepared their minds to receive the Christian faith. Acts 14:15-18. They were soon influenced by Jews from Antioch (of Pisidia) and Iconium, and they stoned Paul and left him for dead. Acts 14:19. On his recovery he and his companions fled to

DERBE

A small town some distance from the high road, near a pass called "The Cilician Gates". At this place they rested for some time, preaching the Word and teaching many people. Acts 14:21. Then they returned by the same route they had come, through Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch, to

PERGA

Where they preached for a time and proceeded on their return to

ATTALIA

Which was about 16 miles west of Perga, where there was a fine shipping port from whence they set sail to

ANTIOCH,

Where they gave a report of their work and experiences to a full assembly of the church and there they abode with the disciples for a long time. Acts 14:27, 28.

JESUS AND THE LAW

Mark 2:18 to 3:6
(TEMPERANCE APPLICATION)

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:33-40

GOLDEN TEXT

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.—Matthew 5:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Jesus and the Law. The law concerning which the Pharisees opposed Jesus, was the law of Moses. It was added to God's covenant to Abraham because of the sin of the people.—Gal. 3:19. It was added to restore and maintain the people in righteousness of conduct. This righteousness was righteousness of God's standard. For centuries before Christ, the Rabbis had written commentaries on the law. The more striking comments had been assembled under the general name of Talmud. This Talmud, which made very many changes concerning God's laws, was regarded by the Pharisees and scribes as the authentic rule of Jewish religion.

Numerous excuses were made whereby individuals might properly ignore certain God-given laws. They paid "tithe of mint and anise and cummin" and omitted the more important matters of "judgment, mercy and faith."—Matt. 23:23. Jesus did not reprove them for observing the former, but He strongly reprovved them for not observing the latter. Jesus taught, Matt. 5:18, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled." He did not repudiate God's law in any particular; He repudiated the Pharisees' contradictions of the law. "The law is holy."—Rom. 7:12. Jesus upheld it.

The Bridegroom. This particular law of fasting, used by the Pharisees and scribes, was of their own making, not of God's giving. Of this the Pharisees were aware. Their question afforded Jesus opportunity to announce another truth concerning Himself. Their question, which did not need answering, was thus answered more forcibly. Jesus was the Bridegroom.

The guests, His disciples and followers, were joyful because of His works and teachings. Under such circumstances they could not naturally fast. The point could but have been clear to them. He foretold to them, however, that the Bridegroom would be forcibly removed in a later day. Then, even those disciples, who were now feasting on His words, would fast. This was law enough for Jesus and it fully answered their false questioning.—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Ye may not think that I came to put down the law or the prophets: I came not to put down, but to fulfil.—Matt. 5:17, Roth.

Christ did not come to put down the law, but to complete it and bring it to its consummation. This He did by His own life and deeds. The beauty of the law was mirrored in the life He lived—a life without sin or guile. He fulfilled all its requirements and brought it to that promised seed, which He, Himself, was.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Jesus interprets the law. "The law is spiritual."—Rom. 7:14. The life of the Master was based upon the Spirit rather than upon the flesh. He interpreted His Father's will in harmony with spiritual motives. He recognized in the law the justice and the power of God arrayed against sin. It was not a positive force for good, and served to point out the way of evil rather than that of righteousness. Thus with Paul, he understood that the law was not designed for a "righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners."—1 Timothy 1:9-10. To all such workers of iniquity the law became at once a warning and a source of punishment. The law did not prompt to good works, but discouraged evil.

No law against doing good. "Against such there is no law."—Galatians 5:22-23. Not even the Sabbath was designed by God to restrict the doing of good works. "On the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made."—Gen. 2:2. But He still sent His sunshine and His rain on the seventh day as well as on the other days of the week. He still performed the work of necessity for the well-being of His children. Thus, Jesus interprets the law as permitting the doing of good at all times, regardless of circumstances or occasions. Following the Master's example, the Christian of to-day enjoys complete liberty of action always for the doing of good, when such deeds are prompted wholly by a desire to relieve the needy and the oppressed.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Jesus, the light, and the law.

"Brethren, I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment . . . the word which ye have heard from the beginning. Again, a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth."—1 John 2:7, 8.

Verse 7 in the above would contradict verse 8 were it not for the fact that John says, "which thing"; that is, which newness, is true in him and in you. In other words, the old commandment became new in Jesus "because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.

Verse 9 shows that the old commandment about which John is talking is the commandment concerning love—that commandment upon which the whole law hinges.

Jesus' daily life, His death, resurrection and ascension was a demonstration of God's love. It was no longer a mere word or an abstract something abstractly commanded. In Jesus it was a living force to which man reacted not by arbitrary command, but as steel reacts to the force of the magnet. We love Him because He first loved us, is a law as effective as the law of magnetism.

Thus in the light of Jesus' daily life, His death, resurrection and ascension, an age-old command became new; and in its newness all of God's commands and activities hinge on love. In the light of God's love as it is demonstrated in Jesus, all thoughts of hatred, revenge, injustice, and selfishness are dispersed as physical darkness is dispelled by physical light. In Him all things are new, because all are seen in the true light.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus teaches the spirit of the law.

Every proper law is made for a purpose, and there is a principle involved which is necessarily higher than the letter of the law itself. If, then, a person can study a God-given law and determine the principle behind it, the purpose for which it is given, and then abide by that principle, he obeys the law even though at times he may apparently violate the letter of it, technically.

The statement of Jesus to the effect that the sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath, is one worthy of thought. The Pharisees and scribes were sticking for the letter of the law, and if any act of Jesus appeared in any way to violate that letter they eagerly grasped the opportunity to accuse Him. But Jesus was teaching and preaching the highest of all law—the real spirit of the law of God.

Should one to-day simply obey the written statement of God's laws, or should he study earnestly to find the real principle and purpose and abide by that purpose? Did Jesus violate the letter of the law? If we are sincere followers of Christ, will we sometimes appear to violate the letter even while faithfully obeying the spirit of the law?—F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

The new-old commandment: Study and analyze 1 John 2:7-9. How are old things in Jesus made new?—A. K.

CHURCH NOTICE—DECEMBER 28

Isolated members of the Abrahamic faith of Kokomo, Indiana, have proven to be quite a success the past two months.

We have just closed a series of meetings conducted by three ministers of this state: Bro. Anderson, who preached five sermons; Bro. Long, five; and Bro. Drabentstott, five. A great interest was shown at all the services and the following six were baptized by Bro. Anderson: Bert Maromey and wife, Harry Parker and wife, Alice and Bernice Bengé. We pray that they may live faithful in the Master's service.

We have been having Sunday School in a small store building every Sunday and Bible study every Sunday and Wednesday nights. Our Sunday School has increased since September from 17 to 30 and 35, in fact, it has been increasing so rapidly that we hope to be financially able to rent a larger building in the near future.

We ask an interest in prayers of all the brethren of like precious faith, that we may succeed in our effort.

Mrs. O. J. Parker,
725 South Waugh St., Kokomo, Indiana.

MRS. MARY FLINT

Mary Flint was born March 23, 1857, and died December 29, 1927, at the age of 70 years, 9 months, and 6 days. She and James Flint were united in marriage July 3, 1883. Six children were born to them. The father and three of the children preceded her in death. The other three, Joe, Etta Harley, and Annie Baker, are still living. She also leaves ten grandchildren, five sisters, one half sister, one brother, one half brother, and a host of other relatives and friends.

In early life she united with the Church of God. Sr. Flint was an earnest, devout Christian woman. She was the Superintendent of the Sunday School at the Pleasant View church.

Funeral services were conducted in the Christian Church at Pence, Indiana, by the writer on January 2nd, after which she was laid away to sleep until Jesus comes.

Sr. Flint will be missed at the Indiana Bible School and the Pleasant View Church, for she has been a faithful worker. May we meet her in the kingdom is our prayer.

J. H. Anderson.

MRS. MARTHA BAUSMAN

Mrs. Martha Middlekauff Bausman, of the Golden Rule Home, Oregon, Illinois, died January 7, 1928, following an illness of two weeks. She was born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Middlekauff at Mount Morris, Illinois, December 30, 1850, the eldest of six children. In 1899 the deceased was united in marriage with Barnes Ford Bausman, with whom she lived until his death at Calico Rock, Arkansas on January 2, 1927.

The deceased had the great misfortune to lose the sight of both eyes a few years ago, said to have been caused by abscess behind the eyes.

Because of her inability to care for self she applied for admission to Golden Rule Home where she was admitted on September 3, 1927, conveying thereto a fund agreed upon. Very quickly those of the Golden Rule Home learned that "Aunt Martha" was a most congenial member of the family.

About two weeks ago she contracted a cold which threatened to terminate in pneumonia. Suddenly, however, it developed into an abscess within the head, causing both embolus and a toxic condition that resulted in death. The doctor who attended her throughout her sickness, and who enabled her to rest in consciousness and peace most of the time, was at her bedside frequently during the last thirty hours of life in a diligent effort to thwart the illness.

Early in life the deceased heard and believed the gospel as taught by teachers of the Church of God at and near Mount Morris. Her father's brother, Joe Middlekauff was one of those who backed the work there and until his death some two years ago. Living isolated from the Church of God, she united with the people of the Christian Church. As soon as she became resident in Oregon she requested admission to the Church of God in conformity to her expressed beliefs.

Sr. Bausman leaves to mourn her loss a brother, Austin, of Mount Morris; a sister, Mrs. Minnie Seyster, Oregon; two brothers, Samuel B., Santa Monica, Calif., and Fred A., Mount Morris, Illinois. Her brother, Alfred, next younger than herself, died at Portland, Oregon, about two years ago.

Interment was made in the family lot at Mount Morris, Illinois.

That she might come forth at the first and better resurrection was her abiding Christian hope. "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ", she was laid at rest to await His call.

MRS. CARRIE FREE

The people of Blair, Nebraska, and vicinity were greatly shocked by the sudden death of Sr. Carrie Free early Christmas morning. On Christmas eve she visited a neighbor until about 9 p.m., and on her way home was struck by an automobile while crossing the street.

Her skull was badly fractured and she passed away at 1:30 a.m., Christmas morning without regaining consciousness.

She had been a faithful member of the Church of God for about 35 years, having been baptized by Bro. Almus Adams in 1892.

Sr. Free was born in Indiana, December 31, 1860, and moved to Washington County, Nebraska in early womanhood. For many years she had been a resident of Blair.

She leaves to mourn her loss: two sons Claire, who lived with her, and Lloyd, of Silver City, New Mexico; two brothers, Art Johns, of Blair, and E. B. Johns, of Central City, Nebraska.

Funeral services were held December 28, 1927, Bro. Almus Adams officiating.

ONE OF GOD'S LAWS

The law given in Exodus 20:8 is, "Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy." The Pharisees were watching everything that Jesus did to see if they could find something whereby they might accuse Him. And when He and His disciples went into the field of corn and began to pluck the ears and eat them, the Pharisees said they were breaking the sabbath. But Jesus knew what rules God had given His ancient people, one of which is found in Deut. 23:25—"When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbour, then thou mayest pluck the ears with thy hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbour's standing corn." Jesus and His disciples had been hungry, and all He needed to do was to ask those Pharisees if they had not read what David did when he was hungry, how he and they that were with him went into the house of God and ate the shewbread. It was not breaking the sabbath, neither was it stealing, to eat what they needed. But they must not carry away, or destroy any. Jesus was teaching them all a lesson of honesty.—M. A. W.

It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

JESUS AND THE LAW (Mark 2:18 to 3:6)

WHY DO the Jewish people observe their sabbath each Saturday? Why are the strict Jews so careful not to do any work on that day—even so much as light a match? It is because they are keeping the old Mosaic Law.

Many years ago—many years even before the time of Jesus—there was a great Israelite leader named Moses. God sent him to lead His chosen people back from Egypt to their homeland, Palestine. At one time in their journey, God called Moses up on Mount Sinai, where He gave him many laws, which the people were to follow. Because of Moses these laws were called the Mosaic Law. There were rules regarding the Israelites' worship, clothing, family life, feast days, and conduct. The Ten Commandments are a part of this great Law, and many people, to-day, believe that they must keep these ten laws, although they think the other parts are for the Jews only. Certain classes of Jews were very careful to observe the law to the very letter; that is, to keep the words of the law, rather than the thought conveyed by those words. They were so very religious that they were always watching to see if other people were being religious too.

When Jesus began to attract attention with His teachings these critical classes centered their attention on Him to see if they could find a flaw in His conduct. They questioned Him as to why His disciples did not keep the fast days as John's disciples had done. Jesus replied that it was not necessary as long as the Bridegroom was with them.

Then, one sabbath day, Jesus and His disciples walked through the field of grain. As they went along, they plucked a little of the grain. Now, we can see no wrong in that, but the hypocritical Pharisees said it was "work", and were ready to accuse the disciples of profaning the holy day. They asked, "Why do they on the sabbath day that which is not lawful?" In return, Jesus asked them if they did not remember what David had done when he was hungry. David had gone into the temple and eaten the shewbread when such a thing was lawful for the priests only.

Jesus was trying to show them that there were times when great need made it necessary to use things for good that should not be used ordinarily. Just so it was with their eating the grain on the sabbath. If they were hungry, it was right to prepare food to sustain life. That is what He meant by, "The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath." Moreover, He declared, "Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath."

Another time Jesus went into the synagogue where there was a poor man with a withered hand. Again His enemies watched to see what He would do, because, according to the law they must not heal on the sabbath. However, Jesus said unto the man, "Stand forth." Then to those about Him He asked, "Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill?" Because their hearts were unkind and their motives wrong, the Pharisees could not answer this question. Jesus read their intentions and was both grieved and angered by their attitude.

Looking about Him, He said again to the man, "Stretch forth thine hand." And, children, you know what happened—the withered hand was whole like the other one. Instead of being glad that the man was healed, these Pharisees went out and began to plan how they might destroy this dangerous, lawless, Healer.

Now, do you see that Jesus was teaching that it is right to do kind deeds on the sabbath, and that it is right to help others in need anywhere, anytime?

Later, Paul explained that the law was a "school-master to bring us unto Christ", but that after Christ came all were under a new law of grace.

While this law does not require us to keep holy the sabbath, yet a real Christian will be glad to do what is right on that day, and every day of the week.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Galatians 3.
2. Read several of the chapters of Exodus, beginning with the 19th chapter.

THE WAY OF IT

*A little boy made him a wee snowball,
And rolled it about in the snow;
It gathered the crystals and clung to them all,
And, oh! how that snowball did grow.*

*Oh, my!
You've made one, of course, so you know.*

*A little boy whispered a word one day,
Unkind, of someone he knew;
And each one who heard it repeated his way
The story, till, oh, how it grew!*

*Oh, my!
And a heartache was caused by it, too!*

Two little red mittens the snowball rolled,
That grew in such magical way;
And a little red tongue was the one that told
The tale that grew big in a day.

Oh my!

Be careful, wee tongues, what you say!

TINY TOTS

God gave some laws for the Jewish people to obey. One of them said that no one should work on the sabbath day.

One sabbath day, Jesus and His helpers ate some grain as they walked through the field. Later in the church, Jesus made a man's withered hand whole.

Some enemies of Jesus said that He was doing wrong, but Jesus said that it was right to help other people any day and every day.

LETTER AND SPIRIT

By C. E. Randall

ONE OF the great sins of people who have come to the knowledge of the truth is depending and trusting in the acquired knowledge for salvation. They know the letter of the Word, but are not possessors of the fullness of the Spirit that should accompany the knowledge of the truth. A knowledge of the truth is essential to salvation, but such a knowledge, in itself, will not save anyone unless the knowledge acquired is put into actual operation. There is sin of holding "the truth in unrighteousness". Rom. 1:18. That is, knowing the truth, but not being led by the spirit of the Word. The wrath of God is against all who in this manner suppress truth.

Priding one's self in possessing the truth, and having more truth than people of other denominations, tends to develop self-righteousness, and self-righteousness makes impossible a consecrated life. We need a knowledge of the truth, but a great deal of truth concerns a sanctified life, that is, one that is set apart—in the world, but not of the world. We need more dedicated, devoted, consecrated service in our every day lives. The more devoted we become to Christ, the more useful will be our knowledge. Knowledge of the truth and a consecration of our lives to Christ, qualifies us for labor in Christian service.

The parable of the Pharisee and the publican, as narrated in Luke 18:9-14, strikes at the very heart of the sin of priding one's self because of not being like the rest of Christendom, but having come into the glorious light of the truth. We should not glory in the fact that we have the truth, but rather that our sins have been forgiven, and that through our knowledge of the truth we can lead others into the saving grace of our heavenly Father.

Truth will work mighty wonders if harbored in a devoted, consecrated individual.

CHILDREN OF KINGDOM CAST OUT

By Sister Endsley

AND I SAY unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."—Matthew 8:11-12.

"And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment: and he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless. Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. For many are called, but few are chosen."—Matt. 22:11-14.

"But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellowservants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour when he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."—Matt. 24:48-51.

"Then said one unto him, Lord, are there few that be saved? And he said unto them, Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are: then shall ye begin to say, We have eaten and drunk in thy presence, and thou hast taught in our streets. But he shall say, I tell you, I know you not whence ye are; (Jesus must not have known them as His disciples, for He knows all things, and every one.) depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out. And they shall come from the east and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God."—Luke 13:23-29.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."—Matt. 25:31-34.

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."—2 Tim. 2:15.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 27

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF JERUSALEM AND OF ROME

(Daniel 11)

BUT WITHIN few days he shall be destroyed, neither in anger nor in battle."

The passing of these laws gained for Gracchus the support of the classes most benefited and he succeeded in being elected for a second year. At the end of that period, however, he was defeated for a third term by L. Opimius, who promised the voters much greater benefits than those they had received from Gracchus, but without any intention of keeping his word. He was a senatorial candidate, put forward for election with the sole object of defeating Gracchus, and was prepared to promise anything in order to achieve his purpose.

One of the innovations of Gracchus had been the formation of a colony, called Junonia, on the site of Carthage in Africa, to which the poorer classes could migrate, and where they were to enjoy all the privileges of Roman citizens. Immediately after he entered upon his duties as tribune Opimius attacked this scheme on the ground that the site of the proposed colony was accursed by the gods; and he fixed a day upon which a proposal to abandon it was to be submitted to the electorate. Gracchus and his supporters attended at the Capitol to oppose the abandonment of his project, and so high did public feeling run on the matter that it required only a small incident to cause a riot. It was customary on such occasions to open the proceedings by offering sacrifices to the gods; and this ceremony had scarcely begun before one of those engaged in it grossly insulted one of Gracchus's supporters, whereupon the latter immediately cut him down with his sword. In endeavoring to quell the tumult which arose Gracchus inadvertently interrupted the tribune Opimius, who was addressing the people, an act which, according to an old Roman law, was punishable by death. Opimius immediately ordered the riot to be stopped by force of arms; and Gracchus, recognizing his danger, fled to the temple of Castor for refuge. A large reward was offered for his head, for the aristocrats were determined to destroy him and to regain the power which he had wrenched from them.

After the lapse of a few hours Gracchus, at the solicitation of his friends, left the temple and attempted to escape to the opposite side of the river Tiber, but in his haste he fell and injured his ankle. He managed, however, to cross the bridge, and entered a small wood accompanied by a favorite slave, his friends having remained behind in order to delay those who were in pursuit. He quickly realized that the injury to his foot precluded any chance of escape, and he besought the slave to kill him, knowing that if he fell alive into the hands of his enemies he would be subjected to the grossest indignities before his execution. The slave, who dearly loved his master, acceded to his request, and afterwards ran the sword through his own body.

Thus there stood up in the glory of the kingdom a raiser of taxes who was destroyed within a few days, neither in anger nor in battle, but, strange to say, in loyalty and in love.

Singing a lie, teaching a lie, living a lie—all are the same. They all come from the same source—a liar. "And all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death."—Rev. 21:8. Let us quit singing lies by using our own song books; stop teaching lies, by getting our own literature; and if we have been living a lie, cease, by being what we really are.—C. E. Randall.

LOVE—ONE OF LIFE'S MOST EXPENSIVE AFFAIRS

themselves, they return benefits that could not be derived otherwise.

So, too, with the Father. He has required of man his love. God has revealed on every hand His great love toward man. In return for this, He directs that man should manifest love to the Father. It is for man's good; it is for man's own personal upbuild; it is the richness that develops within the soul of the individual. Love that is truly enforced by law is no love at all. Service that is rendered by compulsion rather than devotion, is cold indeed. Therefore, for the man's own personal enrichment, for his own advancement of intellect and heart, God has made known to him the great benefits of love and has urged and requested man to enter into love for his Maker. But just as love of man toward man motivates him to serve and expend in behalf of the one loved, so man's love toward God moves, yes, urges him, even with uncontrollable urge to manifest his love to the Father by service—service which is measured in our day by dollars and cents. Is it not true that man's love toward God can be safely estimated and valued by the degree of service and expense with which one serves and devotes himself to his Creator? Is not money the thermometer of one's love to God? Should not man, who pours forth so much because of his love to his fellow, pour forth equally much, yea, more, because of his love to God? Does that man really love Jehovah who devotes all of his strength and power and earnings of life unto himself, for his own carnal satisfaction, for his own wasteful pleasure?

True love is one of the most expensive things in the world and this is also true as applied to one's love for God. But in return for this unlimited outlay of expense toward the Father, man receives from God Himself such blessings and benefits and health and guidance as to make all that expense to be mere partial payment in return for the benefits derived.

THAT BLESSED HOPE

By E. O. Stewart

HOPE IS a little word, but it means so much to the one who clings to it. After our day's work is over and the evening shadows hover around us, when we are upon our beds in sweet repose, our minds often take a prospective view in sweet anticipation of the brighter days to come. Hope is an anchor now stationed and firmly fastened in the haven of rest.

Faith is a cable which is securely fastened to the anchor which rests in the harbor. Though we may be tossed here and there upon a restless sea, let us cling to that cable until we can view with undimmed eyes the ever-green shore, and the everlasting hills of glory, when hope shall end in never-fading realities.

What a wonderful thing "hope" is! It soothes a care-worn heart in the darkest and saddest hours: it spans the silent stream of death, bridges the yawning chasm between time and eternity, and stands as a beacon light in a graveless and deathless land. It was hope that prompted our Savior to submit to His Father's will, and drink the cup in lonely Gethsemane. It was for the joyous hope set before Him that He endured the cross, despising the shame. It was the hope of being the Savior which prompted Him to reverse the order of prayer, and pray for His enemies, that God might forgive them in their ignorance. If they ever accept that proffered mercy, it will be because of the hope in the promises of that God who cannot lie that shall prompt that acceptance.

Hope is desire with expectation. Desire is not hope, unless one has expectation along with his desire. Expectation is not hope in the absence of desire. Desire with expectation constitutes hope.

Desire is created in the mind through hearing the gospel, which is spoken of as "glad tidings of great joy". Desire is absolutely dependent upon hearing the word of God, and hearing is the first element of faith.

Expectation is just as dependent upon believing as desire is upon hearing. Hearing is the basis for desire, and believing is the basis for expectation.

So the first element of faith, which is hearing, produces the first element of hope, which is desire; and belief, which is the second element of faith, produces expectation, which is the second element of hope. If what you hear is true, and you desire it, then you have a true desire which is the first element of true hope. If you believe what you hear, then you expect what God has promised; hence, you have the true hope. So true faith becomes "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen".

The faithful Christian is gazing with joyous hope into the great beyond, "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." "Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with paience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame. . . ."

By faith we look for His coming, when tears will be wiped away, and the long broken home circle be united again; when pale, faded cheeks shall resume their rosy tints; when youth and beauty shall be stamped upon every brow.

Is such a hope worth striving for? Is it not worth more than the shifting scenes of earthly pleasures which do not satisfy a longing, thirsty soul for that blessed hope?

May God bless the readers of The Herald this coming New Year.

THE KING OF GLORY

PSALM 24

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

*The earth and the fullness with which it is stored,
The world and its dwellers belong to the Lord;
For He, on the seas, its foundation hath laid,
And firm on the waters its pillars hath staid.*

*Oh! who shall the hill of Jehovah ascend,
Or who in the place of His holiness stand?
The man of pure heart, and hands without stain,
Whose swears not to falsehood, nor loves what is vain.*

*He shall from Jehovah the blessing receive;
The God of salvation shall righteousness give.
Ye gates, lift up your heads and an entrance display.
Ye doors everlasting, wide open the way.*

*Be lifted, ye gates, to the beautiful way;
Ye doors everlasting, an entrance display;
The King of all glory high honor awaits;
The King of all glory shall enter the gates.*

Jesus, the Babe born in Bethlehem we expect to come into power and great glory soon, when ten thousand times ten thousand and thousands of thousands shall proclaim with a loud voice: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing. And every creature which is heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever."

We cannot imagine this praise and thanksgiving from the whole creation, which will fill the world with one grand, sweet anthem, when the everlasting gates are lifted up and the King of glory ascends the throne and enters into His great work of redemption.

May we be worthy to share with Him in the work of the millennial age, when the "doors everlasting wide open the way".

PALESTINE AND EUROPE

COL. SYMES REVIEWS PALESTINE'S PROBLEMS

"THE PRESENT problems of the Palestine Government, in relation to the welfare of the population and to facilitating the upbuilding of the country were reviewed by Col. Symes, Civil Secretary of the Palestine Government, at a conference with press representatives on December 20th.

"The unemployment is a great problem for the Government, particularly during the winter months. The Government is doing all it can to accelerate public works, but it has no large funds for this purpose. The work on the Haifa harbor will start after a year,' Col. Symes declared. 'The Government will continue to experiment on the commutation of 63 villages. The education ordinance, with the proposed amendment, will be promulgated shortly. Work on the Rockefeller Museum will start in January of 1929,' he stated."

SEES END OF UNEMPLOYMENT IN SPRING

"THE PREDICTION that unemployment problem of Palestine resulting in a severe economic crisis, will be solved by the Spring of 1928, was made by Nahum Sokolow, Chairman of the Zionist Executive, in an interview with press representatives in Vienna.

"I am confident that when Spring will arrive the Palestine crisis will disappear. It is certain that at least 2,000 Jewish workmen will find employment in the Haifa harbor construction works which will be started soon. A large number of Jewish workers will also find employment at the Jordan when Rutenberg will start work on his concession. With the unemployment removed, Zionist work in Palestine will again assume its normal character,' Mr. Sokolow declared.

"The study of the possibilities for floating a Zionist loan for Palestine is making progress. When a practical proposal will be agreed upon I am certain that the matter will find the sympathetic support of many influential circles of governments and the League of Nations,' Mr. Sokolow added.

"Mr. Sokolow also related that during his last visit to Prague, Transylvania, he conferred with the Prime Minister, Benes, concerning the national minorities question."

WHY FEAR HIS WILL

*"His will be done," we say with sighs and trembling,
Expecting trial, bitter loss, and tears;
And then how doth He answer us with blessings
In sweet rebuking of our faithless fears!
God's will is peace and plenty, and the power
To be and have the best that He can give,
A mind to serve Him and a heart to love Him,
The faith to die with, and the strength to live.*

WILL RUSSIA ATTACK INDIA?

THE FOLLOWING, taken from the October 7 issue of The Rochester Times-Union, of Rochester, New York, will be of interest to those who are watching the direction in which the international "straws" tend to blow. While none can foresee with accuracy the certain results of national movements, yet all can anticipate the better the more they are informed from all angles of research.

"Soviet Russia is not only sure it will conquer the British Asiatic possession, but it is preparing for a counter invasion from Great Britain after the forces of the Communists are first successful, Upton Close, author and lecturer who spent the Summer in Russia studying conditions, believes.

"Close said Wednesday that the Soviet authorities were frank as to their intentions and their views of international developments within the next decade.

"The Russians see the contest for power as involving only themselves and England, according to Close. The United States would stand aside in the struggle, he said the Russians believed.

" 'Russians' believe England will be driven to desperation when the Soviets take possession of English colonies in Asia,' Close explained. 'They anticipate an attempt by Great Britain to invade Moscow.

" 'While in Russia, I saw a parade of two hundred thousand boys and youths through the streets of Moscow, held in connection with a preparedness celebration. Their motto was, 'Prepare for the Invasion.'

"The only contingency the Russians will admit as likely to interfere with this forecast is overthrow of their government by a power outside Russia, and they regard that as next to impossible.

"One of the reasons England is considered as the most likely opponent in the struggle with the Soviet is that the Bolsheviks believe that country is the only one of the major nations which is ready for a far-reaching social revolution.

"This upheaval, of course, would enter largely into their plans for invasion of India and other British holdings in the Orient.

"Germany and the United States are regarded in Russia as comparatively contented socially and a revolution in those countries would not be likely to succeed, the Soviet believe. They also take into consideration the traditional hatred of Russia for England, which antedates Bolshevism.

"For this reason, the youth of the land is being trained under the idea that they will be called upon to save their nation from the British lion.'

"Close has been identified with the United States Diplomatic service in the Orient. He is the author of 'The Revolt in Asia,' a study of social and political conditions in that continent. His real name is Josef Wellington Hall."

FORGIVENESS

By M. A. Woodward

WHAT A WORD! How much it means! What happiness (spiritually), or misery it covers! It means that some one has forgotten the "Golden Rule", has been blind to God's promise to help us carry our burdens, and has offended some one who has been struggling so hard to make good and perhaps failed, at least, has not come up to your standard of stewardship. Perhaps you have been trying to right these failures in your own strength, which has not been sufficient for the task.

One of the hardest things we have to do as Christians is to acknowledge our own weakness, and ask another's forgiveness; but when the duty is performed, what a load is removed from our minds; what sweet peace rests with us; and what joy when we kneel to pray. How we thank God for the strength to do the right thing; and ask Him to soften our temper, to humble our wills, and sweeten our lives with His dear love. How splendid it is to be able to acknowledge our own faults, and make wrongs right. No church can prosper, no neighborhood be happy, no home life be in sweet accord without this spirit of true forgiveness.

Beloved in the Lord, may we each one cultivate this wonderful Christian grace, teach our Sunday School children, the young convert, our babies at home, this very necessary Christian virtue: be ready to ask forgiveness. God is ready to answer your prayer.

EDITORIAL

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

F. A. STILSON, Ass't Editor.

BEING THE FIRST of the year when a number of the churches are laying their programs for future work, we have reluctantly taken more space than we otherwise would for an article this week under the title "Financial Plan for Local Churches", adapted from Modern Money Methods. There is much of advantage in a definite plan of work and the author of this book, F. A. Agar, is strongly opposed to some of the customary financial methods practiced by many churches. With him the Editor would like to emphasize: better no finance at all, excepting those financial efforts shall tend to result in spiritual growth of the giver and truer and stronger Christianity for all.

Church finances should not be considered so much from the standpoint of expense as they should be from the standpoint of advantage. Many and many excuses are evolved to show the wonderful advantages that are afforded the individual who owns a nice attractive auto. The money paid therefor is seldom regarded as an expense; rather, it is the ability to afford equipment beneficial for life.

So with Christianity. It is the most beneficial of anything that one can procure. The money paid therefor is but so much effort to secure the greatest possible advantage.

* * * *

WE ARE GLAD to notice an increase of interest in different localities resulting from the presentation, for the past few months, of the tithing system. From different directions come the reports of increased interest as manifested by this method of operation.

It is a statistical fact that those persons and those churches that devote themselves most thoroughly to the tithing system are more prosperous, both spiritually and otherwise, than those persons and congregations which do not thus practice.

* * * *

JUST AS ONE reveals his enthusiasm for sports, or autos, or theaters; for houses, or farms, or business, by his repeated and voluntary disbursements therefor, so, also, he reveals his depth of enthusiasm and earnestness in the Christian life by his constant, systematic, persevering devotion of funds to that cause.

* * * *

"For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."—Heb. 10:37.

HOW OFTEN THOSE words come burning back into one's mind. "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." "And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be."—Rev. 22:12.

Throughout Michigan, Indiana, and other places these words have been heard repeatedly from the lips of one now dead, as he, over and over again, closed his appeals for Christian devotion to his congregation. And is that not one of the burning anticipations of our day? Is it not in anticipation of the return of our Lord that so many "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus"?

A change of all changes will then be brought in: sorrow will be turned to gladness; weeping will be turned to laughter; mortality will be turned to immortality; death will be turned to life; the old will give place to the new, when He, unto whom the Father has committed all these things, shall return and take unto Himself His mighty power, and reign. Elder B. W. Woodward was not at all in error when he used these words so frequently to burn into the hearts of his congregations the vision of the great truth that was contained in them.

In anticipation of that day, let us each one devote self, with every possible ability and power, to the service of Him whose we are and whose return we so joyfully anticipate. Let us sound the joyful acclaim to all sorrowing brethren or man and encourage each to choose for himself Him whom the Father has exalted over all.

* * * *

ONE GOD-APPOINTED way to serve Christ is through the church. Just as the member of the golf club does not serve the particular field or land where the game is played, but rather serves the game through cooperating to provide the field; so the Christian serves Christ in cooperating to provide such physical things as are necessary to afford the best, the deepest, the most spiritual, the most consecrated services to the Lord, our Master.

CHRIST TRANSFORMS MAN'S COSTLY WOE TO GOD'S FREE MERCIES

By Samuel E. Haney

"Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."—Matt. 26:52.

THE PREPOSITION "by" appears in several versions. Of these prepositions Vizetelly says, "By properly used before the agent or doer; with, before the instrument or means: as, He was killed by the assassin with a dagger." This distinction should be worthy of note were the word "sword" confined to a literal phase instead of being Biblically versatile, i.e., "My soul is among the lions: ~~and~~ I lie even among them that are set on fire, even the sons of men, whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword."—Psa. 57:4. "Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also."—Luke 2:35. "And out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, . . . And the remnant were slain with the sword . . ."—Rev. 19:15, 21. "And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."—Eph. 6:17.

Primarily we think Jesus, in the text quoted used the word "sword" figuratively: representative of sovereignty, authority, a position He disdainfully ignored in the context, i.e., "Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels? But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be?" Nevertheless, a literal sword was drawn and used, and Jesus ordered it sheathed.

So let us consider the subject "sword" from one of its symbolic meanings, e.g., war, military as opposed to civil power and strife to get some idea of what might have been averted had professing Christians (Christendom complied with Christ's command by taking seriously the result of disobedience. Man has disobeyed. Result: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." A second warning is given in the last message to the church: "He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints."—Rev. 13:10. Only the saints, by their patience and faith have escaped all this, which history will attest.

It is not possible to derive even an approximate financial cost of wars during the Christian era, but we can get an inkling by considering the United States' indebtedness as the result of the world war. President Coolidge said in his message to Congress on December 6, that the public debt of the United States will be about $17,975,000,000.00 at the end of 1927. Mathematically we know, but it is difficult for the mind to conceive just what a billion dollars is. So we will get down to a corporeal, gold basis and see what the debt looks like in cubics of the precious metal. In gold, the debt represents 40,000 cubic feet. A cubic foot of gold weighs 1360 pounds and is worth about $450,000.00. Try visualizing two husky men lifting this solid mass, then multiply the scene by 40,000.

With these figures as a basis, it is easy to figure out many interesting things. For instance, what an array of cubic inches, each weighing about 12½ ounces, and worth about $260.00, the amount of gold per capita, what it should mean to the sick, crippled and indigent, etc. All this wealth for lethal weapons and material that was used by this and other nations to kill and maim human beings, and ravage land and property. We hear much of the League of Nations and Disarmament which, though unintentional, is equivalent to a camouflaging of the inevitable. It requires money to carry a "sword". On December 12 the press reported President Coolidge (who is reckoned a wise and conservative statesman) favoring "A naval program which runs upward of a billion dollars."

Christ, referring to the days we now are in, said, "And ye shall hear of wars, and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows."—Matt. 24:6-8.

We have been considering a transitory cost of wars; let us now take a look at the real, abiding cost, e.g., the cost that puts gold on a par with lead. Go with me to the hospitals and sanitariums and see those incurable wrecks of humanity in invalid chairs and on cots: then to the insane asylums and see those staring eyes peering through grated doors and windows. "Awful!" you say. Yes, but there yet remains another scene. Take an imaginary picture of the cemeteries in Europe where lie all that is mortal of myriads of young men who were the flowers of their generation. Notice those long lines of little white crosses? They are silent monitors, telling us more eloquently than can tongue or pen the heart-rending story of the real cost of an unsheathed sword. Well may this sin-sick, weary world cry out, "O God, will there ever be an end to this diabolical carnage?"

Thank God we can answer, "Yes!" For "The Prince of life" is coming, Acts 3:15, "and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end," Luke 1:32, 33; "and on earth peace, good will toward men". Luke 2:14.

Yes, the day is near when Jesus will again say, "Put up again thy sword into his place." And this time the world will obey His orders; for it is written, "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen (nations, R. V.), I will be exalted in the earth."—Psa. 46:9-10.

"And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."—Isa. 2:4.

FINANCIAL PLAN FOR LOCAL CHURCHES

A COMMON SITUATION

FROM MANY a church and pastor in the past days has come a letter similar to the one that follows which describes a condition that menaces the progress of the kingdom of God and has made impossible any real growth in any local church where such conditions exist. The letter is as follows:

"For years about one hundred out of a resident membership of three hundred and seventy-five in the _____ Church, of _____ have been giving toward the local expenses of the church, and less than seventy were contributing to missions.

"The offerings on Sunday fell far short of the expenses, and the treasurer made the rounds on Monday to collect from the members absent from Sunday worship sufficient money to pay the inadequate salary of the pastor. Even with this it was not unusual to be owing the minister several hundreds of dollars. Two or three times a year a public appeal was made from the pulpit and the deficit cleaned up.

"In March a big haul was made to meet the missionary apportionments. The church women were constantly using their time and energy to earn some money in order to keep the credit of the church from suffering in the eyes of the community. Every department of the church was obligated to scramble for the money needed to carry on the work which it was doing, and it was not unusual to have half a dozen requests for money from various church workers during the Sunday morning or evening services. Those who would give were asked again and again to help with their money the various phases of church work, while those who were not giving were left alone in their covetousness until they lost all signs of spiritual life and were lost to the cause.

"A little while ago a great change came over our whole financial life, and we are a different people because practically the entire church got behind a real financial plan that was built upon a Scriptural basis and was related by personal ministry to every member of the organization."

The plan spoken of in the letter has been used in many places in recent years, and whenever a local organization really works the plan it produces the needed results.

No plan will work itself; it must be worked by the servants of the Lord if it is to succeed.

A FINANCIAL PLAN FOR THE LOCAL CHURCH OUTLINED

(1) THE OBJECTIVE. To secure from every church member.

A. The recognition that God is the owner of all material things and all personality. "Ye are not your own, . . . ye are bought with a price." There can be no differentiation between a man and his money.

B. A positive recognition of the consequent stewardship, to be acknowledged by a systematic, proportionate giving function, which shall include in its objects the whole program of God's church. To secure not less for the missionary and beneficent work of the church at large than for the local church support. Not to secure support for one phase of the work at the expense of the other.

(2) THE UNDERLYING PRINCIPLES.

A. All money for the support of God's work should be the direct, simple result of self-giving worship of God.

B. Right methods should be used. Wrong methods should be discarded.

(a) We lose the respect of the world as well as our own self-respect by money-grabbing devices and other harmful methods.

(b) We shall wisely urge against money being raised by methods that are contrary to the principles of Christian stewardship.

(3) THE PROGRAM.

A. To secure in all departments of the church the primary recognition that giving is a function of spiritual life. Every member of the church should be taught the principles of God's ownership and man's stewardship.

B. To urge every child of God to give proportionately and systematically, "not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." We must therefore all have a vital interest in and concern for the person who does not give at all or who gives inadequately and grudgingly.

C. To induce giving upon a proper understanding of the dictates of love and obedience as well as upon the needs of the church and the plan of salvation.

D. Church membership, if it is to produce spiritual health and growth, must entail some definite financial responsibility upon every member, not alone for the support of the local body but also for the preaching of the gospel to every creature.

E. Giving must be to God primarily, and to the church for expenses and beneficence as a part of His program.

(a) It should therefore relate itself proportionately and definitely to the opportunities presented by the national and local needs or budgets for Christian service.

(b) It should never be withheld because of dislike for man, method, or agency. Love of God compels obedience to His whole program.

F. The local church should seek to guide the function of giving in the life of all its members. It should therefore prepare an annual budget made up in two sections: (a) local church expenses, (b) beneficence.

G. A committee should be appointed in the manner prescribed by church custom. Where no other rule applies the committee should be representative of the officers and of all departments and activities of the church. It should aid the trustees or financial officers in compiling this double budget. This committee will maintain a fair sense of proportion in planning their double budget. The committee, when constituted, should represent the interests of the whole church. Such a committee is often known as "The Executive Committee", "The Church Council", "The United Missions Committee". This committee will constantly remind the whole church that three things are closely related:

(a) Direct gospel propagation (Evangelism).

(b) Educational work (Education).

(c) The acquisition and use of money by every believer for all phases of gospel work (Stewardship).

aa. Make the budget inclusive, covering in one or other of its parts all the needs of all departments of the church. Continuous appeals will thus be prevented. Present efforts for various causes should all be included in the beneficence budget, or an unexpected need should be met by an appropriation from a reserve fund provided for that purpose.

bb. The possibility for extra or sacrificial giving is to be made easy by the use of special envelopes and through carefully planned public presentations during the year.

cc. Constant presentations of kingdom enterprises to be the aim of the church.

dd. Double envelopes and double treasury system should be organized, i.e., separate treasurers for the two funds, or at least different bank accounts. In large churches there should also be a financial secretary for each fund, to do all the detailed account keeping with the individual givers.

II. An annual every-member canvass should be carried out. It should not be organized as a grab for money, but as a real ministry to life. Life must have its functions if it is to be maintained. The canvassers must be properly coached before being sent out to visit the people.

I. There must be a loving, brotherly follow-up of all who have made pledges, so that they may not fall behind in their payments. If any do fail to pay with due regularity, a real ministry should be instituted by the financial officers for the purpose of helping the member to continue faithful as a steward of the Lord and thus be saved to the cause of Jesus Christ.

(4) UNUSUAL FINANCIAL NEEDS.

A. Extraordinary needs for money in large sums will sometimes come for enterprises such as a new church edifice, a debt, or a greatly enlarged program of world evangelization.

B. There must be an open mind and a willing spirit toward such unusual needs, and the church must always encourage the membership to participate in the largest possible measure.

C. There must be constant recognition that failure is more often produced by refusal to give than by over-generous giving.

D. The church needs to realize that the cause of Christ will never really prosper till heroic giving becomes the practice of every believer.

(5) Summary.

A. There must be final and complete recognition that spiritual life and giving are inseparable. The regular worshipers are the regular givers. Non-givers are the non-worshiping members. About ninety-five per cent of income comes from the givers of record. The loose offerings will average about five per cent of income. Such a small cloak will not cover the army of non-giving members. They should not be allowed to hide under it.

B. The church must not permit any substitutes to displace the normal functions of a spiritual life.

C. Courage, not cowardice, love, not listlessness, must rule in regard to delinquents. Where now we lose in dishonor many a life, let us save many by courage and a loving ministry to sick souls.—Adapted from "Modern Money Methods," by F. A. Agar.

GOD IS LOVE

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

LAST SUMMER, while visiting in a consecrated Christian home, the question came up of how far-reaching God's love was. A dear sister present exclaimed with tears coursing down her cheeks, "God is love, and as long as there is breath in my body, I am going to tell of His love." Many times since then have I thought of that exclamation of joy. This dear sister had found God's love precious to her; so precious that she was going to proclaim it as long as she lived.

I wonder if He is so precious to you, dear reader, or to me. In so many ways He is manifesting that great love to the world. Only one who had a great heart of love would put so much of the beautiful into this sinful world and keep it here, surrounding man with all that is lovely and beautiful in nature, when man has so far forgotten the Author and Giver of all he has to enjoy that he scorns His blessed name. This earth is so beautifully and wonderfully made that it would seem like every child of God, in beholding its beauty, could see God's love manifested in every flower that blooms, the tender grass, the fountains of water, the majestic mountains, the singing birds, etc.

Recently, I heard a lecture given by a woman mountain climber. She said that no mountain side was so rugged that in the crevices of the rocks the most beautiful flowers could not bloom. During her lecture, she illustrated her mountain climbing with pictures, showing the different kinds of flowers growing in these crevices far, far up the mountain side, no other sign of vegetation anywhere in sight. It was another evidence of God's love, leaving a little brightness on the mountain side, a little spot of cheer in the desert, where bloom many desert flowers.

So, as God has ever been giving us of His love, He tells us to love each other as He has loved us; that "He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sin. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another."

I believe that if we could all only get into the real spirit of this love for God and for one another that we are taught to have—and without it we cannot please God—if we could just grasp its fullness, oh! how much of these petty jealousies and bickerings, backbitings, fault-finding, and the hundreds of other things, would be lost in the love for God and for each other. We would have compassion instead of hate; we would be drawn together with bands of love, and not be watching every one to criticise, and sitting in judgment on every word said that is not just exactly as we think about it. As Bro. Sheets said last summer at Oregon General Conference: "If we really are filled with the love of God, we will not be ready to give a brother who may differ with us a public reprimand; but rather, quietly, in the spirit of Christ, talk the question over privately, and then drop it." Love must govern us in all things.

The Apostle Paul makes this very plain to the Corinthian church in 1 Cor. 13:1. He says, "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing."

Even so, we find that gifts are good, but only when they are ministered in love do they profit the giver; benevolence is good, but not apart from love. Love is better than knowledge, and greater than either faith or hope without love. Read all of 1 Cor. 13 and you will learn why. Let us follow after charity, let the love of God dwell in us richly, so that we, like our dear sister in Indiana, can exclaim with joy, "My Jesus, I love Thee; and I will tell of Thy great love and try to emulate it until death closes my eyes." In so doing we reflect the Christ life in our lives, and may cause some dear one

"Out on the ocean, wild and drear, Away from the Father's tender care"

to come to the harbor of rest and peace in Him.

How great is our responsibility! Let us each, with the beginning of a new year, try to come nearer to the great Example and Pattern.

*"The world is filled with roses
And the roses filled with dew,
And the dew is full of heavenly love
That drops for me and you."*

Let us be filled with these drops of heavenly dew—love.

DEFIANCE OF GOD

THE TIMES IN which we live are "perilous". The world has earmarks to-day which reveal that it is even now in the last days. It seems as if the whole procession of evils mentioned in 2 Tim. 3:1-6 are with us. Perhaps the most outstanding sin in the whole category is blasphemy, and here it is in our own day. We come face to face with it. It is flagrant, even aggressive. Twenty years ago the name of God was spoken with some degree of awe, even by unsaved persons. Now His very existence is being denied, not by a few but by many, not by the ignorant but by the educated, the trained, and the cultured. They defy Him, they resist Him, they challenge the Almighty. The fear of God that amounts to reverence is a rare quality.

In the days of that great champion of the Gospel, Dr. Joseph Parker of the London City Temple, an infidel declared blatantly, "I don't believe there is a God. If there is, let Him strike me dead in three minutes." (We tremble to pen the shocking words.) Three minutes passed; the "fool" (Psa. 53:1) lived on. In commenting on the incident, Dr. Parker said, "I wonder if he thought he could exhaust the patience of the Almighty God in three minutes."

Of more recent date is the following incident. In a certain city a minister of one of the large down-town churches has turned his platform into a forum. Now, the Roman Forum was a public meeting place where every sort of question of the hour was discussed. This minister has opened his church (dedicated to God for holy, for divine purposes, and supported by people that bear the name of Christ) as a place where anybody who thinks he has a message is perfectly welcome to air his views, even though they be altogether atheistic. It is reported of this so-called minister that he stood on his own platform before a large company and, with watch in hand, said: "If there be a God, let Him strike me dead in one minute." The minute passed. God's mercy spared him.

Arthur Brisbane, of newspaper fame, commented on the incident by relating the following: "Down in Texas the other day two ants were crawling along a rail of the great Sante Fe route. One said to the other, 'It is said that there's a great being that owns this rail on which we're crawling, and that he is called the president of the road.'"

"'Hm,' sneared the other ant. 'I don't believe any such stuff as that,' and he waxed bombastic and daring. With great energy he shouted so that the world might hear, 'If there be a president, let him come down here and kill me.'"

"Now we all know that the president of the great Sante Fe Railway system could have sent a 'special' train down there and run over that little ant, but it is not at all likely that he would take the trouble to do so."

We rejoice that God is, and that He is the rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. Heb. 11:6.—Selected by Madeline Gardiner.

THE RIGHTEOUS SHALL NEVER BE REMOVED: BUT THE WICKED SHALL NOT INHABIT THE EARTH.
—PROV. 10:30.

THE BEREAN RALLY DAY effort at Rockford, Illinois, for Saturday night, Jan. 7, was a real success. The class, with a membership of around fifteen, had present that night thirty-eight, and a very interesting program which ought to bring some very beneficial results.

How about some other classes trying the same idea?

THE ANOINTING OF DAVID

By Alton Berggren

SAUL WAS KING of the Israelites and the Spirit of God prevailed over him. God told Saul to go to Amalek and kill every man, woman, infant, ox, camel, and all things that lived.

Saul went and destroyed all but Agag the king, and the best of the sheep, goats and all that was good.

Then the Lord told Samuel that Saul had not obeyed his commandment for the Lord had said to destroy all.

When this was told Saul he wanted to repent. After coaxing Samuel a while, Samuel went with Saul to repent.

Then Samuel called Agag the king of the Amalekites. When he came Samuel hewed him to pieces with his sword.

Then Saul went to his house and Samuel came to see him no more until his death but he still mourned for Saul.

The Lord said unto Samuel, "Fill thy horn with oil and go to Jesse the Bethlehemite: I have chosen a king among his sons."

Then Samuel went with a heifer and his horn of oil saying he was going to sacrifice to the Lord. When he reached Bethlehem the people were afraid but Samuel said, I come "peaceably: I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord: sanctify yourselves and come with me to the sacrifice."

He went to Jesse and had the sons pass before him one by one all but David, the youngest, who was herding the sheep. The Lord said to Samuel, "It is none of these."

Then Samuel said to Jesse, "Are these all of your sons?" Jesse said, "all but the youngest who herds the sheep." David was brought before Samuel and the Lord said, "This is the one."

Samuel then anointed David's head with oil and departed.

An evil spirit had now come over Saul and his servants said, "If someone will play a harp for you, you will become well." At this Saul said, "Bring me a man cunning at the harp." Then one of the servants said, "I have seen a son of Jesse who is skilled at playing a harp."

David was brought before Saul and he played, and Saul became well again.

Later on the Philistines gathered their armies on one hill and the Israelites gathered on a hill just across a valley from them.

There was a champion among the Philistines whose name was Goliath. He stood six cubits and a span. He came forth in the valley morning and evening and challenged any Israelite to come and fight with him.

It happened that three of Jesse's sons were in the Israelitish army, and Jesse had sent David to them with food. When he came his brothers thought he had come to see the battle and made fun of him. Then there came forth the champion. David said, "I will fight with Goliath the giant," but the men laughed at him. They then brought him before Saul telling of what he had said. Saul said to David, "You may go, and also take my armour." But David took off the armour finding it too heavy, and chose five smooth stones out of the brook, put them in his shepherd-bag, then taking his staff went down the valley to meet Goliath.

As he came near, Goliath cursed him in his own gods, but David said, "I come in the name of the Lord of Hosts."

As he drew nearer David took one of the stones from his bag and slung it at the giant's forehead. Goliath fell flat with his face to the ground, then David ran to him and smote him with his staff, then cut off Goliath's head with the sword of the champion he had slain, for he had none of his own. David also received much honor from Saul.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 28

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF JERUSALEM AND OF ROME (Daniel 11)

HAVING POINTED out the events which would mark the period of Rome's greatest glory, the prophet, before passing to the fall of the Roman empire, turns his attention to Jerusalem, and foretells the incidents connected with the fall of the Jewish monarchy.

"And in his estate shall stand up a vile person to whom they shall not give the honor of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries. And with the arms of a flood shall they be overflowed from before him, and shall be broken; yea, also the Prince of the covenant."

The "vile person" to whom our attention is now directed was Herod the Great (B.C. 40-4) who was the first monarch of alien blood to sit on the throne of Judah. By him the Jewish kingdom established by Judas Macabaeus was brought to an end, and the last king of Judah destroyed.

Herod was the second son of Antipater, an Edomite who was appointed procurator of Judea by Julius Cæsar B. C. 47, and though he was only fifteen years of age at that time Herod was made governor of Galilee.

"During the civil wars Judea, as well as all the other provinces of the Roman empire, was agitated by violent troubles.

"Pacorus, son of Orodes king of Parthia, had entered Syria with a powerful army. From thence he sent a detachment into Judea with orders to place Antigonus, the son of Aristobulus, upon the throne, who on his side had also raised troops. Hyrcanus, and Phasaël, Herod's brother, upon proposal of an accommodation, had the imprudence to go to the enemy, who seized them, and put them in irons. Herod escaped from Jerusalem the moment before the Parthians entered it, to seize him also.

"Having missed Herod, they plundered the city and country, placed Antigonus upon the throne, and delivered Hyrcanus and Phasaël into his hands. Phasaël, who well knew that his death was resolved, dashed out his brains against the wall to avoid the hands of the executioner. As for Hyrcanus, his life was granted him: but, to render him incapable of the high-priesthood, Antigonus caused his ears to be cut off: for according to Levitical law, it was requisite that the high priest should be perfect in all his members. After having thus mutilated him, he gave him back to the Parthians that they might carry him into the east, from whence it would not be possible for him to embroil affairs in Judea. He continued a prisoner at Seleucia in Babylonia till the coming of Phraates to the crown, who caused his chains to be taken off, and gave him entire liberty to see and converse with the Jews of that country, who were very numerous. They looked upon him as their king and high priest, and raised him a revenue sufficient to support his rank and splendor. The love of his native land made him forget all those advantages. He returned the following year to Jerusalem, whither Herod had invited him to come, but put him to death some years afterwards.

"Herod at first took refuge in Egypt, from whence he went to Rome. Antony was then in the high degree of power, which the triumvirate had given him. He took Herod under his protection, and even did more in his favor than he expected. For, instead of what he proposed, which was at most to obtain the crown for Aristobulus with a view of only governing under him, as Antipater had done under Hyrcanus, Antony caused the crown to be conferred upon himself, contrary to the usual maxim of the Romans in like cases. For it was not their custom to violate the rights of royal houses, which acknowledged them for protectors, and to give crowns to strangers. Herod was declared king of Judea by the senate, and conducted by the consuls to the Capitol, where he received the investiture of the crown, with the ceremonies usual upon such occasions.

"Herod passed only seven days at Rome in negotiating this great affair, and returned speedily into Judea. He employed no more time than three months in his journeys by sea and land.

"It was not so easy for Herod to establish himself in the possession of the kingdom of Judea as it had been to obtain his title from the Romans. Antigonus was not inclined to resign a throne which had cost him so much pains and money to acquire. He disputed it with him very vigorously for almost two years.

"Herod who, during the winter had made great preparations for the following campaign, opened it at length with the siege of Jerusalem, which he invested at the head of a fine and numerous army. Antony had given orders to Socius, governor of Syria, to use his utmost endeavors to reduce Antigonus, and to put Herod in full possession of the kingdom of Judea.

"Socius and he, having joined their forces, prosecuted the siege in concert with the utmost vigor, and with a numerous army, which amounted to at least sixty thousand men. The place, however, held out against them many months with exceeding resolution; and if the besieged had been as expert in the art of war and the defence of places as they were brave and resolute, it would not perhaps have been taken. But the Romans, who were much better skilled in those things than they, carried the place after a siege of something more than six months.

"The Jews being driven from their posts, the enemy entered on all sides and made themselves masters of the city. And to revenge the obstinate resistance they had met with, and the pains they had suffered during so long and difficult a siege, they filled all quarters of Jerusalem with blood and slaughter and plundered and destroyed all before them, though Herod did his utmost to prevent them.

"Antigonus, seeing all was lost, came and threw himself at the feet of Socius in the most submissive and most abject manner. He was put in chains and sent to Antony, as soon as he arrived at Antioch. Antony designed at

THE GROWING FAME OF JESUS

Mark 3:7-12; 6:53-56

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 60:1-5, 8, 9

GOLDEN TEXT

The common people heard him gladly.—Mark 12:37.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Growing Fame of Jesus. It had been but a few years since the beginning of His ministry. Mark, up to this point, recites little of what He taught; he recites much of how He served. From Mark's narrative, one would easily believe that the fame of Jesus was spread by the impromptu proclamation of the people, concerning the great works, which He constantly performed. It was not His gospel of the kingdom, as preached today, that drew the crowds unto Him; it was His manifest authority over all those adverse conditions resting upon man that magnetized them to Him.

This authority was nothing short of a display of kingdom conditions. It will require like authority in the age to come to overthrow the curse, to uproot iniquity, to abolish disease and ultimate death; to plant righteousness, to establish justice, to guarantee equity. It will require like authority to accomplish the great positive laws of the kingdom age, that it required on the shores of Galilee to overthrow individual instances of evil, of disease and torment.

The Multitude Seeking Jesus. From practically every region, where the descendants of Abraham had settled, the people gathered in multitudes before Jesus. The roadways were filled with pilgrims: some on beds, others with canes; hobbling, trudging, speeding toward Him who was commanding uncleannesses, foulnesses and diseases, and was being obeyed. Such authority, with its attending results, had never before been recorded in the history of mankind.

Prophecy narrates that His fame will even be greater in a day coming soon. "Many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." And the result will be that swords will be beaten into plowshares, and spears into pruning-hooks; war will cease.—Isa. 2:3, 4. This, too, will result from the exercised authority of Jesus. It will be the time of regeneration.—Matt. 19:28.

It will be because of this authority, and its manifest results, that the nations will nationally appeal to Jesus for His Kingly touch, as the individuals appealed to Him to exercise His authority, as told by Mark. His fame in the future, as in the past, will result from the mighty works of His righteousness, from the grandeur of His kingdom operation. Truly, Mark was narrating those things which thus give the reader a foretaste of the kingdom conditions.

Questions on the Subject. What was there about Jesus that made His fame spread so rapidly and so far? What was the nature of His service? Would He be able, later, to teach more effectively His truths, because of having established confidence in Himself through His physical healings?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

And the great multitude was hearkening to him gladly.—Mark 12:37, Roth.

The great crowd of mankind in contrast to the scribes, Pharisees, etc., were glad to hear Jesus. They were eager to follow Him. His disciples were chosen from the unsophisticated rather than from the upper social and religious groups. The greatest examples of faith, humility, and consecrated devotion to our Lord and Master are quite generally found among the great multitude of common people.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The appeal to service. "He had healed many"—v. 10. Jesus manifested a deep and constant interest in the lives of the common people. It was not necessary that He should tell them of His sympathy and understanding, for He indicated the nature of His sentiment for them in a most practical way. They could not always understand His teaching, and the parables were frequently beyond their comprehension; but they could understand the priceless service He rendered to them in their times of need. The blind whose eyes were opened, the deaf who were made to hear, the sorrowing whose loved ones were restored to life; these knew that Jesus loved them. These knew that His wonder-working power was available to them. They saw in Jesus' works an evidence of God's love, and that Jesus was what He claimed to be, the only begotten of the Father. May the world come to see in us a reflection of the spirit of service which endeared our Lord to the hearts of men!

The appeal of simplicity. "The common people heard him gladly" because He spoke a language they could understand; that is, His message was a simple one that met the needs of the common people. It had to do with the problems of every-day life. He did not speak in the stilted, difficult terms of philosophy, nor did He deal with pointless generalities. He told His wonderful story of salvation in the most simple words when He sought to reach the ear of the multitude. "The common people heard him gladly" on such occasions because His message was both designed and phrased for them. The gospel can be presented to-day quite as effectively as it was by the Master, if we give it with the simplicity that marked His teaching, bearing in mind that our one great purpose is to reach the understanding of the people that they may be saved. "Except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air In the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue."—1 Cor. 14:9, 19.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Jesus, the Light, expanding.

Since the beginning of God's dealings with man through the spoken word, the mind of man has been developing and he has been absorbing light (mind) from the source of all light. We know this is true. God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all. Therefore, wherever and whenever God makes word (mind) contact with man light is transferred from God to man. Life itself testifies to the fact that mind-light has been developing in man from age to age. The growth of science is only the growth of man's knowledge (light) concerning himself and his environments, the progressive fulfillment of God's decree that man should have dominion over the earth.

And peculiarly enough the particular light dispensed through Jesus penetrates first and most into those minds most devoid (by ordinary environments, or by suffering and affliction) of those desires and instincts that are back of dominion over the natural world in the present order. The common people heard Jesus gladly. The light Jesus was dispensing could appeal to them because their minds were more nearly free from the knowledge that brings present dominion.

But the babes to whom Jesus dispenses light concerning God shall eventually outdistance the most enlightened minds of this order, and into their hands shall come a more complete dominion than present science with its boasted flesh-powers, no matter how glorious, can ever dream of. Those who know God are the true scientists (or will be) through whom light shall reach the ends of the earth.—A. K.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

The growth of light: Before the presence of Jesus among men—its medium and the realms of darkness in it were active: the result of its activity.

The growth of light through Jesus: Contrast Jesus with all other mediums; the light that He alone dispenses; the subjects to whom it is dispensed; the final result.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Bro. Patrick is holding special meetings at Grand Rapids, Michigan.

The Michigan Quarterly Conference will be held at the Grand Rapids church January 27 to 29.

