LIFE IN MANIFESTATION

"Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."
—1 Tim. 4:8.

NO DOCTRINE is more plainly taught in the Scriptures than the doctrine of two lives, or existences, entirely distinct as to source, nature, and mode of manifestation. Remotely and primarily, all life is from God, whether embodied in the vegetable, lower animal, human, or angelic form. In our world the transmission of life is accomplished through ordained and subordinate sources of origin. Confining ourselves to humanity, "the life that now is," has its source in the "first man, Adam, who was made a living soul," (Gr.—eis psuchen zosan, into a soul living), and who "is of the earth earthy," and whose organization is a "soulal body," (Gr.—soma psuchikon), and who, consequently, can transmit no higher principle of animate life than he was endowed with—the soulal (natural) principle. The life principle communicated to the organization, in its resurrection glory, is from the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, a heavenly source, and is a spiritual principle, suited to the renewed and glorified organization, which is, by way of contra-distinction, called a "spiritual body." From this scriptural connection we learn another important fact, that neither the one life nor the other is manifested at all, except in a body in every way adapted to the life-principle itself, whether this principle be soul-life or spirit-life.

The soul-life is represented as being as transitory as vapor, that appeareth for a little while, and then vanisheth away, while the spirit-life is as enduring as the Divine Existence; so to be made spiritual, immortal, and incorruptible, is to be made partakers of the Divine Nature. The soul-life is manifested in the human family in its present earthly state, and the spirit-life will be made manifest in the redeemed family of God, in its future resurrection state, but each life is manifested through a bodily organization.

Now since the natural, soulal life, derived from the earthy man, the first Adam, is manifested in and through an earthy organization called the soulal body; and the supernatural life, derived from the heavenly man, who is the second Adam, and the Lord from heaven, is to be manifested through a glorified and heavenly organization, called the spiritual body; in what manner is life of any kind to be manifested during the intermediate state of those dead in Christ, if manifested at all? Does the child of God become a disembodied existence, and equal to the angels during the death state? Our answer can only be legitimately drawn from the unerring scriptures of truth. For this purpose we quote a few of many in point.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3:1-4.

Here Christ, the Lord from heaven, the second Adam, is set forth as being the very life of the redeemed—the only and true source of an endless future life to death-doomed man, and this Christ-life is declared to be hidden till His second appearing. Life cannot be hidden, and at the same time be manifested in a disembodied form. Hence it logically and scripturally follows that the saints' future spiritual life is not manifested during the intermediate state of the dead, and that it is not till His advent, and, consequently, till after their resurrection from the dead, that the saints will appear with Christ in glory.

It is for this manifestation of the sons of God that a groaning creation is waiting and longing with earnest expectation. It is for this adoption, the redemption of the body, that all that have the firstfruits of the Spirit, groan and ardently sigh. Death is not the gate to endless joy, nor is it for his skeleton hand to open the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem. The keys of death and hades—the grave—are in our Redeemer's hands, and He will unlock the dismal abodes when He comes, and His church will go free—the gates of hades shall not prevail against it.

O, day of glory, day of God, day of emancipation, day of resurrection, and day of restitution and re-genesis! Would that we could see thy dawn—thy sunrise! We wait for thy rosy-colored morn, and for thy meridian splendors that no night shall ever darken. Blessed Jesus, remember us when Thou comest into Thy kingdom. Sleeping or waking, may we be accepted of Thee in that day!

THE OTHER SIDE OF MERCY

HENRY VAN DYKE is reported to have said that, "Joy is as much a duty as beneficence. Thankfulness is the other side of mercy." God is merciful. It is ours to be thankful.

It is in Him that "we live and move and have our being." God has loaded our every life to overflowing with benefits. This, not because we were especially deserving of benefits; rather we are often deserving of chastisement. But God's forgiveness, God's mercy, God's love fill our lives with His bounteous goodness. If we would but stop to think, we would realize that we are living monuments of His mercy. When Peter spoke to the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple and gave him what he had to give, causing the man, who lame from his birth had never walked, to stand upon his feet and imparting the strength and health of manhood, at once that man was "walking and leaping and praising God." The mercy of God was bestowed through Peter. But the healed man provided abundantly the other side of mercy—thankfulness.

HAVE DOMINION

"Have dominion over every living thing." Gen. 1:27-31.

IN THE MORNING of creation God bade man to have dominion "over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." To exercise dominion over every living thing, man must of necessity first exercise dominion over self. Man's first recorded failure in the discharge of his God-given duty was when he failed to control himself. Never can man hope to recover this his failure until he shall have first been recovered from the sin which he committed.

Christ, who also was made a little lower than the angels, Heb. 2:9, governed himself even unto death. Never did He allow himself to avoid one of God's words or works. Always was He true to His Father. This, because that He governed himself to do the Father's instruction.

In addition to showing himself able to control His own life, and able to rule all type of life about Him—the water, the wind, man, disease, beast, fish—He also showed himself able to govern and rule him that had the power of death. Heb. 2:14. Because of this last, man has assurance that he will be triumphantly raised out of death into life. He further has assurance that inasmuch as the all-wise God commanded him to exercise authority over all form of creation, therefore man is able to accomplish the task. God did not ask him to do more than he was able. Man will yet govern all creation, including self.

However, such labor requires the utmost faith in the Creator. The Scriptures are replete with the assurance that he who exercises such faith shall yet, with Christ, rule from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

AMEN-ALLELUIA

IT MAY, IN THE ESTIMATION OF SOME, show just a little tendency toward sentimentalism for an individual or a company of individuals to shout and sing "Amen-alleluia." But this is what the twenty-four elders and the four living ones, whom John upon Patmos saw around the throne of God in heaven, are about to sing. Rev. 19:5 adds, that "a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that hear him, both small and great." When the marriage of the Lamb will have come heaven and earth are to sound forth praises unto God. Rev. 5:11:12 adds that, "ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands" shall add their voices in proclaiming "power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing," to the Lamb that was slain but who shall soon sit in power and authority over earth and its fulness.

Let us not be ashamed to honor our Lord and Master with our songs and voices of praise and adoration for the manifold blessings we daily receive from His hand, and for the promises assuring that He will return to restore earth and her fulness till it shall be filled with the glory of God.

THE HERALD hopes that his royal satanic majesty will not in any way be offended by the confusion of thought carried in its lines to the many readers this week. We also hope that the readers themselves will not be washed into the depths of the ocean of sin by the ebb and flow of the tide on this seemingly unimportant theme.

We suggest that, "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" will be a welcome theme for some of The Herald's able contributors to present to our readers.

JOHN AS ELIJAH

By J. S. Lyon

REPLYING TO "Information Wanted" in the issue of September 17, we submit the following: Jesus stated on two different occasions that John was Elijah. Once in August, seven months after the baptism, Matt. 11:14, Luke 7:24-30; and a second time, seven months later, Matt. 17:10-13, Mark 9:11-13.

Reincarnation is decidedly not a Bible doctrine, so the only sense in which John could be Elijah was a representative sense.

Elijah must personally appear in the time of the end according to Malachi 4:5 and Matt. 17:11.

John resembled Elijah in appearance, character and mission. Furthermore the angel Gabriel stated that he should appear in the "spirit and power" of Elias. Luke 1:17.

The mission of John had ended when Jesus put the coming of Elijah in the future, "Elias shall come."

The Scriptures in many particulars are confusing. This is a definite proof of their genuineness. A false testimonial would be a straightforward tale carefully elucidated to make itself plain. The searcher for truth in Scripture must be impressed with the belief that the difficulties of interpretation we meet with are purposeful. The subtle teachings were not meant for the Jews to understand. Matt. 13:15, etc.; Rom. 11:25. The disciples themselves failed to understand many of them and had to be taught by the Savior. The many hundreds of different denominations in this day testify that the same unintelligibility persists. What scripture was referred to when He said of John's death, "as it is written"? We know not. No canonical book so prophesies. No commentary that I have makes any comment upon it. Perhaps others may find some information.

The other question is relative to the word "again", Mark 9:9; Matt. 17:9, "raised again from the dead." The word, "again", does not appear in either the Vatican, Sinaitic or Alexandrian manuscripts. Both Authorized and Revised versions are at fault here.

In John 14:9 Jesus identified himself as the Father in a like sense to that in which He compared Elijah and John. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father". "I am come in my Father's name". John 5:43.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE

IT IS NOT ENOUGH that we have the light of God in our hearts, and hold it in our hands, and take it where it may shine, but we must so let it shine that others will see it. A missionary, the Rev. Mr. Compton, was on his way to India. One evening, about nine o'clock, he was in his state-room. The great steamer was ploughing its way through the sea. Not feeling very well, he was about going to bed, when he heard the cry: "A man overboard." His first thought was to run up on deck and try to help rescue him. But then he thought he might be in the way, and no doubt the sailors would do all they could to save the poor man. But could he not do something? He could at least try.

So he took his little lamp, and held it close to the little window, which, on account of its appearance, is called the bull's eye. Soon he heard the joyful words, "Saved." The next morning he learned that his little light shining through the little window, was the means of saving the man. It came at the right time, and was in the right place. It showed the sailors where to throw the rope as it came to him. All the efforts of the sailors would have been useless, and all the attempts of the drowning man would have been of no avail, if it had not been for that light.

O, have you no light which you can hold up at some window, and which may save some soul from perishing in his sins?—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis from The Bible Standard.

According to my earnest expectation and my hope, that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.—Phil. 1:20.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

THE FOLLOWING IS THE FIRST of a series of notes prepared by Verna Thayer on The Plants of the Bible that will appear from time to time in this section. Many plants are used to illustrate deep truths. Watch for them.

THE WILLOW

The willow tree flourished in marshy places and along the banks of rivers. Eight species of willows grow in the Holy Land, among which are the brittle willow, the white willow, the weeping willow, the stalked willow, and the blackish willow. The weeping willow or Babylonian willow is probably alluded to in Psalms 137:2. No allusion is made in Scripture to the economic use of willows. Its branches are much used at the present day for basket work. Willows are planted or grow spontaneously by all the watercourses, and are characteristic trees of the landscape.

Before their captivity the Jews regarded the willow as an emblem of joy, and bore its branches before the Lord in token of rejoicing during the Feast of Tabernacles. After the captivity the willow became an emblem of mourning.

FUTURE INDIGNATION

PART 2

By C. W. Dean

WE WILL FIND it very helpful in the study of this subject to carry our readers back to the origin and purpose of things as the Scriptures detail them, by which we can clear away some of the error and false conception and open the way for a clearer apprehension of God's eonian administrations. For example, in speaking of the beginning of Satan, immediately our minds are filled with the traditional idea that he was a "perfect" creature, an "archangel" of heaven; that he and Christ were the two morning stars who sang creation's anthem; and that through sinister motives Lucifer fell and was cast out of heaven and became Satan.

Of course we are familiar with the favorite passage of Ezekiel, 28th chap., used to prove that he was first perfect and then "fell", but a careful study of this passage will clearly show to anyone that the prince of Tyre was emphatically a human being, a man. Furthermore, we are involved with inexplicable difficulties unless the dirge refers to the prince, governor, or king of Tyre, with special reference to his government. Ezek. 28:16-18. If we insist that it refers to Satan, we must be prepared to say that he is "not now." Ezek. 28:19.

Another favorite passage which seems to afford conclusive evidence that Satan fell from an exalted position in heaven, is found in Isaiah, but the flood of erroneous teachings spread abroad among truth-lovers would never have been tolerated if consideration had been given to the context of the text upon which it is all based. It is usually quoted, "How art thou fallen from heaven O Lucifer, son of the morning!" Apparently few ever stop to question its accuracy. An examination of the Hebrew text for evidence that Lucifer here refers to Satan reveals little indeed. It is the same word which our translators rendered "howl" in Zechariah 11:2. In the feminine it occurs again in this same chap. of Isaiah at the beginning of v. 31, and is rendered "howl". In slightly different form it is found in Isaiah ten times. It does not refer to Satan's fall in the past, but looks forward to the future when the "desolator", the man of lawlessness, who exalts himself above every diety, is brought down. In the American Revised Version it is rendered, "How are thou fallen O day star, son of the morning." Dr. Young's Analytical Concordance quotes it a translation of helel applied to the king of Babylon. How futile is the effort to find a foundation for the fall of Satan from heaven in the study of this passage! Lucifer is a misnomer of human invention and should find no place in the teachings of those who desire to speak the truth of God's Word. We should accept the Scriptures in their purity and exactness of expression: the slanderer has been sinning from the beginning, 1 John 3:8; he, the slanderer, was a murderer from the beginning and has not stood in the truth, because there is no truth in him; he is a liar, and the father of it. John 8:44.

Here is sufficient evidence that Satan was a sinner and murderer from the beginning, has not stood in the truth, seeing that the truth is not in him, is a liar and the father of it. Furthermore, he was created a waster, to destroy. Isaiah 54:16. We are safe when we hold to the titles by which the Scriptures designated him, but we are headed for confusion and difficulties when we turn to the unscriptural titles of tradition. The Scriptures designate him as the ancient serpent, adversary, slanderer, and Satan—titles which clearly emphasize his character and work; not something that comes to him after a supposed fall, but that which was in him at the beginning. He is the embodiment of covetousness, conceit, envy, egoism, pride and concupiscence, through and by which he finds access to the heart of mankind, deceiving and destroying, testing and sifting them. A consideration of what the Scriptures say concerning him and his origin verifies his teachings.

The stars are often used in Scriptures as figurative of celestial beings. In the unveiling we read: the dragon's "tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth." Rev. 12:4. Then again we read that the stars are figurative of angels, or messengers. Rev. 1:20. The text suggests messengers, or angels of heaven, rather than literal stars as Rev. 12:9, 10 reveal. Just as stars are figures for celestial beings, so do we find that serpent is a figure for Satan. Having identified the ancient serpent to be the adversary and Satan, a creature of God, created for the particular work embodied in the titles by which he is designated, we next turn our attention to the consideration of what the Scriptures reveal concerning his operation and location. Our only course for a clear understanding of where Satan is and of what he is doing is to give reverent consideration to the Scriptures.

In the book of Job we are given an account of a celestial council with Satan in the midst, which throws much light on his position and operations. There came a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before Jehovah, and Satan came also in the midst of them, and Jehovah said unto Satan, "From whence cometh thou? And Satan answered Jehovah, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it, and Jehovah said unto Satan, hast thou considered my servant Job (Enemied) that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and upright man, one that feareth God, and turneth away from evil; Satan answered Jehovah, and said, Doth Job fear God for naught? Hast thou not made a hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath, on every side? thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land. But put forth thy hand now, and touch all that he hath, and he will renounce thee to thy face. R. V. Translation, Job 1:6-11. Bible students are familiar with the account of the ordeal that was brought upon Job by Jehovah through Satan, Job 2:3; 42:11. But the particular point to which attention is called here is that the ancient serpent, called slanderer, Satan, the adversary, the waster, created to destroy, had access to the very presence of Jehovah, and performed the work for which he was created by bringing about the destruction of all that Job had.

Referring to a statement of our Lord found in Luke 11:17-20, in connection with the ministry of the seventy-two whom He dispatched before His face into every city and place whither He himself was about to come, the seventy-two returned exultantly, saying, "Lord, even the demons are subject unto us in Thy name. He said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning falling out of heaven. Behold, I have given you authority to tread upon serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall in any wise hurt you". This has no reference to the so-called fall of Satan in the past, but as an immediate and particular application to Satan's actions in response to the distress among his demon minions under the power of Christ's name in the ministry of the seventy-two disciples, he dashed like lightning out of heaven to earth to render them aid. The expression "falling" has no reference to "casting out Satan" but is often used of the descent of some celestial being from heaven, so swift as to be spoken of as lightning, or a star falling. Example: "And the fifth messenger trumpet sounded, and I perceived a star falling out of heaven, and to him was given the key to the abyss." Rev. 9:1, 2.

A wonderful vista of light on Satan, his location and operations, together with the spiritual forces of wickedness among the celestials under his suzerainty, may be gained by a study of the revelations made to Daniel while he was in Babylon. Dan. 9:20-23. This gives an explicit account of Gabriel, the messenger who stands before God, Luke 1:19, being dispatched with a message to Daniel to give him understanding in that concerning which he was praying. Considering the briefness of Daniel's prayer, it shows that it took a celestial messenger only a very short time to come to Daniel from the throne of God. Let us contrast this with another experience of Daniel in the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia. A matter was revealed to Daniel, Dan. 10:1, referring to verses 12-21: "Then he said unto me, Fear not, Daniel: for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard; and I am come for thy words. But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days: but, lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me: and I remained there with the kings of Persia. Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days; for yet the vision is for many days. Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I am come unto thee? and now I will return to fight with the prince of Persia: and when I am gone forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come. But I will shew thee that which is noted in the Scripture of truth: and there is none that holdeth with me in these things, but Michael, your prince."

As we learn from the writings of Paul, Satan is the chief of the authority of the air, the spirit now operating in the sons of stubbornness, the head of the sovereignties and authorities, the world might of this darkness, the spiritual forces of wickedness among the celestials. Eph. 2:2; 6:12. And here, in Daniel, we are given a glimpse of his operations, through his chiefs withstanding messengers like Gabriel from the throne of God twenty-one days. It should be remembered that Satan is not confined to the heavens in his operations. As we learn from Job, he keeps in touch with earth's affairs by going to and fro, and walking in it. He is the god of this age, or eon, 2 Cor. 4:4, with the authority and glory of its kingdoms under his power. Job 9:24; Luke 4:5, 6.

The Lord Christ did not deny that the kingdoms of this earth and the glory of them was in the power and authority of Satan. This statement of Satan, Luke 4:5, 6, brings forth an awful truth, and the realization of its outcome is so overwhelmingly stupendous as to stagger all who meditate upon its reality. That is the adversary, Satan, who offered the kingdoms of the inhabited earth to our Lord if He would only worship before him. He will actually give them with great authority and glory to a man at the end of time who will worship before him the adversary, the desolator, the man of lawlessness, the beast, who will take the authority and rule as the most blasphemous, nefarious tyrant the world has ever known. The dragon gave it, "the beast," its power, and its throne and great authority; and authority was given to it, "the beast," over every tribe and people and language and nation. Rev. 13:2-8. With all this in view, it is clear that Satan is not in the hell of orthodoxy, but in the heavens with access to the very presence of God. Satan is to be cast out of heaven into the earth, Rev. 12:7-10, which causes rejoicing in the heavens, and to those that dwell therein, but it brings woe unto the inhabitants of the earth, with which we shall deal in part three.

AT ONE OF THE BIG BELL manufacturing plants in Chicago there are slender, shining strips of vibrating steel, an octave of them. When they are struck, their tone is perfect, not a single wave length too many. With these tuners every bell is tested. Does God's test find our hearts ringing true always; giving out a true testimony, exact and thrilling? There are many sizes of bells, but tone is the test of bells, not size. Tone is the Christian's test. Bells and pomegranates hung from the high priest's garments, representing fruit and praise. How much a bell is like a human throat with its telling tongue. We are to be God's bells ringing out, singing out, continuously. Let not material organs and bells take the place God has given to Christians in praise, thanksgiving and prayer!—Selected.

THE ADVERSARY, SATAN

A CONTROVERTED SUBJECT

By Mrs. S. A. Horn

HOW I WISH that I might add something that would appeal to all in the discussion of a "personal devil's existence, residence, activities and sex", and help to show that it is when this devastating adversary is trodden under foot that everything that the Lord made proves "very good". See Gen. 1:31. Then will God indeed "rejoice in his works". Psa. 104:31. But need we go away back to the beginning of the old creation to learn this? Are we not today inspired with wisdom from the same source as he that wrote the parable of the garden? Do we in very truth believe that an allwise God would have us to understand that, having labored to plant a garden, He then stood upon the earth "discussing" matters pertaining thereto with creatures He had formed of clay? Let us not go about our Father's business without due meditation. How, for instance, can the thought of the sons of God "cohabiting" with the daughters of men be entertained for a moment? True, men who first called on the name of Jehovah were likely called His sons, but were they as we understand today? Ishmael was Abram's first son but by a bondwoman only, and the first son of God was by nature. Gen. 4:26; 1 Cor. 15:47. Let us hope the God who once overlooked times of ignorance—Acts 17:30—is still lenient.

Now would even one, I wonder, agree with me that it is the wilfull, passionate spirit of lust within the flesh which constitutes that "great dragon" that is the adversary of God? Bro. Drinkard once asked, "What constitutes the Christ?" Well, this is the opposite of whatever does: serpent, satan, or devil, it is the spirit which is of the world as opposed to the spirit which is of God. 1 Cor. 2:12. It is more crafty than any beast, yes even than man as first formed, for he had no knowledge. If as we teach, the man in the garden was "good and perfect", what danger that he might "partake" (share) of that which is death? Rom. 8:6. 2 Cor. 1:9. Why the "shalt not"? Is law for the righteous—1 Tim. 1:9—or is it an imputation of sin wherever found? Rom. 5:13. But God is just: He charged no sin to the man in the garden till he was weighed in the balance and found wanting. Job 31:6; Dan. 5:27. Knowing His servant's weakness "he put no trust"—Job 4:18—in him but gave him orders and left him in the garden to "try him"—2 Chron. 32:31—that He might know and prove what was in his heart—Deut. 8:2—before "charging him with folly". Job 4:18; 2 Pet. 2:4.

All references to "the angels that sinned" point to the pair in the garden. Sin is ascribed to the flesh. Is it not man's own lust that draws him away and entices him? James 1:14. And it was Eve's own lust that conceived of sin and brought it forth, but she had that lust of Adam for he was first formed. Then lust of the flesh and the devil are of a sameness, neuter gender, and bring forth of the same kind. John 8:44. Wherever law is necessary we know there is evil. Sin makes law necessary, apart from it, sin is dead both powerless. How many of you believe that a "third intelligent personality" moved David to have Israel counted that he, David, might know their number after God's promise to multiply them innumera- bly? Which sinned, think you, Satan or David? 1 Chron. 21:1, 8, 17. Again, would Job have been found in the power of Satan—Job 1:12; 2:6—had he been right and God wrong? Job 34:5. Did he not "abhor self" before God accepted him? Job 42:6, 8. Jesus was a Man tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. If, as the brother points out, He was alone in the wilderness, who was present to commune with, save self and God? No third personality here, but two intelligent beings. Jesus was tempted to misapply the meaning of scripture perhaps, but did not suffer himself to be led astray. And we note that when the devil had thoroughly tried Him, he left for the time being. How many of us have had this very experience? Jesus himself, the most holy and intelligent Man of His time, admits temptation. Luke 22:28. Each is tempted by his own lust. God does not tempt, but tries us. Jesus rebuked this "satan" in Peter when he "minded" the things of men. If we revert again to the beginning we find that it was man in God's image, after His likeness, that He was minded to let have dominion. Where is it so stated that the first Adam filled this requirement? I believe we are all agreed that flesh is lustful, and since man is flesh what but this could cause God to strive with him that he might indeed have dominion over all flesh, even self? Gen. 6:3; Gal. 5:17. And we must bear in mind that God "speaks of the things that be not as though they were"—Rom. 4:17—and "chooses the things that are not, to bring to naught the things that are". 1 Cor. 1:28. That is not first which is spiritual, yet God chose it to bring to naught the works of that which is natural, or was first. Satan "roaring about, seeking to devour" might indeed "take a city", but he that "ruleth his own spirit" is better—Prov. 16:32—for he may be wise unto that which is good, and simple unto that which is evil, that the God of peace may shortly bruise Satan under his feet—Rom. 16:19, 20. Instead of being "grieved at heart"—Gen. 6:6—God may "rejoice in his works" and "sow gladness for the upright heart". Psa. 97:11.

Come "let us reason together", and take counsel against this common enemy. We have chosen whom we will serve. Glory to His name!

Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear shall live. For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself.—John 5:25, 26.

CONQUERING THE WORLD

Sunday, October 6, Prov. 21:23.

WHOSO KEEPETH his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles."

Success is the one great word that is taught to the listening child and that is last breathed out by the aged dying. Success, however, is merely the climbing upward over the incline, over the obstacles unto attainment. To accomplish this in many instances, is to gain victory over that which is without, but before such victory can be attained one must succeed in controlling self to shove forward into unceasing effort. To conquer then means largely to conquer self. "Be ye temperate in all things" is the way the apostle tells it to Christ's disciples. Such temperance requires much of self control: and such self control in the face of every opposition is that which brings the individual to his success.

In a greater sense than in the carnal life is this true in the spiritual effort. Abstinence from the wrong, persistent devotion to the right brings one to that victory in Christ offered to all His followers.

ADVENTURES OF FAITH

Monday, October 7, Dan. 1:8-13.

Christian faith is never really tested until one puts that faith into action. Faith in action leads one ever anew into ventures under Christ's leadership. It was because of Daniel's faith that he ventured out in the way of God's leadings in spite of the king's opposition. Nor did God betray him. Following his faith he was led into new and pleasant experiences; he was led into victory. That first victory was over self. He conquered any fear that might have been his. Secondly, his victory benefited his opposers and all onlookers. In so far as Daniel's faith overcame himself and overcame those round about him, he conquered his little world. See 1 John 5:4.

THE REWARD OF FAITH

Tuesday, October 8, Dan. 1:14-21.

The rewards of faith are twofold: first, the natural consequences or developments to the individual; second, that gift unrelated to the particular work done which God, the Giver, bestows.

At the end of Daniel's experience of faith it was found that his food and his daily action had increased his physique more than had the food of others increased them. In addition to all this, "God gave him knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom."

Let the Christian take lesson! Let him remember that before he tests God as to whether He will keep His promise and will render benefit in return for faith that he must first express the faith. In so doing he will first test self. One is not putting God to the test until after he truly exercises himself in faith in God. That is to say, one must exercise complete self control, must conquer self before he puts himself into like condition to prove God.

ALL THINGS TO ALL MEN

Wednesday, October 9, 1 Cor. 9:19-27.

Paul does not even suggest that he would be anything and everything to each particular man. Rather, that in meeting mankind, Jews, Romans, Grecians, all, he would adapt himself to the way of each; he would bring himself into control for the largest and best of service to those whom he, through Christ, was serving. What mighty self control this would be! How much better he was thus equipped for the service he was to render!

The individual Christian in this day is likewise Christ's servant sent out to all. To serve he must adapt himself to the best and truest needs of those to whom he goes. In this manner he, too, should become all things to all men.

FOR CONSCIENCE SAKE

Thursday, October 10, 1 Cor. 10:23-33.

Conscience is a thing of training. Paul had two of them. To the first one, he was very devoted. Because of his conscience he persecuted the followers of Christ; he even gave his voice against them unto death. But that did not make his acts any the better. Much to his sorrow he found out that his conscience was wrong. It was therefore necessary for him to put it to death. His second one was the result of a better comprehension of God through Jesus Christ. He was no less devoted to that one. He served it with complete devotion. But the second conscience was better than the first one in that the second was in harmony with God.

Many of us, dear Christian readers, have had conscience number one. It conforms very largely to our own personal, carnal wishes. Because we name it conscience we hold ourselves duty bound to religiously serve it. We, too, need the second conscience. We need to gain such self control that we will overthrow the conscience attuned to the flesh and open wide the door to a conscience that receives Christ in all of His wishes and that becomes as duty bound to Him as is conscience number one duty bound to self.

HE THAT IS JOINED UNTO THE LORD IS ONE SPIRIT

Friday, October 11, 1 Cor. 6:12-20.

Paul brings out the fact that God in joining man and woman in marriage has proved that the "two shall be one flesh." Using this great truth as an example he brings out a larger truth that "he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit." The Christian is one with Christ, in like manner as the husband or the wife is one with the other. The contrast is that, while the union of the natural results in one flesh, the union with Christ results in one spirit.

It is because of this oneness in spirit that Paul declares "that all things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient." Being in Christ, having conquered the flesh, having mortified the deeds of the body, his entire life activity is to serve Christ, who is a quickening spirit. Regardless therefore of the effort he might put forth, that effort would be not to the pleasure of self but to the service of his Lord. It is for this reason that all things are

OUR TIMES BEFORE APPOINTED

By F. L. Austin

THAT GOD has previously outlined the times for the shifting of the forces that, working together or in sequence, give progress to the ever advancing work of His own infinite plans and purposes, is revealed to all by Paul in Acts 17:26 when, in speaking of the nations as the handiwork of God, he says that God "hath determined the times before appointed". Egypt's time for international leadership was in the misty centuries of the past. Babylon's time was later. Greece had a time; so also Rome, Britain, Germany, United States, Israel had a time, but signally failed to use it to His honor and glory. The failure was also devastating to herself. He "hath determined the times before appointed" for each one to do its share or portion in the Creator's erection of His world structure.

Not only has God foreseen and foretold the rising of nations to positions of action, He has also revealed that in the days now near at hand, when it will be time for the nations to federate under one head, the time will have arrived when general conditions will have reshaping effects upon the race. By James He tells that riches will have their time. Certain forms of corruption will follow. This will lead up to "the coming of the Lord". Jas. 5:1-10.

Riches are one and all computed according to the amount that is merely gathered of the unlimited supplies created by God. In most recent times riches as computed have been increased over and over again. Figures that are commonplace today would have dazzled the minds of twenty-five years ago. Whence has all this gigantic increase come? From elements that were always in existence but that only now—just now—have come to be recognized and appreciated by man. The different powers in use now—steam power, water power, electric power, and others—have been one of the principle sources of this rapidly growing fabulous wealth, and one of the principle causes of changing conditions of society — morally, industrially, religiously. Power is passing the threshold into its appointed time.

On this important subject The Chicago Tribune on last January first, editorially gave a timely eye-opener. Because of its general information it is quoted in full. The prophetic student can readily discern that the time when power and its attendant riches may soon be brought to completely fulfill God's announcement relative to the last days is approaching, if not already present. The article, for which we are indebted to one of The Herald readers, follows:

THE FUTURE OF POWER

"The power problem of mankind may be solved in another fifty years or so," a scientist said recently, and in this quiet statement prophesied a change in human living such as man in all his history never has encountered. For the scientist meant literally that power would be available for man's uses without limit at low cost. It would be a natural property like water or like air or sunlight of which the costs lie in the machinery of usage, not in the source. In a modern civilization, founded primarily on the exploitation of the power resources of the earth, such a statement has a significance almost beyond measure.

Whence could this power abundance come? In coal today, the power basis of the modern world, America is rich, and today America is already a billion horse power nation. Coal in America, a Swedish expert says, will last 4,000 years, while coal in England will be gone in 450 years, and in Germany in 1,000 years. "There is not the slightest doubt," Arrhenius says, "that the United States will hold and further secure its position as industrial leader of the world, and this is made even more certain by the fact that North America is very well placed as compared to Europe in the matter of supplies of iron. Ninety per cent of the world's known coal reserve lies in the United States and in China, in the ratio of four to three, respectively."

With one windmill to the acre in our average ten mile wind, wind alone in the United states, says Ralph Bennett, would deliver eight billion seven hundred million horse power. With power reservoirs further developed, with power lines organized that can use small feeders, wind power may well become important. And the tide power on our coasts with an average five foot tide would furnish 106,500,000 horse power. The earth's internal heat may some time be available for power well-nigh inexhaustible, Parsons, inventor of the turbine, says that an experiment in power wells some ten or twelve miles deep, costing as much perhaps as one world's fair, might well result in a feebly flickering candle.

The sun power, father of all our energies, and the solar energy in the United States, says Steinmetz, is a thousand times the total of our coal annually consumed. Even a tenth of America's solar radiation is 13 billion kilowatts. Two average counties in the dryer part of Texas have sun enough to run all the factories and transportation systems in America. The world lies with the engineer. When he needs them, he will find engines no doubt for the sun and wind and waves and the deep heat of the earth. There is energy enough, from the inside of an atom to the clash of suns, to keep man going on.

Cheap power will make a world as different from today as concentrated power in engines has made today different from the world two hundred years ago. The modern age is the child of the industrial revolution. What will be born of the power revolution of the future few will dare guess.

EXODUS, THE SECOND BOOK OF MOSES

By Lyman Booth

THE HEBREWS called this book, "SEPIER SHE-MOTH, or The Book of Names, because it gives the names of the "Children of Israel which came into Egypt: every man and his household came with Jaacob." The Septuagint names it Exodus, or the departure, because the main and most interesting subject contained therein is the departure of Israel out of Egypt. It tells why the sons of Jacob went into Egypt and gives a history of their sojourn in the land. It relates the incident of their selling their younger brother, Joseph, also a general outline of their servitude from the death of Joseph to their deliverance, which took place about one hundred forty-four years after Joseph died.

The sacred historian gives a very full and complete account of all the particulars of the wonderful calamity which attended their departure, or that followed immediately thereafter. The writer introduces the subject with an account of his parentage, his birth, his perilous exposure to death, his marvelous preservation by the king's daughter, of his education and training in Pharaoh's court. He relates how he defended the cause of his enslaved brethren; his flight into the land of Midian; his life there as a shepherd; and finally his call to go into Egypt and free his brethren from bondage, which was to be the crowning work of his life. Being commissioned by Jehovah together with his brother, Aaron, to lead the host of Israel out of Egypt, he went. He relates the visitation of the plagues by which the proud monarch was forced to permit the enslaved Israelites to depart into the wilderness. He tells of the perils they encountered on the way, and the dividing of the waters of the Red Sea, through which they were lead as it were on dry land; how the wicked king and his hosts were overthrown and perished while attempting to pursue and punish the fleeing Israelites.

Then follows the account of how Jehovah miraculously led and provided for their daily necessities during their sojourn in the wilderness, notwithstanding their murmurings; also how He gave the moral code to them from the smoking and burning summit of Mount Sinai, and how He delivered to Moses many parts of both the judicial and ceremonial law. He faithfully and accurately records the covenant entered into with Israel, the appointment of the Aaronic priesthood, the instructions for the construction of the tabernacle, and then instituted a system of rules for His worship among them. Although Israel promised to do all that the Lord required, they violated their promise and worshiped the golden calf.

It is worthy of note in this connection that many other sacred writers refer to the events that are recorded in this book. These events were treated by the several sacred penmen as matters of notoriety and unmistakable certainty. Many quotations from this book may be found both in the Old and the New Testaments. We find them in Psalms, the prophets, and by our Lord and His apostles. Their frequent references to this book plainly imply that they regard it as the work of Moses, "the servant of the Lord," and that the words recorded were divinely inspired.

The constant reference by other sacred writers to the miracles recorded therein are by them regarded as having been wrought through Moses by a divine Power, for the purpose of proving the laws and doctrines therein given to be the oracles of God himself. That this statement is true, the reader may be satisfied by referring to the marginal readings.

Some important prophesies are contained in this book that were fulfilled either before or soon after Moses' death, as well as some which were verified centuries after they were uttered. One in particular, in Exodus 34:24, "Neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the Lord thy God, thrice every year," which history says was accomplished. This book abounds more than any other in types, the antitypes being plainly manifested nearly fifteen centuries afterwards, which fact furnishes indisputable proof that the book was written under the direction of the Holy Spirit.

Profane historians have shown sufficient evidence, unwittingly perhaps, that many of the fables which abound in their writings are built upon the distorted traditions of facts and events so plainly related by Moses, events of which Moses has furnished an authentic history, and of which those pagan writers may have heard vague and indistinct reports and clothed them with fancy imaginations.

Thoughtful and sincere contemplation of the contents of this book will convince any unbiased mind that the narratives therein are the infallible word of God, and that they furnish a firm foundation for our confidence in the truthfulness of God's Word. Therefore, it should be read with due reverence and with the utmost attention. The reader will find it replete with wise instruction as to God's early dealings with Israel, and the ultimate effect that will be made manifest in future years through the perfected and immortalized agents of God after they shall have made their exodus from the wilderness of sin.

One way to induce a little girl to keep her hands clean is to give her a pretty ring.

The idea holds good with grownups. Persuade a person to receive Christ into his heart and he will keep his body clean both internally and externally, and he will present a respectable appearance.—S. E. Haney.

QUERIES NO. 5

WHO SAW IT?

"Every imagination of the thoughts of his (man's) heart was only evil continually."

WHERE IS IT FOUND?

A BIBLE CHARACTER

The initials of the answers of the following questions spell the name of an eastern king whose lying awake at night had important consequences. What are the answers?

1. What woman whose discretion and courteous behavior led to great exaltation?
2. At what place did an eminent high priest die?
3. What cousin of Saul was captain of his host?
4. Who violently opposed rebuilding the temple?
5. Whose ill-timed zeal provoked the Lord?
6. Who is the first named servant in Scripture?
7. The name of a city of refuge.
8. Give the one syllable name of the early home of an Old Testament character.
9. An Old Testament name of Christ.

A SCRIPTURE ENIGMA

"I end as I began,
The weal and woe of man;
Yet do not harshly blame,
I bear my mother's name."

HAPPENINGS IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Where in the Bible is there reference to:—

1. Merchants in tears?
2. The election of the Board of Guardians?
3. A business man attacked by an officer's wife?
4. A large contract for timber and food?
5. Business stopped and salesmen beaten?

ANSWERS TO QUERIES 3

1. At Damascus, Acts 9:20.
2. Cornelius, Acts 10:3.
3. At Antioch by Paul and Barnabas, Acts 14:26.
5. In his epistle to the Romans, Romans 1:1.
6. Phebe, Romans 16:1.
7. To the Romans, Romans 16:16.
8. In, First Corinthians 8:1.
9. Of them that sleep, First Corinthians 15:20.
10. Of the dead in Christ, Second Corinthians 8:5.

In addition to those already mentioned in the last two issues, good answers, showing thought and study, have been received from the following: Mrs. Mary S. Todd, Nebr., Queries 1; Mrs. Mina S. Crosby, N. Y., Queries 1 and 2; Hazel Titus, S. Dak., Queries 2; Jessie Ford and Mrs. R. C. Drew, Ill., Queries 2.

Each will be able to check accuracy from the printed answers.

Mrs. Crosby deserves honorable mention for accuracy and careful preparation, and Hazel Titus for carefully answering each set one at a time.

Let's speed up and get some answers in on time, so that back lists need not appear. Answers to Queries 5 will appear in issue of October 15.

Careful answers to Queries 3 have been received from Hazel Titus and Mrs. Mina Crosby.

LISTENING TIMES

WHAT WE NEED above all things in these crowded days is the setting apart of many listening times, times of quiet in which we can hear the heavenly voices that call to us unregarded in the busy day. God has something to say to us which, in the whirl of our earthly ambitions, we cannot hear; and He makes the noises of the outer world to cease that He may speak to the soul. Sometimes He "tries us in the night"; sometimes He "giveth songs in the night"; sometimes He gives us "a vision in the night"; but all of these we will utterly miss if there is no quiet time in which He can come very near to us. There are many ways of preparing to receive blessing from on high; but one of the most essential is this, "Commune with your own heart, and be still."—Selected.

lawful unto Paul.

Likewise Christian brother, he who has become one in Christ is privileged of Christ to go with Him into every nook and cranny of the experiences of others in an effort to edify them.

DESTROY NOT THE CHRIST-SAVED

Saturday, October 12, Romans 14:13-23.

Christ walked with sinners and ate with them. Not in spirit did He associate with them, but with pureness of heart and pureness of ideals He associated with all. In such contrast with them personally, He drew many unto himself. It was for just such that He died. Not at all did He die to participate with them in their evil things, but to draw them away from their evil things unto the ways of himself.

Every association of today has its influence upon those associating. Some associate for the purpose of drawing others downward; others associate for the express purpose of lifting their fellow companions; still others disregard the interests of their associates and act purely for self pleasure. Paul teaches that every Christian should so thoroughly control himself that he will decline even the pleasure of his own Christian rights if so be that such would cause an uninformed brother to stumble. Christ died for that stumbling one. Paul shuddered lest he, in order to please self, might be the cause over which another for whom Christ died might stumble.

OCTOBER IS HERE!

DEAR BEREANS OF ILLINOIS: We have again come to that month of October which is the one month of the year in which we practice real self-denial, with the view to helping others who are not quite so fortunate as ourselves. Could Bereans do anything more noble?

Let us really deny ourselves of the many luxuries we are accustomed to buy frequently and save the amount we would have spent on them for just one short month. If we do this faithfully our will-power will be increased—and followers of Christ must have will-power—and surely we will have a feeling of real joy in being able to help others.

The portion of this money that will be given to the Relief Committee of the National Berean Society may go to buy shoes for someone who is very much in need of them or it may purchase coal, food, or medicine for somebody in dire need of these necessities of life. Surely we want a hand in helping carry out these many Christian duties, do we not? Then we must deny and keep denying ourselves during the thirty-one days of October and at the end of that time send our money thus saved to Mrs. Esta Starbuck, 420 S. Third St., Rockford, Illinois.

It was voted at the last meeting of the state society to use one-half of the money received from self-denial month for literature and the remainder for welfare work. As literature is needed in spreading of the gospel it is easy to see that this part of the money will be well spent. So let us make this a real self-denial month.

Yours in Berean service.

Elmer Goekler, President.

We are pleased to be able to give the following report of the Iowa State Berean meeting. May we not have further reports of your progress from time to time during the year, Iowa?

IOWA STATE BEREAN CONFERENCE

Thursday, August twenty-second, was observed as Berean Day at the Iowa Conference. At the one business meeting held in the forenoon the different committees and societies reported on work done during the past year. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Sidney Jackson, Waterloo; Vice-president, Esther Sealine; Stanhope; Secretary, Mrs. Arnold Sealine, Stanhope; Treasurer, Mrs. Leonard Harland, Cedar Falls.

The following were appointed as chairmen of committees: Program, Mrs. Chas. Howe; Isolated, Mrs. Leonard Harland; Recreation, Dorothy Starbuck; Tract and Literary, Esther Sealine; Junior Bereans, Alta King.

In the afternoon an enjoyable program was given by the children and young people. One new feature of the program was the giving of pennies, saved by the children during the year, to the conference.

The Berean sermon was given in the evening by Bro. Melville Lyon. The day was profitable to all and we thank those who helped in any way.

Mrs. Arnold Sealine, Secretary.

Here is encouraging news from the West, for Bro. Forrest Long is reporting a nice new organization at Holbrook, Nebraska. This is a young society, but our prayers beseech for it a steady growth. Remember, Holbrook Bereans, there is no limit to what a faithful few can accomplish. We'll expect to hear from you again!

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

The Salem Bereans held their second social evening on September seventh at Bro. C. W. Goekler's home. The program was planned by the program committee who were elected at the first meeting, and was as follows.

Song by the congregation, prayer, song by congregation, followed by all reciting the books of the Bible and discussing some selected verses. We were then favored with a duet by Ruby and Edith Hendrix, a reading of Psalm 36 by Elmer Goekler, and a talk on Jerusalem by Ivan Veach. After this we all joined in another hymn. The rest of the evening was spent in playing games.

We believe these gatherings will be a great help to our Berean class.

The next meeting will be held on the evening of September 28 at the W. C. Hendrix home.

Ruby Hendrix.

These excellent reports show life, interest and advancement. How is your class progressing?

KEEPING FIT FOR THE SAKE OF OTHERS

KEEPING FIT, what does it mean? It means keeping your body and mind in their best health. The story of Daniel is given as an example of keeping fit. He kept himself in health by not eating the rich food nor drinking the wine the king provided. Thus, he was better able to serve his people and God.

In order to do our best we must observe the rules of health, too. We must eat and drink the foods that are best for our growth. If our bodies are weak and we are not well, we feel cross and are not able to do our work properly.

Therefore, we must keep fit in order to serve God and those about us to the best of our ability. Helping to serve others brings us happiness; so in keeping fit, we serve ourselves, too.

REMEMBER

A clean mind, a clean heart, and a clean, strong body are best able to serve others.

The best five doctors anywhere,
 And no one can deny it
 Are Doctors Sunshine, Water, Air,
 Exercise and Diet.
 These five will gladly you attend,
 If you are willing;
 Your mind they'll cheer, your ills they'll mend
 And charge you not a shilling.

—What to Do

WHERE FIND

“Glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.”

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Daniel 1:8-20.
2. Read the story again about Daniel in the “Herald” for July 16.
3. Make a list of things you can do to improve your body.

NOTE BOOK

BEAUTIFUL THINGS

Beautiful faces are those that wear,
 It matters little if dark or fair,
 Whole-souled honesty printed there.

Beautiful eyes are those that show,
 Like crystal panes where hearth fires glow
 Beautiful thoughts that burn below.

Beautiful lips are those whose words
 Leap from the heart like songs of birds,
 Yet whose utterance prudence girds.

Beautiful hands are those that do
 Work that is honest, brave and true,
 Moment by moment, the long day through.

Beautiful feet are those that go
 On kindly errands to and fro
 Down humblest ways, if God wills it so.

Beautiful shoulders are those that bear
 The needful burdens of homely care
 With patient grace and daily care.

Beautiful lives are those that bless
 Silent rivers of happiness
 Whose hidden fountains but few may guess.

Guard, my child, thy tongue,
 That it speak no wrong;
 Let no evil word pass o'er it;
 Set the watch of truth before it.
 That it speak no wrong,
 Guard, my child, thy tongue.

Guard, my child, thy eyes;
 Prying is not wise;
 Let them look on what is right;
 From all evil turn their sight.

Guard, my child, thine ear;
 Wicked words will sear,
 Let no evil words come in
 That may cause the soul to sin.

Ear, and eye, and tongue,
 Guard while thou art young;
 For, alas! these busy three

Can unruly members be.
 Guard, while thou art young,
 Ears, and eyes, and tongue.

KEEPING FIT FOR THE SAKE OF OTHERS

Daniel 1:8-20; 1 Corinthians 9:19-27; 1 Timothy 4:7-12; 2 Timothy 2:1-5.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 66:1-4, 16-20.

GOLDEN TEXT

What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's—1 Cor. 6:19, 20.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

I. Self Control in Service to God. "Thou shalt" and "Thou shalt not" were commands of God in Exod. 20 revealing the responsibility of self control which God put upon man. God gave the information. He left man to accept it or reject it.

Self control is the controlling of self to do or not to do that which the mind knows to be proper, or to refrain from doing the improper.

One's mastery of self is of value only as his standard of right and wrong is of value. Daniel chose God for his Standard. His self control was to keep himself in that conduct acceptable to God. Adam's conduct was apparently that which best suited self, therefore he could not pretend to follow God's standard.

Every Christian first of all accepts Christ as his standard. Immediately he is obligated to control himself in a manner pleasing to Christ and consequently pleasing to the Father. Therefore, Paul's urge, 1 Cor. 9:27, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." Again, Paul's anxiety for the Thessalonians, "I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Here are some outstanding facts:

If every human being would control himself to conform to God's standard of right there would be—

- No blasphemy against God,
- No deceit of fellow men,
- No injury of one by another,
- No cheating,
- No killing,
- No war,
- No sin of any kind.

Self control, according to God's standard, would accomplish all of this and more. Man owes to God self control regarding everything that pertains to the advantage of his mind, of his body, of his life, of his time, of his entire being. The only recipe of the Bible to approach this accomplishment is contained in the words of Gal. 5:16, "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh."

II. Self Control Necessary to Spiritual Growth. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would."—Gal. 5:17. Again, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God."—1 Cor. 2:14.

Repentance is not merely to turn away from the sinful custom, but to turn away from the carnal standard and to turn to the higher standard, the standard of Christ, the spiritual Man. This requires intense self control. But such repentance having once been truly made, then the spiritual is taken hold of and, in turn, it takes hold of the man. See 1 Tim. 4:7-16. "No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier."—2 Tim. 2:4.

III. Self Control of the Christian Essential to Witness for Christ to the Unchristian. Daniel's stand for God, his loyalty unto Him resulted in an outstanding testimony before the idolatrous nation of the truthfulness of God. Such testimony, or witness, was an object lesson of far greater value than mere words and promises. That Daniel's attainment of strength resulted from his self control is unquestioned.

Our Savior was exalted beyond measure. That His exaltation was consequent upon His undeviating self control through the days of His ministry is also unquestioned. His demonstrated witnessing for the Father has encircled the earth and has reached the heart of nearly every race.

In the face of the most tantalizing and venomous opposition the Apostle Paul controlled himself in the service of Christ throughout all opposition. He brought his body under at all times. His one great burning anxiety was to bring his entire being to the service of Christ. His life work perhaps more than his life words were a testimony for his Master.

Equally, the Christian of today owes it to his fellow beings and coming generations that he control himself against every known wrong, be it great or small. The generation of today is increasing in its wild and riotous custom of living only because the example and approval of others have encouraged them to brazenly dare the rapids. For the good of others the Christian should control himself against all habits of life that tend to influence others harmfully: the use of liquors, tobaccos, opiates; the patronage of places of gambling, places of questioned amusements; the lending of oneself in any way to the encouragement of that which tends to injure even the weakest of fellow men.

"Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died."—Rom. 14:15.

IV. Self Control as a Personal Blessing. The clearness of vision, the greatness of understanding, the richness of comprehension, all of which came to Daniel as a result of his clean and upright service to God, were of ten thousand times more benefit to him than could have been any satisfaction resultant from any service to the flesh. Controlling oneself to live true to the highest standards is abundantly proven to be to man's highest interest. Jesus taught His disciples, Mark 10:29, 30, that no man had forsaken all to follow Him who should not receive a hundred fold more in this present life and in the world to come life everlasting. That man who is really looking to his own best interest would, if possible, serve Christ if for no other reason than for his own selfish attainment. Of course this is impossible. The very selfishness of purpose would defeat the end. The most certain way to avoid the bleared eyes, the confused brain, the diseased body is to control self against the evils of life. The most certain way to gain the bright eye, the pleasant countenance, the happy life is to forget self in one's service to his Lord.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

God Requires Our Best. ". . . Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service." Rom. 12:1, A. R. V. God requires the best we have for His service, for we are His dwelling place, in us He lives and through us He manifests His power, His wisdom, and His love. We no longer belong to ourselves—we are wholly His. "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." 1 Cor. 6:19, 20. Our bodies and minds belong to God and we must keep them clean and vigorous to do His work. We have no right to defile them with narcotics or intoxicants, or to weaken them with misuse, for they are God's. Dancing or other forms of worldly amusement which use our strength other than in the Father's service should be shunned.

—G. E. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"What! do you not know that your body is a Temple of that Holy Spirit in you, which you have from God? Besides, you are not your own: for you were bought with a price; glorify God, then, in your body." 1 Cor. 6:19-20, Diag.

No man liveth unto himself. Regardless of his own will in the matter, his influence is felt either for good or for evil. The Christian's character should be so clean, so pure, that it radiates purity to those about him. Our bodies were given us for use, not for abuse. "God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness." He has "given unto us his holy Spirit." 1 Thess. 4:7, 8b.

Therefore if we would be well pleasing to God and useful to man, we must keep our bodies pure, so that the Holy Spirit may have full sway within us.—L. A. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

DOINGS AT HEADQUARTERS

Sr. Mary Jackson has recently returned to the Home after a two weeks' vacation during which time she visited friends in Niagara Falls district and relatives in Iowa.

Sr. Betty Kilmer who has been bedfast at Golden Rule Home for a number of weeks remains about the same.

Before these lines shall have gone to press we expect the arrival of a florist, one Mr. Charles Moore, from Albion, Michigan, to supervise the growing and floral work at Golden Rule Greenhouse. Mr. Moore, who is a member of the Christian church, answered our ad in Florist's Review where we asked for a thorough grower practicing Christian standards. We very much hope that the Golden Rule Greenhouse will be true to name and will return to us even more profit than heretofore.

The type for this issue of The Herald has been set by Mr. Lyman Thompson, who has been our efficient linotype operator for a year past. We regret to say that this will probably be his last work for The Herald. He is leaving for the newspaper field where wages will be approximately fifty percent more than what this office is paying, and much more than this office is warranted to pay. Mr. Thompson, who came to us a year ago as a stranger, has been very faithful indeed in all his work. Both he and his genial wife have made many good and lasting friends while here. All wish them the full of what their lives of integrity and high ideals merit.

Beginning Monday, September 30, our print shop will be manned by one printer, Bro. Paul C. Johnson, and one apprentice, Bro. Cecil Smead, of California. This was the urgent recommendation some months ago of the Executive Board, it being advised that the work warranted no more than such help together with occasional necessary extra assistance.

While your Secretary has persistently advised against such a reduction of help and that such reduction would cripple our plant, yet we are going to give it an honest and thorough trial. We feel that an amateur on our new linotype can be but a financial loss. It is not the custom of any printing plant to break in an entirely new man on such machinery, and yet it will be impossible for Bro. Johnson to work on the floor and at the same time set the type.

For the past month, even with Mr. Thompson, an accomplished linotype operator, the plant has been compelled, though working over time, to postpone delivery on some of its work, as must be recognized by those who have been waiting for Choice Texts and Thoughts, which are just now being mailed.

We solicit the forbearance of the brotherhood and the patrons of The Herald print shop should this plan prove ineffective. We assure you that if after an honest trial we find that the work cannot thus be done, the plan will be changed to meet the demands.

BIBLE TRAINING CLASS

It is impossible to state at this writing just how many students will register for the Bible Training Class on Monday, September 30th. We have the assurance that several earnest young people will be enrolled. Bro. Clarence Lapp, Sunnyside, Wash., will be two or three days late in arriving, but on arrival will be tried out as bookkeeper and stenographer for our office. In this way we hope to be able to give him half-time work with which to finance his class work. Bro. Cecil Smead, Los Angeles, expects to work in our print shop and two of the other young men will be given work between the greenhouse, Home and office.

We are planning a much heavier study course than we have had heretofore, and hope that the step forward this year may be advanced another step next year.

Next Sunday is the regular preaching Sunday at the Dixon church. All are asked to bear in mind that from now on, we will have services both morning and evening, the first and third Sundays of each month.

IOWA CONFERENCE REPORT

Sunday, August twenty-fifth marked the close of the Iowa Conference for 1929. Looking back over the events of the week, after a lapse of a month's time, it still stands out in our minds as one of Iowa's best conferences. Bros. Eychaner, Williams, Marsh and Lyon instructed us in both Bible classes and sermons.

While the attendance was light the first few days, the last of the week found the facilities of our little tent city taxed to the limit to provide lodging for all.

We were glad to have with us this year Bro. F. W. Ficken and family, of Ft. Morgan, Colo. This was their first visit to the Iowa Conference and we hope that they may come again. Others from a distance in attendance all or part of the week were Alta and Lillian King, Lincoln, Neb.; Leona Marsh, Ind.; John Marsh, Chicago; Mrs. Karl Stuhler (Viva Moore) and daughter, Jean, Washington, D. C.; Pearl Hatten, Geniel Carpenter, Arlen Marsh and J. Arthur Johnson, Oregon, Ill.; Dorothy Starbuck, Rockford, Ill.; and Mrs. J. M. Prime and daughter, Ann Patrice, of Omaha.

A kindly Christian spirit of tolerance prevailed all through the meeting and deep interest was manifested in all Bible classes. Especially was this true of the Junior class taught by Bro. Williams.

At the close of the last Sunday afternoon service we went to the bank of the nearby Cedar River where, after a few impressive words of instruction by Bro. Lyon, the following were buried in the waters of baptism by Bro. Williams and led out to walk in newness of life: J. M. Kiger, Marengo; H. P. Brown and daughters Helen and Noma of 412 Elm St., Waterloo; Olive Berggren, Stanhope; and Gerald Palmer, Cedar Falls.

At the business session the former executive board were chosen to again take charge of the year's work. They are: John, H. S. Hunt, Clarksville; Vice-pres., John W. Oaks, Gladbrook; Rec. Sec., Mrs. A. M. Jones, Eagle Grove; Treas., T. J. Ellis, 319 Cutler St., Waterloo; and Mrs. W. H. Allard, Cedar Falls, Rt. 2, Cor. Sec.

Mrs. W. H. Allard, Cor. Sec.

KOSZTA, IOWA

The annual Sunday School picnic was held in the grove east of Koszta on September 15, with eighty partaking of a fried chicken dinner. Bible school was held at 2 p. m., Sr. Sylvia Heller teaching the primary class, Sr. Clark of Gladbrook the young people's class, J. W. Williams the Bible class, after which a program by the Gladbrook Sunday School was given. Preaching followed at 3 p. m. by J. W. Williams.

In the evening a Berean meeting was held, the subject being, "The Kingdom of God". Then followed another sermon to an attentive and appreciative audience. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Berry and family and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Solbrig and daughter, Atelia, from Marengo were present, besides several auto loads from Gladbrook.

A business meeting of the church was held on Friday evening, Sept. 20, at the home of the President, Charles Noaker, to make plans for the ensuing year's work. Election for officers for the year was as follows: Pres., Chas. Noaker; Vice-pres., Ray Cronbaugh; Sec., Mrs. L. M. Kiger; Treas., Sylvia Heller.

The Sunday School will spend September 9 at a picnic at Back Bone state park, and October 6 at Gladbrook, with a basket dinner and a program to follow in the afternoon by the Koszta Sunday School. Everybody welcome.

September 22 was election of Sunday School officers for six months: Supt., Mrs. L. M. Kiger; Asst., Margery Cronbaugh; Sec., Leo Heller; Treas., Dena Cronbaugh; teachers: primary, Violet Cronbaugh; intermediate, Sylvia Heller; Bible class, Helen Cronbaugh.

SWEETWATER, TEXAS

Bro. Stewart will no doubt give a report of this meeting of Aug. 30-Sept. 8, but permit me to mention that the little folks' class feature was added to the meeting program here. It was surely worth while to spend a short time each evening with the little folks. The highest number in the class was twenty-six. Mind you, many of their parents are not members of the Church of God. Herein is opportunity! Let the church realize her duty, take hold of these opportunities and go forward in Christian service, laying aside those weights that hold her back and tend to hinder proper progress toward the one great aim — service to the Master.

T. A. Drinkard, Clyde, Texas.

OUR VISIT TO NIAGARA FALLS AND VICINITY

We had such a good time and enjoyed our visit with the brethren and friends at the different churches that we had the pleasure of visiting that I feel moved to write a few lines. Sr. Leota Hanson and myself left St. Louis Saturday noon and arrived in Niagara Falls Sunday morning and we went to the church for the morning services.

Brother Gordon and the brethren who were there gave us a very pleasant and cordial greeting. Brother Gordon preached a very interesting sermon on the subject of "Endurance," which we enjoyed very much. After services I went home with Brother Gordon and his good wife. Leota had made other arrangements for the afternoon, but came on to Fonthill in the evening. We were very pleasantly surprised to meet Sr. Jackson of Golden Rule Home, and her son Sidney and bride. They and Sister Gordon met us in Victoria Park where we had a picnic lunch together, after which we spent the day sight-seeing the wonders of nature round the Falls. In the evening Leota came over and Brother Gordon and wife very hospitably entertained us at their home for supper, after which we went with them to the Fonthill church for the evening services, where we heard another good discourse and made the acquaintance of the good people there.

Brother Gordon is working hard, and he and his wife are both well pleased with their new field of labor. They bear a good reputation, for all the people with whom we met at both churches speak in very kindly and complimentary terms of their new pastor and his wife.

We can not remember the names of all the people we met but we like them all and appreciate the warm friendliness that was shown us while in their midst. We visited Sr. Railton at her home, and ate supper with her. Our dear Bro. Rennard is still in the hospital but is the same genial, sociable fellow as always. He is sorry he can not use his right hand to write, which he would enjoy doing as he has so much spare time that he could devote to writing.

We spent four happy days at the Falls, then started our journey homeward, stopping at Buffalo, N. Y. one day sight-seeing. Then we went by boat to Cleveland, Ohio and there at the pier our Bro. Lyon stood with smiling face and took us in tow and devoted the whole day to our pleasure, going the length and breadth of the city. As that night was Berean study we had the pleasure of meeting with the church at Cleveland. Leaving Cleveland we came directly home feeling that we had enjoyed a profitable as well as a pleasant journey, and with renewed hope and faith that God is over all.

As we think of many different ones of like precious faith, each standing in his or her own place, serving the Master and waiting patiently the coming of our Lord and Savior, while striving to do His will, we partly understand how we need to encourage each other and help to bear one another's burdens, for we are all one building and we want to be fitly joined together when our Lord shall return.

Let us not be weary in well doing for in due time we shall reap if we faint not, for He who promised is faithful.

Ida Vogel.

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Two young ladies, two married and one single, obeyed the Lord in baptism Sun., Sept. 22. Their names are as follows: Mrs. Helen Owens, Randolph, Nebr.; Mrs. Ruth Patterson, 4316 Barker Ave., Omaha, Nebr.; Miss Naomi Meadows, 4316 Barker Ave., Omaha.

Our Sunday School is planning a program for Rally Day, Oct. 13. Services for the day are as follows: Sunday School, 10 a. m.; Morning Worship, 11 a. m.; Basket Dinner, 12; Rally Day Program, 2:30 p. m.; Berean Class, 7 p. m.; Evening Service, 8 p. m. Members living at a distance are invited to come to spend the week end with us. Arrangements will be made to entertain anyone coming from a distance that will write ahead of time to E. E. Giesler, 219 E. Front St., or phone White 377.

Always welcome at the Church of God.
E. E. Giesler, Pastor.

CLEAR LAKE, WIS., and MORA, MINN.

On Saturday evening, Sept. 14, and Sunday, the 15th, services were held with the brethren at Clear Lake, Wis. It was good to meet with these folks again and we are glad that a number are planning to come to the fall conference at Lester Prairie, Minn., Oct. 3 to 6. We had little more than returned home until a phone call came that we were wanted back for the funeral of Mr. Gordon, known as Uncle Steve, who has made his home with Bro. and Sr. Harry Thomas for the past eight years.

CHOICE TEXTS AND THOUGHTS

Some ministers who attended the General Conference

F. E. Siple, Dixon, Ill.; G. A. Brown, Oregon, Ill.; M. W. Lyon, Cleveland, O.; E. E. Giesler, Blair, Nebr.; Paul M. Hatch, Oregon; F. L. Austin, Oregon; J. W. Williams, Gladbrook, Iowa; Paul C. Johnson, Oregon; G. E. Marsh, Los Angeles, Calif.; Grover Gordon, Fonthill, Ont.; C. E. Randall, Grand Rapids, Mich.; J. Arthur Johnson, Oregon.

The pretty little brochure of Choice Texts and Thoughts of many who attended the last General Conference has now been mailed to all whose orders have been received. Should any of them fail to arrive as ordered, a card to the N. B. I. office will be sufficient to start another copy to replace the wandering one.

Some who were not in attendance at Conference sent in choice texts. These also have been included.

A few extra copies were printed. As long as this supply lasts they can be had at the regular price of sixty cents each, postpaid. When ordering, write name and full address plainly. This last is especially necessary should anyone find it necessary to send an order to replace a lost copy.

Miss Emily Hamilton, Miss Shala Hoskins, Elton Ruhn and son, Ivan, motored back with us to Clear Lake for the funeral and on from there to Mora, Minn., where services were held with the brethren Saturday evening and Sunday, Sept. 21 and 22. At both Clear Lake and Mora the congregations are small but, though handicapped, they nevertheless keep up regular Sunday Schools and at Mora a Bible study class is held each Sunday evening. Several from Mora also plan to make the trip to the conference at Lester Prairie.

Mr. H. H. Holland, business manager of the Bible Faith Mission, supplied for the local church here at Eden Valley on Sept. 15, and Elder Fred Daubanton of St. Cloud spoke Sunday, Sept. 22. Both speakers were gladly received, and we trust they will come again.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Kittie Watt; Edwin B. Schmueker; F. M. Mathes; H. W. Patterson; W. E. Wharton; Mrs. Rex Arlington; Mrs. A. T. Nelson; Mrs. Ethel Johnson; Mrs. Flora Hogue; Mrs. Berty Moore; Mrs. Harold Nokes; Mrs. Lawrence Chaplin; C. H. Belshaw; Leslie Edwards.

STEPHEN GORDON

was born in New York July 6, 1836, and died Sept. 19, 1929, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thomas, of Downing, Wis., where he had made his home the past eight years.

Mr. Gordon spent about three years in the Union army and is the last of the Civil War veterans to lay down his life in the community of Downing and Clear Lake. After the war he married Miss Jennie Thomas, of Nashua, Iowa. She preceded him in death eight years ago.

Six nephews and one niece survive him, namely, Fred, Robert, William, Philip, Martin and Harry Thomas, and Mrs. Peter Tolson; the nephews all living near their uncle at the time of his death and the niece a resident of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. Gordon, known better as Uncle Steve, was loved by all and known as a devout man. Funeral services were conducted by the writer Saturday morning, Sept. 21, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Harry Thomas.

BELONGING TO THE CHURCH

HOW OFTEN WE HEAR THE EXPRESSION, "I belong to such and such a church!" Have we ever stopped to analyze that statement and decide how much or how little it may mean? Just what we do mean will determine to a very great extent our attitude toward the church. Many people act as though they meant that the church belonged to them. Perhaps they help to pay the minister and so, they think, he belongs to them. If he does not preach what they like, or do just what they want him to do, they are done with him. Maybe some of their money goes to pay the choir—and then the choir must sing just what they like. Probably other things are not as they want them and so they will stop going to church until things begin to come their way. What these people need to learn is that the church does not owe them anything. If the church has brought to them the influences of the gospel and has provided a way for their salvation, it has given them more than they can ever pay with all they possess. The church belongs to no man or company of men. The real owner is Jesus Christ. He organized it; He died for it; and He has ordained it as His messenger to reveal to every man the way of life.

To belong to the church means something more. It means that we have pledged to it, in the name of the Lord Jesus, a fair part of our support, our possessions, our life. Instead of seeking favors from the church and expecting her to be "handing" us something, we are pledged to study her "peace and prosperity," and to do our best to enlarge her power and her influence in order that she may fittingly fulfill the commission of her Lord and Master. The church, in a sense, owns every man and woman who has entered her membership, and has a right to demand their services in the name of Christ.

The church belongs to no man; but neither does any man "belong" to the church until he is assuming his fair share of the church's task.

THE SERENE CONFIDENCE OF THE GODLY

PSALM NINETY-ONE

THE MAN WHO KNOWS the almighty and most high God to be his shelter and his home, can sing to him with grateful confidence: "Thou art my refuge, my fortress, my God in whom I trust."

For he is mighty to deliver from perils of every kind. He can save thee from snare and deadly pestilence: his sheltering wings can safely cover thee. Thou needest not fear the terror of night, nor the arrow that flieth by day, nor the plague that stalks in the dark, nor the deadly heat of noonday. Ten thousand of the godless may fall about thee, but the evil shall never touch thee; for Jehovah's faithfulness is to thee as a shield of defence. Thou shalt see with thine eyes how the godless are punished; but that is all. For thou thyself art safe; thou hast made the most high God thy refuge and thy home. No evil shall befall thee; no plague shall come near thy tent; for at his bidding, the angels preserve thee wherever thou goest, bearing thee up and keeping thee from stumbling on stony ways. Over all that is strong and cruel and treacherous thou shalt have the dominion. Reptiles and adders, lions and dragons, shalt thou trample under feet.

"And this," saith Jehovah, "I will do for the man who loves me and cares for me. I will deliver and exalt him. When, in his hour of need, he calls me, I will answer and stand by him. I will save him and bring him to honor, and spare him long to see the golden Messianic days."

THE HEAVEN-LIGHT

IT IS STATED that John Ruskin once said that no great picture was possible unless it had in it what he called heaven-light. What is true of pictures is also true of one's life. No great life can be developed unless it be touched with the light of Him who is the "light of the world". If only earth-light is seen in one's life, his life can but be temporal, tawdry, unsatisfactory. But he whose life is touched and tinted by the light of Christ is building unto eternity.

PINS

SOME TIME AGO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TIMES related the incident of an old lady who upon the occasion of her wedding in early life was given a paper of pins. In her old age she yet had some of the same pins. Her husband was reported to have said that she was so saving of the pins and so saving of other pins that she had gathered from time to time, that she never in her married life had to buy more pins. Her mind throughout life seemed to be on pins.

It seems quite possible for folks to go through life with their minds and time so completely given to small unimportant things that they might well be called pin-heads. The faithful follower of Christ can but have another vision in life. His time and effort and means are used with a view to attainment unto great promises of God. David said in 2 Sam. 23:1-7: "He hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure: for it is all my salvation, and all my desire." These words show what the mind of David was focused on, in the closing years of his life. His mind was given to the great things revealed to him by God; his life was given unto such service. But he who uses life for the little, temporal, ephemeral things of the day might well be likened unto the careful woman in the incident related above.

Let us press forward toward the great things of life, "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

THE LIGHT OF THE HOLY PLACE

"He hath made the ten candlesticks of gold according to the ordinance concerning them, and he set them in the temple, five on the right hand; and five on the left."—2 Chron. 4:7.

THERE WERE NO WINDOWS in the tabernacle of the temple of God. In the Holy of Holies there was no light by man; only the shekinah glory of God illuminated the otherwise dark room. And in the Holy Place there was no light but the light of the ten candles which were placed there under directions from the Father. Here the Levites entered in doing the service of the tabernacle; here they were able to see by the flickering light from the candles, to perform their duties.

Into the Christian life there is no world-light that can enter that can be of any real assistance to Christian development and attainment. It is the light of Christ radiating into the heart and life of the individual that illuminates him, enabling him to move forward in the Christian duties of love, forgiveness, godliness. Without the shekinah light from heaven radiating into the Christian's life, he is hopelessly in the dark as to the performance of spiritual duties.

It was when the light from heaven, brighter than the noonday sun, shone upon Paul that he was able for the first time to see his Lord and Master whom, to that moment he had been persecuting.

It is when the real light of truth shines into your life and mine that we, for the first time and thereafter, are able to recognize the great truths of God, the great facts of the future, the great purposes unto eternity.

Let us not cut windows for the admission of the light of society or of business, but let us close our lives as was the sanctuary of God closed, to all carnal or worldly life, and on bended knee let us petition the Father with word and with devotion that He will illuminate our pathways with His own light, light that will rightly open the way for service, for growth, for attainment in Christ our Lord.

PRAY FOR US

"Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you."—2 Thess. 3:1.

THE APOSTLE PAUL who was directly led by the spirit of the Father, nevertheless asked for the prayers of the brethren.

There is a wonderful result to always be expected from united prayer on a given thing. Where one and all unite in their petitions to the Father for given results they necessarily will turn to aid, in so far as individually possible, in the accomplishment of those results. A life of prayer is a dedicated life. He who properly asks the Father for given things will naturally and necessarily lend himself favorably unto the realization of the thing asked. So when many unite in petitioning God for given blessings, the many, individually and collectively, lend themselves, their influences, their abilities to the accomplishment of that same thing.

Let us not misunderstand. This is not to say that one answers his own prayer. In no sense or degree is such a thought encouraged. Rather, that one engaged earnestly in the prayer life must necessarily, if he is true to himself, consecrate himself in preparation for the realization of the end sought.

Believing that it is wholly proper to imitate the apostle Paul in this particular, the request is here made that you, brethren of the Church of God, readers of The Restitution Herald, will pray for those of us who by virtue of our positions must necessarily carry the great load of responsibility in furthering the Christian work of the Church of God. The effort to build, strengthen and enlarge the church throughout the country is a task of greatest proportions. No man nor group of men can in human strength accomplish such a labor. It requires divine assistance. You, brother, sister, are urged to "pray for us". We urge that you will consecrate your lives to your part in this great service. We urge that each will do his little portion, whatever it may be, and do it regularly, punctually, continuously.

Just to realize in the awakening moments of morning, in the hours of the day as they progress, that somewhere or another a brother or sister, yea, many, are at this moment praying for us is one of the mighty helpful things of the day.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

---

THE NOBLENES OF WORK

Sunday, October 13, Genesis 2:1-3

THE EARTH WAS MADE BY GOD. He worked. The seventh day God rested from the work which He had made or, as verse 3 reads, He "rested from all his work which God created and made". A few things should here be noticed:

First, God labored. He labored diligently, earnestly. If we accept this as it is given in Scripture, God himself ennobled work.

Second, The result of God's labor was an accomplishment, an achievement, a result. It is this result that is called "work" in the third verse of that chapter. It is from that accomplishment, from that result that the Father ceased. He rested. He rested not from fatigue, not from endeavor, but He completed a certain work and ceased.

The seventh day in this chapter was undoubtedly set aside as a day on which to commemorate the achievement of God, to commemorate the work of creation.

True, it is necessary for man to cease from his labors in order to rest from fatigue. It is said that one Dr. Stratton, points out that for six days out of seven the heart beats faster in the morning than it does in the evening, while on the seventh day it beats slower. The lesson then would be that the very make-up of man requires that he cease from his activities, that he rest from his fatiguing work every seventh day.

GOD ORDAINED WORK AND REST

Monday, October 14, John 5:10-18

Not only did God ordain work, He also ordained rest. In Ex. 20:9 God says, "Six days shalt thou labor". It is a command. It is imperative. "And do all thy work", that is, accomplish all thine achievements. These achievements are to be accomplished in the six days. Then the Father directed that the seventh day was the rest of the Lord thy God.

In instructing the Jews of his day, Jeremiah taught, 17:21, "Take heed unto yourselves and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem". In the days of the Savior, the Jews in giving interpretation to this particular text and others, added to and took from God's Word to please their own whims. Because that the Savior had healed one upon the sabbath day, they therefore accused Him falsely, according to their interpretation of this language of Jeremiah.

In no sense did the Savior ignore the sabbath day, rather He beautified it, He glorified it.

BUSYBODIES

Tuesday, October 15, 2 Thess. 3:6-15

The Greek for the English word is found in no other place in the Bible. Its meaning is, in The Critical Greek Lexicon: "to take more pains than enough about a thing; hence, to waste one's labor; to meddle or interfere with other folks' affairs." By this we notice that the people were working, were busybodies, but the fact is, that they were working about things that accomplished no work, that is, no evidence of results. They were dallying their time away in little trivial affairs of life and such people usually dally more or less of their time away meddling with the activities of others. Thus the word comes to be used in the meaning of "busybodies" in other people's affairs.

Here however the apostle Paul was endeavoring to emphasize the fact that each Christian individual should labor and labor diligently. How little we realize this fact! It is a question in the writer's mind if anyone is so rich, so well off, that he can afford, in Christ, to be idle. He who is so well to do as to feel that it is unimportant for him to labor and labor diligently, fervently and ambitiously, with

BE YE SEPARATE

By Samuel E. Haney

“And this is the record (‘TESTIMONY’, Emph. Diag.) that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God, hath not life.” 1 John 5:11, 12.

OTHER VERSIONS of verse twelve have the definite article “the” before “life”. It is said to be impossible to find two blades of puzzle grass marked alike, which is suggestive of some texts of Holy Writ, e. g., difficult to find two persons agreeing in their interpretations of them. But this cannot be said of the text of our article. There is no possibility of misconstruing the apostle’s meaning. Nothing could be plainer than the fact that God is here specifically ignoring hereditary life. Bluntly speaking, God differentiates by saying, Christians have life, and non-Christians have no life, reckoned thus in His sight. He then explains the source of this “life”, viz., His Son. The same thought is conveyed in John 5:24, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life”. The Lord emphasizes this state of “death”, or dead state of the unregenerate world (Matt. 8:22), “But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead”.

The word “dead” many places in the Bible conveys a relative rather than an absolute meaning. A person is alienated from the life of God through trespasses and sins; and yet, he is keenly alive to things and to his senses. Paul says (Eph. 2:1, R. V.), “And you did He make alive, when ye were dead through your trespasses and sins”. By having these thoughts in mind, when preaching the gospel to individuals and groups of people of the world, we shall be more patient and considerate, realizing we are talking to the “dead”, in so far as salvation through the blood of Christ is concerned. The most we could possibly hope to accomplish is to revivify the “dead” by bringing their stony, adamant hearts in contact with the solid Rock, Christ Jesus. A spark of “life” may thus be kindled. Only a spark! but much has been done spiritually and physically by a single spark. Martin Luther’s soul was made a human dynamo by a single verse of the Bible. And some of the worst wrecks of humanity have been dragged from the gutter and made useful servants in God’s vineyard by the words, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.” Like an electric spark that puts into action the heaviest motor cars, once a spark from heaven completes the circuit between God and man, the “dead” instantly comes to life; and the whole Word of God is made luminous,—as it is written, “Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.”

Something to do, you say? Yes, it is a fight from start to finish, every step being contested by Satan, “the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience”. But the more strenuous the battles, the more victorious we become: for all the power of heaven is behind us. Our conflicts are not one-twentieth so severe as were Paul’s; yet he could say, “We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose”. And as we become more and more alienated from the world and ingratiated into the Lord and His love by the power of His Spirit, which we are sure to do if faithful, we shall also automatically become less interested in things pertaining to this drunken, tottering world; and proportionally take more seriously and rest more securely in God’s promises. By such procedure the following promises become more indelibly impressed upon our hearts: “For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee . . . Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world—(‘consummation of the age’, Emp. Dia.)— . . . He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee”, — Isa. 41:13; Matt. 28:20; Heb. 13:5.

The foregoing is the cheerful part of our subject. We shall now consider the sad phase. What a dark picture it presents! “And he that hath not the son of God, hath not (the) life”—Dead! A concise summary (1 John 5:19, R. V.), “We know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in (‘under’, Emp. Dia.) the evil one”. The expression is often heard, when God’s name is blasphemed, or used frivolously, “It’s a wonder God doesn’t strike that man dead”. No wonder at all. The poor man is already “dead” in his Creator’s sight; and the proverbial saying applies to him, “He (inadvertently) is walking about to save funeral expenses”. James, in referring to this hereditary (Adamic) life says (4:14), “It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away”. Paul says, Eph. 2:12, we were all in such an attitude, when we were “without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel (spiritual Israel, in our case), and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope (of “the everlasting life”), and without God in the world”. Thus we see the unregenerate (“dead”) world today facing the wrath of God:—“A fearful thing to fall into the hands (power) of the living God”, without Christ, the Mediator, the only Way of life.

There is no set of brains that can so accurately describe the horrible catastrophe now hovering over the race as did the angel to John (vv. 2, 3, 15): a condition destined to do havoc with man’s moral, social and business status. Its formation is even now apparent to the “watchers”: “And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of

A STRING OF PEARLS

By Lyman Booth

THE APOSTLE PAUL, in closing his letter to the brethren at Thessalonica, wrote these words, "I charge you by the word of the Lord, that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren." The fifth chapter is the concentrated essence of his teaching.

In the beginning he spoke of that great day in terms which denoted the manner of Christ's coming. Then he exhorted them to walk in the light, as children of the day, and gave them those short isolated admonitions which have been compared to a string of pearls, each of which is more valuable than gold, obedience to which will make Christian life plain in relation to the world and especially in its innermost relation to God. To the one who would never render evil for evil, a perfect life would follow. Doing good to all men at all times would result in a beneficent life. Before assenting to an opinion, if one would test its character and then adopt and hold fast only that which is good, his would be a consistent and symmetrical life. That one who ministers comfort and support to the weak and needy would be gentle and gracious. Pure and beautiful would be the life of that one who abstains from all appearance of evil. But all these must spring from that holy communion with God in which prayer is unceasing, and thanksgiving unbroken, and in which the light of the Holy Spirit is never dimmed by earthly passions, nor its still voice drowned by the cares of this world. The whole being is brought into perfect harmony with the divine behests. For this the Christian should pray without ceasing.

Although the day of the Lord is yet future, it is the eventful day on which all thoughts will turn to Him, sooner or later, willingly or by constraint, in fear or in joy. It is the day which will silence the tongue of the skeptic, all human guesses, wild speculations and all errors; the day in which divine justice will succeed all that the sons of men now call justice; the day in which His presence will overshadow everything else, and all else will be as though it were not. His relation to the world will be acknowledged as an unmistakable reality. As surely as we behold the sun on a clear day, we shall hereafter behold the Judge upon His throne.

Men seem to be the most secure just before their own judgment and ruin. "When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them," is as true of men as it is of nations. Whenever the sentiment of security is likely to degenerate into contempt for God and His Word, He is likely to take the rod in His hand to teach men the severity of discipline, the lesson of submissiveness which they would not otherwise learn.

Perhaps the brightest of all this string of pearls is light. He is the Light and will certainly give His aid to that person who, for His sake, is striving to walk and to live in the light. To the open-hearted, He will bestow the light of all blessings.

There are two powers or forces—light and darkness—and they are contending within us and for us. That which is pictured in the light of day is truth, and darkness of night is error, falsehood. Light shows the path to our destiny, darkness obscures it and disaster is certain. Because of this we are admonished to watch, for temptations are lurking in ambush on every side, not alone in great emergencies, but in the little things of our daily affairs and mostly hidden under unsuspected appearances. They are found in the downy pillows of comfort on which we pillow our thoughtless heads; they are found in the thoughts when we mistake our goodness and greatness for the voice of wisdom; in merchandising where the offer is made with falsehood for gain. They are found in the so-called social world under the name of cordiality, but which bloom forth in horrifying criminality. Men crave and borrow the silver tones of friendship and praise our beauty or talents, which sounds so pleasing that we listen and are often led to chase the gaudy, butterfly wings of flattery, forgetting that "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." Prov. 16:18.

Herein are our tempters. They are out on parade and dressed in disguise, wearing false faces; they follow circuitous paths; they offer gifts with one hand and glittering crowns with the other. Though filled with deceit, they are transformed into angels of light. Then how necessary is it that we heed Paul's admonition to watch? We must watch ourselves more than the other fellow; watch our thoughts, our words and deeds, for in these lie all the mischief. The origin, power and results are there. They are Satan's citadel. No harm can come to us except through the gate of our yielding hearts, which we thoughtlessly leave open by our misguided will, through the lack of ever keeping a watchful sentry on duty over our behavior.

Paul recommends giving thanks in everything. This is the Christian's duty which he never forgot in his exhortations to the brethren. He did not consider it a mere optional exercise, but a binding obligation because it is God's will concerning those in Christ Jesus. To pray without ceasing and in everything give thanks is a duty enjoined upon each and all, for the one strengthens and promotes the other.

In order to give thanks in everything there must be much prayer, for fervent, sincere thankfulness leads to pure devotion and humble prayer. In these few words of the apostle a lesson is given us which even the most advanced Christian should constantly study. All of God's dealings with the Christian should lead him more deeply and devotedly into the school and practice of prayer, and he should ever remember that his redemption through Christ is attained only when in everything thanks and unstinted praise are rendered unto God. The giving of thanks is the infallible sign of a faith which is made alive by good works, and which assures its possessor of the infinite love and approbation of our heavenly Father.

This precept contains no command that is difficult of fulfillment, if we but realize that prayer, as the desire after God, rules the whole life of the faithful and not merely at times of intensity and extreme danger. The continual desire of the Christian is his silent voice, his unexpressed prayer, and the cry of the heart is its sweet fervency of love. Nothing can draw the Christian closer to God than prayer, which when neglected will permit one to drift away from Him until finally all interest is lost; all labor lags; all fervency cools; and love withers, which results in disaster to that party. The Holy Spirit is quenched, for as Paul says in Eph. 4:30, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." He grieves over our carelessness and over our weakness, because He sees the end to which our waywardness leads. Though He may grieve over our weakness and carelessness, it will give Him joy if we turn about and follow His guidance; and still greater joy if we permit Him to dwell, to abide with us, to make our bodies His temple, to suffer Him to finish the work which He began with us, and to make His seal, whereby we have been called, more visible as time moves onward. If this be a joy to Him, His joy will be an infinite blessing to us, and His finished work in us will be eternal life through Him who has called us to glory and virtue.

These short and familiar exhortations, not to grieve, and not to quench the Holy Spirit, were given originally to the Christians and we of today will do well to heed them. They teach us that this divine influence will not retain, by force the possession of our hearts, for if it finds no fellowship or holy action on our part it will withdraw its aid. It will refuse to abide with the slothful and stupid soul. It prefers the life of those who are active.

Next he advises the Thessalonians not to despise prophesyings, but to prove all things. The principle of proving all things is taught in 1 John 4:1, where we read, "Beloved, believe not every spirit (or prophet), but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world." That is to say, we are to compare the statements of those who claim to teach in the name of God with the statements of truth, and to accept nothing which is not in harmony with that standard. On the one hand we are not to think lightly of any portion of the Word by whomsoever spoken; on the other we are not to be led by every wind of doctrine, but we are to test or prove all things, rejecting the bad and holding to that which is good. Prophecyings were the utterances of the Spirit and were for the edification of the church. It seems as though the Thessalonians did not give due credit to prophecyings, preferring rather to speak with tongues, and Paul wrote to correct their misguided preference. He said to the Corinthians, "Covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues." He was anxious that the brethren at Thessalonica should not make the same mistake, because prophecyings tended to edification, exhortation and comfort. We should weigh carefully all evidence, and accept the truth and reject the false, this with the view to the settlement and strengthening of faith.

Remember that it is God who does the calling, for Jesus said, "No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." This is a drawing which if sought by us will never be withheld. Jesus said, "It is written in the prophets, And they shall all be taught of God. Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me." Then He directs attention to the fact that faith is God's work in them, for He said, "All that the Father giveth me shall come to me." John 6:67. This giving He describes as a drawing, and none are drawn except through love, for love can draw or it can send. None come to Him except drawn by the love of the Father. But how many are drawn by the operation of the Holy Spirit, and yet how many more refuse to come! The will is a powerful agent either for good or evil, and sometimes so stubborn that it may resist the Father's efforts to draw, the same as it resists Christ's invitation to "Come unto me." If a person will not come without being compelled, we can comprehend the difficulty when the question is asked, "Why cannot men be taught of God?" Why do they not receive instruction, and why do they refuse to obey His teaching? Certainly not for the want of mental capacity, nor for any inability which lies beyond their control. Christ answered the question thus, "Ye will not come to me that ye may have life."

Isaiah said, "All of thy children shall be taught of the Lord, and great shall be the peace of thy children." (54:13.) God's drawing then consists of teaching through His Word by His Son Jesus the Christ. It is not an uncertain excitement of feeling so often manifested in protracted meetings, but it is the divine influence penetrating the heart of the hearer which teaches, and which imparts peace to the mind and makes plain the two great opposites, sin and grace.

We repeat, it is God who calls. His Son lived an active and most useful life, and He requires that His followers be no less active. He gave himself a sacrifice, and He requires a sacrifice of self, which is the death of evil in us. He has risen and is alive forevermore, and requires that we be dead to sin and alive to Him. For every sacrifice we make for Him we will receive a blessing.

There are many phases of God's calling which are applied to His disciples, such as the following: "Called out of darkness into marvelous light"; "the called of Jesus Christ"; "a heavenly calling"; "called by God's grace, to holiness"; "called to peace"; "called to eternal life"; "called to be justified", and afterwards "to be glorified"; "called in one body"; "called unto liberty"; "called to inherit a blessing"; "called to walk worthy of the vocation". These are all made sure by the statement, "Faithful is he that calleth you."

In concluding the epistle Paul said, "I adjure you by the Lord, that this epistle be read unto all the brethren." It is well suited to the young Christian, and older ones would do well to practice its instructions, for it corrects many errors, warns against vain security, and contains wise counsels for all. It is worthy of our most careful consideration, and "to be read to all the brethren."

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

a view to the service of Christ is one who is not living up strictly to the Christian obligation.

"Six days shalt thou work" was just as much a command of God as the other command to rest upon the seventh day.

THAT WE MAY HAVE TO GIVE TO HIM THAT NEEDED

Wednesday, October 16, Eph. 4:25-32

He who pursues the study of the Scriptures will recognize that one of the principal things taught throughout is that the strong should be able to give unto the weak. God in all of His greatness and faith labored and wrought the work of creation and has been able to give blessings untold unto weak, finite man.

The apostle Paul emphasizes to the Christians of the present dispensation that they shall work, work diligently, work more than is necessary for themselves that they may have to give to those who are not blessed with health, with strength, with mental capacity or with power to conduct life's affairs so as to bring in the proper returns.

The ambition to have in order to be able to give to others brings forth one of the great truths of the Scriptures.

LET NO CORRUPT COMMUNICATION PROCEED OUT OF YOUR MOUTH

"Bad, rotten, putrid, (properly said of animal or vegetable substance)." The rotten spots in one apple not only rots the entire apple but it conveys its putridness to the adjoining apples. The putrid piece of flesh conveys its putridification to that in contact. The putrid, rotten words that proceed from one's mouth convey putrid thoughts unto the minds of other individuals, corrupting their lives.

Christians should guard against rotten, putrid words: all manner of blasphemous words, all manner of words that are used merely for the expression of one's own dissatisfaction, of one's own irritated feelings. Let us remember that words are the instruments by which thoughts are conveyed and by which lives are reared and directed forward from infancy to old age, even unto death itself.

TAKE HEED TO THE CHURCH OF GOD

Thursday, October 17, Acts 30:24-35

The apostle was giving his final charges to the elders of the church at Ephesus. Their one great bounden duty was that they being appointed by the Holy Ghost to act as shepherds, should take good and careful heed that they might be able to feed properly the church of God; feed that church with the great spiritual truths and with the great examples of Christian life and of Christian activity.

It is heartrending sometimes to notice those who stand in the capacity of elders or pastors whose duty it should be to feed the lives of others, to see them reading daily, day after day, week after week, nothing but the trash of fiction, novels and such things, spending their time in ways that do not at all advance them spiritually and that in no manner of means prepares them for the work of feeding the church of God.

Whatever work one engages in, he must seek to use his time so as to prepare himself for the best proper service in the selected labor. And he who labors in the ministry has no time to waste, but should use all time possible for personal preparation that his qualifications may be the best.

LABORERS INTO HIS HARVEST

Friday, October 18, Luke 10:1-11

Note well the Savior's illustrations made in this parable. As the harvest field turns to golden color, the husbandman must secure additional laborers to gather in the ripened grain.

For centuries the Father has been cultivating and growing the human race preparatory for the great ingathering in harmony with His eternal purposes. During this growth dispensation the disciples of Christ are urged that they shall one and all, either in person or in cooperation go out into all the world to gather in human lives for the great harvest of our Father. This is work. This is work of the highest type. It requires the greatest possible amount of self-control, of personal consecration.

Let us always remember that in every generation the real laborers are few. Let none be discouraged because of this fact. God foresaw. He knew of this condition and He in His own good power will bring in a proper harvest.

FILLED WITH THE SPIRIT OF GOD

Saturday, October 19, Exodus 31:1-11

Bezaleel was appointed of the Father to be the artificer in all the cunning work that was to enter into the tabernacle which He directed Moses to build. Notice that in verse three God, the Speaker, says, "I have filled him with the Spirit of God, in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in his manner of workmanship." There is not a thing that the man of God can set his hand in service to God that God is not willing to render unto him of God's own Spirit to enable him to be true, successful and victorious for God.

God has appointed the Christian to a task. God is not only willing but anxious that every working Christian will live so close to his Master that God can bestow sufficiently of His own Spirit to qualify him for the task however great.

But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.—Luke 10:42.

THE PALACE OF THE KING

Changed from the Scotch by Lyman Booth

It's a beautiful world that we have before our view,
And sunny is the land we are traveling through;
But in vain we look for something to which our hearts can cling,
For its beauty is as nothing to the Palace of the King.

We like gilded summer with its merry tread,
We sigh when winter lays its beauty with the dead;
Though beautiful the snowflakes, as down on winter's wing,
We know it can't compare with the Palace of the King.

Then I've been thinking, when a thing here is so bright,
The sun in grandeur, and the moon with quivering light;
The ocean in the summer, or the woodland in the spring,
Are as nothing when compared with the Palace of the King.

It's here we have our trials, it's here that He prepares
His chosen for the raiment which the ransomed wears;
It is here that He would hear us, amid tribulations sing, We'll trust our God who reigneth in the Palace of the King.

Though His palace is above, He'll bring it here below,
And we are His ambassadors wherever we may go;
We've a message to proclaim, loved ones at home to bring
To Him who ever liveth in the Palace of the King.

We as His courtiers hold not this honor in vain, Though we're the wandering ones for whom He died in pain;
And it's fullest love and service that the Christian should bring,
To the feet of Him who liveth in the Palace of the King.

The time for sowing seed is very nearly done,
The time for winning souls will all be over soon;
Then let us be active, if a faithful soul we'd bring,
To sit at royal feast in the Palace of the King.

Let's trust Him better than we've ever done before,
For He will feed us from His everlasting store;
Let us walk closer to Him, for time is on the wing,
And soon He'll come and take us to the Palace of the King.

Its jasper walls in richest beauty ever shine,
Its bowers are trellised with an ever green vine;
Pearly gates to that mansion a glorious radiance fling,
On the golden floor that shines in the Palace of the King.

No night shall enter there, and no desolation see,
And no tyrant hoofs shall trample in that city free;
There's an everlasting daylight, a never fading spring,
Where the Lamb is all the glory in the Palace of the King.

To see His glories, think not we've long to wait,
Let us ever be ready, for we know it's getting late;
Let our lamps be brightly burning, let's raise our voice and sing,
Soon we'll meet to part no more in the Palace of the King. —Author Unknown.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD

By Lydia Railsback

OUT ON THE HILLSIDE is a great flock of sheep, feeding in green pastures. They seem to have no fear of danger, for they are under the care of one who has their welfare at heart. They are guarded by a watchman through-the day and are carefully sheltered by the master at night.
The sheep know the call of their leader and will follow no other. They graze cheerfully through the day and rest peaceably at night; all this, because they have confidence in their keeper. If one gets lost or sick, it is sought out and brought back or given special care till restored to health. All this is done because of the love for the sheep by their keeper.

"All we like sheep have gone astray." We are being sought out one by one, and brought into the fold. Do we come quickly when we hear the call or do we hesitate? and say, "Sometime I expect to give myself to the Master, but not now." Sometime may be too late. Why not now?

The sheep that will not enter the fold cannot expect the protection and care that others have. Just so with those who do not give themselves to Christ and are not willing to be led and cared for by Him. David says, Psa. 34:7, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them."

"The sweet singer of old", in writing the twenty-third Psalm, expressed great confidence in not only what the Lord can do, but what He really does do. When one is cared for as David claims to be in this "Shepherd Psalm", there is but little left for one to do for self. What a comfort David must have felt to be able to rely on God's grace as he did!

What David felt may be realized by every true Christian. I cannot think that God is any less mindful of His children now than was He in the time of David. The love that He has shown for His children so outshines the love the shepherd has for the sheep that there is but faint comparison between them.

David also says, Psa. 37:23-25, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand. I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." What greater care and protection need a Christian ask than this? It seems to me that such care is surely feeding "in green pastures".

For those who can truly say, "The Lord is my shepherd", there is no doubt peace and comfort, for Jesus himself said, "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish." To rely on this promise is sufficient, for we know that, "Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."

THOUGHT-GEMS GLEANED FROM DAILY STUDY

By the Editor

THE EARTH WAS WITHOUT FORM AND VOID

THERE IS MUCH MEANING in this little verb "was". It is the same identical verb in the Hebrew as "became", in Gen. 2:7: "man became a living soul". It is the same as "came" in 4:3; and the same as "become" in 9:15, i. e., the waters shall no more come to be a flood. It is the same as "became" in Gen. 19:26: "and she became a pillar of salt". I. e., she was a pillar of salt after she came to be one. The same is true in Gen. 1:2, the earth came to be without form, and afterward it "was without form".

The fact is, that the heavens and the earth of v. 1 were in proper form. Something happened after v. 1 before v. 2, which caused the earth to be shapeless and empty.

WITHOUT FORM

The Hebrew word for "form" in Gen. 1:2 is the same Hebrew word as found in Isa. 45:18, "He created it not in vain". "Vain", in this text and "form", in Gen. 1:2, are from the Hebrew word tohu. Isa. 45:18 declares that God did not create the earth without form. I. e., He created it not tohu—formless. A proper understanding of the verb "was", in Gen. 1:2, will bring us to recognize the fact that the earth was, sometime after creation, made formless and made void, empty.

Many of our higher critics and skeptical scientists, because that geologists claim to find evidences that the age of the earth is millions of years instead of six thousand years, would discern that there is no reason to criticize the accuracy of the Bible in this respect if they would give just a little attention in an endeavor to understand the real thought of this text. So far as any language indicates to the contrary there may have been millions of years between the occurrences of the first and second verses of Genesis one.

GOD CREATED

The emphatic word in Gen. 1:1 is God: "God created the heaven and the earth". In the introduction of the Bible everything is ascribed to the living God. He is the Creator, the Maker, the Actor, the Mover, the Speaker. There is absolutely no room for evolution in this chapter. Forty-six times or more He is thus mentioned.

GOD RESTED FROM HIS WORK

Read Gen. 2:1-3 again. You will notice that God "rested from all his work" which God created and made. Whatever "work" here refers to, notice that it was created and made. He is not talking about the labor, the action. He is talking here about what had been accomplished, the work that had been wrought. Just as the sculptor looks upon the monument as being his finished work, so God looked upon all the creation that had resulted from the six days of labor and called that His work. He finished this monument of creation on the seventh day. He then rested. He honored the work.

True, He ceased from activity, from labor, in so far as labor or activity pertained to the labor of creation. But in a larger and bigger sense, He hallowed the seventh day as a memorial of the achievement of creation. He rested in that sense. The seventh day was a day of memorial in recognition of the achievements of God.

THEREFORE THE LORD THY GOD COMMANDED THEE

What was the reason? "Therefore". Namely, because that "the Lord thy God brought thee out of thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm".—Deut. 4:15. It was for that reason that "the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day". They kept the day in commemoration of the great achievement of deliverance from the land of Egypt. It was a wonderful accomplishment; it required the great leadership of God. In no sense was the human, individual Israelite, capable of such deliverance. It was the work of God's own hand. They were commanded to rest, to cease, in commemoration of this great accomplishment.

HE IS NOT HERE

This is the word of the angel upon the first day of the week at the mouth of the tomb wherein the body of Jesus had been laid. Something had happened. His resurrection had been accomplished. One who was born in the old Adamic nature had now been re-created into a new creature, a creature like unto God himself. He was the first of all thus to have been raised, thus to have been perfected.

In commemoration of this great event the Christians immediately began to assemble upon the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ. They kept the day as a memorial of the accomplishment of resurrection unto immortality, incorruptibility, unto a spiritual life.

Whether or not it be right that Christians should rest upon the first day of the week in commemoration of this great accomplishment and in anticipation of the future day when the dead in Christ shall be raised and fashioned like unto Christ's own glorious body, is not the point that we are trying to emphasize here. The point of emphasis is this: that the first day of the week is by common Christian practice observed in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ. As such it should be hallowed. He that keepeth the day keepeth it unto the Lord. The writer cannot discern how it is possible for any Christian person to presume to commemorate God's great work of the resurrection of Christ, or to commemorate the fact of Christ's new life in the observance of the day on which He was found to be alive, and then proceed to indifferently, thoughtlessly use the day for all manner of personal work or pleasure or satisfaction. He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord.

It is a big question if it be not true that the Christian world is largely responsible for the present habit of the people to use Sunday, the day set aside for the commemoration of the accomplished resurrection of Christ, as a day in which much of society and business life is engaged in injurious sports, labors and crime. It is impossible that he who professes to serve his Lord shall use the one day consecrated to the name of the Lord in the way that is customarily used, and at the same time maintain his proper spiritual relationship to Christ and to God.

devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing”. Then John “heard another voice from heaven (which was for our benefit), saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues”.

Brethren, let us scrupulously examine ourselves and learn whether or not our “garments” are cleansed from Babylon's filth by the “blood of the Lamb”; and whether we are obedient to the commandment, “Come out of her”!

"SINCE THE PEOPLE BEGAN TO BRING THE OFFERINGS INTO THE HOUSE OF THE LORD, WE HAVE HAD ENOUGH TO EAT, AND HAVE LEFT PLENTY."—2 CHRONICLES 31:10.

SELF-DENIAL MONTH PRESENTS to Illinois Bereans the opportunity for two-fold sacrifice. We often deny ourselves certain luxuries because we would rather spend the money they would cost for something else. But this month we not only deny ourselves the little extras we are used to, but we put aside the price each time and do not spend it upon ourselves, and at the end of the month we send it in to our treasurer to help those who have not even the bare necessities of life, to say nothing of its luxuries.

We are in the second week of October now. Size up yourself. What did you sacrifice last week? Have you lived up to your opportunity so far?

A COMMUNICATION OF INTEREST TO YOU

DEAR BEREANS, This year at the Oregon conference, each one in attendance was asked to select a choice text for the little souvenir booklet that has been published. This brought to my mind a plan for keeping some of these texts before me. Each week I'm writing one, with chapter and verse, on a small card, and placing it in the mirror of my dresser. I can't help but see it and read it each morning as I dress. I feel that these choice thoughts from God's Word are helping to start the day right. Don't you want to do it, too?

If you have no special text in mind, you can quickly copy, or clip and paste, the one that appears at the beginning of the Editorial Page of the Herald each week.

Evelyn H. Austin.

"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ".—Frances Rossiter, a Dixon, Ill., Berean.

NEW IDEAS AND HIGHER IDEALS

THERE IS A SAYING that there is nothing new under the sun. That may be true enough. We may never be able to think of anything that someone else has not thought of before.

In your work, whatever it may be, you may run across something new to you that gives you a new idea. You become all excited about having discovered something new, and you give it a trial. Hurrah, it works! Excitedly you tell your friend, or your boss, all about it, thinking you have made a great discovery that may usher in a new epoch in industry, or something of the kind. He may just laugh at it and ask you where you have been for the last several years, and probably tell you the same thing was discovered a long time ago and has been in use for the last fifteen or twenty years.

Don't let a thing like that discourage you. Press onward for new ideas as well as higher ideals. It takes constant work and study in your work to make a success of it.

Our lives are made up of new ideas and higher ideals. If we knew everything from the beginning of our lives, we would have little to live for. There may not be anything new under the sun, but we all learn new things every day.

Our Christian lives are the same way. To be true, upright Christians, we must study for new thoughts, new passages of Scripture and new ideals, then work them into our lives to make us better Christians. You may not find anything that has not been found by someone, sometime, but it is new to you and to thousands of other people. Take your new religious thoughts and your new Biblical discoveries to your friends, and the person that laughs at them, is a poor example for Christianity. Show your faith by your works, for we are told that faith without works is dead.

As prophecy is being fulfilled, and we are nearing the time for His appearing, and the world is growing more wicked and wiser, we more fully realize that now is the time to "Search the scriptures daily, for in them ye think ye have eternal life".

Our day may be of sunshine, it may be of sorrow,
Our life is what we make it, today and tomorrow;
But tomorrow is coming and with it our King,
Today is the day His praises to sing.

The western curtain is lowering, the day is almost done;
The guiding light of day is sinking with the sun.
As darkness creeps upon us, why should we wail and weep?
We know that Jesus cometh to redeem us from that sleep.

—Frances Byers, Indiana.

"But as for me I know that my redeemer liveth, and at last he will stand up upon the earth."—Job 19:25, American Standard Version.

USEFUL WORK A CHRISTIAN DUTY

“Work for the night is coming,
Work through the morning hours.

“Work for the night is coming
When man works no more.”

HOW OFTEN HAVE YOU SUNG that song or heard it sung? And do you know that it was fashioned from the words of Jesus? In John 9:4 Jesus says, “I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh when no man can work.”

Jesus worked. As a boy He worked helping Joseph in his carpenter shop. He must have studied, too, for at the age of twelve, He could ably discuss points of Scripture with the aged priests. When His mother found Him in the temple, He said to her, “Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?” Then He returned with Mary to Nazareth, and increased in wisdom and stature.

Learning and growing seemed to be His most important work at this time. And is it not the work of most of you at this time? Your work is going to school, and is it not as important a work to you as the work of older people is to them? You must have tools, books, paper, pencils, and so on, for your work. You must work during regular hours and according to schedule. You must be prompt. It is a real work and worthy of your best effort.

Perhaps you say, “I do not like to go to school.” I doubt if you truly mean that—not if you have the right spirit of trying and interest. You may prefer free hours and play, but regular hours and regular habits prepare you for the regularity of work in later life.

Learning to stick to your work is most important. You will find many tasks not entirely to your liking, but we must do them. We simply cannot shy around them and let someone else do the unpleasant things. We would never be successful if we did that. Step by step, day by day, overcoming obstacles is our work—our “increasing in wisdom”. In our last story, “Keeping Fit”, we talked about “increasing the stature”, which, you see, is part of our work, too.

However, school must not be your only work. You must help in the home duties. There are so many tasks you can assume that will lighten the work of mother and father. Look about you and see how many. And what a happy feeling you will have when you see how much you have helped!

Whatever you do, do with your might, honestly, and with true effort. Paul said to the Thessalonians in 1 Thess. 4:11, “And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your own hands, as we commanded you.” What was well for the Thessalonians is good for us, too.

Now Paul worked. He was a tentmaker, and when he lived in one place any length of time he supported himself by making tents. He said he did not want anyone else's gold or silver or apparel. He worked and helped those about him. He thus set an example for others. He recalled the words of Jesus, “It is more blessed to give than to receive.”

At another time Paul said he did not eat any man's bread for nothing. But there were some people who were not doing their duty. They were not working, but were busybodies. The command was given that if any would not work they should not eat. Nevertheless, all were exhorted, “that with quietness they work and eat their own bread.”

So, children, let us all do useful work. Set our daily schedule of home work and school work, and stick to the routine. Moreover, let us not neglect our Sunday work and God's work, which are daily and all one, if we but make them so.

REMEMBER

“Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.”

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Nehemiah 4:6; Haggai 2:4; John 5:17; 1 Cor. 4:12; Proverbs 31:13.
2. Make your daily schedule of work.

WHERE FIND?

“But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.”

NOTE BOOK

Reverse side: Copy:

“Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest, brave and true,
Moment by moment the long day through.”

Remember in Longfellow's poem, “The Village Blacksmith”, how the blacksmith “goes on Sunday to the church”, and each day he works at his useful trade.

“Each morning sees some task begin,
Each evening sees it close,
Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.”

USEFUL WORK A CHRISTIAN DUTY

Genesis 2:15; Exodus 20:9; Nehemiah 6:3; John 5:17;
9:4; Acts 20:33-35; 2 Thessalonians 3:6-12; Ephesians

Devotional Reading: Psalm 8:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT

For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat.—2 Thess. 3:10.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. A Gambling Spirit Hurtful to Business and Morals.

Basic truth. If any would not work, neither should he eat.

Outline. I. Essential That All Should Work. II. Criminal That One Should Undertake to Live on the Ungiven Work of Others, Even of God. III. The Spirit of Gambling is the T. N. T. That is Destructive of All True Success.

I. Essential That All Should Work. There is no known means of advancement without work. The student gains his education by mental work; the blacksmith develops his arm by physical work; the manufacturer perfects his business by work; the Christian develops spirituality by spiritual endeavor—everything requires work.

God worked. "On the seventh day God ended his work which he had made."—Gen. 2:2.

Christ worked. "I must work the works of him that sent me."—John 9:4.

God ordained that man should work. He "put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it."—Gen. 2:15.

The glory of work is realized only when man works that he may give of the result to others. God gave His creative work to man. Christ gave His redemptive work to man. Man loses the glory of work when he works for self-elation and not with a view to ability to give to others.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" is but another way of enjoining him who is able that he work. There is no other way for the Christian to give that is of so much value to another as it is to give the gospel of salvation in this day of world-wide transportation and communication. The Christian can give of the fruit of his labor in terms of the gospel sent upon the printed page or by word of mouth. If the spirit of giving could but overthrow the spirit of retaining and liberate the Christian from the cords of selfishness, how much more rapidly would the Christian grow in the spiritual life! The more one gives the more reason there is to work for increased ability to give.

II. Criminal That One Should Undertake to Live on the Ungiven Work of Others, Even of God. He who undertakes by the lottery or chance of gambling to obtain his living from the profits of others is a double criminal: he would, without working, obtain from another the result of his neighbor's work and he would rob God of that manliness and manhood that can be perfected only by personal and honest labor. To deprive one's fellow of this just earnings is bad enough, but to deprive God of a man developed by honest labor, for the future age is still worse. That sport or recreation that encourages the spirit of gambling is unchristian sport.

III. The Spirit of Gambling is a T. N. T. That is Destructive of All True Success. One has to but witness the tremendous multitudes that are drawn out of the channels of productive honest labor into the channels of destructive gambling to realize something of the truth of this statement. The markets of the crops of the hard working farmer are said to be practically controlled by market gamblers. Millions and millions of value are thus taken away from the earner, and given to him who refuses honest work. This is but one of hundreds of illustrations on this subject. The results are ruinous.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Purpose of Life. "Lifetime is working time," for such was the purpose of our creation. "There was not a man to till the ground," (Gen. 2:5), and it was to supply this need that the Lord God formed man and gave him life. Jesus recognized this when He said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." John 5:17. Work was the one great object of His life; He must perform God's work. "Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." John 4:34. And for this reason He "went about doing good, . . . for God was with him." Acts 10:38. In the service He so faithfully rendered to God and to men, He has left us an example, that we "should follow his steps." Worldly labor may go unappreciated and unrewarded, but such is not true concerning service to God. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." 1 Cor. 15:58.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Work.

In tropical countries where nature supplies exuberantly man's physical needs, man is most indolent and sensual. His condition is indicative of all mankind's condition had the necessity for work never been introduced by God's curse on the earth.

God foresaw this future for man when Adam and Eve, having only the soul life common to animals, began to live this instinct life in the midst of nature's free and unfailing supply to its demands. But God had a different future in store for man than a future in which mental powers would develop only to the extent necessary for appropriating to self's flesh needs the supplies that nature freely gave. So He cursed the ground for man's sake. He deprived man of the privilege of easily supplying self's flesh needs. He forced man's budding powers of thought away from indolent consideration of flesh self and its exaltation toward a consideration of nature and of ways to master her—that is know her—and, more slowly, toward a consideration of fellowman and of God. He began the development of man's mental powers to that level of thinking which furnishes the mental soil in which God's life power, love, can take root and grow.

Why turn longing eyes backward toward Edenic serenity and "perfection"? It was insipid and sensual. Why not look forward to man in the perfection of his powers, both physical and mental, through suffering and toil? Jesus constantly draws our eyes away from Adam toward Himself. Shall we not thank God for the ground, cursed, and enter into the blessings of work, both physical and mental? And let us keep in mind that these blessings can reach their fullness only as work is directed by Christ.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Honest Work Essential to Success.

"Nothing worth while is ever achieved without effort", is a quotation we hear so often that its truth is seldom realized. As young people, we often dream of attaining success in our chosen vocation in a few easy strides. We look at the achievements of some person whom we admire and we aspire to the same success, forgetting the long tedious path by which he rose. We depreciate the long hours of study, the close application to each day's tasks, no matter how insignificant and unimportant to our final goal they may seem to be. We overlook the discouragements and difficulties surmounted by sheer effort of mind and body.

In the Christian warfare, as in the worldly, success comes only by "patient continuance in well doing." Step by step, slowly and painstakingly, we reach the desired end, to be like Him who left us "an example that ye should follow his steps". In 2 Peter 1:5-7 we find the rounds in the ladder of Christian achievement, given us by our Savior.

Worldly success, no matter how great, is after all perishable and comes to naught. But success in the Christian life, abides forever, for the crown that is given to those who continue therein is eternal life. Let us be diligent in our chosen occupation in the world, but let us be even more diligent in our Christian life for its rewards are unending.

—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The contests which the Berean classes are conducting are bringing the desired results— increase in attendance. There were seventy-one present last Thursday evening, with twenty-three in the adult class.

Our third anniversary will be held Sunday, Oct. 7. The day's program has not been completed as yet, but we expect to put on the best program this year of any that has been given. A pot-luck dinner will be served at noon. A cordial invitation is extended to any that find it possible to attend.

The drain which we have worked and waited for, has been put in past the church. With a dry basement and assurance of it remaining in the same condition, we can put forth a greater program the coming year than it was possible to do during any time the past year and a half.

The Young People's League which meets every Sunday evening during the fall and winter months has started off in splendid form with a great deal of enthusiasm. They are going to purchase a piano for the basement and will have a room especially decorated for their meetings.

Sr. Woodward has been visiting friends at Dutton and Grand Rapids the past fortnight. We are thankful that the Father has given her a return of health and strength.

Elda, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Rhoades, underwent an operation at Blodgett hospital for the removal of her tonsils last Friday. She is recovering very nicely.

Godwin Heights Firemen attended last Sunday evening's service in a body in appreciation of what the church and pastor have done in the community in way of civic development. Our church has won the good will and confidence of the people of the neighborhood.

The Dorcas Society has been very active the last few weeks. They have directed several inspection tours of some of the leading stores, laundries and factories of Grand Rapids. They are real workers for the church.

Sr. Chas. Simpson has been under the doctor's care of late. She is somewhat improved at this writing but is far from being well. The prayers of the righteous availeth much.

Choir practice will be started again the coming week. Sr. Blakely will direct the rehearsals.

OUR ILLINOIS WORK

On Friday night of this week we are to meet with the Kewanee brethren, and on Saturday night and Sunday next will be our regular Ripley appointment. Please all remember that this trip comes on the second Sunday of each month this year instead of on the third as heretofore.

We closed a very pleasant series of meetings with the Salem church on Sept. twenty-ninth, more detailed report of which will be found elsewhere.

The work at Rockford is progressing nicely and we anticipate some interesting reports from there soon.

Dixon is doing splendid work under its new two-Sunday per month program. You should see our Wednesday night Berean classes.

We wish to express our hearty thanks to the Illinois brethren for their splendid co-operation and urge that we all continue faithful in service.

F. E. Siple.

DIXON RALLY DAY

To place it on our preaching Sunday, Dixon is having its Rally Day on October 20. The Sunday School convenes at 9:45, preaching at 11:00 a. m., and 7:30 p. m. We urge as many as can to help us make this a real Rally Day.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

In but few localities we have been permitted to visit have we met with a congregation so thoroughly in earnest in their efforts to advance the work of the Church of God in all its phases as we have encountered in the body at Los Angeles. Each individual seems to consider it his or her personal obligation to reach as many as possible with the gospel. Three neighborhood meetings are being held in widely separated parts of the city in addition to the regular services of the church. Under the able leadership of Bro. Murl Cripe, Superintendent, the Sunday School is flourishing. Senior and junior Berean societies meet each Wednesday night. Since our arrival it has been decided to hold junior Berean services each Wednesday night as in the past, but to alternate the senior Berean meetings with a service for prayer and for the study of prophecy. The latter is to be conducted with a view to spiritual uplift, rather than for the purpose of satisfying carnal curiosity concerning future events. The membership is considerably larger than we had supposed it to be. Bro. Lindsay laid a firm foundation of doctrinal truth upon which Bro. Johnson built a superstructure of practical, spiritual Christian teaching and Christian living, and it remains for the Church of God in Los Angeles to continue to raise its walls of service and of truth still higher. May God prosper us to that end.

Last Friday evening the pastor and his family were surprised in their home at 4561 Venice Blvd., by a gathering of practically the entire Church of God clan. Our limited space was filled to overflowing, but in spite of close quarters all enjoyed a most pleasant evening together. When the crowd had departed we found that a great many had forgotten to take away with them certain packages and containers of most attractive and inviting appearance which they had brought with them when they came. We appreciate very much the kind reception we have received in all quarters since our arrival here three weeks ago.

We have been greatly impressed with the long distances which many of the brethren travel to reach our various places of service. Some of them drive over thirty miles (sixty miles round trip) twice each week, and miles of the way through dense city traffic in order to be present at the meetings.

Bro. and Sr. Norman McLeod have moved to their new home in Holtville, Calif. They will both be greatly missed by the congregation as Bro. McLeod is an able teacher and Sr. McLeod, a musician of ability. May God bless them in their new location.

Sr. Bleasdale who has been in the mountains for the summer has returned to her home in Pasadena.

We have had the pleasure of meeting with many friends and brethren whom we had known in the past but have not seen for many years. Among them are Mr. F. V. Marsh, formerly superintendent of our Sunday School at Irving, Iowa; Mrs. Orvil Chown and her daughter, Mrs. Ella Marsh, both formerly of Iowa; Bro. and Sr. Nokes and Sr. Holloway of Sac City, Iowa; Bro. Hammond of Nebraska; Bro. Gray of Illinois, and many others. It certainly seems good to meet them all again.

We are praying that the work in Dixon may be made to prosper wondrously under the leadership of Bro. Siple.

G. Eldred Marsh.

Bro. and Sr. Stilson and daughter, Eva, spent from Thursday till Sunday afternoon in Oregon, visiting among the brethren and friends.

Bro. Paul Frebel of the Oregon, Ill., congregation who has undergone an operation at the Edward Hines, Jr., Hospital, Hines, Ill., is getting along as well as can be expected.

Bros. Paul and Arthur Johnson spent the week end with home folks at Sac City, Iowa. This was Paul's first visit home since returning from Los Angeles. Their aunt, Mrs. Alma C. Anderson returned with them and will visit with her sons in Chicago.

Bro. and Sr. Chas. Howe of Waterloo, Iowa, were welcome visitors at church services in Oregon, Ill., Sunday, Oct. 6. They were visiting their cousins, Bro. and Sr. Harold Starbuck of Rockford, Ill. Come again, Bro. and Sr. Howe.

DOINGS AT HEADQUARTERS

Sr. Betty Kilmer continues in a low condition at Golden Rule Home.

Golden Rule Home is full to overflowing. The six young people who have taken up our Bible Class work, added to those already in the Home have filled it to capacity. Of course, it is understood at all times that the young people, rooming and boarding there, are there only so long as the rooms are not occupied by old or alone ones. Whenever anyone arranges to enter the Home these young people understand that they will need to give way as may be necessary.

At this writing Mr. Moore who entered Golden Rule Greenhouse as grower is very much liked. Not only does he appear to be an efficient grower and manager but he is careful in his financial planning, looking to the careful expenditure of money, and that with a view to the largest possible return in revenue. He has found it necessary to purchase quite a supply of new cuttings and of baby plants in order to restock the greenhouse to a position where he can hope for the proper income next spring. The last week has been a very busy one at Golden Rule Greenhouse.

The 1929-30 Bible Training Class opened on Monday, September 30, with five students present. The following day the sixth one was on hand. A heavy course of study has been outlined for the year, and without exception the students are taking hold of the work with a vim.

At this writing we are breaking in several new helpers in our different departments. This necessarily retards the work in these several departments temporarily. We hope in the near future to be back again to normal working conditions.

We have already found it necessary to add some extra help to our force in the print shop, and if additional work concerning which we have been consulted, is given to the shop it will be necessary to increase the help for some little time at least.

Nearby members of the General Conference Board were called by Bro. Austin to consult on important business matters, Friday, October 4, Bro. C. E. Randall of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Bro. F. A. Stilson of Plymouth, Ind., among them.

The following is the personnel of the 1929-30 Bible Training Class: Clarence Lapp, Sunnyside, Wash., Cecil Smead, Los Angeles, Calif., John Denchfield, St. Cloud, Minn., Harvey and Dorothy Krogh, Blair, Nebr., and Richard LeCrone, Omaha, Nebr. These earnest young people are taking three hours a week in English and two in History under Sr. Mary Gesin and five hours a week, Bible, under Bro. F. L. Austin. All are also doing half-time work to pay their expenses. Their program of work, study and recreation is outlined to develop the talent that is in each and to reflect honor upon the Master. Pray for the teachers and members of the new Bible Training Class.

RALLY DAY

How many are pushing this Rally Day thought? How many are laying their plans and doing their advertising with a view to increasing their attendance and activities in Sunday School and in church? Do not get the thought that Rally Day is merely for one day. Its purpose is to increase on Sunday, October 13th, with a view to gaining an increase that will be permanent throughout the year.

Remember this, every wide-awake church of every denomination puts forth special effort at this season of the year to build up its work. In a large measure many of them succeed. Let us profit by their example, let us learn every possible Christian method for success, and let us give our energy to the work.

Sunday, October the thirteenth.

ZEAL AT ARKANSAS CITY

Since arriving home from the conference at Arkansas City, Kans., I have been thinking of the great zeal that the brethren there have for the Lord's work.

Since the conference last year they have lost two good workers by the death of Sr. Chaplin and Sr. Vickery; and although few in number, and some not well, they have pressed forward in the service of the Master, trusting that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord.

These brethren are to be commended in that they have brought up their children in the way that they should go and the result was that a number were baptized at the conference last year. These young people are a great help in the Bible study which they have each Sunday and by their aid they were able to have a good conference again this year with Bros. Siple and Magaw as speakers. All were so glad that they could bring their families with them.

Grandma Reed is a wonderful woman, and although up in years she was busy helping whenever she could.

Let us all try to be as earnest in the work as these dear brethren. The time is short. Let us remember that we have presented our bodies a living sacrifice to God and that we are His servants.

As in the days of Sodom and Gomorrah the wrath of God was not poured out until the just were taken out, so in this age it may be that the righteous few will be taken out before the terrible time of trouble comes upon an ungodly world.

"Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Luke 21:36.

Hanna Barber.

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

The Salem church near Marshall and Martinsville, Illinois, wishes to report a profitable series of meetings just held by Bro. F. E. Siple. The weather was splendid most of the time, and the audiences were good. Basket dinner was enjoyed on the last Sunday, although rain made the roads bad and lessened the attendance on that day.

Three were baptized as a result of the meeting. They are: Elma Jones; Woodrow Hendrix, and Elden Richey. We are thankful for the addition of these young people to our number.

We also wish to announce that we have one more monthly appointment for this fall. Meetings will be held on Saturday night and Sunday, October 26 and 27.

The Salem Church.

OBITUARIES

JOSEPH GARDINER

was born July 1, 1843, at Cartright, Canada. He came to Illinois in 1865. He was married to Ella L. Coffin in 1874. To them was born one son, Charles M. Gardiner, who died Aug. 29, 1913. He was from a family of twelve children and was the last to go into the "land of shadow." He died at Hope, New Mexico, Sept. 20, 1929, his twin brother, Ben, having died fourteen years previous.

In early youth he embraced the faith and hope of the gospel and became a strong defender of that faith. After they moved from their farm to Champaign, Ill., they lived a retired life on account of his poor health. They moved to Eldorado Springs, Mo., on that account and he was in much better health, but always feeble.

They moved to Hope, New Mexico, to be near her brother. Sr. Gardiner, who is now in her eighty-second year, brought him to Champaign to bury him beside their son, in Mt. Hope cemetery. He was brought to our home at 1009 S. Wright St., and funeral services were conducted by the writer and her husband, L. A. Boice, on Sept. 23, 1929. In his last illness, which lasted about two weeks, when asked by his wife if he was ready to meet his Lord, coming in the clouds of heaven, he said, "Yes, I am ready." What a tribute to any man to be able to say that. He was true and faithful to the end of life. He could say as Paul did, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only but to all them also that love his appearing."

Harriet E. Boice.

FALLEN ASLEEP

Wilburn Pippin was born in Oklahoma, Jan. 24, 1899, and died at his home in Brownfield, Texas, Sept. 22, 1929.

Bro. Wilburn leaves a father, one brother and eight sisters, besides many relatives and friends to mourn his absence. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We believe that when the Lord shall descend from heaven to awaken His sleeping saints, Bro. Wilburn shall be among the redeemed ones. And we pray that they may be an unbroken family in that great homecoming day.

Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, after which Bro. Wilburn was laid to rest in the Brownfield cemetery to await the Master's call.

Dearest brother thou hast left us

Here thy loss we deeply feel;

But 'tis death that hath bereft us,

God can all our sorrows heal.

Then again we hope to meet thee

When mortality has fled,

And at home with songs to greet thee

Where no farewell tears are shed.

E. O. Stewart.

BY THE HAND OF GOD THE BOOK OF LEVITICUS

By Lyman Booth

THIS BOOK IS CALLED LEVITICUS because it records the consecration of Aaron and his two sons, of the tribe of Levi and of their confirmation to be priests of the Lord which was to continue with their descendants during all time, or while the dispensation in which they lived endured; also, because directions for their official ministrations are given in full, in every minute particular. Many things are given in detail respecting the rest of the tribe, together with the services allotted to them. The book contains but very little history. One incident is mentioned in particular, namely, the horrible death of Nadab and Abihu, the two sons of Aaron, almost as soon as they were consecrated to the priesthood, for their manifest irreverence in their most sacred office. This book consists mostly of ritual laws and precepts, delivered to Moses from above the mercy seat, which happened during the first month after the tabernacle had been erected and dedicated.

In these ceremonies the gospel was typically preached to Israel in a very solemn manner, and the many repetitions which are given are suggestive to a serious mind that something vastly more important than the mere outward observance was encompassed in each of them. It serves to teach us the fact that all true service and worship must be based upon divine revelation, and must be guided by it, not left to caprice of man-made creeds. One of our Lord's apostles in speaking of them calls them "beggarly elements", and also "the law of carnal commandments", and another said they were "a yoke which neither they nor their fathers were able to bear". Neither remark was uttered in disrespect. The fault lay not therein but in the weakness of the people living under them. If we examine other New Testament scriptures, we will find that those ordinances which may have appeared so difficult of observance, so unreasonable and without apparent meaning, were shadows of good things to come. More than that, they were real prophecies, which were accomplished in the gospel. This, of itself, proves the verity of the book and that it was the dictations of a divine Mind, and there are other prophecies which confirm this conclusion.

We know not how long Israel observed the law concerning the sabbatical year, also the year of jubilee, but there is one thing of which we are quite certain, that is, that no imposter would have had the temerity to enact such statutes, much less to have thought of these words, "If ye shall say, What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase: then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years. And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in, ye shall eat of the old store." (25: 20-22.) This was a great promise, yet in all the history of Israel's loyalty we do not find that it ever failed of an exact accomplishment.

The twenty-sixth chapter contains a true picture of the present state of the Jewish people, which amidst all their woe and misery, are still preserved a peculiar and distinct people, verifying the promise made to them in the close of the chapter. It is very necessary in this skeptical age, to introduce and investigate each Book in the Bible, by an examination of those prophecies which are found therein, which have been literally fulfilled many centuries after the time they were spoken. Those which have been fulfilled tend to establish their authenticity, as well as their divine origin far more than any human evidence can do. It may also be observed that the sacred writers in other parts of the Scriptures, also our Lord as well as His apostles refer to this book, which gives substantial proof that it is the genuine work of Moses, and not only that, but that the statutes contained in it are the words of God. These are two points which many people who call themselves good Christians seem inclined, under pressure, to yield to skeptics and infidels.

There are many references to the ceremonies and rules of conduct as prescribed in this book to be found in the later writings of the Old Testament, especially by Ezekiel who was both prophet and priest. We find our Lord referring to the rites connected with the cleansing of the leper (Matt. 8:4; Mark 1:44), and also quoting the second great commandment (Lev. 19:18; Mark 12:31). The apostle Paul comments at length on the special ceremonies of the day of atonement and their fulfillment by Christ.

If we consider carefully some of the testimony of a few witnesses such as Luke in 2:22, 23; Rom. 10:4, 5; 2 Cor. 6:16 and Gal. 5:14 and study them as the oracles of God, we may be able to gain much useful instruction even in this remote day, though we are not under obligation to its special appointments.

THE EDITOR'S WEEKLY TEXT

"For thou, Lord, art good, and ready to forgive; and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee."—Psalm 86:5.

SELF-INSPECTION

"Be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—Matt. 24:44.

FROM TIME TO TIME different cities direct that their traffic officers shall halt the automobiles on the street and inspect them carefully, as to the way the brakes work and the safety of the car for driving. If the car passes satisfactory inspection a sticker is placed at one corner of the windshield which at a glance informs both officers and citizens; if it fails to pass inspection a colored sticker may be placed upon another designated corner of the windshield to notify the officers and the world that the car is unsafe to the public.

What a benefit it would be if we could turn the light of inspection upon our own lives, if we could discern those things in our lives that make us safe to run at large with others of our kind. Might it not be well also if it were possible that some sort of an indication could be placed upon some of us to indicate that we are unsafe to be at large in public places?

None should forget the great fact that in the near future He who is Judge of all the earth is coming and that He will accomplish just such a work as the above for every individual. Only those who are found proper to assist in making the world a safer place in which to live will be accorded position by Christ. The unsafe, the unfit, the contaminants of man must be placed upon the human junk heap prophetically portrayed.

THE NOBLE ORDER OF REPAIRERS

"Thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach, The restorer of paths to dwell in."

—Isaiah 58:12.

IT WAS GOD'S WORD. He instructed that repairers should be gathered in; that they should repair the house of God, the things of God in use by man. This army of re-pairers occupied an important place in the economy of God and in the worship of man.

Can we not take a valuable lesson for ourselves? Should not the buildings which we dedicate to the service and worship of God likewise be kept in cleanly, goodly repair? The weather-beaten paint, the crippled steps, the decaying door-sills, the dusty floor, the darkened lamp, the soiled pews, should not all these be kept in joyous, anxious repair that the house of God may indeed be a house of godly splendor, neatness, purity?

So, too, the individual life. We are the temple of God. We need, individually, constant repair. Wrong habits should be corrected, uncleanly living should be purged, impure thoughts and words should be corrected, unkindly criticisms should be erased: your life, my life, brother, sister, undoubtedly needs repairing that we may be fit for God's indwelling.

RALLY DAYS

THE HERALD IS ENCOURAGED to believe that the Rally Days which have been put forth in the past have been productive of much good to the churches throughout the year. It is hoped that the churches will be able to realize throughout the months to come much benefit from these efforts.

Let us study and learn the value of special church days.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON SERIES

THE SUBJECT OF THE Sunday School lesson for next Sunday is, "Useful Work a Christian Duty"; and for the Sunday following, Oct. 27, "The Christian View of Recreation". The entire series for this quarter has been designed with a view to studying definite social problems as they relate to Christianity. The Herald urges that the Sunday Schools of the Church of God will give these studies earnest and thorough consideration.

We should always hold before our minds the great truths of the Bible which are to be realized at the coming of Christ, but we should not fail to discern like great truths which pertain to daily problems. The child and the young person of today are meeting conditions so different than were the conditions of yesterday that it behooves the church to become informed from the Scriptures as to the attitude the individual should take regarding many daily questions. May it not be that there is much of present day Christian life and Christian blessing that is entitled to earnest Christian consideration?

We pray that all, both attendants at Sunday School and non-attendants will give prayerful attention to these Bible themes with a view of best understanding the Father's wishes for the individual and for the church.

PERSECUTIONS LIABLE TO THE CHRISTIAN

First Peter 4:15

ALLOTRIO-EPISKOPOS is a word which occurs only here, not being used even by any of the Greek classical writers. It is composed of two words, alotrios, "belonging to another", and episkopos, "an overseer" (bishop). According to this, it would mean one who takes supervision of affairs which pertain to others and in no wise to himself. Hence it is rendered in A. V., "a busybody (R. V., meddler) in other men's matters." But this is evidently weak, and it is in fact far short of the facts referred to in the context. The Christians were being exhorted in this epistle with regard to a great persecution, which was even then commencing, and in which they were charged with being "murderers", "thieves", "evil-doers", and "alotrio-episkopoi", whatever that may mean. Now it is clear that something more is meant here than a mere "busybody", or "meddler": these are not classed among criminals. The fact is, that these persecutions commenced with popular accusations. The "Christians" were regarded with general hatred, and the common charges brought against them were murders, incendiarism, etc., but chief of all they were charged with hatred of the world and hostility to society. The technical term for this latter crime was odium humani generis, and it meant that the Christians were bent on relaxing the bonds which held society together, introducing divisions into families, setting children against parents, parents against children, and accomplishing all this by unlawful and magical arts. This charge was absolutely necessary to procure their death; for in the Roman Empire the right of inflicting capital punishment belonged only to a few high officials, and death was the punishment of magicians. The Roman officials scorned a merely religious charge (see Acts 18:15-17; 19:37; etc.).

It seems clear, therefore, that the word was coined in order to express in Greek the Roman indictment of odium humani generis. So elastic an accusation could be easily proved in times of popular excitement. Christians were charged with breaking up the peace of family life, raising discontent and disobedience amongst slaves. True, they were hostile to vices of Roman society, and doubtless denounced them. Society, then, must destroy these Christians in self-defence! This is the teaching involved in this word. It is no mere advice to disregard the taunts and jeers of others. It was a solemn exhortation, that when persecution came they were to suffer, not as murderers or thieves, or as being like our agitators—as the enemies of society—but as Christians. "Be ready always to give an answer" (1 Peter 3:15). "If ye suffer for righteousness' sake happy are ye, and be not afraid of their terror" (see 3:14). Do not suffer under those terrible accusations and false charges, but "suffer as a Christian". Be not ashamed of this, but glorify God on this behalf, (see 4:12-16).

Many Christians are today ignorant, and therefore unmindful, of what is meant by this solemn exhortation. As the leaders of the people they are taking the place of those whom we speak of as "agitators"; and, by preaching what is openly called "a social gospel" and "the gospel of the people", are helping forward the enemies of society, and are themselves disturbers of the peace, under the guise of what they call "Christian socialism". Such teachers would find it difficult to obey the exhortation to make a good defence against such charges, for in their case the accusation would be true and not false.—Adapted from Number in Scripture, by E. W. Bullinger.

WHAT IS ABIDING IN CHRIST?

ABIDING IN CHRIST should be a very practical doctrine. When a man abides in a certain place we know where to find him. The abider in Christ is like that. He is where Christ is on the issues of the day. Quiet, firm, serene, he takes his stand on the issue of Modernism, on the issue of Worldliness, and on the issue of the authority of the Word. He sets an example of regularity and faithfulness in his Christian duties. He suffers with the truth, he loves the appearing of our Lord. He is loyal to the Word and to those who teach it. There are many souls like that. Their lives may not be perfect, but their address is permanent.

VOICES

A voice of noise from the city,
From the haunts of sin and pain;
The groan of a mighty multitude.

Oh! shall they plead in vain?

A voice of the lonely dying,
Not knowing where they go,

Oh! silently appealing

Is the cry of that mighty throng,
That voice of noise from the city,

"How long, O Lord, how long?"

A voice from the midst of the temple,

A voice of doubt and fear,—

"How long shall evil triumph?"

O God the Father, hear."

A voice of wide-spread error,

A voice of those that say,

"There should be wider entrance

To this too narrow way."

A voice of the plenteous harvest

That few men go to reap,

Though the enemy's softly sowing,

Whilst the weary watchers sleep.

So through the lonely waiting

Of these years of care and wrong,

That ceaseless voice from the temple,

"How long, O Lord, how long?"

A voice of the Lord that speaketh

To those who watch and wait;

Toil on a little longer.

His step is at the gate.

See how the shadows lengthen

Athwart the evening sky;

Lift up your heads, O children!

Your redemption draweth nigh;

And through the unknown distance,

In an echo deep and strong,

Is the voice of the Lord proclaiming,

"I will not tarry long." —Unknown.

REBUILDING JERUSALEM

By Emma C. Railsback

THE SUGGESTION made in our splendid Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterly in the lessons for the past quarter concerning the return from captivity, that the building of the wall around Jerusalem must have preceded the building of the temple seems to me to be contradicted by a number of Scripture texts.

After King Cyrus had made his proclamation that God had charged him to build a house at Jerusalem and he had urged Israel to take hold of this work, Zerubbabel led the first company of fifty thousand of Israel back to Jerusalem. All of God's faithful children up to this time, when sojourning in any country, new or old to them, proceeded first to build an altar to the God of Israel; and Joshua and Zerubbabel were no exception to this rule. After they had been established "in their cities" (Ezra 3:1-8), they builded the altar of God and began celebrating the set feasts of the Lord, which, no doubt, occupied quite some time. The record shows that it was from the seventh month of the first year to the second month of the second year before the foundations of the temple were laid, but during this six months, the preparations for the building of the temple were being carried on. Ezra 3:7.

After their season of rejoicing because the foundations of the temple had been laid, the people of the land weakened the hands of Judah and their faith began to fail. They ceased to build until God sent the prophets, Haggai and Zechariah, to encourage them to go on with this great work, which was not completed until about twenty-one years after the foundations had been laid.

It seems that Cyrus' proclamation had not contained instructions for the rebuilding of the wall around the city and it remained for Nehemiah to take up this part of the work, even in more "troubulous times" than had prevailed during the building of the temple. The builders were compelled to carry weapons of defense and their enemies resorted to many schemes to put a stop to the work, but they continued until the walls had been finished except the setting up of the doors, when their enemies in a final effort to defeat the completion of the work, bribed a priest to advise Nehemiah to gather the people together within the temple and to shut the doors of the temple, that Nehemiah might not be slain, which he refused to do as being a sinful thing.

This one verse (Neh. 6:10) seems ample proof that the wall had not been built before the temple. And concerning the statement that the city was large and great, but the people were few therein (Neh. 7:4), the statements found in Ezra 3:1 and Neh. 7:73, saying that the children of Israel "dwelt in their cities", would be sufficient reason why but few dwelt in Jerusalem prior to the building of the wall. However, they gathered themselves as one man "from their cities" after the completion of the wall, to hear Ezra the priest read and expound God's law to them. Neh. 8:1. Likewise had they gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem "from their cities" when the first altar was built. Ezra 3:1. So it seems that the order of rebuilding was from the heart outward, first the altar, then the temple, then the wall.

A correct understanding of this order would seem to be important if for no other reason than to be able to take God's Word in the order given as nearly as possible in these days when there is so much teaching which tends to discredit it and which breeds doubt and unbelief in the minds of the spiritually weak and feeble.

FUTURE INDIGNATION

PART 3

By C. W. Dean

ABOUT THE MIDDLE of the "one seven" (seventieth seven) wherein the covenant is empowered with many of Daniel's people, Dan. 9:27, corresponding to the time when the fifth seal is broken in the unveiling, Rev. 6:9, Satan and his host of wicked forces among the celestials will be ejected out of their place in heaven and cast down to the earth.

A battle occurs in heaven, Michael and his messengers battle with the dragon, and the dragon battles and its messengers, and they are not strong enough for him, and neither is their place still found in heaven. And the great dragon is cast down, who is the ancient serpent called the Slanderer and Satan, who is deceiving the whole inhabited earth, and its messengers are cast with it. I heard a loud voice in heaven, saying, Now come the salvation and the power and the kingdom of our God, and the authority of His Christ, seeing that the accuser of our brethren was cast down, who was accusing them before our God day and night, and they conquer him through the blood of the Lamb, and because of the word of the testimony, and they love not their souls unto death. Therefore make merry, O heavens and those tabernacling therein (in them). Woe to the land and the sea, seeing that the slanderer descended to you having great fury, being aware that the season he has is brief. Rev. 12:7-12.

Comparing Dan. 7:25; 9:27; Rev. 12:6 and 13:2-5, reveals the fact that the brief season which is allotted to Satan after his expulsion from heaven is the last half of the one seven of Daniel's prophecy, a period of three and a half years, or forty-two months. Satan cast down in his great fury contrives various means for destroying the holy people, Israel. Standing on the sands of the sea, which figures peoples and throngs and nations and languages, Rev. 17:15, he brings up out of the sea a seven-headed, ten-horned wild beast. This is the realization of the dream which men are dreaming today, which has already taken form in the League of Nations and the World Court. It will be a religious-political federation of nations, a world-dominion headed up by the desolator, the king of strong presence, the man of lawlessness.

The dragon gives it its power and its throne and great authority, and one of its heads was as it had been slain to death. Its death blow is cured, and the whole earth marvels after the wild beast, and they worship the dragon, seeing that it gives authority to the wild beast. They worship the wild beast, saying, "Who is like the wild beast, and who is able to battle it." To it was given authority to do what it wills forty-two months, and it opens its mouth in blasphemies toward God to blaspheme His name and His tabernacle, and those tabernacling in heaven. It was given to do battle with the saints and to conquer them, and authority was given it over every tribe and people and language and nation, and all who are dwelling on the earth will be worshipping it, every one whose name is not written in the scroll of life of the Lamb which has been slain from the disruption of the world. Rev. 13:1-8.

Human imagination is incapable of realizing the awfulness of this great affliction that is surely coming upon the world under the tyrannical reign of the desolator. It is a worse time than the world has ever known, or ever will know, and except those days are discounted no flesh would be saved, yet because of those who are chosen, those days will be curtailed. Matt. 24:22; Mark 13:19-20.

Harmageddon is the Hebrew name for the place where the kings of the earth and their armies of the nations will mobilize for the battle of the great day of God Almighty. The term Harmageddon occurs but once in the Scriptures, Rev. 16:16. The text with its immediate context reads, And the sixth (messenger) pours out his bowl on the great river Euphrates, and its water is dried up in order that the road of the kings of the Orient may be made ready. And I perceived out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the wild beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet, three unclean spirits, as if frogs (for they are the spirits of demons doing signs) which are going out to the kings of the whole inhabited earth to be mobilizing them to battle of the great day of God Almighty, and they mobilized them at a place called, in Hebrew, Har-Mageddon. Rev. 16:12-16.

This great valley is called the great plain in the Scriptures, also the field of Esdraelon, the field of Megiddo, the Galilean plain, and is a vast meadow covered with the richest verdure throughout its breadth and length. It is at the head of a great trough which runs down through a great valley, the valley of Jehoshaphat to Bozrah, a distance of about 184 miles. This is the real field of battle. Harmageddon has been the chosen encampment in contest from the days of Sargon II., king of Assyria (722 B. C.), to the disastrous march of Napoleon Bonaparte in Syria (1799). It was here that Barak defeated the Canaanites. Judges 5:19. Gideon defeated the Midianites. In fact, the Gentile nations, Jews, Christian crusaders, anti-christian Frenchmen, Egyptians, Persians, Turks, and Arabs, all have pitched their tents on the plain of Esdraelon, or the field of Megiddo, called in Hebrew tongue, Har-Mageddon.

The Scriptures do not reveal the date of the battle in regard to the year, month or day; but they do specify the time in relation to other events. We find by careful study of the accounts recorded in Scripture, that the battle occurs just before the thousand years' reign at the unveiling of the Lord Jesus Christ from heaven. Proof of this is the fact that the three powers instrumental in mobilizing the kings of the earth and their armies for the battle—the dragon, the wild beast, and the false prophet—are all captured as a result of the battle, following which comes the millennial reign of Christ and His saints.

Before presenting scriptural proof for this, let us consider what is revealed concerning the powers who instigate the mobilization for the battle. We have already considered the ancient serpent, the great red dragon, who is called slanderer and Satan. He, of course, is the chief authority of the air, the spirit now operating in the sons of stubbornness, Eph. 2:2, and the suzerain of the kingdoms of the earth. Luke 4:5-6; Rev. 13:1-8. ## I WILL NEVER LEAVE THEE

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

BELOVED, THINK IT NOT STRANGE concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Peter 4:12, 13. "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 1:7.

"We glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope: and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Rom. 5:3-5. "In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world. . . . Ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice; and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy." John 16:33, 20.

"Who (God) comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." 2 Cor. 1:4. Whatever trials may come to us we have the blessed assurance that "all things work together for good to them that love God." Rom. 8:28. "Cast all your care upon him (God), for he careth for you."

"Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you and cast your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake. Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for behold, your reward is great in heaven." "Let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. 12:1, 2, 5.

We must not be forgetful of the exhortation that "speaketh unto us as unto children, . . . that whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth"; knowing that, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Psa. 46:1. We know that "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." Psa. 103:13, 14. So we rest in perfect confidence that our Lord will not give us one trial too many, but with each trial we have, He has provided a way of escape if we only trust Him to carry us through.

"There's never a night but is followed by day,
And the darkest to dawn must give place.
There's never a sorrow that comes our way,
But is sent with a message of grace.

Oh soul, is thy burden too heavy to bear,
Does the load seem too weighty for one?
There's a Helper at hand, all thy sorrows to share,
'Tis thy Father's own well-beloved Son,

Then cast every burden on Jesus thy Lord,
And thy troubles will quickly depart;
Make every sweet promise in His precious Word
An entrance to His loving heart."

EXTRACTS FROM SUNDAY SERMONS

"SCIENCE TODAY LESSENS FAITH"

By M. A. Woodward

AN INDUSTRIAL CIVILIZATION need not exclude God," said Rev. A. P. Record in answering the question, "Can we find God?" "A scientific age tends to distrust anything that is incapable of scientific demonstration. A machine civilization is prone to explain the universe in mechanical terms; and yet such an explanation fails to account for the highest product of the universe—the mind which interprets and explains. If science proves anything, it is that effect cannot be greater than its cause. The Power that planted in our common human nature the latent qualities, which are being wrought and refined amid the complexities of our modern civilization, must be of the like quality himself. Thus God becomes the major premise of every syllogism of religious life."

REBEL SAINTS

Dr. Edward Dewitt Jones pays a beautiful tribute to Wm. Penn in the following words: "He was born to affluence but cast his fortunes with the heroic group of Quakers which set out to worship God according to its conscience and the inner life, submitting to arrest and imprisonment with complacency, nothing daunting him. He was a pioneer of freedom, an apostle of tolerance, a follower of Jesus who spurned physical weapons and won victory with the sword of the spirit".

We might add to this thought that other "rebel saints" as Paul and Peter, ardently rebelled against false doctrines then taught, and boldly proclaimed their faith in the sound doctrines of Jesus the Christ. With many others who bravely walked in their footsteps though they knew they would be stained with blood, knew that persecution awaited them, they were willing to suffer for the faith of Jesus. They found God very precious to them, and willingly suffered all things that they might receive the crown of rejoicing when their Lifegiver should return as He had promised them He would. They never doubted that promise, for Jesus made it by God's command in answer to His prayers.

To my mind there is only one way to find God, and that is the way the apostles found Him, through Christ. We must find Him in all His wonderful power to find God a real Helper to us, for it is through Him Jesus works. Listen to Him as He pleads all night for strength to carry on His work with the vast multitudes that throng Him.

Did His prayers avail anything? Let us see: He is standing at the grave of Lazarus, His beloved friend and follower. He looks up in prayer, saying, "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me, and I know that thou hearest me always . . . . And when he cried with a loud voice Lazarus came forth, bound hand and foot." God had triumphed through Christ, and we hear Jesus saying, "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer believing, ye shall receive." What a promise! God seems so far away at times until we reach Him through Christ. Then how near and dear He seems.

OUR INDIVIDUALITIES

WHEN JESUS PRAYED that His disciples might be one, He did not expect that they would be one in everything in their make-up, or they may as well have been so many automatons. There are evidences aplenty that Jesus chose His apostles with this end in view—their differing make-ups or personalities, and the value they would prove to be in His work, especially in drawing useful lessons from their experiences and pointing them out for the benefit of us all. He knew they would remain the same persons, but reinforced by divine power, when the Holy Ghost should descend at Pentecost and fill them. "He knew all men, and needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man". John 2:24-25. Many a civil government head, or army general would be well equipped if he had this power in the selection of his associates.

There are many useful lessons that can be drawn from the lives of the apostles, but mention of two of them, Peter and John, will suffice for the present. Whatever frailties or weaknesses may be charged to the former there was a generous streak of courage in his character that seldom failed him. He thought it was going to be sufficient to follow his Master to His death. "I will lay down my life for thy sake," said he (John 13:37). But here was an occasion when the Master again "knew what was in man". He foresaw the time of his arrest, trial and crucifixion and how Peter would feel through it all, and, while not lacking in courage in the ordinary sense of the word, he would be all discouraged and ready to give up, evidently thinking Christ's mission to the world was about to become a failure. He was all down-hearted and denied his Lord when asked by the damsel if he were not a follower of Jesus. "And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth. And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man". Matt. 26:71, 72. Do you suppose Peter's courage failed him toward these two girls? I don't think so. Down-hearted, he was aggravated beyond endurance by their taunting questions, as he was also later by those that stood by who came to Peter and said, "Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech bewrayeth thee. Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man", thus making the triple denial foretold by Jesus. "And immediately the cock crew." If all the roosters should crow nowadays when the Peters and others deny their Lord, what a din there would be! This Peter had not been accustomed to handling serious questions in diplomatic language, as men do now in politics, so when accused and har- passed enough he blurted out his answer roughly.

But let us follow Peter further and see what becomes of him. If he had been like some men today that would have been the last of him; but not so with Peter. There was so much heart-work in it with him, and Jesus of Nazareth had got such a grasp on his affections that it was hard to get away. He and John were out for a Sunday morning walk, perhaps to talk things over. Maybe John was having a heart-to-heart talk with him about his backslidings. Then lo! while it was yet dark, Mary Magdalene came running and said unto them, "They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him." If Peter had been like some he would likely have said, "That's nothing to me," but he didn't say any such thing. "Peter therefore went forth and that other disciple and came to the sepulchre." So they ran both together and John outran Peter and came first to the sepulchre and stooping down and looking in saw the linen clothes lying; "yet went he not in", lacking courage we infer. "Then cometh Simon Peter following him and went into the sepulchre and seeth the linen clothes lie, and the napkin that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself. Then went in also the other disciple which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed."

This is one case where the superior courage, or bravery of Peter is shown, which we cite for an illustration, though perhaps a simple one. But if the reader will turn to Acts, second chapter, "When the day of Pentecost was fully come" and the disciples "were all with one accord in one place" and the power "came from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind and filled all the house where they were sitting, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance," it put the finishing touch on Peter's pluck with wonderful results. Read verses 14 to 41 for one of the best sermons ever preached, resulting in the conversion that day of about three thousand souls!

The further history of this apostle is worth examining but we turn to the apostle John who, with James his brother, also an apostle, were sons of Zebedee, fishermen on the lake of Galilee. John's strong point was the affections. He has more to say about love in his gospel and three brief epistles than all the other apostles; but it is not of the sentimental sort that passes for piety in some circles, nor was he weak-kneed. He and his brothers got the name of "Boanerges" which is, "The sons of thunder" from the One who chose them and sent them forth and gave them power to heal sicknesses and cast out devils. Surely, they were no weaklings!

Thus we see the Master was able to use two vastly different men for the same work of proclaiming the gospel. Each had his special ability and his special work. It is just the same today. The Lord has a work for each one of us to do—a work that no one else can do quite so well as we. Instead of our personalities being obscured or made uniform by our religion, if we are fully surrendered to Christ He will enrich, develop and perfect our lives into the glorious likeness of the sons of God.—Selected from "Our Hope",

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

NOT ALL THOSE SERVE GOD

Sunday, October 20—1 Cor. 10:24-33

WHETHER THEREFORE YE EAT, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." V. 31. Christianity draws one so completely out of self and so fully into God and His Son Jesus Christ that we are frequently exhorted that life's entire activity should be so controlled as to bring service unto the Creator and Redeemer. There is no moment of the day, no moment of the Christian life that can properly be devoted to activity which is other than unto the Father.

All labor, all recreation and all rest should be so controlled and regulated as to edify the individual and make him strong and more effective in his Christian activity. If this precept were kept habitually in mind, it would stand out in far greater strength of witness unto the Lord and Master. Nor would such life and activity render tame and common the standing of the individual. He who serves God best, enjoys life most, reaps the most of contentment, the most of deep, true blessing and can but hear from the Father words like unto the Savior's statement, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

ASSOCIATIONS

Monday, October 21—Mark 2:15-22

"How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?" V. 16. Our Savior was sent into the world not for the purpose of holding himself aloof from sinners but for the purpose of raising them up unto himself. Eating and drinking are necessary activities of life. These of themselves should be so regulated as to upbuild individual lives. Eating and drinking are not for the purpose of pleasing one's sense of taste. Pleasing of the taste to the injury of the body is wrong and unchristian at any time and in any particular. It was not the eating and drinking for which Christ was condemned. It was the fact that He ate and drank with such associates as their talmudic teachings forbade.

Jesus, the great Teacher, taught them the true lesson. Sitting with others did not contaminate Him. He sat with them not to absorb any ungodly trait of their lives, but to inject into their lives some of the godliness of His own. It is not the mere matter of association that is unchristian. It is the fact that in such associations one craves to take in, like a sponge, something of the unchristian life that is attractive to the old carnal nature, native in the Christian. It is this absorption of the carnal from such associates that is injurious to the Christian's development. He who can associate with nonchristians in their sinful conduct and in so doing succeed in injecting into their lives the things that are Christ-like, the things of God, is a real physician administering help to the needy; but he who is unable to associate with nonchristians without yielding to their drunken, carnal doings is injurious both to them and to himself and is dishonoring his Master and his God.

Not mere association, but the results of association should be the Christian concern.

THE SABBATH

Tuesday, October 22—Mark 2:22-28

"The sabbath was made for man and not man for the sabbath."

"God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it; because in it he had rested from all his work, which God had made." Gen. 2:3. Note carefully that in this text the word, "work", is a noun and not a verb. God looked back upon the results of the labors of six days and beheld what He had accomplished, beheld the work as it stood out before Him. The seventh day was set aside as a memorial, as a monument in recognition of the accomplished creation that everywhere met His face. God was not weary; He was not tired; He did not rest as a matter of restoring His strength. But He rested in recognition, in honor of the achievements of the week.

Jehovah brought Israel out of Egypt through a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm; therefore God commanded that they keep the sabbath day. Deut. 5:15. Again the sabbath day was commanded as a memorial. Truly, man needed rest to recuperate his strength, but the purpose of God in commanding him to observe the sabbath was that he should commemorate the achievement of God in deliverance from Egyptian bondage. Read Deut. 4:34-37. Again their rest day was a monument, a memorial unto God's achievement. Of this day the Savior spoke in today's Scripture reading, that the sabbath was made for man. Not only does man rest, recuperate, gain strength on that day, but man is enlarged in heart, is enriched in life in the fact that he ceases from his own efforts bringing him to rely upon God.

The Christian observes Sunday, the first day of the week, because of the practice established by the apostles. This day was observed by them not by commandment but to memorialize the great work of God in the resurrection of His Son. The resurrection of Christ unto new life, unto immortality, unto incorruptibility was the crowning work of God. It is in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ, the second Adam, that the Christian rests upon the first day of the week.

As a Christian service, it is difficult to imagine how any Christian is memorializing the resurrected Savior unless he ceases from his labor, from his recreation, from his effort to please self, and devotes the day unto the sacred memory of God's accomplishment and of Jesus who was thus exalted.

CHRISTIANITY AT REST

Wednesday, October 23—Mark 6:30-34

"Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest awhile." V. 31. The Savior tired much in His strenuous labors. Oft He withdrew himself that He might have opportunity of rest and recuperation. He likewise taught His followers that they too needed rest.

It is as much a Christian duty to rest the weary body and the fatigued frame as it is to perform labors to the honor of God. Proper rest is for no other purpose than for the upbuilding and the strengthening of individual ability for service. The poor, mortal, finite life can but weary unto exhaustion unless it is properly rested.

The rest mentioned in today's reading is different than the rest that is referred to as "sabbath rest". While that is to memorialize work already accomplished, this is to recuperate the worn-out, jaded life.

JESUS GRACES THE WEDDING FEAST

Thursday, October 24—John 2:1-11

We have Christians today who in their great anxiety to render untarnished service to Christ, question the righteousness of associating in gayety and pleasure. Our Savior set an example which probably is proper for all His followers to heed. He apparently was one with and in the righteous joy and pleasure of the wedding gathering. Indeed, it is a question if our Savior's life was not a life of joy and gladness because of the righteousness which He was at all times living, and which He was administering unto those attending Him.

The Psalmist gave abundant instruction that the godly man should render joyous phrases and glad acclaim to the Father in heaven for all the surrounding benefits and blessings of God. In like manner, the Christian life whether at the wedding feast, or at the righteous social gathering should in joy and gayety render joyous honor to God for His wonderful blessing to man, for the grandeur of association and to render honor for life itself.

Then again the physiological benefit that always results from righteous laughter and pleasing exercise must be considered. These practices strengthen the organs of respiration and circulation, and give tone and health to the physiological structure.

Jesus, at the wedding, gives example as to how the Christian can properly carry out joyous activity.

UNCHRISTIAN DISSIPATION

Friday, October 25—Daniel 5:1-6

"They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold. . . ." V. 4.

The abuse of our God-given lives by dissipation in things carnal is everywhere condemned. God so created the human body with its many cravings in order that the body itself might prompt man to partake of those things necessary to sustain life. It is proper for man to eat, proper and necessary for him to drink, proper for him to laugh, proper to sing, proper to carry on all those things for which the Father has given him taste and desire. The unrighteousness of it all comes from over-feasting, over-gratifying any one of these cravings. Intemperance in any line is improper.

Self-control, the government of self, is perhaps one of the greatest accomplishments in life. Truly, he who rules his own tongue is greater than he who takes a city; also he who rules his appetite, who rules his activities so that he is not merely yielding to body cravings but is rather utilizing opportunity to serve the body righteously, is the greatest of generals. Dissipation, yielding in any direction to abnormal degree, can but weaken one's life and dishonor God.

Liquors, narcotics, nicotines, carnal lusts of any and every nature, when yielded to, can but weaken the individual, the descendants, and society. Belshazzar lost his kingdom apparently through dissipation; Nebuchadnezzar was in like manner made an associate with the fowls of heaven. Christianity, following the ideals of Christ with the greatest of purity and devotion, can but lift the individual life and descendants to ever higher attainment unto God.

THE RENEWAL OF STRENGTH

Saturday, October 25—Isaiah 40:27-31

"But they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." V.31. The prophet here beautifully recalls to mind that "the everlasting God, the Lord, the creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary." He further announces again that it is he that "giveth power to the faint."

Thus we are brought to realize anew that the same God, who in creation's morning gave life and strength, is the One to whom all must look that they may have their strength renewed and their powers of life strengthened and increased. Indeed, He is "the giver of every good and every perfect gift."

CIVILIZATION EATING OUT ITS OWN HEART

THIS IS WHAT we said aloud as in the quiet of our study we read an excerpt sent to us for comment by the September Woman's Home Companion. It was headed "60,000 Churches Dead," and went on to show the cause of their failure—the motion picture, the automobile, the radio, increased school activities, new subjects taught, etc. All these things which the so-called progress of the age has brought in, have led men and women, even professing Christian men and women, to "forsake the assembling of themselves together," which they should have done "so much the more as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25). "You have plenty of time to read on Sunday," is the slogan of the Sunday newspaper which is also keeping millions of people away from the house of God. If therefore it be true that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," what a harvest is awaiting the votaries of twentieth century civilization in the day when they must give account!—The Moody Monthly.

Very good answers to Queries 5 have been received from Mrs. Hugh Glover, Colo.; Hazel Titus, S. Dak. There is also one nicely prepared list unsigned. Who are you?

Answers to queries 4 came too late for publication in last week's issue from M. A. Woodward, Mich., 90%; Mrs. Mina Crosby, N. Y., 100%; and Mrs. Peleg Chase, Mich., 100%.

A WORD ABOUT "QUERIES"

What a fine way to spend these long evenings, studying the Bible, and finding answers to the queries! If you cannot answer all, answer as many as you can. It will prove to the Editor that you are interested, and trying to do the best you can. How fine it would be for the Sunday School children to learn the questions and answers by heart, and let them be part of the next Sunday's lesson! When I was a child I used to learn to repeat a whole chapter, and often four or five chapters. I have never forgotten those lessons, but when I try now to commit to memory it is very hard work.

THE DIVINE PURPOSE

By Clarence E. Flynn

God's great unceasing purpose
 Abides across the years
 Despite their heavy burdens,
 Despite their sins and tears:
 Peace for all men and nations,
 Justice for the oppressed,
 Help for the lone and troubled,
 And for the weary, rest.

So runs the Father's planning
 As Time pursues its way.
 Such is the hope we treasure
 Of better things some day.
 Across the wheeling ages
 Sounds like a silver bell
 The voice of Faith proclaiming
 That all shall yet be well.

TITHING EDUCATION MADE EASY

ANY CHURCH MAY NOW put on a ten weeks' course of tithing education, right in the midst of its other activities, and at a ridiculously low cost.

The Layman Company, which has distributed many millions of pamphlets on the tithe, now announces an attractive new series, at so low a price that distribution to an entire church through ten weeks costs only two cents and a half per family.

A set of samples and full particulars will be sent free of charge upon request.

"SEEK YE FIRST THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS".—MATTHEW 6:33.

OREGON BEREAN SOCIETY

The Oregon Bereans met at 6:30 Sunday evening, September 29, and again the following Sunday, to reorganize the local society. The following officers were unanimously elected: Azalia Winfrey, President; Charles Moore, Vice-president; Cecil Smead, Secretary-treasurer.

Sr. Winfrey will take the lead in the social activities of the young folks. She has planned a program for the coming year which will include four social events, two being for members, and two being for both members and non-members. There will be a reception for the older people and one for the children.

Sr. Winfrey will be assisted in her duties by Mr. Moore, manager of the Golden Rule Greenhouse, who is from Albion, Michigan. He is especially fitted for the duties of the office, having been connected with the Christan Endeavor Society. John Denchfield and F. L. Austin will cooperate with Mr. Moore on the Social Committee. The Membership Committee is composed of Richard LeCrone, chairman, Clarence Lapp and Ruth Gesin. Alice Gesin was selected as pianist.

Notwithstanding the fact that the membership of the society has suffered by members moving away, the society reorganized with twenty-two members, some of whom are from widely separated parts of the country, and six of whom are members of the training class. The members are all eager to take up the lessons in Book Two of the senior series. These facts all contribute to the belief that some highly spirited and interesting meetings will be held, and that the truth of the Word of God will be understood more than ever.

Cecil A. Smead, Secretary.

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

The class at Rockford held its annual business meeting on Friday, September 27, and the following officers took their places at the helm to guide the class for the coming year: President, Mildred Walls, 1016 North Ave.; Vice-presidents, Verna Thayer, Kilburn Ave. Road, and Earle Mogle, 1016 North Ave.; Secretary-treasurer, Harold Starbuck, 420 S. Third St.

We are growing up this year. For three years we have met faithfully week in and week out. Now we have branched out and are enjoying regular preaching services on two Friday nights of each month. We no longer meet at the homes but have engaged a W. C. T. U. hall, where we have either Bro. F. E. Siple or Bro. Paul Johnson with us on the Fridays preceding the first and third Sundays of each month. The regular classes are held at the same place on the Fridays when we have no preaching service.

With this big step as a forward start we hope to go on to much greater things in God's service. The Rockford class urges all those within reach to cooperate in this effort, and meet with us every Friday night at 7:45, at 1904 N. Main St. We will give you a cordial welcome.

Will you pray for the advancement of this phase of the Father's work?

I saw a Berean sacrifice something he wanted very much the other day, and put away the price it would have cost in a little envelope, because it is Self-Denial Month.

Are you remembering to deny yourself?

MARSHALL BEREAN SOCIAL

The Salem Berean Society held a social meeting Saturday night, October 5, at the home of W. C. Hendrix and family. There were twenty-six present at this meeting.

The class period was opened by the song, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus", followed by prayer. Next came reading of the thirty-fifth chapter of Isaiah by Edna Wood; then a special song by Ruth and Lorene Goekler. A talk on the use of numbers in the Scriptures was given by Harry Goekler. A short time was taken for Bible queries and questions. We closed with the song, "Rock of Ages".

After class all joined together in games. All enjoyed themselves and hope to be present at the next meeting, which will be at Sylvan Richey's home in Martinsville.

Ralph Goekler.

A NEW NEBRASKA CLASS

The Holbrook Berean Society was organized August 23, 1929, by the assistance of Bro. F. E. Siple, of Oregon, Illinois.

The officers elected were: President, Wayne Wilson; Vice-president, Clyde Long; Secretary and Treasurer, Forrest Long.

This organization held its first meeting September 1, 1929, with nine members present, and much interest was shown, Forrest Long, Secretary.

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF RECREATION

RECREATION IS A RE-CREATION and includes many forms of pleasure, exercise and rest for the purpose of keeping the body in a fit condition to perform its daily tasks.

At the time of our lesson the customs of the many people were very different in the different countries. The Pharisees kept the law by letter rather than spirit. They held very strictly the rites and ceremonies. They fasted on the Sabbath, while Jesus and His disciples did not. Jesus healed the lame man, and went about doing good. Jesus told them that the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath.

At present the work that men do is far different from the work that men did hundreds of years ago. Modes of travel have changed our ideas of pleasure and have made it possible for us to go many places to rest that otherwise would have been impossible for us to do.

While it may seem a selfish motive to engage in any form of exercise to fit ourselves to better perform our daily work and also to do God's work, we must be physically and mentally fit; and to live in a routine, we become dull and unable to give Him our best service.

—Dessie Fox

REMEMBER

Recreation means rest or play. Choose the play that will keep your mind and body fit.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Mark 2:18-28.
2. Make a list of games that will help you.

WHERE FIND:

"Whether, therefore, ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

NOTE BOOK

Reverse side. Copy your list of useful games and recreations.

"All work and no play make Jack a dull boy"; but all play and no work make Jack equally dull, if not more so.

ANOTHER PRAYER FOR YOUR BOOKLET AUTUMN PRAYER

Friend, so gentle, kind, and dear,
Listen to Thy children here,
While they thank Thee for Thy love
Shown in stars that shine above;
Shown in frost, in cloud o'er head,
Shown in leaves of gold and red.

Help me in my heart to thank Thee;
Help me with my lips to praise Thee;
May I to each playmate be
Kind as Thou hast been to me.

A PUMPKIN SEED BASKET

You can make this basket from pumpkin seeds, watermelon, or any other large seeds. Unless the seeds are fresh, they must be soaked in water over night to make them soft enough to string.

Find a little box that you can use for the basket. Cut a strip of pasteboard for a handle, and paste the end of it to the two sides of the basket.

Thread a needle with a long thread and make a double knot in the end of it. Stick it from the inside of the basket through the place where the handle is pasted on. Then sew through a seed the long way, sticking the needle in one end and out the other. Push the seed to the end of the thread and stick through the handle where the end of the seed comes. Stick back through the handle and sew on another seed until you have a row of seeds along the handle. Then sew a row of seeds around the top of the basket.

To make fringe, string four seeds on a thread, stick the needle through the lower corner of the box. Stick it out again far enough away for the next string of fringe. String on four seeds, make a double knot in the thread, and cut it. Do this all around the box until you have the fringe made.

—Little Learners.

THE SPARROW'S REPROOF

"Said the Robin to the Sparrow,
'I should really like to know,
Why these anxious human beings
Rush about and worry so?'"

"Said the Sparrow to the Robin,
'Friend, I think that it must be,
That they have no Heavenly Father
Such as cares for you and me.'"

—Selected.

GOLDEN TEXT

I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10:10.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Outline. I. The Christian Life in Both Recreation and Labor Should be in Consecration to God. II. Spirituality of Aim Should Rule All Christian Activity. III. Recreation and Christianity. IV. The Place of Christian Recreation in a Community.

I. The Christian Life in Both Recreation and Labor Should be in Consecration to God. When the Christian was "bought with a price," 1 Cor. 6:20, he was entirely purchased. No reservations were considered. His first and chief obligation in every action of life is to obey the first and great commandment: Love God with all the heart, mind, strength and life. There is no such thing as a Christian being entitled to engage in unchristian labor, or unchristian recreation, no, nor to engage in an unchristian way in labor or recreation.

On the other hand, Christ is the great Leader and Shepherd who would lead the individual follower into true, proper, and beneficial labors of body, mind and heart. Just as one must "appear before the judgment seat of Christ," 2 Cor. 5:10, that he "may receive of the things done" in his daily occupation of life so must he appear to receive of the things done in recreation. Christ's standard covers both.

II. Spirituality of Aim Should Rule All Activity. "God is a Spirit", John 4:24; accordingly, all of His purposes and labors are spiritual. Christ is "a . . . spirit", 1 Cor. 15:45; accordingly, He in all His thoughts and labors is spiritual. He who truly and literally follows God and Christ is spiritual, likewise, in all his aims. To have the mind and motive of Christ is spiritual. To be guided by that mind in every pursuit of life is to have a spiritual life.

Paul was as equally spiritual when tent making as he was when preaching the gospel. Reversely, anyone can be as carnal in preaching the gospel as he would be in purposely defrauding a widow. It is not the work done that alone determines the character of the worker, but rather, it is the motive of the worker which determines the character of the worker and of the work. The same principle applies to recreation.

III. Recreation and Christianity. Recreation without Christ is but another form of serving self, of manifesting covetousness, which is idolatry. Col. 3:5. Recreation as used today in its broadest sense includes all forms of revelry, banqueting, dissipation, etc. In its limited sense, it is confined to so-called innocent pleasure and pastime. However, even the latter often genders strife, bickering, and contention. When these result, the motive is questionable.

Recreation like labor is, under God's provision, for the individual's upbuild. That it has its rightful place and is in duty a part of each individual's career is unquestioned.

But, to properly fit into the Christian life recreation must be pursued with a spiritual motive. For instance, to play a game for the avowed purpose of beating another is unquestionably carnal. But to play the same game with a view of excelling self day by day, growing in ability, all with a view to greater spiritual ability, is the reverse. To cheer the winning play of a favored team in a game merely because the team is one's favorite and to hiss the opposing team merely because they are opponents, is but to reveal a life that is motivated by carnality. But, to cheer each team because of its own clean and excellent playing ability, not only shows a higher motive on the part of the onlooker but also encourages purity and nobleness of effort upon the part of the respective players. If this latter were the rule of the day the quarrels and fighting engendered in recreation, and the gambings that accompany them would be dissipated forthwith.

IV. The Place of Christian Recreation in a Community. For the very reason that Christ's kingdom is not of this world, John 18:36, the Christian should not undertake to rule this world, either in its whole or in its parts. Since the days of Nebuchadnezzar, whom God made ruler over all the earth, Daniel 2:38, the operation of the governments of the earth have been committed to the will of man. Therefore, it is inopportune for the Christian to presume to govern any community or municipality according to Christ's ways and rules.

Likewise, it is equally inopportune to presume to control the recreations of any worldly community. Therefore, recreation being essential to one's best development, Christian recreation should be in agreement with spiritual living. To this end both its program and the execution thereof should be motivated by the spiritual mind. This necessitates that all Christian recreation be provided for by Christians. The community invited to participate in and partake of such recreation can but be benefited in proportion as such recreation leads the community to higher ideals. One sad error of the church is in leaving recreation to be directed by the world and in thus indirectly assenting and permitting its own people to follow the world's ways and customs in this matter. Perhaps as much as in any other way the recreation of today that is provided by the world excites the carnal nature of the would-be Christians to a degree that defeats his efforts to follow Christ, his spiritual Head.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Purpose of Recreation. "Recreation is a second creation." It is the process by which the mind and body are rested, renewed and invigorated for the serious duties of life. An excellent means of recreation is to possess a hobby, that is, to cultivate an interest in something entirely outside of the ordinary course of our lives. The athlete is said to become "stale" and "overtrained" when he applies himself too closely to a single form of exercise. So one engaged in any other line of endeavor becomes biased and "one-sided" if he restricts his thought and effort too much to but one purpose. To the Christian, recreation should mean the freshening of the mind and the strengthening of the body for greater service to God. Therefore he will not engage in any form of recreation which has a tendency to draw him away from the Father, to lessen his influence for good, or in any way to diminish his future usefulness and efficiency in the work of the church.

—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Joy attends the use of any power of body and mind. This joy of activity is of God and is therefore a good gift.

God requires of man temperance through control over the use of life's powers, that those powers may serve fellowman and Himself. But the joy that attends the use of each power works toward excess in use that the pleasure of self may be served. Must, then, joy be eliminated that temperance through control may obtain? The Puritans said "Yes" and the joy of living came under their ban. The joy of reaction to music or to any harmony in sound, color, or movement was condemned. The joy of play was denied even to children. The joy of natural affections was repressed.

The temperance sought by the Puritans was a temperance through self-control and no power in self can temper the drawing power of joy; therefore, joy had to go—as Puritans thought.

But the temperance required by God is not based on self-control, but on God's control through the entrance of love, the full and perfect expression of power. Being the supreme expression of power it tempers and coordinates all other expressions of power into service to God and man and enhances the joy of each by the fullness of its own joy. Thus temperance, as required by God, increases and brings joy to its fullness, instead of placing it under a ban. The God controlled life is not joyless through repression and elimination of life's activities as is the life controlled through the strength of self.

God recognizes the part joy has to play in man's development, for when He is returned unto Zion and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem and Jerusalem shall be called the city of truth and the mountain of the Jehovah of hosts, the holy mountain, "the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." Zech. 8:3-5. This is just an indication of how Christ's government will solve the "problem of recreation" that joy may find its rightful expression.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

We are glad to report that Bro. George Rennard is able to be around again after nine weeks' absence from church. He spent eight weeks in the hospital, suffering with a broken arm and a cracked hip. The hip seems to be alright again but he still shakes hands with the left.

Little Bernice Moore, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Earl Moore, has been quite sick for the last ten days. The latest report was that she was some better, but not altogether out of danger.

The Berean class is having its regular meetings again with very good attendance. Bro. W. J. Lent, the president of the society, is to be congratulated for keeping this nice class going.

After the Bible study last Thursday, Oct. 3, we were invited over to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Brown. When we arrived we found quite a number of the same people that we had said good bye to at church just a few minutes before. It was a surprise reception for the pastor and his wife. A few games were played and a very good luncheon was served, after which Bro. William Moore, speaking for the Niagara Falls church, made some very complimentary remarks to show their appreciation of our work among them. He then presented us with a beautiful table lamp, a present from the church at Niagara Falls. These are the words as I remember them: "Let your light so shine before men, that they, seeing your good works, will glorify your father in heaven". We truly hope that it will be, even as he said. We are sure that the good wishes and kind remembrances will never be forgotten, and hope that our influence for good will reach into eternity.

It has been decided to hold the regular All-Day Meeting as usual, to be held at the church at Tenth and Cleveland Ave., Niagara Falls, N. Y. Arrangements are being made to have another speaker to help out in this meeting. We are not positive just who it will be at present, but you can be sure that it will be worth your time to attend this meeting. All who can possibly come are invited and urged to be present.

Several of the brethren from Fonthill were at the Falls church last Sunday morning October sixth.

Grover Gordon, Pastor.

MICHIGAN FALL CONFERENCE

The Michigan Fall Conference will be held at Coats Grove beginning Friday evening, November 1, and continuing over Sunday. Bro. Jas. A. Patrick, of Ashland, Ohio, will be the speaker. We not only invite but urge as many as possible to attend these meetings.

Wm. A. Hanson, Sec.,
1840 Union Blvd. S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

We still have on hand a few copies of "Choice Texts and Thoughts". If you have seen this neat little book, you will certainly wish to have a copy of your own. It will be found of even greater value in years to come and much enjoyment will be derived from looking through its pages, reviewing familiar faces and reading choice texts. Price, 60 cents, address, National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

A CALL FOR HELP

I am asking for a girl's winter coat, size 9 years, one that some child has outgrown and is in good condition. Also, some winter dresses, (not summer), bloomers, and flannelette night dresses for girls from 8 to 13 years. Perhaps some of the Aid Societies that have helped me before in the relief work by making such garments will be willing to help again. I will greatly appreciate being helped with this call I have made for the garments I have mentioned.

Mrs. Orpha Sanford,
5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois.
(Please note change of address.)

DIXON RALLY, OCTOBER 20

Basket Dinner

The Dixon Sunday School and church have their Rally Day planned for Oct. 20, and are inviting all to bring baskets and have dinner in the basement. Sunday School at 9:45, and sermons at 11:00 and 7:30.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

MINNESOTA

Bro. Sydney Magaw held a short series of meetings at the St. Cloud church from Sept. 26 to 29. His subjects were, Thursday, Jesus and His Friends; Friday, Daniel, a Type of Christ; Saturday, The Time of the End; Sunday morning, Crucified with Christ; Sunday evening, Jerusalem, Past, Present, and Future. Good crowds were present and enjoyed these services very much.

The Minnesota Fall Conference was held at Bergen, Oct. 3 to 6. This has surely been a very good conference, with a good attendance from other places. So many Bible truths were put before the people, it was a time of rejoicing for us all.

We trust those present will carry home to others the truths taught them there. The preaching services Saturday evening and Sunday were conducted by Bros. Sydney Magaw and Ray Abbott.

Mrs. T. M. Savage.

AN INVITATION

Dear brethren, scattered throughout the United States and Canada, Greetings:

The thought that you may be coming to our fair city on a pleasure or business trip impels me to write and ask you to be sure to spend Sunday with the Los Angeles church should you be anywhere in reach. We have Bro. G. E. Marsh with us for the coming year, and he must be heard in order to be appreciated. Those among the brethren who have heard Bro. Marsh know just what a feast of fat things we are having, but I am writing for the benefit of those who have not heard him. I exhort you not to let the opportunity slip should you be anywhere near us.

We just about have the work outlined for the immediate future and we expect to have a very interesting mid-week Bible class, using the Berean outlines interchangeably with lessons on prophecy as outlined by Bro. Marsh.

We thank the Lord every day for His blessings and workers, and ask the brethren everywhere to pray for us and the success of the work in this great city, for "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," says the apostle James.

Yours in the blessed hope,
Nettie B. Crundwell.

DUTTON, MICHIGAN

I am now with Mr. and Mrs. Leatherman for a time in Dutton. We are going to have Bro. Randall here next Sunday, Oct. 6, and an evangelist from Otsego, Mich., a week from Sunday at the same hour, 3 o'clock, fast time. The evangelist has been preaching since she was fifteen years of age; is now only twenty-one. She is a very zealous worker, trying to bring people into the fold of Christ. We hope to have a good house of listeners. All come who can, and let the people in this little town know we are not dead.

M. A. Woodward.

Sr. Almeda Glotfelty, one of the faithful members of the little group at Lanark, Ill., is visiting relatives of the Glotfelty family in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Increased attendance is noticed at both the Niagara Falls and Fonthill churches, Sunday, October 6, work encouraging. "Bro. Gordon is giving entire satisfaction. He is the making of an able speaker."

Bro. Paul C. Johnson will conduct services at the Plum River (Illinois) church, Sunday morning, Oct. 20, and in the evening of the same day at Adeline. Let all those nearby lend their encouragement by attending these services.

Quite a number of the Dixon brethren hurried from their Sunday School to the church at Oregon to help swell the Rally Day crowd and to get Bro. Austin's morning message. They stayed to enjoy the basket dinner.

Next Sunday, being their Rally Day, some of the Oregon congregation expect to leave immediately after the morning service to share with them in both material and spiritual blessings. Bro. Austin will be the afternoon speaker.

Rockford, Rochelle and Adeline, Illinois, and Beloit, Wisconsin, were also represented at the Oregon Rally Day services. Even if you do live twenty-five or thirty miles from church why not start the car in that direction rather than in the opposite direction for destinations much farther from home? If you attend church you will be feeding upon the food that gives life eternal.

PELZER, SOUTH CAROLINA

The Church of God at Guthrie Grove is glad to announce the addition of two new members, Bro. and Sr. L. W. Tipton of Greenwood, S. C. They were well qualified for baptism because they have been searching the Scriptures for several years and are ably versed in them. The writer had the pleasure of assisting them in putting on Christ by baptism. Therefore we rejoice with them in hope of eternal life, for they have ceased to be aliens and strangers from the commonwealth of Israel, but in Christ are of the same household of faith.

M. O. Williamson.

HERALD RECEIPTS

J. A. Dickinson; Mrs. Paul Bennyhoff; Samuel Kirkpatrick; Mrs. E. Taylor; Luella Caples; Miss Cleora Randall; John Lehman; Mrs. Ella Rose; Peter Briunsmas; Mrs. A. Balch; Mrs. Harriet A. Reed; Mrs. W. H. Rose; Mrs. Wm. Hadicke; Mrs. Annie Trotter; C. E. Shaffer; J. K. Driskill; Mrs. Mary Allard.

CHRIST AND JUDAISM

Jesus in His ministry of the gospel of the kingdom did not try in any degree to perfect the social world by improving Judaism. He converted a few individuals and sent them out into the midst of Judah and the world, knowing full well what the result, the growth, would be. He did not try to rid the world of sin at one stroke, nor did He try to rid Judaism of her wrong in one day. No, nor did He try in any degree to correct society so that it would be in accord with Christ's own ideas of social life. What He did try to do, and did do, was to convert a few individual people and make them like unto himself in their ideals, aims and efforts.

JESUS AND SOCIETY

In no sense did Jesus undertake to become one of the leaders of the society of His day, nor did He endeavor to mold society as such unto His own ideas. On the other hand Jesus did enter into the very midst of all kinds of society from the highest to the lowest; and did use His influence upon the individuals of which society was composed to bring those individuals to a realization of His own great aims and ideals. He did not shun to go to those who were regarded as the lowest in society. He was not embarrassed to go to those who were of the highest in the estimation of man.

He does wrong today who endeavors to measure the standards and values of Christianity by the measure of social conditions. The social yard stick is not capable of measuring a Christian, no, nor of measuring Christianity.

On the other hand Jesus did by His teachings and examples greatly benefit society in that He benefited the individual, or individuals who were part and parcel of that society. No society can be greater than the makeup of its component individuals. The more there is of true Christianity in the members of society, the purer must that society be. Therefore, while Christianity is not a part and parcel of society, yet it does owe a tremendous duty to society in that it should so develop Christian conduct and Christian character in the individual as to greatly correct and edify social standards and society itself.

CHRISTIANITY AND SOCIETY

While the undoubted purpose of the gospel is to the end that the individual shall be drawn unto God and to His Son, yet there is another side which none of us could overlook. It is this: in a very large sense man is his brother's keeper. In this same sense Christianity owes a duty to fellow men the world around. That is to say while the first great result of Christianity pertains to the individual in drawing him to God there is a secondary result possible which pertains to the Christian's betterment of society as a whole and of immediate society in particular. In honor to Him whom the Father has exalted as the Savior and Leader of the world, every Christian should stand before society as the reflection of his Leader, Jesus. In so doing he cannot but heed society in its every particular: in his business, his governmental problems, in social problems.

The Sunday School lessons for this fourth quarter have been selected by the interdenominational committee for the purpose of arousing a study of the varied social problems as related to Christianity. We urge that the teachers, superintendents and scholars will endeavor to get the most possible out of this three months' study. Remember that in no sense is it an effort to overthrow the gospel or belittle it in any way. It is simply an effort to delve into some of the secondary results of gospel work. It can be made most profitable to those who will engage diligently in the research.

OBITUARIES

WILLIAM ABRAM PROSSER

Was born in New York state, July 6, 1837, and died at Newberg, Oregon, Sept. 13, 1929, being 92 years, 2 months and 7 days old.

The subject of this sketch spent his youthful days in his parents' home attending the public schools and later pursuing an academic course near Utica, N. Y. At twenty-three years of age he entered the educational field as a teacher. His first work in this direction was in Wisconsin, after which he moved to Carroll county, Missouri, where he continued to teach for several years. He was then elected county judge of Carroll county and served in this capacity until the spring of 1881 when he moved to Washington county, Oregon. Here in June 1884 he was elected to the state legislature.

When a young man he took up religious work and was ordained to the ministry of the Church of God. His ability as a speaker and debater placed him in the first rank as a leader. He will be remembered by a large circle of friends for his clear elucidation of biblical truths.

It was on the twenty-third of January, 1860 in Wisconsin that he was married to Miss Sarah Wiry. To this union six children were born, of whom five survive, namely, Maria E. Truesdell, of Fresno, Calif.; Walter E. of Newberg, Oregon; Horace J. of Newport, Oregon; Emma L. Brooks of Newberg; Martha M. Vineyard of Calif.

H. J. Prosser.

MRS. MARTHA HAMON

Was born May 9, 1849, at Salyersville, Ky., and died at her home in Eden Valley, Minn., Sept. 23, 1929, having attained the age of eighty years.

Miss Martha Prater was married to Mr. Hamon, Sept. 6, 1866. The first years of their married life were spent in Kentucky and Illinois. In 1880 they moved to Minnesota, and up until the past twenty-two years lived most of the time on a farm in Union Grove township, south-west of Eden Valley. At that time they came to Eden Valley. To this happy union twelve children were born, seven boys and five girls. Nine of the children are living, Mr. Hamon preceding her in death ten years ago. Before coming to Minnesota both Mr. and Mrs. Hamon were members of the Methodist Church, and after coming to Eden Valley they took membership with the local Church of God.

Those that are left to mourn her death are five sons, four daughters, three brothers, and many other more distant relatives and friends. The sons are: Edward and Robert of Park-beg, Saskatchewan; Elijah of Paynesville, Minn.; James of Seattle, Wash.; and John of St. Paul, Minn. The daughters living are: Mrs. Sabina Brown of Paynesville, Minn.; Mrs. Emma Davis of Minnitaki, Ont.; Mrs. Lulu Hubbard of St. Paul, Minn.; and Mrs. May Gaspar of Eden Valley, Minn. The brothers who survive her are: James Prater of Salyersville, Ky.; Robert Prater of Pawnee, Okla.; and Elijah Prater of Boyd, Okla. There are also twenty-six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren living.

Funeral services were conducted for Sr. Hamon on Sept. 26 from the home and the Church of God. Elder Ray Abbott of Paynesville assisted in the services. The hope of resurrection was used as our subject in bringing words of comfort to the bereaved ones, and though sorrow now weighs them down we trust that when the Master comes each may have so lived as to be ready for the crown of life together with the one who has now fallen asleep in death.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Brethren and Friends:—Prov. 25:11-13.

Our weekly messenger for July 30, arrived in the best of time to be used with good effect on Sunday August 4 at a family reunion of Bro. J. L. Muncrief at Maberry Springs, some two miles west of his old homestead on No. 6, Albert Pike Highway. Sr. H. H. Kent's excellent article, entitled "Preparations for the Coming Storm," was read aloud with good effect. Some fifty persons were there with seven of his eight living sons and daughters, his eldest son being absent.

May we kindly ask the writer if she has "sealed the faith," with or in water? Rom. 4:11; Matt. 3:13-17; Col. 2:11-13; Acts 8:9-12; "Men and Women." This baptism, Eph. 4:5, frees the applicants from their sins. Rom. 3:19-25; Acts 2:38, R. V. For instance, Apollos, Acts 18:24-28, had need of Christ's baptism, Acts 19:1-5 R. V. John's baptism made him fit to meet Jesus. Jesus' baptism prepares us to meet God. Acts 2:22.

In The Restitution Herald of July 30 beginning on page 697, we have a lengthy article by C. W. Dean, entitled "Celestial Bodies." He says, "Celestials deal with celibacy and immortality which was hid in Christ," and gives John 8:12, as "sufficient" proof that Christ preached to fallen celestials in prison. 1 Pet. 3:19. Oh, what a blunder! 2 Pet. 2:5 tells when the preaching was done; and not while Christ Jesus was dead. See Rev. 1:18; Matt. 12:38-40; 28:1-9; John 20:1-9. "The words that I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life." John 6:63.

See Heb. 13:3-9 on the subject of marriage. It is worthy of note that Jesus Christ's first miracle, was at a marriage in Cana of Galilee. John 2:3-5. See His reply to His mother, where she said, "They have no wine," (but she knew better or thought differently). "Woman, what have I to do with thee." See Gen. 2:18-23, first woman. Please read Matt. 26:10-13. See how Jesus took the woman's part when she was in trouble by men. No wonder, for He was never tempted that we know of by a woman or women. But we do read that many women ministered unto him. Matt. 27:54-56. Amen!

Your brother in Christ,
R. A. Humphreys.

The Chicago church was represented on Rally Day at Oregon by the presence of Sr. F. L. Austin, who assisted with the music.

INFORMATION ABOUT ELIJAH

By J. W. Macallister

QUESTION: CAN ANY READER explain Matthew 11:14; Matthew 17:12 and Mark 9:12, concerning Elijah?

The basis of expectation for the coming of Elijah was no doubt prompted by the prophet Malachi, where, in 4:5, he says, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." No doubt the studious prophecy-believing Jew of the Lord's day looked for a literal personal fulfillment of this prophecy as indicated in Matt. 17:10 and Mark 9:11.

When the disciples asked Jesus to make plainer to their minds this teaching of the scribes relative to Elijah's coming, Jesus proceeded to show them that the partial fulfillment of that prophecy had been accomplished by John the Baptist in his ministry, calling for repentance for their sins and a plea for a return of Israel to true heart-worship of their God. You will remember how God sent Elijah, the Tishbite, during the idolatrous reign of Ahab and Jezebel to call the attention of Israel to their departure from the worship of the true God to Baal worship, and the wonderful exhibition before their eyes as to which was indeed the God of power on Mount Carmel.

Much of the teaching of ancient times and indeed to some measure at the present time is to illustrate the point by calling the student's attention to some past event or historic personage known to them and to draw an analogy or comparison to them and the question being discussed. Notice that we followers of Christ are called children of Abraham because we have a genuine faith in God's ability to fulfill all His promises. We are not in any worldly sense Abraham's children, but because of a similarity of true faith with Abraham, we are reckoned as such. So, likewise, because John the Baptist, in his ministry calling for repentance and reformation just prior to our Lord's ministry, was the forerunner of the Messiah, so also he typified a similar work done by Elijah in the Jewish age preceding that time. However, that John's work was not the complete fulfillment of Malachi's prophecy Jesus shows when He tells the disciples in Matt. 17:12, that Elijah shall truly come and restore all things. This was spoken after the death of John, thus showing that while John fulfilled part of the Elijah type there was yet a greater and more complete fulfillment of the prophecy. This we believe is a work that is to take place in the very near future, if indeed it is not being done in some measure already.

The children of Israel no doubt were typical of the Christian church and both they and the Christian church have wandered far afield from their primitive purity of faith and doctrine. When in the past history of the Christian church has there been such a showing up of deep-seated error and false doctrine as at the present time? This we believe will be greatly augmented in the near future as we approach the great day of the Lord. The light that shineth more and more, and brighter and brighter as we approach the perfect day will accomplish the work of endeavoring to bring back God's children to a better understanding of His great love for His human creatures.

You will note that after Elijah had made his first great plea to the people of Israel he, accompanied by his assistant, Elisha, made a tour of the schools of the prophets, i. e., the schools where the spiritual leaders of Israel were being trained and perfected. This missionary tour was just prior to his being taken out of this earthly life by the whirlwind and chariot of fire. We understand that this second ministry of Elijah is being and will be more fully antityped by a class of faithful teachers of truth in these last days of the age by sounding forth the midnight cry, "Behold the Bridegroom, go ye out to meet him!" So we think every true watcher for the Bridegroom will be made aware of the approach of the longed and prayed for, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done in earth as in heaven".

May we all strive to be faithful in giving our testimony as His witnesses, looking forward to the coming of that glad day!

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.—Phil. 4:8.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna Thayer

WHIEAT WAS THE MOST IMPORTANT of all grains cultivated in Palestine, and vast quantities of it were produced. It was sown late in the fall and harvested in May. The many-eared variety, or mummy wheat, was cultivated in Egypt, and is the kind referred to in Pharaoh's dream. Gen. 41:22. Wheat is mentioned under the name of corn in the Authorized Version. Wheat is first mentioned under the name of corn in Gen. 30:14, where the harvest season is designated.

Wheat was an article of export from Judæa. Ezekiel 27:17. It was offered in sacrifice, Exodus 34:22, as were all cereals. It was of different qualities, some producing one hundred grains. This is not an exaggeration in case of the Egyptian wheat, the panicle of which is compound. "Kidneys of wheat", Deut. 32:14, doubtless refers to the fat grains of best qualities. It is usual at the present day to cut off bunches of the fattest wheat ears while still green and toast them in the fire. Thus cooked they are "the green ears of corn dried by fire", "corn in the ear parched by fire", and "parched corn", all Biblical references. This is a favorite food of the people a month or so before harvest.

Nearly ripe ears or ripe ears are rubbed out in the hands, and grains eaten raw. This brings to our mind the picture of Jesus and His disciples plucking ears of corn on the sabbath. The origin of wheat is not known. Wild wheat is found in northern Syria.

MORE ABOUT ZIONISM

By F. E. Siple

IN A SECULAR MAGAZINE, that does not even have any religious tendencies, we have just read a long article dealing with the present movements among the Jews, their hopes through the past and in the present, the present relationship with the Arabs, and how other nations view these various matters. It is an interesting and instructive article. But one of the most interesting and outstanding features of it all is that the world is observing all these matters and commenting upon them because of their importance, and yet failing to realize how it is all a plain fulfillment of Bible prophecies.

To us the outstanding proof of the inspiration of God's Word is just such fulfillment of its prophecies, and how thankful we should be that the very things we have taught as a church, and looked for so long should be outstandingly unfolded before the eyes of all.

The article is as follows:

WHY THE HOLY LAND BREEDS WAR

IF WE SHOULD CLEAR OUT of here, the Moslems would probably cut the Jews' throats the first week, and possibly the Christians' throats the next."

That was what a British official of the mandate government told me when I was last in Palestine. Naturally I cannot give the official's name, for he wasn't talking for publication and he's still on the job. But his words pithily describe that seething caldron of religious and racial hatreds which is apt to blow off the lid and boil over in bloodshed and riot at the slightest provocation. And the worst of the matter is that Palestine is merely a part of a bigger mess. The whole Near East is today a smoldering volcano which may do almost anything at any time. Yet even in that troubled part of the world, Palestine must be adjudged a peculiarly distressful country.

Geographically speaking, Palestine is insignificant. Its area of 9,000 square miles is only that of the state of Vermont, and it is inhabited by less than 1,000,000 souls. Yet little sunbaked Palestine is the Holy Land of three great religions—Christianity, Judaism, and Islam. Palestine is the battle ground where two mighty forces, Zionism and Arabism, today clash in bitter strife. And those two forces, compounded as they both are of religious fervor and patriotic zeal, contain explosive possibilities worse than TNT or dynamite.

British bayonets may restore order, but they cannot bring lasting peace. For, as someone once wittily remarked, "You can do anything with bayonets—except sit on them!" Despite all the British Tommies who may march up to Jerusalem, hatred and rivalry will smolder deep in men's hearts, ready to burst forth on the next occasion. And, given the nature of those rivalries and hatreds, their explosion in Palestine will kindle fears and passions to the uttermost ends of the earth.

Here, then, is a true world problem. And it is a problem of long standing. The bloody riots between Jews and Arabs which we have just witnessed are merely the latest phase of an age-old tragedy. The stage was set when the Romans smashed the Jewish state nearly 2,000 years ago and scattered the Jews far and wide. But, though dispersed among the nations, Jewry never forgot its ancestral home or stopped dreaming of a "return to Zion." This abiding hope is vividly revealed in the ritual phrase uttered at the Passover service: "Next year in Jerusalem!"

However, down to recent times, this longed-for return to Zion was blocked by such formidable obstacles that it remained a mere pious dream. Rome, which had broken Jewry at tremendous cost, took no chances of fresh trouble and forbade Jews to resettle in Palestine. When Rome became Christian, this political prohibition was reenforced by religious motives; because the Church would not see its holy places defiled by the presence of those it deemed its most stubborn foes.

Shortly the red tide of Islam burst from the Arabian deserts, and Palestine was not only lost to Christian rule but was settled by a population mostly Arab in blood and Mohammedan in faith. That happened thirteen centuries ago; and those old title deeds of conquest and settlement form the basis of Arab claims that Palestine is an Arab land—an indivisible part of the great Arab empire or confederation which Arab nationalists hope to forge, from Mesopotamia to North Africa.

It is, in fact, nationalism which has sharpened the old

“Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name.”—Malachi 3:16.

THERE WAS A TURNING

MALACHI HAD BEEN REVEALING to Israel and exposing to her priests their misdeeds before God. In the first chapter he reproved them for the deeds they were doing. In the second chapter and the seventeenth verse he reproved them for their words. In 3:16 he announced the messenger of God who should enter with a purging influence and then again referred to reproving Israel for her deeds. As a result of this some were awakened to realization of their position. Immediately, they that feared the Lord spake with frequency one to another.

Their conduct was but natural. Once a community or a people become thoroughly aroused to any given matter, they immediately begin to circulate among themselves with frequent speaking, discussing consideration of the points. This apparently was Israel's situation.

If I mistake not, the day is near, very near at hand, when similar conditions will prevail again. Not only will this prevail in Israel, but throughout the whole world wheresoever God has been considered. A new awakening is soon due. At that time as never before there will be a reverence for Jehovah and a talking one with another.

AND THE LORD HEARKENED AND HEARD

THE COMPASSIONATE EYE looks back upon Israel's wanderings from God and is made to realize that God hearkened and heard those who turned to reverence Him. History does not record where man has been so low in vice and rebellion against God that having truly repented and actually turned from his wrongs to the Father to find that the Father refused to accept him. I say history does not record such an occurrence. The reverse has always been the case. Whosoever has turned honestly to God has been heard and forgiven.

God changes not. Since the day that the first sin was shot from the quiver of man into the garden of Eden, God has remained willing and anxious to forgive. Four thousand years pass their shadows across the life of man and God sent His only begotten Son into the world that it should not perish but have everlasting life. Jesus died, was laid in the tomb; was sealed therein with a Roman seal; was watched without by a Roman guard. He was dead in every sense of the word; dead as all our predecessors. But when the sun arose over the eastern horizon upon the first day of the week, He who had been dead stood forth in all the vigor, strength, greatness of health and of life; yea, life immortal. The power of God to reach into the tomb and draw forth its sleeping Captive was manifested to man as never before.

If ever man had evidence on which to establish faith in Jehovah it was then, nor has that evidence diminished throughout the centuries. It stands today even stronger. God resurrected One who still lives. His activity in life is manifested over and over again as the daily prayers of His followers call forth His evident responses.

The same God, who sought the repentance of Adam and Eve, the repentance of Israel under Malachi, is urging the repentance of man in this day. He has proven himself over and over again as the God of love and mercy and strength. He hears our every wireless word and thought from your heart and mine announcing deep contrition and turning unto Him. He will hearken and hear in our behalf as fully as He hearkened and heard in Malachi's day when they often spoke one to another.

THAT THOUGHT UPON HIS NAME

WHAT COMFORT in these words! From yonder bed where sickness or injury has held the loved one for weeks or months, no works can proceed toward God but thoughts, the decisions of the mind, the purposes of the heart, the rectifications of life that have arisen from the pillow day after day. How comforting that God ever hearkens and hears those who earnestly, with repentance in their hearts, call upon His name.

The book of remembrance is kept for them as for others.

THOSE WATCHING THE SIGNS of the times are interested in noting the alignment of the nations of the world in relation to the Hoover-MacDonald vision relating to disarmament. Why do John and Jonathan stand together, even though opposed by others?

THE ORVAL FETTERS MEMORIAL LIBRARY

AS PREVIOUSLY NOTED IN THE HERALD, Bro. and Sr. David Fetters, of Lucerne, Indiana, following the recent death of their son, Orval, a noble and promising young man just entering into life's responsibilities, sent the National Bible Institution $100 of Orval's savings. With the remittance was their statement desiring that the amount might, through the Bible Training Class, be used to assist other young people.

After careful study by different ones it was decided to invest the amount in choice reference works for the Bible Training Class, to be listed under the title

THE ORVAL FETTERS MEMORIAL LIBRARY

The first selection for this library is a set of John Lightfoot's Works, 13 volumes. These books are considered very valuable for Bible students. They were printed in London in 1822. The only copies available are copies liberated from old family libraries. Through a Chicago house we have just secured a well preserved set direct from England, for $40. It is planned to have it rebound, when the books will be better than at the time of publication. The binding should not cost over $10 to $12.

Other choice reference works will, D. V., be purchased with the balance of the fund.

YOUR ATTENTION IS CALLED to "A Loan Will Be Necessary" on the Church page of this issue. Please read it.

It was not Martin Luther's conversation alone which made him so conspicuous in the religious world, but his subsequent zeal animated by the spark:—"The just shall live by faith". And there is a sequence, as Paul explains, for every one of us (Eph. 4:11-13), "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ". To attain this we must place ourselves in Paul's position, e. g., dead to self and the world, and, "glorying in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world, . . . having crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. Then, knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. For he that is dead (to self) is freed from sin". Gal. 6:14; 5:24; Rom. 6:6, 7.—S. E. Haney.

A CALL FOR PRAYER

THE FOLLOWING LETTER is self-explanatory. The editor agrees fully with Bro. Sheets' statements. The home of Bro. Andrews is a devoted one.

Another letter has been received from Sr. R. A. Robinson, of Clyde, N. C., asking our prayers in behalf of a very dear sister in the faith who has lost her mind and who was taken to the asylum. Sr. Robinson says, "Pray with me without ceasing."

Let us join in daily fervent prayer to God that His strengthening and guiding hand will be with these earnest people—to His honor and glory.

I ask that Sunday, October 27, be a day of special prayer in their behalf and that daily prayer thereafter be offered.—Editor.

Maurertown, Virginia.
October 16, 1929

Dear Bro. Austin:

Since you left us last August Bro. J. H. Andrews, of near Woodstock, has had a great deal of trouble. Sr. Andrews, his wife, has been taken to the sanitorium for T. B. treatment. Examination revealed that both lungs and her throat were affected. She is confined to her bed and is not permitted to talk. It was also discovered that Malcolm, one of the boys we baptized this Bible school, had sore places on his lungs that would develop into T. B. if not checked. He is now in the preventorium taking "building up" treatments.

Bro. Andrews, a mail clerk not yet on the regular list, has been called back into the service and has been serving from Washington to Kentucky. His mother, sixty-eight years old, has been caring for the children in his absence. She did her work nobly and well until she fell and broke her hip. In addition to the broken hip, she has developed tuberculosis, and will have to go to the sanitorium as soon as she is able. This means that the home will have to be broken up and that two boys and a baby girl will need to be cared for by others.

This is a very hard blow for any family that is as attached to each other as this devout family of brethren are. Bro. Andrews requests that the brethren pray for them in this their hour of need. Each member of this family firmly believes that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much".

To Bro. Andrews' request, I will add my own. Will not all that firmly believe in prayer offer the same for this family? I know them to be very devoted to their God. Theirs is one of the few homes in which there is daily family worship. (What a blessed thing that is!)

Thanking you, Bro. Austin, in advance, for your kindness in bringing this to the attention of the brotherhood, I am,

Your brother in hope of better things,

Harry A. Sheets.

MORE ABOUT ZIONISM

antagonism between Jew and Arab into a rivalry more bitter than ever before: Here is how it came about:

Throughout the ages Jewry believed that some day Jehovah would send a Messiah who would lead the Chosen People back to their lost homeland and establish the supremacy of Israel over all the earth. So grandiose a vision was, obviously, not a matter of practical politics. It could come to pass only through a miracle.

Such was Jewry's traditional attitude toward Palestine—an attitude which prevailed down to the rise of the Zionist movement a generation or so ago. Zionism is thus a very recent thing, differing radically from the old Messianic idea. Before Zionism, Jewry thought only of establishing small religious communities at Jerusalem and other holy spots in Palestine. These pious groups were made up mostly of learned old men who spent their lives in prayer and who were supported by contributions from Jews everywhere. These pious communities still exist; and their members, quaintly garbed, with long beards and a mystically aloof air, flit like strange shadows from another world amid the jostling tumult of modern Jerusalem's busy streets.

Odd though it may at first sight appear, these religious zealots are strongly opposed to Zionism. Yet their attitude is strictly logical. Relying as they do upon a miraculous Messiah who will come "in God's good time," they deem it downright impious to strive for the return to Zion by worldly means. Furthermore, rigidly orthodox as they are, they look with dismay at the presence in the Zionist ranks of many Reformed Jews who disregard Judaism's elaborate ceremonial practices. May not such persons, despite their Zionist zeal, actually retard the Messiah's coming by causing Jehovah to avert His face from His people?

So reason the anti-Zionist zealots, who regard Zionism as a dangerous delusion, foredoomed to failure. Sadly they long for former days, when they prayed in peace, unmolested by their Arab neighbors.

Certain it is that until Zionism arose there was no friction between Jews and Arabs in Palestine. A small community of pious souls offered no possible menace to Arabism. Such Jews could be safely tolerated or ignored. Politically, they did not count.

Even when the first Zionist colonies were planted in Palestine, a couple of generations ago, no real trouble arose. To be sure, the Arabs tended to look askance at these newcomers from the first. However, at that time, the Arabs had more serious matters to worry about. Palestine was then a province of the Ottoman empire, and Arab grievances were focused on Turkish oppression and misrule. To Arab nationalists, dreaming dreams of future greatness, the Turk was the enemy.

It was the Great War which created the present tragic situation. When Turkey sided with Germany, the Allied powers (England, France, and the others) vowed the destruction of the Ottoman empire. That empire was a ramshackle affair, full of internal discontents which British propaganda skillfully utilized. The most likely tool was Arab nationalism. Accordingly, British agents promised the Arabs what amounted to complete independence if they would fight the Turks, and the upshot was an Arab rebellion which powerfully contributed to Turkey's ultimate defeat and the occupation of its Arab provinces—including Palestine by the British armies. At the close of the war, the Arab nationalists were wild with joy. They believed that their patriotic dreams would surely come true.

But the Arabs were in for a rude awakening. They soon found that they had been literally double-crossed—"gypped" twice over. Here is what had happened:

In the first place, at the very time when the redoubtable Colonel Lawrence and other British agents were promising the Arabs about everything in sight, the British and French governments had signed a secret treaty by which France was to get Syria while England got Palestine, Mesopotamia, and as much of the other Arab lands as she could conveniently lay hands on. That secret agreement was made in 1915.

Two years later the British government struck another bargain. The war had reached its climax. England stood literally with her back to the wall. That was the moment chosen by the heads of the Zionist movement to offer England valuable support in return for an official recognition of their aims. The deal was made, and in November, 1917, came the famous Balfour Declaration, which is rightly held to be the charter of Zionism. This momentous document reads as follows:

"His Majesty's Government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of that object; it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

The Balfour Declaration was duly accepted by Britain's allies, and was ratified in the Treaty of Versailles. When Britain was given a mandate from the League of Nations over Palestine, the Declaration was incorporated in the commission by which the mandatory government was bound.

However, there was one party which most emphatically did not ratify the Balfour Declaration. This was the Arabs. From the Versailles Conference to the present hour, the Arabs have denounced it furiously, and they have refused to cooperate with the mandate government so long as the declaration remains in effect. Time and again, Arab spokesmen have warned that there will be no real peace in Palestine until the Zionist "national home" policy is abandoned. At the height of the recent riots, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, the religious head of the Palestine Moslems and their ablest leader, stated publicly:

tions of which may soon be heard in every corner of Moslem Arabia. We are faced at this moment with a grave national rebellion in which we will have the sympathy and if need be the support not only of the Moslem Arabs of Syria, Egypt, and North Africa, but of the whole of Arabia with its many millions of people. The whole of Arabia is aroused."

And when we recall the bloody uprisings and ceaseless unrest throughout the Arab world during the past decade, from Mesopotamia and Syria clear across North Africa to distant Morocco, we must realize that the temper of Arabism is waxing fiercer from year to year. Yet confronting the Arab stands the Zionist Jew, legally entrenched in Palestine, thrilling with the long-repressed hopes of ages, and backed by the powerful support of Jewry throughout the world.

FUTURE INDIGNATION

By C. W. Dean

HAVING IDENTIFIED SATAN, our next concern is to know who the wild beast is, to whom Satan gives his power and throne and great authority, by referring to the seventh chapter of Daniel, dealing with the end of time and the restoration of the kingdom to Israel. In this chapter Daniel beholds four monstrous animals coming up from the vast sea, differing one from another, the foremost as a lioness, the second like a bear, the third as a leopard and had four heads, and the fourth was a nondescript, terrible and awful, and different from all the animals before it (as to position) and had ten horns. It eats all the earth and threshes and pulverizes it.

Daniel became terrified at the vision and drew near the messenger and requested an exact interpretation of it all. The messenger made known to him the interpretation of the declarations, hence we have no need for theorizing the matter. The vast sea is a figure for the peoples and nations of the earth, verified by the unequivocal statement of the messenger that the beasts are kings and kingdoms. These monstrous animals—they are four—are four kings which shall rise out of the earth. Dan. 7:17. So he says that the fourth animal is a fourth kingdom coming on the earth that is different from all (other) kingdoms. It shall eat all the earth, and thresh it, and pulverize it. Daniel preserves these declarations in his heart, and later, when the messenger is giving him further visions concerning events of the end of time, he cries out, My lord, what is after these things? And he said, Go, Daniel, for the words are stopped up and sealed until the era of the end. Dan. 12:8.

But to John, in the unveiling of Jesus Christ, the era of the end was made known. So we will turn to a study of the Patmos visions and get the revelations of what Daniel asked to see and was denied. In other words, Daniel in his visions beholds four monstrous beasts in the earth at the era of the end, with the fourth, the terrible and awful nondescript beast, eating, threshing, and pulverizing, but is not permitted to see the outcome of his works. To John is given knowledge of the beast after he has accomplished his work. He describes it as follows: And it (the dragon) was standing on the sand of the sea, and I perceived a wild beast ascending out of the sea, having ten horns and seven heads, and on its horns ten diadems, and on its heads blasphemous names. And the wild beast which I perceived was like a leopard, and its feet were as a bear's, and its mouth was the mouth of a lion, and the dragon gives it its power and its throne and great authority. Rev. 13:1-3. Here John gives us a composite picture of the four beasts of Daniel, which may be summed up as follows:

1.—The Lioness	1 head	0 horns
2.—The Bear	1 head	0 horns
3.—The Leopard	4 heads	0 horns
4.—Nondescript	1 head	10 horns
	7 heads	10 horns

Here John's vision brings before us the final act of the world's drama at the end of time, after the terrible awful nondescript beast of Daniel's vision has devoured the three other beasts which were before (in front) of it.

Let us not forget that while these wild beasts are kingdoms, yet as it was in Nebuchadnezzar's day, religion will be the object of rule. Worship rather than rule will be the dominant note. Luke 4:7. And we may be assured that the wild beast here brings before us graphic pictures of kingdoms and confederacies bound together by a common religion. The cry of our day is federation of government, business, religion, politics and society, and the urge will grow stronger as the end of time draws nearer.

The three eastern beasts will be kingdoms dominated by the three great religions of those countries, Buddhism with 460,000,000 followers in China and Japan, Brahmanism with 230,000,000 communicants in India, and Mohammedanism with 220,000,000 worshipers in Turkey and adjacent countries, while the terrible and awful nondescript beast, with ten horns, west of the other three, can be none other than federated Christendom with ten allied Christian military powers.

Therefore according to Daniel and John in time, the three eastern beasts will be conquered and absorbed by Christendom into one great world religio-political monarchy which will worship as demanded by the dragon, and the wild beast, who is the desolator, the king of strong presence, the man of lawlessness, the eighth and last head of world dominion of human government. It will be of utmost help to bear in mind that this empire will not be limited to any ancient boundaries, but will include every tribe and people and language and nation—all who dwell on the earth will be included in its DOMINION.

This brings us to the consideration of the False Prophet in Part 4.

THE EARTH CAME TO BE WITHOUT FORM

By Dorothy Krogh

IN THE BEGINNING GOD CREATED the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep." Genesis 1:1 and 2.

This passage from the Scriptures is often interpreted by the average reader of the Bible to mean that the earth was created without form and void in the beginning. They thus take the beginning to be about four thousand years before the birth of Christ, or about six thousand years ago. However, many Bible students now believe that this is a misinterpretation.

The Hebrew verb that is translated "was" in the second verse of the first chapter of Genesis is translated "became", "came to pass", and "be", in the sense of "become", in other instances in the Bible. The words "form and void" in Genesis 1:2 are tohu va bohu in the Hebrew. Isaiah 45:18 says, "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else." The Hebrew word that is here translated "vain" is the same word tohu that is translated "form" in Genesis 1:2. Therefore it could not have been created without form, tohu, but it must have become without form, we do not know how long after it was created.

This interpretation of the first two verses of the first chapter of Genesis explains many things to us. It brings about an agreement between the Bible and the theory of science that the earth has existed millions of years. The Bible says that, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth". We do not know when the beginning was, so the length of time that the earth may have been in existence is unlimited in our knowledge. It was probably inhabited, as Isaiah 45:18 says that it was created not in vain, that is, not without form, but to be inhabited. That vegetation existed is proved by the fossils and remains which science declares to be many thousands and perhaps millions of years old.

The earth was created in a state of perfection, Genesis 1:1. The next verse tells us of the condition into which it fell about four thousand years before Christ. It became a formless waste and whatever life existed on the earth was destroyed. God then brought the earth into its present condition as described in Genesis 1:3 to 31. From this time on we have a record of the earth. Before that time the Bible gives no knowledge of the condition of the earth or the length of time it existed.

The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?
The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?—
Psa. 27:1. Helen M. Doll, 3934 Ridge Ave., Dayton, Ohio

NEED FOR STUDY

DEAR EDITOR: The recent articles by our brethren, C. W. Dean and J. A. Van Horn, certainly contain considerable matter that excites interest. The writer feels that in our desire for Bible research, interest should not be obtained at the expense of accuracy, nor should it launch out into that which by its very nature can only remain in the problematical category, if not indeed in the unprofitable and questionable. Both of these characteristics appear in the articles referred to. One may state one's own opinion quite freely in an article, but to advocate it as Bible doctrine without definite Scripture statement, or to imply that it is Scripture teaching is surely a responsible and serious matter.

It is evident that many young Christians are readers of The Herald, and for their sakes, also for the good name of our magazine, let it be said that while we believe in and encourage reverent inquiry on any scriptural topic, we are careful that there shall be reasonable accuracy of Scripture statement, and next reasonable scriptural grounds for advocating that the Scriptures do actually uphold the theory advanced.

Without going into the articles in detail, in fairness to our contributors, I give one or two illustrations of the class of statement mentioned above, though others equally important occur.

First: Our Bro. Dean seriously misquotes Scripture when he says that "the answer (of the Lord Jesus) was that he, John, will tarry till I come". Such was not the answer, nor did John correct it but the thought that was applied to it, and unintentionally our brother's misstatements of Scripture lead him to a misapplication of it in more than one instance.

Second: His remarks with reference to an appearance of an angel in Revelation being the fulfillment of John 21:22 and also the fulfillment of the promised Comforter are based upon wrong construction of Scripture statement and must in consequence be erroneous.

The statements concerning Orion and Pleiades by Bro. Van Horn are highly wrought pictures of imagination gleaned from unwarrantable inferences, and cannot be substantiated by a consideration of the context referred to.

Scripture reveals comparatively little about the heavenly bodies that so engage our awe-inspired admiration, and while it has long been the writer's cherished opinion that we shall some day know more about these shining spheres to which God himself has directed our gaze than the meager information at present within our grasp, he would in a brotherly spirit urge caution lest we bring the name of Jehovah into reproach.

The writer himself in his study of Scripture is more and more realizing the need of careful study and preparation with prayer before presenting the results obtained, for it is no light responsibility to seek to lead others into the truth.

With every kindly wish, yours faithfully,

R. H. Judd.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

GOD OVER ALL

Sunday, October 27—Isaiah 45:5-25

UPON THIS FIRST DAY of the week as we again pause in life to commemorate with holy reverence God's great work in resurrecting His Son unto immortality, the mind may well bow in recognition to the fact that God is over all things. As Maker, Creator, Provider, Director, Sustainer, Ruler there is none other. To Him and Him alone the fullest of respect and honor and devotion are due from man. When man stops to realize the evident greatness of God and the evident smallness, weakness, dependency of man, he can but ask the question, "What is man that thou art mindful of him?" In response to this man can hardly help but realize his debt of honor and devotion to God.

THE HUSBANDMAN WORTHY OF THE HARVEST

How aptly the Savior's parable of the vineyard brings to a new and deeper realization the attitude of not a few servants. The Savior illustrates by the statement that the laborers, servants, are sometimes given to deny the owner his rightful dues, even to the extent of killing some who had come to collect for him.

When one comes to apply the teachings of this parable to the attitude of many towards God, how true it is to fact. Few men honor God with His rights from them. As the owner engages laborers for the accomplishment of his own plans and for his personal realizations, so God oversees the world with a view to His own purposes. True, He looks to the interest of His creatures, but the great end in view is the realization of His own plans. How much we as laborers owe to God!

GOD WANTS HIS SON TO COLLECT

Tuesday, October 29—Mark 12:13-17

The people had just listened to the parable which we read yesterday. The leaders approached Him to question what should be their tribute to Caesar. They would entrap Him in His speech. They would humble Him. How like the husbandmen who would kill the son that the inheritance might be theirs!

Is it not well that you and I, as Christians, should more fully recognize our rightful daily obligations to Jesus and not endeavor to divert our dues to Him unto other interests?

OUR OBLIGATION TO HUMAN GOVERNMENT

Wednesday, October 30—Romans 13:1-10

Even upon Gentile thrones, even thrones that are averse to God, "He removeth kings and setteth up kings."—Daniel 2:21.

The human race cannot well afford to be without leaders or government. A leader guides the migrating flock of geese. A leader herds the sheep upon the mountainside. Leaders are needed everywhere. God has ordained that man shall have recognized leaders, recognized government.

God himself is over all, but under Him He has appointed angels, kings and others to lead, each in his respective assignment. God has ordained human government. He directs that every soul should "be subject unto the higher powers".

In agreement with this, it is necessary for every individual to exercise proper recognition and obedience to those in authority, always recognizing God as supreme Authority over all. Only as the individual lends himself to such plans and to such Authority, can he rightfully feel that he is living dutifully.

MUTUAL RESPONSIBILITY

Thursday, October 31—1 Peter 2:13-25

Every individual is dependent upon his fellows. For his livelihood, the cobbler must have the patronage of others; for his necessary accommodations, the king must have the service of the cobbler. Most people are necessarily dependent upon the baker even as the baker is dependent upon them. No man is independent of others.

The same is true in religious life. Mutual Christian dependence binds all together. "Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the king." Christianity does not release one from service and loyalty to his fellows but directs that service shall be given with a true realization that it is righteous, Christian.

THE MOB SPIRIT REBUKED

Friday, November 1—Acts 19:31-41

There is probably no instance in history where the mob, instigated by the spirit which takes law and authority into its own hands, has been justified. A stampeding mob of humans is probably just as wild and irresponsible as is a stampeding herd of wild cattle. People composing such a mob become rash, irrational, uncontrollable. Every precept of recognition of just rights of others is trampled under foot. Jesus was crucified by the mob spirit; Paul was incarcerated by the same. The Christian, who at all times remains loyal to the Father and to His laws and commandments, is he who is best fortified against yielding to such unchristian spirit.

ALL STRENGTH DERIVED FROM GOD

Saturday, November 2—John 19:1-11

"Thou hadst not been holding any authority against me had it not been given thee from above."—Rotherham's Translation. The sovereignty of God is at all times supreme. He who diverted the Babylonian king to live with beasts and fowls for seven years, He who engulfed the Egyptian army in the Red Sea, is powerful at any moment to thwart every evil attempt of man. But throughout these passing ages God has granted or permitted evil at many times. Except such permission were given from above neither Pilate nor Nero, Caesar nor the Sultan could have exercised themselves in any of their nefarious works. Pilate's misuse of government was no proof that government is wrong. It was evidence that man, in whatever walk of life he occupies, is a failure and, in comparison with Jehovah, is altogether unreliable. Therefore in all things honor God first and most. Honor those who as leaders and directors are honoring God.

CUMBERED ABOUT MUCH SERVING

Christ never asks of us such busy labor
As leaves no time for resting at His feet;
The waiting attitude of expectation
He oft times counts a service most complete.

He sometimes wants our ear—our rapt attention—
That He some sweetened secret may impart;
'Tis always in the time of deepest silence,
That heart finds deepest fellowship with heart.

We sometimes wonder why our Lord has placed us
Within a space so narrow, so obscure,
That nothing we call work can find an entrance;
There's only room to suffer—to endure.

Well, God loves patience! Souls that dwell in stillness, Doing the little things, or resting quite,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission,
Be just as useful in the Father's sight,

As they who grapple with some giant evil,
Clearing a path that every eye may see.
Our Savior cares for cheerful acquiescence,
Rather than for a busy ministry.

And yet He does love service, where 'tis given
By grateful love that clothes itself in deed;
But work that's done beneath the scourge of duty,
Be sure to such He gives but little heed.

Then seek to please Him, whatsoe'er He bids thee;
Whether to do, to suffer, to lie still!
'Twill matter little by what path He led us,
If in it all we sought to do His will.—Selected.

THE BOOK OF NUMBERS

By Lyman Booth

THIS BOOK DERIVED ITS NAME from the repeated numberings of the people of Israel, especially the one at the beginning and the one at the ending of their wanderings in the wilderness. It comprises a period of thirty-eight years and three months from the giving of the law, "the first day of the second month of the second year" of the Exodus, to the first day of the fifth month of the fortieth year. The book is called, in the original, Va-yedabber, from the word with which it begins. It begins with an account of the arrangement of the twelve tribes into the regular encampment in four divisions under their several leaders around the tabernacle, the care of which and of all its furniture, was committed to the Levites in three divisions, according to their families.

We have the account of the breaking up of their encampment at Sinai; the first census; the arrangement of the army; the service of the priestly tribe, with the account of their charge; the cloudy pillar; the regulations of their wanderings. We see the march from Sinai to the borders of Canaan, including the appeal of Moses to Jethro; the burning of Taberah; the giving of the quails; the sedition of Aaron and Miriam and the latter's leprosy; the sending of the spies into Canaan and their report, and the murmuring of the people. We learn later of the rash attack on the Canaanites and its repulse; the events connected with their thirty-eight years of wandering; the rebellion of Korah and the punishment inflicted upon him; the death of Miriam; the sin of Moses and Aaron which was the thing that prohibited them from entering into the promised land. We read of their circuit round Edom; the death of Aaron; the war and conquest of the Amorites; the event of Balaam; the sin of Baal-peor and its consequences; offerings and vows; the war with the Midianites. Then follows a brief summary of their journeys and the building of the cities of refuge to which one might go and find safe shelter until proven either guilty or innocent of a criminal charge.

The book of Numbers contains many specimens of poetry, some of which are beautiful and give an idea of the character of the times in which they were written. A fair specimen is the chants which were the signal for the Ark to move forward when the people moved, and for it to rest when they went into camp. A similar song in commemoration of the victory of Israel over their enemies from the book of the wars of Jehovah, namely, the "Song of the Well". It has been suggested that this is the well that was mentioned in Numbers 21:17, 18, where the people came to draw water, also the well where Jesus rested and conversed with the woman of Samaria, it being Jacob's well.

In reading the narratives of this book, one cannot fail to be impressed with the fact that the writer was truthful, because he freely exposes the errors of his own kin, of Aaron and Miriam, and relates the offence which excluded him from the promised land.

In confirmation of the testimonies of antiquity, Moses wrote the books which bear his name, which fact is sustained by all the sacred writers, and especially referred to by our Lord and His apostles. It is worthy of note that these books are referred to many times in other parts of the Scriptures as things of firmly established credit, which never could have been had not the books been well known by all Jewish writers. A few references in the New Testament will serve to show that our Lord and His apostles regarded them as true, else why did they mention them at all? Besides the many instances in which the Old Testament writers use parts of the writings of Moses we have, in the New Testament, our Lord referring to the brazen serpent being lifted up by Moses in John 3:14; while Paul mentions the serpents which destroyed the people in 1 Cor. 10:9. Notice also that the sin of Baal-peor is mentioned in 1 Cor. 10:8, and by Peter in 2 Peter 2:15, 16; while John, in the book of Revelation, refers to the sin of Balaam in 2:14.

Though the children of Israel were grievously burdened and mercilessly mistreated while in Egypt by their taskmasters, yet in their freedom and wanderings under the guiding and protecting hand of God, they became dissatisfied. They murmured and complained bitterly and "fell a lusting", for the leeks and onions and other supplies from the field and garden. Human appetites then were the same as now, always craving something not to be had. Many professed Christians fail to practice self-denial and are not content with present conditions. They seem to cling to a life of ease and pleasure, and like Israel can not forget the leeks and garlic. Israel's desire for the things they left in Egypt lost them the opportunity of entering into the promised land. There is also danger ahead of the Christian, if he clings too closely to the good things and pleasures of life, of losing the opportunity of entering into that rest provided for the pure and the holy.

There are many parts of the law, both moral and ceremonial, intermixed with other matter through the book, all of which confirm the testimony of antiquity, that Moses wrote the book and this conclusion is supported in an especial manner by our Lord and His apostles. In fact, these laws and ceremonies and several accounts are frequently referred to in many portions of Scripture written many centuries after Moses wrote his accounts. Israel has clung tenaciously to the writings of Moses during all the years after they were given.

Whether Israel obeyed those laws and conformed to those ceremonies or not does not alter the fact that Israel still remains as a living monument to the truth of God's Word and the wonder of His mercy for His people.

THE EARTH CAME TO BE WITHOUT FORM

By Richard Le Crone

RECENTLY, WHILE I WAS READING one of our daily newspapers, my eye fell upon a cartoon which held my attention for an undue length of time. The cartoon was rather an unusual one. In the center of the cartoon was the portrait of one of the most prominent men of our times. Buzzing about his head and darting at him and trying to pierce his skin with their sharp proboscides were a number of what appeared to be mosquitoes with human features. They carried the pencil and pad of the reporter and author.

In explanation there was shown at the bottom of the picture a group of men busily engaged with their typewriters. Upon their lips were words similar to the following: "This scandal will cause a great stir"; "I ought to clean up on this if I can get past the censures"; "I knock the 'big bugs', it sells good and gives me a lot of publicity". As I meditated upon this I began to wonder if perhaps this was not the explanation of a lot of the adverse criticism and skepticism which has lately been published in the United States, in regard to that highest of all Authorities, and His Law—God and the Bible.

The men represented in the cartoon as mosquitoes, are professional critics. They earn their living by criticising and commenting upon the writings and works of other men, both individually and collectively. They have found that they can attract the most attention and therefore make the most money by commenting on and especially by criticising, usually destructively, the things which are most vital to the people, and therefore most in the public eye. If a fault can be found in something in which the people have placed a great deal of faith and confidence, the author who points out that flaw will be widely read and will profit thereby. In doing this, however, they sometimes become over zealous and attack things which should not be tampered with and find flaws and errors where there are none.

But what has all this to do with God or the Bible? For generations God through His Law, the Bible, has been recognized as the supreme Authority of the world. They are the Ruler and the Law which the people felt could not fail. But now some of our over zealous critics are seeking to capitalize this faith by turning their attention to this highest of Authorities and are presuming to find fault with Him and to pick flaws in His Word. In short, they are criticising the Bible.

For example, some of the so-called "higher critics" tell us that the Bible cannot be authentic because it teaches that the world is only some six or seven thousand years old while science has proved it to be millions of years old. But here, as always, we find that the Word of God is perfect and if properly understood will not conflict with science.

In Gen. 1:1, 2 we find this statement: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep".

Now here is what the critics have overlooked. The word "was" in the first part of the second verse is translated from a Hebrew word which in other places is translated "became", "came to be", etc. The earth was not without form and void in the sense that it was created thus and had always been that way, but in the sense that some time after creation it came to be formless. According to our usage the passage would more properly read: "And the earth became without form and void".

As to the length of time between the creation and the time when the earth became formless or more literally "waste", we have no way of knowing. The scientists may be right about its age, but the critics are mistaken about science and the Bible being at odds. Science is merely a revelation of God's natural and unwritten law, and His written and unwritten laws, if they are understood, will never conflict.

WHAT IF?

By M. A. Woodward

IT WAS MY PRIVILEGE to attend the morning service at the Grand Rapids South Lawn Church, Sunday, Oct. 6. It was the day to elect Sunday School officers, so I had plenty of time to sit and think before the preaching service began. When that little army of children and young people hustled into their seats at the call of the bell, and entered so heartily into the singing of the beautiful hymns, I thought what a tragedy it would be if any one of our earnest workers should lose the Christ spirit in some hour of trial! Suppose the children, young people and new converts should realize what had happened, realize that the Adamic spirit was showing itself to be uppermost in their lives and controlling their thoughts, actions and even the expression of their faces! What if the Christ life should be lost, the glad, happy look on their faces turned to a hard, unhappy look, knowing that others felt the influence of it all? To wonder if we could ever recall it and show them we were so sorry to have lost the Christ? To know it would mean bitter tears, earnest prayers, heartache, and constant searching to find the blessed Peacemaker and enthrone Him again in our lives!

The words of Christ came to my mind, "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil", and I prayed earnestly that this prayer might be fulfilled in each of their lives.

The subject of the Sunday School lesson for Oct. 13, also came forcibly to my mind, "Keeping Fit for the Sake of Others", and the marvelous golden text, "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's".

This is what one of God's saints meant Sunday after our service at Dutton. He came up to me and said, "Sister, are you rich?" I said, "Yes, rich in Jesus' love." He repeated the question, and then said, "If you are not full of God, you are dead. If you are, you are rich." How true it is! We are empty, dead, without God. "Therefore, glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

O, the human wrecks strewn along the highway of life, because they have lost sight of God. Let us all try to find and keep Him in our lives. The Christ asked the Father to bestow upon His children with the last words of His beautiful prayer just before His betrayer met Him with that unholy kiss, "And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it; that the love wherewith thou hast loved me may be in them, and I in them."

"PROVE ME NOW HEREWITH, SAITH THE LORD OF HOSTS, IF I WILL NOT OPEN YOU THE WINDOWS OF HEAVEN".—MALACHI 3:10.

BY THE TIME THIS PAPER reaches you, Illinois Bereans will be well into the fourth week of Self-Denial Month. In other years there have been those outside of Illinois who also practiced denying themselves for these thirty-one days and added their savings to ours to be used in behalf of our needy brothers and sisters. If any of you in other states care to join in this month's self-sacrifice we will be glad.

This practice of self-denial is a wonderful thing. Some of us who think we give up so much are surprised at the drop we take in our own estimation when we discover how little we really give to our God and how much we keep for ourselves.

Therefore it is intensely interesting to practice real sacrifice for a month. During this time we are trying to remember that true sacrifice, the kind that is acceptable to God, is not the presentation of things we do not care for, but the offering up of the best of all we have and consequently the things we want most.

It has been encouraging to talk to different Bereans who are taking this matter earnestly to heart and enjoying the sacrifice. Illinois should be blessed abundantly in her service this year because of this splendid beginning. All contributions should be mailed early in November to the state Berean treasurer, Mrs. Esta Starbuck, 420 S. Third St., Rockford, Illinois.

A NEW START AT LOS ANGELES

On behalf of our Berean class, it is with pleasure that I announce the commencement of a new session under the able leadership of Bro. G. E. Marsh, our newly elected president.

To meet the general desire we are following the senior Berean study outlines, alternating with studies on prophecy, which should also prove of value and interest in these latter days of unfolding revelation, for those who have the ears that hear and the eyes that see.

A. Leonard Brady, Secretary-Treasurer.

We are especially glad to report the organization given below. The Ripley class has been organized and reorganized in the past, and now as a fresh start is made we are earnestly praying the Father to bless and prosper His work and workers there. Give us your hand, Ripley; here's ours!

THIS TIME WE STAY

The young people of the Church of God at Ripley organized a Berean class on September 22, 1929.

The following officers were elected: President, Gerald Cooper; Vice-president, Wayne Laning; Secretary and Treasurer, Mildred Fey; Assistant Secretary and Treasurer, Margaret Cooper.

We have enrolled fourteen members so far.

Mildred Fey, Sec.

Here is another splendid report from the South Bend, Indiana, Bereans. Such reports put heart into our work everywhere. Let's have many more of them!

CLASSES RESUMED AT SOUTH BEND

After finishing the old Berean books we discontinued our Berean class the last Sunday in June, and resumed it on the 29th of September.

On that date about thirteen members met at the home of Sr. Lydia Railsback and started the lessons in our new Berean books. We have several new ones in attendance and hope that we may be able to keep them interested.

On October 13th, we met and elected our officers for the oncoming year. Lynn Leighty was reelected President. This makes the third year in succession that he has served as such. Harold Smith was elected Vice-president; and Frances Boyle was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

So far we have had a good attendance and a lively manifestation of interest. We hope that other Bereans everywhere are enjoying the wonderful Word of God that has been outlined in our new Berean books.

Frances Byers, Ex-Secretary.

NOTICE

Articles for the Berean page should be sent in through the chairman of your state literary committee. Will all contributors living in states which are organized please take notice of this request. All others send direct to the Berean editor. This is to assist the state literary committees in keeping their reports straight.

RESPECT FOR RIGHTFUL AUTHORITY

YEARS AGO, whenever one country was captured by another, the people of that country were forced to give gifts, or pay money to their captors. This money was called tribute money and was a kind of tax.

Now at the time Jesus was on earth the Jews were under the power of the Roman Emperor, Caesar, and had to pay him tribute. This tribute money was most displeasing to the Pharisees. They were a class of Jews who pretended to be very righteous, but at heart were very wicked. They hated Jesus and were always trying to entangle Him in some argument.

One day the Pharisees made up a deceitful plan by which they hoped to make Jesus say something that would bring Him severe punishment. They went to Jesus and after trying to flatter Him by saying they knew how true He was, asked Him this question: "What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute money unto Caesar, or not?"

If He said it was lawful for the Jews to pay tribute to Caesar, they would accuse Him of being disloyal to the Jews. If He said it was unlawful, they would accuse Him of being disloyal to Caesar. However Jesus saw through their scheme, and told them to bring Him a piece of the tribute money. He asked them whose image was on the coin. They replied it was Caesar's.

Then He answered their question: "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's." The Pharisees could find no fault with these words. Moreover, they wondered at His wisdom.

Now what did Jesus mean when He said, "Render therefore, unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's"? Simply that we must love God with all our hearts, and also obey the laws of the country in which we live.

But would not any real Christian do that anyway? Paul, in a letter to the Romans, said that everyone should be subject to the higher powers. These higher powers were really ordained by God so that in obeying them we are obeying God. There is no need for anyone to be afraid if he is doing good. Only those who do evil need fear.

"Render, therefore, to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour."

REMEMBER—A real Christian will keep the laws of the land.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read about the Caesars.
2. Read First Peter 2:13-16.
3. Memorize the thirteenth verse.

WHERE FIND?—"The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good."

NOTE BOOK

Page 1.—Copy the "Where Find?" verse.

Reverse side.—Write names of the officials of your country, or some laws to obey.

TRY AGAIN

"If you find your task is hard,
Try again;
Time will bring you your reward,
Try again;
All that other folks can do,
Why, with patience, may not you?
Only keep this rule in view,
Try again."

Devotional Reading: Matthew 5:13-20.

GOLDEN TEXT

Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers.—Rom. 13:1.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Making Effective the Will of the Community.

Basic Truth: Eternal vigilance is required to make practical any law against human selfishness.

Outline: I. Respect for God's Authority. II. Respect for Human Government. III. Proper Christian Attitude Toward Law. IV. Respect for Church Government.

I. Respect for God's Authority. "I am the Lord; and there is none else."—Isa. 45:18. The Hebrew is "I am Jehovah." I. e., the great covenant-making God. As such, He is supreme over all the earth; His authority should go unquestioned. Being a God of love, His sole end in government is to benefit His governed creatures. Being Lord of all the earth, He must have knowledge covering all and His law must necessarily be for the betterment alike of all.

The finite mind which is incapable of grasping the larger problems is in no position to question, oppose or resist Jehovah's rulings. The curse and every sorrow that ever came upon man are results of man's disobedience to God's law. No such disobedience ever profited man. To disrespect for God's law can probably be attributed every evil condition.

II. Respect for Human Government. Since God turned the government of the earth over to men, Dan. 2, man's law has been the only governing control of society. It would be impossible for the world to advance if there were no law, no orderly arrangement of society. Christians especially, according to Paul and Peter, should respect every law of the land that is for good. He who breaks the nation's law is a criminal whether his breach be known to others or not.

Today throughout large sections many so-called Christians are breaking the law in spirit in that they are winking at the violations of others; while still others are excusing themselves for breaches of the law in that others are habitually doing likewise. In either case he is bidding the law-breaker good speed, cf. 2 John 10, and is partaker of his evil deeds.

The one U. S. law today which is definitely intended for good but which is most commonly opposed is that of the 18th amendment. He who opposes any law, whether or not he be Christian, merely because it does not suit his own taste is undoubtedly a traitor in principle to his country, as well as a definite opposer of God's arrangement. Cf. Rom. 13:2.

III. Christian Attitude Toward Law. The Christian, being an avowed servant of God, is duty bound to uphold the righteous laws of the land both in principle and in conduct. The one great hindrance today to the successful proclamation of the gospel is the all prevailing spirit of lawlessness. The lawless have little hearing for the Word of God. If for no other reason than that of promoting the spread of the gospel, the Christian should diligently practice and uphold obedience to the law.

IV. Respect for Church Government. Over the community of the church God has made the elders overseers. See Acts 20:17, 28. In the church as in the nation, the individual is by Scripture urged to respect rightful authority. The church can no more be governed and cared for without its own proper law than can the nation. Just as the government of the nation is for the nation's good, so is the government of the church for the good of the church.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: God's Sovereignty.

Adventists look forward to Christ's kingdom as the medium through which God's sovereignty will be established and become operative among all peoples. But Paul, speaking of existing governments, says "there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God." Rom. 13:1. Hence God's sovereignty is and always has been established and operative among men. The difference between the status of God's sovereignty during Christ's rule and its status now is that then His sovereignty will work out evidently and fully the depths of His wisdom and love; and, in addition, it will be recognized and acknowledged by mankind; whereas now it works wisdom and love as through a glass darkly and is recognized and acknowledged only by those who view life through eyes enlightened by Christ's faith. These, because they recognize and acknowledge present governments as mediums of God's sovereign will for the present, must needs be subject to their laws not only for wrath's but for conscience's sake. The laws may seem foolish, or even just cause for rebellion, but Christ's people must render obedience. This they know—God's sovereign will never operates through Christ and His people to accomplish change by means of disobedience, rioting and rebellion, though His sovereign will does operate through others in these ways. It is through Christ that God's sovereign will works out evidently and fully the depths of His wisdom and love.

Christ's followers obey fully the laws of whatever government they may be under, for they recognize them as the expression of God's sovereign will for the time, and for a purpose of which He alone may know.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Obeying the Law.

Disrespect for authority seems to be one of the greatest of modern shortcomings. On every hand, we see young and old flaunting disobedience in the face of the law, and seeming to flatter themselves on being able to do it. If we carefully observe such lives, can we truthfully concede that they are worth while either to themselves or to those about them?

Christ taught obedience to the law of the land to His followers, and Paul tells us to "be subject unto the higher powers. . . . Render therefore to all their dues. . . . Owe no man anything, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law." How does loving one another fulfill the whole law? What will be one's conduct who does that? Will he be careful of his actions both because of their results upon himself as well as upon his associates?

And for a greater reason than any of these, the Christian will be careful of obeying the law of the land and that is, because of the reflection upon his Master which may result from his actions.

Let us all consider each action in life as to the possible reflection first upon ourselves, next upon those with whom we come in contact, and last but greatest of all, upon the One whom we should serve and obey above all others.—M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Obey.

Read the story of the parable given in Mark 12:1-11 and you will see what Jesus had to say about respecting rightful authority. The people were not pleased with it at all. They sent Pharisees to question Jesus and try to make Him contradict himself. They said, "Is it right to pay tribute (something like taxes) to Caesar?" He knew they were trying to catch Him, so He said, "Bring me a penny."

They brought Him a penny, and He asked, "Whose picture is on this penny?" They answered, "Caesar's." He replied, "Very well then, give Caesar the things that belong to Caesar, but remember to give to God the things that are God's." At this they could not answer.

We should not be afraid or desire to disobey the officers that are over us. They are our friends to guard our very lives and property. As long as we obey the law, we need have no fear of the officers. Whose fault is it if we steal, or drive a car carelessly and then get caught by an officer? Should we growl at the officers, or reform ourselves?

If we obey the laws of our land and make good citizens of ourselves, we are more apt to be willing to obey God's laws.—V. C. T.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

The final regular appointment for the season will be held at the Salem church near Marshall, on Saturday night and Sunday, Oct. 26 and 27. We trust that there may be a full representation on this the last trip of the year.

F. E. Siple.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Errors will occur in the best regulated businesses and such was the case when The Herald carried the church anniversary announcement a couple of weeks ago. Instead of our anniversary being held on the 7th of October, as announced, it is to be held October 27th. Some of the best musical talent in Grand Rapids has been secured for the day and if plans meet the Father's approval we are going to have a big day. Come and enjoy it with us.

C. E. Randall, Pastor.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

Rally Day at the Church of the Golden Rule was Oct. 13, and it was a real Rally Day in every respect. The Sunday School achieved another record attendance, this time of 148. After the lesson there was a short program by several of the younger classes. Following this the pins and certificates for one year's attendance were presented by Mr. Halls, the Superintendent, to those who had earned them. October 1 finished our first year's work, so that the observance of its completion worked in very well with our Rally Day. About 30 received their certificates and pins for regular attendance for the whole year.

Nor was the Sunday School the only phase of the work to observe the occasion. It was a Rally Day for the church as well, and over 70 came for the morning service, almost twice the usual number. The evening service, which rarely boasts as many as 15, had about 50 present. A special effort had been made to get the people out for this one day. Everyone felt that it was well worth while, and that our Second Rally Day had been a real success.

M. W. Lyon.

MICHIGAN FALL CONFERENCE

The Michigan Fall Conference will be held at Coats Grove beginning Friday evening, November 1, and continuing over Sunday. Bro. Jas. A. Patrick, of Ashland, Ohio, will be the speaker. We not only invite but urge as many as possible to attend these meetings.

Wm. A. Hanson, Sec.,
1840 Union Blvd. S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Howard Leroy Dawson was born to Bro. and Sr. Rollo Dawson on Oct. 3. Grandpa and Grandma Saylor are wearing a broad smile.

Sr. B. F. Cook, of 555 Ninth Avenue, San Francisco, made a few brief calls on relatives and friends in and around Los Angeles, Oct. 6th and 7th. We wish she would come again and stay longer.

Now that summer vacations are over, the sisters of the church have resumed the Ladies' Aid meetings, to be held twice each month. They met Oct. 10th and sewed for Sr. Railsback. The next meeting will be in the nature of a shower at the home of Sr. Saylor in honor of the new grandson.

We are glad to report that Sr. C. A. Nokes who has been quite ill for several weeks is slowly improving. We trust that she will soon be able to attend church services.

Meetings are held at the home of Bro. and Sr. Squires, of Lynwood, each 2nd and 4th Sunday afternoons. Bro. Marsh has kindly consented to take the lead in this effort also and we trust that the interest will increase.

WANTED: Ten to read "A Loan Will Be Necessary" under "Doings at Headquarters" and ACT.

The Queries Editor is waiting for answers from Bereans, here, there, and everywhere. Won't you try them individually, or in your class work? Thank you.

Bro. F. L. Austin will hold services with the brethren at Fonthill, Ont., Sat. evening, Oct. 26. All those living nearby are urged to attend.

The Annual Fall Meeting at Niagara Falls, N. Y., will be held Sunday, Oct. 27, services morning, afternoon and evening. Bro. F. L. Austin will assist the regular pastor, Bro. Gordon, at these services. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend. You will be much benefited by attending and your presence will be an inspiration to others.

Bro. and Sr. R. H. Judd, of Toronto, Ont., celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary on September 18th. The Herald wishes this estimable couple many more years of happiness together and prays that if it be God's will, they may live unto the coming of the Savior.

ROCKFORD RALLY

The faithful little band of Rockford Bereans has expanded and enlarged until now they meet regularly every Friday evening at the W. C. T. U. hall at 1904 N. Main St., Rockford, Ill. They now enjoy preaching services by Bro. F. E. Siple or Bro. Paul Johnson on the Fridays preceding the first and third Sundays of each month at 7:45 p. m., Oct. 18th being their first preaching service at the hall. Bro. Siple spoke on, "What the Coming of Christ Means to Us". There were about thirty in attendance and the interest was very good.

Friday evening, Nov. 1, will be their Rally Day. Bro. Siple will be the speaker. Those living within driving distance are cordially invited to rally round Rockford.

In the absence of Bro. F. L. Austin at Fonthill and Niagara Falls, Brothers Cecil Smead and Richard Le Crone of the Training Class, will speak for the Oregon congregation Sunday morning, Oct. 27, and Bro. Paul C. Johnson in the evening.

The Chicago church, holding their meetings in Waller Hall, second floor, at 754 N. Waller Ave., will have preaching services on Sunday, Oct. 27, 10:30 a. m. Bro. Paul Johnson will be the speaker. Everyone is invited to attend.

THE DIXON, ILLINOIS, RALLY

Sunday, Oct. 20, was Dixon's Rally Day and a full house greeted the speakers morning and afternoon. Morning services consisted of a program rendered by the wide-awake Sunday School classes and Junior choir, and a sermon by the pastor, F. E. Siple. Basket dinner at noon was enjoyed by a large number of visiting friends as well as Dixon folks, in the basement of the church.

The afternoon service was conducted by Bro. F. L. Austin, who gave a touching sermon on "The Greatest Rally Day", at the close of which Miss Lois Weitzel came forward for baptism. Lois is a member of the Junior choir and has been a regular attendant at Sunday School. She will be an asset to the church and we rejoice in her decision.

The day's services were concluded by the pastor, Bro. Siple, in a timely and inspiring message on "The Light of the World".

"The Little Church with a Big Welcome" was artistically decorated for their Rally and breathed hospitality to all who attended.

DOINGS AT HEADQUARTERS BIBLE TRAINING CLASS

The work of the Bible Training Class is moving along nicely. In Bible work a study of the Book of Genesis, in outline, is being completed at this writing. A study of Exodus will follow. The studies in Ancient History have been so planned that the periods and subjects coordinate beneficially with the Old Testament studies. Weekly test sermons before the class assist in many ways, while written themes and tests train in other ways. Two class-work articles will be found elsewhere in this issue of The Herald.

GOLDEN RULE HOME

Sr. Kilmer continues low at Golden Rule Home on account of a weak heart.

The Home table is well filled. Indeed, it has been necessary to decline two or three access to it.

The Home is, first of all, for aged and alone ones. If they do not fully occupy it, then, second, the Home offers accommodation to the members of the Bible Training Class. For them the charges are made the lowest possible. At present these two groups fill the Home.

HERALD SHOP

There are perhaps a dozen copies left of Choice Texts and Thoughts—a neat, attractive and helpful little booklet. 60 cents each.

The print shop is at present working on a book of several hundred pages.

GOLDEN RULE GREENHOUSE

The Greenhouse is being rapidly transformed in some particulars. Owing to the lateness of the season, extra help is being employed to bring the work up to date at the earliest possible time. About 8000 geranium cuttings, and 2500 small potted snapdragons, begonias, fuchsias, poinsettias, vineas, etc., have been bought in by Mr. Moore since Oct. 1. These are nearly all for spring trade. A few are for Christmas and some for next year's stock. Daily from early till late all hands are busily utilizing the present beautiful weather. Just now, the digging of bulbs, and summer plants and of potatoes, the preparation of soil for next year's needs, and the annual repair of the Greenhouse roof are being rushed.

The regrettable feature is that we do not have the crops to supply the coming fall and holiday trade without buying abnormally of fully grown plants. By next spring the income should again cover current expenses and begin to return some of the money that must now be advanced to restock and renew the business.

These labors are all in execution of the decisions of the Executive Board in session in August. Also, by same decision, a new Floral Truck—Ford—much needed to replace the old one, has been purchased.

Inasmuch as all previous profits have been utilized in the business the Board instructed your Executive-Secretary to make necessary loans to accomplish these labors.

A LOAN WILL BE NECESSARY

It will require at least $2500 to finance this work, perhaps $3000, but the Greenhouse must pay its own way. Therefore, a loan for one year is planned.

We are asking that we may place this loan among the church people—a straight business proposition. Nearby brethren have several times loaned similar amounts to the institution for similar needs. These have all been properly cared for. I am now asking that some who are farther distant will take up this loan.

Will not any brother or sister who has a few Hundred Dollars that can be conveniently loaned to the National Bible Institution for one year with interest at six percent per annum, please forward the same at once? In return for these amounts promissory notes will at once be issued and mailed to the respective senders of funds.

Here is a chance for interested ones to help—and help at once. Please let us hear from several.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

LOS ANGELES CHURCH OF GOD 264 W. 42nd St.

Preaching services and Sunday School each Sunday morning. Communion the first Sunday of the month. Additional services during the week. All are welcome. G. Eldred Marsh, Pastor.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: The soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final destruction of the wicked, 2 Thess. 1:9; the restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

CHILDREN BY ADOPTION

the HE CAME UNTO HIS OWN, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God" (John 1:11-12). Was God frustrated in His purpose then, concerning Israel, because so few of the children of that house were able to believe on the Redeemer whom He had sent? Not so; the gifts and the calling of God are without repentance. He turned to the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name (Acts 15:14). Beyond all doubt this was the purpose that He had in mind from the beginning, because God is not the God of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also. By the death and resurrection of Christ, the "wall of partition" separating the Jews from the Gentiles was broken down (Ephesians 2:14) and the Gentiles entered into the court of the tabernacle, which is the position of "reconciliation" with God (2 Corinthians 5:18; Revelation 11:2). But the Gentiles did not, and could not, enter into the "holy" or sanctuary of the tabernacle. That is a position which belongs to the priests only. Therefore, before any Gentile could enter into the church of Christ he must be received into the family of God by "adoption" (Romans 8:14-15). The purposes of God respecting Israel, "a kingdom of priests", were not altered by the defection of the fleshly seed; God is able of the very stones to raise up people amenable to His purpose. Israel is not cast away. The "fullness of the Gentiles" of whom Paul speaks, are those who are brought in to fill up the predestined number of the "firstborn" of Israel; they cease to be Gentiles when adopted into the family of God, but are fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets into an holy temple in the Lord (Ephesians 2:19-22).

"And so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Sion is the "mount" of the New Covenant, as Sinai was the mount of the Law Covenant. The Deliverer is Christ. The New Covenant, under which is worked out the perfect development of God's purpose respecting Israel, is essentially a "resurrection" covenant. None can be brought under the operation of its provisions except those who are "risen with Christ". The firstborn of Israel (the church), as their name implies, are the first to be developed under the resurrection covenant. But even this perfecting of the saints is a work which is carried on entirely under the law of faith, as Paul declares, "Ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body" (Romans 8:23). It is not until Christ appears that the "hope of the glory of God", nourished in the church for nearly two thousand years, becomes a reality in the glory of the first resurrection (Revelation 20:6). Jesus himself, in instituting the memorial of His death, said, "This is my blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine, until I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom" (Matthew 26:28-29). Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen (Hebrews 11:1). But we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is (1 John 3:2).

MORE ABOUT ZIONISM

By F. E. Siple

IN A SECULAR MAGAZINE, that does not even have any religious tendencies, we have just read a long article dealing with the present movements among the Jews, their hopes through the past and in the present, the present relationship with the Arabs, and how other nations view these various matters. It is an interesting and instructive article. But one of the most interesting and outstanding features of it all is that the world is observing all these matters and commenting upon them because of their importance, and yet failing to realize how it is all a plain fulfillment of Bible prophecies.

To us the outstanding proof of the inspiration of God's Word is just such fulfillment of its prophecies, and how thankful we should be that the very things we have taught as a church, and looked for so long should be outstandingly unfolded before the eyes of all.

The article is as follows:

WHY THE HOLY LAND BREEDS WAR

IF WE SHOULD CLEAR OUT of here, the Moslems would probably cut the Jews' throats the first week, and possibly the Christians' throats the next."

That was what a British official of the mandate government told me when I was last in Palestine. Naturally I cannot give the official's name, for he wasn't talking for publication and he's still on the job. But his words pithily describe that seething caldron of religious and racial hatreds which is apt to blow off the lid and boil over in bloodshed and riot at the slightest provocation. And the worst of the matter is that Palestine is merely a part of a bigger mess. The whole Near East is today a smoldering volcano which may do almost anything at any time. Yet even in that troubled part of the world, Palestine must be adjudged a peculiarly distressful country.

Geographically speaking, Palestine is insignificant. Its area of 9,000 square miles is only that of the state of Vermont, and it is inhabited by less than 1,000,000 souls. Yet little sunbaked Palestine is the Holy Land of three great religions—Christianity, Judaism, and Islam. Palestine is the battle ground where two mighty forces, Zionism and Arabism, today clash in bitter strife. And those two forces, compounded as they both are of religious fervor and patriotic zeal, contain explosive possibilities worse than TNT or dynamite.

British bayonets may restore order, but they cannot bring lasting peace. For, as someone once wittily remarked, "You can do anything with bayonets—except sit on them!" Despite all the British Tommies who may march up to Jerusalem, hatred and rivalry will smolder deep in men's hearts, ready to burst forth on the next occasion. And, given the nature of those rivalries and hatreds, their explosion in Palestine will kindle fears and passions to the uttermost ends of the earth.

Here, then, is a true world problem. And it is a problem of long standing. The bloody riots between Jews and Arabs which we have just witnessed are merely the latest phase of an age-old tragedy. The stage was set when the Romans smashed the Jewish state nearly 2,000 years ago and scattered the Jews far and wide. But, though dispersed among the nations, Jewry never forgot its ancestral home or stopped dreaming of a "return to Zion." This abiding hope is vividly revealed in the ritual phrase uttered at the Passover service: "Next year in Jerusalem!"

However, down to recent times, this longed-for return to Zion was blocked by such formidable obstacles that it remained a mere pious dream. Rome, which had broken Jewry at tremendous cost, took no chances of fresh trouble and forbade Jews to resettle in Palestine. When Rome became Christian, this political prohibition was reenforced by religious motives; because the Church would not see its holy places defiled by the presence of those it deemed its most stubborn foes.

Shortly the red tide of Islam burst from the Arabian deserts, and Palestine was not only lost to Christian rule but was settled by a population mostly Arab in blood and Mohammedan in faith. That happened thirteen centuries ago; and those old title deeds of conquest and settlement form the basis of Arab claims that Palestine is an Arab land—an indivisible part of the great Arab empire or confederation which Arab nationalists hope to forge, from Mesopotamia to North Africa.

It is, in fact, nationalism which has sharpened the old

THE GODS WE WORSHIP

By M. W. Lyon

THE GODS WE WORSHIP have more to do with our everyday lives than many people realize. A man inevitably grows to be like that which he admires. He copies the methods and mannerisms of those he looks up to. And so does every man, consciously or unconsciously, imitate the characteristics of his God.

From the beginning there has been a strong line of demarcation between the true God and the false, the one God and the many. The first four words in the English Bible are these, "In the beginning God." No human history can push back the veil of knowledge before that time. No human mind can penetrate into what may have transpired before that time. It staggers at comprehending the infinite. There is a reason assigned for ourselves being here, there is a purpose revealed in the creation of the world, and we can think of a time when it may not have existed, before Genesis 1:1. But we cannot think of a time when God did not exist. For He alone is the great I AM, the incomprehensible, the eternal One, with neither beginning nor end.

All others are in a class apart. They are imposters. They are frauds. They have been made by the hand of man himself. And this is why the first commandment is, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." In falling down to worship before that which one's own hand has made there is a certain degradation which lowers one's ideals immeasurably, aside from the evident fact of its utter falsity. So the sin of idolatry was ever urged upon Israel of old by all the prophets of God, and its ruinous tendencies portrayed for their warning.

There is no more certain means of distinguishing between the true God and the false than by drawing comparison between the type of character which each inspires. The noble standards of justice and righteousness and purity and truth which today are the foundation of all civilized society came from that nation which first held aloft the light of faith in one God who is the Creator of the world. And the character of the miserable gods of the heathen peoples who worshiped them knew not what is reflected in the degraded character and wretched licentiousness of their worshipers.

In the same way, although perhaps not to the same degree, you may read a man's conception of God in the life he lives. Two men, both of whom may be worshipers of the true and only God, may differ radically in their conduct of life according to the way they understand the character of God. One will believe Him to be the essence of justice, truth and love. Then his life will surely manifest that belief, for he will respect Him, and have confidence in Him, and thus strive to obey Him at all times. The other will conceive God to be of such character that He can neither love nor respect Him, although for all that he may live in terror of His judgment. His life will demonstrate it through its laxity of standards and its disregard for anything but his own pleasure.

The great challenge of God to man is, "Be ye holy, for I am holy" (1 Peter 1:15, 16). His noble character is a standard for us. What kind of god do you worship? Is it a god of silver or gold? Is it a god of personal pride or accomplishment or fame, or is it a god of pleasure? Is it a god which is simply a principle and has no real personal existence or consciousness or thinking ability? Then is not that god a false one? Idolatry is not all confined to those who fall upon their faces before a graven image. Eph. 5:5; Col. 3:5. There are, as Paul says, (1 Cor. 8:5, 6) "gods many and lords many, but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him."

Let us catch a vision of Jehovah, the God of heaven, in all His glory and magnificence, and know that here is a standard, yes, more than a standard, a living, potent Creator, who shall be able to sustain us when finite things fail! Let us cast away our idols all, and worship only Him!

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

WORLD PEACE

Sunday, November 3—Isaiah 11:1-10

MORE AND MORE DO WE HEAR in these days of the great thought of world peace. Everywhere nations of the world are striving to work up a program whereby such a peace may be consummated. Let us do nothing whatsoever that will hinder in any degree the progress of the statesmen and diplomats toward such a consummation. But, on the other hand, as Christian people, let us cling closely to the teachings of the Scripture relative to the great day of peace.

Our lesson of today brings us face to face with great truths relative to this beautiful condition of peace. God has paved the way for such. He has arranged in His mighty plan that His Son, Jesus, shall be filled with the Spirit of the Father, "the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord." It is this Savior of ours filled with the great Spirit of the Father that will bring peace to the world.

The results of His labors are seen in the closing verses of this lesson. Peace will be so complete, will embrace so fully the entire creation of God that there will be no destroying in all the holy mountain of God. The reason assigned is, namely, because the earth shall be filled full of the knowledge of the Lord.

THE MOUNTAIN OF THE LORD

Monday, November 4—Isaiah 2:1-11

It was easier to fortify hilltops from the approach of enemy armies, therefore the ancient peoples built as much as possible their capitals upon the tops of hills. As a result the capital was sometimes called the mountain of the nation. The term, "the mountain of the Lord", designates the place of God's capital or throne over Israel.

In verse 2, Isaiah the prophet assures that, "all nations shall flow unto it". The following verse indicates why all nations shall flow unto God's capital and what they shall expect and shall receive. "Out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Because of His direction, His leading, the people will be enabled to walk in His paths and to follow His ways. The result of this will be that the nations themselves, which do not so follow and so obey Almighty God, will be judged by the Father. He will break down the sword of such; He will rebuke them in their ways. The final results will be that the plowshare shall take the place of the sword throughout the earth; the pruninghook shall take the place of the spear everywhere. In consequence of all this there shall be peace and quiet among all nations and among mankind. Not man's ways but God's, will be responsible for ultimate world-wide peace.

KNOWLEDGE OF THE TRUE GOD NECESSARY

Tuesday, November 5—Acts 17:22-31

After six thousand years of man's following largely after his own ways, and after man discovers how much he has failed even after having put forward the best of his efforts, is it not doubly wise for us to stop and think that it is the great God of heaven who, after all, should be recognized as the Leader of every nation and every individual. The best that man can do must more or less fail. God and only God, can bring to success, to victory complete.

The peace of the world, for which so many noble-hearted, high-minded men and women are striving, will yet be attained but it will be attained only through Jesus Christ our Lord and Master. It will be attained by Him for the simple reason that He follows completely God's ways, God's truth.

The God who of one blood has made all nations of men that dwell on all the face of the earth is the same God who, in His mighty program, plans and purposes, has provided proper ways and means by which the race of mankind can live together in perfect unity and perfect peace. Let us who live today strive with all might and main to understand that God better than ever before and to promote a knowledge of Jehovah throughout the bounds of our associations.

COMMON IDEALS NECESSARY FOR COMMON ATTAINMENTS

Wednesday, November 6—John 4:15-26

He who worships God in spirit and in truth can but come to honor God's way and honor God's ideals. Such honoring of the one great Father over all brings the individual worshiper into a recognition of those common ideals. Being thus brought to live and think and act as one person, we come then to respect each the other. There is no other way known unto men that will bring the human race unto a spirit of peace and good will toward one another so much as for them to worship truly, sincerely, in spirit and in truth, the one common God in heaven.

Our Lord and Master came to lead mankind unto the Father, to bring man to see God as God really is. The Record shows Him in all of His majesty and love, it shows Him in all the greatness of His mercy, of His knowledge, of His wisdom, of His leadership for mankind.

Let us not obstruct the efforts of others toward a larger and a more generous peace among fellow men, but upon the other hand, let us take the Savior's way, the Savior's ideals. Let us follow Him faithfully in true belief that at all times we may serve Him first and foremost. He who does this will certainly come out conqueror through Jesus Christ.

MORE ABOUT ZIONISM

(This is a continuation of the interesting selection made by F. E. Siple, which was started in last week's Herald.)

THE ZIONIST FAITH was strikingly revealed to me in my meeting with Ittamar Ben-Avi, one of the best known Zionists and himself the son of the famous Ben-Yahuda, the reviver of Hebrew as a living, spoken tongue. Fresh-complexioned, with rebellious hair which falls continually over his forehead, frank of speech and radiating enthusiasm, Ittamar Ben-Avi is an attractive personality. Born and reared in Palestine, he considers himself a type of the free, "open-air" Jew, cleansed of the stigmata of the ghetto.

"We shall succeed!" he exclaimed confidently. "Zionism is absolutely necessary for the soul of the Jewish race, for its moral and intellectual regeneration, for the self-respect of Jews throughout the world and the awakening of the world's respect for the Jews. With all this at stake, Jews everywhere will be more and more behind Zionism. And the Jew is stubborn—he knows how to work and wait!"

That keynote was stressed in many talks I had with other Zionist leaders. Their main points were these:

The Zionist aim is the creation of a state in which Jewish ideals and the Jewish spirit will have really free scope, and where the Jewish genius can find natural and congenial play. But this can be only in the ancestral homeland, Palestine. Ever since the Roman Dispersion, the Jewish genius has been warped and perverted. The ancient Jew was mainly a herdsman, cultivator, and warrior. So long as the Jew remained in Palestine, the type was kept thus, not only because of his surroundings, but because the money-loving elements migrated to other lands.

Now (say the leaders) note how the old spirit is already reasserting itself! With Zionists, gain is not a motive. No Zionist comes to Palestine to make money; all know that hard work and a fair livelihood are what they must expect. The Jews in Palestine do not think and talk money. Indeed, they show themselves rather poor business men—and glory in the fact.

Another notable thing is the pride of the Zionists in their name: they want to be called Jews, and terms like "Israelite" and "Hebrew" are regarded almost as an insult. Furthermore, there is no sensitiveness in discussing the shortcomings of their race; in fact, the more one criticizes Jewish failings in the world at large, the more they consider this a fresh argument in favor of Zionism.

To sum the matter up, the Zionists claim that Zionism is necessary, not only for the soul of their race, not only that Jewish genius may contribute its best to the world, but also for the whole world itself. The world is today sick from a perverted and thwarted Jewish spirit, and it will remain thus until the Jewish spirit is cleansed and freed.

For its own good, therefore, the world must give the Jew a chance to be himself.

There, in a nutshell, you have the Zionist spirit—a spirit which draws multitudes of Jews from the uttermost ends of the earth. What an array of types you encounter in Jerusalem, in the all-Jewish port town of Tel Aviv, and in the agricultural colonies! You see English Jews from Britain and her dominions; French and German Jews; American Jews, full of snap and pep; languorous Spanish Jews; Eastern Jews from Russia, Poland, and Roumania; weird-looking Jews from the depths of Central Asia; and black Jews from Yemen. I understand that there are even a few Chinese Jews in Palestine, though I saw none in my travels. There they all are, assembled together in little Palestine; most of them ardent Zionists, learning to speak Hebrew, working for the Jewish homeland of their dreams.

Here is a force at once material and spiritual, which must seriously be reckoned with. Consider what Zionism has achieved during the past ten years. At the close of the war the Jews in Palestine numbered about 50,000, a considerable portion of them being the religious zealots previously mentioned. Today there are fully 150,000 Jews in Palestine. From less than one-twelfth of the population, the Jews now number nearly one-sixth. And every year sees a steady stream of Jewish immigration into Palestine, over 30,000 having entered in a single year.

Furthermore, these immigrants are of high average quality. The Zionist organization has promised the mandate government to bring in only as many immigrants as can be placed in the agricultural colonies or given jobs in the towns. This means that the Zionist officials can pick and choose among the multitudes who want to go to Palestine, and they naturally pick the best human material. The agricultural colonists are mainly sturdy young men and women, called "Chaluzim" or Pioneers.

Every year sees new colonies established. It costs the Zionist organization about $3,500 to place an immigrant family on the land. But the Jews of the world open their purses; the treasury is continually replenished; and the work goes on.

From the Zionist standpoint this is as it should be. But how about the Arabs? In Arab eyes, every new Jewish colony spells another step in their own ultimate undoing. Palestine is a small country, while its Arab inhabitants are, on the whole, a poor and backward people. How can they cope with the highly efficient Zionist organization, backed by immense wealth?

So argue the Arabs. And it does no good for British officials of the mandate government to assure the Arabs that they will be protected from Zionist oppression. The Arabs do not want to be protected from, or by, anybody. They themselves want to dominate the land which they consider theirs, and to stop these Zionist Jews from coming in. That is why the Arabs absolutely refuse to recognize the Balfour Declaration.

Neither does it do much good when moderate Zionists, seeking understanding with the Arabs, tell them soothingly that Palestine is not to be a Jewish state, but that there is to be merely "a Jewish national home in Palestine." For the Arabs retort by quoting a whole sheaf of Zionist utterances of quite a different tone. Just after the war, when Zionist emotions ran at fever heat, many prominent Zionists let their zeal outrun their discretion.

For example: in 1919, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, the head of the whole Zionist movement, announced roundly: "We desire to create such conditions that in a given time, as short as possible, Palestine shall become as Jewish as England is English, or as America is American." At the same period Sir Herbert Samuel, who afterward became head of the mandate government, stated that Zionism sought to secure the "fullest measures" whereby, "with the minimum of delay, the country may become a purely self-governing commonwealth under the auspices of an established Jewish majority."

And these ambitious pronouncements of Zionism's highest spokesmen were far outdone by other prominent Zionists like Israel Zangwill, who told the Arabs that if they didn't like Zionism they could get out. Some Zionist orators even dug up parallels from the Old Testament, termed the Arabs New Canaanites, and suggested their expulsion from Palestine. Now all these Zionist pronouncements have been carefully collected and memorized by the Arabs, and they quote them to you at length—particularly the more violent ones. The Arabs have made up their minds that this is a life-and-death struggle in which no compromise is possible—at least, no compromise which would leave the Jews any sort of "national home" in Palestine. Since even the most moderate Zionists, on their side, declare that a guaranteed national home in Palestine is vitally necessary to the future of Jewry throughout the world, the chances for a genuine agreement between Jews and Arabs look pretty slim.

Even the most temperate of the Arab leaders whom I talked with could see nothing ahead but strife, until political Zionism should finally go down in hopeless ruin. The most interesting of the Arab spokesmen is Said Amin Hussein, Grand Mufti of Jerusalem. His is a striking personality. He is young for his high position, since he is even now in his early thirties and has held his office for several years.

Yet no one can meet and talk with the Grand Mufti without becoming instantly aware that here is an astute and capable leader of men. The calm, aquiline features denote dignity and pose; the eyes reveal intelligence; while his conversation shows wide information and broad contacts. A staunch nationalist, the Grand Mufti is feared and hated by the Zionists as one of their most formidable opponents.

Such is the line-up and such the contrasted attitudes of Jew and Arab in Palestine. Now, how do neutral observers view the situation? Jerusalem contains many European and American residents who have long studied the problem and have something worth while to say. On the whole, these foreign residents are pessimistic regarding Zionism's future prospects. Few persons care to be directly quoted on this highly controversial subject, but when they discuss matters confidentially, they will tell you frankly that in their opinion Zionism is almost certainly bound to fail in the end.

First and foremost, they say that Zionism cannot permanently hold back the rising tide of Arab nationalism. The whole trend of things in the Near East is toward the formation of clear-cut nation-states, like ours of the Occident, in which minorities with special rights and a special political status can have no place. That is what has already happened in Turkey, where the Greek and Armenian minorities have been massacred or expelled wholesale, and the same ruthless process of unification is going on elsewhere. However much you may deplore it, it seems to be the trend of the times in all Near Eastern lands.

Another point emphasized by these foreign observers is the underlying economic situation, which tends to work against Zionism. On anything like equal terms, the Jew cannot compete economically with the native Arabs, who are the product of an intensive process of natural selection and are ideally fitted to wrest a livelihood from Palestine's bare hills and sun-baked plains. Of course Jew and Arab do not today compete on equal terms, because the Jewish colonists are backed by an efficient organization with large revenues. So long as the golden stream from abroad pours in, the colonists can maintain themselves. But millions of dollars are, and will continue to be, needed every year; and should Zionist enthusiasm abroad ever slacken, the Zionist movement in Palestine will stagnate or retrograde.

Will Britain keep her present mandate over Palestine? That is a moot point about which much can be said on both sides. The chief thing that keeps England in Palestine is the near-by Suez Canal. England could never see Palestine in even potentially hostile hands, because the Suez Canal is literally the life-line of the British empire—even more vital to it than the Panama Canal is to ourselves.

On the other hand, England's commitment, under the Balfour Declaration, to guarantee a Jewish "national home" in Palestine keeps her in hot water not only with all the Arab peoples, including the Arabs in Egypt, but also with the great block of Indian Moslems, whose thoroughgoing hostility might mean the loss of India.

Finally, England is hard up, these days, and Palestine is a relatively expensive charge upon the British exchequer. The British taxpayer's grumbles have already been heard rather loudly on the subject of Palestine. The upshot is that both in England and among British residents in the Near East there is a strong body of opinion which favors either giving up the Palestine mandate or annulling the Balfour Declaration. One English official in a neighboring British dependency put the matter bluntly when he said to me with a shrug of the shoulders:

"Of course the Jews get it in the neck. But—we don't run our empire for the Jews!"

SOMETIME

Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
 And sun and stars forevermore have set,
 The things which our weak judgments here have spurned,
 The things o'er which we grieved with lashes wet,
 Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
 As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue;
 And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
 And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

And we shall see, while still we frown and sigh,
 God's plans go on as best for you and me:
 How, when we called, He heeded not our cry,
 Because His wisdom to the end could see.
 And e'en as prudent parents disallow
 Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
 So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
 Life's sweetest things because it seemeth good.

And we shall shortly know that lengthened breath
 Is not the sweetest gift God sends His friends,
 And that, sometimes, the sable pall of death
 Conceals the fairest boon His love can send.
 If we could push ajar the gates of life,
 And stand within, and all God's workings see,
 We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
 And for each mystery could find a key.

But not today. Then be content, poor heart;
 God's plans, like lilies pure and white, unfold.
 We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart--
 Time will reveal the calyxes of gold.
 And if, through patient toil, we reach the land,
 Where tired feet, with sandals loose, may rest,
 When we shall clearly know and understand,
 I think then we will say that "God knew best."

THE GREAT TRIBULATION

By J. W. Burget

JESUS AND THE APOSTLES were talking about the buildings of the temple, and Jesus said unto them, "See ye not all those things? Verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down." Matt. 24:2. "And when ye shall see Jerusalem compassed about with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh . . . for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke 21:20-24. "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. 24:21, 14.

Paul said this gospel "was preached to every creature which is under heaven; whereof I Paul am made a minister." Gal. 1:23. Therefore the gospel was preached in all the world by the apostles after Jesus went to heaven, but before Jerusalem was destroyed at the beginning of the great tribulation year of 70 A. D., when the Romans captured Jerusalem, destroyed the temple, and carried the Jews captive into all nations. The end came then to the Jewish dispensation, or kingdom, and the great tribulation began upon the Jews.

The great tribulation is not the battle of Armageddon at the coming of Christ Jesus, for Jesus will fight, and the Jews will not be carried away into tribulation again, but those nations that come against Jerusalem will be badly whipped. Ezek. 39:12; Zech. 14:3. The Jews shall dwell in their own land, and Jesus will be King of kings and Lord of lords and rule the world. Ezek. 29:26; Zech. 14:16. The great tribulation lasted from 70 A. D., or from the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans under Titus to the end of the German war, when the Jews got their country back.

"But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light. And the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken." Mark 13:24, 25. We should not look for those signs until after the tribulation is past; and the tribulation ended in 1918 A. D. "And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven. Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all those things be done." Mark 13:26, 27, 30.

This generation commenced at the end of the great tribulation in the year 1918, and ten years of this generation have passed away. Jesus will come soon. Remember that He said that not all of this generation would pass away until all of those things would be done that He said would come to pass which are recorded in Mark 13. This chapter is divided into two epochs of time, the first part up to verse 24 that which happened after Jesus went to heaven, and during the great tribulation; and the last part that which will happen after the great tribulation is ended.

Brother, sister, when you see those mighty armies of all nations surrounding Jerusalem, flee from the cities, get away from the walls of the cities, flee for your lives, for every wall shall fall to the ground. Ezek. 38:20. It was revealed unto John the revelator things that would come to pass, and he tells us that there were voices and thunders and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great. And the great city (Jerusalem) was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell. Rev. 16:18. All this will happen when Jesus stands upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east.

A PRESCRIPTION WORTH TRYING

By Samuel E. Haney

"All the days of the afflicted ('poor', Masoretic text) are evil ('sorrowful', Roth.): but he that is of a merry ('cheerful', R. V.) heart hath a continual feast ('banquet', Roth.)."—Proverbs 15:15, Mixed Version.

TO WHOM DOES THE TERM "afflicted" (poor) refer? The fact that the whole race of mankind is afflicted, and that "all the days", since the advent of sin "are evil" is not controversial. But the term as here used appears to be restricted to Christians in general, nominal and consecrated. Jesus gives us the heavenly standard of the perfect Christian and his goal to incite his aspiration, "for the perfecting of the saints": "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake."

Let us compare our experiences with our Lord's ideal of a Christian's experience as portrayed under these nine "blessings". We can thus learn something of our spiritual progress and status in our Redeemer's estimation; and incidentally learn whether we are of those to whom the wise man refers in the latter clause of our text. The man who can harmonize his experience with but one of these nine blessings is not getting much out of his religion, only one-ninth of his privileges. He is likely to be a pusillanimous weakling of whom the Christian world is surcharged; who unconsciously allows himself to be spiritually segregated by the wily enemy. But blessed is the man or woman who can say, "Amen!" to them all. From this viewpoint let us get scriptural reasons for this affliction. It would require a volume to explain the many reasons for the fact that people are conditioned and swayed by heredity, temperament, environment and habit.

We give a few reasons which seem to apply generally: the erroneous immortal soul doctrine; failing to receive the Word of God seriously; failing to believe the whole Bible; desiring to expunge, or overlook parts which are not germane to the individual's customs of living; fearful of persecution, humiliation and inconvenience; credulity, the most vulnerable part of our armor; trusting in man's word rather than in God's Word, for "thus saith the Lord; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord"; idolizing "the things that are in the world", when God says (1 John 2:15-17), "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever"; gratifying instead of mortifying the flesh, "for if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God"; self-exaltation instead of self-abnegation, yea, self-sacrifice: "and whosoever shall exalt himself, shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself, shall be exalted. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven".

In concluding this phase of our subject we shall say, persons under these and other militating influences are much handicapped in obtaining the blessings appropriated for their soul, spirit and bodies by God's sacrifice of His Son in their behalf. Man's spiritual, mental and physical afflictions parallel with his disregard of God's whole plan of salvation.

"But he that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast." Every mature Christian knows from experience that the nominal Christian has occasional tastes of the "feast of fat things". But this merely emphasizes the division of our text, e. g., ephemeral versus continual. A continual feast is the product of an incessant "merry heart". But, asks the "heavy laden" one, how is this possible in the midst of a multiplicity of duties, obligations, trials and troubles? The prophet Micah seems to address you (4:9), "Now why dost thou cry out aloud? is there no king in thee? is thy counsellor perished? for pangs have taken thee as a woman in travail."

Dear weary soul, has it ever occurred to you that the merry-hearted ones at the Lord's banqueting board have engaged One whose name is "Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace"? Are you heavy laden? "Come unto me", says this Prince of Peace, "and I will give you rest". It was for this purpose that our blessed Redeemer suffered and died: "... to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens (that Satan has imposed), and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke". Isa. 58:6.

The father addressing his prodigal son said (Luke 15:32), "It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found". Reader, do you note that these words have their application in our experiences? We were dead through trespasses and sins, and He did make us alive. Eph. 2:1, R. V. We would have been lost forever had not God sent His Son into this sin-cursed world to find us.

Let us therefore take the wise man's advice: "A cheerful heart is a good medicine (causeth good healing, margin); but a broken spirit drieth up the bones", R. V., "A joyful heart worketh an excellent cure", Rotherham.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna Thayer

WORMWOOD

WORMWOOD, A PLANT FOUND IN PALESTINE, is noted for its extreme bitterness. The word is often used in the same sense as gall to denote what is offensive and destructive. Jer. 23:15; Lam. 3:15, 19. In point of fact, the excessive dread which the Hebrews had of this bitter substance was founded not on clinical experience, but on prejudice. They are composite plants, mostly of the interior tablelands, especially of the deserts. Their growth in desolate places, added to their bitterness, gave them their bad reputation.

THYINE WOOD

Rev. 18:12

THYINE WOOD, (order, coniferae; genus, lignum vitae) was the highly prized wood of a small tree that resembled our cedar or arbor-vitae, and grew in northern Africa. Close-grained, fragrant, and of a beautiful brown color, often variegated by knots, it was peculiarly adapted for fine cabinet work. It was especially valued by the Greeks and Romans for tables. It formed part of the precious merchandise of Babylon. The word thyine means sweet.

FIGHT THE GOOD FIGHT OF FAITH

FIGHT WE MUST or be traitors to our trust. It is no time for quiet, apathetic ease. We have a sacred responsibility—God help us to rise to our high calling and to be true thereto! Bear witness, then! Scatter the literature of the new reformation; preach the Word of light and life; pour your gifts into the treasury, that the work and witness may be pressed forward with zeal.

Success—that of God's standard and purpose—is sure. Anne of Austria said to Cardinal Richelieu, "God is a sure Paymaster. He may not pay at the close of every week, or month, or year; but He pays in the end." We apply this to our high and holy purpose. People of the living Lord, witness for His truth! Workers in the new reformation, ultimate success is sure—for "God is not unfaithful, to forget your work of faith and labor of love".

Of the first Napoleon's most trusted warriors, in the fatal fight which saw the setting of his brilliant, unworthy sun, it is said that toward the sunset of that long, bloody day, when the scared veterans of fifty fights were summoned to lay down their arms, they cried out, "The old guards can die, but they cannot surrender." That was sublime heroism for Napoleon and France. But from the stake and the gibbet, from the crackling faggot and the gleaming guillotine, from the dungeon and the rack, for twelve hundred and sixty years of bloody martyrdom, comes to us the cry, "The soldiers of the cross can die, but they cannot surrender."

Let this be our watchword in the conflict. We can suffer and die for the truth, but we cannot surrender it. Let us stand in the breach for the world's welfare, the church's freedom, and our Lord's honor. Do not despise and underestimate the "day of small things". God can thresh a mountain with a worm, and by things, even as small as we are, bring to nought things that now tower above us in worldly dignity and power.—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis from the writings of Cyrus E. Brooks in The Bible Standard.

BENEFITS OF TITHING

TITHING, LIKE EVERY OTHER Christian service, is two-fold in its results. First: the results benefit those to whom and for whom the service is rendered. This is usually the result given special consideration by all but in reality there is one other service which, by all means, is of greater value. That service is to self.

A man is valuable to God only in proportion as he is qualified to serve his Father. Such qualification is the result of faith that works. Such a work returns benefits in the shape of increased strength, increased devotion, increased consecration. Thus the individual grows up into Christ. Love is at the bottom of such service. The contribution of life without love is as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals unless that contribution originates from the pure promptings of the heart. 1 Cor. 13:1-3 clearly emphasizes this truth.

Therefore the service rendered, whatever that service may be if prompted by pure, true love and true faith returns a benefit upon the doer which is greater than any benefit that can redound to the recipient. This truth is beautifully expressed in a little unsigned statement that comes to hand. It reads as follows:

"The supreme benefit of tithing is not the money it brings to the church. It is the joy, the contentment, the individual personal happiness it brings to the daily life of the tither. To these the money standard does not apply. They can be neither weighed, measured nor counted, yet these and not the money are what God cares for. His glory is enhanced by the happiness of His children. To think that He cares for the money involved is absurd.

"True, our tithes are needed and do infinite good in the extension of His kingdom, but His kingdom, His church, is made up of individuals. God especially cares for individual people, just such people as you and I.

"All God's laws, including His law of the tithe, are intended to promote the highest good and greatest happiness of those who obey them. God's laws are God's will. When we pray, 'Thy will be done,' we are praying for obedience to His always good, kind, wise, loving laws; and joy, peace, contentment, happiness and prosperity are the perfectly natural and to be expected results of obedience."

Would that one and all could learn the fullness of the statement, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

SIN AND DEATH

By R. H. Judd

The following article, which was originally written for the Toronto Globe, containing points that should be of interest, was by the author sent to The Herald also.

A RECENT CORRESPONDENT called attention to the question of death in relation to the animal kingdom and to man. He pointed out that the prevalent idea, that natural death in all creation resulted from Adam's transgression, is at variance with known scientific findings, death having been in operation prior to the event to which he alluded.

That public opinion regarding Bible teaching on a given subject is mistaken, often seriously so, I believe almost any earnest Bible student will be prepared to admit. The issue presented is I believe a case in point, and if Scripture is appealed to directly instead of through the medium of public opinion, which is often fickle and unreliable, it will be found that there is no conflict between the Bible and science on this matter. Ninety-three years ago Prof. Redford, D. D., L. L. D., of Worcester, England, said: "We call upon you to make important distinction between interpretations which have been fixed upon Scripture and the Scripture itself. When any fact in nature or any theory established by philosophy in reference to any class of facts, is found to be irreconcilable with any particular interpretation of Scripture, it is our duty to re-examine the interpretation and not hastily to infer that the facts are at variance with Scripture, because they are at variance with our interpretation of it."

In Rom. 5:12 we read, "As by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men", and it is given by theologians as proof that death did not precede Adam's fall. But right conclusions of an author's meaning can only be reached by taking into account all previously expressed matter in relation thereto. Prevalent opinion is based on the thought that Adam was created immortal and that natural death was the penalty threatened. That it is in error on both these counts a careful examination of the threatened penalty will reveal.

Let us quote: ". . . thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. 3:17. Were these uttered by a human judge, what would they mean? Answer: That a judicial sentence of death would be carried out on the day indicated, and that natural death would be prevented. These words meant precisely the same to Adam. Then why was not the sentence carried out? Answer: Extenuating circumstances are always considered even in human judgment, and the judge has the authority within prescribed conditions to revoke the pre-announced sentence. God himself lays down this principle in Jer. 18:8-10 and Ezek. 18:26-29.

Had Adam been created immortal there would have been no need to turn him out of the garden, "lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life and eat and live for ever." That Adam and Eve repented, and came under the principle referred to, is proved by their acceptance of the skins of animals slain on their behalf. Some try to help Scripture by saying that the day was a day of one thousand years. Scripture needs no help of this kind. The absurdity of threatening a man with death on the day he eats a certain fruit, and that day be a day of one thousand years must be apparent to all. If that day, the day in which he ate, was a day of one thousand years how could it be distinguished from every other day as so clearly implied by the threat? Besides, Adam did not live even one of such days. The Record says he lived nine hundred thirty years and then died, and that is the only account in the Bible of his death. He could only understand death as he had seen it in operation in the animal kingdom. The simple Scripture account is by far the easiest to comprehend. Having forfeited immortality, Gen. 3:22, his mortal nature remained unchanged; thus in the ordinary course of nature "death passed upon all men" who were his posterity. That death came to Adam's race through sin is hence perfectly true. At the same time it is equally true that it does not shut out the fact that death had already been in evidence. The Bible and true science do not conflict. Had Adam not sinned the reasonable deduction from the narrative is that he would eventually have been given access to the tree of life, and would thus, according to Scripture language, "live for ever". The fact that in the place of these plain statements man should misrepresent and undermine the authority of Scripture, is one of the things that seem almost inexplicable.

The only way now to eternal life is God's appointed way. Here it is, read it and believe it:

God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have EVERLASTING LIFE.

MORE ABOUT ZIONISM

Meanwhile, what effect will the recent disorders in Palestine have upon the situation? It is hard to say. The bloodshed and destruction wrought during the riots and fighting will inevitably leave wounds which may be slow to heal. Both Jews and Arabs are in a highly excited state of mind, and both sides are bringing pressure on the mandate government for "reforms" which will ease the present tension and safeguard the future.

The difficulty is that these suggestions are diametrically opposed to each other: The Arabs demand a whittling-down of the Balfour Declaration. The Jews demand fresh guaranties for their protection and lasting security. The one thing certain is that passions have been so mutually inflamed that the contending parties are further apart than ever from anything like a genuine understanding. This may not make pleasant reading. But it is the truth. And the truth might as well be faced.—Lothrop Stoddard,

EGYPT'S PEACE WITH GOD

Thursday, November 7—Isaiah 19:19-25

After Egypt shall have passed through the many centuries in opposition to Jehovah she will be brought, according to our scripture of today, to a healing, even brought to God. He will heal her and "they shall return even to the Lord, and he shall be entreated of them, and shall hear them". Not only is Egypt to be brought into complete subjection to the Father, but also Assyria will be purged with the waters cover the sea.