Bro. E. Cedric Pope, of Cortland, Illinois, will assist in the special meetings at Grand Rapids, and the Michigan Quarterly Conference, January 22 to 29.

A good interest and attendance characterized Bro. Randall's first week of labor with the Eldorado church.

* * *

Bro. Randall is doing temporary pastoral work at Eldorado and we pray the Father to prosper him and the church in the gospel work.

* * *

Bro. Austin's offer to send tithing literature to all inquiring for same, has been accepted by many. The offer is extended to all.

Sr. A. Rooker, of New Post Richey, Florida, was taken by death on January 4. She was buried at Dutton, Michigan, her former home, on the 9th, Sr. Woodward officiating.

Sr. Bert Thompson is much improved after another serious sickness. Sr. Lois Hunt, her daughter, reports that it is hoped they have found the basic cause for her frequent sicknesses and that permanent recovery may be enjoyed in the near future.

* * *

Sr. M. A. Woodward, after a very pleasant journey from Michigan, arrived at New Post Richey, Florida, on January 9, where she found Bro. and Sr. Joseph Good pleasantly situated for the winter and enjoying good health. Bro. Good's home address is Colorado.

* * *

We are pleased to report that Bro. McGraw's health has improved so favorably that his physician has sent him home to Oregon one month sooner than the regular minimum of six months' stay. He expects to remain quietly at Oregon under the doctor's directions for a short time and then to gradually pick up his work again in The Herald print shop. Every indication is that he is feeling first class and that he has practically recovered from his disease. Here is still another instance where we recognize God's answer to prayer.

ANOTHER ANNUITY BOND

We are issuing another Annuity Bond under date of January 14, 1928.

Annuity Bonds return interest to the annuitant so long as he or she remain alive. At death the principal becomes the sole property of the National Bible Institution, the legal transfer having been already made by the annuitant.

To protect the annuitant the principal of each and every Annuity Bond is kept on interest by the National Bible Institution during the life-time of the respective annuitants. Beside this all the assets of the National Bible Institution are security for these Annuity Bonds.

This is one of the very best ways for any one to preserve for self the use of funds for the duration of life and yet be sure that at death the same will become the property of the one for whom it is intended.

SOUTH LAWN PARK CHURCH OF GOD SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Sunday School of the South Lawn Park Church at Grand Rapids, Michigan, writes that it has another idea of service. As it seems to be wholly along the right line, we quote as follows:

"The ninth of November at an Officers' and Teachers' Meeting it was decided to tithe of our Sunday School collection. The following Sunday the classes elected their officers and the treasurer of each class is to keep one tenth of the offering and the rest is to come to the Sunday School Secretary. To-day it was voted to send you the five dollars tithe money received from seven Sundays last quarter and whatever tithe we receive the first quarter of 1928, to be used for the Ministers' Training Class at Oregon. Hope you can use it that way and I hope others may like the idea and fall in step. Inclosed please find check for five dollars.

"The tithe money is supposed to do two things: Teach the children as well as older ones the tithing way of supporting the Lord's work, and also to help in some other work which will probably be missionary work of some kind."

JACOB BOYER

Bro. Jacob Boyer died this morning (January 10). Thus passes one of the pillars of our church at Maurertown, Virginia.

He had been a constant sufferer since very early fall, having spent his last active strength in our Bible School in August. Our hearts have been greatly saddened by our loss, but we rejoice that death came to end his suffering.

We will send a more complete obituary later.

MRS. FRANCES E. BROWN

Died at her home in Oregon, Illinois, January 11, 1928. She was one of ten children born to James and Aunie Leslie, of Lisle, Ontario, three of whom survive her.

The deceased was, on December 25, 1876, married to Sidney Gollinger, of Lisle, Ontario. To them were born five children, of whom two survive: James H., of Oregon, Illinois; and Mrs. A. Jarrett, of Ft. Williams, Ontario. The husband and father was stricken by death in June, 1908.

Seven years later, in June, 1915, the deceased was united in marriage with John G. Waldie, of Oregon, Illinois, with whom she had a happy home until his death on September 25, 1923.

On October 5, 1925, the deceased was united in marriage with Elder George A. Brown, of Oregon, Illinois. For each other they became true companions and afforded each to the other that help and service of love which should adorn every home.

The deceased had been a church worker from early life. On the morning of December 13, 1927, the writer was called to the home and she requested immersion in the name of Christ. After this sacred service was attended to, both husband and wife requested membership with the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois.

For several weeks Sr. Brown had suffered repeated light strokes and for two weeks before her death had been confined to her bed, unable to clearly speak or convey thought. Very faithfully and patiently was she waited upon by Bro. Brown, who is 88 years of age, and others.

She was laid at rest with that Christian hope that, at the call of our Lord and Master, she, too, may be adjudged faithful and may be called out from among the dead to be clad with immortality and abide with Him who is the Life of the world.

AMONG THE JEWS

DR. MACDONALD WEBSTER, of Edinburgh, who has been the leading speaker at a congress of Jews held in Budapest, recently stated that of 4,000 cases of Jewish converts that he had handled, all had been won to Christ by the kindness of Christians, save in two cases only. Arguments about the Messiah take second or third rank, while the fruit of the Spirit in Christian lives make a profound as well as the primary impression. In a questionnaire given to converts here in America, where 120 reported on the influences which led them to Christ, the same gracious thing was given as the bridge which spanned the chasm, viz., Christian kindness.

Recently an "Alliance for the Reconciliation of the Peoples" (Jews and Gentiles) has been formed by some Jews in Hamburg, Germany. They very vehemently reject rabbinism and the tradition of the elders. In a manifesto they say, "Heavy is the burden on our Jewish brethren of the millennium-long false traditions of our wise men. The reading of the New Testament is strictly forbidden our brethren. The Messiah idea is, to the overwhelming majority, a sealed mystery. Name us the prophet, ye blind leaders of the blind, predicted by Moses, who has brought it to pass that millions and millions of men have found their way to the God of Israel, if it be not the humble Man of Nazareth, whom our ancestors in their ignorance of the truth allowed Pilate to crucify. Answer the question, ye scribes and teachers of present day Israel. Or do ye no longer believe in Moses?" It is a significant sign of the times that Jews who have not yet accepted the whole truth of Christianity should send forth a manifesto of this character. There is evidence of life in the once withered fig tree.—Pentecostal Evangel.

MANY OF GOD'S children are made physical, mental and spiritual co-sufferers with the world by their obstinacy in holding on to self and the world, thereby giving the evil one a death grip to their souls. God says, "My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways."—Prov. 23:26. "Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, and that seek him with the whole heart."—Psa. 119:2. God demands the "whole heart" for which He paid an awful price. Do you not think He is entitled to the best that is in us? It is possible to be both the essence of generosity with our fellow creatures and the quintessence of parsimony with our Creator.—Haney.

THE GROWING FAME OF JESUS

(Mark 3:7-12; 6:53-56)

By Verna Thayer

MANY, MANY YEARS ago, when Jesus was here upon the earth, He did very wonderful things. Do you remember how Jesus healed the withered hand in last Sunday's lesson? That was a wonderful thing, was it not?

After Jesus had healed the withered hand He took His disciples and went over to the seashore, but a great multitude of people followed them. Oh! ever so many people: people from Galilee, and Judæa; some from Jerusalem, and some from Idumæa; others from beyond the Jordan River; and yes, they even came from Tyre and Sidon when they heard of the wonderful things that Jesus did. I am sure that if we had lived in that day, we also would have wanted to see the things Jesus did.

When Jesus saw what a great number of people had gathered on the seashore, He said to His disciples, "Get a ship ready, so that I may go into it, if the people gather too closely around me." And while they were gathered around Him, He healed many, many of them. They were so anxious to be healed, and knew that if Jesus but touched them they would be healed. If some of our loved ones were very, very sick, and we knew some one could heal them by touching them, I suppose we would have done as those people did that day.

Many times Jesus asked the ones whom He had healed not to tell of it, but His fame as a Healer only grew the more.

At one time Jesus and His disciples came across the sea to the land of Gennesaret. As soon as they landed and Jesus was upon the shore, what do you think the people did there? They carried sick people on beds to Jesus to be healed, and into whatever village, or city or country He entered, they laid their sick in the streets for Him to heal. Would not that seem strange to see the streets filled with beds of sick people waiting to be healed? And we know that Jesus did not pass by many without healing them, for His love was very great for the people.

It almost makes us wish that we could have lived in those days, when we read of the wonderful things Jesus did, but we know that when Jesus comes back to the earth, He will do even greater things, and we want to live such lives that we may be here when Jesus comes again.

TINY TOTS

JESUS AND HIS disciples went down by the seashore. Many sick people came to Jesus. They came from many places where they had heard of His wonderful healing. Jesus went across the sea in a boat. Here other sick people came to Him and He made them well.

PLAYMATES

By Verna Thayer

MOTHER, MOTHER," called little Betty from the bedroom where mother had just put Betty to bed and turned out the light.

"Mother, I'm afraid," said Betty.

Mother immediately went into the room and said, "Afraid, Betty dear? Why are you afraid?"

"Oh! mother, I'm so afraid, it seems as though there are all kinds of animals right here in my bedroom, just ready to get me, and I just can't go to sleep."

Mother turned on the light and Betty looked all around and found no animals there. You see Betty had just imagined they were there, but just the same she could not go to sleep.

So mother said, "Do you want me to tell you a story about a time when no one will be afraid?"

"Yes, mother," said Betty, "but will there really be a time when we will not be afraid of anything?"

"Yes. We will not need to be afraid," said mother.

"A long time ago there lived a man named Isaiah. He was a prophet. Do you know what a prophet is? He is a man who tells about things that are going to happen in the future. He said there would be a time when we would not need to be afraid, for there would not be one thing to hurt us."

Then mother read to Betty these verses from the Bible: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid (baby goat); and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them."

"Why, mother," exclaimed Betty, "that does not mean that some time little children can lead lions and bears and all those bad animals just like I do my dog Laddie, does it?"

"Yes, my dear, that is just what it means, and that is not all, you can even play with snakes and they will not bite you, for this is what another verse says, 'And the suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den.'"

"Oh! mother, won't that be wonderful," said Betty sleepily, "I won't be afraid any more, for I'll think about the time when those animals will not hurt me."

"Go to sleep," said mother, "for the time is coming when we will not be afraid; for 'They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain.'"

IF GOD CAN find men who will square their lives by the Bible, and live by the truth, there is nothing promised in the Book but what He will give them.—Compton.

BIBLE NUMBERS

MORE THAN ONE

By Abbie C. Morrow Brown

MORE THAN ONE—SPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE

REPETITION has a peculiar significance of special importance.

"Verily, verily." A call from Jesus to consider the supreme importance of the words which follow. Found 25 times in John and nowhere else (John 1:51; 21:18).

"Come away . . . come away" (Song of Sol. 2:10-13). A call from the Bridegroom to the bride to leave the natural and live in the spiritual.

"Thou art fair . . . thou art fair." (Song of Sol. 4:1). Precious praise from the Bridegroom.

"Set me as a seal . . . as a seal" (Song of Sol. 8:6). Ardent desire of the bride for the love of his "heart" and the power of his "arm".

"Abba, Father" (Mark 14:36; Rom. 8:15; Gal. 4:6). A cry of filial devotion and faith.

"My God, my God" (Matt. 27:46). The saddest cry that ever fell from human lips.

*"O Jesus, Lord, 'tis joy to know,
Thy path is o'er of shame and woe,
For us so sadly trod."*

MORE THAN ONE—EARNESTNESS

"Abraham, Abraham" (Gen. 22:11). A call to confidence.

"Saul, Saul" (Acts 9:4). A call to conversion.

MORE THAN ONE NAME

WOMAN—EVE. Eve, in innocency, called woman, because taken out of the body of Adam (Gen. 2:22, 23). Type of the bride, taken out of the church of Christ (Eph. 5:25-32). After the fall Adam, in faith, that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, called her "Eve, the mother of all living" (Gen. 3:20).

ABRAM—ABRAHAM. Thirteen years after Abram listened to Sarah, and Ishmael was born, God said, "I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect. . . . Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram (high father), but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee." (Gen. 17:1-5).

SARAI—SARAH. Sarah means "a princess". Both husband and wife were beyond the possibility of increase. "H" is the double letter in Jehovah, the Eternal One, the Life Giver. "H" was added to each name, which changed it (Gen. 17:15).

ESAU—EDOM. The man who sold his birthright, the right of the priest in the family, for a bit of food to satisfy natural hunger is a warning to us to keep the body under, lest we miss the spiritual priesthood here and the incorruptible crown hereafter (Gen. 25:30; Heb. 12:16, 17; 1 Cor. 9:25-27).

JACOB—ISRAEL. The supplanter who cheated his brother, changed to a prince who had power to prevail with God and men (Gen. 32:28).

BENONI—BENJAMIN. Benoni (son of sorrow) his mother called him, a type of Jesus, the suffering Savior (Luke 2:34, 35). Benjamin (son of my right hand) his father called him, a type of Christ, the Conqueror (Gen. 35:18; 49:27; Heb. 1:3).

SIMON—PETER. The vacillating Simon changed to the steadfast Peter (Matt. 16:17, 18).

LEVI—MATTHEW. The tax gatherer changed to the apostle (Luke 5:27, 29; Matt. 10:3).

SAUL—PAUL. The bitter persecutor changed to the world-wide preacher (Acts 9:4; Col. 1:1-6).

MORE THAN ONE—FELLOWSHIP

ELIJAH—ELISHA. (2 Kings 2:1-14).

*They two went down the first step on the way
That led from man to God,
From night to endless day.*

*They two went down, no pride or lifted head,
But humbly bowing down
They, by His love, were led.*

SUBJECTS FOR STUDY

RESURRECTION OF CHRIST

By C. E. Randall

WAS CHRIST raised from the dead on the first day of the week, or was He raised on the Sabbath, as argued in a recent article that appeared under the caption "The Resurrection"?

The Gospel writers nowhere affirm the statement that Jesus rose on the sabbath. They do agree and confirm each other concerning His resurrection taking place on the first day of the week. "And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him. And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun."—Mark 16:1, 2. This writer affirms that when the women came to the sepulchre the "sabbath was past"; that it was "early in the morning, . . . at the rising of the sun."

"Early . . . the first day of the week" does not refer to the hours immediately following the sabbath, or going down of the sun which marked the close or end of the sabbath, but, as Mark so plainly states, it was "at the rising of the sun". The author that was quoted in the article previously mentioned says, "The two Mary's alone were at the sepulchre in the evening, that is, early the first day. This was not early in the morning of the first day. It was about twelve hours before; namely, in the evening, the beginning of the first day of the week." The readers will readily see by reading the first nine verses of Mark 16 that "early . . . the first day of the week" was at the "rising of the sun", and not as the above writer would have us believe, at the "setting of the sun." If Mark understood "early . . . the first day of the week" to be at the "rising of the sun", then, when he says in verse 9 that "Jesus was risen early the first day of the week," we are safe in believing him to mean near the time of the rising of the sun, and not the going down of the sun. The statement of verse 9, that says, "when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week," is proof positive that Jesus was raised on Sunday and not on Saturday.

The great earthquake, the rolling back of the stone, and the resurrection of Jesus took place, according to the statement in Matt. 28:1, 2, at the time when the women were on their way to the tomb to anoint Jesus. This is all in harmony with Mark's account.

John's record of the women going to the tomb gives the same "early morning" order, although he emphasizes it a little differently: "The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark." John 20:1. "Yet dark" indicates that the sun had not risen yet to dispel the pre-dawn darkness. The successive incidents that followed her discovery of the empty tomb are daylight experiences. The coming of the two disciples to the tomb and seeing the grave clothes; Mary's staying at the tomb, and weeping; and her meeting with the Savior are post resurrection events that happened the "same day" that Jesus was raised. John 20:19. It was the "same day" and not the same night. It is not and never has been characteristic of women to come to and stand around a cemetery at night.

Another incident that has a strong bearing on the time of the resurrection is the fact that the guards who were on duty watching the tomb lest the disciples come and steal His body, went into the city after the resurrection and "shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done". Matt. 28:11-15. They went to report this miraculous event as soon as it happened: they met the women when on their way into the city: their experience was the same as that of the women and the two disciples—one that happened early in the morning. If it had not been, they could not have used the blind that they did, namely, His being stolen by His disciples that night, which was the first half of the first day of the week according to Jewish reckoning.

THE RESURRECTION

By Wm. Burget

EVERY BIBLE BELIEVER should know that Jesus kept the passover, for Jesus "sent forth two of his disciples" to make ready for the passover. "And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover. Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve."—Matt. 26:19-20. Also see Mark 14:14-18; Luke 22:8-15; John 13:1-4.

The Scriptures teach that when Jesus and His disciples had ended the passover supper, and "when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives". Matt. 26:30. "Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad."—Matt. 26:31.

That same evening the Jews came after Jesus, "and they laid their hands on him, and took him."—Mark 14:46. "And they led Jesus away to the high priest: and with him were assembled all the chief priests and the elders and the scribes."—Mark 14:53.

Jesus was taken the same evening that He ate the passover supper with His disciples, and the next morning He was crucified. "It was the third hour, and they crucified him."—Mark 15:25. This same day was the Jews' preparation day. "And now when the even was come, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath . . ."—Mark 15:42. "And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on."—Luke 23:54. This is the day that Jesus suffered and died. Mark 15:37. I believe that Jesus died about three o'clock p. m. as we record time, or the ninth hour as the Jews recorded time. Matt. 27:46, 50. Should not every Bible reader know that Jesus was crucified and buried on the passover day, the fourteenth day of the first month? Lev. 23:5.

Jesus was buried on the passover day in the evening, Mark 15:42, 47, and was in the tomb all the next day, the sabbath day, and came out of the tomb early the first day of the week. Mark says, "Now when Jesus was raised early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils." Mark 16:9. Also He appeared to those two disciples who went that same day (the first day of the week) to a village called Emmaus, and they talked with Jesus, saying: "But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done."—Luke 24:21. Therefore if Jesus rose the third day He rose this day, the first day—Luke 24:1.

God did rest on the seventh day from all His work. "And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest."—Heb. 4:5. John was in the spirit on the Lord's day, the day when Jesus shall reign upon this earth. John in spirit saw that day, God's second rest day. Paul tells us about Jesus "blotting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross. And having spoiled principalities and power, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them in it."—Col. 2:14-15. "Let no man (for the above reason) therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."

Jesus kept the sabbath, but when He died the sabbath was nailed to His cross. Therefore, the Roman church did not have any true sabbath to set aside.

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

"Will you please explain the following scripture; Gen. 6:2? Are the sons of God fallen angels, as the descendants of Cain?"

The term "sons of God" is, in Scripture, used only of God's created beings. It seems never to be used of one of the descendants of such. Adam was created by God and is, in Luke 3:38, spoken of as the "son of God". Jesus also was a creation of God, not a descendant of man. He is frequently spoken of as the "son of God". Christians are spoken of as "new creatures". They are "in Christ Jesus". They are made such by God's own mandate. In no sense can one come to be in Christ as the result solely of individual human effort. He is given such position only by the Father's express word creating him to that position. As such, they are called in 1 John 3:2, "sons of God".

Beside Adam and Christ and new creatures in Christ, there is probably no reference in Scripture that any others of the Adamic type come to be and are called "sons of God". Those scriptures referring to others who are named "sons of God" probably in every instance refer to angels. Job 1:6; 2:1; 38:7; Psa. 29:1, margin (the Targum here reads "angels" instead of "mighty") and Dan. 3:25.

We have no authority for presuming that "sons of God" in Gen. 6:2, 4 is used in any other way; in fact, the context would indicate that these "sons of God" were a people distinct from the Adam family. Especially is this indicated when we remember that the word here translated "men" in the phrase "daughters of men" is the Hebrew word adam preceded by the definite article, "the". That is, they were the daughters of "the man". The Hebrew word adam is derived from another Hebrew word adamh, meaning "ground". Therefore, Adam, as applied to man refers to him who was made of ground. Adam frequently refers to mankind as a race, but when preceded by the definite article, it refers to "the man"; so that these "sons of God" were not descendants of man as were "the daughters of the man".

This, too, would be in harmony with what is apparently taught in Jude 6, where "the angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation," are referred to. 2 Peter 2:4 may well be studied in this same connection.

Next week, God willing, this text will be further considered.

SEEING THROUGH THE BLOOD

A FATHER and his little son were looking through the window of a hotel and watching some soldiers marching along the street. The soldiers wore bright red uniforms, and when the father spoke to his little boy about the fine-looking, red-clad soldiers, the boy answered: "But, father, the soldiers are dressed in white and not red."

The father was quite concerned for his little son, thinking he must be color blind, when he noticed that the boy was looking through red glass. He was not tall enough to reach up past the border glass on the window. When looking at anything red through red glass, the object looks to be white. God views the sinner through the blood of Jesus. Thus the sinner's filthy rags become robes of righteousness, and scarlet sins become white as snow.—Wm. Miller.

first to have reserved him for his triumph; but Herod, who did not think himself safe as long as that branch of the royal family survived, would not let him rest until he had obtained the death of that unfortunate prince, for which he even gave a large sum of money. He was proceeded against in form, condemned to die, and had the sentence executed upon him in the same manner as common criminals, with the rods and axes of the lictor, and was fastened to a stake; a treatment with which the Romans had never used any crowned head before.

"Thus ended the reign of the Asmoneans, after a duration of one hundred and twenty-nine years from the beginning of the government of Judas Maccabaeus. Herod entered by this means upon the peaceable possession of the kingdom of Judea."—Rollin's Ancient History.

PAUL'S MISSIONARY WORK

By Lyman Booth

SECOND JOURNEY WITH SILAS AND TIMOTHY

Acts 15:36 to 18:32

TIMES A. D. 49, Lewin; A. D. 51, Conybere & Howson.

ANTIOCH

PAUL SUGGESTED to Barnabas that they should re-visit the churches they had founded. Acts 15:36. To this Barnabas consented, but insisted on taking John Mark with them, but Paul strongly objected. Barnabas and John Mark then separated from Paul and they went to Cyprus, while Paul started out with Silas by land, Acts 15:37-41, through

SYRIA AND CILICIA,

Confirming the churches and delivering the decree of the council at Jerusalem. They probably missed Tarsus, as it is not mentioned, and proceeded to DERBE AND LYSTRA.

At Lystra Paul met Timothy, who had probably been converted to him on his former visit, Acts 16:1-2, 2 Tim. 1:5, and after circumcising him, he took Timothy with him through the district of

PHRYGIA AND GALATIA,

In which places they established churches. But Paul became sick, Gal. 4:13, and was divinely forbidden to preach the Word in Asia, including Mysia, Caria, and Lydia. They then made their way, Acts 16:17, over against

MYSIA,

That is, Mysia Minor, a province belonging to Bithynia. There again, "the Spirit", Acts 16:7, forbade their proceeding in that direction, and they were guided by the Spirit to

ALEXANDRIA

A Roman colony on the north-west coast of Asia Minor. At this place they were joined by Luke. Note that the illness of the apostle Paul would make the services of "the beloved physician", Col. 4:14, very acceptable. Here a vision of the Macedonian invited Paul to Greece. They left Troas, and after touching at Samothracia, they landed at

NEAPOLIS (KAVALA),

A seaport of Thrace. From there they journeyed across the Pharsalian Plain to

PHILIPPI,

A Roman colony of Macedonia, Acts 16:12, founded by Augustus, and as there was no synagogue, they repaired to the house of prayer, called Proseucha, outside the city, on the banks of the river, Gangites. Acts 16:13. Here Lydia, a seller of purple from Thyatira (a city celebrated for its purple dyeing) was converted, but in consequence of casting out an evil spirit from a soothsaying damsel who brought much gain to her masters, Paul and Silas were arraigned before the magistrates, who scourged and imprisoned them. Those magistrates were called Pretors,

Acts 16:20-22, specially appointed (as Cicero tells us) to administer justice in the Roman colonies. For further indications of Luke's accuracy, notice the rods of the Roman lictors, Acts 16:22 and 2 Cor. 11:25, and the stocks also. Acts 16:22. During the night, however, they were miraculously delivered and the jailor and his household were converted and baptized. Acts 16:33. Leaving Luke at Philippi, Paul, Silas, and Timothy passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia to

THESSALONICA,

The metropolis of Macedonia, at which place Paul stayed three sabbath days, Acts 17:2, and preached with much success. But his enemies, the Jews, assailed the house of Jason, where Paul lodged, and accused him before the rulers of the city, or "Politarchs". Acts 17:6. On an ancient archway of Thessalonica evidence has been found that verifies Luke's statement concerning these incidents, and the inscription gives the title "Politarchs" to the magistrates and named seven who bore the title. Those Politarchs succeeded in driving Paul out of the city, and they went to

BEREA

Which was about sixty miles southwest of Thessalonica, where he was well received by both Jews and Gentiles until his enemies from Thessalonica interfered and rendered a longer stay impossible. Acts 17:13. From here (or Dium) the brethren sent Paul by sea to

ATHENS,

To which place he went alone, Silas and Timothy having been left behind. Acts 17:14. There he argued with the Jews, conversed with the philosophers and was forced to address them on Mars Hill, Acts 17:22, 23, but meeting with little success in this effort he went to

CORINTH,

The capital city of the Roman province of Achaia, and the residence of the proconsul Gallio. Achaia was a senatorial province under Augustus, at this time being placed on the list of imperial provinces, then restored Claudius to the Senate; hence the title proconsul is absolutely correct. Acts 17:12. At Corinth he was finally joined with Silas and Timothy, and for a year and six months the apostle made this great mercantile center his headquarters, writing his two epistles to the Thessalonians and working with Aquila and Priscilla at his trade of making tents. Acts 18:2, 3. After some time his accusers took him before Gallio, who treated his accusers with indifference and drove them from his judgment seat. Eventually Paul sailed from Corinth to

CENCHREA,

The eastern port of Corinth, from thence to

EPHESUS,

Where he left Priscilla and Aquila, and went alone to

CAESAREA

And from thence to Jerusalem to keep the feast of Pentecost. Acts 18:21. Then after the feast he went to

ANTIOCH,

Where he remained for some time. Thus he completed his second journey. Acts 18:23.

“BEHOLD, HE COMETH”

MANY PEOPLE are preparing to celebrate the birth of Jesus. The exchange of presents is uppermost in the minds of the great majority of them, no doubt. Yet this celebration is a proof to the world that Jesus was born.

Some contend that He was not born upon our Christmas day, i.e., that we are not celebrating the day upon which He was born. Likely we are not. There are day celebrators who think more of the day than of the event. The all-important thing is to realize the full meaning of the birth of Jesus to the world. Few know that His work upon earth is but half finished; for He is to come again “with power and great glory”, Matt. 24:30, and establish His kingdom here upon earth. His “law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem”, and the nations of the world “shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks”, and as a result of the operation of His kingdom, “nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.”

Oh, glorious day! “Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.” Rev. 22:12. As we read of the preparations for war in our day, our hearts cry out, “Oh, speed the day, Jehovah, when the nations of the earth shall say, ‘Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob. and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths.’”

Oh! speed the day, great Jehovah, when there will be “glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men”. Luke 2:14. We are praying “Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is done in heaven.” We realize the ultimate purpose for which God begat His Son. He was born to be the “King of the Jews,” and we have the utmost faith in His words. He is to be King of the world. He was born to be Ruler of Israel and of the whole world. Micah 5:2; Dan. 2:34, 44, 45; 7:13, 14.

We know that the first dominion of His kingdom shall come to the daughter of Zion, and to the daughter of Jerusalem. Micah 4:8. Therefore we bow our heads in reverence as we see the children of Israel going back to the Holy Land in preparation for the sending of Jesus from heaven, Acts 3:19-21, to rule the world in righteousness.

We realize that this world is in need of “refreshing”, and our prayer is, “Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.”

“Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.”—Jude 14, 15.

“Therefore be ye ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.” To “them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.”

We, Thy children, O great Jehovah, celebrate with love and reverence the birth of Thy Son. We recognize Thy plans and promises in the birth, the death, and the coming again of Jesus, and with uplifted hearts we await His coming as to the consummation of all Thy plans and the realization of Thy promises.—Elsie Alley Williams.

HIS WORK BUT HALF FINISHED

How true the above lines, as published by The Faith! Would that more Christians realized that Christ’s “work upon earth is but half finished”, and that His return is necessary for Him to complete that work to the glory of His Father. The things that Jesus “began both to do and to teach” will yet be consummated. For such consummation He will come “the second time, without sin, unto salvation.”

GLORIOUS DAY!

As the day of His nativity, so the day of His return—it is not the day that is to be held in reverence, but the Worker. The day is but the open door to grander experiences of the Father’s glory.

Praise His Name!

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

TILL RECENT TIMES all education was centered in the home. Public education is of but comparative recent years.

The one logical and true center of all education is the Home. None other can possibly have the same anxious concern for the proper and efficient instruction for the child as the parents.

Christian education is no exception to this fact. But times have changed. Practically all education has been diverted from the home and centered in the public assembly. This should not, however, lessen the parents' interest in the proper and efficient training of the child's mind—his education.

The first years of public education were devoted entirely to the study of the Bible as the one only text book. Reading and spelling were learned as the child read the text of God's Word of words to learn first of all God's directions and instructions to man. No greater text than that. Would that it yet were given proper respect by makers of Courses of Study. Gradually the scope of education has been shifted and expanded, until to-day there is left but a very small portion of the time of the growing child in which he can study the teachings of the Father of all. The parent has by custom grown to commit practically all responsibility for the instruction of the child to the public schools and has seemingly forgotten that the schools give little, if any, instruction to educate the child in the most important phase of life, namely, in matters pertaining to God and to God's revealed purpose in man. Therefore, the responsibility for the proper education of childhood as to these all-important subjects has now been fully left to

THE CHURCH.

But, the effort of the church has mostly been concentrated upon the adult. Some, yes, many churches have come to recognize the great abandonment of the child to the wiles of the most treacherous and degrading iniquities rampant. But the majority have not. In the

EDUCATION OF THE CHILD

Lies perhaps the greatest privilege and the greatest duty for the Christian.

To accomplish this very work, God, Who alone knoweth best, commandeth the children of Israel not only to bind written statements of God's laws upon their foreheads and upon their wrists, but He also said, "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." "And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates." Deut. 6:3-15.

This is no longer being done. The home no longer greatly regards God with proper interest, nor does it teach the child of his Maker. This work, important and far-reaching as may be the effects, is left to the church, and the church to-day is beginning to gladly awaken to its opportunity and is departmentizing its work in that it is beginning to specialize through the medium of

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

But again there is a weakness even here. Statistics indicate, according to a well-known Sunday School worker, F. L. Brown, as quoted by Clarence H. Benson on page 84, in his book, "An Introduction to Child Study", that 90 per cent of the people who come to accept Christ are instructed unto Him by the Sunday School. In Frank L. Brown's article,

"THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AS A GOLD MINE,"

He says, as quoted by Mr. Benson: "If a business man received from one department of his business ninety per cent of his entire profits, ninety per cent of his trained workers and practically all his new business, he would pay considerable attention to that department. Especially would this be so if that department was consuming only ten per cent of his capital and time. The possibilities are that he would cut out or cut down the unprofitable departments and concentrate his capital and energy in the fruitful department. The Sunday School is the gold mine of the church. The pastor and the people have put into its development ten per cent of the church's income, ten per cent of the time of the pastor and members, and it has yielded ninety per cent of the new members, workers and new home contacts. The dividends have a long record of steady payments. Good church strategy would suggest that the pastor and the people properly provide this enormously productive department with equipment, leadership, hard thinking and broad planning.

SALVATION

Ultimate salvation is the one goal toward which all Christian effort aims. God Himself instructed His earli-

This was with a view to the great good of the child; it was with a view to the great good of the nation of to-morrow; it was with a view to the great good and ultimate salvation of the individual.

GOD COMMENCED WITH THE CHILD

Can we do better? Not unless man, in his present-day achievements has surmounted the wisdom of God.

APPEAL TO THE CHURCH OF GOD

I appeal to the Church of God throughout the broad land to consider the bounden duty of educating childhood—not alone the child of the Christian home. God loves the child belonging to the neighbor as fully and completely as He loves the child of the Christian home. I appeal that Christians everywhere will awaken to the realization of the one greatest of all great duties and privileges and reach the child as well as adult life with the marvelous teachings and promises of Almighty God. Let it be life's one constant aim and devotion to get the fulness of power and ability of strength for the presentation of God and His truths to all around, especially to the children.

CHRISTIAN FINANCES

THAT FINANCES are as much a part of Christian growth and living as is prayer, obedience to gospel commands, or any other Scriptural injunction, is the firm belief of the writer. And just as tokens presented to the one that is loved indicate the joy and the gladness of the giver, the real outpouring of his love; so does the hearty zest with which the Christian preserves his financial strength that he may use it in rendering tokens of love to his Father and to his Lord indicate his heart's devotion to God. In both instances the hearty, anxious giver is benefited the most.

God needs nothing which man has—it all originated with the Father—but man needs to draw himself nearer unto his God. The degree of joy and gladness with which man serves God to the limit of his every ability indicates the closeness to which he has approached his Father. It is this close rapport with Jehovah that man needs more than all else.

Joyous, glad giving of one's finances to the service of the Father draws him into a closeness as also prayer, worship, and such things. But for such giving to return to the giver that bounty of blessing that is opportune, the gift, the service, the devotion, must be the outpouring of one's real joys to his Creator.

Let us learn that joy by deep and close association and service.

CHRISTIANITY is by far the greatest cause for one to engage in. It surpasses beyond measure all business professions, all business occupations, all sports—it surpasses everything that is man instituted and furthered.

CHOOSE

By Lottie E. Young

MANY PEOPLE make a mistake as to how to become a Christian. You cannot make yourself one by any amount of praying, or by reading the Bible, or "feeling" you should take the important step. It is simply a matter of deliberate choice. All through the Word of God this thought runs like a thread. Away back in Deuteronomy listen to Moses saying, "I have set before thee life and death; therefore choose life." And again, Joshua calls upon them solemnly, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." A little later we find him saying to that same people, "Ye are witnesses that ye have chosen you the Lord to serve him." In the Book of Proverbs we have this record of a straying people: "They did not choose the fear of the Lord"; and the Lord, through the prophet Isaiah says of them sadly, "They have chosen their own ways." Then He comes closer with a solemn, personal reminder of their position, "When I called ye did not answer; when I spake ye did not hear, and ye chose that wherein I delighted not."

In the New Testament we get a still clearer view of God pleading with His people: "choose", "come", "follow", "ask". The thought in some form seems always on the lips of the Lord Jesus Christ. Away on in Revelation think of the picture He gives: "Behold, I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in to him." Always and everywhere is distinct effort of the will insisted upon.

Let us think of a man behind a closed door, shut in a room. He is not happy, for he knows that ahead of him are many troubles and dangers. In front of the door think of one standing who speaks the words already quoted. He has explained to the man that he longs to help him; and he knocks and knocks, but the door does not open; it is locked. Yet the man inside has the key; he can unlock the door, and he is the only one who can. "If you will open this door I will come in and stay with you; I will save you from all danger and take care of you for ever." Still the door does not open. Does the man hear, do you think? Let us ask him. "Friend, do you hear what that man who is knocking says?" "Yes, I hear." "Why do you not open the door?" "I do not feel like it." "Never mind that, he does not ask you how you feel; he says open the door." But the door stays locked oftentimes, for the man has not chosen aright, and he is the only one who can let in the loving friend.

It is a distinct effort of the human will, a deliberate choosing, that opens the heart-door. It is then that the blessed Guest enters at once and helps us over all the rough places of life. One thing more we must note—the day of invitation. It is always "this day", "now". Throughout the entire Bible you will find no call for "to-morrow", or "next month", or "next year". Do not say, "I mean to be a Christian sometime, but I don't feel like it now"; for "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation," and it may not be your privilege to ever hear this call again.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER

By Alice B. Curtis

THIS PARABLE IS recorded in Matt. 13:3; Mark 4:3; and Luke 8:5. Jesus spoke in parables for several reasons. It was a pleasing and forcible way of teaching, and even an unwelcome truth could be expressed thus, with less likelihood of giving offence, than if a more direct manner of speech were used; and the Jews were accustomed to that way of teaching.

When Jesus spoke this parable, it brought to the minds of those who heard it, as it would bring to the minds of those who should read it, the familiar scene of the husbandman scattering the seed upon the earth; for in every land man must sow and reap that "there may be seed for the sower and bread for the eater." It has been said that "a parable does not run on all four"; that is to say, the object in the parable and the object to which it is compared or likened are not alike in every particular. They are not like two plane surfaces, which, when laid together, touch at every point, but are more like a plane laid upon a curved surface and touch at only one point. A parable teaches one an important truth or moral lesson, and it and the lesson it teaches must be alike in one particular at least; and after the lesson or truth is discerned, the rest of the language in the parable is used as a sort of drapery or embellishment and makes the parable more readable and life-like.

The parable of the sower teaches how the different classes of mankind would receive the gospel. The four varieties of soil typify four different classes of hearers; and, no doubt, all who have heard the gospel are included in one of these four classes. Jesus expounded this parable to the disciples, so we can have no doubt as to its meaning.

The "wayside" hearers do not understand the gospel, but they could understand it, for God has made the essential truths so plain that "he may run that readeth it", Hab. 2:2. "The wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein."—Isa. 35:8. This class of hearers seem to be "carried about with every wind of doctrine", and what is heard last crowds out what was heard before, and so the truth is snatched away as the fowls devoured the seed in the parable.

The stony ground indicates a class of people who have no depth of character. They hear the gospel gladly, and desire to be saved, but are not willing to endure trials and persecutions. They are not like Paul, who declared that he took "pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake." 2 Cor. 12:10.

The third class of people are those represented by the ground infested with thorns. They hear the word, but social duties, business cares, and the desire to be popular or wealthy take so much of their time and attention that the blessed Christ and His wonderful work are crowded out.

None of the first three soils bring crops to fruition. In the first one the seed does not even germinate.

Though the seed sown be good seed, the soil conditions are unfavorable to growth, and no crop is the result. So, with the three classes of people of which these soils are the type, they, too, are unfruitful of good works. Christ bade the self-righteous Pharisees bring forth fruits meet for repentance, warning them that every tree which bringeth forth not good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. Matt. 3:8-10.

Do you wish to be numbered with these unfruitful ones who, unless they change, are of no use to the Master and are doomed to destruction? Would it not be infinitely better to belong to the fourth class who, Jesus said, heard and understood the word, "and brought forth fruit, some an hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold"?

In 2 Peter 1:5 we may find a list of the qualities which every one who desires to be a useful Christian should acquire. They are as follows: faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity. It is added that he who possesses these graces "shall neither be barren nor unfruitful".

Some people have thought that Jesus taught in parables because He did not intend that all should know the gospel. This is surely a mistake; for in the same chapter where the parable of the sower and other parables are found, Christ says very significantly, "who hath ears to hear, let him hear." V. 9. And again in verse 43 He speaks the same solemn words. He told the disciples He spoke to the people in this way "because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand": "for this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them." In Matt. 9:13 Jesus plainly says, "I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." "The multitudes that came to hear Christ's teaching were composed of all classes of people and yet we read in Luke 7:29 that "all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John". Here we have an example of publicans, who were not of the Jews, receiving the gospel under Christ's teaching.

"BUT WE SEE JESUS"

*I don't look back; God knows the fruitless efforts,
The wasted hours, the sinning, the regrets;
I leave them all with Him who blots the record,
And mercifully forgives, and then forgets.*

*I don't look forward; God sees all the future,
The road that, short or long, will lead me home,
And He will face with me its every trial,
And bear for me the burdens that may come.*

*But I look up—into the face of Jesus,
For there my heart can rest, my fears are stilled;
And there is joy, and love, and light for darkness,
And perfect peace, and every hope fulfilled.*

A LETTER

DEAR MR. AND MRS. ———: Your kind letter and gifts are received and best of all is your inquiry concerning immortality. I notice you refer to 1 Cor. 15:50-51. Paul makes it very plain that 'flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God,' and confirms it by saying, 'Neither doth corruption inherit incorruption,' and consoles us by saying, 'We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed.' This change from corruption to incorruption will be 'in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.' Paul also tells us that there are different kinds of flesh and different kinds of glory, etc.

"When we read carefully 1 Cor. 15:50-51 we can see that Paul is saying what Jesus said to Nicodemus, John 3:3, 'Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.' Verse 6, 'That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit.' In verse 10 Jesus said to him, 'Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?'

"There are many to-day that are as ignorant as Nicodemus. We often hear them sing, 'Ye must be born again'; but if they would read 1 Cor. 15:50-55, they would see that the new birth means an incorruptible body, and that it will take place in a moment; then we can say, 'O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?' Therefore we are waiting 'to wit, the redemption of our body.' Rom. 8:23.

"Jesus was the first and the only one up to the present time that has been born again, Rom. 8:11; all others, having died in faith, have not received the promise of immortality 'that they without us should not be made perfect.' Heb. 11:40.

"Jesus has 'abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel,' 2 Tim. 1:10, and is the Head of a new creation. For if 'we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.' 1 Cor. 15:49. There are only two creations: Adam was the head of the mortal, and Jesus the head of the immortal. Our personality will be the same in both creations, but our mortal flesh will be changed into immortal. 1 Cor. 15:53. When that change comes, then we will be born of the Spirit. John 3:5. Then we can go and come like the wind, John 3:8, and be clothed with immortality. Paul longed for it, saying, 'For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed (die), but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.'—2 Cor. 5:4. Paul lived in the hope that it might be in his day, for he said, 'We shall not all sleep (die), but we shall all be changed.'—1 Cor. 15:51. But in 2 Thess. 2:3 he says, 'That day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition.'

"Who is this man of sin that is worshiped so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God?'

"Revelation 17 has this to say concerning it:

"(1) Mystery, Mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth;

"(2) Woman on a scarlet colored beast;

"(3) Decked with gold and pearls;

"(4) On her forehead—Mother of harlots;

"(5) Abominations of the earth;

"(6) Drunken with the blood of the saints;

"(7) The beast had seven heads;

"(8) The seven heads are seven mountain (or hills) on which the woman sitteth;

"(9) The waters which thou sawest are peoples, nations, multitudes, and tongues over which she reigneth.

"But the destruction of this great system of deception is given in Revelation 18:

"(1) A great angel came down from heaven;

"(2) The earth was lighted with his glory;

"(3) Cried with a strong voice, saying, 'Babylon is fallen';

"(4) For her sins have reached unto heaven;

"(5) Therefore her plagues come in one day;

"(6) She shall be utterly burned;

"(7) Strong is the Lord God who judgeth her;

"(8) The kings of the earth shall lament for her;

"(9) Saying, 'Alas, alas, that great city Babylon;'

"(10) For in one hour is thy judgment come;

"(11) And a mighty angel took up a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, 'thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all.'

"Can it be that this great system under name of Mystery, Babylon, stands for that which came down to us from Paganism before the days of Constantine, known in Rev. 17:3 as the scarlet colored beast in the wilderness of Ancient Rome; and is the woman on the beast, the Christian church placed on the beast by Constantine, the Roman emperor? If this be so, then we can account for the pagan beliefs coming in to the Christian faith, viz., immortality of the soul, trinity, and virgin birth, all of which was known in ancient Rome.

"Therefore this system, whatever it is, will be broken to pieces at the appearing of the Son of man. For He must reign until He puts the last enemy under His feet, and a short work will God make upon the earth. Rom. 9:28.

"And at the time of the end 'many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.'—Dan. 12:4.

J. E. Robbins."

THERE IS no greater antithesis to-day than the Spirit of Christ and the spirit of the world. These conflicting spirits automatically discriminate between consecrated and nominal Christians. However, the Spirit of Christ may be counterfeited for a time, but the inevitable fruition is sure to reveal the deception.—S. E. H.

"The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth."—Matt. 13:41-42.

DOINGS AT HEADQUARTERS

ON NOVEMBER 30, last, your Secretary notified the Advisory Board and the Executive Board that the Secretary had received inquiry as to whether the National Bible Institution would sell two of the lots conveyed to the National Bible Institution in the southwest portion of the City of Oregon. These two lots stand by themselves, separated from the other lots owned by the National Bible Institution. They are the two most southwestern lots, the lots of least value. We were offered One Hundred Dollars each for them.

After having received affirmative word from fifteen of the members of the Advisory Board and from five of the members of the Executive Board, a meeting of the Executive Board, as per call, was held on December 17th in the offices of the National Bible Institution. Those present were Leland Hanson, 1st Vice President and Chairman, F. A. Stilson, Treasurer, F. L. Austin, Secretary. A quorum being present, it was moved and unanimously carried that the President and Secretary of the Executive Board would sell and transfer these two lots at One Hundred Dollars each.

Since then the deed has been made and signed by G. E. Marsh, President, and F. L. Austin, Secretary, and was, a few days ago, given over to the purchaser, who gave us his check for Two Hundred Dollars. This Two Hundred Dollars was immediately applied to our notes payable.

F. L. Austin, Secretary.

In harmony with the decision of The Restitution Publishing Company in its last annual meeting, the Secretary thereof mailed a petition to all of the stockholders, requesting signature from each as to whether the President should call a stockholders' meeting for the purpose of considering the transfer of The Restitution Publishing Company to the National Bible Institution. After receiving a petition from owners of more than two-thirds of the stock of The Restitution Publishing Company, the President called such a meeting for Oregon, Illinois, to be held upon December 29, 1927. At this meeting, a large majority of the stock was present or was represented by proxy. On motion, the title of the property of The Restitution Publishing Company was ordered transferred to the National Bible Institution.

On December 30th, 1927, a meeting of the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution was called for Saturday, January 14, 1928, for the purpose of taking a formal action as to the receiving of the title of this property. In accordance with the bylaws of the National Bible Institution, the Advisory Board was notified, as was also the Executive Board, of a motion that would be placed before the meeting of the Executive Board on January 14, 1928, to take over the printing plant from The Restitution Publishing Company.

At this meeting the Secretary reported that fifteen members of the Advisory Board had advised affirmatively as to this motion; accordingly, the motion was placed before the chairman and was unanimously passed.

At this writing the proper papers for the transfer of this substantial property have been completed and the National Bible Institution becomes the owner of this printing plant.

In behalf of the members of the Church of God, I express heartiest thanks to one and all of the relatively few stockholders of The Restitution Publishing Company for their contribution to the church as a whole, and for their cooperation in maintaining this publishing plant for more than sixteen years in the interest of the church. Especially are thanks due to Brother S. J. Lindsay for his efficient management and editorial work for the first eleven years, and to the very few who bore the unavoidable deficits year after year.

F. L. Austin, Secretary.

SOME GOOD folk go stone blind when confronted with such facts as conflict with their pet theories, and self-complacency.—S. E. H.

JOY TURNED TO SORROW

IN THESE DAYS when the State and its laws for right are so traitorously treated by even many in authority and by others who claim the regard of respectable citizens; when God and His Word are ignored and disdained, it is uplifting to read as follows:

"Intemperance is associated with and leads to all sorts of other evils, and leaves a trail of blood and tears wherever it drags its slimy carcass through the social world. It takes bread from the mouths of little children, breaks hearts, fills prison cells, digs graves. It closes doors to health, to success, to happiness here and hereafter. It causes its victims to defy the laws of God and man, to do things they would never think of doing except under the influence of drink; while the Bible distinctly teaches us that no drunkards 'shall inherit the kingdom of God.' 1 Cor. 6:9, 10; Gal. 5:19-21. The 'd' in 'drink' stands for drugs, dissipation, disobedience, disease, divorce, disability, deception, disadvantage, disappointment, disgrace, depression, destitution, dependence, despair, death, and destruction. Said the late Mr. Gladstone: 'Intoxicating drinks have produced evils more deadly, because more continuous, than all those caused to mankind by the great historic scourges of war, famine, and pestilence combined.' John B. Gough knew what he was talking about when he said: 'The barroom is a bank; you deposit your money and lose it; your time, and lose it; your character, and lose it; your manly independence, and lose it; your home comfort, and lose it; your self-control, and lose it; your soul—and lose it.' 'At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.'—Prov. 23:32. See also vv. 29-35."

He who is really Christian at heart will profit by this admonition.

LET ALL THINGS BE DONE DECENTLY AND IN ORDER.—1 CORINTHIANS 14:40.

ON SUNDAY NIGHT, January 15, preceding our Bible class and sermon, we met with the young folks and assisted in organizing a Junior Berean Society at Ripley, Illinois.

There is a fine group of young people at Ripley, and they are anxious to push this organization in which they can learn, express themselves, grow and develop.

As a president "Mother" to the class they chose Sr. Tessa Laning. The other officers are: Alfred Hetrick, Vice-president; and Miss Edna Cooper, Secretary-Treasurer.

The new class is to meet on Sunday nights at 7 p. m., and the first meeting was called for January 22.

* * * *

The statement of Paul printed at the head of this page gives one of the most important rules for success, whether one applies it to private life, to business, or to church work. Order and method win where everything else fails.

* * * *

He who tries to conduct a store but does not keep accurate account of expenditures and receipts and make frequent inventory is inviting bankruptcy. If he has no regular hours of opening and closing, no tidiness in arrangement of stock, no standard of dignity as to conduct permitted in his place of business, he is simply marking time till the doors shall be closed.

* * * *

But conducting a religious work is the most important work that any man or woman ever undertook. Order and decency, therefore, are fundamentals which can build for success, or which, if violated, are sure to bring failure.

Business meetings should be held at regularly prescribed times, and officers chosen who will conduct the work to the best interests of the class. An officer when chosen carries a heavy responsibility, and has a wonderful opportunity to serve his Lord. To allow pleasure trips, or other matters of passing importance to interfere with one's duty to his class and to his Lord is being unfaithful as a steward in the conduct of business. Whether you are an officer or not, if you have a class to work in set an example for the rest of the class in regularity and punctuality.

Furthermore, help to see that the class work is conducted with dignity, so that the best results may be obtained by all and Christ need not be ashamed of the conduct. Solomon once said there was a time for everything. Mirth has its proper time, and we all enjoy the smile and the laugh. But there is a time also for reverence and true worship. Let us not rob ourselves and the class by injecting the wrong atmosphere into the service period.

* * * *

Turn frequently to the closing verse of 1 Corinthians 14, and meditate upon the great apostle's admonition: "Let all things be done decently and in order."

* * * *

THE SUPREME SACRIFICE

IN THE OLD TESTAMENT Scriptures, the people were required to offer sacrifices for the atonement of their sins. Lev. 4:26, 31, 35; 5:5-6. God even commanded Abraham to offer his only son as a sacrifice, and Abraham would have obeyed Him, had not God stayed his hand.

Coming down to the New Testament Scriptures, we find the greatest example of sacrifice that can be found anywhere in the Holy Scriptures, namely, Christ offering Himself that the world might be saved.

Life was just as sweet and precious to Jesus as it was to any other person and He could have escaped death had He so desired. Why, then, did Christ allow Himself to be led to Calvary, and be nailed to the cross without even trying to defend Himself?

Paul gives us the answer in Hebrews 2:9, "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man."

Also Hebrews 12:2, "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

Christ, by His supreme sacrifice, opened the door of salvation unto all men. May we all accept the opportunity that Christ has given us, and remain faithful "even unto death".

THE FALL OF JERUSALEM AND OF ROME

(Daniel 11)

ON THE FALL of Marcus Antonius, Herod was granted a continuance of his kingdom by Augustus, who also added numerous territories to it. From this time till his death his reign was undisturbed by any foreign war, but it was stained with cruelties and atrocities of a character almost without parallel in history. Filled with jealous fears for the safety of his throne, he caused every member of the Asmonean family to be destroyed, and even many of his own relations; and in the latter years of his life, the lightest shade of suspicion sufficed as the ground for his wholesale butcheries, which are described in detail by Josephus. Of these, the one with which we are best acquainted was the slaughter of the infants at Bethlehem. The infant Christ, however, escaped the malice of this inhuman wretch by means of a warning given to Joseph, and was carried into Egypt where He remained until after the death of Herod.

The "prince of the covenant" alluded to by the prophet was Antigonus, the last king of Jewish blood to sit on the throne, which was now occupied by a direct descendant of Esau the brother of Jacob, and his deadly enemy. With the destruction of Antigonus the Jewish monarchy was brought to an end. "This extraordinary, and until then, unexampled event, by which the sovereign authority of the Jews was given to a stranger, an Idumean, ought to have opened their eyes and rendered them attentive to a celebrated prophecy, which had foretold it in clear terms; had given it as the certain mark of another event, in which the whole nation was interested, which was the perpetual object of their vows and hopes, and distinguished them by a peculiar characteristic from all other nations of the world, who had an equal interest in it, but without knowing or being apprised of it. This was the prophecy of Jacob, who at his death foretold to his twelve sons, assembled round his bed, what would happen in the series of time to the twelve tribes, of which they were the chiefs, and after whom they were called. Among the other predictions of that patriarch concerning the tribe of Judah there is this of which we now speak: 'The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be.'—Gen. 49:10. The sceptre or rod (for the Hebrew signifies both) implies here the authority and superiority over the other tribes.

"All the ancient Jews have explained this prediction to denote the Messiah; the fact is therefore incontestible, and is reduced to two essential points. The first is, that as long as the tribe of Judah shall exist it shall have pre-eminence and authority over the other tribes; the second, that it shall exist, governed by its laws and magistrates till the Messiah comes.

"The first point is verified in the series of the history of the Israelites, wherein that pre-eminence of the tribe of Judah evidently appears. For the second point, we have only to consider it with a little attention. When Herod, the Idumean, and in consequence a stranger, was placed on the throne the authority and superiority which the tribe of Judah had over the other tribes were first taken from it. The tribe of Judah had no longer the supremacy: it no longer existed as a distinct body, from which the magistrates were taken. It was manifest, therefore, that the Messiah was come. But at what time did that tribe become like the rest, and confounded with them? In the times of Titus Vespasian, and Adrian, who finally exterminated the remains of Judah. It was therefore before those times the Messiah came."

"SCIENCE FALSELY SO CALLED"

PSYCHOANALYSIS is a word glibly used these days," says The Philadelphia Inquirer, editorially. "Sigmund Freud, regarded as its pioneer," continues the article, "has disappointed even many of his own disciples by his latest utterance. In a small volume just published in Vienna he commits himself to the theory that 'religious ideas are illusions.' This seems to make futile the task of trying to reconcile them with psychoanalysis. Man-kind, Dr. Freud goes on, should renounce every illusion in the name of intellectual progress. Science alone holds out the lamp of hope to the world. Religion 'cannot be victorious against actuality, which is science.'"

In a clear analysis of how so called science clearly refutes its own claims for final reliability and knowledge surpassing data revealed by God in His Word of words, The Philadelphia Inquirer continues:

"This is an arrogant attitude which scientists once assumed much more frequently than most of them do now. There is reason for becoming modesty, since so many scientific 'truths' of one generation are disputed by the next. Science must have, of course, a solid basis of fact; and no one now seeks to discredit the great discoveries of the scientists, still less to persecute them for their opinions. But there is such a thing as pseudoscience, and many think that the Freudian theory comes within this category. At all events, it is still in the experimental stage. Dr. Freud essays to show that Rousseau's theories were wrong, though they were once so widely accepted, and has no difficulty in doing it. It is equally conceivable that a generation hence his own may be in the discard.

"He is a very imperfect philosopher who fails to recognize the innate need of humanity for religious belief. In every stage of history this has existed, in however debased a form. If we confine our view to the Christian era alone we shall see that the dogmas of the church have been more durable than the dogmas of science, however much the latter may have influenced the interpretation of the former. The Freudians, much like Hermione's 'little group of serious thinkers,' sometimes make us suspect that they do not really know their own minds."

To these refutations of false science The Herald adds its "Amen"!

JESUS MISUNDERSTOOD AND OPPOSED

Mark 3:19b-35; 6:1-6

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 50:4-9

GOLDEN TEXT

He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.—John 1:11, 12.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Jesus Misunderstood and Opposed. There were three classes here referred to, who misunderstood the Savior:

(a). His enemies. Those who were opposing Him, whose interests His works injured, whose theories His words upset; they misunderstood Him, because of their envy and jealousy. Their eyes were blinded; their hearts were hardened; His every work and word were misconstrued. No correct understanding could possibly result to such a mind.

(b). His friends. Though greatly interested in Him, anxious for His rise and stand, yet their intimate knowledge of His person and life discerned no strength or greatness in His natural ability more than was common in all. His undisputed works were no proof to them that He was anything more than any other person.

(c). His neighbors. Those intimate with Him in boyhood and early manhood were also blinded, not because of any evil affection, but seemingly because of intimacy of daily life and work.

These illustrations reveal that enmity, love and friendship equally blinded the eyes of those here referred to, prohibiting them from understanding, comprehending the voice and the work of Jesus.

Opposition. Likewise, there were three classes who opposed Him. Not that any could successfully resist against His direct effort, but they successfully opposed to the extent that they were unreceptive of His words and thus were deprived of His blessings. The enemies opposed Him violently, maliciously and deceitfully: His kinsfolk opposed Him in their affection and concern for Him: His neighbors opposed Him by their indifference, lack of application to His words and ways.

None obstructed Him in His work. He accomplished His mission; He proclaimed His gospel; He evidenced His Father. Each class, misunderstanding the Master, merely thrust obstructions before their own advancement.

He hath an unclean spirit. This is the reason, v. 30, for the Savior's words, that those who were blaspheming Him should not be forgiven in this age or in the age to come. "Has no forgiveness to the age."—Diag. They had attributed His works to an unclean spirit, but Jesus, to the Holy Spirit. But the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of God. All sin is a sin against God—some sin through the medium of man, others through the medium of self—but their sin consisted in sinning against God through His Spirit, in that they blasphemed by attributing His Spirit to be unclean.

There is no indication that such blasphemy was limited to the particular period in which Jesus lived. There is much indication that equal opportunity exists today to blaspheme similarly.

The works of God are manifested in various ways: by the star-studded heaven; by the mirth-filled earth; by the blooming violet; by the warbling bird; by all nature animate and inanimate; as, also, by past and current events evidently emanating from the hand of God.

Questions on the Subject. Did the misunderstanding of the people, concerning Jesus, result from His weak expression of Himself, or from blindness of mind? How many classes misunderstood? How many opposed Him? Were the methods of opposition alike? Against whom did the opposition redound? What is force of Savior's teaching, vv. 28-30?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Unto his own possessions he came, and his own people did not receive him home. As many, however, as did receive him, he gave to them authority to become children of God, to them that were putting faith in his name.—John 1:11-12, Roth.

He came to His own right and possessions, the land of Abraham, and the throne of David and whatsoever things which were given Him of the Father. But His own people, Israel, would not receive Him, hence He could not assume control over His possessions. But to as many as did receive Him, He gave the right to be called the sons of God.—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Misunderstood. "When his friends heard of it they said, He is beside himself."—Mark 3:21. One of the saddest experiences of life is to be misunderstood by those who are the dearest to us. Prompted by some mighty purpose, we devote our time and energy to its accomplishment. But our friends do not understand. Their viewpoint is different from ours, and, while they may not ridicule our efforts, in attitude if not in words they indicate their total lack of sympathy. A young man of my acquaintance was impressed to enter the ministry. He planned his education with that end in view; but his mother, although a member of the church, was wholly out of sympathy with his purpose. She had high worldly ambitions for her son, and pointed out to him the scanty financial remuneration afforded by the church when compared with the rich returns to be obtained in other vocations. Her advice prevailed, and he was persuaded to enter into other, and entirely worldly, pursuits. Such was not the case with Jesus, however. The opposition of His friends but aroused within Him a feeling of pity for their blindness, of sorrow for their lack of faith. His purpose remained unshaken. Regardless of the attitude of friends or enemies, His God-given work must go on! The Church of God to-day needs young men of courage and devotion to carry the glad tidings into all the world. Those to whom the call comes must not be turned away from it by the advice of friends, the ridicule of enemies or the opposition of the world. It is God's work that must needs be done!

When failure comes. "He marvelled because of their unbelief."—Mark 6:6. Jesus worked quite as faithfully among His kinsfolk in Nazareth as He did elsewhere, but, without apparent success. His heart prompted Him to take His message to them especially; but it was without avail. Many a faithful preacher of the gospel has had the same experience. He could convert strangers, but his own dear ones remained unmoved by his appeal.—G. E. M.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Jesus misunderstood and opposed.

Jesus began His ministry with His own nation, the Jews, because God sent Him to them. They believed in God and worshiped Him, and they were looking for a king to sit on David's throne. But when the little Christ-child came they could not believe He was to be their promised king. And so in everything He did He seemed to be misunderstood. Even His own brothers thought Him crazy, beside Himself, and tried to have Him go home and stop preaching. But Jesus knew His heavenly Father had sent Him for this very purpose, and no matter what they thought about Him He must do the work God had sent Him to do.

We read in Heb. 5:8, "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered". He was made perfect through suffering. The trials and disappointments of life are what we all need to prove our loyalty to God. We read in Rev. 3:19, "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent". We may be misunderstood as Jesus was, but we must be brave and willing to suffer with Him.—M. A. W.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Jesus, the Light: What special light, intelligence or consciousness, does Jesus dispense? What Bible evidence do we have that this light was not received into the inner life of man until after the resurrection, ascension, and outpouring of the Holy Spirit? Why was this true? 1 Cor. 2:10-16. What one condition makes possible man's reception of the light into his inner life? Why does the light dispensed through Jesus expand so slowly?—A. K.

AN OPPORTUNITY

The reports of the Doings at Headquarters, elsewhere in this issue mean much. The National Bible Institution, which is the incorporate body for conducting the business of the General Conference of the Church of God finds itself another step advanced, with much increased responsibility.

In organizing the National Bible Institution, it has been the burning desire of the church to Scripturally unify its strength, that ever increasing Christian service could be rendered in honor to God and Jesus Christ.

This last step gives to the National Bible Institution not only increased responsibility, but also greatly increased opportunity. More and more is it demonstrated that the printed page is one of the best mediums for educating people in the way of the gospel. While the National Bible Institution has been conducting the publication for the church for the last five years, yet it now assumes the responsibility of maintaining the printing plant and of increasing it in such measure as it can to make it the most efficient possible in this line of work.

The brotherhood everywhere is urged to consider carefully the meaning of this step and to give earnest effort to the proper encouragement and support of the work. May the publishers receive the heartiest cooperation in the circulation of those things for which the church stands.

Let us one and all seize our increased opportunity and with faithful hearts and hands cooperate to carry our Christian labors forward with increased enthusiasm and increased results in effectiveness.

F. L. Austin, Executive Secretary.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

Preaching services are being held twice each Sunday, and Bible study at the church on Thursday nights. Tuesday and Friday nights as many as can conveniently come to our home do so and join in the study of the Book of Revelation. The Sunday night sermons are on the "Prophecies of Daniel". A good interest is being manifested in these services.

IOWA REPORT

The regular appointments have been kept except that the Hickory Grove date on the fourth Sundays has been abandoned for the winter, as has been the custom, and we hold at Lake View and Sac City on that Sunday now until April. The second Sunday at Stanhope, and the third Sunday at Koszta have not been missed. Gladbrook, on the first Sunday, missed in December while I was at Lincoln, Nebraska, but we held services there on Christmas Day instead. It was thought that that day would not be suitable for a meeting elsewhere, and Mrs. Williams was in Indiana at the time, as her father had had a stroke of paralysis, but after staying about three weeks she left him improved enough to get out. We had a very pleasant Christmas at our home in spite of our divided family, as Cleo was with her mother at the time. The season was very happy in so many loving remembrances and gifts from far and near. We wish in this way to express our gratitude, as far as words can express it.

We keep up our regular weekly study at Gladbrook on Tuesday nights, and Koszta has started a Sunday School, and others have spoken favorably of a similar step. The children at Stanhope always have a regular part in the service, and take good interest. We cannot press too strongly upon all the value to be derived from regular weekly meetings, even when a preacher cannot be with you. Each can take a little part anyway, and help to make an interesting meeting.

January 29th we will meet at Waterloo, and on Monday after at Clarksville. Let all come who can.

Glenn Allard, of Zelzah, California, is visiting in Iowa, being at Gladbrook at this writing.

The father of Bro. Earl Reinhard was buried near Gladbrook recently, and Bro. Gifford at Waterloo, yesterday, whose obituary accompanies this report.

Sr. Edna Allard, of Fort Dodge, is reported improving some.

Bro. Cowles was with us in the meeting at Lincoln, Nebraska, but we could not make any impression on the general public in so large a place on such brief notice.

There is some outside interest at Stanhope at present and a little at Gladbrook. Reuben and Edna Sealine are in their new home at Stanhope, and Anton Sealine is building a new house which they hope to occupy soon.

The Iowa brethren seem to be faithful, and to be progressing spiritually. There is one suggestion the evangelist would like to offer to those who live where we have regular monthly appointments, and that is that we take one or more of our sermons each month to a nearby place where we may offer the gospel to the public, and thus do more evangelizing than we are doing. In spite of last day conditions we might interest some. The evangelist would be glad, on going to any regular appointment to find that such a plan had been arranged. Some schoolhouse or rural church building can nearly always be had for the purpose.

AUNT HULDA THOMPSON

Hulda, daughter of John and Fredrica Zander, was born June 22, 1852, in Hanover, Prussia. She came to the United States with her parents in 1865, establishing their home in Woodstock Township, Schuyler, Illinois. Here she made her home until she became the wife of Washington Thompson on May 4, 1871.

To this union were born six children, two having preceded her in death. Those surviving are Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of Ripley, Illinois, J. F. Thompson, of Rushville, Illinois, Mrs. Albert Bray, also of Rushville, and Perry J. Thompson, at home. The husband and father passed away September 27, 1908. Since the death of her husband she and her son Perry have made their home in Ripley, and Mt. Sterling. Sr. Thompson fell asleep on January 8, 1928, at the age of 75 years.

In 1888 she became a member of the Church of God in Ripley, under the ministry of Eld. John Foore, one of the pioneer ministers of our faith. She has ever lived a consistent Christian life. Her friends in Mt. Sterling and vicinity were from all faiths and creeds.

She leaves to mourn her departure her four children named above, ten grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren, besides a host of relatives and friends.

Aunt Hulda was one of the most faithful and consistent Christian workers we have been privileged to know. Funeral services were conducted from the late home and from the Christian Church in Ripley on January 10, after which she was laid away to await the Master's call.

JAMES GIFFORD

Died at his home in Waterloo, Iowa, at 1:30 p. m., January 10, 1928, of ailments due to extreme age and a fall suffered Christmas night, when he seems to have fallen partly downstairs. At least, he was found at the landing in a helpless condition. He was 89 years of age, having been born February 25, 1838, near Quebec, Canada.

He came to this country when a young man, settling in northern Illinois. He enlisted for the civil war at Rockford, Illinois, in Company H, 92nd Illinois mounted infantry, serving three years.

He and Miss Cynthia E. Thomas were married at Cedar Falls, Iowa, September 21, 1867. For two years they resided in Ogle County, Illinois, then settled on a farm near Waterloo, in 1869, and continued to operate this farm till 14 years ago, when they retired and moved into Waterloo. Sr. Gifford died two years ago last October, and the funeral of Bro. Gifford was conformed as much as possible in likeness to hers. A few of his old comrades of J. G. Safely G. A. R. post at Traer, to which he belonged, assisted in the service, and he was buried at Elmood Cemetery, near his Waterloo home.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. James Cassen, who has cared for her father since her mother's death, a son, Howard, of Des Moines, Iowa, a sister, Mrs. Sarah Talley, of Sioux City, Iowa, and a half brother, William G. Gifford, of Cherokee, Iowa.

The writer spoke of the usual hope given on such occasions, assisted in the service by a neighbor, a retired M. E. minister, named Sheckler. The house was filled to overflowing with sympathizing relatives and friends, who followed to the last resting place nearby.

"And many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad."—John 10:20.

"And when his friends (kinsmen) heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, He is beside himself."—Mark 3:21.

The fame of Jesus spread abroad, see Mark 1:27, 28, and the common people heard Jesus gladly. Notwithstanding, few received into their inner consciousness the light that was radiating from Him. Many said He was mad; His friends, kinsmen, said He was beside Himself; even those upon whom He expended the most intimate care in daily teaching and companionship tried to argue Him out of following the way which He said God had laid out for Him. And when He pursued that way in spite of their efforts to save Him from it, they deserted Him. Even they never received the light until it was shed abroad in their hearts by the resurrection and ascension, and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost—activities wholly independent of and above their own efforts.

That marvelous light that shines from God through Jesus is so far above the light that man has gained through his own efforts that the light thus gained cannot receive it. The light that radiates from Jesus can become a part of man's consciousness only as it is shed abroad in his heart, and it can be shed abroad only in those hearts that are quietly waiting and receptive through prayer.—A. K.

FOR INTERMEDIATES

Any leader or teacher meets opposition, and one who start out in a cause must take that fact into consideration. Our Savior was no exception. It was naturally to be expected that the religious leaders, Pharisees, etc., would oppose Him, but it must have been a real sorrow to the Master for His friends to misunderstand and make His task more difficult as shown by Mark 3:21.

In most cases in life, opposition is based either on selfishness or misunderstanding. With the Pharisees it was both. They had been the outstanding religious leaders, and were too selfish to give that place to another; hence, they would not even open their minds to consider His message. But the friends, upon hearsay, without getting full information, opposed. They had misunderstood.

Is opposition to Christ to-day still based on misunderstanding and selfishness? Could one really know Christ to the extent of appreciating His service for man without loving and serving Him? Does selfishness often blind one to the receiving of truth?—F. E. S.

JESUS MISUNDERSTOOD AND OPPOSED

(Mark 3:19-35; 6:1-6)

HOW MANY HELPERS did Jesus choose? Can you name them?

Jesus went up into a mountain and called these disciples unto Him. Then He ordained them, that is, He gave them power to preach, heal, and do the wonderful things He had been doing. Now they could help Him more than ever; and Jesus surely needed them because of the multitudes which came from far and near to be cured.

So many came that Jesus could scarcely find time or place to eat. Then His friends became alarmed and tried to force Him to stop His teaching and healing. They said, "He is beside himself." Somehow they could not understand that He was doing the work for which He had been sent.

However, Jesus did not give up His mission even though He loved these mistaken friends; nor did the criticism of His enemies affect Him.

The great scribes of Jerusalem came down to Capernaum, thinking they had the final argument to completely silence Jesus. They declared, "He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils."

Jesus answered this accusation by asking them how Satan could cast himself out of himself. He also gave them several illustrations—one of a kingdom, another of a house, which if divided will not stand or hold together, but break down entirely. And just so, "if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end."

Jesus continued to teach, using many parables, or little stories. They were like riddles to many of His hearers, especially to those who opposed Jesus.

He also stilled a storm on the sea, cast out unclean spirits raised the ruler's daughter from the dead, and healed a woman.

All these events had been about Capernaum, among strangers; but now Jesus decided to go back to His home town, Nazareth, among His relatives and neighbors. The disciples followed Him there.

When the sabbath day came, of course Jesus went to the synagogue. That was nothing unusual, no one thought anything of that, but when Jesus arose and began to teach in that authoritative way of His, the people who had known Him were astonished. They exclaimed, "From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands? Why, is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, and brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? Why, we have known him all his life." They seemed to think He was trying to assume undue authority and attempt something beyond His ability, or set Himself above them; and they were offended. They refused to believe in Him; so He could do no great works more than healing a few sick people and teaching in the villages near.

Now was not that queer that strangers listened and believed, but His nearest and dearest considered Him no more wonderful than themselves?

Then Jesus said, "A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house."

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read how several of Jesus' helpers were called-- Matt. 4:18-22; 9:9; John 1:35-51.
2. Read Mark 3:31-35.
3. Learn the names of Jesus' brothers.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Are we giving honor to those in our own homes, where honor is due?

Do we treat our loved ones thoughtfully, courteously, and helpfully as we would strangers?

BIBLE VERSE

6. Galatians 6:2.

TINY TOTS

Jesus made many sick people well. His friends and people who loved Him did not know that God had given Jesus this power to heal. Some of them wanted Him to stop preaching, and others would not listen to Him.

His enemies said He had received His power from Satan, the evil one.

But Jesus would not listen to any of them, but kept right on doing what God wanted Him to do.

PAUL'S MISSIONARY WORK

By Lyman Booth

THIRD JOURNEY WITH TIMOTHY AND OTHERS

Acts 18:23 to 21:17

Time: A. D. 54, Lewin; Same, Conybare and Howson.

ANTIOCH

AFTER STAYING at Antioch for some time, Paul, with Timothy and perhaps with Titus, started out on the third journey and visited the churches at

GALATIA AND PHRYGIA

Of which visit no exact details are given, but from 1 Cor.

16:1-2 we may infer that he exhorted the members of these churches to relieve by weekly offerings their poor brethren in Judea. From there he went to

EPHESUS,

The capital of Roman Asia. Luke described it as a free city, having its proconsuls, Acts 19:38, town clerk or "recorder", Acts 19:35, its Asiarchs, Acts 19:31, its popular "assembly", Acts 19:39. This city was considered as the guardian of the shrine of Artemis, Acts 19:35, of which the silversmiths made models and mysterious symbols called "Ephesian letters", copied from inscriptions on various parts of the image, Acts 19:19, and were used as amulets and charms. At that place he baptized some of John's disciples, Acts 19:2, 7, and made the city the center of activity for more than three years. At first he labored in the synagogue, then in the school or lecture room of Tyrannus, refuting Pagan errors and the imposture of sorcerers who publicly burned their books and confessed their fraud. At length at the instigation of Demetrius, a craftsman engaged in the manufacture of shrines of Artemis (Diana), he was assaulted during the great annual Pan-Ionic Festival, and compelled to depart hastily. So with Tychicus and Trophimus, Acts 20:4, he went to

TROAS

Where he was in great anxiety, 2 Cor. 2:12, about the effect of his letter to the Corinthians. At length the suspense became unbearable, 2 Cor. 2:13, and he decided to proceed to Macedonia and from there to press on to

PHILIPPI,

Where, at last, he received tidings by the coming of Titus, 2 Cor. 6:6, and then wrote in the fullness of a thankful heart his second epistle to the Corinthians. Then, with Titus, Luke, and Trophimus, he journeyed on to Corinth. He continued his labors in the northern part of Greece, and penetrated into the part about Illyricum on the eastern shore of the Adriatic Sea, Rom. 15:19, and with the approach of winter, removed to Achaia, and took up his abode at

CORINTH.

During his stay of three months here, he wrote the epistles to the Galatians and the Romans. His intention to sail to Jerusalem with the completed offerings for the poor was frustrated by a plot formed by the Jews against his life, Acts 20:3, and he then proceeded by land through Macedonia to

PHILIPPI,

While Sopater of Berea, Aristarchus, and Secundus of Thessalonica, Gaius of Derbe, Timothy, Tychicus, and Trophimus proceeded in advance to Troas. At Philippi the apostle stayed behind with Luke and there kept the feast of Passover, Acts 20:6. Then they sailed and in five days arrived at

TROAS,

Where they joined the other disciples. Here, on the last sabbath of their stay, Paul preached in the upper room, and Eutychus fell from the window, but was restored to life again by Paul, who amidst joy "broke bread" in the congregation and then they traveled by land to join his companions who had gone round by ship to a sea port of Mysia, opposite Lesbos.

ASSOS

At Assos they all embarked and landed at

MITYLENE,

The chief town of Lesbos. The next day they anchored off Chias, Acts 20:15, and the following day they put in at

TROGYLLIUM,

A promontory on the main land opposite the island of Samos. The following day they stopped at

MILETUS,

The ancient capital of Ionia. From this place Paul summoned the elders of Ephesus and took leave of them in a very solemn address, Acts 20:18, 35, warning them to tend the flock committed to their charge. Launching again, they sailed with a fair wind past Coos and Rhodes to

PATARA,

A sea port of Lycia, where they changed vessels and embarked on one sailing direct to Syria. Sighting Cyprus and leaving it on the left hand, they sailed direct to the port of

TYRE,

Where their vessel was due to unload its cargo, and the apostle was privileged to remain in the society of Tyrian Christians, Acts 21:4. At length, in spite of warnings of danger, and after a solemn farewell on the seashore, he went to

PTOLEMAIS,

The modern Acre. Here ended the sea voyage, and after remaining one day the little company started out on foot for

CAESAREA

And found a home in the house of Philip the evangelist, Acts 21:8. It was at Cæsarea that the prophet, Agabus, bound his own hands and feet with Paul's girdle, thus signifying the apostle's approaching imprisonment. Luke and others implored him not to go up to Jerusalem, but it was all in vain. While Mnason of Cyprus, "an early disciple", Acts 21:16, he started out by land for

JERUSALEM,

Where they were received by a full assembly of the apostles and elders who advised Paul to consult the prejudices of his countrymen, and prove himself an observer of the Jewish law, by joining four men in the completion of a Nazarite vow and defraying their expenses, Acts 21:20-25. He did so but afterwards was seized by a tumultuous mob, who would have torn him to pieces had it not been for the intervention of Claudius Lysias, the Roman commandant, who extricated him from their cruel hands and eventually sent him to Cæsarea, to the governor, Felix, Acts 23:26-35.

SUBJECTS FOR STUDY

TWO RESURRECTIONS

After submitting the following two articles on the above subject, one by W. M. Grant of Edinburgh, the other by D. Campbell, Mrs. Chaplin writes, "I would like to see an answer to this question on Rev. 20:5. Does this fifth verse belong where it is placed by the translators? In the Syriac translation it is entirely left out."

WHAT IS meant by the first resurrection? Rev. 20:5. Does it imply a second, and what is the order or arrangement?

The Scriptures plainly show that at the second appearing of Jesus Christ there will be a resurrection of the dead, which will comprise both just and unjust, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that everyone may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." 2 Cor. 5:10. The judgment takes place at the appearing of Christ. "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom."—2 Tim. 4:1. Although the Revised Version deprives us of the strength of the little word "at", yet it must be very evident, that the judgment of the living and dead is so linked with His appearing and kingdom that they are concurrent.

Will there, then, be another resurrection, a second? When and for whom? If we would answer in the affirmative, we would say at the end of the thousand year reign of Christ, for such as die during that period. We know the sinners will die. "There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed."—Isa. 65:20. "But every one shall die for his own iniquity."—Jer. 31:30. This being the case, why, then, raise him and judge him again? Has he not already been condemned and punished? There seems a lack of evidence that the righteous (subjects, mortals) will die. If there were clear evidence that they will die, it would necessitate their resurrection at some subsequent period, either during or at the close of the thousand years, and that might be called "second" resurrection. But why should they die? Will not the Law Giver and Life Giver be then on earth? When they ripen like the full ear, may they not be changed, as the living are at the beginning of Christ's reign? We cannot dogmatize. The evidence seems sufficient to decide.

To return to the passage in question, does first always imply second in sense of time? Not necessarily. From the passage already quoted it is inadmissible that all who come forth from the grave at the second appearing of the Lord will be accepted, for some come forth to judgment. "And now, little children, abide in him; that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming."—1 John 2:28. All do not abide in Him, and consequently some will be ashamed before Him, because found naked, Dan. 12:13; although this class arise from the dead. They come forth to the time of judgment.

The righteous are counted worthy. They are children of the first or chief resurrection. Over them the "second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."—W. M. Grant, Edinburgh.

ANOTHER STUDY OF THE SAME SUBJECT

WHAT IS meant by the first resurrection may be gathered from the application of the term in the only place where it occurs in the Scriptures, namely, Revelation 20:5. In the immediately preceding context the Apostle John says, "I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, . . . and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."—Rev. 20:4. And at the 5th verse he explains, "This is the first resurrection." The term, therefore, is clearly applied to those who are counted worthy of the state of glory, honor, and incorruptibility; to which the true brethren of Christ will be introduced by a resurrection from the dead at His coming. Does it imply a second resurrection? Undoubtedly; but not necessarily in point of time; probably in point of rank. The original for "first" is protos, and this word is very frequently used in the New Testament in the sense of rank. In Luke 15:22, Acts 25:2, and 1 Tim. 1:15 it is translated "best", "principal", "chief", and the meaning it carries in these cases would appear to be its meaning in the passage specially under notice: for it is said, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power." And again, those who lived and reigned with Christ the thousand years, "This is the first resurrection", whereas we all know very well, from other parts of the Word that not all who are comprehended in "the first resurrection" in point of time are "blessed and holy". A second resurrection in point of time may, however, be fairly contended for on the strength of the words, "the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished."—Rev. 20:5.

True, some hold that the rest of the dead are the wicked remainder, who, rising from the dead at the appearing of Christ, are adjudged unworthy and that the words "lived not again until the thousand years were finished" just mean that those wicked ones, although necessarily living at the beginning, are not permitted to live until the end of the millennial age, but during some part of its course come under the power of the "second death".

In the 3rd verse of Revelation 20 the phrase "till the thousand years should be fulfilled", is used in a sense, altogether different from this. In the sense, in fact, which would just strike the reader as its true sense in the 5th verse: namely, as signifying that not until the end of the thousand years would a certain event occur, or a certain state of things—a state of things quite non-existent during the thousand years—begin to obtain. But, while evidently implying a second resurrection in point of time the statement that “the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished”, does not appear to me to cover all who may come forth in such a resurrection. It seems to have specific reference to those who shall constitute the abiding results thereof.

These latter live in the end of the millennial age in the same sense, that the constituents of the “chief resurrection” lived at the beginning, i.e., they live for ever and relatively to them form a “rest”. Indeed, “the rest” or “remainder” of the human race upon whom the gift of immortality is bestowed, relative to the first or chief resurrection also constitute, or belong to, a second or inferior resurrection inasmuch as, although attaining to honor and incorruptibility, they do not participate in, but are the outcome of, the thousand year reign of Christ and the saints. As to the order and arrangement, we have it set forth by the Apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 15:23, 24. “But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ’s at his coming. Then cometh the end (rank or last band), when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father”.

—D. Campbell, Glasgow.

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

“THE SONS OF GOD”, GEN. 6:2, 4

IN CONNECTION with the thoughts introduced last week on this question, the reader should study Gen. 6:4—“There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.” It is very evident from the reading of this text that the giants of those days were the offspring of the “sons of God” and “the daughters of men”. These giants were a different race than was the race of Adam. It was apparently because of this developed condition that Jehovah said, “My spirit shall not always strive with man.” In this developed condition “God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth.”—V. 5. “And the Lord said,” v. 7, “I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; . . .” The apparent reason for this destruction to be brought about by the flood was that “God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.” V. 12. The word “corrupt” in vv. 11 and 12 is the same word as is the word “destroy” in vv. 13 and 17. That is to say, this new condition of life upon the earth had in theory destroyed, by destroying the purity thereof, the Adam family, therefore, God was to destroy that family in fact.

That this is the thought of inspiration in this chapter is again discerned in v. 9, where the word “generations” in the beginning of the verse has reference to family history, while the word “generations” in the end of the verse is a very different Hebrew word, meaning “his contemporaries”, that is, the generation that was then living at the time that Adam was living. Regarding the generation that was then living, v. 9 says, “Noah was a just man and perfect in his generations, and Noah walked with God.” But the majority of the people of the generation then living were not perfect, therefore, they were to be destroyed. The Companion Bible notes that this perfection does not pertain to morality. It is the word that is rendered “without blemish”, and other similar expressions, very frequently in describing the perfection of the animals that were to be used for sacrificial purposes. They were to be perfect in body; unblemished.

Noah, in Gen. 6:9, was thus perfect. He was perfect as a descendant from Adam. The others were more or less confused in their blood with the blood of the sons of God. They were giants; they were men of renown, of great name, of great wickedness, being able by the strength of their stature to enforce the wickedness of their hearts upon others.

It was for this purpose, namely, to cleanse the earth from this polluted strain of posterity, that God brought the flood in the days of Noah. Had He not so done, the seed of the woman that was to bruise the serpent’s head might not have been possible: for in Noah’s day, sixteen hundred and fifty years after creation, there came to be that great intermingling and confusion of species, which necessitated God’s righteous judgment unto destruction. This, again, seems to be reason sufficient in itself for believing that the “sons of God” referred to in vv. 2 and 4 were a people different and distinct from the Adam family. The passages in 2 Peter and Jude, as recited last week, offered an answer as to who these people were. It is fully according to the language in v. 4 that the giants were the descendants of the combination revealed in this chapter.

God willing, we will undertake next week to trace these giants.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE

THE BIBLE holds the distinction of being the first printed book, and the King James or Authorized Version of the Bible is to-day the best-selling book in the world.

The Bible contains 3,536,489 letters, 773,693 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books.

The word “and” occurs 46,277 times and the word “reverend” but once.

Ezra 7:21 contains all the letters of the alphabet except “j”.

The 19th chapter of 2 Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike.

The middle verse of the Bible is Psalm 97:8.—Selected.

It is said that the statements given above are the result of a Spanish prisoner’s labors in the solitude of his dungeon during a period of thirty-three years.

MESSIAH TO END STRIFE

By Samuel J. Williams

(Written for United Press)

A NEW MESSIAH who will become King of the Jewish nation and whose appearance will put to an end the next world war is predicted by the orthodox Jews in Palestine.

TO BE SUPERMAN

They declare that He will be a superman and that His kingdom will be a great center from which will radiate peace and brotherhood extending throughout the entire world.

The revelation of the Messiah will be preceded by the rebuilding of the temple, they say, adding that this will cause the enmity of many nations, especially those of the Moslem world. The last world war will focus itself in Palestine, and at the critical moment when all appears lost, the Messiah, coming from heaven, will gain a decisive victory, according to the predictions. It is said He will immediately be proclaimed King, the first King of the Jewish nation in twenty centuries.

Of the 150,000 Jews in Palestine, most of whom have returned there from the four corners of the earth since the war, at least 50,000 are expecting developments to rapidly transpire until at an unexpected moment the Messiah will be revealed. "The Jews are praying every day for the coming of the Messiah," declared the president of the town council of Peta Tikva, the largest Jewish agricultural colony in Palestine.

TO BRING GOOD

"The Jews believe that sometime a Messiah will come who will bring good not only to the Jews but to the whole world," remarked D. Smithson, who was decorated for distinguished service in Palestine during the war. "This idea is spreading throughout the country," he continued.

"The movement to Palestine, the settling on the land, and the building up of the Jewish national home is the forerunner of the Messiah," declared Ephraim Sacks, formerly of Chicago, now president of the town council of the beautiful orange producing colony, Rehovoth.

The idea of the restoration of the temple just prior to the coming of the Messiah is soon to be realized, they hope. Ever since the destruction of their last Temple in 70 A. D., by the Roman Emperor Titus, the Jews have gathered daily at the famous "wailing wall" in Jerusalem, praying for the rebuilding of the Temple. The invasion of the Moslems in the seventh century resulted in the erection of the Mosque of Omar, the third most sacred shrine of performance of the sacred rites of the ruined Temple.

"The Mosque of Omar will be torn down soon and a wonderful Temple like Solomon's shall be built there," happily exclaimed a Rabbi as he was looking out over the temple area from the window of his synagogue.

Rumors are widespread that the specified parts of the temple have already been prepared in various countries, ready to be transported to Palestine and assembled at a moment's notice.

PETITION LEAGUE

A group of Jerusalem Jews have actually sent a petition to the League of Nations, asking for a portion of the old temple site to be awarded the Jewish nation. The tabling of this petition by the League has not daunted their hopes for a restored temple. So sincerely are they expecting it that a class of prospective priests are being taught the performance of the sacred rites of the temple sacrifices.

The restoration of the temple will create an intense animosity among the surrounding nations, they fear. "The nations of the world will fight against Jerusalem in the near future," declared one of the largest manufacturers in Jerusalem. "The leaders of the Jews sense the situation, but they are afraid to express their opinions publicly," he remarked.

The circumstances making possible a war in Palestine will be the withdrawal of the British administration, it is believed. The secretary of a synagogue in Jerusalem said to me: "The Jews have been waiting 2,000 years for England's help. A certain Rabbi, making a prophecy 700 years ago, foretold that the English would come into Palestine in 1916, but he also stated that they would leave Palestine before the expiration of a quarter of a century. This is yet to be fulfilled. Then he says that there will be a big war here. The last world war will focus itself in Palestine. The kings of the earth shall fight against the Jews in Palestine, but the Messiah will come, and cause the enemy to be utterly defeated.

"The Messiah will be recognized as the great world leader, the law of the Lord shall flow out of Zion and nations will learn of war no more," the Rabbis firmly maintain.—Selected.

PRIZE FIGHTS—AND FIGHTS

WHAT DOES GOD think of prize fights and fighters? David answers, Psalm 11:5—"The wicked and him that loveth violence his soul hateth."

What does God think of faith-fighters? Paul is God's spokesman, 1 Timothy 6:12—"Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life."

RESURRECTION

OUR LORD'S REPLY TO THE SADDUCEES CONSIDERED

By R. H. Judd

"If a man die, shall he live again?"—Job 14:14.

"Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not the God of the dead, but of the living. For all live unto him."—Luke 20:37-38.

FOR SOME TIME past this subject has been much on my mind. Upon no other subject are we so shut up to the Bible for information regarding it.

Resurrection is the keystone of Christianity; take this away and Christianity falls to the ground, for on this essential point it differs from every other religion extant. I have no sympathy with those who seek to compare the religion of Jesus Christ with that of Mohammed, Confucius, or Buddha. It is beyond comparison. The religion of Jesus Christ is a living religion, a religion of life in every sense of the term. The need of the world is life, both actual and spiritual.

As a preliminary to our subject, it will be necessary to enquire somewhat concerning that which makes resurrection needful, viz., DEATH. What is death? Our orthodox pulpits rarely, if ever, preach resurrection, because they profess to believe "there is no death; what seems so is transition." WHAT SAITH THE SCRIPTURE? Surely the words of our text most emphatically teach us that death is a cessation of animate being. If a man die, will he live again? He has lived, will he live AGAIN?

Quite recently, I had sent me a tract by Rev. Jas. Spilling, on the subject of Resurrection, and the writer says: "Death is the voice of Almighty God calling to us in this lower world from the serene heights of heaven, 'Come up hither.' Death is a kind of gateway from one world bright and beautiful to another world still more bright and beautiful. Thus regarded, death is not the foe but the friend of man, not a curse but a blessing." Are these definitions in accord with God's Word? To my mind, to say that "death is the voice of God," is not only denying Scripture, but is rank blasphemy; nor is such language too strong with which to condemn it. If death is God's call to "come up hither," then I say, and I say reverently, God's ways are at least open to very grave question.

Death comes in a variety of ways; often through the most appalling accidents, and the most terrible crimes. Such theory as we have just quoted makes God directly responsible for these occurrences. No, we cannot, and we dare not think God's methods are such. God does not call His saints to Himself by such terrible means.

"By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men." "The wages of sin is death."

We thus see that God's Word places sin and death upon an equal footing. It is surely, then, worse than presumption to speak of it in the terms of the writer we have quoted. He goes further, and says: "Natural or bodily death is not God's curse upon man, but His blessing." It would seem he must have forgotten Genesis 3:17-19—"And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it, CURSED is the ground for thy sake. . . . In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, til thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for DUST THOU ART, and unto dust shalt thou return," and other kindred passages. A theory, the logical outcome of which is to deny the Word of God so flatly, for that very reason must certainly prove itself untrue.

Space will not permit us to investigate further this portion of our subject. Enough has already been said to prove to us conclusively that death is a solemn reality, that it is the result of sin, that it is no friend, but a most dreaded foe, and even those who speak to the contrary, show by their actions that their belief is not well founded.

All have sinned, "none can by any means redeem his brother". Hence the need for a REDEEMER and RESURRECTION.

As before stated, our only source of information on this subject is Revelation; but thank God it is not meagre.

GOD'S MARVELOUS WAYS

"Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven: and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they."
—Deut. 9:14.

IT REQUIRES but brief consideration for one to realize that God was abundantly able to carry out such emergency work relative to that "stiffnecked people" without in the least endangering the fulfillment of His promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Moses himself was a true descendant of the fathers and a nation developed from his family would also be of the family of the fathers to whom the promises were given. Just how God would be able "of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham," Matt. 3:9, may not be understood by us; but that God's ways are not man's ways and that God is able under all circumstances to complete His word and perfect the fulfillment thereof, has been repeatedly evidenced in all history.

Man is unable to always trace the serpent's path upon the rock, he is unable to pick up the wake of the huge vessel that passed yesterday over the ocean waves, or to discern the wake of the eagle that has sped through the air above; likewise, he is unable to discern the stream of racial progress, differentiating it from other races; but God, Jehovah, the great Creator and the great covenant God is able to follow and manage that people of promise and bring them yet unto the fullness and realization of His great promises to the fathers. He did not destroy them in the day of Moses, as spoken in Deut. 9:14; He did not make of Moses the nation there suggested; but since that time that nation has been scattered earth-wide. Though man cannot discern with definiteness the deviations and wonders of that people, still God is able to make complete His promises to Israel, by having preserved a true and faithful line of seed from which and with which to yet fulfill, in all the beauty and grandeur of reality, His oath-bound promise, as repeated to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

"If need be," said Christ, "the very stones can be made to respond under the immeasurable, miraculous power of God to fulfill His promises."

MARRIAGE

ELSEWHERE IN THIS issue will be found one of four or five sketches by Melba Glanton Arlington on the very vital subject of the daily conduct and attitude of the Christian. Herald readers will profit by giving consideration to the thoughts therein.

Marriage, one of the subjects of which she treats, may also well be considered from the standpoint of its obligation toward God. It was the Father Himself who ordained the marriage relation for man and woman. This relation has been by the Father made a very basic condition through which He is maturing His plans for man. Without the marriage law, such as has been prescribed by God, there would be no known way for the preservation and continuance of any special family of man according as God has promised. There would be no way known to man for the training and developing of child-life unto godliness.

God commanded Israel, Deut. 6:3-15, to teach His commandments and instructions "diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes."

Without the home that is set aside by God-provided marriage, there would be little or no influence or control by the Christian parent over the growing family. Marriage and the home that is provided thereby is the one great cornerstone of all true social progress by the human race; accordingly, the vows of marriage in Christian lands and under Christian authority are always made as vows in the presence of and unto Almighty God. Marriage is not only a vow between two individuals each to the other, but it is a vow to the Father in heaven, really in recognition of the great truth that He more than any human being is the interested Party in that particular marriage. Accordingly, the vow, having once been made, is a vow for mortal life, excepting under such emergency conditions as are by the Father revealed as being sufficient cause for the termination of the vow; and, even then, with one or two possible exceptions, those excuses are the result of either the husband or the wife having first broken the vow before God.

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? . . . He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not."—Psalm 15.

A BUDGET SYSTEM OF FINANCE

THE CHURCH at Oregon, Illinois has just completed its annual business meeting. Among the other things which were done was the introduction of the Budget Financial System in accordance with that advocated on the floor of the General Conference last August. This system was presented to the General Conference by a group of active workers after having given it careful study.

This system recognizes the need of local work to the fullest extent possible in each and every locality. It then recognizes the need that each and every local member cooperate in carrying the evangelistic work as conducted by the several State Conferences. In addition to this, it recognizes the need of all cooperating in the maintenance of the General Conference. Thus this system recognizes the cooperation of the individual in every branch of the church work. The evangelistic work mentioned is similar to what many denominations term home missionary work.

By the aid of the treasurer of the Illinois State Conference and the treasurer of the General Conference, it was ascertained that the members of the Oregon Church did, during the last year, distribute their pledges so that something over 60 per cent of the total amount of pledges of all Oregon members went to the local church; a little less than 20 per cent was pledged to State Conference; some over 10 per cent of the total was given to the General Conference. Thus, in practice, the proportions advocated on the floor of the General Conference were very closely approximated, which were that 60 per cent of the contribution be devoted to local work, 20 per cent to state or sectional work, and 10 per cent to General Conference work, leaving 10 per cent in the hands of the individuals for miscellaneous distribution as seemed best.

It was this system that the Oregon Church adopted at its last business session. The theory is that, by adopting this system, each and every individual will be made to realize more the proportionate needs of the different phases of the work; that each phase is necessary to the benefit of the whole proportionately, and that each one is taking an active part in all. One is not caused to contribute over largely in one direction because he feels that the work in that direction has been neglected by others or vice versa. Each one realizes a common and earnest effort upon the part of the church as a whole for a furtherance of all the work in a proportionate manner. Another advantage is that, when a person indicates a pledge that can probably be paid weekly or monthly, according to the time of his receipt of personal income, he realizes that said pledge covers practically all that he will be called upon to contribute for current expenses. He realizes that no church worker will be along the next day urging contributions for some other branch of the work. He can make contribution to the full of his ability with the knowledge that it is practically complete so far as maintaining current upkeep of the work. He also is brought to realize that, regardless of whatever special work may be undertaken by the local church or by the General, the current work must of necessity be first maintained in the local church, the State Conference, and the General Conference for the good of all.

All these realizations are both beneficial to the individual and are necessary to the furtherance of any continued program of work.

RESPONSIBILITY

By E. O. Stewart

JUST HOW much one should understand before he reaches the point where he becomes responsible as to his eternal destiny, is a question. If each person is given a certain number of talents, as Matt. 25:15 seems to indicate, how may we tell how many we have? Will we get any credit for gaining two talents if He gave us five? Is the man to whom He gave five talents responsible for five other talents, and will a failure on his part to gain five talents more result in his eternal damnation? Do these talents represent just what we must do to be saved, or do they represent different positions in the kingdom? Are repentance, faith and baptism talents? Do men become servants of God prior to faith, repentance and baptism? Did He give the five talents to baptized believers? If not, why did He call them servants?

Let us remember that He gave each man talents according to his ability. To one He gave one talent, but the one was not satisfied with what the Lord left for him to do. He saw some other man using five talents; he got jealous of his position because he could not do what his brother was doing, and sought to be honored with a position which he did not have the ability to fill. Thus, many become offended and bury their talents, sit down on the stool of do nothing and when the Lord comes all they will have to give Him is what He gave them at the beginning. This one was called a slothful servant. We will say he was a baptized believer, but he neglected the gift that was in him.

We see so much of that to-day. So many seem to think all there is to do is to repent and be baptized.

Brethren, to believe and be satisfied with such teaching invites slothfulness. It is a selfish way of looking at salvation, and causes people to be not fervent in spirit. If we were one-tenth as fervent toward the business God left us to perform, as we are about the other nine-tenths which we go about daily to perform, plus the folly and things to satisfy our lust for the improper kinds of pleasure, the church would lack for nothing.

As long as people use nine-tenths of their income for the necessities of life, and the other tenth for improper pleasure, they just have a form of godliness, but they do not allow it to affect them zealously.

THE PURE, UNDEFILED religion of Jesus Christ is the most unpopular thing on this planet. Many who extol it to the sky handle it as though it were red pepper—a little going a long way for every-day use.—Haney.

THE HOUR OF TEMPTATION

By Samuel E. Haney

THE FIFTY-NINTH chapter of Isaiah is unique in that it covers a period of thirty-eight centuries in which mankind mourns and groans under the penalty of sin—the result of disobedience. Christ was born in the center of this era; hence, nineteen centuries each of Jewish and the gospel dispensations. Notice how, at the beginning, God makes clear the accessibility of His aid, "Behold, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear." But as we peruse we see a disregard of this proffered aid, resulting in a portrayal of the effect of sin, primarily, of the Jews; secondarily, of the Gentiles (churchianity). The subject deals with Jew and Gentile as a whole, respectively. But Biblical history, observation, and experience prove there has always been a small minority of obedient ones who should be considered as we proceed.

"But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid (made Him hide) his face from you, that he will not hear."—V. 2.

What an arraignment the first fifteen verses is of both Jew and Gentile—fleshly and spiritual Israel! It was not until the Jewish "house" became entirely "desolate", at its approach to 70 A. D., that Isaiah's prophecy reached its zenith. Here the Jew was sadly reminded of Christ's words, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate."

The Jews, as a whole, were too proud, vain, and hypocritical to countenance the humble Nazarene, while in their midst speaking, and doing such miraculous things as no other man ever did—"He came unto his own, and his own received him not."

Note Jeremiah's germane prophecy, "For I earnestly protested unto your fathers in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice. Yet they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear, but walked every one in the imagination of their evil heart: therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do; but they did them not. . . . Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon them, which they shall not be able to escape; and though they shall cry unto me, I will not hearken unto them."—Jer. 11:7-11.

The Jews reached just such an inextricable plight in 70 A. D., at the destruction of Jerusalem, and the indescribable suffering, and death of 1,250,000 souls. How well all this dovetails with spiritual Israel—professing Christendom—ever since the apostles fell asleep; and as all Bible students see, the antitype is to end in the impending trouble, "such as never was since there was a nation." Statesmen and professional people in all walks of life know, whether they admit it or not, that it is humanly impossible for the race to extricate itself from an imminent, inevitable, world-wide catastrophe.

The period we now are in parallels with the days Christ was in the flesh. This is caused by the fulfillment of prophecies, through current events of both Old and New Testaments. While the present incipient nervous state of the race, and even of the physical earth, makes life a little precarious, it is interesting and helpful for Bible students to note with what accuracy Babylon's (including Christendom's) devotees are fulfilling prophecies. But first, let us take a concrete, and then, a detailed view of affairs in our day. The human race is in a nidus of sin—the center of infection. And "hell's" incubators, Luke 10:15; Prov. 27:20, are working overtime. Sin's slimy tentacles are slipping into every crevice of life, which is destined to lead to the final crisis, the downfall and destruction of all nations, just as it was in Noah's and Lot's days. 2 Peter 2:4-7; Jude 6, 7.

What "perilous times" these are! Life and death are in the balances! Paul's words, 2 Cor. 2:15-16, should arouse the most apathetic, "Because we are a Sweet odor of Christ to God, among THOSE who are BEING SAVED, and among THOSE who ARE PERISHING (being lost, Rotherham); to these, indeed, an Odor of Death to Death (out of death into death, Roth.); and to those, an Odor of Life to Life (out of life into life, Roth.); and for these things who is qualified?"—Emphatic Diaglott.

But Jesus says, "Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth."—Rev. 3:10. "This doctrine of the Second Advent makes one a calamity howler, and takes all the joy out of life." This remark, by an enlightened Christian, was overheard by the writer. The speaker voiced the sentiment of many in these closing days, and evidenced the fact that we are now in "the hour of temptation"; and also an intelligent desire of gratifying instead of "mortifying" the flesh, Rom. 8:12-14; choosing the way of the flesh rather than the way of the spirit, playing with the fire of Gehenna, the second death! Superfluous to say, these poor, deluded souls have yet to learn what real joy is. This is the crucial period. God help us all! Psalm 91:7.

"When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice: but when the wicked (a lawless man, satan the source, Roth.) beareth rule, the people mourn (sigh)." —Prov. 29:2. Christ's and Paul's (and myriads of others) experiences prove the Christian's status is not enviable, humanly speaking—"He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not"; "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things." "Blessed are ye that hunger now (after righteousness, Matt. 5:6): for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh."—Jesus. But, "Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woes unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep."—Luke 6:21, 25.

One cannot have both this world's "joy" and the joy of the Lord in his heart. This world's "joy" is superficial, a boisterous drunkard's laugh, the effect of Babylon's wine. But Oh! what a sickening afterclap: "And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb." "And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them."—Rev. 6:15-16; 9:6.

These are the days we need, "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."—Eph. 6:11. This can be accomplished only by a thorough, whole-hearted consecration. Anything short of this leaves a breach in our defense, a possible compromise, a retreat, and probably defeat.

WHY SO MANY DIVORCES?

By Melba Glanton Arlington

The marriage relation was ordained by God. It was so ordained because, according to God's creation it was "not good that man should be alone". It is undoubtedly equally true of woman. Divorce, then, is the result of man usurping the place of God and severing that which God ordained should be united.

Melba Glanton Arlington is herewith giving the readers of The Restitution Herald a few short sketches on the evils of divorce and some of the causes thereof. As this practice of divorce has so very much to do with the individual's prospect of salvation, we urge that young and old will not only read these sketches, but will also ponder over them and study through the Scriptures for even greater and deeper meanings and reasons regarding the evils of divorcement.—Editor.

ONLY A FEW years ago, divorce was considered a rather unusual occurrence, and to-day statistics prove that there are almost as many divorces as marriages. The causes seem to vary a little, yet back of each case lies one of four great reasons: jealousy, too much social life, lost love, and infidelity.

Love between two young souls is indeed beautiful: the girl glowing with excitement as she displays her new engagement ring, the boy floating in the air, mentally, as he dreams of his future with the "only girl in the world".

Often, father or mother object to the suitor, or the girl, but I believe that every young person has a right to choose his or her life mate, provided proper age has been reached. Parents may advise, but the heart must guide the individual. Many lives have been wrecked and homes broken because parents insisted upon choosing the life partners for their children.

True, girls and boys often mistake passion for love, and marry the wrong one, but nine times out of ten, if outsiders will allow them to become adjusted, they will get along very well.

After the engagement comes the wedding. It may be a simple, home wedding; it may be a gorgeous affair; or it may take place in the office of the Justice of the Peace, or in the parsonage; but the fact remains, the vows are always the same. Those vows used to mean more to men and women than they do to-day. Twentieth century folk seem to think that it is only a form of the law, which they are compelled to comply with. Here is where the first tragedy of married life begins.

We solemnly vow before God to take this mate "for better or for worse, until death do us part". In Ecclesiastes 5:4 we read, "When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed." Regardless of nationality or creed, we must know that a Supreme Being exists and that the teachings of the Holy Bible are morally uplifting and correct.

Not long ago I heard a young girl say, "Well, I am going to be married soon. I don't know whether I will like married life or not, but if I don't, I can always get a divorce and try someone else." The vow is not even considered and soon she visits the divorce court. Then will she not learn that the "someone else" is human and has faults also?

I once knew a young woman who obtained a divorce from her husband of two years on the grounds of incompatibility of temperament. She complained that he drove her nearly insane because he insisted on sitting quietly and looking at her instead of talking. Two or three years later she married again. Now the queer part is this: she has married a man who talks too much and he drives her nearly frantic with his incessant and erratic chatter. So, you see, it is like jumping out of the frying pan and into the fire.

In every case the vow remains a vow, and if the condition seems "for worse", we must try to endure it. This however, we cannot hope to do unassisted, we must call upon God. There are two large animals in every home, bear and forebear, and if we would try to understand the other fellow's viewpoint just a little more, then exercise patience and love a little more, most of our troubles would soon vanish into the ether and be forgotten.

(To be continued)

GOD IS EVER delighted with men who put Him to the test and who venture upon His boundless power and grace. Mal. 3:10.

THE DAY OF THE LORD COMETH

By C. E. Randall

BEHOLD, THE DAY of the LORD cometh, and the spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee."—Zech. 14:1.

God is surety for the fulfillment of this prophetic statement. "Hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?"—Num. 23:19.

Prophets, in spiritual power, proclaimed the day's coming; Christ confirmed them with marvelous words and astonishing miracles; angels, divinely appointed, reiterated the solemn truth to the Galatians; Paul, by vision and special revelation, was made to know its certainty; and last of all, John was permitted to be "in spirit on the Lord's day" and to gaze upon its wonderful and marvelous activities, of which the "half has never been told."

The dawning of this new day is one of the outstanding certainties of the age, soon to be realized. Its breaking is rapidly approaching an unprepared world, who will flee to the dens and rocks of the mountain to hide their faces from Him "that sitteth on the throne". Rev. 6:15, 16. What a day for the unprepared! Nothing that man can do or attempt will forestall or prevent the coming of this day. The time of its appearance has been set and when the appointed time arrives it will be heralded by the heavens revealing our risen and ascended Christ. God has always set bounds for His pre-arranged labors and none have ever passed the limitations thus imposed.

Abraham was told that his seed should be strangers in a land not theirs, for hundred years; and afterward should come out with great substance. Gen. 15:13, 14. The appointment was kept. When Israel had been in Egypt the allotted number of years, they were delivered, and, true to prophecy, came out with great substance.

Daniel "understood by books" that the years of their captivity were drawing to a close. They were destined to seventy years of servitude and when the multiples of seven had been fulfilled, God delivered, even though it necessitated the overthrow of a world kingdom.

If the statements of the coming of the "day of the Lord" are of God, man cannot overthrow its reality and certainty and any attempt to do so will be to fight against God. Acts 5:39.

Therefore, if Scripture abundantly affirms the truthfulness of the statement, "Behold, the day of the LORD cometh," let us accept it and refrain from putting "far away the evil day", thereby permitting that day to come upon us unawares. Amos 6:3, 4; Luke 21:34. People are lying upon beds of ivory and couches of ease, little realizing that the "night is far spent, the day is at hand." Rom. 13:12.

Truly, the questions of the prophet are timely: "Watchman, what of the night? Watchman, what of the night?" "And what will ye do in the day of visitation, and in the desolation which shall come from far? to whom will ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your glory?"—Isa. 21:11; 10:3. To the world it is a "day of desolation"; to the church, a "day of hope".

Oh! that people would realize that "since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him."—Isa. 64:4.

Surely, as we catch the foregleams of this glory of which the "half has never been told", we will say with him who was "in spirit" in that day, ". . . come quickly. Amen. Even so, Come, Lord Jesus."

HOW MAY I BEST SERVE GOD?

By Grace M. Marsh

Andrew brought his brother Simon to Jesus for instruction.

Certain women ministered unto Jesus of their substance.

Samuel, as a small child, spent his time with Eli in the temple, ministering before the Lord.

Miriam and the women of Israel sang to the Lord because of His glorious triumph over the Egyptians at the Red Sea.

Dorcas "was full of good works and almsdeeds which she did."

Lois and Eunice, in a Christian home, trained Timothy in childhood in the faith for which he later became a missionary.

Abraham gave to Melchizedek, the priest of the most high God, "tithes of all".

Mary sat at the feet of Jesus and learned of Him.

Paul dictated some of his greatest epistles while in prison and continued his teaching until the time of his death.

John took the bereaved and dependent mother of his Lord into his own home.

A poor widow, having only a farthing to give, gave her all to the temple treasury.

The little Israelitish maid, serving as a slave in the land of Syria, told her master of a prophet in Samaria who could cure him of his leprous condition.

The Macedonian Christians made gifts even beyond their means to Paul and his associates to support them in their great affliction.

FOR WE KNOW THAT IF OUR EARTHLY HOUSE OF THIS TABERNACLE WERE DISSOLVED, WE HAVE A BUILDING OF GOD, AN HOUSE NOT MADE WITH HANDS, ETERNAL IN THE HEAVENS.—2 COR.5:1.

A COMMUNICATION from one of our active Berean classes requests an explanation of 2 Corinthians 5:1, which we have printed at the head of this page.

* * * *

If we were going to paraphrase that passage, we would put it something like this: For we know that if our present condition of living should come to an end, we have an eternal life, not produced or passed on by man, in Christ with God in heaven.

* * * *

Another passage teaching the same thought is Col. 3:3-4—"For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

* * * *

The life of the human race has been forfeited, and each mortal man knows that ere long his earthly tabernacle shall be dissolved and he shall be laid away to rest, and even his body shall return to the earth from whence it came, while his breath returns to the great atmosphere from which it came.

In Gen. 2:7 the formation of man is clearly stated. God made him of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul. When, therefore, the spirit returns to God who gave it, or the breath returns to the great atmosphere from which it was taken, and the body returns to the earth, then the dissolution of this earthly tabernacle, this mortal house of existence, has taken place. Were there no other place to which one could look for hope, this death would be the eternal end of man.

* * * *

But Jesus the Christ has purchased life for us with His own blood. He, therefore, is our life. But He is with the Father in the heavens above, and hence Paul says that our life is hid with Christ in God, and that when He who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with Him in glory.

* * * *

But this eternal life, or building of God, is not made with men's hands. Furthermore it is permanent, and it is in the heavens, because Christ is there. Observe that the word "eternal", in 2 Cor. 5:1, is an adjective modifying house, not an adverb specifying how long it would remain in heaven. When Christ who is our life shall come and give that great possession of immortality to us our house will no longer be in the heavens.

* * * *

Verses 2 to 4 continue the same thought as given in verse 1. They show the suffering and discontent of this present order of life, and the longing for everlasting life. But Paul realized that even this life with all its sufferings is much more desirable than death, or no life at all, and therefore he said, "Not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life."

* * * *

And so it is that we pray not for death, but for the coming of Christ and the gift of immortality with which the faithful shall be clothed.

* * * *

If there are further questions on this particular matter, or on other points, that anyone would like to ask the Berean Page will be glad to handle them to the best of its ability.

THOUGHTS

ARE we going to send the child out across the sea without any protection against the storms of life that are bound to come and beat against it? How much more important is it to see that the child is adequately prepared from the beginning for a safe arrival in the haven of adult life. Eighty-seven per cent of adult converts fall away within five years, but not more than forty per cent of child converts, in the same time.

Therefore: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Not simply "tell a child", nor just "teach him"; but "train the child".

Telling is helping to know.

Teaching is helping to know and grow.

Training is helping to know and grow and do.

"The child mind," says Patterson DuBois, "is a citadel that can be taken neither by stealth nor storm, but there is a natural way of approach and a gate of easy entry always open to him who knows how to find it."

PART 30

THE DOWNFALL OF PAGANISM

(Daniel 11)

IN THE PREDICTIONS concerning the Western Roman Empire it is to be borne in mind that the prophet does not speak of it as "fallen" in the usual sense of the word, but as being transferred from the control of one set of its inhabitants into that of another, and this is exactly in accordance with the views of modern historians. Prior to the year A. D. 590 the State alone was authorized to make and execute laws; but after that date, chiefly by the aid of the Frankish invaders, and by force of certain circumstances, governmental power was shared in by the church, which during the following centuries gradually encroached on that of the State until in the days of Pope Innocent III., it claimed to be and was supreme.

"And after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully: for he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people."

The ruler to whom these predictions refer was Theodoric the Great (A. D. 455-526). "Theodoric the Ostrogoth, the fourteenth in lineal descent of the royal line of Amali, was born in the neighborhood of Vienna two years after the death of Attila. A recent victory had restored the independence of the Ostrogoths; and the three brothers, Walamir, Theodemir, and Widimer, who ruled that warlike nation with united counsels, had separately pitched their habitations in the fertile, though desolate, province of Pannonia. The Huns still threatened their revolted subjects, but their hasty attack was repelled by the single forces of Walamir, and the news of his victory reached the distant camp of his brother in the same auspicious moment that the favorite concubine of Theodemir was delivered of a son and heir. In the eighth year of his age, Theodoric was reluctantly yielded by his father to the public interest, as the pledge of an alliance which Leo, emperor of the East, had consented to purchase by an annual subsidy of three hundred pounds of gold. The royal hostage was educated at Constantinople with care and tenderness. His body was formed to all the exercises of war, his mind was expanded by the habits of liberal conversation; he frequented the schools of the most skillful masters, but he disdained or neglected the arts of Greece; and so ignorant did he always remain of the first elements of science, that a rude mark was contrived to represent the signature of the illiterate king of Italy. As soon as he had attained the age of eighteen he was restored to the wishes of the Ostrogoths, whom the emperor aspired to gain by liberality and confidence. Walamir had fallen in battle; the youngest of the brothers, Widimer, had led away into Italy and Gaul an army of barbarians; and the whole nation acknowledged for their king the father of Theodoric. His ferocious subjects admired the strength and stature of their young prince, and he soon convinced them that he had not degenerated from the valor of his ancestors. At the head of six thousand volunteers he secretly left the camp in quest of adventures, descended the Danube as far as Singidunum or Belgrade, and soon returned to his father with the spoils of a Sarmatian king whom he had vanquished and slain. (Gibbon: chap. 39.)

Such triumphs, however, were productive only of fame and the invincible Ostrogoths were reduced to extreme distress by the want of clothing and food."

"He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches."

"They (the Ostrogoths) unanimously resolved to desert their Pannonian encampments, and boldly to advance into the warm and wealthy neighborhood of the Byzantine court, which already maintained in pride and luxury so many confederate Goths. After proving, by some acts of hostility, that they could be dangerous, or at least troublesome, enemies, the Ostrogoths sold at a high price their reconciliation and fidelity, accepted a donative of lands and money, and were intrusted with the defence of the lower Danube under the command of Theodoric, who succeeded after his father's death to the hereditary throne of the Amali. . . .

"And he shall forecast his devices against the strongholds even for a time."

"But the faithful servant was suddenly converted into a formidable enemy, who spread the flames of war from Constantinople to the Adriatic; many flourishing cities were reduced to ashes, and the agriculture of Thrace was almost extricated by the wanton cruelty of the Goths, who deprived their captive peasants of the right hand that guided the plough. On such occasions Theodoric sustained the loud and specious reproach of disloyalty, of ingratitude, and of insatiate avarice, which could only be excused by the hard necessity of his situation. He reigned, not as the monarch, but as the minister of a ferocious people, whose spirit was unbroken by slavery, and impatient of real or imaginary insults. Their poverty was incurable, since the most liberal donatives were soon dissipated in wasteful luxury, and the most fertile estates became barren in their hands; they despised, but they envied, the laborious provincials; and when their subsistence had failed, the Ostrogoths embraced the familiar resources of war and rapine."

"And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south with a great army."

Pannonia, of which Theodoric was king, lies to the north-east of Italy, the land here spoken of as "the south". Some years earlier Odoacer, another foreigner, had deposed the emperor of the Western Empire, and was now a king, though he claimed to be merely acting for the Eastern emperor. The readiness, however, with which the latter agreed to the proposal of Theodoric, shows that he had some doubts regarding the real status of Odoacer,

JESUS PICTURES THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Mark 1:14, 15; 4:1-34

Devotional Reading: Psalm 145:7-13

GOLDEN TEXT

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.—Matt. 6:10.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

The Kingdom of God. In Mark, as in the other gospels, the teachings of Jesus seem to be grouped in four successive stages: the first part is given to the announcement of the King, the second part to the announcement of the kingdom, the third part reveals the rejection of the kingdom, and the fourth part reveals the rejection and crucifixion of the King. In Mark 4 are given different parables announcing the kingdom of God. It was the gospel of the kingdom that Mark, in 1:15, 16, suggested as the great theme of our Master. He revealed the benefits, the blessings, the rewards, the comforts, that attended the conditions of the kingdom of God. He also taught by the demonstration of His power that as King, He was able to bring about kingdom conditions most beneficial to man. The sick, the lame, the disabled were promiscuously benefited by His authority.

In Mark 4, Jesus illustrated the kingdom, not from the standpoint of works and physical benefits, but illustrated its development and growth by underlying principles fundamental to the development of the kingdom. These principles were the subject of His instruction and direction. The parable of the sower going out to sow, was explained by Jesus to show how the word of God must be received with confidence and faith and must be made the groundwork of conduct, if the individual is to bring forth fruits, that is, conditions of life and society, desirable by man and acceptable to God.

Kingdom Production. No one knows how it is that a seed, planted in the soil, breaks forth into life, grows to the bud, to the bloom, to the seed ripened for harvest. That it does so, is not questioned. The fact stands before the eyes in thousand-fold demonstration. Likewise, explained the Savior in parable beginning in verse 36, the words of God, the seed of the kingdom, has been by God planted into the heart of mankind. In God's own way, in His own time that seed will bring forth a harvest, that harvest will be the kingdom of God, in greatness, perfection and completeness. It will even come to be like the mustard seed, which, though it may be the most inconspicuous of seeds, grows into the largest class of shrubs; even to such largeness as to furnish shelter and comfort for such as come to it.

Questions on the Subject. Define the kingdom of God. Name some of its principal parts, its king, etc. What is the underlying principle, which creates and gives character to the kingdom of God? Which is more important; to learn the location, the geography, the politics of the kingdom of God, or to learn the underlying principles, the truth, the reality of the kingdom? Upon what one great principle has God established His kingdom? Name the most important truths for man to learn today relative to God's kingdom.—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Come may thy kingdom: accomplished be thy will, as in heaven, also on earth.—Matt. 6:10, Roth.

We, to-day, can just as truthfully and earnestly pray this same prayer, "Thy kingdom come." As yet it has not come, as some would have us believe. With the coming of God's kingdom, His will will begin to be done on earth, and why not pray for it and hope for its coming? In that time will the righteous King mete out righteous justice and judgment in the earth. He shall reign till all enemies are subdued, even the enemy, death, itself. "Lord, hasten that day."—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Invincible Word. "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God."—Mark 1:14. John might be cast into a dungeon, his tongue stilled in death, yet the message he proclaimed could not be stayed; for "the word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you."—1 Peter 1:25. The united forces of evil cannot hinder its progress, nor can the "gates of hell prevail against" the church founded upon its truth! Matthew 16:18. When the divine will permits one messenger to fall by the wayside, there is always another ready to grasp the banner of truth and bear it forward, ever forward, toward the eternal goal! We have wondered sometimes, as we sorrowfully laid some faithful old soldier of the cross in his final resting place, who would be able to take up the work he had been forced to put down. But God ever provides witnesses of His choosing, and the glorious work goes on! What an inspiring thought, that you and I are engaged in an effort that cannot fail,

"Till earth's remotest nation Has learned Messiah's name!"

The living word. "The seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how."—Mark 4:27. The gospel of the kingdom of God is a living word. It contains a vital principle which cannot die. It has power to generate within the penitent heart of the believer the "new creature" life of the Christ-body. Planted in "an honest and good heart", it will "bring forth fruit", even unto eternal life, Luke 8:15. We perhaps cannot understand the secret of its power and the manner of its growth, yet we can see the marvelous change that has overtaken the one in whom it has wrought the miracle of conversion. If Paul plants faithfully the "good seed of the kingdom", and Apollos waters, God will surely give the increase, 1 Cor. 3:6.—G. E. M.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Jesus telling the people about the kingdom.

The first mission of Jesus to this world was to preach the "Good news" of the kingdom to His Jewish brethren. There was no great excitement about His preaching; His great burden was for them to repent of their sins, and believe His message to them.

For three and one-half years He tried in many ways to make them understand Him. He used parables to show them the moral, political, humane, and spiritual side of His subject. Just a few out of the many who heard Him believed His words. But the multitudes followed Him to see His miracles performed. They seemed to forget what their Scriptures said in Isa. 7:14 and 9:6, 7, concerning this child; and what their prophet, Daniel, had said in Daniel 2:44—"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed".

How blind they were. But there are many people today just as blind to their future welfare as were these Pharisees and Sadducees of old. Jesus wants us to understand how He loves us and will save us when He returns to this earth; for He is soon coming again.—M. A. W.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

The kingdom: Jesus' understanding of "kingdom" as demonstrated by His preaching and "bringing it at hand". Jesus' concept of "kingdom" contrasted with man's. The extent to which Jesus' concept is received and accepted by man.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

A real get-together day was enjoyed by the Chicago church on January 22. The service was held with Sr. Jessie Wilson, 625 North Long Avenue, and all were invited to stay for a cafeteria dinner at the home of Srs. Whitehead and Harsch, 5439 Ohio Street. Sr. Browning was in charge of the "eats" and a very fine meal was enjoyed by more than thirty.