All these can be looked for, not in this day of man, but in the coming great day of the Lord, when the Judge of all the earth, Jesus Christ, shall sit in judgment upon the nations breaking down the present way of evil, of war and commotion, bringing in with the aid and cooperation of His church the nations of the earth unto a peaceful service to Jehovah, the God of heaven.

GOD'S CHOICE HILL

Friday, November 8—Psalm 87

Three times in this chapter and in three distinct relations does God exalt Zion. After speaking in verses 1 and 2 of other dwellingplaces, He then speaks in verse 3 of Zion and the glories of the city of God. In verse 4 the prophet refers to other nations and once in verse 5 he follows along with the prophesied citation that different leaders, great men, noted ones will be reported to have been born in Zion, the capital of God's nation. In verse 6 the Psalmist speaks of other people, but in verse 7 he announces that the rising of all the springs of the Lord rise in thee, that is, in Zion.

Not because Zion was originally better than any and every other nation, but because God chose Zion and His purpose will yet be fulfilled in her. Zion, the city of God, will become the might of the world.

A PURE LANGUAGE

Saturday, November 9—Acts 2:1-6

On the day of Pentecost God revealed His great ability to make every man understand His message concerning Jesus Christ in his own native tongue. The miraculous power to convey thought to individuals of different tongues is one thing, but there is a larger power to be yet revealed by God in the use of language. Zeph. 3:9-11 tells us of the day in which God will turn to the people a pure language; not pure in one tongue as they had in the beginning, but pure in the sense that they will purify their language from evil words and be brought into a position consistent to worship God in sincerity and in truth.

When man is pure of tongue, he will be pure of thought. When he is pure of thought, he will be godly in his thoughts. When man is godly in his thoughts, the world may look for a reign of peace.

THE PRAYER OF FAITH

or another all are the results of sin.

Our Savior died that He might carry our sins in His own body to the tree. He died for our atonement; He died that you and I might receive forgiveness from sin. The great question that comes to us is this: Are we to receive from the Savior the atonement reserved altogether until the age to come or are we to receive a part and a portion of this great benefit during the present day? The Savior himself answered this question in part, when in Matt. 8:16, 17, He announced that He cast out the spirits with His word, and healed all that were sick: "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses." In one way or another the Savior then and there even prior to His own crucifixion was fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah in the fifty-third chapter. He was looking forward to His atonement, to the accomplishment of the same in behalf of others. In so doing, He performed works in His own day upon poor mortal men, evidencing unto them His great power in atonement.

But has He not atoned for you and me? Has He not given His life a ransom for us? Is not the guilt and weakness of mortality a sin? And should not you and I look unto Him for present day forgiveness and for present day correction in a large measure?

I would not wish to carry this thought too far. I realize full well that our weakness of action is such that we cannot claim all that our Savior is willing to give. But I would like to suggest to the Christian of today, that his privilege is to live closer and ever closer to our Lord, to learn more and more of Christian life through the Word of God; and that living close unto Him, he is to expect blessings in proportion to his closeness and his accuracy to Christ our Lord and Master.

Prayer for the sick, then, must include several facts. It must include the thought that the sick one should also be brought nearer to Christ, nearer in faith, nearer in obedience. Submitting himself to the Master, he should expect the Savior's blessings to return upon him.

James teaches no less. The forgiveness of sin and the healing of the sick are the result in one way or another, that is, to some degree or another, to those who render effectual fervent prayer. Let us pray one for another.

We again call attention of the brotherhood especially to the home of Bro. and Sr. Andrews, of Woodstock, Va. We asked that on last Sunday the 27th the brotherhood would, so far as they could by fervent faith in God, unite in prayer for the benefit of this stricken family. Turn again to Bro. Sheets' letter in last issue, read it once more, then unite with us again, on Sunday, November 3rd, in prayer for these same people. May God's blessing rest upon them. May their error be discovered and corrected and may strength return to them for the upbuilding of their family, for the strength of life and also for the glory and honor of our Lord and Master.

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

WHEN I WAS A CHILD attending Sunday school, before taking our classes we had a roll call of the entire school, and we responded by repeating a verse of Scripture. I well remember one verse I committed to memory. It was Psalms 119:105, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

How true this is, yet how tragic that today there are so many well-meaning ones who neglect the reading and study each day of the Bible. Many think if they attend church on one day of the week and hear the minister read a chapter, they require no more until they hear him again a week later, should they be fortunate enough to get there regularly each week.

Do you think these same people would be satisfied to eat in that manner to sustain their health and the strength of their physical bodies? I think not. I quote a selection entitled, "The Diary of a Bible," which brings out my thought regarding neglect of reading God's Word. Here it is.

"January 15.—Been resting quietly for a week. The first few nights after the first of the year my owner read me regularly, but he has forgotten me, I guess.

"February 2.—Clean-up. I was dusted with other things and put back in my place.

"February 8.—Owner used me for a short time after dinner, looking up a few references. Went to Sunday school.

"March 7.—Clean-up. Dusted and in my old place again. Have been down in the hall since my trip to Sunday school.

"April 2.—Busy day. Owner led a league meeting and had to look up references. He had an awful time finding one, though it was right there in its place all the time.

"May 5.—In grandma's lap all afternoon. She is here on a visit. She let a tear drop fall on Colossians 2:5-7.

"May 6.—In grandma's lap again this afternoon. She spent most of her time on 1 Corinthians 13 and the last four verses of the 15th chapter.

"May 7-8-9.—In grandma's lap every afternoon now. It's a comfortable spot. Sometimes she reads me and sometimes she talks to me.

"May 10.—Grandma gone. Back in the old place. She kissed me good bye.

"June 3.—Had a couple of four-leaf clovers stuck in me today.

"July 1.—Packed in a trunk with clothes and other things. Off on a vacation, I guess.

"July 7.—Still in the trunk.

"July 10.—Still in the trunk, though nearly everything else has been taken out.

"July 15.—Home again and in my old place. Quite a journey, though I do not see why I went.

"August 1.—Rather stuffy and hot. Have two magazines, a novel, and an old hat on top of me. Wish they would take them off.

"September 5.—Clean-up. Dusted and set right again.

"September 10.—Used by Mary a few moments today. She was writing a letter to a friend whose brother had just died, and wanted an appropriate verse."

Would this method of Bible reading and study be in keeping with Paul's admonition to "study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth"?

Glenn M. Birkey.

WHAT DOTHT IT PROFIT?

OCTOBER IS DRAWING to a close, and the period of time which Illinois Bereans observe each year as Self-Denial Month is almost over. We have no regrets as we look back over these weeks during which we have tried earnestly to practice self-control and refrain from self-indulgence. Have you not enjoyed the experience, Bereans?

Now mail your self-denial money at once to Mrs. Esta L. Starbuck, 420 S. Third St., Rockford, Illinois, that it may bring food and warmth to hungry bodies and cheer to hungry hearts.

Since we have learned what it means, let us not forget the blessedness of self-sacrifice during the coming months. May true unselfishness beautify all our Christian labors for today—and for all time.

REVISIONS

OUR ATTENTION IS CALLED to some changes in committee appointments for the National Berean Society, from those given in the annual report in September. Sr. Lilian Railton, Fonthill, Ontario, Canada, has taken the chairmanship of the Senior Social Correspondence Committee, and Sr. Elva Maye Beaty, Dawson, Oklahoma, is in charge of the Junior Home Study work. Both of these sisters are well qualified through past experience for the positions they hold. May God add His blessing to their efforts.

WORLD PEACE THROUGH MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING

I WONDER JUST HOW that could be done?" said Jane, as she stopped and looked up from the paper she was reading. "Yes, I really do wonder."

"Wonder what?" asked mother, when she saw the puzzled look on Jane's face.

"It says here in this paper that some day we are not going to have any more war. Every nation and person will be at peace with each other. People will continue to get better and better and a system of government will be worked out until we will have what they call world peace."

Mother, with a smile on her face, hoping to find out just what Jane had on her mind, asked, "Well, what's wrong with that?"

"Now, mother," said Jane, "You know you have always taught me that the Bible says just the other way. Didn't I learn a verse that says something about when men say there will be peace, that a great, great war will break out?"

"Right, you are," said mother, "Here's the verse: 'For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them,' 1 Thess. 5:3."

"We have studied about the last great war many, many times," said Jane. "It must be going to be terrible. Why, I don't believe any one will be able to live during such a time. But when I get to wondering about it I always think it will all be ended when Jesus comes. So that is why I was wondering how we can have world peace until Jesus comes."

"We cannot," said mother. "But there are a number of places in the Bible that describe to us a picture of the kingdom when Jesus will be here to rule over the whole earth. Then, and only then, will we have world peace. Do you know where any of them are found, Jane?"

"No, I do not, but I think I could find some," said Jane.

"Let's see, if you can," said mother, as she went on with her work, and Jane, at once, went to get her Bible.

"Is Isaiah 2:2-4 one place?" asked Jane, not long after she had started to look.

"What does it say?" asked mother.

"It says that the Lord's house will be set up on a mountain, and that all the people will want to go there so He can teach them. The law will go out from there, too. The people will want to make ploughs out of their swords, and pruning hooks out of their spears, and there will be no fighting," said Jane.

"Yes, that's a good picture. Isaiah gave us several good pictures of that same time."

"Is the mountain there at Jerusalem? and how can Jesus rule over all this great large world all by himself? We located Palestine and Jerusalem in our geography lesson the other day and they seemed so tiny when you think of all the rest of the world," said Jane.

"Jesus will not rule over all the earth alone," said mother. "Do you not remember the promise He made to His disciples, that they should sit on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel? And, too, He has promised us, that we may be kings and priests and rule with Him."

"What, we rule with Jesus? How could we, mother? We wouldn't know enough to rule like Jesus will," said Jane, rather puzzled.

"No, we do not now," said mother. "But we will then, for if we live a good, faithful life, we shall be changed and be like Jesus, so we will know how to do the ruling just as He would have us to do."

"That's different," said Jane. "I hope we will all be there to help Jesus rule when we have world peace on the earth."

—Verna Thayer.

REMEMBER:

When Jesus comes we shall have world peace.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Isaiah 11:6-9.
2. Read Acts 17:22-28.
3. Learn Isaiah 11:9.

WHERE FIND?

"Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

NOTE BOOK

Page 1. Copy Isaiah 2:3.

Reverse side. Make a list of as many things as you can think of that will be different then.

THE FIRST THING IN THE MORNING

Dear Father, we thank Thee for the morning light,
And that Thou hast kept us through the night.
Go with us all throughout the day,
And help us all along the way.
Keep us in Thy loving care;
Guard and guide us everywhere,
For Jesus' sake. Amen.

—Mary S. Hitchcock.

WORLD PEACE THROUGH MUTUAL UNDER- STANDING

Isaiah 2:2-4; 11:6-10; 19:23-25; Acts 17:22-28; Ephesians 4:4-6, 13-19; John 4:20, 21.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 98:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT

They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.—Isa. 11:9.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Our Share in Promoting International Understanding.

Basic Truth: The reign of peace will be introduced by "the Prince of peace."

Outline: I. World Peace the Dream of Man. II. World Peace the Gift of God. III. World Peace the Boon of Man. IV. Our Share in Promoting International Understanding.

I. World Peace the Dream of Man. Like the Israelites who in their idolatrous covetousness, proclaimed "Peace, peace; when there is no peace," Jer. 6:14, so the Gentile world ever and anon heralds the day of universal peace. God's Word is replete with assurances that there can be no day of peace to the world so long as sin reigns. Beautiful as is the ideal, entrancing as is the hope, nevertheless he betrays faithlessness to Christ who strives expectantly for peace in this day.

II. World Peace the Gift of God. "In that day" is where Isa. plants the mile post on which is written the era of peace. That glory of his majesty", Isa. 2:10, will stand before all men. "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled . . . and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day." V. 11. "That day" then is the day of Messiah's reign. It is the day which follows His return. It is the day when man no longer holds the staff of power. It is the day when righteousness shall radiate from the throne of the world. True, there will then be mutual understanding among the people, but that understanding will be derived unmistakably from the throne of Him who rules from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth. See Psa. 72:8.

The God, who of one blood created all races, will not be partial in His administration of peace. It will be for all. That is, for all those who will "go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Israel"; who will "learn of his way"; who will "walk in his paths."

It is a false cry that echoes from horizon to horizon around the world today proclaiming a coming day of peace by man. Concerning this same cry, even in these changing days of Gentile times, the inspired apostle Paul announced in 1 Thess. 5:3, "When they shall say, peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, . . . and they shall not escape." Does not the Christian church do wrong in the face of such scriptures to encourage the political world to anticipate the possibility of a day of peace consequent upon man's own efforts?

III. World Peace the Boon of Man.

World peace stands for more than the ordinary mind at first realizes. Surely, world peace will delete the world of war and of all its attendant carnage and suffering; it will cancel staggering and needless costs of war; it will preserve the rich countryside and the valued manufacturing centers from the devastations of war; it will secure to the parent heart millions of sons now sacrificed to the god of war: it will do all this but it will do more. Peace, in God's redeeming sense will delete every hurt, every pain, every sorrow that now fills the home or the individual life. Isa. 11:9.

It will return friendship between beast and man, Isa. 11:5-9; it will herald the day in which "the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all nations." Isa. 61:11. It will be the motion picture day of God in which He will throw upon earth's screen the ever changing scenes occasioned by the disappearing thorn and the incoming fir tree; by the retiring briar and the advancing myrtle tree, Isa. 65:13; by the fading of sickness and the brightening joy that shall fill all people, Isa. 33:24. The day of peace characterized by the Bible far surpasses the present imagination of man.

IV. Our Share in Promoting International Understanding. True, if hope be not presented, like the alluring pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, all Christians have a duty to perform in promoting international understanding and good will. Every step forward in this direction can but benefit. The sweet influences of the Christ-life should be radiated through every facility known to man. It must, however, be constantly recognized that the day is not distant when the announcement of peace shall be followed with the dust of destruction. 1 Thess. 5:3.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

World Peace. The Scriptures clearly teach that universal peace will not be brought about until the Lord comes; that nations will continue to beat their plowshares into swords, and their pruninghooks into spears, (Joel 3:10) until the "kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord." Rev. 11:15. What, then, should be our attitude toward the movements designed by their sponsors to establish world peace? It would seem that the rule governing our attitude toward all other reform movements should also be observed here. The fact that we know that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse" (2 Tim. 3:13) does not hinder us from endeavoring to stem the tide of unbelief and sin. So, while we believe that world peace will come only with the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth, we may, and should, encourage every effort that is made to minimize the danger of war. Such an attitude places us upon the side of righteousness in the eyes of the world, and broadens our influence for good.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Peace of Jesus.

"Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you" were among Jesus' parting words to the twelve. The peace that was Jesus' peace was the quietness that attends consciousness of the Father's perfect power, perfect wisdom, and perfect love. During His mortal life this peace was not without the turmoil that attends temptation, loneliness, doubts, and even black despair, as many of the Psalms show, but beneath all this turmoil there was the conviction of the Father's un-failingness and this conviction turned Him to God and kept Him faithful to God's way for Him, even when He had to follow that way blindly and when, according to all tangible evidence, God had forsaken Him. And following the way He has entered God's own peace, a peace that attends God's absolute surety of Himself because of His absolute power, absolute wisdom, and absolute love.

This is the peace of Jesus, and it is the peace that Jesus left with the twelve. It is also the peace that is radiating now from Jesus through the twelve into receptive hearts. When these, too, shall have entered God's own peace even as Jesus has, they, headed by Jesus, shall bring to all mankind that faith and confidence in Jehovah the Father which shall bring world peace.

There is one thing needed for world peace and that is the faith of all peoples in a central power which shall administer to each its rights. God the Father working in and through Jesus the Anointed is that Central Power.—A. K.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11:9.

When the following will have been fulfilled then will there be "World Peace Through Mutual Understanding", then and not before. "And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, . . . for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21:3, 4.—L. A. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Bro. Paul Hatch spoke for the brethren at Michigantown, Indiana, Sunday, October 27, in the absence of Bro. Anderson.

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

The Berean class food sale, Saturday, October 12, was certainly a success, the proceeds being far above our expectations.

Our Rally Day program on Sunday, October 13, was fine. All the services for the day were well attended and all seemed to have a joyous time, as well as a spiritual uplift.

The pastor at this writing is at Moorefield in a series of meetings, but will be in the pulpit at Blair the first Sunday in November. Sr. Lucille Le Crone filled the pulpit on Sunday, October 20. Lucille gave a fine talk which everyone seemed to enjoy.

Bro. M. D. Newell, of Blair, will have charge of the pulpit on Sunday, October 27, and will speak at the morning service.

Sacrament the first Sunday in November at the morning service. Let all the membership be present. Those living at a distance will bring lunches and stay for the day.

Our pastor will be with the church at Avery for the second Sunday in November.

RALLY DAY AT BRUSH CREEK

Rally Day was observed at the Brush Creek, Ohio, church with one hundred and one in attendance. Services were enjoyed by all. The church also had the pleasure of having Bro. and Sr. Philip Curtis, of Scottsburg, Indiana, with us on Sunday.

Edna Brewer, Sec.

JOINT MEETING, GLADBROOK AND KOSZTA

On Sunday, October 6, it being the regular preaching day at Gladbrook, the Koszta congregation joined with us in an all-day meeting and picnic lunch at Conant's Park, east of town.

We had Sunday School and preaching in the forenoon, and a program in the afternoon, consisting of readings, music and speeches by some of the Conference Board who were present. Our President, Bro. H. S. Hunt, and wife, came from Clarksville, and Bro. and Sr. W. H. Allard and others from Cedar Falls and Waterloo.

After a responsive reading led by Sr. Kiger, four of the Koszta girls, Pauline Heller, Wilma Cronbaugh, Ruth and Alene Fields, gave a vocal quartet. Then a reading by Dean Cronbaugh was very well given, with suggestion by the leader that he may become a preacher. A vocal solo followed by Frances Fields and a piano solo by Mae Oaks, then a piano duet by Gayle Allard and her instructor, Sr. Moeller, reading by Mae Oaks, and a piano solo by Gayle Allard, a vocal solo by Mrs. Torrance, and a vocal duet by Bro. Williams and Sr. Moeller were given next. Then Bro. O. J. Allard, who was present with us, gave a talk on what might be called, "Song Book Religion". Bro. Williams was scheduled for a sermonette, but it was thought the time was short and the day already well filled. The weather was beautiful and everybody seemed to enjoy the day.

HERALD RECEIPTS

I. O. Rogers; Wm. M. Huffer; Sperry Claypool; Sybil Guthrie; Floyd Eldridge; Rufus A. Curtis; Ferne Moore; Albert Siple; Mrs. H. Unterkircher; Miss Mary Doll; Lois Hazelwood; Jennie Salisbury; Mrs. Will Scott; Fannie S. Knight.

In remitting for the renewal of The Restitution Herald, a subscriber writes, "We cannot do without your paper in our home. Long may it live and herald the truth to our many homes." We thank you for these words of appreciation, and trust that The Herald will continue to proclaim God's precious truths and bring many to know the way of life eternal.

The Oregon congregation commenced a series of lessons on the book of Revelation at their regular Thursday evening prayer and study hour. All those in attendance are enjoying and being much benefited by these studies under the leadership of Bro. Austin.

The community around Oregon was shocked by the death of Dr. H. H. Sheets, October 25. Dr. Sheets was physician for Golden Rule Home and the family doctor of many of our church families. One who ministers faithfully to the needs of others in distress and sickness comes to be much loved and esteemed.

Bro. F. L. Austin was the speaker for the Fonthill and Niagara Falls brethren on October 26 and 27. We trust that the churches throughout the country observed and will continue to observe his request for prayer for those of our number who are sick.

ILLINOIS APPOINTMENTS

Friday, November 1, at 7:45 p. m., Rally Day and preaching services at Rockford by Bro. F. E. Siple, at their regular meeting place, 1904 N. Main St. Everyone is cordially invited to join them in their rally.

On Sunday, November 3, there will be preaching at the Dixon church morning and evening by the pastor, F. E. Siple. All those nearby not in attendance at other services are invited to come and worship with them.

In the absence of the pastor, Bros. Richard Le Crone and Cecil Smead conducted the services for the Oregon church on Sunday morning, October 27. Bro. Le Crone opened and closed the services and Bro. Smead gave an uplifting talk on "A Purpose in Life". This was his first attempt at filling the pulpit and was very well received by the congregation.

Bro. Paul C. Johnson spoke for the Chicago church on Sunday morning, October 27, and for the Oregon brethren in the evening of the same day. He wonders whether some of the Chicago folks got lost on their way to church.

Take a look at the advertisement which appears on the back page of this issue. If you are in need of song books now is the time to put in a supply.

SOME WORDS OF GREETING

Greetings to the household of the one faith, one hope and one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all. May the blessings and peace rest upon all of precious faith. I am alone and beg of you to remember me in your prayers. I am enclosing some money for the renewal of The Restitution Herald, and for my tithe. I can send only the widow's mite. In Christian love,

Your sister in the one faith,
Mrs. L. J. Sweet,
2329 Grand, Parsons, Kansas.

THE THEME OF WORLD PEACE

One of the most absorbing themes in news and conversation of the present day is that of world peace. Many deep thinkers of the time think that world peace is actually practicable, that if we persist long enough and perseveringly enough, we will bring it to pass. What are some of the foundation reasons for war? Name some of the evil characteristics of man that bring about war. What change will have to transpire in the hearts of men to bring about universal peace?

While the efforts at world peace are commendable in that they bring before the minds of men those principles of truth and righteousness which our Savior exemplified, we must never forget that man cannot bring this condition about by his own efforts, nor in his own strength.

Many of the writers of the Scriptures portray in pen pictures the beauty of the time when war shall be no more, when instead of using his faculties for devising ways to destroy life, man will seek to build up and ennoble life.

When "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," there will be no room for greed and selfishness, but each will seek the other's welfare. Let us be ever looking forward to that time and fitting ourselves for a part in it.—M. G.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Several more answers to Queries 6 were received this week.

Hazel Titus is one that regularly sends answers to Queries. She gives a large percentage of correct answers.

Mrs. Mina Crosby, another regular student of Queries sends in a very neat paper answering Queries 7. All answers were correct, excepting one, which also may be correct in her judgment.

"I want to tell you how much I enjoy the queries", writes Mary J. Burnett. "I think that the Queries will help to better remember the things that we study," she continues.

Another letter says, "We like them better than cross word puzzles." Another reports, "Sr. ——— and I have had a great many 'phone talks comparing notes on 'Queries'." The Editor is glad you are enjoying them, but wishes more would send in their answers.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

THE BIBLE IS IMMEASURABLE by any rule which a mere man may carry. Although one should spend his life in research in order to give out an opinion worthy of himself, it could be no more than an individual judgment. And, indeed, it is the Book that "nobody knows".

No man has such sweep of vision as to be able to stand in his place and view the Bible as a whole. Rather he judges it by verses and chapters. In his noblest efforts to grasp its transcendent reaches, he finds that he has all but forgotten the outline of its uplifted peaks, the while his eyes have been searching the recesses of its stupendous base. It is as if he stood before a mountain whose sublimities baffle both sight and memory.

The man who speaks lightly of the Bible may be compared to one who can stand on the shore, looking out to the ocean, and see nothing to stir him to wonder and reverence.

The man who finds nothing in the Bible but certain words and texts with which to prove his inherited creed has tried to make a primer of the Book of books. He has wholly missed its radiating "light that was never on sea or land".

The Bible, with its cry of the beginnings, its sob of the ages, its rise and fall of the centuries, its good men and its evil men, its hopes and fears, its faiths and despairs, its seamless garments and its tattered robes, its dawns and reeking darkness is the Book of books.

If a man "knows" Cain and Judas, if he can fathom Moses and Solomon, if he can explain Paul and Nero, if he can bridge the chasm between Herod and Jesus—if he can tell everything that was, that is, and that is to be, then he can read the Bible from its first word to its last with perfect understanding. If not, he must wait with the rest of us until eternity shall open the last seal of the Book of books.

In the meantime the Bible is a book which a man may use as he uses the sun and the stars; he may save his soul from falling by its warnings and guide his faltering steps by its light. He cannot shut it up in his house or hide it under his bushel; but he may warm his spirit by mystic fires, and find ineffable companionship among its saints who have walked with God!—Selected by I. O. Rogers.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS SHALL COME

By G. Eldred Marsh

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts; Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heaven, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; and I will shake all nations, and the Desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts."—Haggai 2:6-7.

THESE REMARKABLE WORDS of the prophet are replete with meaning to the one who thinks broadly and deeply of human needs. To the student of world politics they speak a familiar language, for they tell the story of a coming international, idealistic Eutopia, wherein will be fulfilled the fondest dreams of the world-reformer. To the cosmopolitan, "citizen of the world", whose broad fraternity will not confine itself within the limits of any one nationality, these words of Haggai breathe the very spirit by which he himself is animated. To those who seek peace through the outlawing of war, they suggest the accomplishment of cherished purpose. And to the child of God, the student of prophecy, they bring assurance of answered prayer, the prayer he learned from his Master's lips, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven"; for these words pre-echo the sentiment of the angels' chorus, so filled with promise and hope, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

The full depth of meaning of this splendid scripture does not find expression in the familiar rendering of the King James Version; but the American and English revisions bring it out more completely. The former excellent translation reads, "And I will shake all nations; and the precious things (margin, things desired) of all nations shall come"; while the latter version renders the passage, "And I will shake all nations, and the desirable things of all nations shall come." The noticeable difference between the old and the newer versions is the change in the word "thing" from the singular to the plural form, which greatly enlarges the significance of the text.

It is obvious that the primary thought of the prediction is that the treasures of all nations will eventually be poured into the coffers of Judah, and be made to enrich and glorify the rebuilt temple of the Lord. But in a broader sense it suggests the final realization of the loftiest hopes and aspirations of the entire world. And it is from that standpoint that I approach its consideration. When the Lord Jehovah "shall shake all nations" in the closing days of the tribulation period, and bring them to a realization of their hopeless condition, and shall establish His kingdom in their midst, then the "things desired of all nations shall come".

This is a "big order" indeed! It is an "order" that should satisfy the heart of the broadest minded philanthropist. "The things,"—observe the force of the plural form of the expression—"The things desired of all nations shall come." So broadly inclusive is this promise of Jehovah that it is difficult for the mind to grasp it fully. Like countless other assurances of present and future outpourings of divine grace recorded in the Bible, we can hardly comprehend it.

Were the text limited to the extent suggested in the common version; i. e., to the chief desire of all nations, our effort to compass its meaning would not appear so difficult. Careful analysis of the national hopes of the world, as such hopes find expression in legislation and are reflected in the press, results in the conclusion that permanent freedom from the sacrifices and horrors of war is by far the most universal of them all. "The desire of all nations" unquestionably is for peace. They are tired of strife and of bloodshed. They want time in which to recover from the devastating effects of past wars; time to build and grow, intellectually and commercially!

Both before and since the World War our own country has earnestly invited the nations to join her in a concerted effort to promote peace. The latest of such movements has resulted in some fifty of the leading governments signing the Kellogg Peace Pact with us, and some ten or eleven others signifying their intention to do so in the near future. If this particular diplomatic agreement does nothing more than to express clearly a world-wide abhorrence of war, it is worthy of serious consideration. It is evident from the manner in which it has been received that there is, indeed, a unanimous desire throughout the world for peace. And

THE FINAL RALLY DAY

WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED? As to the question asked by millions and millions of God's creatures, you and I have likewise asked the same question, and many others of our fellow men have asked the same question, we turn to the sacred Word to find an answer.

To the wicked men who on the day of Pentecost asked Peter this question, he answered, Acts 2:38, “Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is to you and to your children and to as many as are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.” These people had come to believe Jesus Christ because of the previous words given by Peter.

Likewise Philip told the eunuch in the eighth chapter of Acts, “If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest.” The eunuch had asked him if he might be baptized. Baptism was one of the directions of our Lord and Master, a direction carried out by the apostles following the Savior's ascension. If they were to belong to the Master, they were to be baptized into Him.

Paul tells us in Romans the sixth chapter, that baptism is something more than a mere formal manifestation before the world. Baptism is that which was practiced by way of indicating that the individual is buried with Christ by baptism into death. It is his announcement, his demonstration that he purposes to become dead to the world or to the former life and as no dead one can rise of his own accord from death, so likewise in Romans six, the apostle says, “Like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.” Walk in the newness of life after having been raised as Christ was raised, raised by the Father, lifted to a new life, a new creature in the Father's reckoning.

Soon Christ our Lord and Master is to return again the second time without sin unto salvation. When He returns there will be a gathering together of all the faithful ones. This gathering will be the greatest rally that the world shall have ever known. It will be a rallying together of the faithful ones throughout all Christian dispensations. It will be a gathering together of the apostle Paul, and Peter, and John from the isle of Patmos, of the faithful ones who attended them as they ministered in the different parts of the world at that time. It will be a gathering together of the faithful ones who lived and died as a result of their battles during the dark ages. It will be a rallying together also of faithful ones of this time, of your loved ones and mine, of faithful ones from every home, from every country, from every nation.

What a rally day that will be! The query comes to you and me, will we be among the number who will gather around the returned Savior at that beautiful day? Will we be among those who shall lift our voices in praise and adoration and thanksgiving unto Him whom the Father has placed over all the world? Let us so live, let us so persevere to the end of life's race that in that great day of the rally around the Master you and I may be among that company.

EVERY EYE SHALL SEE HIM

HOW THE STATEMENT of the seventh verse of Revelation one could ever be literally fulfilled has been an interesting query in the minds of both believers in the second coming of Christ and of non-believers. The press reports that Premier MacDonald spoke to the world about a question as to the standing of the United States and England among other nations. Regarding his speech on this theme given in New York City on October 11, the press says, “His voice was broadcast by radio to every corner of the globe.”

In addition to other wonders of the radio, the world is being introduced day by day to new developments in the television. Not only is it possible for the telephone to be so operated that both speaker and listener can see each other, but recently many pictures have from a distance been thrown upon the screen.

As with the voice so with the vision, man is beginning to learn the use of some of the great laws of the universe which heretofore have been a secret so far as man's finite knowledge could grasp.

What a happy day that will be when from around the world those whose ears and hearts are delicately attuned to the great life of Him who has been exalted above every name that is named, shall both hear His mighty call and direction, and shall see His beauteous countenance beaming forth the righteousness of God!

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

CHRIST DIED FOR ALL

Sunday, November 10—Mark 16:9-20

“GO YE INTO ALL THE WORLD and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned.”

Christ's death was with no respect of persons. Christ sent His gospel to all creatures. The law of Moses was given by God to Israel, and to Israel only, but the gospel is given to Israel and to the Gentiles as well.

Inasmuch as Christ died for all, it therefore becomes the duty of each and every follower of Christ that he should in turn live for all. There should be no more respect of persons with the Christian because of race differences than there was with Christ in His death.

Baptism also was for all. It was not merely for the Israelites to whom the kingdom of God was presented by Christ, but following the resurrection of Christ the gospel was for every creature. Baptism was commanded to people of all races alike.

GOD'S CLEANSING CLEANS

Monday, November 11—Acts 10:9-16

“What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.”

The law of Moses set aside certain animals and certain creatures as being clean. Others were unclean. In Peter's vision he saw all manner of four-footed beasts and creeping things let down from heaven in a sheet. He received instruction to slay and eat, but he refused upon the ground that many of those things were unclean. God's answer in the vision to him was, “What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common”.

The Israelitish people had also been taught that their nation was the cleansed and purged nation. All others were unclean. Following the vision the messenger of Cornelius reached Peter and requested that he would go to Caesarea and preach to the Gentiles there. Then Peter began to understand the meaning of the vision. Through Jesus Christ, God has cleansed alike Gentiles and Israelites. All were clean through the gospel and through obedience to Jesus Christ. Peter was no longer to look upon Gentile people of any race whatsoever as being unclean.

GOD IS NO RESPECTER OF PERSONS

Tuesday, November 12—Acts 10:23-33

“Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.”

Cornelius was a centurion of the Italians. He was not just a common citizen, but one in authority, a Gentile also. Nevertheless his prayers were heard by God. It was God himself who instructed Cornelius to send for Peter. It was God who taught him that Peter would tell him words whereby he might be saved. God was just as much concerned about Cornelius and other Italians as He was concerned about Israelites.

After that Peter had taught Cornelius and his household things concerning Jesus Christ, and Cornelius was believing and accepting those things, it was God who gave evidence that He was receiving Cornelius in that, while Peter yet spake, “the Holy Ghost fell on them which heard the word.”

The gospel is one of the greatest levelers in all the world. It leveled the Israelites to the Gentiles, and Gentiles to the Israelites. It levels the American to the Italian, the Italian to the American. It levels all races in Jesus Christ.

THY GOD SHALL BE MY GOD

Wednesday, November 13—Ruth 1:6-18

“Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.”

The acknowledgment of God as Ruler, Sovereign and Leader of the individual life was sufficient even in the days of strict national separation, for Ruth the Moabitess to be allowed to make her home with the Israelitish people. He who accepts God and God's Son, is before God on a level and a par with others who likewise accept. God is the Creator of all. It was He who out of one blood made all nations for to dwell on all the face of the earth. It was He who in making those nations, made them for His own great glory and honor. Let us all then make God the great ideal in life and make him who serves God, our brother.

GIVE ME TO DRINK

Thursday, November 14—John 4:1-14

“How is it that thou, being a Jew, asketh drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria?”

It was the Savior, who did no wrong, thought no wrong, who asked at this time of the Samaritan woman a drink. He astonished her, for she could not understand how a Jew could ask drink of a Samaritan who was regarded as the enemy of the Jew and as unclean. Jesus knew better. Her race, her foreign citizenship made little difference to Him who came to be the Savior of the world.

But the Savior did not stop there. He offered her drink that would last unto eternity. Not only did He ask for temporal blessing from her but He was anxiously willing to give unto her eternal blessing. The Savior's lesson should sink deeply into the hearts of Christian people of today! The gospel is free to all. Racial differences make no distinction. He who proclaims the gospel, he who measures

PART 4

By C. W. Dean

LET US CONSIDER THE FALSE PROPHET, who plays such an important role in the religious phase of the empire, securing worship for the first wild beast through signs and false miracles which are given to it to do. John writes, And I perceived another wild beast ascending out of the land, and it had two horns like a lamb (lambkin), and it talked like a lion, and it is exercising all the authority of the first wild beast before it, making the earth and those dwelling in it to be worshiping the first wild beast whose death blow was cured. And it is doing great signs, that it may be causing fire, also, to descend out of heaven into the earth before mankind, and it is deceiving those dwelling on the earth because of the signs which it was given to do before the wild beast, saying to those dwelling on the earth to make an image to the wild beast which has the blow of the sword and lives. And it was given to it to give spirit to the image of the wild beast, that the image of the wild beast should be talking also, and should be causing that whoever should not be worshiping the image of the wild beast may be killed. Rev. 13:11-15

Here we can see that the second wild beast, which is called the false prophet, Rev. 16:13, makes every effort to get worship for the first wild beast. We know that in Elijah's day, the test of Deity was the calling down from heaven of fire, for Elijah said that the God that answereth by fire, He is God. 1 Kings 18:24. So here we find the false prophet causing fire to descend from heaven before mankind. Here we see demonstrated the power and signs and false miracles which Paul declares that God will send the sons of stubbornness, the strong delusion, an operation of deception, that they should believe the falsehood, that all should be judged, or may be judged who do not believe the truth, but delight in injustice. 2 Thess. 2:11-12. Hence, we find the power federated on earth to battle against the Lamb (Lambkin) who is Lord of lords, and King of kings, is Satan, the wild beast, and the false prophet. The wild beast will be an earthly monarch, energized by Satan, heading up the federal kingdoms of the world; and the false prophet will be a pope, heading up the federated religious systems of the world, exercising all the authority of the first wild beast before it, securing worship for the first wild beast through the power and signs and false miracles given it to do before mankind.

THE MOBILIZATION

And I perceived out of the mouth of the dragon and out of the mouth of the wild beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet, three unclean spirits, as of frogs (for they are spirits of demons doing signs) which are going out to the kings of the earth (whole inhabited earth) to be mobilizing them for the battle of the great day of God Almighty. . . . And they mobilized them at a place called in Hebrew, "Harmageddon". Rev. 16:13, 14, 16.

And I perceived heaven opened, and, lo, a white horse, and he who is sitting on it is called Faithful and True, and is righteous in his judgments and battling. Now his eyes are a flame of fire and on his head are many diadems, having names written of which no one except himself is aware, and he is clothed in a cloak dipped in blood, and his name is called the Word of God. And the armies in heaven followed him on white horses, being dressed in linen white and clean, and out of his mouth a sharp saber is issuing in ordering with it. He should be smiting nations, and He will be shepherding them with an iron club, and he is treading the wine trough of the furious indignation of God, the Almighty, and on his cloak and on his thigh he has a name written: King of kings and Lord of lords. And I perceived the wild beast and the kings of the earth and their armies gathered to do battle with him who is sitting on the horse and with his army. Rev. 19:11-19.

This array of scriptures mobilizes the armies for the battle of the great day of God Almighty on the plain of Esdraelon, called in Hebrew, Harmageddon. The battle is not between nation and nation, capital and labor, or government and religion as some preach and teach, but is the day of avenging, when Christ, as King of kings and Lord of lords, will tread the wine trough of the furious indignation of God, the Almighty (Rev. 19:15). He defeats the kings of the earth and the armies of the sons of stubbornness energized by Satan; so great and horrible will be the destruction of human life in the battle of the great day of God Almighty, that God will prepare for it in advance by calling the scavengers of the air and field together to eat the flesh lest the stench of the unburied dead should breed pestilence in the land. Let us hear the call of the messenger to the birds flying in mid-heaven: Hither; be gathered for God's great dinner, that you may be eating flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of the horses and of those who are sitting on them, and the flesh of all freemen as well as slaves, and of small and great. Rev. 19:17-18.

Only those biased by some theory would ever think of spiritualizing this passage of Scripture. In fact, the details are given in such manner as not to permit of any spiritualization. The call or invitation is to the birds that fly in mid-heaven. The flesh of kings, the flesh of captains, the flesh of horses and those who are sitting on them, the flesh of all freemen and slaves, small and great, sets before us a carnage of man's mightiest array of armies, visited by voracious scavengers for removing foul remains from the earth. A still more graphic description of the great dinner is given in the Hebrew Scriptures, Ezek. 39:17-20. In this same chapter we are told that the house of Israel, the occupants of Palestine in that day, will be seven months burying the bones of the dead from which the birds and beasts have eaten flesh. We are told also that the dwellers of the cities of Israel shall make fires of the weapons of warfare for seven years, without taking wood from the field or cutting down out of the forests.

THE AWAKENING HAND OF GOD

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

HAVING LATELY READ the annual message of President Lipski of the Zionist Organization to the thirty-second annual convention, I have found some things in it that I thought might be of interest to our readers, and so I have decided to send these extracts to you through The Herald, hoping you, too, may enjoy them.

Louis Lipski says that "it is a literal truth that a new land comes to life, rising painfully out of the submerged past. It is as if, in the long years past, Palestine had been laid in a trance and the magic spell now has been broken. Is this a figure of speech? Do you call it fantasy? When God saw His people driven forth by the Romans from the land He had promised them as their heritage forever, compassion overcame Him, and He set His seal on the land to hold it until they returned. A finger of mercy touched it and it fell into a sleep that has endured for over nineteen hundred years. Empires rose and fell; conquerors came and departed; but the land lay prostrate in fearful slumber and was not disturbed.

"The middle sea was reduced to paralysis. Its circulation was inhibited and it became the Dead Sea, a strange useless appendix, absorbing the riches of the soil; a bottomless pit, a cistern of death. All the water of the Jordan poured into that sinister vessel and left its wealth there. The rivulets that gave their life to the Jordan felt no urge to feed a useless instrument and wandered aimlessly about, losing themselves in swamps and morasses, deprived of perennial renewal of water.

"The forests decayed, were destroyed by predatory tribes and roots of what was left of them were nibbled away by hordes of goats driven by impoverished Bedouins. The extinction of the trees left the mountains bare forbidding skeletons of their former state. The hills of Judaea were left unprotected, abandoned by nature and man.

"The coastal plain, once nature's store house, became desert sand. Dust covered the ugly decay of the cities; centuries of progress passed the deserted land and made not a mark upon its features. Commerce turned to other parts; ships passing saw only a strip of sand from Gaza to Acco, topped by the range of devastated rocks of the Judaeian hills. Upon that black ridge the ancient city of Jerusalem rested. Within the creaking gates old rites and customs were being lazily repeated by derelict remnants of many races who seem to have taken a vow to await unchanged the deliverance that has been promised to the favored son.

"A darkened capital; a land left forgotten by its children; sightless people moving about going through prescribed motions like automatons; the wind blowing the sand ever further toward the hills; it is indeed a desolate picture. The bride, awaiting the coming of the predestined groom, keeping her beauty hidden for protection against unwelcome suitors, had donned unsightly garb; had become unkempt, ugly, lethargic, morose, lacking grace and beauty: a tragic spectacle of desolate mourning and hopeless lamenatation.

"Now the veil of ages is being removed. The Magician has spoken the word and many hands have responded to reveal the truth. Palestine is being reborn. Hands of love touch its soil, and that which seemed dead, beyond recall, comes to life. It recognizes the touch of the beloved one; it reciprocates remembrance and love. Get the right perspective, and it will speak but one word, awakening!

"What do you think is the true meaning of the reclamation of the Dead Sea? They speak of millions of tons of chemical deposits, realizing the wealth that has poured into it through the centuries. They speak of industrial enterprises, of cheap fertilizers. But the Dead Sea is the physical heart of Palestine; the heart that had stopped beating. The quickening of its life means the removal of a cancer that has eaten into the physical life of the land. It had been a clog. It had been a drain. It had taken all and given nothing in return.

"When Novomeysky opens the veins of this cancer, creates an exit for the waters of the Jordan, he restores nature's normal circulation in Palestine's physical life. The change will be felt far up in Mount Hermon. The good news will be carried to the creeks and rivulets and wadis, into every swamp and morass. Every artery will be prepared to function when once the heart resumes its healthy beat.

"Penchas Rutenburg came before Novomeysky, but there is a direct connection between the harnessing of the Jordan, and the exploitation of the Dead Sea. Rutenburg is bracing the walls of the river; he is cleansing its bed, regulating its flow, clearing the way for the converging streams. He is creating an adequate receiver for an enlarged waterfall that will hold and use all the water poured into it. The river will at last have a normal beginning and a healthy exit. The strengthening of the Jordan, now in process of execution, means bringing to life the hidden currents of water in the land. It is contributing to the making of a dependable system of circulation. A physical abnormality is being removed; the land is being helped to awaken."—From The New Palestine.

When we look at the disclosures made by the Scriptures concerning the great apostasy from the faith, which shall be a feature of the last days, also the lawless tendency of the age as shown in nearly every political, social and moral movement we are forced to view them with grave suspicion, and duty enjoins upon us the exercise of the right to examine carefully all new-fangled notions, whether social or religious.

It has been said that truth is many-sided like a cube; and we should never be so tenacious of the aspect of it which is familiar to us as not to be ready to come round and view it under another man's aspect. This may be true, but I find that truth is truth no matter from what angle or side we view it, and it always appears the same, while error parades under many colors. Hence the necessity of being on the watch at all times lest we "fall into temptations" and our calling fails of election.—Lyman Booth.

SOME PROPHETIC STUDIES

By R. H. Judd

PRELUDE

Here are a few suggestive thoughts concerning this subject: The reader will notice how wonderfully all true Bible teaching blends, harmonizes and proves the truth of each combining unit of truth. How clearly it is incidentally demonstrated that the Holy Spirit is not a separate personality, but is in reality the very power itself, emanating from the one and "only" Most High God! The Spirit is not the objective subject of this message, but the Bible message regarding it is inextricably woven into it in such a way that there is no escape from the obvious teaching of Scripture concerning it. The writer believes that could the personality of the Holy Spirit be actually demonstrated as a third person of the trinity, then the cold, terrible anomalous and paradoxical fact is also demonstrated that He who claims to be the "Almighty God" is himself devoid of power, for the Scriptures themselves testify that the Holy Spirit is "the power of the Highest". Such a conclusion would be awful, is awful in its contemplation, but we thank God it is not, it cannot be true.

No. 1

HEBREW PROPHECY, like the Hebrew people, stands without parallel in the history of the world. Other nations have had their oracles, diviners, soothsayers, magicians and necromancers. The Hebrews alone have possessed prophets and a prophetic literature. It is useless therefore to go to the manticism of the heathen to get light as to the nature of Hebrew prophecy. The only reliable sources of information on the subject are the Old and New Testaments.

To interpret the prophetic writings with accuracy a familiar acquaintance with the original language is undoubtedly of immense value if not a necessity; but a correct idea of the prophetic work and office and the nature of prophecy in general and prophetic utterances in particular, may be obtained from any ordinary translation of the Old Testament by any intelligent reader. He can, without knowledge of Hebrew, understand the character and history of Moses or Elijah, and know that Elijah foretold a drought and Elisha sudden plenty, Micaiah was a true prophet and Zedekiah a false one, as easily as Gesenius or Ewald, or Ellicott, Browne, or Rawlinson. No student of God's Word should allow himself to be mystified or silenced by an appeal to the learned, much less disturbed in his faith, as if he could not ascertain the general teaching of Scripture without a profound knowledge of the ancient languages, and the latest pronouncements of the higher critics. The essential features of prophetic truth are too boldly drawn to be hidden by the private interpretation, or even the translation, of any one individual.

It may seem to be out of place to put before readers of The Herald definitions of the various terms used in Scripture relative to prophetic utterances and the prophets who uttered them. Believing, however, that a correct definition of terms is essential to the correct understanding of any given subject, and that truth repeated is thereby emphasized and assimilated, the following suggestive thoughts gleaned from study are put forward in the hope that they will be of service to some.

(1). Primarily, in the Scriptures, a prophet is a man called and sent by God to communicate a divine revelation. This is apparent in the first place by the names given. They are called "prophets", "seers", "men of God", "men of the Spirit".

The Hebrew word, Nabi, is supposed by some to signify by its etymology "an inspired person", by others an "utterer or announcer". Instead of seeing conflict in the two definitions, the writer sees harmony, for when we come to seek our definition from Scripture we find that a prophet is well described as "one who speaks for another", an announcer of a message not his own, but another's. Hence we see the propriety of the thought that his message must be "breathed into"—literally, "inspired"—by another. Both of these aspects are beautifully illustrated in two passages in the book of Exodus, where Aaron is definitely said to be the "prophet" or "spokesman" of Moses. See Ex. 4:14-16, and 7:1.

(2). The title "Seer" refers rather to the manner or mode of receiving the divine communication than its utterance to others. It is derived from Numbers 12:6, "If there be a prophet among you, I the Lord will make myself known to him in vision". The prophet's vision is not the offspring of his own mind. The Lord makes himself known to and through the prophet. It is remarkable that the word "vision" does not necessarily imply ecstasy or symbolic representation, for it is often equivalent to "the word of the Lord", as in 1 Sam. 3:21. The first chapter of Isaiah, which in the main cannot in any sense be said to be symbolic, opens with the words, "The vision of Isaiah", while the second chapter has for its title the remarkable statement, "The word which Isaiah . . . saw". See also Amos 1:1; Psa. 89:19; Obad. 1:1. Also, see Nahum 1:1, the burden—or oracle—the book (written word) of the vision of Nahum; and Hab. 2:2, 3, where it is said, "the vision" . . . "it shall speak". See too Numbers 12:6 where the Lord says He will "speak in vision" (dream).

There is yet further instruction for us in the study and meditation of this word "seer". It is this, that God would lay claim to the very sources of the springs of life. His prophets must thus be consecrated to Him from the deepest recesses of their inmost being. Some passages of Scripture seem to place "vision" and "thought" on much the same plane, as for instance Job 4:13 and 33:15, and the many scriptures where God lays claim to the thoughts of mankind—especially His own redeemed ones—will readily come to the mind of the reader.

ADORATION OF JEHOVAH'S GLORIOUS KINGDOM

JEHOVAH'S JUST AND GLORIOUS RULE

PSALM 145

I WILL EXTOL THEE, MY GOD, O King, for ever, and praise thy name continually. Thy greatness is unsearchable, and thou art worthy of all praise. One age proudly tells to another the story of thy mighty works. They tell with joy the wondrous tale of thy glorious and terrible deeds, in which was revealed thine abundant and memorable love: and their story of thy great and wondrous works I too will ponder and tell. Thou art a God of grace and pity, of great patience and love, kind and pitiful toward all that thou hast made. All thy works praise thee, thy saints bless thee, telling the world of thy might and thy glorious kingdom, whose sway is everlasting. Thou art faithful in all thy words, and gracious in all thy deeds, supporting those who fall, and lifting those who are bowed down, in due season supplying from thine open hand the needs of all thy creatures, as they turn to thee with expectant eyes. In deed and word thou art gracious and kind, ready to hear the cry of all who call upon thee in sincerity, ready to help and satisfy and save. All who love thee thou dost preserve, but the wicked thou dost destroy. May praise and blessing rise to thy holy name, not from my lips alone, but from the hearts of all men everywhere forever!—Rendered in paraphrase by John Edgar McFayden.

GOD'S THREE-FOLD OATH

GOD DECLARES ON OATH that He does not will your death, your everlasting destruction. If you die, you die against God's will. If you perish, God has no pleasure in your perishing. If you are lost to God, to purity, to happiness, and that forever, it will not be because God has chosen this as your portion, but because you have wilfully and persistently chosen to be lost contrary to God's plan and purpose.

God again declares on oath that if the wicked man forsake evil and turn to Him he shall not die but live. Here God on oath breathes hope to the wicked on the condition of his penitent return, assuring him of life eternal if he turn from his sin, and do that which is lawful and right.

And again a third time God declares on oath that if the wicked man persist in his evil way die he must, die he shall, for his iniquity that he hath committed he shall die. "As I live, saith the Lord." These are strong, stern, solemn words. Either God must die or the persistent impenitent must die. Both cannot live. God hath sworn by His immortality that the wicked impenitent man must perish.

The walls of the celestial city are mounted all round with the oaths of God keeping back all unbelievers from approaching its gates, and securing the city and its inhabitants forever against the entering therein of a single impenitent soul.—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis from the writings of Richard Roberts, a minister of London, England.

out the water of life, should measure out to one and all as needed.

I THANK GOD

Friday, November 15—Romans 1:8-17

"I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all."

What a happy day it will be when the races of the whole world will in faith gather together under the great sovereignty of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Master! With what unison will the world then live its life! What peace must prevail as a result!

Were the Christian people of today, Christian people of all races and bloods to unite in one common faith, in praise and thanksgiving to God, they in themselves would largely be the balance wheel of the world, standing side by side for one great common cause. It would hardly be possible for other peoples to throw the world into its customary periodical turmoil.

GOD'S LIGHT

Saturday, November 16—Acts 13:44-52

"It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judged yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, we turn to the Gentiles."

The Jews showed themselves ungodly in that they allowed their prejudices against the Gentiles to turn them away from the Word of God. Because of such prejudice and of such turning Peter also turned away from them, carrying the Word of God to the Gentiles that they might also believe and be saved.

What a rebuke is this to us of this day! How many of us turn away from the real truths of the gospel simply because of our denominational or racial prejudices against other people!

IS MY RELIGION merely theoretical, or is it practical? Do I take every word of my Lord's and His apostles' perfunctorily, or sincerely: as, "This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die", John 6:50? Listen to Jesus (Matt. 7:24-27), "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell, and great was the fall of it." So let us build our faith upon Holy Writ, guided by the Holy Spirit, emanating from God, "for other foundation can no man lay that that is laid; which is Jesus Christ", Paul. The sandy foundation represents the spirit of the world and of the flesh, which, at its best, is satanic.—S. E. H.

THE TIME TO TRUST

“What is the time to trust?
Is it when all is calm,
When waves the victor’s palm,
And life is one glad psalm
Of joy and praise?
Nay; but the time to trust,
Is when the waves beat high,
When storm clouds fill the sky,
And prayer is one long cry,
O help and save!

“What is the time to trust?
Is it when friends are true?
Is it when comforts woo?
And in all we say and do,
We meet but praise?
Nay, but the time to trust,
Is when we stand alone,
And summer birds have flown,
And every prop is gone,
All else but God.

“What is the time to trust?
Is it some future day,
When you have tried your way,
And learned to trust and pray
By bitter woe?
Nay, but the time to trust,
Is in this moment’s need,
Poor broken, bruised reed!
Poor troubled soul, make speed,
To trust thy God.

“What is the time to trust?
Is it when hopes beat high,
When sunshine gilds the sky,
And joy and ecstasy
Fill all the heart?
Nay, but the time to trust,
Is when our joy is fled,
When sorrow bows the head,
And all is cold and dead,
All else but trust.”

—A. B. Simpson.

The oldest of all extant cities is Damascus in Syria. It is mentioned in the book of Genesis. It was near here that Saul of Tarsus had his vision. Today it is still a center of trade and travel. Its fruits and flowers are as celebrated now as in ancient times. The damson, or blue plum, the damasco, or apricot of Portugal and the damask rose. Damask, our fabric of cotton and silk, and damaskeening, the beautiful art of inlaying wood and steel with gold and silver, also come from Damascus.—Selected.

THE FIFTH BOOK OF MOSES

By Lyman Booth

FROM THE FIRST HEBREW WORD of this book, Ele-hadebarim, it has derived its name in English. It is called by some, the Book of Reprehensions, because of its many reproofs which Moses gave the children of Israel on account of their misconduct. It has also been called Thorah, or the Law; and Misna, which conveys nearly the same meaning as the word Deuteronomy, which signifies a second law or a repetition of the law, for in it we find many of the statutes of the law repeated, together with the blessings that would follow their obedience, or the curses for their disobedience.

It is in this book that Moses gave further explanations of the law and animated exhortations for Israel to comply with all the commandments. The most remarkable events in Israel’s past history were given anew and amplified to practical purposes. It was quite necessary that they should be repeated at this time, for Moses was speaking to another generation than the one which came out of Egypt. All the adults of the former had died in the wilderness, except Joshua and Caleb. Besides repeating the old there were several new laws and other matters added not mentioned in the former.

We might say this book contains Moses’ dying exhortations, if not his last will and testament, for he had been warned, at least two months prior to his death, that he should die without the privilege of entering the promised land, although he should behold it from the summit of a near by mountain. His zeal and service for the glory of God was most active. His love for his people was fervent and knew no bounds. The concluding days of his career were remarkable for the various methods and means he employed for Israel’s benefit. He recited before them how the Lord in His dealings with the fathers had covenanted to bless them in many ways. He also reminded them of their past rebellion; then exhorted them to be obedient to all of God’s commandments. His appeal, though gentle and kind, was pathetic and full of energy.

He gave directions for writing the law on pillars of stone, and foretold a division of the tribes that would appear at Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim, and commanded them to ratify the terms of the law. In referring to their leaving Egypt, he said (4:20), “The Lord hath . . . . brought you forth out of the iron furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a people of inheritance, as ye are this day.” These words were given to show them the love and mercy God had for them, and to impress on their minds the danger of disobeying God’s word. Moses said (v. 24), “For the Lord thy God is a consuming fire, even a jealous God.” A consuming fire is a destructive fire, and jealousy is none the less destructive. Then by way of encouragement he said (v. 31), “For the Lord thy God is a merciful God; he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he swore unto them.”

In 4:43 were named the three cities of refuge in which certain ones could find safe shelter until found either guilty or innocent. Moses spoke of Christ in 18:15, as follows, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken". Our Lord must have looked upon this book as being the word of His Father, for He used portions of it with which He warded off the temptations while in the wilderness. This circumstance alone is ample proof of the inspiration of the book.

Many of the prophecies of this book have long ago been fulfilled and still others await fulfillment. Israel prospered at times, but at last were scattered like chaff to the four winds, and they have drained the cup of persecution to the bitter dregs. Other sacred writers have quoted parts of this book as the word of Moses and the word of God. Here are a few which demonstrate its divine origin. The reader may find it interesting to turn to them and read them. 1 Kings 2:3; 2 Chron. 25:4; Dan. 9:13; Matt. 4:4, 7-10; John 1:45; Acts 3:22; 7:37; 1 Cor. 9:9; Gal. 3:10-14.

There is a striking similarity between this book and the rest of the Pentateuch. We notice the slavery of Israel to Egypt, and to Egyptian laws and customs. To this must be added that Paul, in Rom. 10:6, 8, 19 and 15:10, argues from Deuteronomy at some length and quotes it as written by Moses.

Deuteronomy contains many prophecies which have become past history, while many are waiting fulfillment. And of this the reader may satisfy himself by reading the following chapters: 4, 17, 28, 32, and 33. The five books of Moses contain sufficient internal evidence to convince any thinking person that they are the dictations of a wise and infinite Mind, though written by the hand of Moses, "a servant of God".

THE NUMBER TWO BEREAN BOOK

---

I WOULD LIKE TO CALL the special attention of the readers of The Restitution Herald to Berean Book Two. I have read and re-read it with the greatest of pleasure. It is an admirable book for free lending or giving. Its statements are concise, well backed by carefully selected Scripture references; and if read through in a straightforward manner, as one would read an ordinary book, its contents will be found to be of intense interest and value. The terseness yet fluency of expression will be found to be remarkable—indeed eloquent—inciting the reader to further research along the line of each of the subjects treated. If read with willingness of heart and mind to give it fair examination I venture to assert that you will deem it worthy of wide circulation. We cannot all agree on every minor detail, nor would the argument that appeals to one necessarily appeal to another, but I feel assured that this little work admirably expresses our convictions as a church, and that our Bro. Lyon deserves the thanks and congratulations of us all for his unstinted labors. It is my heart's earnest prayer that it may be a blessing to many—yes, to thousands.

Yours in the Master's service,

R. H. Judd,

such a desire is most logical. Nations cannot thrive in an atmosphere of suspicion and fear. Commerce cannot be developed while wars and rumors of war are agitating the minds of the people. Education, business, science, invention, art—all the concomitants of civilization, are dependent for their free development upon the establishment and maintenance of peace. It is true that certain branches of commerce and of science fatten on the necessities of war-torn nations; but true progress, permanent development, and real culture are possible only during periods of prolonged peace.

Prior to the introduction of the Kellogg Peace Pact by the United States, various other plans were formulated by which it was hoped to bring about a state of good will among the nations. Among other movements of this nature, as especially worthy of mention, we recall the Hague Tribunal; the League of Nations; and the League to Enforce Peace. I call special attention to these three because in their plans and purposes they present the three great principles upon which all similar organizations have based their hopes of success. These principles are, (1) Agreement or Treaties; (2) Education; and (3) Force.

The first method suggests that peace may be brought about through the signing of covenants, in which the nations concerned solemnly pledge themselves to seek other means than war in the settling of misunderstandings among them. The second would endeavor to produce a peaceful condition in the world by educating the people to abhor war, and to refuse to engage in it. The third would attain its purpose by organizing the leading powers into an irresistible military coalition, which would be able to overawe and coerce the smaller nations into maintaining the peace. All of these methods possess their attractive and promising features. But none of them are new; and they have all been tried repeatedly in the past, and without exception have failed in the accomplishment of their purpose. No, the desire of the nations for peace has never been realized. Yet, it is still the ideal for which men strive and of which they dream.

THE SINGING HEART

The singing heart is the heart we love;
It lightens grief and care;
It matters not what the shadows are,
We know a song is there.
And be it walking the open road
Or on the city street,
The singing heart has a joyous note
That makes just living sweet.

FOR YOU TO FIND

QUERIES 10

Would you like to be rich?

WEALTH

“Riches certainly make themselves wings.”—Who said?
Where found?

Where found? Who or what?

1. A wealthy man's wish granted.
2. A wealthy man's wish refused.
3. A wealthy man tested by God.
4. A wealthy man tested by Satan.
5. A man who lost a fortune and gained a greater one.
6. A Prince's testimony after gratifying every desire.
7. Two things better than riches.

BIBLE STUDY

My name a glowing gem of praise;
A “nothing” graved by man's device!
What may not pass a needle's eye;
And what we call the showy sky;
What all things have when gone and past,
And a rich odorous ointment last.

The initial letters joined will tell
What men so often love too well.

“Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory of his house is increased: for when he dieth, he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him.”—Psalms 49:16, 17.

“But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven.”—Matthew 6:20.

The response last week to the Queries gives us courage to think that you are enjoying digging them out and sending us your answers. We notice that several isolated ones are working out the answers and find pleasure as well as profit. It helps to take away the isolated feeling when you know others are studying the same questions at the same time, doesn't it?

One letter tells us that “we voted at Berean class to send in our answers, each one making them out as much as possible before class and completing them after the Berean lesson.” Some are making scrap books of Queries. This may be a good idea for younger ones, utilizing spare moments to good advantage, thus compiling a reference book for future use.

Correct answers to Queries 8 were received from Mrs. Jane Lansbery, Esta L. Starbuck, Hazel Titus, Mrs. Mina Crosby, Mrs. Hugh Glover, Harry Goekler, Lulu and Eva Stilson. This is just like hearing from different members of one family, scattered over several states. Now sharpen your wits for the next one.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

TARES

TARES IS A GRASS VERY COMMON in Eastern countries. Matthew 13:25. It is difficult to distinguish it from wheat until the head appears. The grain of tares is poisonous, and even a small quantity of it mixed with wheat and made into bread produces dizziness. The grain, however, is so much smaller than that of wheat that the two can be easily separated. Read the parable of the tares.

SYCAMORE TREE

(Ficus Sycomorus)

THE SYCAMORE TREE is of the same genus as the fig. It has a flattened spherical comus, from 15 to 50 feet high, often one-sided, and sometimes shading an area 60 to 80 feet in diameter. As it is frequently planted by roadsides, its long, nearly horizontal branches project over the road. It was therefore eminently a suitable tree for Zaccheus to climb in order to see Jesus passing. Luke 19:4. Seated on its lowest branch, he would be within easy speaking distance of the Savior.

The foliage also is not usually dense, especially in the old trees by the waysides. The trunks often attain a very large size, sometimes 30 to 40 feet in circumference. The leaves are ovate-subcordate. The fruit is a small, not very palatable fig, about one inch long, growing thickly together on curious little leafless twigs on the trunk or large branches.

This fig is eaten as it ripens, and it ripens in successive installments almost throughout the year.

The wood of the sycamore, although light and porous is durable. It was used in Egypt for mummy cases. It is not now so common in the Holy Land as to furnish available timber, but it was formerly very plentiful in the lowlands; but occurred in the hill countries also. Amos, a Judaeen shepherd collected its fruit. Amos 7:14. It is not to be confused with the tree of the same name in the United States and England.

"IT IS THE SPIRIT THAT QUICKENETH; THE FLESH PROFITETH NOTHING".—JOHN 6:63.

THE SPLENDID THOUGHTS presented in the following paper and in other papers which were read at the annual Berean conference at Oregon, Illinois, last August, led to the vote that they be published for the benefit of many who could not attend this meeting. We will present the others as opportunity affords.

SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT FROM BEREAN STUDY

A GOOD WORKMAN IS KNOWN by his output. It matters not whether he be a mechanic, artist, surgeon or musician, whatever he does reveals the development of his mind by knowledge and practice acquired.

Hence Paul in 2 Tim. 2:15 exhorts us to "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth".

He shows what it will mean in our lives to study God's Word and to keep in close communion with Him, in Eph. 2:10. "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."

The Berean must be impressed with the references made and the appeal for the development of our minds in the Scriptures. 2 Peter 3:1; Rom. 8:5; 12:2; Phil. 3:16, 15; James 1:8, 18; 2 Cor. 5:17; Gal. 6:15, 16.

When we speak of things spiritual we mean the influence upon our minds of divine things as revealed in the Holy Scriptures. 1 Cor. 2:13-15; Gal. 6:1; 1 Pet. 2:5.

The normal mind, whether carnal or spiritual, is exercised in the same manner, namely, by words and impressions made through the eyes.

Our reason, then, for dwelling upon these things is that our minds or intellects are developed by the knowledge thus acquired. We are soon judged by our associates as possessing either a dull or a bright mind. On every hand man appeals to the mind chiefly by comparison or analogy. Jesus and Paul, also the prophets, were masters of this method and our heavenly Father condescends to appeal to His children in like manner.

Every Berean will recall especially Moses' and Christ's methods of preaching by parables, also Paul's masterful reasoning by analogy in his epistles. Hence, then, we compare natural things with that which is spiritual for the development of our minds.

The prophet Hosea in 8:5-14 shows the results of following the teachings of the world and practicing their forms of worship instead of God's word. Had Israel been obedient to God's word and followed its precepts and teachings their minds would have become spiritual and they would have become spiritual and they would have received His blessing; but by forgetting God and following the teachings of the world their minds became carnal and drew them away from God, and great was the suffering thereof.

Jesus, as related in John 6:31-35, likens Himself to bread, and in John 4:14 to water. In John 6:63 He says, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."

So, then, the study of God's Word will be to our spiritual minds as bread is to the development and strength of our material minds and bodies.—W. J. Halls.

WE SUBMIT THE FOLLOWING partial report of the Illinois Berean societies for the month of September. We would like to have a more complete record. Will not the secretaries of all societies in Illinois cooperate with the state secretary, Edna Wood, of Marshall, and see that she has a few details of interest about your class each month? It helps immensely.

Dixon: membership, 20; average attendance, 10; interest, good. Marshall: membership, 20; average attendance, 13; interest, good. St. Louis, Mo.: membership 12; average attendance, 6 or 7; interest, good. Rockford: membership, 17; average attendance, 15; interest, very good. Oregon: membership, 23; average attendance, 18; interest, best ever.

THE SECRETARY NEEDS HELP

To All the Bereans: Frequent requests for reports to The Herald of Berean activities have been made, but little attention has been granted the records of the National Berean Society. Would it not be possible for some one from the locality to send the secretary (address at head of page) a report of possible organization of new societies, positive organization, disbanding of old societies, etc., together with a list of the officers and their addresses? Such reports would not only greatly help in the keeping of the records but would also facilitate the work of the National Board.

LIVING WITH PEOPLE OF OTHER RACES

"HELLO, old dirty brown face!" I looked up from my work to see the little boy across the street thus addressing a passing colored woman.

The attention of the foreign maid was also attracted, and she immediately chided the youngster for his unkindly remark. She also told him to say, "I'm sorry". It was a lesson he had to learn.

It is the same lesson that many older people have yet to learn. We claim God for our Father, and forget that He is Father of all. Those of other countries and races love God, too, and worship Him, often more sincerely than we do.

It is our duty to respect these people who have different customs and traditions. We should tell them about our faith and try to interest them in our classes. Above all, we should set them an example of right living, love and worship.

Peter had to learn a similar lesson. He was a Jew and had been taught that God was the God of Israel, so God had to teach Peter that He is the God of all who will accept Him. And this is the way God did it:

Peter was in Joppa, living in the house of Simon, the tanner. One noon he went up on the housetop to pray. He became very hungry, but while waiting for his food to be prepared, fell into a kind of sleep. Then God sent him a vision—a sort of dream.

He saw the heavens opened and a great sheet let down from heaven by the four corners. In this sheet were animals of all kinds, and creeping things. A voice told Peter to kill and eat these animals, but Peter said, "Not so, Lord." You see, the Jews were very particular, according to their laws, about eating certain foods or animals, especially pigs. So, to Peter, this lot was very unclean. However, the voice said, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." This was done three times, then all was drawn up into heaven. God was teaching Peter that people of other nations were not unclean if God cleansed them; and that if He willed it so, all nations were to be welcomed into the church, "even as many as the Lord our God shall call".

Then Peter was prepared to receive three strangers, who arrived as the vision ended. These three were the servants of an Italian (Gentile) centurion named Cornelius, who had come to believe in God and served Him. He, too, had been shown a vision in answer to his prayers, and an angel told him to send for Peter, that Peter might tell him what he ought to do to be saved. So he sent for Peter.

In the meantime, Cornelius called together all his relatives and friends, that they might hear all things that were commanded Peter of God. Peter, with six brethren, soon arrived, and when Cornelius would have worshiped him, Peter would have none of that, for he said, "I myself also am a man".

Strict Jews would not have entered the house of a Gentile, and many would have refused to live in the house of a tanner who worked with the skins of animals. But Peter had learned differently. After Cornelius explained to him about the angel telling him to send for Peter, Peter began to preach to those assembled. The first thing he said was, "I perceive that God is no respecter of persons", that He would accept the righteous out of every nation.

Later Paul said, "There is neither Jew, nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

Let us, then, be kindly to all with whom we come in contact, regardless of their color or race. Let us try to make them feel at home with us, and make our lives so happy and attractive that they will want to be one of us.

REMEMBER

We are all one in Christ Jesus.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn Galatians 3:28, 29—"Abrahamic Faith".
2. Illustrate Peter's dream.
3. Read Romans 1:8-17; John 4:5-14; Acts 13:46-49.

A THOUGHT

It is very nice to think
The world is full of meat and drink,
With little children saying grace
In every Christian kind of place.

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

LESSON VII.—November 17, 1929

LIVING WITH PEOPLE OF OTHER RACES

Ruth 1:1-18; John 4:5-10; Acts 10:1 to 11:18; Romans
1:14; Galatians 3:28, 29.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 3:14-21.

GOLDEN TEXT

Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.—
Acts 10:34, 35.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Contribution of Various Racial Groups to a Common National Life.

Basic Truth: Man ought neither to add to nor take from God's Word. This, neither by words nor by application.

Outline: I. Ruth in the Land of Israel. II. Jesus Among the Samaritans. III. Peter Among the Gentiles. IV. No Racial Lines in Christ. V. God's Nations.

Introduction: To the writer this entire selection from Scripture is foreign to the inference suggested in the title of the lesson. God's warnings to Israel oft repeated were to the effect that they should not dwell in the midst of other nations. Especially did He urge and exhort that they should not intermarry. There was a reason.

In Christ the matter is different. Every man should by the Christian be regarded as neighbor.

I. Ruth in the Land of Israel. While Naomi and her husband reduced by famine in Judea took refuge in Moab, Ruth 1:1, 2, yet it was not for the purpose of mingling with another race. Naomi returned to the land of Israel accompanied by her daughter-in-law Ruth, a Moabitess, Ruth 1:6-19. Ruth was at once absorbed, or naturalized, into a family of Israel. This was not to form a common national life, but was by God used to strengthen Israelitish life.

II. Jesus Among the Samaritans. In no sense did Jesus mingle with the Samaritans in order to contribute to the upbuild of common national life. Such was foreign to His every thought. The only nation or national life which as such our Savior served, was the nation of Israel, the kingdom of God. (See 1 Chron. 28:5; 29:23.) What Jesus was doing in Samaria was to gently whisper the name and love of His Father unto the Samaritans and introduce them into the immediate family of God. To live with people of other races in an effort to contribute to the enlargement of the family of God is evidently in agreement with the whole gospel program.

III. Peter Among the Gentiles. In no sense was Peter ambitious to contribute toward a common national life. He cared neither for common national life nor Israelitish national life. He had renounced all these in so far as his heart's interest and service were concerned. But, learning from heaven that God was well pleased to receive Gentiles equally with Jews into the house of the Savior, and that He had cleansed them equally as He had the Jews, Peter forthwith broke down every personal prejudice and faithfully assisted Gentiles as well as Jews unto obedience unto Christ. It was in the contribution of various racial groups to a common life in Christ that Peter was interested.

IV. No Racial Lines in Christ. Paul's beautiful lesson in Gal. 3 so often fails of being understood. God has exalted Christ above every other name, Eph. 1:20-23. Then, immediately He sent to all the world and invited one and all to freely enter the household of His Son. The fact is that in Christ God is creating a new people, just as He created a new people in Abraham. In harmony therewith, Paul has made plain, that in Christ there is no grouping of Jews by themselves and of Gentiles by themselves, of bond or free, of men or women, each entitled to special consideration, but that all have in Christ lost their racial and national identities and are by Him reckoned as one in Him.

For contribution toward this end, living with people of other races has no Christian bounds. "Go ye into all the world," Matt. 28:19, was the parting word of our Savior recorded by Matthew. "Disciple all nations", R. V., was the purpose assigned. Not of contributing toward a common national life, but of gaining the would-be loyal ones from every nation to be exalted and glorified with the Master, that was the purpose. In Christ all are members one of another, Rom. 12:5. National, racial or colored lines are unknown in Him.

V. God's Nations. It was God who separated the sons of men into groups according to language upon the earth, Gen. 11:7-9. He did so for a purpose. He has revealed that He will collect them again under one King, His Son, Rev. 11:15; Matt. 25:31. That will be for national life, but it will be under conditions far superior to those of the present.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Christian Fellowship. One of the sins of the Pharisees was their self-exaltation. They held themselves aloof from other men, counting them as unworthy of their fellowship. The most difficult lesson Peter had to learn before he could enter upon the service of the Lord whole-heartedly, was "that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." Acts 10:34, 35. This truth was strongly emphasized by Paul, who says that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men." Acts 17:26. Recognizing that we are "all one in Christ Jesus," we should experience a sense of fellowship with the disciples of the Lord of all races and of all classes. Further, knowing that Christ died, not for our sins only, but for the sins of the whole world, (1 John 2:2), we should manifest a sympathetic interest in the salvation of all men.—G. E. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And Peter opening his mouth, said, I perceive in truth that God is not a respecter of persons, but in every nation, he who fears him and works righteousness is acceptable to him." Acts 10:34, 35, Diag.

America is said to be the melting pot of the world. Here we have many nationalities. What a wonderful thing it would be if every member of these different nationalities could be taught the Word of God, so that there would be "neither Jew nor Greek, neither bond nor free, neither male nor female:" but all be one in Christ Jesus!

When those who fear God and work righteousness are gathered out of all nations and races, then it will be a happy company; for races and nationalities will undoubtedly be forgotten, and all will be workers together with Him.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Peter's Conversion.

One of the last, if not the last step in Peter's conversion was the vision of unclean beasts, when a voice said, "Rise, Peter, kill and eat," and Peter answered, "Not so Lord." Then came the answer, "What God hath cleansed, call not thou common." And these words put the crowning touch to Peter's conversion; for Peter's understanding was turned from the flesh viewpoint, from which he was seeing mankind as it is in actual fact—as beasts of the earth; wild beasts; as things creeping in slime and darkness; as fowls of the air soaring in the pride of flesh culture and power—to the Christ's view point from which he saw mankind as God has decreed it shall be. The conviction—God hath cleansed, through Christ, all manner of peoples—overwhelmed him, and he accepted it as fact notwithstanding the existing facts that faced him.

This conviction—that God has given to Jesus wisdom, and power, and love for the cleansing of all manner of peoples, and that that cleansing is so sure that He says, "hath cleansed"—must play its fundamental part in every conversion. When it has played its part the converted one will regard his unclean neighbor as clean and will be his friend in daily life even as Jesus was the Friend of publicans and sinners. He will thus bring into unclean life a cleansing touch of the Christ's wisdom, power, and love, these having become his by the conviction and its conversion.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. Sarah Austin, aunt of Bro. F. L. Austin, visited Sr. Woodward at the home of Lloyd Austin (another nephew) in Otsego, Michigan, last week, also relatives in Kalamazoo. She will soon return to her home in Manistee. Owing to ill health she has not been able to meet with her own church people for more than twenty years, Sr. Woodward being the last one she heard preach. We find her the same sweet sister, patient and happy in the Lord.

Your attention is again called to the Song Book ad on the back page of this issue. Substantial reductions on all song books make it possible to replace your worn out books and to add new ones to those in your church.

In ordering song books one brother writes, "I want a copy to use in my home. I think our song book is full of good songs."

The office is attempting to go through The Herald files and bring the subscription list up to date. There are very many who are past due from one to three years. In remitting, several have written us that they did not realize they were in arrears and gladly sent in the amount due. Following is but one of several letters we have received that warm our hearts and give us courage to press onward.

"Dear Ones in Christ: Enclosed please find $2.00 for my subscription for The Herald for the coming year. It's weekly visits are always looked forward to with pleasure and delight in its many splendid articles from various writers. May the Lord bless you in heralding the truth as it is in Jesus.

"Your sister in Him,
"Mrs. Nora Johnson."

The Golden Rule Home wishes to extend heartiest thanks to Mrs. V. D. Smith, of Bristol, Indiana, for a box which was received this week. The thoughtfulness of Sr. Smith and of others who from time to time send gifts of various nature to the Home is very deeply appreciated.

MEETING AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Bro. L. E. Conner will hold a series of meetings at the Ripley, Illinois, church, beginning on November 5th and continuing for eighteen days. May the brethren within reach come and let us have a real spiritual meeting together once more. Bro. Siple will also be with us on Sunday, November 10, his regular appointment. May the meeting be uplifting in our Master's service.

Tessa Laning, Sec.

GOLDEN RULE GREENHOUSE

We have been grateful to receive some response to our request for a loan from within the brotherhood. Nearly half of the $2,500.00 asked has been received.

This is a straight business matter. The Board deemed it wise and prudent to make certain expenditures at the Greenhouse. This calls for the use of about the amount stated. It is felt that the Greenhouse should handle this in a regular business way. In no sense is it a gift. We are asking for loans, at 6%, to total around $2,500.00. Anyone willing to loan a portion of this will promptly be mailed a note for the amount.

The Greenhouse has done a good business for October. Especially has the last week been good. A large amount of new stock is being added, as has also a new truck.

The boiler which was bought in 1923 has given repeated trouble at great expense. Again it is leaking badly. Effort is being made to get an adjustment on this, as there is an evident weakness in the construction.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

Too late for the last issue The Herald received notice from Bro. C. W. Dean of a meeting at Richmond, Virginia, from November 3 to 17. The meetings are being held in the Apostolic church, 34th and Leigh Streets, Adlai Loudy from Johnson City, Tennessee, being the speaker. Some excellent subjects are announced. Services each evening at eight o'clock and Sundays, 10th and 17th, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

The annual all-day meeting of the Church of God at Niagara Falls, was held on Sunday, October 27, with good attendance at all three services. Bro. F. L. Austin was present and as usual gave some very interesting as well as constructive sermons. He is well known in this section of the country, having lived here for seventeen years, and his influence is still felt after an absence of several years, and will be for years to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Shea welcomed us to their home to have our basket dinner and supper. This meant a great deal, as it seemed there was no other place to be had just at this time and I am sure it was greatly appreciated by all. There were seventy for dinner and eighty-two for supper, for the most part people from quite a distance.

The day was one long to be remembered—good preaching, good music, good fellowship throughout. Every one is to be commended for hearty cooperation in making it a day of praise to the Father in heaven and our Lord Jesus Christ. Meetings of this kind make one think of the gathering that will take place when our Master returns and calls the ones that belong to Him. There will be no parting then. We recall the words of the prophet speaking of the redeemed: "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away".

Grover Gordon, Pastor.

Among the many pleasures of the recent gatherings at Fonthill and Niagara Falls were the frequent kind expressions of appreciation of the good work that Pastor G. A. Gordon is rendering. The good audiences were evidences of his faithful services.

We cannot help but expect good fruitage from these congregations.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Bro. F. L. Austin spoke at the Fonthill church on Saturday evening, October 26, and in spite of a political meeting just across the street there was quite a good sized audience. It seemed strange to have people on one side of the street fitting themselves for rulers in the kingdom of men and on the other a group fitting themselves for the kingdom of God. It is gratifying to know that there are still some who are interested in that kingdom that shall never be removed.

Arrangements have been made to have Berean class at least every two weeks, to be held during the winter months at the different homes. This is an adult class. Sr. Railton will continue her class as before.

Bro. and Sr. Elliott and David took us over to see Bro. and Sr. Absolom Hoover near Selkirk, on the shore of Lake Erie. Sr. Hoover has been confined to her bed for four or five weeks with an attack of bronchitis, but is some better at present. The Hoovers are both past eighty years of age and are living on the same farm where both Bro. Hoover and his father were born.

Bro. and Sr. Eugene Lent spent several days last week with Bro. and Sr. Cronkwhite at Bratford. Bro. Cronkwhite is in very poor health.

Fonthill was well represented at the all-day meeting in Niagara Falls on Sunday, October 27. Grover Gordon, Pastor.

IOWA

Since Conference time the writer has been holding services at the Hickory Grove church on the fourth Sunday of the month, this being the regular preaching day at that point. There has been a good attendance. We go back for one more service this fall, November's meeting being the last until next spring. The Hickory Grove people are too widely separated to get together during the winter.

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls class has had preaching fairly regularly since last spring. Bro. Eychaner and the writer alternating. The Sunday school has met regularly from week to week with a good average attendance.

Bro. and Sr. Eychaner expect to leave soon to spend the winter in Florida. We shall miss them very much and shall look forward to their return next spring. Charles W. Howe.

JOHNSON-AUSTIN

Bro. Paul C. Johnson and Sr. Ethel Austin, daughter of Bro. F. L. Austin, were united in marriage at the home of Bro. and Sr. William Austin, Sinmissippi Farm, Oregon, Illinois, on Sunday, November 3. Bro. Austin officiated at the ceremony. The happy couple left for a trip to Niagara Falls and points in Canada and Michigan.

The readers of The Herald and members of the church throughout the country who are warm friends of either Bro. Johnson or his bride join in wishing them happiness in the years to come.

CUMMINS-BRUINHARST

At high noon on Thursday, October 17, a very quiet wedding was witnessed by twenty or more guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Cummins, of Battle Creek, Michigan. The interested parties were Mrs. Cornelia Bruinhurst and Mr. John C. Cummins. Sr. M. A. Woodward used the ring ceremony in uniting them.

After the appetizing luncheon was served, and good byes all said, the bride and groom packed themselves and little Paul, her son, in their car amid a heavy shower of rice, and shouts of happy days ahead, as they started on a trip through to Washington and California. On their return trip they intend visiting our dear friends, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Powell at Elk River, Eureka, California.

Word comes to the office that Sr. M. A. Woodward has so much improved in health that she has been able to speak for the brethren at Otsego, Michigan, has made a trip to Battle Creek for a wedding, conducted a funeral service, drove thirty-seven miles to Dutton to hold services, and all within a week. She also attended the anniversary meeting at the Grand Rapids church on October 27. Sr. Woodward writes, "I am thanking God every day for returning strength." We know that The Herald readers will be glad to hear of Sr. Woodward's return to health and strength to carry on the Lord's work.

GEORGE W. TAYLOR

Fell asleep at his home in Otsego, Michigan, at 8:30 p. m., October 21. Bro. Taylor was born in Oswego, N. Y., June 29, 1843. He enlisted in the 138th New York Infantry, later going with the 9th Artillery, serving through the war. He came to Michigan at the age of twenty-seven years, teaching school at Watson.

Bro. Taylor was united in marriage with Miss Ellen Ishan. Six children were born to them, four of whom are still living, Anna, Donald, Oron and Jesse. He is also survived by six grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and two half brothers, other relatives and a host of friends in Otsego. Anna, the only daughter, devoted her life to her mother and father. The mother died nearly two years ago. The last two years of Bro. Taylor's life she has cared for him with the tender care a mother shows her helpless babes, for he was almost entirely blind and quite deaf.

Bro. Taylor was baptized forty years ago, and joined the Methodist Church, but changed his views materially and fell asleep with the blessed hope of a glorious resurrection when the Christ shall come to awaken the sleeping saints. His funeral was held in the Benson funeral chapel, Sr. M. A. Woodward officiating.

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Illinois, under the act of March 1879.

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents; sample copy, free.

Change of Address.—When ordering a change of address be sure to send us both old and new addresses.

To stop Paper.—It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending out THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

A THANK OFFERING

NOVEMBER IS THE THANKSGIVING MONTH. The giving of thanks is expressed in two ways—by word of mouth and by work of hand. God has been good to us. He has blessed us with life and with all that we have received from His bountiful store. We are thankful for each and every blessing.

In accordance with our annual custom, the pleasure of giving thanks to God by giving of our substance is again before us.

The National Bible Institution is made up of the combined effort of the people of the Church of God. Its one and only aim is to ever serve Him more and more. By this combined effort much service is being rendered that could not otherwise be given. The frequent contributions of many cover most of the regular current expenses of this service—expenses that, like all religious work, result from efforts that bring no direct returns materially.

But there are other crying needs for financial strength—needs other than current expenses. We stand much in need of increased financial strength for greater evangelization; of increased publishing facilities; of means to liquidate a portion of our indebtedness; of a sufficient amount of uninvested money to use as working capital during dull months, enabling us to keep the work progressing.

From the zero mark the N. B. I. has in eight years grown to its present status. When we consider all, much has been achieved. Every penny's worth of this has been accomplished by personal contributions.

Now, in addition to the regular contributions for current expenses, it is suggested that, during this Thanksgiving month, all will contribute toward with a view to making it at least $3,000.00 by Thanksgiving Day. This Offering should be in addition to regular current offerings throughout the year. The current offerings merely take care of the current expenses. Quite often they fall short of this. But an additional Thank Offering of $3,000.00 or more will make the National Bible Institution that much stronger.

A THANK OFFERING

Should we not aim to increase the N. B. I. by this amount yearly?

Those of you who can, please start this Thank Offering now, at once. Thus, may it enjoy a steady, rapid growth to the $3,000.00 mark or OVER.

Who will take first place with $1.00, $5.00, or $500.00?

Address: National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

A THANK OFFERING

To aid in raising a possible $3,000.00, or more, THANK OFFERING with which to further the work of the National Bible Institution in gospel service, I hereby remit

GOD HATH HIS SOLITUDES, unpeopled yet,
Save by the peaceful life of bird and flower,
Where, since the world's foundation, He hath set
The hiding of His power.
Year after year His rains make fresh and green
Lone wastes of prairies, where, as daylight goes,
Legions of bright-hued blossoms all unseen
Their carven petals close.

From deep to deep the floods lift up their voice
Because His hand hath measured them of old;
The far out-goings of the morn rejoice
His wonders to unfold.
The smallest cloudlet wrecked in distant storms,
That wanders homeless through the summer skies,
Is reckoned in His purposes, and forms
One of His argosies.

Where the long-gathering waves of ocean break
With ceaseless music o'er untrodden strands,
From isles that day by day in silence wake,
From earth's remotest lands,
The anthem of His praise shall uttered be;
All works created on His name shall call,
And laud and bless His holy name, for He Hath pleasure in them all.—Selected.

"In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things."—Psalm 72:7, 8, 18.

THE LAST ARMISTICE

AS THE ANNIVERSARY of Armistice Day, November 11, 1918, returns for the eleventh time, one harks back in spirit to the solemn silence of ecstasy that enthused the heart and unleashed the long taunt nerves as the glad news flashed across the land. Fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, guests flowed forth from mansion and humble cottage to assemble unbidden in common center. Whistles blew, flags were unfurled, impromptu parades were formed. Prayers of inexpressible thanksgiving burst forth. In every way the joy of peace—though but temporarily arranged—welled forth.

Another Armistice will yet resound its praises. It will spring from God's holy mount and flash its joy-notes till they kiss each other at the earth's half-way meridian. It will acclaim the cessation of hostilities ferociously pressed against earth's newly appointed Sovereign—God's well beloved Son—by the power of the antichrist and all his cohorts. The book of Revelation paints the picture of that dizzy day of terrific struggle by man—a picture pointed out by the prophetic fingers of David, Joel, Zechariah, and others; pointed out by the Savior's far-away look as His weeping voice of Matthew 23 and 24 warned the people of the Holy City.

That Armistice, the one which punctuates with a period the rule of that image whose head was of gold, will be the Armistice heralding the dawn of earth's long hoped-for millennium of peace, when Christ, the King of kings, will rejuvenate the world with His wondrous rule of justice and truth so pleasing to His God of righteousness and everlasting mercy.

When earth's morn shall awaken to the intensive calm of this last Armistice, may you and I surround His throne among the immortalized victors that will rejoice in His glad reign of peace.

God saved the first-born of Israel in Egypt. In so doing He evidenced again before Pharaoh His supremacy over all things. Also, God saved that first-born for His own use in leading out and building Israel.

The same God is to-day saving another first-born company.

THE EDITOR'S MESSAGE

THE GREATEST THING in the life of man is not law, civil government, military power, or world conquest; it is not knowledge, philosophy, art, poetry, or culture; it is not religious organization by creeds, temples or glittering forms. The greatest thing in the life of man is that invisible, intangible spiritual control of the human heart.

The life thus made great is the one that has responded to the gospel of Jesus Christ and has leaped to Him who is the great magnet of God. It has leaped to Him who is God's Finder—Him who is ever by His gospel moving about, in and through the human debris of sin's overthrow for every heart that will respond to His upholding and uplifting power.

God would be pleased to have all men respond and leap to this Magnet. It is powerful to receive and safely convey all who come for this wonderful transformation. But, though God is pleased to have all open the door of life to receive of His strengthening Spirit (the Spirit that would temper the life and make it responsive to Christ), yet He has provided that only "whosoever will", shall be drawn by Him.

Inasmuch as it is the gospel of Jesus Christ that "is the power of God unto salvation", and inasmuch as the gospel must find the individual and not the individual find the gospel, Jesus commanded His disciples to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Enveloping the world with the gospel of Jesus Christ even as God spread over Israel the rays of light from the shekinah glory is the bounden duty of the one who is Christ's.

God is no respecter of persons. He alone can set the standard of greatness for His creatures. He would bestow of His Spirit upon all. He alone can impart to them of His Spirit which is sufficient to make them great. He alone can inspire with that Spirit that is able and sufficient to lead into all truth, righteousness, faith, and love.

Let us submit ever more completely, accept guidance ever more effectively, and be lifted ever higher unto and into Him whom God has exalted above every name that is named.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE HIGHEST PATRIOTISM

Sunday, November 17—Eph. 1:15-23.

"Then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all."—1 Cor. 15:28

More than all others, God is the Sovereign of nations, the Sovereign of man in every phase of activity. It took seven years of abode with the beasts of the field before Nebuchadnezzar recognized and "blessed the Most High, and . . . praised and honored him that liveth forever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation."—Dan. 4:34.

Far above all human "principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come," God hath exalted His Son. Patriotism to God, the Creator and Sovereign of the universe, and to His Son, whom God has exalted above every human power, is the foremost patriotic duty of man. All other patriotism must, of necessity, be second in the life of the Christian.

DISLOYALTY TO GOD

Monday, November 18—Jonah 1:1-10.

"Lest haply ye be found even to fight against God."—Acts 5:39.

"Arise, go to Nineveh," was the word of God to Jonah. God was Jonah's only Sovereign. Jonah's one duty was to obey. It was not his to ask why, not his to demur. As a loyal soldier of Jehovah, it was his to comply. Especially was this true in that Jonah was an Israelite, one who claimed to follow God.

In like manner, he who aims to be Christian is duty bound to heed God's every word, Christ's every command relative to temporal as well as to spiritual life.

A NATION PROSTRATE BEFORE GOD

Tuesday, November 19—Jonah 3:1-10.

"So the people of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them to the least of them."—Jonah 3:5.

It was when the human king and all his human subjects prostrated themselves before the Sovereign of the world that the judgment announced against the nation was rescinded and the blessings of God flowed upon them. Human rulers are not always able to justly and fully recompense patriotism, but God, the sovereign Creator and His Son, who has been exalted above all human power, are able to fully recognize the patriotism of the humblest individual and to reward him for his every loyalty. Yea, more, He is both able and also anxious not only to reward, but to bestow unmerited mercies and favors.

TREASON MERCIFULLY REQUITED

Wednesday, November 20—Jonah 4:1-11.

"And the Lord God prepared a gourd, and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief."—4:6.

While Jonah had sufficiently repented of his rebellion against God to recognize and comply with God's command, yet he was displeased in that God had shown mercy unto Nineveh. He was more concerned as to his own standing before Nineveh than he was as to his standing before God or as to God's mercies upon others. But because Jonah repented even so little, God mercifully and miraculously created the gourd to shade him from the noonday sun. This only revealed more emphatically the carnal selfishness in the man. It was this selfishness that was the cause of his former disobedience to God and that continued to reveal him as unfaithful to his Maker. In the light of these events, how merciful was God to him!

Likewise unto him who would truly be Christian Christ's blood purges from sin and purifies for the reception of the righteousness of God given to the faithful.

THE RELIGIOUS CONSCIENCE EMPHASIZES PATRIOTISM

Thursday, November 21—Acts 17:22-31.

"And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitations; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him and find him, though he be not far from every one of us."—Acts 17:26-27.

Athenian patriotism, like that of all peoples, was emphasized by the Athenian religious concept. The deep religious vision which one entertains determines his attitude in patriotic recognition of God. Paul's teaching is that all nations are the creatures of God, that all "should seek the Lord", and that the appointed day "in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained" will reveal the true attitude of every individual and of every nation toward the sovereign Creator.

LOYALTY TO GOD WITHIN IDOLATROUS NATIONS

Friday, November 22—Psalm 1:3-7.

"By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion."

It was the weeping voice of Jewish people in captivity in idolatrous Babylon, but bent upon worshiping Jehovah. Though they were captive because of their previous untrue attitude toward Jehovah, yet as their hearts now cried unto their Maker, His pitying eye watched over them.

ELIJAH AND JOHN THE BAPTIST OUR WONDERFUL INHERITANCE

By T. A. Drinkard

By Samuel E. Haney

THE FOLLOWING QUESTION was asked in The Restitution Herald of September, 17, 1929: "Can any reader of The Herald explain Matthew 11:14; 17:12, concerning Elijah?"

It seems to me that these passages of Scripture are self-explanatory if we will allow them to occupy their correct setting, given by the Master to explain a doctrinal teaching concerning the coming and work of the Elijah of prophecy. It is not my desire to enter into a lengthy discussion of this question about which so much is said and so little understood, but briefly to call attention to several thoughts which are worth your consideration.

First let us turn to Malachi 4:5, and read: "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." How long before? It does not say, but that the work he would do of verse 6, was to be done before the day of the Lord, is certain. Just a thought: Suppose we say this occurs just before the close of this age, how can it be harmonized with the teaching of a personal antichrist king arising?

By Matt. 11:7-13 you will please notice that Jesus very briefly and positively calls attention to John and his work, and to settle further doubt as to John being the Elijah of prophecy He says, in verses 14 and 15, "And if ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear". Are we willing to hear Him, and accept this version and forever settle the question as to who the Elijah of prophecy is?

Matthew 17:10-13 presents the same question, and Jesus says, "Elias truly shall first come (in the future?) and restore all things". All things! What does it mean? Where is Elijah? Isn't he dead, like all the faithful of ages gone by, waiting for the coming of Jesus the Christ? Was he not literally among the class of Rom. 5:14? If he is, would he not have to be resurrected before the church? Speaking of John the Baptist, Matt. 17:13, Jesus shows in verses 11 and 12 that he was the one prophesied of, by saying, "Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed."

Mark 9:11-13 is Mark's version of the same subject matter as given by Matthew pertaining to who Elijah was. True it is, that John utilized the God-given "spirit and power" which enabled Elijah of former days to perform as he did. Luke 1:17. But that spirit and power was of God. Elijah of himself could do nothing, but since God prepared him by allowing him the use of these weapons, he could go forth knowing that God was with him.

The work of the Elijah of Malachi 4:5, 6 was to be before the day of trouble, not during or after. Truly as Jesus always expressed the truth, even so we must contend that the Elijah of these several scriptures was John the Baptist. He came and performed that work; he is now dead waiting the morning of resurrection, when the times of restitution begin. Acts 3:21.

SHORTLY BEFORE OUR REDEEMER'S death, He gave His church this command, "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid". John 14:27. Did Jesus expect His disciples all down the age to be able to keep this command? Not likely; rather, the outcome should cause this and similar remarks to appear to have precautionary trend. A child is sent on an errand in the dark. Its mother says, "Now, don't be afraid when passing the cemetery". The mother, however, knows it will be, hence her encouraging words. It is questionable if there has ever been one faithful disciple of Jesus who has been able to entirely overcome periods of trouble and timidity.

Our Master's solicitude for us prompted Him to give many inspiring and inspiriting brief exhortations that can hardly be called commands. Note the consoling prelude of our text: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you". How affectionately He pleads, "In my Father's house are many mansions (abiding places, R. V., margin; resting places, Wey.): if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also".

Were a rich man to say to you or me, "I have bequeathed you a million dollars", we should hardly be able to contain ourselves for ecstatic joy. And yet, we might die before our benefactor. But we have the Son of God, the Prince of peace, the King of kings saying to us, "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom". Can we grasp what this means? No, no more than we can understand the real import of immortality. But let us settle it definitely in our minds, that on the Word of God, the kingdom is to be conditionally ours. Rev. 2:26, 27. Thus, we are having a foretaste of the kingdom; but our puny minds are inadequate to grasp the immensity of its beauty, its peace, its loveliness, its deathlessness, its joy, its glory! What an inheritance, signed and sealed by the blood of the Lamb!

Is it possible for Christians to have trouble and fear, and yet be immune from its spiritual, mental and physical deteriorating effect? Yes, by using the means divinely provided to overcome its effect, viz., faith and obedience, making us susceptible to the Lord's Comforter. The freedom can thus be acquired. Paul and his associates seem to have enjoyed this freedom—"We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed". 2 Cor. 4:8, 9. There are not many spiritual giants in our day. But, says one, the apostles and their fellow pilgrims had the advantage of us. Yes, in a way, they did by having the Lord with them in person. But are we not favorably situated, though, in other ways, by having the compiled New Testament and by generations of knowledge handed down from our predecessors and faithful preachers and teachers?

Others may say that the apostles had the Old Testament to draw from for solace and sympathy direct from God. So have we. But the effectiveness of God's Word always corresponds with man's faith and appreciation of the Word's infallibility. Surely God's pleadings with Israel, a typical people (servants) are more applicable to us, His adopted sons and daughters. Jacob's experience was but a dream: "And behold, I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of". Gen. 28:15. Note the encouraging words recorded for us (Heb. 13:5, 6, Em. Diag.), "Be not of an avaricious disposition; be satisfied with present things, for he himself has said, No, I will not leave thee; no, no, I will not forsake thee." So that, taking courage, we may say, "The Lord is my Helper, and I will not fear; what can man do to me?" Can we not now say, after being awakened from many years of spiritual darkness, that our experience, though real, had the effect likened unto a narcosis trance?

What are the causes that prevent the vast majority of Christians practicing Jesus' precautionary words, of which only a few of the many are here cited, that they might escape the crushing weight of their troubles and fears, and not suffer in common with the ungodly world? A summary: self-righteousness; dereliction; procrastination in making a thorough surrender of self; abandonment of the world by wholehearted consecration to God and His service, which to secure divine life from the resurrected Christ—the only Way of life—must be done either voluntarily or by a participation in the "great time of trouble" now casting its precursory shadows over the whole inhabitable earth.

There is another cause which, involving all associated with Christianity, I here segregate to emphasize its magnitude, and of which Jesus' warning words have served as a beacon light all down the age, e. g., Lot and Noah and their respective families who were the only righteous and worthy ones to escape the trouble of their generations. They were a representative class of our day to whom Jesus refers in Luke 17:26-29; 21:36. The experience of Lot's wife is particularly germane, when God "turned the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes, . . . making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly". 2 Peter 2:6. The angels warned Lot and his family: "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed". Gen. 19:17.

One of the several lessons for us in this narrative of the greatest holocaust to date is, the significance God placed upon Mrs. Lot's act: ". . . His wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt". V. 26. Why not marble or granite instead of salt? Salt signifies preservation that the incident might not be forgotten.

It was not merely the act of Mrs. Lot turning her head and looking back that brought God's wrath upon her, but her disobedience, and what the act exemplified: the real sentiment of her heart, unwillingness to "come out" of the doomed cities. Paul says, "All these things happened unto them for ensamples (types, margin): and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world (age) are come". 1 Cor. 10:11. The antitype of the foregoing is well duplicated by the wicked world today; and the live Christian has no difficulty in recognizing this fact. One's inability to see this, or, seeing it, one's unwillingness to admit of it, is due to but one thing, viz., prejudice engendered by participation in some manner. Blind, indeed, is the one who fails to recognize God in Paul's words antityping the angels that visited Lot when Paul says, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate"! And doesn't Jude give a perfect description of the world today, and its resultant effect? And isn't this sufficient reason for our separation, now that we see the "smoke of the country (Babylon)" beginning to ascend, "as the smoke of a furnace". V. 28.

"Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire". Jude 7.

"MEDITATION CHAPEL"

THIRTY YEARS AGO two traveling men who happened to be crowded together in the same hotel room were pleased each to find the other a Christian man. But they lamented that no Bible was handy to assist them in their devotions. They organized the society of Gideons, which aims to place a Bible in every hotel room in the world, and which has already distributed a million copies. And now John McEntee Bowman, president of the Bowman Biltmore Hotels Corporation, has set apart a "Meditation Chapel" in the company's hotel in New York and plans similar chapels in the other hotels operated by the corporation. The chapel contains benches and a small altar on which fresh flowers are placed each day. And over the altar is the inscription, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest". Matt. 11:28. Mr. Bowman says, "The presence of one spot in the hotel, disassociated from the worldly things of life and dedicated to the God we profess to serve, is now recognized as a spiritual necessity."

FUTURE INDIGNATION

By C. W. Dean

THE PROPHET ISAIAH gives us a majestic description of Christ treading the great wine trough at the time of this battle, in power and much glory taking vengeance on His adversaries and destroying the power of evil. Isa. 63:1-3. Many outrages on Holy Writ have been committed by those who extract the phrase, "I tread the wine press alone", and apply it to Christ's work on the cross. There was no vengeance in Christ's heart on the cross, but the prophet is here foretelling the day of Christ's vengeance on His enemies and the deliverance of His chosen people Israel from the power of the wild beast. And the trough was trodden outside the city, and blood came out of the trough to the horses' bits, from a thousand and six hundred stadia (183.86 miles) Rev. 14:20. It would be a waste of time to comment upon the ridiculous expositions that have been drawn from this text by reading into it fanciful visions to which all spiritualizing interpretations lead. It is much easier and far safer to believe what God has written than to attempt to follow out the interpretations of men. Just why can we not accept this scripture as God has spoken it and believe it? From Harnageddon down through the valley of Jehoshaphat (Joel 3:1, 2, 9), to Bozrah (Isa. 34:6-8; 63:1-6), is a line of about 183.86 miles. The length specified here by the Scriptures is likened to an enormous trough for treading grapes, such as found in vineyards in Palestine. So great will be the slaughter in that day, that blood will flow down through the trough and rise to the horses' bits at the lower end of the valley. Of this time Isaiah tells us that the land will be soaked with blood, Isa. 34:1-8. It is called the valley of "decision", for here is where the controversy between Jehovah and the nations is decided.

No doubt but this terrible destruction on the host of armies of the wild beast and false prophet led by Satan will be brought about by the great calamity of hail which falls under the seventh bowl of wrath at the time when the battle is fought, Rev. 16:17-21. Hail has been used of old as God's engine of destruction. He used it against the enemies of Israel in the days of Joshua at the battle of Beth-Horon, Josh. 10:1-11; and He can use it again, literally, in His great day of wrath and battle. Jehovah of hosts reminded Job of His treasures of hail which He reserved for the day of attack and war; for He asked, Do you enter the treasures of the snow, do you see the treasures of the hail? which I kept back for seasons of distress, for the day of attack and war. Job 28:22-23.

Humanity seems almost incapable of grasping the realities of the awful horrors of the event closing the present wicked age (eon). The dragon, the wild beast, the false prophet, and the kings of the whole inhabited earth with their armies are present in the heart of Palestine, between the mountains of Israel, to do battle with the white horse Rider and His armies from heaven, who is the Lord of lords and King of kings.

Now let our minds go back over the scriptures already presented, which describe this awful scene. Think of the sun darkened, and the moon not giving her beams, and the blackness of the sky stabbed by millions of menacing meteors and the same time the earth is swaying (being swayed) to and fro by an earthquake, such as has never occurred since mankind came to be on earth, so that the mountains and islands leave their places. Think of the great cities with all their wonderful skyscrapers falling! Think of the calamity of hail, each stone as large as a talent weight (85 to 114 pounds) falling from heaven on men! Can we imagine a more desperate situation? Do we wonder why the kings of the earth and the magnates and the captains and the rich, the strong, the slaves, and freemen go scurrying to the caves and dens, crying for the rocks of the mountains to fall on them?

Yet all these things are but a prelude to the most momentous vision earth will ever see. All of a sudden, the black pall wrapping the earth in midnight darkness will roll back and reveal the Son of man (Son of mankind) in all His glory. Like a new luminary, blotting out the sun in its brightness, there appears the most glorious Majesty of the epiphany, the coming of CHRIST, the white horse Rider from heaven. Just as the lightning flashes forth from the sullen clouds, so will be the presence of the Son of man. The veil of pitch darkness will roll back like a scroll and the glorious One will be revealed from heaven in all His power and majesty. One mighty blow from above, one flash of glory and the man of lawlessness, the desolator, the wild beast and the false prophet are rendered powerless, captured and cast into the lake of fire and sulphur; while the kings of the earth and their armies of the sons of stubbornness are destroyed and feasted upon by the birds of the air and the beasts of the field. The stone of Daniel will have fallen, and with one blow the dominion and misrule of the Gentiles is ended. The world kingdoms become our Lord's and His Christ's and He shall reign (be reigning) for the eons of the eons. Rev. 11:15.

When Satan, the chief of the authority of the air, Eph. 2:2, and the suzerain of the world might and spiritual forces of wickedness among the celestials, Eph. 6:11-12, is bound and cast into the abyss, locked and sealed so he cannot deceive the nations until the thousand years may be finished, Rev. 20:3, then will begin earth's jubilee, when the kingdom and the authority and the majesty of the kingdom under all the heavens is granted to the people of the supremacies; the kingdom is an eonian kingdom, and all authorities shall serve and hearken unto it. Dan. 7:27.

The writer desires to call attention to all readers, that he, too, once stood in the doctrines of men, spiritualizing, symbolizing, and materializing until he took his stand with the servants of Christ, seeking righteousness and meekness, believing that God does not need man-made excuses for the truth of His Holy Writ. The most beautiful truth of the age has been revealed to me through study of the Holy Writ, with servants of our Lord Christ, which is God's eonian purpose hid in Christ. Seek meekness, self-control, It may be we will be hid in the day of Jehovah's wrath,

THE OUTWARD AND INWARD MAN

By R. E. Griner

"For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day."—2 Cor. 4:16.

THE OUTWARD MAN, as I understand the Scriptures, is a mortal creature of the dust (Job 4:17; Gen. 2:7), flesh (Psalm 78:39), who is dependent upon his Creator for everything, even the breath of life (Job 12:10; James 4:14). He is subject to death at all times (Heb. 9:27) and while in the death state is unconscious (Psa. 146:3, 4; 6:5; Eccl. 9:5, 6; Job. 3:17-19).

The inward man, it seems to me, is the hope of living again, through the resurrection, to which a person is begotten by obedience to the gospel and faith in the promises. 1 Peter 1:3-6—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." Rom. 7:22—"For I delight in the law of God after the inward man."

My views may be all wrong in reference to the inward man being a hope through faith or a child in promise, but I think Paul, in Romans 4:17—"God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth things that be not as though they were," gives much light on the subject. Paul wrote the Corinthian brethren (1 Cor. 4:15), "In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." Then those who have been begotten by hearing, believing, repenting, confessing, and obeying are begotten to a hope of living again when Christ returns to "judge the quick and the dead at his coming and his kingdom" (2 Tim. 4:1), and are therefore "the children of promise" (Galatians 4:28).

Before the Ephesians heard and obeyed, Paul says in Ephesians 2:12, "At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Did they have the inward man then? Col. 1:5—"For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye have heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel."

Where in the Scriptures is the alien sinner spoken of as having the inward man as some pulpit ranters teach? Gal. 5:5—"For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith". (Rom. 8:24, 25) Titus 1:2—"In hope of eternal life". Titus 2:13—"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ."

Peter and Paul both speak of future hope or hope to be realized in the future. Peter admonishes, 1 Peter 3:5, "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you." Rom. 5:2-5—"Rejoice in hope," etc. Heb. 6:18, 19—"Lay hold upon the hope set before us; which hope we have as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil."

Submitted in love and search of the truth.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS SHALL COME

WHAT DOES the Gospel of the Kingdom of God have to offer in respect to this first great desire of the nations? First, it assures the world that the desire for peace is neither unreasonable, nor impossible of realization. Further, it agrees with the world-reformers by asserting that peace can and will be brought about through the putting into effect of the three principles which they have suggested: i. e., Agreement; Education; Force.

Peace will be brought about by agreements among the nations when the predictions of Micah 4 and Isaiah 2 are fulfilled. The former reads as follows: "But in the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills, and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob. . . ." Micah 4:1-2.

The agreements thus made will not have to do with the limitation of armaments or with boundary disputes or with the rights of "racial minorities"! These agreements will be the acknowledgment of the nations of a fervent desire to unitedly seek the Lord God of Israel, and to pledge their willing allegiance to the King of kings and Lord of lords.

Let us visualize the scene presented in this prophecy a little. France may say to Germany, her traditional enemy, in those days, "Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob!" Micah 4:2. And Russia may cry to starving China, in the language of Isaiah 2:3, "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob."

This concerted action on the part of the nations will not be after the order of that of which Ezekiel speaks, for Ezekiel's prophecy will have long since been accomplished, and it had to do with quite a different condition. He speaks of the period of prosperity and quietness that will follow the regathering of Israel to their homeland; when the vast wealth which they even now possess, shall have been brought together in Jerusalem, and shall arouse the envy of "Gomer and all his bands", and cause them to "think an evil thought", and to say, "I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go up to them that are at rest, that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates, to take a spoil, and to take a prey. . ." Ezekiel 38:11-12.

When the nations fulfill the prophecy of Micah they will do so in great humbleness. They will "go up" not as vandals to "take a spoil, and to take a prey"; but to seek the Lord God of Israel in truth!

Zechariah goes more into detail regarding the matter. "Thus saith the Lord of hosts; It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities: and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of hosts: I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord." Zech. 8:20-22.

Los Angeles in the west may call to New York City in the east, saying, "Let us go up speedily, and continually, to (see margin) entreat the face of the Lord!" And London may cry to Paris, and Berlin to Leningrad after the same order. And all the great cities of the world, repenting in sackcloth and ashes, shall go up together to worship the Lord God of all nations in Jerusalem. Thus, by agreement to worship God shall harmony come to prevail.

The second principle by which the reformers of the world seek to bring about peace is Education. Let us go a little further with the prophecy of Micah and of Isaiah. "And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob." Now what will be the motive that prompts the nations to turn unitedly toward the city of the great King? The text continues: "And he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Micah 4:2.

What will be the result of this schooling of the nations in the University of the Kingdom of God, under the inspired instruction of the Dean of all masters, the Lord Jesus Christ? "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Micah 4:3. There will be no courses in the strategy of war in the curricula of that divine institution of learning.

The third principle upon which the world hopes to build its structure of lasting peace is Force. Arthur Brisbane remarked in a recent editorial that M. Clemenceau, war premier of France, thinks "we shall have peace only when powerful nations force it on those that would like to fight." It is evident that the French statesman is right in his conclusion. Peace can be maintained only by an exhibition of force. But that Force will be centered in the Son of God, to whom has been committed "all power in heaven and in earth"; for "He must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet". 1 Cor. 15:25.

But the Christ will not govern alone. "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father". Rev.

2:26-27. Here is Power sufficient to control all nations, and through which the desire of all nations for peace and security shall come. The gospel of the kingdom of God, therefore, makes provision for the Agreements, the Education, and the Force required to establish and to maintain peace throughout the world for all time.

The prophecy of Haggai goes much beyond the matter of peace. The promise is in the plural, the "things desired of all nations shall come". In addition to the desire for peace, the nations wish for prosperity, which is the fruitage of peace and of industry. Much of our present unrest is due to our inability to provide a means of livelihood for all. "God has created man a creature of desires, and constituted the material world in which he lives with abundant means for the gratification of those desires"; but it is not always possible for us to make this supply available to men throughout the world. Hence the words of Jesus remain as true today as they were two thousand years ago: "The poor always ye have with you". John 12:8. Because of the unequal distribution of the products of the earth want and poverty prevail, and the Communist, the Socialist, and the Bolshevik devise their various remedies to relieve the sick old world in vain.

The gospel of the kingdom of God provides the only reliable source of deliverance that has ever been made known to mankind. Micah continues his assuring predictions: "They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it". Micah 4:4.

The nations devote much attention to the development and to the conservation of their natural resources. They seek to improve the quality and to increase the quantity of both plants and animals; while the scientist is constantly endeavoring to discover new and cheaper sources of power to be employed in the production of manufactured goods. All of these desirable and necessary things will be provided for in the kingdom of God, when "he shall have dominion . . . from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth". Psa. 72:8; for "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose". Isa. 35:1.

When the "things desired of all nations shall come", "the inhabitant" of that favored realm "shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity". Isa. 33:24. "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing". Isa. 35:5-6.

When the "desire of all nations shall come", the sufferings and the distresses of the past, all of which were brought on by sin, shall cease forever to trouble the hearts of men. Jehovah declares, "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." Isa. 65:17. In the gladness and the joy and the righteousness prevailing there, there will be found no place for sin with its fruitage of suffering and death: for "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things" shall have "passed away". Rev. 21:4. Thus the infinite God, in His wonderful love for men, has provided in the glad tiding of His coming kingdom, abundantly, for all their needs, and for the gratification of all their natural desires.

The greatest of all the needs of men, they do not feel, being wholly unconscious of it, and that is THEIR NEED OF GOD; for "this is eternal life, that they might know" Him, "the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom" He "hath sent". John 17:3. But for this has the loving Father made provision in the blessed gospel of His Son. And in that glad day of righteousness and peace "they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more". Jeremiah 31:34. "For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the sea". Isaiah 11:9.

Praise the name of the Lord!

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

THORNS AND THISTLES

THERE IS PROBABLY NO COUNTRY on earth of the same extent which has so many plants with prickles and thorns as the Holy Land. One of the spectacles most striking to the stranger in this land of surprises is that of a flock of goats browsing in a patch of Eryngiums, cirsiums, or prickly centanreas, crunching down the heads, a couple of inches in diameter, composed of stiff thorns and then masticating them with evident relish. The camels also used many thorny plants for food.

Notwithstanding this, the thorns flourish and multiply, and in many places take possession of the land. Thistles grow to a height of ten to fifteen feet. One district is called the "District of Thorny Burnet", because of the abundance of the thorny burnet. A large part of the lime produced in this country is burned with this shrub, which is cut up, Isa. 33:12, with pruning hooks. It produces great heat and makes excellent lime. They are also used in ovens for culinary purposes. Various species of thistles and thorns are threshed out and used for feed for beasts.

There are not less than fifty genera and two hundred species of plants in Syria and Palestine furnished with thorns and thistles, besides a multitude clothed with scabrous strigose, or stinging hairs, and another multitude of prickly fruits. The species of thorns from which the Savior's crown was made are not definitely known. It was thought it might be calycotome villosa, because of the facility with which the branches of this shrub are wrought into the required shape, and the evident adaptation of the resulting crown to the torture intended.

TRY YOUR NUMBERS

QUERIES 11

A teacher being asked how many scholars were in his Sunday school, replied: "If you multiply the number of Jacob's sons by the number of times which the Israelites compassed Jericho on the seventh day, and add to the product the number of measures of barley which Boaz gave to Ruth; divide this by the number of Haaman's sons. Subtract the number of each kind of unclean beasts that went into the ark; multiply by the number of men that went to seek Elijah after he was taken to heaven; subtract from this Joseph's age at the time he stood before Pharaoh; divide by the number of stones David selected to kill Goliath; subtract the number of furlongs that Bethany was distant from Jerusalem; multiply by the number of anchors cast out at the time of Paul's shipwreck; subtract the number of people saved in the ark, and the remainder will be the number of scholars in the school". How many were there?

5. Rachel, Genesis 31:19.

The Queries readers must have been very busy the past week or two for we have received answers from only three. J. C. Wilson and Gladys Barber answered Queries 8 correctly, and Hazel Titus, Queries 9. These long evenings are admirable for study,

WORK

Let me but do my work from day to day,

In field or forest, at the desk or loom,

In roaring market-place or tranquil room;

Let me but find it in my heart to say,

When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,

"This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;

Of all who live, I am the one by whom

This work can best be done in the right way."

Then shall I see it not too great, nor small,

To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;

Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours,

And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall

At eventide, to play and love and rest,

Because I know for me my work is best.

Henry Van Dyke.

"THE MERCIES OF GOD are never recorded in Scripture for man's presumption, and the failings of men never for imitation."—Lightfoot, Vol. 7, p. 279.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

He who truly worships God in spirit is never forsaken by God even though he is surrounded by the cruelest of idolatry. Whether in the prison dungeon with Paul, in the fields of captivity with Judah, before the God-defying throne with Daniel, or in any other place, the true-hearted Christian will ardently exert his faith in his Master and will receive that succor from the majestic Hand that is most needful for him under the circumstance.

CHRIST THE COMMON HEAD OF CHRISTIANS OF EVERY NATION

Saturday, November 23—Eph. 2:11-22.

"But now in Christ Jesus ye who were sometimes far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ."

God's Son clearly revealed that God is not the God of the Jews only, but that He is also God of Gentile believers everywhere. Though born in a land and of a race foreign to God, yet by approaching the true God through Jesus Christ, all are brought nigh. In such position, all are citizens under a common Sovereign, and a common patriotism of the highest that is known to man should permeate all. Where common patriotism enthuses the patriots, they are loyal to each other even as they are loyal to their common Sovereign.

As Christians, let us fight the good fight of faith with our aims always upon our exalted Lord first, and in such aim serve one another as soldiers side by side in the victorious advances of Him who is to conquer the world itself.

MAKING THE BEREAN HOUR EFFECTIVE

THE SUBJECT OF MAKING the Berean hour effective should be considered from many different angles or viewpoints: during the class hour, in our own lives, and in the influence we may exert on others.

To make the study hour one that will show results for good, it seems we must show enthusiasm in the work, and an eagerness to try to bring out all the thoughts of what the study of the Bible means to and for all of us. Each one should make special effort to do his best to bring life and interest into the study hour, with the thought of being helpful to the others. How often a thought expressed, or the meaning of a verse explained by one who has spent time, thought and prayer on the lesson has meant so much to some member of the class, clearing a way and making some task so much easier by the encouragement and help they have received. So it seems that if each one would bring vital life into the class hour, with thoughtful consideration and prayer, we would give to others, by our example, the same longing or wish to always be there too, so that they may also experience the pleasure and good of meeting with those who have the happiness of talking over, studying, and learning more of our dear Father's love, and His wonderful plan of salvation for all those who will only come to Him and take Him for their hope and daily Companion. Life, vital and throbbing with interest, is what we must bring into our class hours to make them what they should be.

Through our Berean hour work, if we come to it as Jesus would have us come, with this idea of helping others, and entering into the study hour with the effort of making that time as interesting and helpful as we can, it seems we would arouse more interest in the work, and bring to each one a realization of the need we all have, in trying to learn of and understand God's plan, and the happiness we all can experience in association and work with those who are striving to make this life a school wherein we are trying to fit ourselves for the greater work under our Lord and Master when He comes again. The effectiveness of Berean work in our own lives, indirectly involves the influence we may bring to bear on others.

In the study of God's Word, if we absorb its teachings and try to follow in our Master's steps, it will show in all our actions and thoughts, in our daily lives, and the noble principles which Jesus lived and taught when on this earth, and which we can learn in the study of our Bible. It will gradually mold and shape our characters so that we will show the same living charity to our fellow-men, and they will realize it means something deeper and richer than all worldly attributes, to be a follower of the dear Master, and to daily study and ponder on the Word of God, shaping our lives to His will. Let us live up to our motto set before us, not only in word but in deed, "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me."

Daily prayer and a striving to overcome all worldly influences, by a constant effort to build and strengthen the spiritual life is what Berean hour should mean to us all. Only by constant watching and going to our Lord in prayer and for help every day can we ever hope to be able to say with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

—Edith E. Miller.

GOOD NEWS FROM OHIO

A Berean Class of the Brush Creek church was organized Friday evening, October 18, at the home of Bro. and Sr. Worley. The following officers were elected: President, Eunice Pearson; Vice-president, Chas. Doll; Secretary-treasurer, Luella Underwood; Assistant Secretary-treasurer, Pearl Shellhaas.

On the evening of October 25 the society was visited by the Dayton Berean Society and a good start was made for the coming year. It is planned to meet every Friday evening in the home of Sr. Worley. May your prayers be with us in the work of the Lord.

Eunice Pearson, Pres.

Dear Bereans, the Psalmist has said, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it: except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." So let us allow the Lord to guard and to watch over us in our Christian building.—Paul Hatch, Illinois.

Hello, Texas Bereans! Isn't it about time we should hear from you again?

THE HIGHER PATRIOTISM

TRUE PATRIOTISM IS LOVE or devotion to one's country. By this we mean we must obey the laws of the land and honor our flag whenever and wherever we see it. We must keep the flag up and never let it trail in the dust or let it get dirty, for that dishonors it.

If we love our country as we should, we will do all we can to make it the very best country there is, and we will want it to be a place where little children can play and not be in any danger. To help make it like this, we must neither chew nor smoke, nor drink anything that will make us drunk. If we chew, we will be dirty in spite of ourselves; if we smoke, we will make the air impure for others to breathe; and if we get drunk, we might hurt someone so that we would be sent to jail. We do not want anyone to do those things to us, so we must not do them to anyone else. Anyway, that would not be loving our country, for it would be making it a dangerous place for children to live, rather than making it a safe place. Our rulers want to make it a safe place and we must help them.

Some day Jesus will be the Ruler, and if we are good children so that we will grow up to be good men and women and do all the heavenly Father has asked of us, then we will get to live with Jesus and help Him do the things He has to do.

If we want to be with Jesus when He comes, we must love Him even better than we do our country, and do all we can to please Him now. He knows when we are naughty and when we are good, and He wants us to be good all the time. He wants us to love Him so much that we will ever be true to Him. If we are true to Him, we will help others love Him and work for Him.

If we live for Jesus we will be helping make our country good by helping those around us, and we will also be helping ourselves to be better men and women. So we will be true to Jesus by being true to ourselves and others, that we may be permitted to live and work with Jesus when He comes to be our Ruler.—Lydia Railsback.

WHERE FIND?

“Now, therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.”

NOTE BOOK

Page 1. Make a list of the things you can do to show patriotism.

Reverse side. Illustrate the story of Jonah.

REMEMBER

God wants us to love our country and obey its laws.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Think of all the ways you can show Christian patriotism.
2. Read the story of Jonah.
3. Read J. A. M. on page 34 of the Truth Seekers' Quarterly.

THE SCOUT OATH

On my honor I will do my best:

1. To do my duty to God and my country, and obey the Scout law.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

When temptation's darts assail us,
When in devious paths we stray,
Let Thy goodness never fail us,
Lead us in Thy perfect way.

—Hastings.

BY THE WAY

This quotation is from a quaint book-marker as reported in Christian Life:

- “Mother, I've found an old dusty thing High on the shelf—just look!”
“Why, that's a Bible, Tommy dear;
Be careful—that's God's book!”
“God's book!” the child exclaimed,
“Then, mother, before we lose it
We'd better send it back to God,
For you know we never use it!”

A RECIPE

Take one whole pound
Of Kindliness,
And stir it round
With thoughts that bless.
Plenty of Patience makes it nice;
Some Fun will add a little spice;
Don't weigh out Love, but pour it in;
Oil of Good Cheer will grease your tin;
Mix well, in just the old-time way,
And you'll have made a happy day.

THE HIGHER PATRIOTISM

The Book of Jonah

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 55:1-7.

GOLDEN TEXT

And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth.—Acts 17:26.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Patriotism and Internationalism.

Basic Truth: He who is true to God cannot be false to any man.

Outline: I. True Patriotism. II. True Internationalism. III. God Supreme. IV. The Christian's Duty Toward Patriotism and Internationalism.

I. True Patriotism. A patriot is a fellow countryman.—Webster. Patriotism is "devotion to the welfare of one's country."—Web. A country's welfare is that which is for the welfare of its citizens. Satisfaction of unrighteous political ambitions is in no sense in the interest of the welfare of the country. He who is all-wise knows the true welfare of every country. The citizen of any country who serves his country in obeying God is undoubtedly the truest patriot.

Abraham "sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country."—Heb. 11:9. The land was his by promise yet not possessed at that time. He looked into the future for it, v. 14, for it and for God's rule, v. 16. He was true to God who promised him. His was true patriotism to God and to his every true co-patriot.

To sacrifice one's self to the furtherance of the selfish, lustful aims of a political leader is anything but patriotism to one's country.

II. True Internationalism. This subject compels a consideration of what God did when He confounded the language in Gen. 11:7. In so doing, God divided the Adamic race into national families. The query arises: Was such for man's good? Or may it be that it was a temporal punishment for some wrong being done? The fact that their language was confounded necessitated that they should thereafter have little or nothing to do with each other. May it not also be that the tongue foreign to the language of God's prophets was hindered if not deprived of a knowledge of God and of worship of Him? Not till God shall have poured out His indignation upon the assembled kingdoms, Zeph. 3:8, will He "turn to the people a pure language, that they may call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent (shoulder C. B.)," v. 9.

Just how far the man-given effort of today to fraternize the nations is in harmony with God's plans or with the gospel of Christ may be a mooted question.

Internationalism under the reign of Christ will band the nations together as one. He will be King of kings, Rev. 19:16; 11:15. Such internationalism will be for the good of all. Mic. 4:1-7. But internationalism of today is destined to grow into a federation of nations under one head, Rev. 13:1-9; Dan. 2:40-43; 7:23-25, that is to provoke a time of trouble, Matt. 24:21, 22, the greatest in earth's history.

The evangelization of the world, Matt. 28:

19, is a Christian mission, not a political one. It is to "take out" a people for the name of Christ, Acts 15:14, to become separate and distinct from all nations rather than to internationalize nations.

III. God Supreme. It is when we realize that God is Lord, Isa. 45:18, "and there is none else" supreme over man that we begin to recognize the relation of all human questions to God. It has well been said that, "He who does not know how to follow does not know how to lead". One of man's greatest problems is to learn how to follow God's supremacy; to learn not to take the reins out of God's hand and to direct in his own manner. The Christian's first duty in every question is to discover the wishes of the supreme God regarding that question.

IV. The Christian's Duty Toward Patriotism and Internationalism. Regarding patriotism, the Christian's first duty is to discover the wish of the supreme God, then to serve Him with all the energy afforded by God. To love and serve God with all one's being is the greatest commandment to the Christian. This is the truest of patriotism.

In so doing, the Christian will be most patriotic to his own country's best good. This, also, is the truest patriotism to one's nation.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

God's Call. It is said that one is strongly called by the gospel but twice. If the second invitation is disregarded there generally remains but little hope of its being earnestly repeated. This is also true of our call to service. Jonah did not respond to his first, and was punished for his neglect. He then obeyed the voice of Jehovah, probably thereby bringing salvation to himself and deliverance to Nineveh. But the second opportunity does not come to all. It is wise, then, to act at once when we are impressed with the importance of entering into covenant relation with God, or to engage in His service.

God's Universal Love. Jonah's mission to Nineveh, Peter's vision on the housetop, and Paul's special commission to the Gentiles in general, teach the universality of God's love. "Ninevites, Indians, Negroes, Chinese and Hottentots are also 'his offspring'." We are children of one family, and of one blood. When this truth has gripped our consciousness we are ready to share our gospel, our Christ, and our God, with others.—J. A. M.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation". Acts 17:26.

The Athenians were trying to please all by erecting altars to each of their gods; but Paul had a much higher ideal, and stood firm for the true God. His patriotism was far greater than the others. He was loyal and true to the One who is able to "make of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth."

We, like Paul, should be patriotic, and like Paul, we should never be afraid nor ashamed to show by our actions, or tell by our words for whom our patriotism stands.

—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Jonah and God's Mercy.

When God destroyed the gourd which sheltered Jonah, Jonah was angry, though the value of that shelter was transient, and though Jonah had done nothing to merit this temporary kindness.

When God repented of the evil He had decreed against Nineveh, Jonah was angry, though Nineveh had the value of much cattle and of six score thousand people who had repented, thus meeting the condition to reception of God's mercy.

Jonah was hard to suit. He was angry when God withdrew mercy, even a transient mercy extended to one rebellious individual. He was likewise angry when God extended mercy, a mercy that covered much cattle and thousands of individuals made fit by repentance to receive mercy.

Why such inconsistency and warped thinking? Because self was the center of his thoughts. In the first case the withdrawal of mercy deprived self of comfort. In the second case the extension of mercy deprived self of the glory and satisfaction of preaching the inferiority of another people and of seeing that inferiority proved in destruction.

The transient value of the mercy withdrawn from one individual, and the untold value of the mercy extended to thousands of individuals did not influence Jonah's thinking. Self was the one thing that influenced him.

Consideration of self has much to do with man's conclusions concerning law, when, and to whom God should extend mercy, and this consideration is so strong in human nature that it is doubtful whether Jonah caught the lesson in one sitting. Likely not, judging from the slowness with which present day individuals develop the power to think selflessly.—A. K.

True patriotism reckons all of God's creatures on a par, all equally unworthy of His forgiveness, nevertheless willing that all shall enjoy it. It counts the whole human family as God's family. If this love permeates our hearts we will be anxious that all with whom we come in contact shall know that same love. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

THANK OFFERING

The following named persons have promptly responded to the Thank Offering notice which appeared in last issue. We asked if the thousands of members of the Church of God would not one and all express their gratitude to the Father for His benefits and leadings throughout the year in the form of a contribution to the National Bible Institution for the furtherance of Christian labors. We suggested that these thousands of people, just by averaging a few cents each, could contribute to the sum of $3000 or more. This would be a great strength for the furtherance of the work. We thank the following for their prompt response:

Miss Alice Kerr	$ 1.00
Leila E. Whitehead	20.00
Mrs. Diana Murphy	1.00
Mrs. Amy Johnson	3.15
Mrs. Chas. Gesin	2.00
Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Austin	20.00

Sunday School Scholars: Try the arithmetic problem in the "Queries" column this week. Ask your teacher if you have the right answer.

Sr. Amy Weaver, of Louisville, Kentucky, recently spent a week end visiting Sr. Quincy Carpenter at Brumfield, Kentucky.

HAMMOND, LOUISIANA

It is our plan to begin a series of meetings with the brethren at Hammond, Louisiana, the Thanksgiving week and to continue over Sunday, December 8. Those interested in further particulars may address Albert Siple, Hammond, Louisiana.

F. E. Siple.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

We plan to begin a short series of meetings at our Eldorado church, in Eldorado, on the evening of November 19, and to continue over Sunday, the 24th. We are hoping that all living near there who are interested in the gospel will plan to gather at this time for mutual benefit.

F. E. Siple.

FELIDA, WASHINGTON

The last quarterly meeting of the Northwest Conference of Oregon and Washington was held August 31 and September 1. The first evening Bro. Wilson, of Corvallis, spoke on the nature of man. Sunday morning we enjoyed Bible study and a sermon, after which a basket dinner was spread in the basement of the church. The afternoon meeting was followed with communion service. In the evening, Bro. Wilson gave a very good talk on the restoration of Israel.

The Felida Church.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 2; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Guthrie Grove, S. C., 4; Welcome, S. C., 1; Dana, N. C., 5.

Money received in Indiana: Pleasant View, $28.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $15.00; North Salem, $10.50; Burr Oak, $10.00.

Expense: $14.85.

Turned over to Conference Board, $3.65.

Note: We are now engaged in a meeting at Dana, N. C. Next Sunday afternoon we are to speak in the Court House at Hendersonville, N. C., on "The Coming of Christ" and "Signs of the Times". We are having large crowds and good interest in spite of the bad weather. It has rained all the time that we have been here. There is quite an opposition to the truth here. We need your prayers, and also some good literature could be used. See Matt. 24:14; Mark 16:15.

Are we obeying?

J. H. Anderson.

AN APPEAL

I do not think it is necessary for me to explain the relief work, as I feel our people fully understand how it is carried on and know something of the good that has been done. The full knowledge of the blessing it has been to those of our number who have received help in times of need will never be known until our Savior comes and all things will be made plain.

As I have told you before, the unpleasant thing for me about this work is that I have to ask for help to carry it on. Giving aid to families where there is severe sickness that takes all and more than all of the earnings coming into the home, helping to provide fuel, food and clothing, where it is needed, and giving to our unfortunate ones, the joy of knowing someone cares, is to me one of God's richest blessings.

If there are any of you who wish to help me in this work, will you please send your donations to my address? This work is not just among the Bereans. Every one whose desire it is to serve God has a part in it.

Winter, with its added hardships will soon be here. That makes the need for help greater and I am trusting that our people will respond to this appeal I am making for financial help, so that the good that has been done in former years may go on in the future.

Mrs. Orpha Sanford,
5424 Race Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.
Chairman of National Berean Relief of The Church of God.

OREGON

Sr. Lela Taylor has returned to Corvallis, after having spent the summer with relatives in California. She was accompanied by her sister, Sr. W. H. Tremaine, of Los Angeles, who returned after spending several days at the home of her mother, Sr. Flora Hogue. Sr. Taylor is a student at the Oregon State College.

Bro. J. C. Wilson, of Lebanon, attended Sunday School at Corvallis.

Bro. A. N. Harlan has returned from an extended trip through the mid-west. We are glad to report an improvement in health, and that his eyesight is much better.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kerr and daughter Jane have again located in Corvallis, after four-years' absence. Bro. Kerr is a student at O. S. C.

Again we report the loss of a faithful brother, Wm H. Prosser, of Newberg, Oregon. Bro. Prosser, in earlier years, was an active worker in the great cause, and in later years, though aged and feeble, wrote letters of encouragement and comfort to the Northwest Conferences. His son, Bro. Horace J. Prosser, is an able teacher and often helps at the annual conference. We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones and offer this this encouragement and comfort: Job 19: 23-26.

The Northwest Conference of Oregon and Washington will hold its quarterly meeting November 30, and December 1, at Corvallis, Oregon. Everyone is urged to attend and help make this an interesting meeting.

Gladys Barber, Sec'y.

MICHIGAN

The Michigan Quarterly Conference convened at Coats Grove, Michigan, November 1 to 3, with Bros. Patrick and Randall and Sr. Woodward as speakers. Both attendance and interest were good. The Coats Grove male quartette rendered some beautiful selections which were appreciated by all. When the gospel invitation was extended Mrs. Greta Endsley, of Woodland, came forward accepting Christ as her Savior. On Monday several from Coats Grove motored to the Grand Rapids church where Bro. Patrick assisted her in putting on the all saving name of Christ.

Wm. A. Hanson, Sec'y.

CONFERENCE NOTES

I am not wishing to take Bro. Hanson's work from him, but in his absence from conference I took notes and was asked to report to the paper, so I will tell my part and leave the rest for Bro. Hanson. I rode from Dutton with Bro. Randall Friday afternoon. We found Bro. Patrick at Bro. Coats', looking well, and ready for the evening work. His subject was "Love", and he gave us, as usual, a splendid sermon.

Saturday morning, as we gathered for worship, Bro. Randall suggested a praise and prayer meeting to begin this conference. What a joy it was to have the old-time worship again resumed! We knelt in earnest prayer for the success of this meeting, then for the N. B. I. work, and for the very much afflicted family of our Bro. J. H. Andrew, also the sister that Sr. Robinson mentioned. May we not forget each day to remember these dear ones in prayer. God has answered prayer many times before. Why not now?

After this blessed service, Bro. Patrick gave a splendid Bible lesson from 1 Cor. 3. In the afternoon the writer spoke, choosing her subject from the text the dear Christ used for His first sermon. Where is it? What is it? Bro. Patrick did most of the speaking and his subjects were: "Love"; "Israel in Prophecy"; "God's Purpose in Creation"; and "Christ's Second Coming". Each sermon was filled with good, inspiring thoughts that will add strength to all. Bro. Randall gave an excellent sermon from Job 11:7, "Canst thou by searching find out God?" Of course he proved that all could find Him who would, and when found, He would prove the very best, the surest and most profitable Friend and Helper we ever had.

Throughout the entire conference a spirit of friendly, Christian unity could be felt. Bro. Wing, their pastor, very kindly gave up his usual service to us. The meals were served in the very commodious basement, and over 160 were fed at Sunday noon hour. Sunday evening a cafeteria meal was served to a large crowd.

In the evening we enjoyed another splendid sermon by Bro. Patrick, and then goodbyes had to be said. We were made very happy in receiving a dear sister into the fold of Christ. We are praying for others there to make the good confession.

I came to Lansing with the dear Coats family, who came to return their son, Kendall to his school here. I will be here for a few weeks before going to Chicago for the winter (D. V.).

ARE WE THANKFUL?

As we approach the season of the year when the giving of thanks is the customary rule, the thoughtful person will frequently ponder in his mind the reasons he, individually, has for thankfulness. From the richest, most honored or influential person in the land to the poorest in material things, the humblest individual, all have something for which to be thankful. God bestows upon all, rich and poor alike, His beautiful sunshine and needed rain, His glowing summer and zesty winter, His awakening spring and mellow autumn. Of these blessings we are all too often unmindful.

But apart from these, you and I have many reasons for gratitude to our heavenly Father. For the immeasurable love of our Savior and for the opportunity to tell this love in one way or another to those about us, for these we should be truly thankful. Someone has aptly said that the test of thankfulness is really not what you have to be thankful for, but whether any one else in the world has reason to be thankful that you are living. And how true that is! The truly happy hearts are not found among those who possess everything to give comfort and ease, but among those who daily give themselves in service to others.

We may have so little to give, financially, that we think it is not worth the giving, but when your little offering and mine are combined, the benefits derived are that much greater. The National Bible Institution is working with this end in view, the uplifting spiritually of our brothers and sisters all over the land. Because of your offerings and mine, small though they be, the National Bible Institution is able to do much for the good of all.

Do you want someone to be thankful that you are living? If so, do not withhold your offering, large or small, to further the work of the Master in which we are all engaged. Send an offering from your heart, overflowing with gratitude to the Giver of every good gift. Send it now.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA

By Lyman Booth

THE FIVE BOOKS OF MOSES contain the greater part of the history of those early ages, and are the most reliable and authentic records we have. Though many portions of the books of the prophets are historical, yet the books of Moses and the prophets are termed "The Law and the Prophets", because of the style peculiar to each. The book of Joshua might be properly considered historical. It is supposed by some writers that about ten hundred and fifty years intervened between the deaths of Moses and Nehemiah. Others claim it was a longer period, but be it more or less, it doesn't matter. The point that is of most importance is that these books furnish a connected narrative of the events, which is very interesting as well as instructive to the student of the Scriptures.

With the exception of some Phœnician accounts which are full of inconsistencies and are of extremely doubtful authority, and a few Egyptian and Assyrian accounts, there is little else that gives any reliable information of what transpired during those ancient and far away times. It isn't safe to place much confidence on those ancient narratives from Eastern nations. Still some writers have considered them with so much favor as to claim that they render other reliable histories as questionable, histories that have been approved and accepted by the best authorities. Hence their testimony ought to outweigh all fabulous writings, which are so disfigured as to be scarcely intelligible, because they relate events as having taken place centuries before the creation as it is given in the Bible. They are mere statements without reliable proof.

The renowned historian, Herodotus, who has been called the father of history, did not give his work to the world until about one thousand years after those of Moses were written. It is worthy of note that the events mentioned by Moses were not only probable and possible, but highly rational. Not only so, but they agree with the general conduct of mankind in whatever condition or circumstance found. Moses' accounts agree with sober traditions and with the fragments and relics of antiquity that are being dug up from the buried ruins of ancient cities. These relics of ancient times, when brought to light, serve to prove many questions of ancient genealogy. They furnish proof of manners and customs of those countries, during those remote centuries, as far as they have been made known to us in Holy Writ.

Moses' accounts refer principally to a people in many respects, far from great. And though they were unjustly despised by all other nations, Moses continually calls our attention to the most ancient transactions of other nations with which they had any dealings. His narratives, though brief, give us a truer history than other historians wrote concerning the Egyptians, Phœnicians, Assyrians, Chaldeans, the Medes and Persians. This should impress every reflective reader with the highest and holiest veneration for the sacred Book, which has no equal and is the most wonderful Book in the world. Its history should endear it to every Christian man and woman. Best of all, it is well suited to make known God's mercy and goodness and love, and also to show the real character of man and his need of a Redeemer.

Types and prophecies are found in the historical accounts, especially in those referring to our Lord as the Redeemer in nearly all parts of the sacred Oracles. In those records are to be found miracles of the most wonderful and awe-inspiring nature, which were wrought to confirm those messages from God, which were offensive to all idolatrous people. They should serve to silence forever the voice of the skeptic.

We are not definitely informed as to who wrote each book in this section of the Bible, but the supposition prevails that the prophet or seer was employed to do the work whose name appears most frequently therein. We cite a few texts to this effect:— 1 Kings 16:17; 1 Chron. 29:29; 2 Chron. 12:15; 20:24; 26:22. We may say with reasonable certainty that the prophet who lived at the time the events transpired did the writing, under the supervision of the Holy Spirit, which accounts for their simplicity and perfect harmony with all other accounts of Bible history. Their combined narratives form a complete history as we now have it in the Bible. There is very

GOD'S BLESSINGS

MAN IS EVER YEARNING for blessings and benefits from God. He prays for them; he searches for them in every way known to him; he ever seeks them for self.

Blessings are unavoidably accompanied by circumstances that produce sorrow, sometimes even pain. Sin has so tarnished all of God's beautiful works that he who comes to be the possessor of any God-given blessing untouched by sin is followed by sin. Does God send the beautiful sunshine to bathe and warm all the earth, to bloom the roses, to grow the wheat? That same blessed sunshine grows the thistle and all manner of noxious weeds. The blessing is accompanied by the fruit of the curse. Did God bless Israel with deliverance from Egypt? That deliverance took Israel into the wilderness where waters were bitter, food was scarce, traveling was difficult. Quickly Israel, blessed with deliverance, longed to return to the leeks and onions of Egypt, even to bondage itself.

Does God bless the individual today with the benefits of Christianity? Those benefits necessarily impose upon him duties and services which he at once calls trial. Perhaps that is the right name for them, and yet those trials would not be met had not the blessings introduced the individual into new and better surroundings.

The very fact that there is a hill top necessitates that, for one to gain its summit he must climb upward. The downward course is easy; the upward, difficult, but the hill top benefits cannot possibly be experienced in the valley. Every blessing of God is accompanied by that which sin-touched man calls trials. They are not trials; they are simply obstacles that must be surmounted as one presses forward into the blessings given.