This occasion was Bro. Siple's first meeting with the Chicago church for this winter, and it was very encouraging to see some new faces, and so many of the old ones together again.

MULLIN HIGH SCHOOL

The Herald is pleased to receive a copy of the well-edited, clean, attractive bi-monthly, The Tattler, published by the students of Mullin High School, Mullin, Texas. It is noted that Mary Belle Guthrie is Editor-in-Chief. Sr. Guthrie is one of our wide-awake sisters in Christian service. The Herald congratulates her in holding such a responsible place with her class. May the experience and responsibility not only fit her for life's duties, but also strengthen her to proclaim by pen the wonderful truths of the gospel.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

The St. Cloud church held its annual business meeting January 4th, laying plans for the year, and receiving reports of committees for the past year.

We paid off the mortgage on the church and at the Christmas program burned the mortgage. We expect to make a number of improvements on the church this year.

The work at the St. Cloud church seems to be in good condition. We trust God will continue to bless. Three are waiting for baptism.

There were 88 at Sunday School on the morning of January —, and the church was well filled at the evening service.

Brothers F. Daubanton and T. M. Savage were elected elders; Frank Noyer and Charles Thoms, deacons.

Mrs. T. M. Savage, Church Clerk.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The annual business meeting of the church at Los Angeles was held on January 8, 1928. The very favorable and thriving condition of the affairs of the church, financially and otherwise, as revealed by the reports covering the previous year's work, were most gratifying and encouraging to our people, many of whom come long distances at great personal sacrifice, in order to meet with us here.

In the election of officers for the ensuing year, Bros. Ernest Crundwell and Murl Cripe exchanged places, Bro. Cripe being appointed to serve as Sunday School Superintendent and Bro. Crundwell as deacon. With these exceptions, the election resulted in the entire group of officers for the past year being re-elected.

The appreciation of the congregation was expressed in the unanimous vote to have Bro. S. J. Lindsay serve as Pastor for this next year.

We meet for Sunday School at 10 o'clock and preaching at 11 o'clock each Sunday, at 264 West 42nd Street, Los Angeles, and when any of our brethren are in the city or vicinity we shall be very glad to have them meet with us and enjoy the service.

FROM THE NORTHWEST

Dear Bro. in Christ: On January 2nd I was called to go to a point in Lewis County, Washington, near the town of Winlock, to the farm home of Mr. Chas. Newbury. I had become acquainted with the family several years ago when they were living near Eden in the southwest portion of this state. They had attended meetings at that place and seemed deeply interested in the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. Afterward they moved to their present location. I visited at their home for a day almost two years ago, and their interest in the gospel truths still continued to increase. At that time Mr. Newbury had a sore on his lower lip. Later this developed into a malignant cancer. He went to a hospital for treatment, but after six weeks they declared it to be incurable. He and wife have a family of five children, three boys and two girls, all attending school. I remained with them for two weeks. In the evenings, when the chores were done, and supper over, we all gathered around a small table and engaged in an intensive study of the Word of God. It was very interesting to note how eagerly each one would turn over the leaves of the Bible to find and read the given references. On January 10 the father, mother, and five children were all obedient in baptism. Afterward we had the ordinances of the Lord's Supper and the Washing of the Saints' Feet, at their home. Others expressed a deep interest in the truth, and we hope for more results later on.

How grand and lovely it is to see a whole family starting unitedly to follow in the footsteps of Jesus. Though separations may come, yet if faithful, all will be reunited to part no more forever when the great Life-giver shall appear. The names of the parents are Charles and Hazel Newbury. The children are May, James, Helen, Charles, and Harry. May the dear Father bless and keep them in the love of the truth and obedient to the Lord.

On my way home I stopped over for a day at the home of Bro. and Sr. Keyser. It was a joy to meet these dear ones again, and to study with them God's blessed Word. Almost two years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and for a time his life was despaired of. He is much better now, but can only walk a short distance, as one side is still affected. They are strong in the faith of the gospel, and their delight is to converse on the coming of Jesus and His glorious kingdom.

Your brother in Christ.

A. L. Corbaley.

ADDISON COFFMAN

The quiet hand of death reached forth on January 21 and laid low an old pioneer, Addison Coffman, father of Samuel Coffman, of our Adeline, Illinois, congregation. Being past 84 years of age, he had been failing in health for some time.

Funeral services were conducted from the late home near Adeline on January 24, and the large concourse of friends and neighbors bore testimony to the place he held in the hearts of many.

JACOB E. BOYER

Was born December 1, 1847 and died at his home near Maurertown, Virginia, on January 10, 1928, aged 80 years, 1 month, 9 days.

His early life was spent in Powel's Fort Valley where he at one time had charge of a large iron furnace. Later he moved to Maurertown, where he lived his Christian life, respected and beloved by all until his death.

He was placed in a vault in Woodstock by the side of his beloved wife (she died in August, 1907) where they sleep together in the dust until the resurrection of the last day.

The Editor of the Woodstock (Virginia) Times, reporting Bro. Boyer's death, states that he heard several remark that they considered Bro. Boyer as nearly perfect as man ever gets in this life. That was high tribute to his integrity, but we feel it was well bestowed. The seventy automobiles laden with sorrowing friends paying last tribute to the deceased was further evidence of the high esteem in which he was held.

Bro. Boyer was an elder in every sense of the word. For years he had been one of the central pillars of the Church of God in Virginia. His sound, loving Christian advice will be keenly missed by those here struggling for eternal life. He will be missed in Bible study classes, as he was an excellent student, sound in faith, kind, considerate, and "apt to teach".

The burden he carried must now repose upon younger shoulders. When we realize the extent of that responsibility we ask, in the language of Elisha, for a double portion of his spirit. Perhaps we already have that, for bone of his bone, flesh of his flesh, and spirit of his spirit are his surviving son and daughter, Willie and Regina. In and through them Bro. Boyer still lives to help and aid in God's cause.

Thus again the enemy, death, wins a temporary victory and ends a beautiful Christian life. The victory will be short, for our Savior triumphed over death and will soon awake our sleeping brother to a full life, free from sorrow, pain and death. Praise be to God for that Blessed Hope.

Harry A. Sheets.

SOME SUNDAY SCHOOL THOUGHTS FOR SENIORS AND ADULTS

"From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 4:17.

The special mission of the light, as manifested through Jesus, was to reveal God the Father. But in thus revealing God the Father Jesus shed true light on every phase of human life—social, political, and moral—for He presented to man God's viewpoint and concept of each. He preached God's kingdom and brought it at hand by concrete works; and the concept of government that He thus presented was so entirely foreign to anything known to human thinking that no one could grasp it. A kingdom whose authority and dignity was maintained by honest, personal service to its lowest subjects was a thing unheard of; a kingdom whose king mingled commonly with even publicans and sinners was the idea of a man beside himself; a king whose direct followers and supporters were fishermen and tax collectors instead of soldiers was an impossibility; a king who spent his time teaching and encouraging those of his subjects who had sinned away their lives, and those who were outcasts because of poverty and sickness, instead of a king who spent his time looking after state affairs full of pomp and show, was unusual, to say the least; a king who taught and practiced love of enemies was a paradox—no kingdom could long hold out under such tactics. No wonder Israel rejected Jesus as her king. How could she believe and accept a thing so entirely outside the range of her thinking and experience?

But Jesus shed true light on every phase of life, and this concept of government is the true concept. Such a government is the only one that will endure.

And Jesus' concept of a kingdom is not widely accepted today, not even among adventists. How we glory in Peter's sword, and in fire from heaven to destroy his enemies; in the expectancy of widespread destruction. Of course we won't take part in it—we must love our enemies—we will only occupy places of glory and honor in the kingdom that rests on the ruins.—A. K.

FOR INTERMEDIATES

The one all-important message that Christ spent His strength and time in teaching, was the gospel or good news of the kingdom of God. Matt. 4: 23; Mark 1:14, 15. This He did through direct statements to His disciples and by parables to the multitudes. It was the one great objective of His ministry.

That He had been born to be King, our Savior full well realized. The prophets had all so predicted, and He frankly admitted the same to Pilate later. He was the King, and Israel was the kingdom. No wonder He performed miracles and proclaimed that the kingdom was at hand. But they would not accept. And so, the kingdom being rejected by these people, our Savior sowed the seed, which shall, at the time of His coming, produce a real, genuine kingdom, growing to fill the whole earth. The hope of the world depends on the coming of this kingdom; hence, it was the main theme of our Savior.

Has the kingdom been established yet, or will it be set up at the return of Christ? Matt. 25:31; 2 Tim. 4:1.—F. E. S.

It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

JESUS PICTURES THE KINGDOM OF GOD

(Mark 1:14, 15; 4:7-13)

FIND A PICTURE of a mustard plant and keep it before you while you listen to the stories Jesus told to the multitude by the Sea of Galilee.

He sat in a boat by the seashore and talked to the people on the land. They listened very attentively to the stories He told, although very few of them really understood the real purpose or underlying thought. We call these stories parables. They say one thing is like some other thing, or represent that thing by a well-known object. For instance, Jesus asked, "Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel or under a bed?" He really did not want to teach about a candle, but about His own words, which were not to be hidden for all time.

All of His listeners had ears, but not all "ears to hear"—to hear the real thought of the parables. To the disciples He explained most of these lessons, and from them we try to have ears and learn too.

The stories this day were mostly about planting seeds and growing plants. All of you have seen seeds sprout and the plant develop; yet how many of you can see or tell how it is done? Jesus said just so was the kingdom of God—first the seed, then the blade, then the ear, and then the full corn or grain in the ear. Lastly, in proper time, comes the harvest, when all is gathered in for many useful purposes. Now, the seed of the kingdom was the "word of God", which, planted, will grow in many ways; and eventually bring forth many to the harvest, or eternal kingdom.

Jesus spoke of the mustard seed in particular to illustrate this thought. It is the very tiniest seed; but when it is sown and grows up, it sends out great branches, so strong that birds may lodge in its shade. And while the kingdom of God had such a tiny beginning, yet it will grow and spread until it covers the whole earth.

Of course it makes a big difference what kind of soil receives the seed. Jesus illustrated that by explaining that some seed fell by the wayside, and the birds ate it up; some fell on stony ground where there was so little soil that after it sprung up it could not take root. Then when the sun shone hot on it, it died. Other seed fell among thorns which choked it out. And yet other seed fell in good ground and bore excellent fruit.

Later, Jesus explained this parable to His disciples. He said "the word" was the seed. The birds were the evil which took the seed out of the hearts in which it had been sown. The seed on the stony ground represented people who heard gladly, but when trouble came could not endure, and forgot the "Word". The seed among thorns were those which received the gospel, but the thorns of worldly affairs choked out their spiritual life. And you know what the good soil is, and what it does.

The questions for you and me are: Are we being good soil? Do we have ears, and are we hearing with our ears?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Find some mustard seed. Put some of it into water and see what it will do. Later, plant some in different kinds of soil, and watch.

2. Write me all the ways you can think of in which we may help the growth of the kingdom plant.

MEMORY VERSE

7. Acts 17:10.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Are we helping scatter "the seed" and helping in the tending of the plants?

TINY TOTS

JESUS TOLD the people who came to hear Him that God's kingdom was like a plant. First it was a little seed—just a few people. Then it grows up, like the plant, and will have many people.

And, like the plant, while we are little we can do little things for God. Then when we grow older we can do more and greater things for Him.

WE NEVER KNOW

*"I spoke a word,
And no one heard;
I wrote a word,
And no one cared
Or seemed to heed;
But after half a score of years
It blossomed in a fragrant deed.
Preachers and teachers all are we,
Sowers of seed unconsciously,
Our hearers are beyond our ken,
Yet all we give may come again,
With usury of joy or pain.
We never know
To what one little word may grow.
See to it, then, that all your seeds
Be such as bring forth noble deeds."

PAUL'S MISSIONARY WORK

By Lyman Booth

THE VOYAGE TO ROME WITH LUKE ARISTARCHUS, AND CERTAIN PRISONERS UNDER CHARGE OF JULIUS, A CENTURION OF THE AUGUSTAN COHORT.

Acts 27 and 28

TIME: A. D. 60.

HAVING APPEALED from the tribunal of Festus to that of the Emperor of Rome, Acts 25:11, Paul sailed from

CAESAREA

In a ship of Adramyttium, a seaport of Mysia, in charge of Julius, "a centurion cohort". Acts 27:1. They first landed at

SIDON,

Probably for the purposes of trade, and the apostle received, on shore, the kind attention of friends. They thence sailed "under the lea", Acts 27:4, that is, along the north side of the Island of

CYPRUS,

And thence across the sea, which is off "Cilicia" and Pamphylia to MYRA.

A direct course would have been straight to Patara, keeping to the south of Cyprus. At that time Myra was a flourishing seaport of Lycia. At Myra the centurion found an Alexandrian corn vessel bound for Italy and transferred his cargo into it, and sailed laded with a heavy cargo besides 276 persons on board. Owing to very unfavorable winds, it was only after many days, Acts 27:7, that they arrived at

CNIDUS,

A promontory of Caria, at the extreme southwest of the peninsula of Asia Minor. From this point the wind drove the vessel out of its course to the south to

SALMONE,

The eastern promontory of Crete. It was with difficulty and by keeping in the shelter of the southern coast that they worked their way to

FAIR HAVEN,

Near which and about five miles to the east, was the city of Lasæa. Paul advised them to anchor there for the winter, but owing to the shallowness of the harbor they resolved to try to reach

PHENICE,

The town of palms, a harbor looking northeast and southeast. Weighing anchor, they set sail, but were caught in a violent wind, called Euroclydon, Acts 27:14, "beating" down from the heights of Ida on the Cretan shore, in heavy squalls, and eddies and drove the helpless vessel where it willed, until the ship was under the lea of

CAUDA, OR CLAUDA,

An island, Acts 27:16, southwest of Crete. With much difficulty they succeeded in hoisting on board the boat, which they were towing behind. Acts 27:16. Then they tried to undergird the vessel by passing strong cables around the hull, and being afraid they would drift on the syrtis, a dangerous sandbank north of Lybia, they lowered the gear, Acts 27:17, and sailed slowly before the wind. On the next day they lightened the ship by throwing the freight overboard, Acts 27:18, and on the third day they threw out the tackling (probably the mainyards) of the ship. At midnight of the fourteenth day, as they drifted to and fro in the sea of Adria, Acts 27:27, they thought from the noise of the breakers they were nearing land, and after sounding they lowered four anchors from the stern, and on the next day ran the ship aground on a creek, where two seas met, off the island of

MELITA OR MALTA.

At that time this island was not well cultivated, and was inhabited by a population of Phenician origin. By swimming and floating on portions of the wreck they finally landed. The people of the island received them hospitably, kindled a fire, and welcomed them to its genial warmth. A viper fastened itself on Paul's hand as he was gathering sticks. At first the people thought he was a criminal of some kind, but when he flung the viper into the fire and received no harm they regarded him as a God. Paul healed the father of Publius, the chief Roman officer of the island, who was afflicted with fever and dysentery, and after a stay of three months they sailed in another Alexandrian corn vessel called "The Twin Brothers", Acts 28:11, and arrived at

SYRACUSE,

The chief city of Sicily, where they tarried three days, and from there they turned northward toward the straits of Messina, but the wind being against them they were forced, after making a circuit, Acts 28:13, to turn into

RHEGIUM,

At the extreme southwest of Italy, where they remained one day. On the following morning they arrived at

PUTEOLI OR POZZUOLI,

In the bay of Naples, at that time the regular harbor for the Alexandrian corn fleet. There they rested seven days, and visited with certain of the brethren, and then journeyed by land to

APPII FORUM,

About forty miles from Rome, where a welcome company of brethren met them, and the apostle "thanked God, and took courage." Acts 28:15. After going ten miles further they arrived at the

THREE TAVERNS,

Where they were met by a second company who greeted them cordially, and thus at length the apostle arrived at the Imperial City. In A. D. 61 Julius turned Paul over into the hands and care of the Prefect of the Prætorian guard, after a very hazardous journey requiring about a year, which at present-day methods of travel would require but a few days.

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

“THE SONS OF GOD”, GEN. 6:2, 4

CONTINUING THE answer to the question on the above text, the reader's attention is called once more to the words of the text. “There were giants (nephilim, Hebrew) in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.” The Hebrew word, nephilim, is here translated by the English word “giants”. This progeny of giants, nephilim, were “mighty men”, “men of renown”, they filled the earth.

In last week's statement on this question, it was noted that only Noah, with his family, was pronounced “perfect in his generation”; that is, a pure descendant of Adam. It was for the destruction of this race of imperfect, and ungodly people that God, 2 Peter 2:5, “spared not the old world” and brought “in the flood upon the world of the ungodly”. This same word nephilim is used in Numbers 13:33, which reads: “And there we saw giants (nephilim), the sons of Anak, which come of the giants (nephilim).

The inspired Record announces that giants, nephilim, like unto those of the day of Noah, confronted Israel in her spying out of the land of promise. Do you ask how such giants could exist in 2514 A. M. when the flood had destroyed all such in 1656 A. M.? Genesis 6:4 answers. Moses was the writer. He was living with that generation of Israelites which lived from 2512 A. M. to 2552 A. M. and was speaking of Noah's day when he said, “There were giants (nephilim) in the earth in those days (Noah's days); and also AFTER THAT”. The origination of the giants was from the same cause, both in the days of Noah and in the days “after that”. It was a new generation of giants, having been brought in after the flood, which the children of Israel met in the land of Canaan, and, as God had destroyed one generation of giants by the flood, so He afterward assigned to Israel the task of utterly exterminating that second ungodly, impure, domineering people. Numbers 13:33 speaks of these giants as being both the sons and the ancestors of Anak, that is, Anak's ancestors were giants, nephilim; as were also his sons. The Anakims were one family or tribe of the nephilim.

The giants were frequently called Anakims, as in Deut. 1:28. In Deut. 2:10 they were also referred to as Emims, as well as Anakims, and these Emims, v. 11, “were accounted giants, as the Anakims”. The children of Ammon were also reckoned with the giants, vv. 19-23, and “the Ammonites call them Zamzummims; a people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims”. The people of Bashan were also reckoned with this number: “Og king of Bashan remained of the remnant of giants; behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron; . . . nine cubits was the length thereof, and four cubits the breadth of it.”—Deut. 3:11. If the cubit was twenty-one inches, then his bedstead was over fifteen feet long and seven feet wide. Read chapters 1, 2, 3 of Deuteronomy.

The overthrow of this people will be studied next week.

THE GREAT TRIBULATION

By John W. Burget

AND WHEN ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh . . . for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.”—Luke 21:20, 23, 24. “For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.”—Matt. 24:21.

This tribulation is upon God's people, the Jews, and it began when Titus destroyed Jerusalem in 70 A. D. The times of the Gentiles, and the tribulation upon the Jews, will end at the same time. God's chosen people are now going back to their homeland, Palestine; therefore their tribulation is now ended,—or about to end.

“Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken.”—Matt. 24:29. Showers of meteors have fallen; but meteors are not stars. We should not look for those signs of the sun, moon, or stars, until after the tribulation upon the Jews has ended.

Does anyone believe, or think, that those monster stars of God's heaven, many times more extensive than our earth, could fall to our earth?

“And he (Joseph) dreamed yet another dream, and told it his brethren, and said, Behold, I have dreamed a dream more and, behold, the sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me. And he told it to his father, and to his brethren: and his father rebuked him, and said unto him, What is this dream that thou hast dreamed? Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren indeed come to bow down ourselves to thee to the earth?”—Gen. 37:9-10.

Take notice that Jacob interpreted Joseph's dream, which he dreamed: that the sun, moon, and stars did represent the chosen people of God.

Therefore, when Jesus said that the sun shall “be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven,” He did signify fallen disciples: for Jesus did foreknow that some of His disciples, members of the church of God, that He purchased with His own blood, would, in the last days, “depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils.” 1 Tim. 4:1.

HIGHER LEARNING AND THE BIBLE

THE NEW HISTORY

No. 3

By Norman John McLeod

NEWER investigations in the period of the oppression and exodus of the Hebrews in Egyptian history have presented many knotty problems. The problem of who the Pharaoh of the Exodus was is one that almost defies solution. Tradition and much investigation has generally assigned the role to Ramses II., but many facts make it appear otherwise.

All of the prominent pharaohs have been found either in their tombs or nearby. The mummy of Ramses II. rests in the museum at Cairo. If the pharaoh of the Exodus was lost in the Red Sea, how does it happen that his body rests in the tomb or at Cairo? How can the facts be harmonized? Ramses II. had ninety children, so that there grew up a whole class of nobles called Ramessids after their parent. Naturally when there were twelve Ramses on the throne foreigners began to call all of the rulers of Egypt by that name. Then when anyone belonging to the royal family was called Pharaoh, or Pero, meaning "The Great House," it is easy to see how confusion was easy. From this period of about 2000 B. C. the custom of sending a member of the royal house out to lead the army became prevalent.

General acceptance is usually accorded to the theory that it was during the reign of the Hyksos in Egypt that Joseph went there. Following their reign, the native dynasty was restored and lasted down to foreign conquest by the Assyrians. The Hyksos have since been shown to be the Hittites, a Semitic people related to the Hebrews. The kings who drove the Hyksos out spread the boundaries of the Egyptian Empire until they included Sinai and Palestine and all the land up to the Euphrates. Thutmose III., the "Egyptian Napoleon", ruled practically the whole known world. The date of the entrance to Egypt would thus be placed before this and would be about 2000 B. C. Following Thutmose III., came a group of religious kings who were weak in war and politics. Amenhotep II. changed from the worship of Amen-Ra to another god who he said was the only god. He changed his name so that it no longer included the name of Amen, and named his son Tut-Ankh-Aton, Aton being the new god. When Tut-Ankh-Aton came to the throne civil strife took place which resulted in his returning to Amen-Ra and changing his name to Tut-Ankh-Amen. This period of disorder is when the exodus most likely got under way, for it was then that Egypt's foreign enemies reconquered Palestine.

If the exodus were placed following Ramses II. certain facts would be hard to reconcile. He broke the power of the Hittites so that they would not have been in the Promised Land when the Hebrews came. He again spread his dominions over Sinai and Southern Palestine, so as to press the Philistines onto the Hebrews to the north. The year 1500 B. C. is the most logical from most points of view for the exodus, and that year found Tut-

Ankh-Amen on the throne of Egypt.

The new history establishes, rather than overthrows, the Bible stories of the oppression and the exodus.

WINDOW TESTIMONY TO THE TRUTH

DEAR SIR: I have hit upon a new plan of bringing the Truth before the general public, namely, by what I designate my "Window Pulpit". The idea is simply to write out a brief statement of fact, or criticism of error, and place the writing in my shop window, hard against the glass, so that dozens, who would never otherwise hear of our views, read the notices daily.

Although the plan has only been in operation a few weeks it has already borne fruit, and I have gotten in touch with several people who are interested, and two clergymen, at least, have spoken to me about the notices.

I append three specimens of the notices which perhaps may prove interesting to readers, and lead to others adopting the plan.

Yours in service,

John Balfour.

True, in the Old Testament it is not so prominent as in the New, but that there are many passages which clearly and unmistakably teach it cannot be denied. For instance, Psalm 49:15—"But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave (Sheol); for he shall receive me." Dan. 12:2—"And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." Hosea 13:14—"I will ransom them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death."

There are one or two instances of resurrection recorded in the Old Testament, but these are admittedly only of a temporal character. Christ alone brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. He alone is the Resurrection and the Life. He alone can give eternal life; a life by which we "cannot die any more."

The writer of the tract already referred to maintains that resurrection takes place at once, immediately at death, basing his teaching on Luke 20:37-38. He first introduces an argument against the resurrection of the body, much of which is of considerable force, and quoting as proof, "Thou sowest not that body which shall be"; though some of his arguments drawn from nature to my mind lack precision. For instance, he states we have a fresh body every seven years, and he then asks the question, "In which of these bodies are we raised?" We do not have a fresh body every seven years, but in the course of seven years every particle of old tissue has been replaced by new; and the new takes on the impressions of the old. This fact accounts for the wonderful memory and the retaining of life-long scars, etc. Memory is often used by orthodoxy in proof of separate personality.

They conveniently forget how much is forgotten.

He next endeavors to prove from 1 Corinthians 15:44—"There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body",—that we now have a spiritual body as well as a natural body; the latter is buried in the article of death, the former at once raised. It will be noticed that the whole of his arguments are based on the fact of the present tense being used in the verses quoted. Did these verses stand alone, much might be said in favor of his theory. After a little examination, however, we shall see how false the teaching is, and absolutely contrary to the Word of God. By insisting on the present tense used in Luke 20:37-38, he maintains, with apparent reason, that the dead are raised now. On turning up the passage, however, it will be observed that instead of beginning at the commencement of Christ's reply to the Sadducees he JUMPS RIGHT INTO THE MIDDLE. By such unfair treatment the plainest language may be distorted. Christ's answer to the Sadducees is conclusive—not in proving the dead to be alive, but that there is to be a resurrection of the dead—not in this age, but in that which is to come. Notice His words: "The children of this age marry and are given in marriage, but they which are accounted worthy to obtain that age and the resurrection of the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage." The continued use of the present tense throughout the passage will now be understood. It makes a future event more readily grasped. The passage clearly puts the resurrection as taking place in that age.

The Swedenborgian theory in no way accounts for the many passages where such terms as "them that sleep", "them that are asleep", "the dead in Christ", so frequently occur. According to them, death, often in the most hideous form, ushers them into the presence of God. As for me, I shall be satisfied when I awake in his likeness, when THE LORD HIMSELF shall descend from heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Oh, what a contrast! "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; upon such the second death hath no power." In what way does the theory we have been discussing recognize a first resurrection?

Many other points of our subject might be considered, such as "How are the dead raised, and with what body do they come?" Various theories have been put forward in the hope of solving this interesting problem—the Germ theory, the Identity theory, the Re-incarnation theory, and the theory alluded to in our remarks, which we might call the Spiritual Body theory.

I do not wish to discuss the probability or improbability of any of these. No doubt we all have our personal thoughts regarding them. These are not, however, matters of vital importance. God has not told us how He will raise the dead, but we have His promise that He will do so. Men and women around us are dead in trespasses and sins. Let us who have the light of God's Word see to it that they, too, get it.

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth JESUS AS LORD (Variorum Bible), and believe in thine heart THAT GOD HATH RAISED HIM FROM THE DEAD, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. 10:9-10. "Your fathers did eat manna (in the wilderness) and are dead: he that eateth of this bread (Christ) shall live for ever."—John 6:58. "And this is the Father's will which hath sent Me, that of all which He hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day."—John 6:39.

"In the world (age) to come, life everlasting."—Luke 18:30.

BEDOUIN FINDS TREASURE

A DESPATCH from London, dated December 30, tells of the discovery of ancient wealth in the ancient city of Petra:

Petra, a rose red city, "half as old as time", full of exquisite golden ornaments and engraved precious stones, is making Tut-ank-hamen's splendors look like a ten cent store's objects d'art which have come into the hands of eminent archæologists connected with the British Museum.

According to Westminster Gazette, a wandering Bedouin tripped on the "open sesame" to a labyrinth of underground passages that led to a treasure-house full of riches undreamed of even by the author of "The Arabian Nights".

Petra, deserted for centuries, is perhaps the most astounding city created by man. It is situated in Palestine on the edge of the trans-Jordan desert, between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Akaba, in a once populous valley shut in by precipitous cliffs of sandstone. Tombs, temples and houses chiseled out of red rock stand to-day almost as perfect as when they were occupied thousands of years ago.

The city was lost to European knowledge because the Arabs, in pre-war days, would not allow any one to come near the ruins. The German Archæologist, Burckhard, rediscovered the ruins in 1812, but since then, in spite of their efforts, scientists had never been allowed to pass through the gorge jealously guarded by the Bedouins. —Selected.

CHRIST IN PSALM

"Be not far from me; for trouble is near; for there is none to help."—Psa. 22:11.

By Samuel E. Haney

DAVID, in the twenty-second Psalm, prophetically couches events and conditions whose importance, time will prove, has no equal in the sacred annals of God's dealings with man. The first twenty-one verses refer to our Lord's mental and physical suffering. And in the last ten verses we recognize God's kingdom in operation, to which we shall refer later. After reading the first phase (21 verses), read Matt. 27:34-44 inclusive, and note how accurately David describes the greatest event that ever occurred in all the universe—the sacrifice of "the only begotten of the Father" by the most excruciating and ignominious death ever conceived of by demons and men.

While Jesus "paid it all" (John 19:30)—completed the ransom by His own precious blood (life)—a sacrifice which no one can either add an iota to or subtract from—and all that David says refers to the Lord; yet, there are several statements here that have always been applicable to the faithful followers of the humble Nazarene which are now uniquely impressive.

Every Christian having years of experience in the narrow way can recall periods in his babyhood and kindergarten days when he would have misgivings—feeling that God and everything holy had deserted him, and his soul would cry out in substance: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring? O my God, I cry in the daytime, but thou hearest not; and in the night season, and am not silent." Such moods are usually the by-product of severe illness, troubles or trials and sometimes all of these at once. Paul summarizes them as "tribulation". Acts 14:22.

It is at such times, when the babe in Christ is struggling for the breath of spiritual life, that the very demons of darkness seem to attack him, and his erstwhile friends turn their heels to him. Ever been there, reader? The writer has many times, but, by the grace of God, he managed to hang on to the Rock—the Solid Rock. And as a result, he has become "stronger in the grace that is in Christ Jesus". And O, how essential this heavenly strength is these crucial days! Not selfishly so, but that the strong might "bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves". Rom. 15:1.

Paul, addressing those approaching maturity in Christ, says, "As a good soldier of Christ Jesus accept your share of suffering. (No more as babes.) Every one who serves as a soldier keeps himself from becoming entangled in the world's business so that he may satisfy the officer who enlisted him. And if any one takes part in an athletic contest, he gets no prize unless he obeys the rules". 2 Tim. 2:3-5, Weymouth.

The world, knowing nothing of the Christian's joy, thinks it strange that he does not go where it goes, talk as it talks, laugh when it laughs; but the child of God, seeing the godless world posed on the verge of an abyss of misery, trouble and death, sees nothing to laugh about. He sees, and at times feels a reflection of verse seven, "All they that see me laugh me to scorn: they shoot out the lip, they shake the head", virtually saying, "A Pharisee! a religious fanatic!" Ever experience anything like this? Jesus did, and the writer also delights to boast of such honor. Luke 6:22. ". . . Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you". John 15:19, 20.

The nearer one lives to God and His Christ, the more concisely and explicitly David reflects his sentiment: "Be not far from me; for trouble is near; for there is none to help. Many bulls have compassed me: strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round. They gaped upon me with their mouths, as a ravening and a roaring lion". Psa. 22:11-13.

But there is a phase of this part of the prophecy that is inimitably confined to "the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David", e. g., the vicarious death of the Son of God, who "redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree". (Gal. 3:13.) "They pierced my hands and my feet. . . they part my garments

GOD'S RIGHTS

DEEPER and deeper does the realization of the truth sink into my heart that in every thing God has His rights. He created the earth and its fullness: all are His: He has rights therein. It is therefore right and proper that the fullness of the earth should yield to the Maker the rights that are His.

GOD'S RIGHTS IN MAN

Having made man and surrounded him with every good thing for blessing, God had right to require of Adam a service of life that would yield most, both to Adam, the creature, and to God, the Creator. When Adam failed, it was right and proper that God, the Creator, should judge him and should further plan to obtain His own rights. This He did, and we are all living under those plans.

GOD'S RIGHTS IN ISRAEL

It was not because of Israel's goodness, purity, or Godliness that she was chosen by the Creator to be His special people; it was because God loved Israel. Having fashioned Israel, having surrounded her with every good thing, having been her Strength to redeem her from captivity, having been her Provider throughout the barren wilderness, having been her Protector in the presence of frequent enemies, having been her Director in the ways of her marchings, having been her Leader as she entered the promised land, having been her All in all things to her, God in return had rights in Israel as none other had. These He demanded.

The refusal of Israel to respect His right brought upon Israel all of her sorrow and suffering. He plead with her over and over again, through prophet, priest and king, to yield Him His rights. Being denied He released her to the sorrows and agonies of those whom she served till she will His rights respect.

GOD'S RIGHTS IN THE CHURCH

The Christian is not what he is by virtue of any strides which he in his own strength has made; he holds his position as a new creature in Christ as the result of God's own merciful emplacement of him in his position. Was he a sinner? In return for his faith God forgave his sin and imputed righteousness. Was he weak? God's mercy made him what he is in strength. Was he without promise and without hope in the world? God in His own grace and mercy gave him both. Was he without God? God Himself exalted him into the great family of His Son. All that he is, all that the church or congregation of Christians is has been given by God.

Who, then, can say that God has no rights in the church? Is God's name to be proclaimed to the world? He has right to direct His favored Christian people to go into all the world and make that proclamation, to proclaim the gospel to every creature. Is the name of God's Son to be exalted? He has right to require the Christian man to exalt in his whole life-action that Son's name. Has He need to bring others into obedience and service? He has right to require of the Christian that he be the ambassador to go out and communicate with weak, erring man and instruct him in the ways of service unto the Father and His Son.

The Christian rightfully owes all things to God and His Son who have exalted him into the high position he occupies. God's rights are unlimited. The heeding of them returns many fold.

GOD'S RIGHTS IN THE FAMILY

It was God who ordained that man and woman should head the families throughout the ages. It was God who designed the great laws by which the race should be continued, enlarged, enriched, ennobled. God has rights in these families. Woe be to that father or mother, that husband or wife who ignores God's rights in their family relations. And woe be to that state, that public officeholder, and to the private or public advisor that aids and encourages the breaking of marriage vows; of vows that in the making God was implored to witness and sanction—breaking them in utter disregard of God's rights therein.

Man or woman has no more right to destroy the family relation than to undermine the very throne of God. The family is an institution of Almighty God. God's rights can not be lightly ignored.

GOD'S RIGHTS IN THE INDIVIDUAL

"For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's."—Rom. 14:7, 8.

Every individual is a creature of God's possession. God has rights in him or her. The recognition of these rights is to recognize the very dayspring of life itself. The denial of these rights is but to court evil, failure and final loss.

GOD'S RIGHTS

God has rights in everything in life. In every activity of the day God has a right to His share therein: a right to be recognized by the worker, a right to receive testimony from him, a right in every planning, activity, aim, and purpose of life.

Let us, you and me, above all other things, grant God His rights in every life-action.

TRUTH

By Lyman Booth

SANCTIFY them through thy truth: thy word is truth." John 17:17. These words were spoken by our Lord in His prayer in behalf of His disciples. They are a confession of His Father's truthfulness. His word is truth because "it was impossible for God to lie." Heb. 6:18. The Psalmist said, "The truth of the LORD endureth for ever. Praise ye the LORD." Psa. 117:2. Since God is the Eternal One, and it is impossible for Him to lie, His Word is unalterable, unchangeable. It can not be overthrown, neither does it need defense, because it remains forever the same. We need not worry because skeptics and infidels assail it, for it is able to care for itself, and also all who rely upon it. No matter how much men may oppose and discredit it, it will shine forever, while man's word will fail and be forgotten. Not one jot or tittle will ever fail of its mission until all shall have performed that whereunto it is sent. If we would have truth on our side we must first get on the side of truth and remain there.

Truth has its strength in the Almighty, in the principle of infinite love. The hills and mountains may crumble and be washed into the sea, and granite be ground into powder, but truth will remain unchanged.

If any one finds that he is not in harmony with truth, with God's Word, the thing for him to do is to change his manner of living, because truth will not leave its place; man must. Truth is power; falsehood is weakness. Truth is constructive; falsehood is destructive. God is truth, and is ever ready to protect, to save, to cleanse and to purify, but to receive His mercies one must first show a willingness to receive. Truth is abiding; falsehood is fickle. Truth builds for eternity; falsehood ends in eternal destruction. Truth clothes itself in beauty; falsehood in filthy rags. Truth ever wears a smile and is crowned with glory and honor; falsehood wears a frown and is crowned with shame and disgrace.

Falsehood may flourish for a time, but soon sinks into oblivion; truth, seemingly crushed to earth, will rise again more glorious than ever. Truth is a solid rock; falsehood is sinking sand. "The lip of truth shall be established for ever: but a lying tongue is but for a moment. Lying lips are abomination to the LORD: but they that deal truly are his delight." Prov. 12:19, 22.

God's truth has stood for ages and will survive all time, though the heavens fall and the earth pass away. The light of truth will shine unto the perfect day, while falsehood will fade into utter darkness and blackest night.

Outside of God's Word there is nothing but doubt and uncertainty. The great Jehovah has written two books for man's instruction. The Book of Nature and the Book of Revelation. Upon their teaching regarding the same subject they agree perfectly. In both there is light and knowledge, but few see the light, and fewer still comprehend their wisdom.

Earth is filled with darkness and gloom. The mists and fog of error have settled down upon the world until it is difficult, in many instances, to detect the good from the evil. In vision, Isaiah beheld our day, and said, "Behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people". Isa. 60:2. A dark picture at which to look. The pathetic part of the picture is that the great majority love the picture because "their deeds are evil."

This darkness and gloom shall not be dispersed until "the Sun of righteousness" shall "arise with healing in his wings." Then light and truth, in their beauty, loveliness and grandeur will shine forth forever and fill the earth with God's glory.

MY BIBLE AND I

We've traveled together, my Bible and I,
Thro' all kinds of weather, with smile or with sigh!
In sorrow or sunshine, in tempest or calm;
Thy friendship unchanging, my lamp and my psalm.

We've traveled together, my Bible and I,
When life had grown weary and death e'en was nigh!
But all thro' the darkness of mist or of wrong
I found there a solace, a prayer, or a song.

So now, who shall part us, my Bible and I,
Shall "isms", or "schisms", or "new lights" who try?
Shall shadows for substance, or stone for good bread,
Supplant thy sound wisdom, give folly instead?

Ah, no! my Bible, exponent of Light!
Thou Sword of the Spirit, put error to flight;
And still through life's journey, until my last sigh,
We'll travel together—my Bible and I.

WHY SO MANY DIVORCES?

"The mirror of character analysis" is urged by Melba Glanton Arlington to be placed in constant use, not only by newlyweds, but also by the elders in wedded experiences. Some of the disillusionments of life are here referred to and some of the great anchors, which God has provided to staple married life, are called to the attention of all in this section of "Why So Many Divorces?"—Editor.

THE wedding and honeymoon over, our young people come back to earth and settle down to reality and the commonplace things of life. She has heretofore looked upon her lover as some sort of a sheik-god and placed him upon a pedestal. Soon she learns that he snores while sleeping or he doesn't look so handsome before his early morning shave. His little personal characteristics loom up before her as great vices and her hero at once begins to totter on his throne and he falls. Disillusionment sets in and she believes that she is being abused or has made a mistake and she is ready to cry or something. She really isn't sure what is wrong.

So it is with the young husband. He soon forgets that his wife was once his sweetheart and the little courtesies which were used to win her are considered unnecessary.

Husbands and wives are still the lovers of yesterday, only we are seeing them through more magnified lenses.

Newlyweds should never go to live with either of the parents, as there never were houses built to accommodate two such families. A man always likes to be "daddy" of his own home and it belittles him to take second place. Then, too, young folks should have the responsibility of a home. It is a great experience and always better for any little ones coming later.

If the bride has been a professional woman before marriage, the hours will seem to drag for her and in her lonely moments she hates her home and longs for the old life. There is always a serpent in every garden of Eden and he can transform himself into many different characters. He often enters the home as a friend, and by offering a little timely sympathy gains the young wife's confidence and finally her love.

Motherhood is the best panacea for such ills, though many are shirking the responsibility. One or two children in the home bring, or should bring, the happiest moments in life. Motherhood develops in woman the best that there is. To feel the tiny arms of innocence and purity about your neck each day, brings one nearer to the throne of God.

Children, very often, keep the home fires burning when all else has failed, and the greatest menace today is divorce in homes where there are children. We are responsible for the stewardship of these little ones and we dare not give vent to foolish personal grievances.

Young people of today are wild and reckless. It takes a tight rein and the grace of God to direct them in the right channels. But who is to blame? Frivolous card-playing mothers and golf and club-mad fathers. Can a mother or father tell his or her children not to smoke, when they set the example?

Mothers, I beseech you, go to your mirrors of character analysis, throw the searchlight directly on your own lives and ask yourselves this question, "Am I fit to raise my boy or girl so that he or she may have a decent chance with the world and eternity?" It is a serious question. Then go to your closet and in secret ask God to direct you aright. His answer will not be of the world, but oh, the joy and peace that shall be yours when you follow His way.

THE LORD'S SUPPER

By Lottie E. Young

FOR MANY HUNDREDS of years the Israelites celebrated the Feast of the Passover in remembrance of their wonderful deliverance on that awful night in Egypt when the death messenger visited every home in the land with the exception of those in which the children of Israel were gathered. At this feast they ate a roasted lamb and remembered as they ate it that they owed their deliverance in Egypt under God to the blood of a lamb which had been sprinkled above and on the sides of their doors. The lamb which they ate not only pointed back to the lamb whose blood was shed for them in the past, but it also pointed forward, though they apparently did not so understand it, to the Lamb of God who was one day to be slain, and whose death would result in a still more wonderful deliverance—the deliverance of all those who truly believe on Him from the "second death".

When Jesus came to Jerusalem He knew that He was to be put to death, the Just for the unjust, at the time of the passover, and that He was the great Passover Lamb whom the Father had set apart to be slain for the deliverance of mankind. We can picture Him and the twelve disciples as they were gathered in that upper room to celebrate the great Feast—the last time they would celebrate it under the old dispensation; for the church of the New Covenant was now about to be set up and it was meet that it should have a rite answering to the Passover of the Old Covenant. We are told, "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples. . . . And he took the cup, and gave thanks (just think, thanks for the shedding of His own blood!), and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it."

The Lord's Supper is a memorial of Christ's death, which the Master Himself established for the purpose of keeping the blessings coming from His death ever in the minds of His followers, and of helping us to grasp and use them. A Christian should not live in the past, but can never look back too frequently upon the things which excite our gratitude. We never lose time by looking backward toward the cross. The bit of bread, and the sip of wine are to help us to see it, and to bring before the mind's eye the Lamb of God, our sacrifice for sin.

The Supper also speaks to us of the infinite love of God and His Son. It is a feast of love; it was inspired by love; it is partaken of by those who have learned to love. Every time we eat the Supper we ought to get a clearer vision of our great Pattern.

The Apostle Paul in his account of this memorial feast says, "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." And so, it turns our thoughts not only backward to the cross and Him who suffered upon it, but also toward His coming again, not as a sin offering, but as the greatest of kings, when the final victory shall be consummated over death and him that hath the power of death.

If we will notice in all the miracles performed by our Lord, the person helped had to do his part; it was no one-sided affair—Jesus spoke the word, but Lazarus had to come forth from the tomb, and the onlookers were told to unfasten the bandages. It was a "stretch forth thy hand," "take up thy bed and walk," "shew thyself to the priest" and "offer the gift that Moses commanded," etc., before there could be any cure, and so this Lord's Supper has a personal meaning for us.

Suppose we lay a loaf of bread on a shelf and look at it three times a day, or fall down and worship it the same number of times, would it do us any good? We all know that bread has not only to be put into the mouth, but chewed, digested, and passed into the fibers of the body before it does its part in making us stronger.

In the same way Jesus tells us that He has given Himself as Bread. He says to us, "Take, eat. If you will feed on me, if you will receive me, I will give you nourishment and strength: I will build up the tissue of your spiritual being."

If I want to get the strength that is in a slice of bread, I must give it the right of way in my body. Cake and candy will never give us bodily strength; so neither will the pleasures of this world fit us for a life of usefulness. If I want the strength which Jesus has for me, I must open up my whole being for Him. I cannot say that I am willing He shall control my conduct in certain things, but not in others; that I am willing to obey Him to-day, but wish to have my own way during the vacation season; that I am willing to be guided by Him so long as His commands appeal to me as the road I want to take, but no longer. It is easy singing

"My Jesus, I love Thee, I know Thou art mine; For Thee all the pleasures of sin I resign."

But when it comes to the actual doing, how is it with you and me?

If we want to be like our Great Example, we must completely surrender ourselves to Him, and let Him have His way with us in all things. If we do this, we can be assured of the fact that some day we shall hear Him say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord," when all the joys and sorrows of this present age are past.

WHY?

By M. A. Woodward

WHY DO SO MANY of our young people lose interest in religious work as soon as they enter college, or a business work? Is it not because we, as parents and, therefore, guardians of the spiritual welfare of our children, fail to give them the proper home training? We do not impress their young minds, with the real sacredness of the matter; we do not teach them that after they become members of Christ's body they must prove true and loyal to God and His cause all the way through life: not particularly to their home church, but to their God, and His especial truths that He has made so important in His written Word.

Why is it that the Catholic and Jewish churches hold their young people? They have taken pains to impress what, to them, were very necessary teachings in their very young lives. Their lives have been molded from infancy in that direction. In a recent Sunday School paper we read the following:

"The children of Orthodox Jews receive an average of 354 hours of religious instruction annually: the Roman Catholic children about 200 hours. The average Protestant child is on time at his Sunday School a scant 52 times. It would be more correct to put the figure at 40.

"The early training of our Protestant children is not as sound as it should be. They have little to stand upon except a sentimental attachment for an institution that gives them spasmodic religious training for a few short years."

The home training has been sadly neglected and then we have to worry and mourn because our children have lost interest. During childhood is the best possible time to train and stamp thoughts that will stick to them through life. It seems almost useless, and we wonder if it pays. Listen to Anna H. Wood:

*"A little lifting of the eyes to see,
A little trembling of the head from shame;
A little softly whispered melody
Around the thought of a dear human name.*

*"A little wishing of a clearer mind,
A little longing for more tenderness;
A little aching for the way to find
The word to help another in distress.*

*"A little sorrow for the unkind deed,
A little hope for braver days ahead;
Always so little—yet what mighty need:
What countless thoughts unvoiced, and prayers unsaid."*

Just a little word of loving reproof or correction, of speaking of God's love, and teaching the little, trusting child that God's Word to them is all they need to help them bear even childhood's disappointments, and later, life's burdens and cares: but they must be loyal and true, for Jesus is coming to read their lives to them.

Parents, do not miss the golden opportunity of youth to impress your child's mind with God's truths.

THE LORD'S DAY

By C. E. Randall

THE PHRASE, "Lord's day", occurs only once in the Bible—Rev. 1:10. It is here used of the time when John was "in the spirit". The things which he saw and heard were to take place during this period of time. "Write the things which thou hast seen (during the Lord's day), and the things which are (same time), and the things which shall be hereafter" (results of what he had seen and heard). Rev. 1:19.

"Lord's day" is a possessive phrase with the emphasis placed on day, thereby showing complete separation and distinction from man's day. "Lord's day" and "day of the Lord" refer to the same period of time; the only difference is in the grammatical arrangement, which changes the emphasis. The "day of the Lord" is an age of judgment, a period when God will lay judgment "to the line, and righteousness to the plummet: and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies". Isa. 28:17. Judgment is always associated with the "day of the Lord".

It is described as:

- "A day of wrath",
 - "A day of trouble and distress",
 - "A day of wasteness and desolation",
 - "A day of darkness and gloominess",
 - "A day of clouds and thick darkness",
 - "A day of the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers."
- Zephaniah 1:15, 16.

It can be readily seen by these statements that the "day of the Lord" is a time of judgment. The same calamities that are credited to the day of the Lord in the Old Testament are set forth in Revelation as events that are to take place during the "Lord's day". John, who was permitted to be "in the spirit" in the "Lord's day", saw Old Testament prophecy concerning the "day of the Lord" in process of actual fulfillment. The constant reference in Revelation to Old Testament prophecy and fact, numbering 285 times (Bagster's Bible), is overwhelming evidence to prove that the subject of the book is the same as set forth by the prophets of Israel in the Old Testament. The burden of the prophets' messages concerned Israel and the time when they would be brought into the bonds of the new covenant. Ezek. 20:33-40. A goodly portion of nearly every prophetic message is devoted to the manner, method and time of Israel's regathering and reestablishment in the home land of Palestine as the kingdom of Him "whose right it is". Ezek. 21:25-27; Luke 1:32, 33.

These same people are the subjects of the letters dictated by Christ to John to be given to the seven assemblies in Asia during the "Lord's day". Rev. 2 and 3. It was in this time that John was "in the spirit". It is the time when the Son of man will walk in the midst of them (Rev. 1:13, 20), as God was in the midst of Israel's camp. Deut. 23:14.

The temptations and obstacles which these seven as-semblies encounter during this period were foreshadowed and typified in their wilderness experiences and kingdom conduct. It is God's final pleading with Israel prior to their being given a new heart and a new spirit, when they shall look on Him "whom they have pierced". Ezek. 36:23-30; Zech. 12:10.

The opening of the six seals and pouring out of the seven vials will bring Israel into a time of trouble such as never was, or ever shall be; and "except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Matt. 24:21, 22. It is these plagues of the "Lord's day" that make the "day of the Lord" a day of blackness, trouble and distress. Thus, it is seen that the conditions pertaining to the "Lord's day" are spoken also of the "day of the Lord". These two expressions are interchangeable terms applying to the same period.

The "Lord's day" begins when man's day ends. We are living in man's day, when man is judging and administering the affairs of the world. "It is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment (day, margin)". 1 Cor. 4:3. Our present time is man's final and greatest attempt at self-judgment. It must of necessity end in judgment from the Lord.

The Lord's judgment will be vastly different from man's, in that He will not "judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth". Isa. 11:3, 4.

If we believe that the "Lord's day" is coming, then it behooves us to "pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Luke 21:36.

"THOU SHALT NOT LIE"

THIS IS the supreme commandment in Kirkwood, Mo. Liars and scandal mongers are "sot down upon" in a new city ordinance, which inflicts severe penalties.

Any one who "utters, publishes, circulates, repeats or originates" a false report, if it tends to provoke a breach of the peace, is liable to a fine of at least $5.00, while the extreme penalty for defaming a citizen will be subject to a fine of $100. and imprisonment for not more than thirty days. The minimum imprisonment provided for is 24 hours. Stories untrue in fact come under the ordinance, "white lies" thus being provided for. So far there have been no arrests under the ordinance.

Albert B. Chandler, an ambitious young St. Louis lawyer, who lives in Kirkwood, is the author of the liar's ordinance, as the city attorney for Kirkwood. Gossiping, scandal monging and lying about one's neighbors' affairs, he intimates, has broken up many happy homes in Kirkwood.

"Kirkwood is no better nor no worse than lots of small towns and cities," he says. "We need this anti-liar's ordinance to stop this confounded gossiping and backbiting and we are going to have it."—Selected.

ENTERING THE KINGDOM

NOT LONG ago I heard a lecturer say that if enough people would think hard enough that there was to be no more war, they would finally by concentration influence all the rest of the people to overcome all destructive thoughts that lead to war, and that it would not take long before there would be permanent peace. Hence this would finally bring heaven upon earth.

But truly we know that only demons would influence people to say such things which are so contrary to the Word of God, which is our only guide. For God's Word plainly tells us that it is the heart of man that is wrong, and our thoughts do not amount to much in God's sight until there is a change of heart. David said, "I hate vain thoughts, but thy law do I love." Psa. 119:113.

Let us examine God's way of entering the kingdom. Only God's words will count in eternity, for men's words are dying words. Jesus said, in John 3:3, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." This is something substantial upon which we may rest our faith. The Bible speaks plainly in every aspect of life and there is no need of any honest person misunderstanding God.

Again, we learn in Jer. 17:9. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. Who can know it?" So God tells us here it is the heart that is wrong, not our thoughts, for our thoughts could not please God until our hearts are made right with Him.

But the Christian knows that if the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts, the spirit of God, the Holy Spirit which comes to us at our spiritual birth, will enable us by the grace of God to overcome all destructive thoughts which really belong to our old natures and should be laid aside as the spirit of God directs. He also knows that the evil in the world now is worse than it ever was before, and that it will continue so, and even get worse as we near the end.

So many lecturers are going through the country, each claiming to teach some greatly neglected but much needed truth, and many who are not rooted and grounded in the truth are apt to be deceived. Falsehood and deception seem to be accepted and the truth is neglected and rejected. It reminds one of Isa. 59:14, 15, when it speaks of "truth fallen in the street".

Christ said that we must become like little children if we would enter the kingdom. A little child believes his father and follows the advice he gives. So we, as God's children should look to our heavenly Father instead of following man's advice.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Here is another requirement for entrance into the kingdom where we shall see God. Any one could stop thinking destructive thoughts, cease to think about war, etc., and never know anything about God who purifies the heart.

Christ said, "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight". So here we learn that God's children do not enter into wars or quarrels of any kind. The God of peace that dwells within them does not permit them to. It is the nations who consist of ungodly people that are doing the fighting and bringing about wars.

When we are truly candidates for the kingdom of heaven a great transformation has taken place first in our hearts, and then in our lives. Then alone are we ready to enter into the place that our Father has prepared for us (1 Thess. 2:12), which we will enter when our Lord and King comes back to set up the kingdom. How could the kingdom come without the coming of the King? How could there be peace in the wicked world until the Prince of Peace came?

We are told in the Bible that it is through great tribulation that we enter the kingdom. It will require much faith and patience on our part, as we look to the Captain of our salvation to take us safely through. But it will pay to continue in the Word to the end.

No Christian likes to hear of wars, but all Christians are looking to a time beyond the time of wars when righteousness and peace shall reign in the hearts of men.

There never was a time in this world's history when on one hand there was so much talk of peace and on the

GLORIOUS REDEMPTION

By J. H. Leavitt

FORASMUCH as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation (vain manner of life—A. R. V.) received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot.”—1 Peter 1:18-19.

Clarke's commentary gives the following definition of redemption: "To redeem signifies to procure life for a captive, or liberty for a slave by paying a price." For example, supposing you were taken captive, and made a slave, and your captors demanded a certain sum of money for your release. A friend that has ample means, learns how you are situated, sends the required amount, and when the captors receive it, they set you free. You were the redeemed: that which redeemed you was the sum paid: the party that paid the price was the redeemer.

Through disobedience to God, man became a sinner and a slave to sin, and also a guilty criminal under the sentence of death. He could do nothing to save himself out of this deplorable condition, but God, in His great love and mercy, could and did provide a way by which the captives to sin could be saved out of their bondage and from death. ("Praise the Lord.") A redemption price must be paid, and the price was the sacrifice of the life of a sinless person, Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, who was "without spot or blemish". Being such, He could pay the redemption price, and did, by the sacrifice of His life upon the cross. As we read in Eph. 1:7, "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." Fallen, sinful man, the captive; Christ, the Redeemer. The price paid was the sacrifice of His life. Reread the text.

Likely some who read this article can say in the words of the poet: "Redeemed, redeemed by the blood of the Lamb, redeemed by His infinite mercy, His child forever I am." Blessed, happy are those who have this experience. It may be that some who read these words have not complied with the terms of the gospel, and consequently they have not experienced the redemption. My advice to such is, Repent, and believe on Jesus Christ, that you may be saved, and be with the redeemed when Jesus, the blessed Redeemer comes for His saints. Consider how much this means to you. It is a matter of life and death. If you comply with the terms of the gospel, you will have eternal life; but if you reject the offer of mercy, you will perish.

"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"—Heb. 2:3.

LANGUAGES

By H. B. Hathaway

AND THE whole earth was of one language, and of one speech. And it came to pass as they journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar". They said, "Let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth, . . . and the LORD said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do." The LORD confounded their language so that they could not understand one another's speech. So the LORD scattered them abroad.

That is the reason we have so many languages at the present time. I suppose the LORD had two reasons for doing what He did: one was that He wanted the whole earth populated; and another, no doubt, was that He wanted to keep people from congregating in large cities, as this caused wickedness to increase—Sodom and Gomorrah were examples.

There is a time coming when there will be one language again; for this statement is made in Zeph. 3:8-9. After saying that He will gather the nations and kingdoms to pour upon them His indignation and fierce anger, He says He will "turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent."

There was a demonstration of that on the day of Pentecost. There were there people speaking many different languages, yet they all heard and understood what the apostles said and marveled that such was the case.

THOUGHTS ON IMMORTALITY

WHAT IS THE HUMAN SOUL? Before you can understand the Biblical view of this subject some 800 passages have to be examined. But one fact stands out clearly. The Bible NEVER once states that the SOUL IS IMMORTAL. On the other hand, the Scripture emphatically says that the "SOUL THAT SINNETH, IT SHALL DIE."—Ezek. 18:4, 20.

Now it is obvious that an IMMORTAL being could not die. Again, "Christ poured out his SOUL unto death."—Isaiah 53:12. How could that which is IMMORTAL be poured out unto death?

IMMORTALITY is taught in Scripture, but not the Immortality of the Soul. Indeed, the Scripture asserts that "God only hath immortality," 1 Tim. 1:17; 6:16, and it is God's immortality that is promised to mortal man.

To those who, by patient continuance in well doing look for glory honour and IMMORTALITY, God will render ETERNAL LIFE, Rom. 2:7. Why look for it if you are already immortal?

"For this MORTAL must put on IMMORTALITY."—1 Cor. 15:53.

Why do you have to put it on if you have it already?

Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be SAVED, that is, become IMMORTALIZED.—Words of Life,

TWO MIRACLES OF POWER

Mark 4:35 to 5:20

Devotional Reading: Psalm 104:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.—Matt. 6:10.
What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?
—Mark 4:41.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Miracles of Power. "There went virtue out of him, and healed them all."—Luke 6:19. "Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes?"—Mark 5:30. The word "virtue" in this quotation is the same Gr. word, "dunamis", which is nearly always translated by the word "power", meaning, strength. The Scripture teaches, positively, that, when the Savior wrought great miracles, energy, power, dunamis, from which Gr. word we get dynamo, dynamics, dynamite, was actually drawn off or away from Him. He imparted to the sick strength sufficient for them to act. Virtue, that is, energy, was transferred from Him to the demoniac. Energy, ability was drawn from Him to successfully oppose the wind, the rolling wave and bring the calm.

Miracles of power necessitated a great center from which to draw this power. Christ was that center. He was established by God. The Spirit, a manifestation of which was seen at His baptism, ever impregnated Him with refreshed strength. He retired to the mountain to rest and to pray, and returned in the morning with a new supply with which to take up new labors and perform new miracles.

Such extraordinary power could be safely intrusted only to One who had immaculate faith in the great Creator of all things and dispenser of power for the accomplishment of all purposes. Jesus was that Man of Faith. God intrusted to Him ability and responsibility. These two miracles were evidences of the wide range of activity in the use of God-given power, which was approved by God, Himself. How marvelously great will be that day in which God's power will be exercised, through His Son and His Son's helpers, to overthrow all sin, all curse, all iniquity; to plant and develop equity, righteousness, peace, prosperity: when that power shall be directed by His authority unto the ends of the earth.

How Is It Ye Have No Faith? It may have been because of the fewness of the acts that the apostles had witnessed of the unspeakable works of their Master, or it may have been because of the increased realization of their own weakness, or that their trust and devotion had not developed as had their vision, but the fact is that the Savior opened to their vision the fact that He craved that they would enter far more deeply into the activities of faith. It was not sufficient that faith in them should stop at the preaching of the word, the healing of the sick, and the casting out of demons: if it was not for them to exercise their faith with power to overcome wind and wave, it was at least for them to realize that the Master was authorized with all power, sufficient to protect them and Himself and to understand all conditions.

God demands of the Christian that he shall have faith sufficient to accomplish all required personal, present-day Christian activities.—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

And they were caused to fear a great fear; and were saying one to another, Who then is this, that even the wind and the lake give ear to him?—Mark 4:41, Roth.

Christ gave many examples of His power in signs and wonders performed among the people. They were little glimpses of the glory beyond, when He shall take up His authority and reign as King of kings and Lord of lords.

They had seen the dead raised to life, the lame made to walk, the blind, to see; but it caused great fear to see Him control the elements themselves. His power to forgive sins is just as certain and just as easy as to say, "Take up thy bed and walk."—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Love. Following a day spent in preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, the Master, entering a little fishing vessel, retired to the stern of the ship and fell asleep. A terrific storm, for which the lake is still noted, suddenly arose and swept the waters into a seething uproar. The blackness of the night was broken by the incessant lightning which revealed the white-capped billows rising in fury on every side. In the excitement and anxiety of the moment the fear-stricken disciples called upon the Master in language that almost savored of rebuke: "Carest thou not that we perish? And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm."—Mark 4: 38-39. Jesus was One upon whom it was safe to rely in every time of danger or of need. Their lives were wholly safe in His keeping. Like the disciples on the road to Emmaus, they desired that Jesus should "abide" with them, that they might ever be surrounded by His protecting power. In the wonderful miracle which resulted in their deliverance from the storm, they saw an indication of His love for them, and were led to trust Him more fully.

When we observe the manner in which Jesus still cares for His own, we, too, are impressed to commit our "way unto the Lord; (to) trust also in him" that He shall bring to pass the desires of our hearts.

Fear. Another wonderful miracle was performed before the multitude; but how different was the reaction of the people to it! Instead of being drawn to Jesus in loving confidence, they were filled with fear at the exhibition of such marvelous power. They were afraid to have One remain among them who was so evidently possessed of supernatural forces. Because they knew Him not as a Friend, they preferred to miss the benefit to be derived from His presence. The worldly man who is told of the coming of Christ shrinks in horror from the thought of Jesus' nearness for the same reason—he does not know Jesus as a Friend, and therefore fears His power.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Light working miracles.