AS WE APPROACH THANKSGIVING (our Canadian readers celebrated theirs on Armistice Day) and Christmas all should stop to realize that these are days set aside by the nation in honor to God and in recognition of His marvelous works before man. As Christians let us do our part to exalt the names of God and His Son on all such anniversaries.

FROM WHENCE COME JEALOUSIES?

IN A RECENT STUDY HOUR in the Bible Training Class, attention was called to the life of Moses as he fled from Pharaoh. Moses had been especially favored of God and stood second to the head of the nation of Egypt. As a result of this, some of those whom he would aid were evidently jealous of him and became his enemies. He fled the country in order to preserve his life.

From this little beginning, the mind of the class made comparison with other parts of Scripture and something after the following was brought to light:

Sinful jealousy is given birth only as the jealous person compares self with the enjoyed advantages of another one. Jesus, inspired and empowered by God, performed works and spoke words never before experienced by man. His every work was for the good of His followers; His every word was for their uplift, yet though there was no evil either in His thought or in His deed, many became jealous of Him and would overpower and overthrow Him. Saul was a good fellow among his associates. No sooner did he turn to Jesus and receive benefits from Him, than his one time friends became extremely jealous of him.

Practically every blessing from God places an individual into position which tends to draw forth jealousy and enmity from his fellows. The God-given power which Moses enjoyed caused others to desire to overthrow him and usurp his position. It was the fact of David's evident blessings from God that caused the javelin to fly from Saul's hand. The miracles wrought by Peter, attracting multitudes unto his teachings, gendered enmity in the lives of his opponents.

Christians, those who are real, hearty in their Christianity should ever guard themselves lest they be caught in this same trap. Instead of allowing oneself to be jealous over the blessings of another, one should rather endeavor to live sufficiently close unto his God and his Savior that he, too, will merit and receive of blessing that will elevate him to like standing of the one of whom he may be jealous.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME IN A MODERN WORLD

THE HOME

Sunday, November 24—Eph. 6:1-8; Ex. 20:12.

THE HOME is God's first and greatest grouping of man. It is not a house; it is a family as created by God Himself. It was God who ordained the family life; who planned and purposed the home. The first one of the latter five of the Ten Commandments at Sinai was an instruction to the home. Paul's frequent teaching was with reference to the development of home life. Obedience to the parent in the Lord "is right", Eph. 6:1. The provoking of children to evil or wrath by the parent is wrong.

Adam, as the head of the human race, carried a tremendous responsibility. Jesus, as the sole Redeemer, Savior of the human race, was entrusted with unspeakable responsibility. The ruler of a nation, likewise, carries great responsibility. In like manner, the head of the home is mantled with responsibility most important.

There is no other way by which to exalt life, to exalt the home, to exalt the nation comparable with the Christian way. That home which would stand highest for the good of the world today must be Christian. That parent who would be truest to his children must be Christian. The modern world is literally famishing for want of truer Christianity in larger measure.

LESSONS FROM THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

Monday, November 25—Luke 2:40-52

Without presuming to suggest that child life in any other home of any time could approach the godliness of the child life of Jesus, it would yet be well to prayerfully consider how that the home life was reflected in Jesus, the Child. The fact that Mary was so true to God, so devoted to the Father's ways that He could overshadow her with the Holy Spirit, Luke 1:35, and of His own power upon her provide that her Son should be holy from His birth, while indeed miraculous, nevertheless emphasizes unmistakably the blessings of parental life upon the child. A home must be known by its fruits. That home, which provides God and the world with a childhood true to God, noble in life, is a home that, in its parents, is also in one way or another close to the Father.

It is the standard of the home that makes the standard of the nation, the standard of the world. The Christian home to be most valuable to man must prepare a childhood which, going into life's activities, shall carry with it the best that can be carried. To accomplish this that childhood must be Christian and, in turn, the parents should live in Christ in order to provide the best childhood for God and man.

EDUCATIONAL TRAINING AS IT AFFECTS THE HOME

Tuesday, November 26—Deut. 6:1-9

Not only is the child entitled to be well-born and thus to have the best possible start in life, but the child is also entitled to be trained in its childhood after the best known way. God commanded His chosen nation, Israel, to teach the children of the home the greatest and most fundamental truths as estimated by God Himself. These truths were to be taught to the children diligently, daily, frequently during the day. They were to be engraven into their tender lives that they might be held ever prominently, even unto old age.

HOLY MATRIMONY

Wednesday, November 27—Matt. 19:1-9.

If one is to judge from the standards of God's Word, he is forced to conclude that one of the most withering, blighting and desecrating practices of the day is that practice of destroying marriage. God's creative work did not stop when He created man, nor when He created woman. It did not stop until He had created the two into one that "they twain shall be one flesh". He who destroys the marriage vow, breaks down God's creation just the same as he who destroys man or destroys woman breaks down God's creation. The great crime of divorce strikes God before it strikes the husband and wife affected thereby.

A brief analysis by the reader will bring him to recognize the fact that without the sanctity of the home, there is no known way to God or man of properly and advantageously rearing the child. Without the sanctity of the marriage vow, there can be no sanctity of the home. Marriage, in all its purity and godliness, should be extolled by man as it is by God. It should be kept in the fulness of the spirit, in the fulness of the letter as unto God.

GRACE AT MEALS

Thursday, November 28—Luke 24:28-35.

The immortalized Son of God, when He first broke bread after His resurrection, paused to thank God, the Giver of every good and perfect gift. How much the home is benefited by pausing in the morning, before each meal, in the evening, to thank the God of heaven for life, for health, for strength, for food, for the blessings of the day and to seek His guidance in the use of these blessings! The benefits resulting from the Christian life are cumulative. The little blessings of today added to like blessings of yesterday and of all the past days of life, accumulate to large, almost unmeasured blessings as life grows on. The

PERSONIFICATION

By Emma C. Railsback

PERSONIFICATION IS USED a great deal in the Scriptures. To represent an inanimate object, a qualification or condition as possessing the attributes of a living being is to personify it. The sun, the moon and stars are personified; likewise trees, hills, mountains, wisdom, the sword and many other abstract and inanimate things.

The moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem and before His ancients, gloriously. The eleven stars made obeisance to Joseph. The trees went forth on a time to appoint a king over them. Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the Lord. Let the field be joyful and all that is therein. Then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice. I, wisdom, dwell with prudence and find out knowledge of witty inventions. Thence will I command the sword: Awake, O Sword, against my shepherd. The mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of field shall clap their hands. Let the floods clap their hands, let the hills be joyful together.

Masculine, feminine, or neuter gender is used in personification. To wisdom is ascribed feminine gender, "Doth not wisdom cry and understanding put forth her voice? She standeth in the top of high places." To the sun is given masculine and to the moon feminine gender, "The sun shall be darkened in his going forth and the moon shall not give her light to shine."

Some writers tell us that the Scriptures ascribe neuter gender to the Holy Spirit, but the translators have applied the masculine. However that may be, we find the Savior saying, "If I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you. . . . When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth."

It is not so difficult for Bible students to understand that the rules of personification have been applied in the foregoing manner to trees, hills, wisdom, etc., or to this energy-gift, Spirit, from Jehovah, as it is to comprehend the truth that the evil, opposing, adverse influence that emanates from the carnal nature of man is personified under the title of Satan, and given the masculine gender. Perhaps the fact that personification is used more frequently in this respect has something to do with our difficulties in understanding it.

By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin. The carnal mind is enmity against God, said the apostle. "The works of the flesh are these, adultery, fornication uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like." The flesh controlled by the carnal mind commits all the above sinful practices. So it is the carnal mind of man that opposes Jehovah and not the supernatural Satan.

If we will compare 1 Chron. 21:1, the first place where Satan is found, with 2 Sam. 24:1, we will find that David was Israel's adversary or Satan. Santa Claus is the personification of Christmas joy and cheer and the giving of gifts and his name is legion, not one supernatural being. Likewise, Satan is the personification of the sinful practices of the carnal nature of Adam and his descendants, the devil and his angels, and his name, too, is legion.

THE SURE PUNISHMENT OF THE WICKED AND VINDICATION OF THE RIGHTEOUS

Psalm 37

BE NOT FRETFUL or impatient at the success of the wicked; for the world is ruled by God, and a divine judgment is coming before which the wicked shall wither like grass. Only have confidence in God, and do what is good, and then thou shalt one day dwell in the land of the enjoyment of peace and plenty. If thy delight is in Jehovah, he shall give thee thy heart's desire. Commit to him with confidence the care of your life, and he will do all that is needful, making the justice of thy cause to shine clear as the noonday sun. In silence and patience commit it all to God, and be not fretful at the prosperity of knaves. Cherish no anger or impatience in thine heart, as that can but lead to further evil; for the judgment is coming—coming very speedily—which will blot out the wicked, and the place where they were wont to be, and it will also bring the humble, who wait upon Jehovah, into possession of the land, within whose borders they shall enjoy prosperity of every kind.

The godless concocts his cruel plots against the righteous; but the Lord laughs at him, for he knows how the plot will end: he sees the day of judgment that is coming. With all their skill and strength and weapons of war, they seek to compass the ruin of the righteous; but their weapons shall be useless, or useful only to ensure their own doom. A good man's little is better than a bad man's store; for the bad man's might shall be shattered, but the good man is upheld by God. Over his fortunes he lovingly watches, and he will always have descendants to enter upon his inheritance. In evil times when others are hungry, the good are fed. Yes, the ungodly perish; the enemies of Jehovah shall vanish like smoke as a brand in the oven.

The ungodly does not return what he borrows; whereas the just man is moved by his pity to liberal gifts. Those that he blesses shall inherit the land, and those that he curses shall be annihilated. Jehovah guides the steps of the man with whose manner of life he is well pleased. When he stumbles he does not altogether fall, for Jehovah holds his hand. Never once in my long life have I seen the righteous forsaken, or his children forced to beg. Rather he is always generously giving; his children also are a blessing to others. If thou but do what is good and shun what is evil, thou shalt dwell forever in the land; for Jehovah, who loveth justice, never forsaketh his saints. The wicked are doomed to everlasting destruction, their offspring shall be rooted out. But the righteous shall possess the land, and dwell in it for ever and ever in unshaken prosperity, because the words of his mouth are words of wisdom, and the law of his God is in his heart.

The wicked lies in wait for him with murderous intent; but Jehovah will not abandon him, nor let him be condemned in the trial. If thou wait upon Jehovah and keep to his way, he will honor thee by giving thee the land, and thine eyes shall feast on the destruction of the ungodly—and that right speedily. For I have seen the wicked lifting himself proudly, like a cedar of Lebanon; but, when I drew near, behold! he had vanished, leaving not a trace behind. Preserve thine integrity and practice uprightness, for the future belongs to the man of peace. But future there is none for the wicked; they are destroyed, root and branch. The righteous are saved by Jehovah; he is their stronghold in time of trouble. Because they put their trust in him, he helps them and saves them from the ungodly.

THE BIBLE STANDARD OF DRESS FOR WOMEN

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

IF WE COULD roll back the dark pages of God's Word that deal with the judgment scenes that are about to fall upon all ungodliness and unrighteousness at the end of this, the gospel age, and if we could tell the ungodly these things as God reveals them to us and as they will be, we might be able to impress some with the dire results that will come from our present-day fashions and manners. In Col. 3:5, 6 we read that "impurity" and "unholy dress" are two of the reasons for the wrath of God coming. Weymouth.

In spite of all reform movements, we see wickedness on the increase. To lift up one's voice to reprove the sin of our present-day fashions would only make of one a target. But, nevertheless, our present fashions come under the above characteristics which will fall under the wrath of God. To view the situation as it is brings to mind the prophet Isaiah's experience as we read his words in Isa. 59:14, 15, "And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off; for truth is fallen in the street and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey." Were there ever truer words than these spoken to suit our times and the moral condition as it is now? In this blessed chapter, the man of God is pleading with Israel to depart from iniquity which has separated them from God. He tells them that their sins testify against them, and that is what sin will do in the end for all those who serve it. The Bible says our sins will find us out.

No one who truly believes that the Bible is the Word of God needs to be told that the last great and terrible conflict between good and evil that is described in the book of Revelation is close at hand. The battle is not a new one, for it has been the cause of all the conflicts of the ages. Not until it is all over, however, will sin be seen in all its hideousness, and not until then will righteousness shine forth as the noonday. To that day, all true Christians are looking. If it were not for that hope, much of the struggle that Christians must now face would be almost unbearable. But until it is over, we must keep on our aimour and reprove and warn.

Oh! some say, it is not good to speak so plainly. We do not like it. We do not care to have the Bible taught, for it is so old-fashioned. Reader, if you do not teach your children the way of God, some one else will teach them a much worse way. There is no false modesty about the Bible and some day those who have been taught that way will be proud of it. There is much satisfaction in knowing that we are pleasing God in bringing our children up according to His Word. Then, if they do rebel, we know that God will not blame us. Yes, truth has failed, and it is partly due to the fact that many have not taken a definite stand for it. We can never blame God when failure comes, for the trouble is always with man.

We read much about what is being done for prohibition, and we rejoice that the evil is being taken care of. We hear of the evils of the cigarette habit, and we would be glad to do all we could to stamp out this evil if we could. But here is an evil, the results of which may be even more serious than either of the other two evils. You may wonder at this, but it is true; for when a nation declines in morals, it is not long before it becomes an inferior nation.

They tell us that times have changed and that the new way of living is more healthful, but we doubt it; for the present conditions do not bear out what they say. The Bible says, "Walk in the old paths and you shall find rest for your souls." The old ways are always the best although they may be the longest. It pays to stop and consider God's ways. We believe it is time for plain speaking, for God's way says, "If the watchman see the sword coming and blow not the trumpet, so that the people be not warned, if the sword come, . . . his blood will be required at the watchman's hands." Crime is increasing every year, statistics state. Is it not high time that the mothers of our children awakened to realize it? Of course, there are many false standards that might be taken into consideration, but it looks as if the one under the above heading should be given full attention.

We know that we are living in a time of great changes and we hardly know what to expect next. Few think very seriously on anything and do not realize that they will have to give an account of themselves and that they will be responsible for their children. The great mass of the people are ripening for judgment. If we have the love of God in our hearts, we should feel our responsibility in this matter and not fail to warn when the opportunity comes to do so. It is for us to sow the seed, God will take care of the harvest. Yes, we should warn our friends as if they were in a burning house, asleep, and not aware of the danger they were in. For such is truly the condition. The Bible says that it is for these things that the wrath of God is going to fall on the ungodly. Read Rom. 1:18; Col. 1:3-6; Eph. 5:6.

There is but one standard in the Bible. Upon this we may always depend. It says that the women should dress modestly. This leaves out all the extravagances and extremes in dress. In 1 Peter 3:4, 5, we learn that a meek and quiet spirit is greatly approved by God. In 1 Tim. 2:9, we read that women should adorn themselves in modest apparel. Deut. 22:5, 6 teaches us that women should not wear anything in clothes pertaining to men's clothes. In John 2:15 we read, "If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him." Modern dress belongs to the world.

Jesus said, "If a man love me, he will keep my words." —John 14:23. These are Bible standards for women for all times and all occasions. Because God's Word teaches it, true Christians should feel their responsibility in the matter of dress when morals are so low, for unless they hold up the standard, no one else will. Besides, they should have a desire to please God in this important matter.

THE BOOK OF JOSHUA

little history recorded after the days in which Ezra wrote, and we take it for granted that his accounts are true. He, being a prophet, was no doubt guided by the Holy Spirit, as were all the prophets of God. It is supposed that the canon of the Old Testament was arranged in his day.

Undoubtedly these books contain the scriptures to which our Lord referred so frequently, and which the Jews considered as the oracles of God. It is worthy of especial notice that the several books, or parts of the Bible agree and therefore prove each other to be genuine with regard to the various subjects contained therein. The several divisions of the Bible furnish us with important and undoubted facts, many of which profane history acknowledges as true. Hence we find our Lord and His disciples referring frequently to "the Psalms and the prophets," in proof of their own statements.

It is a known fact that modern historians do not agree in their narratives of events which have occurred in their day, though living at the same time and almost in the same locality. But we note that the sacred writers have given their accounts of various matters in perfect agreement, though separated by centuries and thousands of miles. This is sufficient proof of the truth and accuracy of their accounts.

As for the Book of Joshua, it is considered by most writers that Joshua wrote the greater part, and possibly all of it. (See 24:26.) The writer, whoever he was, speaks of himself as a person well acquainted with the transactions which he relates, 5:1. He mentions Rahab as then living in Israel which shows he was contemporary with Joshua, 6:25. Nevertheless a few passages may have been written at a later date by another prophet, 19:47; 24:29-33. Granting that a few texts may have been written at a later date, it by no means proves that the whole book was written after Joshua's death. In other parts of the Bible we find passages which tend to prove the historical events to which Joshua refers as true, namely, 1 Kings 16:34; Psa. 114:3-5; Acts 7:45; 13:19; Heb. 4:6; 11:29, 31; 13:5; James 2:25. Besides these there are others which refer to the promises and prophecies contained in the book which have either been fulfilled or are awaiting fulfillment, namely, 1:8; 8:30-35; 11:15, 20; 20:2, 21, 43-45; 22:1-9; 23:6-16; 24:2, 10, 19, 20.

Numerous fables furnished by pagan writers seem to indicate that they were, at least, partially acquainted with Jewish history, from which those fables must have arisen, manifestly the story of Phaeton driving the chariot of the sun for one day, which, probably, originated from the staying of the sun by the command of Joshua. It is quite probable that the Carthaginians were descendants of the Phœnicians, or Canaanites, who fled from their country before the victorious sword of Joshua and of Israel.

We do not find that this book contains any specific prophecies, but there are several warnings given to Israel to expect the fulfillment of those delivered by Moses, also the curse pronounced upon him who should attempt to rebuild the ruined city of Jericho, 6:26.

We suggest that Joshua as a leader, his wars and conflicts, and the inheritance which he assigned to Israel are typical of Christ, His conflicts and triumphs, and the rest reserved for the saints.

Expositors have estimated that about seventeen years intervened between the deaths of Moses and Joshua, seven of which were spent in the conquest of Canaan and ten in the peaceable possession and rest in the land. The book as a whole contains useful instruction. The exhortations with which he bade adieu to his beloved people, though tender and kind, are intensely interesting and emotional and show his love and anxiety for their national peace and prosperity. He died at the age of one hundred ten years, and was buried in Mount Ephraim on the north side of the hill of Gaash, 24:29, 30.

Jesus said (John 9:4), "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work". Dear Reader, are you aware of the imminence of this "night" and that God has given you and me an important mission to perform in any capacity we be adapted? The situation which the "dead" world is facing is copiously referred to in the Bible. Rev. 18 (read entire) tersely describes events which are now in their incipience. Hence our service to the "lukewarm"; and when, "Every heart shall melt and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water". Ezek. 21:7. "Blessed is that servant, whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing". —Jesus.—Samuel E. Haney.

advantages of Christian life, though perhaps small some days, in the end accumulate and become wonderful, accumulating as the fortunes of the thrifty man. Throughout life there is a daily satisfaction and in the end there is untold advantage.

THE DUTY OF CAREFUL LIVING

Friday, November 29—Eph. 6:1-9.

The home, like the individual, is made up of the sum total of its activities. The home is pleasant, beautiful, uplifting, inspiring to parent and child according as the individual efforts of each and all are put forth. Paul and other writers carefully detail some of those things that should be encouraged and others that should be avoided. These instructions are not arbitrary, they are informative. It is just as natural for a person of filthy, foolish, thought and habit to fall lower as it is for a weight of iron to descend. The reverse is equally true. Sin of any kind can do nothing else than lower the individual. Reversely, righteousness elevates.

May the readers of these lines endeavor that their homes shall be Christian in thought and in action.

BENEFITS FROM A GODLY ANCESTRY

Saturday, November 30—2 Tim. 1:3-14.

Paul emphasizes how that Timothy's faith was like unto that of his grandmother and his mother. How little the average person realizes that the life lived today will influence coming generations, even beyond understanding! The benefits of Christ's great life and sacrifice did not accrue to Him in that early day nearly so much as they accrue to His followers throughout the centuries, even unto the ages of the ages. The benefits to be realized from the active Christian life of today will adorn, like gems in their setting, all future time.

So, too, in the home man should cease living merely for the selfish good of the day and begin living for the children, the children's children unto all future time. The faith of Eunice and of Lois entered Timothy, increased and was wafted on to others who followed him. The same principle is true today. The youthful parents of today, could they but grasp the great opportunities which are possible of increase even as the rays from searchlights spread out broader and broader over the land, and live for the larger good of tomorrow, would be serving God in His great creative work unspeakably more than by merely accumulating for personal pleasure during the short, uncertain years of life.

SORROW AND JOY

Each one must meet with Sorrow here,
And feel her molding hand,
Though we murmur at her presence,
And are slow to understand
Why she shadows earth's fair pathways
And in all life's music sweet,
Blends her minor chords of sadness
Ere the music is complete.

God's Word alone can answer
What we ask oftentimes with tears,
Whence cometh Sorrow; why does she Exist throughout the years?
Man plunged in ruin by his sins,
A captive of despair,
Was dwelling near the gates of Death,
When Sorrow found him there.

She lays her heavy hand on him,
His wayward heart she wrings,
Till, learning sorrow follows sin,
He strives for better things.
Man ever would with Pleasure walk,
And from Life's lessons turn,
Which he must in Affliction's school,
From Sorrow's pages learn.

God will not break the bruised reed,
Or contrite heart refuse;
But from the meek and sorrowful,
His people He will choose.
A Man of sorrows was our Lord,
He bore our grief and woe,
And we must drink of Sorrow's cup,
His fellowship to know.

Weeping endureth for a night,
But soon comes Joy's bright morn,
When from Earth's heart, in one glad day
A nation shall be born.
Haste, happy day, when Christ shall come
And lift the curse of sin!
Lift up your heads, ye gates, and let
The King of glory in.

—Alice B. Curtis.

AN UNFAILING SUPPLY

By Samuel E. Haney

“Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.”—1 Corinthians 10:12.

WHILE BUT FEW CHRISTIANS resent being dubbed physical and mental weaklings, most Christians (?) take no offense at being recognized religious weaklings, rather considering it flattery. And this is often made manifest by their cynical jeers and askance looks at the humble, faithful disciple of Christ. This class of ubiquitous, self-styled Christians is satisfied with just enough Christianity to be called Christian (Isa. 4:1), and thereby incidentally accomplishing two purposes, e. g., not to be deprived of the joys of this life, and to be prepared—as they suppose—to be “taken” when He comes for His faithful ones. Were such spiritual hybrids in some mysterious, superhuman manner to get into God's kingdom, the efficiency of God's great sacrifice on Calvary would be weakened, if not nullified. But the Lord's parable, Matt. 22:1-13, assures us there will be no mishaps, nor danger of any one's getting in without “a wedding garment”, Christ's righteousness. One did slip through in the parable, but he was unceremoniously “cast out into outer darkness”,—his rightful place.

It is when we think we are strong, well able to stand, that God gives us occasions to demonstrate either our fancied strength, evinced by the flesh, or the strength impelled by the faith of our prototype, Job, viz., “Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him.” It is to clarify our true status that Job's experience was written and for our admonition, as every mature Christian can verify.

Therefore, let us take heed! Heed of what? Our own theories and methods? No, no; but of God's Word, the only true rule. God's admonition to Israel, Jer. 6:16, is of greater importance and applicability to us under grace than it was to the Jew under the law: “Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein.” It should be the surprise of our lives to know the number of people, styled Christians, to whom the last clause of this verse applies, “They said (decided), We will not walk therein.”

The necessity of making a stand as a religious and moral rectitude, is prominent in Paul's teachings. Notice the four strong points he makes in so few words, 1 Cor. 16:13, “Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.” The result, 1 Thess. 3:8, “For now we live, if we stand fast in the Lord.” What is to be ascribed by the phrase, “Stand fast in the Lord”? It is like some English words which involve many things, as a tree with many branches. Paul gives its root meaning, 2 Cor. 6:7; Eph. 6:11—“By the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left”—thus, “Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil”,

Paul's final advice to the Christian before his initial round, Eph. 6:13-18—"Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, whereby ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked ('wicked one', Emph. Diag., Wey.). And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God: praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all the saints." A rather lengthy set of rules? But to obtain victory and a favorable decision from our Judge, they all require strict adherence. Matt. 25:21—"His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

We have considered the root phase of our subject and now we shall note the many derivatives, and the extent to which they apply to every-day practice in these last days. The modern branches of this tree are so numerous and diversified in their characteristics that it would be presumptuous to add one word to Jesus' lucid, parabolic description and simple explanation of them. "Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God. Those by the wayside are they that hear; then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved. They on the rock are they which, when they hear, and receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away. And that which fell among thorns are they, which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with the cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection." And now that the harvest is being gathered, verse fifteen in conjunction with current events, luminously clarifies the distinction between the genuine and the counterfeit: "But that on the good ground are they, which, in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience", (italics mine).

The modern Christian's strength by which he makes his stand is derived from his natural senses, flesh. But the gallant soldier, Paul, had different ideas and experiences. 2 Cor. 12:8-10—"For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me (i. e., 'the messenger of Satan to buffet me', v. 7). And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak (natural, Adam man) then I am strong (supernaturally, by the power of the Spirit)". See Isa. 40:31.

It should be as easy to understand why Paul succeeded in making a stand to the end of his career as it is for us to see the words of Psalm 91:7 in process of fulfillment: "A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; for it ('it': read vv. 5, 6) shall not come nigh thee". The great apostle gives us a little inside information in 2 Cor. 1:24 and Phil. 1:27: "Not for that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for by faith ye stand. . . . Stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the gospel."

THE WORSE POVERTY

By Lydia Railsback

MANY PERSONS have been born in tumble down shacks, and provided with scant clothing and barely enough food for existence; but somehow they struggle along always hoping for something better. The need of better food and clothes is many times a menace to their very being. It often prevents proper education and in some cases causes them to become outcasts. This engenders untold hardships and suffering, and one who has to endure such is to be pitied. It is, indeed, quite hard for one, of himself, to rise above such conditions.

Another picture: A Babe was born in a humble manger, and was provided with swaddling clothes. The Child grew and waxed strong in both body and mind. He was a Friend to the poor. He often fed and healed them. He taught them the ways of life and showed them that "neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."—Acts 4:12.

The first picture is a deplorable one; the second, beautiful. Let us compare the world to the characters in the first picture. The human family plunged into the depths of sin, worse than poverty and rags, and cannot, of itself, rise out of that condition. But the Character in the second picture came to lift mankind out of this condition.

There was a time when a certain people "were without Christ, . . . and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world". These were called "dogs" and, to my mind, were much worse off than those in our first picture.

Today, those who do not accept Christ are without Him. He came to lift us out of sin and give us life; but unless we reach out and accept this salvation, there is none for us. If we do not accept Christ, we are no better off than were the Gentiles of old; but if we do accept Him the picture is entirely different. Without Christ, we are the poorest of the poor, regardless of how much of this world's goods we may have; but with Christ, we are "made free from sin, and become the servants of God", and we have our "fruits unto holiness, and the end everlasting life". "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Rom. 6:22, 23,

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

VINES

THE VINE is one of the most important plants mentioned in the Bible and cultivated in the east. Noah planted a vineyard. Palestine was a land of vines. They were planted on mountains, and flourish there best at the present day. The vine is cultivated in a variety of ways. Some times it is trained over a trellis, or made to climb a tree. Ezek. 19:11. Sometimes it is trained over props about the height of a man, or a little higher; the branches spread laterally, often forming festoons from stake to stake. The usual method is to allow them to run on the ground, and with forked sticks prop up the cluster bearing branches. Pruning is done at the end of the fruiting season. John 15:2. The branches which bear no fruit are diligently cut away. These vines are able to endure without rain for seven to eight months.

To protect the vines from foxes, jackals and robbers, watchmen are placed in towers in prominent places. White-washed stones, three to six feet high, set in conspicuous places are a marked feature in the oriental landscape. These are for frightening away the animals.

A great variety of grapes are cultivated in Palestine and Syria: (1) a greenish white grape 1-2 to 2-3 inches in diameter with sweet juicy pulp; (2) olive shaped and white; (3) dark purple, size of a small prune; (4) some similar to black Hamburgs; (5) some with green rind, striped with red, etc. The vine of Sodom, Deut. 32:32, is supposed to have borne a beautiful fruit, but poisonous. It is not known whether this is a definite plant or not.

THE SUNSHINE MAGAZET of November, 1928, quotes the following "Best Things" collated by Leon T. Wahl of Kansas City, Mo. He calls these the best things in life:

- The best law—the Golden Rule.
 The best education—self-knowledge.
 The best philosophy—a contented mind.
 The best war—to war against one's weakness.
 The best medicine—cheerfulness and temperance.
 The best music—the laughter of an innocent child.
 The best science—extracting sunshine from a cloudy day.
 The best art—painting a smile upon the brow of childhood.
 The best telegraphing—flashing a ray of sunshine into a gloomy heart.
 The best biography—the life which writes Charity in largest letters.
 The best mathematics—that which doubles the most joys and divides the most sorrows.
 The best diplomacy—effecting a treaty of peace with one's own conscience.
 The best engineering—building a bridge of faith over the river of death.

SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT AND ITS INFLUENCE ON THE CHURCH

LET US FIRST ANALYZE what we mean by spiritual development. We believe it to be a developing or increasing of God's Spirit in an individual—a living closer to God so a person may develop or use His Spirit. It is built up by knowledge, faith, prayer, works.

Our spirituality is developed as we learn more of God, yet one may have a great knowledge of God and His wonderful plan of salvation and still not be developed spiritually. Such are like the Jews who grasped the letter of the law but failed to understand the spirit of the law.

How many there are who give a tenth of their earnings, who go to church regularly, teach Sunday School classes about God and His Son, Jesus, and yet in their daily lives (1) forget to pray; (2) forget to be kind and charitable; (3) let their tempers fly; (4) say cutting things; (5) act worldly; (6) talk worldly; (7) patronize movies, card parties and dances; (8) are regular "good fellows", the life of the party; (9) and are clothed (or unclothed) in extreme fashion.

Such people depend on their knowledge to save them, forgetting that they are not enough developed spiritually to serve in the kingdom. Churches with such members are not developed spiritually and have not much more influence on the world than any good lodge.

We believe that one who is spiritually developed (1) prays unceasingly to God for strength and wisdom; (2) is meek and humble and is not puffed up; (3) gives God the honor and glory for anything well done; (4) speaketh no evil, doeth no evil, thinketh no evil; (5) does not seek worldly pleasures, worldly offices or worldly praise, but rather seeks things of God and sacrifices earthly glory for future glory; (6) is apt to teach; (7) is generous, kind and charitable; (8) does not think that it doesn't matter how you act, just so you believe right.

We can all sense whether a person is spiritually developed or not. Such people are bound to command our respect and to help us if we care to be helped. People with one hand held out to the world are as easily sensed and do not command our respect and are no help to us spiritually.

Spiritual development of church members is necessary in order to win souls to Christ. Christ did not win people to Him by being one of the bunch and a general good fellow. He walked as God instructed Him even though it meant walking alone, and how great is His influence even yet!

Spiritual development in the church means a great force for good, a force to heal sick minds and encourage people to live better lives and live them for Christ.

—Ada Simpson.

TWO GOOD REPORTS from the Chicago Bereans are evidence of the continued interest of their class work. The Chicago Bereans have almost unlimited opportunities for growth, and yet they work under extreme handicaps, too. Our prayers are with their faithful workers, and we shall be glad to hear often of their progress.

CHICAGO BEREANS

THIS IS TO NOTIFY you that the annual business meeting of the Chicago Berean Class was held on Friday, October 11th, at the home of Mrs. Edna Beck, 5424 Race Avenue, and the following members were elected for the coming year: Mrs. Edna Beck, 5424 Race Ave., President; Miss Gladys Daehler, 6 N. Lotus Ave., Vice-president; Miss Florence Daehler, 6 N. Lotus Ave., Secretary; Miss Beatrice Stilson, 3612 MacLean Ave., Treasurer.

There were eight members of the class present, as follows: Mr. and Mrs. S. Kee, Beatrice Stilson, Gladys Daehler, Ethel Austin, Grace Laning, Mrs. Edna Beck, Florence Daehler.

A short social hour was spent after all necessary business had been duly transacted.

—Florence Daehler, Secretary.

THE CHICAGO BEREAN CLASS was held on Thursday evening, October 24th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kee, 5920 N. Paulina Ave., Bro. F. E. Siple and fourteen members being present. A very interesting lesson was led by Bro. Siple.

After class a short social hour was spent and refreshments were served by Mrs. Kee.

—Florence Daehler, Secretary.

We do not have to be greatly talented to offer our services to the Master, for He can take from us the smallest offering that is made in all sincerity, and though there may be mistakes and imperfections He will bless the offering and use it in His own way as He sees best.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME IN A MODERN WORLD

"SAY, JERRY, can I play on your football team?"
"Why sure, Henry. Come on, along, while I tell mother what we are going to do."

"What? Say, you don't have to tell your mother what you're going to do, do you?"

"No, but she feels better if she knows just where I am. And she would know where to find me in case I was needed."

"Needed! What for?" ejaculated Henry.

"Oh, she might want me for something or other. Don't you have any home work to do, or errands?"

"Yes, sometimes; but my mother isn't home herself very often. And if I stay away late the errands are all done. And anyway, we don't eat much at night."

"Where is your mother, Henry?"

"Oh, bridge club, or down-town, or somewhere. And say, Jerry, you don't get to go out after supper, do you? I never see you down at the corner."

"Yes, sometimes I go to the corner if there is some reason for going. But my brothers and sisters and I have such good times at home we hardly ever think of the corner."

"Good times at home! What do you do?" queried the marveling Henry.

"Why, we help with the evening duties," replied Jerry.

"Doesn't take long when each does something. Then we study our lessons, or read, or practice and sing together, or play games, or have Bible lessons, stories or drills."

"Do you mean to say your father and mother study and play games with you?" interrupted Henry.

"Surest thing! They are keen on all those things, and really one of us."

"You don't say!" murmured Henry. "I wish my mother and father were like that."

"Well, it is nice to have a home like mine," said Jerry, growing very thoughtful. "Dad and mother like us to be happy, and have good times, but they want the fun to be worth while. Mother always says we'll be happy if we never do anything we would be ashamed to tell her about."

"Guess she's right about that, too. Say do you go to church and Sunday School, and all that?"

"Why, of course, Henry. Why not?"

"Oh, I thought just sissies went to places like that, and talked that kind of talk,"

"Well, am I a sissy?"

"You, a sissy! I should say not, Jerry! You're a regular fellow. You always play the game square and take your ups and downs right."

"Oh, that's the way everyone does at our house," cheerfully responded Jerry. "We work together and talk things over together."

"Wish we could at our house. But do you know, it makes me feel kind of queer and foolish when I think of telling some things to my folks. And they'd think I was crazy if I said anything about Jesus or the Bible, or anything like that; and none of us ever say a prayer."

"That's too bad, Henry. Maybe if you started once it would all come natural. I'd rather talk to mother about the things I think and things I enjoy than any one else."

"You know, Jesus and His mother were very close friends. She must have taught Him many things, and have taken good care of Him; for the Bible says that He grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom. And I am sure He tried to please her, too. I like the story about Him when He was twelve years old. Like to hear it?"

"Go ahead," said Henry, in an interested tone.

"Well, Jesus must have studied hard and learned the Scriptures like the Jewish boys were taught, for when He was twelve the whole family went up to Jerusalem to attend the feast of the Passover. They stayed a few days and then started for home. Mary and Joseph thought Jesus was with some of the others and traveled all day before they realized that He was not in the company. So they went back and inquired of all their relatives and friends where Jesus was. And where do you suppose they found Him? Back in Jerusalem, in the temple, sitting in the midst of the greatest Jewish doctors, and hearing them and asking them questions. And He understood the law so well, and answered the questions of the others so clearly that all were astonished.

"His mother had been worried and when she asked Jesus why He had treated them so, He replied, 'How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?'

"Of course they did not understand just what Jesus meant and long after they returned to Nazareth Mary kept these sayings in her heart. And the Bible says He was subject unto them, that is, He did the things that Mary and Joseph wanted Him to do. Pretty good example, eh?"

"Pretty good," echoed Henry.

"Well, here we are at my house, I'll be out in a minute. By the way, would you like to go to Berean class with me this week? And perhaps my mother and father will call on your parents and they will be interested, too."

28-32; Ephesians 6:1-9; 2 Timothy 1:3-5; 3:14, 15.

Devotional Reading: Colossians 1:9-18.

GOLDEN TEXT

Honour thy father and mother.—Eph. 6:2.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian Home: Its Helps and Hindrances.

Outline. I. What Constitutes a Home? II. What Constitutes a Christian Home? III. Christ's Place in the Home. IV. The Home's Place in Society.

I. What Constitutes a Home? "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh." Gen. 2:24. This was God's arrangement. His wisdom planned it. It is the group unit of all society. Not only is husband and wife one flesh but those who are born unto them are included in their group. This husband and wife, one flesh, constitute in its beginning, home.

Home is for more than merely its own members. It is God's unit of society, of national life. Without it one sees no way to foster childhood, to inspire high ideals in youth, or manhood, to encourage the proper sense of responsibility throughout life or to care for those weakened with age. Home is the backbone of the human race. It is the nucleus around which all of God's plans and purposes revolve.

II. What Constitutes a Christian Home? The home relationship to Christ is carefully referred to by Paul in 1 Cor. 7:10-16. He there commands by God that the husband or the wife who is a real believer in Christ is in duty bound unto Christ first and more than unto the married companion. In case but one of the two belong to Christ by real belief Paul directs that the believing one should not leave the unbelieving one, but if the unbelieving one desires to withdraw from the believing one then the believing one shall permit of same rather than to withdraw faith from Christ and to turn from Him. If, however, the unbelieving one chooses to continue the home life with the believing companion who is living faithfully in Christ then he or she becomes sanctified, that is, set apart by his or her cooperation with said believing one. The unbeliever is not made Christian in this manner, but by conduct chooses Christ to the degree that he or she chooses the companionship of the one who serves Christ first and most.

A Christian home then in its fullness is one in which both husband and wife loyally and faithfully serve Christ more than all else. Secondly, a Christian home is one in which the husband or the wife faithfully serves Christ, and the unbelieving member assents to such service by the other one and cooperates in the making of the home. In such a home the childhood that grows up therein can be thought of in no other way than as being brought up in the nurture and the admonition of the Lord. Service to Christ becomes the first ideal of each member of such home.

Note carefully that Paul does not intimate that the believing husband or wife shall limit his or her service to God in order to please the unbelieving one and keep peace in the family. The reverse is asserted. The believing one continues kindly but faithfully in Christ. It is the unbelieving one that must yield to conform to the life of the believing one.

III. Christ's Place in the Home. Just as the individual life is purified and made Christian by the entrance of Christ into it, so the home after the same manner is purified and made Christian by Christ's sovereignty therein. His position in the home is to lead it in all of its undertakings, in all of its problems, in all of its difficulties. A home thus builded can but be a light in its community.

Probably Christian life is more perfected by home influences than by any other. The home, living true to Christ, can bring up the child in the way he should go as no other agency of man.

Christ in the home then, becomes that great Leader and Shepherd to guide, through the parent, child-life toward adult service for Him in honor to God. All this is not for today alone. Its real hold upon the world will be realized in its fullness in the day of Christ's kingdom when, under Him, the earth will be filled with the glory of the Lord.

IV. The Home's Place in Society. Deut. 6:3-9 reveals a part of God's message to the home. The home is to prepare its childhood for the position it shall fill in adult life. It is to teach childhood the Word of God; teach it honor for God; teach it service for God. So taught other things being equal, the youth that steps out into life's responsibilities will be a servant of God in his activities. A home that so builds is building not only for itself but is building for society of every phase, for the local community to the widest reaches of the nation.

This, in fact is the home's place in society: To maintain its present standard so as to encourage God's work and to rear childhood that will in the succeeding generations continue that work. That father and mother, who watch the life of the infant in their care, have it in their power through Christ to train that child to enjoy all the future ages of God's glory. What a wonderful position they, as one flesh occupy before God!

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

God in the Homes of the Nation. Social, community and national life are but reflections of the family life upon which they are built. And the family life is a composite picture of the individual lives of its members. No nation can lift itself above the average level of its homes. If God dwells in the homes of the nation His influence will be felt in its legislative halls, its commercial activities, and in its social life. The character of its entire people will be glorified and uplifted by His Presence.

Christian Home-Building. Home-building is the most important business in which we can engage, for in the Christian home we are laying foundations for eternity. We are building into the lives of those sheltered by its walls the enduring principles of Christian faith and hope and love. We are founding characters that are destined to survive beyond the span of the present generation, and into the endless ages that are to come. May God help us to build our homes that they may be worthy of the name "Christian!"—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Headship in the Christian Home.

The Christian home is that home in which God's headship through Christ's, through the husband's, holds sway. In the Christian home the husband is the immediate directing force over all things. He is not an autocratic, selfish master for he is the head of the wife even as Christ is the head of the church. Christ's headship is love, accomplishing the full development of each member in all things. On the husband's shoulders rests the weight of the responsibility for directing and controlling all relationships between husband and wife, between parents and children, between the home and the community, in accordance with Christ's will. He, under Christ, is the head over all things—including himself first of all. The home thus presided over by the husband is the most immediate and concrete expression of Christ's headship that a modern community can find.

Just as fast as man realizes and measures up to the headship God has decreed to him through Christ, just that fast does the race make progress. Adam failed to measure up to this headship and ascribed his failure to woman. All Adam's sons fail as he did, and to-day they definitely ascribe to woman the weight of responsibility for progress. But woman's shoulders cannot carry this responsibility, for God has not placed it there. Man's can and, under Christ, will, for God has placed it there. And as man enters his headship, double standards of morality vanish, likewise lauding and worship of womanhood and motherhood as the hope of the race (which is only a more beautiful way of saying, "The woman thou gavest me").

Manhood, through Christ, is the hope of womanhood, of motherhood, and of the race.

The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world, but that rule has its origin in Adam's flesh thinking, having as its goal the preservation and exaltation of flesh life, and nothing out of such a source can save the race, the home, or the individual.—A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Bro. and Sr. A. J. Eychaner have closed their home at Cedar Falls, Iowa, and will spend the winter at 303 Zack St., Tampa, Florida. Our best wishes go with them for their health and strength through the coming months.

Word has been received at the office of the sudden, severe sickness of Bro. Lewis Romine, of South Bend, Indiana. Bro. Romine was taken to the hospital November 13, for examination and treatment. We trust that at this writing his condition is improved.

In some localities our church people have much difficulty in getting to Sunday School and church because of the condition of the roads. Among these are the Plum River (Ill.) folks. Considering such difficulty the attendance last Sunday, November 17, was very good. Some of us who have easier going might attend at such a place sometime and then go home and feel ashamed occasionally when some of our little hindrances appear to keep us away from the place of worship.

Services will be held with the Dutton, Michigan, brethren on Sunday, November 24. Either Bro. C. E. Randall or Sr. M. A. Woodward will speak. Another service will be held there later, D. V., in the nature of a Thanksgiving meeting, announcement of which will be made later. All are invited to attend.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

A series of meetings will be conducted by Bro. F. E. Siple at Eldorado, Illinois, beginning November 19 and continuing over the following Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend.

Fred Shain.

PASADENA, CALIFORNIA

Pasadena, a city of about eighty-five thousand souls, has no Church of God, although there are churches of many denominations. Therefore the brethren living in Pasadena feel it their duty to establish a Church of God, where the gospel of the kingdom is preached and the things concerning the name of Jesus the Christ made known to all interested in a future life.

Brethren, pray for us that we may be granted knowledge, wisdom and courage to hold forth the revealed Word of God, so that His name may be glorified.

Visitors to our city are earnestly invited to meet with us at the home of Bro. J. M. Reid, 301 North Euclid Ave., at 10:30 every Sunday morning.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

"The Essential Elements of Christian Faith" is the general subject that has been announced for a series of sermon-studies to be given here beginning on the first Sunday in December.

"The Essential Elements of Christian Faith" are those facts concerning God and His relation to man which enables the latter to conform his life to the divine requirements of spiritual service. These basic principles of truth are necessary to salvation; for without a definite knowledge of them an intelligent, responsible, and active faith in God cannot be developed; and salvation depends upon such a faith.

An excellent report of the Rally Day services at Los Angeles, California, will appear next week with a picture of a portion of the group present.

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

Sr. Griener, of Lyndonville, N. Y., visited friends in the city last week end and also attended the church service on Sunday morning, November 10.

Bro. and Sr. Paul C. Johnson, of Oregon, Illinois, spent several days at the Falls and vicinity. The Falls seem to have an attraction for newlyweds. Bro. Johnson preached a very good sermon at the Niagara Falls church Sunday morning, which was enjoyed by all. He received many congratulations in more ways than one.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Thanksgiving Day, was observed throughout Canada on Monday, November 11. Monday nearest to Armistice Day is the day set apart for giving thanks in this country. In U. S. Thursday, November 28, is the day of special thanksgiving. God's Word says, "Pray without ceasing. In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."—1 Thess. 5:17-18. The giving of thanks should not end with the special days, but should continue at all times and for all things.

Bro. and Sr. Will Holland spent Sunday and Monday with Bro. and Sr. Arthur Gilbey at Rochester, N. Y.

Bro. John Railton, of Rockford, Illinois, surprised the folks at Fonthill by dropping in on them unannounced. He, with Bro. and Sr. Paul C. Johnson, Ernie Shute and family, Sr. Ball and the pastor and wife, enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner at the home of Bro. and Sr. Elliot. Everyone who has had that pleasure will understand just how we all felt after the meal was over. In the evening Bros. and Srs. Wm. Reed, Eugene Lent, Tom Davis, and Srs. Clark and Ruth Matthews were called in to visit with Bro. Railton. This is his old home and most of the above mentioned are relatives.

Bro. Paul Johnson preached an interesting sermon at the Fonthill church Sunday evening. His subject was, "The Past, Present, and Future." Sr. Johnson was renewing old acquaintances and visiting scenes of her childhood days around Fonthill.

Grover Gordon.

CHICAGO CHURCH

Sunday, November 24, Bro. F. L. Austin will speak for the Chicago brethren at their regular place of meeting in Waller Hall, 754 North Waller Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. Members and friends who are able to do so are urged to attend this service. Bro. Austin will have a message of spiritual uplift for all.

While Bro. Austin is serving the Chicago brethren Bro. John Denchfield of the Bible Training Class will speak for the Oregon congregation Sunday morning, November 24, at eleven o'clock. His subject will be "The Abundant Life." Bro. Austin will be back to speak in the evening. The attendance at Oregon has been very encouraging both at the Sunday services and the Thursday evening prayer and study hour. At the latter, a study of Revelation is in progress.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Bro. Skeels recently fell off a stool while at work and injured his arm. He was compelled to stay at home for a few days and nurse the injury. He is back at work again now.

Church services were called off last Sunday and practically the entire membership journeyed to Coats Grove to help in making the conference a spiritual blessing, and it was every bit that.

There were thirty in attendance at our adult class last Thursday evening. The other four classes enjoyed a goodly number also.

The newly-weds, Bro. and Sr. Paul C. Johnson, made a short stop over at Grand Rapids on their way to the Falls. A social evening was spent at the home of Bro. and Sr. Holly and the Grand Rapids folk had a good time whether the inexperienced married couple did or didn't. At any rate a cordial invitation is extended to all young married couples of our acquaintance to spend one night in Grand Rapids as our guests.

Several Berean and Sunday School classes have been entertained at social parties by their respective teachers the past couple of weeks.

Begin now to make a list of the things for which you can be thankful. Think of as many as you can and there will still be many which you cannot see.

Entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Illinois, under the act of March 1879.

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample Copy, Free.

Change of Address.—When ordering a change of address be sure to send us both old and new addresses.

To Stop Paper.—It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

Receipts.—The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Our recent appointment at the Ripley church was very pleasant in different ways. We found the meeting which Bro. Conner is conducting there to be progressing splendidly. Bro. Conner is in excellent form and our brethren there are giving him hearty support.

The church wedding at high noon on Sunday added much to the sacredness of the day. We wish that more of our girls who belong to the family of God would make use of this opportunity for showing the place that the church fills in their lives. The closest human bond is that of marriage, and how fitting that it should be solemnized in the church, the house which stands for the spiritual bond which unites one to his heavenly Father.

F. E. Siple.

acted as ushers. Master Raymond Marquitz was ring bearer and little Miss Dorothy Hollingsworth was flower girl. Louise Brewer played the wedding march. The bride came in on the arm of her uncle, John Garard, who gave her away. A reception was given at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Anna Kelly, following the ceremony.

Mrs. Shepley has been a member of the Brush Creek church for a number of years and is well and favorably known to all the people in that vicinity. Mr. Shepley is a quiet, unassuming young man, well liked by all who know him. The best wishes of the membership of the Brush Creek church go with this couple as they enter upon this new relationship in life.

SHEPLEY-KELLY

The Brush Creek (Ohio) church was filled to overflowing on Thursday, October 31st, at eight o'clock in the evening to witness the marriage of Miss Marjorie Kelly to Mr. William Lewis Shepley. The double ring service was used. The church was very prettily decorated with palms, ferns, and flowers.

The bride was attended by three maids, Martha Hentz, Ethel Bennett, and Marie Pearson, and a maid of honor, Corrine Carroll. The groom was attended by Vaughn Hollingsworth. Jas. Kessler and Clarence Doll

HETRICK-FEY

At the close of our forenoon sermon at the Ripley church on Sunday, November 10, a pretty wedding was solemnized in the presence of a house filled with friends and relatives. Miss Mildred Fey, one of our splendid church girls there, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Wm. Fey, became the bride of Alfred Hetrick.

These young people were both raised in the community in which they were married, and where they will make their home. They enjoy the friendship and respect of the many who know them, and we pray the Father's

A THANK OFFERING TO GOD

WE HAVE asked that the Church of God will this year render to God A Thank Offering of $3000.00.

TO GOD?

Yes. Whatever the Thank Offering shall be it will be used to further our united Christian labors. These labors are all labors of service to God.

The frequent letters commending The Herald, the Sunday School Quarterly, the Golden Rule Home, and all phases of our work convince us that each of these labors is witnessing for God.

Yes, they are God's work.

We have this day received one of the happiest Thank Offerings yet. Robert Hardesty, of Oregon, stepped into our office with a sack of one hundred nickels. With happy eyes and beaming face, he tendered them for himself and his brother Harold to the Thank Offering as the Newsboys' Tithe. What a witness of service to God! Let no one think that this gift, presented for the Father's work, will not return to these boys many fold.

Think, brethren, of the real meaning of Thank Offering. Think—and make an offering. Let us unite in presenting the largest possible offering this year—$3000.00, or more.

THE BLESSINGS OF THANKSGIVING

BLESS THE LORD, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

Bless the LORD, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits:

Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;

Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies; . . .

The LORD is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. . . .

He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.

As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.—Psalms 103.

THANKFULNESS unto God builds one toward Him. It increases one's love for Him. It warms and enriches one's service. It makes one to be like Him.

He who most praises God fits himself most for the reception of God's bounties. With David, he understands God best; beholds His kindnesses; discerns His watch care; recognizes
His righteous ways, His daily provid-ings, His guiding hand and His sustaining favor.

Perhaps, also, similarly as is the faithful parent, God, Himself, is beneficially gladdened by the thankfulness of His weak, helpless children. Who is there of Christ's earthly followers who would not anxiously please the heart of his Creator by an outpouring of thanksgiving for all of His wonderful works to the children of men?

Manifold are the reasons for thanksgiving! Glad should be every true-hearted Christian that the nation has again set aside a whole day in which to unite in our praises of thanksgiving unto the Giver of every good and perfect gift!

WE THANK THEE, LORD

FOR LIFE'S myriad golden opportunities of service and growth toward the fulness of manhood and womanhood in Jesus Christ—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For health and strength and food and raiment and the unnumbered joys of life that flow therefrom—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For home and fireside, for dear ones, loved and loving; for all the mutual aids, the helping hands, the affections that, intertwining, weave life's better and happier pictures—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For happy childhood, with its gleeful laughter, free from care; for the paddies soft and tender, pressing their untried fingers upon the tired faces of parents, careening them, comb-like, through the straggling locks; for gleeful children to be trained and schooled to the highest and brightest ideals, and made ready to fill the ranks made vacant by fallen heroes—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For grandsires with ennobled brows, softened and tempered by the experiences of long years of patient toil and bleeding hearts; for counsel's voice, for words which, bridge-like, encourage the weary hands and fainting hearts of those in the battle-front of life, carrying them over from banks of disappointment to those of new hope and new effort; for those who are approaching ever nearer the great and silent river but ere they reach its banks turn back to whisper prayerful blessings upon those following—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For brave, true men and women who in the prime of life are faithfully devoting themselves, following the star of hope in the hand of Thy Son, our Lord and Master; for steadfast hearts of faith rocking the cradle with one hand and with the other supporting the feeble and the aged, distributing to both their helpfulness and their strong but gentle caresses—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For the gospel of Thy dear Son permeating the world of mankind with the glad news of a soon coming kingdom which in righteous rule and peaceful sway shall bathe the earth with mercies of the Omnipotent, awakening hills and vales to the songs of triumph of Him who died for man, and of them who embrace His righteous cause and dedicate all to His ultimate victory—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For Jesus, Thine own well beloved Son, whom Thou didst send to molify the myriads of hearts corrupted by the sin of Thy first son Adam; for Him in whom life and immortality may be made to bloom in us; for Thy well beloved Son whom Thou hast exalted above every name that is named in this world and that which is to come; for the infinite blessing which permits us to share His victories, His joys, His glories—

We thank Thee, Lord.

For Thine own great voice, heavenly Father; for Thy tender words filled with compassion, urging forward Thy marvelous plans and purposes, unseen and invisible to mortal eye; for Thy promises of hope; for the privilege of becoming Thine own sons and daughters and of anticipating the great day when Thou shalt dwell with man; for Thou, Thyself, who hast made us and whose we are—

We thank Thee, Lord.

IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS

THE APOSTLE PAUL not only exhorts in 1 Thessalonians 5:18 that the Christian should "in everything give thanks", but he continues by saying that "this is the will of God in Christ Jesus".

A thankful family is a happy family. Were the whole family of God thankful unto Him at all times for the blessings of the day the character of the world itself would be changed. But, again, if even the family of Christians rendered thanks for all things, this world would be happier, more peaceful; and the godliness radiating therefrom would rapidly warm and temper toward godliness in the sin-sick world.

Thankfulness is a privilege insufficiently valued. Think of the opportunity afforded the weak, finite child to approach the Creator of himself and all of his surroundings, and in his simple, human way express his thanks in everything! This is a daily privilege—a privilege that is also a duty. There is no thank offering to God but what enriches the offerer. Was it not for this, as well as for the rendering of proper honor to Jehovah himself, that Paul instructed, "In every thing give thanks"?

SOME PROPHETIC STUDIES

By R. H. Judd

THE DESIGNATION, "man of God", implies intimacy— one who is in close touch with God with a view to service for Him. This thought is amply sustained when consideration is given to the class of men to whom the phrase was most frequently applied, for instance,—Moses, Elijah, Elisha, Daniel, and David. These were men of action and of service. For this reason they are also called "messengers of God", 2 Chron. 36:16, and frequently does Jehovah honor their claim by Himself calling them "my servants the prophets".

It would seem remarkable that the only two instances of the use of this phrase, "man of God", in the New Testament occur in each of Paul's two epistles to Timothy, and that in both of them the thought of active, consecrated service seems to be the keynote of Paul's message. See 1 Tim. 6:11; 2 Tim. 3:7. Against this latter passage is a reference to Deut. 33:1, where Moses is called the "man of God".

The phrase, "man of the Spirit", Hosea 9:7, margin, explains the agency by which the prophecy came, viz., by the Spirit of God. Peter says, "For no prophecy ever came by will of man, but men spoke from God, being moved (borne away) by the Holy Spirit." 2 Peter 1:21, R. V.

In Numbers 11:17 the Lord says, "I will take of the spirit that is upon thee and put it upon them." Accordingly, in verse 25 it is said, "And the Lord . . . took of the spirit that was upon him and gave it to the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, when the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied."

Thus the following points seem to be well attested:—

(A) It is the resting of the Spirit of God upon a man (good or evil such as Samuel or Balaam) that constitutes him a prophet. It was not the spirit of Moses, but the Spirit that was upon Moses—the Spirit of God.

(B) We thus learn that it is the Lord who gives the Spirit. Moses was not able to confer it, though he might, through intercession, be a contributing cause.

(C) In Numbers 11:26 we find that it was given altogether independently of Moses, and that Moses himself calls it "the Spirit of the Lord".

(D) From 2 Sam. 23:2 and other passages we learn that the prophet himself realized that the word spoken through him was not his, but God's. See also 1 Kings 22:24; 2 Chron. 24:20; Isa. 61:1; Joel 2:29.

(E) Christ also being a prophet, realized that His message was not His own, but the Father's that sent Him. Compare John 7:16-18 with Isaiah 61:1. Compare these passages also with Hebrews 1:1 and note: (1) How God spoke through the prophets causing His Spirit to rest upon them, as we have already seen. (2) "In these last days" He has spoken by His Son, "last of all he sent unto them his son. . . ." whom He also anointed with the Holy Spirit. Acts 10:38.

A few words with reference to the character of the prophets will show that not only was prophecy, in its full sense of speaking for God and through Him foretelling the future, a unique fact in relation to the Hebrew people, differentiating them for all time from all other peoples, but that those chosen for the purpose were themselves outstanding personalities, far in advance of their contemporaries among the Hebrew people or the peoples surrounding them.

It was their unpleasant duty to boldly condemn evil whether in people, priest or even kings, and this without fee or reward, sometimes having to meet the wrath of a king who could at will persecute, or even take the life of the prophet. They were temperate, self-denying, patient, valiant for truth, leaning upon God as their stay. They were not, as so many seem to think, ascetics, nor unlearned fanatics. Mostly married and living among the people, they discharged their duties as citizens. They have left a literature unparalleled in the history of the world, which if judged according to human standards only, is unsurpassed in genius, sublimity and grandeur, and in purity and morality unequalled by any nation in any age.

This unique line of prophets, if reckoned only from Samuel— though in reality centuries earlier, Gen. 41:38,— began nearly four hundred years before the birth of Rome, and, closing almost contemporaneously with Grecian history, when compared with the state of the world around them presents a phenomenon almost as wonderful as the power of prediction which they claimed. The best days of Greece and Rome can furnish no heroes or moral teachers to compare with this long succession of holy men so disinterested and patriotic, who were bold reprovers of vice and preachers of practical virtue. Their writings are so imbued with imperishable and universal truth that for nearly twenty-four centuries after the death of the last they have continued, and still continue, to touch the hearts, the faith, the thoughts and the lives of the greatest of the human race. Neither their doctrine, their writings, or their lives can be accounted for as merely human genius. None of the great writers of Rome or Greece have approached in purity and grandeur these giants of the Hebrew prophets. Euripides never prophesied, neither did Plato. Indeed, "of all the great writers of antiquity Plato is the most striking witness to the corruption of fallen human nature and the propensity of the greatest intellect, when

SOME THANKSGIVING THOUGHTS

FROM THE TRAINING CLASS

THE TERM, THANKSGIVING, has, to the average person, come to mean a day on which one may gorge himself with good things to eat, or "turkey day." Few people stop to think of the true purpose of the day. Thanksgiving was originated by the pilgrim fathers when our country was young. At that time it consisted of a few days set aside in the fall of the year, during which they gave thanks to God for their crops and prosperity during the year. Later, the last Thursday in November was set aside by the government to be a day of thanksgiving to God throughout the nation.

Let us all make this a day of true thanksgiving to the Father.—Dorothy Krogh.

THANKSGIVING, that day which was first observed by our pilgrim fathers as a special day of worship and thanksgiving, is here. May our hearts be filled with praise to God. "Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms." May we "enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name"; "giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Truly we give all thanks unto God for all things are given unto us by Him. Foremost, we give thanks for Jesus, our Lord, who gave His life on the cross that we might have everlasting life. Our food, clothing, health, shelter, homes, friends, life, and all blessings are given by God; truly, all things. Now therefore, our God, we thank Thee, and praise Thy glorious name.—John L. Denchfield.

ANOTHER THANKSGIVING time is here and perhaps very few of us have taken any serious thought of the day other than thinking of it as a day of feasting and visiting; a day set aside by our government as a national holiday; a day set aside that the entire nation might come to a complete stop in all its varied activities of life. Little do we stop to think or consider what this day meant to those who in the first place proclaimed it as such.

Let us turn back the pages of history several hundred years, that we may get a fuller realization of what this day meant to those who instituted it. When our forefathers first came to this land, they were very few in number, without home, without friends, without protection from the Indians, and with no means of livelihood except the provisions brought over on the Mayflower. Those first days were days of toil, untold hardships and suffering. Many of their number were taken by death during that first winter and the ones that remained were indeed discouraged and downhearted. Spring came and God sent His beautiful sunshine to warm the hearts of the people with renewed hope, and to revive life once more in old mother earth. Seeds were planted and as the crops grew, they were hopefully and tenderly cared for. God gave a bountiful harvest and it was for this reason that our pilgrim fathers held a feast and proclaimed a day of thanksgiving and praise unto Him who had so bountifully blessed them.

Let us, then, pause in our mad rush through life, and on this day that was originally set aside to God, offer unto Him praise and thanksgiving for the countless blessings we have received and for the fact that we have been permitted to enjoy life, liberty and happiness through another year.—Clarence Lapp.

I WONDER if we all realize the full meaning of Thanksgiving. Thanksgiving should be the giving of thanks to whom it is due, the Lord, for we know that "every good and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights."—James 1:17.

Let us truly be thankful on this Thanksgiving Day for the many temporal blessings of life that God has given us. We know that it is through His great love that we are blessed. Let us also be thankful for spiritual blessings, thankful for our faith in Christ and for the joys that are brought to us by this faith.—Harvey Krogh.

IT IS GOOD for us to appear before the face of the Lord with gladness to serve Him, joyfully singing praises to His holy name and pouring out our hearts in thanksgiving to Him, because He has made us and we are His. His mercy, everlasting and unstinted, has been shown to us by the gift of His only Son through whom we may become possessed of immeasurable life, if our actions are well pleasing to our Father in heaven.

Let us strive with all humbleness and diligence to be worthy of so great a mercy, ever looking toward Jesus for strength to sustain us in our fight.—Cecil A. Smead.

"OH, THAT MEN would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and declare his works with rejoicing."—Psalm 107:21, 22. How much we have for which to be thankful! This is the season when the spirit of thanksgiving is foremost in the minds of men. But far too many of us confine our thanksgiving to this season.

It is interesting to note that the thank offerings, unlike the other sacrifices of the children of Israel, were not ordained to be offered in a fixed and regular course: "And when ye will offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the Lord, offer it at your own free will."—Lev. 23:29. The general principle of the thank offering seems to have been that it should be entirely spontaneous, offered as the occasion should arise, from the feeling of the sacrificer himself.

While the Christian does not make his thank offering in just that way, there are many ways by which he may give thanks unto the Lord. A few of them are enumerated in Col. 3:12-17. "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, . . . . . And above all things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the words of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing . . . , with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him."—Richard LeCrone.

ABOVE THE material blessings of life, and they are many, I am grateful to our Father in heaven, for you, brothers and sisters over the land, who have made it possible for these young minds to be trained in ways of service to Him; for you who have thankfully returned to the Giver a portion of your blessings, thus making possible the Training Class. And for the opportunity to cooperate with these six young people who love and are all striving to serve the same Master, I am truly grateful.—Mary A Gesin.

A PRAYER FOR TO-DAY

Let me be thankful. Yes,
Let me know thankfulness
For things that help and bless
Along the way:
Let me be brave and glad
For all the good I had
But yesterday.

Let me set down the sum
Of blessings that have come:
Let me hear echoes from
My laughter,
Till I care not to see
What life may bring to me
Hereafter.

O, let to-day be such—
Nor little, nor too much—
That I need not to touch,
Or borrow
The good that now is Thine,
But which is to be mine
Tomorrow.

Aye, each day let me find
Contentment in my mind;
Some word or action kind,
My life to bless.
And thus let me, I pray,
Make every day a day
Of thankfulness.—Adapted.

THE SEVENTH BOOK OF THE BIBLE

By Lyman Booth

FROM THE ORIGINAL Hebrew word the title of this book is derived. The principal subject is the history of those judges whom God raised up among His chosen people, before giving them a king. After the death of Joshua, they were raised up to be "the deliverers" of the people from their enemies around. They were not a regular succession of governors, but were merely occasional deliverers, chosen from different tribes and families, whose duties were to rescue the nation from their oppressors, or to administer justice. While they were the regal vicegerents of Jehovah, who was the real King of Israel, yet they assumed no extraordinary degree of authority or regal display of power.

The judges were sometimes styled by the Romans consules or dictators, raised up on special occasions, and were vested with powers for the emergency, like the Roman dictators. They delivered the nation from some pressing danger, and with the termination of the crises which called them forth to duty, their power also terminated. It is probable that in the event when there were no judges, the affairs of the people were conducted by the Levites, elders, or ordinary magistrates together with the high priest, aided by other priests who conducted the affairs of the several tribes. In accordance with the law of Moses, they administered justice, but in case there was a judge he presided over them.

The authorship of the book has been variously attributed to Joshua, according to the tradition of the Jews and early Christian writers, to Phinehas, Eleazar, one of the elders who survived Joshua, Samuel and Jeremiah. It is generally supposed that the prophet Samuel, the last of the judges wrote the book; and indeed it appears to have been written during the reign of Saul, as the words "in those days there was no king in Israel", used repeatedly would indicate. Judges 17:6; 19:1; 21:25 imply that there was a king when the history was first published, yet it seems that the Jebusites still kept possession of Jerusalem, from which David afterward expelled them.

The book is very clear in its details. It has been remarked by some writers that the song of Deborah and Barak affords abundant proof of having been composed shortly after the date of the event thus commemorated. In 18:30 reference is made to "the captivity of the land", which seems to fix the date after the captivity of Israel by the Assyrians. But other matters indicate it was written by a citizen who was well acquainted with the country and its people, and that the original copy must have been written in an early period. In the first sixteen chapters a compended narrative is given of the affairs of Israel, from the death of Joshua to that of Samson, during a term of nearly three hundred years.

The book may be divided into three divisions. Part one, from chapters 1 to 3:4, is termed an introductory, giving an account of the conquest of certain portions of the land by different tribes. Part two, from chapters 3 to 16, describes the failure of the Israelites in driving out the heathen nations, also their lapse into idolatry, the punishment inflicted upon them and their deliverance by thirteen judges, who assumed dictatorship at God's command. Part three, from chapter 17 to the end of the book, contains two very noted incidents, first that of Micah and the Danites (17:18); second, the deed of shame performed at Gibah, and the war that followed which nearly exterminated the tribe of Benjamin (19 to 21). The latter part forms a kind of appendix which records events prior to those given in the main portion of the book.

It is uncertain whether the rule of the judges, as they are recorded, ran consecutively or contemporary. Samson and Samuel seem to have been contemporary, and probably Abimelech, Tola and Jair were. In Jephtha's time the office of judge became life-long; and became hereditary in Samuel's time. This was followed by a monarchy. The priesthood is not mentioned from the days of Phinehas to the days of Eli, and for some reason not known the office passed from the family of Eleazar to Ithamar. Some of the events mentioned are alluded to in Psalms 78 and 83. Also the iniquity of Gibeah (19 to 20) is referred to in Hosea 9:9 and 10:9. There are several other references to this book, both in the Old and the New Testaments: 1 Sam. 12:11; 2 Sam. 11:21; Neh. 9:28; Isa. 9:4; 10:26; Acts 13:20; Heb. 11:32. It is certain that this book formed a part of that sacred volume to which Christ and His apostles frequently appealed, as the oracles of God.

From these records the condition of Israel does not appear to have been so prosperous as might have been hoped. It is probable, however, that the worship at the sanctuary was regularly maintained during this time, and that there was a pious remnant during all this period who did not fall into the repeated apostacies and idolatries of the nation in general.

The books of Joshua and Judges bear about the same relation to the books of the Law as the Acts of the Apostles does to the Gospels. The former notes the decline of the Jewish order, the latter the prosperous condition and progress of the Christian church. This history should teach us the lesson in a very striking and solemn manner that apostacy from God sooner or later will bring a punishment. The whole account illustrates the character of human nature in the Scriptures and shows, in a most affecting manner, the consequences of failure to attend to the worship and service of God. Also it reveals the blessings which come to that nation or people that returns to God, who in His mercy is ever ready to raise up a Deliverer when they cry to Him for help in their troubles. Great as were those ancient deliverers and great and illustrious as were their deeds, God in His love and mercy has raised up a greater Deliverer who, in His appointed time, will deliver, not only Israel, but every one who calls upon Him, from the thralldom to sin in which the whole world has been struggling ever since mother Eve plucked the fruit from the forbidden tree.

OUR NEIGHBORS

THE SECOND COMMAND

Sunday, December 1—Matt. 22:34-46.

“And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.”—Matt. 22:39.

THE LATE BRO. BABB, of Renssalaer, Indiana, on commenting on this second command frequently said, “Yes, but in order to love your neighbor much you must also love yourself.” The point was this, one should love himself the most that is righteously possible and then should love his neighbor equally well. Otherwise, if one cares little for self he might care little for his neighbor. That would be opposite to our Savior’s teachings.

No man can love his neighbor as himself without bettering both himself and his neighbor. No man can afford to do himself the injustice of failure to love his neighbor, even all for whom Christ died.

THE CHRISTIAN’S NEIGHBOR

Monday, December 2—Luke 10:25-37.

“And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.”—Luke 10:27.

IN OUR SAVIOR’S parable it was a Jew who was left lying by the side of the road having been wounded by robbers. Each of two supposed friends had avoided giving neighborly attention to the wounded man. A Samaritan, passing by, stopped to give hearty and thorough aid. Ordinarily the wounded Jew would have regarded the Samaritan as an enemy. In this instance the Savior confirmed the statement that the Samaritan was the neighbor of the Jew.

He who shows kind consideration of his fellow is his neighbor, and he who loves his fellow as himself is neighbor to his fellow. Thus the Christian is directed to love one and all with whom he comes in contact in life’s way.

GOD’S RECOMPENSE FOR NEIGHBORLINESS

Tuesday, December 3—Matt. 25:31-46.

“Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.”—Matt. 5:40.

CHRIST DIED FOR ALL. In so doing, He regarded all of Adam’s race as His brethren. Therefore, he who would serve Jesus as his Lord and Master must of necessity look upon all his fellows as those for whom Jesus died, and he must regard himself as neighbor and brother to all.

THE MIRROR-FACE

Wednesday, December 4—James 1:19-27.

“For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass.”—James 1:23.

HOW DIFFICULT it is to remember the face that is seen only in the mirror! How difficult it is to maintain the Christian standard when that standard is only recognized in thought and ideality, never recognized by activities of life! James would teach that all who would be true to his neighbor must be true to him in action, in service. He must not advocate the principle of Christian service and omit the proper accompanying works, but work as he thinks.

THE MAJESTY OF JUSTNESS

Thursday, December 5—Lev. 19:9-18.

“Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honour the person of the mighty: but in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbour.”—Lev. 19:15.

JEHOVAH’S TEACHING to the Israelites reveals His standard of conduct between man and man. The Christian standard can certainly be no lower than was the standard that God set for Israel. The harvest gleanings were left for the needy. Under no circumstances could one justly steal from, deal falsely with, or lie to another. Defrauding in any manner and robbing were denied. Dealing unrighteously, bearing tales about others, bearing grudges against others, all these were denied the individual by God. Our Savior included all of these admonitions of God to Israel when He, Jesus, commanded that one should love his neighbor as himself.

ASSISTING NEIGHBORS TO ONE’S OWN POSITION

Friday, December 6—Acts 8:26-39.

“And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip, and the eunuch; and he baptized him.”—Acts 8:38.

THE DEACON PHILIP was a Christian Jew. By the Spirit of God he was directed to join himself to the chariot of the dark-skinned Ethiopian. This Christian Jew was now to carry out the Savior’s teachings and also be a neighbor to all. He must do for this dark-skinned Ethiopian what he would have done for himself.

Philip did not hesitate. He took him, in obedience to Christ’s teachings, down into the water and baptized him. In so doing Philip assisted the Ethiopian into a like position in Christ. He would raise to a position in Christianity equal to and like unto that of his own. Philip was a true neighbor, a Christian neighbor.

MAKING NEIGHBORS OF ONE’S ENEMIES

Saturday, December 7—Acts 2:37-47.

“Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.”—Acts 2:38.

PETER’S OWN Jewish kin-folk were his enemies in that they were enemies of Jesus whom Peter extolled. But at this point in his life, Peter was so thoroughly merged into the spirit of his Master that he hesitated not to receive his past enemies to be his friends in Christ Jesus, and to be partakers of every blessing in Christ which was offered through the atoning death of God's Son.

It is just such new life as is revealed in Peter that has made Christianity stand out as a sparkling gem on the dark breast of this old world. It is just such Christian neighborliness that will eventually transform this sin-cloaked world into a world that shall radiate from heart and face the glory of a righteous God.

THE LIGHT WE MISS

By G. Eldred Marsh

"For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them."—Matt. 13:15.

THESE WORDS OF ISAIAH, quoted by the Master, emphasize a condition with which we are all familiar; for we have experienced it in our own lives. How blind we often seem to be! How deaf to the wonderful words of blessing! How unperceptive of the marvelous forces of good around us! God has given us vision, but how few see the soft tints of the sunset with appreciative eye! He has given us auditory nerves, but how few hear with attentive ear the melody of singing birds and laughing children! He has given us the highest and most godlike of all the powers of perception, the spiritual sense, yet how few realize definitely the presence of God in our own lives!

The loss we suffer through our blindness and through our failure to exercise the powers of perception He has given us, is not alone in the spiritual satisfaction and pleasure we miss, but we undergo a serious loss of a most real and practical nature. Not observing the blessings around us, of course we cannot appropriate them to our use. We cannot make use of what we do not know exists. A man lost in the countless windings of the great limestone caverns of Virginia, might walk for hours vainly seeking egress from that maze of twisting corridors until his flaring torch burned out and left him in the blackness of impenetrable gloom. Creeping painfully along, feeling his way with outstretched hand, in constant fear of suddenly falling to his death in some unseen chasm, he might follow the rough, dripping walls for miles until he dropped from exhaustion. He might have died with his hand almost resting on an electric switch, a simple turn of which would have flooded those gloomy chambers with light, had he but known of its existence!

So it is with the Christian who does not realize the value and the power of prayer. He is groping needlessly in the darkness with unseen dangers on every side, all because he is blind and does not know that the simple switch of prayer will turn the revealing light of the Lord Jesus Christ upon the pathway of his life!

THANKSGIVING

We offer gratitude and praise this day
For what Thou hast withheld as well as given;
In Thy wisdom Thou hast oft made difficult the way
O'er which our feet have striven;
And when some cherished plan of ours has come to naught,
Some boon we craved to feed our earthly pride,
We've found that what instead Thy wisdom brought
Was better than the gift Thy love denied.

We thank Thee for the sorrows we have had to bear;
For disappointments that have often come our way;
For when the clouds obscured, we always found Thee near,
With healing in Thy love and sympathy.
So when we count the blessings from Thy bounteous hand,
We would not only name those that with joy we see,
But offer praise for all that Thou hast planned,
To hold Thy erring children close to Thee.

—Maude Dillard Fryer, in Sunday School Times.

THINK AND THANK

FOOTNOTE TO PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION

THINK and THANK, the great dictionary tells us, grow from the same stem. To think is to thank. The thoughtful are always thankful; ingratitude is an element of thoughtlessness.

I have lived to see a thankful generation give place to a thankless one, and both impress me with their honesty of attitude. The former generation did not pretend to be thankful, nor does the present one, yet the former without pretense was thankful, and this without pretense is not.

Their likeness is in their lack of pretense. Their difference can be resolved, not by denouncing it, but by explanation, and fairly to do this we must understand.

This generation is cut off, in its conscious experience, from the sources of its life. Pavements interpose between its feet and the soil; the shelves of grocery stores between its food and the fields; the colossal shelter of cities between its face and the elements, and the fallacies of civilization between its soul and God. Seedtime and harvest pass unheeded; it bows down to laboratories and machines, to banks and warehouses; it worships all conveyances of supply as if they were the source, for these are all the source it knows. When, therefore, in a recent year, I saw the President's Proclamation laid aside by one with the remark that he knew what he had to thank for what he had, his own right arm, his industry, his foresight, I took it as an honest act. His thanking went as far as his thinking.

For thankfulness is but the grateful perception of the order of life, appreciation and approval of the preparation Providence, really—which so amply meets the human need and yet affords such scope for man's enlargement that never has he even glimpsed the nearer limits.

The Presidential Proclamation recommends giving thanks to Almighty God for the blessings of the year; this is a footnote to that document, directed to those who cannot reach as far as thankfulness, yet able perhaps to attain to thoughtfulness about it all. All that we have is a gift. My friend who thanked his good right arm, his industry and his foresight, will presently see that they are gifts. Our ability to serve multitudes through our industrial civilization is a gift. There is nothing that we have that was not given us. Experience is a gift, and the power that turns it into wisdom and character is also a gift. All this raises thought of a giver.

I think the Giver is so generous that thanks make no difference to Him, "for He is kind unto the unthankful and the evil", but it may make a difference to us. A gift is giving and receiving, not giving alone. You cannot give your son his opportunity unless he will take it. God himself cannot give me more than I will receive of Him. And receiving has its degrees. Who receives greedily receives much less than one who receives appreciatively. The dinner of herbs eaten with thankfulness is more—even nutritionally—than a banquet with ingratitude. In the end I believe the thankless have really nothing to be thankful for, for as nothing can be owned by whom it is not appreciated, so nothing is really possessed except in thankfulness. Thanks is the final act of appreciation, the seal of ownership.

Beneath our Thanksgiving custom there is, therefore, something very sound. It is not mere form that leads men to thank God. The more thoughtful one grows the more clear it becomes that seen providences, numerous as they are, must be greatly outnumbered by the unperceived providences surrounding our lives. But even when men start with daily bread, the lines run back and back.

Back of the loaf is the snowy flour,
And back of the flour the mill,
And back of the mill
The wheat
And the shower
And the sun
And the Father's will.

FIRST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

By George Washington, 1789

NOW, THEREFORE, I do recommend and assign Thursday, the 26th day of November, next, to be devoted by the people of these States to the services of that Great and Glorious Being, who is the Beneficent Author of all the good that was, that is or that will be. That we may then all unite in the rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks for His kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation—for the single and manifold mercies, and for the favorable interpretation of His providence, in the course and conclusion of the late war.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

SPIKENARD

THE SPIKENARD is a plant with shaggy stems, branching from their base and resembles the tail of an ermine. The perfume and oil are obtained from this part of the plant. The Romans used it in this state in anointing the head. It was exceedingly valuable, that used to anoint Jesus' feet being worth twelve pounds sterling. The tests of genuineness given by Pliny are lightness, red color, sweet smell, taste which leaves a dry sensation, but pleasant flavor in the mouth.

SHITTAH TREE — SHITTIM WOOD

THE SHITTAH TREE or shittim wood is the desert acacia of which the ark of the covenant, the boards, tables, etc., of the tabernacle were made. The comus of these trees resembles that of an apple. It is about 15 to 25 feet high, a little broader than its height. It has stiff, thorny branches, bipinnate leaves with leaflets  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch long to  $\frac{1}{2}$  line broad, and with a more or less spirally twisted necklace-shaped pod,  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch long.

Its wood is heavier than water, exceedingly hard, of fine grain; the sap-wood yellow, the heartwood brown. It is not attacked by insects, therefore eminently fitted for furniture in this land.

These trees must have been very numerous in ancient times, perhaps filling most of the desert valleys and growing in the clefts of rocks on the now barren mountain sides. Even now, after they have been so extensively cut by charcoal burners, there are numbers of them. Besides the wood, so valuable on account of its durability and excellent charcoal which can be made from it, the tree yields the famous "gum arabic" in considerable quantities. Its astringent bark is used in tanning leather.

BE STRONG

Be strong!

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle—face it; 'tis God's gift.

Be strong!

Say not, "The days are evil. Who's to blame?"
And fold the hands and acquiesce—Oh, shame!
Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong!

It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long;
Faint not—fight 'on! Tomorrow comes the song.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION

By T. A. Drinkard

IT PAYS MANY times to offer words of encouragement to those who are making every effort possible to do the things worth while, with the aim in view of helping others along in Christian service.

I want to express my appreciation for the effort of Bro. Booth in giving us through The Restitution Herald his well written articles on the several books of the Bible. It is a very commendable work. It will do much toward assisting those whose knowledge is limited in regard to the several divisions of this most wonderful Book. May this brother continue this work, and give us his views of these books in the order given in the Bible. It would be a good thing for each one interested in this line of work to preserve these articles for reference and future study. We need more of such writings, something that can be easily understood by those just taking up the gospel work, and that which will fill them with a zealous desire to do more for the Master.

Bro. Judd strikes a note of warning when he says. "One may state one's own opinion quite freely in an article, but to advocate it as Bible doctrine without definite Scripture statement, or to imply that it is Scripture teaching is surely a responsible and serious matter." (R. H. Oct. 22, 1929) Let us each one realize the serious obligation that rests upon those writing through these columns, for the sake, at least, of young Christians who may read the articles. If we are not sure we are right, how much good will we do toward assisting them in the study of the divine Word? We are not authorized to teach anything that can't be plainly proven by the Word of God, and when we step beyond this rule we enter the field of speculation. One man's opinion in this field is just as good as the other one's, and the sooner we learn this principle and act accordingly the quicker better results will come.

I am especially glad to see young people coming forward and giving their time and talent in gospel service. They need our moral support, and Christian encouragement. May they continue to press onward in this service of the Master, and in the day when Jesus comes to reward His faithful ones be given a home in His kingdom.

Jesus said, "Occupy till I come."—Luke 19:13. Robert Young says that occupy means to do business, and he is right, as the Master entrusted to the care of His church a business, that of saving souls from death. A greater business cannot be found. You and I are going to be held responsible for the way we conduct our part of that business at the day of judgment. That judgment is coming as surely as God has announced it. Are you occupying for the Master during His absence?

How comforting are these words, "Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man."—Luke 21:36. Just how do they escape? By being caught away to meet the descending Lord? I hardly think so, inasmuch as a wonderful escape has been effected before the meeting takes place in the air. Their change from mortality to immortality has taken place at the time of resurrection, and by virtue of this change they have escaped. Wonderful thought! No longer are they subject to trouble, for they have passed beyond the veil of death and mortality. Are you praying for this escape?

WHO CAN ANSWER THESE?

The following may go to the head of the arithmetic class: Esta L. Starbuck; Hazel Titus; Ruth Tomlinson; Mary Jane Lansbery; Etta G. Elton; Lydia Railsback; Mary J. Burnett; Etta Densmore; Anna Guthrie; Eva Fletcher; Verna Himmelright; Gladys Barber; Hettie Fetters. Why, they are all girls! It is usually supposed that boys are better at arithmetic. Only one boy tried and he made one little mistake which threw the whole problem off, of course. Sometimes one little mistake does that, doesn't it? Just like life!

One contributor writes: "I had to read nearly the whole book of Esther before finding the number of Hamaan's sons, as I missed it on first and second glance over the book." Another says, "I hope the Queries Editor will not become discouraged, for no doubt there are many who, like myself, study the questions, but do not always respond. The Queries promote study along unusual but interesting lines." The Queries Editor was just wondering if the interest was lagging a little.

Just at the last minute, some one came to the rescue for the boys with a correct answer to the problem. That's fine; it doesn't leave the boys completely in the dust. Try again, Bro. Cooper and family and Richard Rahn!

SOME PROPHETIC STUDIES

left to itself, to extenuate the foulest and most odious vice. In nothing does the superiority of Hebrew ethics shine out more brightly." Oh, ye quoters of Plato, note this!

Next we might note briefly the unity of their message, though time, place and circumstance of prophet varied greatly. Concerning God, they teach that He is One, the LORD, the Creator of heaven and earth; holy, wise, a righteous Judge and a merciful Savior, forgiving iniquity and sin. See Isa. 40:28; 44:26; Jer. 10:10; 23:23, 24; Isa. 14:24, 27; Jer. 32:19; 17:10; Hab. 1:13; Mal. 2:10; Isa. 64:8; Jer. 11:20; Joel 2:13; Micah 7:18; Dan. 2:28; Micah 6:8. If the reader will study these passages he will be awed with the sublimity and unsurpassed grandeur of their message; nor can he fail to realize how a true conception of God is fundamental to every relationship of man, to his Maker and to his fellowman.

"IN EVERY THING GIVE THANKS."—1 Thess. 5:18.

WHAT A WORLD of meaning lies hidden in those five little words—"In every thing give thanks"! Paul expressed the same broad, deep injunction to the Philipians in these words, "Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice", and to the Romans thus, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

No wonder Paul could exhort, from the depths of his heart, "In every thing give thanks"! Had he not suffered unspeakable afflictions of every kind: storm, shipwreck, beatings with stripes and rods, stonings, imprisonment, weariness, pain, hunger, thirst, cold, nakedness, persecution by false brethren, and the burden of the daily care of all the churches? Yet he summed them all up and with gratitude added, "But out of them all the Lord delivered me."

WE OFTEN BOW our heads to thank God for the sunshine that brightens our lives, but what of the clouds? Are we glad for the shower that brings the rainbow, for the trial of faith that works patience, for the fire that refines the gold, for the chastening that assures us of our Father's love?

O BEREANS, in everything give thanks, "for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you"!

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

IT'S A POOR JOKE—

- When some woman blushes with embarrassment.
- When some heart carries away an ache.
- When something sacred is made to appear common.
- When a man's weakness provides the cause for laughter.
- When profanity is required to make it funny.
- When a little child is brought to tears.
- When everyone can't join in the laughter.

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

THE SALEM BEREAN CLASS held their fourth Berean social Saturday night, November 16, at the home of Sr. Edna Wood.

The meeting was opened by singing a song followed by prayer. Another song was sung, after which the 95th Psalm was read by Ralph Goekler. Each member then quoted his favorite scripture verse. We were favored at this time with a duet by Ruth Goekler and Edith Hendrix. After this a few questions were asked and discussed and then all joined in singing another song.

Due to the bad roads and inclement weather, only about half the usual number were present. We feel that these socials keep up the spirit and interest of our class which otherwise would not be so good.

Harry Goekler.

AS WE STAND on the river's edge and watch for a moment the waves roll by and then as we gaze at the watery foam which would mean death to anyone who happened to fall in, we see several, who wish to be baptized for the remission of sins, that they might receive eternal life, walk carefully into the watery grave that they might be planted into Christ's death and be raised to walk in newness of life.

Could anything be more like death as you see them lowered into the watery grave and see the tranquil and calm faces of those who are watching nearby?

"Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?"—Rom. 6:3.

"For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. 6:5.—Icel Stedman, Nebraska.

JUST A REMINDER

OCTOBER is long past, but there are several who have not yet sent in their self-denial money for last month. Will you please take care of this matter and send your contribution at once to Mrs. Esta Starbuck, 420 S. Third St., Rockford, Illinois? If your sacrifices totaled only twenty-five cents, remember that the willingness of heart determines the value of a gift with God. May our self-denial efforts be acceptable to Him!

PILGRIM PRISSY

“I WANT TO HEAR the story of the Pilgrims who came to land on Plymouth Rock.”

Prissy pulled on sister Majory's dress. Then she pulled on mother's dress. Then she pulled at grandmother, and she even tried pulling Bobby. Pulling didn't help. Nobody had time for stories or for Prissy, either.

“I want to hear the story of the Pilgrims who came to land on Plymouth Rock,” she cried again.

Nobody heard. Prissy scowled. What good was it to be Thanksgiving time with no story about the Pilgrims? What good was it to be named Priscilla? She would ask kitty. Kitty might know. So Prissy sat down on the floor and took kitty in her lap.

“Kitty, what good is Thanksgiving without the story of the Pilgrims?” But kitty only stuck out his pink tongue at Prissy. Maybe he was sticking out his tongue because he didn't know the story. Well, she'd better tell him.

“Kitty, once upon a time there were some good, good people. They wanted to have church their own way. But a king wouldn't let them. So they sailed away in a big ship and came to Plymouth Rock. They climbed out on the rock and built houses there. It was cold, and they didn't have much to eat, but they went to church and praised God. After awhile they started Thanksgiving Day to show how thankful they were for the church and their food and their folks.”

Kitty purred. He liked the story. Why, that was a good way! To tell the story to kitty was like hearing it yourself.

“Now we have Thanksgiving Day. I am thankful for mother—”

But Prissy had whined and scowled at mother. Now she ran to give her a kiss and climbed on a chair and helped stem cranberries. That was a way to be thankful. After a while Prissy came back to kitty.

“I am thankful for Marjory.” But she had been cross at Marjory, too. She remembered that Marjory was busy. She flew in and picked up her toys and put them away. That was a way to help Marjory.

It took all afternoon. First she told kitty what she was thankful for. Then she acted thankful. Soon it was night, and mother called the girls to her chair.

“I am going to tell you the story of the Pilgrims,” she said. “And about one little girl whose name is Priscilla, who has been acting like a Pilgrim all day.”

“Teasing and pulling didn't help to get the story, but helping did,” whispered Prissy as she curled up on mother's lap.—Little Learners.

HELPING NEIGHBORS IN NEED

SOME PEOPLE believe in feeding “down and out” men who ask for food. Others do not. They ask, “Why should we give to these people? How do we know they are deserving?” An answer to these questions is found in Matthew 25:31-46. These verses tell what will first happen when Jesus comes into His own. He will divide the nations into two classes, as a shepherd divides the sheep from the goats, and commend the so-called “sheep” for their mercy, saying that they took care of Him when He was in trouble and in need. In wonderment the people will ask Him when they had done these things and He will reply—“Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me.” This passage should entirely justify the belief of people who are always willing to “lend a hand”.

We all must take this into consideration, therefore, when a person in need appears before our door. This prophecy also applies to helping our neighbors. Little kindnesses, such as sending food to sick homes and other trifles, as well as the larger things, aid in helping us to be one of the sheep when the time for the great separation comes.

GOLDEN TEXT

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.—Lev. 19:18.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Modern Good Samaritan—Who Is He?

Basic Truth: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Outline: I. Christ and His Brethren. II. Aiding Christ. III. The Result. IV. The Consequence of Failure.

I. Christ and His Brethren. "The brethren" of this lesson are evidently Christ's kinsmen according to the flesh, Israel. Cf. Rom. 9:1-4. They are those of the chosen race surviving the great tribulation of Matt. 24:21 who compose the Israelitish nation under the dominion of His throne. The sheep and the goats are most likely the neighboring people who through that tribulation will take sides for or against Israel during the "time of Jacob's trouble." Jer. 30:7. Therefore "brethren" does not always refer to the same class. It may refer to brethren in the home, brethren of the nation, brethren in the Lord, etc.

He who is Christian is the brother of Christ according to the Spirit. He is our elder Brother. Christians are one with Christ. They belong to Him as members of the human body belong to the body. He who gives a cup of cold water to a disciple of Christ because he is the disciple of Christ, shall in no wise lose his reward. Matt. 10:22. Having aided Christ's disciple, he has aided Christ. This does not make him a Christian but it does make him loyal in a certain sense to his Lord.

But the fleshly sons of Abraham, faithful Israelites, are the brethren of Christ as pertaining to natural things. Their interests as the chosen nation of God are likewise Christ's interests. The least one of them when in the kingdom of God will be greater than John the Baptist. See Matt. 11:11.

Christ's brethren, each in his own class and position, are inseparable from Christ.

II. Aiding Christ. Like the Father, Christ is in no need of our gold or cattle or popularity with man; no, nor in any physical need or strength of arm, nor of our vigilance by day or night. All these are His from the Father. But Christ has a world-wide mission to perform. His it is to restore all that by Adam's sin was lost. He who serves Christ's brother builds self toward Christ. Indeed, he who serves Christ in Christ's labors does, in so doing, build self. Thus, the individual by his own labor and effort aids Christ most in that he is, in so doing, perfecting self.

III. The Result. The result is that the individual becomes "like minded" with Christ. Read Phil. 2:1-5. Such an one, whether like minded with Him as pertaining to His church and spiritual work, or like minded with Him as pertaining to Israel and her restitution, will be given position each ac-ording to his own like-mindedness, with Christ in His glory, or at His right hand as to His national work.

IV. The Consequence of Failure. The Scriptures are clear on this point. Failure to come to be in agreement with Christ continues the individual in opposition to Christ. Christ will entertain no opposers in His glorified church. None such will be granted immortality or fashioned like unto His glorious body. Nor will Christ entertain any opposers in His perfected kingdom. Restored Israel will have no traitor of God in its number. Nor will there be any opponent in those of the Gentiles who are garnered into the kingdom of God perfected. A cutting off is all that is left for them. This punishment will be eternal. Not the process but the result, will be eternal.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Applied Christianity. The Church of God provides an opportunity for service to every follower of Jesus Christ. It is not necessary that all should be eloquent preachers of the Word. God has other work to do beside preaching. It is not necessary for all to be missionaries or evangelists in order that they may serve God today. A cup of cold water given to a thirsty child in the name of a disciple shall bring its reward! Matt. 10:42. The simplest act of service, if performed because of our love for God, fulfills in a measure our duty to Him. The neighbor next door, sick and alone, is a call to service! The young man starting out in life for himself, needing a helping hand, a little fatherly advice, or just encouragement, opens up an avenue for Christian service! The young woman who comes a stranger to a strange city would deeply appreciate a hearty word of welcome and friendliness, perhaps an invitation to take tea in a Christian home, to make Christian friends, to establish Christian social connections. In all the commonplace happenings of life are found opportunities to serve God by serving His children.—G. E. M.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Jesus and the Lawyer.

A certain lawyer wished to test Jesus as to His knowledge and the keenness of His mind; so he asked, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?" Jesus quickly turned the question back to its questioner thus putting the questioner's reputation as a learned one at stake. The lawyer answered his own question and Jesus accepted the answer and the lawyer felt small, for he had been made to realize that this unlearned Man had, not only ready knowledge, but the keenness of mind to discern that, petty pride and self-assurance, not honest desire for truth, had prompted the question. Wishing to justify himself as a true seeker after knowledge, he said "Who is my neighbour?" In other words: The law separates Israel from other nations, it segregates the sinner, the leper and the unclean in Israel from other Israelites. Does loving my neighbor as myself require that these class lines be set aside as you are setting them aside?

Jesus met this question with a parable which disregards the lawyer's question: "Who is my neighbor?" and answers the question: "Who is a neighbor?" After making sure that the lawyer got the point of the parable, He said shortly "Go thou and do likewise."

No doubt that, after some pondering, the keen mind of the lawyer got not only the point of the parable, but its subtle sharp rebuke—the essential thing in God's basic law is not, "Who is my neighbour?" but, "Who is a neighbour?" and "Am I one?" Cease your learned questions and be a neighbor. Being a neighbor cannot violate the lines drawn by the law. Give and receive the love that is a neighbor's—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: How to be a Good Neighbor.

While we are learning the lessons of being obedient sons or daughters to Christian parents, we look about us and see on every hand young people who are not learning these lessons, nor putting into practice these principles, and some even who have not the blessing of Christian parents. And here is where we find a wonderful opportunity.

The most important thing for us to remember is that actions speak louder than words. Our neighbors are constantly watching the things we do, and all the more closely do they watch us if we are Christians. If they see actions that are not in accord with Christian ideals, our Christianity is justly questioned, and we often cause a weaker one to fall. If, however, they recognize that we are endeavoring to put into daily use the lessons Jesus left us, they cannot help but honor the One we serve. And then is opened up the way of being a good neighbor.

The first avenue of access into a neighbor's heart is often through a little act of kindness which may only take a moment's thoughtfulness. We may pass many of these by, thinking them insignificant, in our eagerness to do the greater things. But if we perform these apparently trifling deeds of kindness, the greater opportunity will come, the opportunity to teach our neighbor to love and serve the same Savior that we do.

Let us ever be on the alert to be a good neighbor, first by example, then by precept, for we serve God best by serving our fellow men, realizing that to love God "with all the heart . . . and to love his neighbour as himself is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices."—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. Orpha Sanford, of Chicago, was a caller at Golden Rule Home Sunday, November 24.

Sr. Renner, of Golden Rule Home, has been ill the past week. We all pray for the soon recovery of "Aunt Mary" to her usual health.

The churches of Oregon, Illinois, will join in a union Thanksgiving service at the Methodist church, Wednesday evening, November 27. Bro. Austin will be the speaker.

Bro. Williams' congregation at Gladbrook, Iowa, united with two others local churches in a union Thanksgiving service on Sunday, November 24.

We are distressed to hear of the serious breakdown in health of Sr. Sonnicksen, of Lake View, Iowa. May the Father shed His comforting watch care over her.

Bro. L. E. Conner, of Macy, Indiana, will speak at Dixon, Sunday morning and evening, December 1. All those living nearby are invited to worship with them.

Bro. Paul C. Johnson will speak for the Rockford Bereans, Friday, November 29, at 7:30 o'clock, in their regular place of meeting at the W. C. T. U. Hall, 1904 North Main St., Rockford, Illinois.

We are glad to hear of the rapid improvement in health of Bro. Lewis Romine, of South Bend, Ind. He has been released from the hospital and is able to be up and around part of the time.

The Oregon congregation will hold a special Thank Offering Service, Sunday morning, December 1, at eleven o'clock. Bro. Austin will speak and all who find it possible to be present will find a welcome and an inspiration to carry with them for days to come.

A letter from Sr. Robinson, of Clyde, North Carolina, tells us that her daughter has been very sick and asks that we remember her in our prayers. Let us not forget those who have asked for prayer in their behalf and also many others who are needing our Father's aid who have not made it known to us.

Bro. Siple will be privileged to enjoy Thanksgiving Day with his mother and other relatives at Hammond, Louisiana. He will be engaged in a series of meetings at Happy Woods Schoolhouse, near Hammond. We pray the Father's blessing to rest upon the speaker and the hearers.

The services conducted by two of the members of the Bible Training Class were very well received by the Oregon congregation, Sunday morning, November 24. Bro. Harvey Krogh opened and closed the services, and Bro. John Denchfield gave a very commendable talk on "The Abundant Life". Progress in class work is quite evident to all.

A letter from Bro. M. W. Lyon states that they had about 55 out to morning service and 132 to Sunday School on November 17, in the face of a stormy day. He says further, "I feel we have an unusually large number of things to be thankful for this year, in a church way. The work is progressing in excellent fashion, with real prospects for future growth." We rejoice with Bro. Lyon in these evidences of the Father's blessing.

OUR APPRECIATION

The Golden Rule Home wishes to send their heartiest thanks to the Berean Class at Springfield, Ohio, for a box of Thanksgiving goodies which will bring smiles to those around the table on Thanksgiving Day. Their gratitude also goes to Sr. Upton who sent a nice check to be used for their Thanksgiving dinner.

A THANKSGIVING CARD

A letter just received causes me to suggest the sending of a bright, red card to Sr. Sarah A. Hook, Inglebrook Lodge, Bristol, Indiana. Sr. Hook is old now. Her active days are past. Her daughter, Sr. Victor Smith, with whom she lives and enjoys all comfort, writes of the pleasure she derives in looking over, many times, especially those that are red, the post cards at hand. Therefore this original thought. Let us send her a shower of them.

F. L. Austin.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

"The Source of Christian Authority" will be the subject of the sermon at the Los Angeles Church of God, 264 West 42nd Street, Sunday morning, December 1. This will be the first of a series of discourses on the "Essential Elements of Christian Faith". "Those things which are most surely believed among us" we affirm to be essential, necessary to salvation, and to constitute the one gospel which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth". Sunday School will precede and communion follow the morning service. A basket dinner will be served in Exposition Park. At 2:30 in the afternoon the pastor will deliver the second sermon of the series mentioned, his topic being, "The Diety". A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

G. Eldred Marsh, Pastor.

Take note of the advertisement on the Church Page of last week's issue. The books listed there make excellent gifts.

THE LOS ANGELES RALLY DAY

The Los Angeles church and Sunday School decided to hold a Rally Day service the first Sunday of November and accordingly Bro. Marsh sent out notices to the brethren in the nearby cities, with the result that the attendance was increased until the chapel was filled. Some of those attending from other places were: Bro. and Sr. Hobart, of Glendale; Bro. and Sr. H. J. Edmister and son Stanley; Sr. Jessie Reid, of Pasadena; Sr. Alma Steffa, Sr. Ethel Verity and daughter Betty, Bro. and Sr. Alex Scroggs and Bro. and Sr. Austin Scroggs, of Pomona; Sr. Jessie Knuffman, of Riverside; Bro. and Sr. Norman McLeod and family, of Holtville; Bro. J. E. Hammond and daughters, Anna, Martha, and Josephine, of Anaheim; Bro. and Sr. Elizabeth Frier and son Charles, and Bro. and Sr. Cline, of Long Beach; Bro. and Sr. Ward, of Willowbrook; Bro. and Sr. John Squires, of Lynwood.

While some of the above named brethren live in other cities they are regular attendants of our services. Sr. Viola Hockenbery, of Long Beach, made an earnest effort to be with us for this service, but not being familiar with the city, failed to locate the church. After the three morning services, Sunday School, preaching and communion, a picture of the group was taken in front of the chapel. For various reasons quite a number who were present were not in the picture. After the picnic dinner in Exposition Park, we returned to the chapel for the service at 2:30.

Both the morning and afternoon sermons were spiritual feasts as are all of Bro. Marsh's sermons and lessons. Letters were received from others living at a distance expressing a desire to attend this service, among whom were Sr. Leona Thompson, of Tulare, and Sr. Sallie Burt, of Bakersfield. We wish that all the devout brethren in this state who believe that the kingdom is near and the time is short in which we may proclaim the gospel message would rally to the support of this work in every way possible. It is good to be zealously affected in a good cause and there is no better cause. Let us not be lukewarm. How can any believer be lukewarm when he sees the signs fulfilling which indicate the glorious appearing of our Lord!

INDIANA QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

Dec. 6 to 8, at Rensselaer church. Notify Bro. Everett Warren if you are able to attend. All are invited. F. A. Stilson.

Dear Bro. Austin: I want to tell you how much I thank you for all the wonderful work you do and for our good paper which makes its weekly visits. There are so many good articles each week. It gives one such peace and joy to read them. They are just the things for these terrible times, as the world is so full of discord and, sad to say, the church also. My prayer is that Christ may soon come and change things, and put an end to evil.

Your sister, Mrs. Margaret Moore.

A resident of Marshall county, Iowa, for thirty-six years, died at his country home, following an illness of seven weeks. Mr. Johnson suffered a stroke of cerebral hemorrhage on September 10, while returning to his home. The stroke left him helpless and speechless during his last illness.

James Lee Johnson was born in Preston, Lancashire, England, December 9, 1853. He came to the United States with his parents in 1859. Mr. Johnson bought his Marshall county farm in 1893, where he made his home until his death. He continued farming and supervised his acreage the last twenty years of his life.

Mr. Johnson was married to Amy Alma Hilliard, at Mount Carroll, Illinois, September 9, 1879. The wife and five of eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson survive. The children are Laura Vivian, Alfred Lee, Fred Theodore, and Frank Horatio, all unmarried and living at home, and Mrs. Lillie Davis, Delhi. Seven grandchildren, two brothers, Frank Johnson, Jefferson, and Richard Johnson, Farlin, and a sister, Mrs. Ellen Collyer, Des Moines, also survive.

Funeral services were held from the Presbyterian Church at Albion.

Total received to date, $302.88

Again, with deep appreciation we thank one and all who have contributed to the above offering. We confidently expect that between this writing and November 28 the above total will be greatly increased as many take pleasure in making their contribution to coordinate with Thanksgiving Day.

OUR $3000 GOAL

So far our Thanksgiving Offering is far short of the goal that was suggested at the beginning of November. While this goal was a mere suggestion, yet it was a suggestion deeply felt. The summer months are always slow months, and yet expenses run on as before. Nearly every year our unavoidable expenses throughout the summer bring us to the fall season with an amount of over-due bills. The Thanksgiving Offering usually helps to take care of these. This was one of the items in minds at the time of suggesting a goal of three thousand dollars for this year's Thank Offering.

Another item is that any business, in order to progress healthfully needs to increase its facilities that it may do better work. There are a number of items sorely needed in our print shop and the sooner we can purchase some of these the better it will be for all concerned. This was another item in mind at the time the three thousand dollar goal was suggested.

Again, we have all along been carrying an indebtedness. This indebtedness creates an annual interest expense. The indebtedness is against the National Bible Institution. The sooner that this can be liquidated the better it will be for the cause. To the end that we may pay a neat sum of this indebtedness the three thousand dollar goal was suggested.

Again, we state that it is our purpose that this Thank Offering shall be used in the interest of the religious work of the National Bible Institution. It is not the intent that any part of it shall be used for the Greenhouse. That has been taking care of itself, and must so continue. It is felt that the brethren, in first establishing the Greenhouse, have done sufficient in that particular and that further contribution shall be used strictly for the more religious work. It is the intent that this be carried out.

Different ones have corresponded to the effect that if an effort were put on to raise a given amount that they would gladly contribute their portion toward the sum. This is to make plain if possible that such an amount is in fact needed in the interest of the work.

The news boys' offering of five dollars noted in last week's Herald shows what could be done if our young people throughout the land who are earning regular incomes could be shown that it is their duty also to give themselves to God's work.

Again we ask that one and all will contribute according to their several abilities, that those of small incomes will contribute of their pennies and nickels, and that those of great incomes, of their hundreds or thousands according as God's blessings may enable them.

Several thousand should contribute to this offering by the close of November.

F. J. Austin, Executive Secretary.

SOME MATERIAL THINGS FOR WHICH THE NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION IS THANKFUL

FOR ANNUITY BOND HOLDERS

WE ARE THANKFUL that during the past year different ones of the brotherhood have taken our Annuity Bonds in amounts totaling four thousand six hundred dollars. One thousand dollars of this amount is somewhat exceptional in that while it is the intent of those who have received the bonds that the bonds stand, yet, owing to peculiar circumstances, there is a possibility that part or all may, under emergency, need to be recalled.

While these bonds do not give the National Bible Institution immediate assistance more than to strengthen the Institution, yet those who have taken the bonds have provided that when they shall have come to the end of life their means to the extent of the bonds shall become the sole property of the National Bible Institution. Thus while providing themselves the needed interest during lifetime they have provided service unto God after death. The brethren everywhere are thankful to those who have not only set this noble example, but who thus declare their desire to serve God.

Any others desirous of information concerning the National Bible Institution Annuity Bonds should address the Institution at Oregon, Illinois.

FOR CONTRIBUTORS

WE ARE THANKFUL for the contributions that have continued throughout another year. Some are as regular in their monthly contributions as is the calendar itself. As a large part of the activities of the National Bible Institution is not remunerative in itself, it is possible to carry on its activities only by continued cooperation of the brotherhood at large. We are thankful to one and all for the part that each has taken in this matter.

Each regular contributor, whether of large or small amounts, is thus having a share in the steady and continued advancement and growth of the National Bible Institution.

FOR GREENHOUSE ADVANCEMENT

WE ARE THANKFUL for the great step forward that our Golden Rule Greenhouse has made in the last six weeks. Our grower, Mr. Moore, has put new life into the house. His enthusiasm in his work is felt everywhere. Thousands of new plants have been put in. Seeds, recently sown, are adding other thousands of plants for the benches. The greenhouse, unless some unforeseen and unexpected difficulty arises, offers plants and blossoms for large sales and good returns from now onward.

We are thankful to the brethren who responded to our request for loans with which to do this work. While these loans have not yet amounted to as much as we sought, yet those who have thus assisted have aided and made this possible.

FOR A NEW BOILER

ALSO, WE ARE THANKFUL to the American Radiator Company for replacing the boiler which was purchased in 1924. That boiler has broken down about four times since it was installed. After we called the head man of the Company to see the conditions, he immediately took steps either to replace the broken portions, f.o.b. Oregon, or to give us an entirely new boiler for the difference in price between the price for parts which he offered and the price of a new one. Under advice, the new one was taken at a price of two hundred dollars—a little more than the cost of the repairs that were now compulsory—added to the expense for installation. We are thankful that this work was completed and the new boiler was fired the day preceding the unseasonable cold weather now prevailing at Oregon. (The zero mark was reported this morning, Friday, November 22.)

For these material blessings, in addition to blessings spiritual, your secretary feels that the National Bible Institution is truly thankful to our Father in heaven.

LABORERS TOGETHER WITH GOD

By Grover Gordon

“For we are labourers together with God: ye are God’s building. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.”—First Corinthians 3:9-11.

PAUL UNDERSTOOD THE SAVIOR’S PLAN to build a church, but according to his language here he did not consider that Peter was the foundation. “Thou art Peter, upon this rock I will build my church”; but the foundation was to be built on Peter’s confession: “Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.” The building of the church is the work of the Master which He gave over to His own servants to complete in His absence. “For the kingdom of heaven is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods.” Matt. 25:14. He expects those servants to carry on that work, and as in any building it takes several different kinds of workmen, “He gave some, apostles; some, prophets; some evangelists; some pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ”; (Christ’s body, the church, Eph. 1:22-23) Eph. 4:11-12.

In the erection of any building, the workmen must work together in harmony for the best results, so also in this building, the church, “the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the EFFECTUAL WORKING in the measure of every part, maketh INCREASE of the body unto the EDIFYING (building up) of itself in LOVE”. The service of love for one another is just as necessary as any part of the work, and is a work which the Master commanded to be done. “A new commandment I give unto you, THAT YE LOVE ONE ANOTHER; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. BY THIS shall all men know that ye are my disciples, IF YE HAVE LOVE ONE TO ANOTHER.” John 13:34-35.

Sometimes it seems we forget this part of the service, without which our other labor is not profitable, for Paul after showing the different ways of service and the different gifts in 1 Cor. 12, says: “But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.” 1

Cor. 12:31, “Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity (love), I am as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, it PROFITETH me nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, IT PROFITETH ME NOTHING.” 1 Cor. 13:1-3.

Tongues, prophecies, mysteries, knowledge, faith are all necessary, but without love (charity) they are incomplete, and in carrying them to a point where they cause division and strife they become hindrances rather than helps. “Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, CHARITY, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart. But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes. And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will.” 2 Timothy 2:22-26.

Just as the architect and the mason finish their work and others build on that work, so have the apostles and prophets finished their work of laying a foundation for others to build upon, for Paul said: “According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.” 1 Cor. 3:10. It would seem then that it is left to the evangelists and the pastors and teachers with the whole body fitly joined together, building up itself in love.

Are we using the talent which Jesus gave, each according to his several ability? Surely every one has the ability

THANKSGIVING

WE HAVE BEEN PLEASED TO NOTE SO much real true Christian spirit in the Thanksgiving season just passed. There is much for which the Christian world should exalt the name of God at the Thanksgiving festival. It is from God that every good and perfect gift has come. It is in Him that we live and move and have our being. It is because of this that year after year the national government under which we live has seen fit to set aside a day in the recognition of Jehovah and His greatness. Would that the Christian world would more and more use the day both to thank the great Giver and to develop the spirit of true Thanksgiving in the hearts of the people!

THE FIRE OF GOD

“AND THERE CAME A FIRE out from before the Lord, and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat.” Lev. 9:24. The chapter from which this quotation is taken is a record of the first offering according to the law. After having defined and described the offerings in the first seven chapters, and after having consecrated Aaron and his sons in the eighth chapter to officiate; then, in chapter 9 Moses called Aaron to render the first offerings in accordance with the instructions. Accordingly everything was made in readiness, the prescribed animals had been brought forward, and the slain victims were placed upon the altar. No fire was there. Indeed none was to be kindled by man. Fire came forth by the power of God and consumed the sacrifices. It was God’s way of showing His approval of all that had been done.

How true is this principle in the Christian life also! Unless God shall approve the efforts that are put forth, unless He shall approve the devotions of the individuals, their work has been vain.

THEY SHOUTED FOR JOY

IT WAS NOT THE FACT that they had merely seen the fire arising spontaneously from the altar that caused the people to shout. It was the evident fact that their work had been approved of God. By the side of the lonely mountain, in the midst of the desert, the people had been performing a work that had never before been rendered by man. They had followed the instructions of God, had built and established in the matter of sacrifice, and now to see the fire burst forth was an evidence to them that God had accepted their effort. What reason was this for shouting! No wonder also that in this Christian day when the individual renders service to God and he recognizes the evidence of God’s acceptance, he rejoices. Others may not know the secret of the experience. They may not understand the hearty shouting of the one who has seen and known of God’s confirmation of his act. But he who lives close unto the Father, who guards his steps, his words, his devotions, and then recognizes God’s acceptance of his effort, that person has reason to shout for joy.

GOD COMMANDED NOT

WHETHER IT WAS OVERENTHUSIASM on the part of Nadab and Abihu we perhaps do not know. Immediately after the fire of God had come upon the altar of burnt offering Nadab and Abihu, Aaron’s sons, went forth again to offer, but this time they took strange fire. God had made no such command. They overstepped the directions of God.

Some ask every now and again if some other way is not just as good. For instance, Jesus told His disciples, “Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.” In making this statement the Savior used the word, “baptidzo”. Every Lexicon and every student of the Greek language defines this word to mean “immerse”. Yet many teach that it is just as well to practice something else instead of immersion and call it baptism. It would be well for us to remember the words of Moses—“which he commanded them not.” Lev. 10:1.

The same principle is true regarding all Christian service toward God.

“ALL THAT THE LORD HATH SPOKEN WE WILL DO.”

THE JEWISH MESSIAH

THERE IS NO NATION OR PEOPLE so vitally associated with the past and future plans of the kingdom of God as the Jew; he is the central figure in the divine program. From the Jewish race came the world's Redeemer, and to the Jewish race came the world's Redeemer. Readers will recall that it was over the Jew at Jerusalem that the Redeemer cried: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

Nineteen hundred years have passed since that cry echoed over the doomed city and the house still remains desolate. In a small journal recently off the press for the first time, and known as the Good News and Good Will to the Jews, and which is the first Hebrew-Christian missionary magazine in the Dominion of Canada, there are some very interesting things said about the Jew. One is an astonishing proposal by American Jews to resuscitate a Jewish Sanhedrin for the purpose of giving Jesus a new trial. The following is a brief summary of the plan as set forth in Good News and Good Will:

Recently a representative of a religious publicity company interviewed one of the members of the Hebrew Christian Alliance of America, and disclosed the astonishing news setting forth the stupendous program now set in motion by American Jews to resuscitate the ancient Jewish Sanhedrin for the primary purpose of giving Jesus a new trial. Only recently Rabbi H. P. Mendas, at a dinner of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, declared that: "The time has come to reconvene the Jewish Supreme Court, the Sanhedrin, to decide on religious questions brought up by modern conditions." But it develops that this matter of reorganizing the Great Sanhedrin has been quietly discussed by large numbers of Jewish laymen since the conquest of Jerusalem by General Allenby near the close of the Great War.

On April 28, 1929, Solomon Shwayder, a Jewish lawyer-manufacturer of Denver, Colorado, called together in his home twenty leading Jews of his city and laid before them plans for the organization of "a Jewish Society for the promotion of the Divine Mission of Israel." The Rocky Mountain News of April 29, 1929, contained the following brief account of this meeting:

"Proposals for formation of a society to seek an authoritative, organized answer to the world of the Jewish conception of Jesus, were presented to a score of prominent Jewish laymen last night. The group met at the home of Solomon Shwayder, who explained the ideals of the society."

The Sunday School Times, commenting on the movement, makes some very striking remarks. It says:

"The movement outlined by Mr. Shwayder contains possibilities rich in blessing or ominous and terrifying. If the new Sanhedrin should conclude that the Jewish nation committed a great crime, and should then lead Israel to true repentance and conversion, the world would at once face millennial realities. For the voluntary turning of a people to Jesus as their Messiah, after nineteen centuries of bitter hatred and opposition, would bring back their King with joy and triumph, and would present such a miracle of conversion that infidelity would lose all its power, and the nations of the earth, astonished and bankrupt in all their vain hopes, would come trooping to the feet of Jesus. But if the Jewish Supreme Court should reaffirm the guilt of Jesus, it could not save the Jews from the most violent persecution by every merely nominal Christian people."—Selected by Mrs. Lillian Railton from The Toronto Globe.

ENTERING THE BODY OF CHRIST

By G. Eldred Marsh

"LET ALL THINGS BE DONE DECENTLY and in order" is an admonition that should be scrupulously observed in all the activities of the Church of God, but particularly so in the manner of receiving members into the body of Christ. It is the Lord himself who adds to the church such as are being saved, and it is He also who has made the conditions by which one may qualify for such union. These divinely established conditions are absolutely unalterable and unavoidable, both as to the principles they involve and as to the order of their observance.

The profoundly sacred and eternal nature of the relations into which one enters when he becomes an accepted child of the Most High is manifest justification for the confirming of these important qualifications as prerequisites of union with the Father through Christ. These qualifications may be considered as spiritual and ceremonial.

The spiritual requirements are faith and repentance. The ceremonial requisites are confession of faith and baptism. Until these initiatory demands have been consciously complied with the candidate for admission into the body is not entitled to any of the special and blessed privileges which fellowship with Christ entails. He may not partake at the communion table of the Lord because those holy emblems represent a unity with Christ which does not as yet exist; and the cup is the antitype of the bloodmark upon the doorpost, which assured deliverance from death to the firstborn only, and he is not as yet accounted as of that number. The communion service when observed by one who has not believed the gospel of the kingdom of God, repented of his sins, and been baptized thereafter, not only loses its wonderful meaning, but verges on sacrilege, for the most holy of all services is profaned by the hands of one who has not been cleansed "by the washing of water by the word".

The unbaptized individual, regardless of his moral character and regardless of his knowledge of the gospel, is debarred from many other privileges and blessings enjoyed by the baptized believer, for he has not entered into true fellowship with Christ, and consequently is not a joint-heir with Him of the rich promises of the Father.

GOD'S PROMISE TO ABRAM

GENESIS 12:1-7

By Harvey Krogh

HAVE YOU EVER BEEN PROMISED something that you have never received? Do you still expect to receive the thing promised to you, or have you given up all hope because the promiser was a mortal man who was subject to making errors? The promises that God makes are far different than the kind that men make. God's promises are certain to be fulfilled because He cannot lie.

In Gen. 12:3 and 4 God promised Abram seven things, seven, the number that denotes spiritual perfection throughout the entire Bible. These seven promises are: (1) "And I will make of thee a great nation, (2) and I will bless thee, (3) and make thy name great; (4) and thou shalt be a blessing: (5) and I will bless them that bless thee, (6) and curse him that curseth thee: (7) and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

The first promise has been fulfilled nearly to its utmost. God changed Abram's name to Abraham and gave him two sons, Ishmael, the firstborn, and Isaac, the younger. Isaac was the son to whom the promises were renewed. Isaac was given two sons, Esau, the firstborn, and Jacob, the younger. Unto Jacob was Isaac's blessing given and the promises renewed. I suppose you wonder why the second son was chosen instead of the firstborn as man chooses. It is simply God's way which is different from man's way. Christ, the second Adam, is the One to whom God's blessing and kingdom and power to rule are to be given.

Jacob, the immediate father of the nation, went down into the land of Egypt where he became a great nation. The promise was renewed to Jacob in Genesis 25:11: "And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins." That nation grew into a company of nations and unto this day it is growing, for we can see two of this company, the Jews, a people that are everywhere.

"And I will bless thee", the second promise, has surely been fulfilled. The words of the servant of Abraham are recorded in Gen. 24:34, 35: "And he said, I am Abraham's servant. And the Lord hath blessed my master greatly; and he is become great: and he hath given him flocks, and herds, and silver, and gold, and menservants, and maidservants, and camels, and asses." If we could realize the value of these things that Abraham had which the Lord had given him, we could see that Abraham was surely blessed.

"And make thy name great." God made Abram's name great, for Abram was known by many people. All Israel, his children, look back to him as their righteous father. At Christ's time the Jews were proud of their father Abraham.

"And thou shalt be a blessing". Abraham is a blessing unto all of the Gentiles. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree: that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." Gal. 3:13, 14. Through Christ, who is the Son of Abraham, Matt. 1:1, are we blessed. Thus Abraham is a blessing unto us.

"And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee." These two promises are always being fulfilled. God was with Abraham and his people. Those who follow Christ are blessed both temporally and spiritually. Those who are against Him are cursed. Thus it behooves us to be on the side of the Lord.

"And in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." This is the greatest of all the promises given to Abraham. Gen. 22:18—"And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed". Paul in his letter to the Galatians, the third chapter and sixteenth verse, says: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." Paul's writings are inspired, so therefore we know that Christ is the Seed through which all families of the earth shall be blessed. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

SOME RESULTS OF FAITH

By Samuel E. Haney

"Jesus wept."—John 11:35.

WHY DID JESUS WEEP? Was it because Lazarus had died? His resurrection proved otherwise; and a logical synopsis of all the circumstances answers, no, and reveals the real cause, viz., lack of faith on the part of His disciples.

Lazarus' sickness presented an opportunity to teach the great truth of the non-necessity of the presence of Jesus for the answering of prayers and the healing of diseases which He could not afford to miss. So instead of going in person to heal Lazarus, He sent His promise: "This sickness is not unto death." Then it was for them to believe that promise, and to act their faith. For this purpose He tarried two days. Did they believe the promise? No. Instead, they wondered and fretted over His tardiness; and likely criticized Him for His apparent indifference. The result of their faithlessness was that Lazarus died.

On Jesus' arrival Martha greeted Him murmuringly, saying, "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." It was the Lord's fault, and not hers. From her angle she was all right. She had notified Jesus of her brother's sickness, and He merely sent a promise, which failed of fulfillment. She had not yet learned that it requires undoubting faith to energize the promises of God as they come to us through His appointed channels. To emphasize the point: Mary also greeted her Master with the same faultfinding criticism (v. 32): "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." How eloquently these sisters speak of their two days of faithlessness, worry, fretfulness, and anxiety! Ah, had they but learned the lesson which the centurion had learned, what a creditable story would have been recorded of them! "And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed." Matt. 8:5-10.

Isn't it significant that only twice is it recorded that Jesus "marvelled", e. g., "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel"; and when He said, "A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house. And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them. And he marvelled because of their unbelief. And (merely) went round about the villages, teaching." Mark 6:4-6.

Again, a non-recognition of His Messiahship and lack of faith caused Him to weep: "And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes". Luke 19:41, 42. And while it is not so recorded, should not the situation be conducive to weeping? and can we not visualize His tears when He said, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Matt. 23:37-39.

Ah, yes, concurrently speaking it was the Jews' unbelief—lack of faith—in Jesus Christ as their Messiah, engendered by arrogance and stiffneckedness (Acts 7:51) which caused their undoing and the loss of God's favor and the semblance of a national home.

Faith "comes by hearing", and always in an embryonic state; but like all God's gifts, it must be developed:—"And the apostles said unto him, Lord, increase our faith." He replied, "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed (after fully matured) ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up, etc.," Luke. 17:5, 6. Paul says in Rom. 1:17; 12:6; Eph. 4:13, "For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith . . . Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith . . . Till we all come into the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."—Progressive!

Jesus frequently reprimanded His disciples (Matt. 6:30), "Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field (gradually), which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" He even tells them they have no faith (Mark 4:35-41), ". . . And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?" By these statements we can understand why He said (Luke 18:1-8), ". . . I tell you that he (God) will avenge them (His own elect) speedily. Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" It is questionable, even amongst His followers. Paul intensifies the burden and importance of Jesus' words. "But without faith it is impossible to please him (God): for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. 11:6. We cannot do better than to take to heart Paul's admonition to Timothy, "This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare; holding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away, concerning faith have made shipwreck." 1 Timothy 1:18, 19. These are inspiring statements. Lord, help us to grasp their intended significance, that our Redeemer may not be made to weep at our lack of faith!

The causes of lack of faith are too numerous to mention in an article, yea, they would make a volume. Substitution and subterfuge seem to be popular and prevalent schemes on the part of many, in our day, to obtain God's love and favor, which may in part, account for the duplication of the primitive disciples' lack of faith. And is this not because people imagine they can fellowship with God, in the absence of His Son, in the same spirit and comradeship as they do with their fellow man? To be persona grata to God and His kingdom makes one persona non grata to the god of this world (Satan) and his kingdom, and vice versa. One delusion is the substitution of hope for faith, and desire for trust: hypnotic reasoning on the part of the "flesh", wherein "dwelleth no good thing", Rom. 7:18. Paul explains (2 Thess. 2:9-12), "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned (judged) who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Isaiah seems to spotlight the subject: ". . . And there shall be a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing them to err."

Our great Teacher says, "Have faith in God", which if obeyed will assure us continuous peace, as it is written, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee."

OUR BEST DAYS

"THE DAYS that seem hardest are often the ones bringing the richest returns. The days in which you have to struggle with your inclinations, and do one thing when you want to do something else, may count tremendously in character building."

"It takes courage to live—courage and strength and hope and humor. And courage and strength and hope and humor have to be bought and paid for with pain and work and prayers and tears."

HOME AND HEAVEN

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

PERHAPS THERE is no word in any language that sounds sweeter to the ear or means more to the human heart than the word "home". Especially does it seem so to those who have seen their need of a place of refuge from the present world conditions.

Back in the memory of all who have attained to maturer years there linger scenes and faces which were connected with home, that we cherish. Fond memories bring back days of contentment. In time we can forget all unpleasant things. While some of the pleasant experiences will always stay with us. Even though there may have been hardships, God has put into the heart of every true and faithful person a love of home. This is because it is a part of God's great plan for mankind that the home and family, as it was first established, should be the basis and foundation of society. The family should be the rock upon which the whole structure of society should rest. The home was the first institution that God established. It was here before churches or schools ever were thought of. Hence we see of what importance it is to God.

Closely associated with the word home come thoughts of an eternal home, for we have been taught that some time in the future there would be no more suffering, sorrow, death, and that all connected with the curse will be done away. Our training in this life should be such that we may be ready to enter our eternal home, when the time comes that this eternal home will be established upon earth. Memory which has played such an important part in the recollection of our earthly home, will also be active then. Our own lives and motives will be then made plain to us as well as to others and we will see and understand the infinite mercy of God in dealing with us, and that it was only through God's longsuffering that any of us were enabled to enter into that eternal home.

But alas! Sin which entered in the garden of Eden, has also played havoc with teaching in regard to heaven. Our Lord, when on earth, always spoke of the necessity of preparation for the kingdom, but never did He mention a heaven that we entered at death. The Bible tells us that the dead know nothing about the things of earth. Eccl. 9: 5, 6; Psa. 115:17. All the sons of Adam are now sleeping, until the time of the resurrection when God in His good time will raise the just and the unjust at their respective times. The resurrection of the just has been the hope of all ages.

As we study the Old Testament, we learn that our future home is always mentioned as being "on the earth". Several times in the thirty-seventh Psalm we see that the promises are to those who are to "inherit the earth". We are told in Psalm 78:69 that "God hath established the earth for ever". When the time comes, our home will be established upon the earth. Those who wait on the Lord will inherit the earth. Psa. 37:9. The earth will be the inheritance of God's people. Psa. 115:16.

It will be a most beautiful place when restored to its Edenic state. Words almost fail us when we try to describe it. In Isaiah thirty-five we may read some of the blessed conditions and restful states that will exist on the earth after it has been cleansed from all its unrighteousness. There will be no more desert then, nothing to fear, and peace shall reign supremely.

From cover to cover of the Bible we see that God's plan has been to restore the earth to its Edenic state, and that this will be accomplished and carried on by one Man, God's only Son, Jesus Christ, the Lamb that was slain on Calvary's tree. With Him will be associated those whom He has been calling to Himself during this, the Gospel Age. He will then restore justice and righteousness upon the earth during the Millennial Age, and will rule the nations with a rod of iron. Rev. 2:27. At the end of the Millennial Age we will know and appreciate the full meaning of that home from heaven and all its blessedness, for there will be no more sin then. The thought of being with and near the Lord would alone mean heaven to the Christian. And this, added to the joy of being again united with our loved ones who sleep with the just is indeed a hope in these dark days. Then we think of such passages as these, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." 1 Cor. 2:9.

We long for that time to come when all shall come to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ. We anticipate that the time for His coming is very near. It should be an incentive to us to send out the truth that God gives to us that we may feed the sheep of God and prepare the way for the coming of God's Immanuel, which is the only true harbinger of peace that will be enduring. God's way of peace is the only way to make sure of a place in that eternal home that Christ is now preparing, John 14:1-3, which will be established upon the earth at God's appointed time.

TEN REASONS

IT MAY BE INTERESTING to read the reasons some children gave for being thankful. Their teacher gave them just ten minutes to write ten reasons for gratitude. Nearly every one named at the head of the list: parents, home, health, education. These four do mean much to the child. Without them, he is at the mercy of the world. With them, he is fitted to face life, especially if these influences are Christian. Some named good habits, friends, hope, the privilege of living in the United States, peace, clear eye sight, good teachers. One was thankful that God had treated him well. Another was thankful for the support of two brothers, for protection from accident and for mother's recovery.

In many of these, all of us, as well as the children, can find reason for gratitude to our heavenly Father. Think it over!

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT IN INDUSTRY

Sunday, December 8—Mark 12:1-12

"The stone which the builders rejected has become the head of the corner: this was the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes."—Mark 12:10-11.

ALL INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS should be first and foremost for the true advancement of man. Man's short vision frequently causes him to miss the true mark in this respect.

In this world, where standards are so varied, the Christian must stand by his. His standard should be that of his Master. All activities should be promoted around this standard. Other builders may overthrow, but God will make true standards to be the cornerstones of true business just as He exalted His crucified Son to be the Headstone of the corner.

GOD REVEALETH BUSINESS TRUTH BETWEEN MEN

Monday, December 9—Deut. 24:10-18

"In any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own raiment, and bless thee: and shall be righteousness unto thee before the Lord thy God."—V. 13.

God spoke to Israel as a nation. He revealed to that people the basic principles of truth as to conduct between man and man. Such basic principles are eternal. That which God pointed out in early days is still true. To the Christian, whose ideal it is to live according to the spirit of God's Word, these principles should be kept with even greater religiousness.

AS THE SERVANTS OF CHRIST

Tuesday, December 10—Eph. 6:1-9

"As the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart"—V. 6.

It is pleasant to have the apostle Paul instruct both parents and children, both masters and servants, that their conduct toward one another, in Christ, should be "as to the Lord, and not to men". In writing of the obedience of children to their parents, of the over-care of parents for their children, Paul includes these with others and says, "knowing that whatsoever good things any man doeth, the same shall he receive from the Lord, whether he be bond or free."

GOD REPROVES INJUSTICE

Wednesday, December 11—Amos 5:6-15

"Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate"—V. 15.

Ever and anon, the Bible reveals that those who "seek the Lord" are the ones who, in reality, enjoy the fulness of that life provided by God. They are to seek Him not only in the learning of His Word, but also in the learning of His ways of conduct. It requires true and accurate ways for man, to keep him in proper relationship to others just as much as it necessitates true and proper ways for Orion, and all the other stars and bodies of heaven, in order that they shall swing through space with their tremendous speed and yet maintain their proper relations to each other.

CHRIST'S FOLLOWERS ARE HIS LABORERS

Thursday, December 12—Matt. 20:1-16

"Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own?"—V. 15.

In this parable, our Lord teaches that the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder. The householder has laborers. He sets their tasks for them. His is the right to reward his laborers abundantly if he wills.

Jesus also has laborers. He has tasks for them to perform. Not one but has his task; not one but shall receive from the Master sufficient and ample reward

TO BE GODLY IN BUSINESS ONE MUST BE GODLY AT HEART

Friday, December 13—Deut. 5:12-20

"And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commandeth thee to keep the sabbath day"—V. 15.

Over and over God taught Israel that it was He who provided for her in her daily wants. The sabbath was a day of absolute rest and yet God afforded Israel the necessities of the day.

Even in the soon-coming tomorrow, when antichrist, in all of his power, shall require the mark of the beast in the forehead or hand in order to entitle the individual to buy or sell, God's assuring word is given to His followers of that day when He writes to the assembly at Pergamos, saying, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna". Rev. 3:17. God always has another ration in the barrel for him who obediently listens.

TRUE RICHES ARE THOSE WHICH TRULY PROVIDE

Saturday, December 14—Eccl. 5:10-20

"There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt."—V. 13.

Those circumstances in life which deprive the individual or the family thereof of true growth and of truthful recognition of God, are an injury to the individual, to the family, and to mankind. Reversely, those circumstances in life which test the individual most truly, which draw him forward, which bring the greatest development of manhood, which strengthen life's faculties and powers most, are the truest riches.

ALL THE YEAR LONG

All the year long have my steps been attended
 Surely by One who regarded my ways,
 Tenderly watched over, sweetly befriended,
 Blessings have followed my nights and my days.
 Tears have been quenched in the sunshine of gladness,
 Anthems of sorrows been turned into song,
 Angels have guarded the gateways of sadness,
 Summer and winter—yea, all the year long!

All in the dark would I be, and uncertain
 Whither to go, but for One at my side,
 Who from the future removes the dim curtain,
 Seeing the glory—to mortals denied;
 No other Friend could so patiently lead me,
 No other Friend prove so faithful and strong;
 With angel's food He has promised to feed me
 Who has befriended me all the year long.

He will not weary—O, blessed assurance!
 Infinite love will the finite outlast;
 But for my heavenly Father's endurance,
 Into the depths of despair were I cast;
 He is my Star in a midnight of sorrow,
 He is my Refuge, my Strength, and my Song;
 Earth is today, but there's glory tomorrow,
 And Jesus to be with me all my life long.
 —Unknown.

IF THOU BELIEVEST

By F. L. Austin

HOW MUCH IS DEPENDENT upon the truth of these words! Over and over again from the dawning of creation to the close of Revelation, God has made dependent His mighty promises to man upon the assertion, "If thou believest".

God's strength and power are in no wise limited by this assertion, rather, He leaves the appropriation of that strength and power for the individual to the individual's faith, "If thou believest".

When the eunuch asked, "What doth hinder me to be baptized", Philip's answer was, "If thou believest". The mere formality of baptism could have proceeded but the effectiveness of baptism depended upon the eunuch's faith.

He who snatched Jonah from the depths of the sea; He who shielded the Hebrew children from the burning heat; He who closed the lions' mouths, saving Daniel, can save you and me at any time, anywhere so far as His own strength must be considered. But the great truth of Scripture, shining out like an evening star in the otherwise darkened heavens, says that whosoever believes in His name shall not perish but have everlasting life.

Salvation itself depends upon the same great truth, "If thou believest".

AN ABSORBING NARRATIVE

By Lyman Booth

THE BOOK OF RUTH forms a kind of appendix to that of Judges, though it does not immediately follow it in the Hebrew Canon. It serves as an introduction to subsequent history. It is quite probable that it was written by Samuel, after he had anointed David to be king. It also seems to connect the period of the judges with the monarchy, and furnishes an important connection in the ancestry of David. Ruth, a Moabitess, having been married to the son of Elimelech of the tribe of Judah, after the death of her husband and her father-in-law, accompanied her mother-in-law, Naomi, into the land of Israel. There she was married to Boaz, a near kinsman, and thus she was brought into the line of David, and consequently of Christ, the son of David. The genealogy at the close of the book shows the following: Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat David. This genealogy is included in those given by Matthew and Luke.

No certain date can be assigned as to just when the book was written, but it must have been after the time of David, and long before the exile. The events occurred in the days when the judges ruled, but we have no evidence to determine under which of them. It embraced a term of ten years, and by some it is assigned to the latter part of Eli's judgeship, and by others to the beginning of that of Samuel. It shows the love and tender mercies and watchful care of a divine providence to the smallest concern of His people, also the peculiar circumstance of a Moabitish woman, a Gentile, becoming an ancestor of Christ our Lord. May it not have been a pre-intimation of the calling of the Gentiles into the Christian membership?

A brief summary may be interesting. During a period of famine two Ephrathites of Bethlehem-Judah, Elimelech and his wife Naomi, with their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, went to seek a home in the land of Moab. (1:2). Here Elimelech died, and after about ten years his two sons died. They had married two of Moab's daughters, Orpah and Ruth, (1:3-5). Bereft of her family Naomi prepared to return to her home, and Ruth who could not be persuaded to remain with her kin, determined to accompany Naomi. (1:8-18). After arriving at Bethlehem, Ruth went to glean among the sheaves, in the field of Boaz, who was a wealthy kinsman of Elimelech (2:1), and he permitted Ruth to share in the provisions he had made for his servants. It was by the advice of her mother-in-law that Ruth claimed kinship with him, which he readily acknowledged. There was a nearer kinsman whom Boaz tried to prevail upon to discharge a kinsman's duties (4:1-8), but when he declined, Boaz performed them and married Ruth by whom he became the father of Obed, the grandfather of David, (4:1-17).

A number of important points are presented in the book. First, it shows the pious character of Boaz, and the friendly relation between him and his reapers. Second, it illustrates the Jewish land system and the manner in which property was transferred from one person to another, Third, it brings to our notice the love and truthfulness and unshaken fidelity of her who was privileged to become the ancestor of David. Through her marriage she became a type of those who are being called out by the gospel from among the Gentiles, by David's greater Son.

A FOURFOLD PROMISE

Genesis 13:14-18

By John Denchfield

GOD'S PROMISE TO ABRAHAM which is recorded in Genesis 13:18 is wonderful to contemplate. Although it deals primarily with Israel, it contains much which is very encouraging to all. There are four main points of the promise which it may be well for us to consider. First, land was promised; second, land was promised to Abraham; third, land was promised to Abraham and his seed; fourth, land was promised to Abraham and his seed forever.

The Lord God promised land to Abraham and his seed. As we hear the words of God spoken to Abraham, "Look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever", we begin to realize that this was not just a small area but really a vast territory. On turning to the words of the apostle Paul, we find that this promise really includes more land than we usually think: "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Rom. 4:13. Abraham should be the heir of the world. Was it not a great promise?

God, speaking to Abraham, said, "To thee will I give it." Abraham was to inherit the land before mentioned, but, ". . . he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child." Acts 7:5. God promised it to him, but he has not yet received it. Certainly God's promises are sure and Abraham shall yet inherit the land.

"To thee will I give it, and to thy seed." We understand that although the promise was made unto Abraham, it included his seed after him which shall be as the dust of the earth. We have no knowledge of Abraham's seed having received this promise. Paul, after having mentioned Abraham and some of his seed said, "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise." Heb. 11:39. Abraham's seed have not yet received the promise. Again, God's promises being sure, the seed shall yet inherit the world.

We have seen that Abraham and his seed were promised the land. Now let us notice just one word; it is forever. Surely we see clearly that Abraham and his seed have not inherited the land forever. Nevertheless the promise is that they shall inherit it forever. How long? Forever!

"These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." Heb. 11:13. Abraham and his seed died in faith, did not receive the promise, yet saw them afar off. They realized the fulfillment was in the future. They believed them, were persuaded that the promise was sure and true, and embraced them. The promises were their hope, which they embraced. They also declared themselves strangers on the earth, which shows plainly that their hope lay in a new country. Concerning Abraham we read, "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Heb. 11:10. Surely the fulfillment of the promises to Abraham and his seed will require a new earth, for did not God promise to Abraham "all the land which thou seest"? The promise will not be received by Abraham and his seed until after the resurrection when the new heavens and the new earth shall appear.

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Peter 3:13. We, according to the promise given to Abraham, are also looking for that day when the new earth shall appear. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away: and there was no more sea." Rev. 21:1. Then shall Abraham and his seed be given the land as a possession forever.

LABORERS TOGETHER WITH GOD

to love! Or are we hiding our talent in a napkin and burying it? Do we say it is asking too much, it is too hard, thereby saying, "Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed: and I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine"? Matt. 25:24-25.

"Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: EVEN AS CHRIST FORGAVE YOU, SO ALSO DO YE. AND ABOVE ALL THESE THINGS PUT ON CHARITY, WHICH IS THE BOND OF PERFECTNESS." Col. 3:12-14. "For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another." 1 John 3:11. "The end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer. And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins." 1 Peter 4:7-8.

We are laborers together with God, we are God's building. With this thought in mind, "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Philippians 2:3.

Answers to Queries 12 were received from two new contributors—ten year old Charlotte Rahn, of Los Angeles, and the South Bend, Ind., Berean society. You must all have been very busy counting up the things you have received during the past year for which you are thankful. It's quite a problem in addition and multiplication, isn't it? And haven't you all found that a sorrow shared is divided and subtracted, and a joy shared is added and multiplied?

Move over, folks, and make room for Charlotte and the South Bend Bereans!

"He drew a circle that shut me out—
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
But Love and I had the wit to win:
We drew a circle that took him in."

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

THE ROSE

THE FLOWER KNOWN TO US as the rose is not the one referred to in the Song of Solomon 2:1 and Isaiah 35:1. The Hebrew word translated rose probably refers to the poly anthus narcissus, a beautiful and fragrant flower that grows in the plains of Sharon. Two species of this genus grow in Palestine and Syria, flowering from November to March. There are also seven species of roses which exist in Palestine and Syria. These are mentioned only in the Apocrypha. They are cultivated everywhere in Palestine and Syria and passionately admired by the people. One of the industries for which Damascus is noted is the distilling of rose water and an essential oil, attar of roses; as well as the making of syrup of roses. Large plantations of rose bushes are to be seen there and in other parts of the country. True wild roses are seldom found except in the extreme north of Palestine.

REED

THE REED IS A PLANT of the grass family having a long slender stalk. From it were made musical instruments, paper and pens. It was also used as a measuring rod. The sacred writers often used the word to illustrate weakness and fragility. 2 Kings 18:21. Some reeds have hollow stems and are easily bruised. They grow in marshes. Stronger reeds were used as walking staffs.

THE COMING KINGDOM

FIRST IS THE FULFILLMENT of prophecy as in Genesis 13:14-16 and 26:4: "And the Lord said unto Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered." "And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

In 2 Samuel 7:15-16 and Psalm 89:36 we find what God promised David. "But my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever." "His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me."

This kingdom was overturned because of sin, as prophesied in Ezekiel 21:25-27. "And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."

Who was born to this right? We find this in Matt. 1:1 and Luke 1:33. "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham." "And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

He will establish His throne and kingdom, as found in Matt. 25:31 and 2 Tim. 4:1. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory". "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom."

Second is the fulfillment of man's hopes. Man's most cherished hopes are for life, and for health, and for peace.