Read Mark 4:41 and 5:15.

It is beyond the power of man's intelligence to explain how these two miracles were accomplished. But there is, nevertheless, a reasonable basis for accepting them. Some power created and keeps active the wind and the sea, and some power makes possible the mind of man and its continuous activity. This is self-evident. It is also self-evident that the power that creates is able to control.

Evidence that acknowledges this fact is the personal experience of the Christ's power in one's own life. Only such can fully accept the Christ's miracles as facts. Of course this evidence is Greek to those who have not experienced the Christ's power, hence there is superstitious fear when a miracle is witnessed, and disbelief when it is heard. The disciples knew the Christ, but even they feared and wondered what manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey Him.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Miracles: What are they? Discern miracles that are taking place day after day. Are the miracles recorded of Jesus any more beyond man's comprehension than these every-day miracles? Is the resurrection any more of a miracle than life and death?

Acceptance of miracles: We accept every-day miracles because we experience, even though we don't comprehend them. Who alone can truly accept the special miracles of Jesus?—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. E. A. Scoville, of Oregon, is now with her son at Egan, Illinois.

Bro. Austin spent Sunday, February 5, with the brethren of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, congregation.

Under the kind care of Bro. and Sr. J. W. Good at New Port Richey, Florida, Sr. M. A. Woodward is recuperating from a severe attack of acute indigestion. She was feeling much better on January 31.

Services were held at the Plum River church, near Lanark, Ill., on Sunday, Jan. 29. In spite of rough roads good audiences were present, one driving sixty miles to attend. Bro. Siple reports a very encouraging field of work there.

A sudden shake-up in the appointments for Oregon and Dixon, Ill., was necessary at the last minute for last Sunday, Feb. 5. Since Bro. Austin had to be gone, Bro. Siple compromised with him and filled the Oregon pulpit at night after being at Dixon for the day. Bro. Sidney Jackson spoke at Oregon in the morning and at Dixon at night.

WINTER QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The special meetings began at Grand Rapids, Mich., January 15, and the interest was very good all through these meetings. We were very glad to have Bro. Siple with us a few days and to hear four of his excellent sermons. Bro. Pope and Bro. Patrick also gave us some splendid sermons.

On January 27 the Winter Quarterly Conference began, Sr. Fletcher, from Kalamazoo, was the only one from away to attend the Conference, but we from the Grand Rapids territory received much benefit from these meetings. Is Salvation Free?, Fellowship, Blessed Hope, and God's Purpose in Creation were some of the sermon texts. At the close of the last meeting our hearts were made glad when two came forward and accepted Christ—Mrs. Rhodes and Mrs. Savage. They and some others expect to be baptized in the near future. So we feel our labor has not been in vain. Surely, God has been with us.

Yours in faith,

Wm. A. Hanson.

MRS. ALSEMINA ROOKER

Was born in Ogdensburg, N. Y., August 12, 1850. She came to Michigan with her father's family at the age of seventeen. Early in her life she married Myron Rooker, and to them were born seven children: Francis, Otis, Orvil, Carrie, Daniel, John and William. Mr. Rooker was a soldier in the Civil War and died from disease contracted there, two years after they came to Dutton. The children were all alive at the time of his death, and Sr. Rooker proved a capable and devoted mother through all the years of rearing the family. Five children, ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, with many friends remain to mourn her loss.

When she heard the gospel preached she accepted it, and Bro. Woodward baptized her twenty-six years ago. She never lost faith in God, and through her sickness of several years she was always patient and cheerful. Most of her last seven years were spent in New Port Richey, Florida, with her daughter, Carrie and family, who showed her the love and tender care which she so well deserved.

Her funeral was held from the Dutton, Michigan church, and she was laid beside her husband in the Dutton cemetery to await the call of the Master.

M. A. Woodward.

MRS. E. A. MORRILL

Eliza A. Conaway was born at Lawrenceville, Ill., July 8, 1838, the seventh of a family of eleven children born to Jesse and Nancy Conaway. In 1855, at the tender age of 16, she was married to David Cressy, who died in 1865, leaving her with five children; William, Martha, Sophronia, David and Ada, all but two of which have preceded her in death; the two surviving being Mrs. W. S. Peck of Aurora, and Mrs. Ida M. Stone of Rockford, Ill.

In 1870 she was married to A. K. Hyde of Batavia, who only lived to 1878. Two children were born to this union, Arthur K., who has fallen in death, and Myrtle, now Mrs. W. H. Colburn of Aurora.

The last marriage was to Mr. Geo. Morrill, of Oregon, Ill., with whom she lived until his death in 1902. Since then Mrs. Morrill has made her home with her daughters in Aurora, being tenderly cared for by them to the very last. She fell asleep at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peck, on Jan. 31, 1928, almost 90 years of age. The last weeks of her sufferings were eased by the attentions of the loved ones who live in Aurora and also by the constant presence of the daughter, Mrs. Stone, of Rockford, who assisted in nursing her to the last.

Sr. Morrill has been known to all to be a woman deeply religious and very devoted to her faith. In early life she became a member of the Church of God, and through many long years she has remained faithful, being recognized as a remarkably well-read Bible student.

In addition to the children who survive, is the aged brother, J. Conaway, of Seattle, Wash., also 11 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held in Aurora on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 2, in the presence of a large gathering of sorrowing friends and relatives, and Sr. Morrill was laid to rest, waiting the resurrection morn.

THE STILLING OF THE TEMPEST

By F. E. Siple

The strength of a kingdom depends upon its king, and a king without power is not worthy of the name.

Here, then, are the evidences. The tempestuous waves of an angry sea instilled dread and terror into the hearts of others, but at the command of Jesus they sank quietly to rest. Is there any wonder the disciples were amazed, and asked, "What manner of man is this?" But this, though evidence of power, had only to do with control of the elements and nature. Another sign was needed. Into their presence came a man possessed with devils, a powerful man, but mentally diseased and deranged—violently insane. Once more the Master's voice spoke. The devils were gone, the man was calm and peaceful—"in his right mind," v. 15.

Master of wind and wave, controller of disease and insanity: His was the power of a real King.

THOUGHTS ON "TRAINING"

WHY DO older boys and girls, young people and adults, attend church irregularly? Why is there not that consistency about their attendance at church which marks their attendance at school or at business? They have never been trained.

Why is it that children and adults are late to church and Sunday School when they are not late elsewhere? They have never been trained to be punctual at God's house and in God's services.

Why is it that we have so few tithers in our churches, so few regular contributors, such a large number of church members who are content to give spasmodically? Giving is a part of worship which has been neglected in their earliest years.—From Benson's, "An Introduction to Child Study".

TWO MIRACLES OF POWER

Mark 4:35 to 5:20

CAN YOU count the miracles Jesus has performed—healed the sick and afflicted, expelled unclean spirits and forgave sins? All these were in relation to people.

Now we have a story which shows His power over the elements also.

In our last story you remember how Jesus had been teaching by the seaside nearly all day, and, when it was evening, Jesus said, "Let us pass over unto the other side." After the people had been dismissed the apostles and Jesus started across the Sea of Galilee. They went in the same boat in which Jesus sat while He was teaching. Friends accompanied them in other smaller ships.

All at once a great windstorm arose, and great waves rolled over the sides of the boat. The vessel soon became full of water and the apostles were frightened for fear the boat would soon sink. Now, where was Jesus during this trouble? In the back part of the boat sound asleep—tired out, no doubt. Did He not know of the threatening disaster and the terror of His helpers? They finally aroused Him, and exclaimed, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?"

Did He become excited too? Surely He must have acted very calmly, for He arose, rebuked the wind and said unto the sea, "Peace, be still," and immediately the wind and sea obeyed Him—the wind ceased and the waves became calm.

Then Jesus turned to the disciples and rebuked them also, "Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?" They had been with Him daily, witnessing His God-given powers, and now, when a test came, they were fearful. However, they marveled, and said one to another, "What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?"

When the group reached the other side of the sea, in the country of the Gadarenes, they were met by a man with an unclean spirit. This man's mind was so tortured that he was wild. He lived alone in the tombs and wandered about them and the mountains day and night, crying and cutting himself with stones. Men had tried to chain him and bind him, but he broke all such fastenings. How he must have suffered!

And what do you think happened when he saw Jesus?

Why, when he saw Jesus a way, way off he ran and worshiped Him. This insane man was like the storm-tossed sea; but at Jesus' words he, too, became calm. Then Jesus sent the unclean spirit, which was really many spirits, into a herd of swine or pigs, and the whole herd—two thousand—rushed down a steep place into the sea and were drowned. Immediately the herders ran into the city and told what had happened.

To be sure, the people came at once to see for themselves. And how afraid they became when they saw the sick man sitting there quietly, properly clothed and in his right mind.

Like most people, they were afraid of what they could not explain or understand, and so they were afraid of this man, Jesus, who could accomplish such wonderful results. They begged Him to leave their country at once.

He proceeded to depart, and how the healed man begged to accompany Him.

However, Jesus refused this request. Instead, He told the man to go home to his friends and tell them what great things the Lord had done for him.

"And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Do you know Jesus is doing just as great things for us today? And are we as grateful as the distressed man?

Is our faith strong enough to withstand our storms?

MEMORY VERSE

8. Psalms 24:3, 4.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. If you have toy boats, play out the story of the storm.

Or have something to represent the boats and characters, and play the story.

Draw a picture of the storm.

TINY TOTS

Jesus and His disciples started in a boat across the Sea of Galilee. A great storm arose while Jesus was asleep.

His disciples awakened Him. He then spoke to the wind and the sea, and the storm stopped.

When they landed a man with an unclean spirit met them and Jesus healed him at once.

A TRUE CHRISTIAN SAYS:

It should be done;

It can be done;

It will be done;

It has been done.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 31

By George Johnston

THE DOWNFALL OF PAGANISM

(Daniel 11)

THE sagacious mind of Theodoric soon perceived that he was odious to the Romans, and suspected by the barbarians Embracing an enterprise worthy of his courage and ambition, he addressed the emperor in the following words: 'Although your servant is maintained in affluence by your liberality, graciously listen to the wishes of my heart; Italy, the inheritance of your predecessors, and Rome itself, the head and mistress of the world, now fluctuate under the violence and oppression of Odoacer the mercenary. Direct me, with my national troops, to march against the tyrant. If I fall, you will be relieved from an expensive and troublesome friend: if, with the Divine permission, I succeed, I shall govern in your name, and to your glory, the Roman senate, and the part of the republic delivered from slavery by my victorious arms.' The proposal of Theodoric was accepted, and perhaps had been suggested, by the Byzantine court. But the forms of the commission or grant appear to have been expressed with a prudent ambiguity, which might be explained by the event; and it was left doubtful whether the conqueror of Italy should reign as the lieutenant, the vassal, or the ally, of the emperor of the East.

"The reputation both of the leader and of the war diffused a universal ardor; the Walamirs were multiplied by the Gothic swarms already engaged in the service, or seated in the provinces of the empire; and each bold barbarian who had heard of the wealth and beauty of Italy was impatient to seek, through the most perilous adventures, the possession of such enchanting objects. The march of Theodoric must be considered as the emigration of an entire people; the wives and children of the Goths, their aged parents, and most precious effects were carefully transported; and some idea may be formed of the heavy baggage that now followed the camp by the loss of two thousand wagons which had been sustained in a single action in the war of Epirus."

"And the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand."

"Odoacer, a rival not unworthy of his arms, had already occupied the advantageous and well-known post of the river Sontius near the ruins of Aquileia, at the head of a powerful host, whose independent kings or leaders disdained the duties of subordination, and the prudence of delays. No sooner had Theodoric granted a short repose and refreshment to his weary cavalry, than he boldly attacked the fortifications of the enemy; the Ostrogoths showed more ardor to acquire, than the mercenaries to defend, the lands of Italy, and the reward of the first victory was the possession of the Venetian province as far as the walls of Verona. In the neighbourhood of that city, on the steep banks of the rapid Adige, he was opposed by a new army, reinforced in its numbers, and not impaired in its courage: the contest was more obstinate, but the event was still more decisive; Odoacer fled to Ravenna, Theodoric advanced to Milan, and the vanquished troops saluted their conqueror with loud acclamations of respect and fidelity.

"Ravenna alone, secure in the fortifications of art and nature, still sustained a siege of almost three years, and the daring sallies of Odoacer carried slaughter and dismay into the Gothic camp. At length, destitute of provisions, and hopeless of relief, that unfortunate monarch yielded to the groans of his subjects and the clamours of his soldiers. A treaty of peace was negotiated by the bishop of Ravenna; the Ostrogoths were admitted into the city; and the hostile kings consented, under the sanction of an oath, to rule with equal and undivided authority the provinces of Italy."

"For they shall forecast devices against him. Yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him, and his army shall overflow: and many shall fall down slain."

It will be observed that the various incidents pointed out by the prophet are all unique; the like are not found in the histories of any other rulers, and thus the particular individual to whom our attention is directed in any prediction or series of predictions, can be readily identified. While a great many kings have been removed by the knife of the assassin, Odoacer alone met his death under the peculiar circumstances foretold by the prophet. Gibbon describes these circumstances clearly and concisely:—"The event of such an agreement can be easily foreseen. After some days had been devoted to the semblance of joy and friendship, Odoacer, in the midst of a solemn banquet, was stabbed by the hand, or at least by the command, of his rival. Secret and effectual orders had been previously despatched; the faithless and rapacious mercenaries at the moment, and without resistance, were universally massacred; and the royalty of Theodoric was proclaimed by the Goths, with the tardy, reluctant, ambiguous consent of the emperor of the East." (Gibbon: chap. 39.)

Our attention was directed in the first prediction concerning Theodoric to the fact that he would act deceitfully, and his every act was marked by that characteristic. Though his friendship and assistance were pledged to the Eastern emperor by a treaty, and in return he received great sums of money and large tracts of land, he caused his own Gothic warriors to rise in a body, slaughter the Greek subjects of the emperor, and ruthlessly burn and destroy many cities and towns. In the case of Odoacer also, after swearing to live in peace and friendship, Theodoric took the first available chance to murder him, and, where Odoacer would least expect to be attacked, at a banquet to which he had invited Theodoric and his leading officers.

With the passing of Italy into the hands of the Goths the Western Roman empire was for a time buried in ob-

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

"THE SONS OF GOD" GEN. 6:2, 4

EXTERMINATIONS OF GIANTS

THE PAST studies of this people have brought us to the consideration of its overthrow.

Deuteronomy seven gives a record of the overthrowing of the people of Canaan, largely giants, by the descendants of Abraham. God's instructions were not alone to destroy them, but, as the Hebrew word signifies, to exterminate them.

This word "giants" in the above quoted texts, excepting Gen. 6:4 and Num. 13:33, is from the Hebrew word Rephaim. As the Anakims were descendants of Anak, so the Rephaims were descendants of Rapha. See 2 Sam. 21:16, 18, 20, 22, where "the giant" is Hebrew Rapha. His offspring were called Rephaims.

Thus, there were different families and tribes developed from the original strain of giants (nephilim), just as there were different tribes of Israel developed from common ancestry.

Now these Rephaims of Canaan are first mentioned in Gen. 14:5, where Chedorlaomer went out and "smote the Rephaims in Ashteroth Karnaim, and the Zuzims in Ham, and the Emims in Shaveh Kiriathaim". All these are spoken of in the above Deuteronomy texts as giants, Rephaims. Anak is specifically mentioned in Num. 13:33 as being a descendant of the nephilim, and his descendants are again spoken of as nephilim. In Deut. 2:10, 11 both the Emims and the Anakims "were accounted giants" (Rephaim, Heb.). All were evidently branches of the nephilim as were the Anakims. Thus, almost immediately, from the time that God announced His promises to be fulfilled through Abraham's seed, this strange race of giants looms up under the name Rephaim, Gen. 14:5. There is little question but that the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah was because of this un-Adamic race increasing amidst the Adam race.

That it was God's plan and purpose to utterly exterminate these half-breed, "ungodly men" is not only evidenced by their destruction by the flood, but also by the victory of Chedorlaomer over these people, by the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah on account of these people, and the cutting off of the tribes of Canaan by Israel. It is further evidenced, also, by the fact stated in Isaiah's prophecy: ". . . they are deceased, they shall not rise". This word "deceased" is the Hebrew word "Rephaim". It is a proper noun in the Hebrew. It is the Rephaim that shall not rise. These Rephaim are the "other lords beside thee", v. 13. That this is not a mistaken interpretation is further evidenced by v. 19, which reads: "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead (Rephaim)". The word "dead" of v. 19, like the word "deceased" of v. 14, is "Rephaim", a proper noun. The words "cast out" of v. 19 are not words referring to resurrection, but "cast out" in the sense of cast away, throw out, rid self of.

It is God's purpose that these Rephaims, giants, nephilims, half-breed people, shall be utterly cast out, exterminated. The people originated from "the sons of God and the daughters of men", Gen. 6:4, will be no more.

EDITOR RESTITUTION HERALD: Dear Sir: I noticed a question in your issue of January seventeenth, as to who are the sons of God of Gen. 6:2. Apparently you seem to convey the thought that they are not the sons of Adam.

Now I would like to know why?

Doubtless you know that we are told that there was not a man to till the ground until God created Adam, and we are also told time and again that Adam was the first man, thus doing away with any thought that any other race of people existed on the earth at the time of his creation.

Again, if they were angels then angels can sin, and what object will God have in making us like unto the angels? Mark 12:25.

That they are the descendants of Seth seems to me evident, because we have been led to believe that he was a man of God and he evidently brought up his family to be God-fearing, law-abiding people. But when some of them came to think of marriage they became enamored by the sons of Cain, or daughters, and they did just what too many of our young people, and older ones do to this day, viz., they became unequally yoked together with unbelievers. If some one should say that law was not given then, I would ask for proof.

Would we have known that God had instructed Adam that they should not even touch the forbidden fruit if Eve had not reported it to the serpent? And so we must know in the first few chapters of Genesis that there are many things said and done which are not recorded, but those things that are written are for our admonition on whom the ends of the ages are come. And even now, today, those who receive the engrafted word become the sons of God, 1 John 3:2, as you have already mentioned. Then why should we hesitate to believe that these sons of God of Gen. 6:2 are just as much the sons of Adam through Seth as that we can become the sons of God through Jesus Christ? They took the name of the one whom they served, even as we.

I have also looked up the other texts you cite and fail to find any suggestion of angels in them. The "Targum" is an unknown book to me. My book reads, "Give unto the Lord, oh ye mighty", and the margin reads, "ye sons of the mighty". Psa. 29:2.

Quite possibly you would refer me to Jude 6 but I would answer: If sons of God, means angels, why might not angels mean sons of God? As we are called sons of God, i.e., the true followers, obedient to God, when we read the seventh verse we find the illustration and we know that it was the sons of Adam who have fulfilled this very condition. Then why wander far away into the mist of outer darkness, that I have never seen any one yet who has been able to fully comprehend. Let us hold fast to the simple truths which God has revealed and leave the mysteries to the others. Submitted in love,

SUBJECTS FOR STUDY

WILL THE CHURCH BE JUDGED AT CHRIST'S COMING? DOES GOD DO THIS JUDGING

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

I RECENTLY read an article on Christ's second coming. The writer expressed the belief of some of our own people concerning this special line of thought, so I am sending a copy of this short article, hoping some of our able ministers will write on the subject. The article is as follows:

"Matthew 25:30, 31 assuredly refers to the judgment of the household of Christ at His coming. To understand it, read in connection Matt. 24, which forms a part. It may therefore be paraphrased thus: 'When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; . . . and he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other:' for 'the dead in Christ shall rise first:' being awakened by the voice of the archangel and the trumpet sound, and together with the saints that are alive will be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air. (1 Thess. 4:16, 17. This airy place is the throne set for judgment. 'He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant unto me by sacrifice. And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge himself.' Psa. 5:4-6. This judgment takes place before He comes to Jerusalem: for when He makes His appearance there all His saints will be with Him. Zech. 14:5. The question that arises is, 'Where do He and His saints come from?' The answer is, 'From Teman' (Elah comes from Teman, or from Teman cometh), 'and the Holy One from mount Paran.' (Hab. 3:3). The word Teman means the south, and should be so translated in this passage. The peaks of Horeb and Sinai are a portion of the mountain chain of Paran, Horeb being at the northern edge of the ridge and Sinai being at the southern edge. Horeb is styled the 'mount of God' in 1 Kings 19:8, and Moses in spirit indicates Sinai as the place from which Jehovah comes with myriads of saints. Deut. 33:3. No more suitable place could be found than that desolate region south of Jerusalem for the angel reapers, Matt. 13:39, to gather the tares and wheat for the purpose of separation, without drawing the attention of the nations to what is going on. Moses was there instructed in the law, and the saints are there to sit down at the feet of their Lawgiver, Deut. 30:3, to receive instruction previous to the going forth of the law from Zion, 'and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.' Isa. 2:3. "Matthew 25:31-46 therefore depicts the separation of the wheat from the tares . . . the tare class being relegated to the judgment and the wheat into 'my barn'. In Rev. 7:9 we see the righteous enter into eternal life. Matt. 25 depicts the wheat in glory."—Selected.

My reason for asking that this subject be written on, is for the benefit of some who are puzzled about these passages of Scripture. For myself, I believe that only those who are worthy to rule and reign with Christ are raised to meet Him when He comes, they are raised immortal and, if worthy, for rulers to be with Him in His kingdom. The saints who are living when He comes will be changed to an immortal nature and will ascend to meet Him, with those who have been awakened.

But we have those who agree somewhat with the writer of this little article of which I have copied a part, the part bearing on the question of Christ's coming for His saints and the judgment of the church when He comes.

"We agree with old Samuel Smiles, that the man who never made a mistake never made anything else."

livion. But it was ordained that it should again be brought to life, though in a new form and under an entirely different class of rulers. Pagan rule was now a thing of the past; but no one at that time could possibly have foreseen that a great Roman Catholic empire would, within little more than a century, be firmly established on the ruins of the Pagan. Of all the rulers who had arisen in Western Europe none was of the Catholic faith, to which, indeed, all were bitterly opposed. But there was still one who had not adopted Christianity (Clovis, king of the Franks) and the Roman Catholic hierarchy, realizing that it was easier to convert a heathen than to proselytize one already Christianized, became deeply interested in the career of this monarch.

other hand extensive preparations for war.

So we, like Moses in his day, must endure, "having seen him who is invisible." We can rejoice because it seems as if we can see the beginning of the end. None of us know what we may have to endure or experience while still in this life; for God says, "If the righteous scarcely be saved", what will be the end of the sinner and the ungodly? But we believe as we faithfully look to Him that He will never leave or forsake us as we make the Bible our guide.

Many are saying, "Peace, peace when there is no peace." But the way of peace they do not know.

CHRIST IN PSALM

among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." Psa. 22: 16-18.

Over nineteen hundred years elapse, and the rest of the Psalm (prophecy) becomes operative, developing a glorious portrayal: "The glory that was set before him" is realized, Heb. 12:2. Our troubles and trials are changed to gladness and laughter; humility and suffering for righteousness' and the gospel's sake to exaltation, honor, glory (John 12:26; Rom. 8:18); and the release from the possibility of the second death, and the beginning of an endless, immortal life with the King of kings and Lord of lords! Any wonder the "natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God"? 1 Cor. 2:14. Too good to be true, he thinks. Yet such are the sure promises of God, which constitute the "prize" which the Christian is ever contesting for—the goal toward which he is continually "pressing".

Jesus in the beginning gives all praise to the Father, e. g., "I will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the congregation (assembly; multitude) will I praise thee. Ye (Christians) that fear the LORD, praise him; all ye seed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the seed of Israel. . . . My praise shall be of thee in the great congregation: I will pay my vows (promises to God—Strong) before them that fear him. The meek shall eat and be satisfied: they shall praise the LORD that seek him: your heart shall live for ever. All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee. For the kingdom is the LORD'S: and he is the governor among the nations."—Psa. 22:22-28.

Now (v. 30) the prophecy introduces the overcomers, the Lamb's wife (Rev. 2:26-28; 19:7): "A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the LORD for a generation." This "seed" is referred to by Paul: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:26-29. Then "those being invited according to a purpose (Rom. 8:28, Emp. Diag.), "shall come, and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done this." Psa. 22:31.

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

Deep in unfathomable mines
Of never-failing skill,
He treasures up His bright designs
And works His sovereign will.

Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan His work in vain:
God is His own interpreter,
And He will make it plain.

—William Cowper.

ADVANTAGES OF THE BUDGET SYSTEM OF FINANCE

IT HAS been the sad experience of more than one church congregation that when an emergency problem arose, such as building a new church, establishing a printing plant, or any such similar thing, certain ones would contribute largely for the emergency task, but would at once discontinue a small or great portion of their contributions for the regular current program. Thus, immediately, when the emergency work was undertaken, finances for the current work began to dwindle and real financial embarrassment would ensue.

Regardless of whatever emergency work arises to be financed, it must always be realized that the current program must first be maintained, else the emergency provision fails in its usefulness.

Someone might say, "We are going to build a new and better dwelling house. Because we are putting our money into the house, we must stop buying groceries, clothes and school text books and turn all of our money into lumber bills."

That would be fine if the family thus doing could get along without eating and living during the months of the building of the house. On the contrary, all realize that the harder one works for the erection of any such new improvement the more he is really going to need in the way of groceries; that is, the normal current household expenses cannot possibly be lessened. And they must needs be met.

So also in the church work: no building or expansion investment locally, or in state conference, or in General Conference can in any wise lessen the needs for maintenance of the current continual program. That individual or local church which feels that he or it is putting much into improvement and is therefore excusable for withdrawing support from some phase of the necessary current program of the work, is only creating difficulty which must in the end be injurious to the improvement concerning which he is devoting an undue share.

The budget system of finance reckons with such conditions and keeps ever before the individual the need of maintaining each and every phase of current obligation—the local phase, the state phase, the general phase.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

"SO CHRIST WAS ONCE OFFERED TO BEAR THE SINS OF MANY; AND UNTO THEM THAT LOOK FOR HIM SHALL HE APPEAR THE SECOND TIME WITHOUT SIN UNTO SALVATION."—HEBREWS 9:28.

THE SECOND coming of Christ is one of the Bible's outstanding teachings of hope. No other great promise of truth is completely fulfilled without the return of our Lord and Master. Did God make a covenant to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob? That covenant cannot be realized until after Jesus, the Seed of the covenant, shall have returned to earth to fulfill the promises in the covenant. Did God promise life, salvation, to man? That salvation, according to the text above quoted, can be consummated only by His appearance "the second time without sin unto salvation".

All of God's promises are centered in Christ Jesus. Without Him was not anything made that is made. He is the one Seed of the woman through whom all plans and purposes of God will be fulfilled. For this great fulfillment the return of Him concerning whom the great Revelation of the Bible is given, must take place.

As He, forty days after His resurrection, was ascending, two white clad messengers addressed the apostles and said, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1:11. And Jesus Himself, in preparing His apostles for the wonderful experiences through which they, with Him, must pass during that closing passover season, said, John 14:3, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; . . ." Matthew quotes the Savior, 16:27, as saying, "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Again, Matthew quotes the Savior, 25:31, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: . . ."

All of these texts assure the reader of faith that the Bible distinctly holds before the eyes of all, one great all-inclusive truth; namely, that "this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

The Crowning Day

The day of Christ's coming in all His glory will be the crowning day of all time till then. No other event till then will ever have held so much of good, of uplift, of benefit to the human race. It will be the beginning of the consummation of all the promises of God, treasured up through all ages, in Christ the Savior.

Therefore, in anticipation of that great and most wonderful day, Christian people, old and young, are urged to give all diligence to make their calling and election sure. Labor and serve and love with that fulness of consecration that shall be most pleasing unto the Father of heaven and unto the Son of His love. That will assure each one to "be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," in the day that the trumpet shall sound the approach of the Lord.

TRUST IN JESUS

Savior, happy would I be,
If I could but trust in thee;
Trust thy wisdom me to guide,
Trust thy goodness to provide,
Trust thy saving love and power,
Trust thee every day and hour;
Trust thee as the only light,
In the darkest hour of night;
Trust in sickness, trust in health,
Trust in poverty and wealth;
Trust in joy and trust in grief,
Trust thy promise for relief;
Trust thy blood to cleanse my soul,
Trust thy grace to make me whole;
Trust thee living, dying, too,
Trust thee all my journey through;
Trust thee till my feet shall be Planted on the crystal sea;
Trust thee ever blessed Lamb,
Till I bear the victor's palm;
Trust thee till my soul shall be Wholly swallowed up in thee.

"FOR THE LORD your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the LORD your God did to the Red sea, which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over: that all the people of the earth might know the hand of the LORD, that is mighty: that ye might fear the LORD your God for ever."—Joshua 4:23, 24.

GROWING IN GRACE

"BUT grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever."—2 Peter 3:18.

The apostle has just concluded his prophetic description of the close of this world and of the establishing of the new heavens and the new earth, "wherein dwelleth righteousness". He then begins to warn and to exhort the brethren to live so closely to Him who gave Himself for the church that they might "be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless". He then concludes with that strong urging, v. 17, "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness."

The great caution of the apostle Peter was that the church should not be "led away", but rather that it might "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ". To grow in Christ's favor that He shall exercise increased favors or grace toward the Christian should be one of the greatest aims in daily Christian life. Who would not feel glad to grow daily in the favor of a popular, honorable ruler in high estate? To receive favors of an upright president or king can but awaken the heart of an individual to render better and truer service to such an one. But what must it be to grow in the favor of our Lord, Jesus Christ?

It must be evident to all that to thus increase before the Lord necessitates that the individual shall live more and more faithfully and consecratedly before Him. The little things of life, as well also as the big, must of necessity shapen the character and conduct of the individual in this particular.

The February issue of The No-Tobacco Journal states that one Miss Royden, an English evangelist, having recently come to America to work with one of our religious denominations, publicly announced that "smoking and drinking in moderation have nothing to do with religion". Jesus inspired the apostle Paul to say, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." 1 Cor. 3:16, 17.

Distorts Moral Sense of Best Person

The same journal quotes Charles B. Towns, one of the greatest specialists in America in the treatment of the various kinds of drug addiction. Mr. Towns, according to this journal, says:

"Morphine, as is very well known, will distort the moral sense of the best person on earth; it is part of the action of the drug. Since the narcotic effect of tobacco is very similar to that of morphine and is obtained in the same way, one would naturally suppose that tobacco would produce, in a milder degree, something of the same moral distortion. This may seem a startling conclusion, but change your mental attitude and observe. Have not smokers undergone a noticeable moral deterioration in at least one particular? They have a callous indifference to the rights of others. This happens with all habitual indulgence, of course, but is it not carried to a greater extreme with tobacco than with any other? Few men quarrel with a hostess who does not allow them to drink, but all habitual smokers expect that, regardless of her own desires, she will let them smoke after dinner. 'We gave up the fight against tobacco in our drawing rooms long ago,' said a famous London hostess. 'We found it to be a case of no smoke, no men.' Respectable men in New York City who would not break any other law, deliberately smoke in the subway, despite the fact that it is forbidden and that it is vitally necessary to keep the air there as pure as possible. A gentleman is more annoyed at being forced to consult another's preference about smoking than about anything else that could arise in social intercourse, and is often at small pains to conceal his impatience with people who believe they have rights which should be respected. He says, 'What right has any one to object to my smoking?' If he were morally sound, common courtesy would cause him to ask, 'What right have I to smoke where others object to it?'"

"If a man must get drunk, we say he shall get drunk where he is a nuisance only to himself and to others of the same kind. If a man wishes to interlard his conversation with obscenity and grossness, we say he shall not compel us to listen to him; but a smoker may, with impunity, pollute the air, offend the nostrils, and make himself a nuisance to everyone near who does not practice his vice."

Is this not morally obtuse? Change your mental attitude and consider.

"The habitual use of a narcotic produces a cunning and resource in concealment; it develops, when occasion arises, the desire to deceive; and whether occasion arises or not, the desire to shift obligation and to evade responsibility. Tobacco does this more mildly than opium, and it does so more appreciably with boys than with men; but, as with opium, it is part of the narcotic effect in all cases."

A Day of Specialists

This is the day of specialists. We specialize on things big and small. Here is one who has specialized on the effect of drugs upon the human system. No one questions his assertion that morphine "will distort the moral sense of the best person on earth; it is part of the action of the drug." No one can feel that to knowingly engage in and habituate self to the use of morphine could in any wise advance the individual so as to increase him in favor of the Lord, Jesus Christ.

But this same specialist not only asserts that "the narcotic effect of tobacco is very similar to that of morphine and is obtained in the same way", but he also cites that which is too well known by all in proof that certain uses of tobacco do distort the moral sense of some of the very best people among men.

Question: Should these and all other personal habits be studiously and prayerfully studied, all with a view to their effect upon the individual's standing in the favor and knowledge of Jesus Christ?

Pleased, encouraged, must have been the apostle John when Jesus, following His resurrection, spoke to him on the way and said, "Follow me". What favor was thus shown him! There must have been a reason. The reason was in the person of John himself. His clean, devoted life drew the Savior's increased favor.

Let Us Specialize

Let us, too, of this day watch every thought and action of life that we may not only be approved of by the Master, but also be recipients of His manifestation of favor or grace toward us.

WHY SO MANY DIVORCES?

By Melba Glanton Arlington

Melba Glanton Arlington, in this sketch relating to the reason for so many divorces, presents to her readers some of the great strength of love and also of its counterpart, jealousy. That jealousy is not always evil, however, but may be properly encouraged in an edifying direction unto eternity, is emphasized by the quotation, "I am a jealous God". Perhaps jealousy exists only with love. If so, then love should be kept in its sweetest temper and most edifying circumstance.—Editor.

FOR LOVE is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave." Song of Solomon 8:6. Love and jealousy are two words which cover a vast area. We will deal, first of all with jealousy, of which there are three kinds.

We may go back to our earliest history and find that the first murder ever committed was due to material jealousy—the kind which envies what the other fellow possesses; the kind that "gets even". Cain was jealous of his brother's success and coveted his position in life.

Jealousy has crept into politics, religion, the church, the social life, and into business, until men and women have come to blows, or have resorted to violence. The great desire to be in the limelight more than the other fellow and the jealousy, envy, of position and wealth are wrecking the world.

Next comes sex jealousy, which every man has for his woman or vice versa, and which extends even to the animal kingdom. It is only natural, if we care for someone of the opposite sex, to be a bit solicitous lest a third party interfere. This condition always has existed and perhaps always will, so long as we are in this sphere of life. But the thing we must do is to try to overcome it.

So many times our jealousy is unfounded and imaginary. It is once aroused, then the fires of imagination fan the brain until one's vision is dimmed. Vengeance slips in and we are prompted to rush to the divorce court or resort to the last straw, which is often murder. Our prisons are full of men and women suffering out the penalty for taking the latter course.

Uncontrolled jealousy will sap the moral strength from man until he can no longer control his emotions. It is a deadly foe. Temper is always a close companion and feeds the fire to the finish. How my heart aches when I read of the hundreds of murders committed while men and women are in the throes of temper. They awake from a sordid condition to find themselves in prison.

It has been said that a fit of temper will cause a poisonous fluid to saturate the stomach and temporarily cripple the digestive organism. A drop or two of this fluid will kill a small animal. I make no hesitancy in saying that fits of temper are brief spells of temporary insanity and if persisted in will lead to death at an early age.

Jealous temper can be controlled by anyone with God's help. When the desire to let go overtakes you, please sit down and close your eyes to all about you and think, "It is written". You will be surprised at the results. Love will soon creep in.

When we speak of love, real love, we mean that great devotion which a mother has for her child, the only love giving all and asking no return, the biggest love in the universe and the nearest to the kind God gives us. The love between mates should be very sacred and true; a love so big that petty jealousy must crawl to the background.

If poor, struggling humanity could only realize the great power which love holds and put it into thought, speech and life itself the jealous terror would soon be eliminated to a marked degree.

The third kind of jealousy is the kind our Maker refers to when He says, "I am a jealous God". Not the kind that will seek vengeance, but a real jealousy for our future welfare. I believe that God is the only being who really has a right to be jealous. Why? Because ALL belong to Him. We do not really own a single portion.

A THIEF IN THE NIGHT

By C. E. Randall

FOR yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."—1 Thess. 5:2-4.

It is the "day of the Lord" that is coming as a thief—not Christ. This event is not coming on the "church of God". Why? Because they are "children of light" and "children of the day". It is to them that say, "Peace and safety" that this day is coming as a thief, and will bring sudden destruction. This is a prophecy concerning the world and not the church.

A thief comes at an unexpected moment when the householder is not looking for or expecting him. Surely, the foregoing statement of Scripture does not indicate that the Church of God will not be looking and waiting for Christ, although it is commonly taught that Christ comes as a thief for the church. Paul tells us that the church will be looking for Christ, and to them "shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9:28.

It is true that we do not know the hour or day of His appearing. But has not the Master said, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:28.

There are signs that He gave that mark the time of His appearing as being near at hand; therefore, let us "watch and be sober" lest this come on us unawares.

In the epistle to the church, i. e., assembly at Sardis, Christ warns the people of Sardis to watch, or "he will come on them as a thief". Rev. 3:3. The church at Sardis, which will exist during a portion of the "Lord's day",

Rev. 1:10, can not be associated with the "church of God" of the Pauline epistles. The "church of God" has a standing of grace and has been raised up together and made to "sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Eph. 2:6. The assembly at Sardis has a standing of works which will be the basis of Christ's judgment during the day of the Lord. Rev. 22:12. This particular congregation, like the other six assemblies, is based on some phase of Israel's past history, which happened unto them as examples, 1 Cor. 10:6, 11, and does not concern the church of the present, the "body of Christ"

This thief-coming is not for the church of God, but, as expressed in Rev. 16:15-18, it is at the time when the seventh angel pours out the seventh or last vial. This thief-coming is when He comes with the church, who have been previously caught up to meet Christ in the clouds. 1 Thess. 4:16, 17. Thus the church of the above scripture will be accounted worthy to escape all the things coming on the earth during that time of trouble, such as never was, or ever shall be. Luke 21:36; Matt. 24:21. The Sardis assembly does not escape all of this trouble, but goes through much of it, at least, many making their robes white. Rev. 3:3, 4.

How grateful we should be that "God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess. 5:9.

IMPS

If you don't believe in fairies, and the elves are not your friends,

And you have no faith in brownies or in gnomes,
Let me give you just a glimpse Of the ugly little Imps
That invade today so many happy homes.

Impoliteness is an Imp whom all should try to shun,
The young, and older, too, without a doubt,
Impatience is another
Who will cause you lots of bother
'Less you send him quickly to the "right-about".

Impertinence and Impudence are naughty little twins;
And, oh, it is astonishing to see
The mischief that they do;
And, my dear, if I were you,
Their comrade I would never, never be.

One little Imp will sit astride a pencil or a pen,
Whenever there's a problem hard in view,
And draw his mouth 'way down,
And whine out with a frown:
"Impossible, Impossible to do!"

Impudence and Impenitence and Impulse are three more,
Though the latter is not always under ban,
And there are more, no doubt,
Who are hovering about
To get us into trouble if they can.

BIBLE INSPIRATION

By R. H. Judd

THERE ARE some who, in their zeal to uphold Scripture inspiration, take the position that our Authorized Version is itself, as a translation, verbally inspired of God. That such is neither logical nor tenable is again and again illustrated in the course of Bible study. Take, for instance, Psa. 24:6—"This is the generation of them that seek him, that seek thy face, O Jacob." The Revised Version alters this to: "This is the generation of them that seek after him that seek thy face, O God of Jacob."

Also Acts 20:28—"Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." That the foregoing translation cannot be correct, is evidenced by reference to Heb. 9:14, where it is recorded that it was Christ who offered His blood to God. The two words last quoted, quite apart from other forcible Scripture testimony, altogether preclude any possibility of the Authorized translation being the correct one.

The following will appeal to most thoughtful minds as a better translation: first, because it is a legitimate translation according to the ancient manuscripts; second, because it brings Scripture and evidential fact into unison. "Take heed unto yourselves, and to the flock in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord, which he purchased with his blood."

But there is a wider application of the use of legitimate translations. Frequently new light is shed upon a given passage of Scripture (not necessarily doctrinal in the present-day use of that word) which is helpful devotionally. For instance: Psalm 121, as the margin indicates, more properly begins with a question, "Shall I lift up mine eyes to the hills?" The evident answer is, "No, the Lord is my helper". The hills, as in heathen countries now, are representative of idol worship and idol priesthood, as may be seen by the margin of the R. V., in Jer. 3:22, where it speaks of "the noisy throng on the mountains". David's help was in God.

Psalm 32:6 is another instance where legitimate variation in translation is of value, for surely "the time of finding out sin" is the time "when thou mayest be found".

The writer is always glad of the help of translations by well known men of integrity, such as Rotherham, Weymouth and others. Generally, that translation which harmonizes most closely with the Scriptures as a whole will be found to be nearest to the minds of the original authors.

With reference to 1 Chron. 21:1, Dr. Schofield, the well known Bible scholar, is authority for the statement that the R. V. is more generally correct in its marginal renderings. In this instance, the word "adversary" instead of "Satan" sufficiently explains the difficulty regarding 2 Sam. 24:1.

BELIEF SHAPENS CHARACTER AND STANDING BEFORE GOD

By M. A. Woodward

DOES IT make any difference to God and ourselves what we believe in regard to our salvation? Is baptism one of the prerequisites?

Jesus said to His disciples, "Go . . . preach the gospel . . . He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned (condemned)." —Mark 16:15, 16. And to make these words more emphatic and necessary for us to believe, Jesus said, "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting." —John 12:48-50.

Then, if Jesus meant anything when He spoke to the disciples in Mark 16:15, 16, it was to point them to the hope of everlasting life. He knew what trials awaited those who would be brave enough to preach His gospel —persecution, hunger, cold, and finally the martyr's death—but at the end the reward of "no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain", and a place with Him in the "many mansions". In John 14:23 Jesus adds, "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." Read the whole Bible through and there are no more precious words than those; nothing to give any more inspiration to live aright, or prove our desire to please God and His dear Son.

Think of living in partnership every day of our lives with such company; and they, both God and His beloved Son, will abide with us and love us. I cannot write for the tears of joy that blind my eyes at the glorious realization of what may be our daily comfort.

What have we had to do to gain all this? Repent of our sins, believe the words Jesus has spoken to us, and go and be baptized. Let us remember the mode of baptism is not affusian (sprinkling) or pouring a little water on the head; for baptize means to dip, to plunge, to submerge under water. We hear people say the mode or manner of baptism does not matter, as it is only an outward form of an inward grace; but Jesus, when He heard that John was baptizing in the Jordan river, asked John to baptize Him, not sprinkle or pour. Jesus understood the word and all it meant, and as He came up out of the water, "lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Do you suppose God would have given this assurance of love to His Son if He had not been doing the right thing? Then why do people, ministers of the gospel, want to deceive their hearers by making so light of anything on which God has set His seal of approval.

The Methodist bishop here in New Port Richey said,

Sunday evening among several other foolish things, that it was very foolish to believe immersion was the only mode of baptism. "Why," he said, "When Peter baptized the three thousand people, there would not have been water enough to have finished the work; for they would have toted it all away in their clothes." How foolish and wicked such remarks; as though God did not understand the matter fully and mean just what He said.

The disciples believed and acted out their belief. Paul, in Romans 6:1-11 helps us so vividly to see the type of resurrection life: "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

The Christian life is a new life. We have become dead to sin, and the new life begins with every sin forgiven—a clean, white page before us.

May God help us to keep it clean because of His blessed presence with us.

WORDS OF THE BIBLE COUNTED

WHEN, WHERE and HOW

BY LYMAN BOOTH

IT IS well known that the letters, words, verses etc., contained in the Bible have been counted, but by whom, when or where, is not generally known. Treat's Publication, entitled, "Curiosities of the Bible", speaks of the occurrence as being of Spanish origin, and that the Prince of Granada, fearing usurpation, caused the arrest of the would-be usurper, and by order of the Spanish crown, he was thrown into an old prison, where he was confined for thirty-three years with no other companion than the rats, mice and other vermin that frequented his cell.

During his confinement he counted the letters, words etc., contained in the Bible, and scratched the several numbers on the stone walls with a nail. When his work was discovered he was furnished with writing utensils and ordered to make a copy of the results of his long and tedious task, and on its being completed, he finally received his liberty. The following is a partial copy of his great work:

The Bible contains 3,566,480 words, 31,173 verses, 1195 chapters and 66 books.

The word "AND" occurs 10,684 times. The word "JEHOVAH" 6,855 times, and the word "REVEREND" but once, which is in the 9th verse of the 111th Psalm.

The middle verse is the 8th verse of the 118th Psalm. The 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet except "J".

The three most inspiring promises are to be found in the 6th chapter of St. John, 37th verse, the 14th chapter of Matthew, 28th verse, and the 37th Psalm, 4th verse.

There are ten chapters in the book of Esther in which the words "Lord" and "God" do not occur. The 8th, 15th, 21st, and 31st verses of the 107 Psalm are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike. The 119th Psalm contains 176 verses. There are no words or names of more than six syllables.

"RIGHTEOUSNESS EXALTETH A NATION"

By Sydney E. Magaw

Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people."

A comparison of any Christian country with any heathen land will prove that Solomon's words are true. The blessings of God upon a people far outweigh multitudes, armies, or natural resources. "The eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil."

India, long in existence as a nation, shows only a contrast to young America. The three hundred and thirty millions of people without God cannot equal our one hundred and twenty millions with God. A people with God stands always at the highest. Thousands could not stand before Gideon, the three hundred and God. The heritage of India is legend, myth, and superstition; that of America is the steady onward and upward growth of a people with a faith in God.

Of all nations the United States, now, stands exalted above all. The Pilgrims and Puritans could not have dreamed that their loyalty to God would reap such a reward. Where the missionary goes and Christianity is learned civilization and material progress follow. Where the God of heaven is not honored, that people is held in the bondage of ignorance. The schools, the hospitals and the churches are not found in heathen lands, unless Christian organizations from without their borders have planted them there.

In the United States nearly all can read and write. How seldom we think of these abilities as blessings. In India ninety-four out of every one hundred cannot read or write. There are, in India, thirty-eight millions of children of school age, out of which only eight millions receive any education at all. Think of it! There are thirty million children of school age getting no instruction, and will grow into manhood and womanhood absolutely illiterate. Only one out of every three boys receives any education, and only one out of every fifteen girls. In India as a whole only one in every seventeen can read and write. Three towns out of every four have no schools. India's literacy percentage is only 5.8 percent, while that of Great Britain is ninety-two percent.

There, mere children have children. Fathers and mothers in many cases become so before reaching an age in which to make it possible to care for their children. The average length of life there is only 24.7 years, while in the United States it is above 40. The population of England increases as fast as India with the birth rate just a little over half as great. In nearly every large city of India over two hundred babies out of every one thousand die within one year and in many of the larger cities the number is over four hundred. In the United States less than seventy-five die the first year out of each one thousand.

If per capita wealth of India is taken as 1, that of Japan would be 3.7, Canada 18.5, Great Britain 22.8, and the United States 27.9. It pays to be a Christian.

In 1917 and 1918 India had twelve newspapers and periodicals per million inhabitants, while in the United States we had two hundred twenty-five per million inhabitants. In India the average for post office articles—letters, papers, and parcels—per person was three and six-tenths, while in the United States the average was one hundred thirty-six.

The number of telephones in use per ten thousand inhabitants are as follows: in India—Bombay 4, Calcutta, 3; in the United States—New York 1170, Chicago 1850.

The above data is taken largely from "Building with India", by Daniel J. Fleming, and copyrighted in 1922.

As surely as "Righteousness exalteth a nation", so will the righteousness of God exalt the individual. He is a Father. He sees and hears and understands. He blesses now and has a greater reward for the faithful one than any human ever conceived. Even morality uplifts, but God's righteousness imputed to man makes him clean from sin and he becomes justified, judged as righteous through the Savior, and exalted on a plane high above all those without God.

A PRAYING church will be a soul-saving church. How quickly one loses the vision of souls when there is a let-down in his prayer life! Unless we continue earnestly in prayer and supplication in the Spirit, we will not have the anointing upon us for service. If we follow the Lord Jesus Christ we will pray a great deal. More than thirty times is prayer mentioned in connection with the life of Jesus. The blessed Master had the habit of prayer. He prayed early in the morning. Mark 1:35.

We are never ready for the day's service no matter what our work may be, until we have met Jesus face to face and had our hearts filled so that our "cup runneth over" with joy. If we neglect the early morning Bible study and prayer for what we consider pressing business, we will find it easy to get out of victory and be weary in body and soul. Prayer keeps us under the Anointed, gives us strength physically, enables us to meet any emergency that may arise. Without much prayer we will be weak and powerless.

Jesus sometimes prayed all night. Luke 6:12, 13. I know of an evangelist whom God is greatly using, and he tells me that he takes an all-night of prayer once a week for himself, praying that God will keep him humble and low at His feet, so cleansed from all sin and self-seeking that the Holy Spirit can have a cleansed, empty vessel to use for the glory of God. We need more all-days and all-nights of prayer. Lord, teach us to pray. —Pentecostal Evangel.

WHERE IS YOUR TREASURE?

By E. O. Stewart

"Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."—Luke 12:34. "Heart" in this verse means affections, and Paul says, "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth." "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."—1 John 2:15-17.

By reading the 18th chapter of Revelation you will find just what the world is lusting after. "The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones (such as rubies and diamonds with which men and women decorate their persons), and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood" (such as fine furniture with which people fill their houses, not even having a church house in which to meet and worship God). The people spend that which belongs to God for such things, while the church work goes begging. One man can build his own home and furnish it with those things, but twenty men cannot build a church house. I am not objecting to people fixing themselves as comfortably as possible: that is a God-given privilege, but don't rob God to do it. Render unto God the things that are God's.

The moral and true religious phases of life are being neglected. Put one-tenth as much into the religious phase as you do in other things, and you will see quite a different condition in every community.

May God help us to find our talents and cultivate them.

"FIT FOR NOTHING"

The city of Hutchinson, Kansas, is a center of the salt industry of the country. Years ago when the facilities for curing and preserving the salt were not what they are now, a great quantity was exposed to the weather, to the wind and the rain, the frost and the heat, and was consequently rendered useless. It "lost its savor." It was used by the city authorities for road making, and a fine avenue was covered a foot deep in the "savorless" salt. For months it was trodden under foot of men and beasts. Robbed of its proper preservative properties, however, it also failed as a roadbed, and soon that highway was one of the worst in the town. Nor was this all. The salt thrown upon the road so saturated the soil that the fine trees that graced each side of the street suddenly dropped their foliage and died. There to-day we have a treeless avenue and a bad road. A character stripped of its helpful influence becomes not merely negative as to good, but positive as to evil.—World's Crisis.

A TRUE INCIDENT

By Lottie E. Young

A YOUNG man had just lost his wife, for whom he deeply grieved. A little boy of four was left, and all the father's heart was wrapped up in that child, but the future looked very dark for the continuance of the home.

One night when sleep had refused to come to the father's eyes, as his brain was busy in contemplating the future, his lips cried out: "My God! The way is hidden; I cannot see the next step."

Evidently the sound of his voice had wakened the child near him, as the little fellow called out, "It is so dark I cannot see you, Daddy." Then, when the reassuring voice was heard, the child said, "I love you", and with the father's arms around him went directly to sleep.

This brought to the mind of the man that promise given so many centuries ago—"Like as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth them that fear him", and while he realized that he would grow weary holding his darling, he said, "I love you, Father, and know your everlasting arms never grow tired, and will ever bear up those who put their trust in Thee. Quiet my anxieties and give me peace." And the prayer was answered.

How full of wisdom are the words of David, as contained in the thirty-seventh Psalm! In it we are told to "Fret not", but to "Trust in the LORD", and commit our way unto Him, for "the salvation of the righteous is of the LORD: he is their strength in the time of trouble. And the LORD shall help them, and deliver them". Are we any wiser today than was this man "after God's own heart", when the sorrows of life press heavily upon us?

VIOLET OR SUNFLOWER CHRISTIANS?

A MAN OF GOD said, "I like best of all that definition of humility that traces the meaning to the etymology—humus, 'ground', i.e., 'Humility, not rising far above the ground'. I like to think of the exquisite trailing arbutus, always half hidden, or the lowly violet, in contrast with the tall and brazen sunflower."

Another man of God, when spoken to about this illustration, added that the little violet was always looking up, and the sunflower, once up, turned its face downward, as if despising the lowlier flora all about it.

In his revealing book on humility, Andrew Murray says that pride is the basal sin out of which all other sins emerge. It was lack of humility which fathered sin in the universe. Satan's heart was lifted up because of pride—this exquisite Lucifer, as he then was, "Light-bearer", wanted to be as God, and it resulted in his downfall, and outcast from glory. It was the same sin that caused the fall of man and sent the virus of original sin pulsing through the veins of all Adam's and Eve's children throughout the generations, for Satan's lie to our first parents led them to believe that by disobeying God they should "become as gods" or God.

Pride ever since has been idolatry—self worship.—Christ Life.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

PART 31

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF THE BURGUNDIANS, THE VISIGOTHS,
AND THE OSTROGOTHS

Daniel 11

THE FRANKS, at the time when they first appear in history, were settled on the banks of the lower Rhine. In the early part of the fifth century, however, they began to extend their kingdom, and they soon obtained possession of most of the country now known to us as Belgium. In the year A. D. 486, under the command of their youthful king, Clovis, they defeated the Roman general, Syagrius, and took possession of his dominions. Alaric II, king of the Visigoths, whose territories extended over the southwest of Gaul, became alarmed at the victories of Clovis, and, fearing that his kingdom would also be attacked, sought and obtained the interview which the prophet foretold.

"And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, and they shall speak lies at one table; but it shall not prosper; for yet the end shall be at the time appointed."

"The first victory of Clovis had insulted the honor of the Goths. They viewed his rapid progress with jealousy and terror; and the youthful fame of Alaric was oppressed by the more potent genius of his rival. Some disputes inevitably arose on the edge of their contiguous dominions; and after the delays of fruitless negotiation a personal interview of the two kings was proposed and accepted. This conference of Clovis and Alaric was held in a small island of the Loire, near Amboise. They embraced, familiarly conversed, and feasted together; and separated with the warmest professions of peace and brotherly love. But their apparent confidence concealed a dark suspicion of hostile and treacherous designs; and their mutual complaints solicited, eluded, and disclaimed a final arbitration. At Paris, which he already considered as his royal seat, Clovis declared to an assembly of the princes and warriors the pretence and the motive of a Gothic war. 'It grieves me to see that the Arians still possess the fairest portions of Gaul. Let us march against them with the aid of God; and having vanquished the heretics, we will possess and divide their fertile provinces.'" (Gibbon: chap. 38.)

How wonderfully, and yet how simply, does God set forth the fact that He is omnipotent. Here is a prophecy which, at first glance, would appear to be unimportant, yet which is in reality of great significance. First of all, it establishes without fear of contradiction the fact that Daniel was divinely inspired, for no mere man could have foretold history as he did. Secondly, it shows how clearly in a few words God can indicate the particular action, or actions, by which a certain individual may be identified. No other meeting of two kings under similar circumstances is recorded in history, and therefore the predictions can only refer to Clovis and Alaric II. The meeting of these two kings was apparently such a trivial circumstance that few historians have even referred to it. But no trivialities are to be found in the Word of God; every sentence demands the closest scrutiny.

"Till the thirtieth year of his age Clovis continued to worship the gods of his ancestors. His disbelief, or rather disregard, of Christianity, might encourage him to pillage with less remorse the churches of an hostile territory; but his subjects of Gaul enjoyed the free exercise of religious worship, and the bishops entertained a more favorable hope of the idolater than of the heretics. The Merovingian prince had contracted a fortunate alliance with the fair Clotilda, the niece of the king of Burgundy, who, in the midst of an Arian court, was educated in the profession of the Catholic faith. It was her interest as well as her duty to achieve the conversion of a Pagan husband; and Clovis insensibly listened to the voice of love and religion. He consented (perhaps such terms had been previously stipulated) to the baptism of his eldest son; and though the sudden death of the infant excited some superstitious fears, he was persuaded a second time to repeat the dangerous experiment. In the distress of the battle of Tolbiac, Clovis loudly invoked the God of Clotilda and the Christians; and victory disposed him to hear with respectful gratitude the eloquent Remigius, bishop of Rheims, who forcibly displayed the temporal and spiritual advantages of his conversion. The king declared himself satisfied of the truth of the Catholic faith; and the political reasons which might have suspended his public profession were removed by the devout or loyal acclamations of the Franks, who showed themselves alike prepared to follow their heroic leader to the field of battle or to the baptismal font. The important ceremony was performed in the cathedral of Rheims with every circumstance of magnificance and solemnity that could impress an awful sense of religion on the minds of its rude proselytes. The new Constantine was immediately baptized with three thousand of his warlike subjects, and their example was imitated by the remainder of the gentle barbarians, who, in obedience to the victorious prelate, adored the cross which they had burnt, and burnt the idols which they had formerly adored. . . .

"On the memorable day when Clovis ascended from the baptismal font, he alone in the Christian world deserved the name and prerogative of a Catholic king. The emperor Anastasius entertained some dangerous errors concerning the nature of the divine incarnation; and the barbarians of Italy, Africa, Spain, and Gaul were involved in the Arian heresy. The eldest, or rather the only son of the church, was acknowledged by the clergy as their lawful sovereign or glorious deliverer; and the arms of Clovis were strenuously supported by the zeal and favor of the Catholic faction." (Gibbon: chap. 38.)

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.
Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.
Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

SONS OF GOD

By Wm. Burget

THE Church of God people should know that the Scripture teaches that Adam was the son of God, Luke 3:38, and that Noah, a descendant of Adam, was also a son of God.

"And the LORD said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth . . ." Gen. 6:7. If God created those human beings that He destroyed, they were descendants of Adam, the son of God. Therefore, all those human beings that God destroyed were sons of God.

Jesus said: "And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man." Luke 17:26. Are there not giants in the world today, men of renown, able to lead mighty armies, and to build mighty ships; giants in finance, men of renown who have amassed millions of dollars? The Word of God teaches that it takes one thousand of our years to make one day with God. 2 Peter 3:8. It teaches that God made everything in six days and He rested on the seventh from all "his work which he had made". Gen. 2:2.

The Word of God also teaches that God made man on the sixth day. Therefore Adam was in the garden about two thousand of our years, or two days with God. "And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, . . ." Gen. 1:28. Did Adam obey God, or did he and Eve live in the garden of Eden two thousand years, and had no children born unto them? How could God say unto the woman, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception . . ." Gen. 3:16, if no children were born unto them? Those scriptures teach that there were children born unto Adam and Eve while they were in the garden of Eden, and those children being sustained by eating of the tree of life, grew into giants and men of renown. Their descendants living in the time of Noah were also giants, men of renown.

"THE SONS OF GOD", GEN. 6:2, 4.

By Gertrude M. Logan

IN REPLY to the article on the above subject will say that it seems to me that the Bible deals with the salvation of the people of this earth only, and if you bring in any other stock, from whatever source, you confuse matters.

We are now sons of God by faith, but we can fall away by forming worldly alliances, and it is just this, I think, that was done in Genesis six, except that the worldlings were of great size, and their children became "men of renown". The combination of superior brains and large, strong bodies of the giants enabled their children to reach a higher position than before. Hastings Bible Dictionary states that the giants were large, but were unable to rule themselves, being subject to the smaller people around them, but after mingling with the sons of God they became "men of renown". If these sons of God were of heavenly origin, it is very strange that such superior spiritual beings did not transmit any of their nature to the children who were so earthly and wicked that God destroyed them.

These sons of God could not be angels of heaven, as we are told in Matt. 22:30 that they neither marry nor are given in marriage, and Luke 20:36 says they can't die.

It seems to me that Genesis 6 and 2 Peter should be taken in connection with other Scripture to be understood. Since "angel" means "messenger", we must depend on the context to determine whether they are heavenly or not. The Diaglott shows the original Greek word in 2 Peter 2:4 to be different from that in Heb. 1:7 and 2:5 and 9; so those of 2 Peter 2:4 must be earthly messengers who are confined to tartarus, with chains of thick darkness (error). Then Peter goes right on about the old world, or age, rescuing Noah and Lot because they were righteous.

Since God's glory would consume a fallen creature of the earth, I cannot see how an angel that had dwelt in heaven, of God's throne, could escape one second after he even conceived an evil thought. The heaven where evil exists is the one described in Rev. 12:7. Isa: 13:13 speaks of the same heavens.

In Gen. 5:24 we read that Enoch walked with God, which implies sonship. And in Gen. 4:26 we find that men began to call themselves by the name of the Lord (margin).

The pigmy is just as much out of the ordinary as the giant, neither of which type seems to fit in the plan of Jehovah in spiritual or eternal things. We have an occasional giant today, which shows that the original characteristic came through Adam. Since there is nothing in the inspired Word to account for their origin other than this, I deem it unsafe to formulate theories unsupported by inspiration: thereby becoming "wise above that which is written". They were not the type God desired to continue into eternity, and were only of use in some way to perfect a class for eternity, as far as I am able to see it. They were not confined to any one tribe or political party. Goliath, of 1 Samuel seventeen, was a Philistine.