Life. The dead shall be raised in connection with Christ's coming and kingdom, as in 1 Cor. 15:21, 22 and

Rev. 20:6. "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

A REQUEST

WILL ANY OF OUR MINISTERS, Berean workers, or others, send in names of lonely, bereaved, or isolated ones to whom the Social Correspondence Committee should write?

Please send full name and correct address to the Chairman of the Committee,

Mrs. Lillian Railton, Fonthill, Ontario, Canada.

WELL MAY it be spoken to us as to Israel of old, "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength." Then perchance when the wind, the earthquake, and the fire have passed we, too, may hear the "still small voice".

CHRISTMAS

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON is on again. Once more the Christian world begins to awaken to the great anniversary of the birth of our Lord. It is a season and a day that in its feasting and gladness should yet be solemnized by a deep and ever deeper realization of its meaning. There are influences at work throughout the world which tend to take away from this anniversary much of its true meaning. This is manifested in the effort to change the spelling of the word to Xmas. This eliminates the word Christ. It takes the child mind and life away from Him, the anniversary of whose birth we commemorate.

Would it not be well for Christian people everywhere to scrupulously maintain the proper spelling of the word; to just as scrupulously avoid the use of Christmas gifts and Christmas cards that use this word spelled with X instead of with Christ?—F. L. Austin.

THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT IN INDUSTRY

EVEN IN THE DAYS OF MOSES many people who employed others to help them were selfish and unkind and treated their helpers unjustly. Moses told them not to make life hard for those who helped them. He told them to pay at once what they owed. Those who are noble always treat their helpers with courtesy.

Paul wrote a letter to the Christians telling them how to treat one another. He told the children to honor and obey their parents. He told the parents to love their children and to train them to love and obey God.

Those who work for others should do their best whether they work for money or just through kindness. Careless work is always shown by poor results; weeds grow faster than grain.

Those who are rich or have more than others, have a duty toward those who have less. Paul warned those who had more than others that they must not be proud nor high-minded. He urged them to do good and to grow in good works. We may be sure that whatever good we do when serving others, whether free or for pay, God will reward us.

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them". Matt. 7:12.—Little Learners.

REMEMBER—God wants both worker and employer to live the Golden Rule.

"He that rules by terror
Doth a grievous wrong."

WHERE FIND?—"The rich and poor meet together; the Lord is maker of them all."

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Deuteronomy 24:10-18 and Deuteronomy 5:12:20.
2. Review the lesson on "Work".
3. Learn the Golden Rule.

THE LITTLE ENGINE THAT COULD

Once there was a Train-of-Cars, and she was flying merrily across the country with a load of Christmas toys for the children who lived way over on the other side of the mountain. Her wheels went round ever so fast, squealing along the track, and leaving the rails humming and singing behind them. She was such a happy little Train-of-Cars. She was so pleased with the load she was carrying, and she had just time to get to the end of her journey before the last Christmas shopping.

But all of a sudden, right at the foot of the mountain, puff! chug! squeak! The engine broke down; the wheels slid along a little farther with a shrieking, wailing cry and then stood perfectly still. Now, how was the Train to cross the mountain and get her toys over there in time for the children's Christmas? Dolls of every kind, play animals, balls, bats, wagons, toys of every description! Were they all to stay there packed away useless, and the children on the other side to go without them for Christmas?

As the little Train stood there, hoping for help, along toward her came a great strong Engine, all finely cleaned up and black, with his number plate scoured and shining. He had just finished his work of pulling a fine long passenger train, with sleeping cars, parlor car, and dining car, and he was on his way back to the roundhouse now, puffing and blowing with pride.

"O Big, Big Engine!" cried the Train, and every one of her cars joined in the chorus, "Will you please take us over the mountain? Our engine has broken down, and we're loaded with Christmas toys for the children on the other side. Will you help us?"

But the Big Passenger Engine puffed and snorted and blew off steam angrily.

"It's not my business to pull such a little nobody as you!" he roared. "I pull much finer trains than you! Puff! Puff! Ding, Dong!" And he switched himself around on a side track, passed the poor little Train-of-Cars and soon left her helpless, far behind.

"Little by little the time goes by—
Short, if we sing through it; long, if we sigh.
Little by little, an hour, a day,
Gone with the years that have vanished away.
Little by little the race is run;
It's not how long, but how well we have done."

GOLDEN TEXT

And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.—
Luke 6:31.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Golden Rule in the Work of the World.

Basic Truth: Only he who loves God with all his heart can love his neighbor as himself.

Outline: I. Oppression in Industry. II. Just Service Entitled to Just Wages. III. Taking Advantage of the Other Fellow. IV. The Christian Spirit in Industry.

I. Oppression in Industry. Exod. 1:8-14 reveals the unjust oppression of the Pharaoh of Egypt over Israelitish bondmen. The fall of the Egyptian monarchy indicates the unstable condition of the nation. Unjust practices cannot build up strong industry. God taught the Israelites that those who engaged the services of others must not oppress them. Paul adds to this, Eph. 6:5-9, that the servants can no more oppress or cheat the master than can the master cheat the servants. The present day spirit of many laboring people to exact exorbitant wages and refuse just service is equally as harmful to industry and to a nation as was Pharaoh's injustice to his servants harmful to Egypt.

Much of God's overthrow of various peoples and nations has been based on their oppressive methods. Amos 5:6-15 in urging a correction of similar condition, exhorts, "Seek ye the Lord and ye shall live; lest he break out like a fire in the house of Joseph and devour it, and there be none to quench it in Bethel."

II. Just Service Entitled to Just Wages. There is no place that tests more truly the love of an individual for his neighbor than his association in industry. He who would rob the capitalist of a just measure of industry for a given stipend is equally wrong as the manager of industry who would rob the worker of just compensation. Naught but the Christian spirit in the heart of man can bring unto the worker or the captain of industry the desire to practice the Golden Rule. The industry of India which pays three to twelve cents per day for child labor in an industry that nets three to four hundred per cent profit reveals the length to which carnality will go to satisfy its selfish greed.

III. Taking Advantage of the Other Fellow. "These are the things that ye shall do; Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates: and let none of you imagine evil in his heart against his neighbour; and love no false oath: for all these are things that I hate saith the Lord."—Zech. 8:16-17. These instructions to ancient Israel are equally true to the Christian experience. Complied with, no advantage would be taken by one phase of industry over another phase; none would take advantage of his neighbor.

The same principle is as fundamental for the welfare of nations as for that of individuals. While it is distinctly taught in the Scriptures that neither neighbors nor industries will be brought to practice this ideal during the present dispensation, nevertheless the Christian should in his individual life, whether in industry or in the national duties, put them into individual practice.

IV. The Christian Spirit in Industry. As Christians enter industry both those that serve, Eph. 6:5, and those who carry the heavier responsibilities, Eph. 6:9, should, yea must, as Christians, exercise themselves as the apostles have taught.

Is it not a false conception to think that everything is fair in industry? Is it not a false conception of the manager that if he has financial power he is entitled to compel unjust service of the laborer that being strongly organized he can compel the manager to bow to his unjust requirements? Can it be possible that one can truly claim to be Christian and practice any of these things?

Christianity in industry can be carried only so far as Christians themselves will carry it.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Economists and Jesus.

There is a theory which says that if the world's business of getting material needs were so organized and controlled that each individual would receive a just share of the world's wealth, then there would be no friction in man's social life and his moral and spiritual life would develop naturally. This is the economic view of world peace and salvation.

The theory does not take account of the law, the operation of which says Jesus is the Basis for the operation of all other of God's laws, whether they be economic, moral, or spiritual. This basic law is the law of love to God and man. Unless this law operates in the heart of mankind, there can be no organization and control of economic activities that will accord to each a just share of the world's wealth. Moreover, man's moral and spiritual life would not develop just because of perfect economic adjustment. Before transgression Adam was absolutely free from economic worries, but he was far from being a moral and spiritual being.

The economic theory of world salvation proceeds, as do all man made theories, from the outside in. God works always from the inside out. Jesus only can make the law of love to operate in the heart of mankind; therefore, Jesus only can save the world, economically, morally, and spiritually.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Fair Play in the Day's Work.

The principles of Christianity would be of little use did we not put them into daily practice, in our home life, our school life and as we go out into our regular vocations in the workaday world. The Golden Rule is a rule that will apply to all phases of life. "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise", is a measure we may use for all our conduct.

Name some of the instances that have come under your observation in school life where the Golden Rule should have been used. What evil results could have been avoided? One of the greatest faults of human nature would be erased if the Golden Rule were used by all, and that is, selfishness. Apply the same principle in the business world and see the wonderful results. Many are recognizing today that the Golden Rule works, not because of the good resulting to another, but because of the benefit accruing to one's self.

In that beautiful sermon on the mount, Jesus laid down many principles of Christian living. Chief among them was the thought of our duty to others, doing unto them as we would desire they should do to us. "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, pray for them which despitefully use you." And He likens those who hear His sayings and do them, to wise men who build their houses upon solid foundations which the storms cannot destroy.

Let us put self aside in our daily activities wherever they may be, at home, at school, at work, and "play fair."—M. G.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Golden Rule in Business. One of the encouraging changes that have taken place in the business and industrial world during the past half-century is the improved attitude of the employer to his employee. In many places the Golden Rule is supplanting the rule of gold. The employer is giving increasing attention to the conditions surrounding those under him, both during their working hours and during their periods of leisure. No doubt self-interest of the employer has in a measure produced this change; for the business man has found by experience that well-paid men, who are able to live in comfortable homes and surround themselves with the necessities as well as with some of the luxuries of modern life, perform their work better and more quickly than is the case under different conditions. And this increased efficiency of course adds to the profits of the firm. But the Golden Rule, put into effect literally by several large concerns, has been found to react to the great advantage of both the employer and the employee. God's ways are always best!—G. E. M.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

In spite of stormy weather a goodly number attended the special Thank Offering service held by Bro. F. L. Austin at the Oregon church on Sunday, Dec. 1, both morning and evening.

Sr. F. L. Austin of Chicago spent Thanksgiving and the following week end with relatives and friends in Oregon, and assisting the choir at church services.

Bro. and Sr. Edwin Renner of Chicago, were callers at Golden Rule Home on Sunday, Dec. 1. Their mother, Sr. Mary Renner, is slightly improved at this writing. Sr. Betty Kilmer's condition remains unchanged.

Bro. Siple is at present engaged in a meeting near his boyhood home at Happy Woods Schoolhouse near Hammond, Louisiana. He is enjoying meeting with old friends and they are enjoying listening to the old, old story of the gospel.

DUTTON, MICHIGAN

Probably the last service of the year at Dutton, will be held there December eighth. Those living nearby are urged to be present and help make this service one long to be remembered. Sr. M. A. Woodward and Bro. C. E. Randall expect to be present.

ILLINOIS APPOINTMENTS

Bro. Paul C. Johnson expects to hold services at Kewanee on Friday evening, December 6, and at Ripley on Saturday evening and Sunday, December 7 and 8. This is Bro. Johnson's first visit to these brethren since his return from California and we bespeak for him a good audience.

INDIANA QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The Indiana Quarterly Conference will meet with the Rensselaer church on Friday evening, December 6, and over the following Sunday. Notify Bro. Everett Warren if you expect to attend and remain over night. Your presence will encourage and help the brethren at this place and all who may attend. May God bless our gathering together unto Him.

F. A. Stilson, Pres.

RIVIERA, TEXAS

On Saturday evening, November 16, Bro. Stewart, the Texas evangelist, and Bro. Clint Scott, of Sweetwater, arrived here and began a meeting. Bro. and Sr. Moses and Ruth Moses, of Houston, came in time for Tuesday evening services. Leroy McCulloch, of San Antonio, got here on Friday. Our meeting closed on Sunday night, after a very profitable week. The visitors left on Monday morning for San Antonio, where they may have services with brethren there. We were indeed glad to have these people with us and hope that they may be with us when we have another meeting.

Opal Robbins.

A REPORT FROM RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Our special meeting conducted by Bro. Conner at the Church of God in Ripley, closed on Thursday evening, November 21. The weather conditions were very favorable, only one service being omitted on account of rain. A good-sized crowd attended each service, giving fine attention. Some of our distant brothers and sisters of Quincy, Macomb, Golden and Camden were able to attend part of the time. Although there was no addition to our church body we feel much good will come from our meetings together.

And as the curtains of winter drop about us, we feel Bro. Conner has left us many good thoughts to meditate upon in the days ahead, and we resolve to try harder to put them into practice than ever before, that we may grow in knowledge and truth and be counted worthy when the King comes. May we, too, be numbered with that unbroken family in the sweet bye and bye.

Tessa Laning, Sec.

INDIANA REPORT FOR NOVEMBER

Sermons: Dana, N. C., 4; Hendersonville, N. C., 1; Brumfield, Ky., 1; Rensselaer, 2; Plymouth, 1; Burr Oak, 1; North Salem, 1; Kokomo, 1.

Money Received in Indiana: Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $15.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; North Salem, $5.75; Hillisburg, $25.00.

Expense: $10.75.

Note: On the first Sunday in November we were requested to preach in the Court House at Hendersonville, N. C., to the leading citizens of the county on the Coming of Christ and the Signs of the Times. Notwithstanding the day was a very bad day, so bad in fact, we did not expect many, we had three hundred present. The interest was good and, the Lord willing, we hope to have the pleasure of addressing them again on the truths of God's Word.

J. H. Anderson.

ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

On November twenty-fourth we closed a week of services with the brethren at Eldorado. We have a very fine and cordial group here, and it has been a real pleasure to gather with them once more. It is a field where more work should be done, and we are trusting it may be possible to hold a longer series of meetings before long.

The death of Bro. Mosby's father during the meeting was greatly to be regretted.

On the closing day a pleasant feature was added by the attendance of an auto load from Herrin, Illinois—relatives of the late loved and respected Bro. Peter Jeffrey.

F. E. Siple.

Dear Brethren: In looking over the "Doings among the Churches" page of The Herald I am more than pleased to note the way Bro. J. H. Anderson and Bro. L. E. Conner are going out into the field to work. Both are able men and can do much toward teaching the truth of the kingdom to the world. Indiana has three able young men. Let the local churches call on them in order that our state evangelist may have more time to obey, Matt. 24:14 and Mark 16:15.

Any church calling on Bro. Paul Hatch, Michigantown, Indiana, Bro. Vaughn Long, or Bro. Cantwell Drabenstott, Hartford City, Indiana, Rt. 3, is sure to be delighted with wonderful sermons. Let us thereby help in spreading the gospel of the coming kingdom, and get more men into the field. See Rom. 10:18 and Col. 1:6, 23.

Believing we cannot keep the good news to ourselves, Matt. 28:19, 20,

D. G. Harvey.

ONE HUNDRED EIGHTY THANKS

One hundred eighty thank offerings have been sent to us as expressions of thanksgiving. The entire working force of the church is grateful to our Father and to these one hundred eighty givers for this attitude upon their part, and for the helpful cooperation thus rendered in the carrying forward of labors dear to all. Undoubtedly other offerings will yet be received during the next few days.

The actual number of offerings received is ninety. We have estimated that many of the offerings are for more than one of a family; therefore we have estimated that there have been one hundred eighty who have contributed to this call. The total amount received to date has been $502.33. The average amount for each contributor, first estimating that two were interested in each and every remittance, is $2.79, plus. Using this average amount as a basis for computation, let each one stop to compute what would have been the total for carrying forward the gospel work had the entire eight thousand or more of our number contributed as per this average.

There are three great religious feast days in the year: Easter, Thanksgiving, and Christmas. How appropriate it would be if at each one of these national holidays, set aside in recognition of God, every faithful follower of Christ would regularly render a Gift Offering to the great cause of truth!

We want to extend our appreciation to those who have so well responded to the Father's cause in this Thanksgiving Offering.

F. L. Austin, Secretary.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Readers: Greeting for this Thanksgiving season with its bountiful supply of good things, both for the appetite and the mind. The soil has brought forth abundantly, and we enjoy its bounty. A spiritual feast is also spread before us and we delight in meditating upon the infinite goodness and mercy of a loving Father in heaven, from whom every good and perfect gift cometh. Why should we not be the happiest people on His footstool, especially when we look into the prophetic mirror and behold the picture of passing events, knowing that soon the struggle and turmoil of the nations will reach the limits of their efforts for supremacy?

Soon the Prince of Peace will usher in the "Age of Gold", when men shall learn war no more; when the implements of warfare shall be converted into implements of husbandry; when the thrones of kings shall be shattered and give place to the King of Peace. Soon right shall triumph over wrong; the weak become strong; the poor become rich; and the wealthy become poor. We long for the time when the peasant's cot shall become a place wherein penury and want shall not enter, but where plenty and comfort shall abound; when the palace of the rich shall no more be the scene of intemperate and immoral revelries. Soon shall the boon companions, prejudice and ignorance, give place to the knowledge of the Lord; the simple shall become wise, and the wise be taught the wisdom of God. Vice and crime shall give way to virtue; hatred shall be changed to love; sorrow and mourning shall be turned into joy. Tears shall no more moisten the cheek, for then the dark shadow of sin shall have passed away, and over all, the glorious Sun of Righteousness shall shine in infinite splendor and brightness throughout an eternal and unending day. Hope looks forward with wistful eye to see the King in His beauty enthroned on Zion's holy hill, surrounded by an innumerable company who have made their robes white in the blood of the Lamb.

For this glad time the Christian everywhere should look aloft to the throne of grace and offer heartiest thanks to the Giver of every blessing. Prayer and praise should mingle, and freely and reverently flow from every heart. Joy and gladness should shine from every eye, and every ear should be tuned to the sweet song of redemption, and every tongue should be employed in telling the old, old story of Jesus and His love.

In His service,

Lyman Booth.

Dear Editor and Friends of our weekly banner of truth: The Herald of the nineteenth is brimful of good things for the inner man, Eph. 3:11-19. We hope to see the banner of our Lord's Father raised above other "lords", Isa. 13:1-3; 1 Cor. 8:5-7. "For us there is but one God (not three), . . . the Father, out of whom are all things, and we for him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom are all things, and we through him. But this knowledge is not in all".

Some of the apostles and Christ Jesus our Lord had some little trouble in plumbing the line for us. See John 17:9-21 and Gal. 2. "Reckon the patience of our Lord as salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom imparted to him, wrote to you; as also in all his epistles, speaking in them concerning these things; in which are some things hard to be understood." Please read 2 Peter 3:14-18. So Paul helped Peter, as he did others. Acts 18:24-28; 19:1-5.

Your brother in hope,

R. A. Humphreys.

FURTHER SUNDAY SCHOOL THOUGHTS
FOR THE JUNIORS

Topic: Good Boys and Girls Make Good Men and Women.

What do you think of the boy or girl who, as soon as mother's or teacher's back is turned, at once proceeds to do the very thing that has been forbidden to do? What kind of men and women will they make? Would you want to deal with them in business?

It is so easy to slip into the cookie jar and get one or two while mother is working outside, even if she did say, "Please wait, it is so near luncheon time." She'll never miss that many. "Oh, I just peak into my book and see what the answer is while teacher isn't looking."

But, say, you'll feel lots and lots happier if you will not do these things, and mother and teacher will be happier, too. Then when you're grown up, you will be so well trained you will want to be perfectly honest with everyone. It's the little tiny misdeeds that we do that soon grow to be larger ones. That's why so many, many of our boys and girls are in reform schools today. We do not want to be sent there, so let's try and overcome all those little temptations that prompt us to do wrong today; and then we need not fear for our future.—V. C. T.

"And as you would that men should do to you, do in like manner to them". Luke 6:31, Diag.

The Golden Rule of the Bible applies to all alike, to the rich as well as to the poor and to the young as well as to the middle-aged and to the old. It is a rule that can and should be carried into all walks of life. The person who has the love of God in his heart to the extent that he lives up to the Golden Rule, will be one who will show his Christianity wherever he goes, whether at home, among friends or out into the business world.

Such an one as this will be a good example to all them about him, and his light will ever shine for the Master.—L. A. R.

WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?

WHOSE SON IS HE?

By Rufus A. Curtis

THE ABOVE QUESTION, propounded by Jesus to the Pharisees, is fraught with deep and lasting issues to us, being influenced largely, by our thoughts of "the Christ", as revealed in the Bible. Mark 8:27-29; John 4:41-42. The Jews thought of Him simply as "the son of Joseph". They thought they knew both "his father and mother". John 6:42. In this they were mistaken. They were as ignorant of the Father, as they were of His Son. John 16:1-3.

When the high priest put the question direct to Jesus; "Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?" Jesus answered without any equivocation, "I am." John 14:60-62. For Jesus claiming to the Son of God, His Jewish accusers thought He ought to die. John 19:7. Their thought influenced their actions; for they finally put Him to death. They thought Him guilty of death. They spit in His face, and buffeted Him, and others smote Him with the palms of their hands, saying, "Prophecy unto us thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?" Matt. 26:62-68.

In view of the fact that ignorance and cruelty generally go hand in hand, how needful it is that our hearts should be moved by the same noble impulse that found expression in the language of the Psalmist, David, when he petitioned his Creator, "O send out thy light and thy truth; let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy-holy hill, and to thy tabernacles." Acts 2:23; 3:17; Heb. 11:35-38; Psa. 43:3.

The volume of the Book contains many marvelous things concerning Jesus, God's only begotten Son, who came to do His Father's will. Heb. 10:7-10; John 3:16; 1 John 4:9; Luke 1:26-35. We should diligently search the Scriptures, and obey their divine commandments if we would share in the immortality that is brought to light through the gospel, as God's gracious gift through Jesus Christ our Lord. John 5:39-40; 15:10, 11; Rom. 2:5-7; 6:21-23; 2 Tim. 1:9-10.

I love to think of Jesus as the Savior of sinners. Matt. 1:18-21; 1 Timothy 1:15. I love to think of Him as the door into the sheepfold. John 10:1-5. He is the good Shepherd, and has demonstrated that fact to the world by laying down His life for the sheep. John 10:11-15. I love to think of Jesus as the true Vine, and His loyal followers as fruit-bearing branches. John 15:1-11. I love to think of Jesus, the Son of God, as our great High Priest, who ever liveth to make intercession for them who come unto God by Him. Heb. 4:14-16; 7:24-28. I love to think of Jesus as the Way, the Truth, and the Life. John 14:6. We cannot substitute some other way into the sheepfold of the good Shepherd. John 10:1, 11.

"What think ye of Christ?" Do you think of Him as your Redeemer from the thralldom of sin and the dominion of death? To believers, He is precious; to others, a Stumblingstone and a Rock of offence. 1 Peter 2:7; Rom. 9:33. We cannot ignore these momentous questions concerning Jesus, as to whether He is the Christ, the Son of God, and whether we can have life through His name, or not. John 20:30-31; 3:14-17. There can be no neutral ground in the conflict between truth and error. Jesus has said, "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." Matt. 12:30.

If you are ashamed of Jesus and His loving message of pardon, peace and final redemption, allow me to call your attention to the following divine warning: "Beware therefore, lest that come upon you, which is spoken of in the prophets; Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish; for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you." Acts 13:40, 41; Luke 13:1-5; John 3:14-16. Your thoughts of Jesus and the good tidings God sent Him to preach to the meek, broken hearted captives of the earth, bound in the prison house of sin, mortality, and death, will either eventually elevate you to joint heirship with Jesus, to life immortal, and an immovable kingdom under the whole heaven, as enduring as the sun, the glorious orb of the day, or, they will cause you to be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of

EDITORIAL

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

F. E. SIPLE, Assistant Editor.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God."

PRAYER

IN THE PRAYER which our Savior taught His disciples, Matthew 6:9, there is a point it would be well for every child of God to heed. After making the address, "Our Father which art in heaven," three references are made to the Father at the very onset:

"Hallowed be thy name,

"Thy kingdom come,

"Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven".

It is not until after this humble bowing of the heart before the Father that the Christian is taught to refer to self. Whatever the need of prayer, whatever the distress of the petitioner, whatever the importance or the emergency, it is well to remember that in addressing the Father, He always should be honored, exalted, and glorified before the petitioner can justly present his seeming needs.

PRAYING FOR DIFFICULTY

"It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."—Matthew 19:24.

HOW OFTEN OUR PRAYERS to God pertain to the things of this world which in their abundance would constitute riches and provide this difficulty. We are not rich? Perhaps not in the sense in which man describes riches. But the kernel of this truth is perhaps revealed to us by Mark's expression, 10:24, "How hard it is for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God." It is not the possession of the riches in themselves that makes it difficult for the individual. It is the fact that the individual trusts in them, depends upon them. Nor must one needs be the possessor of riches before he at heart trusts in them. Many a pauper visualizes how much he could do if he were only rich. Riches stand before his eye as the one all important, all powerful condition. Such a person certainly trusts.

It is this trust or dependence upon the things of this world, trust in riches, that withdraws one from trust in God. It is dependence upon riches that makes it impossible for one to enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Let us trust in God.

THE LORD SHALL BLOT OUT HIS NAME

IN THE CLOSING HOURS of his life, Moses admonished the people whom he had led, Deut. 29:10-20, to be true unto the God of heaven. He recalled the desire of the Father to establish the people of Israel in the blessings of the covenant which He had made with Abraham. Then in verse 18, he said, "Lest there should be among you man, or woman, . . . whose heart turneth away this day from the Lord our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations", he warned that "him who should thus do" the Lord shall blot out his name from under heaven.

Do we realize what this would mean, the name blotted out from under heaven, no longer to have that name considered? It would be expunged; it would be no more.

The tribe of Dan, one of the ten which, under Jeroboam, separated from the nation of Israel, erected a golden calf, 1 Kings 12:28, for worship of which Dan's name was blotted out from the rest of the twelve tribes which were sealed with "the seal of the living God" in Rev. 7:5-8. The tribe of Ephraim was also guilty with the tribe of Dan in the day of Jeroboam. Its people, too, worshiped the golden image instead of Jehovah. The name of that tribe also is blotted out in the same scripture.

By negative assertion the epistle to the angel of the church of Sardis, Rev. 3:1-6, announces that those who fail to serve their God, those who defile themselves in false service, will have their names blotted out of the book of life.

This is God's word, not man's. God distinctly tells what He will do with the children of man. The faithful will be gathered in, crowned with life, blessed with the blessings of God; the unfaithful will be blotted out. Are not these truths applicable in principle to the people of all times? Is it not true that he who would enjoy the blessings and promises of God must of necessity live true to Him?

In the light of this truth which is revealed both early in scripture and late, is it not important that each one of us should carefully discern what we worship? Our day is filled with the inventions of man. His ideas are visible everywhere. Youth and old age are solicited to rise to the ideals of man. Let us watch carefully, lest by following after man we are following the Jeroboam of our day and being turned away from the God of heaven.

CREATION AND SCIENCE

By R. H. Judd

IN CONFIRMATION of points mentioned in the two articles in the issue of October 22, relative to the early verses of Genesis 1, I wish to submit the following. The writer makes no definite statement for which he is able to give unimpeachable authority. The use of the word "waste" in the R. V. in Genesis 1:2 and in Isaiah 45:18 has long been of intense interest to the writer as a remarkable proof of inspiration. I wonder if our readers realize how much divine inspiration is literally packed into those early verses of Genesis, which are, even on the surface, a marvel of concise statement.

The thoughts given expression to by our contributors are but a portion of the proof, evidently designed by God, to give an answer in its appointed time to those who in these latter days of boasted civilization and knowledge so delight to cavil concerning the supposed differences between the Bible and science. I will here give some points besides those given in the articles mentioned, that take away any ground for belief that the Bible here contradicts science. When all these are considered, surely one cannot but acknowledge that through nothing short of divine inspiration could any human author weave within the compass of two short sentences, Genesis 1:1-2, such an astounding amount of information relative to the past history of this earth of ours. First, the definite article "the" does not occur in the original. Thus no specific beginning is specified. Second, the Hebrew word, "in reshith (beginning) primarily means anteriority, i. e., in former times—in past antiquity—God created, etc." The Hebrew is indefinite, as in Jeremiah 28:1, "In the beginning, reshith, of the reign of Zedekiah" does not mean the first day or even year, for it immediately adds "in the fourth year", but refers to the former part of his reign.

This idea is well expressed by the Psalmist in other words, "Of old—in former duration—thou hast laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the works of thy hands." Thus the words of Moses, also of David, are big enough to take in times indefinite. The words of Moses leave "the when" of creation (of the earth itself) undefined. This may explain to some extent the differences of opinion as to what share others had in the work of creation, some being of the opinion that angels acted under God's commands while others think that God alone was the Creator of all creative acts mentioned in Genesis, chapters 1 and 2. May it not be possible that both ideas can be harmonized, and that passages such as Isaiah 42:5; 44:24 refer to the actual creation of the earth itself and the heavens, and that at the creation recorded in Genesis, after verse 1, the angels may have had a part, for "He spoke and it was done", "He commanded and they were created"? Psa. 33:9; 148:5. Would not this logically explain that much discussed verse, "Let us make man in our

GIFTS FOR THE KING

By M. A. Woodward

I AM WONDERING how many of the brothers and sisters of our dear Lord are planning His gift for His birthday. Your friends are each in your mind as to what their gifts shall be; and you think something like this: I believe I will give Will a new shaving set; and Nell a pretty brooch. The children will want books or games. I'll find something nice for them. Another soliloquizes thus: I just feel too poor to give gifts this year, I believe I will just give cards. Well, let me see. Cards are from two to five or ten cents apiece beside the postage. They will at least be five cents each and I have more than 100 people to remember. There is at least five dollars I must spend. Well, I can spend five dollars for the cause of truth, too.

Think what five dollars or even one dollar would mean if each Herald reader would send it on Christmas to the work! How these gifts would please the Christ, for then there would be proof of their love to Him and we would realize a blessing had come to us in sacrifice. It is a real sacrifice to me not to be able to give a gift, though small, but I cannot do both, give to my friends and to the needy cause.

How many of us will stop taking some paper, perhaps, that we do not really need and send that amount to the National Bible Institution or wherever we think it would do the most good? Or, perhaps we have not been able to even take a paper. Then we can make a quilt perhaps, not an elaborate one, just a common quilt. Many wish to buy these now as they are very fashionable, also pillow cases, towels, aprons. Oh, there are many ways if we want to do it to earn a little for the Christ's birthday. There are always some poor children who cannot come out to Sunday School because they have no clothes that they want to appear in. Get together as they do in Grand Rapids and make some; take them to them and ask them to come to Sunday School. These things all count for your credit in the cause of truth.

The work at our printing plant and home always needs help financially. What a satisfaction to know you have helped lift the burden from those weary workers, those who are doing duty all hours of the day and night to give us a good paper and furnish good Sunday School Quarterlies. And again, we do not realize the tireless effort it takes to keep Golden Rule Home running so smoothly and so like its name indicates, Golden Rule, for that is what it is, a sweet, peaceful, pleasant home. If you have extra fruit this year, it will be gladly used there, and you will be giving such joy to the dear brothers and sisters there.

Christmas is coming and all these things may be in your minds to help fill the gifts for the Christ. May God put it in the minds of many to send gifts of love to our beloved elder Brother, the beloved Christ.

THE BOOKS OF SAMUEL

By Lyman Booth

THESE TWO BOOKS form but one in the Hebrew canon, and derive their name from Samuel, not so much because he was the author, but that prophet was the most prominent actor in the opening portion, and the main instrument in the establishment of the Kingdom of Israel. The books of Samuel and of Kings were considered in the original form as two books, but the seventy translators divided them into four books which they named the Books of the Kingdoms. In the Vulgate translation this division is used, except that they are called the Books of the Kings, which title is preserved in the Authorized Version of the English Bible.

Though Samuel could not have written more than the former portion of the first book, perhaps the 24 chapters, the remaining portion is ascribed to the prophets Nathan and Gad: for we read in the Chronicles, "Now the acts of David, the king first and last, behold, they are written in the Book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer". 1 Chron. 29:29. It is not unreasonable, therefore, to conclude that Samuel wrote the first acts of David, and that Nathan and Gad continued the work after Samuel's death, and wrote the last acts or the records of his reign till his death, which was ascribed to Samuel, as the more eminent person, and worthy of the honor of its authorship. That portion ascribed to Nathan and Gad is but an appendix to the work Samuel began. We observe that in Samuel's time a new epoch commenced in Israel's history: the government by judges was changed for that of kings; and Samuel anointed both, whose history is given by Samuel who was the principal person in all those transactions.

The Books of Samuel and Kings are called in the Vulgate Latin translation, "The first and second book of Kings," and therefore the books we now call first and second Kings are "the third and fourth books of Kings." But we know from 1 Chron. 20:29 that there were books of Samuel, Nathan, and Gad, the Seers; and those prophets were answerable for a large portion of the work, and David's personal memoirs would supply the rest. We understand there were scribes and secretaries (2 Samuel 8:17; 20:25; 1 Kings 4:3) who no doubt helped to place the records in consecutive order, thereby preserving their national literature in such compositions as Hannah's Song, 1 Sam. 2:1, 2, David's lament over Saul and Jonathan, 2 Sam. 1:17-27, his lament over Abner, 2 Sam. 3:33, 34, his extreme grief over the death of Absalom, 2 Sam. 18:33; his thanksgiving, 2 Sam. 22, and his last words, 2 Sam. 23:1-7. Thus the books themselves were based upon the works of the prophets who were contemporary with the kings whose history they give, regardless of the actual dates on which they were compiled.

Samuel was born while Eli was judge and high priest of Israel, and while Eli's sons were bringing shame and destruction on themselves and their family, and almost on the nation. Samuel was growing in wisdom and piety, and became an illustrious prophet, a model reformer, a merciful deliverer and a just judge of Israel. Yet Israel became very weary of his mild government and desired a king. Saul was placed over them, but was soon dethroned for his disobedience to God, and David anointed to succeed him.

The rest of the book gives an account of David's illustrious deeds, and the persecutions he endured, till the death of Saul which gave him the opportunity to ascend the throne. It is uncertain how many years elapsed during those events; some estimates place it at eighty years, others at one hundred fifteen. From 1 Kings 2:27 we may justly conclude that this book was extant when the first book of Kings was written. Other scriptures refer to the events therein recorded as of undoubted certainty. Especially many of the Psalms were made on occasions of one or another of them. Our Lord and His apostles quote them as a part of the sacred oracles, Matt. 12:3,4; Acts 7:45, 46; 13:21-23. These books contain an interesting study of three biographies: first of Samuel, 1 Sam. 1 to 12; second of Saul, 1 Sam. 1:13 to 2 Sam. 1; third of David, 1 Sam. 16:11 to 2 Sam. 24. As in the history of the patriarchs, so in these biographies, nothing is concealed and nothing forgotten. They do not hide the sins of the kings. They describe the miseries that follow the forsaking of the path of righteousness and the blessings which accompany right doing.

Samuel's ancestry from Levi, which is given in outline, is recorded in 1 Chron. 6:22-28 and 33:38. The reformation of his people from unbridled licentiousness to a peaceable monarchy is due to his administrative skill and intellectual ability. It isn't difficult to see why he became one of the heroes of Hebrew history. He was a very prominent person in Israel, being the last of the judges and the first of the succession of the prophets. He could be properly classed with Moses and Aaron. See Psa. 99:6 and Jer. 15:1.

Saul began well but ended very disgracefully. His first acts were very promising, 1 Sam. 10:11. On account of his sudden elevation he soon became self-assertive and self-willed. At times he dwelt in spells of melancholy and jealousy. He bitterly persecuted David and finally being filled with remorse, he consulted with the witch of Endor, just before the battle of Mount Gilboa which resulted disastrously. Instead of endeavoring to rule as the vicegerent of Jehovah, he became proud, selfish, stiff-necked, and very profane.

With David, the sceptre came into the house of Judah for the first time and he became the founder of a dynasty that lasted for more than four hundred years. His early years were spent in preparation for his future career. We next note his flight and hiding from Saul as an outlaw, then his elevation to the throne. We also note his devotion to Jonathan and his solemn vow not to injure the Lord's anointed, Saul. He was noted for his valor, his musical and poetical gifts. Never in the time of danger nor in the hour of prosperity did he go after strange gods, or lapse into idolatry. But there was a time when he gave

THE COVENANT WITH ABRAHAM

By Cecil Smead

IN GENESIS FIFTEEN WE HAVE recorded the covenant as God first made it with Abraham. The Lord God is revealed in His relationship to the earth as the eternal, immutable One, carrying out His purpose of blessing in the earth. The word of the Lord came unto Abraham and made a covenant with him.

In preparing the covenant God told Abraham to take five certain beasts and prepare a sacrifice. Numbers are used in Scripture with a spiritual significance, five being the number of grace. Five beasts are used in the offering because the covenant is to be unconditional. Furthermore, the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Abraham in order that there might be only one contracting party to the covenant and that that One should be the Lord God himself.

The Lord God unconditionally promised Abraham seed as the stars of heaven and that that seed should inherit the land where Abraham dwelt. As yet, Abraham had no seed, his steward being his heir, and Abraham did not even have enough land to put his foot on.

While the promise that Abraham's seed should be as the stars of heaven undoubtedly means that they should be too numerous to number, it also meant that there should be a spiritual calling in the seed of Abraham. The earlier reference to his seed being as the dust of the earth (Gen. 13:16) had reference to the fleshly part of Abraham's seed. The spiritual calling is Christ and those who are the seed of Abraham through Christ.

In solemnizing the covenant God sent a smoking furnace followed by a lamp passing between the pieces of the sacrifice. The furnace was symbolic of the affliction of Israel; and as silver is refined so the children of Israel were to be refined. The lamp was symbolic of Israel's deliverance. As the furnace was before the lamp so affliction is before deliverance, bitter before sweet, wilderness before Canaan, cross before crown, tribulation before blessing, suffering before glory. All these should happen to the seed of Abraham, both fleshly and spiritual.

The Lord God also promised Abraham a portion of land within certain specified boundaries, land which has never yet been possessed by Israel in whom Abraham's seed is called. Therefore Israel's inheritance is yet in the future when Christ shall set up Israel as an everlasting kingdom to inherit the land of Canaan.

We read that Abraham believed what the Lord God told him and that He counted it to him for righteousness. So that by grace Abraham will be saved through the faith he had in God. And so it is with us; we are saved by grace through faith; both are gifts of God as is set forth in Ephesians 2:8.

Genesis 15 has revealed more to us than we would think at first glance. We have found much, but there is much more to be found in that same chapter which can be acquired only by diligent study.

We have found the Lord God as the immutable One carrying out His blessing upon the earth; that His covenant with Abraham was an unconditional promise of seed and land; that Abraham's seed refers to both fleshly and spiritual seed; that tribulation comes rightfully before blessing; that Israel is yet to be possessed of the land of Canaan; and that it is by the grace of God flowing like a stream through the channel of faith that we are all saved.

DARKNESS AND LIGHT

By Lydia Railsback

DARKNESS IS THE ABSENCE OF LIGHT. (Webster.) If one attempts to walk in the dark on an unknown path, there is usually trouble, as few paths or ways are so smooth but what there is at least some little thing which will cause one to stumble. But not so on a well lighted pathway. All objects can be clearly seen and avoided or in some way surmounted. No matter how dark the night may be, there has always come a time when the sun came up over the horizon and sent his light to dispel the darkness.

Just so with the darkness of sin, there will come a time when the Light of the world will appear and dispel all gloom from this sin cursed earth. In the meantime, we who are in the world, but not of it, should seek for all the light we may find, and use it to good advantage.

The Psalmist says, "The entrance of thy words giveth light". Psa. 119:130. How much can each one of us do to help others obtain some of this light? The Psalmist says in another place that, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path". If our path is lighted by God's Word, there will be no reason for stumbling or falling; for God's light far exceeds the light of the brightest noonday.

Jesus said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life". John 8:12. Why not walk after Christ and have that light? "Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reprov'd, (margin, discovered). But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." John 3:19-21.

What a vast difference between those who love darkness and those who come to the light! One means death, the other, life. The choice is for each one to make. Dear reader, which do you choose? If life, walk in the light; if darkness, no one can help you.

" 'Tis not a task, O Power Divine,
To thank Thee for these gifts of Thine;
For summer's sunshine, winter's snow,
For hearts that kindle, thoughts that glow;
But when shall I attain to this:
To thank Thee for the things I miss?"

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

FIRST THE CHILD, THEN THE MAN

Sunday, December 15—Luke 1:59-80.

“And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit.”

—Luke 1:80.

Just as the mighty oak of the forest must once have been but a fresh twig of the morning, so every person of great character or influence must have first been a new born child. It is God's way; none can thwart it. The inference is true, namely, every child in the home, if well born by good and proper parentage, holds in his tiny life the possibility of attaining unto the greatness of one of God's great ones. There is no limitation to the possible attainment of that loved life upon the arm of its mother, excepting those limitations arranged by the Creator of all things.

“And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit”, is the one rule that must apply everywhere. How regrettable it is to-day that so many able people in the prime of ideal life deny themselves the privilege of rearing children, whose very existence might well enable them to become richest jewels in the great, eternal, unfading accomplishments of God! How wicked to deny the Father these lives and their possible greatness before Him!

EARTH'S GREATEST CHILD

Monday, December 16—Luke 2:8-20.

“For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.”

—Luke 2:8.

Just as all of God's wonderful plans are perfected from new beginnings, so also Jesus, His Son, was introduced into the plans of God as a new born Child. His was the beginning of a life destined to be exalted “above every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come”, Eph. 1:21. “Though made of a woman, made under the law”, Gal. 4:4, His was the beginning which would develop until He should be “King of kings, and Lord of lords”, Rev. 19:16.

THE CHILD TRAIT PERMEATES THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN

Tuesday, December 17—Matthew 18:1-10.

“Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.”—Matthew 18:4.

With a little child in their midst, Jesus illustrated to His disciples the position in God's kingdom of child life; not necessarily of the child as a new born, inexperienced person, but of that child trait which accedes to the teachings of the Father in heaven and which obediently performs His requests.

Child life is susceptible to whatever trained, experienced life will afford it. Like the molder's clay, it is susceptible to any given shaping. He, only, who approaches God in child-like humility is susceptible to that perfection of character fitted for God's kingdom.

THE CHILD IN THE CHURCH

Wednesday, December 18—1 Samuel 3:10-19.

“Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth.”—1 Samuel 3:10.

It was the willingness of the child, Samuel, that made him anxious to receive Jehovah's teaching. It is the confidence of the child that turns to the voice of Holy Scripture in the New Testament, as well as Old, that develops the child into obedience to the truth of God. The story of Samuel is one from which mighty lessons may be learned. The application of the lesson to Christian life is most valuable. Christian parents should awaken to the fact that the child mind and life, unwarped and untarnished by sin's mighty forces, is the life that manifests loyal confidence and trust in the Master. Let us more and more encourage childhood to visualize and grasp Christian teachings.

FORMATIVE INFLUENCES AFFECTING THE CHILD

Thursday, December 19—Acts 7:20-34.

“Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it.”

—Proverbs 22:6.

Under the sweet influences of his godly mother whom Pharaoh's daughter engaged to attend to Moses, Moses was reared and fashioned after the best manner known to the woman, whose life was consecrated to God. Shapened and formed by such godly influences and then by the influences of the better learning in Egypt, Moses was prepared for his work of later years, a work which has influenced all races during the centuries since.

Would that parents could but visualize the far-reaching influences radiating from the lives of their children! It is not too much to say that for every child born into the creation of God, both the present and all future ages are changed. The future cannot possibly be the same as it would have been had you or I not been born. Then, again, the manner in which life is shapened from childhood produces results that unavoidably affect, in one way or another, the ultimate and eternal accomplishments of God.

With what earnest prayer and godly effort should every child be developed and fitted for both the immediate and the eternal future!

FATHER AND SON

Friday, December 20—Genesis 22:1-13.

“And Abraham said, My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering.”—Gen. 22:8.

Abraham's unflinching faith in Jehovah was a daily example unto Isaac, his son. As it would be unjust for Jehovah to require that man should live more holy than He, himself, so it is unjust in parents to expect the son or the daughter to control themselves against the lusts of the flesh more than do the parents. Abraham believed God. He believed Him to that degree that he would even offer the life of Isaac, his son, whom he loved more than his own life. With such confidence of faith, Isaac too, was schooled unto faith exalted far beyond that of others about him. Oh, that parents would go ahead and blaze the trails for their children to follow as they tramp through tangled jungles of sin, seeking the open fields of righteousness and freedom in Christ!

GOD AND THE CHILD'S EDUCATION

Saturday, December 21—Acts 22:1-10.

“I verily am a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day.”—Acts 22:3.

After the most perfect manner of the law given by Moses as spokesman for God, Paul was educated at the feet of the then best known teacher thereof. Zealously he lived toward God with all might and power. He sought to do God's service, nor was his heart false in his efforts. His zeal and faith were true in so far as he had been educated.

Observe the watch-care of the Almighty in this instance. Though Paul's education was partly wrong, yet his heart had become true to God. In the fulness of His mercy and loving kindness, God revealed to Paul truth to take the place of error which he had entertained. Immediately Paul had changed and complied with the education taught by heaven.

Nor is the parent of to-day competent to fully teach his children. Earnest petitions to the heavenly Father should constantly seek Heaven's guidance in giving to childhood the highest and truest education possible, education concerning God himself and God's men. Under the education of the Father, Paul was equipped to influence the thoughts of many. These influences marked out many disciples who will undoubtedly be active with Christ in the kingdom of God in the coming ages. How important was Paul's education!

 Stronger than its deepest tide,
 Deeper than its measuring rod,

WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?
WHOSE SON IS HE?(Continued from front page)

His power. Isa. 61:1-3; Luke 4:16-19; Rom. 8:16-18; 6:23; James 2:5; Heb. 12:28; Psa. 89:35-36; Dan. 7:18-24; Matt. 25:46; 1 Thess. 1:7-10. Jesus has said, “Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.” Mark 8:36-38; Luke 9:25-26.

The Master has said, “Without me ye can do nothing.” John 15:5. “He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.” 1 John 5:11-12. “Rejoice evermore”, 1 Thess. 5:16, “for all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's.” 1 Cor. 3:21-23.

“In the heart of London city,
 'Mid the dwellings of the poor,
 These bright golden words were uttered,
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’
 By a lonely, dying woman,
 Stretched upon a garret floor;
 Having not one earthly comfort,—
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’”

“He who heard them ran to fetch her
 Something from the world's great store.
 It was needless—died she, saying,
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’
 But her words will live forever;
 I repeat them o'er and o'er,
 God delights to hear me saying,—
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’”

“Ye who read with admiration
 How that Christ doth bless the poor,
 Can you say with deep thanksgiving,
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’
 Haste thee, hide thee, death awaits thee,
 God's just wrath doth lie before,
 Unless thou art humbly boasting—
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’”

“You may have much in your garner,
 Yet by God be reckoned poor;
 He alone has riches truly,
 Who has Christ, though nothing more.
 Look away from earth's attractions,
 All earth's joys will soon be o'er;
 Rest not till your heart proclaimeth—
 ‘I have Christ! What want I more?’”

DAY BY DAY

I heard a voice at evening softly say,—

Bear not thy yesterday into tomorrow,
Nor load this week with last week's load of sorrow.
Lift all thy burdens as they come, nor try
To weight the present with the bye and bye.

One step and then another, take thy way—
Live day by day.

Live day by day.

Though autumn leaves are withering round thy way, -

Walk in the sunshine: it is all for thee;
Push straight ahead as long as thou canst see;
Dread not the winter whither thou must go,
But when it comes be thankful for the snow;

Onward and upward, look and smile, and pray—
Live day by day.

Live day by day.

The path before thee doth not lead astray;

Do the next duty, it must surely be
The Christ is in the One that's close to thee.
Onward, still onward, with a sunny smile,
Till step by step shall end in mile by mile;

I'll do my best, unto thy conscience say;
Live day by day.

—Unknown.

THE CHILDREN'S HOPE

By T. A. Drinkard

Thus saith the Lord; A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rahel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord; Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work (Whose work?) shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they (Who?) shall come again from the land of the enemy.—Jeremiah 31:15-16.

I LIKE TO TALK about the children's hope, which they have because of God's promise made in their behalf, through His prophet in days gone by. We cannot afford to ignore this promise by Jeremiah. God surely intended for us to obtain at least a small measure of joy by reading about it and to realize that He was gracious enough to make provision for the little children who come forth into life like beautiful flowers, yet are soon cut down. Job 14:2. By the study of this scriptural statement of Jeremiah 31:15, compared with Matthew 2:16-18, it will be seen to be fulfilled in the days of Herod the king. These children lost their lives because Herod was determined, if possible, to kill the appointed King of the world.

Was there an hour of weeping and sorrow over the land? God heard those mothers' prayers and promised to restore the little innocent children of sorrow back to life. True it is, such promise has not as yet been realized; yet it has never been revoked. God knew His plan from the days of old, Acts 15:18, and it pleased Him to reveal it unto those that delight to carry out its requirements. Matthew 13:11-12.

Again, it is written, "But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."—Mark 10:14. Jesus foresaw a future for those little children. Did His life work and sacrificial offering upon Calvary's cross bring to them the right to live beyond the resurrection day? Were they considered when Jesus gave Himself a ransom for all? 1 Timothy 2:6. Surely Jesus remembered Jeremiah 31:16, which says that should those children fall asleep in death, yet in God's own good time they would come again from the land of the enemy.

Many of them are now in that land of darkness. Job 10:21. Is there no future for those treasured flowers of earth? Must they remain in death just because they were unable to help themselves? What harm or sin have they committed that would debar them from being in the kingdom of God as subjects? It is clearly taught in Scripture that there will be children in the kingdom. Let me read a portion of Isaiah's prophecy: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together: and a little child shall lead them."—Isa. 11:9, 6.

This prophecy appeals to me very much. Its portraying view of the kingdom is almost beyond our comprehension of things. And in that view I see the little child pictured leading the once vicious beasts of the earth, but which are now tame, having a pleasant disposition.

THAT DAY

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
And, counting, find
One self-denying deed, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard—
One glance most kind,
That fell, like sunshine, where it went—
Then you may count that day well spent.

But if, through all the livelong day,
You've cheered no heart, by yea or nay—
If, through it all,
You've nothing done that you can trace
That brought the sunshine to one face—
No act most small
That helped some soul and nothing cost—
Then count that day as worse than lost.

—George Eliot,

A FATHER OF MANY NATIONS

GENESIS 17:1-8

By Richard LeCrone

SEVERAL TIMES in the Bible we are told that the events of the Old Testament were types and shadows of things that were to come. The Apostle Paul in speaking of the adventures of the Children of Israel, says: "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition . . ."—1 Cor. 10:11. We find many of the prophecies of the Old Testament fulfilled in the New. These fulfillments consist not only of things prophesied of by the prophets, but also those prophesied of by the events.

The New Testament is a divine commentary on the Old and is the highest possible authority in the explanation of the Old Testament scriptures. Are we not then fully justified in going to the New Testament for the explanation of, or at least help in the understanding of the Old Testament scriptures? Let us follow such a procedure in connection with God's covenant with Abraham.

God's covenant with Abraham is repeated several times in the book of Genesis and is repeated in several degrees of fulness and detail. But we shall, at this time, concern ourselves with one particular repetition. It is found in the first few verses of the seventeenth chapter of Genesis and reads as follows: "As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations. Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will make thee exceedingly fruitful, and I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee. And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee."

In this instance the emphasized thought seems to be that Abraham's reward for keeping God's covenant will be that he shall become the father of many nations.

As we follow the generations of Abraham through the Bible we find God promising Abraham that his seed should come through his son, Isaac. Abraham's first son, and lawfully his heir, was the son of his wife's handmaiden. But it was through his second son who was born of Abraham's wife, Sarah, that the promise was to be fulfilled. God's promise to this effect is found in Gen. 21:12. "Let it not be grievous in thy sight because of the lad, and because of thy bondwoman; in all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice; for in Isaac shall thy seed be called."

In Genesis 12:3 we find God making this promise to Abraham: ". . . and in thee shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." Going on to Gen. 22:18, we find Him telling Abraham how this promise is to be fulfilled: "And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice." Our attention is thus diverted from Abraham to his Seed. Our problem now becomes one of determining just who that Seed is.

We study the entire Old Testament without discovering that Abraham has yet become, in any sense, the father of many nations. Let us now proceed into the New Testament and there search for a fulfillment of the promise.

In the first half of the first chapter of the book of Matthew, we find a genealogy of the generations of Abraham. It begins with Abraham and names each generation in its order until it comes to One named Christ. There the record is suddenly broken off. For the identification of this Man, Christ, we turn to Galatians 3:16, and there Paul introduces Him to us. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." But this identifies Him only as an Israelite, and so far as we know, Abraham is still the father of only one nation.

Although the record of the generations of Abraham stops with Christ, we are not to conclude that He was the last descendant of Abraham. It was through the Seed that the promise was to be fulfilled which God gave unto Abraham: "And I will make thee a father of many nations."

Again the inspired commentary comes to our aid. The Apostle Paul, in his epistle to the Galatians, explains the mystery for us in his usual clear-cut and concise style. "For ye are all the children of Abraham by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Thus, through combining the study of the Old and New Testaments, we are able to more fully understand God's covenant with Abraham, and to see Abraham in the fulness of his capacity as "a father of many nations".

way to the temptations of passion and he committed the great sin of his life for which he was severely punished, but which he confessed in deepest sorrow and for which he was forgiven.

His history is an introduction to those prophecies concerning his family, especially concerning our Lord who sprang from the root of Jesse. Psalm 2; 72; 99; 11:1-10; Acts 2:25-31. In relation to our Lord, David was His type after the flesh, and in his humiliation and exaltation. As a vanquisher of heathen nations, he was a fitting type of Him of whom he made mention many times in the Psalms, calling Him the Son of David. Compare Isaiah 53:3 with Acts 13:34. The book records many typical events which had their accomplishment in Christ. It contains several prophecies concerning the families of Eli and Saul, which were speedily fulfilled. The song of Hannah concludes with a prophecy of our Lord, in which He is predicted, for the first time, as the Messiah, the anointed of God.

CREATION AND SCIENCE

image . . . ." as the angels were created before man and man is undoubtedly in their image? Whom else could God command? Of course He could command, as it appears Christ commanded the storm on Galilee, but putting the two together, Gen. 1:26 and Psa. 148:5, there would seem to be reason for the attempted harmony.

Leaving this digression, we now come to our third point. Third, the Hebrew particle, ve, translated "and" has two interesting features: (a) It makes the second verse a continuation of the narrative begun in the first. It implies that the earth was already in existence and that something had been said of it with which the "and" is the connecting link, showing that the earth already existed before it became waste. (b) The Hebrew particle, ve, does not imply immediate sequence. A very great time may have elapsed between the first and second verses. Thus in chapters 6:1, 11 (R. V.); 11:1; and 24:1 there is no immediate sequence. This again allows for unlimited time between the events of the first and second verse.

That this last mentioned interpretation was not invented for meeting the geological difficulty is proved from the fact that 1500 years before geology was dreamed of as a science, Saints Augustine, Basil, and Gregory pointed this out, and Origen and Justin Martyr, still earlier.

Fourth, that the creation in Genesis, after verse 1, is only a surface creation is more than probable from the foregoing fact, and is in full harmony with the finding of geology that the earth has suffered several catastrophes, man only appearing after the last. That this is probably only a surface creation is apparently confirmed by Psalm 104:30—"Thou re-newest the face of the earth."

ALL THINGS WHATSOEVER YE WOULD THAT MEN SHOULD DO TO YOU, DO YE EVEN SO TO THEM.—MATT. 7:12.

THE COMING KINGDOM

(Concluded from last week)

HEALTH. A condition of the kingdom age. Isaiah 33:24. "And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity." Isa. 35:3-6, "Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompence; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." Isa. 29:18, 19, "And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel."

Peace. Another kingdom condition, Micah 4:3-4 and Psalm 72:6-8. "And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and thy shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it." "He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth. In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth."

Third, a work of Christ. John 18:36-37 and Isa. 9:6-7, compared. "Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence. Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

—Leota Hotchkiss, Grand Rapids Berean Society.

Here is a splendid article from a young Indiana Berean. We have just been thinking how much more pleasant life would be if the Golden Rule were practiced in the relations of business to-day. We cannot hope for that, but there will come a day when industrial life, as well as religious life, will acknowledge Jesus Christ as Head. May it be soon!

THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT IN INDUSTRY

EVER SINCE the rise of the factory system, and even before, there has not been much Christian spirit in industry. There are many exceptions, however, where the employers are kind and considerate, and where the employees do their best conscientiously.

In the majority of business relations there is not perfect harmony; for the employers do not respect the welfare of the workers and the employees do not do their work well.

Both the management and the labor should agree; and to do this perfectly the Christian spirit is needed.

Some men, kindly and considerate of their office workers, are always in a dilemma, for the employees are not conscientious about their work. Other cases are exactly opposite—workers doing their best under inconsiderate employers.

Throughout the Bible are commands for masters not to oppress, and for servants to be obedient. These commands may well be applied to modern industry, but, sadly, are not; mainly because many men believe religion has no place in industry.

Injustice, as practiced by both employer and employee, is very offensive to God. And justice, which makes for harmony is pleasing in His sight. As harmony produces better products, better both in quality and quantity, it is much to be desired.

Therefore, the Christian spirit in industry is valuable.

William Hunt.

THE CHILD IN A CHRISTIAN WORLD

“T WAS THE night before Christmas
When all through the house” all was in perfect order. All morning mother and the children had cleaned and baked and planned. Bob and Betty had cracked nuts for the salad, polished apples for the big dish, made place cards and tiny surprises.

They had happily brought down the box of decorations, and made the little cottage gay with the wreaths, bells and candles of previous years. This “set off” the Christmas tree, which Father had brought in in the early afternoon. It, too, was shining with tinsel and all manner of pretty emblems. And when everything was in place big Sister had read Hans Anderson’s story “The Little Fir Tree.”

After dinner Bob spelled out “The Night before Christmas”, and again big Sister yielded to the demand for “The Little Match Girl” and “The Christ Child”.

But now,

“The stockings were hung by the chimney with care
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there.”

A solemn hush had settled over the little household. A breathless expectancy filled the room. Mother had completed her preparations and had quietly taken her place in the midst of the family group. Betty crept up into her mother’s lap and lovingly put her head against the beloved shoulder. Bob had also edged up close to her knee.

For several days Mother had been telling them about Mary and Joseph and the customs of the people in the Holy Land. They had poured over maps and pictures. They had talked about shepherds and people of the East. At last they were ready for the real story toward which they had been planning. Betty whispered, “Now, Mother, tell us the story you promised—the one about why we have Christmas.”

“Yes,” said Mother. “But in place of telling you the story I want to read it from God’s own Word. It is told in the most beautiful, dignified language there—far lovelier than I could tell it. Let us read it as it is given to us.”

“And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

“And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

“And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds. But Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart. And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told them.”

The little mother quietly closed the Book and reverently laid it aside. She, too, often pondered in her heart.

Looking about at the little circle of glowing faces, she felt so happy and blessed that she simply had to raise her voice, too, in praise as the others had done. The little ones joined in the beautiful old hymns and carols that they had all come to love.

And surely with all this genuine worship, they were ready for the real Christmas—the giving and receiving in the truly loving spirit.

Part 2 of “The Little Engine That Could” will appear in next issue.

THE CHILD IN A CHRISTIAN WORLD

Matthew 18:1-6; Mark 9:36, 37, 42; 10:13-16; Luke 2:1-20.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 11:1-9.

GOLDEN TEXT

Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.—Matt. 19:14.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Christian Obligations to Childhood.
Basic Truth: Jesus, in His Prenatal Life was Mothered by the Holy Spirit.

Outline: I. Christian Obligations to Childhood. II. Discerning Right Leadings and Following Them. III. The First Christian Child.

I. Christian Obligations to Childhood. "She was found with child of the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 1:18. From the earliest day of Christ's prenatal life, God surrounded Him with His own Spirit. The purest, strongest, most godly influence known to the heavenly Father enveloped His Son. Following His birth, the Father's Spirit guided, guarded and taught Him till manhood. At manhood the Savior was given the Spirit without measure, John 3:34. He who was chosen to become the Head of the world second only to God, was by God, even from earliest days of prenatal infancy, nurtured and tended by the Father's mightiest power for good.

It is in childhood that every prospect for victory in Christ shall be chosen. Only such children will attain to that victory as, during their mortal career, shall by faith live true to their Lord. If God wrapped the infant Messiah of the world so carefully with the influences of heaven, with what should we Christians of this time surround the childhood of our experience? That Christian who overlooks the child and waits for the man is like the shepherd who neglects his wolf-driven sheep till the lambs are grown.

II. Discerning Right Leadings and Following Them. With no physical object in sight, with no visible leader, the Christian, led by the eye of faith, listening with his ear to the Word of God, must discern that voice and leading of the Father, which, when followed will lead him to victory in Christ. But the child of his home, ere he reaches the age of faith in his Maker and faith in his Savior must, faithwise, be carried in arms by his parents until he may begin to walk the walk of faith. Thence till he can of himself under his Master's leading, fight his own fight of faith, the parent must school and train and encourage that child toward his Master, and away from opposition to the Master.

To rightly discern these leadings, to rightly lead that child of God's creation, is one of life's greatest tasks. Prayerfully, earnestly, spirit-led, he must by implicit faith explore life's travels, ever sensing God's leading for himself and the childhood about him.

"Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 19:14. If God so guarded the childhood of His Son and if Jesus exhorted that children should be permitted to come unto Him for His sustaining favors, with what intense concern should Christian life regard the childhood about it and search those leadings which, when followed, will crown the child with age-lasting victory.

III. The First Christian Child. Everything has its beginning. So also did God's new Man. As Adam started alone in Eden's garden, so Jesus, the sinless, the spirit-wrapped Child was alone in His beginnings. True to His Father, God failed Him not, but led Him gently. Like the lone evening star in the great, dark blue dome, so Christ, the first Child of Spirit, stood alone in the great darkness of human evil. But the angels of God introduced Him to man; the wise men of the day searched Him out; the simple men of faith gathered about Him and the victorious Messiah began to lead others of His kin (perhaps His half-kin, cf. Ishmael and Isaac, Gen. 21:10-12) toward the great fulfillment of God's plan for the new man. He who was great in His manhood was great in His infancy; He who was Victor at the cross was Victor at twelve before the lawyers. The crowned Savior was the outgrowth of the Child of God.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Man instinctively associates these words with healthy, attractive, winning childhood, with children who come trustingly to loving parents. He does not so readily picture Jesus blessing unbeautiful childhood, warped in body, mind, and disposition.

Instinct life in health and strength recoils from the physically and mentally unfit because "survival of the fit" is the flesh idea of race preservation and salvation. In harmony with this idea, the flesh mind does not conceive of a Savior as One who blesses unfit little ones, nor unfit little ones grown to adulthood in years only.

Redemption through Jesus is the Spirit's law of race preservation and salvation, and the working of the Spirit through Jesus is not influenced even ever so remotely by the flesh ideas.

The general failure, or reluctance, of Christians to grasp that God's love through Jesus provides for the salvation of the "unfit" is due to the promptings of instinct flesh life. Flesh man becomes Christian as he learns to distinguish the promptings of the flesh from the promptings of the Spirit, and to eschew the one and cleave to the other.

Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me" not altogether because childhood represents beautiful trust, but also because childhood, beautiful and unbeautiful, represents man's inherent need of the Father's love.

—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Finding and Following Right Leaders.

As young people, we are all hero worshipers. We choose a certain person as our ideal and we follow him. Sometimes it is a fictitious character; sometimes it is one from the pages of history; but more often it is one from life itself. We fashion our lives after this one; we shape our habits to conform with his; in short, we imitate our choice in word and deed. How important then that the leaders we choose shall be the ones who shall lead us upward, not downward, toward a worthy aim, not away from it!

There are a few individuals who are neither leaders, nor followers, but go their own way regardless of others. The vast majority of us, however, are like sheep, we follow the leader. Look about you and note instances of this. What is the effect of this attitude upon their lives? By observing them, can you name certain traits in the characters of the leaders?

The Children of Israel were a notable example of this. When they had righteous leaders, they worshiped God and He blessed them in many material ways, and the opposite was true when they had wicked leaders. Two outstanding instances of this are David and Ahab.

Let us choose those who will lead us in the right paths and who will help us toward Christian ideals.—M. G.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Religion of Childhood. Christianity is the religion of childhood. Its Founder is introduced as a tiny Baby in His mother's arms. And children adore babies. The early life of Jesus shows the possibility of an individual living for God, and working for God, long before he has reached maturity. Christianity makes the purity, the innocence, and the faith of childhood the standard of conduct for all men. The teaching of our Lord places a shining crown of approval and blessing upon the brow of youth! When divested of its traditional robes of mystery, the great fundamentals of Christian faith are easily assimilated by the child mind. It is not difficult to teach him to believe in the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus, or in the wonderful fact of His coming again to call the sleeping saints from their earthy beds to the glory of the new day. Their hearts will thrill at the thought of the Eden home with its fruits and trees and flowers, with its light and life and joy! All these things a child can understand and appreciate, and through them be brought to love and serve God!—G. E. M.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Several errors crept into this issue because a corrected proof sheet was mislaid.

It makes us very happy to report that Sr. Mary Renner of Golden Rule Home has improved very much in the last few days and she is able to be around her room part of the day. We pray that "Aunt Mary" may be spared for many years to brighten and cheer Golden Rule Home.

Sr. Betty Kilmer fell asleep at Golden Rule Home, December 4 and was laid to rest December 6 near Chana, Illinois, Bro. F. L. Austin officiating at the services. In health Sr. Kilmer was of a very congenial disposition and an agreeable and adaptable member of the Home. She was baptized by Bro. Austin in 1927 and, though quite deaf, she enjoyed attending services when health permitted. Other particulars of her life are not at hand. After several months of suffering, she sleeps, quietly awaiting the Master's call.

In building a background for the Christmas sermon, Bro. F. L. Austin has been giving, on Sunday evenings, different phases of the Savior's mission. Last Sunday he spoke on "Christ the King", and next Sunday evening the subject will be "Christ the Atonement". The attendance at all the Oregon services has been very gratifying to the pastor.

NOTICE

Those who have not already ordered their quarterlies for the first quarter of 1930, please send in your order at once, stating number desired. Address, National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Our pastor will be in Moorefield, Nebraska, December 15 and 22, holding services on the two Sundays. All readers, far and near, are invited to come for either or both of these Sunday services. Our Berean class will have charge of the morning worship here on Sunday, December 15. The Bereans are planning a Christmas program.

Services next first Sunday at Blair, sacrament following the morning service.

All are welcome at the Church of God.

ILLINOIS APPOINTMENTS

Sunday morning, December 15, Bro. Paul C. Johnson will preach for the congregation at the Plum River church and in the evening of the same day at the Adeline church. All those living near these churches bear this in mind and gather together for worship.

Bro. F. E. Siple will speak for the Rockford Bereans on Friday, December 13, at 7:45 at their regular place of meeting, 1904 N. Main Street. All who find it possible to attend will be welcomed.

After almost a month's absence, holding meetings in the south, Bro. F. E. Siple will again be with his congregation at Dixon on Sunday, December 15. Sunday School at 10 o'clock and preaching at 11 a. m., and at 7:30 p. m. Every one always welcome at the Dixon church. Go and enjoy these services with them.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Bro. and Sr. Townsend have moved into their new home in the south end. This move brings them closer to the church where they spend a good deal of their time.

Christmas will soon be here. It is the country's greatest holiday. As usual the church is making plans to commemorate the birth of our Master and Savior. The wheels of activity are turning very rapidly.

Dutton and Grand Rapids folks spoke in thanksgiving terms to the Grand Rapids pastor and family with a large amount of good things to eat. Michigan, like other states, has a lot of dear, good souls. Friends are values that cannot be estimated.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Sr. Wyman has moved to Santa Monica, so as to be near her son's family. Her address is 1024 1-2 18th Street. She has been a regular attendant at all church services and now we miss her greatly. We trust that she will be able to attend occasionally after she gets nicely settled in her new home.

We were happy to have Sr. Harriet E. Shepherd, of Redlands, with us for 1st Sunday services. We wish she might come oftener.

The long, continued dry spell is blamed for colds and sickness among us. Sisters Crundwell and Cripe have been kept from services for some time, but are better at present. Several others have suffered likewise.

Bro. Marsh's first two sermons of the series on The Fundamentals of Christian Faith were strong and forceful and left no room for doubt as to where he stands as to the Church of God advocating clear and definite doctrines to be believed and obeyed in order to salvation.

Bro. and Sr. Hatch and Sr. Dresser, of Santa Ana, were among the out-of-town brethren attending the 1st Sunday services. Hearty expressions of approval of the truths set forth were heard on all sides.

Bro. and Sr. Conway have returned to Los Angeles from Seattle. Bro. Conway has been among those afflicted with severe colds and not able to attend services, but we have been glad to welcome Sr. Conway and Sr. Morgan among us again.

Sisters Marsh, Saylor, and Rahn constitute the committee for the Christmas program which will be given December 22. We trust that it will be one that will set forth the gospel message to both young and old and inspire zeal to steadfastness.

OREGON

Bro. O. J. Allard spent several days visiting in Eugene before continuing his trip northward. He was accompanied to Corvallis by Sr. Minnie Rogers who attended the quarterly meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wadsworth and daughter and Sr. Sarah Smith, of Portland, motored to Corvallis to attend the funeral of Sr. Smith's brother, the late W. I. Barber. The party spent several days visiting with relatives and attended the meetings.

Several members drove from a distance to attend the quarterly meeting of the Northwestern Conference. Those from Vancouver, Washington, included Bro. and Sr. Ed. L. McIrvin and Bro. and Sr. Wallace Woolf. Attending from Gresham, Oregon, were Bro. and Sr. A. W. Darby and Sr. H. B. Cramer.

Bro. Burrell B. Hathaway and wife attended church on Sunday.

Sr. Elsie Galbraith, of Vancouver, was unable to attend the conference meeting because of illness.

Sr. S. E. Smith, of Portland, left Tuesday for Oakland, California, where she will visit with grandchildren.

The Sunday School at Corvallis has purchased twenty of the new hymn books from National Bible Institution and is very much pleased with them.

Bro. J. C. Wilson spent the week-end in Corvallis.

N. W. QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The Quarterly meeting of the Northwestern Conference of Oregon and Washington was held November 30 and December 1 at Corvallis, Oregon. Bro. O. J. Allard opened the meeting on Saturday evening with a sermon. Sunday morning, instead of having Sunday School Bro. Allard conducted a Bible Study on "Faith", following which Bro. Darby gave a talk on "Our Hope". Bible study was continued in the afternoon. At the evening meeting Bro. Darby talked on, "The Christian Life and Its Reward." Ignorance of one's duty to the heavenly Father can be no excuse for anyone who heard this sermon and fails to live up to it. Bro. Allard spoke on "Healers and Wonderworkers", and warned the church against these present day evils.

The quarterly meetings provide a means whereby the members may meet oftener than heretofore and the increased interest and activity more than repays the leaders for their efforts. In the present days of trials and tribulations it is all the more necessary to meet often and encourage each other to continue in the faith.

Gladys Barber, Secretary.

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Bro. Austin: I am very sorry I have no copy to enclose at this writing. The following explains. Some ten days ago a severe cold settled on the left side of my face. An infected tooth becoming involved caused much swelling and inflammation from eye to shirt-band and from nose nearly to ear. All the teeth on the left side finally "joined the band" as it were. You can better imagine than I can explain how I enjoyed the music. It's better to turn a tragedy into a comedy than to divert a happy mode into discouragement. Am glad to report conditions are clearing up. I feel that in a few days I shall have time and opportunity to again apply my mind and eyes to the precious Word, and to pass along my collected thoughts on the good tidings of great joy to others.

What weak mortals we are! How little it requires to put us temporarily out of commission! But if our minds and hearts be properly exercised by our experiences we can easily recognize their good effect as Paul explains in Romans 8:28. Nothing can possibly happen (?) to us—be it pleasant or unpleasant—but what our heavenly Father has a profitable lesson in it for us. What failures we should make were it not that God can create blessings for us out of our mistakes and carelessness! He looks at the intent and sincerity of the heart and blessings come when we "keep the heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life", Prov. 4:20-23.

Kindly convey my best wishes and Christian love to the brethren. I remain,
Your fellow servant in His name,
Samuel E. Haney,
2437 South 17th Street, Philadelphia, Penn.

Dear Workers: Enclosed find check for fifteen dollars: Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Savage, Sr., General Fund, $5.00; T. M. Savage, Jr., $4.00; W. M. Bower, Training Class, $1.00; Sadie Savage, Thank Offering, $5.00.

We surely enjoy The Restitution Herald. It is always like a nice visit from a lot of friends. We thank our heavenly Father for His help with the work. May God bless you all.

Yours in His service.
Mrs. Thos. M. Savage,
Waite Park, Minn.

(How thankful regular tithers grow to be, and what good tithers thankful ones make! All may be glad to know that the above is one of the regular monthly contributions to this work.—Secretary.)

WILLIAM ISAAC BARBER

The subject of this sketch, William Isaac Barber, was born November 4, 1865, at Eagleville, Mo., and died at Corvallis, Oregon, November 27, 1927, being 64 years and 23 days of age. Bro. Barber was the son of Joshua and Caleb Barber. He was married to Edith Wilson, of Blythedale, Mo., in 1907, and to this union two children were born, a daughter, Gladys, and a son, Carl.

Bro. Barber was baptized into the Abrahamic faith by Bro. John Foore at Parsons Kansas in 1907, and lived a faithful Christian life to the end. Words of hope and faith were spoken by the writer to comfort the sorrowing, bringing forth some of his most favorite texts, and then he was laid away to rest till his Master calls.

J. C. Wilson.

MRS. S. C. SONNICHSEN

Harriet Parkinson was born in Grant County, Wisconsin, in 1867 and died at Cherokee, Iowa, December 3, 1929. The family came to Sac County, Iowa, when she was a year old, making the trip in a covered wagon, and settled on the east shore of Wall Lake, where she grew to womanhood. She was married to S. C. Sonnichsen on November 27, 1890, and two children were born to them, one son who died in infancy, and a daughter, Emma, wife of E. L. Swanson, of Sutherland, Iowa. She was baptized in 1910 and lived a life of devotion and unselfish service, respected by neighbors and loved by all.

Funeral services were held in the M. E. church at Lake View, Iowa, by the writer, assisted by the local pastor, and she was laid to rest in the Ferguson cemetery, free from the torments of flesh life that so afflicted her the last three years, and waiting for her crown of life.

THE LORD HIMSELF

“WHEREFORE LET MY LORD HIMSELF give you a sign,— “Lo! a Virgin being with child and giving birth to a son thou wilt call his name Immanuel.”

A SAVIOR GIVEN

For A Child hath been born to us,
A Son hath been given to us,
And the dominion is upon his shoulder,—
And his Name hath been called Wonderful Counsellor,
Mighty God,
Father of Futurity,
Prince of Prosperity.
Of the increase of dominion and of prosperity
By sustaining it,
With justice and
With righteousness,—
There shall be no end—
Upon the throne of David and Upon his kingdom,
By establishing it and
From henceforth even Unto times age-abiding:
The jealousy of Yahweh of hosts will perform this!

EDITORIAL

“For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.”—Luke 2:11.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

THE WORKERS OF THE RESTITUTION HERALD and the National Bible Institution extend heartiest Christmas Greetings to all the readers and workers, and to all their loved ones. Like other phases of life, Christmas is largely what we make it. He who approaches close up to the Father's throne, close up to the Savior's light, is more receptive of the gifts of God, of the love and sacrifice of Christ, than he who stands off afar. May the whole family of readers and co-workers unite to guide each other nearer and ever nearer unto Him whom the Father has sent to be the Light of the world. May that Light shine more brightly upon your pathway and lead you more clearly in the way of duty than ever heretofore. May the great, true lessons which the Christmastide annually brings around, enter more deeply, more brightly, more effectively, into your individual lives, and may each one find that moving star of hope which will lead him to the place where the Savior is.

The members of the Golden Rule Home, with thanks for all the gifts of the Father, bid Christmas cheer, good will, and fellowship and love to one and all.

CHRISTMAS

AGAIN THE ANNIVERSARY of the birth of our Lord and Master comes to us. Its influences of deepest cheer, of happiest good will, of tenderest care for others around and about are permeating the atmosphere everywhere. The nation will be the better for Christmas. Commercialized as the day is, converted into a day of rioting and lust in many places and ways, yet nevertheless the world will be the better for this, another anniversary. The sweet influences of the Christ life, the tempering of thousands and millions of lives, fashioning them like unto that of the Savior, can but give to the world a vision and benefit that could come in no other way.

Christians should be encouraged greatly by the fact that they are enabled Christmas after Christmas, to emphasize some of the great and uplifting phases of Christianity. They cannot hope that the day or season will be ideally deed in Christ unto the world of man. May Christmas be made the jewel of opportunity set upon the background of the preceding months of 1929.

THE LORD HIMSELF

ON THE FRONT PAGE of this issue will be found the Emphatic Bible Translation of Isaiah 7:14 and 9:6, 7. Rotherham, the author, writes a footnote in explanation of the word Virgin in 7:14 as follows:

“It is true that the Hebrew word here is almah, and not bethulah; but an examination of all the occurrences of the former shows that it is synonymous with the latter, and properly means virgin”.

Neither the translation nor the footnote are presented in The Herald as being a final word as to these scriptures, but rather to give the readers the benefit of whatever of Rotherham's effort in the presentation of God's Word. They are presented as opportune and appropriate at this season of the year.

THE WISE MEN

WERE THEY LED with the dictate and commandment of Herod or were they led by the star in the heavens? They came to Jerusalem, Matt. 2:1, and inquired where He might be who was born King of the Jews. Pricked and aroused, Herod at once called together the chief priests and scribes and “demanded of them where Christ should be born”. Back to the prophets the wise men unrolled their scrolls until they came to the record of Micah 5:2 and answered Herod, “In Bethlehem of Judea”. Urged on in fear of his security upon the throne and jealous of even a Babe to whom his subjects should ascribe the title of King, Herod privately called in the wise men, Matt. 2:7, and “diligently” inquired of them what time the star appeared. He would know how long that star had beckoned the wise men from the east. He would know how old that Child was. He would learn all possible about Him who was “born King of the Jews”. Having learned the place where He should be born and having learned the time when the star appeared, he commanded the wise men to go to Bethlehem. Out from his presence they took their journey; out into the street of Jerusalem, they went their way. The star which had guided them here, again “went before them, till it

THE UNITY OF THE SPIRIT

By C. E. Randall

"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."—Ephesians 4:1-3.

THE CHURCH throughout the New Testament is spoken of as "one body". The church is one even as Christ and the Father are one—not one in person, but one in purpose and spirit. Christ in His last great prayer asked the Father to keep those that He had given Him as "one". "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory that thou gavest me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one."—John 17:20-22.

The purpose of this oneness is clearly stated in the clause, "that the world may believe that thou hast sent me". The oneness of the body of Christ does more to impress the world that Christ came and did His first ministerial work than any other thing. There is a responsibility on the part of every son and daughter of the Father in making this request of the Savior a practice as well as a rule. If we are to walk worthy of our vocation we must keep the "unity of the spirit in the bond of peace". Such a relation among the members of the Church of God is not the dream of a dreamer but the plan of the Head of the body—even Christ.

ATTAINING UNITY

This unity cannot be attained by creeds, articles of faith or statements of belief. There never has been nor ever will be a body of believers that believe alike on all questions or that view every phase of a question from the same angle. We haven't a church where all members believe alike on all doctrines. They may and should be in agreement on the fundamentals such as conditional immortality, sleep of the dead, baptism and other closely allied doctrines. While I grant and believe that there are some of the fundamentals such as listed above that an individual must believe and live before he can become a member of Christ's body, yet there will never be a unity of belief on all doctrines as long as there is more than one composing the body.

If the oneness of the body of Christ cannot be fully realized through unity of belief, how can it be accomplished? It can come through the Spirit. There is one Spirit, and by this Spirit we are all baptized into one body. "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." 1 Cor. 12:13. It doesn't make any difference whether we live in Ohio, Illinois or Michigan, it is the same Spirit that operates upon all. It comes from the same Source and works for the same purpose. If we have this Spirit, why should there not be unity among us? If we have not this Spirit, we are none of His. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8:9. I sometimes wonder, when there is apparent lack of unity, if the Spirit which is the true basis of unity is not lacking. If we have the Spirit, we are going to walk worthy of our vocation and if we walk worthy of our vocation we will have the Spirit and will keep it in the bond of peace, which is unity.

Before leaving this phase of the question, it might be well to add that the Spirit is not obtained by a superficial knowledge of the truth. There are a lot of people that know the truth, but haven't a particle of the Spirit. And we don't have to raid the ranks of other denominations to find this class of people; we can find a large group in our own following. The Spirit does not come through mere knowledge, but through the application to our lives of the truth that we possess. A little truth put to work is worth more than all the knowledge possessed by prophet and priest alike, when such knowledge is not used to God's glory.

CONTROVERSY

Controversy should not be the cause of bringing divisions, schisms and hard feelings in the body of Christ. "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness." 1 Tim. 3:16. Controversial questions or teachings concerning which we are in disagreement should be handled with the utmost tact and courtesy and this will be done if we have the indwelling of the Spirit. Differences of opinion on doctrinal questions around which we are divided should be an incentive for research work and should lead to edification, but should not be a cause for division. If the true Spirit pervades our lives these questions can be talked over in a Christian way and the oneness of the body not affected.

FAMILY PRINCIPLE

The church is established on the family principle. We are one great family, with a common Father, even God. This family is composed of many members, each member having a vocation: all working for a common purpose; striving for the same goal. Each member can call God, "My Father"; together we can say, "Our Father". We can call Christ, who is the Head, "Our Brother", for He

REJOICING OF ANGELS

Hark! what mean those holy voices,
Sweetly sounding through the skies?—
Lo! the angelic host rejoices;—
Heavenly hallelujahs rise.

Hear them tell the wondrous story,
Hear them chant in hymns of joy;
Glory in the highest—glory,
Glory be to God on high.

Peace on earth, good will from heaven,
Reaching far as man is found;
Souls redeemed and sins forgiven,—
Lord, our golden harps shall sound.

Christ is born our King anointed,
Heaven and earth His praises sing!
Oh, receive whom God appointed,
For your Prophet, Priest, and King.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS ANTHEM

“AND SUDDENLY THERE WAS WITH THE ANGEL a multitude of the heavenly host.” God is “the Lord of hosts,” Jehovah of Sabaoth, the Commander of the majestic armies of heaven. The veil which ordinarily hides this Sabaoth from mortal eyes was in an instant swept aside and a portion of it was disclosed to the view of the amazed shepherds. In their dazed condition the shepherds only knew that at one moment the sky was crowded with angels, and the next moment they had disappeared and the stars were shining forth as before the strange event.

“And when they saw it, they made known concerning the saying which was spoken to them about this child.” Thus these humble men were the first of a long line of Christian evangelists who through nineteen centuries have been spreading the “good tidings of great joy” throughout the world.

“And all that heard it wondered at the things which were spoken unto them by the shepherds.” Well might they wonder, for it was the greatest news ever told in the world’s history, tidings proclaimed by a chorus of angels. And all men join in singing that song, so far as they have knowledge and grace.

“And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen.” They praised God for the wonderful sight of the angelic host, for the beauty of the celestial chorus, for the mystery of the marvelous birth, for the glorious hopes attaching to the advent of the Messiah, and for the great honor conferred upon them in making them witnesses and announcers of these things.

This was the climax that confirmed the angel’s prophecy to Mary as well as the ancient prophecies to the Jewish race. The birth of the Savior was not a hasty thought of the heavenly Father, but it reached back to the beginning of time and was involved in all the long processes of creation and of history.

Christmas is a day of supreme gladness. Christianity came in with a song. The song of the Nativity is the song of songs, for it has given birth to a world of singing. There was not much singing before Christ came; there is not much real music today where He is unknown. But where Christ is loved and served, joy and gladness obtain, and sorrow and sighing flee away.—Adapted.

THE COVENANT WITH ABRAHAM

By Dorothy Krogh

GOD SAID UNTO ABRAHAM, “Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I shall tell thee of.” What a command! God had on many former occasions, tested Abraham’s faith and obedience but this was the hardest trial of all. Isaac was his only son.

Ishmael had been sent away from him by God’s command, and now Isaac, the promised son and heir, was to be taken from him. His loss would seemingly result in all hopes of the fulfillment of the promise being destroyed. It was through Isaac that Abraham’s seed would become a great nation and also through him was to come that Seed in whom all nations of the earth should be blessed.

This was a severe trial to human nature, but if the flesh shuddered, the spirit was absolute. God commanded—Abraham obeyed. He took two young men and the wood for the burnt offering and with his son set out for the place of which God had told him. When he came in sight of his destination he told the young men to remain there while he went with the lad to worship. Lading Isaac with the wood and taking the other materials for a burnt offering, Abraham with his son proceeded on the journey.

Isaac, ignorant of the design of his father went cheerfully on but perceiving that a proper victim, the most essential requisite for a sacrifice was wanting, innocently asked his father, “Where is the lamb for a burnt offering?” Such a question at such a time would be enough to shake any heart less firm than Abraham’s. But strengthened by his faith in God’s promise, Abraham replied, “My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering”. This is indeed what happened. Abraham, having bound his son and laid him on the altar, raised his knife to slay the sacrifice.

But God was satisfied with the faith and obedience of Abraham. An angel called to Abraham, saying, “Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou anything unto him.” Abraham raising his eyes beheld a ram caught in a thicket by his horns. Convinced that this was a substitute provided by God, he took the ram and having slain it with the knife intended for the destruction of his son he presented it "instead of Isaac, as a burnt offering unto the Lord."

This token of Abraham's obedience was satisfactory to God and He rewarded him with a renewing and enlargement of His covenant, saying, "By myself have I sworn, for because thou hast done this thing and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son; that in blessing I will bless thee and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice."

The first part of this covenant has been fulfilled. The seed of Abraham, through Isaac and Jacob, grew into a great nation, Israel. These people were prospered and favored by God until they became a powerful nation, victorious in battle and unequalled in splendor. In the second part of the covenant Christ is promised, "And in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." These words refer to the one perfect Seed, Christ. This has not yet been fulfilled, but in the age to come, through Christ, all nations of the earth shall be blessed.

GIFTS TO THE CHRISTMAS CAUSE

---

NO DOUBT BUT AT THIS CHRISTMAS TIME many Universities, Hospitals, Clubs and other interests will receive donations and endowments totaling millions of dollars. The individual gifts will run from a few dollars each to a hundred dollars, a thousand, a million, or more, according as ability and desire determine. It is only as such gifts are repeated and repeated that the aforesaid institutions come into being and exist.

Besides the aforementioned, the names of Bible societies, all religious publishing houses, all religious headquarters—probably every one of these throughout the country—are each and all built, equipped, maintained and operated, by the gifts of those who are interested. He who would try to visualize the worth of man's gifts for the public good should try to visualize the sum total of the many towering edifices, surrounded by groups of lesser buildings; the many churches, schools, parks, etc., etc., which stand out in testimony everywhere throughout the broad land. And all these gifts are prompted by a deep-seated desire in the human breast for the good and welfare of others.

The Church of God seems scarcely to have realized, according to its ability, this side of life. None, anywhere in God's realm have more reason for incentive to do than do those who are professedly committing all to God and building all upon His word of revelation. It is therefore earnestly suggested that this brotherhood everywhere shall, each and all, carefully consider the truth of the foregoing statements and shall prayerfully consider what might be proper and well for us as a people to provide as a gift to the world in the name of our Savior.

Already this brotherhood has undertaken a large labor through its general work under the name, National Bible Institution. There is no limit to the amount of the publication of gospel truths, to the amount of evangelization, to the amount of real gospel work that can be done by this Institution, excepting that the boundary line is made hard and fast by the limited amount of means at disposal for these labors. To the end that each may see some of the possibilities of service in this line the following is presented:

Annuity Bonds are bonds issued to the purchasers thereof, which draw a stated rate of interest during lifetime. At the death of the purchaser, the principal of the bond becomes available for use by the National Bible Institution. The Annuity Bond medium is one of the means by which many other institutions have attained their great financial strength and ability. It affords the purchaser income upon his principal, as needed, during lifetime. It affords him the means of assuring that that principal shall become the property of the National Bible Institution at his death. The National Bible Institution would be greatly strengthened for service if the people of its brotherhood would realize the good that could be done in this manner and would devote a goodly portion of their means in this way.

Here are some suggestions: One wishes to provide that, after his death, a steady income go to a member of his family—to an aged companion, to a child, or to some other one. An Annuity Bond, purchased in the name of that one for whom he wishes to provide an income, would provide such income during the lifetime of that one. At the death of that annuitant, the principal would become available by the Institution. In this way one is able to "care for his own" so long as they in life need care and then to provide that the Christian cause shall be enriched by the principal which he shall designate in such a bond.

The National Bible Institution will gladly welcome this type of gift at this Christmas. There are hundreds of thousands of dollars "set aside for rainy days" which would do the owner just as much good if the principal were given in this way; which would provide the owner, or any other person designated, annual revenue throughout life, and in the end would enrich this Institution and strengthen it for service.

In closing it should be stated that the principals of these Annuity Bonds are not placed in use by the National Bible Institution during the lifetime of their owners, but that they are reinvested, with the advice and assistance of our banker, in the best known securities for the protection of those purchasing the Annuity Bonds.

Let us unite in serving God by providing financial strength for this great work.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

GOD SEEKS WORSHIPERS

Sunday, December 22—John 4:16-26

"But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him. Verse 23.

HE WHO CHOOSES TO PLEASE the Father can do so in no better way than to do that which the Father seeks to have done; worship Him. To bow one's whole life before the pleasure and person of the Creator, who in gentlest, kindest and most painstaking mercy, wishes to guide, to strengthen, and to provide for His creatures, is but to learn and practice the ways of that Creator.

The greatest reason that the Father seeks such worshippers, is because all such, by their worship and devotion of life, are built up and perfected like unto the Father himself. For their special good, He seeks to have them worship Him.

LOVE FOR THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP

Monday, December 23—Psa. 1:22.

"I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go in to the house of the Lord."—V. 1.

From the earliest day of the choosing of a nation, God provided that its people should have houses of worship. It was there that He taught Israel to assemble in worship and devotion; it was there that our Savior met in the days of His ministry with those who followed Him. The house which is erected by the sum total of the gifts of the people is an expression of the hearts of that people. The congregation which assembles expresses anew the hearts of those gathered as they unite in common spirit to worship the God of heaven. There are no other buildings erected by man which compare with the true houses of worship. None others provide so much of real profit to the spiritual and temporal or practical forces of life.

THE DEPTHS OF WORSHIP

Tuesday, December 24—Hebrews 10:19-26.

"Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water."—Hebrews 10:22.

Worship is not only a bowing before the Father. The very fact of submission unto Him carries the individual in spirit toward the innermost sanctuary of the Father's presence. But the Hebrew writer, after explaining in 9:8 that the Holy Ghost through the patterns of the tabernacle of olden days signified "that the way of the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing" adds, in 10:19, "having therefore, brethren, boldness (liberty, margin) to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus"; he reveals that true worship will carry the individual eventually into the very holy of ho-lies beyond the veil into the presence of God himself. Nothing but being fashioned like unto the Father can qualify a person thus to enter and abide in His presence. Such are the depths to which true worship advances the individual.

WISE MEN WORSHIP

Wednesday, December 25—Matt. 2:7-12.

"The star, which they saw in the east, went before them, until it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."—Vv. 9, 10.

There was no room for doubt in the minds of these men of wisdom. They did not need to ask whether or not the One before them was the proper child. The star of heaven, like the Shekinah glory of earlier days moved slowly before the wise men. It led them whither God would have them go. There is no bit of record to indicate that the wise men obeyed the instructions of Herod who sent them in search of the Christ Child. His information was useless to them; they followed the star. They found the infant, in His beginning of days, Him whom the Father pointed out to be the coming Savior, Redeemer, and Sovereign. Here they worshiped as never before.

God's leadings are still active. He who would truly worship God, God will lead.

GOD'S BOOK GUIDES HIS WORSHIPERS

Thursday, December 26—Nehemiah 8:1:8.

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."—Second Timothy 2:15.

Being released from their seventy years of captivity in Babylon's land, Ezra led the people back to the place of the old firesides in Jerusalem. Quickly he assembled the people together for glad praises to God and for worship before Him. But one of his first public acts was to assemble the nation and while they stood in reverence before the great Giver of every good and perfect gift, the word of God was read aloud, that old and young might hear and understand. From morning unto mid-day, Ezra "stood upon a pulpit of wood, which they had made for that purpose"; and "in the sight of all the people" he opened the book, and as he read "all the people answered, Amen, Amen". "And they bowed their heads, and worshipped the Lord with their faces to the ground".

FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD

Friday, December 27—Matthew 6:5-15.

"And thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."—V. 6.

Prayer is one form of worship. It is the reaching out of the mind, of the thoughts of life, of life itself for the Father. It brings the individual mind into communion with that of God. Like as the individual dresses, adorns, beautifies the person when he contemplates approaching before another whom he regards, so the one who enters in prayer unto the Father purifies the mind of evil, beautifies it with thoughts of the Father and His Son, and approaches with the best mental preparation possible. In this manner he begins to commune with the Father. In the Savior's instructions as to prayer it is well to notice that the approach by way of prayer first acknowledges the Father, hallows His name, petitions for His authority, seeks His will—all this before any personal request is suggested. First worship; afterward assistance.

WORSHIP THROUGH SERVICE

Saturday, December 28—1 John 3:13-24.

"He that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him."—V. 16.

"Let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth."—V. 18.

Bowing before the Father is not complete in word only, neither alone in physical prostration but like humility, must be manifested in the actions and services of life. True worship brings the worshiper to humbly perform for the Father in his daily activities. In no way is this manifested more sincerely than by doing for the Father's creatures that which the Father would have done for them.

THE WISE MEN

came and stood over where the young child was". There is no record here to indicate that the star led them to Bethlehem to the Master, but they can hope and work and pray that many will strive to impress the truths which God vesthem; it led them to the Child. It was Herod who commanded them to go to Bethlehem. Luke tells us, 2:22, "When the days of her purification, according to the laws of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord." This was when the Child was forty-one days old, Lev. 12:3, 4. Then in v. 39 Luke says, "When they had performed all these things according to the law of the Lord, they returned to Galilee, to their own city Nazareth"; while Matt. 2:22 tells us "When they were come into the house (not stable) they saw the young child with Mary, his mother." Then vv. 12 and 13 add that "when they were departed," the angel appeared to Joseph and said, "Arise, . . . and flee into Egypt." The wise men did not return to Herod, "but when Herod saw that he was mocked of the wise men" he was angry "and sent forth and slew all of the children that were in Bethlehem . . . from two years old and under". If the wise men visited Jesus at Bethlehem, then Joseph and Mary fled to Egypt from thence. They could not have returned for the purification when the child was forty-one days old. The Scriptures indicate that the wise men visited Jesus at the house in Nazareth, not at the inn in Bethlehem.

However, he who today is wise will yet seek the Lord and the guiding light of Almighty God will lead every inquirer to the place where the glorified Christ can be found for the enrichment of him who will receive Him.

SEEK AND YE SHALL FIND

By M. A. Woodward

A STORMY WINTER DAY WAS SUNDAY, December eighth, but what did our energetic worker, Bro. Randall care for the storm. He was working for a Master who had faced many a storm for him, and others whom He desired to save. So he was at Dutton to speak to the eager seven who had walked through the storm to receive a blessing.

We were rewarded with a good, instructive sermon from the very practical servant, James, who in his first chapter calls us all to thoughts of God's willingness to help us, if we have faith in Him. Bro Randall emphasized the thought of our need of help in even the small things of this life, and that God stands ready to assist in any undertaking of His children that is just and honorable.

I had long believed this and have had many a talk with the patient heavenly Father about many things too small to bother our human friends with, but too knotty for me to unravel. They really concerned me deeply, and as "I walked with Him and talked with Him", I found ready answer to the problems that had worried me, for we all realize how sometimes a very small mistake on our part may cause others heartache or sadness or disturbance or inconvenience. It gladdened my heart to know that others were trusting God in the prayer of faith for the small things of life.

James speaks so humanly when he exhorts us to patience, "Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." He seemed to be experiencing the same difficulties which we may be passing through, His faith had been tried so he could say, "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience, but let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." We need not be discouraged then, when at times our faith gets a sudden jolt, and we have to stop and ponder. Look up to God with strong determination to go on, asking for the wisdom we fail to have, and which He willingly gives to all who ask in faith. He does not upbraid, chide, or condemn us because we have failed, but He makes a way for us to escape the chiding by our asking Him for help.

God demands perfect faith on our part in His ability to help us. We are too much like the woman who made a request of God, and because it was not granted immediately, said as she arose, "Just as I expected." She had no faith or patience to wait God's time. Jesus says, Mark 11:24, "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them". This is a manifestation of our faith. How little we are realizing God's willingness and power to help us, just because we do not act out our faith in Him! May He forgive us, and help us with wisdom and faith to prove our love to so very kind and merciful a Father, who through His Son, Jesus the Christ, has promised us all things, even eternal life.

UNTO US A SON IS BORN

A CHILD

ISAIAH WAS PROPHECYING concerning Judah and Jerusalem. Under instruction from God he declared, "for unto us a child is born". This statement in 9:6 of Isaiah was in harmony with what he began to state in 7:14, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Emmanuel". Assuring the followers of Christ of the accuracy of these prophecies and of their larger fulfillment in Christ, Luke, by inspiration, commented upon them by saying, "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ, the Lord".

The child Jesus was marvelous in many ways. Just as a simple child He was extraordinary though He was but the bud which gave promise of the fruit. As Son of God He gave promise to all the wonderful achievements that He in full power and authority of life would accomplish.

With Jesus as with all other created individuals, there could be no fullness of life, no fullness of work, no fullness of beauty or grandeur or greatness to be spread out over the land, unless He should first exist as a Child. And so the prophecies of Isaiah and the announcement of the gospel writers proclaimed, not only a Child born, but announced a Child as the beginning of a mighty labor, of a mighty performance; a Child destined to a most marvelous end; a Child whose later accomplishments meant more than those of all others to mankind.

That simple Child who was born to Jerusalem nineteen centuries ago is likewise born for you and me, who in our human weakness wonderingly gaze forward unto the fruition of our lives.

"Unto us a child is born."

A SON IS GIVEN

UNDER THE PROPHECIES of God there is a peculiar and special way in which the hope of the home, of the nation, of the world, is in their sons. From the Father in heaven is given in Christ a Son which is the hope of all ages.

He is the Son of God. Like as God created Adam "of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul", so He created Jesus, a second son, Adam's brother "made of a woman", Gal. 4:4, and gave into the midst of all of Adam's failure, His well-beloved Son. He was God's Son in whom was vested all the hopes and purposes of the Father.

He was given to be the Son of Adam in that God created Him through and out of Adam's descendants. As such all the hopes of Adam and of Adam's race are vested. Every failure of humanity was heaped upon His shoulder; every vision and hope of man depended upon Him. In a most special way the world of Adam's posterity looks to this Son as its only Hope, its only Prospect.

He was given to be the Son of Abraham. To Abraham was committed the far-reaching promises and covenants of God. God promised that in him and his seed all nations should be blessed. This blessing has never yet resulted. Isaac never fulfilled the covenants as given by God. These, too, awaited the new born Child, the Son that was to be given. And as the Savior first lifted His childish head and greeted the world of mankind with His clear, bright eyes, He looked upon a world that was dependent upon Him for the fulfillment of every blessing covenanted by God.

He was the given Son of David. To David God had given a throne. That throne was to abide forever. It was to exercise authority over God's chosen people Israel, and then to extend its authority to the nations of every climate and every shore. But the son of David's own day was insufficient, incompetent in his finite power to wield authority of such extent. In his helplessness he failed. But to David and to all David's people and to all people who are yet to rejoice in the benefits of David's throne God gave a Son, Jesus.

THE GOVERNMENT

"AND THE GOVERNMENT is put upon his shoulder." While in a small way the prophecies may have first pertained to Ahaz and his succeeding son, in a larger way the prophecies pointed forward to the One of whom David in Psa. 72 spoke forth in praises and said, "He shall rule from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth." This given Son of God, given to man, given to Abraham, given to David, has been given with the great assurance that the government of earth's world shall rest upon Him.

Little wonder that heaven's angels broke forth in one great chorus on the occasion of the birth of this Savior! Little wonder that they heralded the glad song, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ, the Lord."

EMMANUEL

REPEATING ALMOST WORD FOR WORD the prophetic statement of Isaiah 7:14, Matthew writes, "They shall call his name Emmanuel", and then interprets the name to mean, "God with us".

What meaning in that name! "God with us"! Jehovah Himself walked in the garden of the Lord in Eden's morn. His voice was clearly heard by His first man. And now, in the midst of a sin-sick world God placed His newly-created Man. Through Him God spoke and worked and wrought.

He was not placed in some far-off realm of better circumstance, but, into the very face and heart of sin He was given His task. Quickly and surely He revealed to man how "God with us" is and ever will be powerful to pluck sin's sting from the heart of man and to heal its wound with the eternal balm of the Spirit and righteousness of God.

HIS NAME SHALL BE

HIS NAME

BY FIGURE OF SPEECH with which all scriptures, and especially the Hebrew scriptures, are so filled, the prophet here by metonymy speaks of the child when referring to the name of him. It was the Child himself who was to bear the various titles which Isaiah announced.

WONDERFUL

THIS CHILD WAS TO BE CALLED WONDERFUL, Singular. As old Mt. Everest lifts its head far above all other elevations on earth, so the Savior was destined to exalt His life in works and attainments far beyond the attainment of every other creature of the Father. In amazement and wonder and humility all others are destined to bow in adoration and homage unto Him.

He shall be called Wonderful.

COUNSELLOR

TO ALL THE CHILDREN OF ADAM, to all the sons of Abraham, to all the heirs of David, Jesus was destined to be Counsellor. It is He who, in His beautiful and mighty life of righteousness, in His grand and submissive service to God, is giving that counsel and advice which raises man from beneath sin's dark cloud and exalts him into the glorious atmosphere of God's righteousness. It is He who in His counsel of teaching, of trustfulness, of humility to the children of men, is encouraging and strengthening them to scale the pathways of life and occupy with Israel the land above the cloud and storm and to share the provided blessings and advantages of Almighty God.

THE MIGHTY GOD

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE that this appellation was given to the son of Ahaz. Those who might think that these two prophecies of Isaiah pertain to Ahaz's heir must necessarily pause when this ascribed title is given. By inspiration the beautiful commentary upon Jesus speaks in Heb. 1:8 and says, "Unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God is for ever and ever." The appellation "God" is, by the scripture, given to Christ, the Son. And it is well so, once we come to understand the meaning of that Hebrew word which, in Isaiah, is rendered by the English word "God". Its meaning is, "God as the Creator", while that particular Hebrew word in Isaiah 9:6 is "God the Mighty Creator." Other Hebrew words refer to God as the Covenant Maker, Jehovah; as "the Almighty One", Shaddai, etc. These last are not ascribed to Christ.

As Creator, Christ is He, through whom and by whom the Father has purposed to bring all things unto their consummation. Not that Jesus was with the Father prior to His birth but that the Father is still in the great work of creating. The heavens and the earth are not yet finished; they are to be made new. Rev. 21:1. Man is not perfected; he is to be restored, yea, some are to be immortalized. The covenants of Abraham have not yet been fulfilled; their fulfillment is still in the process of being created. These, with all others, are dependent upon the mighty creative power vested in Jesus.

And so He shall be called the Mighty God, the One who for his Father will advance that which the Father has begun, until all things shall have been brought to their perfection.

THE EVERLASTING FATHER

THE WORD FATHER is not always used as of a progenitor. "The Father of our Country" in no way implies that George Washington was the parent. The Father of Liberty indicates that he of whom it was spoken was the one by whose devotion and effort liberty was afforded. So, too, with our Savior. He shall be called the Everlasting Father. Abraham was the father of the nation of Israel but his name, his greatness, his prophesied blessings unto Israel were for only a limited period of time. As father in such a capacity, his fatherhood was temporary. Not so with Christ. His fatherhood shall be everlasting. The nation of Israel and the world itself will by that given Son have access to all the unspeakable blessings and prophecies of the omnipotent God. Israel will be restored; Jerusalem will be clothed with new clothing; all nations, to furthest horizons, will profit by the lasting beauty and the rich righteousness that flows forth from the Master's throne. Nor are these blessings of beauty and grandeur and greatness but temporary; they will be eternal. He, the Master, will be the Everlasting Father of that new day, that everlasting day soon to dawn; of that new era of universal and eternal peace.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE

NOT A PEACEFUL PRINCE, although He will be all that and more. Isaiah prophesied by inspiration that He will be the Prince who will restore and establish peace before His people. Therefore the title ascribed to Him, the Prince of Peace.

Peace is not a spontaneous condition springing forth at the word of the Master, as though by some mystic power; peace is the fruit of righteousness created in the lives and activities of the people by Him who sits upon the throne, whose word of direction and authority and help permeates and changes every life. It is the result of man learning the first and great commandment, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself". It is the result of learning that great and wonderful provision by God, Thou shalt forgive thine enemies.

Even in the morning of creation when God, walking beneath the verdant trees of Eden's garden, looked first upon the rising sun in the east; even in that day when God saw all that He had made, and behold it was very good, the Father's omniscient thoughts gazed far out over the centuries and saw the day toward which we are rapidly approaching in which the given Son should become the great Provider and Giver of peace in the family of man. Nearly six thousand years of carnage and bloodshed, of bitter woundings and deep lacerations have mottled the lives of men with their dark shadows; but on this another anniversary of the birth of Him who is to be called the Prince of Peace, the human brow lifts itself toward the east and is borne with hope that emanates from the sacred word of truth. We look with anxious eyes to that brighter day when peace from Him who is its Prince shall begin to spread its latent light and gladdening warmth over the homes and hearts of men.

CONCERNING OUR SAVIOR

QUERIES 16

1. What office did our Lord fulfill in offering himself a sacrifice for sin?
2. What expression is used concerning Christ as of the house of David?
3. In what term does Paul in his epistle to the Corinthians speak of the relation of Christ to the Father?
4. What title of Christ, though given Him in contempt by His enemies, was the fulfillment of prophecy?
5. What name of our Savior indicates His wisdom?
6. In what prophetic language is the essential attribute of God ascribed to Christ?
7. What is the title by which our Lord's human descent is described?
8. Under what designation does prophecy indicate Christ as cleansing from all iniquity?
9. Name the grand office of Christ as our Divine Teacher.
10. What title of Christ means "God with us"?
11. What is one of our Savior's names taken from the Greek alphabet?
12. How does our Lord show himself to be the support of the temple built of His elect?
13. What is it that God's people find in Him?

From these initials you will find the love of God to human kind,
As foretold by the prophet, what Christ should be.

3. "Xmas" leaves Christ out of Christmas.
4. It is the opinion of the Queries Editor that we should not write "Xmas" or use seals or greeting cards that has "Xmas" on them.

We'll have to put another leaf in the table because the South Bend Bereans come regularly now. How many are there of you? We are delighted also to receive answers from Thornton R. Cleek. How old are you, Thornton, and do you study them out mostly by yourself? Don't forget to come again, Bro. Cooper and family.

Along with her answers to the Queries, Sr. Woodward makes some interesting and sometimes amusing remarks on the questions. And, would you believe it? there was one she couldn't answer. Take courage, the rest of you!

HELP WANTED!

Many seemed to like the problem of Queries 11, in the issue of November 19. Who wants to prepare a similar problem and answers for our Queries column? How about it Mina Crosby, Hazel Titus, Mrs. Glover, Esta Starbuck, or any of you who have lately joined our Queries family? Thanks.

THE UNITY OF THE SPIRIT

is not ashamed to call us brethren. "For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren." This great family with the same Father, the same Christ, the same Bible, and the same Spirit, working for the same end, looking for the same hope, should be able to live in the same house (1 Tim. 3:15) in unity. There are differences of opinion in our fleshly families. We cannot see all things alike, yet we are one family. The ties of family relationship in the great family of God should be stronger than the ties that bind us together in our fleshly families. The same Spirit that made God and Christ one in purpose and effort will unite the other members of the family if allowed its free course.

CHRISTMAS: AN HISTORICAL SKETCH

PRIMARILY, CHRISTMAS IS INTENDED to commemorate the all-important birth of our Lord. Although it has no Biblical origin, it has nevertheless become one of the most consequential of the world's religious holidays. The exact date of the Christ's birth has never been ascertained—certainly it could hardly have been the time now generally accepted—but an almost immemorial custom has established December 25 for the day of that momentous event, and it is now observed by nearly all the churches of the Christian world except the Dissenters of the British Isles and the American branches thereof.

As early as the regime of Commodus (180 A. D.) traces of Christmas are found. Indeed, some authorities date a few of its customs from the time of the Egyptian Basilidians and older Pharaohs. But the majority of historians place its introduction in the fourth century, disregarding the claims of some that it had its genesis in the Hebrew feast of dedication. Still others believe that the Roman Saturnalia constituted its beginning. In fact, so indefinite are the ideas concerning it that history of the origin of Christmas can only be considered hypothetical at best.

Throughout the centuries Christmas has not been altogether free from criticism. A group of Christians, gathered in a church to celebrate Christ's nativity, were found by the insidious agents of Diocletian. The doors were locked upon them and the building burned. So perished the first known martyrs of our present international holiday. A few of the members of the Eastern church decidedly opposed its adoption by the Greeks, and in later years the absorption of German customs caused still more dissension.

From the heathen winter holidays came the idea of giving gifts. A short time later, the yule log, the mistletoe, and the evergreen—the use of which is as old as the prehistoric Druidical observances—were added as symbolic gestures. The beautifully erroneous tale of Santa Claus is a more recent acquisition, and was taken from the stories of the mythological St. Nicholas. So confused and interrelated are customs of Christian and unbeliever that little can be authentically said of the exact origin of the modern usages.

Thus from Roman, from Greek, from Persian, from Celt comes the modern Christmas. Let us blend these ancient customs into a composite whole that will permit us to use this day as it should be used—for the praise and glorification of our Lord.—Arlen Marsh.

THIS LITTLE HISTORY of the Christmas-tide we are sure will be gladly received by all. It contains some facts not ordinarily understood, which add to the interest and the intelligence with which we celebrate this universal holiday.

The commemoration of the birth of Christ has meant much to the world. With the approach of the very beginning of the Christmas season, a different spirit pervades the atmosphere and works miracles in the hearts of humanity. Faces that more often are cold and hard are softening now with warm smiles; minds that ordinarily are selfishly preoccupied are devoting themselves to the happiness of others; friends clasp hands with a friendlier grip than usual and loved ones seem nearer and dearer than ever before.

What does it mean? Two thousand years ago angels heralded the birth of Jesus Christ throughout heaven and earth. He grew to manhood and walked as a leader among men and spoke as one having authority. Even now in our day of self-exaltation and disregard for the wishes of our heavenly Father, the spirit of Christ still has power to soften the hearts of the proud and mighty and crown the humble with grace and beauty.

There is coming a day when in glory and majesty Christ shall rule in the hearts and lives of all earth's people, not just for a day, but through all the endless ages of eternity.

As we enter the Christmas season this year may we let its full significance sink deeply into our hearts and dwell richly there.

They who learn of Christ walk with serene confidence through the hard places, carrying the blessing of the Prince of Peace with them. Dear Bereans, may this peace be yours today and throughout the coming year.

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL!

OH, WONDROUS SHEPHERDS

Oh, wondrous shepherds! You whose cloaks were brushed
By glory at the manger—you whose treasured part
Was making known abroad the things you saw—
The things that Mary "pondered in her heart".
Oh, did you tell about the feathery softness
That was the small One's hair? the pink delight
That was His mouth? the tiny helpless hands
So soon outstretched in giving? and the light
Without belief that shone within His eyes?
These things you thought too trivial to tell?
There in the shadow, resting in glad peace,
I think that Mary pondered these things well!

TEACHERS!!!

The David C. Cook Publishing Co., of Elgin, Illinois, puts out Sunday School attendance cards—Christmas trees upon which candles are pasted, birds, Noah's Arks. All are attractive.

We are planning a little difference in the page for next year. We welcome all suggestions and material.

You will want to make a Note Book for the whole year.

In this save a few pages for some Bible Verses, save a few pages for facts, then remember the Something to Do and Character-Building Blocks.

Why not send some of your Note Books to conference?

"He that despiseth his neighbor sinneth: but he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he."—Proverbs 14:21.

"The glory of young men is their strength."—Prov. 20:29.

"A little Child; a little star,
A stable rude; the door ajar,
Yet in that place so crude, forlorn,
The Hope of all the race was born."

THE LITTLE ENGINE THAT COULD

PART 2

BUT THE LITTLE TRAIN-OF-CARS never left off hoping that someone would come to help her.

Pretty soon there came along another great strong Engine, that had just pulled a heavy freight train over the mountain, and was on his way back to the roundhouse to rest. So the little Train called out to the Freight Engine and every one of her Cars joined in the chorus: "O Big, Big Engine, will you please take us over the mountain? Our engine has broken down, and we're loaded with Christmas toys for the children on the other side. Will you help us, help us, help us?"

But the Big Freight Engine puffed and snorted more angrily than the other, and sent up out of his smokestack a shower of angry sparks.

"I've done enough work for today! I've done enough, done enough, done enough, done enough!"

And he switched himself around on the sidetrack, passed the poor little Train-of-Cars, and soon left her helpless, far behind! But the little Train-of-Cars never left off hoping that some one would come to help her.

Pretty soon there came along a smaller Engine, just about the size of the one that had been pulling the Train. He looked dingy and rusty and dusty, and he didn't puff at all. He just sighed and groaned and grunted and rumbled and grumbled! But the little Train called out to him and every one of her Cars joined in the chorus:

"O Engine, Engine, will you please take us over the mountain? Our engine has broken down and we're loaded with Christmas toys for the children on the other side. Will you help us, help us, help us?"

Then the Dingy, Dusty, Rusty Engine groaned and grunted and rumbled and grumbled:

"I never could pull you over the mountain! I haven't enough strength! I never could! I never could!" And he dragged himself round on the sidetrack, passed the poor little Train-of-Cars and soon left her helpless, far behind!"

Still the little Train-of-Cars never left off hoping that someone would come to help her.

And as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read.—Luke 4:16.

REVIEW

Lesson 1. Mark 12:28-34; James 2:14-17.
Topic: Our Debt to Others.

Summary: The world as a whole is by God made up of parts. Each individual part has its own duty to perform to all other parts. Accordingly every person is indebted to every other person of the world, to God the Creator, and to Christ the Redeemer, for the faithful performance of his part. Misfits and incompetent parts must be thrown out.

Just as we, as individuals, are in debt to all others, so all others are individually indebted to us. The whole is one great team in which each player is indebted to all for his best play.

Lesson 2. Daniel 1:8-20.

Topic: Temperance Essential to One's Highest Usefulness.

Summary: God sets the only true standard for man. Daniel purposed in his heart to follow that standard. It resulted to him in increased wisdom, understanding and position. One cannot purpose in his heart to follow the highest aims without controlling himself against yielding to such things as hinder him from such higher attainments.

Lesson 3. Gen. 2:15 and others.

Topic: A Gambling Spirit Hurtful to Business and Morals.

Summary: It is a false notion that work is one of the penalties of the curse. God, and all His creation, works. One of the results of this false idea is the morally devastating practice of gambling. While work ennobles and builds the worker, gambling is destructive to the prosperity of the gambler's victim and is a veritable T. N. T. to the gambler himself. Honest work provides honorably for the worker while gambling is but thievery put up under another name. He who would steal from God's creatures is not far from stealing from God himself.

Lesson 4: Mark 2:18-28.

Topic: Recreation in the Christian Life.

Summary: In recreation as in labor the Christian should approach his activity with proper Christian motives. Having been "bought with a price" he is but bound to render himself unto his Purchaser in the pleasures of life as well as in the more serious duties of life. Having been espoused unto one Husband, 2 Cor. 11:2, one's recreation as well as his labors should be pleasing unto Him.

Lesson 5. Mark 12:13-17; Rom. 13:1-7; 1 Peter 2:13-16.

Topic: The Will of the Community.

Summary: Jesus in His ministry, Paul in his ministry, Peter in his ministry, each exhorted Christians to recognize God-appointed government. It is as necessary for the body politic to have a governing head as for the body physical to have its controlling head. Decapitate the human body and the body is dead. Similarly, the body politic. Christians especially, regardless of the conduct of any or all others, should faithfully obey the laws of the land.

Lesson 6. Isa. 2:2-4; Acts 17:22-28; John 4:20-21.

Topic: Our Share in Promoting International Understanding.

Summary: The federation of the nations into a common understanding of good will resulting in peace is contrary to the announcements of the Bible. Universal good will and peace depend upon the return of the Messiah to take upon himself the rulership of the earth. It is to be brought about by the nations learning His ways and walking in His paths. In the meantime, Christians should emulate the Christ life, scattering the influences thereof far and near.

Lesson 7. Acts 10:9-15, 30-35; Gal. 3:28, 29.

Topic: The Contribution of Various Racial Groups to a Common National Life.

Nations are the handiwork of God. He never exhorted man to amalgamate them. The mingling of Jesus with different nationalities, the laborings of the apostles with various races, were all for the purpose of calling out from among them those of faith in Christ. Mingling with all races to this end is an outstanding exhortation of Christ and the Father.

Lesson 8. John 1:1-3; 3:1-5; 4:5-11.

Topic: Patriotism and Internationalism.

Summary: Jonah was unpatriotic to God and therefore could not be patriotic to his nation. True patriotism is first loyalty to God. Only by such loyalty can the Christian be a true patriot. Internationalism is the reverse of what was commenced by God in Gen. 11:8. It will be God's order of the day when He shall have sent His Son the second time.

Christianity in this age is not first with a view to patriotism or internationalism. It is with a view to gathering out a first-born company to be glorified with Christ, after which to assist Him in His great work in the coming age.

Lesson 9. Luke 2:40-52.

Topic: The Christian Home; Its Helps and Hindrances.

Summary: The birth that the home afforded Jesus, and the spiritual care and guidance given Him, assisted Him to that perfection where He shall become the King of the world.

Neither man nor woman are complete in self. It requires the two to become "one flesh." This is God's group-unit in society. As the human body is the sum total of all its individual cells, so the world is the sum total of all its perfected units.

Lesson 10. Matt. 25:31-46.

Topic: The Modern Good Samaritan. Who is He?

Summary: Our lesson text points to the great fact that our Savior rewards or punishes (in part at least) according to the conduct of a Christian toward our Savior's brethren. The Savior in the parable emphasized the point that inasmuch as ye have or have not done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done or have not done it unto me.

Lesson 11. Deut. 24:14-15; Eph. 6:5-9; 1 Tim. 6:17-19.

Topic: The Golden Rule in the Work of the World.

Summary: History reveals that the spirit of oppression existed equally in the days of Pharaoh as in any day since. History undoubtedly substantiates the fact that oppression of man by man ends in weakness and overthrow. No law, no army has been able to forcefully compel man to resist evil or to cling to good. The Christian spirit in the individual has lifted many out of carnal oppression and established them in the beneficial results that follow in the wake of loving one's neighbor as himself.

Lesson 12. Luke 2:8-20.

Topic: Christian Obligations to Childhood.

Summary: The Psalmist indicates that the magnet needle is already poised for those of whom he speaks in Psa. 58:3: "The wicked . . . go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies." Job of old adds to this the great question, 14:4, "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?"

The Savior was early wrapped in the pure surroundings of God's own Spirit. From this sinless beginning He came to be perfected unto the glory of the Father.

Christians who today carry forward on earth the Savior's work have need to enfold with purity and spirituality the childhood of the day and to direct it unto the great victory in Christ.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Bro. F. E. Siple will be the speaker for the Chicago church next Sunday morning, December 22. A full attendance is urged.

Sr. M. A. Woodward is making her home for the winter in Chicago with Sisters Whitehead and Austin. She may be addressed at 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Illinois.

The Christmas program of the Oregon, Ill., Sunday School and Choir will be given on Monday evening, Dec. 23. A welcome is extended to all.

Bro. John Denchfield of the Bible Training Class spoke for the Chicago Bereans on Sunday, Dec. 15. This service was of mutual benefit, lending encouragement to the student minister and building up the members in Christian activity.

Bro. Austin is planning a special Christmas service for the Oregon congregation for Sunday, Dec. 22, both morning and evening. All who find it possible to attend will be uplifted by his message.

DIXON PROGRAM

The Dixon church is planning to present its Christmas program next Sunday night at 7:30. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to all.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

Starting November 24 and closing December 8, the writer was privileged to aid the Brush Creek Church of God in a series of meetings. This was indeed a blessing to us and we trust to others as well. We are sure life long friends have been made, and, though this was our first trip to Ohio, we feel safe in saying that there is a consecration there on the part of many of the workers that will bring its rewards in the kingdom.

Miss Florence Knife and Mr. Harold Kessler asked for baptism during these meetings. A baptismal service was held on Sunday afternoon in Brush Creek and we are glad to welcome into our company these two who have decided to live for the Lord.

This series of meetings will never be forgotten by the writer and we trust that God in His own wisdom will continue to bless the faithful group at Brush Creek.

Sydney E. Magaw.

APPRECIATION

I want to thank the church for the beautiful flowers and also all the friends that remembered me so kindly with letters and cards and those that called to see me while I was sick. I am grateful also to the young folks of the Home, with their smiles and cheery words, to the members of the Home, for their kindness and helpfulness and to the matron for the good care I received. Last, but not least, I thank the Giver of all good gifts for providing the Golden Rule Home for us, alone ones. It has been a great blessing to me, and I pray it will be to many others, if the Lord tarries.

In Christian love,
Mary M. Renner.

MULLIN, TEXAS

Dear Restitution Herald Family: Bro. E. O. Stewart of Sweetwater, Texas, filled his regular appointment at Mullin the 7th and 8th of this month. He delivered three fine sermons, Saturday night, "The Two Creations," Sunday morning, "The Soil in Which the Word Is Sown," and Sunday night, "The Three Worlds," by request. We surely do enjoy these good talks and would like to hear them every week instead of once a month.

Sr. O. B. Fleming and Mrs. Locklear came over from San Saba Saturday afternoon and staid over Sunday. We were so glad to have these sisters with us, and hope they, and all others who will, may be with us next second Sunday and Saturday night.

May God bless our gathering together unto Him.

Mrs. John Guthrie.

LOUISIANA TRIP

Our two weeks of meetings at the old home near Hammond, Louisiana, proved to be a very interesting period, and came to a close on Sunday night, Dec. 8. A very regular attendance greeted us from night to night, even though a part of the time was quite cold for that section of the country.

Three young people were baptized during the meeting, and we are glad to introduce Miss Esther Bottolfs, Miss Anna Maude Halverson and Miss Carrie Anthon, all of whom may be addressed at Hammond, Louisiana.

A splendid group of young people are to be found here, which shows the practical results of faithful Sunday School and Bible class work. Electric lights have been installed in the old Happy Woods schoolhouse, making a wonderful contrast to the old oil lamps. The brethren are now discussing plans and possibilities for more regular preaching of the gospel, and we are earnestly praying that the day is not far hence when our little band will own a church home of their own in Hammond and be building up a live church in the Master's name.

Before returning home we had the pleasure of a two-day visit in the J. S. Lyon home at Citronelle, Alabama, where we found the group living true to their faith. We enjoyed the communion service with Grandma Turney, now ninety years of age.

F. E. Siple.

TEXAS

In the latter part of October we held a meeting at Levita and the interest was good, if it did rain. From there we went to Houston, Luling and Riviera, holding meetings at each place. It seemed that the rain followed us at every place we went, which hindered attendance. Sickness kept some away whom we missed very much.

Bro. Clint Scott of Sweetwater took his car and went the whole round with me. Glad to have him along.

On the 25th of November we started for home, coming by way of San Antonio, where we spent the night with Bro. McCulloch. We spent Tuesday night at Junction with Bro. Byerley. Wednesday morning we came home and found the folks all well, for which we were thankful.

Amount of money received on trip $140.00; expenses $20.00.

E. O. Stewart.

THANK OFFERINGS

There are still a few belated Thank Offerings coming in and we are very grateful for each one. They show that the givers are heart and soul behind the cause in which we are all laboring. We have also already received two Christmas offerings, from Sr. F. E. Smith and from Bro. Geo. Jones. May these early offerings be but the precursor of many more such gifts to the cause of Christ.

Following are the Thank Offerings received the past week:

Mrs. F. E. Smith,	$10.00
Mrs. C. Seely	2.00
D. B. Jackson	8.00
Cordelia A. Gray	2.00
H. J. Stadden	10.00
Mrs. M. H. Poole	3.00
David Beck	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Prime	1.00
J. W. Sweet	1.00

Total Thank Offerings $613.83

GIVING THANKS

We should be thankful for all that we have. Every day and every hour we have something to be thankful for, if we would just stop long enough to think. The world is in such a hurry that it doesn't stop long enough to think where all our blessings came from. Psa. 46:10 tells us to "be still and know that I am God." If we never stop and meditate how can we be thankful for anything? We should be thankful for food and raiment, for shelter and for well-formed bodies, for bright minds and good health, for happy homes and long years of peace in our nation where we can worship God as we choose. These are wonderful privileges and we should all appreciate them more than we do.

The month of November itself is something to be thankful for. What month in the whole twelve is more beautiful? My heart throbs with joy and thankfulness to our heavenly Father as I step out in my back yard and look across at the big hills all dressed in their autumn loveliness of varied colors from crimson, yellow, brown and gold, dotted here and there with some beautiful evergreen of live oak, blue jacks and cedar and also the lovely Japan with its rich green foliage and scarlet berries. What a wonderful place this world must have been before sin entered!

But let's think of the time when sin will be removed, for God has promised us many times in His holy Book that He will restore this sin-cursed world to its sinless state. Thanks be to God, for we know He will keep every promise He ever made. Then all will be at peace, no more sad good byes, no more crying, nor pain. Oh, dear reader, don't you think it's worth striving for?

Let us all work, watch and pray, and in all things give thanks.

A sister in the one precious faith, occupying the best I can until our King of kings shall come,

Mrs. Newton Davis.

BOWERS-HARDACRE

Bro. Nello J. Hardacre and Mrs. Hazel Bowers of Lanark, Ill., were united in marriage at the parsonage of the Church of the Brethren by Rev. Jefferson Mathis, Nov. 21 at 8:00 p. m. They are visiting relatives in Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas and on their return expect to make their home in Lanark.

May the Father's blessing go with them in the new home thus established.

WILLIAMS-FOSTER

At the Happy Woods schoolhouse near Hammond, Louisiana, at the close of our forenoon service on Sunday, December 8, Miss Ellen Foster became the bride of Mr. John R. Williams.

Ellen is the second daughter of Bro. and Sr. Ed. Foster, and has been one of our most attractive and respected church girls. The groom is an industrious young man from a good Christian home and is employed in New Orleans where the young couple will make their home.

We pray the Father's richest blessing upon these young people and the home which they are establishing together. F. E. Siple.

THOMAS MARTIN MACY

Was born on Feb. 4, 1893, and died on Nov. 30, 1929, at the age of thirty-six years. Mr. Macy, from his boyhood, has lived near Troy, Ohio.

He was married on Christmas day, 1916, to Miss Edith Penny, of near Troy. To this union two daughters were born, Ruby and Bernice, who are now twelve and ten years of age, respectively. From the time of his marriage, when about twenty-two, he began farming for himself, which occupation he followed until the time of his death.

Those who survive him are both parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Maey, four brothers, five sisters, and the two daughters. One brother, Charles Elden, preceded him in death thirty-four years ago. The living brothers are George, Daniel, William and John, all living near Troy. The sisters living are Mrs. Herbert Bourquin of Dayton, Mrs. Wm. Gray, Mrs. Howard Bowman, Annette and Rebecca, all of near Troy. He also leaves Grandfather Burnsides and Grandmother Macy and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted from the home of Mr. Macy's parents and the Church of God at Brush Creek, Ohio. Words of sympathy were spoken by the writer, and the hope of resurrection given as our greatest boon to live consecrated unto the Lord.

Sydney E. Magaw.

A WAY TO FINANCIAL FREEDOM

The Layman Company's pamphlet, "Winning Financial Freedom" has proved so popular and effective that once more we offer it to any pastor without charge. On request we will send, postage paid, enough copies to supply all the lay officials of his church.

The pamphlet describes a simple method by which the pastor may carry on, quietly and steadily, the education of his people in the principles of Christian giving, without interfering with his other work, and at a cost purely nominal.

The Layman Company is a non-profit, interdenominational Christian agency which puts its resources at the service of all the churches.

When you write please mention The Restitution Herald and give your denomination.

The Layman Company,
730 Rush St., Chicago, Illinois.

Be sure to read the article which fully explains the Annuity Bond plan of rendering service to our cause. It will be found on page 181, under the heading, "Gifts to the Christmas Cause."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON THOUGHTS

Worship. There are two different ways in which the truth of God may affect one who believes it. He may grasp the facts of the gospel intellectually, be deeply impressed with the desirability of salvation, and be brought to repentance and faith that he himself may obtain the blessings promised. The second way in which the gospel may affect the believer is that in the sacrifice of Christ he catches a glimpse of the wonderful love of the heavenly Father for all mankind; in the "exceeding great and precious promises" he sees reflected again the marvelous grace of God for the children of men. As he ponders on the many manifestations of God's goodness, he, too, is moved to repentance and faith; not simply that he may come to enjoy the blessings promised, but that by his repentance and faith he may express something of the love and appreciation he has learned to feel toward God. This sense of appreciation leads to worship, to communion with the Father, and to devotion to His cause and service.—G. E. M.

"And he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up; and according to his custom on the Sabbath-day, he entered the synagogue, and stood up to read." Luke 4:16, Diag.

It was Jesus' custom to go into the synagogue on the sabbath. The apostles enjoyed meeting together for fellowship and breaking of bread. Paul, on his missionary journeys would go to the synagogues so that he might meet the people there to teach them.

David said, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord."

Christians, too should enjoy the sweet fellowship that is found in "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." There is no fellowship so sweet as that found in true worship.—L. A. R.

1929

1929

THERE ARE MANY HOLIDAYS during the year which we celebrate. We would not want to do away with one of them, but were it in our power to displace any, Christmas would not be the one. No music on the street of life is so sweet to the ear as the music of the Christmas bells. To those who are older, no memories are more dear than those which cluster around the anniversary of the birth of our Lord.

And so today, throughout the land, people everywhere are rushingly preparing for the greatest of all holidays. Children in the homes are humming Christmas carols; churches and Sunday schools are resounding with the Christmas story. Upon the street are to be found the adornments which tell of the approaching day; in the windows of the merchant houses is every conceivable thing, which if presented, will add to the joy of one or another in the home.

Your children will not be disappointed. They may not get everything their little minds long for, yet in one way or another they will be remembered and Christmas will be none the less to them than it has been in former years. But did you see that little, ragged urchin shivering in the street, looking in upon the brightly lighted windows filled with all the good things in toys and in the comforts of life? Did you see the light in his eye revealing that behind that dirty face there were ideals and visions; there were possible refinements, all awaiting their development? Did you see that down beneath the soiled and ragged clothing there was a heart as true and tender as perhaps any in life's world?

It was for these that God gave His only begotten Son; gave Him just as much for these as for your children and mine; gave Him to them just as truly and in just as full measure and benefit. Did you see the care-worn mother and the life-beaten father, bent by the years of life's burden, manifesting the lack of many comforts of life? They, too, looked in upon those beautiful Christmas displays which betoken awaiting comfort and coziness and content. For those, too, the Savior came on Christmas day, for them as well as for any other in life's way.

Christmas day was not ready-made. It is the out-growth of centuries of development. Today it stands as the crowning day of all the year. It is so because of what man has made it. Its joy and cheer and gladness echo and re-echo the world around. Its inevitable spirit of good will removes much of the hardness so often found in the human heart. It entwines life with life around Christ the great Standard. And this is the purpose for which He came: to lift man out of self, out of the depths of sin, into the great reality of life and its blessings which were given birth with their true Master.

Then, too, if we have ideals that are worthy the name, Christmas sends us out in search of a star that will guide us to that great destiny provided and made opportune by God. The urge of the human heart ever now and anon causes man to aspire to higher aims. Christmas is the one holiday that seems to open the door, that seems to warm life's hearth and lead the seeker to look toward the larger and the brighter, through Christ.

Happy is the one who endeavors to interpret this nobler and larger spirit that is couched in Christmas activity! That star leads upward; it is in the bosom of the Master; it will go before every life, old and young, rich or poor, and lead to the shores of immortality. That star will come to rest over the throne of Him who is to rule from sea to sea, from the river to the ends of the earth; of Him beneath whose gentle hand the whole earth is to be filled with the glory of God.

As in days of old, those wise men sought for One they long desired to find, so today many are seeking for Him but they know not where to find Him.

Back to Bethlehem to the manger lowly is where we mostly go today to search for Him whose voice has sent its waves to vibrate on the harp chords of every heart. But, as on the glorious resurrection morn the angel spoke to his weeping listeners and said, "He is not here", so we too must learn of Bethlehem, He is not there; He has left. Few were the days He gave to the city of His birth; few were the days He gave to Judea or to Galilee. His works having been done, His words spoken, He has moved on from that beginning hour, out into the great span of years. Today He stands right where we stand. He has left the past; He has not reached the future. He is here, at 1929. He is ever knocking for admittance to our hearts.

So upon this, the anniversary of His birth let us each open the door to the inn of our several lives and welcome Him to sit with us at the fireplaces of our homes. The Savior is helpful unto that life into which He is admitted. If you will admit Him, He will bestow upon you joy and blessing and peace.

OUR WISH FOR YOU

THE WHOLE YEAR THROUGH

May the Giver of gifts give unto you
That which is good; that which is true;
The will to help; the courage to do;
A heart that can sing the whole day through,
Whether the skies be gray or blue.
May the Giver of gifts give these to you.

THE CLOSING YEAR—THE CLOSING AGE

By F. L. Austin

THERE IS EVERY evidence to the fact that we are in the closing days of the year 1929. Its days have faithfully dawned and closed; its opportunities have been many and rich; its blessings have been abundant. Through it all, God the great Giver of every good and perfect gift, has been manifested continuously. The history of the year is well nigh closed. Its days will never, never return; its pages may never be altered.

For the individual the closing of the year marks the closing of another period during which opportunity, the greatest boon to man, has ever been present. Individual progress has been made according as each has seized the opportunity and with God-given strength has utilized the same to the best advantage. The main question for the individual is: Does the close of the year find him nearer to his Father, in closer communion with his Master, more thoroughly rooted and grounded in the face of truth and of life everlasting?

For the world the history of the year records much. The nations of earth have turned the world's kaleidoscope many times. The picture seen today is a different picture than that looked upon at the year's birth. Several of the questions standing over from the great war have been agreed upon, altered, or abrogated until the inter-relationship of the nations is based upon almost new settings. Where peace has increased in some sections, bitterness has increased in others. The earnest efforts toward the solution by man of universal and continual peace create rapidly changing pictures very like the change from sunshine to shadow as autumn clouds rise across the heavens in front of Old Sol. Daniel's prophecy announcing that in the last days men shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased has had much meaning in the last twelve months. What rapid advancement has been made in the matter of travel to and fro; what wonderful inventions has the increase of knowledge placed before the world! It should be noted that this knowledge has been greatly increased in the fields of chemical, electrical, and dynamical research. These discoveries create new issues in the council chambers of the

“What manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God.”—2 Peter 3:11, 12.

NEW YEAR GREETINGS

ALL THE WORKERS in the National Bible Institution activities, Oregon, Illinois, unite in wishing The Herald readers and their families the happiest of New Years. No one knows what the new year holds in store for us. All we realize is that the Father of all is Sovereign of the world and that His great righteous wisdom is outlining for man the best of opportunities. May it be ours to present each life so faithfully and truly unto the God of heaven and unto His Son our Lord that we shall become recipients of the richest blessings afforded by the Father.

THE SECOND ADVENT

“With a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God.”—1 Thess. 4:16.

THE SAME INSPIRED BOOK which prophesied so freely and so definitely of the first advent of our Lord and Master has prophesied much more freely and much more explicitly of His second advent. If the angels sang from heaven's dome on the occasion of His birth, how much more will they proclaim His second coming. Indeed the Savior himself told His apostles that “the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels”, Matt. 16:27; and upon another occasion He stated “when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory”, Matt. 25:31; while Paul, that great apostle who was told by revelation from heaven, declared, “For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God.”—1 Thess. 4:16. Not only the angels' voices, but the archangel's voice will peal forth the announcement of our Lord's second coming.

That will be a marvelous day. There may be wise men searching for Him, but they will not search in the way that the wise men searched of old, nor will their visit result as did the visit of those wise men. The coming of our Lord and Master bespeaks for the earth a condition which will alter all of the affairs of mankind. Those who shall be called away to meet the Lord in the air, 1 Thess. 4:17, will be affected beyond the power of man to contemplate. Indeed their very natures will be changed. Paul tells us in 1 Corinthians 15:51, 52 that their mortality will be changed to immortality, that their corruptibility will be changed to incorruptibility. They are assured that they will be like unto their Lord and Master. In Phil. 3:21 we are told that they shall be fashioned like unto the glorious body of the Master; while in Rom. 8:17 the apostle teaches that they will become joint heirs with Jesus Christ. The second coming of Christ means everything to the true Christian who will at that time be transformed into the likeness of Christ himself.

To the world of man at large the coming of Christ also means changes little contemplated. He will not come merely to offer himself in teaching and work as He did before, but as He comes the second time “without sin unto salvation”, He will not only present His cause, but coming in power and ability, He will require of mankind that it will yield to Him. Immensely heavy judgment will be placed over the earth compared with which the judgment upon Egypt and later judgments upon others were but trivial. Prophecy is replete with the information that the Savior's effort to take the throne of David and rule the earth will be strenuously opposed by the forces of man. But so definite is God's plan and purpose in that particular, and so powerful will Christ be as King that He will compel even by force that the nations of the world shall yield to Him and His ways. Refusal thus to do will be at the expense of death to them.

The second advent of our Lord is near at hand. Every human activity indicates the rapid fulfillment and completion preparatory for this great change. The rejoicings of the Christmas anniversary just passed should impress every true believer with appreciation of what the rejoicings of the accomplishments of Christ in the near future will be. Let us so live and so consecrate our lives that with John upon the Isle of Patmos we can pray:

“Come Lord Jesus and come quickly.”

LOOKING FORWARD

THE NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION is looking forward to a large and active work. While there have been many tests and trials in the past, yet we feel that steady and worthy progress has been made. During the past year our work has strengthened noticeably. As we look forward into the coming year and years, we do so with our lives firmly established in faith in God and His Son. We believe that we are engaged in a work that is approved by the Father. We heartily believe that this work is benefiting very many people throughout the land and that opportunity for increase and benefit is very great.

"WHERE IS HE THAT IS BORN KING OF THE JEWS?"

By R. H. Judd

SINCE SONS WERE BORN to the mothers of men, how often, I wonder, has the question been asked, "Where is he that is born?" The birth of a new life into this world of ours awakens an interest compared with which all other interest pales. Never since the day that the doctor took up in his arms our firstborn son has his mother forgotten the words spoken by our physician and friend, words of comfort, words of cheer, not only of what he was then, but also of what he was to be. The years rolled by and in his young manhood he began to fulfill those kindly predictions concerning him. Proud to own and kiss his mother in any circumstance that seemed to demand his affection and care, no matter in whose presence, called forth loving and admiring remarks as to how that pride must be reciprocated.

That JESUS CHRIST also was "born" the Scriptures abundantly testify. Wonderfully prophetic were the words of Isaiah, that prince of prophets, who perhaps next to Moses the man of GOD gives us in language of surpassing grandeur, the most sublime forecast concerning our Savior to be found in any of the books written by God's servants the prophets.

"Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder."

We do well to concentrate our thoughts this Christmas time on the great central FACT of the birth of JESUS CHRIST. Eight times at least do the Scriptures declare this basic truth that our Savior first entered life through birth, that He was "born", and if it is, as some teach, that eight in Scripture stands for that which is human in contrast to the divine, then the humanity of JESUS—that He was in this respect a "prophet like unto Moses" is clearly indicated. He was "the man Christ Jesus." It is the basis of an interesting study to note the distinctive characteristics that accompany each of the Scripture references which testify to this unique fact.

But the writer wishes, in this paper, to draw attention to a few thoughts which convey to his mind a Christmas message of somewhat wider scope than that which so customarily is placed before us. That Scripture sometimes includes in a single sentence vast stretches of time is well known to many Bible students. As we proceed with the study of our text, we shall find that it is a most remarkable instance in point.

There would seem to be little question that down through the centuries some lives have entered this world who in God's providence were predestined to be born for a definite purpose, to serve a distinctive cause. The reader will readily recall instances in both sacred and profane history that give reasonable grounds for such belief. Supreme among these, infinitely above any one of them, or all combined, is the outstanding birth, life and living again of our Lord and Savior JESUS the CHRIST. Foreordained, in the counsels of GOD, before the foundation of the world, predictions regarding Him have been fulfilled and will be fulfilling while time rolls into eternity.

Rightly we celebrate the fact that our Savior was born. It helps us to realize in great measure the actuality of His personality and the reality of the life that He lived—a man among men. But are we not too apt to stop midway and, indeed, almost to forget that our text was a question—is a question—applicable then truly, but equally applicable now, yes, more so?

The question of the wise men was a deeper question than the wise men thought. It is a deeper question than many a Christian man to-day thinks. "Where is He that is born King of the Jews? The wise men could not answer it. GOD had to answer it for them. Herod could not answer it, nor would GOD give him the answer he desired. True he enquired of those who should have been able to give him the answer, not in part, but in full. Nor have GOD'S professed witnesses to-day grasped the full significance. They have not realized the stupendous fact that Christ could not have been King during His earthly life. I repeat, astounding as this statement may seem, He could not be King, for did He not say, and in that saying include himself, that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of GOD"? Did He not say, "Except a man (and was He not a man?) be BORN AGAIN he cannot see the kingdom of GOD?" Surely He did! We have the testimony of the written Word that our Savior was thus BORN AGAIN—that He was "born from the dead", the "firstborn among many brethren" and "the firstfruits of them that sleep". We have also the testimony of John, Peter, Paul and of at least five hundred brethren beside who were living witnesses to this great fact.

Again let us ask the question now so fraught with new meaning, "Where is He that is born—born a second time—King of the Jews?" Did He not say of himself that He "was born to this end", and that "for this cause came I into the world"? With such words before them as yet unfulfilled, the writer fails to understand how some earnest men and women can see their way to say that only in a very general sense, not in a national sense, will these words be fulfilled. What mean then those words of the thief on the cross, "LORD, remember me WHEN THOU COMEST INTO THY KINGDOM"? Are not the signs abundant of the coming back of the KING? Has he yet been King of the Jews? Are you and I, friends, going to join in the midnight cry to bring back the twice born King, for "He asked life of thee (GOD), and thou gavest it him, even length of days for ever and ever."

THE WEAVER

I sat at my loom in silence,
 Facing the westering sun;
 The warp was rough and tangled
 And the threads unevenly run.
 Impatient, I pulled at the fibres—
 They snapped and flew from my hands;
 Weary and faint and sore-hearted
 I gathered the broken strands.

I had beautiful colors to work with—
 White, blue like heaven above,
 And tangled in all the meshes
 Were the golden threads of love;
 But the colors were dulled by my handling,
 The pattern was faded and gray,
 That once to my eager seeming
 Shone brighter than flowers of May.

But alas, not the half of my pattern
 Was finished at set of sun;
 What should I say to the Master—
 When I heard Him call, "Is it done?"
 I threw down my shuttle in sorrow;
 I had worked through the livelong day:
 And I lay down to slumber in darkness,
 Too weary even to pray.

In my dreams a vision of splendor,
 An angel, smiling-faced,
 With gentle and tender finger
 The work of the weavers traced.
 He stooped with a benediction
 O'er the loom of my neighbor near,
 For the threads were smooth and even
 And the pattern perfect and clear.

Then I waited in fear and trembling,
 As he stood by my tangled skein,
 For a look of reproach and pity
 That I knew would add to my pain.
 Instead, with a thoughtful aspect,
 He turned his gaze upon me,
 And I knew that he saw the fair picture
 Of my work as I hoped it would be.
 And with touch divine of his finger
 He traced my faint copy anew,
 Transforming the clouded colors,
 And letting the pattern shine true.

THE CLOSING YEAR— THE CLOSING AGE

nations, new issues regarding their relative standing, regarding their relative strength, regarding their individual prospects. These discoveries create new problems for the individual, new questions for aspiring youth, new environment for the progressing Christian. The year has brought forth these and many more matters.

All these bring to mind another great theme, viz.:

THE CLOSING AGE

JUST AS THE YEAR 1929 has been running its course with astronomical precision, so has the age, the age of Gentile power, been running its course with equal precision. It too, has offered man both as an individual and as a nation, untold opportunities. It too, has placed before man increased riches, advantages and growths. As the calendar year, so the age has been writing its history, history which may never be altered by the return of the age itself. So far as the age is concerned the dial of Ahaz will never be turned back. Time will not be repeated.

We turn to the calendar to find our present location in the year's course. But we must turn on the prophetic record to locate our position in the course of the age. The calendar tells us that when we reach December 20 we are but a few days short of the year's terminus. Likewise when we turn to prophecy we discover certain definite, foretold events which tell us that we are but a short distance from the close of Gentile times.

Our Jewish brethren have been making much advance in the resettlement of the land of God's giving, but in the recent past a counter-claim has been put forth. Our Arab kinsmen have laid definite and precise claims which oppose the free and easy advances of the Jew. The Mandate power, even the nation which the world has been pleased to look upon as perhaps the leading military and political power of earth, is finding that her Asiatic subjects require much attention as also much expenditure of national strength.

Complicating these matters, recent doings in the land of ancient Rome have created new possibilities and new outlooks. Only recently the political power of Rome voluntarily acquiesced to restore to the religious authority their location for the temporal power. Following this restoration, the king and the queen of Italy officially called upon the Pope, doing so in such manner of procedure as to permit of the interpretation that they acquiesced in the thought that the head of the Roman church was a step upward in advance of the king, the head of the nation.

With the knowledge that this church has long since had an anxious eye on the Holy Land, praying for the day when that power which has for centuries been exercised over Jerusalem by Mohammed might come to be exercised by the head of that church, observant and thoughtful men are anticipating the time in the near future when the temporal emblems of the church of Rome will be reared over her Ambassadorial House in the Holy Land. All these things are not only complicating in their complexity the problems of the Jew and Jerusalem, but they are indicating very strikingly the rapid approach of that power which is to become so definitely opposed to God's prophesied plans and purposes as to fulfill the prophetic announcement of antichrist. And antichrist brings the Gentile age definitely to its close.

So, as the year rapidly rushes toward the threshold of a new twelve-month, the age is also rushing toward the threshold opening into a new era, an era which during its course will fill the earth with the people of God's choosing, with the newness of God's power.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS

SOMETIMES CALLED

THE THIRD BOOK OF THE KINGS

By Lyman Booth

THESE TWO BOOKS OF THE KINGS contain the history of Israel under the government of kings, from the close of David's reign to the Babylonish captivity. The reign of the kings was about four hundred twenty-seven years. Originally they appeared under the title of one book, but were afterward divided into two, and called the first and second books of the Kings, and in some versions, the third and fourth books of the Kings. It was broken into two parts by Greek translators of the seventy, and the Vulgate followed this division, which has been adopted generally.

Who the author, or better, the writer, was can not be definitely decided. The compiler refers to three sources of his information, first, the book of the acts of Solomon, 1 Kings 11:41; second, the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah, 1 Kings 14:29, which is quoted fifteen times; third, the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel, 1 Kings 14:19, quoted seventeen times. Though these annals have perished, yet the selections from them which were intended to exhibit God's dealings with His people, have survived. There is a great similarity of style between the later portion of Second Kings, in the incident of which Jeremiah was an observer and the narratives which bear his name, and which seem to point to a late date, 2 Kings 25:22; Jer. 13:6. Jewish history ascribes them to Jeremiah, but certain scenes, such as the biographies of Elijah and Elisha, the dialogue between Ahab and Micah, also the career of Jehu seem to show an eye-witness, whose record has been inserted here by the compiler.

It is evident, however, that they contain a summary of the history compiled from larger records, which had been collected and preserved by contemporary prophets. 1 Kings 11:41; 14:29; 15:31; 22:39-45; 2 Chron. 9:29; 12:15; 13:22; 20:34; 26:22. A considerable part of the transactions of their own times is related in connection with the prophecies of Isaiah, Jehu, and Ezekiel. If they were arranged in the present order by one sacred penman, they who credit them to Jeremiah seem to have the correct opinion. Indeed his prophecy and the second book of Kings end in a narrative of the same event, though they may have been written by another hand after his death. Though they may have undergone slight changes in Ezra's time, they have been received continually by Jews and Christians, as a part of the sacred oracles, and the events are frequently referred to in the New Testament Scriptures. Matt. 1:7-12; 6:29; 12:42; Luke 4:25-27; Acts 2:29; 7:47-50; James 5:17, 18.

The reader will observe that our Lord and His apostle James not only mention them as authentic records, and a part of the sacred oracles; but especially attest some of the most wonderful miracles recorded in them, thereby giving sanction to them as of the inspiration of God. The books of the Kings also contain many prophecies, especially concerning Joshua, who was foretold by name three hundred years before his birth; but none of these prophecies, in their evident meaning, refer to events later than the Babylonian captivity.

The historian records the principal transactions of Solomon's long and peaceful reign, which however, was shadowed by a dark cloud towards the close. Under his successor, the nation was divided into the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel. The descendants of Solomon reigned over that of Judah up to the captivity which was about three hundred eighty-seven years. Thus from the time David began to reign for a period of four hundred sixty-seven years the throne was occupied by his descendants in lineal descent, except as the sons of Josiah succeeded one another.

What a peaceful kingdom it was! During this long period there was not a single revolution, or civil war, and but one short, unpleasant interruption, by Athaliah's usurpation. Perhaps it would be difficult to find anything to equal this long internal order. When we reflect how many revolutions, civil wars, murders of kings by rivals, and changes in the succession are found in English history, we marvel at the tranquillity of Israel during that long period. It is remarkable that Israel's kings ruled much longer than the wicked princes of other nations. The greater portion of this period was passed in peace and prosperity. How different when compared with the history of Greece and Rome!

The kingdom of Israel continued under the rule of nineteen kings for about two hundred fifty-four years, up to the Assyrian captivity. Those Assyrians were all idolaters and some were monsters of iniquity, and yet the Lord by His prophets, Elijah and Elisha, preserved a considerable degree of true worship in the land, till the measure of their wickedness was full. They were then dispersed among other nations, except a remnant which was assimilated among the Jews. In these books the history of these two kingdoms runs parallel and the whole forms a pleasing comment on the prophecies delivered to the nation by Moses and Joshua. See Lev. 26; Deut. 4, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32 and Joshua 23:15, 16. They give a vivid illustration of the proverb, "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."—Proverbs 14:34.

The first book contains about one hundred twenty years of Jewish history, especially the reign and prosperity of Solomon. The temple was built by him of which a full description is given. God had commanded Israel to offer all their sacrifices at one place, which had been at Shilo prior to this commandment. The ark had been removed from Shilo to Zion by David, in order that a temple might be built there, which was done by his son, Solomon. Numerous references in the Old Testament are made to the temple, to the sins of the people in sacrificing in other places, to their profaning of the temple, and to the judgments of God inflicted upon them for this crime. Especial reference is made to the destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans; and the rebuilding of it by Zerubbabel. These things are so often referred to in later history and the prophecies that if Solomon did not build it then God punished Israel for violating merely human appointments. When the Samaritans preferred Mount Gerizim, our Lord told the woman of Samaria that they knew not what they worshiped for salvation was of the Jews. This saying, with his constant attendance at the service, sufficiently prove the divine inspiration of those records in which it is disclosed that Solomon built the temple at the direction and appointment of God himself.

With the exception of two reigns, these books embrace the whole regal period from the death of David to the captivity. The narrative may be given in three parts: first, the reign of Solomon, in which the undivided kingdom was at its highest degree of power, 1 Kings 1 to 17; second, an account of the divided kingdom of Judah and Israel until their captivity, 1 Kings 12:2 to 2 Kings 17; third, the history of the kingdom of Judah forward to the Babylonian conquest of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar and the captivity of the people, 2 Kings 18 to 25.

The contents of these books should be studied in connection with texts in Chronicles and in the light of contemporary prophets. They show a conflict between faith and infidelity, between the worship of God and Baal, the personification of the powers of nature. Israel forsook God and her kings followed Jeroboam, "who made Israel to sin," and her record closed the same as that of the descendants of Cain and the apostate descendants of Noah and Abraham; while Judah, being blessed with a few faithful kings, like Asa and Hezekiah, repented of her unfaithfulness and after her exile was restored.

Special prominence and favors were given the prophetic office. The schools of the prophets, which were instituted by Samuel, were fruitful and the value of the prophetic order was very serviceable in rendering aid to the nation.

The prophets were the trusted councilors of the kings, the historians of the nation, the teachers of the people. It was their duty to maintain the religion of Jehovah against the idolatrous tendency, to defend and interpret the moral law, to discourage oppression and covetousness, cruelty and wrong dealing, and to raise their voice against the vicious practices of kings and people.

The discovery of the Book of the Law, in the days of Josiah, 2 Kings 22, gives a clear insight into the decay of religion which occurred during the reign of Manasseh. We can not read these books without being impressed with the numerous references to the books of Moses and by the manner in which the thought and phraseology of the Mosaic period is interwoven. For instance, in Solomon's dedication prayer, 1 Kings 8:22-53, we find expressions which recall the language found in Numbers, Leviticus, and Deuteronomy, and the recital of the evil practice of Ahaz, 2 Kings 16, and the numerous offences for which the Northern Kingdom, 2 Kings 17, was destroyed. These phrases and items are to be found in our present book of Moses, and bear strong evidence of their existence in one form or another during the whole reign of Israel's and Judah's kings. The subsequent events are assumed as undoubted facts in the writings of all the prophets. In fact the whole canon of Scripture agrees so perfectly that each part receives unmistakable confirmation from all the rest,

THE "PLYMOUTH" BRETHREN AND THE PUNISHMENT OF THE WICKED

A VERY GREAT responsibility attaches to the man who occupies the position of a religious leader and teacher. He ought to be above all things honest—honest in dealing with God's truth, and honest to his opponents and those who differ from him. We fear that Mr. John R. Caldwell, a prominent leader of the "Plymouth" Brethren in Glasgow, does not come up to this standard as a leader, for whenever he has to refer to Conditional Immortality, he never uses that title, but "the non-eternity of punishment." All his followers do the same thing. On their part it is doubtless, in the great majority of cases, pure ignorance; but it is not so in his case. He knows well enough that believers in Conditional Immortality have over and over again repudiated his title as utterly misleading and nondescriptive of their position. Indeed, they would never take the title as applying to themselves, were it not made plain by other connections that it is intended to be so applied. But in spite of all disclaimers—in spite of the knowledge that they believe in eternal punishment as strongly as he does himself,—he persists in calling their doctrine "the non-eternity of punishment." This is not honest. If he should say that he does not admit that eternal destruction or death is an eternal punishment, that does not alter the case. He knows that the other side believes and maintains the contrary, and that they have adopted a title by which they choose to be known; therefore as an honest man he ought not to ignore their contention and title, and call them names with the intention of creating an unjust and ignorant prejudice against their doctrine. From such controversialists we cannot expect fair play.

Neither do we think that he deals honestly with GOD'S Word. In his magazine, "The Witness", for July, 1896, he contributes an article on "Fundamental Error and Scriptural Discipline". In this article he classes believers in Conditional Immortality and Universalism under one title (another instance of his want of fair-mindedness), and says, that "the enormously rapid spread of these doctrines throughout all Christendom, and the indifference with which they are regarded by some who are themselves sound in the faith, seem to call for a decided facing of the question as to how the holders of such errors are to be dealt with according to the Word of GOD". The attack is, however, almost exclusively leveled at Conditional Immortality, and the facing of the question is not as to the truth of the doctrine, but how to deal with those who hold the "heresy", for heresy it is by a foregone conclusion. And by a process of reasoning satisfactory to himself, judgment is arrived at and sentence of excommunication is pronounced. This troubles us just as little as any papal sentence of excommunication.

But the tables may be turned on Mr. Caldwell quite well. He says: "If a defiled conscience be allowed, the Spirit is grieved and the power for maintaining the truth is gone. It is therefore certain that where fundamental error is embraced conscience has first been violated. This may not be apparent to others; it may have been in such a way as not to appear in this life, but as surely as the leprous spot on the forehead declares the man to be 'utterly unclean' so surely does fundamental error discover the moral condition of him who holds it." Now Mr. Caldwell is evidently so wrapped up in his own sense of self-righteousness, that not for a moment does he pause to think that these serious accusations which he does not hesitate to level at others, may be leveled at himself. He forgets that from our standpoint it is he who has the fundamental error, and so every word which he has used in condemnation of us is equally in condemnation of himself, according to which side has the truth. That is the point first to be settled. Whose "conscience has been first violated" if not those which have imbibed the Platonic dogma of natural immortality—the devil's lie of Genesis 3:4? Having first adopted that idea as a fixed principle, or fundamental doctrine, it is not possible for them to deal honestly with the Word of GOD. Witness the following statement:—"Scripture invariably conveys the thought of the punishment of sin being eternal, conscious suffering." Invariably, observe. We begin to wonder whether the writer of these words has any eyes that he can see, or we may rub our own and wonder if we have been seeing aright. Let the unbiased reader judge for himself from the following passages:

"Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. . . . The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the excellency of the pastures; they shall consume; in smoke shall they consume away."—Psalm 37:10, 20.

"Ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth, and as a garden that hath no water. And the strong shall be as tow, and his work as a spark; and they shall both burn together and none shall quench them."—Isaiah 1:30-31.

"What do ye imagine against the Lord? He will make a full end; affliction shall not rise up the second time. For though they be like tangled thorns, and be drenched as it were in their drink, they shall be devoured utterly as dry stubble."—Nahum 1:9-10.

"Behold the day cometh, it burneth as a furnace; and all the proud and all that work wickedness, shall be as stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Mal. 4:1.

"Even now is the axe laid to the root of the trees: every tree therefore that bringeth forth not good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire . . . . He that cometh after me is mightier than I, . . . . whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly cleanse his threshing-floor; and will gather the wheat into the garner, but the chaff he will burn up with unquenchable fire."—Matt. 3:10-12.

"Gather up first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them. . . . As therefore the tares are gathered up and burned with fire, so shall it be at the end of the world."—Matt. 13:30-40.

"If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered; and they gather them, and cast them into the fire and they are burned."—John 15:6.

"They are the enemies of the cross of Christ; whose end is perdition."—Phil. 3:18, 19

"But these as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption."—2 Peter 2:12.

In these passages (only samples of many more of similar import) we have several figures under which the punishment of the wicked is predicted. Is there in a single one of them the idea of "eternal conscious suffering"? Do they not all expressly exclude the thought? An article that consumes away into smoke—what is left of it? "A garden without water"—what life is there in it? How does the Lord make a full end of those who have endless existence? How can those who exist forever in conscious indestructible existence be appropriately likened unto tow, or dry stubble, or chaff—the most inflammable and destructible of all materials? Who would ever think that a tree would continue to exist and live of which it is said that "neither root nor branch" of it is left? Who would ever suppose that an unfruitful tree dug up and cast out and put in the fire; or a withered branch severed from the life-giving stem and cast into the fire; or tares gathered up in bundles to be burned are symbols of continued life and existence? Who believes that an "unquenchable fire" is a fire that does not burn up, or in other words, does not do its work? or believes that there is no difference between coming to an end and having no end? No one would say or believe any of these impossibilities except a man whose "conscience has first been violated" by the false doctrine of natural immortality. If we are the Sadducees of modern times, as Mr. Caldwell is pleased to call us (although we believe both in the existence of spirit and in resurrection), then he and his followers may be called the Pharisees of these days, to whom our Lord's words apply: "This people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them."

So completely have they closed their eyes that it would almost appear as if the passages we have quoted were not in Mr. Caldwell's Bible. And in reality his Bible on this subject must be confined to the Rich Man and Lazarus, and perhaps such passages as Mark 9:42-48; Rev. 14:10, 11; 20:10. For assuredly in no other passages is it possible even to deduce the idea of "eternal conscious suffering". For what is the plain unfigurative language of Scripture? "The wages of sin is death"; "the end of these things is death"; who shall be punished with "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord"; and so on almost ad infinitum. Again we ask,—Who supposes that death means life; that to die means to live forever, even in misery; that corruption means conscious existence; that everlasting destruction means everlasting preservation (in misery); or that the finish of sin means that it shall go on without end? And again we reply,—No one, save those whose "conscience has first been violated" by the false doctrine of natural immortality. Only they would think of so perverting the ordinary use of language, and it would not be possible for them to deal honestly with GOD'S Word.

Hence even their beggarly array of texts against the overwhelming and uniform testimony of Scripture will be found in no way to support them. For the scene of the rich man and Lazarus is in Hades, a place of the dead, where the Scriptures inform us there is no knowledge, nor work, nor praise, nor speech; but silence, and the worm and corruption. Therefore in brief we must view it as a parable, or set ourselves in opposition to all the plain, unparabolic teaching as to the state of Sheol or Hades. "The unquenchable fire," and "the worm that dieth not" of Mark 9, are quoted from Isaiah 66, where the connection shows the scene to be one of carnage; here worms are feeding upon corpses. And, indeed, the passage when rightly understood is a strong figure of utter and irremediable destruction. The passage in Rev. 14 refers to a local destruction of certain ones who worship the beast, and their torment is limited by the expression "day nor night". It does not refer to the final punishment of the wicked in the day of judgment. The same limitation is found in Rev. 20:10 which moreover has special reference to the devil. The fate of wicked men is foretold further on in the chapter. Those whose names were not found written in the book of life were "cast into the lake of fire". "This is the second death."

We might say very much more, of course, on these things, and no doubt what we have said on these last few texts will not meet with Mr. Caldwell's assent; but we put the matter before any fair and open mind to decide on which side lies the truth; to decide whether it is not mad folly in the search after truth to reject, say, seven-eighths of the plain, unparabolic testimony laid before us, and pin our faith to doubtful interpretations, to say the least, of one or two parabolic and highly figurative passages. Truth is stronger than error and must prevail, but of course we can close the door to its entrance and effectually shut it out.

The above was a neat little 8 page tract issued by the late R. K. Strang at the low price of 3 for 1d.; 25 for 6d.; 50 for 11d.; 100 for 1 s. and 9d., post free. It is now out of print. It has done immense good in the past. If any of the brethren will contribute to its re-print I will gladly give a share.

It cannot be printed in this country for the prices named, but I am sure our beloved Bro. Austin will do his best.

APPROVED OF GOD

"STUDY TO SHOW thyself approved of God," was the advice of the apostle and student, Paul, to the younger disciple and student, Timothy. Paul's advice was sound. Most people realize it at fifty if they don't at twenty-five. At twenty-five the person who doesn't want to study asks, "What's the use?" At fifty the person who hasn't studied wastes much energy in vain regret over "what might have been—if."

Paul had studied hard and long—studied under the exacting, scholarly Gamaliel. He knew the value of study.

When Jesus bade us to "love the Lord thy God with all thy mind," He conveyed the necessity of study. For never can we love God with all our mind unless we study something of His workings in the world, his dealings with men, and His revelation of himself in nature and history and through men. The more we know of Him, the more we love Him.

The more science teaches us of this boundless universe with its myriad stars and whirling worlds, the more wonderful our Creator becomes. The more we find out about the process of His revelation through inspired poets and prophets and lawgivers and through His supreme revelation in our Savior, the more real and loving our Father becomes. And to find out these things implies study. Of course, this involves work, perhaps sacrifice.

"There's never a goal worth the getting,
But what you must work to attain."

If Paul had said, "Pray, sing, or talk, to show thyself approved of God," it would please some folks a great deal more. Study is hard. Yet there is nothing we need more to-day than a good, thorough knowledge of God, as Creator, Revealer, and Father. Since God is Truth, no study we undertake in an effort to find out Truth can be foreign to Him. The more we learn, the more clearly should we perceive and love Him. "Study to show thyself approved of God."—Selected by Alice B. Curtis.

“Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord.”

—Psalm 127:3.

IT IS UNQUESTIONABLE but that one of the first and chief purposes of the organization of the home by God was for the care of childhood. Man by nature is so created as to experience joy and satisfaction because of children in the home. It is only the artificial man-made circumstances of the day that militate against the advisability of children in the home. Such is contrary to the Creator's provisions and ideals. The Psalmist, speaking for God, announces, “An inheritance from Yahweh are children”; again, “As arrows in the hand of a warrior, so are the children of young men.”

“How happy the man who hath filled his quiver with them!”—Psalm 127:3, 4, 5—Roth.

JESUS' ANCESTRY AND BIRTH

Monday, December 30—Matthew 1:17-25.

“But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons.”—Galatians 4:4, 5.

FORTY-TWO GENERATIONS preceding Christ are referred to by Matthew's introduction to the birth of the Savior. In this way, Matthew links Jesus up to David and to Abraham, v. 1. Matthew 1:18 referring to the Savior's birth, will be more accurately understood if the article “the” preceding “Holy Ghost” is omitted in the English reading and is thus made to conform to the Gr. text. The Gr. text reads simply “of spirit holy”. In the like phrase with which v. 20 ends the same notation should be made.

It was the angel of the Lord who announced the truth of the Savior's birth to Joseph and it is the word of the Lord, Gal. 4:4, that informs us that God made, i.e., created, Jesus at this time, as He made, created Adam in the beginning. Like Adam, Jesus was the work of God's creative hand. The means, the methods and the manner were different, but creation resulted.

GOD'S PROTECTING WATCH CARE

Tuesday, December 31—Matthew 2:7-15.

“Lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.”—Matthew 2:9.

THE WISE MEN, in search of Jesus to do God homage, were also a cause of danger in that they excited alarm and jealousy in Herod. While Herod by diligent inquiries sought the new born King that he might slay Him, the guiding star led the wise men elsewhere to where the Child was. Herod was thus left uninformed and the warnings of the Lord directed Joseph and the Child to safety. The same God who directed Joseph's life into Egypt for his safety, Gen. 45:5, likewise directed Him who was to be King into the same foreign land for hiding and for safety.

THE CHILD MOSES

Wednesday, January 1, 1930—Exodus 2:1-10.

“In which time Moses was born, and was exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months.”—Acts 7:20.

IT WAS in those days when the royal decree of Egypt demanded the immediate death of all the new born sons of Israel that God paved the way for the preservation of Moses. Moses is one of the early examples of how God creates beginnings with a view to ultimate ends in His purposes. It was the redemption that the Father was looking unto for this promised deliverance. He provided a son; provided childhood instruction, environment; provided these in spite of the adverse purposes of the king whom His chosen people were serving.

THE CHILD SAMUEL

Thursday, January 2, 1930—1 Samuel 3:1-9.

“And she vowed a vow, and said, O Lord of Hosts, if thou wilt indeed look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and remember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid a man child, then I will give him unto the Lord all the days of his life, and there shall no razor come upon his head.”—1 Samuel 1:11.

WHILE YET INEXPERIENCED in the ways of God, yet unused to His voice, God called Samuel the youth unto a service of life. How much was Samuel indebted to the earnest prayer of his mother! How fully did God answer the same!

Not only was God honored by this consecrated son, but the nation of his day was enriched; the people of all ages following were benefited. The Christian of to-day is given reason for faith: all as a result of the prayer of Hannah in the hour of her consecration.

What lessons for to-day!

AS A LITTLE CHILD

Friday, January 3, 1930—Mark 10:13-16.

“Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God.”—Mark 10:14.

JESUS IN THE midst of His busy life, in the midst of His miracles of wonder, in the midst of His words of authority, includes the child life of His presence as a portion of His great service. He impresses upon the mind of all the fact that the child is the beginning of all of God's accomplishments in man.

The glory of the Father is revealed by that which He accomplishes in man. Man begins with childhood; childhood is the beginning of the Father's glory. That home, that church, that community which encourages childhood and shapens its ways to accommodate and develop it is doing more for the honor of God than are others which are working for the temporal grandeur of the hour.

THE CHILD IN THE CHURCH

Saturday, January 4, 1930—Luke 2:41-51.

"How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

THE CHURCH is God's only appointed body for the present day into which He is gathering and grouping those of mankind who are separating themselves unto Him. Into this body or group the Father is inviting through His Son, whosoever will by faith follow Christ.

The same God who watched over Joseph the son of Jacob, guiding him and protecting him; the same God who watched over Moses; the same God who blessed Hannah and her consecrated child, Samuel; the same God whose angels announced the birth of Jesus, is anxious to receive the children of our day into the fold of His church. That Christian father or Christian mother who appreciates the value of a child's life unto Almighty God will do doubly well to consecrate by example and teaching his or her child unto a true service to God.

A LITTLE VOW

Every hour and every minute
Has a New Year's Day
tucked in it,
And each single one of these
Is packed with possibilities—
Possibilities of pleasure,
Of sharing with a friend
Some treasure,
Of making a "Good Morning" cheery—
Make a good morning from a dreary—
Of shutting tight the lips to hide
A bit of gossip safe inside,
Instead of letting it get out
To roam about,
And maybe do
More harm than you
Would like it to.
Let us take a little vow—
Since it is the New Year now—
To be more kind, more brave, more gay
This year, and make each single day
That comes a model
New Year's Day!—Mary Carolyn Davis.

GOD'S PROMISE TO ISAAC AND TO JACOB

By Clarence Lapp

AS WE GO BACK INTO THE HISTORY of Isaac the story is brought to us of the twin brothers, Jacob and Esau. Esau was a hairy man with a red complexion. He was also a great hunter and spent most of his time in the field. In other words, he was a man of the world, a man skilled in the ways of the world. Esau's father, Isaac, loved him more because he was the firstborn. The firstborn of those olden days was to receive from the father the best blessing, the greatest possessions, and all the power and authority of the father was to be passed on to the firstborn at the death of the father.

After the boys had become men there was a famine in the land and Esau went out one day to hunt for something to sustain life. After being out all day he returned without having found anything, and as the Scriptures state, almost famished. Jacob had a large pot of something similar no doubt to what we would think as soup and of course when Esau came home hungry and nearly famished, just as you or I would do, he asked Jacob for some to eat. And Jacob said, "Sell me this day thy birthright." In all probability Esau did as any other human being would have done under similar circumstances, he sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. When we stop to think of it, we see how very foolish a thing it was for Esau to do but there are thousands and thousands of people in this very day that are selling their birthright for a mere mess of pottage. Many are day after day exchanging their birthright for the things of this world, and as we might say, exchanging their very lives, their hopes, their inheritance through Christ for the mess of pottage that the world has to offer, which in the words of Solomon is all vanity.

It was during this famine that Isaac left his home and went into the land of the Philistines to Gerar. Isaac evidently had thought of going down to Egypt, for we read that the Lord appeared to him and commanded that he should not go down. God then gave Isaac the promise which He had formerly given to his father Abraham, the same promise that was to be handed down to the generations to come after him. In Gen. 26:3, 4 the Lord said unto him, "Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries and I will perform the oath which I sware unto your father Abraham. And in thee shall all nations of the earth be blessed." This promise was given to Abraham and was handed down to Isaac. It was a conditional promise in that Isaac had to comply with certain rules that he might receive the blessings promised. God promised Isaac and his seed all the land which should be shown them, that in Isaac and his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed. In this promise we have the prophecy or the promise of Christ's coming to earth. It was through the seed of Isaac that Christ was born and indeed He came to be a blessing to all nations of the earth. Many blessings to all nations will have been realized at the coming of Christ. The promise also stated that Isaac's seed should be as the stars of the heavens or numberless.

Isaac finally became an old man and he thought it was about time to give his blessing to his son, so he called Esau his firstborn to him. He asked Esau to go kill a venison that he might eat and bless him. Isaac sent Esau for the venison not just for the meat but since Esau had sold his birthright to Jacob, there was a question in Isaac's mind whether God wanted Esau to have the blessing. If Esau returned without meat Isaac could use that as a sign that the blessing was not meant for his firstborn. Here Rebekah, Isaac's wife, took a hand in affairs. She loved Jacob more than Esau and for this reason she wanted Jacob to have the blessing. She disguised Jacob as a hairy man and sent him to Isaac to receive the blessing that should rightfully belong to Esau. Isaac could not see and so was deceived and bestowed the blessing on Jacob. When Esau returned to be blessed and found that Jacob had stolen his blessing, he was furious and resolved to kill his brother. Rebekah warned Jacob of this and told him to go and dwell with her brother, Laban. Before he went Isaac gave him the blessing that had been handed down from his father Abraham. Before this blessing was given however Jacob was charged not to take of the daughters of Canaan to wife but to take a wife from the daughters of Bethuel who was his mother's father. The blessing Isaac gave was that Jacob should be fruitful and multiply and inherit the land. The same thought is presented in this blessing as was in Isaac's, that he and his seed should be a blessing to all nations and that in or because of his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed. It was only through the power of God that Jacob's seed was to be blessed and not because of any great thing Jacob had accomplished.

In this promise we have one of the many clear prophecies concerning Christ, because it was through the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that Christ came and all nations have been blessed because of this seed. The promise given to Abraham was thus handed down to Isaac and from Isaac to Jacob and from Jacob to his seed after him. We have seen the fulfillment of several phases of this promise in that the seed or descendants of these men have come to be as numberless as the stars, in that they have inherited the land of promise and are at the present time going back to claim it. And more than all these that their Seed, Christ, is a blessing to all the nations of the earth.

LOOKING FORWARD

And so as The Herald goes forth week by week upon its mission, it is in the hope that as one of the phases of our work, it will accomplish more in the coming year and through the future than it has in the past. Also our prayer is that every feature and phase of activity will increase in effectiveness. We seek the constant and continual cooperation of every one who unites in this labor. May the results of the future reveal the fact that we are laboring under the approval of our Father.

SELF-DENIAL REPORT

OWING to the fact that some of our savings from October's self-denial effort were rather late in coming in, we have made no report until now. Illinois' Berean treasurer announces a total fund of forty-one dollars received. This is less than in some former years, nevertheless we are glad for this amount, and more especially for the earnestness of those who cooperated in the effort.

As we warmly-clad ones shiver in the zero blasts of Illinois' winter weather, we presume that needy brethren who are benefited by this fund will also thank you for your self-denial.

HOLBROOK, NEBRASKA

THE Holbrook Berean Society has been progressing nicely, and much interest has been taken in the lessons given. Many newcomers have been attending. On December 8 the Berean Class took charge of the Adult Bible Class also, with Wayne Wilson as leader. The attendance that evening was forty.

Forrest Long, Secretary-Treasurer.

ILLINOIS BEREAN SOCIETIES

OUR STATE SECRETARY gives below a brief record of the classes for the month of November. We would be glad if every one of the local organizations would see that Sr. Wood has the necessary information to report for your society each month.

SAINT LOUIS: Membership, 8; Average attendance 4 to 6. Interest good.

OREGON: Membership, 24; Average attendance, 14 and 4 visitors; Interest, good, lively. Remarks: Have finished lesson 7. The book is well prepared.

CHICAGO: Membership, 15; Average attendance, 10. Remarks: Hope to be able to give a more detailed report next month.

ROCKFORD: Membership, 22; Average attendance, 16 to 18; Interest, good.

MARSHALL: The Salem Bereans have not met for a couple of months, but are now meeting at various homes in Martinsville.

Look for their report next month.

—Edna Wood, Secretary.

As we step out upon the threshold of a brand new period of life, we are confronted with the question in our minds: "What preparations can I make toward living this year in a way more acceptable to God than I have lived during the past twelve months?"

The future is full of uncertainties, and dark paths through which our little vision is unable to penetrate. Oftentimes upon occasions, when we have passed through some of the hard places, we have said, "If I had only known this, I would have done differently."

But we never know.

Therefore, there is just one New Year's wish that I am making for you to-day, Bereans, and especially for you who are still in the springtime of life. If you are daily in the offices of the business world and have to face the conditions which that brings, you will realize perhaps a little more strongly than some others just how much this wish will mean. For it is there that the idea of man's superior wisdom is fairly thrust upon you, and that of submission to Jehovah is either ignored completely or else deliberately and openly ridiculed. Unless the foundation of your faith is secure, these worms of corruption will eat in and overturn your whole structure.

My prayer, therefore, for every Berean to-day is simply this: May you ever live close to God. Let us, upon each morning of 1930, draw near to Him in prayer, and go forth to the day's activities hand in hand with Him.

"If God be for us, who can be against us?"

JUNIOR REORGANIZATION

THE JUNIOR BEREANS of the Oregon, Illinois, church organized November 1929, consisting of two classes. The younger class meets at the home of Mrs. Edna Gruber and the older class meets at the home of Mrs. Ida Hardesty. The meetings which are held every Friday night, begin at 7:45. A party is held once each month at the home of Mrs. Hardesty. The teachers are Dorothy Krogh and John Denchfield. The officers are as follows: President, Wilbur Finkboner; Vice-president, Harold Hardesty; Secretary, Harold Hardesty; Treasurer, Robert Hardesty.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

HEROD WAS KING in Judea at the time Jesus was born. He was a great king, perhaps, but not a good king. Soon after the birth of Jesus, wise men of the East came to Jerusalem and asked, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen His star in the east and are come to worship him." When Herod heard their question, he was terribly troubled and called all his chief priests and scribes together and asked them where Christ should be born. They explained to him that years before prophets had said that a great King should be born in Bethlehem of Judea. Now Herod did not want anyone else to be king in his place, so he began planning how he might destroy Jesus. He first called the wise men to come before him and asked them when they had first seen this star. Then he told them to find Jesus and when they had found the Child to come and tell him, so that he might go and worship the new King too.

So, the wise men continued to follow the bright star until it stood still, right over the place where Mary and the Baby Jesus were. How happy the men were! They fell down and worshiped the child, and gave Him rich gifts from their treasures—gold, frankincense and myrrh.

God was watching over His Son and those who loved Him. Therefore, in a dream, He warned the wise men to go home another way rather than return to Herod. Then they knew Herod wanted only to know where Jesus was so he could hurt Him.

Naturally, Herod became very angry when the wise men failed to appear. He made another plan—a terrible, cruel plan. He ordered that all the little children in or near Bethlehem that were two years old or younger should be killed. Oh, how the mothers' hearts must have broken, and what mourning there must have been! This, too, had been foretold by the prophet, Jeremiah.

In the meantime, the angel of the Lord appeared unto Joseph in a dream, and warned him of the impending danger. He told Joseph to take Mary and Jesus and hurry down into Egypt and to stay there until God told them to return. At night, the three quietly stole away and went down to Egypt.

After some time, Herod died. Then the angel of the Lord again appeared unto Joseph telling them to go back to their land of Israel. Upon hearing that Herod's son was king, Joseph felt afraid, and turned aside into Galilee. The three refugees made their home in the little village called Nazareth.

Thus, two other prophecies were fulfilled—"Out of Egypt have I called my Son," and, "He shall be called a Nazarene."

NATURE QUESTION

THE LITTLE ENGINE THAT COULD

PART III.

After a long, long time, along came a Little, Small Engine. It seemed quite useless to ask this Little, Small Engine for help, yet the Little, Small Engine had one very bright, lively eye in her head, and she was humming and hurrying along, whistling and ringing her bell in the very liveliest fashion.

So the little Train cried out, and every one of her Cars joined in the chorus: "Little Engine, could you take us over the mountain? Our Engine is broken down, and we're loaded with Christmas toys for the children on the other side. Can you help us, help us, help us?"

Now the Little, Small Engine had never been far away from the freight yard where she had spent all her days in switching, but she did not mean to let those children go without their Christmas toys if she could possibly help it. So she answered: "I think I can! I think I can! I think I can!"

Then she came straight up to the Train, caught hold of her, and began to tug and pull. Pretty soon, Ding dong! Ding dong! Puff, puff, puff! Chug, chug, chug! The Train-of-Cars began to move, slowly, slowly. And the Little, Small Engine, as she toiled, kept puffing:

"I—think—I—can! I—think—I—can! I—think—I—can!"

Slowly, steadily, she gained speed. "I—think—I—can! I—think—I—can! I—think—I—can!" Now she ran steadily up the track. "I think I can! I think I can! I think I can! I think I can! I think I can!" At last she reached the top of the mountain and then she puffed out joyously, "I THOUGHT I COULD!"

There, below, on the other side, lay a great, big city where the children lived to whom she was bearing the Christmas toys. Down she started, sliding faster, faster, faster, and as she went, she sang merrily, "I thought I could! I thought I could! I thought I could! I thought I could! I thought I could!"

And so the children got their Christmas toys.

THE END.

CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

Matthew 1:1 to 2:23

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 11:1-9

GOLDEN TEXT

Thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins.—Matthew 1:21.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Childhood of the Savior-King.

Outline. I. Introduction. II. His Birth. III. His Childhood.

I. Introduction. Matthew begins with the introductory title, "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham." This is the inspired title of the book. At once the record sets forth the genealogy of Jesus from Abraham, the one from whom all of God's promises to Israel radiate. Jesus, according to God's own purpose, was presented to mankind as coming from the lineage of Abraham through David. As such Israel's best interests would well and naturally, in the estimation of man, be His best interests; Israel's friends would be His friends; Israel's opponents might, naturally, well be opposed by Him.

II. His Birth. Little is said by Matthew regarding the manner in which Jesus was born; that record is left for Luke who writes of Him as Jehovah's perfect Man. Matthew fulfills his mission in this respect in the simple announcement in chapter 1 that Mary should call His name Jesus, that is, Savior, in fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah 14 that a virgin should bear a Son whose name should be Immanuel, i.e., "God with us."

III. His Childhood. Matthew's narration of the royal enmity aroused by the announcement of the birth of a new king reveals conditions similar to occurrences in other generations and in many royalties. So vivid and emphatic was the thought of all that Jesus was to be King of Israel—even God's appointed King for Israel—that Herod, the ruler under Rome, and all who would uphold Rome, early began to block His way unto the throne. But God in harmony with "his eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus", Eph. 3:11, guarded and led His new Savior-King throughout His infancy.

Questions on Subject. What is the inspired title of this first N. T. book? What is meant by generation in 1:1? Consult editorial and discuss standpoint from which Matthew presents the ministry of Jesus. Why does not Matthew narrate more about the birth of Jesus? Why did God select a pure, godly, family to rear His Son? Is there any lesson here for parents to-day? How was Christ, in His birth, related to royalty? What was there in His position that caused Herod to fear Jesus' Kingship?

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Importance of Youth. The botanist tells us that the mighty oak is by the microscope seen in the acorn. The industrialist first shapes the mold, pours the molten metal, then takes out the shaped product. God prepared and qualified a proper parentage from which to create His Son whom He appointed the world's Redeemer and Sovereign.

Only from a proper acorn could one contemplate an oak; only from a proper pattern can the manufacturer expect a true casting; only from a proper childhood did God look for a true Sovereign of the world.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins."—Matt. 1:21.

Over seven hundred years before the events of our lesson it was prophesied that "a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son", which was fulfilled in the birth of Christ. The name, "JESUS", means Savior, therefore the child was called, "JESUS", because, "he shall save his people from their sins".

Smith's Bible Dictionary says, "It is more than likely that our usual date for Christmas, December 25, is not far from the real date of Christ's birth. Since the twenty-fifth of December comes when the longest night gives way to the returning sun on his triumphant march, it makes an appropriate anniversary to mark the birth of Him who appeared in the darkest night of error and sin. God's providence had prepared the world for the coming of Christ, and this was the fittest time in all history."—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Jesus the Child of Foreordination.

When Jesus was eight days old and even before He was born, the Holy Ghost spoke with absolute assurance concerning His future. He spoke to Zacharias, Mary, the angels, Simeon and Anna, without the slightest hint that there was the least possibility of the Infant failing the mission that God had assigned to Him.

Why such sureness? Because the Holy Ghost knew that the Child had been foreordained before the foundation of the world. He knew that God's love for man had been working since the beginning, toward bringing a Child into the world which should embody, dormant, all the qualities necessary in a Savior. He knew that Love, acting through infinite Power and Wisdom, had so selected Seed, had so controlled the laws of heredity, had so managed environment that Jesus was born a Child in whom the choosing to do God's will, the cleaving to good and the eschewing of evil, were absolutely sure. He knew that Jesus, by reason of such "ordering" in His birth and life would manifest fully the fullness of God, which is grace and truth, and thus be man's Savior.

Shall we not give thanks for such a Gift, rather than resent such foreordination?—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: How the Child-King Was Received.

When Jesus our Savior was born into the world it was no ordinary event. The Child of promise, the long looked-for One who was to be the Redeemer of the world was this same Baby to whom the wise men brought gifts, before whom the shepherds knelt in worship and whose birth was heralded to the world by angelic chorus. Long had His coming been anticipated by those who were believers in the prophecies of Isaiah and others.

But the beauty of this picture was marred by the jealousy of man. Christ was born to be King and Herod was not willing to give up his authority to another. Tell the story of Herod's cruel law and God's watchful care of His Son. Will there come a time when all will kneel in worship before this King, when there will be no envious hearts to plot evil against Him? Give a reference to prove your answer.

How did this child grow and develop? What was the reason for His increasing in "wisdom and . . . in favour with God and man"? What does the word, "Messiah" mean? What was Jesus' title? Were the events connected with His birth in keeping with His mission? —M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Baby Jesus' Life Saved.

All during the Christmas season of the year we are told the story of the birth of the baby Jesus in a manger in Bethlehem. When the wise men saw the star they began looking for the Babe. They asked Herod, the king, "Where is this Baby that is born to be King of the Jews?" Herod did not know, but he did not like to hear about any one else going to be king. So he asked the wise men to tell him where the Babe was when they found Him.

The wise men found the Babe, but do you think they returned to tell the king? Oh! no, they went home another way. But Herod thought, "I'll make a law that says all babies under two years of age must be killed. Then that will do away with that Baby whom these men said would be King." He made the law and all babies had to be killed.

Do you think this Baby was killed, too? No, for an angel appeared to Joseph in a dream and said, "Take the Baby and His mother to Egypt so this king may not kill Him." So one night Joseph took Mary and Baby Jesus and started for Egypt. Here they stayed until King Herod had died. They then came back and lived in Nazareth.

Who would you say saved Jesus' life? If He looked after and cared for Jesus, will He not care for us also?—V. C. T.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

OUR CHURCHES

A number of our churches will soon be holding their annual business meetings. The interest of the church will again be considered from the practical working standpoint. It is not proper to exalt a mere organization. But the church is not such. It is an extraordinary organization; it is the one God-organized force that is to-day in the work. It is of the Father's placing; it is in harmony with His purpose; it is the only organized force which is directly in the hand of God to-day. It, therefore, behooves every earnest Christian to be prayerfully concerned at all times for the interests of the church. Especially should that concern receive much consideration at that season of the year when its working plans, its ideals, its ambitions are considered and given shape. One cannot enthuse too much regarding God's church. He cannot give it too much time, too much effort, too much thought. All that he can do will still be too little.

Let us exalt the church in our minds to the place which it should hold and let us establish its name high and clearly before the eyes of man.

Sr. Marshall Logan, of Plymouth, Indiana, is recovering from a sprain caused by a fall about a month ago.

Sisters Margaret Lyon of Chicago and Dorothy Lyon of Rockford will spend Christmas with the George Siple and Chas. Gesin families at Oregon, Illinois.

Bro. F. E. Siple expects to speak at the Plum River, Illinois, church Sunday, December 29, both morning and evening. Let all those living in this vicinity bear this in mind and attend these services.

The brethren at Rensselaer, Indiana, enjoyed a very good conference meeting December 6 to 8, though the attendance was small on account of threatening weather. Brothers Anderson and Hatch did the speaking.

Bro. and Sr. Chas. Gesin and Ruth and Alice had a delightful surprise when Ernest arrived unannounced Sunday, December 23 at 4 a.m. Ernest is a law student at the University of Arizona, at Tucson.

The South Bend, Indiana, church and Sunday School gave a Christmas program and social on Sunday evening, December 22, at the McDonald-Fox home. Kiddies and grown-ups enjoyed the evening greatly.

Sr. Leila Mae Siple, of Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, is spending the holidays with her parents, Bro. and Sr. George Siple, at Oregon, Illinois. She is a very welcome visitor among her many friends and her assistance in the choir is much appreciated by all.

Editor Restitution Herald, Oregon, Illinois. Dear Brother: I am enclosing herewith manuscript for the books of First and Second Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, and Esther. I have notes in pencil for the books of Job and the Psalms and will forward same as soon as I have time to type them.

I also wish to accept with thanks Bro. Drinkard's "Words of Appreciation", and in reply to his suggestion of having them put in book form, will say that all depends on the means for printing and the desire of the brethren to procure a copy.

It is my present intention to continue through the Bible if length of days and health are given me. If printed in book form they will probably fill from 150 to 200 pages, according to my figures.

Yours in service,

L. Booth.

The above letter of Brother Lyman Booth, of 4318 Olive Street, St. Louis, Missouri, is self-explanatory. Undoubtedly there are others who would like to see this manuscript printed in book form. The editor suggests that all those interested will correspond with Brother Booth that he may know what decision to make. If he is to print the book, the sooner he knows it, the more cheaply can the book be issued, as the composition in the printing room can be preserved, thus avoiding the necessity of resetting the type. A post card to-day will tell the story.—Editor.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Sr. Benaway escaped serious injury when her car was smashed into by a coal truck. She was on her way home from the church where she had been working on the Christmas program. We are thankful to the Father for His protecting care.

Rex Skeels and family have been suffering with the flu the past fortnight. They are well on the way of recovery at this time.

At a recent meeting of our church board it was decided to have our series of revival meetings in April instead of January as has been our custom in previous years.

Sr. Woodward was in the Rapids a few days recently calling on some of her many church friends. She is using her strength in the Master's service, and it can be truthfully said that her life which has passed the fourscore mark is having a "beautiful setting". Hail to Aunt Mary.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

Sunday, December 8, brought to a close a very successful meeting of two week's duration. Bro. Sydney Magaw, of Eden Valley, Minnesota, gave us a real feast of good things, and the result is that two realized the need of Jesus as their Savior, and were buried with Him in baptism. The church is renewed with zeal to press onward, while there are others that have been awakened to the glorious truths of God's Holy Word. We trust the seed that was sown will spring forth and bring fruit for the Master's service.

We wish to introduce to the brethren; Bro. Harold Kessler, 449 Sandhurst Drive, Dayton, Ohio, and Sr. Florence Knife, West Milton, Ohio, Route 2. Bro. Kessler, a young father, has considered this step for some time, and since he has made his decision for Christ, we trust he will be a worthy servant for the Master. Sr. Florence Knife is a high school girl and how we rejoice to know that she, at this age, has taken Christ as her Companion, who will guide her and direct her pathway, if she will follow where He leads.

May we all with them consecrate our lives anew, keeping ever before us the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus, that when He comes we may be crowned with life everlasting.

Joy Ann is the name that has been given to the little daughter who came to make her home with Bro. and Sr. Chas. Pearson, November 25.

Every one is doing his best in the pageant, "Oh, Worship the King", under the direction of Bro. Chas. Doll and Srs. Belva Knife and Louise Brewer. The pageant will be presented by the Sunday School on the evening of December 29.

JAMES T. AULD

Civil War veteran, fell asleep October 16, 1929, and was laid to rest October 19 in the mausoleum in Union Cemetery, Uhrichsville, Ohio. He had been a resident of Uhrichsville for the past 20 years. He was born near Dearsfield, Ohio, June 28, 1845, and was of a family of twelve children. Besides his widow, he leaves to mourn one brother and three sisters who live in Iowa. Death resulted from complications following an attack of "flu" last May, though he had been confined to his bed only a week.

There was no preacher of our faith nearby and a friend read all of the fifteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians. Two hymns were sung, "Abide with Me" and "Asleep in Jesus".

Bro. Auld was a member of the Church of God and was a strong believer in the resurrection of the dead and the hope of eternal life.

CHRISTMAS OFFERING

Some who were unable to send in at Thanksgiving time have been contributing to the work in the form of Christmas offerings. We want to thank one and all for this cooperation in the work. It seems most fitting that at this most religious Holiday Christian people everywhere should make a portion of their gift for the cause of truth for which Christ gave His life.

GIFT SUBSCRIPTIONS

We have already received several subscriptions from Herald readers as gifts to their friends. We have been glad to notify the friends to whom such subscriptions have been made, informing them of the gift thus presented. We are also glad to cooperate with our readers in this way and to assist them in making a gift of The Herald to their friends.

ANNUITY BONDS

Since last issue we have received another check for $600 asking for an Annuity Bond. The same has been made out and is at the present time enroute to the Treasurer for his signature.

The National Bible Institution has benefited by something over $5000.00 in Annuity Bonds that have been issued since early summer, and we are hoping that many more will soon see their opportunity along this line and will aid the Christian cause, for which their fortune will be advanced in good and proper ratio according to the means which are theirs. The Annuity Bond affords a method whereby bonds or stocks or cash or any good commercial paper can be exchanged for Annuity Bonds. These Annuity Bonds in turn are secured by the best trustworthy securities which our judgment in connection with the judgment of our banker permits. Thus the holder of the Annuity Bond is securing his interest during the period of his lifetime, after which the principal is available by the National Bible Institution for the best use possible. Perhaps we should mention again the fact that people of large means utilize the Annuity Bond method for assuring steady income for their heirs. Not long ago we read of something over $100,000 which had been so given to a religious institution, the income from which was to be paid to a certain youthful heir during the lifetime of the heir. Following the heir's death, the entire principal becomes available to the religious institution for use.

In fact, it is by such methods as this and others that some of our strongest religious work is prosecuted year after year. Again we wish to thank our brother referred to above for his cooperation in the work.

The minister in his work finds many things that are not pleasant, and many things that are pleasant, things that encourage him in his work, send him on his way rejoicing.

Last third Sunday was a dark, gloomy day. The writer and his son, Lonnie, went to Plymouth for service in the forenoon, and North Salem in the afternoon; then to Burr Oak for service in the evening.

We drove to Bro. D. Weaver's for supper. After supper quite a number of the members came in and each one was carrying a load. We wondered what was up. Then just before starting for church Sr. Weaver called us into the parlor, where there was a great pile of stuff for the physical man, and said, "Bro. Anderson, here are some things the members of Burr Oak church want to give you and the children for Christmas." Well, we had our car full. However, the greatest blessing was not the gift itself, but the spirit of love that prompted the gift. May God bless the givers.

At the church that night our hearts were made glad when Sr. LaMunion, and young Sr. Zechiel, Sr. Pearl Zechiel's daughter, came into the church.

J. H. Anderson.

COMMUNICATIONS

Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies. The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities. For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.—Psalm 103:1-12.

I bless Him for the wonderful care He has bestowed on me and mine, and I thank Him always. He who most praises God, fits himself most for the reception of His bounties. O, praise ye the Lord, all ye His saints. Praise His wonderful name.

Emma C. Miller.

THE BIBLE

The Bible, the Bible, blest volume of truth—
How sweetly it smiles on the season of youth!
It bids us seek early the pearl of great price,
Ere the heart is enslaved in the bondage of vice.

(2 Tim. 3:8-15; Jer. 29:13-15; Acts 8:9-39)

The Bible, the Bible, we hail it with joy;
Its truths and its glories our tongues shall employ;

We'll sing of its triumphs and tell of its worth,
And send its glad tidings afar o'er the earth.
(Psa. 37:34; Matt. 25:31-41)

The Bible, the Bible, more precious than gold,
The hopes and the glories its pages unfold!
It speaks of a Savior and tells of His love
And shows us the way to the mansions above.
(Luke 18:22; Mark 8:36; Matt. 6:19, 20)

The Bible, the Bible, the valleys shall ring
And hilltops re-echo the notes that we sing;
Our Banner inscribed with its precepts and rules,
Shall long wave in triumph, the joy of our schools.
(1 Sam. 19:18; Acts 19:1-9)

TITLES AND RECORDS OF JESUS

EVERY INSPIRED TITLE given to Jesus has its own signification. Just as Jesus is our Passover, 1 Cor. 5:7, so is He our Atonement. As Passover He means one thing to us, as Atonement He means an entirely different thing. Every title has its own meaning. The same person is acting in different capacities according as His titles indicate.

The Bible is inspired. Each book is inspired. God has inspired different writers to write what He wished to reveal. Had He desired to reveal more, He would have inspired more writers or the same writers to have written more. Matthew, Mark, Luke, John are four different records of Christ's ministry. Each writer was inspired. They were not severally inspired to write the same thing; each has written differently. While writing of the same One they have written different phases of His life's word and work.

The Gospel Records

While Matthew's record is the record of God's King whom He assigned to be King of His chosen nation Israel, Mark's record is of Jehovah's servant. Cf. Zech. 9:9; Isa. 42:1. Luke presents the Master as God's Man. See Zech. 6:12. The first man failed but Jesus, the second Man, was true to His Father and succeeded in all that God appointed. Then in John's gospel the ministry of Jesus seems to be treated from the standpoint of Jesus as God's Son. Thus four distinct gospel records are presented. They all treat of the same person, Jesus, but they treat of Him in four aspects of life. In some instances all of the writers have used identical works, parables, miracles, words of Christ. In other instances they have used different works and words.

These gospels cannot be harmonized in the sense in which many have published so called Harmonies of the Gospels, i. e., given records in Matthew though similar are not necessarily the same as the records in the other gospels worded differently.

In the study of Matthew for the first six months of 1930, the students should ever keep in mind that we are to study Jesus as God's appointed King. As such we find His genealogy is given back to Adam. He is treated of as King to be, and His kingdom treated of as that of a literal, natural nation, even the nation of Israel finally restored to God's favor.

DATES

Usher, the chronologist whose dates are placed in the margins in most of our Bibles, builds the chronology of the ministry of Jesus on the theory that the period of our Savior's ministry continued for three and one-half years. The editor of the Quarterly believes that that school which teaches that the ministry of Jesus was one and one-fourth years is more nearly correct. The dates ascribed to the lessons of this quarter are upon that basis.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BAPTISM

By S. J. Lindsay

BAPTISM A SEAL OF FAITH

The following is the first of a series of three articles written by Brother S. J. Lindsay and published in The Restitution Herald February 16, 1916. These articles are gladly reprinted in response to a call for same by one who has appreciated them very much. We are considering the advisability of publishing the articles in tract form. We will be glad to receive a post card from each reader expressing his opinion as to this.
—Editor.

IN THE FOURTH chapter of Romans we learn that after Abraham exercised faith toward God, he was given the sign of circumcision which was a seal of his faith which he exercised before he was circumcised. It will be necessary for the student to read this chapter carefully before proceeding further. The same chapter tells us that we must walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham. What were the items of faith which Abraham believed?

First, according to the promise of God, Abraham looked for an everlasting possession in the earth, Gen. 17:7-8. Second, he looked for a son and heir in whom all the families of the earth should be blessed. Paul says that the heir (seed) was Christ, Gal. 3:16. It was upon exercising faith in these things that God gave Abraham the seal of circumcision whereby he sealed his covenant with God in blood.

Inasmuch as we are to walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, and inasmuch as Christian fellowship requires a seal, it is necessary for us to see what that seal is. Before we are ready for the seal, we must exercise the necessary faith—the faith which Abraham had. In Col. 2:10-12, we read, “And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power: in whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ: buried with him in baptism, wherein ye also are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.”

Then burial in baptism is Christian circumcision. It is in baptism that we take the blood seal. Christ shed His blood in death and burial, and by symbolizing death, burial and resurrection we take upon us His blood and arise to walk the new life. As Abraham was required to believe God in what God promised, before he was circumcised, so we must believe what God promised before we can be properly baptized. Simply dipping a person in water does not necessarily constitute baptism.

We find this principle of truth exercised in the great commission and in the teaching and practice of the apostles to whom the commission was given. The commission was, “Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.”—Mark 16:15-16.

First, the candidate must hear and believe the gospel. Having heard and exercised faith in what he has heard, upon repentance he is ready to take the seal. By an examination of the Acts, it will be found that the apostles followed this order of things. Peter preached the gospel on the day of Pentecost. That gospel contained the promise of God's kingdom with Christ sitting upon David's throne, a Christ risen from the dead. Expressing belief in these things, the hearers were exhorted to repent and to be baptized for the remission of sins.

Philip preached to the people of Samaria and when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women. They were not ready for baptism until they had heard and believed. The eunuch said to Philip, after Philip had taught him, “See, here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptized?” Philip conditioned his readiness to baptize him only upon his expression of belief in the things which he had heard. In every instance recorded it will be found that the knowledge of and belief in the gospel preceded baptism.

Some questions then. Will dipping in water a little child or any person who knows nothing about the gospel have any saving effect on such person?

Will it help matters any to dip any person in water who believes something for gospel other than that which Christ and the apostles preached?

Does it not stand to reason that before we can legally seal a covenant or contract, we must know what that contract is? Should we not enter in upon the subject of baptism with a great deal of care?

He who does away with Christian baptism in his system of religion does away with the means God has given by which the covenant with God may be legalized. The Children of Israel exercised the same blood mark in leaving Egypt. Had they left the blood off their door posts, it would have meant severe loss to them even though they had fulfilled every other requirement God made of them.

FORTY-TWO GENERATIONS

THERE IS a little point in the 17th verse of Matthew 1 that would not be amiss for all to consider. Matthew has listed the generations of Christ from Abraham. After completing this list in 1:16, he then groups them into three groups of fourteen. The first begins with the call of Abraham and ends with the call of David from his sheep-fold. The second commences with the construction of the temple and continues to its destruction. The third begins with the sovereignty of Babylon over Israel and finishes with the power of Rome in supremacy. Is it a mere coincidence that these generations are thus evenly grouped and that their divisions occur in connection with such important changes in events?—F. L. A.

MILESTONES WE HAVE PASSED

By F. L. Austin

ONE BY ONE WITH UNERRING ACCURACY the years toll off. No power of man can stay the time; no dial of Ahaz can hold the ever changing shadow. Like marks along the right-of-way which appear to move backward to the passengers riding on the fast express, so the shadow of time races past us and we find ourselves with each new year one year further approached toward an inevitable enjoyable milestone. This milestone is announced to appear at the closing of a long series of human events and at the entrance of a series of events which in comparison will be beautiful and great beyond contemplation. As the world has rushed forward through the last two and one-half millenniums of time, many milestones have been passed. Never again may the human race move backward to look anew upon those events marked off by those milestones.

The Babylonian empire rose mightily under the power of its king to whom authority was given by the God of heaven to rule wherever man or beast was found. He reached the zenith of his power. With the declining hour of his day he approached the eve and enjoyed the sunset, and his day was over. Babylon as a kingdom of might is no more. That milestone pictured by the prophets has been passed by the world; never again may we look back to live anew its scenes.

Medo-Persia, another prophesied kingdom that should rise to the heights of power among Gentile nations, came quickly to view as the retiring scenes of Babylon passed. Darius, Xerxes, Cyrus in turn led the people to national glory. Quickly this milepost also was passed as the world sped forward through time. Greece flitted by. Rome passed with the others; and since their day we have been passing through as it were a "milky-way" of intermingled powers.

Another milestone seems to be standing where we are now passing. The Jewish people, long since decried by Gentile powers after having been submerged in their scattered condition among the world of nations, is just now emerging and taking a stand within that land which God retained for Israel from the Canaanitish nations of long ago. A miracle of miracles seems to be in the working before the eyes of all people. These Jewish people, unwanted, unbidden, unwelcomed in heart by every national power, are steadily gathering strength, political, religious, financial, and industrial, in the Holy Land. It is all in agreement with God's prophetic word. Just as the needles of the compass from whatever longitude all point unerringly toward the same magnetic pole, so the Jews emerging from the dispersions of the past wend their ways toward the one common center, Jerusalem. Jerusalem is, as it were, a lodestone drawing upon the heart strings of a chosen race. This is one of the most remarkable events in all racial history. Prophecy has located this event as in the closing times of Gentile supremacy. Therefore as we rapidly rush along and note the accomplishment of these things, we realize that the milestone indicates to us that we are approaching as it were the outskirts of the time of the end, coming to new ways.

Of activity we may notice a series of markings. Daniel prophesied, 12:1-4, that in the time of the end men shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. How vividly the accomplishments of these things stand before us as we rush through time! What tremendous changes have been perfected in the mode of travel during the last few years! Not only should we notice the fact of improved conditions for travel but we should notice the greater fact of the increasing habit of travel. Millions and millions are rushing to and fro, increased facilities encouraging travel.

Knowledge is increased. The rapidity with which man is gaining knowledge of the wonders of God's creation is marvelous. It is because of the increase of knowledge that the automobile has been made possible. The airship is a thing of fact. It is because man by careful study has come to gain a knowledge of the laws of God that the radio is being utilized, that the voice of man can be heard the world around. But like increase of knowledge, photography is re-

EDITORIAL

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

F. E. SIPLE, Assistant Editor.

"Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid: for the Lord JEHOVAH is my strength and my song; he also is become my salvation." Isaiah 12:2.

THE YEARS AHEAD

THE YEARS AHEAD WILL BRING new problems in every line of activity. New standards will be developed; new and higher aims will be set; greater achievements will be expected, yea, will be accomplished, but the fundamental principle will ever remain the same. Honesty will prevail above trickery and deceit. Industry will outstrip spasmodic effort; hard work, faithful service, will continue to be the factors.

It will still remain that he who would be straight must think straight; that he who would succeed must follow fundamental principles; that he who would be Christian must think Christian thoughts, must aim at Christian ideals, must live minute by minute Christian principles.

The years ahead are scanned too much with the glass of the business man, the industrialist. They should be scanned by him but also those years should be scanned by the glass of the Christian. Christianity has much to foresee, much to aim unto. It is not sufficient that the individual Christian should stand upon the rise of ground and look across the intervening valley upon the mounted height of victory in Christ without scanning and studying the lowland intervening. Christ lived not alone for self. He lived for all sons and daughters of the first Adam, for those arriving in His day, for those who were blind to His beginning, for those who are yet unborn. Christianity should likewise look at the interests of the race around and about. The real, true, honest Christian will labor for the success in Christ of his fellows as for the success of self.

Is it suggesting too much that the members of the Church of God shall endeavor to grasp this larger vision of future years that we shall be able by increasingly stronger efforts to assist others to gain victory in Christ our Lord and Master?

The years ahead in our immediate future indicate experiences that must be passed through differing from any experiences of past time. Christian industry, Christian work, hard work, Christian devotion true to Christ, these things are fundamental in developing the individual and in aiding him to meet the problems that are bound to arise in the coming years.

AWAKENING ROMANISM

SPAKING OF THE RECENT official visit of the King and Queen of Italy, Stanley High, writing in a current number of the Christian Herald, says, "Pope Pius, having witnessed the pilgrimage of reconciliation of the King and Queen of Italy and, later, of the Crown Prince and his sister, turned, last week, to a discussion of Protestantism . . . . In his address the Pope declared that Protestantism was growing 'more and more exhausted,' and rejoiced that 'returns to Catholicism were being multiplied ever more frequently.' 'Behold Catholicism,' he said, 'which shines in the clear light, while Protestantism goes from denial to denial, rendering ever more intense in many souls that follow the invitation of truth a homesickness for returning to Catholicism. It has sometimes seemed as though the Catholic ship were in danger, but instead it has passed triumphantly on in the real course of culture.'"

More recently, viz., upon the occasion that the Pope left the Vatican City, with his regular retinue of attendants he visited the home of the popes of former years, Saint Francis Cathedral. In so doing for the first time in fifty years the head of the Catholic Church moved beyond the confines of his own gardens and put foot upon unconsecrated ground. Thus Catholicism because of the developments of the years is seen to laud itself more highly and to prepare to proclaim itself anew to higher authority and position over the world. True Protestants who have studied the Scriptures can but see in this mannerism a distinct tendency toward the fulfillment of some of those prophecies which point to the certainty of coming times of trouble. In connection with these developments press reports announce that leaders in Jerusalem are anticipating that very soon papal legates will become prominent in the Holy City. Already Mohammedans claim first right to the city of Zion. The Jews claim it to be their city by gift of God and demand that it shall be restored to them. Christians are there and are seeking the opportunity to place Christianity as the proper religion in the high places in that city of God's choice. With the advance of Catholicism aspiring to leadership and especially over things Christian, and with the record of her past in connection with the orgies of the dark centuries, the world should be on the watch, ready to recognize and to act should this power in its growing self-laudation presume to lift its flag and strike the blows that many from different sections contemplate.

"Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness: he is gracious, and full of compassion, and righteous."

HOW TO BE SAVED

ALL THE INSTRUCTIONS of the Holy Spirit adapt themselves to the specific need and conditions of those to whom they are given, and this is especially true in the directions given to men who are seeking for salvation. The jailor said, "What must I do to be saved?" The multitude who heard the word from Peter at Pentecost said, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" And Saul, smitten to the earth and arrested in his mad career, cried out, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

These questions are all similar, but the answer to each of them was different. And why? Has God different ways of saving men and different conditions of salvation? No. But the questions were asked by different persons, under different circumstances and in different mental conditions; and hence required different answers.

The jailor was a heathen; he knew nothing of Christ or of God, except that there was some power which guarded Paul and Silas, that could shake the earth and rock the Philippian jail to its foundations; and he desired to avoid the vengeance of that power and be saved. He was not told at first to repent, or to be baptized; for repentance and baptism were things that he knew nothing about. He was simply told at first to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ". And when the word of God—the gospel of the kingdom, the story of Christ's love, and the message of repentance and faith in Him, had been preached to him, and he had penitently embraced the glad tidings, he was baptized, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

The Jews at Pentecost, heard the word of God from Peter's lips and the apostolic testimony pierced their hearts. They said, "What shall we do?" Peter did not tell them to believe, for they already believed what he had said. They had heard the gospel message, which the jailor had not heard. They had accepted it as truth and believed that Jesus was the crucified and risen Christ. The direction to them was, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2:38. They were to repent of their wrong in rejecting and crucifying the Lord of Glory. And they were publicly to avow their faith in Christ, who was buried and rose again, by being "buried with him by baptism into death", and being raised again, to walk with Him in newness of life.

When Saul of Tarsus inquired, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" the answer was that he was to go to Damascus, and there be told what he must do. And after he had spent three days in blindness, fasting and prayer, Ananias came to him to tell him the will of God. He did not command him to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, for he had already believed—yes, he knew—for his eyes had seen the Lord and his ears had heard His voice. He did not direct him to repent, for the Lord had already said, "Behold, he prayeth". But he said to him, as to a penitent, praying believer, "And now, why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Acts 22:16.

The three questions, then, are the same and the answers are substantially the same; but they adapt themselves to the special needs of each and every individual case. The ignorant jailor is bidden to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. The believing Jews are commanded to repent and be baptized; and the believing, penitent, and prayerful Saul is told to tarry no longer, but to arise and be baptized, making full confession of his faith in Christ, and of his repentance for his sins; and so escaping from his burden of guilt, wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord.

Reader! Are you ignorant of Christ and His salvation? Read, then, the record of His love, and believe on Him. Do you already believe the testimony God has given concerning the birth, the life, the death, the resurrection, the ascension, and the coming and reign of the Lord Jesus Christ? Repent, then, and prepare to see His face in peace. Have you believed the message, and repented of your sins, and offered up your prayer to God; and are you still lingering in sadness and in gloom? If so, "Why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

The way of life is easy, simple, plain; "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis from "Forgotten Themes, or Facts for Faith," by George A. Brown.

YOUR NEW YEAR'S RECORD

LET'S MAKE BELIEVE THAT EACH OF US is a Victrola needle, and we will call this wax record the year 1930. Each circle on the record is a day, and you are the needle that makes a daily record all through the year. Suppose that everything you said or did each day was marked on your Victrola record!

Now suppose that at the end of the year, your Victrola record could be played, so that you could hear everything you said or did every day in the year. Then whoever heard your record played would know all about your words and actions that year. Would you be proud of every part of your record?

Let's begin this year and make a record full of good words and actions about which we shall not be ashamed to have people know. Remember, as your little needle starts out on its daily run through the circle of hours from sunrise until bedtime that you want to make the best kind of marks on your record that day. Try to make today's record better than yesterday's. Then, on December thirty-first, you may be proud of your 1930 record.—Harold S. Winship.

There can be no question but that the Christian world is facing a real test in the near future. The times of trouble which are spoken of concerning Jacob are undoubtedly near at hand. And as the world enters into this period of trouble, the Christian must stand true and faithful before Christ.

THE EXCLUDED CHRIST

By Mrs. A. J. Chaplin

"Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."—Rev. 3:20.

HOW OFTEN WE HAVE heard this scripture used when making an appeal to those out of Christ! This language really is addressed to the church and to a church which at one time had Christ in its midst, but who now had excluded Him. It is true, they were going through a form of religion or worship. Perhaps they were so much absorbed in the social things of the church and in worldliness that they had not yet even missed His presence.

He said to this church, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." So it would seem that the church was not listening to the still, small voice of Jesus; did not recognize the voice, or hear Him knocking for admittance. They were so absorbed in themselves and what "I am doing," that they had not asked if this way were well-pleasing to the Savior, or the way He would have them do.

Are we following Christ or are we following the world? They were not conscious of the fact that they had left Jesus outside the door, and that even then He was knocking for admittance. That He was not pleased with the conduct of the church is the reason for His call to the church, asking them to overcome. He says, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne even as I overcame, and am sat down with my Father in his throne." There must have been those who had not overcome, who were trying to serve God and mammon, a thing impossible to do and please our Savior.

He calls upon the church to buy of Him, gold, tried in the fire, "that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see. . . . Thou sayest, I am rich . . . and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked. As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent. Behold, I stand at the door, and knock." —Rev. 3:17-20. If Jesus were pleased with a church in this condition, He would be in their midst, not outside the door.

What excludes Christ, the lack of religious fervor in the church, the chilly spiritual atmosphere, spirituality at a low ebb, lukewarmness, neither cold nor hot, largely a mechanical machine with no Christ in it? To such a church Jesus says, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." He is not inside the door, but outside. If the door is opened, He has promised to enter and abide, but the condition is that they must be zealous of good works and repent..

JEWS PLAN A WORLD-WIDE SOCIETY

ACCORDING TO AN ARTICLE which appeared in the Rocky Mountain News, published in Denver, Colorado, Monday, April 29, 1929, there was a gathering of prominent Jewish laymen in the city of Denver on the night of April 28. The purpose of this gathering, according to this article, was to launch a movement which will become world-wide in its scope, and which has as its objective the formation of an organization to make possible the calling together of the Jewish Sanhedrin, consisting of seventy-one Jews from all over the world. It is hoped, according to this article, that this Great Sanhedrin may meet in the city of Jerusalem and review the life, trial and crucifixion of Jesus.

Below appear the principal paragraphs of the article:

"There, they would review the life and trial of Jesus, together with the jurisdiction and decrees of the Sanhedrin acting in the ancient city at the time Rome ruled the world.

"The modern Sanhedrin, basing its conclusion on such research, would set forth Jewry's position in relation to the founder of Christianity.

SEEK VINDICATION

"This body would consider these ancient documents and history in the light of the Holy Scriptures and the recent tremendous events arising from the World War.

"For nearly 2000 years the Jews have been compelled to stand silent in the face of accusations holding them responsible for the trial and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, Schwayder pointed out.

"We should cheerfully and manfully face the issues raised by the blood accusations hurled at the heads of our ancestors and ourselves, and carefully review and consider and give solemn Jewish answer to the life, trial and crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth, that marvelous Jewish son who sprang from the loins of Israel and who is most esteemed and venerated of all men in the sight of hundreds of millions of Christian people throughout the world,' Schwayder declared.

JESUS PRAISED

"Let us also be reminded of the fact that in the very midst of the bitterest persecutions of the Jews many of our greatest rabbis and scholars have praised the personality of Jesus, and have certified the propagation of Christianity was ordained through the providence of God, as a means of bringing our Holy Scriptures and the knowledge of God to the Gentile nations of the world.

"Let us diligently and honestly search for the facts, and earnestly seek to discover the evidence, and thereupon boldly announce the truth.

"And if our ancestors were guilty of any crime in this matter, or violated any law or commandment of God, let the great Sanhedrin fearlessly acknowledge our guilt and crave divine pardon.

"Let Christian scholars of every denomination also be invited to appear and present evidence and argument. Let a true and righteous judgment be rendered, regardless of the consequences.'

"The opportunity for this review and judgment, according to local men who attended the meeting, is being presented now for the first time since the Roman domination of Jerusalem.

"The conquest of Jerusalem by Great Britain, said Schwayder, makes the city free once more, 'where Jewish people may dwell in freedom and security, and where our great Sanhedrin may again assemble and render true and righteous judgments in the name of God and without the fear of men.'"

If this movement materializes and the Sanhedrin is formed, according to the plan outlined above, the results of this deliberation cannot be other than epochal and phenomenal. It appears to the writer of this page that this movement contains within itself potent possibilities which may be used of God mightily in bringing about the eventual conversion of the nation.

According to Hosea 5:15 Israel will realize her mistake only "in their affliction." The nation will be converted and born in a day when they look upon Him whom they have pierced (Zech. 12:10). At that time, according to Isa. 53:1-9, Israel will make the confession that, though she since the crucifixion considered that Jesus was an imposter, she was mistaken in her judgment. She will then confess that He was her Messiah making atonement for all men.

On the other hand, according to the seventh chapter of the book of Revelation, there are 144,000 Jews who are sealed from the twelve tribes of Israel and who, as it appears to the author, turn to the Lord after the Tribulation has begun, the judgments of the first six seals having come upon the world. If this Sanhedrin is formed and the case concerning Jesus is given a fair, thorough and impartial hearing, there can be but one result, namely, the pronouncement that the Jewish nation, humanly speaking, made a fearful and awful mistake in its rejection, trials (Jesus was tried three times before the Jews and three times before the Gentiles) and crucifixion. If such a verdict is rendered many among Israel will be led to investigate privately the claims of Jesus in the light of the Holy Scriptures and will be led to accept Him, even before the Tribulation, provided the verdict is rendered long enough before the day of Jacob's trouble begins. God in His providence may use such a trial in order to bring salvation to hearts that are yearning to know the truth about the matter.

Let each reader hope and pray that God may overrule in this matter and may bring salvation, through the proposed trial or any other development, to the greatest number of Hebrews possible.—Selected by Emma C. Railsback from The Advent Herald.

Pilate said, "What is truth?"—John 18:38. Jesus said, "Thy (God's) word is truth."—John 17:17. This should settle for all time what truth is. Faith comes by hearing this word, Rom. 10:17, and "whatsoever is not of faith is sin", Rom. 14:23. Sin is the transgression of the law, 1 John 3:4. The transgressors shall be rooted out of the earth, Prov. 2:22.

MILESTONES WE HAVE PASSED

vealing mysteries that have been in operation through all the years but just now are beginning to be known by man. The photography of sound, as of objects and of motion, is making possible many practical advances in the commercial world. Indeed the increase of knowledge has greatly increased the circle of commercial activity.

Again, commercial activity through its financial earnings makes possible the work of research with which to increase knowledge. The Popular Science Monthly for January, 1930, recites how the Bell Telephone Laboratories by use of more delicately perfected photography under the light of ultra-violet rays have been able to photograph in such a manner as to designate the 1,150,000th of an inch separating two lines. By the use of this delicate instrument our biologists have been able to photograph microscopically the living unit cells in the human body or in any living substance. Indeed, they are able today to photograph the smallest cells invisible to the human eye that make up the cancerous growth or that make up other disease growths. In this way knowledge of those operations in nature which have been fundamental since the beginning in all of God's great works are coming more and more to be understood. Knowledge is increasing; men are running to and fro. Rapidly these way-marks, these milestones are flitting past. They have become so common in recent times that they are attracting much too little attention.

Prophecy located these things as being in the end of this dispensation. With all these things coming to light in our day we can but ask the question, Are we not near, very near, unto that great boundary line which separates Gentile times from the times of our Lord and Master? Are we not near to the stop and go sign of the ages which will soon give to us the word "go" and thus direct us across the intersection of time into the great new age of the millennium.

We have never traveled this road before. While we realize, and that most forcefully, that we must be close to the end of this dispensation, yet we cannot tell how many thoroughfares we must cross before we shall come to that one final thoroughfare of this period. Nations over the world will find that it is under the power, dominion, and sovereignty of Him whom the Father has designated to be King of all coming time that a condition for man will develop that will fulfill to the uttermost the angel's song of centuries past, peace on earth, good will toward man.

—o—
 "Have you found some precious treasure
 Pass it on.
 Have you found some holy pleasure
 Pass it on.
 God himself is ever giving,
 Loving is the truest living,
 Letting go is twice possessing,
 Would you double every blessing
 Pass it on."

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE SPIRIT OF THE LORD

Sunday, January 5—Isaiah 11:1-9.

"The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him . . . and shall make him of quick understanding . . . and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes . . . but with righteousness shall he judge."—vv. 3, 4.

THE SECOND VERSE ENUMERATES the different manifestations of the Spirit of the Lord resting upon Jesus, wisdom, understanding, counsel, might, knowledge and fear of the Lord. The following verses show how this Spirit resting upon Him manifests itself. He will not judge by outward appearances, nor reprove because of things He may hear, but will judge with righteousness and equity. The results of this judgment will be noticeable over all creation, vv. 6-9.

"They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord." Wonderful prospect, may it come soon!

JOHN THE BAPTIST

Monday, January 6—Matthew 3:1-12.

"He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear."—v. 11.

John the Baptist had a great mission to fulfill, that of heralding the coming of One who was to be Redeemer and Savior. From the little we find in Scripture of the life of John the Baptist, we learn that one of his chief characteristics was humility. He evidenced this in his manner of life, his mode of dress and his method of presentation of his message. Self was forgotten in the joy of proclaiming the good news to others.

It would be well for us to emulate this characteristic of his and forgetting self, give to God and to His Son the honor that is due them.

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS

Tuesday, January 7—Matthew 3:13-17.

"This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—v. 17.

John had been calling many to repentance and to baptism for the washing away of their sins. He told them that the good news of the kingdom of heaven was about to be proclaimed to them and he wanted them to be in readiness for it. Among the multitudes that came requesting baptism was the One whose pathway he was preparing, the One who was destined to be King of that kingdom. Feeling his unworthiness, John demurred, but Jesus desired to "fulfill all righteousness."

That God's seal of approval was upon His Son is shown when the Spirit descended upon Him and a voice proclaimed Him as pleasing to His Father.

THE TEMPTATION IN THE WILDERNESS

Wednesday, January 8—Matthew 4:1-11.

"Behold, angels came and ministered unto him."—v. 11.

The story of the testing of Jesus is a three-fold one—the appeal to the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life. He was indeed "tempted in all points like as we are." Did He yield in any particular? We read further that He was "without sin", answering the tempter with the words of Scripture.

God did not leave His Son to suffer in the wilderness after His testing, but sent angels to minister to Him. If we stand firm through temptation God will shed His protecting watch-care over us, for He will "with the temptation make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

HOW TO MEET TEMPTATION

Thursday, January 9—Matthew 26:36-46.

"Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder."—v. 36.

Jesus had come to the closing hours of His life. The agony of what was before Him was weighing ever more heavily upon Him. Peter, James and John fell asleep in the garden while their Master was praying for strength to endure. Awaking them He said, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."

Jesus met temptation with prayer and He told us to meet it in the same manner. A brief, silent prayer to God in a moment of temptation will carry us over many a perilous place.

THE CAUSE OF FAILURE

Friday, January 10—Luke 22:54-62.

"And Peter went out, and wept bitterly."—v. 62.

From this story of Peter's denial of the Lord that he loved, we can only conclude that it was fear that was the cause of it. And fear is the cause of many of our failures, fear of what men may say; fear of physical consequences; fear of the hurt to our pride, etc. We read that "perfect love casteth out fear" and if our love for Christ is complete, we will know no fear in our service for Him. The remorse in Peter's heart at the realization of what he had done reveals to us the depths to which failure in loyalty to his Master plunged him. Let us cast out fear.

THE WAY TO VICTORY

Saturday, January 11—James 4:1-10.

"God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble. Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up."—vv. 6, 10.

Humility and victory—these seem opposite terms and according to the worldly-wise they have nothing in common. To succeed in affairs of today one must be aggressive. So reasons man, but with God the opposite characteristic avails. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Our faith grows with our humility and in no other way. The more we realize our utter dependence upon God, the stronger will be our faith; the less we depend upon self, the greater will be our victory in Christ.

"Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you."

THE SPIRIT OF MAN

By T. A. Drinkard

“For what man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man which is in him? even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.”—1 Corinthians 2:11.

WHAT IS MEANT by the spirit of man as herein mentioned? Is it necessary to understand just what is meant? Does it matter whether we consider the question as presented by the apostle? If not, why are these things written? On funeral occasions we are told that this spirit of man is the spirit of Eccl. 12:7, which returns to God at the death of the body.

Our Text Book says, “Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason for the hope that is in you with meekness and fear.” 1 Peter 3:15. Does your hope rest upon the above claim? If not, doesn't the above claim strike at the foundation of the Christian hope, the resurrection of the dead? Are you able to tell others why you do not believe the commonly accepted views upon this question? Much of the error existing in the religious field is the result of this teaching as all may verify by investigation of the question.

If you question my reference to what is commonly taught I shall be glad to quote representative men who do teach it, and have been for years. Let me kindly ask this question, Can you persuade anyone to accept the gospel truth concerning Christ's mission on earth who at the same time believes this doctrine? Do you know of just one case on record? For instance, if the “spirit” of our text is a living entity, the person himself, and survives the death of the body, what need have we for a resurrection, and for the coming of Jesus Christ?

The words of our text show that the spirit of man in this case knows, and therefore being able to know, it logically follows that it can understand, believe and obey. The “spirit” of this text is not the same as Eccl. 12:7. Notice “our spirit” of Rom. 8:16. Do not confuse this spirit with Eccl. 12:7 and James 2:26. Turning to Zech. 12:1, I read in part, “And formeth the spirit of man within him.” This spirit was formed within the man. God gave man a mind, or spirit (Rom. 1:9; 7:25). He formed it in man's head, and not in his lungs, through his nostrils. (Genesis 2:7.) Elihu confirms this view by saying, “But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.” Job 32:8. We could not say that He gives the breath of Genesis 2:7 and Psa. 146:4, understanding, even though the breath may be the spirit of Eccl. 12:7. The breath cannot understand the words of inspiration (2 Tim. 3:16).

It is logical to contend that the activity and life-form of this spirit depended upon organism. Notice that Daniel grieved in his spirit, mind, not in the midst of his literal body but in figure, in the midst of his intellectual body or senses. Notice “spirit” of Prov. 20:27, being the candle of the Lord. See, too, that it depends upon something for life (Isa. 38:16), and that the spirit will fail before the Father. (Isa. 57:16.) If the brain is injured you may still breathe the breath of life and live, but the spirit or mind fails to function. When the breath of Psa. 146:4 goes forth, the spirit or mind fails.

Now you will notice that Dan. 2:1, 3, speaks about the spirit of Nebuchadnezzar being troubled. But it was his mind of verse 29. The activity of this spirit, or mind, in its phases of development depends upon the proper functioning of the brain. As before stated, if the brain becomes injured the mind power is decreased. This fact has been demonstrated many times. I submit that mind power, or spirit power, in this case is the effect or the result of a cause. As noticed in Gen. 2:7, as a result of the infusion of the breath or spirit of life the inactive man became active; in other words, the various parts began to function as God intended them to do.

You will notice that by Zech 12:1, the spirit or mind was formed within the man, not formed on the outside and then put in his as is commonly taught. There can be no mind aside from organism. Because man has a mind called spirit it does not prove that the spirit is the man in the case, and survives the death of the body. To assume such a position is but to entangle oneself in a serious difficulty from which there is no redemption so long as such a position is accepted. Affirm if you will that such a view is tenable, follow the teaching to its conclusion and see if it does not deny the resurrection of the dead, which rests beneath every Christian's hope. (1 Cor. 15:13-18.) Even the leaders of such claims are not agreed.

May I call your attention to the statements of three representative men of one among the leading denominations of religious effort? “There is no death”; “the soul is not immortal”; and “the soul dies”. This is the result of trying to wrest the Scriptures to prove human claims. Spirit, or mind, of man, from the human viewpoint how mysterious, but as we study the sacred Word of God we may be able to understand some of its wonder, and power! Take away the breath of Psa. 146:4, and man returns to earth and therefore his mind, thoughts, perish until the morning of resurrection.

SKEPTICS AND MIRACLES

Bro. Geo. T. Rennard, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., wishing to benefit the readers of The Herald, submits the following article by Bruce Catton as published in The Gazette, of Niagara Falls. Shall we submit our daily problems to God, is a question worthy of the careful study of every Christian. The article is as follows:

A FEW DAYS AGO THE PAPERS TOLD ABOUT a woman preacher who had been elected mayor of a small Louisiana city. Telling reporters how she filled her job, the preacher-mayor remarked that she always prayed for divine guidance whenever an especially tough problem came up. Then she told this little story:

"Her city had no water or electric light service. For years efforts had been made to provide them, but they had always fizzled out. She had conferred with business men, civic leaders and others, but had been unable to make any headway. So, one night, utterly discouraged, she knelt and prayed that divine aid might come to the rescue and help the little city get the modern conveniences it needed so badly.

"The next day—out of a clear sky, so to speak—a group of business men called at her office and told her that they were going to form a corporation to establish a water and electricity supply for the city. Thus—she told the reporters—her prayers had been answered. What weeks of effort had failed to do a prayer had accomplished.

"Now it is altogether too easy for us to scoff at that story. Many a reader, no doubt, laid down his paper and snorted, 'Humph! Those men had laid their plans already. Prayer or no prayer, they'd have been ready to go ahead with the job. She's just kidding herself if she thinks her prayer really did anything.'

"That may be true or it may not. Meanwhile, one is moved to wonder why it is that a generation whose daily life is attended by uncounted miracles should be so much more skeptical about things that it cannot see and handle than the previous generations have been.

"When you sit in your home at night and tune in on a radio program, picking music out of silent air, you are taking part in a thing as wondrous as the star over Bethlehem. Suppose you turn on your phonograph. Whom do you want to hear? Caruso? Very well; he has been dead seven years, but he will sing for you, his voice as rich and clear as ever, though his body is dust.

"Far over your housetop soars an air mail plane. The pilot cannot see the earth below. Mist obscures the beacon lights. But that same miracle of radio tells him, unfailingly, that he is on his course. Those things are commonplace. We have even stopped marveling at them.

"The mystery of prayer is far older—old as the day that the first barbaric cave dweller made his first desperate appeal for help to the forces he could not see. Why should we be skeptical? Have we swallowed our new miracles, only to reject one that is as old and familiar as the race itself?"

THE FLYING YEARS

Oh years! Oh years! how soon ye fly!
Like eagles sweeping down the sky;
How rapidly your moments pass,
Like sand-grains dropping in the glass.
Brief years, like life is still more brief;
A fading flower, a falling leaf,
A passing shade, a fleeting gleam,
A thought, a phantom, or a dream;
We creatures are of yesterday,—
Tomorrow we may pass away,
And leave no track upon the sand,
Where firm we trod the wave-washed strand.

But oh, the Everlasting One,
Who marks the ages as they run;
Whose years eternally endure,
Who lives in endless bliss secure;
Though years may pass, and life may end,
This God, this Father is our Friend;
And we may share His love divine,
And in His endless glory shine.

What years of bliss shall for us wait
When we shall pass the pearly gate,
And in perpetual peace behold
Those streets of palaces and gold;
And in the endless glory see
The King who died upon the tree;
Who bore the cross and won the crown,
And on His Father's throne sits down;
While heaven's hosts triumphant sing
And praise the everlasting King.

And they who, through the passing years,
Have felt earth's sorrows, woes and tears,
Redeemed from earth and purged from sin,
Shall hear the welcome, "Enter in,"
And in those palaces divine,
Shall with the ransomed sing and shine;
Released from sorrows and from fears,
From disappointments, sighs and tears,
With joy their anthems they shall raise,
And sing the Savior's wondrous praise.

Oh years! Oh years! How fast ye fly!
Bringing Redemption's morning nigh;
Speed on! Speed on your flight!
Change eve to morn, and morn to night,
And bring the everlasting day
When tears and sighs shall flee away;
There may we meet, redeemed by blood,
Within the Paradise of God,
And there, beyond all care and fear,
Hail God's eternal, glad New Year.

BAPTISM

No. 2

By S. J. Lindsay

MORAL GOODNESS CANNOT TAKE THE PLACE OF OBEDIENCE

WE NOW CALL YOUR attention to the record in Acts ten. Here we find a man whose moral qualities would entitle him to entrance in among the best of people. The description given him would entitle him to church membership in most of the popular churches of the day and no questions asked. Here is what is said of him: he was devout; one that feared God; gave much alms to the people; prayed to God always; was a man of good report among the nation of the Jews.

Here was a good man; but his moral goodness alone could not save him, for he was in an unsaved condition. By referring to Peter's language in the eleventh chapter we learn as much, for we read in the thirteenth and fourteenth verses as follows: "And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter; who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house SHALL BE SAVED." Going back we find, according to Peter's speech to Cornelius as recorded in the tenth chapter, that Cornelius knew the gospel. While they were talking, that Peter might understand that God accepted Gentiles as well as Jews, the Holy Spirit fell upon them in baptismal power, and then it was that Cornelius was baptized. The only difference we can see between Cornelius before and after meeting him is that difference which took place in baptism.

If moral goodness alone could save one, then Cornelius was entitled to salvation. The question may arise, Why should not salvation be based upon the terms of moral goodness? There are many good reasons why it should not be so. First, as Paul argues in Romans four, if we could earn salvation by good works, God would OWE us salvation and we would have nothing to thank Him for. Salvation is a gift based on the works of faith; it is a gift of God. Were salvation based upon good works, men would be led away from humility and would become puffed up with the consciousness of their own good qualities. The practice of faith toward God leads us ever into that realm of humility in which alone the human being can find that perfection which can make him to enjoy himself to the greatest degree. Regarding Lydia's conversion to Christianity we have the same facts standing out, Acts 16. In the fourteenth verse it is recorded that she was a religious woman. She was a worshiper of God and every evidence goes to show that she was sincere and devoted in her faith as much as many are today who worship God. If her sincerity and devotion could work out for her salvation, why was it necessary for Paul to come along to disturb her quiet, peaceful way? Being a God-fearing woman and one who worshiped God, why was it necessary for her to be baptized? And yet we find the text expressly stating that she was baptized.

All are familiar with the statement made by Peter (1 Peter 3:19), wherein he shows that as the ark was the means of saving eight souls by water, even so in a figure, baptism doth also now save us. Then Paul shows conclusively that baptism into Christ is necessary if we would become heirs according to the promise made to Abraham.

"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. . . . And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Galatians 3:27, 29.

THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL

By Lyman Booth

THIS BOOK DERIVES ITS NAME from the prophet Samuel, though he had been dead some time when the history it contains began, perhaps because he anointed Saul whose actions it records. The name of the books was not given by inspiration, and its authority, as a part of the sacred oracles, is not lessened, in the least, by conceding that the title given in various translations, "The Second Book of the Kings", is more appropriate.

The book is but a continuation of First Samuel, and introduces that part which follows. Its authority is considered beyond dispute. The Psalms refer to it in many instances concerning the events which are recorded therein. The narrative of David's sin in the matter of Uriah, related only in this book, is referred to in other places in the Scriptures. 1 Kings 15:5; Psa. 51; Matt. 1:6.

In short, wherever the covenant that was made with David concerning regal authority being vested in his family and finally inherited by Jesus the Messiah, to descend from him; or the promises respecting Solomon, the especial type of Christ; or the choice of Jerusalem, and of Mount Zion as the place of His sanctuary to which the Israelites should gather to worship; or the building of the temple are mentioned, the events as mentioned are acknowledged as true. This book also contains the history of almost all of David's reign, especially that of the most important transactions.

This book is perhaps more frequently referred to than any other portion of the sacred oracles. The promises made of God to David were in the literal and typical sense, evident prophecies, the fulfillment of which, as given in the later books of Scripture, and also in the history of the church, are divine testimony, that it was written by inspiration.

The book opens with David's elevation to the throne, and then relates how he gradually prevailed against the house of Saul. It relates the victories over his enemies, and gives vivid description of his zealous efforts to reform the religious sentiment among his people. It also shows his ambition to enlarge his territory. Though these exploits were all very pleasing, yet they were slightly dimmed by the domestic and public calamities with which he was chastened. Yet through it all his character shines brightly in many instances, and we read that he grew "old, and full of days, riches, and honour." Thus his life closed in a most honorable manner. 1 Chron. 28 and 29.

QUERIES 18

ONE OF THE QUERIES FAMILY has contributed the following interesting recipe for our column. Thank you, Sr. Lansbery.

SCRIPTURAL CAKE RECIPE

(Go to the Bible and find it.)

1. Four and one-half cups of Solomon's provision for one day (first clause).
2. One cup of what Jael gave Heber (last clause).
3. Two cups of the sweet sacrifices of Judah from a far country.
4. Two cups of what Moses gave the people out of the rock.
5. Two cups of what Nineveh's strongholds shall be like.
6. Two cups of the fruit of Aaron's rod.
7. Three teaspoonfuls of what the men of Israel found in the woods on the ground.
8. Six of what the partridge sits on.
9. One-half cup of what Jael gave Sisera.
10. Two teaspoonfuls of the forbidden of the congregation of Israel.
11. Season to taste with what the Queen of Sheba gave King Solomon.

Will keep indefinitely.

OCCUPATIONS FOR WOMEN

Find those mentioned in—

Jer. 7:18; 1 Sam. 8:13; Rom. 16:1, 2; Ruth 2:2, 3; Prov. 31:27; Matt. 26:71; Prov. 31:10-24; Gen. 24:59; Acts 16:14, 15; Eccl. 2:8.

QUOTATION: Where found?

In answering the Queries on "X", Gladys Barber says, "In Greek 'X' (Xpioros) stands for Christ, so I see no objection to using Xmas, though I think Christmas written in full is much prettier." She would like to know why "mas" is added to "Christ".

FOLLOW ME

"Child, follow me," the Master said,
As He knocked full loud at my chamber door;
But the morn was fair, and my heart was gay;
"I'll dally a while on the primrose way,
And I'll come," said I, "when the morning's o'er."

"Child, follow me," the Master said,
As He lingered patiently at the gate;
Gray shadows were falling, the night was near;
"Life's joys are so sweet, and my friends so dear,
I will come," said I, "when the night is late."

"Child, follow me," the Master said,
As He walked away through the darkness deep;
And the night had fallen, and the birds were still;
"Linger," said I, "at the foot of the hill,
And I'll come when the world is hushed in sleep."

"Master, I come," I cried at length,
"Heart weary to serve at thine own dear side, Thou hast called me long, but I come at last."
But mine eyes were dim and my strength was past,
And I could not follow the Crucified.—Unknown.

THE HELPING HAND

"If, when climbing up life's ladder,
You can reach a hand below,
Just to help the other fellow
Up another rung, or so,
It may be that in the future,
When you're growing weary, too,
You'll be glad to find there's some one
Who will lend a hand to you!

Oh! how glad we should be that our blessed Christ understood the mind and will of God so well that He could say with perfect assurance, "God will not chide or condemn you for lack of wisdom, but will help you to understand, and will surely give you what you ask for, and what you need to help you on the road of life." James so carefully reminds us, to "Ask in faith, nothing doubting." May we wisely heed the warning next given, "For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord," (if he doubts).

"THERE IS NO FEAR IN LOVE"

1 John 4:18

LET US LAY HOLD OF FRIENDSHIP. In the eternal life shall we not have friends for evermore? I used to think that friendship meant happiness: I have learned that it means discipline. Seek how we may, we shall never find a friend without faults, imperfections, traits and ways that vex, grieve, annoy us. Strive as we will, we ourselves can never fully fulfill the ideal of us that is in our friend's mind: we inevitably come short of it. Yet let us not give up friendship, though we have found this true. To have a friend is to have one of the sweetest gifts that life can bring: to be a friend is to have a solemn and tender education of soul from day to day. A friend gives us confidence for life. A friend makes us outdo ourselves. A friend remembers us when we have forgotten ourselves, or neglected ourselves: he takes loving heed of our health, our work, our aims, our plans. A friend may praise us, and we are not embarrassed; he may rebuke us, and we are not angered. If he be silent, we understand. It takes a great soul to be a true friend—a large, catholic, steadfast and loving spirit. One must forgive much, forget much, forbear much. It costs much to be a friend, or to have a friend: there is nothing else in life, except motherhood, that costs so much. It not only costs time, affection, strength, patience, love—sometimes a man must even lay down his life for his friends. There is no true friendship without self-abnegation, self-sacrifice.

Let us be slow to make friends, but, having once made them, let us pray that neither life nor death, misunderstanding, distance, nor doubt may ever come between us, to vex our peace. Let us be patient, let us be kindly, let us be self-possessed in friendship. There are so many ways of grieving a friend—shall we not walk softly before him? Let us be true to our friends, and then believe that they are and ever will be true to us. True love never nags; it trusts. One of the dearest thoughts to me is this—that a real friend will never get away from me, or try to, or want to. Love does not have to be tethered, either in time or in eternity.

It is a great and solemn thing to say to another human soul, "In this one life that we have to live, we will share all things temporal and spiritual. Your joys shall be my joys. Your sorrows shall be my sorrows. In absence you shall yet be near. You shall never be so far from me but that I can hear your voice in the twilight and in the night season. Though land and sea divide us, you shall yet walk by my side and kneel with me in prayer; still I shall feel the touch of your hand, and rejoice in your sympathy. Your letters shall make me strong and glad. I am not afraid of you. With you I need not to be greatly reserved. To you I may speak the deep thoughts of my heart. With you alone I laugh; with you only may I shed tears and be not ashamed. To you only can I say, 'Behold, here am I, an undisguised human soul: all others know me in some one mood—you know me in all moods.'

In the eternal life we may make new friends: I dare say we shall. But can those radiant, perfect and glorified ones ever be quite so near and dear to us as those more human souls that we have known when they, like ourselves, were but struggling, aspiring, and suffering mortals: those who have shared joy and pain with us, who have watched us wistfully over mountain, wilderness and sea, who have quarreled with us and kissed us again, who have loved us with tenderness, and who have been faithful to us, even unto death? Meetings and partings, hand-clasps and farewells, loving nearness and grieving tears—these are the lot of friendship on earth. But in eternity there shall be neither weeping nor any sound of sighing, and there shall be no parting there.—Anna Robertson Brown, Ph. D.

The thoughts on friends and friendship given above are from a paper entitled "What Is Worth While?" and we think perhaps you will enjoy considering it as we did.

If you have a true friend you have one of the most valuable treasures that this life can give, and if you can be a true friend you have accomplished one thing worth while.

The following report comes as encouraging news from Canada. We'll be anxious to learn of your good work from time to time, Fonthill Bereans. May God prosper your efforts abundantly.

FONTHILL BEREAN CLASS ORGANIZED

ON NOVEMBER twenty-sixth about thirty members met at the home of Mrs. L. Railton to organize a Berean class. A lesson on "Faith" was given by Bro. Gordon.

Officers were elected as follows: David Elliott, President; Horace Haines, Vice-president; Inez Gordon, Secretary-Treasurer.

Light refreshments were served by the hostess after a social hour.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS

WE OFTEN WONDER if Jesus and John, the Baptist, as boys, knew one another. Their mothers were cousins, so we surmise that they were acquainted. So little is told of their childhood days. One scene, and a few words give us our ideas about those days. "Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favour with God and man."

John was a few months older than Jesus, and we hear of him as a young man first. He was baptizing "with water unto repentance" and telling the people that One would soon come who was mightier than he.

And ere long that Great One did come. He came from Galilee to John as John was baptizing in the River Jordan. Jesus wanted John to baptize Him, but John did not want to do that as he knew that Jesus had no sins to be forgiven. He insisted that he needed to be baptized of Jesus instead. However, Jesus said He must be baptized "to fulfill all righteousness."

Therefore, Jesus was baptized in the Jordan River, and He must have been down in the water, for the Bible says that after He was baptized he "went up straightway out of the water."

And what do you think happened then? The heavens were opened unto Him, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him. Then a voice, God's voice, proclaimed, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Soon Jesus went out into the wilderness—a dreary place—and fasted there forty days and forty nights. Imagine how weak He must have been after living forty days without food.

Matthew tells us that the tempter came to Jesus in His weakened condition and said, "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." But Jesus knew that the evil one was merely tempting Him; and, hungry as He was, refused to make a show of His being God's Son, or His own power. Rather, He repeated a verse from Scripture, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Then again the devil took Him up into the holy city, and setting Him on a pinnacle of the temple, said, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down." And he quoted Scripture, too,—“He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands shall they bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.”

Again Jesus refused to yield to temptation, and again repeated Scripture—"Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

A third time the evil one appeared. This time he took Jesus up into a very high mountain, and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world. Then Satan said, "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." But Jesus did not want to worship evil nor recognize its power, nor become Ruler of the world until God gave Him the kingdom. Therefore Jesus said to the tempter, "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

By this time Satan saw that it was no use: he could not tempt Jesus, nor influence Him to yield to temptation, no matter how powerful, so he left Jesus.

Then angels came and ministered unto God's own Son.

THINK! Have you accepted or will you accept Jesus and be baptized into Him? Will you be able to withstand temptation? Could you repeat Scripture to answer enemies?

HOW MANY OF YOU know the "Lord's Prayer"? The twenty-third Psalm? How many of you will learn the nineteenth Psalm this quarter?

SOMETHING TO DO

- 1 Draw a map of Palestine showing the Jordan River. Locate the place where Jesus was baptized.
- 2 Read the Scriptures in Deuteronomy—8:3; 6:11; 6:13; 10:20.

THINK!

What gifts are you planning for Jesus?

SOMETHING TO DO (Every day)

- 1 Find out which one of the gospels, Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John, tell of the childhood of Jesus.
- 2 Read Hosea 11:1; Jeremiah 31:15; Isaiah 11:1.
- 3 How many wise men were there? Does the Bible say? Where?
- 4 Find what frankincense and myrrh are.
- 5 Trace the flight into Egypt.
- 6 Read, "The Three Kings", by H. W. Longfellow.

Longfellow suggests that the gifts of the kings were "gold as unto a king, incense for Jesus as a priest, and myrrh for His burying."

LESSON II.—January 12, 1930

BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS

Matthew 3:1 to 4:11

Devotional Reading: Psalm 32:1-7

GOLDEN TEXT

This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—Matthew 3:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Triumphant over Temptation.

Basic Truth. "If we suffer (endure), we shall also reign with him."—2 Tim. 2:12.

Outline. I. Advancement Necessitates Increased Service. II. Temptation Reveals the Weak Links.

I. Advancement Necessitates Increased Service. Every position in life requires the holder to rise above its obstacles. The more one is advanced into responsibility, the higher must he surmount hindrances. God advanced Adam to a position above all the works of God's hands. This required of Adam that he would prove himself competent for his position.

God exalted Jesus to be Savior of Adam's failure and to be King over all. Such advancement necessitated that Jesus would prove himself Master over every obstacle in His work. He proved His mastery over self by obeying and fulfilling the righteousness of baptism. He proved His mastery over self by refusing the trials of the devil, and clinging to the words of God.

Similarly must the Christian, if he would occupy with Jesus, triumph over every obstacle in the Christian pathway; rise above the evils of life; surmount the difficulties in the way; and abide in the truth of Christian living. "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." 1 Cor. 10:13.

II. Temptation Reveals the Weak Links. Temptations are not the cause of weaknesses; they merely reveal them. The chain is put to the test of the heavy load or strain not to weaken the chain but to reveal, if any, the weak links therein. So also with Jesus. If there were weakness in Him, that weakness should be made manifest. There was none. He remained true to His Father.

As with Jesus, so with man. God is ever inviting him to the highest positions in life. Man naturally inclines to satisfy for the immediate moment nature's craving. To rise above the immediate present and accept God's assurances for the more distant day seems to be man's greatest test. The daily temptations of life reveal man's weakness or strength in relation to God. Man needs temptation. He needs the trial in order to reveal unto himself his own strength or weakness. Victory produces strength. Man grows by achievement. Though God may know the strength or weakness of man, it is not His to inject strength without first revealing to man his own weakness and receiving from man proper petitions. Test, trial makes this revelation to man. Knowing himself, he can then endeavor to surmount his weaknesses to attain unto that gloriousness of communion with God that alone strengthens and qualifies him.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Anvil, the Horseshoe, and the Mechanic. Without the anvil the horseshoe could not be produced; without the horseshoe the mechanic could not become expert. Work is a blessing—it develops the best in the worker.

Trial, temptation, is the anvil upon which the worker shows his ability and from which he perfects himself for greater service.

Jesus met the tempter unflinchingly. He used him for His own advancement. His faith, His devotion, His power, His authority were all increased by this experience.

The same is true of him who would follow Christ. Trials, temptations are necessary anvils from which to beat out Christian accomplishments and attainments.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Second Adam Tempted.

Jesus, the second Adam, was tempted in all points even as every man is tempted. He felt the drawing power of every desire of the flesh toward preservation and exaltation of the natural life of the flesh in self-centered selfishness even as the first Adam felt them. But, in Jesus there was none of that yielding which causes lust to conceive and bring forth acts of selfishness or sin. For in Jesus there was God's Spirit without measure opposing the drawing power of the flesh.

From the recorded laws and teachings and the experiences God had sent to Israel, from forefathers selected and specially dealt with by God, from the accumulated racial experience of all peoples, from a mother especially overshadowed by the Holy Spirit, from God, the Father Himself, upon whom Jesus was cast from His mother's womb, from all these sources there flowed into Jesus' being, wisdom, knowledge, hatred of evil, love of good, patience, love and whatever enters into the make-up of the Spirit without measure, and this Spirit opposed triumphantly the drawing power of lust toward sin. For this reason Jesus is the Savior of men—the Son of man who is also the only begotten Son of God through whom the fulness of God's Spirit, grace and truth, can be manifested and made to radiate into the hearts of men.

The Savior could not have been produced one hour before He was, for every teaching, every experience that had come to man from Adam down to Mary and crystallized into character, national and individual, were necessary to the Spiritual heritage of One who should have the Spirit without measure.

Praise God for the Son of man who is the Son of God to whom all judgment has been committed.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus Facing His Life Work.

The days of childhood and those of youth are merely preparation days for life. They are stepping stones by which one attains his ideal. No event or circumstance is so insignificant that it does not have its influence on later life. The structure reared is in keeping with the foundation that has been laid.

What great principle is the foundation of Jesus' childhood? Luke 2:51. If this principle were instilled into all children, how much worthier would be the structure of life work reared. As a young man, how do we find Him facing temptation? Matt. 4:1-11. A knowledge of God's Word is as mighty an armor in meeting the daily problems now as then. Do you know how such knowledge will help you in your preparation for life, in being a good teacher, a good preacher, a capable nurse, a capable doctor, an efficient housekeeper, an efficient farmer?

It has been said that a study of the biographies of great men is a very potent factor in building character. Choose one whom you admire and wish to emulate, and study and follow him. Can you think of any one so worthy of emulation as Jesus, the Servant and yet the Master of all?

In preparing for your life work, young people, study Him and His ways and methods, and then follow Him and you will succeed no matter what profession you choose.—M. G.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—Matt. 3:17.

Twice did these words come from heaven, once at the time of Christ's baptism, the other at the time of transfiguration. At the time of transfiguration the words "hear ye him" were added. We need no better evidence than this to prove the Sonship of the One of whom these words were spoken. The "hear ye him" should be earnestly heeded by people of this day.

We, too, may become sons of God, "and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." Gal. 3:26. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3:2.

—L. A. R.

Questions on Subject. Name two ways in which temptation may benefit. How is man benefited by the temptations of Jesus? Compare the trials in the garden (Gen. 3:1) with this one in the wilderness. Is man benefited by temptation? Why does man need to advance?

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

PLEASE NOTICE ENCLOSED SLIP

We are enclosing with each copy of The Herald a subscription blank. If your subscription is paid up, please disregard it. Look at your label and if you find you are in arrears, a remittance will be greatly appreciated.

All were shocked as they learned from Saturday midnight on through Sunday, the 29th, of the death of Sr. Frank E. Siple, of Dixon, Illinois, as but few knew that she had been ailing since December 26. In fact, she was taken acutely ill but shortly before midnight Saturday night, dying within two hours. Funeral services are being held today, Tuesday, at 10 a. m., at the Dixon Church. Interment is being made in the Dixon cemetery.

Bro. Siple and his daughters, as also his relatives and friends are deeply shocked and appalled. We will endeavor to give a more complete statement in the next issue of The Herald.

Bro. F. L. Austin will be the speaker for the Rockford Bereans on Friday night, January 3rd. The meeting place is at 1904 North Main St.

Bro. Sidney Jackson and wife spent the Christmas holidays with their mother, Sr. Mary Jackson, matron of Golden Rule Home.

Aunt Mary Renner of Golden Rule Home is gradually recovering from her recent illness. Her many friends pray that she may live for many years to lend cheer and encouragement to those in the Home.

The Chicago church discontinued the use of Waller Hall on December 27. At the time of writing this notice it was undecided where the next meeting will be held, but all interested can ascertain by phoning the secretary—Number, Austin 7374.

Dorothy and Harvey Krogh and Richard LeCrone of the Bible Training Class left on December 26 for a week's visit at the homes of their parents at Blair and Omaha, Nebr.

Clarence Lapp of the Bible Training Class spent Christmas with friends at Lanark, Illinois.

The Editor spent Christmas at a family reunion at his home in Chicago, his mother, Mrs. M. A. Woodward being present.

Sr. Nellie Cross of Oregon is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Joseph Williams, of Rochelle, Illinois. Both of them are housed in with the epidemic of cold that seems to be prevailing in this section.

The Golden Rule Home reports one of its most pleasant Christmas seasons, if not the most pleasant of its history. Numbers of gifts and cards were received from different parts of the country. A small tree was beautifully decorated in the sun parlor and a Christmas atmosphere permeated the Home.

With the exception of one or two slight colds the health of the Home is good at this writing.

GRAND RAPIDS

It has been decided to hold our revival meetings in April instead of January. Our experience with unfavorable weather conditions last year was largely responsible for the change. This date places the meetings about three months in the future, but it is none too early to start praying for their success.

Our Christmas program was given on Monday evening, December 23rd, to a packed house. It required a lot of effort to prepare the program and appropriately decorate the building, but there is no labor too great when it comes to honoring or worshipping the Christ.

Our annual church election will be held the first Sunday in January. The present board, after going over the various phases of the work, recommended to the congregation the names of the brethren the board felt were best qualified to carry on the work.

The Grand Rapids church extends to her sister churches over the country her wishes and prayers for a prosperous and successful year in the Master's service.

Sr. Jessie Wilson, daughter of the late William H. Wilson, left her home in Chicago on December twenty-eighth for points in Texas where she expects to spend the winter.

Why not start the year by soliciting a friend to subscribe for The Restitution Herald.

Sr. Leta Osborn, who is teaching school near Oregon, spent Christmas with her parents, Bro. and Sr. M. J. Osborn, at Culver, Indiana.

Sr. Myrtle Hatten, who is helping at the Golden Rule Home, and her sister, Pearl, who is working in Oregon, spent Christmas with their parents, Bro. and Sr. D. Hatten, at Culver, Indiana.

Bro. Frederick Claussen, of Oregon, spent Christmas with friends at Culver, Indiana.

Bro. and Sr. Earl Thayer, of Rockford, Illinois, were with relatives near Plymouth, Indiana, over Christmas.

INDIANA QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The second quarterly conference of Indiana was hospitably entertained by the Rensselaer church December 6, 7, and 8. Although inclement weather conditions prevented many from attending, those who were there were greatly benefited by the sermons and Bible lessons of Brothers Anderson and Hatch. Sr. Lydia Railsback and Bro. Floyd Stilson also led classes in Bible discussions. Communion was observed in connection with the Sunday morning services.

CHRISTMAS OFFERINGS

The following Christmas Offerings have been gratefully received at the office the past week. Loyalty and cooperation are wonderful aids in the work in which we are all engaged.

R. H. Judd	$ 2.00
Mr. and Mrs. M. Fetters	2.00
Leota B. Hanson	10.00
Irene Margrave	3.00

FROM THE HOLY CITY

The following is an excerpt from a letter under date of December 1, received by Sr. Mary Gesin from her aunt who is a member of the American Colony in Jerusalem, Palestine. It gives a different viewpoint to the situation there, different from the one received when reading the daily papers. It may prove interesting to some of our readers.

"You must have read in the papers about the terrible times we have had here since last August. On the twenty-third of that month a terrible uprising of the Arabs against the Jews occurred; many were killed and many more badly wounded. Of course it was an awful atrocity, but the Arabs have great provocation from the Jews. To one not living in this country, the thing seems inexplicable. There are many kinds of Jews here; some are peace-loving, minding their own business. Others are of the Bolshevick variety. The latter are those who have caused the terrible outrage.

"There is fault on both sides. In the American papers the accounts all seem to favor the Jews. This is far from right. We have suffered no violence and have had no trouble at all. The sewing class was meeting in the industrial school when the uprising began and the mob attacked the building. Sticks, stones and knives were used, and all the windows of the room were soon broken and great rocks came in. You have no idea how much harm great stones can do in the hands of an infuriated mob. Emily (one of Sr. Gesin's relatives) and her girls retired to a room opening on an inner court, not visible on the street (these inner rooms are common in this country), and stayed there all the afternoon, not knowing whether they would come out alive or not.

"When at last they came out they found that some Arab friends had stood guard at the door telling the mob that the people upstairs were Americans. Six Jews had been killed in that building. I can tell you she was a frightened woman. She was so glad there were iron bars on the windows, which is a custom in this country.

"Since then there has been trouble off and on all over the country. Just now there is a committee from England looking into the situation, and trying to find the cause of it.

"How we pray God to guard and keep us, and that His will shall be done in this city where He has set His name."

WILLIAM E. ADAMS

Was born at Gifford, Iowa, Feb. 27, 1880, and died, Dec. 22, 1929.

At the age of four he came to western Nebraska with his parents, Elder Almus Adams and Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Adams, and then removed to Omaha in 1901, where he remained until death. He was in the employ of the Street Railway Company for twenty years. He was married to Miss Dagmar Christisen who preceded him in death thirteen years. Those left to mourn his loss are the parents; one son, William, age 13; four brothers and two sisters, Esco Adams, 5526 Fontenell Blvd., Omaha, Leo and Ray at home with his parents, Clair Adams, Mt. Eden, Calif., Mrs. Alta Thrush, Benson Addition, Omaha, Mrs. Elsie Strong, 4910 N. 38, Omaha, six nieces, five nephews.

He was laid to rest in Mount Hope cemetery.

AT REST

Sarah Jane Pennington, second daughter of Samuel W. and Julia A. Pennington was born on July 25, 1858 at Keokuk, Iowa, and died on December 24, 1929, at her home near Oxford, Kansas. She and W. H. Bernard were united in marriage on January 29, 1874, and were the parents of nine children, five of whom preceded her in death. Those surviving are Leland A., of Genda Springs; Ethel Teter, of Ponca City; Bertha Tryon, of Kansas City, Mo.; Ruth Woodward, of Winfield; 12 grandchildren and 1 great grandchild. Had she lived until Jan. 29, 1930, she would have spent 56 years in the home where she passed away, having come there at the time of her marriage.

Forty years ago she was converted and joined the Church of God and has lived each day the things that she believed would give her a home eternal, and be with those again, who had gone before. She had been ill five years, confined to her bed for eleven months, but never complaining, always thinking of others, as had been her way throughout life. Her last hours were spent in prayer, and she died in the arms of her companion for the past fifty-six years.

We have laid her to rest 'mong jewels of His,
Folded close in death's icy embrace;
We have pressed the last kiss, we have dropped the last tear,
On the dear and beautiful face.

Fare you well for a while, dear one from our home;

Sweetly sleep from all sorrow and pain
Till the Prince of the angels in triumph shall come

And restore your lost glory again.

The writer was called to conduct services for Sr. Bernard at Mt. Vernon Church and she was laid to rest in the cemetery nearby. A lesson was read from 1 Cor. 15:12-23, 51-57, and words of comfort were spoken from Psa. 103:13, 14. Many friends and neighbors were present, to show their respect and esteem. May her slumber be soon broken by the sounding of the last trump.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

THE MAINSPRING OF ACTION

By Lyman Booth

FAITH IS THE MAINSPRING of Christian works. It is that which prompts all Christian endeavor. It is the force which causes one to act and which keeps him acting. It may be likened to a spring in a clock. At first the spring is iron and by a certain process it is changed to steel. When placed in the clock it is of no use without the other parts of the clock. The other parts also are of no use without the spring. Both are necessary and must work together to produce the results for which they were constructed. To cause them to function properly, the spring must be wound and the two adjusted to work in harmony. This requires a key, to which human power or energy must be applied before the clock will indicate one minute of time. No clock can be depended upon to keep perfect time unless regularly wound.

It is thus with the Christian. Like the iron there must be a change in his intentions, his mental desires to energize and give him the quality or property of action, after which he must be wound and set in motion. This requires a key which we call the Word of God. As the key to the clock requires the application of a human hand or power to cause the spring to impart energy to the clock, so the Christian must be energized by the unseen hand of God, who draws him unto himself, for Jesus said, "No man can come to me except the Father which sent me draw him". John 6:44.

When the Father draws one to His Son by "the gospel of Christ: which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth", he becomes imbued, impelled or energized by that unseen force called love which gives him confidence in the Word. At once he becomes active in good works. He may be considered wound like the clock. When the spring in the clock becomes weak and its strength expended the clock stops and we say it is dead. Thus when faith becomes weak and ceases to operate in good works, James says, "it is dead, being alone". 2:17. We therefore conclude that an active, living faith must be wound up to the proper tension in order that good works may follow.

The result of the operation of the clock is shown on its face where all may see. In like manner the Christian shows to the world his works of faith, not in his face alone, but in his conversation and daily labors. In other words, he must comply with our Lord's request in Matt. 5:16, where He said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father in heaven." The consummation of our faith is eternal life wherein we shall be blessed of Him because of having glorified Him by good and faithful works. Profession may be a bright badge of a Christian, but practice translates profession into good works, from mere speculation into active duties, from sentiment of the mind to the substantial realities of a life devoted to good works.

By our faith we may recognize Him to be our God, but it is by our obedience that we declare Him to be our Lord.

GENTILE TIMES

By the Editor

IT IS GOD WHO IS SPEAKING; Daniel the prophet is His spokesman. Daniel gives thanks and praise, saying, "I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter."—Daniel 2:23. To Daniel had been revealed the king's forgotten dream; to him also had been revealed the interpretation of that dream. Having had it "made known" unto him, Daniel spoke to Nebuchadnezzar saying, "Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold."—Dan. 2:37, 38. The head of gold was the beginning of the image of the king's vision, v. 32, the complete image following the head of gold. In the interpretation Daniel also announces that other kings shall supersede the kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar, Babylon. Daniel concludes the interpretation of the image by saying, v. 44, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Nebuchadnezzar was a Gentile; Babylon was a Gentile kingdom; Medo-Persia which succeeded it was another Gentile power; so also its successor and so also down until the present time, this Gentile period continues until the God of heaven who announced Nebuchadnezzar as the head, i. e., the beginning of this series of kingdoms shall establish anew His own kingdom on David's throne which shall "break in pieces" this Gentile rule.

Scripture is very definite as to David's throne. Its location is at Jerusalem the chosen city. God's own word was, 2 Sam. 7:12-15, "I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever." The city God chose in which to establish David's throne is the same city of which the Father declared through Jeremiah 3:17 that a day should yet come at which "time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord". Thus Jerusalem, the city of God, the throne of David, even the throne of the Lord is the city which is yet to be the place of God's own rule through His own chosen King. That King, declared the angel to the mother of Jesus, is to be none other than her Son, our Savior. "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall rule over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1:32, 33.

Jerusalem was overthrown, trodden down, subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, a Gentile, the head of the image. Nor will Jerusalem be freed from Gentile domination and restored back to God's chosen nation Israel, "until he come whose right it is"—Ezek. 21:27. That rightful One is Christ.

He, to whom Daniel referred at 2:44 as the One who should "break in pieces" all these kingdoms, is born. To the people of His day it was definitely announced that He was "born king of the Jews". Fearful, Herod undertook to slay Him. All the children from two years old and under were put to death in a thorough effort not to miss Him who was born for Jerusalem's King. But the Savior passed His ministry, passed through life only to say, "My kingdom is not of this world"—John 18:36. Rather He told them, "I go away", but He added, "If I go . . . I will come again"—John 14:1-3. And He also foretold, Matt. 25:31, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory".

We may not then expect the close of Gentile times until the return of our Lord and Master. At that return He will occupy His throne, that throne promised Him by the angel speaking to His mother, the throne of His father David. David's throne, dominion, was the throne of Jerusalem, even "Jerusalem the throne of the Lord". As yet that throne, that city and that people Israel are under Gentile authority. Therefore Gentile times still continue, and the prophecies referring to the reestablishment of God's authority, of His chosen people Israel have not yet come to fulfillment.

As we enter into the year 1930 we are indicating that it has been 1929 years since the birth of Him who was born to become "king of the Jews". And as we enter 1930 we kneel with a prayer to the God of heaven that, should this be the year when Gentile times shall end and when the times of Israel shall be reinstated by Jesus, we may be found among that number worthy to be glorified with Him.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna Thayer

PALM TREE

THE DATE PALM abounds in Arabia, Egypt, in the whole of southern Asia, and in Northern Africa. It is now rare in Palestine; but when the scenes that are mentioned in the Bible occurred this tree was very common there. It is one of the most beautiful of trees, growing to a height of from sixty to one hundred feet, with no branches, strictly speaking, except the mass of graceful evergreen shoots which adorn its summit.

The fruit of the palm, the date, is an article of food; camels feed on the seeds, and the leaf fibres and sap are all valuable. The Arabs speak of 360 uses to which the different parts of the tree may be applied.

The tree was held in great esteem by the Hebrews, and hence the frequent allusions to it in the Bible. Psa. 92:12, 14; Jer. 10:5; John 12:13. In Rev. 7:9 it is used with special force and beauty, as the palm was an emblem of victory and was carried before the conqueror in triumphal processions. Read also of Jesus triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

UNITEDLY PRESSING FORWARD

By F. L. Austin

IN CHRISTIANITY AS IN ALL THE BUSINESS AFFAIRS of the world the New Year always brings for consideration new programs, new visions for accomplishment, new and higher aims. While the business world is reviewing past accomplishments and surveying new routes into the future, designing new methods and shoving its ideals farther forward, the church and the individual Christian should also be studying. But Christianity should be studying the problems of Christianity. It is very well to review the past; it is well to discover errors made and to detect the causes of those errors; it is also well for Christianity to survey the future. The Christian church has its duties to perform as well as does any material labor to which man sets his hands. God has placed the ultimate aim ever before the Christian. That aim may never be realized in its fullness until the Father shall have sent His Son the second time "without sin unto salvation", yet the Christian should ever advance, year after year, generation after generation, toward those ideals.

In this ever changing world the duties and opportunities of Christianity today may not be altogether the same as were such duties and opportunities before those of previous generations. The exceedingly rapid increase of knowledge in the world, the tremendous running to and fro, the drawing of the nations and races of the world together by means of communication and transportation—all of these things have rapidly changed conditions and forced new surroundings about the church.

If there ever was a time in this Christian dispensation when all Christians should stand together and unitedly labor for stronger testimony as to the truthfulness and certainty of God's Word that time is now. Also, Christianity needs more and more to manifest itself as a living, effective, active principle in the every day affairs of man. True, the first and outstanding duty of the individual is to bring self into such close fellowship with the Father and with His Son that They shall abide in him and shall lead and sustain him throughout his lifetime. If this is faithfully performed to the end there is no question as to the individual's salvation. But no individual can faithfully serve the Father by drawing himself into some snail-like shell. If he would serve God and his Savior he must do so by reaching out in his Christian efforts in every opportune direction.

The marvelous achievements in communication and in transportation have made it both possible and advisable for the business world to combine smaller industries into one organization that, with the combined strength of all, more strenuous efforts may be put forward for the accomplishment of the desired end. The results of such unification are seen everywhere. The axiom, "In unity there is strength", is true in Christianity as elsewhere. The Christian church is challenged by the circumstances of the day; it is challenged to meet the problems thrown out by the world and to solve them in a Christian way to the honor of Christ and of God; it is challenged to prove to the living generation that Christianity is what it claims for itself. There is apparently no way in which it can so effectively answer these challenges as by uniting its forces and moving unto the guidance of a single Head.

The forces of the church are, in part, as follows: first, prayer. Prayer is the greatest motive power known to man. Experience has taught all those who have properly given themselves to prayer that there is nothing in life that affords such unmistakable assistance, direction, and achievement as does prayer. As in other matters, so in prayer, the binding together of forces of different individuals increases the possibilities of all. Jesus said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst." A second latent force in the Christian world is the moral strength and standing of its people. More than any other calling in life, Christianity claims the highest ideals in this particular. A unification of the moral forces, a blending of the best, the highest, the strongest in each individual, all devoted to the Father for His guidance and for His use, would constitute a Christian force with which to meet the

THE GOSPEL

NINETEEN HUNDRED YEARS have passed since the gospel of the kingdom of God was first proclaimed to the world by Jesus of Nazareth. During these centuries the gospel remains unchanged. It stands to-day as it stood then. There are no new styles or fashions in the Savior's gospel. There may be new problems which the church must face, there may be different circumstances calling for different methods of proclaiming and of announcing the gospel, but the gospel remains the same. As we enter into another year of Christian activity, let us seek with all spiritual power, not to change or amend the teachings of Jesus in any way, but rather to present them ever more effectively, seek to apply them ever more aptly to the circumstances and needs of the time.

PRAYER

PRAYER STANDS AMID the statutes of Christian scriptures as it has stood since the first days our Savior taught it in Galilee and Judea. The same God rules in heaven; the same strength and greatness are His; the same love issues forth from Him; the same mercy is every ready to be presented; and man to-day is weak and needy just as men were in the morning of the Christian era. Prayer is one of the fundamentals in the operation of the Christian life in 1930 equally as it was a fundamental in the year of the Savior's ministry.

Let us pray. Let us pray often. Let us converse with the Father on every little problem of life, about every serious question, about every ambition of the heart. Let us seek the Father's guidance and then seek His wisdom and His strength. "Pray always." "Pray without ceasing." "In everything give thanks."

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

JUST AS 1930 years marked off upon the calendar of time reveals that we are getting farther and farther from that angelic anthem announcing the birth of our Savior, so do these 1930 years announce that we are getting nearer and nearer the second advent of our Savior and Lord. It is no farther from the time of His first advent to that of His second advent to-day than it was in the beginning of the era. The only way to reach the moment of His second coming is to move farther away from the moment of His first appearing. This is being done. And so, 1930, though reckoned as indicating distance from the birth of our Savior, to the hopeful Christian merely means 1930 years nearer to the time when He "shall come the second time without sin unto salvation".

IMMORTALITY

NOT ONLY 1930 YEARS has man lived in his mortal state, but 5934 years (Usher's datings) has man traveled the mortal, thorny pathways. In those fifty-nine centuries man has not advanced one iota in the matter of making a change from mortality to immortality. He has explored the earth and made new inroads into the uses thereof; he has sought out the paths of the ocean and utilized numerous of its possibilities; he has investigated the paths of the air and benefited by whatsoever he could in these heavenly realms; he has delved deep in his study of the rocks, of the treasures within the bosom of the earth, of the unseen and mighty electrical energy of the universe. He has achieved wonders in coming to understand and solve these and many other features of God's immense creation, but he has advanced not one whit in his ability to transform mortality to immortality. Today as of all time, immortality continues to remain a gift from God. For man it is the one end sought, the one great prize, the one unspeakable ideal standing out in vision and hope. It is "the gift of God". It is offered through His Son who "brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." Though God "only hath immortality" yet He has given it to His Son, and provided that the Son should "give it to whomsoever he will". The hour is rapidly approaching when to the individual of true Christian faith "this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality". The change will take place not by long drawn out process or through slow gradual growth from the one to the other but "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump". Then and not till then will the Father's assurance become a fact—"death is swallowed up in victory".

"O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: because his mercy endureth for ever."—Psalm 118:1.

CONTINUITY OF PERSONALITY

The following articles, clipped from The Toronto Globe, were sent in by Bro. Judd and we reproduce them here with the thought that they may prove instructive to our readers.

SOME CORRESPONDENTS on this profound and interesting question of continuity of life do not look upon it as a comforting thing to think of consciousness after death. Among the early heathen of primitive times they liked to think of themselves as conscious after death. Zoroaster, the founder of the ancient Persian religion, said: "The soul being a bright fire, by the power of the Father remains immortal. The soul of man will in a manner clasp God to herself." It was from these Zoroastrians descended the Magi that saw the star in the East that led them to the manger at Bethlehem to see the new-born Savior. If God could make himself known by a star to heathen minds, surely He could reveal to them something of the continuity of the soul.

Some who are not sufficiently educated in Hebrew and Greek terms in the use of the words sheol, gehenna, ruach, pneuma, psuche, etc, are not in a position to state any facts as to the question of consciousness or unconsciousness after death, and then as to a man who may be sufficiently learned in Hebrew and New Testament Greek, he may be so asquint in his thinking that the only thing he entertains in his thought is that he wants to remain absolutely dead in body and soul till the time of resurrection. Suffice it to say that Jesus has definitely made a distinction in an emphatic way between body and soul when He said, "Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul." Matt. 10:28. Jesus did not get this difference between the continuity of the soul and lifelessness of the body from Zoroaster or from any heathen source. Those who pin their faith to the dead theory after death have to resort to some kind of prostitution of reasoning to get rid of Solomon's statement that "the spirit goes back to God who gave it", and as to Elias and Moses on the Mount of Transfiguration, also as to the spirits of just men made perfect after death.

Then, as to the question of being born again, the New Testament knows nothing about a man being born again at the resurrection. There is a difference between the new birth and the resurrection. The new birth as taught by Jesus takes place right here in this life. Surely it must be plain to any reader of the New Testament that for three years our Lord and His disciples preached that the kingdom of heaven was at hand. If it was at hand, when did the kingdom of heaven come in? Answer,—On the day of Pentecost, when three thousand souls were born again in a spiritual way.

Jesus surely explains to Nicodemus what this new birth is when He said that "whosoever believeth on me hath everlasting life," and to Martha and the crowd that stood around Lazarus' grave, "whosoever believeth in me shall never die." Christ, as far as the believer is concerned, knows nothing about death after the dissolution of body and soul. What He offers is everlasting life to them that believe. It is plain that those who will participate in the first resurrection of the body will be those who have been born again.

The teaching of Paul is taken up with this one thing, life in Christ; an experimental religion from start to finish. There is "no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus." "It is no more I that live, but it is Christ that liveth in me." This is the new birth, and then on reaching the end of the journey Paul says: "To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord."

(Rev.) John Lennox.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE GLOBE: I notice a letter in today's issue from Rev. John Lennox of Havelock, advocating conscious continuity of personality after death. One is somewhat surprised that a minister of the gospel should quote other than Scripture authority for his belief, especially when he knows that there is not scientifically one iota of proof in his favor. Scripture statements regarding man in death are so emphatic that one marvels that any professed believer in the Bible can see his way to discredit them. Statements such as the following cannot admit of two meanings. They are straightforward, simple statements, and their meanings are obvious.

"The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything."

"David is not ascended into the heavens, he is both dead and buried . . ."

In the day that a man's breath goeth forth, "in that very day his thoughts perish."

Both Old and New Testament Scriptures represent the dead as asleep: "Them that sleep in Jesus." No fair-minded person will deny that fact, nor can they deny that "sleep" is incompatible with active conscious personality.

Let us look for a moment and see whether Mr. Lennox's reasoning is as sound as he appears to think when he says that reason needs to be prostituted to make Eccl. 12:7, "Then . . . shall the spirit return to God who gave it," compatible with the theory that a man is dead when he dies. The "spirit" here is in the neuter gender. It is given to whom? To the man surely. Then emphatically it cannot be the man. If your correspondent's reason is carried to its logical conclusion he is an advocate for the preexistence of all mankind. The Bible teaching on sheol is distinctly clear. Good and bad alike go there. It is gravedom—the place of corruption and death. The worm and the maggot are there. Trees, tents, swords, sheep and dead bodies and the souls of men go there. They are companions "in the dust of the earth."

"Absent from the body, present with the Lord", true, but Paul had no conception of going to be with the Lord without a body. There are no spirits of men now made perfect, for the same authority (Paul) testifies that "they without us shall not be made perfect." That the dead do not live, in the sense of active living life, is clear from Isa.

QUESTIONS

---

You ask me when I gave my heart to Him?
 'Twas years ago.
 The flowers of spring, the summer's heat,
 The winter's snows
 Have passed so many times, and yet
 He dearer grows.

You ask me how I gave my heart to Him?
 I cannot tell.
 I opened wide the door; He entered in,
 With me to dwell,
 And taught me how to trust; His wondrous love
 To others tell.

You ask me how these marvelous things can be?
 I do not know.
 I only know He walks and talks with me
 As on we go,
 And brightens all the way, because I love Him so.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS

SOMETIMES CALLED

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE KINGS

---

By Lyman Booth

---

THIS BOOK IS PRINCIPALLY a continuation of the First Book of the Kings, to which it is joined in the Hebrew canon, therefore the remarks made concerning the first may, in a manner, apply to the second. It contains the Jewish history for more than three hundred years. In Israel the kings were mostly idolatrous and wicked and totally unworthy of the positions which they occupied. And though Elijah and Elisha and other prophets were prospered in preserving a considerable number of the people from idolatry, yet the measure of their national iniquity was soon filled, so that they were conquered and carried away captive by the Assyrians. They were dispersed among Gentiles, and ever since then they have been a nation without a king, and a people without a country. Their home land was soon planted by the conquerors with a mingled people, who established a corrupt and partial worship of God, from whom originated the nation and religion of the Samaritans. These events began to take place considerably more than one hundred years before the Babylonian captivity.

Some very remarkable revivals of religion took place in the land of Judah under the pious prince of David's family, and by means of the faithful labors of the prophets; but these were of very short duration. Not only were the kings idolatrous and wicked, but the priests and the Levites shamefully neglected their very important duty, so that the people generally were given over to idolatry and to iniquitous practices. After the death of the pious Joshua, the nation became almost universally corrupt. The account closes with a melancholy picture of the destruction of the temple and the city, the desolation of the country, and the enslaving and carrying away of the inhabitants by the Chaldeans, as all of the prophets who lived in the latter part of this period have written. These writings have been preserved, and as they oftentimes referred to the facts recorded in this brief history, we may justly consider their predictions as sanctioning the divine authority of the narrative. It does not contain any direct prophecy, the completion of which extended far beyond the return of the Jews from the Babylonian captivity, and the rebuilding of the temple.

BAPTISM

---

No. 3

By S. J. Lindsay

---

THE ONLY SCRIPTURAL water baptism is by immersion. John baptized where there was "much water". John 3:23. Could there be any excuse for this statement if sprinkling or pouring, either of which would not require "much water", were authorized or practiced? If either of the latter named actions were practiced, would it not be much more likely that where many were to be baptized it would be easier to bring the necessary water to them rather than to take so many to the water? Baptism is called a "burial", a "planting", Rom. 6, and it is spoken of as "going down into the water and coming up out of it again", Acts 8:38, 39.

Furthermore, in the word, "baptism" we have a Greek word transcribed and not translated. Elsewhere this same Greek word is properly translated "dip", where it has no relation to water baptism. In Luke 16, in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, the rich man is made to say, "Send Lazarus that he may DIP the tip of his finger, etc." Again Christ said to those who asked Him who it was that should betray Him, "It is he that DIPPETH with me, etc." Again we read of one whose "vesture is DIPPED in blood." In each instance the word "dip" is translated from some form of the Greek, baptizo.

We have at hand a German Bible. In it we find the first verse of Matthew 3, the following: Zu der Zeit kam Johannes, der Tauffer, etc. The English of this is, "In those days, came John the Baptist." Ask any German to give you the meaning of "tauffer", and see what he will tell you. I asked one once upon a time what it meant when he didn't know what my design was in asking it, and he said, "Id means dat you get soaked."

In type this idea of immersion is sustained. The children of Israel were buried in a watery grave in their passage through the Red Sea. Paul refers to this as a national baptism unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea, Rom. 10. The Israelites were entirely hidden from the Egyptians under water, for a cloud covered them and hid them. Baptism is also given as a figure of burial. As Christ was buried and arose, so we are buried in baptism with Him to arise to walk in a newness of life.

What purpose can people have in wishing to discuss the subject out of the Bible? Why do they seek to change God's plans and purposes? Do they not know this is a dangerous proceeding? Saul tried it only a little, for while the commandment had gone out to destroy EVERYTHING, yet Saul kept back only a little alive, and that only for an apparently good purpose if we are to believe his story; yet it cost him a kingdom. The prophet was told to eat nothing while in the land of the enemy. Yet with good purpose, so he thought, he ate and lost his life. How dare people be so careless about the ordinances of God? Is it because vanity takes hold and molds their actions? We need to flee vanity. It is as poison to us. Let us seek rather a state of deep humility, for in its atmosphere alone can we develop best that character which God purposes for us.

As against baptism it is urged that the winters of our latitude make the thought of being immersed in the extremely cold water of our winter time out of the question. We know of instances where candidates applying for immersion in the winter time have been told by the "shepherds" to wait until warmer weather. Recently when the water was full of slush ice, we were called upon to baptize a sister whose health was far from rugged. She went through the ordeal without a fear and came out of the water knowing that she had been obedient to that form of doctrine which had been delivered her. We have never heard of a case where severity of the weather ever brought harm to the willingly obedient. Let us not seek excuses to avoid what God commands, but rather let us seek to do His will, knowing that He will ask nothing of us in the performance of which He will not protect us.

More could be said upon this subject, but we feel that the matter has been covered sufficiently for this time. We shall be pleased to answer questions that may reasonably arise out of these articles in so far as they may be asked for information and for discussion.

FOLLOW HIM

- Does Christ save you from your sin?
Call Him Savior!
- Does He free you from the slavery of your passions?
Call Him Redeemer!
- Does He teach you as no one else has taught you?
Call Him Teacher!
- Does He mold and master your life?
Call Him Master!
- Does He shine upon the pathway that is dark to you?
Call Him Guide!
- Does He reveal God to you?
Call Him the Son of God!
- Does He reveal man?
Call Him the Son of Man!
- Are your lips silent?
Follow Him!

CONGREGATION OF THE DEAD

By T. A. Drinkard

"The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead."
—Proverbs 21:16.

THIS PASSAGE OF SCRIPTURE seems to teach the final doom of those who refuse to accept the gospel of Christ in this age. We cannot refuse to consider this verse, one which I have often used to prove that man, while in death is silent, unconscious, and will remain there until the time of resurrection. The congregation herein mentioned embraces the dead. The man who wanders away from the way of understanding is said to be a member of this congregation.

But the dead are promised a resurrection, whether it be "of life" or "of damnation". Isa. 26:19; John 5:28, 29. Man of himself can do nothing, even Jesus Christ made this confession. Let us behold man in his weakness, with his shortcomings, and failures. He is unable to come forth from the death of Romans 5:12 once he is in its embrace. He is helpless, unable to do for himself what he would like to do. Without other help, would he not remain with this vast congregation in death?

Job, the man of suffering, who at one time felt that life held very little that was worth while to him, so viewed the matter when he said, "Are not my days few? Cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little, before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness and the shadow of death."—Job 10:20, 21. Notice his despondent cry, "I shall not return." He, of himself, could not come forth. He would have to remain there until God's due time to resurrect him. Though he said, "I shall not return," yet he also said, "In my flesh shall I see God.", 19:26. Job could enter into death but could not come out.

It was a wonderful provision on God's part to arrange a plan whereby through Jesus Christ resurrection would be possible. Job and other men of God knew about this plan of God and each one has seen fit to tell us about it. It may baffle you and me to know just how God is going to do these things, but perhaps we are no more puzzled than was Ezekiel when God asked him if all the dry bones could live. Ezekiel said in so many words, "I don't know! Do you?"

Jesus tasted death for you before you obeyed the gospel call. (Rom. 5:6, 8; Heb. 2:9; 1 Tim. 2:5) Provision was made to care and provide for every one who will accept the gospel of Christ. If you are in the way of understanding remain there. But whether you remain or stray away, if you die ere Jesus returns, you will remain in the congregation of the dead. God has decreed it. You cannot make it of none effect. You will remain in that silent condition until the morning of resurrection.

May God hasten that day of redemption, current problems of life.