Yiddish schools were recognized as on a par with the regular public schools maintained by the Government, in a decision adopted by the Warsaw Municipal Council, which also voted to grant a subsidy to the Yiddish schools almost five times the amount of what has previously been granted. This decision, a victory for the Yiddish school system in Poland, will probably affect most of the towns in Poland.

Two Jewish communities joined the Zionist Organization in Hungary, at the conclusion of addresses delivered by Rabi Loew, member of the Senate. These communities are Miskolez and Szegedin. This is part of a rapid rise in the membership of the Hungarian organization since Zionism was recently legalized.

THE MANGER OF BETHLEHEM

SOON AFTER the time when John the Baptist was born, Joseph the Carpenter of Nazareth, the husband of Mary, had a dream. In his dream he saw an angel from the Lord standing beside him. The angel said to him, "Joseph, I have come to tell you that Mary, the young woman whom you are to marry, will have a Son sent by the Lord God. You shall call His name Jesus, which means salvation, because He shall save His people from their sins."

Joseph knew from this that his coming Child was to be the King of Israel, of whom the prophets of the Old Testament had spoken so many times.

Soon after Joseph and Mary were married in Nazareth a command went forth from emperor Augustus Caesar through all the lands of the Roman Empire for all the people to go to the cities and towns from which their families had come and there to have their names written down upon the list, for the emperor wished a list to be made of all the people under his rule. As both Joseph and Mary had come from the family of David the king, they went together to Bethlehem, there to have their names written down upon the list. You remember that Bethlehem, in Judaea, six miles south of Jerusalem, was the place where David was born and where his father's family had lived for many years.

It was a long journey from Nazareth to Bethlehem, down the mountains to the river Jordan, down the Jordan almost to its end, and then up the mountains of Judah to the town of Bethlehem. When Joseph and Mary came to Bethlehem they found the city full of people who, like themselves, had come to have their names recorded upon the list. The inn was full and there was no room for them, for no one but themselves knew that the young woman was soon to be the mother of the Lord of all the earth. The best that they could do was to go to the stable where the cattle were kept. There the little baby was born and was laid in the manger where the cattle were fed. On that night some shepherds were tending sheep in a field near Bethlehem. Suddenly a great light shone upon them, and they saw an angel of the Lord standing before them. They were filled with fear, as they saw how glorious the angel was, but the angel said to them, "Be not afraid, for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people. For there is born this day in Bethlehem, the city of David, a Savior, who is Christ the Lord, the anointed King. You may see Him there and may know Him by the sign—He is a newborn Baby lying in a manger at the inn."

And then they saw that the air around and the sky above them were filled with angels, praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men.

OTHER MIGHTY WORKS OF JESUS

Mark 5:22-43

HUNDREDS and hundreds of years ago, in the time when Jesus lived, there was a rich man whose name was Jairus. He lived in a town by the shores of a lake, and he was one of the great men in the town. Everyone knew of Jairus and everyone knew what a good man he was.

Jairus was not a priest, but he was almost as good as a priest. He had to decide every sabbath day who should read from the Word of God, and he had to choose the man to preach to the people. There was no one in all the church who was greater than Jairus.

When Jairus went out on the street he used to wear a little box tied to his forehead. What do you suppose was in the box? There were verses from the Word of God, all written down and tightly rolled together. Jairus wore this box as a sign that he meant to keep God's Word on his mind all the time. There was no one in all the town who was better than Jairus.

But Jairus was very sad. Even if he was great and good, and even if everybody knew him and loved him, there was one thing that made him sad. His little daughter was very sick. No one knew what was the matter with her and no one could cure her. At last the doctors said, "Unless something is done to help her very soon, she will die." But no one could tell what to do.

Then Jairus heard of Jesus, the Man of God who was doing such wonderful things. Jairus lived on the very lake where Jesus lived, but He was in a different town. So Jairus said to himself: "I know what I will do. I will go and seek for Jesus and ask Him to come and cure my little girl."

He rose up from beside the bed where the little girl lay and went quickly through the streets of the town. He went down to the edge of the lake to take a boat, but just as he reached the edge of the water, he saw a great crowd of people. They were all gathered around one Man, and they were bringing out their sick people for Him to touch. Then Jairus knew that Jesus Himself had just come across the lake, and he was very glad, for he said, "Surely God is going to help me, for He has sent Jesus here, even before I went after Him."

Jairus came near to Jesus and knelt down before Him.

All the people were surprised when they saw so great a man kneeling on the ground, but Jairus did not care what they thought. He only cared about his little girl.

So he said to Jesus, "My little daughter is at the point of death. I pray thee that thou come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be made whole and live."

Jesus was filled with pity for poor Jairus, and He said, "I will go with thee to thy house." So Jairus led the way to his house, and all the crowds of people followed after them, so that they could not go very fast; for every one wanted to see what Jesus was going to do.

While they were going, Jairus lifted up his eyes and saw his servants coming. Then he was filled with fear, for he knew they had come to bring him news, and he was afraid it was bad news. The servants came near, and said, "Thy daughter is dead; why troublest thou the Teacher any further?"

Then Jairus grew sad at heart, and he said, "It is too late: there is no more hope." For you see Jairus did not know about the widow's son that Jesus had cured and he thought, "No one can bring the dead to life."

But Jesus answered him, "Fear not, only believe." Then Jairus took heart again and they went on together.

So they came to the place where Jairus lived. As soon as they were nearly there, they began to hear sounds of sad music and weeping coming out of the door. For in those days when any one was dead, they used to have people come to the house to play very sad music and to cry aloud and make a great deal of noise.

When Jesus heard all the people crying and making sad music He said to them, "Go out of the house, and leave me alone. Why make a noise and weep? The child is not dead, but sleepeth." Then they all laughed at Him, for they were quite sure that she was dead.

But Jesus put them all out of the house. He did not want to have people around Him who were weeping and making a great noise. He took only the father and mother of the girl and three of His disciples, Peter and James and John.

Then He went into the room where the girl was lying. She was stretched out white and still on her bed. Her mother and father could hardly keep the tears from their eyes as they looked at her, but they believed in Jesus. They knew that He was going to do something wonderful, and they watched Him.

Jesus went up to the little girl as she lay there, and took her by the hand. And He said to her, "Talitha cumi", which means, "Maiden, I say unto thee, arise."

What do you suppose happened? The maiden arose and got out of bed. She did not even sit still on the edge of the bed, but she began to walk about the room.

Jairus was very much surprised at what Jesus had done and he thanked God, who had sent Jesus to help him. And the mother fell at Jesus' feet and cried, "Oh Master, you have brought my little daughter back from the grave to me."

But Jesus said, "Give the maiden food." For He knew that she was hungry after such a hard sickness. So they went and brought food for the maiden, and they

OTHER MIGHTY WORKS OF JESUS

Mark 5:22-43

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 3:14-21

GOLDEN TEXT

Thy faith hath made thee whole.—Mark 5:34.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Other Mighty Works of Jesus. All agree that the prophecy of Isaiah 11:1-10 refers to Jesus, a Branch, that was to shoot forth from the roots of Jesse. Of this Branch, the prophet speaks. "The Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge, and of the fear of the Lord; with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth."

Only that the Spirit of the Lord was upon Jesus could He do such works. Mark's gospel glistens throughout with narration of the mighty works and power of our Lord.

In chapter 1, he recites how Jesus healed one with an unclean spirit, v. 23; He healed Peter's mother-in-law of fever, v. 29; He healed many diseased persons, v. 32; He cleansed the leper, v. 41. In chapter 2, He healed the sick with the palsy, v. 1. In chapter 3, He restored the withered hand, healed many, v. 10, healed another of an unclean spirit, v. 11. In chapter 4, He stilled the wind and stilled the wave, v. 35. In chapter 5, He healed one possessed of legions of devils, v. 1. The swine rushed into the sea, v. 13. He healed the woman, v. 25. He raised Jairus' daughter, v. 35.

His mighty works, His marvelous wisdom, His untarnished righteousness, His undisputed loyalty to God: all these stood out most strikingly, and declared Jesus to be the prophesied Messiah, the Savior of Israel, the Anointed of Jehovah. In it all, He is a Servant of the truest, most faithful, most energetic type.

As King, there could be no equal; no kingdom, under His reign could be surpassed. This, the kingdom of God, is, after all, the great word of instruction that all these mighty words and works affirm.

"I Am the Resurrection." Not only did Jesus reveal by His works that, as Servant to God, His mission was and will be to correct the habits of the living, but by His mighty works He also revealed that to Him, God had given power over still and inert dead.

At the burning bush, Ex. 3:15, Moses was assured that "the LORD God" was the "God of Abraham." Abraham was long since dead. Jesus explained this, Luke 20:27-38, that He was the God of the dead only as His resurrection power restored them to life. Unto Jesus, John 5:26-29, God committed the power to raise the dead. The exercise of this mighty work, also, drew people unto Him.

Questions. Describe a synagogue and its worship in Christ's day. What was the position of Jairus? What would be the influence upon the common people of his prostrating himself before Jesus? Did Jairus strictly believe that Jesus could heal his daughter and prevent her from dying? Could He so have done? Could the people arouse her? Was she beyond human aid? Did Jesus arouse her? Was it the garment touched by the woman that healed her hemorrhage? What is faith? Did it require strength from Jesus to perform mighty works?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

And he said to her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee well; withdraw into peace, and be whole from thy plague.—Mark 5:34, Roth.

This is another instance of the healing power of Jesus. It is also one of the great Bible examples of faith. For what greater faith could this woman or any other person have than that expressed in the words, "If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole"? There was made the contact with Jesus, not only the personal touch, but the contact of faith. "Thy faith hath made thee whole."—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Man's limitations. The Talmud recommended more than ten different remedies for the treatment of the disease from which the poor woman of our lesson suffered. It is evident from the prescriptions recorded that many of the healing methods suggested must have inflicted much suffering on the patient when they were applied. The physician is advised to try them one after the other until the sufferer recovers. All of the methods given in the Talmud appear entirely futile to us, and some of them are undoubtedly based upon the grossest superstition. Yet we must not be too quick in condemning those old Jewish medical practitioners for their ignorance. The modern physicians declare their predecessors of even the past generations were generally wrong in both their diagnoses and in the remedies they prescribed. And it is not at all unlikely that ten years hence our knowledge of disease will have so far advanced that many of the healing methods practiced now will become obsolete, and even be declared to have been harmful rather than beneficial. The honest medical man of to-day readily acknowledges his inability to correctly diagnose all cases brought to him for treatment, and further, that though he may be certain of the nature of the disease he often is at fault as to the proper remedy to apply. This condition in no way reflects upon the education or experience of the physician, but is due to the natural limitations of man's perceptions and powers.

Christ's limitless knowledge and ability. "All things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark 9:23. The limitations of men did not and do not apply to the Great Physician. He was able, and is able, to heal "all our diseases" (Psalm 103:3) because His ministering power is that of the Creator Himself. He knows the true cause of all human weakness is sin, and is, therefore, able to apply the one successful agency for our recovery.—G. E. M.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Other great works of Jesus.

Some had great faith in Jesus, while others followed Him only to find fault with Him. All day long, some days, He was busy healing the sick.

There came a ruler of the synagogue, running and kneeling at Jesus' feet, imploring Him to hasten to his home, for his daughter was dying. And before Jesus could answer him a woman, who had been sick for many years and had found no one to help her, forced her way through the crowd and touched His clothes, and was healed. Jesus asked, "Who touched me?" for He felt virtue, or strength, go from Him. He turned toward the woman, and she told Him what she had done. Jesus said, "Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace." And while Jesus was talking to her a messenger came to tell the ruler that his daughter was dead. Listen. Jesus turned to him and said, "Be not afraid, only believe". Jesus went to his home and took the father and mother to the room where the child lay, and taking her hand, He said, "Daughter, I say unto thee, Arise." And she got up and walked.—M. A. W.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. Ida Eastman, of Fenwick, Ontario, is spending some time in Florida.

"Malcolm" was born to Bro. and Sr. Sydney and Margaret Magaw, January 28, 1928, at Eden Valley, Minnesota.

Sr. D. E. VanVactor, of Evanston, Illinois, is reported to be in the hospital recovering from a major operation.

Sr. Earl Moore, of Niagara Falls, New York, is reported recovering from a prolonged attack of rheumatism.

Word from Bro. Lyman Booth, from St. Louis, Mo., states that he is much improved in health. Bro. Booth has been taking treatments at Dr. Logan's for some months.

Sr. S. Roxana Wince, of Pierceton, Indiana, being quite ill, was taken in the ambulance to the home of Mrs. Mae Mick, where she will receive tenderest care. The Herald hopes to be able to give fuller report next week.

Sr. M. A. Woodward is slowly regaining her strength and health under the influences of the sunshine of Florida, and the sunshine of the home of Bro. and Sr. J. W. Good, at New Port Richey, Florida.

Word comes that Sr. Maria Kennard, of Plymouth, Indiana, recently fell and broke one hip and that she is now in the hospital. Bro. and Sr. Kennard, the parents of Sr. Marshall Logan, will have been married sixty-seven years next May. This is a long time for two lives to live, each within the other. We grieve with Sr. Kennard that in her old age she must suffer this accident. May God's blessings attend them both.

"Our crying need is for our entire ministry to stand behind every phase of national program and be so enthused ourselves that we will carry our enthusiasm into the lives of our congregations."

The above, quoted from a private letter, is a very great truth. If those ministers of the Church of God who claim to be in favor with the work of the General Conference would every one carry out the admonition of the above quoted, it would, without the least additional cost to the ministry, reduce the cost and enhance the efficiency of the board of the General Conference very much indeed.

Let's try it.

Sisters Elizabeth and Angeline Lent are two of our oldest church residents of Niagara Falls, New York. For years their home has been a home for visiting brothers and sisters from whatever place. They have always been backers of the church work locally and nationally—backers in whatever way was possible for them—as was their father before them, not only at Niagara Falls but in the vicinity of his former home at Bowmanville, Ontario.

We are sorry to hear that Sr. Elizabeth Lent has recently not been enjoying the best of health. We pray that she may soon be blessed with normal strength and that her home at 1961 Lockport St., may long continue to be a place of sweet retreat for friend and stranger in the Lord.

Bro. C. E. Randall, who has been at Eldorado, Illinois, for the last few weeks, writes as follows:

"The work here has been exceedingly encouraging in view of the size of the congregation and the road conditions. The attendance has been increasing, new ones coming in for the regular preaching services."

We rejoice with Bro. Randall and with the Eldorado brethren over this report. It seldom fails—if workers put their hearts in the work—the work works forward rapidly. This is as true in prayer meetings as it is in road building.

That a great work has been started at Grand Rapids, Michigan, was evidenced to the writer on Sunday, the fifth. The capacity of the auditorium was large enough to seat just two-thirds of the Sunday School assembled for closing exercises; the one-third (50) stood in a row around the walls of the room.

For the sermon that followed and for the evening sermon the house was practically filled.

That good work has been done here by pastor and people in the year and a half since the work started is only evident to all.

F. L. Austin.

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING

The Blessed Hope Church of God, and Sunday School, Niagara Falls, New York, had their annual business meeting, January 12, 1928.

According to all reports we had a very encouraging year:

Several series of sermons were given by the pastor during the year; an all-day meeting was held in October, consisting of three services and Sunday School, which was well attended; a Berean class was organized and under the leadership of the pastor, Bro. G. E. Marsh, is gaining in membership and enthusiasm. The Bible study and praise service was held each Wednesday night at the home of the Sisters Lent.

At the annual business meeting the members of the Church and Sunday School voted to give the collection taken by both Church and Sunday School on the second Sunday of each month to the Bible Training School. We hope this will be both beneficial and encouraging to those who are in training. May God's blessings attend them in the work.

They also voted to give ten dollars to Mrs. Sanford to help her in her noble work. A box of clothing is also being packed to send to Mrs. Sanford. Her work is a worthy one—may we each lend her a helping hand.

The following Church officers were elected: First Elder, William H. Moore; Second Elder, George Rennard; Deacons, Earl L. Moore and Dr. W. J. Lent; Deaconesses, Mrs. E. C. Culp, Mrs. Jessie Shea and Miss Angeline Lent; Secretary, Mrs. Elsie M. Moore; Treasurer, Elgin C. Culp; Trustee, James R. Moore; Usher, Clyde Shea.

The Sunday School officers are as follows: Superintendent, Earl L. Moore; Assistant Superintendent, Clyde Shea; Secretary, Mrs. Jessie Shea; Treasurer, Clyde Shea.

We invite all to worship with us. Sunday School each Sunday at eleven o'clock, preaching service at seven-thirty.

WILLIAM T. HARDESTY

Oregon, Illinois, was startled on Friday afternoon, of the tenth of February, 1928, by the death of William T. Hardesty at his home, following an illness of a week. Returning home from prayer meeting on the evening of February second, Bro. Hardesty, having a hard cold, retired and was taken, in early morning, with heavy chills. The flu which followed at once became complicated on the eighth with pleuropneumonia, from which latter he succumbed.

The deceased was born January 7, 1882, to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hardesty, of Ashton, Illinois. Soon after his mother's death, which occurred in his fourth year, he was given home and kindly care by Elder and Mrs. George A. Brown. In the labors, sorrows and joys of this family he has since been as one. When about twenty years old he suffered the loss of his father. On December 29, 1912, he was united in marriage with Ida M. Ordnung, of Burlington Junction, Missouri. To them were born three sons, Harold and Robert, who with their mother, and one brother, Louis, of Overland, Missouri, suffer this sad grief, and the third who died at birth.

Bro. Hardesty has for years been a believer in and servant of our Lord, a member and worker of the Church of God. In his quiet, unassuming, patient demeanor he has been well reputed by one and all.

To the church, where he has long served others as deacon, Sunday School teacher and otherwise, he was taken Sunday afternoon, Feb. 12, where, before God, prayer and words of Bible hope were offered, after which kind hands laid him at rest in Riverview Cemetery to await the call of Him who is the Resurrection and the Life.

SOME SUNDAY SCHOOL THOUGHTS FOR SENIOR AND ADULTS

"There cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue . . . saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come . . . and she shall live."

Mark 5:22, 23. This man's great need coupled with reports of what Jesus had done gave birth to belief in his heart to such extent that he came to Jesus for help. Thus he was brought into first contact with the light.

But almost immediately a messenger came which said, "Thy daughter is dead: why troublest thou the Master any further?" And Jesus, anxious to keep alive the tiny spark of belief that was glowing in his heart, said, "Be not afraid, only believe." Then, without demanding an avowal of faith, He led the sorrowing father and mother into the death chamber and freely gave them tangible basis for belief. Mark 5:35-43.

Thus, faith, the condition of salvation, is itself a gift. It is wrong to think of faith as a condition which we can and must fulfill of ourselves in order to gain the service of the Christ. This is salvation by works. Faith is a gift, and the only condition to receiving that gift is consciousness of need, of helplessness. The foundation of faith, even of the first tiny spark, is furnished by God's grace independent of man's activity. That state of mind into which we may work ourselves by declaring that we have faith is not a faith state of mind. It is a kind of forced, emotional conviction that can be kept only by a constant prodding of ourselves. A forced faith is a paradox, and that is the only kind we can have in and of ourselves.

Faith that puts us in contact with the light and its services is that state of mind which evolves under the influence of reason and experience guided by God's hand as soon and as fast as the individual is brought to realize his need of the light. Truly, salvation in every sense is a gift of God's grace.—A. K.

FOR INTERMEDIATES

That the Savior's power was unlimited, reaching all problems of nature and of disease, had been demonstrated. But a knowledge of where power lies is one thing, and of how to receive the benefits of that power is another.

The ruler of the synagogue manifested real faith. Seeking the Master out, he fell down before Him in humility, and earnestly besought Him to come, saying, "And she shall live." Such faith as that goes never unrewarded, and the Master gladly gave the desired blessing.

Again comes the story of the poor, frail woman, weakened by twelve years of disease, summoning all of life's remaining strength with which to press through the throng and touch the hem of her Lord's garment. "Thy faith hath made thee whole." v. 34.

What has faith to do with the receiving of God's real benefits? What relationship do faith and pride bear to each other? —F. E. S.

CURRENT JEWISH EVENTS

As Taken from "The New Palestine"

The Machpela is now open to non-Moslems, as a result of a ruling issued by the Moslem Supreme Council in Jerusalem. The cave, which is presumed to be the burial place of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, is located near Hebron, and has been one of Palestine's Holy sites since the twelfth century. It is concealed by a mosque which was formerly a church built by the Crusaders.

M. Dizengoff was appointed Belgian Vice-Consul in Jerusalem. Mr. Dizengoff was formerly mayor of Tel Aviv.

A Jewish company has acquired the hot springs of Tiberias, and has agreed to complete the improvement of the springs as a health resort within three years.

The first Hungarian Zionist Conference was recently held in Budapest, and was attended by delegates from all parts of the country. Until recently the Zionist Organization was not permitted to enroll members in Hungary.

Henry Ford visited Louis Marshall in New York and personally apologized for the anti-Semitic campaign which was conducted for seven years by The Dearborn Independent, and said that the attacks were made without his knowledge. Mr. Ford assured the head of the American Jewish Committee that he would do everything in his power to right the wrongs that have been committed in his name.

Rumanian anti-Jewish excesses will not be repeated, says George Cretziano, Rumanian Minister to Washington, in a letter to Congressman William I. Sirovich. As a result of Sirovich's introduction of a resolution in the House urging abrogation of the treaties with Rumania because of the anti-Semitic outbreaks in the latter country, Cretziano said that his government was taking all measures to punish those guilty of the excesses, and to prevent a repetition of similar occurrences. This message is said to have been authorized by the Bratiano Government in Bucharest.

TINY TOTS

Jairus and his wife were very sad because their little daughter was sick and about to die. The father went to Jesus to ask Him to make the little girl well, but she died before Jesus and Jairus reached her bedside. However, Jesus took her by the hand and told her to arise. And she came to life again and was well. Then the father and mother were very thankful and happy.

A PSALM OF PRAISE

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High: to shew forth thy lovingkindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every night, . . . For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hands."—Psa. 92:1-4.

MASTERED BY THE MUD

A MAN at Rin Cone once said to a minister of my acquaintance as they stood by the Rio Grande River:

"There is an engine buried out there! The trestle broke on one side and tipped it into the river."

"Didn't they try to save it?" my friend asked.

"Yes, they put down long iron bars, and the last I knew it was sixteen feet below the bottom of the river—sixteen feet deep in the mud, and still going down."

The fine mechanism of the engine did not save it, no matter how polished or oiled or in how fine condition. None of these things were of avail to it when mastered by mud. It was built for a great work, but to do it the engine must remain on the track.

So man, to succeed and do his work, must remain on the track of God's law. When he leaves the track of that morality for the mire of sin and vice and intemperance and all transgression, he is like the engine at Rin Cone—mastered by the mud. No matter how fine his genius or talents or disposition or temperament—none of these avail if he has allowed himself to be mastered by mud. The grandest fire of genius in the world soon burns out in the acrid flame of vice and sin.

Christ can replace the human engine upon the track of obedience to the holy will of God: He can lift from the mire and the pit: He can save even the soul that has been mastered by the mud of sin.—Wonderful Word.

O, TO BE LIKE HIM

By E. O. Stewart

BELOVED, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."—1 John 3: 2, 3.

In what sense are we now the sons of God?

Paul answers this question in Gal. 3:26, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus."

What is faith? Paul also answers this question, "Now faith is the substance (assurance) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Heb. 11:1. Then, those who are led by the spirit of God are the prospective sons of God. They begin the race here for sonship, and if they remain faithful, sowing to the Spirit by which they are led, they shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting, Gal. 6:8, in the world to come. Mark 10:30. "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection."—Luke 20:35, 36.

In hope of such a glorious change, Paul says, "Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."—Phil. 3:20, 21. You will note carefully that, "body" in this verse is singular, while "our" is plural, denoting one body composed of many members. "Our body" is the church—one collective body, composed of many members. See Rom. 12: 4, 5; 1 Cor. 6:15; Eph. 4:4.

This body, composed of believers, obedient Jews and Gentiles, constitutes the "one new man", Eph. 2:15, who is to judge the world in righteousness. Acts 17; 1 Cor. 6:2.

With such prospects in view, of having such exalted position, no wonder John exclaims, "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God."—1 John 3:1. What a glorious hope: "Heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ", Rom. 8:17; destined to sit with Christ in His throne. Rev. 3:21.

Imagine being there, seated with Christ on thrones, ruling in righteousness; with the glow of immortality stamped upon your brow. Sorrow and sickness, pain and death, all are then in the past; all swallowed up by life, joy and health.

*"Then in a nobler, sweeter song
We'll sing thy power to save,
When this poor, lisping, stammering tongue
Is ransomed from the grave."*

Could we but realize the joy of our Savior as that blood-bought company shall pass through that wonderful change. It will be joy to Him, for He shall see the travail of His soul and be satisfied.

How could He keep from rejoicing to clasp again the hand of His mother; that same mother who stood near the cross and beheld her Son whom she knew to be good, kind and gentle, nailed to the rugged cross? O, the pain of that heart-rending scene, as He said, "Woman, behold thy son." Tear-dimmed eyes and smothered sobs can never express the thoughts of that mother as He spoke those words to her. But think of the joy that shall attend that happy, long-looked for meeting in the sweet bye-and-bye, when Jesus our Savior shall enjoy the blessings together with her and all His faithful followers.

What a dazzling picture now arises before our mental vision! We behold our Savior seated on His glorious throne, attended by His joint-heirs, then made like Him. They all take their thrones to begin their wonderful work of subjugation. Angels are standing ready to be sent forth to the uttermost parts of the earth to gather together His elect (the twelve tribes of Israel), for whose sake the great tribulation days shall be shortened. Matt. 24. As the angels carry the glad news the twelve tribes begin their homeward march from the east and west to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom. Matt. 8:11, 12. The twelve apostles are seated on twelve thrones ready to welcome them. We behold each tribe

"BECAUSE that this people hath transgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice; I also will not henceforth drive out any from before them of the nations which Joshua left when he died: that through them I may prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not. Therefore the LORD left those nations, without driving them out hastily; neither delivered he them into the hand of Joshua."—Judges 2:20-23.

"FORSOOK THE LORD"

THIS IS spoken of the children of Israel soon after having entered the land of promise. God had warned them against serving the idolatrous gods of the inhabitants of the land. That they might not be led astray by them, He directed Israel to drive out the inhabitants and thus their gods.

This, Israel failed to do. The result was that Israel forsook the Lord God and served the gods of the land.

The Companion Bible notes: "Religion is not a gradual evolution to what is higher, but a declension to what is lower."

CHOOSE WHOM YE SERVE

"Now therefore fear the LORD, and serve him in sincerity and in truth: and put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and in Egypt; and serve ye the LORD.

"And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD."—Joshua 24:14, 15.

Three systems of gods or of worship are referred to by Joshua. The gods "on the other side of the flood", that is, of the great river Euphrates in Chaldea, the gods of Egypt, and "the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell". All were false. None ever served Israel or any man. Jehovah had served Israel at every turn.

Joshua, approaching his death, exhorts Israel to rid the land of false gods that would lead childhood downward even as water flows from the mountain and that they would choose the God of heaven, whom to serve, love and obey.

THE GOD OF THIS WORLD

IN THIS Christian age, as in the age of Israel, the tendency of man's religious activity is always downward, away from the God of heaven. Is it not equally true today that man's gods blind his eyes and his heart to the great God of heaven? Is it not also true that the one overtowering duty of parent and nation is to banish in every way possible the man-made objects of worship and to ever encourage a growth in truer and closer worship of the God of heaven.

Jehovah always exalts and advises the man who worships Him. Worldly gods, without exception, dethrone the man that trusts therein.

TITHING

THE more one prayerfully studies the subject of tithing and of devotion to God, the more he is forced to realize that God set this rule, not because of His need of the tithe, but for the good of the one tithing. Every person, who upon the first day of the week sets aside as God has prospered him, must necessarily in the action, give thought and meditation to God Himself.

It is this thought and devotion of life that lifts man ever farther from the degrading influence of worldliness. It is such thought that places one before the Father in such way that the Father, according to His will, can bless, prosper, advance the individual in communion with Himself.

BAPTISM

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES contains a notice of baptism in the South Lawn Park Church, of Grand Rapids. The fact that should be noticed is this: as soon as the members of the Church took it into their hearts to provide simple conveniences to aid in the putting into practice the doctrines which they teach, different ones were encouraged thereby to enter obedience.

Baptism was commanded by our Lord. He made it one of the appointed steps toward salvation. Not that the immersion in water imparted physical strength or benefit that would save, but that the immersion revealed a faith that was rendering obedience to the Savior's words, and this rendering of obedience always increases the prompted faith.

The early Christians repaired either to pool or flowing stream to perform this religious service. The place was not so particular; it was the service itself.

It is the writer's firm conviction that, if more of our churches would provide baptistries and conveniences, they would realize a larger fruitage for their labors.

OUR PRAYER CIRCLE

BEING more and more impressed that many of us are neglecting the benefits of prayer, I request that all those who truly and deeply feel the benefits to be derived from united prayer, will drop the Editor a personal line, giving name and address. I request that all such will unite with the Editor in daily or frequent prayer regarding the various phases of our Christian labors; also that those who have problems or programs that are proper for the united prayer of all, will submit same in letters to the Editor.

THE BUDGET SYSTEM OF FINANCING THE CHURCH OF GOD

OREGON, ILLINOIS

CHURCH FINANCES

THE QUESTION of financing a church in its various divisions of Christian labor has always been one of concern for those who have had the responsibility of this part of church work thrust upon them.

Many ways, schemes and devices have been brought into use in different churches as a means of raising the necessary funds with which to carry on their program of church activity.

The Scriptures say, "Give heartily, as unto the Lord", and it is a question worthy of consideration as to whether the gift is "unto the Lord" when it goes through the channel of a "social", "fair", or any money-raising invention. Such methods tend to starve the spiritual life which must be fed properly and regularly if it would come to the full stature of a man in Christ.

Likewise a haphazard or hit-and-miss manner of giving does not yield the fruitage of an unstinted treasury nor the richness of a life consecrated to Christian service.

It has long been proven that any method of giving which is regular and systematic, is the method which results in the most good to the giver as well as the purpose to which it is given. Experience has also taught us that a well balanced program of church activity calls for a definite ratio of financial aid for each separate work and that an unproportionate amount of funds in one department unbalances and hinders the effectiveness of the sum total of all church effort.

This proportion can best be determined and apportionment made by those who have a vision of the work as a whole and also have an intimate acquaintance with the financial needs of each department of Christian labor.

After careful study and consideration of the aforementioned and other points, the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois, has adopted the "Budget System" for financing its church program.

THE BUDGET SYSTEM

"What is the Budget System?" will be asked by many who have not already given it thought and study, and by others who have a vague and hazy idea as to what it is. We will try to explain.

The "Budget System" is not one which is applicable to church financing only, but, it is used extensively in the business world as well as in the operation of various units of our government. And it might be said that it is becoming more and more widely used wherever finances are an important factor.

In the "Budget System" all funds required for various separate departments are estimated and totaled, to make the full amount of funds required to carry on the work properly. This total fund is the "budget".

Illustration: Suppose our church needs $1000 for Pastor; $100 for Sunday School operation; $25 for Choir; $200 for Heating and Lighting; $50 for Charity; $25 for Insurance, Repair and Miscellaneous Expense. These items total $1400 for local church operation. In addition to this the members from this church would probably need to give about $430 for the State work, and about $215 to the National work. The total of all items would then be $2050, which would be the "budget". In all probability about $100 of this amount would be raised by regular Sunday School collection, which would leave $1950 to be raised by direct contributions from the church membership.

The result would be that each member contributes to one fund only and the treasurer would make a distribution of funds and pay all bills against whatever department they may be charged.

And more than this, it would give us a well-balanced and efficient plan of work for the year and if this fund is made definite and sure by each member subscribing his share at the beginning of the year, each department will know just what it will have to operate on during the year.

Concerning State Pledges

We realize that many have made their pledges to the State for this year. In so far as this has been done it has been thought best to deduct the total of these pledges from the "budget" for this year and each one pay his obligation to the State. After this year (1928) these pledges would not need to be made, as they would already be covered by the budget in what is thought to be the right proportion, 6 percent to the local church, 2 percent to the State, 1 percent to the National, 1 percent reserved for emergency or miscellany.

There are probably more than twenty-five wage earners or those who have some other source of income in our congregation and we firmly believe that if each will do his best (we recommend the tithe) we will go far beyond the amount required.

Benefit of Giving

We believe there is no one thing outside of prayer that will build for us that close relationship and contact

THE KINGDOM OF GOD—WHERE IS IT?

By R. H. Judd

VERY much has already been written on the above subject, and much controversy has frequently been the result, so that it may seem somewhat superfluous to write more. Yet it seems to me it might be helpful to some to give what has resulted from my meditation and study.

Of late years I have grown in the belief that the Bible is a Book, not for clergy only, but for everybody, rich and poor, high and lowly; that in the main its language is plain, straightforward, and not difficult to understand. I am also of the opinion that a knowledge of Greek and Hebrew is not necessary to the proper understanding of the Word of God, as some often assert, and thus discourage its real study by many who otherwise would do so. Not infrequently is a young man told to leave certain questions of Bible truths to those who understand these dead languages, and he is thus debarred much interesting and profitable study. Surely, there are very few students of these languages who would claim superior knowledge to those who accomplished the great task of translation of the Old and New Testaments. Therefore, I maintain that any Bible subject may be studied with either the Authorized Version or the Revised Version with perfect confidence and with the best authority. (I do not mean, where opportunity allows, that various translations and authorities should not be consulted. They are often a real help.)

I would most strongly emphasize the fact that under no conditions of any sort can a passage of Scripture be made to bear in any sense a meaning opposite to the dictionary meaning of the words it contains. Get this fact clearly impressed on the mind and it will then be seen how very unfairly the Bible is treated oftentimes in comparison to the treatment given to other books. No other book could have stood what the Bible has stood in this way, and still have maintained its position. This may seem to be a digression from the subject, but I have deemed the prefatory remarks necessary, and I trust the reader will ultimately concur.

The kingdom of God is a term frequently used in the Bible, and the allusions to it are numerous, and for the most part plain. This much cannot be said of very many things given out as Bible truth. When a subject cannot be expressed in Bible language, it can scarcely be called a Bible subject. That, I think, must be evident. We are not, however, in that difficulty here. Our difficulty is rather that of limiting our subject to a few texts, and within the scope of a short paper.

There are two or three verses well worthy of our attention, which seem to indicate as definitely as possible the locality of the kingdom of God. The first is to be found in Matthew six, in the very beautiful prayer our Lord taught us to pray. Simply worded, yet every word seems loaded with truth, and to carry within its center one or more of the cardinal truths of Christianity.

We would fain take up this prayer (rightly called the Lord's Prayer; for none but He could have framed a prayer so fraught with meaning and teaching in every sentence) and seek to expound it word for word, but time and space forbid. The sentences to which I would draw attention are: "Our Father which art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven."

Our Lord was on earth, and He prayed to His Father which is in heaven—two distinct places and two separate personalities. "Thy kingdom come." Three short words, but they express much. It is reasonable to suppose that our Lord's thoughts were at least reminded of the promise given to Daniel, that the God of heaven should set up a kingdom, and He longed and taught His disciples to pray that His Father's kingdom might come. All other kingdoms failed, and in time died away, but not so the kingdom of God. He left no doubt as to the locality of the kingdom, for, being on the earth He prayed that it might come, and as if to avoid any question regarding its locality and nature, He immediately adds, "Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." So then in these few concise, wonderfully expressed words, we have volumes of truth contained. We get the glorious news that this sin-stained earth is yet to be full of the knowledge of the Lord, so full, that God's will shall yet be done here as it is now done in heaven. No pen can describe that wonderful transformation, so we must leave it and pass on to our next proof-text.

Let us turn, then, to Matthew 13:41, "They shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity". This surely shows unmistakably the locality of the kingdom. As regards man and the spheres that minister to his immediate interests, the Scriptures know of but two places—heaven and earth. Heaven is God's dwelling place—the source from whence all blessings come—and there, we have it on Christ's own authority, God's will is done. There, then, can be only one place where it is possible to take "out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity", and that is the earth, which is here designated as "his kingdom". The earth is beautiful now, exquisite in beauty in many places; but when all things that offend, thorns and thistles, and them that do iniquity, are taken out of the way, it will be the kingdom of God over which the Son of God will delight to reign. We can now enter somewhat into the request, aye, and the feeling, too, of the dying thief as he prayed, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom"; for he had read the inscription, "JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS", and that very day the Lord gave him the promise that he should be with Him then. The prophets are full of this glorious theme. Christ and His apostles re-echo it. Peter tells us of the time of the third heaven and earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, and Paul refers to the same theme when he tells us of the visions and revelations of the Lord.

Friends, we have a grand Book, full of grand themes, and most of all, from beginning to end, the Book rings with the glad message of a grand SAVIOR. Let us not, then, be ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation.

WHY SO MANY DIVORCES?

By Melba Glanton Arlington

The poisonous and ever-increasing evils to true Christian development, are by the author placed before the reader's attention in this little sketch relating to "Why So Many Divorces?" Card parties, clubs, dances, cigarettes, intoxicants, hypnotic music and soft lights are things that both man and woman should equally consider and avoid, as detriments to Christian development.—Ed.

AND now, what about our present-day social life? The old style of calling in the afternoon for a quiet chat is rapidly becoming obsolete, due in large measure to the telephone. The old-time family dinner is also becoming a thing of the past, because the lure of magnificent cafes and hotels is greater. Such forms of entertainment are rapidly vanishing but in their places we have a constant whirl of social activities which are sapping our lives, spiritually and physically.

Bridge parties are so engrossing the human family that it seems life can no longer be worth while without them. A certain fascination goes with card playing and it grips the emotions until it becomes a much-desired habit.

A young woman of my acquaintance was an ardent church worker. Though she was opposed to it, she often accompanied her husband to parties where cards were the feature. Soon her husband prevailed upon her to play a few games at home with him and when I met her a few weeks later her entire conversation was centered on her recent attendance at bridge parties.

Cards, of course, are really nothing more than little squares of heavy paper, but the association that goes with them is the thing. And if you doubt their fascination, just learn to play and get into the whirl. It is the game of chance and the eagerness to win which allures. The habit is almost as fascinating and intoxicating as wine.

Women are forsaking their children, their duties at home, in order to attend these daily parties. Young mothers can no longer nurse their babies because of the terrific strain on the nervous system. Others refuse to nurse their offspring because it interferes with their pleasures. Men come home to eat cold food or no food at all and go back to the club or elsewhere to seek their entertainment.

A young woman has been arrested and is awaiting trial for the murder of her husband. It has been alleged that she became furious because her husband objected to her wild social life. Men and women become so steeped in material things and ungodly pleasures that Satan takes possession of the mental faculties and guides them into channels of hopeless sin and death.

These card parties do not end with the game—cigarettes are passed and then wine. And right here may I say a few words concerning both of these vices?

Cigarettes, by chemical and moral tests, are responsible for much of our crime. It is bad enough to see a man smoke them, but when a woman stoops so low, every degree of womanhood vanishes and she puts herself on a level with the inferior things of life. And yet, girls and women, in the beginning, think themselves elite and fashionable. But the realization that they are only drug addicts comes too late.

When intoxicating liquor was tried and found wrong, our government ruled to have it suppressed. But some of our citizens actually thought that their rights were being interfered with. They make wine and sell it regardless of the law, simply to indulge appetite. They do not want health and life eternal—they want what they think is a good time here. Men and women who drink or sell illicit liquor are undesirable citizens and should be isolated as a protection to the younger generation.

My statements are perhaps very plain, but the day of camouflage is past. Real men and women will not deliberately break the laws of our government, the laws of health and the law of GOD.

Dancing and movies are two of the chief amusements of the younger set. The dancing is with this one and that one, at all of the hours of the night. Man and wife rarely dance together. The hypnotizing music soft lights, and the perfume-laden air, coupled with the close association of the modern dances, are things which test the character to the limit. Few have the courage to stand. The modern dance hall, reeking with cigarette smoke and nudeness is a disgrace to any community. "Jazz", the devil's phonograph, is the cheapest kind of musical sound. I have seen hundreds of these players and I have yet to find one without the stamp of the Jazz mania written upon his countenance.

The "movies" contribute their share to the crime wave also, with the portraying of nude, immoral characters. Not long ago, a young boy under my supervision came to blows with another strange boy of the same age. This occurred at the finish of a picture which dealt with fighting. Neither knew why they were fighting, except that they were saturated with the ideas of the play.

Some will say, "Oh, she is writing all these things because she doesn't know what she is talking about. She is just an old foggy in her ideas." I expect these remarks because men and women do not like to give up their idols of sin. I do know what I am talking about. I am thirty-one years old, in the midst of life, and I have experienced and studied every phase of it in every section of the United States.

When God restored my life five years ago, I vowed to consecrate my life to His work. Truth is like a two-edged sword, it cuts deep. We must bring home the facts so strongly that people will sit up and listen. And yet, I say these things in love, because I know what sin will do to man.

Hast thou found some precious treasure?

Pass it on.

Hast thou found some holy treasure?

Pass it on.

God Himself is ever giving;

Loving is the truest living;

Letting go is twice possessing.

Would you double every blessing?

Pass it on.

HIGHER LEARNING AND THE BIBLE

By Norman John McLeod

Geology and God's Word

It can but fortify both young and old to read from the pen of a university man, and educator, one who has specialized in historical research of earth and man, that, after all, God's revealed information is more dependable than is man's logic. Education, rightly employed is one of man's greatest helps toward God.—Editor.

THE FIRST part of almost any book on ancient history will usually contain a great deal of discussion about the beginning of human history. That discussion is quite appropriate to such work, but the "facts" that are set forth in the discussion are often of a doubtful nature. Formerly it was the custom to devote a chapter to what was called "The Pre-Historic Period". Certain materials from which historians gathered their information had led them to set the approximate date of 4000 B. C., as the dawn of the earliest history. Anything coming before that time was "pre-historic". At first the idea was that previous to that time there had been no men on earth. Then came the geologists to upset the whole scheme of things.

Geology, as its name implies, is the science of the earth as regards its formation. How did the world come into existence? and, How is it made up? are the questions that geology is supposed to answer. To study the inner formation of the earth is not an easy matter. One must get a cross section of the earth, and that at many points. The geologists are found, therefore, at mines, canyons, volcanoes, geysers, and railroad cuts. Any place is good where the rock ribs of the world are exposed.

The geologists observed as they looked at the Grand Canyon of the Colorado that the earth is composed of a great many layers; that different kinds of rock are always found at certain levels; that there is continually being added an additional layer of deposits of various kinds on top; and that sometimes far below the surface will be found human and animal remains. Putting these various facts together, they conclude that these human relics were originally on top of the ground and have been covered by the gradual accretion of top layers. By the speed with which this upper layer forms, they estimate the length of time it has taken for all of those deposits to be made. This estimate shows that the world was a very long time in forming, variously estimated from one million to a billion years. Coming up from the earlier periods the first animal remains appear: molusks, and other huge shell fish. So on up through the higher forms of life to human relics. The striking thing is that they almost always appear in that order. The age of man, then, by their calculation, began about 500,000 to 1,000,000 years ago. What a wonderful prop for the theory of evolution! But there are flaws in the theory that geology supports evolution to overthrow the Bible.

First of all, geology is the most speculative "science" that exists. Space would forbid that I express some of their wild theories. Second, there is no accurate way of estimating the periods of geological time. Third, because there appears a steady progression from lower to higher forms is no sign that the higher developed from the lower. The Bible teaches that the simpler forms of life appeared on the earth first, followed at last by the highest of all, man. And, as has been shown in a previous article, there is no indication of the length of time that it took God to create the earth. The Bible says that a thousand years are as a day when it is past, or as a watch in the night with God. A watch in the night is even shorter than a watch in the day; the former being only two and a half hours.

God is eternal; so why balk at a few thousand years? Let the geologists spin their fancy theories. They cannot tear down the truth, whether it is in the Bible or in some other collection of books.

REWARD

By H. H. Hawkins

GOD "is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him", we are told in Hebrews 11:6. This passage alone should encourage us to live and work for the reward which we understand is to be eternal life.

If we stop the average man on the street and inquire of him where and when the righteous will be rewarded, he unquestionably would say, "Why, certainly, in heaven, at death." Suppose we stop for a moment and consider "what saith the scripture?"

Listen to the teaching of Jesus: "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. 5:5. Then listen to the singer of Israel: "For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall inherit the earth." Psa. 37:9. Read also verses 11 and 22. Then the 29th verse strengthens these by adding: "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever". And again, in Prov. 10:30: "The righteous shall never be removed". No chance here of slipping off into purgatory, heaven or elsewhere at death.

The question of resurrection and judgment, which is a large one, enters in. "And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."—Acts 24:15.

"And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."—Dan. 12:2.

It is very important that we have this hope and the things concerning the kingdom of God in our memory. "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word (message implanted—Weymouth), which is able to save your souls"—James 1:21. "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. 6:8.

"For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."—Titus 2:11-14.

Job was greatly interested in this hope in the nineteenth chapter: "For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." (Douay Version—"in the last day I shall rise out of the earth"). Likewise David expressed his hope in the seventeenth Psalm: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness."

God has declared in plain and unmistakable language that the righteous will be rewarded in the earth when Jesus, the Messiah, returns.

Dear reader, the reward or praises that we receive in this mortal life are only momentary, or of short duration, and would be compared as nothing to the reward of eternal life. May we keep our eyes Zionward as the times are closing, trusting that we may have the faith of Paul. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

AMBASSADORS

By Lilian Railton

WE HAVE been reading much lately of the world's desire for peace. Every magazine and paper have something to say of the effort put forth. While the various conferences take place, the leading statesmen sadly realize the futility of the effort, knowing full well that the selfishness of the nations can never make for peace.

From this country some months ago a young man, quite unknown, undertook to cross the Atlantic to Paris. His wonderful accomplishment and humble, manly nature, amid the nations' applause, won for him the title, "Ambassador of Peace". Since then Lindbergh has flown to many countries in Central America as the messenger of peace and good will from Washington. The eyes of the world are upon him and his clean life and kindly smile has endeared him to all.

Now we read that an ambassador is one of the highest rank charged with a special mission. Is not that just what a Christian is?

To be a member of the body of Christ places one in the position of kingship. It also places one in the active position of a servant, humbly obedient to the Lord's command. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature".

Jesus says again, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16. Jesus was known by His works. If we might ever remember the truth of the saying, "What we do not share we can not keep", it would inspire us to make real effort to share the precious news of the gospel.

Paul, when a prisoner for Christ's sake, asked that prayer would be made for him "that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel, for which I am an ambassador in bonds". Eph. 6:18-20. Then in 2 Cor. 5:20, after showing how graciously God hath reconciled us to Himself through Jesus Christ, Paul says, "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ".

Can our Master depend on us? Can He depend on me?

Daniel Webster once said, "If truth is not diffused, error will be: if God and His Word are not known and received, the devil and his works will gain the ascendancy; if the Bible does not reach every hamlet, the pages of a corrupt and licentious literature will: if the power of the gospel is not felt through the length and breadth of the land, anarchy and misrule, degradation and misery, corruption and darkness, will reign without mitigation or end." It looks like a picture of the present day, does it not?

We can not all preach, but we can use our God-given talents. As ambassadors for Christ, we are to do His business. So we will speak His Word to help others; we will also smile and give a brother a friendly hand and a word of cheer, in His name. Then we may by our means help some minister to go and preach the gospel.

Let us realize that the harvest field is wide and laborers are few. In helping to send out an ambassador, we are bringing the gospel of Christ to others, and God will bless us.

Then, dear brothers and sisters, have you read recently that beautiful message from Jehovah in Malachi 3: 16, 17? "Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the LORD of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."

Can it be possible that our Father hears when we are speaking of His Word, and is so glad that He makes a note of our love for Him? It is wonderful, and makes us want to be true ambassadors, does it not?

May we all grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

THE JOY OF PAIN

By M. A. Woodward

I WOULD never have known just how much I loved the blessed Master but for the terrible pain I have recently suffered. After the terrible paroxysm of pain had passed and I lay quietly resting, Marian, the twenty-year old daughter of Bro. and Sr. Good, started playing that sweet wierd hymn:

*I come to the garden alone,
While the dew is still on the roses,
And the voice I hear falling on my ear
The Son of God discloses.*

*And He walks with me, and He talks with me,
And He tells me I am His own,
And the joy I share while I tarry there,
No other has ever known.*

In my weakness I grasped it all, and far away His dear voice echoed back to me, "Dear child, I know what you have suffered. I suffered it all for you long ago."

Marian had finished the beautiful hymn and started on "The Old Rugged Cross". I knew it was there He had finished His sufferings. You and I, dear hearts, received the blessed gift of life eternal, when only a few hours later He walked out of that prison-house free, triumphant over death and the grave. I wept for joy as I thought that soon, soon the reward will be ours. Only "faithful unto death" will soon be a thing of the past, and we will be safe at home.

Another joy it brought me was the thought that Marian understands the meaning of that sweet hymn; for she is a child of the King, having been baptized about three years ago at Holbrook, Neb., by Bro. Cowles. May God keep her true to her vows, is my prayer.

This will have to do for some time to you all who are looking for the letters I promised when I left Michigan. I have written this with a great effort,

Yours for Christ,

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

Part 33

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF THE BURGUNDIANS, THE VISIGOTHS,
AND THE OSTROGOTHS

Daniel 11

THEN SHALL he return into his land with great riches; and his heart shall be against the holy covenant."

Mention is made on several occasions of "the holy covenant", and it is desirable to state just what this covenant is. It is the subject of every book of the New Testament, and is explicitly explained in the Epistle to the Hebrews. It may be briefly summed up in the words of Paul and Silas: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved". (Acts 16:31.) The desire of every thoughtful person is to obtain salvation, or, in other words, to be cleansed from his sins, and admitted into the circle of those who throughout all eternity shall dwell in the kingdom of God in perfect peace and happiness. God is not merely willing but anxious to grant this desire, but only on certain conditions: that the individual believe unswervingly that Christ is the Son of God; that by His death on the cross He took upon Himself the sins of all who care to cast them upon Him; and that the sacrifice of Christ just once was sufficient to guarantee the salvation of every individual throughout all the world and throughout the whole age, who should fulfill these conditions. Thus true Christianity is purely a religion of faith, while Romanism is entirely a religion of works. The Roman church has drawn up a number of laws, and declares that it has power to forgive the sins of those who obey those laws, and to grant them admission into the heavenly kingdom of righteousness and peace. In these prophecies, therefore, those who are said to forsake the holy covenant were those who joined the Roman church, and adopted the Roman ritual and beliefs.

In Daniel's vision of the four great beasts (Dan. 7) it was pointed out that the three horns or kingdoms which had to be removed before the Holy Roman empire could be established were the Burgundian, the Visigothic, and the Ostrogothic. The two former were plucked up by Clovis, and it is to his removal of these that the predictions now to be considered refer.

"The kingdom of the Burgundians, which was defined by the course of two Gallic rivers, the Saone and the Rhone, extended from the forest of Vosges to the Alps and the sea of Marseille. The sceptre was in the hands of Gundobald. That valiant and ambitious prince had reduced the number of royal candidates by the death of two brothers, one of whom was the father of Clotilda; but his imperfect prudence still permitted Godegisil, the youngest of his brothers, to possess the dependent principality of Geneva. The Arian monarch was justly alarmed by the satisfaction and the hopes which seemed to animate his clergy and people after the conversion of Clovis; and Gundobald convened at Lyons an assembly of his bishops, to reconcile, if possible, their religious and political discontents. A vain conference was agitated between the two factions. The Arians upbraided the Catholics with the worship of three gods: the Catholics defended their cause by theological distinctions; and the usual arguments, objections and replies were reverberated with obstinate clamour, till the king revealed his secret apprehensions by an abrupt but decisive question, which he addressed to the orthodox bishops: 'If you truly profess the Christian religion, why do you not restrain the king of the Franks? He has declared war against me, and forms alliances with my enemies for my destruction. A sanguinary and covetous mind is not the symptom of a sincere conversion: let him show his faith by his works.' The answer of Avitus, bishop of Vienne, who spoke in the name of his brethren, was delivered with the voice and countenance of an angel. 'We are ignorant of the motives and intentions of the king of the Franks: but we are taught by Scripture that the kingdoms which abandon the divine law are frequently subverted and that enemies will arise on every side against those who have made God their enemy. Return, with thy people, to the law of God, and He will give peace and security to thy dominions.' The king of Burgundy, who was not prepared to accept the condition which the Catholics considered as essential to the treaty, delayed and dismissed the ecclesiastical conference, after reproaching his bishops, that Clovis, their friend and proselyte, had privately tempted the allegiance of his brother.

"The allegiance of his brother was already seduced; and the obedience of Godegisil, who joined the royal standard with the troops of Geneva, more effectually promoted the success of the conspiracy. While the Franks and Burgundians contended with equal valor, his seasonable desertion decided the event of the battle; and as Gundobald was faintly supported by the disaffected Gauls, he yielded to the arms of Clovis, and hastily retreated from the field, which appears to have been situate between Langres and Dijon. He distrusted the strength of Dijon, a quadrangular fortress, encompassed by two rivers and by a wall thirty feet high and fifteen thick, with four gates and thirty-three towers: he abandoned to the pursuit of Clovis the important cities of Lyons and Vienne; and Gundobald still fled with precipitation till he had reached Avignon, at the distance of two hundred and fifty miles from the field of battle. A long siege and an artful negotiation admonished the king of the Franks of the danger and difficulty of his enterprise. He imposed a tribute on the Burgundian prince, compelled him to pardon and reward his brother's treachery, and proudly returned to his own dominions with the spoils and captives of the southern provinces."

Thus fell the first of the three "horns" which blocked the rise of the Holy Roman empire. The overthrow of the others was not long delayed.

SCIENCE may be able to draw men closer to each other by means of communication and other modern inventions, but it can never draw humanity closer to God. This work is accomplished through and by Christ. —C. E. R.

SUBJECTS FOR STUDY

DID JESUS EAT THE PASSOVER?

By J. C. Peck

TO THE RESTITUTION HERALD: In The Herald of January fifteenth, in an article written by Wm. Burget, he makes this remark, "Every Bible believer should know that Jesus kept the passover." Does he mean to say that Jesus kept, or ate, the Jewish passover the night of His betrayal? If so, I beg to differ with him, for the following reasons:

In the first place, John 13 says it was before the time, that is, the supper He ate with His disciples was twenty-four hours too soon for the eating of the Jewish passover, the Paschal lamb. In the second place they did not have a roasted lamb according to instructions in Ex. 12:8-10.

To prove that the supper spoken of in John 13 is the same meal spoken of in Matthew, Mark and Luke is but to consider the similar circumstances that took place at each and all of them—first making known the betrayer. John 13:18-26. "Jesus answered, He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the sop, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon." V. 26. "But, behold, the hand of him that betrayeth me is with me on the table." Luke 22:21. "Verily I say unto you, One of you which eateth with me shall betray me." Mark 14:18. "And he answered and said unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the dish." Mark 14:20. "Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve. And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, That one of you shall betray me. . . . Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said." Matt. 26:20-25.

Then there is Peter's denial. "Jesus answered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my sake? Verily, verily, I say unto thee, The cock shall not crow, till thou hast denied me thrice." John 13:38. "And he said, I tell thee, Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me." Luke 22:34. In Mark 14:30 and Matt. 26:34 occur almost the same words.

Perhaps you will say, "Now account for the words there, 'made ready the passover'." I can account for them in no other way than that there were some necessary preparations to be made. This was just the beginning of the fourteenth day of the month, Nisan, as night came first in the Jewish day. As the paschal lamb was slain at the close of the fourteenth day, or between the two evenings (margin) they ate it in the night of the fifteenth, and left Rameses on the fifteenth day. Num. 33:3.

Inasmuch as Jesus is the antitype of the paschal lamb, and is our passover, and was sacrificed for us, 1 Cor. 5:7, it seems proper that He should be slain at the same time that the type, the paschal lamb, was slain. According to

John 18:28 I think He was. "Then they led Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment: and it was early; and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover."

GOD'S PATIENCE

Oh, the wondrous lovingkindness,
Planning, working out of sight!
Bearing with us in our blindness!
Out of darkness bringing light.

Weaving blessings out of trials,
Out of grief evolving bliss;
Answering prayer by wise denials,
When Thy children ask amiss!

And when faith shall end in vision,
And when prayer is lost in praise;
Then shall love in full fruition
Justify Thy secret ways.

O, TO BE LIKE HIM

taking its respective place under its rightful judge. Matt. 19:28.

With Israel thus organized into a kingdom, the government of the Lord's house is established in the top of the mountains (superior to the greatest governments of the earth). The glad news goes forth to the surrounding nations, that a righteous rule has been established in Mount Zion. The people in the different nations hear of it. They have been invited to come to Jerusalem to worship, with the announcement from headquarters that if you do not come, you shall have no rain. Zech. 14. As a result of this proclamation many shall say, "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths". Isa. 2:1, 4; Micah 4:1, 5. Thus many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day, and shall be His people. Zech. 2:11.

Let us pray earnestly, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven", and some sweet day we shall behold the earth filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea, and then we shall realize what it means to be like Him.

GET READY FOR THE NEW SENIOR BOOKS. THEY ARE ALMOST READY!

AT LAST, after a series of most regrettable but unavoidable delays, the new Senior book is almost ready. We hope in next issue to make definite announcement, with statement of prices, etc.

The new book represents quite a departure from the old system of miscellaneous lessons on every kind of subject, in that it follows a definite outline from the first lesson to the last in such a way that each lesson is complete in itself and yet they all together complete one unified thought. It is thus intended as the first of a series of permanent books through which we hope that much good may be accomplished.

The new book is going to cost more money than previous books have cost, but no definite statement can be made this week.

Get ready to send in your orders at once with the announcement of prices next week.

THE INWARD MAN

PAUL says in 2 Corinthians 4:16, "For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day."

The labors, trials and sorrows of life are bound to have a wearing and deteriorating effect upon our physical, mortal bodies. A man with a certain constitution, possessing a given degree of vitality, can stand a certain amount of wear and tear in life, but his body of flesh is destined to perish through the process.

However, in certain cases the very things that wear and destroy the body of flesh and sap the vitality are the things which strengthen one's spiritual standing before God. Our struggles against the enemies of God may sometimes weaken us physically, but they give us moral strength and courage, and we are better men and women because of these things.

Paul had been meeting bitter opposition and had been called upon to pass through nearly every kind of trial. Now beautifully he expressed it all by saying we should not faint or be discouraged because of these things, for though our outward man or physical strength perishes or grows less, yet the inward man by the same process is strengthened or renewed day by day.

The same thought is given again in Rom. 7:22, 23, in which the expression "law of my mind" is used synonymously with "the inward man". From verse 14 on the writer has been showing the great struggle in the Christian's life, the great difficulty that a man's mind or real better self has in holding in subjection and subduing the passions and desires of the flesh.

* * * *

Yes, life is a battle, but if we feed and develop the spiritual and mental side it will grow stronger and eventually win. Thus even though our physical bodies do deteriorate and waste away we will have laid up in Christ a life which shall be given us in the resurrection morn and which shall never pass away.

No wonder Paul said, "For which cause we faint not"!

ENDURING HARDNESS

WE EACH of us have to determine the manner in which we meet difficulties that come our way. Either we allow ourselves to be overcome by the natural tendency to evade them, or with the spur of nobler purpose, we rise to the occasion and gain the mastery.

A soldier would be of little value on a battlefield if he had had no experience of discipline or training, neither can we expect to succeed if we fail in the preparing of our hearts and minds for difficulties we must naturally encounter as followers of Jesus.

Paul's exhortation to "endure hardness as a good soldier", is as important to us as it was to Timothy. The needs in many respects are just as great in these days as they were in his.

There are two ways of looking at difficulties. One is to view them with foreboding and fear, and the other to see the good that must necessarily follow when they are overcome. In the pages of history we see the wonderful gains that have been won, and ultimate good achieved by conflict and conquest.

Adventurers have won for us new countries, explorers conquered unknown fields and made possible the sailing in new and hitherto unknown seas. Persecutions have fired the hearts of brave ones, who otherwise would never have been heard of, and though it cost the early Christians the severest of trials, they, by their sacrifice, won for us the inestimable privileges of liberty and freedom that we now enjoy.

We, in our day, have the difficulties of indifference, selfishness and the great love of ease and pleasure. Shall we not be brave and active in encountering them—Sel.

JESUS AND THE TWELVE

Mark 6:7-13, 30

UNDER ANY circumstances a heart as tender and loving as that of Jesus would have been touched with a desire to help. But the great eagerness of the scattered multitude to receive help and strength made them seem to Him like great flocks of sheep with no shepherd to care for them.

If only the multitude could know about the peace and joy of the glad tidings, how good it would be. Jesus often said to His disciples, "These people need some one to lead them in the green pastures, and by the waters of gentle stillness." Then again, when it was harvest time and He saw the fields of ripened grain ready for the sickle, He would say, "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest."

One day the time seemed to be the right time to send His disciples out to teach and preach and help as He had done.

He told them that He was sending them, not for glory, or honor, or reward, but sending them forth as sheep in the midst of wolves.

That they could prove they were sent by Jesus, He gave them power to heal diseases, and ability to drive out evil spirits. They were not to take even the least copper coin with which to pay expenses. They had always worn a wallet wherein they could put a little barley-cake or a few dried figs and a handful of nuts, but now they were to start out with such perfect trust in God that even the wallet was to be left behind. There was to be no extra clothing, and they were not even to wear shoes, but were to go in their every-day sandals like the common people in the country.