A third force in the Christian field is financial power. The world has moved on marvelously rapidly in financial matters. It is readily seen that those industries which have advanced most and have thus gained most for themselves are those which have apportioned wisely but most liberally large budgets with which to teach the public the uses of their products. Their advertising campaigns run into hundreds of millions of dollars. These amounts are merely invested with the expectation of being returned in newly developed business. Christianity too has large resources in its financial ability. We seem to be speaking of Christianity as a business problem. While this may be true in a sense, yet really this is not the case. The church of tomorrow will be stronger than the church of today in some such ratio as the budgets of today are carefully and wisely given with which to teach and disciple others, bringing them into true consecration of service to Christ. A thousand true consecrated converts bring with them a thousand new plans, a thousand added moral standings, a thousand added purses for the activities of the church.

As a church let us unite all of our strength in making 1930 the best year of activity and of service in the history of those now living. Let us remember the ever fundamental truths of the gospel and hold them with increasing strength of faith. In view of all of the surrounding circumstances of life let us ever seek the best way of applying these truths to the problems of today and working together as one individual, all under the leadership of Christ the Lord. Let us put forth every effort to make this, 1930, the most effective year for gospel work thus far in our lives.

SCATTERING CRUMBS

I threw some crumbs from my window
 At the falling of the night,
 And I thought no more about them
 Till, at break of morning light,
 A ceaseless chirping and twitter
 On the frosty air I heard;
 'Twas the sparrow's morning blessing,
 And my heart to joy was stirred;
 For 'tis something to make happy
 Even the wee heart of a bird.

It gave me a pleasant keynote
 For the music of the day,
 A song of thanks for each blessing
 I should find along the way;
 A thought for the joy of others,
 And how oft with little care
 I might give some crumbs of pleasure
 To another heart, and bear
 In my own a double measure
 For the sake of another's share.

TREE RINGS TELL HISTORY

SOLUTION OF THE MOST BAFFLING question in the study of the pre-Columbian history of the United States—the dating of the scores of important Indian ruins of our Southwest—has been announced by the National Geographic Society.

The answer is given in a unique form, a tree-ring calendar, worked out from the study of more than 5000 cross sections of living trees and timbers from scores of the major Indian settlements of our Southwest.

The quest for the missing dates extended over years. It ranged from astronomical study of sun spots, through geology, archaeology and kindred sciences, until it culminated in piecing together the fragmentary clues of timber and tree-rings—evidence as conclusive as finger prints.

TWO EXPEDITIONS INVOLVED

Two series of National Geographic Society expeditions were involved in the results. One series, comprising eight expeditions led by Neil M. Judd, explored the world-famous Pueblo Bonito ruins in Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, and patiently dug from tons of earth hundreds of art objects, household utensils and ceremonial appurtenances. The other series, led by Dr. A. E. Douglass, studied tree rings from Pueblo Bonito and dozens of other ruins.

Of the daily lives of the people at the giant pre-Columbian apartment house at Pueblo Bonito, as at many other Indian ruins in the Southwest, which was North America's metropolis before Columbus came, we long have known as much as we do of the early Egyptians, Babylonians, or Persians.

As travelers stood in amazement before one or another of the ruins of these marvelous civilizations of our own continent their almost invariable question has been, "How old is it?" And that has been the one question which archaeologists could not answer.

SCIENTIFIC VALUE OF FINDS

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, in assessing the value of the finds of the expedition says:

"They have pushed back the historic horizons of the Southwestern United States to a period nearly eight centuries before Columbus crossed the Atlantic. They have discovered not only the age of the great communal dwelling of Pueblo Bonito, metropolis of our aboriginal Southwest, but also have dated some 40 other ruins whose time of occupancy hitherto had been unknown.

"Moreover, they have developed a tree-ring calendar which can be applied to all early ruins in which datable timbers exist. A collateral finding of great interest, yet to be developed, is the possible relation between the weather cycles clearly revealed in this tree-ring calendar of the Southwestern United States and similar cyclic variations being recorded by a third National Geographic Society Expedition (in conjunction with the Smithsonian Institution), an expedition which still is in the field, at Mount Brukkar-os, Southwest Africa, making daily observations of solar radiation."

1200-YEAR WEATHER CHART

Dr. Douglass, in his report to the Society, writes:

"Just as the far-famed Rosetta Stone provided the key to the written mysteries of ancient Egypt, so the collection of an unbroken series of tree rings has made clear the chronology of the Southwest. These researches have carried the calendar back to A. D. 700 in the Southwest and they have provided the beginnings of a continuous weather chart for 1200 years.

"Through this work we have learned of some outstanding events in America which were contemporaneous with the conquest of Spain by the Moors, and we know that certain Pueblo Indian settlements were enjoying their golden ages when William the Conqueror faced Harold the Saxon at the battle of Hastings.

"The earliest beam we recovered from Pueblo Bonito was cut A. D. 919 from a tree that was 219 years old when cut. Pueblo Bonito had reached its golden age in 1067 and was still occupied in 1127."

SOME MESA VERDE DATES

In many instances, Dr. Douglass' report points out, one group name is applied to several ruins. The "talkative tree rings" enabled the explorers to date each ruin of the groups studied. Thus, in the Mesa Verde group, Cliff Palace is dated 1073; Oak Tree House, 1112; Spring House, 1115; Balcony House, 1190-1206; Square Tower House, 1204; and Spruce Tree House, 1216 and 1262.

Dr. Douglass explains how the tree-ring calendar was worked out:

"The method which we have used in extending the historical calendar of the Southwest is the outcome of a long attempt to read the diaries of trees. Every year the trees in our forests show the swing of time's pendulum and put down a mark. They are chronographs, recording clocks, by which the succeeding seasons are set down through definite imprints. Every year each pine adds a layer of new wood over its entire living surface of trunk and branches.

HOW A TREE REGISTERS TIME

"If every year were exactly the same, growth rings would tell the age of the tree and little more. Only in rare cases would they record exceptional events of any interest to us. But a tree is not a robot; it is a living thing, and its food supply and adventures through life all enter into its diary. A flash of lightning, a forest fire, insect pests, or a falling neighbor may make strong impressions on its life and go into its diary.

"But in the arid regions of our Southwest, where trees are few and other vegetation scarce, the most important thing to man and trees is rainfall. This fact has helped vastly in our dating work, for certain sequences of years become easily recognized from tree to tree, county to county, and even from state to state."

From sun spots to tree rings seems a long scientific jump. But it illustrates how one fact of science may have far flung results in other fields. Dr. Douglass is an astronomer.

A DRAMATIC CONFIRMATION

"Originally my work was a study of sun spots," he writes. "It is known that there is a periodicity in their occurrence; they are most numerous at intervals of 11 years. As an aid in that astronomical investigation, I studied trees, for solar changes affect our weather, and weather in turn affects the trees in Arizona's dry climate, as elsewhere.

"The first confirmation of our general interpretation of a relationship between tree rings and sun spot periods came in a most dramatic way. Evidence of the 11-year sun spot cycle had been easily found in Arizona pine trees. The regularly recurring periods had been recorded for 500 years by tree rings, except for the interval from 1650 to 1725. During that 75 years the tree rings gave no evidence of periodical changes in the weather as were to be expected.

"Several years after we had encountered this puzzling fact the late Dr. E. Walter Maunder, an eminent English astronomer, unaware of my findings, wrote to me that he had discovered that there were no sun spots between 1645 and 1715, and that if my tree rings did not indicate some effect of this absence of sun spots, my work was being conducted on an erroneous hypothesis.—Selected by Sr. Gertrude Logan.

38:1, "Thou shalt die and not live." Paul, when writing to the Corinthian Christians was no believer in the resurrection of the body, for he declares definitely: "Thou sowest not that body that shall be." "God giveth it a body, and to every seed a body of its own." The oak is the body that God gives to the acorn. The former has living, active life resultant from the dormant (sleeping) life of the latter.

John 3:5 is our Lord's testimony parallel with that of Paul's, that the second birth takes place at resurrection. "It is sown a natural (soul-ical) body, it is raised a spiritual body." Men and women are now "begotten" into Christ. Let Mr. Lennox ask himself the question, "If Christ had not been raised from the dead, would He have been living today?" The answer must be "No". Again let him ask, "If Christ had not been raised, would any of us awake to everlasting life?" Once more the answer must be an emphatic "No". David said, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in his likeness," and David was not asleep when he said that. That there is dormant ("sleeping") life, the writer believes, in every child of God who dies and "sleeps in the dust of the earth," but Mr. Lennox cannot find a single statement in the Bible or in science (proved knowledge) that contradicts the Scripture statement that, "In the day that a man's breath goeth forth, in that very day his thoughts perish." Mr. Lennox has taken the statement, "Whosoever believeth in me shall never die", out of its setting, and unintentionally makes our Lord's words of none effect, for nothing is more sure than the fact that men, even Christian men, do die.

R. H. Judd.

THE PARACLETE

John 14:16

By C. W. Dean

THE WORD "COMFORTER" which is found in the gospel according to John is translated from the Greek word, Parakletos, or Paraclete as it is sometimes termed. Some say that a knowledge of ancient languages is not essential to the understanding of the Word of Truth. But for one to understand the truth of any subject, a knowledge of the meaning of the words upon which that subject is founded is very beneficial. The apostle Paul admonished Timothy to rightly divide the Word, and to distinguish the things that differ. Many teachers and ministers use that text and many fail to understand the admonition. In order to rightly divide the truth we have to first note who is speaking; second, to whom the words are spoken; third, what is the subject, the time and place. When the subject is written, we should know who the writer is, to whom it is written, and when it will take place.

The word "Comforter" found in the gospel according to John is translated from the Greek Paraclete and in the original means, "One called, a helper, or an advocate." Its appellation involves a personality, and a notable representative sent from God in the name of Christ. The apostle John is the only writer of the Greek scriptures, or New Testament, who writes or speaks of the Comforter translated from the Greek, Paraclete.

All translators agree on the Greek, Paraclete, or Parakletos. The Revisers of the 1611 and 1881 editions agree with the Greek New Testament that the established term "Comforter" as the appellation of the Holy Spirit in the fourteenth chapter of the Gospel of John is a notable representative. The personal pronouns, he, himself, and him, are used by all translators, except the Concordant Version. And the Douay Version uses the word Paraclete instead of the word "Comforter". All agree on the masculine gender of the Paraclete, be it he, or it.

Jehovah God knows the intent and heart of man and he knows that there is a motive behind every act of mankind. God looks at the motive behind the act, oral or written. We all have to appear before the dais of Christ to be requited for the deeds put in practice through the body, or the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad, and there is no partiality. With these thoughts in view, the writer expresses his thoughts upon the subject Paraclete.

"And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you for the age, or eon." John 14:16. Here we find Christ is speaking, and that it is to His disciples. The subject is another Paraclete, and the time is at the close of the age or eon. All will agree that Christ was the first Paraclete. He had finished His ministry on earth, His departure was at hand and His disciples were troubled at heart. However He must depart to prepare a place for them, and while He was gone He would make request of the Father that He would send another Paraclete to abide with them for the age. This in no sense indicates that they should look for an influence without a personality. Christ, their first Paraclete, was sent from God and His disciples knew it. John 17:8. Why should His disciples look for an influence, or a power without the personality of another Paraclete? The answer is, tradition looks for an influence or power without a personality. His disciples expect a personal Paraclete to guide them into truth and to lead them through the great tribulation.

Christ, in speaking to His disciples who are the sons of Israel, told them to rightly divide the word of truth and we should read no other thought into the text. Christ never went to the nations. He said He was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. He ministered to only two Gentiles, one Roman centurion, and one Canaanitish woman, who was admonished that it was not meet to take the children's bread and give it to dogs. Her faith being so great, she was healed, that is, her daughter was healed.

The promised Paraclete is to the sons of Israel and not to the nations or Gentiles. We do not come up through great tribulation. The ecclesia which is His body will have been taken out seven years before the mobilization at Harmageddon. No class or ecclesia of the Gentiles will come up under great tribulation. The great tribulation is applied to the nation of Israel or the sons of Israel and not to the Gentiles. When the Paraclete comes to the world, he is to convict it on three accounts: "of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment".

"That he may be with you for the eon." Here we have a specified time in which the Paraclete will be with those to whom he is promised. Seventy sevens (weeks) are decreed upon the people of Israel, Dan. 9:24. Sixty-nine sevens, or weeks have had their fulfillment; one seven, the seventieth, still future, includes the time of God's future indignation, and the time of the great tribulation. Before the days of great tribulation come upon the sons of Israel the abomination of desolation is set up in the holy place, Matt. 24:15. Therefore we have to turn back to the prophecy of Daniel to learn how the age in which the Paraclete will come shall pass out. There we learn that the desolator will empower a covenant with many of Israel in the land of Palestine for seven years, the seventieth seven which closes the eon of John 14:16.

In the midst of these years the desolator will break his covenant made with Israel, causing their sacrifices and gift offerings to cease and he will inaugurate a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation up to that time. Dan. 12:1. This is confirmed by Christ, Matt. 24:21, and inasmuch as Michael is standing up for Israel at that time, Christ himself will not come until the end of that age. The time period from the breaking of the covenant to the unveiling of Christ at the end of the age is three and a half years and is designated in the Scriptures as "a season, and two seasons, and the distribution of a season," Dan. 2:25; "a season and seasons, and half a season," Rev. 12:14; "forty-two months," Rev. 11:2; "twelve hundred and sixty days," Rev. 11:3 and 12:6; and refers to the last half of the seventieth seven (week) of Daniel's prophecy.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE MINISTRY OF JESUS

HIS PREPARATION

Sunday, January 12—Isaiah 61:1-6.

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."—Lu. 4:18-19.

IT WAS THIS prophecy of Isaiah which Jesus read in the synagogue, Luke 4:18-19. He applied the prophecy to himself. Let us note both the ministry of Jesus and preparation therefor. He was anointed to preach—anointed with "the Spirit of the Lord God". Thus His preparation was complete. His proclamation was of good tidings to the meek. These good tidings were balm for the broken-hearted. He brought liberty to the captives, even the captives of sin; announced the opening of the prison house of death, in that He himself was the resurrection and the life; proclaimed "the acceptable year of the Lord". This was a time when God would once again accept of Israel's repentance, accept of Israel as a kingdom people; a time when the kingdom was again offered to them.

JESUS IN GALILEE

Monday, January 13—Matthew 4:17-25.

"Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."
Matthew 4:17.

Not in Judea, nor in its capitol city, Jerusalem, but in Galilee, did Jesus begin His proclamation from God to man. His first teachings directed others to follow Him. This was the kernel of truth included in every instruction of our Lord. To follow Jesus is the only God-appointed way for the individual or the race to be released from the dark jungles of sin and to escape unto the peaceful, sunlit fields of righteousness.

Immediately following this instruction Jesus began the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom of God. The kingdom was the one emphasized, repeated, much dwelt upon theme of our Lord. This theme includes every other teaching: salvation of the individual, as also of the nation; the resurrection; the second coming of the Master; the establishment of His throne; His world-wide sovereignty. These and all other teachings of our Lord are included in the one great subject, the kingdom of God.

JESUS IN NAZARETH

Tuesday, January 14—Luke 4:16-21.

"This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."
Luke 4:21.

In the city where His childhood had been spent, in the city where He had been known as the carpenter's son and at the beginning of His ministry, Jesus entered into the synagogue of the Jews, there occupying the position of teacher. He opened the sacred scroll to Isaiah 61 and read. Completing the reading, He folded the scroll, gave it to one by His side and sat down. Then with one word of explanation that applied the scripture to Himself, He said, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

Like the new blades of corn bursting forth from the ground, so His ministry in its beginning, as commenced in Nazareth and Galilee, was destined to a rapid growth and to a large fruitage in maturity.

JESUS IN CAPERNAUM

Wednesday, January 15—Luke 4:31-37.

"And they were astonished at his doctrine: for his word was with power."—Luke 4:32.

Back to the shore of Galilee in the city which He afterward made His home, Jesus continued His ministry. Having taught in words that greatly astonished the people, He testified to the accuracy of His word by works of wondrous miracles. The works which He wrought bore evidence of His authority. Throughout His life, Jesus' ministry both in word and work emphasized the goodness of God, His excellency, His sovereignty.

JESUS BEGINS HIS MIRACLES

Thursday, January 16—John 2:1-11.

"Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse: but thou hast kept back the good wine until now."—John 2:10.

Nestling among the hills a few short miles northeastwardly from the city of Nazareth was Cana, the scene of this first miracle of our Master. This miracle was more than a mere service to the people gathered together at the banquet. It revealed that He, through God, was given power over nature itself.

Some question miracles as being out of harmony with God's unbreakable laws of nature. This is not necessarily the case. The great law of gravity is overcome even by the little child who stoops down and lifts the toy from the floor. The mighty airship lifts itself against gravity far up into the clouds, as do the birds. In some way unexplainable to man God vested in Jesus ability, power to turn water into wine, accomplishing in a moment that which ordinarily would require perhaps a year for the vine to assimilate the water from the ground, carry it to its branches, develop and ripen fruit from which wine could be made.

It is this way that the miracles of the Savior testify of the God-given authority committed to Him.

JESUS CLEANSSES GOD'S TEMPLE

Friday, January 17—John 2:13-22.

"Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise."—John 2:16.

Since the days of Moses the temple had been God's abiding place in the midst of His people. It was there that He might be approached by the high priests; it was from thence that His words of blessing were frequently proclaimed to the people. The Passover service required the gathering together of the Jews from every region. Having gathered, they were required to offer a lamb. Profiteers were also present, not only to sell lambs at exorbitant prices, but to charge exorbitant rates of exchange on money which these people brought from distant lands. They compelled those who would worship God to pay excessively for the privilege of so doing. It was this unjust practice in merchandising which our Savior condemned.

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Saturday, January 18—Luke 5:27-32.

"They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."—Luke 5:31.

As a medical man goes to the bedside of one who is prostrate even with the most dreaded disease, he does so that he may give of his strength and ability unto the one who lies in need. The physician qualifies himself purposely that he may minister not to the hale and hearty, but to the weak and to those overcome. The secret of our Savior's life before man is that He answered the Father's call and accepted of those qualifications which especially fitted Him to raise the fallen and to cheer the faint. The way to raise the sinner from his sin is to go where the sinner is, leading him from the way of sin to the way of righteousness.

WHAT A PITY THAT THE HOME should have fallen into such disrepute as it seems to have done today. Many of the virtuous characteristics of the past are sadly lacking now, and as a result, its foundation seems shattered and broken. We almost look in vain for the faithful homemaker and homelover of the past. The present trend is away from the home. In many places it seems to be only a place to eat and sleep. Modern life was born in haste and it is to blame for the present condition of our homes. As a result our present institutions are not built upon a solid foundation. Hence the members of the home have suffered.

The result of the voice that has been lifted up as a cry of alarm has been feeble indeed. But to those who are willing to leave all the glory and glimmer of our day behind, there may still be heard that "still small voice", like the voice of a good shepherd calling us to "walk in the old paths" if we would find rest for our souls. God's ways are always best.—Mrs. H. H. Kent.

"Receive my instruction, and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold. For wisdom is better than rubies; and all things that may be desired are not to be compared to it. My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver. I lead in the way of righteousness."—Proverbs 8:10, 11, 20.

WHAT ARE TRUE VALUES?

FROM TIME TO TIME we come in contact with incidents in life which result in some of the thoughts given on last week's page, and we have continued to think this week along the same question, "What is worth while?"

What does a career in life mean? Is fame worth the price? We asked some Illinois Bereans these things and we are sharing a few of their thoughts with you. Perhaps we shall later take up this subject again, and in the meantime we would welcome any expressions from other Bereans as to this question of so much importance to young people.

HOW FREQUENTLY it is that young people are called upon to face the problems of which side of life should be pursued! A young man may have ability in some certain line and may realize that by pursuing that particular course he could make a prominent place for himself in the world. But it is possible that he may also realize that to make such success he would have to sacrifice much of the simplicity of life, the enjoyment of home and family, and the giving of proper time and thought to the best things which life affords. Here then is a real problem for the young man.

Likewise do we find thousands of girls facing a decision that is just as important. Perhaps a young woman has talent that she knows could by years of work and study be developed to the place where the world would recognize her. On the other hand she knows that to follow out such a career would prevent her from being a wife and mother and giving time and attention that would be necessary to make a true home. And that to many a girl is a real problem.

After all is done and said, however, the decision should not be hard to make after a little quiet thinking. What are the worth while things in life after all? The one side makes its appeal to the desire for worldly honor or success; the other from the standpoint of loving service. And the latter always returns the larger dividends in happiness.

Even with men he is not the greatest who makes the most outstanding success in his profession, but he who makes true friends and serves mankind most. And among women there is no calling on earth so high and noble as that of being a wife and mother to maintain a clean, loving home and to mold the minds of childhood toward true manhood and womanhood.

HECTOR, MINNESOTA

We have been glad to learn recently of the faithfulness of a little group up in Minnesota who, although few in number, have been meeting perseveringly for years. There are two classes in the society at Hector, consisting of nine members, and they meet weekly in different homes.

The sincerity and faithfulness of this group of Bereans are worthy of emulation by some of us who have fewer obstacles to contend with than they have. Our prayers are that God may lend courage and strength for their continuation in faith. We would be glad to hear often from the Hector classes.

We gain spiritual strength and encouragement for our work through associating with those of like faith.

—Sam Bottolf, Louisiana.

"HAVE YOU EVER HAD your pathway suddenly turned sunshiny because of a cheerful, encouraging word or smile? Have you ever wondered if this could be the same world, because somebody has been unexpectedly appreciative and kind to you? You can make today the same for somebody else."

"Be a friend. You don't need money,
You need a disposition sunny;
Just the wish to help another
To get along some way or other;
Just a kindly hand extended
Out to one who's unbefriended;
Just the will to give or lend—
This will make you someone's friend."

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY

IN PALESTINE, where Jesus lived was a beautiful lake set in the midst of rugged mountains. It was called the Sea of Galilee. One day as Jesus walked beside this beautiful lake He saw two brothers, Andrew and Peter, casting their nets into the water to catch fish. They were lowly, unlearned men, but kind-hearted and clean-minded. Jesus wanted them for helpers in the great work He was about to begin—His ministry. He knew they were dependable as far as human beings could be and trustworthy, grateful.

So Jesus stopped and said to these two men, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." Now, they did not stop to ask Him to explain what He meant or what they were to receive, but immediately left their nets and followed Jesus. Wasn't that wonderful faith?

Walking on a little way, Jesus saw two other brothers, James and John, and their father, Zebedee, sitting in their boat mending their nets. Jesus called James and John to come with Him; and like the other two fishermen, they left their boat and even their father and followed Jesus.

With these humble helpers and others chosen elsewhere, Jesus went about Galilee teaching in the synagogues or churches, preaching the gospel of the kingdom and healing everyone that was sick or diseased. So much joy and cheer were brought to these people that they told others and these others brought their sick and afflicted to Jesus. They came from all over Syria, and Jesus healed everyone of them. Crowds came from Galilee, from Decapolis, Jerusalem, Judea, from beyond the Jordan River. Was that not a great work?

We, too, can be helpers in this work. Jesus wants us to bring our troubles to Him and He will help us bear them. And we can help bring others to Him and help others bear their burdens. We can tell of the kingdom and the great healing power of the loving Master. What else can we do?

THINK!

Are we as ready to follow Jesus as the fishermen were?
Do we have as much faith?
Are we as willing to help?

WINTER PRAYER

Loving Friend, oh, hear our prayer!
Take into Thy tender care
All the leaves and flowers that sleep

In their white beds, covered deep;
Shelter from the wintry storm
All Thy snow-birds; keep them warm.
Help me in my heart to thank Thee;
Help me with my lips to praise Thee;
May I to each playmate be
Kind, as Thou hast been to me.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Trace the outline of the Lake of Galilee.
2. Find on a map the places mentioned in the story.
3. Read about the choosing of the other disciples. Learn their names.
4. Make a list of all the ways you can be helpers for Jesus.

WHO SAID?

"They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick."

FACT

Gospel means "good news".
Apostle means "one sent forth".

NATURE

1. Representations of pomegranates adorned the robe of the high priest.
2. What bird was first sent out by Noah?

Hebrews 10:23—"He is faithful that promised."

BLOCK I.

DEPENDABLE

Are you dependable?
Can people depend upon you?
Do you keep promises?
If you say you will do something, do you always do it, if possible?

Some people talk much about what they will do, and thoughtlessly make promises, but when the time comes they fail to appear, or find excuses to cover their failure. Let us try to do the things we undertake the best that we can.

"I would not want Marie or Jack
To talk 'bout me, behind my back.
And so I must not talk, you see,
That way 'bout Jack or 'bout Marie."

LESSON III.—January 19, 1930

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY

Matthew 4:12-25

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 9:2-7

GOLDEN TEXT

Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.—Matthew 4:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Comprehensive Program of Jesus.

Basic Truth. That God's words might be fulfilled.

Outline. I. His Ministry Four-fold. II. Jesus reveals to the People the Advantages of the Kingdom. III. His Welcome by the People.

I. His Ministry Four-fold. From Matt. 4:12 to 7:29 the ministry of Jesus proclaims the kingdom; from 8:1 to 16:20 the King is revealed; 16:21 to 20:34 reveals the rejection of the King; while 21:1 to 26:35 shows the rejection of the kingdom.

II. Jesus Reveals to the People the Advantages of the Kingdom. Jesus began His work in a far off corner of darkness. His work at once illuminated the people and revealed to them benefits and blessings in the name of God not previously recognized. By that time the light became so bright that multitudes even from far off regions and from Jerusalem, the Holy City, hastened unto Him, following Him from place to place. He was not only preaching by word of mouth, but also by service and accomplishment impossible to be denied. He announced it as the gospel of the kingdom; He urged all to repent. Only by such repentance could they accept, at heart, the truths which He taught and worked. It was a marvelous demonstration of the benefits of God's hand and authority on the people. No manner of personal ill excluded them from the full benefits of Heaven's kingdom.

III. His Welcome by the People. He who would secure the applause of the people had but to touch them beneficently, omitting all reprimand. So far Jesus had only benefited them. Jews and Gentiles alike brought their ailing ones to Him and whole multitudes journeyed with Him from place to place. Had He continued in this course, making no conditional requirements, He might have covered the earth in His journeys and never been molested. The people thought ever so little beyond that which immediately benefited their persons. They were glad to welcome the fruits of His word, but later showed themselves loath to pay the price requisite for the continuance of His benefits.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Flying Kites. The boy who would hang his kite far up against the blue of heaven must first make preparation. He must gather together all materials, assemble them, and balance them. He must then discern the proper wind and proceed.

Jesus was to sound the good news of the kingdom throughout the arch of heaven, echoing to all the earth. His first necessity was to gather workers, prepare His announcements, and then meet the currents of logic over which His eternal truths would rise and poise triumphantly.

What was true of the Master is true of His disciple. Like boys ardently zealous with the prospect before them, so the Christian should zealously set himself unto the task of being a true disciple of his Lord. He, too, should gather his material and seek the winds of life, through and over which he may cause to rise the great truths of the Savior.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 4:17.

The "kingdom of heaven" is one of the favorite expressions of Matthew. He uses it thirty-two times and it is not used by the other gospel writers. The Diaglott translation of this is, "Reform; for the ROYAL MAJESTY of the HEAVENS has approached"; and truly Christ was among them, proclaiming the kingdom.

The reason for their repenting was that the kingdom was near at hand in that the Ruler of the kingdom was among them. The burden of Christ's message was the kingdom in its different phases and the preparation for it that they might enter in.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Savior of the World.

"The Kingdom at Hand" in word and deed was Jesus' message as He traveled from city to city. It presented the grace of God working victoriously through the Christ against every phase of evil among men. It therefore carried with it the conviction that Jesus is the Savior of the world.

To-day this same message, recorded in the written Word, carries with it this same conviction, but how fearfully and meagerly the church enters into it. It cants about Jesus, the Savior of the world, into whose hands all power in heaven and earth has been given, but it keeps its eyes on the past and present work of Jesus, and, seeing few who have been redeemed and many who have gone down abject victims to the forces of evil, its cant has no conviction.

The church does not enter into the conviction of the message of the kingdom at hand. It does not know the assurance and joy of worshipping a Christ fully equal to the work assigned to Him. The church believes in a pleading Christ, not in a victorious aggressor, as God's opposer to the forces of evil. She believes in a Christ who accepts colossal defeat at the hands of the flesh in the mighty struggle between the Spirit and the flesh. Under such a "Captain" of salvation the church cannot be otherwise than a shameful failure both in her individual and in her group life.

Hear to the message of the kingdom at hand and know Jesus the Savior of the world gloriously victorious over all that is of and in the flesh order of the world. Herein lies the greatest of all motive powers to spiritual service.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: How Jesus Began His Ministry.

Jesus had passed through the preparation days of childhood and youth. He had reached the days of manhood and was entering upon His life's work. He knew that His was no little task in life. He realized that He was born for a great mission, for He was to be the Savior of men. Did all this knowledge turn His head?

Read Matt. 4:18-22 and find out what was His first great undertaking. Because He knew the importance of His work, He chose helpers to assist Him. Can you name them? From what class mainly did He select them? What was His reason for this?

After choosing these helpers, He immediately set out on His mission to the world. What was it? Matt. 4:23-25. Three wonderful activities are named—teaching, preaching and healing. Why did one naturally follow the other in Jesus' program? Why could He get the common people to listen to His teachings so readily?

What was the gospel of the kingdom named in Matt. 4:23? Is the healing that Jesus accomplished a part of that same message? Will there ever come a time when not only a few from Galilee and some from beyond the Jordan will feel His healing hand, but when all who believe will experience the miracle of His power?—M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Jesus Begins His Work.

Shortly after His baptism and temptation, Jesus began His life's work. He knew He had a great task before Him. In order that He might be able to do all the things that were necessary for Him to do, He must have some helpers.

One day as Jesus was walking along the shore of the sea of Galilee He saw two men. These brothers, Peter and Andrew, were fishing with a net in the sea. They had just cast their net into the sea when Jesus said, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men."

No doubt this seemed rather strange to these men. "Fishers of men," what could it mean? This is what Jesus meant. They were to go out and teach men of Him and His coming kingdom. They left their nets at once and followed Jesus.

Jesus' work is not yet completed. He still needs helpers. Let us all be helpers with Jesus to teach people of Him and His great kingdom which is to come.—V. C. T.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALIFORNIA

Bro. J. E. Hammond of Anaheim and Sr. Ruby Smead of Los Angeles were married on December 14. They are making their home at 735 Zeyn St., Anaheim, Calif. A host of friends join in wishing them both many years of happiness and usefulness in the Master's service.

The prevailing opinion seems to be that the Christmas program given December 22 was the best ever given by the Los Angeles Sunday School. Much credit is due Sr. Marsh in the efficient manner in which she drilled the children.

Bro. Lewis Rahn and family who have been sojourning in Sacramento for several months past have decided to try the climate in the southern part of the state and are locating in El Centro.

Bro. George Rahn is moving his family to El Centro. The church will miss them very much.

Bro. Norman McLeod and family spent the holiday vacation in and around Los Angeles.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, of Inglewood, a son, November 3, who will be known as John Milton Taylor. Mrs. Taylor was formerly Sr. Rena Blackwell, daughter of Sr. Emily Blackwell, of 211 E. 29th Street, Los Angeles.

Bro. and Sr. Howard Moore and little son, Dean, of Corning, California, some six hundred miles north of Los Angeles, were in the city for a short stay and were able to attend our Rally Day services. We rejoiced to have them with us again.

The last two items should have appeared in the issue of November 26, but through an oversight were omitted. We are sorry for the error, but appreciate greatly the courtesy of our many readers in just such instances.—M. G.

The Golden Rule Home family are all reporting good health at this writing.

Correspondents of Bro. R. H. Judd should take notice that his address is changed to 111 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ontario.

About twenty of the Rockford, Illinois, brethren gathered last Friday evening in the W. C. T. U. hall at 1904 N. Main St., for regular weekly worship, Bro. F. L. Austin speaking to them. These brethren have recently rented this hall with a view to banding themselves together for a larger effort in Rockford. We pray God's blessings to attend them.

If the Lord so wills, Bro. F. E. Siple will be with the Ripley (Illinois) church for next Saturday night and Sunday, January 11 and 12. On Friday night preceding he will stop in Kewanee to speak to the brethren there.

Sr. M. A. Woodward may now be addressed at 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Illinois, where she is making her home for the winter. We are glad to state that her health is much improved.

Friends from St. Louis, Mo., Ripley, Kewanee, Chicago, Rockford, Pearl City, Adeline, Freeport, Illinois, and other points were in attendance at the recent funeral of Sr. F. E. Siple at Dixon, Illinois. The pastor of the Christian Church kindly proffered the use of their larger church building for the service. The offer was thankfully accepted and the house was filled with friends extending their heartfelt sympathies to Bro. Siple and his family.

BERTIE ELLEN SIPLE

Bertie Ellen Siple, beloved wife of Bro. F. E. Siple, came to the close of her too brief life at her home in Dixon early Sunday morning, December 29, 1929.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Smith of Adrian, Michigan. She was raised in a Christian home, and after giving her heart to God in girlhood lived a true Christian life to the end.

Sr. Siple was a beautiful wife, an ideal mother, a loyal worker in the church. Although her life ended early she had given her strength and talents in faithful service to her home and church, so that the memory of her will be sweet and her influence will be felt for years to come.

Besides her husband and children she leaves her mother and one brother in addition to numerous other relatives and a multitude of friends.

She sleeps. May her sleep not be long till the resurrection morn.

IN APPRECIATION

To the scores of brothers and sisters, loved ones and friends throughout the country who, in our period of deepest sorrow, so beautifully expressed their sympathy by telegrams, flowers, letters, and otherwise we wish to express our sincere appreciation. Our faith in God and the love and trust of the brotherhood are our consolation at this time.

F. E. Siple and Children.

The Golden Rule Greenhouse did a very pleasing business through the month of December. The cloudy weather of nearly three weeks' duration prohibited the bloom of carnations and flowers in general for the Christmas season, and purchases had to be made elsewhere in order to supply the trade. The Greenhouse did a good business in potted Poinsettias, cyclamen, lilies of the valley, primroses, ferns, etc.

BIBLE TRAINING CLASS

The Bible Training Class took up its work again yesterday morning after the holiday vacation. Since October 1, the Bible study has covered the first four books of the Bible. An effort is being made to make a study of Deuteronomy and Joshua by the end of the first semester. Beginning with the second semester the Bible study will commence with Matthew and an effort will be made to go through the Gospel and Acts by the close of the class year.

In the History class a study has been pursued of the four universal kingdoms of ancient history and the lesser kingdoms covering the period from a prehistoric date, 800 A. D. A study of church history will be taken up in the second semester. Good progress has also been made in English and grammar.

We are very much pleased with the earnest study in all departments that is being given by the members of the class.

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Bro. Austin:

This Twenty Dollars will be our Thank Offering. Sorry it is so belated. We are much pleased with the "make up" of The Restitution Herald. We enjoy its pages. May the New Year bring you health, happiness, and prosperity.

As ever, yours in the faith,
Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Eychaner
303 Zack St., Tampa, Florida.

Elder N. H. Geiselman has just closed a series of five lectures on the Signs of the Times given in the Lynn Avenue Advent Church, this city. Bro. Geiselman is the best lecturer on the above mentioned subject that the writer has ever heard. He surely knows the Bible and especially from a prophetic standpoint. The great prophecies as brought out by the speaker herald the soon coming King; each and every prophetic fulfillment was stressed and the hearers were held spell-bound as the great stream of language flowed from the lips of this true man of God. Bro. Geiselman has made a life study of prophecy and is able to deliver it as few people can. I have had the privilege of hearing him on four different occasions along the same line and each time he has brought down to date those things that have transpired in the meantime. I am writing this thinking that there might be some other church about over the country who would be interested in this line of thought. If any who chance to read this article are interested I would advise them to communicate with Elder N. H. Geiselman, No. 212 West Hillsborough Avenue, Tampa, Florida, and no doubt some arrangement can be made to have these important lectures given. May the hand of God rest with Bro. Geiselman in preserving him to carry forward this judgment message.

C. M. Miley, Box 212, Tampa, Fla.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Illinois, under the act of March 1879.

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample Copy, Free.

Change of Address.—When ordering a change of address be sure to send us both old and new addresses.

To Stop Paper.—It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

Receipts.—The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

THINGS THAT ARE WORTH WHILE

By Dorothy Krogh

The English class of the National Bible Institution Training Class was asked to write a theme on "Things That Are Worth While," illustrating certain rules in grammar. One of these is given here, and we hope it will be interesting to our readers.—M. G.

THERE ARE MANY THINGS in this life that are worth while, some things more than others. The thing that to me is the most worth while is leading a Christian life. The path of a Christian is often rough but it is worth our while to travel it. Having crossed the rough spots, we will receive our reward. The hardships, although they may discourage us at the time, we often find were for our own good.

Leading a Christian life is accepting Christ and serving Him. In leading such a life, we shall find that the things we must do to serve Christ are worth while in themselves. One of the things which are necessary for us to do to serve Christ is to serve others. Giving a helping hand to one who we think needs it; being kind to whoever comes our way; cheering someone who looks sad, these are all good ways in which to serve Christ. If we can do something to make life happier for those with whom we come in contact the joy resulting well repays the effort. The happiness we receive from the knowledge that we are serving Christ, as well as the joy of serving others, makes it worth while. This happiness is far greater than any pleasure one receives in gratifying his own selfish desires. Everyone who wishes to find true happiness must spend his time doing things for others, things that are worth while.

THE UNTIRING GOD

OVER AND OVER, again and again, God has extended His unbounded mercies and kindnesses to one generation after another. Man would weary. The school teacher, instructing the same grade year after year, one year to one class, the next year to a new class that has been advanced into her room, wearies in the course of a score or two of years. But God has been doing thus since the beginning of time. One generation follows another generation in rapid succession. Every new-born, new-growing generation needs the same tenderesses and kindnesses from the Father. Each reveals weaknesses, needs, like unto those preceding. God in His untiring, always patient love and kindness waits upon each oncoming generation with the same tender service. As we start into 1930 the Father must repeat again and again what He has so often in the past, and yet His love endureth forever; His righteousness is everlasting. He serves on; He rests not. No single generation, no single day finds the Father out on vacation allowing His subjects to drift without His watch care.

Let us drink deeply this marvelous truth. Let us approach the Father much. Let us listen carefully to detect His will, His wish in us. And when finished may 1930 bear the record of true, deep loyalty and devotion of you and me toward God.—F. L. A.

Money and material gain will shift as the wave-swept sand; power falters and falls from an aging hand. They mean nothing to us when our eyes are wet. It is home, and friends, and the good we do that are more to us than the wealth of kings.

A CLEAN WHITE PAGE

By Mary A. Gesin

NINETEEN HUNDRED and TWENTY-NINE, with all of its joys, all of its sorrows, all of its failures, and all of its successes is only a memory. We cannot recall one moment of it; we cannot add to nor subtract from the sum total of its activities. We can only profit by its lessons as we reflect upon its varied scenes.

A spotless page has opened up before us, a New Year, clear of imprint, and rich in possibilities, luminous and entrancing, alluring our footsteps forward into its hours, days and months. Not one of us knows what the future holds, how much of sorrow or joy, except that it is filled with fresh opportunities.

Let us steal a few moments at the end of the busy day to reflect upon life and to ask ourselves some questions. Perhaps we can discover some of our unexpected weaknesses and find a hidden strength.

First, What do I do with my time? Do I fritter it away in unimportant things? Do I keep busy doing nothing? Do I lavish every spare moment on myself, pursuing my own inclinations? Or do I decide what are the worthwhile things in life, the things that make for clean, upright, Christian character, and choose them, disregarding the vain and empty honors that the world might bestow?

Second, Do I choose my closest companions wisely? Our friends are not thrust upon us; we seek them out of our many acquaintances because of their appeal to our inmost natures. Do I choose those who appeal to the best that is in me, those who inspire me to noble deeds and pure actions? Or do I select my friends because I crave worldly popularity, empty social honor or questionable pleasure?

Third, Am I honest and fair with myself and my friends? Do I frequently look down into my inmost heart and ask myself this searching question? Do I weed out the flaws in my own character before I try to discover those of my friends? Do I yield to them the credit that is due them for unselfish service, without a trace of envy or malice?

Fourth, Am I courageous in the face of difficulties or sorrows? Do I bear pain bravely, not physical pain, but the denials that life brings to all of us, the things that we think would make life complete, but which are often denied us by an all-wise and all-loving Father? Do I seek to see what the future holds, or am I content to bravely take each day as it come to me, trusting Him who watches over all?

Fifth, Am I kind, considerate and courteous to all with whom I come in contact? Do I do the little things that sometimes we think are too trivial to consider, that bring a smile to a sad face, that cheer the lonely, that lift the burden on shoulders already bowed down, that mean so little to me and so much to another? Do I forget to tell by word and deed my love for those nearest and dearest to me?

Sixth, Do I cheerfully take my part in God's service? Do I gladly give up my own inclinations and desires and serve Him by serving others? Do I do the insignificant things in church work, the things that no one notices, just as willingly as the bigger things that bring the praise of all? Or do I shift the responsibility upon shoulders already weighed down with duties, leaving me free to seek my own pleasure?

Seventh, Do I daily draw near unto the Source of all strength? Do I acknowledge before Him my weaknesses and ask Him for strength to overcome? Do I go to that never failing Friend for help and consolation when life seems just a little too hard for me? Do I seek His guidance and leadership in all the affairs of life?

Let me determine during this New Year just opening to my vision to occupy my time in the best things of life, selecting my work and my recreation with a view to building upright Christian character. Let me choose companions who will aid me most in attaining these ideals. Let me be honest and brave in every experience, considerate and courteous to all. Let me cheerfully assume responsibility in the service of God, doing just the things for which I am most fitted, harmoniously cooperating with others in their departments. And above all let me daily draw near unto the One who never fails, who is ever listening to hear His children call.

If I do not fail on the seventh point, I will be very apt to succeed on all the others, for He is the only true Pattern and Guide. If I earnestly endeavor to take the Savior as my Example in all things, then the record I will write for nineteen hundred and thirty will be one of which I need not be ashamed. Dotted though it may be by weakness, it will shine forth clear and radiant because of a steadfast purpose and an abiding faith.

If we'd notice little pleasures
As we notice little pains;
If we'd quite forget our losses,
And remember all our gains;
If we'd look for people's virtues,
And their faults refuse to see,
What a comforting, delightful,
Cheering place this world would be!

THE ETERNAL NOW

By G. Eldred Marsh

WITH ITS JOYS AND SORROWS, its successes and failures, its riches and its poverty, its good and its evil, the year of grace, 1929 has run its course and passed into the infinite ages of the past!

Did you ever stand on the observation platform of a rapidly moving train and watch the receding landscape as it swept by in an ever-changing panorama? For a moment you saw distinctly the translucent wings of a butterfly shimmering in the sunlight as the insect fluttered from flower to flower, but it was lost instantly from your sight as the train sped on! You observed a beautiful, verdure-clad hill in the distance whose peculiar formation caught and held your attention as you passed. You would have been glad to have lingered a little beside that singing brook over which your train rumbled so speedily; but you could not!

Nothing but memory of vanished beauty, of cool, green vistas, of softly tinkling water bubbling over the glittering sand remained to assure you of the reality of those scenes upon which you had gazed with so much pleasure! And so it is with life—the life we live, for life is made up of instants, moments, seconds, infinitesimal fractions of time. And it is only THIS INSTANT that we actually live. A moment ago we were alive; a moment hence we may be alive; but it is only NOW—this instant—that we may be said to actually LIVE!

Permit me to explain. We have control over our lives but from one instant to the next. The life we lived an hour ago has passed forever beyond our reach. We can no longer govern our words or actions during one second that lies in the past. It is gone, never to return.

Neither have we any control over the moment that lies just beyond the NOW. It is quite as remote from us so far as our power to regulate it is concerned as is the moment already fled. But now—(Continued on page 245)

THE JUST SHALL LIVE

"THE JUST SHALL LIVE by faith" is Paul's quotation from Habakkuk 2:4. This word "just" is the same word which Paul uses where the English translation uses the word "righteous"; i. e., "just" and "righteous" are two English words used to translate one Greek word. Therefore the text might well read—the righteous shall live by faith.

Two important points are contained in these six words. First, the righteous shall live. God has so ordained. It was unrighteousness, sin, which introduced death and which has continued death. In spite of such introduction God still avers that the "just shall live". Second, they live by faith. Caution must be observed and the word "by" correctly understood. This little word has a great variety of meanings. We can get the meaning intended here by going back and finding the little word which Habakkuk used and again which Paul used. It means, as originating in, and proceeding from. That is to say, the righteousness referred to in Rom. 1:16 is righteousness that originates in and proceeds from faith—as the oak proceeds from the acorn. In harmony with this Paul says, "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth". Belief, faith, is the exercise of the individual. From it God develops for His own use and for man's benefit, righteousness.

"The just (the righteous) shall live".

NONE RIGHTEOUS

"There is none righteous, no, not one."—Rom. 3:10.

"Not one is just—not even one."—Concordant.

"There is none righteous, not even one."—Diaglott.

RIGHTEOUSNESS IS THE NAME GIVEN to one's accomplishment. He who accomplishes righteousness and never accomplishes the reverse is righteous. But none so live, for he that offends in one point has scarred his life with the imprint of unrighteousness. Therefore Paul quotes Psa. 14:1 and reveals God's wisdom that, "There is none righteous, no, not one". From whence then can man become righteous? It is an all important question, for "the righteous live". Paul has clearly answered this question in Rom. 4.

He says, v. 3, "Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness". Abraham's faith was imputed by God as righteousness. Notice well that Abraham's faith, belief, was genuine. Do not read into the text the thought that it was imputed faith. It was imputed righteousness but the faith was a fact, it was present. And God "counted", "reckoned", that faith "for righteousness".

"For righteousness". Not that the faith was righteousness. Such is not the thought conveyed by the Greek original. Rather, that the faith led out toward righteousness with a view of reaching it and attaining it, and God imputed to Abraham that, because of his faith, tested faith, he had reached, attained unto that which he aimed for—righteousness. Though he undoubtedly erred by the way, though he missed the mark, yet in view of his faith God figured, computed that he was just.

Likewise God reckons righteousness unto us; reckons us righteous, just, "if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead". Rom. 4:24. The gospel reveals this righteousness imputed by God, Rom. 1:17. It opens the way to man for belief in Christ, Rom. 1:16, and becomes "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth".

A SEAL OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

COMMENTING UPON THE LIFE of Abraham, Paul by inspiration wrote in Romans 4:11 that, "he received the sign of circumcision, the seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised". A seal is not only a sign of approval and acceptance but also a token of assurance. In Abraham's case circumcision was the sign. It was also the seal. It was a seal of his righteousness. In no sense was it a seal of his faith. Paul does not so state. He is emphatic in the statement that circumcision was the seal of righteousness to one who, like all others, was not in himself righteous. It is for this reason that the seal was most appropriate, to assure him of that which none other at his time enjoyed, viz., righteousness credited to him by God. That righteousness, Paul said, was the "righteousness of the faith". That is, it was the righteousness that sprang forth from, out of, by way of faith. These are genitive phrases and show the origin of the righteousness, viz., from faith. Verse 13 is even more explicit: "The righteousness of faith". This may properly be worded, faith-righteousness.

God's provided seal to Abraham, His imprint upon him was circumcision. To the Christian that circumcision, i. e., the open seal of God, is baptism. Col. 2:11, 12.

FORTY-TWO GENERATIONS

The following personal letter was received from Brother C. W. Dean, of Norfolk, Virginia, in comment upon a brief paragraph which the writer recently gave through The Herald. There is too much of thought and study in the letter for it to stop at the door of one person only and it is therefore being published in full that Herald readers may be able to take up the points and study them each for himself.—Ed.

REFERRING TO YOUR comment, "Forty-two Generations", it is more than a coincidence that those generations are evenly grouped. I have often pondered over this recording as compared with that of Luke 3. The account of Matthew is the royal lineage of the Son of David as well as the title to the land granted to Abraham. In contrast to the genealogy given by Luke, we are given the actual physical descent by the male line to Joseph the husband of Mary, the mother of our Lord. The three sections bring us three distinct phases of rule and the failure of each. First we have the theocracy until David which ended when the people clamored for a king, 1 Sam. 8:6-22. Then comes the period of the kingdom which was a series of failures until the Babylonian exile. Since then the nations ruled Israel until the birth of the Messiah, when they were under the Roman yoke, a dismal descent which proved conclusively that no male issue of this line would ever be competent to sit upon the throne of Messiah.

David was the greatest of the kings, yet his son Solomon was a living-evidence of his terrible sin. And so degenerate did the line of his sons become that at the time of the exile Jechoniah drew upon himself the curse of God. Jer. 22:30. Neither Joseph nor any of his progenitors since the exile were eligible to the throne. If Christ were his natural Son, He too, would be debarred. The Messiah cannot be of the seed of Jechoniah, hence the necessity of the virgin birth. Being begotten by God, the sins of progenitors did not taint His blood and the curse of Coniah, Jer. 22:24, had no claim on Him. Yet as the Son of Joseph, He inherited all the honors of the house of David.

Between Joram and Ozias there were three kings, but their names were blotted out according to the law, Deut. 20:20. They introduced idolatry into Israel. Ahaziah (or Azariah or Jehoahaz) walked in the ways of Ahab and was slain by Jehu, 2 Chron. 22:3-9. Joash served Jehovah as long as the priest Jehoiada lived but afterward the princes of Judah served idols. He slew the son of Jehoiada who remonstrated, and the servants of King Joash slew him and would not bury him in the tombs of the kings. Amaziah also bowed down to the idols of the sons of Seir and was slain by the people of Jerusalem, 2 Chron. 25:15-28.

Jehoiakim (Shallum) is omitted from the list of kings because he refused the warnings of Jeremiah, forsook the covenant, and turned to other gods, Jer. 22:1-8. In Chronicles mention is made of his abominations or idolatry which were found on him, 2 Chron. 36:8, having made marks on his flesh as a sign of his allegiance to other gods, Lev. 19:28. Hence he was denied human burial and his name is blotted out of the register of kings, Deut. 29:18-21. Jechoniah's (Jehoiachin's) name is shortened to Coniah, Jer. 22:24. Jehovah withdrew His support from him; he is not included in the line of kings and none of his seven sons, 1 Chron. 3:17-18, succeeded to the throne. As no man of his seed can prosper sitting on the throne of David, yet the regal rights are in his line hence Messiah must be the Son, but not his seed.

In each group, Matt. 1:17, there are fourteen generations. From Abraham to and including David are fourteen. From David to and including Josiah are fourteen. From Jechoniah to and including Christ are fourteen. This Hebrew system of enumeration emphasized true spiritual values. David as the most important progenitor is named twice. By substituting an event in place of a man for the link between the second and third group, Jechoniah is degraded to a place among the private persons of the third group. As a result the twenty kings of Judah are divided into two groups of ten each, the first seven are counted, the last three blotted out.

In Luke the genealogy does not deal with birth or begetting, but with son-ship. Christ is here introduced when He arrives at manhood, and God himself claims Him as His Son. The pedigree of Luke 3:23-38 is not intended to prove Christ as a descendant of Adam, but rather to show that this line, through which He came in the flesh, was absolutely incapable of producing the Sinless One, apart from His divine Paternity. This genealogy gives us the seed of the woman who shall crush the head of the serpent, Gen. 3:15. Unlike Matthew's pedigree, it does not trace the physical male ancestry, but the legal line, through Mary, back to Adam.

In Luke Christ is first proclaimed as the Son of God; then He is shown to be the legal (not natural) son of Joseph. Joseph is not the offspring of Heli, whose son he is said to be. According to Matthew 1:16 Joseph was begotten by Jacob. Joseph was the son-in-law by his marriage with Mary, Heli's daughter. As Heli had no son of his own, his allotment passed to his daughter's husband, Numbers 27:8, and so Joseph is the legal son of Heli and the natural son of Jacob. The lines meet again in Zerubbabel and Salathiel, Luke 1:27, Matt. 1:12, just after the captivity. The line of Nathan died out in Neri so that Jechoniah's son Salathiel was also the legal son and heir of Neri. It is then traced back to the second son (surviving son) of Bathsheba the wife of David, from David back to Abraham which corresponds with Matthew's genealogy.

The Seed was not to be the Seed of man, "Adam," but the seed of the woman. This lesson is emphasized again when the male line dies out in Neri, and the allotment passes through a woman to a legal son, and this is repeated when Joseph becomes the son of Heli through his wife, Mary. Not a single man in the whole list was capable of generating the One who was to bruise the serpent's head. It is a broken and sinful pedigree. He could not come from the loins of man, hence He is not or was not in Adam. It was absolutely necessary that He should be begotten, not of man, nor by the will of the flesh, but of God, and that a virgin should bring forth Emmanuel.

BITTER BEFORE SWEET

By Cecil Smead

THERE IS AN ORDER FOR EVERYTHING in this great universe, from the smallest atom of matter to the greatest orb of heaven. God has ordered it all. He has laid down certain rules and regulations to govern everything. A certain cell of a certain species of plant will perform its certain duties whatever they may be, and will reproduce countless other cells exactly like the first, all in accordance with God's plan and purpose and His set rule of procedure.

The sun follows a certain pathway with the planets revolving around it. What holds the planets to the sun? Why do they not fly away into space to become frozen ice balls? Or, on the other hand, what keeps the sun from pulling them to itself to melt them in fervent heat? The answer is, it is God's law and order. He has ordered it to be that way and it is that way.

Now if the eternal, immutable God of heaven has laid down set rules for everything else, why should He not lay down certain rules for the guidance of His people? He has laid them down, and His people must conform to them.

God's people are those who, having studied His Word, have come to have faith in Him and are willing and ready to follow His commandments. After they have obeyed God and accepted Christ, then God will mold them to fit them for that glorious life which He has promised for His people. He has an order for the molding of His people, too. We can dig that order out by a study of the Scriptures.

God has been molding His people from the foundation of the world. Take the notable example of the children of Israel who were the chosen nation of God. A study of their history will show that God has continually been purging and cleansing them from sin. He would give them hard and bitter experiences to contend with. Then when they had mastered those bitter experiences, He would reward them by giving them the sweet experiences, peace and safety. It always seemed to work that way throughout their history. They were given bitter water before they received the sweet wells of water. They endured the hardships of the wild, desert wilderness before He gave them the land that flowed with milk and honey. They are now scattered among the nations, but their redemption draws nigh.

Even Christ, the perfect Man, was not an exception to that rule. He was sinless himself yet He bore the sins of many, wore the crown of thorns, was nailed to the cross, and suffered and died. Now He is sitting at the right hand of God in heaven, exalted above everyone else and with glory inconceivable. He it is who will rule this old earth with a rod of iron, judging and rebuking many people, and He went from the cross of shame to crown of glory.

Now let us consider ourselves. We say we are God's people. Do we bear hardships unflinchingly, looking toward the result which is the upbuilding of our character to the end that we may become part of that glorious gathering of God's chosen people which is yet in the future? Do we believe, and act accordingly, that if we endure tribulation now we will be blessed in the future? If we do so believe and act, we are God's own children as Paul states in the twelfth chapter of his letter to the Hebrews. Whom the Father loveth, He chasteneth. Divine principle or regulation for the training of God's people is this: to give them the bitter before the sweet; the cross before the crown; and tribulation before glory.

WHEN WILL THE LORD COME?

Will He come in the solemn midnight,
When the world is wrapped in sleep?
While the church of Christ is slumbering,
Only angels vigil keep?
Will He come when sorrow steepeth
Thousand hearts in thrilling woe?
When the power of sin is deepest,
Darkening every home below?
Prepare your hearts, and make Him room,
At any time the Lord may come.

Will He come when glorious morning
Floods the earth with blaze of light;
Every prospect fair adorning,
Will the Lord appear in sight?
Will He come while men ignore Him,
Asking o'er their hoarded gold.
"Where's the promise of His coming?
All continues as of old."
Prepare your hearts, and make Him room,
At any time the Lord may come.

Will He tarry till the evening
When the shadows fall apace?
Will He turn their gloom to brightness
By the shining of His face?
Will He come while earth rejoices.
Gay with music, feast and dance,
Singing with a thousand voices,
Heeding not the Lord's advance?
Prepare your hearts, and make Him room,
At any time the Lord may come.

Will He come while war is slaying?
Will He come while mourners weep?
While ten thousand souls are praying,
Will the Lord His promise keep?
In the midnight, and the morning,
At the eventide and dawn,
Heed your Savior's words of warning—
"Watch," He saith, "I quickly come."
Prepare your hearts, and make Him room,
At any time the Lord may come.

STUDYING TO DIVIDE THE WORD

By F. L. Austin

TO RIGHTLY DIVIDE THE WORD is the most difficult task of a Bible student and it must be carefully done. To subdue one's own preconceived thought and to receive the Word as God wishes to have it understood is the effort of the writer. Wherein I fail in this—and it is impossible but that all finite ones fail in part—it is unintentional and unknown. Furthermore, I take pleasure in attributing to all other Bible students a like earnest desire, unless I find evidences convincing me to the contrary.

There were some earnest, candid thoughts presented on page 232. In studying the "Paraclete or "Comforter", I feel that another point or two should be kept in mind by Herald readers. One of these thoughts is that whatever the Comforter may be (John 14:17, 26; 15:26; 16:7, 13) John instructs that it is "the spirit of truth", "the Holy Ghost". The word "ghost" is from the same Greek word as is the word "spirit", viz., pneuma. I have been unable to find in any Lexicon or in any translation an indication that the word "spirit", in its root form, ever has any suggestion of masculine gender. One would never gather from reading the word in its root form that the word "spirit" has any reference to masculinity any more than does the word "earth", or "mountain", or "water", or "wind", or any other one of such class of words. Indeed it is the word pneuma that is called "wind" in John 3:8. All of the translators that I have access to have used the word here as though it were of neuter gender. Let us then keep in mind that the word "spirit", whether Holy Spirit or otherwise, always in and of itself in the root form, suggests neuter gender, that the thought of masculinity which is attributed to it by so many must be gathered from some other source than from the Word itself. Nor, in referring to the Holy Spirit is the word ever spelled in the masculine form. Therefore, again, such thought must originate elsewhere than in the Word.

Again it should be known by all that there is no particular Greek word for our English word "he". "He" more than 1500 times is written in the English New Testament from the Greek definite article "o", meaning "the". When "he" is the translation of any given Greek word, it is one of several such words which refer to that or this thing or person, that is to say, these given Greek words do not necessarily refer to persons. They may, and frequently do, refer to things. The way that gender is usually indicated is by the spelling of the word. The words are spelled one way for one gender and another way for another gender, just as our masculine gender is spelled "he", while these letters are preceded by "s" to spell the feminine gender, "she". So far as I am able to study there is nothing in the pronouns of the Greek, as used in connection with the word "spirit" to indicate or even suggest that "spirit" or "Holy Spirit" refers to a person at all, nothing to indicate that the object referred to is masculine. Such thoughts it would seem must be gathered from some other source than from the nouns themselves or from the Greek from which we get their pronouns. The pronoun "it" (in the neuter gender) in John 3:8 referring to wind (pneuma) is the same pronoun that in John 14 is translated "he" referring to "spirit". Unless the translator has in some other place in God's Word discovered that "spirit" refers to a person of masculine gender, the writer sees no excuse for ever so translating it in John 14.

The same analysis is true with reference to the word "Comforter" or "Paraclete". While the word as used in classic Greek many times refers to a helper such as a lawyer or advocate, yet it also, according to its meaning, equally applies to inanimate things for help or aid.

If one suggests that the predicate used with it is in the active voice and that the noun therefore refers to a person able to act, we must refer him again to John 3:8 where "the wind bloweth where it listeth". Here it is not only in the active voice but, by personification, it exercises its will-power and blows where it wishes to blow. Nevertheless all translators translate the whole phrase as in the neuter gender and as being inanimate.

Every repeated perusal of the Word in the study of this large and important theme confirms me in the thought that the Spirit of God, or the Holy Spirit, or the Comforter is not a person.

THE ETERNAL NOW

NOW—I can speak and act and live! NOW I can say and do those things which will make the past a pleasant memory, and cause me to scan the future without misgivings. NOW is the day, the hour, the moment that determines our eternal destiny.

We have torn the last leaf from the calendar of 1929. It is of no further use to us. And here we are in January 1930. We can no longer live in 1929. We have not reached 1931. We are HERE and here only—JANUARY, 1930! All the strength of the mighty, all the wisdom of the wise, cannot carry us backward one instant into the past nor bear us forward a single moment into the future! We must live forever in the eternal NOW, for now is eternal, because it is always NOW. Yesterday is never with us, and tomorrow never comes.

"The moving finger writes; and, having writ,
Moves on: nor all your piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it."

We cannot change the past. By our own power and foresight we may not be sure of the future. We can only know and act now. So may God help us to put into action TODAY that which we had wanted to do yesterday, and still had in our minds to accomplish tomorrow. The past may be blemished—but it cannot be changed. But the FUTURE—ALL the future—lies before you clean and pure and spotless. Now, in the NOW, in the present moment, in the present thought, in the present action, you have the power to keep that future always free from stain!

THE PARACLETE

PART 2

By C. W. Dean

THE LATTER HALF of the seven years (three and one-half years) is the great travail (John 16:21; Isaiah 66:7). This woman is in contrast with the false woman in the city of Babylon (Rev. 12:1-2) and is the faithful woman traveling in pain, hence is a sign of the faithful city, Jerusalem. "Clothed with the sun" indicates the possession of authority to rule in the day of Jehovah. The powers of darkness are under her feet (Gen. 1:16). The twelve stars signify the twelve tribes of Israel, as in Joseph's dream (Gen. 37:9). Her condition is like that of Isaiah 26:17-18. Unparalleled persecution will be her portion, which is directed especially against a select company out of her which seem to have a safe asylum in the temple (Rev. 11:1) on Mount Zion (Rev. 14:1). They are celibates, hence are called male sons.

At that time Michael the great prince will stand up for the people of Israel (Dan. 12:1), which will be in the days of the great tribulation. At that time the people of Daniel, "Israelites", every one found written in a book, will be delivered. Christ will not come until immediately after the days of great tribulation. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, . . . and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man." Matt. 24:30.

We are next presented with a period of one thousand two hundred and ninety days with reference to the resumption of the offerings which were made to cease at the breaking of the covenant by the desolator. We are not to add these days to the twelve hundred and sixty, but to compute them from the middle of the seventieth seven when the covenant was broken and the offerings taken away. It reads: "From the era the continual offering is taken away and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, one thousand two hundred and ninety days." Dan. 12:11. This carries us thirty days beyond the days of tribulations and the time of Matt. 24:30.

In Daniel 12:12 we are given a statement of greater importance concerning the faithful in Israel, which reads: "Happy is he who tarries and attains to a thousand three hundred and thirty-five days". Remembering our point of computation—the breaking of the covenant in the middle of the week (seventieth seven), the one thousand three hundred and thirty-five days carries us two and a half months or seventy-five days beyond the days of great tribulation, and the time of Dan. 12:2. The resurrection of the saints in Israel marks the beginning of the millennial kingdom. Satan is then bound in chains, cast into the abyss, and a seal set upon it. Then Christ will enter the strong man's house and despoil him of his goods (Mark 3:27).

Israel as the favored nation of God has always been led by some personal leader appointed of God. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were guided by the angel of Jehovah. The angel of Jehovah went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and eighty-five thousand in defense of Israel. Daniel tells us that Michael will stand up for Israel during the great tribulation, and Christ said that He would make request of the Father and He would send another Paraclete to guide them through that age. The allotted time to Israel was seventy weeks, or sevens. Sixty-nine sevens having run their course, there is one seven still future, and it will not be a blind influence which will guide the faithful Israelites through those days. It will be a notable representative of God sent in the name of Christ to guide Israel through the days of great tribulation. Christ himself comes immediately after the great tribulation of those days.

The Paraclete is not promised to the saints of the nations or Gentiles. When the Lord himself descends to some point in the air, He is accompanied by the voice of the archangel, who is Michael. Christ Jesus, exalted above every name in heaven and earth and all things in heaven and earth subjected to Him, is not Michael. But when He comes for His ecclesia which is His body, the voice of the archangel will be with Him. So will be the personal Michael, the great prince. The voice of the archangel Michael, the trump of God does not do away, or make void the personality of Michael. The Lord himself will descend to some point in the air and Michael will be with Him. The dead in Christ shall rise first, and those in Christ living at that time will be changed, and together they will be caught up in the air and meet their Lord, and they shall always be with Him (1 Thess. 4:16-17). This resurrection follows the Lord's presence in the air long before His coming to the earth. It precedes the great judgment era which ushers in the day of Jehovah.

Being justified in the blood of Christ, the Gentile saints will be saved from God's indignation through Him (Romans 5:9). God has not assigned His Gentile saints to indignation, but to procuring salvation. This revelation is further unfolded by Paul (1 Cor. 15:51), where the secret is disclosed that the living, as well as the dead will be changed. Both will be given incorruptible, spiritual and celestial bodies, without which they could not meet Him in the air. The crowning glory of this blessed expectation was made known to the Philippians. These bodies of humiliation will be transfigured to conform to that glorious body which blinded Paul when he first saw Him (Phil. 3:21).

The ecclesia which is His body has a prior expectancy, and will be snatched away to meet the Lord in the air before the desolator is unveiled or revealed (2 Thess. 2:6, 7), which will give us a period of seven years from the ascension of the body ecclesia to the end of the great tribulation days. The resurrection of Jesus is the guarantee that all who are His will likewise be raised. Until Paul received this revelation, the only resurrection of the saints was that of Dan. 12:2 and the resurrection of life (John 5:29) called a former resurrection (Rev. 20:5), at the beginning of the thousand years after the judgment period. Then the Lord comes down to earth. The place prepared for the twelve circumcision apostles is in the holy Jerusalem (Rev. 21:14; Luke 22:28-30). Until that time, the Paraclete will guide the faithful sons of Israel through the great tribulation days and abide with them for the seven years closing that age, their allotted time.

In John 14:26 the Paraclete is called the Holy Spirit. This does not make void the personality of the Paraclete, Helper, or Advocate. Those who call themselves Bible students and disciples of Christ are not distinguishing the things that differ when they couple the Paraclete with Hagion Pneuma and call both an influence or power without a personality. The Holy Spirit is translated from the Greek words Hagion Pneuma and it is the power of the Most High. Luke 1:35.

THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES

By Lyman Booth

---

IT IS GENERALLY believed that the books of the Chronicles were compiled by Ezra after the Babylonian captivity, and that they contain extracts from the public records of the Jews, and the writings of the prophets. Some parts appear to have been inserted in the same words of the original record which was written before the captivity, and a few names added to the genealogies after Ezra's death. The First and Second Chronicles form one book in the Hebrew and bear the name "The Acts or Annals of the Days," from which the title, "Chronicles", arises. It is not improperly rendered the "Chronicles or Records of the Times."

The Greek title in the Seventy translation is Paraleipomena, or "The Things Omitted", a title which would imply that the Chronicles is supplementary to the books of Samuel and the Kings, and supplies that which was omitted in the earlier history. The Latin has followed the Seventy in its division, but retained the title, Paraleipomenon. The Seventy calls them, "The Books of the Things which had been left out"; but that is not so appropriate as the original name, for there are many repetitions of facts recorded before. These repetitions must not be considered superfluous, for they serve to make clear the preceding history. And those that seem out of place are well suited to connect the whole into one complete narrative without having to refer to other books.

In the genealogies there are several literal or verbal variations from those found elsewhere in Scripture; but it is evident that many persons had more than one name and were known and called by either, and we know from experience that spelling and pronunciation changes considerably in the course of years. We are led to believe that some trivial error of the translator had been made, but there is no variation so great that, in the least, weakens our faith in the external or internal evidence of the divine inspiration of the Scriptures in general, or in the books in particular.

The compiler, whoever he was, seems to have employed the words, the "History of Samuel the Seer", for the "History of the Reign of David," and "The History of Gad the Seer" for the "History of Nathan the Prophet," 1 Chron. 29:29, R.V. "The Visions of Iddo the Seer" was substituted for the "History of Abijah the Shilonite, 2 Chron. 9:29; and for the latter kings, "Histories of Shemaiah the Prophet", Chron. 12:15, the "Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah", 2 Chron. 27:7. We find also the acts of the kings of Israel, 2 Chron. 23:18, and the history of John, the son of Hanani, 2 Chron. 20:34.

The compiler mentions the history of Azariah (Uzziah) by Isaiah the prophet, 2 Chron 26:22, also the acts and good deeds of Hezekiah by the same prophet, 2 Chron. 32:32. In the period from creation to the death of Saul he appears to have used the historical book of our present Scriptures from Genesis to Ruth, also various records, genealogical and historical, which had been preserved even through the captivity.

The writer evidently had one design in view, namely, to relate briefly those things which related to the nation of Israel and especially to each of the twelve tribes, and to the family of David with reference to the settlement in the land after the captivity, and to ascertain the descent of the promised Messiah, for in both the genealogies would be very useful. Until Christ came all the genealogies were accurately preserved; but since that period we have none that are dependable. The types were then fulfilled in the great Antitype, the Kingship and Priesthood were permanently centered in Him. The nation by rejecting Him forfeited their temporal advantages and opportunities and hence their genealogical records were of no further use, and were allowed to pass without being kept as before.

As to the author of this book, Jewish tradition credits it to Ezra, who, no doubt, obtained his information from various annals of the monarchy. While this is considered improbable by some, still the fact remains that Second Chronicles ends with the same passage with which the Book of Ezra begins. This would suggest the same author, and favors the idea that the Book of Chronicles and Ezra were originally one.

The book is easily divided into four parts. The first consists of genealogies from Adam, and we trace the line from Adam to Abraham (1 Chron. 1-9); the line of Judah to Elishama; the kingly line of David through Zerubbabel; the line of priests to the captivity; and the three leading lines of singers, one of which represented the line of Samuel. The second gives the history of David (1 Chron. 10:29) and is remarkable for the omissions which are noted in reading the narrative, also for many new facts which are not given in the Book of Kings. The third contains the reign of Solomon (2 Chron. 1:9). The fourth (2 Chron. 10:36) gives the history of the kings of Judah to the captivity.

There is in this book a great tendency to dwell on the details of the temple worship, the arrangement of the courses of the priests, a bent for genealogical tables and for keeping on record the names of persons engaged in all events narrated; a desire to credit all the events to divine agency, also to represent the divine favor as dependent upon the faithfulness of their rulers and of the people of the

LIGHT BEARERS

By Rufus A. Curtis

"YE ARE THE LIGHT of the world," said Jesus, when speaking to His disciples on the mount of beatitudes. He likens them to "a city that is set on an hill," whose light pervades the surrounding darkness and scatters its gloom. "Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Matt. 5:14-16.

Words and actions should be in perfect accord. Jesus warned against those who "say, and do not." Matt. 23:1-3. Conversation that is "honest", and works that are "good", form a combination that even the forces of evil cannot overthrow. (2 Peter 2:12, 15.)

"For he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile: let him eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is against them that do evil. And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?" 1 Peter 3:10-13.

"When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." Prov. 16:7.

It is no insignificant matter for a professed religionist to be "an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." 1 Tim. 4:12. Actions speak louder than words, for

"A man of words and not deeds
Is like a garden full of weeds."

Christianity can be judged by the fruits that follow in its wake. The Master has said, "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so, every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." Matt. 7:16-20.

Out of "the abundance of the heart", the good or evil treasure, hidden therein, finds expression, not only in words, but also in actions. (Luke 6:45-49.) Practical Christianity will move its possessors to be "doers of the word, and not hearers only". "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1:22-27.

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." James 2:14-17.

"Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. 4:31, 32.

Momentous events are impending. "Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the judge standeth before the door." James 5:8, 9.

THE LAND OF TIME ENOUGH

I KNOW A LAND of vast and silent places, a land where the mountains, pine-clad and well watered, break up into foothills and go down to meet the desert; where the cottonwoods mingle with the pinions and cedars, and the sage grows rank on the mesas; a land of all-encircling and never-failing sunlit skies, of sunsets that fling upward all the colors of the spectrum in faultless blendings to light the sapphire dome of God's own Taj Mahal, and where the moon, like a galleon of enchantment, floats upon a shoreless silver sea. . . .

There is another Paradise Valley lying just over the rim of life. I have called it the Land of Time Enough. From the heat of the day, from the toil and the grind, from the long hours of pain, from the disappointment and sorrow, from the deep mystery of human existence, I lift my eyes where the eagles soar over the crest, and ride on toward the Land of Time Enough.

Time enough to do the many things we never yet have touched; time enough to finish all those things that are but half begun; time enough to read the books that call to us from their shelves, to sit before the pictures we have hurried by, to hear the master songs we never yet have heard; time enough to romp with children down their paths of play; to listen to the dreams of daughters and the hopes of sons; to ramble in the fields of memory with those we "lost awhile"; time enough to know our friends; to walk with kings of thought, to dare and do, to live and move; time enough to walk and talk with Christ himself.—Adapted.

FOUR THINGS

Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellow-man sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and Heaven securely.

—Henry Van Dyke.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

KINGDOM STANDARDS

REPENTANCE ESSENTIAL

Sunday, January 19—Matthew 4:17-35.

“Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand”.—V. 17.

WHATEVER IT WAS THAT JESUS found as He began His ministry needed to be repented of by the people. The reason for that repentance was that the kingdom of heaven was at hand. In order for them to receive the kingdom of heaven with the fulness of its benefits it was essential that they should turn from the standards of their then present government and accept the standards of God's own kingdom.

PERSONAL ESSENTIALS

Monday, January 20—Matthew 5:1-12.

“Blessed are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven”.—V. 3.

The beatitudes were all contingent upon personal standards. They were assured to those who were “poor in spirit”, who mourned then present conditions, who were “meek”, who sought righteousness, who were “pure in heart”. These were essential conditions of personal life in order to be recipients of God's blessings. These blessings were promised as a fruit of God's rule, God's kingdom.

Christianity as revealed to and by the church of God requires, if anything, more of the individual than did Christ require of them with a view to the kingdom.

CHRIST CAME TO FULFILL

Tuesday, January 21—Matthew 5:17-26.

“Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.”—V. 17.

In offering to the sons of Israel unto whom He came, the fulfillment of the kingdom, the Savior explicitly taught that it was not His to destroy the law or the prophets but rather to develop, to bring to pass that which had there been taught. The restoring of Israel from her wayward, rebellious position and then the development and perfection of her unto such status as would be acceptable by God and as would assure her establishment as God's kingdom people, required that her people should, under Christ's leadership, fulfill the teachings of the law and of the prophets. Some of these Jesus pointed out at this place.

DIVINE PROGRESSION

Wednesday, January 22—Matthew 5:38-48.

“Ye have heard that it hath been said, . . . But I say unto you . . .”

The quotations from Moses cited by Jesus were God-given. They were proper and righteous. Jesus, addressing Israelites who too much ignored God's earlier word, as God's Spokesman said, “But I say unto you”. He did not change the law in the sense of annulling it but in the sense of more fully revealing it. He carried the principle forward to a larger and fuller interpretation, thus asking His hearers to take a position much in advance of the position God directed in His earlier word to Moses. The centuries intervening and the altered conditions required progression upon the part of the people. The letter of the law had convinced the people that their interpretation of it was futile. Jesus introduced the spirit, the real principle underlying God's word to Moses. It was this that was essential for the establishment and perpetuity of God's kingdom.

The same is equally true as the teachings apply to the Christian church.

ATTAINED STANDARDS

Thursday, January 23—Matthew 20:20-28.

“Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?”

Jesus was not only appointed to become King of God's kingdom, He was also under the necessity of living the truths requisite for the development of it. The farther He progressed in the development of those truths in practice the more truly and fully did He become the Minister of God, serving, sacrificing for the development and the progression of those who would attain acceptable kingdom standards.

The same in principle is as emphatically true pertaining to the Christian church and to the Christian as an individual. Just as the King is greater than the kingdom which he builds and over which He rules, so the church which is His body and His helper is proportionately greater than the kingdom which it unites with Christ to accomplish.

BODY FELLOWSHIP

Friday, January 24—Romans 12:9-21.

“Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love”.—V. 12.

Today's selection for reading was written to the church of God rather than to the kingdom of God, but as the principles underlying the former selections of the week pertaining to the kingdom are similarly true with reference to the church, so the principle of this instruction to the church is similarly true as applied to the kingdom. The apostle teaches the righteous necessity of all the members of a given body exercising themselves in thorough, mutual fellowship. This principle is always true regardless of the nature of the body of people.

THE STRONG AIDING THE WEAK

Saturday, January 25—John 2:2-11.

“This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.”—V. 11.

He who was King to be, who was to be the resurrection and the life, who was to become all in all, used of His ability to express mercy and aid unto the weak. This He did not only at the marriage feast but throughout His life, regardless of the sinful appropriations which many made of His blessings. As King, Christ's standard of service to the people of His kingdom always carried the lesson of kingdom standards. To those standards His people should aspire.

A CHANCE FOR THE BOYS

QUERIES 20

QUOTATION: Where found? “A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.”

OCCUPATIONS: Give the names of one or more mentioned in the Bible as being—

1. Chronicler
2. Commander
3. Coppersmith
4. Counselor
5. Cup bearer

NEW TESTAMENT PLACES

1. Where was the seat of the ruling power of the world at the time of Christ?
2. Where did Jesus perform the miracle of the draught of fishes?
3. What place was referred to, and to whom did Peter say, “It is good for us to be here”?
4. What place is mentioned only once in the Bible?
5. What city was supposed to produce nothing good?

NEW TESTAMENT PERSONS

1. Who said, “God is not the God of the dead but of the living”?
2. Who were said “to strain at a gnat and swallow a camel”?
3. The martyrdom of what prophet did Jesus relate when censuring the scribes and Pharisees?
4. What national soldiery is symbolized by eagles in the New Testament?
5. Whose words shall not pass away?

Some one asked about the derivation of the word Christmas. Compton's Encyclopedia gives the following:

“From the early centuries of Christianity, the anniversary of the birth of Christ has been celebrated by a special church festival. In early England this festival was called Christes messe meaning ‘Christ's mass’, whence we get our word ‘Christmas’.”

 2 cups syrup or sweet cane (sugar), Jeremiah 6:20
 2 cups water, Exodus 17:6
 2 cups figs, Nahum 3:12
 2 cups almonds, Numbers 17:8
 3 teaspoonfuls honey, 1 Samuel 14:25
 6 eggs, Jeremiah 17:11
 ½ cup milk, Judges 4:19 (last clause)
 2 teaspoonfuls leaven (baking powder) Exodus 12:19
 Season to taste with spices, 2 Chronicles 9:9

OCCUPATIONS FOR WOMEN:

Breadmaking, Cooking and Confectionery, Church Worker, Gleaning, Household Duties, Maid, Needle Work, Nurse, Saleswoman, Singer, Spinning.

QUOTATION: Moses to Asher, Deuteronomy 33:25.

All you hungry people take notice that the following are good cooks, at least, they solved the “scriptural cake” problem: Ruth Tomlinson, Mrs. Hugh Glover and Hazel Titus. The Queries Editor would like a piece of the cake. Thank you.

In naming the “Occupations for Women”, Mrs. Hugh Glover includes, “Comforter and help to any we may reach who are in need of our help.”

It makes one happy to realize that there are so many ways in which one may be a “real” woman, doesn't it? Let us concede to the men their right to be head of the nation, the state, the community and the home. And let us, the women and girls of the land, be the home makers, who help to make home a place where our men and boys will want to spend more and more of their time.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

“Study it carefully, think of it prayerfully:
 Deep in thy heart let its pure precepts dwell,
 Slight not its history, ponder its mystery,
 None can e'er prize it too highly or well.

“Accept the glad tidings, the warnings and chidings,
 Found in the Volume of heavenly love;
 With faith that's unfailing, and love all prevailing,
 Trust in its promise of life evermore.

“May its message of love from the Father above,
 To all nations and kindreds be sent,
 Till the ransomed shall raise glorious anthems of praise:
 Hallelujah, when sinners repent!”

THE SERENE LIFE

PRETENSE, WORRY, DISCONTENT, SELF-SEEKING

These Four Things Hinder True Christian Living.

Let's Do Away with Them.

LIFE IS LARGE. We cannot possibly grasp the whole of it in the few years that we have to live. What is vital? What is essential? What may we profitably let go? Let us ask ourselves these questions today.

To begin with, what may we let go? Who shall say? By what standard shall we measure? By what authority decide? Each of us must answer that question for himself. In looking about for an answer, I find only one that satisfies me. It is this: We may let go all things which we cannot carry into the eternal life. To me this is a deep truth, and a positive one. Surely it is not worth while for us to cumber our lives with the things which we can grasp at best for but a little time, when we may lay hold of things that shall be ours for ten thousand times ten thousand years.

We may drop pretense. Eternity is not good for shams. In its clear light the false selves that we have wrought about us like a garment will shrivel and fall away. Whatever we are not, that let us cease striving to seem to be. If we can rid ourselves of all untruth of word, manner, mode of life and thinking, we shall rid our lives of much rubbish, restlessness and fear. Let us hide nothing, and we shall not be afraid of being found out. Let us put on nothing, and we shall never cringe. Let us assume nothing, and we shall not be mortified. Let us do and say nothing untrue, and we shall not fear to have the deepest springs of our lives sought out, nor our most secret motive analyzed. Nothing gives such upright dignity of mien as the consciousness, "I am what I pretend to be. About me there is no make-believe."

We may drop worry. The eternal life is serene. It is not careworn, nor knows it any foreboding of future ill. Can we not take to ourselves its large spirit of serenity and cheer? For only the serene soul is strong. Every moment of worry weakens the soul for its daily combat. Worry is an infirmity; there is no virtue in it. Worry is spiritual near-sightedness; a fumbling way of looking at little things, and of magnifying their value. True spiritual vision sweeps the universe and sees things in their right proportion. The finest landscape of Corot viewed asquint or out of focus would appear distorted and untrue. Let us hang life on the line, as painters say, and look at it honestly.

We may let go discontent. In all the eternal years there is no word of murmur from any restless heart. In its vast silences how trivial would sound the complainings of our harassed days! In its great songs of praise how our frettings would be overborne!

In life I find two things that make for discontent. One is lack of harmony with one's environment. The other is dissatisfaction with one's present opportunities. Of these, the first may be overcome; the second may be put out of one's life. A congenial environment is not one of the essentials of life: present opportunities, if rightly used, are as great as the soul need ask. Which of us can sit down at the close of a day and say, "Today I have done all that was in my power to do for humanity and righteousness"? Ah no! We look for large things, and forget that which is close at hand! To take life "as God gives it, not as we want it", and then make the best of it, is the hard lesson that life puts before the human soul to learn.

One's environment may be very disagreeable. It may bring constant hurts of heart, mortification, tears, angry rebellion, and wounded pride—but there is a reason for that environment. To become strong, the soul must needs fight something. A great part of the strength of life consists in the degree in which we get into harmony with our appointed environment. So long as we are at war with our surroundings, so long will much of the force of our lives be spent uselessly, aimlessly. A good way to get into harmony with one's environment is to try to understand it first, and then to begin to adapt ourselves to it, so far as possible.

Let us say, "God put me among these scenes, these people, these opportunities, these duties. He is neither absent-minded nor incompetent. This is exactly the place He means me to be in, the place I am capable of filling: there is no mistake. My life is in its proper setting."

We may let go of self-seeking. In the eternal life there is no greed. One hears of neither "mine" nor "thine". All things are for all. As the waters fled away from Tantalus, so do the good things of life flee from the grasping and selfish spirit. The richest experiences of life never come to those who try to win them selfishly. If they do gain their desires, they find them as ashes to the taste. But all blessings are in the way of him who, forgetful of self, tries to be helpful to the world, and who spends his life in loving deeds.

Pretense, worry, discontent, and self-seeking—these are the things that we may let go.—From "What Is Worth While?" by Anna Robertson Brown, Ph. D.

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

STANDARDS OF THE KINGDOM

HAVE YOU EVER heard of The Sermon on the Mount? You may read it in Matthew, chapters five, six, and seven. And who was the Minister that delivered this sermon? Jesus. Why named "on the Mount"? Because when the crowds followed Jesus, "he went up into the mount, and when he was set his disciples came unto him" and "he taught them."

Jesus taught them how to live, what they should do, and what they should not do if they were to be Christians and become a part of God's kingdom. He began by telling them who were blessed and what the reward was for each class. We call these "blessed" verses the beatitudes. The first class includes those who are "poor in spirit" or humble and theirs is the kingdom of heaven. The second are those who mourn. How can anyone be happy when he is sorrowful or mournful? In the new kingdom yet to come he shall be happy, although I am sure God will comfort those today who sorrow and ask His comfort or help. The meek shall inherit the earth. What does it mean to be meek? Does it mean fight for your rights, resent all imagined wrongs?

Jesus says those who hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled. Those who really want to learn right and live righteously shall be satisfied. The ones who are merciful or kind to others will receive kindness in return.

And what a wonderful promise Jesus made to those who have pure hearts (and minds)! They shall see God! Imagine seeing God! Who has never wondered about God's appearance? Let us strive above all else to keep clean hearts within a clean body.

Then the peacemakers shall be called the children of God. What an exalted position to attain unto! How does that dispose of quarreling and fighting?

Jesus says that those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake shall receive the kingdom of heaven, and if any are reviled or falsely accused they shall be rewarded when Jesus returns. Several of those followers of Jesus did really suffer terrible persecution for His sake. Great reward will surely be theirs.

Many years before, God had given Moses many laws for the children of Israel, telling them how they must live. Now we might say that these beatitudes are another set of laws for the children of God.

However, Jesus explains that these new laws do not take the place of the old ones. If one keeps these laws he really keeps the Mosaic laws. Also, Jesus said He did not come to destroy the old law or the prophets, but to fulfill. Not one small part of the law should be left out, but every bit fulfilled. If anyone breaks any of these laws he shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven, but if he obeys and teaches these laws he shall be called great in the kingdom.

The Pharisees kept the letter of the law, but did many cruel deeds. So Jesus warns against that kind of law-keeping. Their hearts were not right, and Jesus wants loving hearts

The law had said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour." Now Jesus says, "Love your enemies, bless them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you." Jesus did every bit of this. God, too, is kind to the evil as well as the good, for He sends His blessings, rain and sunshine, upon all. And we must try to be kind to all—follow the golden rule. Jesus said, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

FACT

The word "beatitudes" means blessedness, happiness.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read all of the "Sermon on the Mount."
2. Read Luke 6:20-26.
3. Copy the beatitudes.
4. Copy the qualities outlined.
5. Find instances where Jesus really lived. Matt. 5:44.
6. Read Psalm 15.

NATURE

2. Noah sent a raven first from the Ark.
3. What tree is symbolic of the prosperity of the wicked? Psalm—?

Who said, "But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace"? Psalm 37:11.

Do you know the story of "The Leak in the Dyke"? What would have happened if Peter had not been dependable?

"Hands were made to be useful,
If you teach them the way.
Therefore for yourself or neighbor,
Make them useful every day."

STANDARDS OF THE KINGDOM

Matthew 5:1-48

Devotional Reading: Psalm 24:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matthew 5:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. A Christian According to Christ.

Basic Truth. To be like Christ one must follow Him obediently.

Outline. I. An Explanation. II. The Standard Is Set. III. Attaining unto the Standard.

I. An Explanation. We must remember that this scripture was given to the Jews showing them how to follow the law. Jesus had not yet introduced that Christianity which would make one "a new creature" in Christ, 2 Cor. 5:17. He was not teaching the Jews to rise above the law, but to grow into the fullness of it. Later He commanded His gospel to all the world, to Gentile as well as Jew. He then taught, as did also His apostles, that the Christian should rise to "walk in newness of life", even in the life of the resurrected Christ. Rom. 6:1-4. Thus, Christianity today is higher in its standards than was that taught by Jesus in the beginning of His ministry. There He taught with reference to the people of the kingdom, while later He taught with reference to the people of His church, even of His body. Eph. 5:30-32.

II. The Standard Is Set. God, through His Word, has set all the standards. He has defined the standard for Israel. He has defined the standard for the Christian. Man has never been authorized to modify or amend God's prescribed standards. Jesus, in Matt. 5, revealed standards to the Jews far beyond what they had realized. He thus revealed to them the way for them to attain unto the kingdom of heaven.

III. Attaining unto the Standard. A Christian, according to Christ, must attain unto the standards set by Him. Those to whom the kingdom of heaven was offered could reach it by living the truths of the sermon on the mount. A Christian, in the sense in which that word was later used, must grow up into Christ in all things. His Leader is the risen Christ. He "is subject unto Christ".—Eph. 5:24. His ideals are those of the risen Lord.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A Hyphenated Citizen. The man who, born in one country, moves to another for his citizenship, quickly finds himself in ill repute unless he lives to the interests of the country in which he has chosen his home. He, who moving to a new country to become possessor of its benefits and advantages, but who insists upon maintaining his native tongue, his native interests, and his native ideals; who insists upon utilizing the advantages of his newly chosen home in order to maintain his native ways, is usually called untrue and unfaithful to the country of his choice.

Hyphenated Christians are no different. That man who, born in sin, born of the curse, turns to his Lord and Master in order to obtain the advantages thus afforded would do well to leave his native ways of sin and of carnality, cut himself free from all such and become Christian in deed and in truth. Such are Christians according to Christ.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."—Matt. 5:8.

Blessed in these verses means happy, and represents the Hebrew word, ashrey. This word occurs in nineteen of the Psalms twenty-six times; elsewhere only in eight books, viz., Deuteronomy, 1 Kings, 2 Chronicles, Isaiah, Proverbs, Job, Ecclesiastes and Daniel. C. B. Then, happy are the pure in heart, because they shall see God. A wonderful reason for their happiness.

To be pure in heart, one must be consecrated to God, and fitted for holy service. This condition fits one to enjoy what God has in store for His children.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Entrance into the Kingdom.

All governments that have ruled mankind have been composed of men who have manifested some or all of the works of the flesh. But Christ's kingdom is to be unique in that the men who shall compose it are not to be tainted in the least degree by the works of the flesh. Paul says "they which do these things"—"adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, sedition, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like"—"shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Anyone who finds himself yielding to these works may know with assurance that he cannot inherit the kingdom. For centuries God has been developing men into the fitness that shall enable them to rule in righteousness and justice and He will not permit one iota of anything contrary to righteousness to enter in. Let us not deceive ourselves. These things must be put aside, not merely because we want a place in the kingdom, but because we hate and eschew all things that are contrary to love.

If we find one work of the flesh holding sway in our lives, we must turn from it to Jesus and yield to His power for cleansing.—A. K.

Topic: Accepting and Following the Highest Ideals.

Every worth while business or profession in life has certain aims and ideals in view which its executives desire to attain. Some of them are purely mercenary, it is true, but many of them are planned with the thought in mind of the elevating, in one way or another, of those who serve.

Jesus was the Head of a great business, in fact, the greatest business of all time, that of saving sinners. He chose twelve men to assist Him in this great work and in our lesson of today we find some of the foundation principles which He laid down for His helpers.

Let us see how many of these we can repeat from memory. What wonderful promises they contain! Happy indeed will be the ones who heed them. The mourners shall be comforted; the meek shall inherit the earth; the pure in heart shall see God, etc.

The standards that Jesus set for His "business" are the noblest known to man and are summed up very tersely in Matt. 5:16: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Let us acquaint ourselves with these ideals and make them our ideals, and great will be our reward.—M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Rules for Membership in the Kingdom.

The greatest sermon ever preached was preached by Jesus on the mountain to His disciples. We have for our lesson a small part of this great sermon. Perhaps some of you have learned a part of this sermon. That part is called "The Beatitudes", and is found in Matthew 5:3-11.

The great subject about which Jesus preached was His coming kingdom, when He would be King over all the earth. Jesus said that we may be rulers with Him if we choose. But there are certain things we must do before we can secure such a great position. Several things are mentioned in our lesson. We must do as Jesus commands or tells us to do. We must be willing and ready to teach others about Jesus.

Above all we must love Jesus. Then, we must love our neighbors and friends, but further yet, our enemies as well. The last is not so easy to do, but if Jesus says we should do it, we must. We'll be much happier in this life if we do, and not only that, but think of what it will mean to live and be with Jesus in His coming kingdom.—V. C. T.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

The several contributions for the last two or three months have lightened the work in the N. B. I. office materially. Several of the bills that had accumulated throughout the past summer have been taken care of. This allows us to face the new year with a little less heart-load than we otherwise would be carrying. There are other items to be met as quickly as possible as well as the current expenses which can be taken care of only from contributions. With continued cooperation like unto the recent past, we will be able to devote more mental energy upon the Bible work and upon the cause in which we are all interested.

As rapidly as the books for the year 1929 are closed and the totals are known, statements will be published from week to week for the information of all.

F. L. Austin, Secretary.

Word reaches The Herald office that Sr. Pheobe Brewer, near Byron Center, Mich., is quite low. Sr. Brewer passed her eightieth birthday anniversary last September and her continued sickness at such age is causing considerable anxiety on the part of those near her.

The heavy snow storm of Thursday night made it impossible for many to attend the annual business meeting at the Church of God, Oregon, Ill. The meeting was therefore adjourned until Thursday evening, January 16, when all members are urgently requested to be present.

Sr. Nellie Cross, of the Oregon congregation, is visiting her son, Clarence, and family at Berlin, Wisconsin.

On Wednesday, January 8, Bro. and Sr. J. H. Williams, of Rochelle, Ill., were celebrating the forty-fifth anniversary of their marriage and accordingly a number of the members of the Oregon church quietly hid themselves over there and surprised them. Bro. and Sr. Williams appreciate deeply the good wishes thus extended them at this milestone of life and we trust they may be spared many more years for the service of the Master.

Bro. Paul C. Johnson expects to be with the congregation at the Plum River church, northeast of Mt. Carroll, Ill., next Sunday, January 19, in the morning, and with the brethren at Adeline in the evening. May it be that the roads will be passable.

Sr. Victor D. Smith desires to thank one and all for the beautiful cards which they have sent to her mother, Sr. Sarah A. Hook, of Bristol, Indiana. She states that they are a real joy to her mother who looks over them day after day. They help to keep her mind busy. Sr. Hook suffered a bad fall early in December and it is feared that this aged sister will not walk again.

BAPTISM

On Sunday afternoon, January 5, we had the privilege of holding a prayer and devotional service in the McGinnis home at 106 Grant St., Savanna, Ill., and of baptizing Mrs.

Ruth McGinnis in the name of her Savior. Sr. McGinnis is in poor health, and having more faith in the Great Physician than in human doctors, she desired this relationship with her Lord. May God sustain and comfort her in our prayer.

F. E. Siple.

CORVALLIS, OREGON

Bro. Platt G. Hathaway and Miss Evelyn Johnson were united in marriage at a quiet ceremony at the bride's home, the Rev. Fred R. Morrow of the First Congregational Church officiating. Mrs. Hathaway has been employed as statement and remittance clerk at the Benton County State Bank. Bro. Hathaway is a son of Bro. H. B. Hathaway and resides on a farm near Corvallis. We pray God's blessing may rest upon this newly established home.

Bro. J. C. Wilson has been laid up with an attack of rheumatism. He is staying with his sister, Sr. Edith Barber, until able to return to his home at Lebanon.

Sr. Minnie Kerr has gone to California to spend two weeks visiting friends and relatives.

Late hours are kept by those seeking answers to the queries which appear weekly in The Restitution Herald. This is an interesting way to spend those spare moments and to become better acquainted with the Book of books.

The wedding of Miss Viola A. Hogue and Florain E. Powers occurred Sunday, December 29. Mrs. Powers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hogue, and is a student at Oregon State College. Mr. Powers is a 1929 graduate of O. S. C. They will make their home in Corvallis. We extend our best wishes to these young people.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The good Word tells us that there is "joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth." We have been experiencing some of this joy of late. At the close of the Sunday evening service, Dec. 29, three came forward when the invitation was given and yielded their lives to the Master. On January third we assembled at the church and assisted them in putting on Christ by baptism. Preceding this service a talk was given by the pastor, after which two more came forward and accepted Christ. These will be baptized tomorrow night. At least six will be received into church fellowship Sunday morning.

All five of these baptized are parents ranging around thirty-five years of age. What a wonderful example for their children! The Lord is wonderfully blessing the labors of the church. Several others are seriously considering this same step. Brethren, pray for this work. Pray earnestly for a spiritual awakening. We don't want to be selfish—pray for a general revival among all our churches. We need it and we need it BADLY. Let us concern ourselves more about the salvation of people than the securing of superficial knowledge of God's Word.

The names and addresses of those baptized are: Mr. and Mrs. Myron Vanportfleet, 136 Webster St., Rt. 11; Mrs. Minnie Eaton, 147 Walter St., Rt. 11; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Woodburn, 119 Abbie St., Rt. 11. Mrs. Sofa Taylor, Jordan Dr., Rt. 11, was baptized some time ago and will be extended the right hand of fellowship with the other members. The Post Office address of all the above is Grand Rapids. Send them a line of welcome and encouragement.

Our annual church meeting was held on Wednesday evening, Jan. 8. There was a splendid turnout of the membership and the business was transacted with an excellent spirit prevailing. The work accomplished during the past year shows some very encouraging results. Eighteen have been baptized, three have been received from other of our churches and one has asked admission from another denomination and will come forward at our next regular service. We rejoice over this victory for the Master.

We are going to have special service for the installation of our church Berean officers recently elected. Announcement of this will be made later.

The first Sunday of the year we had 151 at Sunday School. This doesn't mean much, however, unless we can teach them the ways of the Master and get them to actually practice the same. There is too much sowing for what reaping we do as a denomination.

At a recent Sunday School period the superintendent of the Kent County Sunday School Association visited our school and he remarked that out of the two hundred schools in the county we had the "peppiest" one of all. The Spirit, if allowed to work freely in the life and being of each leader, teacher and member, will make "peppy" organizations, classes and congregations regardless of the size, or place.

Each year the Sunday School gives a Bible to the pupils that attend Sunday School every Sunday of the year. Last year Darlene Scott, 127 Liberty St., S. E., Rt. 11, was the faithful one. She is a girl of about thirteen years of age. Drop her a short letter urging her to always be as faithful to the Master. Several others were absent only a Sunday or two. Regularity and faithful attendance is a big part of true Christian work.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

The Ladies Aid Society of our church have sponsored their second annual Bazaar and Supper on December 11, 1929, and realized a net profit of $85.00. We feel very much elated over the results of our bazaars, as we are just new at the game, and possibly each one will bring in more than the previous one.

The Christmas entertainment, which was put on by the Sunday School, was very good and was well attended, as our auditorium was filled almost to overflowing. The small children just seem to have a wonderful time, especially when Santa Claus appears on the scene.

Yours in the Faith,

CHURCH OF THE GOLDEN RULE,
Effie K. Jones, Clerk.

On two Friday nights of each month the Rockford Berean class has a speaker for the occasion. Next Friday night, January 17, is the next meeting of this kind. Bro. F. E. Siple expects to be there to address them. The meeting place is at 1904 N. Main St.

A TICKLER

Here is a line you will enjoy:
Dear Restitution Herald: I hope the little yellow slip sent with the last Herald jingled every delinquent's memory as it did mine and that the office will get a regular deluge of dollars to start the New Year!

Permit us to say that while we are very grateful for the dollars that are coming in, we are still able to keep our heads above the deluge. Just try to cover us up.

KOKOMO, INDIANA

The Church of God, 1244 S. Jay St., meets every Sunday morning for Sunday School at 9:30, with an average attendance of 35. On the first Sunday of each month Bro. Vaughn Long preaches for us; every fourth Sunday Bro. Cantwell Drabentstott; the remaining Sunday evenings for Berean study at 7:30. We have a fine class of young people with about 25 enrolled, but an average attendance of only about 12. The class is taught by D. G. Harvey. Adult class attendance average is about 9, and the class is taught by O. J. Parker.

On Sunday morning, January 5, a young Berean student, Charles Martin, came forward for baptism. We went to the water after morning services and Bro. Long baptized him in the all-saving name of our Master. We beseech the brethren everywhere to pray that he may walk worthy of the vocation he has been called to perform.

In the evening Bro. Long gave us a wonderful sermon on "Signs of the Times". At our evening service we were pleased to have with us Mrs. Milfred Jenkins, of Alexandria, Mrs. Effie Eikenberry and daughters Mary and Betty, Mrs. Elka Sheets and daughter of Beard.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
Mrs. Omar J. Parker.

FOR LOVE'S SAKE

Just before I left Dutton (Mich.) for Lansing, Bro. Randall drove to Mr. Leatherman's where I make my home while in Dutton, and took me to see dear Sr. Brewer, who has been a great sufferer. Although she was very weak she seemed glad to see us and we had a pleasant visit with her. As we talked with her we found her strong in the faith of the coming Christ and the hope of the resurrection. We were very sorry we had not thought to bring the Lord's Supper with us that we might have partaken together once more. As we prayed with her we felt the strong ties of love tighten and we believe she felt a little happier even in her weakness for renewed friendships and stronger love ties. A recent letter from her niece says she has had several hard spells since we were there and is very weak. May God be her hiding place and strength during these painful days, and if it be His gracious will, may she be restored to comfortable health and strength. Sr. Brewer has a beautiful home; has lived eighty years of her life doing her part faithfully. She was baptized at Coats Grove many years ago by Bro. Woodward and has been faithfully clinging to the truth and living a Christian life, and is now just waiting God's will in her case. Show your love to her, dear ones, by visiting her. Though she may not be able to see you or talk with you, she will appreciate it.

Later Bro. Randall took Sr. Huff and myself to visit Sr. Hewett and her husband in the Doyle Home, at 343 Union St., S. E., Grand Rapids, Mich. We found them both in the same room with their beds turned so they could see and talk with each other, but neither of them can move without help. We talked of the blessed hope and found Sr. Hewett strong in the hope of seeing her Lord when He shall return to claim His own. The nurse came in and helped her to a sitting position; we then set a little table with the emblems and Bro. Randall read a Scripture lesson. After prayer we all partook of the emblems with them. Their faces were wet with glad tears as we worshiped together.

I thought of the wonderful parable of the last judgment given by our dear Master and its lesson for us today. I wish you would all get your Bibles and read Matt. 25 from the 31st verse to the end of the chapter and determine if we as Christians are doing all we should, and all we will need to, to gain eternal life when the King comes. Let us read part of it: "For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer them and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it to the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

We perhaps will never be called on to do all or any of the hard things mentioned in this parable, unless they come our way, but the least little kindness done in His name counts for Him. And it is the little things we so often neglect doing. O, beloveds, beloveds, could we but realize the just judgments of God resting on us for neglecting these everyday duties, we surely would be more careful and anxious to do them in His name. The pleasant little smile to the ragged urchin we have just passed; the kind word to the vendor of those good fruit cakes which we perhaps cannot buy; the appreciative word to the pastor, or editor, the visit to the alone ones, leaving an orange, a flower, a small box of candy, a good book, an appropriate text of Scripture—all these in His name—count for Him. Do not allow the old excuse to come to your lips, "I just have not had time, you know." If it were any place where you really desired to go you could leave everything and GO. When you know of some lonely, discouraged, heart sore one, leave everything and go and come home with a light heart and a happy face, for you have done it for Him, and it counts.

Let me say here that Sr. Randall could not make any of these visits with us as she herself is suffering from neuritis, and these cold days she has to be careful about exposure. The sisters in the Grand Rapids church realize this and often go to her and lighten her burdens. God bless them. Sr. Hewett told me of a Christian man who comes to their room every week, and reads the Bible to them and talks to them. They appreciate this very much. It helps to brighten many a lonely day. Brethren in Grand Rapids, appoint some sweet loving person with love so strong that it shows in the face to go to these shut-ins and read and pray with them. Leave some little token of love, they will appreciate it so much. You will surely receive a blessing in return. Bro. Randall is always ready to do his part with his car, to go to these places to bring sunshine and cheer. Go, for love's sake.

In His name,
M. A. Woodward.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES

national covenants. Hence the history of the Chronicles has been called ecclesiastical, that of Samuel and the Kings, political.

The student will observe that a large portion of Chronicles is common with the books of Samuel and the Kings. While it is a separate history, it is not intended to supercede the Books of the Kings. Many passages agree almost exactly in word with those of the Kings. Still others are peculiar to themselves, for instance, certain songs at the bringing up of the ark by David, the account of the organization of the temple ritual and the Levitical order, also many of the civil offices of Solomon's reign (1 Chron. 23:27). There are found various incidents in the history of the kings concerning the introduction of some of the prophets (2 Chron. 24, 25). The account of the great passover feast kept by Hezekiah and Josiah is given (2 Chron. 29, 30, 35). Some important matters are omitted, among which are almost all the incidents relating to the northern kingdom. In the history of the southern kingdom are all the records of the sinful acts and consequent misfortunes of David's reign, viz., the affairs of Uriah and Bathsheba, Amnon, Absalom, Sheba, Adonijah, Solomon's judgment administration and sin; and the account connected with Hadad and Rezin.

Many things in this book may have been very interesting to the ancient Jews; but which seem otherwise to the present generation. If any portion of the Scriptures were profitable to the church in some remote age or place, and not at all to others, it would not impeach the wisdom and love of the Father; and if we cannot understand or derive any benefit from those portions it would better be charged to our dullness of apprehension.

The first book begins with genealogies from Adam till long after the captivity, some of which are collected from other parts of Scripture. The advancement of David to the throne is next related and a fuller account is given of his government of the kingdom, especially in the regulation of the priests and Levites, in the service of the sanctuary, in the preparation he made for the building of the temple, and his exhortations to Solomon and to the elders of Israel with which he closed his days.

The sacred writer seems to have dwelt on these subjects to stir up a holy and reverent emulation in his countrymen in restoring the temple worship to its former order and purity, so that in the book the man after God's own heart shines brighter, than in the second book of Samuel.

The genealogies given by Matthew and Luke may be supposed to refer in many respects to this book. When it is said that Zacharias was "of the course of Abia," the reference becomes indisputable, Matt. 24:10; Luke 1:5. The prophecies contained therein agree with those in 2 Samuel and in the Psalms, and therefore cannot be said to be absolute proof of divine inspiration, but the thoughts which pervade it are altogether scriptural. We may feel certain it formed a part of the Jewish Scriptures, for our Savior and His apostles referred to it as the oracle of God.

HAVE YOU READ?

NO, I HAVEN'T READ HIS LATEST BOOK, have you? But you read all the newest books, you say. Then you have read the book of Genesis—the only new, really new book there ever was. Oh, haven't you? Then perhaps you have read that very old book, Job? Oh! it's fine, you must have read it. Or perhaps you like books of travel. Have you ever read the journeyings of Abraham, or the trip of the Israelites, or the voyages of Paul? No? Do you like biographies of successful men? Have you read the life of Joseph, or the life and death of Moses, the great organizer, or the life of the great soldier, Joshua? You haven't?

Maybe you like stories. Have you ever read that wonderful story of Gideon and the Midianites, or the story of the fall of Jericho? Oh, that's thrilling! The story of Ruth and Naomi is very beautiful—have you ever read it? So also is the story of Esther and her uncle, Mordecai. Did you ever read that marvelous story of Daniel and his three friends?

The sweetest story ever told is the story of the Babe of Bethlehem. The saddest of all stories—the story of Calvary—have you read that? The most gloriously triumphant story the world has ever read is the story of The First Easter Morn.

If you enjoy good reading, you must not miss these stories of the ages from the Book of books.—Adapted.

DECREASE OF ISRAEL IN THE WILDERNESS

By Cecil Smead

MOSES NUMBERED ISRAEL in the wilderness of Sinai after they had been gone from Egypt a year and a month. All males from twenty years old and up who were able to go forth to war were numbered. The number was 603,550. Then, because of sin, God condemned them to wander in the wilderness until all were dead excepting two. At the end of forty years of wandering the succeeding generation numbered 601,730 which is a decrease of 1820 as set forth in the book of Numbers, and as shown in the following table:

	Beginning	End	Decrease	Increase
Reuben	46,500	43,730	2,770
Simeon	59,300	22,200	37,100
Gad	45,650	40,500	5,150
Judah	74,600	76,500		1,900
Issachar	54,400	64,300		9,900
Zebulun	57,400	60,500		3,100
Ephraim	40,500	32,500	8,000
Manasseh	32,200	52,700		20,500
Benjamin	35,400	45,600		10,200
Dan	62,700	64,400		1,700
Asher	41,500	53,400		11,900
Naphtali	53,400	45,400	8,000
Total	603,550	601,730
Total decrease			1,820

GOD'S PROMISES

By C. E. Randall

"Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."—2 Peter 1:4.

THESE GREAT PROMISES have been made by God to His children. They are many. Some have been fulfilled; others are in the process of fulfillment; while still others remain to be fulfilled in the future. These promises are dependable. Every jot and tittle will be fulfilled. God never breaks a promise. He doesn't exaggerate the truth. He cannot lie. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began." Titus 1:2. All of God's promises are true. He hasn't lied about a single one. We can implicitly and fully rely upon and believe every one. He is a covenant-keeping God, and as such is able to keep every promise He makes.

Man makes many promises. He keeps some of them; others, circumstances and conditions make it impossible for him to fulfill. Not so with God. He is Master of every circumstance and situation, and there is not anything or any person that can prevent Him doing all that He has promised. Your attention is called to a few of these "exceeding great and precious promises".

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." This promise, like nearly all of God's promises, is for the righteous. This promise has been made and re-made several times. Its fulfillment is still future. God first promised Abraham and his seed the earth for an everlasting possession. Gen. 13:14-16. Abraham did not receive the promise, no, not so much as to even set his foot on. But his faith remained firm and he believed God would give it him, and his faith was counted for righteousness. Rom. 4:3.

God will make this promise good. It is far-reaching. Abraham's seed are multitudinous. Abraham couldn't be made perfect without his seed. "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11:39, 40. The "us" needed to be developed before the promise could be realized. The "us" are Abraham's seed and heirs. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3:29. This promise will be fully realized through Christ's coming and the resurrection. Then will we come into the full possession of our promised inheritance. This promise is a wonderful one, yet there are greater ones.

Though our sins be as scarlet, "they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool", is a greater promise than the land promise. God has never failed to keep this promise, when man sought earnestly and prayerfully for its fulfillment. God has done more to provide for the carrying out of this particular promise than of any other. The tabernacle and temple service and all of the sacrificial rites, and greatest of all the "unspeakable gift" were for the cleansing of man from sin.

God is willing and anxious to hide His face from our sins and to blot them out from the "book of remembrance" if we will but confess them. Don't be afraid to talk about the confession of sins, and above all don't fail or hesitate to confess them. 1 John 1:8-10. Our sins will never be removed from us as far as the "east is from the west" unless we, from the depths of our hearts, renounce the "hidden things of darkness" and make full confession of all guilt. Don't try to live on the great promises of God unless you have claimed this one. It comes first. No one will ever become the seed of Abraham with his garments smeared and stained with sin.

"Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord . . . and I will receive you." If you are interested in the promises of God put this last one to work, and partake of some of its fullness before you try to measure and understand the "deeper things of God".

Next week we will call again and tell you about some of God's other promises.

“And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and to all men, . . . to the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints.”—1 Thessalonians 3:12-13.

THE COMING OF CHRIST

IF THERE IS one promise in the Scripture more frequently stated than another promise it possibly is the assurance of the second coming of our Lord and Master. Jesus himself said, John 14, “If I go away, I will come again.” He also taught, Matt. 16:27, “The Son of man shall come in the glory of the Father with his angels”; and again, Matt. 25:31, “when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, . . .” It was the first promise following our Lord’s ascension to the Father’s right hand: “This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.” Acts 1:11. It is also the last recorded promise of Scripture, “Surely I come quickly.” Rev. 22:20.

THE CHRISTIAN AND CHRIST’S SECOND COMING

THERE ARE BLESSINGS unnumbered, there are benefits invaluable, there are joys unspeakable, accruing to the Christian from day to day, but the crowning blessing, the crowning good awaits the return of Him who is Captain and Savior. The gift of life, even of life eternal, immortal, awaits His return: “When Christ who is our life shall appear then shall ye also appear with him in glory.” Col. 3:3. The change of the Christian’s corruptible body like unto the glorious body of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ awaits His second coming: “For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, . . .” Phil. 3:20-21.

Thus to the Christian the second coming of Jesus Christ is far more than a mere event; it is the dawn of a new day; it is the beginning of a new era of existence. It is the dawn of immortality, the dawn of incorruptibility of a glorious body. The second coming of Christ introduces eternity. It is heaven’s joy-bell announcing to the Christian the opening of a day altogether new to creation.

With these many gifts from God, the Christian is equipped for the grand work that opens up with this new era. Like Israel crossing the swollen Jordan into the land of promise, the entering of that land, the realization of the long-waiting promises of God was not a day of cessation but a day of new beginning. So will it be at the second coming of Christ with the Christian.

THE DEAD AND CHRIST’S SECOND COMING

UNNUMBERED HOPES lie buried with the dead. Neither God nor man has ever revealed how such hopes can be renewed, how the dead themselves can again take up the activities of life without the resurrection. Many schemes have been invented by agonizing man in an effort to make possible the realization of some of these long-buried aims. The Bible comes bounding to us with the joyous proclamation that our Lord and Master, after He leaves the Father’s throne for His second advent to man, will while yet in the heavens issue forth His powerful call to those who sleep in Christ. The inspired apostle writing to the Thessalonians says, “The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first.”—4:16. Here is another joy-startling event that awaits the second coming of Christ for its accomplishment. Then, and not till then, according to the words of Scripture the hopes of the buried faithful may be renewed by a resurrection from the dead.

So, again, the second coming of Christ is more than a mere event. In this instance it is the opening of the graves of the faithful ones; it is the entrance upon a new life; it is the gathering together of the faithful in Christ of all times, no longer to wander in the wilderness of sin, but to enter into the glories of the golden age and to engage anew in life’s activities, activities not like unto the activities of mortality, but activities with God’s Son, activities unto the thrill of incorruption of spiritual nature, activities mapped out and directed by Him who is the King of kings and Lord of lords.

Such is part of the meaning of John’s closing words in the book of inspiration, “Even so, come, Lord Jesus.”

SOME PROPHETIC STUDIES

By R. H. Judd

THE NEARNESS OF GOD and approachability unto Him were veritable realities to the Hebrew prophets. To them the people of Israel were undoubtedly God's chosen people. They continually recognized a personal relationship between God and the people, and between the people and God; yet bearing in mind the great sovereignty of Jehovah they were unremitting in their endeavors to remind their fellows of the allegiance they owed to Him. That God himself recognized this relationship is clearly indicated by the promises, rewards and warnings conveyed through the prophets concerning obedience or disobedience to His commands. Thus we find pervading the spirit of each of the prophets a keen sense of righteousness and intense aggressiveness against sin, especially the sin of disloyalty to Jehovah who was the direct Source of every blessing which they enjoyed.

The essential marks of a prophet were:

1. Consciousness of a divine call.
Isa. 6:1-8; Jer. 1:4-10; Ezek. 3:10-14; Micah 3:8. Note the certainty of consciousness in this instance in the contrast he draws between himself and the false prophets of vv. 5-7.
2. Communion and communication with Jehovah.
Amos 3:7-8.
3. Faithfulness.
Jer. 23:28.
4. Sanctity of character, purged with the fire of trial and personal testing.
Isa. 6:5-9.
5. Watchfulness.
Hab. 2:1-2; 1 Kings 22:14.
6. Prediction.
General as Deut. 18:21, 22.
Particular as 1 Kings 22:15, 16, etc.

The word "prophet" has in common use today come to mean "one who foretells the future". This is possibly owing to the outstanding uniqueness of predictive prophecy and its distinctive and exclusive relationship to the Hebrew prophets who were without parallel among any people in any age of the world's history. They were, however, first and foremost, preachers to their own times. In short, they were witness bearers and their work was testimony for Jehovah, just as in Rev. 19:10 John significantly says, "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." The great spirit of prophecy is not prediction, though it may contain it, but testimony, and in Old and New Testament alike the testimony of Jesus is its essential theme and the predictive details are providential beacon lights along the way.

That Moses was recognized as the first and greatest of the prophets is apparent throughout the whole history of the chosen people. Predictive utterances, it is true, were made before his time, but these, though doubtless inspired, were not then regarded as uttered by authority delegated to one distinctly representative of Jehovah for the express purpose of acting as God's messenger. Moses seems to be the first thus set apart and as such he stands without a peer in the whole history of the Israelitish nation. That Christ himself placed His seal upon this estimate of Moses will not be questioned by those who are familiar with the life and history of our Savior.

Moses was great as a leader, philosopher, lawgiver, poet, and king in all but name, yet undoubtedly as a true prophet of God he was greater still. Probably Moses himself considered this service greatest, for in his remarkable prediction concerning the Messiah he says, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet, like unto me . . ." Thus to him, to be spokesman for the Most High God was the greatest honor given to man, and he could not think any other honor more fitting to bestow on the One of whom he was only a representative type.

The very fact that Israel's prophets dared to utter prophecies concerning individuals and nations, stating the rise of one and the fall of another and staking without fear the sure fulfillment of what they uttered, is amazing proof that they were conscious of an upholding and inspiring wisdom not their own. Under no other conditions can their lives and their actions be accounted for. Neither were these prophecies spoken only, for in many instances they were committed to writing, thus rendering themselves doubly responsible for what they spoke. The writings of the Hebrew prophets abound in detailed pronouncements of the destinies of various nations which surround them, with which they continually came in contact. Boldly they told the fate of huge overshadowing empires such as Egypt, Assyria, Chaldea and even of nations yet to be.

How do the unbeliever and the infidel account for the remarkable, outstanding fact that no other kingdoms of the world, past or present, have ever presumed to embody in their national records literature of such a kind? Yet this fact is made still more remarkable when it is remembered that though centuries have intervened since these prophecies were uttered and the nation itself scattered to the four winds of heaven, these records have been preserved and are still bearing ever widening testimony to the truth of these servants of Jehovah who dared to put their trust in Him.

THE NEED OF DIVINE HELP

PSALM 127:1-2

WITHOUT THE HELP of God, all human toil is vain. Be it the building of a house or the watching of a city, unless Jehovah be there to help and inspire, it is all in vain. Ye must not wear your strength out, as if all depended upon you. It is idle for you to rise so early and to sit down so late to the evening meal, thus eating the bread of sorrow. For the best gifts do not go to the busiest hands. Jehovah bestows his gifts upon those whom he loves, when they rest and are still. —Rendered in Paraphrase by John Edgar McFayden.

A LITTLE WHILE

A little while, our trials shall be over;
 A little while, our tears be wiped away;
 A little while, the presence of Jehovah
 Shall turn our darkness into heaven's bright day.

A little while, the fears that oft surround us
 Shall to the memories of the past belong;
 A little while, the love that sought and found us
 Shall change our weeping into heaven's glad song.

A little while! His presence goes before us,
 A fire by night, a shadowy cloud by day;
 His banner, love inscribed, is floating o'er us,
 His arm almighty is our strength and stay!

A little while to live and work for Jesus,
 To gather with the reapers till He come;
 Oh, let not faithless fears and doubting seize us—
 A little while, and then the harvest-home!

A little while! 'Tis ever growing nearer—
 The wished-for dawning of that glorious day.
 Blest Savior, make our spirit's vision clearer,
 And guide, oh, guide us in the shining way.

A little while! Oh, blessed expectation!
 A little while! "Lord, tarry not," we cry;
 Our hearts up leap in fond anticipation;
 Rejoice! The coming of the Lord is nigh!

THE SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE

By Sydney E. Magaw

TO SACRIFICE is to give to another what one might well use for himself. One will hardly sacrifice for another not loved, and the volume of sacrifice is the measure of love.

Sacrifices will be made to God where there is love for God. In these is a double purpose. First, God is in this way given honor, and His work advanced. Second, there is the confession of need and of having faith in receiving that need. Especially is this latter thought shown in the sacrifices of slain animals of the ancients. Abel, in slaying a lamb as an offering to God, not only showed reverence to the Creator, but more exactly confessed that his sins deserved death and that he needed the blood of atonement which his sacrifice typified. Not until man's fall was there an animal slain for sacrifice. Then is the first that we read of skins being used for the clothing of man. Sin needs cleansing. There must be a sacrifice.

The Jewish people could not offer their own sacrifices, but they were to bring them to the priest and he offered them to God. This typified the way in which God will receive offerings today. God accepts sacrifices only through Christ, the High Priest. All who would give to God must make those gifts to Christ. He is Mediator and there is just one. Jesus said, "I am the door," and "he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber"; and again, "I am the way, the truth, and the life, no man cometh unto the Father but by me." The Jewish leaders continued to sacrifice, but God cursed the nation because they would not make those sacrifices through Christ.

The Christian will sacrifice, for he is one with Christ and Christ sacrificed. The Lord was rich in wisdom and power. His enemies, even, were astonished at Him. Waves were quieted; sick were healed; hungry were fed, and the dead lived again. With all this power the Master was unselfish. He sacrificed; no man's possessions did He covet; and, speaking of His own life, He said, "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." With all miraculous power, and knowing himself to be God's appointed King over Israel He "gave himself a ransom for many". His sacrifice was the giving of blessings to others and the taking for himself a chair for a throne, a reed for a sceptre, and thorns for a crown. Alone, upon the cross, listening to the taunts of mockers, He was not only obedient unto the Father's will, but He sacrificed His own life blood. No longer need there be the killing of animals as sacrifices in type of the Lamb of the world. The atonement was made, as He said, "It is finished." "The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep."

How can one claim this Christ and yet never sacrifice? How can one have hope of reward at resurrection with no gifts for the King? How can one be unashamed and keep his talents all for self and worldly gain?

Jesus taught us to sacrifice. His life spoke sacrifice. What a lesson of humility, of loyalty and service was that of the Savior's as He washed the feet of Peter! He said to all, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." The parable of the poor widow giving all she had is a challenge to me.

There is reward that can be gained only in one way. It is through service to Christ. The reward is one much sought for, not only life, nor eternal life, but a new life in which this vile body shall be fashioned like unto His own glorious body. That reward is one worth all the gifts, all the consecration one can give in a short span of activity. In giving we gain; to lose is to find. Cast thy bread upon the waters, and after many days it will return. The Lord said, "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it, . . . and whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you he shall in no wise lose his reward."

We are only servants. We cannot give too much to the Lord. He sacrificed for us and let us sacrifice for Him. Let us have the true spirit of sacrifice, and put into His service what we could well use for ourselves.

THE VALUE OF PRAYER

By Harvey Krogh

DID YOU EVER hear a little boy ask his father if he could go outdoors to play? Surely you have, and the father has given his consent if it is well for the boy that he play outdoors. Maybe you have heard a child say, "Daddy, how can I fix my wagon?" The father of the child will tell him how to fix the toy or may even help him do so. When you were a child you asked your father what to do and how to do it. You asked him if you were doing your work right; you talked with him frequently and with confidence.

We are yet children and we have a Father in heaven who is even more willing to help us than are our earthly fathers. "For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?"—Luke 11:10-13.

It may be well to give a definition of prayer at this time. Cruden says, "Prayer is an offering of our desires to God for things lawful and needful, with an humble confidence to obtain them through the lone meditation of Christ to the praise of the mercy, truth, and power of God."

Do we doubt the answering of prayer? If so, we are doubting Christ's words: "And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."—Matt. 21:22.

If our prayer fails it may be for the reason that is given in James 4:3: "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." James 1:6 says, "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed." Therefore we must have faith.

"And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, that whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, What things so ever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them."—Mark 11:22-24. If these mountains be obstacles or temptations in our path, if we ask believing that God will move them, they will be moved. We believe it, but I am afraid that we lack faith.

The question may arise: For what shall I ask? In 1 John 5:14, 15 we find that if we ask anything according to His will it shall be given us. What is His will? Is it not that we should walk in paths of righteousness? He will guide us if we only let Him. We are to ask for wisdom according to James 1:5. We need wisdom to choose between good and evil. We are also told to pray for the sick. God will make them well, for His love and mercy are unmeasured.

Christ told His apostles, "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation." Mark 14:38. While we are praying to God, communing with Him, we will not think of evil. Paul, in his letter to the Thessalonian brethren, says, "Pray without ceasing." "Hitherto have ye asked nothing in my name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." We cannot measure the joy that comes to us when we ask and receive. It is a joy far beyond the joy that we have in temporal things.

"Lord, teach us to pray," for it is only through prayer that we receive daily guidance of our Father in heaven.

THE PARACLETE

By C. W. Dean

THE WORD, HOLY SPIRIT, Greek, hagion pneuma, appears in the Greek Scriptures or New Testament ninety-two times, and in every case it involves a personality. Its operation is three-fold, baptism, power and gift. The Holy Spirit which we receive through belief is not that which was given after Jesus was glorified, John 7:39, or that is, the Spirit they that believed on Him were to receive was not the hagion pneuma. Christ, being exalted at the right hand of God, received the promise of the Father, the Holy Spirit.

We have heard it said that the Holy Spirit is the power of the Most High God and emanates from Him only. We have seen it written that if it were possible that the Holy Spirit be actually demonstrated as a third person, it will also demonstrate that Almighty God himself was devoid of power. Let us remember that Paul said that in the latter days some would be holding a form of godliness, but would deny the power thereof, and that Jesus said that all manner of sin shall be forgiven unto men, but to sin against the Holy Spirit hath no forgiveness in two ages. Then let us thank God that this does not apply to nations, but to Israel in this age. And in the age to come it applies to ALL.

Now let us see what the Scriptures say of the Holy Spirit concerning its baptism, its power and its gift. First let us distinguish this fact, which is hard for Christendom to apprehend, that all things are of God, Rom. 11:36, 1 Cor. 8:6; 11:12; 2 Cor. 5:18. God is the great Cause, Source and Origin of all things, by and through which He will eventually effect His eonian purpose which He made in Christ Jesus. When God's eonian purpose has been completed, He as Father will be All in All, 1 Cor. 15:28, and it is through the cross, Col. 1:20. All is out of God, all is through God, and all is for—into—God, Rom. 11:36. His eonian purpose hid in Christ Jesus will have its fulfillment. God has highly exalted Him above every name in heaven and in the earth. All things are subject unto Him, 1 Cor. 15.

The universality of Christ's subjection of all under His feet is evident from the one exception, God himself. God is all in Christ now; He will be all in His saints when they are made alive. He will be All in All when death is abolished at the consummation. Who but Christ can accomplish universal reconciliation? God is not dealing direct with human beings, not the Adamic posterity. All is done through Christ, 1 Cor. 15:22.

Having been exalted at the right hand of God, Christ Jesus received the promise of the Father, the Holy Spirit. John the Baptist had foretold that Jesus would baptize in or with the Holy Spirit, Matt. 3:11. Christ himself confirmed it after His resurrection, Acts 1:5, and promised power in the Holy Spirit, Acts 1:8. On the day of Pentecost they were baptized with the Holy Spirit, Acts 2:4, and they spoke with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance. There were about 120 gathered together, Acts 1:15. They cast lots to select an apostle to take the office of Judas, the lot fell upon Matthias and he was numbered with the eleven. Peter, standing up with the eleven, declared that Jesus did God raise from the dead and by His right hand did exalt Him. And Christ, having received the promise of the Father, the Holy Spirit, hath poured forth this, which ye now see and hear.

"Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." The apostles, only, did signs and wonders, but those that believed were together, and had all things in common. They sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all accordingly as needed, and day by day continued steadfastly with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread at home. And the Lord added to them day by day those that were saved. Such is the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Peter was the first apostle to show his power in the Holy Spirit after it had been given, Acts 3:1-8. The Holy Spirit has a voice, Heb. 3:7. Surely we cannot doubt a personality here. The Holy Spirit spoke before by the mouth of David, Acts 1:16. The Holy Spirit of the Old Testament scriptures, Psa. 51:11; Isa. 63:10-11, is translated from the Hebrew word godesh, and in its original language means, "an object set apart". The Holy Spirit spoke through Isaiah the prophet, Acts 28:25.

Saul, after being severed from the twelve circumcision apostles by the Holy Spirit for a special work, has a change of name and becomes Paul, the apostle to the nations. Acts 13:3-13. Here Paul encounters a Jew who is a false prophet and by the power of the Holy Spirit he pronounces blindness upon him for a season in the name of the Lord. In fact all miracles, signs and wonders performed by the apostles in the power of the Holy Spirit were done in the name of Christ, or Jesus Christ, or Lord Jesus, plainly showing that the Holy Spirit, be it influence or power, emanated from Jesus Christ to His apostles.

EVERY DAY MIRACLES

By Clarence Lapp

King WINTER is once more in our midst, bringing with him cold and ice. He has covered old Mother Earth with a warm blanket of snow. Over night she has been transformed from a thing of somber blackness into a bright and dazzling beauty. We see the snow fall from God out of heaven in all its purity and freshness, and little do we think of the lesson we can gain from it. Some snow falls in the street and is trodden under foot of man or beast and soon becomes dirty and polluted with filth. No longer does it show forth in all its radiance and beauty, in all its whiteness and purity but is looked upon rather as a thing undesirable. Soon warmer days come and the warmth of God's sunshine comes forth in all its glory and power. A miracle is performed as the snow is melted and in the form of vapor rises toward the Creator of all.

How similar we find life to be! As we look into the innocent face of a babe, pure and spotless, without the slightest thought or knowledge of sin, we all say there is nothing more beautiful. All too soon the babe is a youth and steps into the realm of manhood or womanhood. Some choose the strait and narrow way, the way to life eternal. Others choose the broad way, the way to destruction. Some make their choice voluntarily, others because of ignorance. Time and sin leave their mark and again we see this life. It is the same life, but what a vast difference! First it was pure and spotless as the new-fallen snow, but now the marks of sin have time and again besmirched it; time and again sin has dragged it into the gutter until there is no resemblance of its former self. It is now filthy and dejected, something repulsive and without hope.

But wait! We see on the distant horizon a great light appearing. Closer and closer it comes, shedding its piercing beams into every nook and corner of the whole earth, giving life and hope to all who will receive it, dispelling darkness and warming every creature by its power. Then we hear a voice, even Christ, say, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

He also says, "Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow." Life is once more given hope through Christ and as the snow is melted and rises in vapor out of the filth of the street by the power of the sun, so Christ by His mighty power to save and cleanse from all unrighteousness, lifts man from the squalor of sin to the beauty of righteousness and hope. And once more we see another miracle performed through Jesus Christ our Savior, the Life and Light of this world.

It's worth knowing, that there are about 310,000,000 cubic miles of water in the sea. If this were spread uniformly over the entire earth instead of being collected in ocean basins it would make a sea a little over one and a half miles deep.—S. E. Haney.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

FIRST THINGS FIRST

GOD OVER ALL

Sunday, January 26—Matthew 22:34-46.

"I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside me."—Isaiah 45:5.

THE CHIEF or first of all the commandments given unto man is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." In man's love and service and adoration he is to look upon God as chief or first in everything. Man's Creator, man's Provider, man's Savior is, from every possible viewpoint of reasoning, of first importance to man. How can he possibly reason differently, be his circumstances what they may?

To this outstanding truth the Christian especially should bear daily testimony in thought, in word, in deed. No single word of life should be spoken, no single act of life should be performed without due consideration of the great truth that God is over all, there is none else. It is "in him we live, and move, and have our being." Acts 17:28.

HALLOWED BE THY NAME

Monday, January 27—Matthew 6:5-15.

"Pray without ceasing."—1 Thessalonians 5:17.

IN THE FIRST recorded sermon of our Savior, He emphasized the value and meaning of prayer. He told His disciples, "Thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." "Thy Father" is the Creator, the Almighty, the great Covenant God; His every word is as faithful as the sun in heaven.

Jesus taught His disciples to submit in prayer to every authority, to every will of the Father; to commit in prayer every problem of life. He led His would-be followers into the very throne presence of Him who is Head and Sovereign over the fullness of the world. Thus the Savior exalted prayer to the place of first importance in the Christian's life and in such prayer led the Christian without ceasing before Him who is first or chief in all the world.

TREASURES IN HEAVEN

Tuesday, January 28—Matthew 6:19-25.

"Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."—Matthew 6:21.

Safely behind the guarded and locked gratings, in behind the huge steel doors, farther in within the cautiously locked fire-proof drawer, one deposits his treasures of valuable papers, coins and precious gems. They represent the accumulated gatherings of a lifetime; they are the treasures of a man's heart. It is there that many a man stores his heart, that is, his heart's interest; not that he ever expects to live behind that door which is behind the heavy gratings, but he places them there that they may be accessible whenever wanted.

But with far greater safety, and looking unto eternal needs, the Savior taught His disciples to so live, pursue and accomplish that the things of first importance in life's matters might be treasured beneath the protection and guardianship of the Creator himself. That is, man's chief conduct of life, his first and foremost aim should be to so live that his life's attainments will be acceptably treasured and protected by the individual for his use and reward throughout eternity. First things first were ever the Savior's teachings.

HEAVEN'S TIME-LOCKED TREASURE

Wednesday, January 29—Luke 18:18-25.

"The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."—Romans 6:23.

"When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory."—Col. 3:4.

Safely guarded by the Creator of life, hidden ever from the direct vision of mortality, may one lay up in the keeping of God's Son, eternal life. The ruler asked the "Good Master" how he could provide this treasure. The Savior's answer revealed that it could be provided only by service, by that service prompted by affection for one's fellows, God's children, those for whom the Savior died. Such service, such active rapport with God will by the Father be treasured away in terms of eternal life. This treasure is to be presented to its worthy recipients at the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior. It is the gift of God. It cannot be given by man; it cannot be earned by him; it is in no sense a wage due him. It is God's own gift. It is given, not as having been earned, but as a free gift. Jesus taught the ruler that manner of life which would call forth this gracious heaven-stored treasure.

CHRIST'S OWN SERVICE

Thursday, January 30—John 4:27-38.

"My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work."—John 4:34.

None are poorer than those who are without God. Such was the position of the Samaritan woman. Not only did the Savior teach the ruler, Luke 18, to sell all he had and give to the poor, but He did likewise. He used all that was His in power and strength and knowledge that He might give to the Samaritan woman and to all in like position, those truths and those directions that would lead them to become possessed of the Father's greatest gifts. In doing for others the Savior ever grew more and more into the heart of His Father, the Creator.

"This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," was no idle word of God. The deep, true godliness of that

IN RETURN FOR GOD'S GIFT

By S. E. Haney

"For when we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly."—Rom. 5:6.

WHY IS IT that no one has definite knowledge concerning our Savior's birth; and that we are not commanded to commemorate His birth? This being true, by what authority or influence does Christendom celebrate His birth? First be it understood, that the writer does not advocate the abolition of this sacred festival. Far be it from him, providing it is done in the spirit and understanding of the divine alliance of His birth with our redemption. Viewed from this angle, His birth is as hallowed as His death and resurrection. It is thus that the consecrated and sanctified Christian celebrates his Savior's birth, even though he does not know nor care on what day or month He was born.

We know, chronologically, the exact date of Christ's death, resurrection and ascension; and had God intended us to know the date of His Son's birth it would have been just as definitely recorded. There are reasons for these two omissions, namely, the date of Jesus' birth and a commandment to celebrate it. Man's omissions are usually the result of carelessness, but not so with God. So let us see whether we can find reasonable and logical solutions to our two perplexing problems.

Is not the pervading influence which actuates Christendom to celebrate Christ's birth almost entirely materialistic? Surface indications appear so. And should not this serve as a reasonable clew to our heavenly Father's purpose in keeping the date of our Savior's birth in obscurity, that His "very elect" might avoid the danger of again becoming entangled with the things which appeal to the physical, natural man?

God says, "Come out from among them (the world, worldly spirit), and be ye separate". The spirit of Christmas is, Come, let us get together and have a season of greeting and fellowship by the exchange of the things that are in the world, reminding us of the spider and the fly. The Holy Spirit says, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof (its desires, Emph. Dia.): but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." 1 John 2:1-17.

But many may ask, Did not God set us an example in giving when He gave His Son, the best and all that was near and dear to Him, that mankind might have a chance to escape everlasting death? And did not Jesus duplicate such love by giving himself a ransom for all? Yes, and we shall do well to ever have such a spirit dominate us even though such heavenly love does not appeal to the unregenerate man: all is "foolishness unto him," 1 Cor. 2:14.

Paul, referring to Jesus' gift of himself for a lost world says, "For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness: but unto us which are saved it is the power of God."—1 Cor. 1:18.

God desires us to manifest an appreciation of His great sacrifice and the voluntary, vicarious death of His Son by a reciprocal spirit, which cannot be done by the "things" of this world which are soon to pass away. Besides it is written, "The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of Hosts, . . . I will take no bullock out of thy house, nor he goat out of thy fold: for every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof."—Hag. 2:8; Psalm 50:9-12. He continues: "Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High: and call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me."

It is a sad fact that the average Christian has but little conception of all that God accomplished for him on Calvary; yet he knows Christ was vicariously sacrificed in his behalf, for which he ought to be obedient to all of God's commandments. But is he? God gave the best He had to redeem us from annihilation; and it is but just for him to demand the best we have, hence the request, "My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe (delight in, R. V.) my ways," Prov. 23:26. By doing this the next step is easy, "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life", both physical and spiritual. God emphasizes this point—"Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, and that seek him with the whole heart." Psa. 119:2.

"Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required."—Jesus. The secrets of the Most High are being revealed in these last days, and God expects proportionally more faith and obedience, this being the only mode of progress, and God's order of procedure. Let us examine ourselves and learn how our lives concur with God's commands, ever keeping in mind that "in due time Christ died for the ungodly", and that likewise, in due time He will come for His saints as recorded, 1 Cor. 15:51-54; 1 Thess. 4:13-8. The word "alive" in the phrase, "we which are alive," means more than the physical. It includes the spiritual, specifically. There is a sad awakening in the semi-hybrid, ringstraked, speckled and spotted Christians. That happy rapturous class will not be composed of people who simply happen to be alive and expecting His coming, but rather those who shall have made themselves ready by having "washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the lamb", and having survived much tribulation and testing.

How it behooves us to have self-life obliterated, to be disentangled from the world, with our "affection" (mind margin) on things above, not on things on the earth! We read, "Enoch walked with God," and "by faith was translated that he should not see death," Gen. 5:24; Heb. 11:5. Is God going to require anything less than Enoch's "walk" and "faith" of us in order to escape death by translation?

THE PRAYERS OF DAVID ARE ENDED

By G. Eldred Marsh

"The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended."—Psalm 72:20.

THE VOICE OF THE MAN after God's own heart, who for four decades ruled over Israel, is no longer raised in worship and in praise to Jehovah of Hosts! "The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended"! His lips are stilled in death, "for David is not ascended into the heavens", but he is "both dead and buried" and as an evidence of his passing "his sepulchre is with us unto this day." Acts 2:34, 29.

"The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended" because David is dead, and "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Psalm 115:17. Yet the influence of his life remains with us still, to bring to us lessons of devotion and faith and the efficacy of prayer, for David was indeed "a praying king".

The stress I have placed upon this closing expression of the seventy-second Psalm is largely a play upon words, for it was never intended to indicate the termination of David's life or his inability to offer petitions to the Almighty because of his death. It was placed where we find it to mark the close of one division of the Hebrew Psalter or Book of Songs. Yet I feel justified in making the application of it that I am doing because of the unmistakable truth of my conclusion, that it is because David is dead that he no longer lifts his voice in prayer and praise to the Author of "every good and every perfect gift."

"The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended" until the Giver of all life shall call him forth and clothe him with immortality in the morning of the resurrection; but I know there is much of blessing, much of consolation, much of spiritual strength to be gained by us if we will consider carefully the prayers of the "praying king."

First of all, David was an humble petitioner at the throne of grace. He called upon God as a true suppliant. He realized His own weakness and was quick to acknowledge his sin. Listen to his plea for pardon!

"Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy lovingkindness;
According to the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.
Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity,
And cleanse me from my sin.
For I know my transgressions;
And my sin is ever before me."

—Psalm 51:1-3, A. R. V.

It was this same "praying king" who first uttered the humble yet consoling words quoted a thousand years later by his blessed Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, in the third beatitude of the Sermon on the Mount: "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." Matthew 5:5. And as we read David's wonderful sermon in the thirty-seventh Psalm we are deeply impressed with its remarkable resemblance to that of the Master, delivered a millennium afterwards. In both discourses humility and meekness are held forth as most godly virtues.

And that is the manner in which effective prayer must be made. Faith is nourished in an atmosphere of humbleness, for only the humble can truly trust in God and lean wholly upon Him. We must recognize our need. We must realize the limitations of human flesh and spirit. We must come to feel fully our own inability and the inability of our fellows to satisfy the demands of our natures completely in both their material and their spiritual aspects. In short, we must approach God in the attitude prescribed by Peter: "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time: casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you." 1 Peter 5:6-7.

THE WAY, THE TRUTH, THE LIFE

Thou art the Way—to Thee alone
From sin and death we flee;
And he who would the Father seek,
Must seek Him, Lord, by Thee.

Thou art the Truth—Thy word alone
True wisdom can impart;
Thou only canst inform the mind,
And purify the heart.

Thou art the Life—the rending tomb
Proclaims Thy conquering arm;
And those who put their trust in Thee,
Nor sin, nor death shall harm.

Thou art the Way, the Truth, the Life;
Grant us that Way to know,
That Truth to keep, that Life to win,
Where joys eternal flow.—Unknown.

THE FOLLOWING was selected and contributed to Queries Column by J. Arthur Johnson. Thank you, Bro. Johnson.

A SHEPHERD, being asked the number of sheep in his flock, replied: "If you divide the number of camels which Job had before their captivity by the Chaldeans, by the number of the king's men sent to take Jeremiah from the dungeon; add to the quotient the number of lords entertained at the feast of Belshazzar; from this amount subtract the number of righteous persons who could have saved Sodom; multiply by the age of David when he began to reign; divide by the number in Gideon's band; add the number of Philistines whom Samson slew with a jaw-bone; subtract the number of Solomon's songs; multiply by the number of days Job's friends tarried without saying a word; subtract the number of fish caught in the draft of the miracle of fishes, and the remainder will be the number of sheep in my flock." HOW MANY HAD HE?

PETER'S SERVICE

Friday, January 31—Acts 3:1-10.

"Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."—Acts 3:6.

Peter could not give what he did not have. He had neither silver nor gold. The man who had never walked, who at the golden gate of the temple was begging pittances of those who entered, was one of earth's most needy ones. Peter revealed his godliness; all that he had he was willing to give. "Rise up and walk"! What a gift it was! It was not in his own name; it was in the name of Jesus Christ; it was in testimony to the power of Christ, even of the power of God. What loyalty to the Master; what service to Peter's fellow men! Indeed Peter was one who had "left all and followed" Jesus, and now he was giving of the fullness of his gains unto his needy fellow.