Other people wore bright colors and flowing robes, but they were not to go looking as though they were worldly men trying to establish a worldly kingdom. Indeed, they were not in any way to do like worldly men. They were not to spend a lot of precious time when they met a traveler, in formal, empty courtesies. They were on a great errand and it was not wise for them to stop whenever they met an acquaintance and raise the hand to the heart, to the forehead and then put it in the right hand of the acquaintance, then bow three, four, five, six or seven times, as circumstances demanded; then stop and repeat the senseless, because insincere greetings.

When they entered a town they were to go to a home where they would be welcomed. When they entered this home they were to salute it with the much-valued blessing, "Shalom lakem", (Peace be to you). As they had no luggage and their wants were few, they were really starting out on a simple, unostentatious, self-supporting mission. They were to go in trustful faith, with gentle courtesy and self-sacrificing simplicity. They were not to be in any way foolish, but were to be as wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

Jesus sent them out on their mission two by two. Each was to have a comrade. This was such a comfort to each, and while helping the work they were to help each other.

After a time the disciples came back and met Jesus at Capernaum. The success of their work must have been great, for the name of Jesus had gone everywhere, not only among the people in Galilee, but also among the people of Jerusalem, and even into the Golden Palace of the hated Roman ruler, Herod, at Tiberias.—Selected from "The Wonderful Story of Jesus."

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Matthew 9, 10 and 11.
2. Play you are in Palestine, and deliver this address as Jesus must have done.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Can we depend upon God to supply our needs today, as He did those of the disciples? Is there any difference between our needs and wants?

MEMORY VERSE

10. Psalms 19:14.

TINY TOTS

Jesus told His twelve helpers to go out into other countries and help people. They were to heal sick people and preach just like Jesus did.

They were to go in plainest clothing, and without any money. Two were to go to each place, and stay in the homes of kindly people.

And the disciples did as Jesus told them, and many were helped by them.

INFLUENCING OTHERS

NONE of us can live to himself. For evil or good, for condemnation or blessing, we must exercise a necessary influence over others. There is going from us hour by hour either a helpful or a baneful influence; our conversation, our conduct, our character, all breathe it forth. And if we would have this influence to be a virtue and a blessing among our fellows, we must not only speak aright and act aright, but also be aright and think aright. For as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.—Selected.

JESUS AND THE TWELVE

Mark 1:16-20; 2:13, 14; 3:13-19; 6:7-13, 30

Devotional Reading: Romans 12:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Jesus and the Twelve. Whether or not Jesus chose just twelve in order to provide one for each of the several tribes of Israel, may not be known. God positioned the twelve sons of Israel as foundation for His chosen nation, and placed the twelve apostles as foundation for His Church. Eph. 2:20.

Thus far, Jesus was truly proving His authority to control and direct, not only individuals in all activities, but to control those who were acting contrary to His leadership. He illustrated kingdom conditions, as the kingdom will be when He is in complete authority. He overpowered evil spirits, sickness, wind, tidal waves of earthquake, hunger, leprosy, even death. His authority, kingship, surpassed all opposing effort. Truly, such authority, operated in strict and true righteousness and Godliness, would perfect a kingdom beyond the ideality of man's imagination.

Jesus Commissions Others. As God endowed Jesus with His own power and authority that Jesus could operate there-with upon man and all earthly conditions, so Jesus endowed the apostles that they, too, showing themselves faithful under His commission, could perform with authority like works with Jesus. They could execute His labors; they could extend, according to the Savior's direction, His authority for Him.

Shall Reign with Him. Jesus taught His apostles, that in the regeneration, they should sit upon thrones ruling Israel. See Matt. 19:28. Of the Church it is spoken, 2 Tim. 2:12, "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him." "As members of his body," the Church is under Christ. As Christ successfully authorized the apostles, so has He promised the Church to authorize its members to perform, carry on, execute any and all of His works, for which He from time to time needs to commission them. See Acts 1:8; 1 Cor. 12:7.

Following His ascension, for a time He commissioned the early Church to accomplish marvelous miracles. Following His return, the Church will reign and perform with Him. The manner and certainty of this is evidenced and assured by the Savior's demonstration of power to authorize and enable others to perform, victoriously and triumphantly over all hindrances.

Questions. What is the difference between the call and the commission of the apostles? Why did He ordain just twelve?

What were the four things for which He ordained or commissioned them? What was the advantage of having the apostles commissioned to perform works similar to those done by the Savior? Does the fact of the apostles' ability reveal Christ's ability to transfer power? Does the fact of such transference give reason for faith concerning similar transference to the Church in fulfillment of 2 Timothy. 2:12? —F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

And he said unto them, Going into all the world, proclaim ye the joyful message to all the creation: he who believes and is immersed shall be saved, but he who disbelieves shall be condemned.—Mark 16:15-16, Roth.

In this text we find an obligation resting on the Christian, likewise a responsibility resting on the non-Christian. When the believer has done his part in proclaiming the good news of the kingdom and salvation through Christ, the responsibility then rests upon the disbeliever as to his position before God. But, if the Christian fails in his obligation to proclaim the glad tidings by what-so-ever means he is best fitted, he may be judged as an "unfaithful steward."—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The call to service. "Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men."—Mark 1:17. (1) The call of Jesus was personal: He addressed His call to special service to individuals, not to the multitude. God called Israel as a nation out of Egypt; but to the particular work of leadership He called Moses and Aaron and Joshua as individuals. During the present age God is calling upon "all men everywhere to repent"; Acts 17:30; but certain specially qualified men He is ordaining to the work of the ministry. (2) The call of Jesus was imperative: "Straightway he called them: and they went after him."—Mark 1:20. Paul responded to the divine call with, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"—Acts 9:6. When called to special service, we, too, should obey without question. (3) The call of Jesus was definite: "And he ordained twelve, that he might send them forth to preach."—Mark 3:14. The work of those called of Christ is clearly described: it is to "preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand", Matt. 10:7. (4) The call of Jesus is to implicit obedience: "They went out, and preached."—Mark 6:12. Christ was "obedient unto death", Phil. 2:8. Obedience is the secret of successful Christian effort.

Preparation for special service. "His disciples came unto him: and he opened his mouth, and taught them."—Matt. 5:1-2. Jesus did not send forth His disciples to preach the gospel without first preparing them for the work, by causing them to pass through a system of instruction designed to (1) develop their own characters and steadfastnesses; (2) to impress them with the sacredness and importance of their calling; (3) to thoroughly acquaint them with the nature of their future duties and responsibilities; (4) and to furnish them with a full knowledge of the truth they were ordained to proclaim. Such preparation for Christian service is not only expedient, but essential, to success.—G. E. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus' call to service.

Undertake his great Lord Himself did not undertake His work alone. He saw the largeness of the task, and He called disciples to labor with Him that He might prepare them for the great work ahead.

These disciples were relatives in some cases, friends, in others, and total strangers in some instances. They came from all walks of life, and were of various degrees of education and training. They were of all types of nature, from the erratic, impetuous Peter to the quiet, lovable John, and Christ called each one because He could use that kind of person.

The Master did not then, and does not now want all of His followers to be alike. John could not be Peter, nor Peter, John. The Master wants you with your personality to serve Him, no matter who you are or where you are. He calls us today, as He called those of yore, not to become alike, but to cooperate in love with each other, each using his ability where it will accomplish most.

Can anyone to-day say he has no ability, or no call to service? How can one determine his proper place to serve?—F. E. S.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

The light's field of activity: Where had its activities been concentrated up to the time of Christ? To what purpose? What had been God's attitude toward ignorance of Himself? What became the light's field when it appeared in the person of Jesus? Its one consuming purpose? The surety of its fulfillment. Why this new and advanced order of activity? —A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

With reference to Bro. and Sr. Kanaar, of Plymouth, Ind., last week, their name was misspelled, making it read Kennard.

* * *

Word comes that Sr. M. A. Woodward is slowly recuperating from her recent attack of sickness at New Port Richey, Florida. She is now able to slowly ascend the stairs by herself.

* * *

Bro. and Sr. Hewitt, of South Lawn Park Church, Grand Rapids, are slowly improving in health. Bro. Hewitt suffered fractured bones some months ago as a result of an auto plunging onto him.

* * *

We are glad to report that Bro. McGraw, under instruction of his doctor, is able to work two hours a day. Bro. McGraw feels the best ever and looks better still, and he is following strictly his physician's advice.

* * *

Sr. Irvin Ferguson (formerly Gladice Hughes) has been seriously ill for several weeks past. She has returned to her home after a series of operations, and is slowly recovering. Letters and cards from the brethren will be much appreciated. But especially she asks their prayers on her behalf. She may be addressed at Anderson, Indiana, Rt. 12.

Sr. Frank Rogers, of Oregon, and her son, Bro. James Rogers, are reported to be enjoying a very fine winter in Yuma, Arizona. Not only is the fine weather appreciated but fine health aids in enabling them to make the most of their opportunities. They may be addressed at 557 Fourth Ave.

TRIBUTE TO BRO. WM. T. HARDESTY

It was indeed a surprise to all to learn of the death of our Bro. Hardesty.

We have known him many years and have held him in high esteem. He always had a quiet and unassuming way, and was always on hand to do his part. He was dependable, and when he said he would do it, it was done.

He will be missed at Conference time by all who knew him. He was always ready with a handshake and a smile. Ever faithful in everything.

Bro. Will is asleep in Jesus. Asleep! A word that means rest, quiet, undisturbed, at peace. He is waiting for Jesus to come to awaken him from his sleep to that bright, happy morn, which he believed would come.

Kind sympathy is extended to Sr. Hardesty and her two boys.

Your sister in the One Hope,

Jessie M. Wilson.

In answer to an inquiry, Sr. Mae Mick, of Warsaw, Ind., writes that Sr. S. Roxana Wince has been very sick with bronchial pneumonia; was unconscious ten days. On February 18 she had recovered a great deal and the doctor reports that, so far as he can foresee, he expects her to regain her normal health.

Sr. Mick has kindly taken Sr. Wince into her own home, where she is caring for her. From past observation, the writer feels sure that nothing will be left undone that Sr. Mick can do to make Sr. Wince as comfortable as possible.

Arrangements are being made to place Omer, the nephew for whom Sr. Wince has been caring for nearly fifty years, into a proper home for one afflicted as he is. If Sr. Wince can gracefully submit to this, as she has often been urged to do, it will relieve her of the greatest burden of her life.

WORDS FROM THE SOUTHLAND

The class at Houston had the pleasure of having with them Bro. and Sr. A. M. Oliver, of Attica, Kansas, and Sr. Oliver's brother and daughter, of Conroe, Texas, in an all-day meeting, Feb. 12. Bro. E. E. Giesler gave two very timely sermons that were enjoyed by all.

Bro. and Sr. McCullough have returned to their farm in Macon County. Their post office address is Freedonia, Texas.

The church at Mullin, Texas, will have a get-together meeting over the second Saturday and Sunday in March. A number from over the state plan to attend. Bro. E. O. Stewart will be with them.

In view of the many rumors going around in regard to our State Conference this next summer, it is wished to say that the Conference will be held at the same place and time as usual, D. V. A full announcement will be made later.

"Peach and plum trees are in blossom now, the fig trees are getting green and every one is making garden", is stated in a private letter from Houston, Texas. Good! From such summer clime that letter quickly arrived at Oregon, where the thermometer stood at twelve degrees above zero and the sharp wind piled new-fallen snow into banks.

A PROPER PROVISION

A telegram, intended for last week's issue, but which arrived too late, bears the following interesting report. "Baptistry completed and five baptized today."

A special meeting has recently been held in Grand Rapids in the South Lawn Park Church. As a result of this meeting, three expressed belief in the gospel and requested baptism. There was no baptistry in the church. There were personal objections to promenading before the public of the city for baptism in the river at this season of the year. There were other disadvantages with reference to renting the use of another baptistry.

On Monday, Feb. 6, Bro. Townsend and others set about to construct a baptistry in the South Lawn Park Church during the spare hours and overtime of that week. It was finished in time for Sunday, the 12th, when baptismal services had been announced.

It is interesting to note that at the service of the 12th, two others obeyed in baptism. The names of all are: Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Savage, Mr. Walter—all adults. A letter from Bro. Patrick indicates his joy at this result. These activities speak in part of some of the hard, faithful work which he has been giving to the field. A number of others indicate serious study, looking to early obedience.

Zealous work for the Master counts!

Bro. F. E. Siple made the Kewanee-Ripley appointment over this week end.

Two automobile loads of the Dixon brethren were in attendance at both morning and evening services at the Oregon Church on Sunday, February 19. Come again!

THE BUDGET SYSTEM OF FINANCING THE CHURCH OF GOD

with our heavenly Father so much as pouring out our material gifts as "unto him". "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also", are the words of our Savior, and that is why we urge each member to enter whole-heartedly into this plan and witness a spiritual growth in just that same proportion in our church brotherhood.

A Bad Situation

It might be said that the finances of a church is a barometer to its spiritual condition. This is true if the funds in its treasury have come as a result of every member, not merely making a contribution, but when he has really and truly done his part. A church may be so unfortunate as to have one or more members who are abundantly able beyond all others to pay freely into the treasury and thus relieve those who have, as it were, "the widow's mite". When such is the case the church is truly "in a bad way". Many a church which has apparently thrived under this condition, has rapidly gone down when those who have "paid the bills" ceased from their labors and laid down in death.

The church that is succeeding is training workers for the future, and giving is a part of this training. Let our slogan be,

"Every Member a Contributor".

After careful study our "budget" for this year has been set at $2000. It is expected that an "every member canvass" will be made at once to discover how much each member expects to be able to do this year.

Give this matter your thoughtful and earnest consideration and be ready to make definite statements to a solicitor when you are called upon.

Let's make the Church of God at Oregon an example worthy of pattern by others, and when the King comes, may He find us rendering a service that will be well pleasing in His sight.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matthew 6:33.

THE BELIEVER'S PROSPECT

"WHAT is my position here in this world? Inheritance is my prospect, the throne of Jesus is my prospect; not riches in this world, nor honor in this world, not a name in this world—all this was laid down at the feet of Jesus, who is coming again to receive me unto Himself, and I shall sit with Him on the throne of His glory, I shall reign with Him, I shall judge with Him the world. That is the effect it had on me; hence the utter renunciation of the world in its various manifestations."—George Muller.

MAN—HIS CREATION, HIS NATURE

By Jas. A. Patrick

THERE IS SO much to be said on the above subject—in fact, there are three subjects in one—that it is difficult to know where to begin and what to say first.

As to man's nature, we can easily decide, if we can decide what constitutes the man. The discussion should not be so much as to man's nature, but as to what man really is. If this question can be decided definitely, the question as to the nature of man will take care of itself.

What is man? What really constitutes the man? Is it physical, or is it something superadded to the physical that lives within and causes the physical to live and act?

Some years ago, in a public discussion on this question, my opponent said, "There is but very little in the Bible to aid us in our definition of man." My reply was as follows: "This we do know, that the Bible is the only authentic record of man's origin and is the only Book that gives us any idea of his destiny. It was written for the purpose of giving us a history of man from the creation to the everlasting kingdom. God is its Author. It describes man in every relation that he sustains to his fellow man and to his God. The word "man" is used in the Bible about 2800 times. The Bible gives an exact account of man's creation, even telling of what he is composed. It gives and describes all the principal attributes of man; yet, 'There is but very little in the Bible to aid us in our definition of man.' True, there is but very little said of Bro. Knotts' man."

Now let us see what the Bible does say constitutes man. In Gen. 2:7 it is said that "God formed man of the dust of the ground". In my Bible classes I have often asked the question, after reading the foregoing statement, "Was he a man then?" Very often the answer is, "No." But the Bible says he was. "The LORD God formed man of the dust of the ground". Then God "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." What became a living soul? Man—the man God made out of the dust. This ought to settle the question, for God plainly tells us what man is.

But how about the man spoken of in Gen. 1:26, 27? It is sometimes argued that this is a spiritual man and the man of Gen. 2:7 is the physical man, and that God put the spiritual man into the physical.

Joseph Smith, the great prophet of the Latter Day Saints, in his so-called inspired translation of the Bible, in Gen. 2:5 gives us this, "For I, the Lord God, created all things of which I have spoken, spiritually, before they were naturally upon the face of the earth; for I, the Lord God, had not caused it to rain upon the earth. And I, the Lord God, had created all the children of men, and not yet a man to till the ground, for in heaven created I them, and there was not yet flesh upon the earth." But he forgot this when he came to 1 Cor. 15:46, 47, and made these verses say, "Howbeit that which is natural first, and not that which is spiritual; but afterwards, that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth earthy." This last is in harmony with the Bible, although not the same wording. So when Joseph Smith makes his Gen. 2:5 say that God created all things spiritually, first, in heaven, and then gives the statement as he does in 1 Cor. 15:46, 47, he makes his Bible contradict itself. And when any one says that God created a spiritual man first, before He created the fleshly man, he contradicts the Scriptures.

The whole of the Bible is in conformity with the idea expressed in Gen. 2:7.

When Adam had sinned, God told him he was made of the dust and should return to it. Gen. 3:17-19. Job gives expression to this thought, Job 34:14, "If he (God) set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath; all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust." To turn again to dust he must have come from dust. Again we read in Psa. 104:29, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled: thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust." In speaking of man and beast, the wise man, Eccl. 3:20, says, "All are of dust, and all turn to dust again." Passages like the above might be multiplied many times, but this is sufficient.

I challenge the world to show where God ever made any other man than the man of dust.

Some one may ask, "How about the inner man of Eph.

PRAYER CHANGETH THINGS

FROM EARLIEST BIBLE days to the close thereof, sacred Scripture is replete with instances of how prayer has changed things for man. Not that God alters His ways and plans to accommodate man, but that man, by altering his ways and placing himself earnestly and heartily before Almighty God, thus presents himself in such manner that God, to His own great delight, is permitted to pour His blessings upon man.

Let him who would walk surrounded by the benefits of God approach the Father in that manner taught by the Savior when He said, "After this manner therefore pray ye."

AFTER THE ORDER OF MELCHISEDEC

"THOU ART A PRIEST for ever after the order of Melchisedec."

These are words frequently expressed in the Hebrew epistle as applying to Christ, quoted from Psalms 110:4. Explanatory of these the apostle writes in Heb. 7:11, "that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron".

That Christ's order of priesthood was in advance of Aaron's is thought by all. As Melchisedec's priesthood was of the same order as Christ, it would therefore seem that it, too, was higher than that of Aaron's and if Christ's priesthood was of the order of Melchisedec, it would therefore seem that Melchisedec's priesthood and Christ's priesthood were of similar rank.

Therefore, as Christ's priesthood imparts to those under Him greater blessings than did Aaron's priesthood impart to those under Aaron, so likewise Abraham and others under Melchisedec received greater benefits from the priestly services of Melchisedec than did Moses and others with him receive from Aaron's service.

What meaning, then, in that little word in Gal. 3:19, "It (the law) was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made". This law that was added to God's promise to Abraham was accompanied by a covenant appropriate for it; also a priesthood appropriate for the law. The law, the covenant, the priesthood, were all added because of sin. All were inferior to the rank of that covenant and priesthood which God placed before Abraham; and inferior, so inferior, to that covenant and law and priesthood that were embraced in Christ as a fullness of that that had been placed before the patriarchal father.

THE NATURE OF MAN

THE NATURE OF MAN is perhaps one of the most fundamental subjects for Christians to study. It must always be realized that man's nature lies at the very bottom of every promise of God, of every redemptive work, of every sacrifice, of everything that God has done and is doing for man.

If man's nature were the nature of God Himself, there would need be no plan of salvation, no Son from before the foundation of the world, to suffer; there would need be no morning of resurrection, no return of the Son of man: all these things would be superfluous. But all these things are distinctly emphasized in the Scriptures. They are there because of man's nature and of the need, through a Redeemer, to restore man from a state of sin into which he entered because of his nature.

On the first page of this issue, Bro. Patrick has presented this subject and it is hoped that many people will come to realize more fully God's great revealed truths regarding man's need for a Savior to redeem.

If it be a Bible truth that man is mortal, let us not seek to hide that truth behind pride, but let us emblazon it before the whole world that many, by realizing man's weakness, may take advantage of the great help proffered through the Son of God's love.

WHENCE, WHITHER

ONE FREQUENTLY SEES, speeding through space at night, the rider in the railway coach pressing his hand against the window pane, peering into the darkness that he may discern some landmark by which he may estimate where he is. Can he locate his position on the line, he can then compute how far he has come from the beginning of his journey and how much farther he must travel to reach his journey's end.

So, too, the Christian! Through this dark night of worldliness, mankind is speeding rapidly toward one of the greatest destinies of the ages. That station pertains to the second coming of our Lord. Unwittingly, humanity and nations are gathering ever more closely toward this great point where the ages will apparently, for a moment, stop.

The Christian is eagerly looking out through the windows of revelation in constant effort to discern more accurately the part through which he at present is traveling, thus to estimate the distance until the coming of the Son of man.

BRO. R. A. CURTIS, elsewhere in this issue of THE HERALD, has endeavored to bring to the attention of all some of the prophetic designations that serve as markers along the way we are now speeding.

It is urged that all will study these things and will profit to that extent that true and ample Christian preparation shall by each one be made to arrive in God's own day and time at this place of anticipated meeting with the Master and with the faithful of all ages.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

By Rufus A. Curtiss

THE OMENS of coming deliverance have gladdened the hearts of God's faithful people from ancient times until the present hour. "The secret of the LORD is with them that fear him."—Psa. 25:14; (Prov. 3:32). "Surely the LORD GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7; (John 15:15).

The patriarch Job, with unswerving faith, gazed down the on-coming centuries and saw things that so filled his mind with joy that he wished to hand down to succeeding generations a knowledge of the foregleams of coming deliverance, of new birth, gladness and resurrection triumph, that he saw in the latter days. He exultingly exclaims, "O that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock for ever! For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my reins be consumed within me."—Job 19:23-27.

Jesus said upon one occasion, when speaking to the unbelieving Jews who boasted of their descent from Abraham, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad."—John 8:56.

If angels desire to look into things intimately connected with the plan of salvation as disclosed in the gospel, which portrays so vividly "the sufferings of Christ, and the glory which should follow", should not we, as dying men and women who are candidates for glory and honor and immortality, be alert and watchful to discern the signs of the times? (1 Peter 1:10-12; Rom. 2:6, 7; Matt. 16:2, 3.) Like the disciples of old we would press the question: "Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?"—Matt. 24:3.

For the sake of brevity I will call the reader's attention to the following Biblical statements that will help us to know our position along the stream of time which is rapidly bearing us on to the climax of human history—the coming of earth's rightful King, "the desire of all nations." John 18:37; Isa. 9:6, 7; Luke 1:30-33; Hag-gai 2:7. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. The Master has said, "Take heed that no man deceive you."—Matt. 24:4; (Col. 2:8).

As evidence that we are even now treading the border land of dispensations, I refer the reader to the following ominous signs, that portend the coming of Jesus, and the ushering in of a new dispensation. Just prior to His coming there will be witnessed:

1. A "falling away", or apostatizing, "from the truth" or, in other words, rejecting sound doctrine, and being "turned unto fables". 2 Thess. 2:1-12; 2 Tim. 5:1-4.

2. The manifestation of many false Christs. Matt. 24:5, 23-25.

3. The proclamation of an invisible coming of Christ, and that He is already here. The Master has repeatedly said, "Believe it not." Matt. 24:23-27.

4. Another sign of the end of the age is that there will be "wars and rumours of wars". Matt. 24:6.

5. There will be national strife, and added to the horror of this "there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places." Matt. 24:7.

6. Christ's true followers will be afflicted, persecuted, and hated of all nations for their allegiance to Him and His truth. Matt. 24:9; James 4:4.

7. Many unstable souls will "be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another." Matt. 24:10.

8. "Many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many." Matt. 24:11.

9. "Iniquity shall abound", and the "love of many shall wax cold". Matt. 24:12.

10. A world-wide proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom as a witness unto all nations is clearly contemplated. Then, when this is accomplished, the end shall come. Matt. 24:14.

11. "And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory."—Luke 21:25-27.

12. The cry of "peace and safety" is to characterize "the times and the seasons" that are precursors of the coming and kingdom of the Redeemer. 1 Thess. 5:1-6; Acts 1:6, 7.

13. "The time of the end" is portrayed by the prophet Daniel in the following language: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased". Dan. 12:4. In all the history of the past we can find nothing that so excites our admiration and wonder as the modern way of travel and the rapid dissemination of knowledge. Now men travel not only on the earth, but over it, through the air; on the bosom of the ocean, and beneath its surface. The rapidity of their movements, as they run to and fro is bewildering to contemplate. The marvels of the printing press and Edison's inventions, utilizing electricity, have well nigh revolutionized modern thought and travel.

14. Our faith in "the day of his preparation" is confirmed by prophecy being turned into history before our eyes today, in the introduction of automobiles. "The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one

EXCUSES

(Luke 14:16-21)

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

A CERTAIN man made a great supper, and bade many: and sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come."

There was not one reasonable excuse given. All were made excuses. The lesson I draw from this narrative is, "Making excuses".

How many of us have, at times, done just as these bidden guests did: simply made a lot of excuses when we should have been up and doing? Some refuse to work in the Master's service because everything is not going just their way and instead of lending a helping hand to help straighten out the tangle and push the work along, they make excuses. The command is: "Go work in my vineyard, for the harvest is great, but the labourers are few." How are we using the talents God has given us to use? Are we busily engaged in Christian service, or are we spending these precious hours for self to the exclusion of Jesus and His cause?

Our Savior also tells us to neglect not "the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; . . . but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

Why should we not neglect this one special thing—the assembling together? It is because these gatherings build us up in our most holy faith. Jesus said that where two or three are gathered together in His name He will be in the midst of them and bless them. All are made stronger by these gatherings together in Jesus' name, and His blessed influence follows us through the days to come. But if we make excuses and stay away from worship it is needless to say that we lose the blessing. And if we neglect these things and think that some other time we will give to our Savior the homage and service due Him, and, like the foolish virgins, fall asleep with no oil in our vessels, and the cry goes forth, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh"—What then?

When the great plants of our cities

Have turned out their last finished work;

When the merchants have sold their last yard of silk,

And dismissed the tired clerks;

When our banks have raked in their last dollar,

And paid the last dividend;

When the Judge of the earth says, "Closed for the night",

And asks for a balance—What then?

When the choir has sung its last anthem;

When the preacher has made his last prayer;

When the people have heard their last sermon

And the sound has died out on the air;
When the Bible lies closed on the altar
And the pews are all empty of men
And each one stands facing his record,
And the Great Book is opened—What then?

When the actors have played their last drama
And the mimic has made his last fun;
When the film has flashed its last picture
And the bill board displayed its last run;
When the crowds seeking pleasure have vanished
And gone out in the darkness again;
When the trumpet of ages is sounded
And we stand up before Him—What then?

When the bugle call sinks into silence,
And the long, marching columns stand still;
When the Captain has given His last orders
And they've captured the last fort and hill;
And the flag has been hauled from the masthead,
And the wounded afield have checked in;
And the world that rejected its Savior
Is asked for a reason—What then?

What reason can we give for having made excuses, and failed to do the things God has required of us? "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and may glorify your Father which is in heaven." Rejecting the Savior is failing to do the things required of the church as well as of the world.

So let us be steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, which is our reasonable service.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.
Give love, and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

TUNE IN ON THE GOOD

By J. E. Hatch

AS YOU SIT in your cozy home with your radio before you, it is your privilege to "tune in" on all manner of entertainments—lectures, the markets, musical programs, jazz or religious sermons or programs.

One of the greatest achievements of mortal man in discovering the law of God and perfecting instruments to demonstrate that law may be used for evil or for good as each individual wishes.

At a certain hour within the week, by the turning of a dial one can get out of the air words or music which will build him up spiritually and cause his soul to praise the Creator of all good.

On the other hand, worldly jazz may be had in abundance for the taking, but it profiteth nothing.

Tune in on the good.

WHY SO MANY DIVORCES?

By Melba Glanton Arlington

Every increasing courteousness and loving attention each to the other are herein emphasized by the author, as becoming a duty upon the part of both husband and wife to each other. Never ending fidelity should be emphasized. God's own declaration of judgment against divorce and the fact that in every garden there is a Satan enters to dethrone God and ruin man are points brought out in this closing sketch of "Why So Many Divorces?"—Editor.

AND NOW we come to the third cause of divorce—lost love. Women my message to you: Do not allow yourselves to become careless in your personal appearance, your home, or your habits. Cleanliness is next to Godliness, you know. Be a companion to your husband, keep his love and admiration as you would priceless jewels. Be pleasant and cheerful when he is in your home; drop a few words of praise occasionally. Don't nag. Get into the habit of accompanying your husband whenever he desires to go somewhere for clean amusement. For if you don't go, someone else will.

Men, my message to you: Cherish your wife's respect as you would your life; be kind and courteous to her. Keep up your personal appearance and don't expect your wife to love you if you swear, drink or ask her to kiss you with tobacco juice running down the corners of your mouth. Treat her as you did when you were trying to win her.

And now, infidelity—a breach of trust. Men do not love as most women do, for their's is mostly physical. Because woman was chosen to be the medium of life-development, she naturally possesses more noble tendencies, or should; yet she has always been the temptress. And a woman may make or break a man.

Again, Jesus said, "But I say unto you that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her; hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." If that is true, and we have no reason to doubt it, men are breaking a commandment of God hourly.

Men are generally referred to as the "stronger sex" but where women are concerned, men are as weak as babes. With this knowledge some women have made excellent use of their beauty and attractiveness.

Girls! Did you ever stop to think that just one look from your eyes or a nod of your marcelled head might mean the destruction of a home and the breaking of a trust? Some day you will have to meet these things face to face, and then what?

I once knew a young girl who became infatuated with her employer, a married man with children. She was determined to have him, and finally succeeded. But, oh, friends, she is in constant fear of losing him and he looks upon her with disgust because he does not respect her. She won him and his wealth and position, but lost her self-respect and happiness.

A man, a minister of the gospel for years, left his wife for another. Instead of finding happiness, he is a miserable creature. He sold his inheritance for a mess of pottage.

Everywhere we are hearing the cry of infidelity. The courts are ringing with it, it is ruining humanity. Men are not true to their wives; wives are not true to their husbands. Rich and poor have the fever, but those of wealth are given more notice and lauded more highly.

A certain radio man was completely spoiled with too much attention from his female radio fans. They sent him costly gifts and hundreds of endearing letters, until his wife no longer held a place in his conceited life and she was compelled to divorce him.

Men and women rarely get divorces and live single the rest of their lives. God said that it was not good for man to live alone. He must have a companion, therefore he nearly always marries again, usually to his sorrow. And why?

"And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery."—Matt. 19:9.

Jesus, as the Son of God, could see the end from the beginning and He knew that this very thing would come. He therefore deemed it necessary to give us a law concerning marriage and divorce. When we stop to think of the thousands breaking this one commandment, "Thou shalt not commit adultery", we do not wonder when we read that God regretted when he made man.

Thousands of men and women are allowing their baser instincts to rule their lives. The beast in man is fed by heavy eating, immoral thoughts and attending immoral entertainments. Wine fans the flame of passion also, and he soon loses his sense of decency.

A man and a woman, now awaiting an extreme penalty, which will probably be executed by the time this is published, should be striking examples to the world. The result of sinful living and infidelity is this.

If we would live the Godly life, the life without sin, the only life worth living and the only one which has eternal life as its reward, we must pray without ceasing. We must so fill our lives and hearts with love and pure thoughts that the evil desires cannot enter. When Satan enters the life of man it takes the power of God to dethrone him, but it can be done. Only give Him a chance. He, God or His merciful Son, pleads with you to listen. He is willing and ready to help you at any call. No problem is too great for Him to solve, no trial or weakness too much for Him to help you overcome. Ask Him now. We dare not risk one hour. Lives are daily snuffed out without a moment's warning. It is up to you to choose—
DESTRUCTION OR ETERNAL LIFE.

NO SOUL CAN preserve the bloom and delicacy of its existence without lonely musing and silent prayer; and the greatness of this necessity is in proportion to the greatness of the soul. There were many times during our Lord's ministry when, even from the loneliness of desert places, He dismissed His most faithful and most beloved, that He might be yet more alone.—Archdeacon Farrar,

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

THE SONS OF GOD

By Charles W. Howe

A CAREFUL STUDY of the races of men is somewhat enlightening from the standpoint of creation and antediluvian days. We find that the descendants of Noah were all white people. The descendants of Japheth are the Aryans or Indo-European people. The descendants of Shem we find to be the Babylonians, Assyrians, Phoenicians, Armenians, Arabians and Hebrews. The descendants of Ham are the Egyptians, Lybians and the Canaanites.

The man who received the curse of Noah, which curse was supposed to produce the negro, never saw Africa, but settled in the land which afterward bore his name; and so Canaan, who was cursed, became the father of the Canaanites and not the father of the negro. Anyway, if a curse made the negro black and wooly, with flat nose and thick lips, what curse made the Chinaman yellow, with a slant of the eye, or the American Indian bronze, with high cheek bones? Then whence came the colored peoples, if the entire earth was destroyed at the deluge? Our answer lies in the word earth. The Hebrew word so translated has a variety of meanings.

I have Gesenius' Hebrew Lexicon before me at the present moment. It gives for eretz the following definitions: (1) the earth, arbis terranum; (2) the earth, land, opposite to sea; (3) a land, country; (4) land, a field; (5) the ground, etc. If the word translated earth could have been translated country or region as this suggests, then the colored races could have been in existence before the flood and still not have been destroyed by it. But where did they originate?

When Cain was driven out from the presence of the Lord, he was afraid lest any man finding him should slay him. What other man of Adam's race was there in existence save his father only? Was he afraid of brothers yet unborn? Who, then, had he to fear unless he knew of a savage and murderous people dwelling in the land of Nod into which he was being exiled?

It seems that the colored peoples must have existed contemporaneously with Adam, if not prior to him. Examine the record of Gen. 1 and compare it with that of chapter 2, and you will find a different order of creative acts in the one from that which appears in the other. In the creation recorded in chapter 1, the lower animals were created first and afterward man was created. In the creation recorded in chapter 2, we find Adam created before the lower animals. Then they were created and brought before Adam and he named them. Eve was created last of all. These differences are sufficient to brand these records as being not two accounts of the same thing, but as two separate and successive events. So while men were created in chapter 1, they were undoubtedly all colored savages and "there was not a man to till the ground". Gen. 2:5.

In Acts 17:26 we are informed that God made of one (the word blood is not in the original) all nations (or families—the word may be translated race—see Thayer's Greek Lexicon), to dwell upon all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation. I take this to mean that God made each race from one, i. e., from one pair, and then placed them in definitely bounded habitations.

We know that the negroes' habitation has a clear cut boundary in the Sahara Desert on the north. The Indians' boundary is very definite, being separated from all others by water on every side. The yellow man's habitation was bounded and separated from the white man's dominion by high mountain ranges. Jewish historians place Eden as western Asia, northern Africa and Europe, and perhaps India. That, then, was the original white man's dominion. We read that God separated them thus that they should seek the Lord. Acts 17:27. It seems that they could not properly seek the Lord outside of their own habitation. But all did not stay where God had placed them, even in Adam's time; for we read in Jude 3 that "the angels (messengers, i. e., human beings, as I take it) which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." See also 2 Peter 2:4.

Ancient Hebrew literature, other than the Bible and yet held as scripture by the Jews at one time, identifies the sons of God who took wives of the daughters of men as being these same messengers who left their own habitation. Concerning people of like wickedness "Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds". Jude 14. I gather from the reading of the ancient Hebrew literature before mentioned that these sons of God were celibate priests of a heathen religion, i. e., they were sons of the gods. The word elohim is always plural and often refers to heathen gods, although usually to the one true Deity. They were not supposed to have wives, it is stated, but nevertheless they became so enamoured with the daughters of men that they cohabited with them and begat a race of giants in the earth. It is stated that they were responsible for leading Eve astray. No wonder that the temptation took the form, "thou shalt not surely die", for they seem to have had a belief like the Morians hold today, that immortality had existed before their birth and would continue forever, i. e., they were "spiritual, living the eternal life, and immortal from all generations of the world." No wonder Eve was told that instead of death the change which she feared would only end in good, making her like the gods, to know good and evil. Adultery has ever been one of the worst sins of the whole category, both in the eyes of God and man, but it seems from the study of the sons of God in their relation to the daughters of men that the greatest sin imaginable is the prostitution of the race, thereby bringing a race of mongrels into existence. At least God destroyed all the progeny of this unholy union, in that day, with such a deluge that no flesh could pass through it and live.

Another interesting thing as related to these sons of God (or sons of the gods) is related to Enoch and his translation. In Heb. 11:5 we read: "By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death." In verse 13 we read of the whole list of people, of whom Enoch was one, who "all died in faith, not having received the promises". Is this a contradiction or only a paradox? Here, again, we are helped by our ancient Hebrew literature, which informs us that Enoch's activities had to do with that class of people from which these priestly messengers had come. "He was hidden, and no one of the children of men knew where he was hidden, and where he abode, and what had become of him." Nevertheless he was on earth all the while, for Methuselah sought him out at one time. It is stated that he went to him to the ends of the earth, for he had heard that he was there. This is exactly in harmony with the statement that he was translated that he should not see death and yet died, i. e., he was translated or placed across (which is the meaning of the word) to another country that he should not see the death meted out in the flood, but escaped it by going to be the first foreign missionary to those people from whom the sons of God had come. Since no man ever had knowledge as to the time of his death, the simple statement is made that "he was not; for God took him." Gen. 5:24. While Enoch was the first foreign missionary on record, Noah was the first home missionary, and he preached for four hundred years in an effort to rescue those of Adam's race from sin. He saw the death which Enoch escaped, for he passed through it symbolically while he was buried within the ark, and so came through the waters, even as we come through baptism into a new life.

And so we have in the descendants of Noah the continuance of the children of men and they are white, every one of them. We also have today the descendants of the people from whom the sons of God came. They are colored people, and their original habitation was the one which lay east of Eden. Their barrier was the one most easily crossed and since that time there have been numerous invasions of these peoples, which at one time threatened to completely wipe out every vestige of European civilization.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like lightnings."—Nahum 2:3, 4.

15. The latter times are prophetically portrayed by Paul, when "some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth."—1 Tim. 4:1-3.

16. So far from the Whitbyan dream of the world's conversion taking place before Christ comes, the Bible portrays the opposite condition with unerring precision. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." It causes the cheeks to crimson with shame that such characters should be found today, "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." The apostle adds, "From such turn away." 2 Tim. 3:1-5.

17. When the Son of man is revealed the morality of the world will have sunk to the level of the days of Noe and Lot. Luke 17:26-30. Then "the wickedness of man was great in the earth, . . . and the earth was filled with violence." Gen. 6:5, 10, 11. "Pride, fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness" led to the neglect of "the poor and needy" by the Sodomites. "And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me", saith God. Ezek. 16:49, 50. Their fate is "set forth for an example" to all succeeding generations. Jude 7. Like causes will produce like results.

18. True faith will be well nigh extinct "when the Son of man cometh." Luke 18:8. Earth's moral night of darkness and gloom is gathering rapidly about us, but I rejoice to know "the night is far spent, the day is at hand." Rom. 13:12; (Psa. 30:5). While men's hearts are "failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth," Christians are admonished to "look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21:26, 28.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

"TAKE NO THOUGHT for the morrow," said Jesus, "for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Pile three hundred and sixty-five panes of transparent glass one upon the other and try to look through them. What do you see? Nothing but inky blackness. Take from off the pile one pane, and look through it. Now what do you see? You see everything that is in sight. Thus you face the year with its three hundred and sixty-five days piled one upon the other—all in darkness. But if each morning you take from off the pile of days the one which comes first, you are enabled to see your duty clearly. Do today's duty. Trust Him for tomorrow, and peace will keep your heart and mind.—Selected.

"TODAY there is no scientific ground for believing that alcohol can cure anything. The death rate from pneumonia among abstainers is 18 percent, among intemperate people 52 percent," says Arthur H. Evans, Surgeon and Lecturer on Surgery at the Westminster Hospital, London.

3:16?" Turn to Rom. 7:22, 25 and we have an answer to this question: "For I delight in the law of God after the inward man . . . So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God". It is the inward man that delights in the law of God, and it is with the mind that he serves the law of God; so the inward man is the mind. This is further confirmed in Col. 3:9, 10 and Eph. 4:23: "Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." This new man is renewed in knowledge. Knowledge is a product of mind. "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man." How do we put on the new man? By being renewed in the spirit of our minds. In Romans 8 the "carnally minded (the minding of the flesh—margin) is death; but to be spiritually minded (minding of the spirit—margin) is life and peace." The Psalmist says that in death the thoughts perish. Thoughts result from mind; so then the mind or inner man perishes in death.

"But," says one, "how about the spirit that returns to God who gave it?" Whose spirit returns to God? And the answer invariably is, "Why, the righteous man's, of course." Yes, and the unrighteous man's, too. Read Eccl. 12 and you will see that the wise man is talking about all men. "Man (generic, all men) goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets." Then the spirit of all men goes to God who gave it. What is this spirit? "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled: thou takest away their breath (Heb., spirit), they die, and return to their dust. Thou sendest forth thy spirit, they are created." "If he (God) set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath; all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust." Psa. 104:29, 30; Job 34:14. From the above it is clear that man's spirit that makes him live is simply the spirit of God that is loaned to him for a season, and then goes back to the Lender. The spirit as used in this sense is simply the life-principle that comes from God, is used by man during his life, and returns to God again; like the electricity that comes from the power house to vivify the motor, and when the motor wears out returns to the power house again.

But it is distinctly told in Psa. 104:29 that men return to "their" dust, while the spirit goes back to God. So we read, "For he (God) knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." Psa. 103:14. Who knows better than God of what man is composed? He invented us. Who knows better than the inventor of what the thing he invented is made? When God says we are made of dust, why should any one say we are made of spirit?

If man is dust, and God says that he is, then he is mortal by nature. It doesn't take much discussion to settle this point when we settle what man is,

In a future article I wish to discuss the subject of man's creation.

WINDOW TESTIMONY TO THE TRUTH

In the issue of January 31, a selection was taken from "Words of Life", entitled, "Window Testimony to the Truth". Through an error the selection was not completed. That the readers may get the benefit of the suggestion, the article is here repeated with an illustration appended.—Editor.

DEAR SIR, I have hit upon a new plan of bringing the truth before the general public, namely, by what I designate my "Window Pulpit."

The idea is simply to write out a brief statement of fact, or criticism of error, and place the writing in my shop window, hard against the glass, so that dozens, who would never otherwise hear of our views, read the notices daily.

Although the plan has only been in operation a few weeks it has already borne fruit, and I have got in touch with several people who are interested, and two clergymen, at least, have spoken to me about the notices.

A specimen of the notices is appended, which perhaps may prove interesting to readers, and lead to others adopting the plan.

Yours in service,

John Balfour.

BALFOUR'S WINDOW PULPIT

What is the Human Soul? Before you can understand the Biblical view of this subject some eight hundred passages have to be examined. But one fact stands out very clearly, the Bible never once states that the Soul is Immortal. On the other hand, the Scripture emphatically says that the "soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:20).

Now it is obvious that an immortal being could not die. Again, Christ "poured out his Soul unto death" (Isaiah 53:12). How could that which is Immortal be poured out unto Death?

Immortality is taught in Scripture, but not the Immortality of the Soul. Indeed, the Scripture asserts that God "only hath immortality" (1 Tim. 1:17 and 6:16), and it is God's Immortality that is promised to mortal man.

To those who, by patient continuance in well-doing, look for glory, honor and Immortality, God will render Eternal Life (Rom. 2:7). Why look for it if you are already Immortal?

"For this Mortal must put on immortality" (1 Cor. 15:53).

Why have you to put it on if you have it already?

Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be SAVED (i. e., become immortalized).—Words of Life.

THE FALL OF THE BURGUNDIANS, THE VISIGOTHS,
AND THE OSTROGOTHS

Daniel 11

AND HE SHALL do exploits, and return to his own land." Clovis, who was now the recognized champion of the Papacy, was determined to establish the power of Rome from the gates of that city to the English Channel, though whether that idea originated with himself or was suggested to him by the Catholic bishops has never been definitely ascertained. The kingdom of the Visigoths, who were of Arian faith, lay nearest to his own dominions, and between him and the city of Rome; and was naturally the next to be assaulted by Clovis. In the year 507, at the head of a great army, he advanced against the Visigoths, who were encamped near Poitiers. "The accidental or artificial prodigies which adorned the expedition of Clovis were accepted, by a superstitious age, as the manifest declaration of the Divine favor. He marched from Paris; and as he proceeded with decent reverence through the holy diocese of Tours, his anxiety tempted him to consult the shrine of St. Martin, the sanctuary, and the oracle of Gaul. His messengers were instructed to remark the words of the Psalm which should happen to be chanted at the precise moment when they entered the church. These words most fortunately expressed the valor and victory of the champions of heaven, and the application was easily transferred to the new Joshua, the new Gideon, who went forth to battle against the enemies of the Lord. Orleans secured to the Franks a bridge on the Loire; but, at the distance of forty miles from Poitiers their progress was intercepted by an extraordinary swell of the river Vigena or Vienne; and the opposite banks were covered by the encampment of the Visigoths. Delay must be always dangerous to barbarians, who consume the country through which they march; and had Clovis possessed leisure and materials, it might have been impractical to construct a bridge, or to force a passage, in the face of a superior enemy. But the affectionate peasants, who were impatient to welcome their deliverer, could easily betray some unknown or unguarded ford: the merit of the discovery was enhanced by the useful interposition of fraud or fiction; and a white hart, of singular size and beauty, appeared to guide and animate the march of the Catholic army. The counsels of the Visigoths were irresolute and distracted. A crowd of impatient warriors, presumptuous in their strength, and disdaining to fly before the robbers of Germany, excited Alaric to assert in arms the name and blood of the conqueror of Rome. The advice of the graver chieftains pressed him to elude the first ardor of the Franks; and to expect, in the southern provinces of Gaul, the veteran and victorious Ostrogoths, whom the king of Italy had already sent to his assistance. The decisive moments were wasted in idle deliberation the Goths too hastily abandoned, perhaps, an advantageous post and the opportunity of a secure retreat was lost by their slow and disorderly motions. After Clovis had passed the ford, as it is still named, of the Hart, he advanced with bold and hasty steps to prevent the escape of the enemy. His nocturnal march was directed by a flaming meteor suspended in the air above the cathedral of Poitiers; and this signal, which might be previously concerted with the orthodox successor of St. Hilary, was compared to the column of fire that guided the Israelites in the desert.

"At the third hour of the day, about ten miles beyond Poitiers, Clovis overtook, and instantly attacked, the Gothic army, whose defeat was already prepared by terror and confusion. Yet they rallied in their extreme distress, and the martial youths, who had clamorously demanded the battle, refused to survive the ignominy of flight. The two kings encountered each other in single combat. Alaric fell by the hand of his rival; and the victorious Frank was saved, by the goodness of his cuirass and the vigor of his horse, from the spears of two desperate Goths who furiously rode against him to revenge the death of their sovereign.

"The vague expression of a mountain of the slain serves to indicate a cruel, though indefinite, slaughter; but Gregory has carefully observed that his valiant countryman Apollinaris, the son of Sidonius, lost his life at the head of the nobles of Auvergne. Perhaps these suspected Catholics had been maliciously exposed to the blind assault of the enemy and perhaps the influence of religion was superseded by personal attachment or military honor.

"The decisive battle of Poitiers was followed by the conquest of Aquitain. Alaric had left behind him an infant son, a bastard competitor, factious nobles, and a disloyal people; and the remaining forces of the Goths were oppressed by the general consternation, or opposed to each other in civil discord.

"The victorious king of the Franks proceeded without delay to the siege of Angouleme. At the sound of his trumpets the walls of the city imitated the example of Jericho, and instantly fell to the ground; a splendid miracle, which may be reduced to the supposition that some clerical engineers had secretly undermined the foundations of the rampart. At Bordeaux, which had submitted without resistance, Clovis established his winter quarters; and his prudent economy transported from Toulouse the royal treasures, which were deposited in the capital of the monarchy.

"The conqueror penetrated as far as the confines of Spain; restored the honors of the Catholic church; fixed in Aquitain a colony of Franks; and delegated to his lieutenants the easy task of subduing or extirpating the nation of the Visigoths." (Gibbon: Chapter 37.)

JUDGMENT

By C. E. Randall

HE THAT heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation (judgment); but is passed from death unto life."—John 5:24. "Condemnation" comes from the Greek word krisis, which is generally translated judgment. It is so used in John 5:22, 27. Thus Jesus would have us understand that His followers will not come into judgment. The whole tenor of church scripture indicates that the "body of Christ" will not appear in judgment with the world. The present time is the period of judgment for the church. It is the time when our sins "are open beforehand, going before into judgment". 1 Tim. 5:24. For this reason Peter said, "For the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God: and if it first begin at us, what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?" 1 Peter 4:17. The beginning of judgment at the house of God is when our sins are open going before; that they may be blotted out as "far as the east is from the west".

That judgment has been passed upon the church and that they shall not come into judgment with the world, whose sins "follow after", is evidenced by the fact that the church is accounted worthy of immortality and is caught up to meet Christ in the air before Christ ever comes to earth to sit in judgment over the nations. 1 Thess. 4:16, 17. Instead of coming into judgment with the world, and appearing before Christ's throne with the ungodly, they come with Christ and sit with Him on the "throne of his glory" and assist Him in the judgment of the nations. "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" 1 Cor. 6:2. How are the saints going to judge the world as "joint-heirs", Rom. 8:17, with Christ, if they are having judgment passed upon them at the same time as the world? They will be with Him on the throne when the nations are before the throne.

The judgment of Matt. 25:31-46 cannot possibly have reference to the judgment of the "church of God". Judgment is passed on an individual before he ever becomes a member of this company. It is plainly stated in verse 32 that it is a judgment of nations. It is nations that are separated as sheep from goats. This separation takes place soon after Christ comes with the church. The day when "his feet shall stand . . . upon the mount of Olives". Zech. 14:4. Joel describes this judgment as the time when all nations will be in the valley of Jehoshaphat, Joel 3. And the Lord shall sit to judge all the heathen round about because they have sold His people and parted His land. The judgment of Joel is based entirely upon the nations' treatment of Israel—His first love. This same principle is the basis of the judgment of the nations gathered before the throne of Christ's glory.

There are only two issues involved. They can be summed up in these statements: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. . . . Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." Matt. 25:40, 45.

God will hold nations accountable for their attitude and treatment of His chosen people, Israel. No nation that will not serve Israel during the Lord's day can continue its national existence. "For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted." Isa. 60:12. Thus the prophet has spoken of the time when the goat nations, that will be placed on the left hand, shall go into everlasting punishment, i. e., cutting off. Matt. 25:46.

Nations should be very careful how they treat Israel. The time is coming when "the sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee, The City of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel." Isa. 60:14.

HAVE YOU FOUND JESUS?

Have you found Him, weary stranger?
Is He precious to your soul?
Has He spoken peace and pardon,
Touched your hand and made you whole?
Is He more to you than jewels,
Stocks or mines, or flowing wells?
More to you than royal palace,
Where earth's proudest monarch dwells?
More to you than friends or children?
Height of place or worldly fame?
More to you than sweetest pleasures,
Acres broad and titled name?
O, if not, your wealth is ashes,
Cheating dust and tinselled toy,
Only yours for one brief moment
Here to have and to enjoy.
All must perish with the using,
Naught to keep for endless years;
Life goes out in bitter grieving,
Vain regrets and useless tears.
Give yourself to God's sweet service;
He hath need of such as you.
Earth's broad vineyard needeth tilling,
Grand the work there is to do.
Up, delay not, life is going:
Swift the moments speed away;
Would you have the crown of glory?
Seek the Savior now—today.
Rich reward awaits the doer,
Wealth beyond what tongue can tell;
Crown and throne, and life immortal,
And bright home wherein to dwell.
Sweet it is to work for Jesus,
Building for the ages long;
Where will come no pain or dying,
Nor be heard sad sorrow's song.
Work for Him will prosper ever,
Widening, broadening, moving on,
Till the world's last field of battle
Shall for Christ, our King, be won,—Anon,

FROM NIAGARA FALLS

The following excerpt shows a healthful condition in the Berean work at Niagara Falls, N. Y., and incidentally gives some suggestions that might be helpful to other classes:

"On the night of February fourteenth we held our annual Berean business meeting. Our reports indicated a very healthy growth and excellent interest throughout the year. From sixteen charter members we have increased to twenty-nine. The society has enjoyed ten social gatherings which always follow the last meeting in the month. (We hold no meetings during July and August.)

"Just now we are studying the lessons on the life of Paul. Under our present arrangements the pastor acts as superintendent of the class work, and assigns certain portions of the lesson to different individuals in advance. We have a large outline map of the Roman Empire, specially made for this work, on which we trace the various journeys, with numbered pins marking each "station". Cords of different colors, a different color for each journey, lead from station to station, and are placed in position as we go along. We study the geography, history, traditions and religion of the cities and countries through which the apostle traveled, but we give special attention to the doctrines presented.

"To illustrate our method more fully, I will tell you that at our last meeting Dr. J. W. Lent gave a short but very informative and interesting lecture on the Roman Empire, its history, extent, religion, and the social conditions prevailing in the days of Paul. At a preceding meeting we had various special addresses, all short and "peppy", descriptive of the cities Paul visited and the social and religious conditions prevailing there in those days.

"The meetings are held in the homes. We are always glad to accept an invitation to meet in the home of someone who is not a member of the society that they may learn what we are doing. The last meeting for the study of the life of Paul will be held in the church, and will be a review of his entire life, illustrated with lantern slides. Fortunately we are provided with a very excellent instrument of that kind.

"The following officers were elected for the new year: President, Mrs. Grace M. Marsh; Vice-President, Dr. J. W. Lent; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Fay Brown; Organist, Mrs. Edith Lankin.

"At the close of the meeting the Secretary presented the Pastor (as an expression of appreciation for his work as Superintendent of the Society) a most generous gift, which was deeply appreciated by the recipient."

THE LORD'S DAY

By Josephine Hammond

Many people have the idea that the "Lord's day" of the Bible is Sunday. It was the custom of Jesus' disciples to meet on the first day of the week, but this was prompted by their love for Him and His gospel and not as obedience to a given law.

The "Lord's day" will come when Jesus comes to reign on the earth after man has had his day and has found that human methods are a failure in establishing peace on earth. The "Lord's day" will be a time of restitution of all things which the prophets have spoken of since the beginning of the world. God is now allowing man to govern the nations while He selects from them a people to be with Jesus and be with Him always. We cannot understand all now, and the details of the working out of what is to be accomplished but we know that there is a real good time coming and, best of all, it is to be right here on earth where it is needed so badly. It will be when God has purposed to make His gospel fill the earth.

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDE

Mark 6:31-44; 8:1-10

HOW MANY people are five thousand people? How much bread would you buy to feed them? How much would it cost?

Jesus healed so many sick people in Galilee that great crowds followed Him. One day, not long before the pass-over feast, He crossed the Sea of Galilee, the crowd following along the shore.

Jesus went up into a mountain and sat with His disciples. At sight of the crowd, probably very poor people, Jesus thought of food for them. He knew how He could provide it, but He wanted to see how much His disciples had learned of His power; so He said unto Philip, "Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?"

Now the disciples had so little money that Philip replied: "Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little."

At this Andrew said that there was a little boy among them with his lunch, but that it contained only five barley loaves and two small fishes. These loaves were scarcely more than crackers and that would not be much help. However Jesus told the company of five thousand men to sit down on the grass. Then the little boy was called and his lunch given to Jesus. The Master broke the little loaves and said thanks to God, just as we should do before we begin to eat. To each disciple He then gave parts of the bread and fish, and they, in turn gave to each of the five thousand. Can you see the food grow in their hands? Each person ate all that he wanted and yet had some left.

Now Jesus was orderly, and did not leave the refuse of the lunch on the ground as some careless picnic people do. Instead, He told the disciples to gather up the remains. And, what do you think? The part that remained filled twelve baskets—more than there was in the beginning. How could that be? Was it God's power through Jesus?

Well, the people were so astonished that they said, "This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world."

SOMETHING TO DO

Ask mother how many fish she needs to feed your family. Then reckon how many fish that multitude would have needed.

Likewise, how many loaves of bread.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Can you really comprehend the wonderfulness of this miracle? Real Christians today receive just as wonderful food.

MEMORY VERSE

11. Matthew 18:20.

TINY TOTS

Many people listened a long, long time to Jesus' preaching. They were hungry, and Jesus asked for food to give them. All the disciples could find were two small fishes and five small loaves of bread. Jesus divided this and told the helpers to give it to the people.

Somehow Jesus made this little bit of food grow so that every one had enough to eat, and there was more left than there was in the beginning.

We call this a miracle.

GOD IS NEAR

*'Mid the darkest scenes of life
God is near!*

*In the turmoil and the strife
God is near!*

*When the angry waves roll high—
And the clouds obscure the sky
Through the storm there comes a cry,
God is near!*

*Though the dearest friend depart
God is near!*

*He can heal the broken heart—
God is near!*

*Do the tears fall thick and fast
As you ponder o'er the past?
There is One whose love will last—
God is near!*

*In the midst of deepest grief
God is near!*

*He alone can bring relief—
God is near!*

*When the hand of Death so cold
Snatches loved ones from the fold,
And you suffer grief untold,
God is near!*

*Go and tell it far and wide
God is near!*

*Dry the tears on every side;
God is near!*

*Take it to the darkest soul,
Let the message onward roll;
It will comfort and console—
God is near!*

LESSON XI.—March 11, 1928

JESUS FEEDS THE MULTITUDE

Mark 6:31-44; 8:1-10

Devotional Reading: Ezekiel 34:11-16

GOLDEN TEXT

I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.—John 6:35.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Jesus Feeds. A new vision of Jesus is distinctly pictured in this remarkable miracle. He had been the great Physician in healing all physical ailments; He had been the great Master in rebuking wind and wave; He had been the great Monarch in overpowering the maniac; He had gradually advanced His position and abilities before the minds of great and small; now He became in very truth a Shepherd. Not merely was He One who could soothe their troubled hearts or balm their wounds, but One who could in very deed lead not only His apostles, but all intent followers to those fields where all needed mental and physical foods would be amply provided. In no particular were His abilities insufficient.

His hearers were, indeed, shepherdless. By following Him intently, they had unwittingly strayed from their former leaders. They had not yet accepted the new Leader. They were leaderless, shepherdless. They realized this. Jesus, knowing their position, at once presented Himself in such fullness that they had opportunity of choosing Him, who would lead them unto all fullness and supply their every need. He taught them and then immediately fed them to the full.

Give Ye Them. Jesus had commissioned His apostles, Mark 6:7-13, to go out and work. Perhaps He had not expressly itemized all works which they should perform. He now directed the apostles to feed this great multitude of more than five thousand men, women and children, to the full. He did not mean for them to purchase supplies. He meant, literally, what He said, "Give ye them". No doubt, had they proceeded, they would have been supplied with power, by which to accomplish what Jesus did accomplish.

Preach the Gospel. Here is another command most similar in import. The gospel words of God and of His Son are to the perishing world the bread of salvation. The command has been given. It requires energy, strength, ability. There is no doubt that the Savior's commission carries with it assurance that strength will accompany the giving, and that all necessary supplies will be afforded. The greatest question confronting the Christian and mankind, is the question of unstinted faith.

Questions. Analyze and point out the leading truths of this lesson. Are Christ's miracles teachings set in action? What leading characteristics of Christ are manifested in this scripture? Why did not the apostles proceed and give the multitude food? Was His command, v. 37, parallel with His command in 16:15?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Jesus said to them, I am the bread of life: he who comes unto me in nowise may hunger; and he who puts faith in me in nowise shall thirst, at any time.—John 6:35, Roth.

Bread is the staff of life and whatever else we may have to eat, the meal is incomplete without bread, and nothing takes its place. Christ is just that to the spiritual, the eternal life. The children of Israel fed on manna, which was also bread from heaven. They fed on it daily. So the Christian must feed daily on Christ or there will be a stunted spiritual growth. Oh, that we might fully realize what it means to feed on Christ, that we may renew the inner man day by day!—F. A. S.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Compassion. "Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them."—Mark 6:34. The great Teacher saw in the throng about Him not simply an audience, waiting for His message; but He observed them as individuals as well. He recognized their personal needs, their lost and leaderless condition. His heart was deeply touched by their blind, suffering, sinful state. May we, likewise, look with sympathy, with tender pity, upon those multitudes about us who are "strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world", Eph. 2:12. May our compassion incite us to action in their behalf! May we be moved to put forth a most earnest effort to bring them under the protection of "that great shepherd of the sheep" who will lead into the green pastures of eternal peace!

Responsibility. "Give ye them to eat."—Mark 6:37. It was the presence of Jesus in that "desert place" that had brought the multitude from their homes. They came as sheep follow their shepherd, without thought for the future or preparation for physical needs, and the great Shepherd held Himself responsible for the condition in which they found themselves, and therefore, He provided for their requirements. "Ye are the light of the world," Matt. 5:14, Jesus informed His disciples in the sermon on the mount. The language applies to the Christian of to-day as well as to those who lived in Jesus' time. The ignorance of the multitudes regarding the glad tidings of salvation, their unconscious hunger for the truth of God, places upon the follower of the Lord an unavoidable responsibility to feed them with the bread which came down from heaven," and give them to drink of the "fountain of the waters of life."—G. E. M.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus meeting everyday need.

A large crowd had gathered. In their intense interest in Christ's works and teachings they had followed, not heeding the lack of necessary supplies. Real need now faced them, and much suffering would have followed if help had not been given. But they had manifested faith in following Christ, and the Master now met their need.

Our Savior sees and knows the common, daily needs of His people. He asks us to pray for our daily bread and for the forgiveness of our daily transgressions. He has walked the human pathway, and has felt its trials and sorrows, and has compassion for those who try to overcome.

What a comfort to know that our Lord not only has the power, but also has a compassion which reaches down to our daily needs!

Will the Lord direct the lives of those who trust Him? In what ways will He provide?—F. E. S.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Jesus meeting every-day needs.

Class, will you read Mark 8:1-10 and tell your teacher what Jesus asked the disciples to do with the multitude of people that had come to hear Him preach? What had His disciples brought with them to eat? What did Jesus tell the people to do? What did Jesus do with the bread and fish? Did they all have enough to eat? Were there any fragments left? Do you think you could love a friend who could and would always care for your needs as Jesus did?

It was as easy for Jesus to feed all those people as to have fed Himself, because He trusted in God for help.

Dear children, do not be afraid to ask God, through Jesus the Christ, for what you really need, and He will provide it for you. It is when we ask God for what we ought not to have that our prayers are not answered. James 4:3 says, "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." If we are true to Christ's teachings we will always say, "If God wills, grant my prayer."—M. A. W.

TOPICS FOR STUDY AND DISCUSSION

Life: Contrast God's life with a life that is exclusively flesh. When did man begin to absorb some of God's light-life? What was Jesus' mission as concerns life? Why and how did Jesus give His flesh?

Discuss and analyze the phrase, "Jesus the bread of life."—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls (Iowa) Sunday School is doing nicely. Even though there has been cold, ice and snow, the average attendance of about twenty-one has been maintained.

* * *

Bro. F. E. Siple left on Saturday, February 24, for Dayton, Ohio, where he will stay a short time.

On account of Bro. Siple's absence, his appointment at Dixon, Illinois, next Sunday, will be supplied in the morning by Bro. F. L. Austin and in the evening by Bro. Paul C. Johnson.

* * *

Bro. F. L. Austin will fill his regular appointment at Oregon next Sunday evening. Because of his absence, the morning appointment will be supplied.

* * *

The sickness of Sr. Dorothy Lyon, of Rockford, Illinois, developed last week into a case of diphtheria. She is now at the County Isolation Hospital, North Main Street Road. Her sister, Miss Margaret Lyon, of Chicago, a trained nurse, has been at her side and will be in close touch with her until she returns from the hospital. Sr. Dorothy is reported to be progressing very favorably.

Sr. M. A. Woodward, now at New Port Richey, Florida, is gradually recovering from her recent sickness.

At their last meeting the Rockford Bereans listened to a very interesting and instructive sermon by Bro. Siple. The Rockford members were all there, and a number of the Oregon brethren were on hand.

* * *

The National Berean Society is now in position to fill orders for the new Senior Lesson Outline Books. This is a carefully edited book containing fifty lessons.

The books may be obtained by addressing the NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY, Oregon, Illinois.

REPLACEMENT AND EXPANSION

For some time past our print shop has been approaching the time when different pieces of machinery must be replaced. It was because of this fact that The Restitution Publishing Company hastened the moment for the transference of the Print Shop property to the National Bible Institution in order that the National Bible Institution could have free hand to replace some of the much used machinery. The Survey Committee at the last General Conference refrained from presenting this problem only because the National Bible Institution did not have jurisdiction to act in the matter.

For some time past this problem has been given careful study. Different publishing houses have been visited and surveyed with a view to obtaining best possible suggestions. Competent and expert men who are engaged in such work have been consulted. A plan has been outlined which will soon be presented in whole to the Church for consideration. This plan suggests a definite goal of construction and equipment with a view to the most economical and efficient operation. It includes the proposition to expand our shop, if possible, sufficiently to do our own publication with the least amount of cost of production, in an effort to overcome the constantly recurring annual deficit.

In the meantime we have reached a point when it is necessary for us to make certain changes at once. Our type-setting machine has gradually been depreciating and those who are familiar with its operation are unanimous in their judgment that it should at once be replaced with a new machine. The members of the Advisory Board have been consulted and all who have to date responded sanction the effort.

In addition to the type-setting machine we are very much needing two or three other pieces of equipment. We are therefore asking the brotherhood for $5,000 at the present time to undertake this replacement.

This replacement will be in harmony with the above plan to increase our equipment. It is a step that is both immediately necessary and will accord perfectly into the larger plan.

We are asking the brotherhood of the Church to consider this problem and that each member will do an earnest part in proportion to ability to make this much needed improvement.

In view of the fact that regular current operating expense of the N. B. I. must be kept up at the same time improvements are being made, it is suggested that all contributions toward the realization of this effort be made to the general fund of the National Bible Institution rather than to any special fund. This will avoid a repetition of what we have hitherto experienced and cause unexpected deficit in current operations.

Please include this problem in your consideration of Easter Offering on page 352.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

SOME SUNDAY SCHOOL THOUGHTS

Topic: The Light as the bread of life. Read John 1:4.

"I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever." "Who-so eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." John 6:51, 54, 63.

The life of God is permeated with light, conscious intelligence in perfection. The life granted to the flesh creation was permeated with darkness, total lack of conscious intelligence, and this darkness was complete until God began to have dealing with man on the plane of the mind through His word. Then, for man, light-life began to develop.

Jesus came to bring life manifested in man up to that point of development where, as mind, it could comprehend and enter into fellowship with God's life.

The food to nourish this development is Jesus Himself, His living influence, His words, and His activities—all aiding us to understand and absorb God's life.

Jesus gave His flesh (which He says profiteth nothing) for the life of the world. He denied Himself living that is prompted and controlled by the instincts of the flesh, and gave Himself to living that was prompted and controlled by the mind of God in accordance with His purpose in Him. And He did this, not because the instinct life is evil in itself, but because it is not the glorious, abundant life that God designed that man should have—His own life permeated with full light—knowledge and truth; and because man cannot have this life by flesh birth. It can come to him only through spirit birth. To give this spirit birth into the abundant life, Jesus came. He demonstrated it, showed the way to it through the flesh, and received from God power to inspire and encourage men in the way, and to bestow it in fulness at the resurrection.

The bread of life should nourish and develop us daily in the abundant life that belongs, by God's design, to man.—A. K.

THE RISING SUN OF A NEW DAY

DEVELOPMENTS AROUND JERUSALEM POINT THERETO

THE AMAZING Jewish activity in Palestine is producing developments nothing short of the miraculous. While the gold and silver of the world being diverted there for reclamation and advancement can hardly be the fulfillment of such prophecies as Isaiah 60:9-11, where "forces" is in the margin translated "wealth"; and while it can not yet be fully claimed that "the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee", Isa. 60:1; yet it is true that God is today "rebuilding the waste places". The world recognizes that great things are there being wrought.

In this connection it is interesting to note that Christian interests are also throbbing with life in God's Holy City. A news item reads as follows:

"The Young Men's Christian Association is erecting in Jerusalem a group of buildings to cost approximately $400,000. The buildings are the gift of a wealthy American who has insisted so strongly that his gift be anonymous that his name is known only to three or four persons.

"The designing has been done by Arthur L. Harmon, architect, New York City. The erection of the buildings, for which excavation has already been begun on an eight-acre site on Saint Julian's way, is largely the result of the work of Dr. Archibald Harte, a Wesleyan graduate, class of 1892, who is general secretary of the Jerusalem association.

"The central structure will be a landmark of Jerusalem.

since from the center is to rise a tall tower, surmounted by a golden dome which will command fine views of all the historic places about Jerusalem. The tower will be served by an elevator, a novelty in Palestine, and around the balustrade about the observation balcony at its top will be placed relief maps with arrows pointing to all the places of Biblical distinction and holy memory about the city and its environs.

"Two of the four floors of the main building will be fitted up as a hostelry, the remainder being used for the customary Y. M. C. A. purposes. The first public auditorium in Jerusalem, seating 800 people, will be in one side of the buildings.

"Other structures will house trade and vocational schools, the Bible school, the gymnasium and swimming pool and indoor athletic facilities. A considerable area of the property will be devoted to athletic fields.

"All races and creeds will be welcomed. There are Mohammedans on its board of trustees."

How sweet 'twould be at evening,
If you and I could say,
"Good Shepherd, we've been seeking
The sheep that went astray.
Heartsore and faint with hunger,
We heard them making moan,
And, lo! we come at nightfall,
And bear them safely home."

THE ANNUAL EASTER OFFERING

AS THE TIME of Easter draws near, we are again reminded of the great advantages accruing from service.

No greater service was ever rendered to God or man than that service rendered by the Master as He, after careful and prayerful preparation during months of ministry, approached that week of passion and with sober heart, and faithful devotion lived those strenuous days, teaching, admonishing, directing one and all while at the same time He was developing accomplishments in Himself such as none other could realize. When in night's moonlight hours of passover, He was taken from hall to hall for mock trials there was ever growing and enlarging in the breast of the Savior a closeness to God, a loyalty, a devotion that could be mastered and realized in probably no other manner. Then, as the oriental sun arose in the blushing eastern sky and the Savior, being goaded toward Golgotha, reeled beneath the heavy cross, who can but visualize that there arose within that breast such feelings true and loyal toward the Father as had never before been experienced by Him who was about to give His all in service to His God, that thus He might serve self and God's men?

Golgotha was reached, the cruel and torturous preparations were hastily performed. He who was the Lamb of God was fastened to the cruel tree; blasphemous lips, hearts of crime, mocked Him as He submissively endured the torturous pain, the agony untold in these closing hours of life. Nor did His service stop when the soldier's hammers had been laid by. Suspended in torturous agony the Savior looked round about upon His gazers and spoke words of endearment to a pitying mother; words of duty to a following loved one and breathed in tenderest compassion those never-dying words of forgiveness to all those who had set themselves in vicious opposition to Him.

All this spelled service and in that service God's name was not only honored, man's needs were not only waited upon, but God's Son was made perfect through suffering.

Suffering, that is, the enduring and the consummation of a task and of the ordeals that go therewith, always tend toward perfection. There is no other way of growth than over the rugged road of service. Service, the giving and the doing for others may benefit those to whom it is rendered, but far more is the benefit unto him who renders it.

And so it is our thought again, that, as we approach the anniversary of Christ's suffering and of Easter joy, we encourage one and all of our brethren to stop and count anew the price by which one gains the heights of life. Does youth aspire to high and noble education? Count the cost of years of toil accompanied by vast expenditures of gold. Does manhood stand on the virgin forest's border and visualize the vast, vast wealth of opportunity held within that forest area? Only by taking off the coat, rolling up the sleeves, pressing forward step by step to fell that forest, to clear the area, to build thereon the log cabin home, to rear therein through love and service the family dear—only by such can be realized the consummation of this opportunity. He who sits by with wistful look and waits for God's angelic host to fell the forest and rear the cottage will wait in vain. Such work as this has God left for man, that man thereby may grow, may enlarge his heart, may make greater his vision, may experience anew and ever new God's great outdoor of opportunity for man.

So with Christian man, God has thrown round about us more lavishly than the manna before Israel, more luxuriously than the great feast of quail, the opportunity of Christian advantage made possible by the Giver of every good and perfect gift. The most wonderful opportunity God ever placed before man was the opportunity to live in Christ and finally inherit with Him. But this opportunity of life, like the opportunity of the man facing the forest or of the youth facing education, must ever be sought by diligent, faithful persevering service unto the end. The only service man has to render is the service of the fruit of his hand. It is not that God stands in need of that service; it is not that at all. It is rather the great undeniable fact that man needs to serve in order that he may arise to a realization of the vision which is before him. The Christian's vision is the vision toward eternity, to visualize the Master in all His glory and by His side and in His company those whom He honors unto Himself. What service is too great for man to give in order to enable him to steadily achieve toward the realization of this end?

And so, as we once more approach the anniversary of the great service of our Lord and Master, we are suggesting to the brethren far and near, rich and poor, old and young, that each one, more profitably unto self and unto the furtherance of the work unto which all have laid their hands, render a special service, a contribution to further the work of the Master in some such way as to aid Him in calling others unto heirship with Himself.

The accomplishment of the National Bible Institution must be measured entirely by the sum total of effort of service. There is no other way to measure it. The sum total of service must be made up from the service of those in its office and the service of those most distant, the whole associated together and put forth in the name of Christ our Lord. Not only to spread His gospel of salvation but to make man to experience something of the great, unmeasured gifts of reward which the Father holds in waiting for those who shall have served, and grown, and developed to a position of inheritance in Christ Jesus our Lord. To further this work, to give it impetus greater than ever, we pray that one and all will send an Easter offering, great or small to be totaled for the largest, greatest service that has been ours to render. What man can accept profit from the Savior's mighty service and fail to himself render the little service possible by him?

BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS

By Samuel E. Haney

BEWARE OF false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."—Matthew 7:15-20.

The "ye" of verses 16 and 20 seems to be the kernel of our subject. That it refers to all professing Christians is manifestly not true, as it is plainly seen that a vast majority are being deceived. But Jesus enlightens us; "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."—Matt. 24:24. Ah, that is it, "The very elect", who believe (and talk and act accordingly) that "My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver", and that, "The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that winneth souls is wise."—Proverbs 8:19; 11:30.

Moses places the "false prophet" on a pedestal where all can see him, and that none need be afraid of him: "And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken? When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him"—Deut. 18:21, 22. These false prophets are referred to in Rev. 20:10.

My father, who was a nurseryman, once grafted fourteen species of apples into one tree. Later, that tree became a curiosity when in full fruition—about every kind of apple known was there. During my thirty-one years of Christian life I have met, and known by repute, "prophets" who reminded me of father's monstrous tree. Some of them had me in their grasp until their "fruit" matured. Then, by their fruit I knew them. Yes, there are many "false prophets . . . in sheep's clothing" these days, but by watching and praying they cannot fool us; for the contrast between present light upon God's Word, and the gross darkness of the world has become too pronounced to permit of God's vigilant ones being foiled.

Howbeit, Satan's incarnate emissaries are likely to be as numerous and as active in polished frontal residences as they are in modern cabarets and moving picture theatres. They are sometimes even indiscreetly entertained in Christian homes. The "wise" know their garments are not always "sheep's clothing"; for there is nothing under the heavens so versatile as the Devil and his coadjutors: nothing can outwit them but the Spirit of the LORD. How sad to see loving Christians who, expecting soon to meet Jesus in the air, are, by their obstinacy, heading straight for Babylon's impending troubles!

If some folks who think that, after enjoying the gaieties and frivolities of this sin-cursed world, they are going to have an easy-go-as-you-please time of it in God's kingdom, would only contemplate Rev. 2:26, 27 they might get a vision of that "rod of iron" rule, which ought to allure them to repent and bring forth fruit, and become "overcomers", thereby escaping the "rod"; for the fruit of the Holy Spirit is a passport, so to speak, into God's kingdom. This fruit emanates from but one source. Jesus Christ: "I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman."—John 15:1. No one can deceive nor escape His infallible scrutiny.

Sometimes it is a mistake to expect the most majestic and symmetrical tree to produce the most handsome and delicious fruit in an orchard. The fruit of that little, distorted, unsightly tree in the corner sometimes is the most pleasing to the eye and palate; just as in these days of brazen lasciviousness, "good fruit" is more likely to be found in hovels than in palatial mansions.

Every one who is a "branch of the true vine" (John 15:1,5) bringeth forth good fruit; he cannot bring forth evil fruit. But a corrupt tree (hypocrite) bringeth forth evil fruit; he cannot bring forth good fruit. "Wherefore by their fruits, ye shall know them". The great Analyst, before whom we must appear (2 Cor. 5:10) says, "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire". O, how vital are the words:

A PRAYER OF DAVID

"THEN WENT KING DAVID IN, and sat before the LORD, and he said, Who am I, O Lord GOD? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O Lord GOD; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come. And is this the manner of man, O Lord GOD? And what can David say more unto thee? for thou, Lord GOD, knowest thy servant. For thy word's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all these great things, to make thy servant know them. Wherefore thou art great, O LORD God: for there is none like thee, neither is there any God beside thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears. . . ."—2 Sam. 7:18-29.

OUR PRAYER CIRCLE

IT HAS BEEN a pleasure to get several replies to the notice in The Herald of the twenty-first, under the above caption.

There are many things for which all Christians should in common unite in their petition to our Father. Paul assures that if God is for us, none can successfully be against us? If we can study to discern our place before our Father in heaven and can then unite in common prayer and petition unto Him, what breadth of concord and unity we develop among ourselves, and what strength must result therefrom! But again, with common and united petition to the Father, how carefully does each one study so as to discern whether the common effort is in perfect accord with the Father's will! Being in accord with the Father's will we can ask what we will and it shall be done unto us.

We first request, then, that our prayer circle, and indeed that one and all who can unite in this effort, will petition the Father to give us understanding and strength to the end that the work of the General Conference may redound most greatly to the Father's honor. Mortal man can never be depended upon to see the way or discern the method by which any of God's great works should be wrought.

The daily, earnest prayer of one and all that God will direct our general activities to His great honor and glory will mean very much in the success of this work.

We will be glad to hear from many others whom we can enlist in this circle.

"PROVE ME NOW herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing . . ."—Malachi 3:10.

THE RAPTURE OF THE CHURCH

THE RAPTURE of the Church is a New Testament theme of great importance and of entrancing interest. There is no other body of people so referred to in the Scripture, unless it be the rapture of Israel, that is, the catching away of Israel out of the land of Egypt over to the land of promise. Such, however, was not rapture. It was Scripturally spoken of as exodus. But the taking away of the church is not spoken of as exodus, but rather as "caught away (Greek) to meet the Lord in the air."

Let us notice some particular characteristics regarding this event.

1. "The dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4:16. This people is gathered from the grave. Direction unto them is given previous to any instruction given to the living. The Voice which was at the tomb of Lazarus and caused dead ears to hear and to revive, will peal forth to every sleeping Christian saint the world around. Distance makes no difference to Him who awakens the dead by His voice. There is much to consider in this thought. If the members of the church must remain in death till the one earth-wide call of the Savior, it is evident that this same people cannot be elsewhere, either in heaven or earth, than in death itself.

This statement of the apostle in 1 Thess. 4:16, can be understood no other way than that the apostle regarded all such as being mortal while in life, and that their mortality was swallowed up by death. The calling forth of these people by Christ not only gives to them immortality, but that calling forth is also their one and only hope for immortality.

2. "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air". The members of the Church still living their normal, mortal lives at the time of the call of the Savior, will be caught away together with those who are awakened out of death.

The word "up" in 1 Thess. 4:17, is up in the sense of away. The living are not caught away previous to the resurrection of their sleeping brethren, nor are the sleepers awakened and caught away leaving the living ones to follow on afterward, one by one; but it is a single work, a single event that unites the dead with the living and changes all "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye", and they are caught away that evermore they may be with the Lord. No sleeping again in death; no more travail in life; but a rapture that conveys this group of God's people into the very holy of holies; into the presence of Jehovah; into the service of Him whose glory is to fill the earth.

OREGON'S BUDGET SYSTEM

I WAS VERY PLEASED with the Budget System your church in Oregon has adopted, and think all churches should do the same; namely, have a system, and not slide along in a haphazard way as most of our congregations have done and are still doing, with no spirit to their work and no responsibility—give something if you like, and not if you like: just as you choose. I say that each member should give; not only the ones who can afford it, but everyone, and all will feel that it is their work.

Then, too, there can be no success without some system. If the Church has no regular pastor to support, it can accumulate a fund to hire one when the opportunity presents itself.

Another thing I think is all right, and that is to take up an offering in meetings. I know that there are lots of people who attend—not members, but in sympathy with the faith, and may be members some time—who would be glad of the chance to contribute their mite, when otherwise they would give nothing. This, I know, is contrary to the general ideas of our people, but is mine, nevertheless.

Wishing you great success in your effort to interest and improve the "church of God", I am a sister in Christ.

—Written as a private letter.—Ed.

A QUESTION ON THE BUDGET SYSTEM

SOME THOUGHTS in the Budget System seem exceptionally good. The amounts designated for Sunday School, choir, heating, charity, etc., are possibly a very fair average, but the $1000 suggestion for a pastor is really an insult to the ministry.

If, as you say, you are trying to make Oregon a church worthy of pattern by others, why suggest a figure at which even the most inexperienced of ministers could not be employed? If, because of the N. B. I. being located there, the Oregon Church is able to have a pastor by paying a fractional part of his salary, why was not an explanation given in your article so as to leave a true impression in the minds of others? Would not $2000 instead of $1000 be a minimum suggestion for a pastor's salary?

Is not an explanation due the brotherhood so as not to leave a false impression?

Evelyn K. Harsch.

AN EXPLANATION

THE BUDGET SYSTEM, as published in The Herald of February twenty-first, was first written by an elder of the Oregon Church, only with a view of explaining the system to the members of the local Church. A copy has been mailed to each member of the local Church. It was published in The Herald only for the purpose of presenting the system, as such, to the consideration of the Church at large. No time was taken to revise the article so as to fit general circumstances.

Sr. Harsch is correct in calling for explanation regarding the amount estimated at Oregon for ministerial or pastoral purposes. The sum paid is far too low were it the intention to fully remunerate a minister. The circumstances at Oregon are these: By common understanding the writer is giving his full time to the National Bible Institution as its Executive Secretary. By arrangement between the local Church and the N. B. I., the writer presumes to undertake the duties of pastor of the local Church and to fill its pulpit on Sundays when present in Oregon, in return for which the local Church compensates the N. B. I. to the extent of the ability of its small membership.

In addition to this compensation, the members of the local Church have been paying annually to the State Conference to assist in remunerating the State evangelist. They have also been paying directly and additionally into the N. B. I. to assist in carrying on the General work. Thus practically all of the money raised by the local Church goes into the treasury of the State Conference or into the treasury of the General Conference.

The proportion, as suggested in the Budget System, is for the purposes of educating the members, both old and young to the realization of the fact that the only true method of maintaining the work in healthy condition is for each member to realize that there is a local responsibility to carry, that there is likewise a state responsibility to carry, and likewise a national responsibility for each one. These latter two can very properly be classified under the general subject of home missionary work. It is rendered with a view to aid the work beyond the boundaries of the local field.

It is hoped that in the near future the local Church will have gained sufficient strength that its members will be able to employ a local pastor, independent of the N. B. I. In such case, it is quite certain that the Church will feel the necessity of securing someone whose services are worth double or treble the amount now designated as the probable maximum of the ability of the local Church for the employment of a pastor.

The Church everywhere needs the very best talent in its pulpit that it can secure. Just as the farm needs the best farming talent possible, just as the merchant house needs there the best talent in its line, so also the Church needs the best talent in its line. A poorly qualified school teacher seldom makes a success in a school room and seldom continues long at any price. The poorly qualified farmer or merchant or manufacturer seldom brings in sufficient gain or revenue to continue him long in his chosen work; or, should he continue long, it would be on an income and under circumstances that make it impossible for him to prosper in his work.

The Oregon Church is adopting the system recommended by all the ministers assembled at the last General Conference.

Brother Ministers: How many of you have put this System before your congregations?

ANOTHER GENERATION

By M. W. Lyon

The Herald is pleased to present to its readers this timely analysis of a question that should touch the heart of every devoted Christian. Bro. Lyon promises us a series of short articles on subjects related hereto.—Editor.

THERE IS NOTHING more certain than death. When the great enemy of man cuts him off from the land of the living, he hath no more a portion forever in anything that is done under the sun (Eccl. 9:6). His record is made. His work is ended. A new hand is at the helm.

These facts were strongly illustrated in the national history of God's chosen nation. When, for many years, Israel had been on friendly terms with Egyptian rulers, and had been recipients of their favor, there came an overturning. "There arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph" (Ex. 1:8); he reversed the customs of his fathers, and put an end to the freedom of the Israelites. The standards of the former day were swept away. Israel saw, and wept. Yet this was but the beginning of sorrows.

By mighty miracles God convinced His Israel of a better king than Pharaoh. He planted them in a land of their own, beyond the reach of tyrant and oppressor. Enemy after enemy was vanquished by the hand of God before a grateful people, until they could not withhold acknowledgment of Him, and they turned to Him with one accord and made a solemn covenant to be true to Him forever.

How quickly is the grandeur of the noon day sun obliterated by the passing of the day—how soon his glory swallowed up in the blackness of the inevitable night! So it was with Israel. The happiness of the early day could not endure for long, any more than could any other blessing based upon the frail mortality of man. Hence the fatal record, in Judges 2:10, 11, that "there arose another generation after them, which knew not the LORD, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel. And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim." How clear and distinct is this warning of history! The faithful leaders were dead. The generation which had witnessed the great works of God had all passed off the scene, as every one must, and now the leaders and the ideals and the standards, yea, and the God of that generation are forgotten! For a new generation is here.

By this record we are forcibly reminded of four great facts. First, that this generation of which we ourselves are a part will soon pass away; second, that as surely as the sun rises and sets our place is going to be taken by "another generation"; third, that mankind, left alone, tends toward sin and away from God; and fourth, that the standards of today may be repudiated by that generation which shall take our place tomorrow.

Man's glory is but for a day. His words are never permanent. The Romans shattered the culture of the art-loving Greeks; the Vandals overthrew the might of Rome's great military machine; the Turks trod upon and desecrated the holy places sacred to Jew and Christian; and the glory of our own civilization will one day lie in the dust, while that of a generation yet unborn will rise upon its ruins. Where are the heroes of yesterday? There is no one to give them a thought.

Today we are living in an age of social revolution, one which bids fair to out do all others in the violence of its revolts against standards of the past. Some of this revolt is good, and progressive; much of it is disastrous. It is squarely to the point to ask ourselves, Have we learned from the lesson of history? Are we wise in throwing off the moral and religious restraints of our fathers; or are we cutting loose from the anchor which we shall surely need in the day of storm? Where is today the God which our fathers worshiped? What do these new doctrines and these new gods portend? We ourselves are "another generation", truly, and shall it be said of us that "they knew not God"?

And if, indeed, we of today be true to the God of heaven, yet what of the future? The time is coming when our influence will no longer be felt, except in the lives of those whom we have fortified with faith. Today we are teaching the next generation to take our place tomorrow. Without question they will be what we make them. Shall our work then endure, or be lost in forgetfulness, as with Israel? Shall it be a generation which will know not the Lord, or one which will keep the incense of faith burning upon the altar of the true and only God?

SWIFT MESSENGERS

By J. E. Hatch

MY FATHER in his time was a great prophetic student and believed in, and hoped to see, the advent of the successful airship. Before his death in 1905 there had been an effort at flight by a heavier than air machine, but it was only for a short distance and did not rise much above the ground.

There is very little prophecy along this line, but he believed the words of Isa. 60:8, 9 to have reference to the airship. The verses following in this chapter reveal that the events of this prophecy will occur in the "last times" of Gentile dominion, when events are shaping themselves for the ushering in of a better kingdom with Jesus Christ as its Ruler.

The sons of strangers shall build the walls, v. 10.

The gates of the city shall be open day and night, v. 11.

Violence shall no more be heard in the land, v. 18.

The sun shall no more go down, for the Lord is the Everlasting Light, v. 20.

Thy people also shall all be righteous; they shall inherit the land forever, v. 21.

The Lord shall hasten it in His time, v. 22.

Before and during the millennial age, swift modes of travel will be employed, and are already being employed commercially. The messengers in the air are today flying as clouds, and as doves to their windows, v. 8.

Could my father have lived to see this day, his heart would have rejoiced with exceeding joy at the sight of these "swift ambassadors" of the air and at the wonders that man has wrought—the radio probably being the greatest of all.

Other wonders will follow, in the opinion of the writer, and they will all be used of God in the work of bringing in "the day of the Lord".

CALLED TO BE SAINTS

By C. E. Randall

UNTO THE CHURCH of God which is at Corinth to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord."—1 Cor. 1:2.

Saint and sanctify come from the same root word, meaning "set apart". The church of God has been called to be a set apart people—set apart as a special class to carry out God's plan as it pertains to the "mystery of Christ". Eph. 3:1-9. Being thus set apart they are delegated with a labor that no other group or nation can possibly perform. The work distinctly belongs to the church of God. And it can be safely said, that no individual can be a member of this called group unless he will adapt himself to the work assigned the "body" as a whole, and cooperatively do with his might what his hands find to do. The importance of the individual assisting in the common task of the church as a unit is forcefully set forth in Paul's comparison of the "body of Christ" to our physical bodies. 1 Cor. 12:12-28; Eph. 5:22-33.

God's calls are always calls to service. The call of the church to be "set apart" is a call for service. It has been said of Him, who is the Head of the church of God, that He was always about His Father's business. Luke 2:49. He became weary, but never forsook His task; nor can it be truthfully said that He shirked a duty or shifted a responsibility. He was always at the post of duty. When His earthly career had been finished He said, with the approbation of His Father, "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do."

God has assigned every one of us a task to perform and will not leave or forsake us with mission unfulfilled, if we will follow Him wherever He leads. Our work is a cooperative one with Christ. "We are labourers together with God." 1 Cor. 3:9.

It is sad to see how many are idling their time away, leaving their ground untilled, little realizing that

"Our todays and yesterdays,

Are the blocks with which we build."

Idleness is a great sin. It was one of the chief sins of the Sodomites. Ezek. 16:49. There is no place for idleness in the "body of Christ". They are set aside for service. Every day wasted will be manifested in our building when the assembling takes place. Many blocks will be lacking. O! that we might grasp the full meaning of Paul's words: "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil." Eph. 5:16. "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

A wonderful opportunity lies before the church of God today, and if we will enter its open portals and unitedly and with oneness of mind proceed to the work of the Lord, our efforts cannot be overthrown; lest haply men be found "even to fight against God".

God always provides His laborers with sufficient strength for every task: courage for every duty; endurance for every test; an escape from every temptation.

The only way we can develop and make our faith manifest is by works. Faith without works is dead." Those whose names have been written on the roll of honor and are set forth as examples of faith, merit this honor because they "left all and followed him." Heb. 11.

The church of God is not only set apart for service, but is set apart from the world. "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." Jno. 17:16. Christ's work was among worldly people, but He never partook of any of their worldliness. He kept Himself pure from "other men's sins," and was without guile in the midst of a wicked and perverse generation. The work of the Lord requires separation from worldliness. "In the world, but not of the world."

Many professed Christians are impairing their usefulness and hampering the efforts of their fellow-workers because they still cling to many of the worldly habits that they formed when in the world. The child of God is not to fashion himself "according to his former lusts" but must "walk in newness of life". When we are buried by baptism into Christ's death, and raised to newness of life, we then become a new creature in Christ Jesus. Rom. 6:4. Baptism is the final act in putting on Christ; thereby setting us apart that henceforth we "walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Rom. 8:1. This new life should be patterned after Christ and not according to the actions and lives of worldly people. A person cannot live too close to Christ, or too far from the world. "And be ye not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." Rom. 12:2.

Our being received of the Father as sons and daughters depends on our separation from the world and touching "not the unclean thing." It is not possible for righteousness to fellowship with unrighteousness; or for the temple of God to have any agreement with idols. 2 Cor. 6:14-18.

The truly set apart child of God is a living epistle, known and read of all men. They are ensamples to all that live round about them, and their "faith to God-ward is spread abroad." 2 Cor. 3:1-3; 1 Thess. 1:6-9. If we will live godly in this "present evil world" our light will so shine that men will see our good works and glorify God. Matt. 5:16.

The more the church of God become set apart the more useful will they be to the Master,

A QUESTION FOR STUDY

THE SONS OF GOD

By Joseph H. Fletcher, Jr.

THE ARTICLES on this subject, the last few weeks, have been interesting, since they look upon this question from different angles. This subject, like all other Bible subjects, is linked up with other phases of God's plan for the carrying forward, and working out of same; and the only light we can obtain on it is the light given us by God. This is revealed through His inspired writers and is recorded in His Word. Therefore we should not look upon it from our own viewpoint, but from the revealed viewpoint. On many subjects there are only brief sentences here and there throughout the Record. This subject, "The Sons of God", is one of them.

Adam was a son of God by creation, Luke 3:38, on the terrestrial plane. He was promised only the things pertaining to the earth. Eve was taken from Adam, thereby making them both incomplete in themselves. "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh."—Gen. 2:24. The children of Adam are sons of Adam. Deut. 32:8; Rom. 5:12; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22. A person cannot be a son of Adam and a son of God at the same time. When he is a son of God he is no longer reckoned to be a son of Adam.

Christ is the only begotten Son of God. John 1:14; 3:16, 18. Christ, "the last Adam was made a quickening spirit." 1 Cor. 15:45. Those who are called to become members of Christ's body, of which Christ is the Head, are likewise called sons of God. 1 Cor. 12:12, 27; Col. 1:18; Rom. 8:14, 19; Phil. 2:15; 1 John 3:1-12. When Christ and His body are united, they will be spirit and celestial beings. 1 Cor. 15:40, 49-54. Thus Christ and His Church compose one family of the sons of God.

There is yet another class known as the sons of God, the origin of which not much is revealed; nevertheless, they are as real as the other sons of God, and are called angels (messengers). Of these there are many companies: the holy angels, or angels of God, Gen. 28:12; 32:1; John 1:51; Matt. 22:30; Mark 12:25; Luke 12:8; Heb. 1:6; Rev. 3:5; the angels that kept not their first estate, Jude 6; 2 Peter 2:4; and the archangels, who in turn have angels or messengers, Rev. 12:7. Christ also has angels or messengers, Matt. 25:3; 13:41; 16:27; 24:31. Satan, or the Devil, also has his angels, or messengers, Rev. 12:7, 9; Matt. 25:41. All of these angels are spirit beings, Psa. 104:4, and we are advised to try the spirits to see whether they are of God, 1 John 4:1; Luke 10:20; 1 Cor. 12:10; 1 Tim. 4:1; Eph. 6:12; Rev. 16:13, 14. Heavenly angels are greater in power and might than human beings. 2 Peter 2:11. Angels have been seen many times, and are similar to human beings in many ways. They evidently are used by God to carry out

His wishes to mankind, as they have appeared in that capacity many times.

When a person comes to realize that there are two distinct classes of messengers—those of God and those of the Devil, "who (the Devil) is transformed into an angel of light", 2 Cor. 11:14—the difficulties of the sons of God and daughters of men disappear. It is true that they never marry nor are given in marriage amongst themselves. Matt. 22:30. This does not say, however, that they could not have had intercourse with mankind, but to the contrary. Those of the church of Christ marry today, but this will not be true when united to Christ in person. There was a reason why this was true in that day and at that time. We will study this in another article.

GRACE

By Angeline Harrington

UNDER THE LAW of Moses, the old dispensation, man lived under a law of self, "eye for eye, tooth for tooth", Ex. 21:24; but under the law of grace, he feels a need for Divine guidance. Illness, trouble of many kinds, lack of employment, may all be agents to lead the ordinary self-centered person to God.

The majority of people in any neighborhood is composed of this type. To be called "self-centered" may not sound correct, for they have various interests—home, family, community, etc.—but the greatest interest of mankind in general is centered in self. The continual study of self will no doubt lead to greed, and in turn cause trouble, ill will, and all other vices in a lesser or greater degree; vices that are harbored in the hearts of men that "are fallen from grace." Gal. 5:4.

Grace goes always with what makes life such a beautiful journey. And grace abounds also with other living Christian characteristics:

"Grace . . . with faith and love".—1 Tim. 1:14.

"Grace and truth".—John 1:17.

"The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost".
2 Cor. 13:14.

Other religions have not this gracious characteristic. Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Confucianism, all have worthy precepts which may be compared to certain Christian sayings, such as variations of the Golden Rule, but grace is "from him which is, and which was, and which is to come". Rev. 1:4.

Our needs are so many; our hearts have countless worries; our minds may become unhinged by unkindness; our days may turn to hours of misery when labor is not appreciated, or goes unrewarded by money; we may lose our homes, or our hard-earned possessions, or our loved ones, by the actions of greedy or unscrupulous associates, BUT we can always turn to the One who told the apostle Paul, "My grace is sufficient for thee" (2 Cor. 12:9), and realize the truth of Ephesians 4:7, "Unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ." May "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you."

PEACE AND REST

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

IN THE NARRATIVE of Mark 4:35-40 we find that Jesus had been teaching the multitudes by the seaside, concerning the kingdom. So eager were they to hear Him that they would not be dismissed. He, no doubt, was very tired, so He said to His disciples, "Let us pass over unto the other side." Soon after the boat left the shore, He lay down on a pillow in the stern of the boat, and fell asleep. Suddenly there arose a great storm of wind, one of those sudden storms which often occur on the Sea of Galilee. The waves beat into the boat and there was real danger, as the boat began to fill with water.

Jesus slept on, not at all disturbed by the roaring wind and lashing waves. The disciples, old fishermen, were so frightened that they hastened to Jesus and cried, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?"

The rushing wind and lashing waves could not awaken Him, but the cry of distress from His loved ones did. "And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased" to blow, and the billows ceased to roll, and there was a great calm.

Jesus spoke only three little words, but how much they meant! Can we picture in our minds the terrible storm at sea: the raging waves tossing the boat here and there; the fear of those old sailors and fishermen; their loss of faith in that moment of terror; the sudden thought of Jesus asleep in the stern; and how they hastened to Him for help?

Dear ones, we, too, are out on the ocean of life. Winds of adversity and waves of trouble are on every hand; great, ominous clouds are gathering all around us and they are getting blacker and blacker; men's hearts are failing them for fear; we see perplexity and distress of nations; crime waves sweeping over the land; such crimes as were never heard of are committed by mere boys. There is no peace or safety anywhere. What shall we do? We have a ship anchored within the veil, and Jesus is our Captain. He is not asleep in the stern, but He is guiding us, and He will take the old ship Zion safely into the harbor of rest and peace in Him.

Enlist under the blood-stained banner of Jesus, stained with His precious blood for you. Get into the ship of which Jesus is the Pilot. It is your only safety. Jesus is coming to bring peace to this troubled world and when He brings peace, we will enter into that great calm. Can you imagine what it will mean to have everything at peace?

The greatest glory yet awaits our King. We saw the multitudes coming to Jesus to learn of Him and what a welcome He received! This was as nothing compared to what He will receive in the day of His triumph. He came first in lowly humanity; He is coming again to reign in power and great glory and all things will be put under His feet. In that day God has decreed that "at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." So we see all homage given to our Pilot, and He will speak peace to the world and a great calm will follow.

Isaiah, in a vision of the kingdom, sees the whole earth at rest, and in quiet. Zechariah, in 1:11, also sees the same vision of a time when peace and rest will come to this earth. He says, "Behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest." What a wonderful thing it will be to be worthy to bring about, with Jesus our King, such a state of things! Let us strive earnestly to obtain that crown that fadeth not away. That we may be coworker's with Him is my earnest prayer.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF LIGHTS

By Lottie E. Young

WHEN I WAS a small girl I used to love to look through a prism and see the brilliant colors—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet—which came from it when the sun shone upon it. Later I learned that the rainbow, God's promise to man that no more would He destroy the world by water, was caused by the great lamp in the sky shining down through millions of rain drops.

When Jesus Christ was on earth He said, "I am the light of the world". He is also the Sun of Righteousness. None of us can be all that Jesus is—shining with a pure, white light—but we can each have our place, and so this light is broken up into many different colors as it passes through the lives of His followers. When we look at a rainbow, we see the red, yellow and green more plainly than we do the other colors, showing they are stronger and fill a larger place in the world than the remaining four. So some of Christ's people on earth make a greater showing than others, but each one of us is a part of Him, if we shine with His light. He does not want us to try to be something that we are not, but to be that part of Himself that He has given us to be.

Every Christian should be a candle shining in this dark world. The Bible speaks of the spirit of man as the candle of the Lord. In our natural state we are unlighted candles, but a thousand unlighted candles in a dark room would not make the room light. It is only when we have received Christ into our lives that we begin to shine, and the more of His spirit we have, the brighter we will shine. We are to keep the wick trimmed so that the flame shall be seen by all, and we are to keep the windows of our life clean so that the beams may pour out without hindrance.

Then, each one in his own place, we must give light to other lives, and make the one little spot in this world that is close about us brighter and happier with love and grace. The great lighthouse lamps pour beams far out to sea, but do not lighten the space around the base. Some people send brightness far away, working for the heathen and doing deeds which benefit the world, while they fail to brighten their own homes and the lives close beside them. We may not be great lamps, but we can all be candles, each ready to shine, "you in your small corner, and I in mine."

PEACE

By Verna C. Thayer

PEACE I LEAVE with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."—John 14:27.

When these words were spoken by the Savior, He knew that His works with His disciples were nearing the end; He knew that His hour of crucifixion was nigh at hand; He knew, also, the time was near when He would ascend to the Father, leaving His disciples to finish their work here on earth. They had grown to love, and to depend upon the Savior for help. Jesus knew the trials and afflictions that these faithful coworkers would need to pass through, so before His departure, yes, before His death and resurrection, He tried to comfort them with these words: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

Not for the world, were these comforting words spoken, but for His disciples. In the same discourse Jesus offered up this prayer to the Father in behalf of His disciples: "I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them that thou hast given me; for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; and I am glorified in them. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are."—John 17:9-10. Is there little wonder that the disciples could go out in the strength of mind and of character, as we know they did go, when such a prayer was offered to the Father in their behalf by the Savior of man?

But thanks be to God the Father that we, even the Christians of today were included in that same petition to the Father. In the twentieth verse of the same chapter it reads like this, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." So we of today may have some of the same peace that was given to the disciples by the Savior in that wonderful sermon to them many years ago.

The word peace means rest, ease, security, contentment. Can the Christian of today have peace? Is there any peace—rest, ease, security, contentment—in knowing that though we sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous? As we have finished our day of labor, what a peace it is to come to the Father through Jesus the Son and lay all our cares and burdens upon Him, knowing that He is at the right hand of the Father and will make intercession for us.

What peace there is in knowing, "If God be for us, who can be against us"! What a comfort to know that no matter what may befall us in this journey through life—sickness, sorrow, tribulation, persecution—nothing can separate us from the love of Christ. Rom. 8:37-39 says, "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Over and over again we read such statements as these: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee"; "The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me"; "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose"; "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Is there peace—rest, ease, security, contentment—in knowing that the Christian of today stands in just such a position before the Father through Jesus the Son?

Therefore, knowing these things, "In every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."—Phil. 4:6, 7.

May this peace of God be with us all in this life, and may we be counted worthy of peace and joy everlasting in the world to come.

BEWARE OF FALSE PROPHETS

"How shall we escape, if we neglect (having disregarded, Emp. Diag.) so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him."—Heb. 2:3.

Paul's concise summary of the subject tends to engender diligence in working out our salvation. The apostle likens "a corrupt tree" to the flesh: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murder, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." He concludes by placing the responsibility where it belongs—on man; if lost, it is his own fault: "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. (Has this been done, reader?) If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Let us not be desirous of vainglory, provoking one another, envying one another."—Gal. 5:19-26.

By obedience to this advice we shall "walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness."—Col. 3:10, 11.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

Part 35

By George Johnston

THE FALL OF THE BURGUNDIANS, THE VISIGOTHS,
AND THE OSTROGOTHS

Daniel 11

AT THE TIME appointed he shall return, and come towards the south; but it shall not be as the former or as the latter. For the ships of Chittim shall come against him: therefore he shall be grieved, and return, and have indignation against the holy covenant: so shall he do: he shall even return and have intelligence with them that forsake the holy covenant."

So far in his career the arms of Clovis had always been victorious. He had now, however, completed the mission for which he had been divinely ordained; and as a consequence his further attacks on the Visigoths met with disaster. The latter had been driven back almost to the shores of the Mediterranean Sea, "but the Visigoths were protected by the wise and powerful monarch of Italy. While the balance was still equal, Theodoric had perhaps delayed the march of the Ostrogoths; but their strenuous efforts successfully resisted the ambition of Clovis; and the army of the Franks, and their Burgundian allies, were compelled to raise the siege of Arles, with the loss, as it is said, of thirty thousand men. These vicissitudes inclined the fierce spirit of Clovis to acquiesce in an advantageous treaty of peace. The Visigoths were suffered to retain the possession of Septimania, a narrow tract of seacoast, from the Rhone to the Pyrenees; but the ample province of Aquitaine was indissolubly united to the kingdom of France."

Clovis had openly declared that his attacks on the Visigoths were based entirely on religious grounds; and the defeat of his army at Arles naturally increased his hatred of his Arian foes. It was not by his hand, however, that the third and last kingdom which blocked the rise of the Holy Roman empire was to be uprooted.

"After the success of the Gothic war, Clovis accepted the honors of the Roman consulship. The emperor Anastasius (in recognition of his victory over the Visigoths) ambitiously bestowed on the most powerful rival of Theodoric the title and ensigns of that eminent dignity; yet, from some unknown cause, the name of Clovis has not been inscribed in the Fasti either of the East or West. On the solemn day, the monarch of Gaul, placing a diadem on his head, was invested, in the church of St. Martin, with a purple tunic and mantle. From thence he proceeded on horseback to the cathedral of Tours; and, as he passed through the streets, profusely scattered, with his own hand, a donative of gold and silver to the joyful multitude, who incessantly repeated their acclamations of Consul and Augustus." Clovis had thus very welcome intelligence with those who "forsake the holy covenant."

"And arms shall stand on his part." This short prediction, consisting of only seven words, would seem to be a very slender clue by which to identify the monarch to whom it refers; yet, strange to say, it contains everything that is essential. In an age when wars were matters of almost daily occurrence, and when the reigning monarch was expected to be at the head of his troops, one who remained in his palace and who left the entire conduct of military matters to his generals is easily identified. That monarch was the Eastern emperor Justinian (527-565), who, notwithstanding that some of the most important wars of the sixth century took place during his reign, was never on a battlefield.

Our attention is called to this emperor for the reason that it was during his reign, and by his armies, that the third "horn" or kingdom was destroyed—the Ostrogothic in Italy. This war lasted for about twenty years, and during that long period thousands of troops, both Gothic and Roman, were slain. It ended in the year 553 with the total defeat of the Ostrogoths, and the destruction of their kingdom. Even though they were defeated "they would not humble themselves to become the subjects of Justinian. All they would promise was that they would never again bear arms against the empire, and this only on condition of being allowed an unmolested passage out of Italy, and of receiving money for the expenses of their journey.

"The Roman generals held a council to discuss this proposal; they had had such terrible experience of the desperate valor of the Goths that they decided to accept the conditions. So, in March, 553, the remnant of the defeated army set out on their northward march. What became of them history does not say. Perhaps they may have found a home among the Franks or Alamans; perhaps they may have made their way to the kingdom of the Visigoths in Spain."

By the extinction of the Ostrogothic kingdom the way was cleared for the establishment of the Holy Roman empire. The "three horns" which stood in the way of its formation had been uprooted; and though sixteen years after the fall of the Ostrogoths Italy was invaded by the Lombards, who were also of the Arian faith, these people, by practically destroying the power of the Eastern emperor within the borders of Italy, aided considerably in founding the Holy Roman empire.

In only one kingdom of Western Europe—Spain—was any large body of Arians to be found; but Rome readily found means to bring these within her fold.

 PLENTY OF ROOM

A YOUNG MINISTER, not so long out of an up-to-date school of the prophets, was asked by a friend of ours why he did not preach from the Word of God rather than from modern fiction. His reply was, "Must a man be confined to the Bible?"

"Confined!" our friend replied, "Do you mean to say you are pinched when you seek in the Bible for sermon material? That is like a soft shell crab, saying, 'Must I be confined to the Atlantic Ocean?'"—Word and Work.

HIGHER LEARNING AND THE BIBLE

By Norman John McLeod

GEOLOGY AGAIN AS WITNESS

"And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so."—Genesis 1:9.

IT IS the ideal of the journalist to achieve such language as that. To imitate the style of the Bible narrative is his aim, because such a wealth of thought and event is contained in so few words. Let us contemplate what an enormous series of changes is related in that one verse.

For the waters to gather "together unto one place" would be an enormous thing in itself. We are told in the earlier part of the chapter, by inference, that water covered the entire surface of the earth. And, then, as the above verse is usually understood, by a great cataclysm the waters all gathered into one place. But God does not work by cataclysms. If you look around you, you will see that they are comparatively rare; in fact, so slow are the processes of nature, which are the working of the laws of God, that man becomes woefully impatient. We know that in China hills walked, but how many have seen them do so? The only recorded occasion upon which men saw a mountain grow was when two sailors off the coast of Central America saw a volcano rise up right at the waters' edge. Once in six thousand years, such a thing is seen!

If we go back to the formation of that water we see another example of a supposititious cataclysm. If you burn hydrogen, which is the process of uniting it with oxygen to form water, you get the hottest flame known to man. It is about ten times as hot as the fire made by brimstone (phosphorous). If you burn as much hydrogen as there is in an ordinary army balloon you will get about a teaspoonful of water. The heat from that same burning balloon will melt the cable by which it is moored as if it were butter. If we could bring hydrogen and oxygen together in sufficient quantity to produce all the water in the earth the heat would be beyond our comprehension; that is, if we brought it all together in one twenty-four hour day. The geologists think that the earth was a long time in forming and that that idea does not conflict with the Bible story of creation has been shown in a previous article.

Now, if all the water were brought together in one place in one twenty-four hour day, there would necessarily be an incomprehensible situation. To accomplish all of this adjustment the entire "crust" of the earth would have to be convulsed. The great heights of the mountains, and the corresponding depths of the sea, would be formed. We see these changes taking place around us all the time very gradually. Due to the excessive weight of a certain portion of the earth's surface it is depressed, and nearby a piece rises up to form a mountain. A violent earthquake accompanies the change. And there is never a day of the year that the seismograph does not record an earthquake. In the Wasatch Mountains, near Salt Lake City, there is a fault that slips so much every year that the pipelines across it must be repaired continually. It is not a mere coincidence that Mt. Whitney, the highest place in the United States, should be right beside Death Valley, the lowest place in the United States. The old idea that cataclysms marked off each historical age, and the theory that the earth was clapped together in a day by means of a cataclysm are gone into the discard, and properly so. So many so-called fundamentalists try to show that the Grand Canyon of the Colorado was made by an earthquake, and not by the wearing force of the river. If you will note the yellow, almost red, color of the stream, you will see that it carries many thousands of tons of dirt a year. At that rate in a few thousand years it could wear away quite a bit of plateau.

There has been quite a good deal of discussion as to the "day" in Genesis. That the things that are decreed took place in the period of six twenty-four hour days is at least improbable. Not that God could not do it, but that He did not. If God could do all of His work in six days, why not six minutes? God does not do His work so quickly. If we stick closely to a literal interpretation of the "day" how must we interpret the following, but that God created all in one day?

"These are the generations of the heavens and of the earth when they were created, in the day that the LORD God made the earth and the heavens".—Genesis 2:4. (See also Genesis 5:1.)

THE BRASS MONKEY

A MAN WHO KEPT a store had a brass monkey, which he set up with a cigar in its mouth. The cigar was lighted, and by machinery the monkey could draw the smoke from the cigar and puff it out again. After it had run for quite a while, one day the works stopped. The monkey was taken apart to discover the cause, when, lo, the works were found to be clogged and in such a filthy condition that they would not run until they were cleaned. The tobacco smoke had been too much for a brass monkey!

What, then, must its effects be on the inside works of a little boy? A good many boys who smoke cigars or cigarettes fare worse than the brass monkey. They stop, but they never start again—they cannot be cleaned up, they die. Boys, beware of tobacco. It is enough to spoil a brass monkey.—H. L. H.

IN AN ENCYCLICAL Pope Pius declares that real church unity can be achieved only through the return of all "would-be Christians" to the Roman Catholic Church and their complete acceptance of and obedience to "the supreme authority of Saint Peter and his legitimate successor.

THERE WOULD BE at least two advantages if each State Berean Society would estimate the number of books needed in their work and order them sent to the secretary, from whom they could be gotten by individuals and classes: first, the cost would be lessened considerably, and second, the National would much more quickly get its money back so as to be able to properly meet printing expenses.

Word from South Bend, Indiana, reports that the Young People's Berean Class has largely increased in size and interest lately. Bro. J. Arthur Johnson has been pushing the work for several weeks, and he also speaks in South Bend each Sunday.

One wise observer says that the results in South Bend show that the only way to successfully build up a church is to have a regular worker with preaching each week. Yes, and it does not have to be an old, experienced preacher, either. A young man with practically no experience, if he will really work and push can build up a strong work.

An excerpt from a letter from Eldorado, Illinois, says: "Berean, at this place, is on a boom. Everything going fine. The Seniors have more in attendance, but, really, I believe we (the Juniors) have the more interesting classes."

The letter goes on further to state that the Junior Class follows the rule of rotation of leaders, for which we are glad. One of the greatest advantages of Berean work is lost if that plan is not followed.

"The Seniors have an average attendance of fourteen or fifteen, and the Juniors about nine or ten."

Good for Eldorado! Incidentally we might add that Bro. and Sr. Randall have been laboring there for nearly three months during the winter, and I dare say that once more we have an argument in favor of regular pastoral work.

If faith causes one to trust fully in God and cease from worry it must be that most of us are terribly lacking in that particular commodity,—faith.

How about the many little, trivial frets and worries of life? We fear the storm will come and blow the house away, or the loved one out with the car will get hurt, or hard times will come and leave us in want, or the sick one will not get well, or the ground hog will fail to see his shadow!—yes, we all manifest a lack of faith all along the way.

How sweet to watch the babe one or two years old. He trust mother to the limit. No matter what she does, he does not fear if he can see her and know she is near. Watch the sweet, tender trust of the babe, and therein learn a lesson of the kind of faith we should have in our heavenly Parent.

Is it any wonder Jesus told His disciples that unless they became as little children they could not enter the kingdom?

How much comfort there is in just trusting God!

VOLTAIRE SAID: "I have no expectation that I will ever be able to destroy Christianity as long as vast multitudes of people attend the churches one day in every week." He well knew that the constant church attendant was well nigh invulnerable against his wily arts. It is not the faithful church members who fall a victim to skepticism and infidelity. His Christian strength is renewed week by week, and his faith redoubled by association with those who walk and talk with God. The danger lies with those who absent themselves from the house of worship on every possible pretext. They are walking on dangerous ground, and a word of warning is always in order. The duty of Christians is to assemble themselves together as often as possible. That is duty; but if one's heart is right with his Creator, duty is swallowed up in privilege and love becomes the actuating motive. Friends, let us work at God's business—we are prone to play, but play will get us nowhere, and while playing the task will go undone.—Selected.

JESUS TEACHES SINCERITY

Mark 7:1-23

DOES MOTHER have to tell you to wash your hands every time before you come to the table? Why is she so particular?

Mother is not particular for the same reason the Pharisees were. They washed their hands because the law said that they should; and, as you know, they adhered very closely to the "letter of the law". They were so particular that washing the hands meant washing with great ceremony—not merely making them clean. Not only did they scrub their hands, but also the cups, pots, brazen vessels, and tables—all according to the "tradition of the elders"—not only God's law, but many laws that had been added by the priests.

Now, one day some of the Pharisees and scribes came to Jesus from Jerusalem, and what do you think they saw? Some of His disciples were eating with unwashed (according to ceremony) hands, and, oh, but they were terribly shocked! They began to find fault, and asked Jesus why it was that His disciples disregarded the "tradition of the elders".

Jesus loved His helpers and understood them. He also understood the attitude of these fault-finders and answered them very severely, even calling them hypocrites, which they were. What are hypocrites? They are those who pretend to be very righteous, but are most unkind and selfish.

Jesus said to these Jews, "Isaiah prophesied that there would be such hypocrites as you. It is written, 'This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me'."

He continued to show them how vain their worship was—that they twisted the meaning of God's laws to suit their own purposes, or put aside God's commandment to hold to the teaching of men.

An example of this was their observance of the command given by Moses: "Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death." But they would give a gift to their parents and say it was a gift to God, thus trying to make it seem that they were honoring their parents and serving God at the same time. But Jesus said this could not be, as the gift was only to God. So they did not keep the law after all.

You see, their hearts were wrong, and Jesus was trying to make them understand what true worship and love meant.

To be sure, good health demands cleanliness in person and mind; then add a sincere love to do God's bidding—and what kind of a person will you be?

SOMETHING TO DO

Cut pictures from magazines showing children bathing, cleaning teeth, etc., and proper foods, and put them where you can see them often.

Beside each put a picture of Jesus helping someone, or another person doing a kindly deed for someone else. They belong together.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Are we worshiping God with love in our hearts, or as a matter of duty and form?

MEMORY VERSE

12. John 14:6.

TINY TOTS

The Pharisees did not love Jesus and His helpers.

One day they saw the helpers eating without washing their hands. The Pharisees said that the helpers were not obeying God's law.

Then Jesus told the Pharisees that they did not truly keep the law, either, although they pretended to. He tried to show them that the disciples really loved Him, and God His Father.

"EVERY EYE SHALL SEE HIM"

By Evelyn K. Harsch

NEW YORK AUDIENCE Watches Actions of Londoners on Screen." Such was the headline in one of our city papers on February ninth. The article goes on to say that:

"A man and a woman sat before an electric eye in a London laboratory and a group of people in a darkened cellar in this village, outside New York, watched them turn their heads and move from side to side.

"The images were crude, imperfect, broken, but they were images none the less.

"Man's vision had spanned the ocean.

"Transatlantic television was a demonstrated reality."

Thus another manifestation of God's law of nature is unfolded to man through a wonderful new invention; and how quickly it followed radio! We now have both "seeing" and "hearing" by means of ether waves through space unbounded.

At the inauguration of Coolidge, his voice was heard throughout our land. His word went forth. Perhaps the next president may be both seen and heard as he delivers his speech from the capitol steps.

Is not this a forerunner of the things that may be seen and heard at Christ's coming? "For out of Zion shall go forth the law and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isa. 2:3); and "every eye shall see him" (Rev. 1:7). What a literal meaning these passages now take on! Christ, the King, on Mount Zion, literally seen of all the world, and His voice literally heard as the laws go forth!

JESUS TEACHES SINCERITY

Mark 7:1-23

Devotional Reading: Psalm 24:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.

—Proverbs 4:23.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Sincerity. Christ teaches deep truth in Solomon's statement, "as he thinketh in his heart, so is he."—Prov. 23:7. The meaning of the first commandment of the Decalogue, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," Ex. 20:3, exalts Jehovah above all else in the mind of man. Whether in the past or in the present, the individual, who pretends thus to exalt Jehovah in this life, must of necessity do so in life-action, life-conduct. That, alone, reveals his inner and true heart-thought.

Sincerity cannot possibly labor to deceive by word of mouth the actual inner, heartfelt attitude of the individual. Because of doing this, Christ accused the Pharisees of hypocrisy.

Corban. Corban is the word used by Moses, himself, in conveying God's instructions to the people in the wilderness, relative to offerings by them unto Jehovah. A Corban was a gift offering. It was gratuitous, manifesting one's pleasure to the Father. The Pharisees completely annulled this provision made by God when they taught that the aid, or service rendered unto one's parent, could, in addition, properly be recorded as a Corban, a gift offering to God, Himself. No gift could or can be presented to both man and God. In no sense is man on a par with God. Therefore, the gift could not be unto both: therefore, they made havoc of God's word.

Teaching for Teachings Man's Teachings. Such, in fact, was what Christ accused the Pharisees of doing. God is the only source from whom proper and competent teaching can arise. The Pharisees and scribes were teaching that their own human teachings, or instructions, were really God-given. Thus, they were replacing God's teachings with man's teachings.

Such is undoubtedly true today in many instances. God's teachings are often set aside as out of date and out of harmony with present day requirements. Often the remark is heard that were Christ present, He undoubtedly would teach present people very differently than He taught during His ministry. This, very probably, was the analysis, also, made by the Pharisees who lived fifteen hundred years after the giving of the law at Mt. Sinai. Just as they made void and useless God's teachings by those of their own, which they established; so, also, he who today would replace God's teachings given by Christ, is likewise making void God's laws and instructions by the teachings of man.

Questions. Why did the Pharisees and scribes approach Jesus? What is meaning of "defiled", v. 2? "Unwashed"? What is the meaning of "oft", v. 3? Were these washings necessary for personal cleanliness, or for ceremonial satisfaction? Was this construction of the ceremonial law Mosaic or Pharisaic? Why wash when they come from the market? What is the meaning of the Pharisees' question, v. 5? Was Christ justified in pronouncing that people hypocrites? Give illustration how they laid aside God's commandments to hold man's traditions. What is meaning of "honour", v. 10? "Curseth", v. 11? Explain meaning of v. 11. How did they make the word of God of none effect?—F. L. A.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Above that must be guarded keep thou thy heart, for out of it are the issues of life.—Prov. 4:23, Roth.

Keep, "guard", thy heart; guard as the soldier guards. It is the big job of life. Guard it at all times, at all places. Guard the affections, the conscience. Out of the heart are the issues of life, the sources and outgoings of life. This does not mean the organ which pumps the blood through the body. A good idea of the meaning of "heart", as used here, may be gotten from such passages as, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart"; "If our heart condemn us not"; "My son, give me thine heart"; "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh". Let us guard it with all diligence.—F. A. S.