What a lesson to us! Little do we realize the possibilities of the Christian, the possible individual development in Christ, the possible service unto the needy. Like loyalty and service rendered by Peter is in order for Christians today.

PAUL'S SERVICE

Saturday, February 1—Acts 21:7-14.

"What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus."—V. 13.

This stalwart manly Saul had "left all, and followed him", his standing among the learned of the synagogues, his ability of service in the high places of his nation. He had left all that at one time had seemed great and dear to him and had turned to follow Him who was the lowly Nazarene. And now in service to his God, to his Savior, and to his fellow men he was not only willing but glad to give the rest that might be his to give; to be bound "for the name of the Lord Jesus", yea, "to die at Jerusalem" for Him. Let us with caution note for whom he was willing to do this—"for the name of the Lord Jesus". What loyalty of service, what lesson of possibility, what example for following!

After he had come to Jerusalem, after he had been bound, after he had been transported across the deep sea, after the shipwreck, after the imprisonment in Rome, after a two years' ministry unto his keepers—after all this, Paul said, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."—2 Timothy 4:6-8.

LET YOUR LIGHT SO SHINE BEFORE MEN THAT THEY MAY . . . GLORIFY YOUR FATHER WHICH IS IN HEAVEN.—MATT. 5:16.

IN KEEPING WITH OUR VOCATION

THERE ARE many conditions in the world today the existence of which we realize only vaguely, until some particular association brings them sharply, and sometimes shockingly, to our recognition.

Most of us have been trained and taught in certain ways. But it is a fact that the world is changing. Are we adjusting ourselves to cope with the new order of things? What kind of example are we setting to those around us?

If you will pardon the personal references, I will give you for example a case which illustrates my thought quite well.

There is in our office a young artist who frequently discusses with me these changing conditions, and unconsciously gives me a viewpoint which otherwise I would not have. He is one of several men in the same department who do not drink or smoke or indulge in some of the practices commonly considered vices, and I ponder over this particular feature of his make-up, and wonder why it is so. In this day it is the exception rather than the rule. Yet this young man is not a Christian; on the contrary, he is one of the most radical opponents not only of Christianity but of all forms of religion that I have ever known. It sends through one's whole being an actual twinge of pain to hear him denounce the things that are sacred to the heart of the child of God.

Memory recalls many a long-drawn-out opposition to the dance, the card game, the use of tobacco, and many a "temperance" lesson in our church papers or our Sunday Schools. These are all right, yes, they are very good, but I wonder if we do not place too much stress on some of these minor evils and too little on the underlying principles which result in true Christian conduct as their natural fruitage?

When one comes in contact with an example such as the one mentioned above, he is compelled to reason the matter out something like this: all the splendid moral virtues in the world will avail one nothing unless they are based on a love of God and the acceptance of His Son Jesus Christ. If only we could implant into our lives more of the spirit that Christ manifested when He prayed, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt", what assurance we would have that the little acts and words of every day would be in accordance with God's pleasure.

The young people of today base their opinions of Christianity largely upon the examples they see manifested. The position of the Christian therefore is one of paramount importance. Are we responsible for the modern attitude toward Christianity? Did you ever stop to think that you cannot do a thing or say a thing without influencing someone, somewhere, for better or for worse? There is no such thing as neutral ground in the struggle of life; an influence that either uplifts or degrades is as inevitable as the shadow you cast on a sunny day.

It is for us who bear the name of Christ, therefore, to be careful to make our lives an inspiration to others to follow rather than to ridicule. They won't forsake art because someone who claims to be an artist disgraces the profession, but they will condemn Christianity if you fall short of the standard of Christ.

Let us cultivate the constant companionship of our Guide and Counsellor, and we shall not prove unworthy of His trust.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

THE ST. CLOUD BEREAN SOCIETY recently met and elected the following officers for the coming year: President, John Savage; Vice-President, Edna Spicer; Secretary and Treasurer, Helen Spicer; Organist, Bernice Johnson; Instructor, Mrs. T. M. Savage.

We have fifteen members in our society, and our aim for this year is to grow in grace and strength, and to bring others to Christ. May we as a class do our part in the Lord's work and live closer to our Redeemer than we have ever done before.

Helen Spicer, Secretary.

ATTENTION, ALL BEREANS

OWING TO THE INCOMPLETENESS of her records, our Treasurer requests that all local and state secretaries stipulate to what purpose the moneys they send to her are to be put. At present, it is difficult to determine what are dues and what are donations. Please remember and observe this request.

If there is anyone who knows of an isolated Berean society he does not believe is on our lists, the Secretary would be very glad to hear from him. The difficulty of uncovering such organizations is tremendous.

PUTTING GOD'S KINGDOM FIRST

WHAT IS FIRST in your life? Is it God's work, school, play or teasing? Our lesson today says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness". Does that mean going out to seek the Holy Grail and making a journey to the Holy Land as the Knights of Old did in the times of the Crusades? No, it means thinking about God's words, learning what He wants us to do, and obeying His commandments. It means doing every day everything that we can to please God.

There is a book named, "What Would Jesus Do?" In this story every time some question arises as to whether something is right or wrong the characters say, "What would Jesus do?" It would be a fine test for us to use when we wonder what we should do, and I am sure we would never go far wrong.

Our lesson tells us to not lay up treasures for ourselves on earth that moth and rust can ruin or thieves, steal, but to lay up treasures in heaven that no one can ever take away from us. Let us set our hearts or minds first on these heavenly treasures, doing daily acts of kindness and helpfulness and obeying our loved ones.

If our minds are troubled, we cannot think so easily of kindly deeds. If we have disobeyed and are worried about being found out or being punished, we cannot be happy nor think of happy things to do for others. Jesus said in this "Sermon on the Mount" that we must not worry about food or clothing, for God knows our needs and will supply them if we are earnestly trying to do His will.

We are told to "ask" and "it shall be given" us. When we pray we talk with God and "ask" Him; but our praying must not be all "asking". Honor and praise to God are due and we should thank Him for His untold blessings and care for us. We may also ask God to forgive us for the wrong things we do, and the things we leave undone, if we forgive others.

Jesus gave us the model prayer in this sermon. He also told us how to pray. Jesus said that hypocrites or people who do not mean what they say, stand on street corners or stand in the synagogues and pray just so people will see them and say, "What a good man he is!" That is the reward he craves and the reward he receives.

Some people say the same words over and over, thinking God will hear them because they say a lot of words. Some keep count with beads of how many times they say their prayer. Others have "prayer mills" which grind out prayers. Do you see how meaningless that all is?

Let us, then, pray with all sincerity, cease to worry over daily problems, and keep God's kingdom first.

THINK! How may I keep God's kingdom first every day in every way?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn the Golden Text.
2. Make a list of ten things to do in seeking the kingdom of God.
3. Read Luke 18:18-25.

WHO SAID? "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee."

NATURE QUESTION

3. The bay tree is used as a symbol of the prosperity of the wicked. Psalm 37:35.
4. What bird is used by Jeremiah as a simile for cruelty?

SHA'N'T AND WON'T

Sha'n't and Won't were two sturdy brothers,
Angry and sullen and gruff;
Try and Will are dear little sisters,
One scarcely can love them enough.

Sha'n't and Won't looked down their noses,
Their faces were dismal to see;
Try and Will are brighter than roses
In June, and as blithe as the bee.

Sha'n't and Won't were backward and stupid,
Little, indeed did they know;
Try and Will learn something new daily,
And seldom are heedless or slow.

Sha'n't and Won't loved nothing—no, nothing
So much as to have their own way;
Try and Will give up to their elders,
And try to please others at play.

Sha'n't and Won't came to terrible trouble—
Their story is too sad to tell!
Try and Will are now in the school-room,
Learning to read and to spell.

PUTTING GOD'S KINGDOM FIRST

Matthew 6:1-34

Devotional Reading: Psalm 145:1, 2, 7-13

GOLDEN TEXT

But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6:33.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Putting First Things First.

Basic Truth. "All these things shall be added unto you."

Outline. I. Putting First Things First in Prayer. II. Putting First Things First in Action. III. Putting First Things First in Ideals.

I. Putting First Things First in Prayer. In the prayer which Jesus taught, four specific things are said of God before anything is said of man. Jesus exalted His Father above all else. The usual custom of man in prayer is to pray for personal aid, benefits, blessings. The outline of the Savior's prayer instructs otherwise,—

- "Our Father which art in heaven,
- "Hallowed be thy name.
- "Thy kingdom come.
- "Thy will be done in earth". . .

The Savior instructed His disciples to place God first in their prayers. Then comes the additions:

- "Give us this day our daily bread.
- "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.
- "And lead us not into temptation,
- "But deliver us from evil".

These last are the secondary things. Man's interests are not nearly so important as are God's interests, just as the servant's interests are not so important to him as are his master's. God is Master, man is servant. Man should place God before himself in prayer.

- "For thine is the kingdom,
- "And the power,
- "And the glory,
- "Forever.

"Amen". (I. e., so let it be.)

This assigns the reason for asking for the personal blessings: God's is the kingdom, the authority to do; His is the power, the strength to do; His is the glory as a result. All continue forever.

Truly, Jesus taught His disciples to put first in prayer Him who is first.

II. Putting First Things First in Action. It is one thing to think of highest things as entitled to our first action, it is another thing to proceed accordingly. Earthly treasures, those that pertain to human nature, first appeal to man. Time and experience prove that they are undependable and but temporary. Treasures proceeding from the power of God himself are unfailing. Jesus taught His disciples that they should seek the latter first. He not only taught them to seek, but He taught them to labor for these; i. e., in life's action to devote one's energy to the realization of heavenly treasures rather than earthly.

III. Putting First Things First in Ideals. One's whole life is given to the realization of his ideals. Therefore, for one to live for first things he must hold those first things as his ideals.

God is first. He is over and above all else. To make God one's ideal, is to place God in person first over self; it is to place His wishes ahead of man's wishes; it is to place His judgment ahead of man's judgment; it is to place God's instruction ahead of man's learning; it is to place God's promises ahead of man's imagined expectations. All of this idealizes the kingdom of God as that which is first and uppermost in man's program.

Putting first things first in ideals is to put God first, foremost over all.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Puzzle Pictures. Who does not find pleasure and benefit from taking the box of irregularly cut blocks and fitting them together so as to form the map or picture which was originally cut up into many pieces? This is interesting in that it encourages observation of the details of the many shapes and lines. But who in the busy hour of life would find either recreation or profit by disorganizing the orderly processes of life and thus making it necessary to straighten these matters out every time before a given task could be performed?

Jesus found the world a veritable puzzled man. He revealed to man how to discover the patterns made by God. One of His axioms was, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you". Jesus placed the kingdom as one of the first things of importance. He instructed man to build around this as a common center. So doing, man will have solved in large measure the continuous puzzle of life.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33.

Christ taught important things, not unimportant. Inasmuch as He said, "Seek ye first the kingdom", it stands to reason that the thing that should be sought first was and still is the most important of Christ's teachings, for if this is done, other things will be added.

The Diaglott rendering is, "But seek ye first his RIGHTEOUSNESS and KINGDOM; and all these things shall be superadded to you". His righteousness is not through the law, "but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith". Then if we seek His righteousness we must do it through faith in Christ, and Christ himself stressed that His disciples should seek His righteousness.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Jesus definitely tells those who hear, with understanding ears, His call to share with Him in the work of God's kingdom, "Seek ye first God's kingdom and his righteousness and all these things (material needs) shall be added unto you."

Seeking God's kingdom is not seeking for a position in it. That is akin to seeking material needs. Seeking God's kingdom is seeking to comprehend its characteristics, its purposes, its spirit, its laws, the source and nature of its power and wisdom. Seeking God's righteousness is seeking to comprehend the words of Jesus—love your enemies; pray for them that despitefully use you; forgive them for they know not what they do; Peter, put up your sword; abide in me; feed my sheep; ye must be born from above; etc.

This seeking requires a mind free from worry and quiet for meditation and prayer, hence God promises to free such seeking minds from the turmoil that always accompanies seeking material needs foremost. God does not say that effort for food and clothing is not necessary, but that the mind may be at rest concerning them. And the mind at rest is free to seek God's kingdom and His righteousness even while physical strength and mental effort are directed toward making a living.

The mind that is anxious over material needs either is not seeking God's kingdom and His righteousness, or it is not taking God at His word.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

This lesson is a continuation of the lesson of last week. In Matt. 5, 6 and 7, Jesus laid the foundation principles which He wished His followers to incorporate into their lives. These principles were just the opposite of the ones the Jews had been taught to follow, for Christ taught forgiveness of one's enemies, returning good for evil, loving one's neighbor as one's self and many other ideals for which Christianity stands.

Following these principles can but develop in the Christian a love for mankind and a loyalty to the One who is the greatest Teacher of all. As we study His life and learn that He not only taught these things, but that He lived them himself, it inspires us to do likewise. Our admiration grows as we learn more of Him, and our loyalty as well. Who but could stand true to such a Leader and to the things which He taught?

Our golden text tells us that if we seek His righteousness first in our lives, the material needs of life will be taken care of. Over and above all things, the importance of being true to the principles of Christ stands supreme. Let us make Him our Guide in all things.—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Correspondents of Bro. T. A. Drinkard are requested to notice that his address is changed from Clyde, Texas, to Smithfield, Texas, Rt. 1.

Sr. Jessie Wilson of Chicago, Illinois, is spending the winter months in the south and she may be addressed at 100 Avant Avenue, % A. A. Boldt, San Antonio, Texas.

Bro. and Sr. Glynn L. Starbuck of Rockford, Illinois, are spending the winter months at 1721 Court St., South Pasadena, California. We hope that they will become acquainted with some of the brethren in that locality.

For some time past Bro. and Sr. Earl Thayer and son, Lyle, have been attending a union Sunday School northwest of Rockford, Illinois. Now Bro. Thayer has been asked to lead them in church activity and is acting as their pastor. We wish Bro. Thayer good success in this his chosen work, and pray that the Lord may be his strength therein.

Miss Phyllis Wood, 411 E. Fourth St. Kewanee, Illinois, has been painfully ill since Christmas. Sr. Phyllis was an officer of the Illinois State Berean Society for two years and is loved and respected by many. A card or a word of cheer in these hard days would mean lots to her.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Bro. F. E. Siple expects to speak for the Chicago congregation, Sunday, January 26. This service will be held at the Austin-Whitehead home, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, at 10:30 a.m., and is under the auspices of the Bereans.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

One of our little Sunday School girls, Neoma Ackerman, answered to the call of death last week. She had been confined to her bed for several weeks with heart trouble. The funeral was conducted at the home by the pastor.

Our Sunday School classes have grown to such proportions that it has been necessary to divide some of them. The adult class has been separated into two classes, women's and men's. A new class has been created consisting of ten-year-old girls. The first Sunday this class had thirteen in attendance. The school now has ten large classes and we would have more if we had any room for them. Our church walls are bulging.

Changes are also going on in Berean circles. Our continued growth necessitates occasional readjustments and shifting to meet the demands made upon the work.

Never was there a time when the world presented such an opportunity for Christian service and possibly we could say there never was a time when they needed it more than right now. Surely, the fields are white ready to be harvested.

DEATHLESS INFLUENCE

There is a sense in which we may truthfully say that we do not, and that we cannot, die! There is one thing in our otherwise mortal make-up that is essentially imperishable. It is not an "immortal soul" of which both the Bible and science know nothing; nor is it "man", in the sense of "life" or "being"; for "it is appointed unto man once to die." "All have sinned" and the "wages of sin is death," so all must die. Yet there is a way, I insist, in which we continue to live long beyond the brief span of mortality. It is through our influence. During our active experience in this present life we set in motion forces for good or ill that will never cease to operate. The statement of Dr. Holmes, that "Our lives go on in our children", is capable of great enlargement; for not only do our lives go on in our children, but they are continued in our friends and our associates for countless generations after we have crumbled away to dust!

How comforting it is as we contemplate this thought, to recall the beautiful testimony so recently given of one so dear to us all as was Sister Bertie Ellen Siple, and to know that that testimony was true—unmistakably true! She was a "beautiful wife, an ideal mother, and a loyal worker in the church"; and "the memory of her will be sweet and her influence will be felt for years to come."

Oh, may God help us all to so live today that kindness and love and truth will radiate from our memories long after we are gone!

In sincere appreciation of Sister Siple's life and character,

G. Eldred Marsh.

SISTER WOODWARD SPEAKS TO US NOW

On reading Brother Marsh's article in the issue of January 14, "The Eternal Now", I stopped my work immediately and said, "I have been going to write to Sr. Gesin for a week and keep neglecting it. NOW I'll do it. I am here NOW, I will do it while I am here. What a good paper we have! I just sat and cried for joy as I read the many beautiful thoughts from her article a week ago, "A Clean White Page", and from the Berean Page, from Bro. Curtis in "Light Bearers", Bro. Smead's good article, the good words in the editorials and the beautiful poem, "When Will the Lord Come?" in the last issue. Oh, how true are the last two lines, "Prepare your hearts and make Him room, At any time the Lord may come."

How true! And how fast the nations of the world are awaking to this wonderful truth, Jesus is soon coming. Oh, how we must hasten our work while we wait, not to find great things to do, but whatsoever our hands find that will help lift the load from some burdened soul. Smile into some care-weary face; stop pitying ourselves and be thankful for the many blessings we have, the wealth of love given us.

Above all, let us be thankful we have a heavenly Father who is always ready to hear and to help. How He has answered prayer for our Grand Rapids church! Bro. Randall, take heart, the Lord is with you. Let us pray.

M. A. Woodward.

OLIVE TREE (OLEACEAE)

THE OLIVE TREE is a tree with gnarled trunk which when grown is usually hollow, with straggling branches. It loves rich soil, but flourishes without irrigation. The small white flowers form axillary clusters. When their function is over they fall in showers to the ground, Job 15:33, and their place is taken by the small oblong fruits, at first green but growing almost black when ripe. From these comes the fatness of the olive, its rich, nutritious oil.

The leaves are oblong to lanceolate, of the characteristic dull olive green at the upper surface, and frosted silver color below. This arrangement of colors makes an olive tree at a little distance appear as if covered by a filmy veil or silver gauze, which gives a soft dreamy sheen to the landscape. The Scripture allusions to the olive tree are numerous. It is the first tree of those now known mentioned in the Bible, Gen. 8:11. Its wealth of nourishment made it a natural candidate for the position "king of trees", Judges 9:8-9. It is an emblem of peace and prosperity, Psa. 52:8; 128:3.

The name "Mount of Olives" indicates the importance attached to this tree, and associates it with many interesting incidents in the life of our Lord.

MINT

THE MINT IS A COMMON HERB of little value, resembling garden sage. Various species of it are found in Palestine.

 It was used in ancient times for seasoning and in medicine.
 The Jews were required to pay tithes on all produce of the earth (Deut. 14:22) but were more careful concerning triffles than about important matters. Matt. 23:23.

MILLET

MILLET IS A KIND OF GRAIN cultivated in Palestine and elsewhere. Ezek. 4:9. The name millet is applied to two kinds of grains—namely, the seeds of panic-grass and the durah or Egyptian corn which somewhat resembles maize.

HOW OFTEN IT is the case in the Christian life, feeling that something Christian should be done one is so liable to invent ways and means of his own devising instead of waiting for the ways of God. Nadab and Abihu were at once slain by fire that came forth by God. It was a punishment to them and a reproof to all Israel. God had not asked them to do beyond His directions. So, too, in the present day, God asks man to do certain things in obedience to God's Word. It is the obedience that God seeks, the consecration of the heart that obeys.

When those who love to "go into the house of the Lord" do so frequently with repeated consecrations unto Jehovah, they temper and shapen their own lives and place themselves anew, with each and every repetition, in such position that the Father's showers of manna and His hand of guidance are daily with them to meet the problems, the cares, the responsibilities of life. The house of worship rightly used is like unto the Shekinah glory to lead the nation's builders and workers.—F. L. A.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES

By Lyman Booth

THIS AND THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES are so closely connected, that having cited many texts in this in describing the former, there is little left to say concerning the narratives contained in this. Therefore the brevity of this article. The second is but a continuation of the history begun in the first. In some respects it agrees with the books of the Kings in which the histories of Judah and Israel run parallel. But in this book the affairs of Judah are recorded more fully and distinctly, while those of Israel are mentioned only occasionally, and only then when the main subject requires it.

The history begins with the accession of Solomon and continues with a narration of several kings of his race who reigned in succession till the Babylonian captivity. It concludes with an intimation of Cyrus' decree for the return of the Jews from his country to Jerusalem, and the rebuilding of the temple.

Besides the additions and the practical instruction, especially with respect to the different effects of piety or profaneness in the affairs of their nation thus favored with revelation, this history makes plain the prophetic writings, which can by no means be so well understood without frequently referring to it. The prophecies contained in it were fulfilled soon after they were spoken or agree with those of prior date.

It is not always easy to determine whether the scriptural references relate to this book or to the books of the Kings. There are many instances of interest that might be mentioned and might be of benefit. One in particular will suffice to give some idea of the greatness of the nation and Solomon's earnestness as servant King, also the elaborate provisions made for the worship of Jehovah, and the sublimity and solemnity of their sacrifices.

Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple, 2 Chron. 6, was followed by fire descending from heaven and consuming the burnt offering and the sacrifices, 2 Chron. 2, and "the glory of the Lord filled the house," 7:1. They kept the dedication of the altar seven days and the feast seven days, 7:9, at which time the king and the people offered sacrifices to the Lord to the number of twenty-two thousand oxen and one hundred twenty thousand sheep. Those offerings and sacrifices were not made merely for the display of human pride, but to manifest their loyalty and devotion to their God.

Such liberal offerings and sacrifices would put a blush of shame over the faces of most of our present-day philanthropists. The poor widows' farthing would outweigh such bequests when placed upon God's scales. It isn't the largeness of the gift that merits His approval so much as it is the love and loyalty accompanying it as the motive for the giving. It is the motive that earns the reward, rather than the gift regardless of its monetary value.

JACOB'S TROUBLE

By Emma C. Railsback

IN THESE DAYS when so many of the prophecies are being fulfilled and Scripture students realize more and more that the people of Israel are God's sign people, everything that concerns them is being closely watched.

The Zionist movement which began some thirty years ago—upon which Jewry was divided—and the more recent entrance upon the scene of the Jewish Agency, which they claim is a symbol of true Jewish unity, also the recent riots and massacres of Jews by the Arabs in Palestine are causes of much comment and speculation.

While we scan the daily papers for any news concerning the situation our minds revert to scriptural types for help in grasping the significance of recent happenings. When Jacob returned to Canaan with his family his servants, his flocks, his herds, and his camels, he greatly feared his wrathful brother Esau. He prayed to God for deliverance; he sent his servants ahead with a present; he sent his wives and children on while he remained behind and wrestled with the angel. The result of his all-night struggle with the heavenly messenger was a blessing and the changing of his name from carnal Jacob to spiritual Israel. When finally the meeting with Esau took place, it was peaceful and they both settled down in the land, Esau at Sier and Jacob at Shalem.

From dealings with present day Jewry and also from reading their periodicals we get the impression that among other peculiar characteristics, they are proud, boastful and tantalizing. No doubt these traits of character are the cause of many indignities and persecutions to which they are subjected today, as they are scattered among the nations and also upon those who are already established in Palestine. Another thing that is quite pronounced in their late editorials is their ingratitude to Great Britain and their demand for better protection at her hands.

No doubt the people of Jacob will have to be touched upon the hollow of the thigh and be made to halt before they will see the need of pleading for a blessing. Or has this already been accomplished by the recent riots and massacres in Palestine? Since this event Jewish editorials have advocated peaceful methods in dealing with the Arabs who resent the coming of the Jew to establish a national home, showing that some realize the importance of that method. But as a people there awaits them a great day, even the time of Jacob's trouble, when the excellency of Jacob shall be turned to the excellency of Israel and they will be given a new spirit and their hearts of stone will be turned to hearts of flesh.

 You don't have to say if you work or you play;

 However you live, it will show in your face."

THE EBBING OF THE TIDE

By Grace M. Marsh

BEHIND THE HILLS OF YESTERDAY the sun of nineteen hundred and twenty-nine has set. There was an afterglow—the blue of disappointment, the rosy glow of pleasure, the purple of unfulfilled desire. All was tinged by the golden gleam of uncounted blessings. And, as the midnight of the year drew near, there was a ripple in the hearts of men at the memory of opportunities unrecognized and duties unaccomplished.

But see! In the east is the dawn of a new year with its golden promises of blessing renewed, and its rosy foregleams of opportunities to come.

To the Christian, the rising of the sun toward the zenith of this new year will be an interesting study. For

“The signs that show His coming near Are fast fulfilling, year by year,” and there is an all-pervading joy in the thought that “the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God.”

In the cycles of God's time men, families and nations have risen on the tide of education and civilization; but always there has come the ebbing of the tide. It is not according to the divine outline that men should be as gods, the declaration of the serpent notwithstanding. It was because of Adam's desire to reach beyond the work outlined for him that punishment was first brought upon the human family. Not satisfied with subduing the earth and having dominion over all it contained, his selfish desire led him to sigh, like Alexander, for other worlds to conquer. And so ebbed the tide of life in the garden.

Noah was an outstanding figure in his day in that he alone found favor in the eyes of the Lord. With the great catastrophe which only Noah and his family and a selected group of purely-bred stock survived, every Bible student is familiar. Yet there were mighty men, men of renown there. So ebbed the tide of the second great civilization.

Through the generations of Noah's sons there developed succeeding civilizations of power and influence. Present day archaeological expeditions are proving by their discoveries that many of the nations involved equaled, if they did not surpass, in grandeur and culture anything that we have today. And yet, after the crest came the ebbing of the tide.

What of the civilization of today? In all walks of life knowledge is increasing. At the close of the nineteenth century men said, “Surely there can be no more inventions.” Yet the new century has already brought into common use many things undreamed-of in 1890, or believed to be so impractical that they would never become a vital part of the throbbing life of the nations of today. Witness the radio, the airplane, the automobile, the transoceanic telephone, television, paved roads, sound pictures and kindred productions of the century. Particularly in surgery and chemistry the professions have gone forward by leaps and bounds. To such men as Byrd, Amundsen and Lindbergh, discoverers who use the medium of air travel, the civilization of the world owes a vast debt. But is it not probable that the present order of things has reached its crest, and may soon feel the ebbing of the tide?

In the course of human events, each succeeding civilization has seemed to have a common fault. As knowledge, power and wealth increased, men came to rely on themselves more than on their Creator. They exploited the gifts placed in their keeping, but, like Nebuchadnezzar, they chose to ignore the divine Giver of all gifts. And because of this has come catastrophe.

So with the present order of things! The United States boasts that she is the wealthiest nation in the world. Scientists are discussing the creation of the life principle from the elements. Men are planning an attempted journey to Mars. Professors are teaching the rising generation that the Bible is a myth. Ministers from their pulpits are preaching a “perverted gospel” that, they say, is suited to present day needs. All the world, it seems, is building its tower of Babel to make itself a name. But in the divine cycle will come the ebbing of the tide.

“But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.” Beyond the chaos resulting from the overthrow of the present order of things will rise the Sun of Righteousness with healing in His wings. “And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely”.

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."—1 John 5:4.

THE VOICE OF THE KING

PROMPTLY AT FIVE O'CLOCK Tuesday morning, January twenty-first, the voice of the King of England sounded clearly across the distance from London to Oregon, Illinois, as he welcomed in gracious sentences the delegates assembled in the gallery of the House of Lords for the opening of the Naval Conference. The occasion was one that should interest every right-minded thinker the world around. The fact that the nations are possessed with an ambition to reduce the inclination to war and to reduce equipment for war is one that should be praised by all. And the fact that the laws of nature have been discovered and adapted to man's use to such a degree that the voice of the speaker can be conveyed to the farthest corners of the earth is one of great importance.

As Christians we are looking for a day in the near future when He whom the Father has anointed to be "King of all kings and Lord of all lords" shall come again "the second time without sin unto salvation". The prophets announced that His word shall go forth from Jerusalem, that His law will be given to all nations. Skeptics have warned us that the very promises themselves are proof of inaccuracy. They have announced time and again that it would be impossible for the voice of a King at Jerusalem to be heard the world around.

Those best learned in the laws of nature feel most that they are still far from a complete solution of these laws which are today being utilized so commonly. Yet even with the present understanding of those laws, the voice of the king is audible in every nook and cranny of the world's surface. Truly, He who inspired the writers of prophecy revealed things almost beyond the belief of man; but that He revealed the truth is being evidenced time and time again by developments in these, our later days.

PEACE

THE SAME SOVEREIGN MIND referred to above is the Mind that declared through His inspired writer, "When they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them". Such declaration of peace and safety will never come until the ruling minds of the nations feel that they are justified in proclaiming that peace is probable. Their minds must first be worked up to the desire; their nations must be taught to crave that condition; their national equipment must also be arranged in such a manner as to give promise to them that peace is more than likely. Let us herald with gladness this high ideal that is growing in the minds of men. Let us praise them for endeavoring with earnest heart to bring about such conditions. Let us be one of the number who will do everything humanly possible in the encouragement of such ideals. But let us also remember this, namely, God has foreseen that there can be no peace until the Son of man shall have been received in all of the meaning of that word. While the Scriptures teach clearly that man's announcement of peace will be swiftly followed by extensive destruction, yet the fact that man longs for that peace and sacrifices for it, testifies that man can the more readily accept and receive the coming Lord.

JUDGMENT

THE COMING OF CHRIST must be attended among other things with world-wide judgment. The fact that our Lord is to occupy the throne of the earth is evidence that He must of necessity judge among the nations. The nation or nations that will readily receive Him and will readily obey Him, He will judge worthy of a place or of places in His kingdom. But that nation or nations refusing to have "this man to reign over us" will be judged unworthy and will be chastened or destroyed as conditions necessitate. Judgment is one of the inevitable conditions that must accompany the return of our Savior.

This would have been equally true had Jesus been accepted and received at His first advent. It would then have been necessary for Him to discern between the loyal and the disloyal, and for Him to have blessed the one and to have dealt punitively with the other. And so, from the beginning of prophetic utterances announcing our Lord's kingship, the prophecies have foretold of the day of judgment attending that kingship.

That rebellious spirit against God's appointed Sovereign of the world is the spirit that will bring the times of trouble upon it. Just so much punishment as is necessary to reduce man either to obedience or to extinction is the amount of punishment that the Scriptures indicate will be measured out by the King on David's throne. The great havoc and destructiveness of judgment are called forth by those who resist the righteous overtures of the Prince of peace.

I WILL DWELL IN THEM

THE THOUGHT CONTAINED in this sixteenth verse of Second Corinthians six appeals to every Christian. The indwelling of the Father is most pleasing. Through Moses He spoke to the children of Israel in Ex. 25:8, and said, "Let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them". The same thought is expressed in Ex. 29:45, 46. The verb "dwell" is taken from the Hebrew word which means "to tabernacle".—Young's Concordance. It is a word of deeper significance than is the word yashab, which also means to dwell but, in the sense of "to sit down, or still", that is, to have a place in which to sit, to live, to rest. "To tabernacle" means more. From the tabernacle issued forth the shekinah glory or presence of Jehovah. His omnipotent strength and power of being radiated from that tabernacle. It carries a far different meaning than merely to dwell leisurely in a parlor of rest. The verb "placed" of Gen. 3:24 is the same verb as "dwell" in Ex. 25:8, that is, God tabernacled "at the east of the garden of Eden, Cherubims". It was evidently in the place of these cherubims in Eden where, from the time of man's sin, God dwelt with him.

After the flood God chose the tents of Shem in which to "dwell". "Dwell" here is the same verb shakan, meaning, "to tabernacle". And so, when He called Israel, the sons of Shem, out of Egypt, He erected in the midst of the nation His dwelling place, His tabernacle; and from between the cherubims, in the Holy of Holies in that tabernacle, God issued His blessings and directions. He tabernacled again with the cherubims.

Coming to the New Testament God has selected the church and has announced, 2 Cor. 6:16, "Ye are the temple of the living God; as God has said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people". Is not this reason enough for the words that follow: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty"?

BRETHREN OF THE CHURCH OF GOD, WHY NOT?

By G. Eldred Marsh

YES! WHY NOT? YOU HAVE OFTEN WISHED that you might preach the gospel that saves with impressive power to those who have never heard it. Why not do it? Perhaps you have realized the much wider audience that can be reached through the columns of The Restitution Herald, and, consequently, have felt a great desire to write and thus assist personally in carrying the truths of salvation to the dying world. Why not put your desire into effect?

You have seen the countless children in your neighborhood who are wholly without religious training, or at least have never heard of the dear Savior who is coming back to this earth to establish His wonderful kingdom of love. You have wished that you might gather them into a great Sunday School class and teach them yourself the glorious truths of God's Word. But why not do it?

You have visited the old home "back East", or "out West" or "down South" since you yourself responded to the gospel invitation, and how your heart burned within you to tell those dear old friends the glorious news of the resurrection of the dead and life through Christ when He comes—news which you were sure they had never heard. Why not tell them all about it?

Yes! Why not preach with eloquence and power? Why not write of the age of restitution with "thoughts that live and words that burn"? Why not call your great Sunday School class together, and teach them intelligently the beautiful facts of the gospel? Why not go as an evangelist back to the old home you knew in childhood, and with resistless logic, driven home by fervent love for them and supported by the infallible Word of God, lead those dear friends of yours into complete understanding and belief of the truth?

"How glad I would be to do all this," you answer, "but I do not have the ability, the training, or the opportunity. I cannot preach or write or teach. I am not qualified by natural aptitude or by special training for work of that kind. But how I would like to do it!"

Again let me ask, "Why not?" You may not be able to do these things personally; but there is a splendid opportunity for you to become a preacher of power, a writer of ability and a teacher well trained for his work through the young men and the young women of the TRAINING CLASS. Your prayers, your interest, your spiritual influence and, last of all, your financial support will assist in sending out into the world an educated and able ministry to represent you! A corps of teachers who can call together in Sunday School classes throughout America those boys and girls you want to reach and instruct them thoroughly in the things of God, in your behalf! A class of Bible writers, prepared to publish the gospel you so greatly love, through the printed page for all the world to read, because of you?

SO WHY NOT, brethren of the Church of God?

WHY NOT?

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

By Virgil DeBusk

THE NEXT GREAT EVENT on the world's time table will be the coming of Christ for His church. Before visiting with judgment, God always sends forth warnings sufficient to enable those that are not prepared for it to make the necessary preparations. This was true before the flood. So God in a marvelous way has been for years and is now sending forth world wide warnings through books, tracts and God-given messages of the soon coming of our Lord. No doubt they mocked and sneered at old Noah, and said he was a false prophet and that it wasn't going to rain. But it did just the same and every one was drowned except eight souls. A great many people are doing and saying the same thing about the soon coming of Christ, but He is coming just the same, and very soon. Those that are not prepared will be left to go through a great tribulation period unless they repent.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4:16. "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15:51-52. "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." 1 Thess. 5:2. This scripture refers to Christ's coming for His church. After the church is caught away then the great tribulation period begins.

After the tribulation period, Christ comes with His saints to reign on the earth. "Behold, he cometh with clouds: and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him". Rev. 1:7. "And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all; and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed." Jude 14, 15. These two passages refer to Christ's coming back with his saints to reign on the earth over the nations. "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5:10.

There are two comings, but only one appearing to the whole world, as only the church will see Him when He comes for her. How could He come with His saints, if He didn't first come for them? His coming for the church will be as "a thief in the night". How does a thief come? Not openly, but you awaken in the morning and find a screen out, your purse and valuables gone. Thus you know that a thief has been in your house.

THE TRIBULATION

Hear Jesus' words on the tribulation, "For then shall be great tribulation such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." Matt. 24:21. Hear His words again, "I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left." Luke 17:34-37. Wife taken and husband left, father taken and mother left! That is the way it will be all around the world. What pitiful shrieks and screams will come from the lips of those that are left! They will see the clothes and shoes of the missing ones. They will try the doors and find that they are locked just as they were when they went to bed. Then a great wail of misery will go up from the homes of the ones that are left desolate because they are facing the great tribulation. The time is so near, it seems we can almost hear the wailing and crying of the earth in its trouble. But it will be too late when it happens, for the saints have gone to meet the Lord in the air. Too late will mean more than ever before to those that are left behind. The storm clouds are hanging low and are almost ready to burst on this old sin-cursed earth.

Christ's second coming is so all-important that it is recorded about three hundred and eighteen times in the New Testament.

When the disciples asked Jesus, "When shall these things be and what shall be the sign of thy coming?" (Matt. 24:3), Jesus did not reprove them for asking, neither did He reply that it was not for them to know. He definitely answered their questions. He said false Christs would come in His name, that there would be earthquakes in divers places, that we would have wars and rumors of wars and that nation would rise against nation and kingdom against kingdom. All this has been fulfilled and the great peace pact that they have now is another Bible prophecy being fulfilled, for when they shall say, "Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." 1 Thess. 5:3.

"Now learn a parable of the fig tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors." When friends come to see you, they are very near you when they get to the door. We are living in that little time between "even at the door", and the definite day or hour of His appearing.

HEAR A FEW OF THE PROPHETS

Notice Isaiah 60:8: "Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?" Do you not believe that our modern airships are what the prophet saw? Hear the prophet Nahum in the second chapter and third and fourth verses: "The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation (meaning, preparing the church for Christ). The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against the other in the broadways:

they shall seem like torches, they shall run like lightnings." God gave Nahum a revelation of the present age. He looked down the stream of time of over twenty-six hundred years and saw our modern automobiles and street cars and described them as well as if not better than you or I could.

Hear the words of Daniel: "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book even to the time of the end. Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." Never in the history of the world has there been so much traveling. The earth is covered with railroads, steamers and airplanes. Knowledge is increased until we can even catch a voice thousands of miles away through the air.

"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient, unthankful, unholy, without natural affections, trucebreakers, false accusers . . . despisers of those that are good . . . high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God." Second Timothy 3:1-4.

THE MINISTRY OF SORROW

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

SORROW IS ONE OF THE MEDIUMS through which God reaches down to puny man and manifests to him that he is insufficient in himself and needs the help of a divine Hand to live a more complete and satisfactory life. When life is touched with sorrow, it gives God an opportunity to supply the need—an aid that could come from no other source. And who has not found this to be true after seeking for help from even the best persons on earth? When real sorrow comes no one but God can satisfy the heart that aches because of the loss of a loved one, or because of some other serious affliction. At such a time we thank God for the sympathy of loving Christians, but the ache that the suffering has left can only be healed by the great Physician in the stillness of His presence.

The lives of the best of Christians are often filled with much sorrow. Sorrow is the result of sin which came through the curse. Death came through sin and disobedience of our first parents. Death is an enemy and is to be destroyed when our Lord returns. 1 Cor. 15:26. If it were not for this hope, Christians would have little to enjoy as they go through this vale of tears. In death all are equal as far as that condition goes, but we praise God for His promises that it shall not be so in the resurrection.

We read in 2 Cor. 7:10 of "godly sorrow that worketh repentance". In 1 Thess. 4:13 we read that there are those who sorrow, "which have no hope". Job said, "Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward". And in 1 Cor. 10:13, we learn that God is faithful and will not give us any more than we are able to bear. Praise God for that! He is a merciful God; He knows. We make mistakes, but the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanses us from our sins.

It will be a glorious morning without clouds for believers when they are again united with their loved ones who are now sleeping. Those who come up in the resurrection are those who have chosen "life", which is obtained through faith in the resurrected One. Col. 3:4. Moses told his people to choose life or death. Deut. 30:15. What a comfort it is to know that our loved ones that we have laid away in silence are asleep! And though there is a loneliness that comes over the heart of all at such times, yet there is a balm that soothes, for we have a Christ who is willing to carry our sorrows.

It is through crushing that the finest perfumes are made, and much substance is often needed to make one drop of the purest. So God by refining and chastening His children, will finally bring them through the fires of earth in order that He will be able to use them later to His honor and glory. It is through great tribulation that we enter the kingdom. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of all of them", not one, but all, if we trust Him to do so. The time shall come when sighing and sorrow shall flee away. To that time we, as Christians, are looking.

Sometimes sorrow comes as a natural consequence, because of the attitude we take toward suffering and affliction. There is a story of a man who, while walking down the street, met a child who was carrying her little brother who was nearly as big as she was. So he said, "Let me help you carry your burden for you." But the little girl spoke up promptly and said, "This isn't a burden, it's my little brother, and he isn't heavy." Love can carry a heavy burden and not know it, even to the place where the body may suffer. Every sorrow may have a place to fill in our lives. It is said that all dark clouds have silver linings, although it is hard to believe so sometimes. God help us to see His blessed hand for good in all that comes to us in these dark days. We must overcome all obstacles if we would be like the Christ. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. 3:21.

"Thou, dear Lord, remainest,
Through clouds, thou dost prevail,
Thou art ever faithful,
Though strength and courage fail."

A DAY WELL SPENT

---

If, when the sun sinks low to-night,
And floods you with its golden light,
As you sit thinking of the day
Crowded with its work or play;
If you recall some kindly deed
A helping hand to one in need,
Or just a touch to ease some pain,
You have not spent the day in vain.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

ERADICATE TREES WHOSE FRUITS ARE UNWANTED

TO OBEY IS BETTER THAN SACRIFICE

Sunday, February 2—1 Samuel 15:6-23.

“What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?”
1 Samuel 15:14.

THE GREAT EVIL WHICH THE AMALEKITES committed against Israel when Israel was journeying through the wilderness revealed their innermost character. God directed His newly-appointed king, Saul, to rid the land of that stock which brought forth such evil fruit. It was not satisfactory to God that evil which was openly and purposely perpetrated should continue in the land. The merciful God directed its utter destruction. This showed His mercy toward others who chose the ways of their Creator.

FALSE PROPHETS, THORNS, THISTLES

Monday, February 3—Matthew 7:15-23.

“A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.”—Matthew 7:18.

Continual bearers of corrupt fruit cannot hope to correct themselves before God by merely supplicating His name. “I never knew you” are the words which the Savior will declare unto this class as He commands them, “Depart from me, ye that work iniquity”. It is not as though the fruit they have borne was foreign to their nature. The fact is that the fruit accurately reveals the nature of the producer. False prophets are in this respect like unto thorns and thistles that bear fruit comparable with themselves.

CHRIST'S TEACHINGS CHANGE THINGS

Tuesday, February 4—Matthew 7:24-29.

“Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock.”—Matthew 7:24.

As grafted scions alter the nature of the fruit borne by the trunk, so do Christ's received words alter the character of man. It was for such that Christ's word has been given, namely, that it might change the course of man's life. As the scion must be received by the tree into its very life before that scion can grow, form new top for the tree and yield, so must the word of Christ be received into the life of the individual before the individual is able to respond to that word and to bring forth Christian fruit.

CUTTING ASUNDER

Wednesday, February 5—Luke 12:41-48.

“The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.”—Luke 12:46.

The mercy and forgiveness of Jesus cannot in the light of all His works and teachings be denied. The principle of forgiveness, like the scarlet thread running through every piece of cordage in the British navy, runs through Christ's every teaching. His love, His mercy, His forgiveness are unquestioned. And yet he who claims to be Christ's and betrays Him by his own unfaithfulness and disloyalty in thought and conduct is assured by the Savior that he will be cut off and that his portion will be an appointment with the unbelievers. Christ's mercy requires Him to be the axe at the root of the corrupt tree.

THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT

Thursday, February 6—Galatians 5:16-20.

“Walk in the spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.”—Galatians 5:16.

Christ came not to the dead. He is not lifting diseased ones into righteousness as men lift drowned ones into a boat. Christ came to the living. He came to lift living men out of the ways that tend to death, into the ways that tend to life. He taught these thorn-like and thistle-like men how to receive through His word the inoculation for new life. Those who accept such inoculation from Christ himself, are classified as being in the spirit. To such Paul says, “Walk in the spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh”. That is, they are changed over so as to bear different, even new fruit.

THE EVIL DOER ENCOURAGES OTHERS TO DO EVIL

Friday, February 7—Romans 14:13-23.

“It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.”—Romans 14:21.

To refrain from being a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in a brother's way is one of the noble labors of Christianity. Our Savior came not to wreck man, but to lift those already wrecked. He asks His followers to imitate Him in this respect. Paul cautions that none should permit himself to destroy with his manner of living any “for whom Christ died”.

PURIFICATION

Saturday, February 8—1 John 3:1-12.

“He that committeth sin is of the devil; . . . For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the devil.”—1 John 3:8.

After beautifully referring to the exceeding love of God which he “hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God”, John then analyzes how that “he that committeth sin is of the devil", that is, his life development comes forth from that source. He "is of" him. He is as a consequence, a work of the devil. Christ came not merely "that he might destroy" such works. To avoid beginning such a work and the certain destruction resulting, John, in harmony with all Scripture, urges that we entertain the great hope of being "like him" who is soon to appear. Being like Him, being of Him, assures one of sonship with Christ unto the Father.

REPORT OF GOLDEN RULE HOME

WE ARE GLAD TO REPORT that the Golden Rule Home has much for which to be thankful during the year 1929. The long sickness of Sr. Kilmer which terminated fatally was the one sorrow of the Home. Sr. Kilmer, though not a member of the Home, was well liked by all and her prolonged illness and death were much regretted. The health of the Golden Rule Home family as we enter upon the new year is very good. The members of the Home at this writing are Mrs. Clara Chaffee, Mrs. Mary Renner, Mr. and Mrs. James Williamson, and Mrs. Elizabeth Scoville. Mrs. Mary Jackson is devoting every mental and physical effort to operate the Home for the comfort and happiness of all. Miss Myrle Hatten is her helper.

At the present time six members of the Bible Training Class are being accommodated there. They are Cecil Smead of Los Angeles, Calif.; Clarence Lapp of Sunnyside, Wash.; John Denchfield of St. Cloud, Minn.; Richard LeCrone of Omaha, Nebr.; and Harvey and Dorothy Krogh of Blair, Nebr.

The expenses of and income to the Home during 1929 were as follows:

	Expenses	Income
Table, etc	$1225.71
Phone, Light, Heat, Water	471.53
Medical	33.65
Insurance	71.65
Repairs	135.40
Salaries	1519.20
Miscellaneous	140.17
Board, Garden, etc.		$1845.77
Interest from Membership Maintenance Fund		507.93
Yearly Transfer from Maintenance Fund		876.00
	$3597.31	$3229.70
Contributed by Individuals for the Home		40.00
Deficit		327.61
	$3597.31	$3597.31

The foregoing figures indicate that the original estimate relative to the operating of the Home was more or less correct. That estimate was based upon the full capacity of the Home. Many of the expenses like insurance, light, heat, etc., are the same regardless of the number of people in the Home. Therefore with a membership equal to the capacity of the Home the expenses per individual would be reduced. During the past year there were several inquiries in regard to taking out membership. Some have been detained in one way, some in another. Sr. Scoville is the only member who entered during 1929.

In behalf of the Home I wish to commend it to the people of the Church of God and to one and all who may be desirous of considering membership therein. I might add in this connection that the funds paid in by, or for, each member of the Home are kept intact for the members and are placed on interest. The interest therefrom is one of the items of income for the Home maintenance. This fund instead of being depleted as some have feared is in reality in excess of the original estimate. We therefore feel justified after seven years of operation in commending this Home to the consideration of all who may be benefited by membership therein. We also wish to thank the brotherhood and Sr. Jackson and her helpers for the successful operation of the Golden Rule Home for 1929.

F. L. Austin, Executive-Secretary.

A BLESSING

WHAT A GREAT BLESSING is a friend with a heart so trusty that you may safely bury all your secrets in it, whose conscience you may fear less than your own, who can relieve your cares by his conversation, your doubts by his counsels, your sadness by his good humor, and whose very looks give you comfort.—Seneca.

WHAT IS SIN?

WHOSOEVER COMMITTETH SIN transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law.—1 John 3:4.

Because the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.—Romans 4:15.

WHEN DID SIN BEGIN?

Not with the ten commandment law, for God said to Cain, "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door."—Genesis 4:7. There must have been a law given at that time covering murder.

Did law come in when the man and woman possessed themselves of the knowledge of good and evil? Hardly. There must have been a law before that, else Adam and Eve could not have sinned. There was a law given to them before they could transgress. It was: "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

Is this the "law of sin and death" spoken of by Paul in Romans 8:2?—Selected by O. J. Allard,

WE GO THIS WAY BUT ONCE

We go this way but once, O heart of mine,
So why not make the journey well worth while,
Giving to those who travel on with us
A helping hand, a word of cheer, a smile?

We go this way but once. Ah! never more
Can we go back along the selfsame way,
To get more out of life, undo the wrongs,
Or speak love's words we knew, but did not say.

We go this way but once. Then, let us make
The road we travel blossomy and sweet
With helpful, kindly deeds and tender words
Smoothing the path of bruised and stumbling feet.

—Selected.

GOD'S PROMISES

By C. E. Randall

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

LAST WEEK WE TALKED about a couple of God's wonderful promises. This week we bring you two more. The above promise is good news from a far country. It is refreshing to the thirsty of spirit and satisfying to the hungry of heart. Some have claimed this promise and are enjoying rich life in Christ Jesus. Words cannot describe the joy and the peace that come from a full life in Christ. There is a "peace which passeth understanding".

There isn't any reason for being just a "part Christian". Every single person that comes to Christ and implicitly seeks after righteousness shall be filled. No one has ever been turned away from this Fountain of life. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden", for "he that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Matt. 11:28; John 6:37. The more one is filled with this righteousness, the more Christ-like he will be.

You cannot overeat of the "Bread of Life". The more you eat, the more you want and the better you like it. Habits are created by indulgence. If you would like to create the habit of eating of the "Bread of Righteousness", then tarry long at its table. If you desire to develop a thirst for the "Water of Life", sup freely from its cup. The fulfillment of this promise rests with the individual. You can be filled to overflowing if you will just seek after it.

If every member of our faith would "hunger and thirst after righteousness" in a very short time we would have the greatest awakening our church ever experienced. It is a difficult task to convince people of the joys that await those who seek after righteousness, when we ourselves look and act as though we were starving from the want of the very same thing. If we will fill ourselves, then we will look and act as if we were filled, and the task of interesting others will be simple and easy.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

This, like nearly every other promise of God, is conditional. The condition is "pure in heart". David's prayer as recorded in the fifty-first Psalm is an appropriate one for every individual. It reads in part as follows: "Create in me a clean heart, O God: and renew a right spirit within me." There is no promise that any one not having a pure heart will ever see God. Why should they expect this promise be given them? A pure heart is one that has been made so by Christ. Without Him we can do nothing in the way of salvation. Our righteousness is as filthy rags. Just think of it! This is God's concept of our own goodness. Isa. 64:6.

There is another thought that must be borne in mind. It is this: it is one thing to have our hearts made pure and another thing to keep them such. It is not so much what we have been as it is what we are. There are a multitude of folks whose hearts were made pure but they allowed the devil to inject the virus of sin into them. They are still claiming Christianity but they have an evil heart because of jealousy, hatred, envy, sneaking and cunning ways, pride, love for pleasure and a hundred and one other things any one of which is sufficient to bar an individual from the kingdom of God. Be not partaker of other men's sin, but keep yourself pure and do only those things which will glorify the Father. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." 1 Cor. 10:31.

A pure heart is the best insurance for a good night's sleep that can be offered. It will remove the cause for many a troubled conscience and give one the strength to look every man straight in the eye without a blush of shame. And last of all, it will give you a card of admittance into the presence of God in the day when He makes up His jewels. Keep your heart pure by staying near and ever nearer to the Christ.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

MELONS

MELONS OF MANY KINDS are common in the East and grow extensively in Egypt. The Hebrews remembered and longed for them in the desert, Num. 11:5. Melons are abundant in Palestine especially the watermelon, which grows to a very large size.

MANDRAKE (Solanaceae)

MANDRAKE (love plant) is a plant with a root like a beet, and a sweet fruit about the size of a large plum. The smell of the plant is enjoyed by the people of the East, Solomon 7:13, and it is still believed in Eastern countries, as it was in Rachel's time, that eating of its fruit will render barren women fruitful. Gen. 30:14-16.

HAVE FAITH IN GOD

By Alice B. Curtis

IN THE FIRST VERSE of that wonderful chapter on faith, the eleventh of Hebrews, we have the word, faith, defined as follows: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." In the sixth verse of the same chapter we read that "without faith it is impossible to please him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." We do not have faith unless we have grounds or confidence upon which to base our faith; and we cannot have faith in God unless we believe that He exists.

The mighty works of creation furnish abundant evidence that back of the universe is a Creator of superlative wisdom and power. It is true that some people assert the universe came into existence through the blind forces of nature, and that nature is God, but this assertion cannot be true since such an assumption would make the effect greater than the cause, which is an impossibility.

Even without the Bible man should be able to know that God exists, for the untutored savage believed in the Great Spirit. We perceive that God is beneficent because of the blessings that He bestows upon us, and we see design in all His works, but without the Bible we could never know what His design was in creating man.

Every plant and living creature is most elaborately and exquisitely made, and is marvelously adapted to its mode of life. The polar bear with its dense coat of fur is not found in warm climates, but amidst the ice and snow of the arctic regions; while the elephant devoid of any covering except the skin, roams the tropical countries of Asia and Africa. The camel is the only animal that is able to traverse the long stretches of the scorching desert, and note how perfectly it is adapted for that service. Its feet are broad and spongy with hard calloused soles; its long legs enable it to get over the ground well; the hump is largely composed of fat from which it derives nourishment; the stomach holds a large amount of water; its eyelid is double for protection from the sun's glare and from the terrible sand storms that frequent the desert; its nostrils are mere slits and can be dilated or drawn close at will; while its knees, breast, and insteps are covered with callosities which enable it to lie down in the hot sand without discomfort.

But of all the creatures God has made, many and wonderful as they are, man is His crowning work, for as David says, "We are fearfully and wonderfully made". One who can study the organic structure of man, the eye, the ear, the brain, the nervous, muscular, digestive and circulatory or respiratory systems and then deny that man has a divine Creator is not rational.

We look into the vault of heaven and see it emblazoned with unnumbered orbs of living light, each in its own orbit wheeling its way through infinite space, and moving with such regularity and exactness that the astronomer can foretell an eclipse centuries ahead, or reckon back to the time of Christ and tell the precise time the moon was new or full. Even the seemingly erratic comets travel in orbits, some of which extend so far into space that the comets return to our planetary system only after long intervals of time have elapsed.

Genesis 1:14 says the lights of the firmament were to be for "signs, and for seasons, and for days and for years." Our time is determined by the heavenly bodies as all know, the day being the time the earth makes a revolution on its axis, the month the time occupied by the moon making a revolution of its orbit around the earth, and the year the time it takes the earth to make a complete revolution in its orbit around the sun.

God's great timepiece is the heavens, but think how complex this great clock is, for each great luminary revolves in its orbit which is of a different circumference from that in which any other revolves, so that the length of the day and year would not be the same in any two of these heavenly bodies. These great bodies are moving with great velocity through the heavens, not only revolving around each other, but around a common center that seems to be the sun, Aleyone in the Pleiades. It is estimated that upon the Annus Magnus, or great year, when the celestial bodies shall complete their grand sweep about the heavens, one day is 25,827 years and the hour upon that tremendous scale is 1076 $\frac{1}{8}$  years. So we can well see how that a day with the Lord is a thousand years as we read in 2 Peter 3:8.

Truly God's thoughts are not our thoughts nor His ways our ways! And when He wishes to communicate to man, He uses thoughts that a finite mind can understand, for "He is very great. He has weighed the hills in a balance, meted out the heavens with a span, telleth the number of the stars and calleth them all by name, shutteth up the sea with bars, and rides in his cloudy chariot." Yet He notes the sparrow's fall; He teaches the migratory birds to follow the sun south in our winter to return north when the sun comes back. And He gives to man the restless heart, so that though he has every good thing the world can bestow, he never finds peace and joy until he knows God's tender love and can appreciate His great and precious promises.

It is said that the story of redemption is written in the stars, and that the twelve signs of the zodiac are the ensigns of the tribes of Israel, the sign, Pisces, or the two fishes, representing the two houses of Israel. We are told that the celestial bodies are for "signs", and we know that God has been dealing with this people since ancient times, and that the true Israel of God is to be the bride of Christ. Seeing the high position to which God has destined this people, it would hardly seem out of place that the ensigns of Jacob's posterity should belt the heavens.

Jesus came to teach the gospel story to man, and He said that His words should not pass away. In what more permanent and beautiful way could they be perpetuated than to have the glowing constellations express redemption's story in sign language? The sweetness of the story would be ever before the eyes of the redeemed ones, even as its memory should be fresh within each heart. We may not be able to read the gospel story in the stars as few of us have the time or the equipment necessary to study these heavenly bodies, but we can read it in God's holy Word.

The Word of God and His creative works constitute two incontrovertible witnesses that God exists, and on their evidence we build a faith that cannot be shaken. "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God". Psa. 14:1. Why belong to that class? Far better be one whom the Scriptures have made wise unto salvation. 2 Tim. 3:15. "God's faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds", and His promises are sure. So let each one obey Christ's commandment spoken in Mark 11:22, "Have faith in God".

I BEHELD SATAN

By T. A. Drinkard

"And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name. And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven."—Luke 10:17, 18.

JESUS BEHELD SATAN AS LIGHTNING fall from heaven! When? How? Why? These seemingly difficult passages of Scripture come before the young student of the Word who is putting forth his effort to rightly divide the Word of Truth, and they can't be discarded as unimportant, because they form a part of God's Word.

Consider this passage if you will. The two verses go together. When did Jesus see Satan fall? While the seventy were preaching the message of truth. How did he fall? By losing his prestige and power. Why did he fall? By proclaiming the divine Word of Truth error had to give way, and hence Jesus could say, "I beheld Satan . . . fall from heaven". Surely He did not refer to the heaven where the Father abides, as such a view would say that sin and disobedience can enter therein.

This could not refer to a time except within the lifetime of the Master. He could see events before His birth only as the Father revealed them to Him. When God's Word is heard and accepted, Satan falls. He loses that much. That is just what happened during the personal ministry of Christ. The disciples went forth preaching the Word. Men and women heard and believed it. Hence Jesus sees Satan fall; he loses subjects; he loses authority; he loses territory. Truth and its defenders push him back, they gain their objective.

The whole scene is here on the earth. The warfare against the devil is still going on, but in the end Christ will win. He has all to gain and nothing to lose. The devil is always on the job, never releasing his subjects until he is forced to. That is the Christian's duty—force devilism to release its hold, power, upon its subjects, allowing them to be made free in Christ.

IN PATHS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

SOME ONE HAS SAID that we learn more by our pauses than by our activities, and perhaps if we reflect on the thought a moment we may find something worth while in it.

To you, Bereans, who are in the flush of young manhood and womanhood, this may appear as a contradiction, for to you action and plenty of it seem almost indispensable. You desire to be up and doing in your day's work regardless of the direction it may lead you. And in your service for the Master you crave activity, results.

But if we never halt in our busy lives, if we never pause to reflect upon some of the results of our actions, whence would come our development? How could we know that a certain action of ours is a stumbling block to weaker ones, or that another action is perhaps about the noblest and most unselfish thing we could do?

One of the most effective pauses in our busy lives is undoubtedly the few moments at the beginning and the longer period at the end of the work-filled day in which we talk to our heavenly Father. In these brief intervals we tell Him "all about it"; we ask His guidance; we receive the wisdom we need to go onward, the strength to perform the needed tasks.

"If thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee; so that thou incline thine heart unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding; yea, if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures; then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. For the Lord giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding. He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous: he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints. Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path."

Strange to say, this very wisdom, this direction, this guidance is given to us in our most absorbed moments, times when we are hardly conscious of desiring help, but nevertheless most needing it. And afterwards we look back upon these experiences and we send up a little prayer of thankfulness to the One who never fails us in any emergency.

Don't you think the following verses express the thought in a beautiful way? Let us not forget to pause often, Bereans.—Mary A. Gesin.

ALONE WITH THEE

Alone with Thee! What mighty power this gives me
To meet life's problems, and to do Thy will;
For only then my soul feels Thy direction,
I bow before Thee, Lord; my voice is still.

Alone with Thee I gain the strength that's needed
To do the work which comes to me each day;
The gift of wisdom to direct each hour
As I move forward on my busy way.

I need Thee, for the day is filled with questions
That puzzle and perplex me as I go;
I need Thee for the love, for my heart's hunger—
Oh, bless me as before Thee I bend low.

Alone with Thee! 'Tis then I feel the stillness,
The peace, the assurance that Thy way is best;
And with Thy help I go on to my labor—
Knowing that in Thy hand I safely rest.

OREGON BEREAN CLASSES

THE SOCIETY AT OREGON, ILLINOIS, meets every Sunday evening at the church at 6:30 o'clock. They are enjoying very much the lessons from Book Two of the senior series, and find them instructive as well. They are studying lesson fifteen, each one taking his turn as leader. The average attendance is about fourteen.

The Juniors are organized into two classes meeting at two different homes each Friday evening under the leadership of Sr. Dorothy Krogh and Bro. John Denchfield. This is an effective way of adding to the instruction of Sunday School attendants.

Let us hear from more Senior and Junior organizations,

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JESUS HEALING AND HELPING

WHEN THE PEOPLE HEARD THAT JESUS had returned to Capernaum they flocked to hear Him. They filled the house where He was preaching. They crowded about the doorway and stood crowded in the door yard. Jesus was bringing them comfort in His promises and joy in His miraculous healing. They wanted all their loved ones made well.

One poor man suffering with palsy was brought before Jesus. He was so helpless that they had to carry him on his bed—a kind of rug or mattress. When Jesus saw how greatly they believed that He could make the man well again, He said to the man, "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee."

Several scribes were standing near and began whispering among themselves, "This man speaks blasphemies. Who can forgive sins but God only?" As always, Jesus saw what was in their hearts. He asked, "Why reason ye these things in your hearts? Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise and walk."

Then Jesus said He would show them that He did have power to forgive sins. So, He said to the sick man, "I say unto thee, Arise and take up thy bed and go thy way unto thine house." And immediately the man did arise and go to his own house.

Can you imagine how he and his loved ones rejoiced over his recovery? And how the multitudes wondered and glorified God that He had given such power unto Him!

As Jesus went from this scene He saw Matthew, a publican, sitting in his office where he collected custom money from the travelers who passed through Capernaum. Now Matthew was a good man—a Hebrew of Hebrews. He knew of the writings, the history, the law and prophecy of his race. He had to examine people and goods; he had to keep official records. He was really secretary, book-keeper and treasurer for some high official—Roman most likely. The business was full of temptations and many of the publicans, no doubt, were tricky and dishonest, but not so Matthew.

Jesus recognized Matthew's abilities, his honesty and usefulness, for He walked up to Matthew and said, "Follow me." And just as if he had been waiting for these two words of invitation, Matthew arose and followed Jesus. He was so pleased that he gave a big feast that evening to celbrate this wonderful privilege that had come to him. He invited Jesus and a number of his own friends, honest men, most likely, but looked down upon by the Jews as "sinners".

How do you suppose Jesus felt when He looked around on that company? There were people who would not accept an invitation to dinner if only one "sinner" had been invited and here was the great Rabbi (Jesus) eating with a whole room full of sinners. But Jesus had come to call sinners to repentance.

Now when the scribes and Pharisees saw Jesus eating with these outcasts, they said to His disciples, "How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?" Jesus heard this impertinent question and replied, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. People who are well do not need a physician, but they who are sick."

Who were the real sinners? Who really needed the Physician? The Pharisees were careful to make sacrifices and observe every word of the law and punish any one who did not. They were hard-hearted and unkind. Jesus said, "I will have mercy, and not sacrifice."

THINK: Is your faith as sincere as that of the palsied man? Will you follow Jesus as quickly as Matthew did?

SOMETHING TO DO

Read how Jesus helped many others. Matthew 8:5-12; Mark 8:1-10; Luke 18:35-43; John 11:33-44; Luke 24:13-27.

FACT

Who wrote the first book of the New Testament?

OBEDIENT

Do you obey mother at once when she tells you to do something for her? Obedience is one of the first things we must all learn. We have to obey rules, laws, people and customs all our lives, if we want to be happy.

The Bible says, "To obey is better than sacrifice". When we do not obey we bring suffering upon ourselves and others. These helpers of Jesus obeyed His call without question. Likewise, we must learn to obey God, our parents and those in authority over us.

"The best way to get even is to forget."

LESSON VI.—February 9, 1930

WARNINGS AND PROMISES

Matthew 7:1-29

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 2:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.—Matthew 7:19.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Cutting Down the Corrupt Tree.

Basic Truth. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

Outline. I. The Corrupt Tree as an Individual. II. The Corrupt Tree as Society. III. The Corrupt Tree as a Nation.

I. The Corrupt Tree as an Individual. The billions of individuals who live and die upon the earth are like unto the billions of plants on earth. Some are beneficial, helpful; others are noxious and destructive. God has appointed Jesus to judge every man, Acts 17:31. His work is to distinguish between the good and beneficial, between the noxious and corrupting. Yea, more, His work is to convert the corrupt and noxious into the good and beneficial. At least His work is to fill the earth with those that will bring forth good fruits. There are two ways of doing this: either to transform the corrupt and make them good or else to destroy the corrupt. Throughout this age Jesus, in gospel and in spirit, is laboring to put off "the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts". Eph. 4:22. For this He must have the cooperation of the individual. To this end the individual must have faith in Christ. Faith in Christ leads the individual to forsake corrupt ways, and turn to the right ways of Christ. He is taught to forsake the way of falsehood and turn to the way of truth; to forsake the way of crime and turn to the way of loyalty; to forsake the way of carnal lust and turn to the way of righteousness and obedience; to forsake the way of the sluggard, the bootlegger, the rioter, the destroyer of homes, the wrong doer in general, and turn to the way of right. In individual life the corrupt tree must be uprooted by the individual himself.

II. The Corrupt Tree as Society. Statistics recently published reveal that there are districts in the city of Chicago which are corrupt districts, i. e., the whole society of the district is corrupt. These social cesspools spread their poisonous fumes and their polluting attributes over every adjoining people and over the one passing through. Jude speaks of them as Sodom and Gomorrah, v. 7. They are, v. 13, "raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." These are flies in the ointment. They forbid the glory of God in their midst. The Savior's admonition is that such shall be rooted out. First, however, He would purge and rectify by infusion of the gospel of the kingdom. He would reclaim as many of its members as will accept of reclamation. Thus the nation and also the Christian should labor with a view to cleaning up these swales of vice, these corrupt social trees. Ultimately those uncleaned, unreclaimed must be rooted up for destruction.

III. The Corrupt Tree as a Nation. Israel like Sodom and Gomorrah previously, because of her corruption, was suffering punishment by God, scattered into all the earth. Her corruption consisted of that ungodly idolatry and ungodly immorality which were sanctioned by the government itself. As with the individual and society, so with the nation: that condition of corruption which is sanctioned and abetted by the head, must be uprooted, unless the nation will use its authority and strength to purge itself after God's instruction. Our own fair nation should cut down the corrupt trees of iniquity growing within its bounds.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Trail Blazer. All honor to the Pilgrim Fathers who pitched first their tents on the narrow shores of the new world. Three thousand miles of forest and plain stretched out in front of them; the briny ocean lay in its depths behind them. Slowly, but surely, they blazed the trail of progress, felling the unprofitable timber, and draining the bogs. Where would the fertile fields of America, the towering cities, the smoke-belching factories be now had it not been for those trail-blazers?

Jesus lived and taught likewise. As He arrived upon the mission of His life, sin and its cursedness were everywhere in front of Him. Filled with the Spirit of God, authorized by the Father himself, He set forth to cut down the corrupt tree of ungodliness and to plant and rear fruit-bearing trees of righteousness. Throughout His ministry and the succeeding centuries, the Savior has prayed long and true for volunteers to carry forward His work. All such are indeed trail blazers. They march out into the morasses of infamy in the social affairs of man; fell the noxious growth; and purify the fetid air that rises from social pollution so that in the name of the Master, the beautiful blossoms of righteousness may open their colorful faces to a sin-sick world.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Preparation for Kingdom Work.

The gospel is being preached to take out a people for His name, and this people is being prepared to be workers with Jesus in His kingdom work. The nature of this preparation is declared by Jesus in Matt. 7:24, "Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock." "These sayings" refer to the teachings in Matt. 5 and 6. By Matt. 7:21 we know that the expression "these sayings" does not refer to prophesying in Jesus name, nor to casting out devils in His name, nor to many wonderful works that are done in His name, be they hospitals, or homes, or education, or reform work, or uplift movements, or Christian legislation.

By Matt. 5 and 6 we know that "these sayings" concern such things as humility, hunger and thirst after righteousness, mercy, faith and trust in the Father, asking, seeking and knocking for the good things that the Father has to give, knowing that, because He is Father, He will open and give out from His store house things both new and old. "These sayings" of Matt. 5 and 6 are inner processes by which Jesus is preparing His kingdom workers.

If, by looking at myself in the mirror of Jesus' teachings, I realize that "these sayings" are not being worked out in me, then I know that I am not being prepared for His kingdom, no matter how many wonderful works I may be doing in His name. And realizing this I will seek, ask and knock, if I have heard His call with hearing ears.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: The Truth about Alcoholic Beverages.

The lesson today is a temperance lesson, and the text for it is taken from Matthew 7, the last chapter of the Sermon on the Mount. In this sermon Jesus gave His disciples the rules of conduct which He considered necessary for living the Christian life. One of the main thoughts in the seventh chapter is that as we sow, so shall we reap. If we follow the rules He gave, nothing but good can result, though often it does not look so.

Jesus likens a man to a tree, saying that a good tree brings forth good fruit and a corrupt tree, evil fruit. Our actions are the fruit of our lives. If we wish to produce good fruit, we will keep our bodies pure and clean, so that our lives may correspond. We will not take into our bodies anything harmful to them. Not one of us can deny that alcoholic beverages are harmful and we cannot indulge in them and expect to escape the result.

In the book of Proverbs are found many wise admonitions for young as well as old. Solomon says that if a man desires to know the right path in life to follow, God will show it to him. He shows the results of following the ways of sin and following the ways of righteousness. One leads to life and the other to death. It is ours to make the choice. Let us choose wisely.—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. Phyllis Wood of Kewanee, Ill., is reported some improved since the report in last Herald. Those who believe the word that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick" are asked to pray for her.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Smead and Earl Smead of Chicago visited their brother Cecil of the Training Class at Golden Rule Home, Sunday, January 26.

Bro. F. B. McCullough and family have sold at Fredonia, Texas, and have bought at Brownfield, Texas. To this latter place they are immediately moving. They are much rejoiced over the prospect of meeting regularly with the brethren of Tokio for worship and Bible research.

Sisters Anna E. Drew of Dixon, Illinois, and Lottie E. Young of Seattle, Wash., were welcome callers at the office last week. Sr. Young, our globe trotter, was en route from New York home after her extended visit in England. She stopped off a few days in Chicago with Sisters Whitehead and Austin and in Dixon with Sr. Drew. Come again, folks.

Sr. Helen Kee of our Chicago group is in the hospital following an operation. A line addressed to her at the Henrotin Hospital, Chicago, would reach her. Sr. Kee was formerly Helen Nell, well known in Illinois Bible School circles. Their home address is 5920 N. Paulina Ave., Chicago.

ARKANSAS CITY, KANSAS

From a letter from Sr. Chaplin, we learn that the brethren at Arkansas City meet every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock for Bible study. She says, "While not all can come out every Sunday yet we have never less than twenty, and last Sunday (Jan. 19) in spite of the bad roads and streets piled high with snow drifts, we had twenty-nine in class with splendid interest. We have started a fund toward a church building and we hope to have a church home before many months." Surely the Master rewards loyal and faithful service such as this.

TRACT NOTICE

The article on Baptism which has recently been reprinted in The Herald from the pen of Bro. S. J. Lindsay has been published in tract form. It makes a neat eight page tract, stapled and trimmed. By printing a large edition at once we are able to hold the price down to $1.50 per 100. Those who have indicated that they wish a quantity of this tract may secure the same promptly from this office. 2 for 5c, 12 for 20c, and 100 for $1.50.

CORRESPONDENCE

Brother Austin: Most gratifying reports have reached me recently of the splendid work being done by Bro. and Sr. Gordon in Niagara Falls and Fonthill. What a powerful incentive this should be to all to put forth greater effort in the encouragement and support of the Training Class!

G. Eldred Marsh.

Dear Brethren: I hope this will be good news to all the family of the faith to hear of a brother leaving isolation and moving into a community of real zealous brethren. I had never known of the Tokio brethren only through our beloved deceased brother, A. S. Bradley, and as we were visiting in the west the writer had a strong leading to visit the brethren at Tokio.

So to Tokio we came and met Bro. Pippin and family, Brothers Day, Elmore, Sappenfield and Miller, and Sisters Martin and Simmons. As I met these brethren they began to locate a place for us in the community and we bargained for a farm, and attended Sunday School the following Sunday. The day was a joyful one! Bro. Elmore called on me to take charge of the Memorial service. You can imagine how blank I felt when called upon, having been in isolation so long, but I jumped up as though I were experienced. As I left my seat I trusted the Lord for guidance in my awkwardness. The service was appreciated and there was joy throughout the day, exchanging our experiences, in the paths of truth. In the evening we attended a big Singing at the same building.

Tokio has a large attendance at Sunday School when the weather is fair. Many of these are from other denominations, and several of the Church of Christ brethren take communion at the Lord's table with us. When we can all realize that the Lord's table is His table and not ours, we can heartily invite all to examine themselves and take freely.

We are moving from Wetmore to Tokio in a few days. We have been on the go for six weeks hunting a new location, and I trust it is the Lord's leading for us to go to Tokio where we can commune together every first day of the week.

We are very heavy and sad-hearted at this moment, as wife has been tearing the wrappers from the Heralds that have come in our six weeks' absence. We read of the enemy Death that stepped into Bro. Siple's home and carried away with him the love and glory of Bro. Siple's earthly life. But thanks be to our suffering Lord, we can look across the stream of suffering and tears, and see her rebuke the one that snatched her from her dear children and loving husband, and say to him, "O Death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

The Lord shall descend with a shout and with the voice of an archangel and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Comfort one another with these words.

F. B. McCullough.

ASLEEP IN JESUS

Ella L. Coffin was born at Dayton, Ohio, in 1848. She was married to Joseph Gardiner in 1874. To them was born one son who died August 29, 1913. Her husband, Joseph Gardiner, died September 20, 1929, at Hope, New Mexico, and was brought by her to Champaign for burial.

The hardness of the journey and the return to an empty home and a vacant chair was almost more than the frail body could bear. Her desire was that she might soon fall asleep and be laid beside her husband and son. Her sickness lasted only ten days and she fell asleep in Jesus on January 9, 1930.

She was brought by Chas. Coffin, her brother, to Champaign (Ill.) for burial. The funeral was held at our home and services were conducted by the writer, as previously requested by Sr. Gardiner. Both she and her husband were converted under the preaching of Bro. Hatch of whom she spoke in her last letter to me. They both lived firm in faith and Christian hope and were ready to meet their Savior, Jesus Christ.

Harriet E. Boice.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates:
the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortal-ization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54;
the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:
32, the church being joint-heirs with Him,
Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation

GOD'S ACRE

I like that ancient Saxon phrase, which calls
The burial-ground God's Acre! It is just;
It consecrates each grave within its walls,
And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping dust.

God's Acre! Yes, that blessed name imparts
Comfort to those, who in the grave have sown
The seed that they had garnered in their hearts,
Their breath of life, alas! no more their own.

Into its furrows shall we all be cast,
In the sure faith that we shall rise again
At the great harvest, when the archangel's blast
Shall winnow, like a fan the chaff and grain.

Then shall the good stand in immortal bloom,
On the fair gardens of that second birth;

And each bright blossom mingle its perfume
With that of flowers, which never bloomed on earth.

With thy rude ploughshare, Death, turn up the sod,
And spread the furrows for the seed we sow;
This is the field and Acre of our God.
This is the place where human harvests grow!

—Longfellow.

MY ENDEAVOR

I WILL THIS DAY try to live a simple, sincere and serene life, repelling promptly every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity, and self-seeking; cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity, and the habit of holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, careful-ness in conversation, diligence in appointed service, fidelity to every trust, and a child-like trust in God.

THE BOOK OF EZRA

By Lyman Booth

EZRA WAS THE SON OF SERAEAH, and probably was born at Babylon. (His name means, Help.) He was a ready scribe, Ezra 7:6, a descendant of Aaron the Chief Priest. He went up to Jerusalem with the second delegation of returned captives. It has been inferred from the language he used (8:1) that he was the author of the book which bears his name. There are others who think that some portions of the book, and the book of Nehemiah were produced from memoirs of those two very eminent men, but doubt that the books in their present form are the works of these authors.

Some authorities claim that Ezra wrote the Chronicles. Indeed some Jewish writers claim he revised all the preceding parts of the Scriptures, and published a correct copy of the whole. In fact their claim seems highly probable. While he has not the distinction of being a prophet in the Scriptures, yet there can be no doubt that he performed such services under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, since there is no distinction made in the New Testament between the several parts of that volume, which was then called "the Oracles of God." They were sanctioned as such by our Lord and His apostles.

The book of Ezra was anciently united with the book of Nehemiah, and in the Seventy they are called the Second Esdras and Nehemiah. In the Vulgate they are called First and Second Esdras. It is a continuation of the Chronicles. It was originally written partly in Hebrew and partly in a dialect which some call Chaldee, and others, Aramic or Syrian. Those parts in that dialect are 4:7 to 6:18 and 7:11-26. They are largely composed of letters and public documents taken from the archives, and are probably quoted in the original tongue, instead of being translated, the object of which was to preserve their authenticity.

The prophecies of Haggai and Zechariah confirm the history contained in the fore part of this book, and since Ezra alone records the rebuilding of the temple, whatever is related in the New Testament pertaining to the temple as it then existed, is in some respects a sanction to the authenticity of Ezra's narrative. However I do not find any direct reference to it except in the genealogies. They do not appear to contain any specific prophecies; but the pious tone in which it is written, and the fact that it is so much in harmony with other Scriptures, present strong internal evidence of divine inspiration. Jeremiah's prophecies are expressly mentioned in this book, and Isaiah's extraordinary predictions concerning Cyrus (1:1-3) are clearly intimated.

It is evident that the writings of the prophets were then in use; and the constant reference to the Law of Moses and to the preceding histories in this book, and that of Nehemiah, proves the same regarding them. Ezra was held in high honor and esteem by the ancient Jews and also by the modern generation, and to this fact we must attribute the forgery of several books, bearing his name, especially the books of Esdras or Ezra in the Apocrypha, which some claim as undoubted forgery.

This history opens with Cyrus' proclamation for the return of a goodly company of Jews, and their attempts to rebuild the city and temple, and to reinhabit the land. It records the opposition they met, and the delays by reason of the opposition, and how they practically succeeded after a long time. After about seventy-eight or seventy-nine years Ezra himself arrived, bringing with him a commission from Artaxerxes which gave him large powers and authority, and with many attendants. The narrative closes with an account of the sin of the Jews in marrying heathen, or Gentile, women. It mentions Ezra's grief, his humble confession, and prayers on that account, and his pious endeavors to win his people back from idolatry.

In the subsequent history the Jews no longer appear as an independent and prosperous nation, governed by kings of their own race, but only a small remnant, returned under their protection and dominion, very often feebly struggling with numerous difficulties, and cruel enemies. Yet, with all, even in this extreme condition they were able to reestablish the worship of God at the temple in Jerusalem in conformity with the Law of Moses, to which they outwardly adhered till the coming of Christ. At His coming they were quite effectually cured of idolatry; but in other matters exceedingly prone to disobedience and self-righteousness.

Nothing of great importance is recorded of their history except what may be found in the prophecies of Ezekiel and Daniel. Very little is found in the Scriptures concerning their condition during a period of about 536 years till the birth of Christ, as compared with the history given of the nation from the days of Moses till the captivity. The old dispensation was drawing to a close to make way for a new one. The spirit of prophecy was about to be withheld from them for a season. The people had so often and openly violated their national covenant that they were not noticed and honored as they had been in former ages by surrounding nations.

If we divide the book into two parts we will notice a considerable interval between them. Part one gives an account of the return of the captives from Babylon at the beginning of Cyrus' reign, B. C. 536, and the rebuilding of the temple interrupted in this work by the Samaritans, but which was renewed at the preaching of Haggai and Zechariah, and accomplished in the sixth year of Darius' reign, B. C. 516 (1-6). Part two, though separated by about fifty years, gives an account of the second company of exiles to immigrate in the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus, B. C. 458 or 457, which was led by Ezra himself, who brought about a reformation of the people, and forbade the Jews to marry heathen women. Thus the period covered by the book was about 79 years from 536 to 457 B. C.

Be at war with your vices, at peace with your neighbors, and let every new day find you a better man.—Franklin.

“ACCORDING TO THE PATTERN”

By G. Eldred Marsh

“Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed thee in the mount.”—Hebrews 8:5.

THE ELABORATE AND BEAUTIFUL RITUAL of the tabernacle service as divinely ordered was exceedingly impressive. The painstaking care with which Moses and his “cunning workmen” formed each particular object to be used in the worship of Jehovah, spoke of the spirit of devotion and godly fear that permeated their purpose. Not the slightest change was permitted. All things must conform with exactitude to the pattern placed before Moses in the mount. Only the purest materials could be used. Scrupulous care must be observed in every detail of construction. Artistry and utility must labor hand in hand, guided by a spirit of prayerful devotion, in order that the entire work might reflect the sacred nature and purpose of it all. For was it not designed for the worship of the God of Abraham and of Isaac and of Jacob?

In the richness, in the beauty, in the perfection of detail, in the laborious effort required and exerted to accomplish it all, there are valuable lessons for us. First, the service of God *demand*s our best. Second, the service of God deserves our best. Third, nothing that we can give or do will more than express our gratitude for that which God has already done for us.

“I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable (spiritual, R. V.) service.” Romans 12:1. In His only begotten Son, God has given us His best. He surely expects us to present our best to Him!

Their best was what He required of Moses and of all Israel. Their service was rendered in the gold and silver, the fine linen, the rich woods and valuable skins needed for the construction of the tabernacle and the temple. After that they must make their sacrifices and offerings of the first and finest fruits, and of the best, the most perfect, of their flocks and herds. Before they could use any of the increase of material things a tenth must be set apart for God. One day in every seven belonged wholly to Him. The “new moons” and the special sabbaths were to be faithfully kept, to be religiously observed, “throughout their generations”.

All of this God required of Israel in the flesh. Surely, He will ask as much or more of the disciples of Christ who live in the Spirit!

Forms and ceremonies marked the divine service of the Hebrews. The laws of God were written upon tables of stone by the finger of Jehovah. The writer of the book of Hebrews declares that the entire Mosaic system of the tabernacle service was “a copy and shadow of heavenly things”. Hebrews 8:5, A.R.V. You will observe that he does not say that these various ceremonies and observances were shadows of things in the heavens, but that they were copies of heavenly things, that is, they pictured heavenly or heaven-like conditions. In connection with this thought we recall a portion of the “Lord’s prayer”: “Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.” Matthew 6:10. This was a prayer that heaven-like conditions might prevail on earth, as they undoubtedly did in heaven.

The “heavenly things” which were foreshadowed in the impressively sacred service instituted by Moses, were largely those services which were to be rendered by the body of Christ. “Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.” Hebrews 8:1-2. Here the high priest is said to typify Christ. And the exalted office he held in the days of Moses was nothing more than a shadow of something far greater which was then still in the future. The Holy of Holies, wherein the high priest alone could enter, is made to symbolize heaven itself. The glory which dwelt between the golden cherubims was representative of the

LAWLESSNESS

A VARIETY OF EXPRESSIONS from men of importance in the world of today on the great subject of lawlessness have recently been published. A legal practitioner of Chicago has gratuitously circulated a booklet calling attention to the great wave of lawlessness that is being experienced from men and women of all walks of life. He has cited case after case where judges have decided that the common practice of gambling in the stock market is wholly illegal and that no debt incurred by such gambling can be legally collected. The effect, however, is so great, and lawlessness has come to have such a hold upon men and women of all classes and types that the nation itself must of necessity reel to and fro beneath the weakened conditions. How forcefully these statements from a legalist with no least inference to scriptural teachings, turn one's attention to Paul's words in 2 Thess. 2, where the seventh verse reads in the Emphatic Diaglott, "For the secret of lawlessness is already working, till only the restraining one for the present shall be put out of the way; and then shall be revealed the lawless one; (whom the Lord Jesus will consume with the breath of His mouth, and annihilate by the appearing of His presence;) whose coming is according to the energy of the adversary, with all power, and signs, and wonders of falsehood, and with every deception of iniquity to those who are perishing, because they admitted not the love of the truth in order that they might be saved." Is it not a fact that lawlessness is rapidly upon the increase in the practices of men and women of all types and classes? Does not this condition prevail with more or less magnitude throughout the world? Is not this one of the outstanding signs of the times? Does it not forewarn that the coming of the Son of man draweth nigh?

THE POWERS THAT BE ARE ORDAINED BY GOD

NO ONE KNOWS IN ADVANCE the reason God has in sustaining one or another in power for a season. He placed Nebuchadnezzar upon Babylon's throne in a time when Judah needed chastening. Nebuchadnezzar was a successful wielder of the lash upon Jerusalem's rebellious people. God, foreknowing the character of that royal man, opened the way for him to carry out his pleasure in the homes of Judah.

All such historic experiences have undoubtedly worked together for good to all those that love God. Today there sits in the Attorney General's office at Washington, D. C., one by the name of Mitchell. Very recently he has let it be known that if a certain phase of the governmental work is transferred to his office for execution that every legal man taking part in enforcing the law along that line must himself be an upholder of the law in practice and in principle. What less could be asked? What less could any self-respecting man expect to do?

The Attorney General has let it be known by his statement, that the very people, numbering in the thousands, who are schooled and trained in the laws of the nation are, altogether too many of them, disobedient, both in principle and in practice, to the laws which they are sworn to maintain. Is it any wonder that there is lawlessness in the land when those who make the laws, and those who test the laws, and those who execute the laws are in themselves, breakers of and revolters against the laws out of which the nation is built and upon which as a foundation, good or bad, it must stand? Attorney Mitchell's published statement, the same being in harmony with the expressed thoughts of our President, is like an oasis in the desert.

Would that all those who espouse Christianity were affirmative supporters of this power at the head of the government. Would that all such would earnestly strive to refrain from being among the lawless and would witness by conduct and testimony that they are law-abiding to God and to those whom He rears for righteous execution of righteous principles.

CHURCH PROBLEMS

FOR THE BENEFIT OF ANY who may feel that the Church of God only has difficult problems we refer to the following: "The Methodist Episcopal Church South has memorialized the General Conference to apportion $80,000.00 . . . to be apportioned among the denominational weeklies." This is to take care of annual deficits of church papers.

The Advent Christian Church is pleading for another $10,000.00 in addition to the $11,000.00 raised last year, to liquidate deficits.

All have our sympathy, for the great amount of time and mental energy devoted to financing church work robs the real Christian effort of just that much.

THE APOCRYPHA

By R. H. Judd

THERE ARE THOSE who are inclined to believe that the various books included in the collection named above are inspired. In the first place perhaps some definition of what is understood by the term "inspired" is necessary. In the writer's opinion, divine inspiration of any work must in its original be free from unreasonable and self-contradictory tenets. Its various teachings must harmonize with each other, and be in harmony with other things that are indisputably the work of God. And further, it must be so throughout its entirety. That other books besides the Bible contain precepts that the Bible contains does not necessitate or even necessarily imply inspiration, for the good that we find in other religions is common to them all, though perhaps variously expressed.

That man has fallen from his original conception of good is too abundantly evident, but he did not lose nor has he as a race lost all sense of good. There is therefore a mixture of good and evil in all that he produces. Both are inherent in him. Inspiration must give to a man more than what he naturally possesses. This the Bible gives as no other book does give or can give.

The following information regarding the Apocrypha will, I think, be of interest to interested persons. The names of the books of the Apocrypha are: 1 Esdras; 2 Esdras; Tobit; Judith; Parts of Esther not found in the Hebrew or Chaldee originals; The Wisdom of Solomon; The Wisdom of Jesus or Ecclesiasticus; Baruch; The Song of the Three Holy Children; The History of Susanna; Bel and the Dragon; The Prayer of Manasses, King of Judah; 1 Maccabees; 2 Maccabees.

It is significant that from the earliest times until the captivity no books, excepting those recognized as inspired, were ever spoken of as having a place in the sacred canon. Indeed it was long after the captivity that anyone dared to mix these spurious books amongst them. Some few of them—particularly the books of the Maccabees—may and do contain excellent history; but generally speaking, they consist of a great deal of legendary nonsense, and with some gross historical errors. They were never really acknowledged by the orthodox Jews or the Christian church to be canonical, inspired or authoritative.

It is assumed by many that because these apocryphal books are found mixed up indiscriminately with the inspired books of the Old Testament in the oldest copies of the Septuagint version in our possession, they must therefore have been inserted at the time when that Greek translation was first made. But such a theory seems quite impossible.

Josephus was born in the year 37 A. D. and was therefore a contemporary of the apostles. In his work, Against Apion, book 1, sec. 8, he says, "We have not an innumerable multitude of books among us, disagreeing from and contradicting one another (as the Greeks have), but only twenty-two books, which contain the record of all the past times; which are justly believed to be divine; and how firmly we have given credit to those books of our own nation is evident by what we do; for during so many ages as have already passed, no one has been so bold as to either add anything to them, or to take away from them, or to make any change in them." Note this expression.

Cyril of Jerusalem, A. D. 315, referring incidentally to the Septuagint, shows that even at that time the books were not mixed into the Septuagint; for he says, "Read the divine Scriptures—namely, the twenty-two books of the Old Testament which the seventy-two interpreters translated." Although there are in the New Testament 263 direct quotations from, and about 370 allusions to passages in the Old Testament, yet among all these there is not a single reference, either by Christ or His apostles, to the apocryphal writings.

It is significant that three times does Scripture give solemn warning concerning adding to, or taking away from Scripture: once by the first writer of the Bible in Deut. 4:2; next, near the middle of the Book, Prov. 30:6; and, third, John the last writer, Rev. 22:18, 19, at the end of the Book. Yet notwithstanding this the Council of Trent under direction of the Pope declared on April 8, 1546, that the books were canonical, and hence these apocryphal books are included in Roman Catholic Bibles. But the very fact that the Pope deemed it necessary to make a decree to make them canonical is proof that they were not so regarded up to that time. The Lutherans deny their inspiration; so does the Westminster Confession which was framed in 1646 by over one hundred fifty learned Protestant divines.

Some regard the Book of Enoch as inspired because our Scriptures contain quotations from it. This, however, is no proof that the book is inspired, for undoubtedly much of Bible history is gathered from other writings for which no claim can be put forward for inspiration, but the Bible use of those facts is an inspired use.

God has not, nor will He, give the imprint of Divine sanction to writings, a large portion of which are not in harmony with His truth. Hence the very fact that these other books have never been truly recognized as canonical, in spite of attempts to make them so recognized, and the fact that they have been allowed to pass so completely away, is sufficient proof in itself that God never intended their inclusion, for had they been part of the "Word of the Lord" they must in their very nature have remained to this day, for is it not written, "The Word of the Lord abideth for ever"? Instead of abiding, what has happened? They, like their authors, fell on sleep and saw corruption. Truly, "They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, no doubt they would have continued with us; but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us."

The Book of Enoch contains much that is totally at variance with the harmonious teaching of the Bible on the fundamental themes of man's nature and destiny. The same is true in more or less degree with the books under review.

“ACCORDING TO THE PATTERN”

presence of Jehovah, into which Jesus has entered as the antitypical High Priest and Mediator for us.

We also observe that the antitypical tabernacle was “pitched” by the Lord, and not man. As evidence of the fulfillment, we have the words of Jesus in Matthew, referring to the confession of Peter, “Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.” Matthew 16:18. The same thought is suggested in Ephesians 2:19-21. “Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord.” The word “temple” means “sanctuary”. Before the building of the temple in Jerusalem the tabernacle was the sanctuary of the people of God.

The first great change we notice between the shadow and the reality is this: the shadow was governed by “carnal commandments”, written upon tables of stone. The reality to which the shadow pointed is described differently: “After those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts.” Hebrews 8:10. While this passage undoubtedly is addressed to Israel, I feel sure from many other scriptures that the truth it teaches is equally applicable to Gentile Christians. Neither Jewish nor Gentile Christians depend for guidance upon the “tables of the law written upon stone”, but upon the changed heart, the new creation life, which the gospel has developed within them.

With this radical change has come the fulfillment of the purpose for which the tabernacle service was instituted, and that service is no longer required. The white garments of the priesthood are now seen in the clean hearts and pure minds of the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ! The impressive sacrifices, once offered upon altars of stone, find their counterpart in the “living sacrifice” of the bodies of believers, free from sin, unmarred by iniquity, having been cleansed by the sacred blood of the Son of God.

One of the most happy results of the change brought about by the sacrifice of Christ, and the breaking down of the wall separating Jew and Gentile, was the simplifying of the approach of men to God. Formerly acceptable worship was limited to those of Israelitish blood, and those Gentiles who had met the conditions of legal adoption into the family of Abraham. A further limitation as to location seems to have been generally recognized, of which mention is made in the fourth chapter of John. The woman at the well said to Jesus, “Our fathers (the Samaritans) worshipped in this mountain; but ye (the Jews) say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.” To this Jesus responded, predicting the great change that was soon to come in both the manner and the place of worship. “Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. . . . But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him.” John 4:20-23. Jesus thus places acceptable worship on the plane of spiritual apprehension and appreciation of God, and not on the basis of formal ceremonials, nor prescribed places.

The apostles taught the same simplicity of worship. We need no longer seek the Lord in the mountain of Samaria, nor need we turn our faces toward Jerusalem: “For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.” Matthew 18:20.

In the early days of the church of God the followers of the Lord Jesus found their places of worship in the humble homes of believers, in the sepulchral darkness of Roman catacombs, in damp caves of the mountains, and even in the prison cell of Paul! The rich vestments of the priesthood were gone; but the “beauty of holiness” had come to take their place. The gold of the cherubim no longer shone under the light of the sacred lamps of tabernacle or temple; but the glorious light of the gospel of Christ was shed abroad into the darkened lives of men. The altars of stone, before which men had been wont to pray, were cast down; but new and living altars had been erected in the temple of the human soul.

In time past the high priest alone could commune with the eternal Father; but now the most humble disciple of the Lord finds freedom to “come boldly unto the throne of grace, that (he) may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.” Hebrews 4:16.

Simplicity and truth, with free access to God, are the blended keynotes of the service we are called upon to render today. Praise the Lord!

THE MOTHER OF GOETHE ONCE WROTE: “I always seek the good that is in people and leave the bad to Him who made mankind and knows how to round off the corners.”

MY STRENGTH

LORD, make me strong! Let my soul rooted be Afar from vales of rest,
Flung close to heaven upon a great Rock's breast,
Unsheltered and alone, but strong in Thee.

What though the lashing tempests leave their scars?
Has not the Rock been bruised?
Mine, with the strength of ages deep infused,
To face the storms and triumph with the stars!

Lord, plant my spirit high upon the crest
Of thine eternal strength!
Then, though life's breaking struggles come at length,
Their storms shall only bend me to thy breast.

A WEEKLY TALK

By C. E. Randall

FOR SOME TIME THE WRITER has felt that the Church of God in its quest for knowledge has been devoting too much time and thought to the letter of the Word, thereby neglecting the Spirit of it. This trend has brought about a lamentable situation. It has brought us to an unbalanced condition. We have more of the letter of the Word than the Spirit. We need to regain our equilibrium. The frequent charges that we are not a spiritual people should be met. If the condition exists, then it is our duty to remedy the situation. That we are lacking in spirituality is evidenced on every hand. It is not so much of sight as it is of feeling.

I remember hearing President Jenks of Aurora College tell a little incident that happened in the beginning of his ministry in northern Minnesota. He and Grandfather Randall (always known as Uncle Amos) were holding meetings near a lumber camp and one night after Bro. Jenks had preached what he thought a good sermon and was on his way home, he overheard a conversation between some lumberjacks. One remarked, "The kid did pretty good", and to this the other replied, "Yes, but he ain't got the feelin' of Uncle Amos".

We are lacking in this "feelin'" that is imparted to others. Have you ever gone into a church when God's Spirit was there in mighty power and you could feel it just as soon as you stepped into the building? When one attends such a meeting, he leaves feeling that it was good to be there. It is this unseen power that makes people realize that there is something in Christianity. It is refreshing; it is appealing.

If we can get this Spirit into our services, we will not need to worry about converts. Spirituality will make a live church, an active church, a growing church out of any group that possesses it. The crying need of the Church of God today is spirituality. We don't need more truth, but more Spirit to balance the knowledge we possess.

For the next few weeks the writer is going to furnish The Herald a "Weekly Talk" trusting and praying that something may be said that will awaken our people to their peril. If we were asked if we had received the Holy Spirit since we believed, in many cases at least we would have to answer as some of old, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Spirit." Let us about face for the next few months and seek for more Spirit instead of more knowledge. Let us see if we cannot catch up with the former, and bring it up to par excellence.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH

By Lyman Booth

NEHEMIAH meaning, "the Lord comforts", was a title appropriately applied to him. This book resumes the history of the Jews, about twelve years after the close of the book of Ezra. It includes their latest canonical records till the birth of Christ, extending down to within one hundred ten years after the captivity. The book of Nehemiah as we have previously mentioned was united with the book of Ezra, and in the Vulgate translation it is called Second Esdras. It is very closely connected with the later chapters of Ezra, and continues the history from about twelve years after the close of Ezra's book to the last jubilee, B.C. 455-413, a period of thirty-two years.

It was evidently written by Nehemiah himself, for he speaks of himself in the first person, and it may have been received among the canonical Scriptures by Ezra and his assistants or successors. He was a Jew of the tribe of Judah, Neh. 1:2, and was acting as cupbearer to Artaxerxes, the king of Persia at Shushan, his winter residence.

Nehemiah, having learned of the distressed condition of his people, petitioned the king for permission to go to Jerusalem, as governor, with a commission to rebuild the walls of the city, and to provide for the prosperity of his race. His request was granted and he labored under that commission with great success for twelve years, after which he returned to Artaxerxes. Later he went back to Jerusalem, where he employed various means to promote the welfare and prosperity of his people, also the reformation of their many abuses.

The frequent, devout exclamations, with which the narrative is punctuated are peculiar to this writer, and his zeal, his activity and disinterestedness are worthy of imitation by every Christian, more especially by those employed in arduous labors and undertakings for the good of the church. It has many internal evidences of divine inspiration, and has been considered by the devout Jews as a part of their sacred Scriptures. The Jews looked upon it as a continuation of the book of Ezra. It does not appear to contain any specific prophecies, nor is the book definitely referred to in the New Testament.

When Nehemiah received the intelligence of the deplorable condition of his people in Jerusalem and Judah, he prayed to God and plead for mercy on their behalf, and God opened the heart of Artaxerxes to give him a commission to rebuild the walls of his ancestral city. The king granted him the request. Zerubbabel had rebuilt the temple but not the walls of the city. These Nehemiah endeavored to reconstruct, amidst the opposition of many enemies, within and without his nation. He employed men of every rank and order and they worked day and night, completing the task in fifty-two days.

This book might be considered the autobiography of Nehemiah, given in three main divisions. The first de-

THE PARACLETE

PART 4

By C. W. Dean

AFTER HIS RESURRECTION, and during His forty days of resurrection ministry, Acts 1:3, Christ told His disciples that all power in heaven and earth had been given unto Him, and all authority. (Matt. 28:18.) This should remove all doubt from whom the Holy Spirit is emanating. Christ commanded His disciples, saying, "Go ye therefore and disciple all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit", Matt. 28:19. Here we have three separate and distinct personalities mentioned, which is a kingdom proclamation, and future fulfillment closing the age, or eon.

Students of Scripture should easily see that this prophecy is still future. Christ has not yet taken His great power (Rev. 11:17; 12:10). The circumcision apostles never went out to all nations. Peter was opposed when he went to the proselyte Cornelius (Acts 11:3). They never baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. They used the titles of Christ intelligently when they baptized. They used the name of Jesus Christ in baptizing Israelites (Acts 2:37), and Lord Jesus when baptizing Samaritans (Acts 8:16). Proselytes were commanded to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ (Acts 10:48). Twelve disciples who were baptized with the baptism of John were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus (Acts 19:4-5).

The apostles never used the formula of Matt. 28:19; they knew it was for the future kingdom proclamation. They never disciplined all nations as such. The Lord was not with them till the conclusion of the age, but left them soon afterward when He ascended. This commission cannot be carried out until His return in power and glory to bless all nations through His people Israel, which will not take place until after the great tribulation days, and during the millennial kingdom of Christ Jesus.

Transgression is a sin against a known law, entailing not only the usual penalties, but the added displeasure of God against one who defies His precepts. The law was not given to the people directly, but through Moses who acted as the mediator. The law was not given through Christ, the Seed of promise. Hence, the declaration of Paul, a mediator is not one; but God is one. A mediator is a middle man, or a person that manages, or transacts between two parties in order to reconcile. Christ Jesus is the only Peacemaker and Intercessor between God and man (1 Tim. 2:5-6). This passage breaks down the bounds in which salvation had hitherto been confined. The testimony of past eras is no basis on which to build in this era. The testimony to the nations committed to the apostle Paul, the mediator of Christ between Himself and Gentiles, Phil. 3:17, is to the effect that Christ was not only the Son of David to confirm the kingdom to Israel, or the seed of Abraham to bring blessings to the faithful, but He is one Mediator of God and mankind, a Man, Christ Jesus, who gave himself a correspondent Ransom "FOR ALL".

Christ Jesus himself promised the sons of Israel, the twelve apostles of the circumcision, that He would send them another "Paraclete", mediator, with the power of the Holy Spirit to abide with them for the age. He plainly tells them that He will not come to them until after the great tribulation. Daniel, given wisdom and understanding by the angel Gabriel, writes that Michael the great prince will stand up for Israel during the time of great tribulation closing the allotted time given the nation of Israel. Can any student of the Scripture doubt that Michael the great prince is operating as a notable representative with the power of the Holy Spirit?

Christ himself said that no one can enter the strong man's house unless he first binds the strong man, and after the strong man is bound he would enter his house and despoil him of his goods (Mark 3:26-27), which refers to Satan. It will certainly require the power of the Holy Spirit to bind Satan. Does Christ himself bind Satan? No, the angel of Jesus Christ binds him (Rev. 20:1-2). Did Christ himself signify the revelation unto John? No, He sent them to John by His angel (Rev. 1:1). Does Christ himself cast out Satan and his angels from heaven? No, Michael and his angels perform that work (Rev. 12:7-9). Does the devil contend with Christ himself over the body of Moses? No, he contends with Michael the archangel (Jude 9). Does Christ himself stand up for Israel during the great time of trouble? No, Michael is the Mediator of Christ during that time. Can we say that Michael the archangel, the great prince, who is at the head of an angelic host is without the power of the Holy Spirit? If we do, we are in error, contradicting the Scriptures.

In conclusion I desire to state again that the "Paraclete" is an Advocate, or Helper, and one called. It involves and indicates a personality; that Hagaion Pneuma, or Holy Spirit, is the power of the Most High, and when coupled with the Paraclete or another Paraclete, the Holy Spirit includes both personality and power. Under no stretch of imagination are we to couple the two and call it an influence of power emanating direct from God to mankind. Such would be blasphemy.

God can only deal direct through justice, and justice demands the wages of sin which is death. Christ, the One Mediator between mankind and God, dwelling at the right hand of God, in a light unapproachable by man, deals with us through a mediator, being the express image of His Father, and the effulgence of His glory. He has the power to send His angel with the power of the Holy Spirit to guide His brethren, the sons of Israel, through the great tribulation. This He has promised to do, that He may be with them for the age, closing the allotted time made to Israel, foretold by Daniel the prophet, and confirmed by Christ Jesus.

IF, INSTEAD OF A GEM, or even a flower, we could cast the gift of a lovely thought into the heart of a friend, that would be as the angels must give,—George Macdonald,

JESUS MEETS HUMAN NEEDS

JESUS TASTED DEATH FOR EVERY MAN

Sunday, February 9—Hebrews 2:6-15.

But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man.—Heb. 2:9.

CREATED MORTAL, given to sin, forfeiting the tree of life, man from his early experience has been wholly needy. Unaided, he can neither lengthen his days, release himself from sin, nor renew himself unto his primal created condition. In infinite wisdom, love and power, God provided another Son, His well-beloved Son Jesus, to lead repentant children of Adam and free them from sin, restore them to life, and to the blessings originally provided by God. Indeed God's gift to those truly faithful unto Him and His Son is eternal life. Rom. 6:23.

EVEN RULERS ARE NEEDY

Monday, February 10—Matthew 8:5-13.

I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.—Matthew 8:8.

THE CENTURION recognized in Jesus both the authority and the power to command in such way that His word would produce results. He illustrated the Savior's power to help him in his need by his own power of authority to command a servant and accomplish his will. But though he had authority, he was impotent to command any help that would aid him in his need for his palsied servant. Even the man in highest authority is in need of the Savior equally as is the servant.

THOUGH WONDERFULLY MADE MAN DAILY NEEDS DIVINE HELP

Tuesday, February 11—Matthew 9:1-13.

"For whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?"—Matthew 9:5.

The Psalmist recognized that he, as all men was wonderfully made, even though a mortal, corruptible being. Psalms 139:14. Jesus received the palsied man who, though wonderfully made, was utterly helpless. The Savior, glorifying God by His work, spoke with power to His helpless brother directing him to return to strength. His added word brought forth by the disbelieving watchers' reveals how Christ also in His same command was to be understood as forgiving the sins of the helpless one. He did a work which no other mortal in human annals was ever able to do. He put his hand beneath the weakest phase of man's weakness and lifted him into the position of strength that results from sins truly and justly forgiven. None other at any time can supply man in this special need, a need which affects every individual,

SUPPLYING THOSE WEAKENED BY HUNGER

Wednesday, February 12—Mark 8:1-10.

"So they did eat, and were filled."—Mark 8:8.

During forty days of fasting in the wilderness, Jesus, not receiving direction from the Holy Spirit which had led Him thither for testing, declined to convert stone into bread to satisfy His great hunger. In the lesson of this morning we find His power exemplified in that He takes the few loaves and fishes and by His commanding power increases them to such sufficiency as to fully feed four thousand. Their need was His opportunity. They were present listening to His instructions. Though for their good, yet it was He who had detained them. He now supplied their every need in that He afforded food to replenish their beings.

THE BLIND SEE

Thursday, February 13—Luke 18:35-43.

"What wilt thou that I shall do unto thee? And he said, Lord, that I may receive my sight."—Luke 18:41.

The flood of noonday light streaming through a cloudless sky is of no value or utility to him who has not perfect physical organs with which to receive the light and to be aided thereby. It was God who created man with these wonderful organs of sight. In some manner or another sin had wrecked the sight organs of the blind man. Jesus came to his need, restored his power of vision. Then the light from the sun, also the created gift of God, became of value to this needy man.

Jesus is the great Physician, the great Helper, Restorer, Redeemer. He supplies every need. None other in the history of humans has done so much. The greatest kings, the rulers of the greatest armies, men exercising the greatest power, are one and all unable to restore the little organ of sight in the human body. Jesus, God's Son, supplies where man needs. Equally true is it when he who lacks the sight of wisdom goes to the great Giver. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him". James 1:5 and 3:17.

THERE SHALL BE NO MORE TEARS

Friday, February 14—John 11:33-44.

"And some of them said, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have caused that even this man should not have died?"—John 11:37.

There is no known power to remove that deep heart-bursting sorrow which overshadows the individual bereaved of one who has come to be nearest and dearest, excepting that power that returns the deceased one to life. With wisdom God has so created and organized the individual life

THE ANGELS' SONG

This hymn is said to be the most poetic of all the Christian hymns. It was written by Edward Hamilton Sears, and first published in 1850. It at once became a favorite, being sung on the streets in England as a carol, also in the colonies on the last few nights before Christmas.

It came upon a midnight clear,
The glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth
To touch their harps of gold;
"Peace on earth, good will to man,"
From heaven's all-gracious King;
The earth in solemn stillness lay,
To hear the angels sing.

Still through the cloven skies they come
With peaceful wings unfurled;
And still celestial music floats
O'er all the weary world;
Above its sad and lowly plains
They bend on heavenly wing,
And ever o'er its babel sounds,
The blessed angels sing.

O ye beneath life's crushing load,
Whose forms are bending low,
Who toil along the climbing way,
With painful steps and slow—
Look up! for glad the golden hours
Come swiftly on the wing;
O, rest beside the weary road,
And hear the angels sing!

For low the days are hastening on,
By prophet bards foretold,
When with the ever circling years
Comes round the age of gold!
When peace shall over all the earth
Its final splendors fling,
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing.

"Circumscribe the evangel in this land, gentlemen; lessen confidence or fail to strengthen confidence in the Bible, democratize the Almighty, lower the Son of God to the level of other men, rob Calvary of its meaning, leave the seal unbroken upon His tomb, and you have driven light and hope from the hearts of men. You have made life not worth living. You have undermined all authority. You have increased lawlessness. You have made government a derision. You have sunk the land into pagan darkness, and to quote from former President Coolidge . . . , you will 'have turned all our material prosperity, overwhelmingly though it may appear, into a barren sceptre in our grasp.'"—Dr. James M. Gray addressing the Radio Commission at Washington,

RETURNING TO JERUSALEM TO JESUS

By M. A. Woodward.

A few extracts from a sermon delivered by Dr. Robert Speers

THEY TURNED back again to Jerusalem seeking Jesus. They who in the first instance thus turned back to Jerusalem were Joseph and Mary. They had made their annual journey to Jerusalem at the Passover. It was the twelfth visit since that memorable year when the miracle of Jesus' birth had come to them at Bethlehem. The passover was ended and they were on their homeward way to Nazareth.

The caravan with which they had traveled had come out early from Jerusalem and four miles on the way had taken the right turning toward Damascus and the north on the old Roman road which can be clearly seen where it divides in the narrow plain, on the right the north road from Samaria and Galilee and on the west the road for Antipatris and Cæsarea. That west turning is almost certainly the very road over which a little later Paul was taken on the first stage of his long journey to Rome. On the north road at the end of the first day's journey from Jerusalem, the Galilee caravans stopped for the night at the little village now called Bireh, the ancient Beeroth.

In the movement of the first day's travel of an oriental caravan, made up of many groups of folk and of the long line of camels and asses, moving in half regulated disorder, the boys would be naturally running about in their boy tasks and boy fellowships, and no one missed Jesus until the families gathered around the fires in and about the old khan for the evening meal and the night's rest. Only then it was noticed that Jesus was not with them. They "supposed him to have been in the company".

This can happen still; Jesus can be missing from our lives and through our suppositions or preoccupations we may not be aware of His absence. But there will be no true and complete family gathering in the evening without Him, no, nor at any other time. If He is not present, the sooner we note His absence the better. Memorable will be the moment of that discovery! A thousand years ago the loving memory of the Christian church marked the historic spot in Beeroth. The ruins of a large church are still visible in the village. It was finished in 1146 on the site of a much older church built on the traditional place where Joseph and Mary made their discovery and whence without delay, we infer, they retraced their steps through the night and "returned back to Jerusalem seeking Jesus". There they found Him.

This is the beautiful ancient story. A company of men and women from all lands and all races repeated it in their own experience in the meeting in Jerusalem, March 24 to April 8, of the International Missionary Council. This Council is made up of representatives of the new churches which have grown up in ever increasing strength and maturity at the fruitage of the foreign missionary undertaking. Two hundred and forty, of whom more than a third were from the churches of Asia and Africa and Latin America, spent these two weeks together on the Mount of Olives, looking eastward over the wilderness of Judea and the Dead Sea and the Jordan, to Nebo and the mountains of Moab and Gilead. Looking westward they saw the garden of Gethsemane and its olive trees whose little grey leaves were so kind to Jesus, and beyond the valley of Kedron over the Holy City, the area of the temple where He taught, the pools of Bethesda and Siloam, the sites of the ancient palaces and the judgment hall, the hill of Calvary where stood His cross and the garden with the empty grave from which He arose.

They had returned to Jerusalem, seeking Jesus. He is the sole reason for the missionary enterprise, and some had feared that here and there throughout the world His church might be thinking to travel forth in the work of foreign missions with Jesus missing from the company. But every such fear vanished as from all the churches, the oldest and the newest, rose one signal voice of faith and loyalty with regard to our Lord Jesus Christ. No one in this Jerusalem council had any other gospel than Christ's gospel, nor was seeking any other. Every one saw in Him, and in Him alone, the Hope of Salvation of the world. There was the richness and freedom of truth, love casting out fear—the fear and suspicion of other men's fidelity, the fear of the truth we have not seen ourselves and which has been given to another for us, the fear of the fulness which is to gather in all the treasures of humanity; for "the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour unto it. And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for there shall be no night there. And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it."

We do not need to go to Jerusalem to find Jesus. We do not need to go anywhere to find Jesus, beloveds. If He is not in our homes, there is where we need to place Him first. And it will not do to think because we have been baptized into His precious name we have found Him. It may be with us as with Peter, and we will have to stop and listen to Christ's words, "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren." We will know if we are converted. We will long for His dear presence every place, at all times. We will want to talk with His Father and ours, and find Jesus listening in, and ready to answer the Father's wishes for us. For He never fails to have His wish for us and that is always, "Nearer, My God, to Thee", so close, dear Father, that I can feel Thy presence all the time.

At the home fireside, at the table asking God's blessing on the food so mercifully given, at night time before the children have gone to their beds, pray with them; let them hear Father's voice asking God to care for them, to guide them. Be kind at home, kiss the tired wife, pet the growing boy so he will know daddy is his pal and mother his most trusted confidant. Find Jesus! Oh, do not wait until the children have grown and gone. Begin now to train them for the kingdom.

How true are Dr. Speers' words, "We can find Him today. He is waiting for us in His Father's business", as He was when the mother, nineteen hundred years ago, was seeking Him sorrowing. His answer to her was, "How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" The warrant is deep and true for our longing to know all we can about His life on earth and the land which He consecrated forever. But it is not the Jesus of Palestine alone we know; it is the everlasting Son of the Father, the Savior who is accessible to us and close by our side, behind the plow or the machine, the ledger or the desk, the sewing basket, on every acre of our American farms, in every street of our American cities, in every room of every home and in every experience and necessity of our American life. This was St. Paul's view. He lifted up in his own life and for all human life the ever-living, everywhere available Christ.

How much we have here to think of and to live in our lives! If you, dear reader, enjoy these thoughts as I do, I will give you another leaf from Dr. Speers' splendid sermon next week. Until then, may we keep thinking, and practicing the living Christ.

scribes his sorrow for his country while at the Persian court, and his return to Jerusalem, Neh. 1:4. Part two relates the arrangements made for the plans for the rebuilding of the walls. It also relates the agreement made for the occupation of the city, Neh. 7 to 11. The seventh chapter is an extract or quotation from Ezra, second and third chapters. It is inserted here apparently for the purpose of recalling the names of the original immigrants of a century earlier, whose descendants were then brought into a new covenant with God at the Feast of Tabernacles, at which time the law was solemnly read, and the history of God's dealings with His people recounted in their hearing, also the solemn sealing of the covenant by the chiefs of the people.

Part three, we might say, is an appendix, chapters 12 and 13. After he had held the office of governor or viceroy of Jerusalem for twelve years, he returned to the court of Artaxerxes. During his absence his people became forgetful of their covenant and promises to follow God, and the old abuses and evil practices began to creep in among them. When Nehemiah was informed of this, he at once obtained leave of absence from the court and hastened to Jerusalem where he employed his time diligently in putting down abuses and in introducing measures for the regulation of traffic on the Sabbath. He also severely denounced mixed marriages, thus bringing about a second reformation. After he accomplished this work, it is thought that he returned to Persia about B.C. 413 and died there, and there appears to be no evidence to the contrary.

that it properly and justly grieves deeply under certain conditions. Such sorrow reveals man's need in some of his destitute circumstances. Jesus, the Anointed One of God, revealed His power and ability here as elsewhere. With tears in His own eyes He promised the living that their dead should return. He petitioned His Father; He spent His word and His power to the dead and Lazarus returned to life. The sovereignty of our Savior over all forms of destitution upon man is revealed again and again. It is in Him that the entire human race has been urged of the Father to confide.

AT THEIR WITS' END

Saturday, February 15—Luke 24:13-27.

"O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."—Luke 24:25.

The storm-tossed waters, tearing into the boat of the mariners; the quaking earth, causing walls to reel and hills to slide; the roaring tempest, uprooting trees and unroofing homes: these and many other circumstances of life perplex and annoy man until he is at his wits' end. See Psalms 107:23-28. So also the apostles upon the day of the Savior's resurrection; they were perplexed and annoyed. The queries and mysteries were unsolvable by them. It was then that Jesus stepped into their midst and with gentle ease restored them to peace of mind. Formerly they had experienced anguish while the Savior slept in the hold of the boat as it tossed and threshed in the billows and winds. As He awoke, with equally little effort, He spoke to the winds and to the waves and restored peace to their perplexed minds.

Life, unaided and undirected from on high, is one perplexity after another in rapid succession. Man unaided is most weak. The tiny insect can frustrate his greatest plans and defy his most strenuous effort. Christ came that He might restore peace to the needy, even that peace which He himself enjoyed, the peace which passeth all understanding by unaided man. In this way our Savior met every class of human needs that were presented to Him. The hour will yet come when the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, and when Christ shall be all in all, WINTER IS WEARING ON. Its icy days are lengthening into weeks and months, and as day after day we face long hours of indoor duties at home, or shut up within the confines of the office, it is easy to grow impatient and weary in well-doing.

Nearly all of us feel that way. And that is why the consideration of a certain truth should prove particularly opportune at this time.

Have you not often made plans for the day, for many helpful and beautiful deeds and many kind words, and then come to its close having failed discouragingly of their accomplishment?

I believe we have all known the perplexity of heart caused by many such outcomes of what promised to be days well spent. Why is this? Let us study for a moment.

Time is one of God's most valuable gifts to man. Therefore, the day that fails to record the maximum in service rendered to God is one day lost.

In order to live each day fully to the glory of God we must bear in mind that our own wisdom and ability are far too small for the task. Should we not start each day right by taking a little inventory when we first awake in the morning, and realizing and being duly appreciative of our blessings? We ought not to be afraid to thank God for the things He does for us. Then before going any farther we should ask that His wisdom and love may guide us through all the day's activities.

As the day advances it is easy to forget and let go of the guiding hand, but whenever we do that, things begin to go wrong, and we worry and fret over little obstacles that might as well be mountains for all the ability we have in ourselves to move them.

Many of us turn to our heavenly Father when we come to the big problems and the crises in life's experiences, but do we accept His help in the commonplace little perplexities of every day?

I once knew a young Christian who was blessed with the simple faith that no task was too small to take to God for strength to perform it to His glory, no problem so inconsequential, even in her little life, but that He was glad to lead her to its successful solution. And hers is one of the happiest lives with which I ever have come in contact.

This, to me, is the secret of a lifetime of days lived acceptably to God and with greatest happiness to ourselves, Israel, in the old days, never went astray while she took God with her. God will lead us just as literally today.

Will each of you stick on the edge of your mirror during the coming week the truth stated at the head of this page? Let us study it carefully each morning of this week and keep its strengthening assurance close to our hearts during the day.

Next week we may talk of the subject from a little different standpoint.

DECEMBER ILLINOIS STATE BEREAN REPORT

OREGON: Membership, 24; average weekly attendance, 13; three visitors; interest, excellent.

DIXON: Membership, 22; average weekly attendance, 10; interest very good, considering weather. The Senior Bereans met on Jan. 8, and disorganized as Bereans. They are now simply the Bible class. The Junior Bereans are now the Dixon Berean Society.

CHICAGO: Membership, 15; average weekly attendance, 10. Attendance very good in spite of the cold and bad weather.

ST. LOUIS: Membership, 9; average weekly attendance, 5 or 6; interest good.

RIPLEY: Membership, 14; average weekly attendance, 9; interest, fair.

SALEM: Membership, 25; attendance for one meeting, 10; interest, good. Weather has been so bad each Wednesday night that we couldn't hold meetings.

ROCKFORD: Membership, 17; average attendance, 14; interest continues to be excellent. Our use of the hall for our regular meeting-place helps greatly, both practically and psychologically. We are enjoying our new lessons and getting much good from them.

Edna Wood, Secretary Illinois State Berean Society.

"Keep your mind serene and calm—
Will it so;

If an adverse thought creeps in,
Bid it go.

You can make or mar the day,
You will find,

By the kind of thoughts you keep
In your mind."

WARNINGS AND PROMISES

JESUS TELLS US THAT WE must be careful not to listen to those who would try to teach us what is not true. There are some wicked people who are like wolves in sheep's clothing. Jesus said we may know them by their deeds. He asked, "Do we gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles?"

Jesus says wicked people will do wicked deeds, just as a bad tree will bring forth bad fruit. Truly good people will do good deeds just as a good tree or good vine will bear good fruit. Every tree that does not bear good fruit is cut down and destroyed. Everyone who by doing wicked deeds, proves that his heart is evil, is sure to suffer.

Those who only pretend to be good are not true friends of Jesus. Jesus sees into their hearts, and can tell if they are only pretending.

Those who hear and obey are like a man who built his house upon a rock. The winds came and the rain fell, but that house stood firm.

Jesus said that those who hear His word and do not obey are like a man who built his house upon the sand. When the rain came and the wind blew, the house fell and was destroyed.

—Selected from Little Learner.

THINK!

- Shall we build on the rock?
Shall we try to grow good fruit?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Tell how to bear good fruit.
2. Illustrate the thoughts of the story.
3. Select the right word for the following:
  1. I will build my house on the _____. (sand, rock.)
  2. We will bear _____ fruit. (good, bad.)
  3. Every good tree bringeth forth _____ fruit. (good, evil.)
  4. The house stood that was built upon the _____. (sand, rock.)
  5. Shall we be _____ friends of Jesus? (true, false.)

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

It is of Lincoln that we sing
On this day set apart

For thoughts and words and deeds that bind
His memory to the heart.

We'll learn the lesson of his life,
And ever try to be
As strong, as gentle and as kind
And good and true as he.

—Songs in Season.

NATURE QUESTION

4. The ostrich is used by Jeremiah as a simile for cruelty. Lam. 4:3.
5. What two birds are used by the Psalmist to express his loneliness?

OBEDIENCE

UZZAH AND THE ARK—2 SAMUEL 6.

When the Ark of the Covenant was made God said that no man should ever touch it; but that it should be lifted by poles stuck through rings at the sides or corners.

The Philistines captured the Ark, but finally it was returned to the Israelites. David and a great company of chosen men went to bring it to the temple. A new cart was made and drawn by oxen to carry the Ark. Music of all kinds was played.

Among the men was one named Uzzah. He was beside the Ark when they came to Nachor's threshingfloor. Without thinking, apparently, Uzzah put forth his hand and took hold of the Ark to steady it. Now, this was what God had said they must not do.

Immediately Uzzah was smitten and died beside the Ark of God. He had disobeyed.

FACT

Beth—means house.
Beth-el—means house of God.

WHO SAID?

"Come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy."

"When we're serving those in need,
We are serving Christ indeed,
If to all we're good and kind,
We shall love and mercy find."

JESUS HEALING AND HELPING

Matthew 8:1 to 9:34

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 35:3-10

GOLDEN TEXT

Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.—Matthew 8:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Jesus Meeting Human Needs.

Basic Truth. "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise."—John 5:19.

Outline. I. Human Needs. II. Human Inability to Meet Them. III. Jesus Meets Human Needs.

I. Human Needs. God originally provided man with every needed thing, Gen. 1:26-31. Man sinned. Sin removed man from God's ways and from the fruits of those ways. Further sin placed obstacles before man. Sickness, pain, war, death, these and more are the results of sin. Weakness of body, weakness of mind, weakness in morals, weakness in judgment, weakness before God, all these and more are also the direct result of sin.

In our lesson the palsied man, utterly weak though living, was brought before the Master. There was no power within himself, nor in his friends, to unloose the shackles of sin and to release him unto action. The Savior's words and works not only benefited the man, but emphasized the weakness of man in himself.

II. Human Inability to Meet Them. Six thousand years of struggle has not revealed to man any way to release himself from the bondage of sin. The sum total of all scientific investigation and learning, of all religious invention by man, of all royal authority and decree, of all military strength and prowess, has not remitted sin, healed the leper, Lev. 13 and 14, or awakened the dead. Man has been unable to retrace his footsteps to the conditions of the Garden of Eden. He has been unable to roll off earth's curse, or to rediscover the tree of life. Gen. 3:17, 24.

III. Jesus Meets Human Needs. One of the first acts of the Savior was to meet and vanquish the tempter. Matt. 4. Another act was to announce the good news resulting from a kingdom obedient to God's teachings. Another act was to meet the evil of unexpected false prophets, Pharisees and scribes, and reveal the righteousness of God to the suffering.

In meeting man's needs, He revealed His authority to forgive, to remit man's sins, and to release man from the fruits or penalties of sin, into the liberty of the righteousness of God. Jesus did not merely teach thus, but He proved by His works His authority so to do. Matt. 8:16-17. He actually liberated the individuals as proven by their ability to respond. This greatest need of man has been met for all time by Jesus in His atonement, and is constantly opportune for him who will obediently seek it.

As is sickness, so also is death a direct consequence of sin. See Gen. 2:17; 3:17-19; Rom. 5:12; James 1:15. There is no possible way to break death's shackles and release the dead without first conquering sin. Jesus not only announced His authority and power to resurrect the dead, releasing them from their death condition, but He actually accomplished the work. He raised Lazarus, John 11:44, and others, thus revealing His ability and authority.

In every way Jesus met the needs and problems of man and showed Himself to be God's appointed Son to return man to the righteous estate into which God first created Him.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Horse and His Rider. The picture of a kindly white-faced horse full of spirit as each consecutive morning he bore a frail widow to her daily tasks in the schoolroom, has stood vividly before the mind for over forty years. Tenderly the steed picked out the smoothest path. Then when his charge had safely alighted at the door, he turned and cantered over the hills to the place of starting. He bore the weaknesses of another. Strong in his own strength, fleet in his own feet, it pleased him to serve her.

Without deigning to wrongly compare the Savior thus, yet may we not emphasize the truth that Jesus in all of His strength and greatness took upon himself to carry and aid needy man in all of man's necessary ways of life. Weak and helpless unto the ravages of sin, disease, and the curse, Jesus has offered to carry the sin-sick, not to the door of the teacher's schoolroom but to the door of new life in Christ Jesus, to the door of immortality, to the door of the new heavens and new earth where God shall dwell with man.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses."—Matt. 8:17.

This is a fulfillment of Isa. 53:4, predicted over seven hundred years before Christ's birth. He was never known to turn any one away who came to be healed. He alike healed the sick, opened the eyes of the blind, made the lame to walk, cleansed the lepers, made the deaf hear, and raised the dead. Matt. 11:5. He not only did these things, but He preached the gospel to the poor that they too might have a part in His kingdom.

A Jesus like that is well worthy of our highest praise and esteem; One that should be loved and followed; One that should be honored and obeyed; One that deserves the lofty position to which the Father has assigned Him.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Healing Power of Jesus.

"By whose stripes ye were healed." In the margin for Isa. 53:5, "stripes", is translated, "bruises".

The bruises that Jesus endured were the untrue charges, the taunts and slurs, the misconstruing and misunderstanding of His motives, loneliness for the appreciation and fellowship of fellowman. The suffering of all these, He endured without complaint, for He knew that those bruises were the healing of the world, because those bruises would perfect love in Him, and, through them, love would radiate its healing freely.

And Jesus' suffering was not in vain. In Jesus, love is perfectly manifested, and from Him it radiates in cures for physical ills, which is the way He takes our infirmities. Matt. 8:16-17. It radiates in teachings that guide man's thinking toward death to sin, as is shown by 1 Peter 2:24 with chapters 3 and 4. Here Peter says that Jesus bore our sins on the tree, that we being dead to sins should live unto righteousness, and then he, or rather Jesus through Peter, gives definite instructions about present living. These and similar instructions implanted and yielded to are a part of the death to sins that Jesus works in man.

Love in Jesus radiates healing through forgiveness, through understanding, sympathy, teaching and guidance, through cures and through the resurrection. It will continue healing until there is no hurt in all the world to be healed.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic. Jesus the Friend of the Needy.

If anyone ever needed a friend the common people did at the time that Jesus lived among them. History tells us that they were oppressed mercilessly by the Romans who ruled over them. Not only that, but their own leaders, the priests, who should have been to them as shepherds guiding and caring for them, were untrue to their responsibilities. No wonder then that Jesus found them in such sorrowful straits.

No matter what their need was, Jesus was able to fill it. Did they need the doctor's healing touch to relieve their diseased bodies? He was the one and only Physician who never failed to reach the cause and remove the result. Were they so distressed in mind that reason had left them? Jesus was the only One who could restore sanity. Were they in misery because of sins committed? He was the Friend who never held himself aloof no matter how low the needy one had fallen. No one ever asked aid of Him who did not receive it. Truly, He went about doing good.

Let us go to Him not only in times of need but in times of joy and we will have a never-failing Friend.—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

We have received news of the serious illness of Sr. Earl Brewer, of Byron Center, Mich. Let us pray for the recovery to health of our many dear ones in different localities.

In the absence of the pastor, Clarence Lapp of the Training Class spoke to the Oregon congregation Sunday morning, Feb. 2. His first sermon was very well given and much appreciated by all. We see some large possibilities in several of the class and pray they may be guided and directed to bring honor to the Master.

Kewanee and Ripley are Bro. Siple's next week end appointments.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Bro. and Sr. Corbell of Tempe, Arizona, have been visiting friends and relatives in and around Los Angeles and were able to attend church services on both the third and fourth Sundays of January. We enjoyed having them with us and we are informed that they enjoyed Bro. Marsh's sermons very much.

On February 6 our Ladies Aid meeting will be held at the home of Sr. Squires at Lynwood. She has kindly prepared a quilt top for the society and we will spend the day quilting it.

Sr. Mary A. Chapman is living with her daughter, Sr. Wilson, of 1021 Pine St., Lynwood.

Bro. and Sr. Conaway have gone to Arizona to visit their daughter, Sr. Kellogg.

Bro. and Sr. Lewis Rahn were called to Los Angeles on account of the serious illness of Sr. Rahn's father. They worshiped with us on the fourth Sunday.

Our members who have recently located in Holtville are holding services in their homes. With six adults and eight children this move will be profitable to all and the Father has promised to bless all such.

Bro. Wesley Saylor is graduating from the Los Angeles High School this week. He plans to take up the study of law in the near future.

PUYALLUP, WASHINGTON

On the evening of January sixth the Church of God of this place met at the home of the writer to elect officers for the ensuing year. On January fifth at our regular meeting, on invitation of the pastor, three willing ones came forward for baptism in order that they might be adopted by faith, repentance, and immersion into the family of God.

After the meeting the company traveled by autos to Clark's Creek where they were baptized for the remission of sins that are past, to arise to walk in newness of life. How we all rejoiced to see these dear ones come out from the world and take their stand for Jesus their Lord! We then proceeded to the home of one of the brethren, where the ordinances of the Lord's Supper, and the washing of the saints' feet were attended to. At this meeting we extended to the new members the right hand of fellowship. May they be faithful and obtain a crown of life when Jesus comes.

We have our regular meetings in a rented room in the Library building in Puyallup. Preaching service at 11 a. m. on Sunday; Social meeting on Thursday evening. On Sunday evening we meet at some previously agreed on private home, and have a Question Meeting. This has proven to be very interesting and instructive; all of the members take a deep interest in this meeting, and have their questions all prepared, that there be no delay. Nothing but Scriptural answers are considered. Outsiders are coming and asking a solution of their problems. This meeting seems to have a greater attraction for the public, than the other meetings. Try the Question meetings, they have been helpful to us, and may be to you also. It gives us a chance to explain our faith to some who could not be attracted in any other manner. It is good for the membership also, and tends to draw them nearer to each other, and nearer to the Master.

The coming of the Lord is very near at hand and there are so few to do the work there is to do. Let us all work for the gospel more earnestly than we ever have before. "Occupy till I come" is the command of our Captain. Will you be ready, will I, when He comes?

A. L. Corbaley.

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

The annual business meeting of the Blessed Hope Church of God was held on the evening of January 9 at the church and in spite of the disagreeable weather there were enough out to make a quorum and also enough were willing to take the different offices which they were chosen to fill.

The Thursday night Bible class has been suspended since before Christmas on account of the weather and road conditions, but it is hoped that we can take it up again soon.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

There was a very good attendance at the Berean class on Tuesday evening held at the Gordon home, twenty-one being present. All enjoyed a good lesson, each doing his bit to make it interesting.

The regular annual business meeting after being postponed was held on January 12. Officers and teachers were elected and each one was willing to fill the position to which appointed.

Some increase in attendance at Sunday School and church services gives us encouragement.

IOWA

The Church of God congregation of Gladbrook, were very pleasantly entertained at a New Year's Day dinner by Mrs. Fred Clark and Mrs. Pearl Rosenberger at the Clark studio. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Berry were prevented from attending because of Mr. Berry's recent accident when he was struck by a train, but some of the delicious dinner was taken to them so they did not miss all the good things. The Earl Reinhard and Earl Stauffer families were unable to be present because of other dinner engagements. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Taylor and son, Vernetta, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Allard, Mrs. J. L. Harland and son, James, all of Cedar Falls. The forty-two persons who were there all report a delightful time.

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls congregation have been having Sunday School and preaching services regularly this fall and winter at the W. H. Allard home. At present Bro. J. W. Williams is preaching there the fourth Sunday of each month. At his last appointment he gave two unusually fine sermons, one on the topic, "The Two Minds", the other, "Signs of the Times". Before Bro. and Sr. Eychaner left for Florida early in November, Bro. Eychaner and Bro. Charles Howe alternated in giving us Sunday morning sermons, but since their departure Bro. Howe has addressed us each Sunday morning except when he was relieved by Sr. Alta King. Next Sunday (the first Sunday in February) Bro. Howe will speak to us on the topic, "Israel as a Type", and the following Sunday Sr. King will again give us one of her splendid talks.

TRACTS, BOOKS AND BIBLES

You'll want to read the tracts announced this week. A new list. Several of them have been published in large editions so as to reduce the price to the lowest possible for your distribution among your friends.

Next week we will announce a big reduction on several styles of Bibles in which you will be interested.

AN INTERESTING VISIT WITH OUR GENIAL GLOBE TROTTER

It will soon be a year since I sent any writings to The Restitution Herald, and as I would not want any one to think I had lost interest in our paper, have decided (as I am now crossing the United States) to let those to whom The Herald is a welcome weekly visitor know how I have been spending my time the last year.

It was in May of 1929 that I left my home in Seattle and crossed through Canada until Montreal was reached, from which city I sailed for England, the trip across the Atlantic taking eight days. The old city of Rochester, which was in existence in the days of Jesus Christ, was "home" during the following five months, although I made many excursions to various parts of that division of the British Empire, as well as Scotland and Ireland. It would take too long to begin to tell you of the places visited and persons met, so will only say we had wonderfully fine weather all summer and that I thoroughly enjoyed every minute of my stay on the other side. A very happy three days were spent in fellowship with "those of like precious faith" at the Conference of the Conditional Immortality Mission, with whose instructive magazine, Words of Life, some may be acquainted over here. This was held in the great city of London during October when the truths of life only in Christ and the soon return of the only One who can cure the ills with which mankind is now suffering were emphasized.

The end of November saw me back in New York, and as this was not only my birthplace but home until eleven years ago, I have many friends in that city whom I was anxious to see, so several weeks slipped by in that fashion. The first stop in the homeward trip was in Cleveland, where several enjoyable days were spent with Sr. Jessie Upton and her daughters. I was also glad to see Sisters Lang, Sanford and Baker, with all of whom I have been acquainted for years. The Sunday spent in that city I attended church where Bro. Melville Lyon is the pastor, and even though the thermometer recorded several degrees below zero, I was told the Sunday School, which numbered 93, was the smallest in several weeks. Bro. Lyon gave us a good talk on Jesus as King, and I was glad to hear quite a number of outsiders were coming to the services. The new church is a very comfortable building, and with the able assistance of Bro. Lyon and his ready workers I pray good seeds may be sown which will produce a bountiful harvest when the King comes.

Chicago was the next stopping place where the smiling face of Sr. Whitehead greeted me, and we were soon in the comfortable home where so many "pilgrims" have been refreshed. Here I also saw Sisters Woodward and Austin, Sr. Sanford and her daughter, and spent an evening in pleasant conversation. Dixon was next and it was a great pleasure for us to see Bro. Siple and a few moments later we were eating dinner in the Drew home where the three sisters live who have been such a help not only in the Dixon church, but the work throughout Illinois. In the afternoon a drive was taken to the home of Sr. Bertie Drew, whose life has exemplified the fruits of the Spirit, "love, joy, peace, longsuffering", in a manner which if more would follow there would be less of grumbling when the "chastening" time comes into every life. The day closed with a Bible class led by Bro. Siple in the pretty little church where the faithful members are letting their light shine in such a way that men may know they are followers of the Master. It was fine to see such good sized classes of all ages intent on carrying out the Berean motto of "Search the Scriptures".

The next day a ride to Oregon was proposed, which I was only too happy to take, and even though the Rock River which I had previously seen in its summer beauty was frozen so hard one could not distinguish between it and the surrounding fields, and a white mantle of snow covered everything, there was a loveliness in the country I had never witnessed before as we glided over the well-packed roads. It was the office where The Restitution Herald is printed which had the first visit, and here we were glad to feel the hearty hand shakes of Brothers Austin, Paul and Arthur Johnson, and Sr. Mary Gesin, and to see the various members of the Training Class, who are studying to be helpers in the places where God may call them. They are a fine looking lot of young people, and if the N. B. I. had done nothing more than educate those who are willing to learn more of the purposes of God, it would have accomplished a great mission. But it has done more, and I just wish every lonely woman in the United States could have looked in with us to the Golden Rule Home and seen the happy gathering in "Aunt" Mary Renner's room where the making of patchwork was going on to the accompaniment of cheerful voices and have heard the thankfulness expressed for the good home which is maintained. It is truly an ideal place for those who have borne the "heat of the day" and are glad for such a resting place now the shadows of evening are drawing nigh, although all are looking forward with joy to the coming of the Life Giver and not "the last enemy". The Church of God should be thankful for the men and women who not only projected this enterprise but who are seeing it through, so let the rest of us do our best to "hold up their hands".

And now my visiting days are finished for the present and the train is nearing my home. Three texts have been specially precious to me as I have journeyed; one has been, "Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass". My going to rest verse is, "I will both lay me down in peace and sleep, for thou, Lord, only makest me dwell in safety", while the thought of "the Everlasting Arms" ever around me has kept me from any feeling of danger no matter whether on land or sea. Everywhere I have gone the words, "Change and decay in all around I see", have been true, but I want the rest of the verse, "O, Thou who changest not, abide with me", to be carried out in my life.

Lottie E. Young.

THE MIRACLE AT BETHANY

By Mary A. Gesin

“And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples . . . that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God: and that believing ye might have life through his name.”

John 20:30-31.

JUST A LITTLE WAY FROM THE CITY of Jerusalem and to the east lay the little village of Bethany, whose very name breathes peace. When we consider the name Jerusalem, we think of power, government, law; but when we think of Bethany, we feel an atmosphere of quiet, a haven from wearying tasks. A winding path led out over the hills and this path our Savior often took, for it led His footsteps to a little home, just at the edge of the sleepy village. Here He was surrounded by the love He did not find in that city whose children He oft would have gathered unto himself, but they “would not”.

Let us peep into this simple cottage and see the members of this home, friends whom Jesus loved perhaps more than all other friends. We see Lazarus, the stalwart brother, who provided the home that sheltered his sisters, Mary and Martha. We recognize in Martha the housekeeper, for we read that “she was cumbered about much serving”, while Mary “sat at Jesus’ feet, and heard his word”. And we suspect that as often as He could steal a few moments from His busy ministry, the Savior found His way to this little home, there to be cared for by Martha, while Mary listened with rapt attention to the words that fell from His lips. And these must have been words of the greatest import, words that revealed a life beyond death whose glory they had never before glimpsed.

One day while Jesus was in the country beyond Jordan ministering to the multitudes that followed Him, Lazarus fell sick. The sisters’ first thought was of their Lord, for we read that they sent word at once to Him. He perhaps had not told them of the wonderful miracles He had performed for the sick and unfortunate, but they no doubt had heard of them, for “his fame went throughout all Syria”. Surely He would come and restore to health the one whom both He and they loved so dearly! We read that He “abode two days still in the same place”, for He knew that this sickness was not “unto death but for the glory of God”, though He was aware that meanwhile Lazarus had died.

Starting on His journey to the little home now saddened and bereft, where He had known so much of comfort and joy, He told His disciples that He was glad He was not there during Lazarus’ illness, that He might reveal unto them the power of God, “to the intent ye may believe”. Always His purpose primarily in relieving sorrow and distress had been to show unto them the Father, for did He not say, “I can of mine own self do nothing . . . because I seek not mine own will but the will of the Father which hath sent me”? And the doing always of the works of the Father bore witness that the Father had indeed sent Him.

Immediately upon meeting Him, Martha said that she knew her brother would not have died had He been there. Such implicit trust in Him did even Martha, the housekeeper, have! And she further revealed her faith by adding that, “Even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee”. What comforting words He spoke to her on that brief walk! “I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.” To His question, “Believest thou this?”, Martha said, “Yea, Lord: I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world”. His teaching, given oftentimes in moments when Martha had been busy with household tasks, had not been in vain.

This well-beloved Friend did not fail the trust they had placed in Him, for He went at once to the grave, and after a prayer to the Father in heaven, He called Lazarus, who came forth from the unconscious sleep of the dead in answer to the Master’s voice. What rejoicing in that little, reunited home! “Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him.”

May we, too, sit at Jesus’ feet and learn of Him and learning, believe!

ANNIVERSARIES

JESUS

WE HAVE BUT RECENTLY passed the anniversary of the birth of our Lord and Master. The whole Christian world set that day aside in holiday, presumably to honor His name. But what has our Lord meant to the human race?

His introduction into the affairs of man dating from the occasion of His birth, is a matter of much moment. As the radiant warmth comes from the sun, ever ascending toward the north, turns winter's congealed nature into spring's leaf and bloom, so the radiant love of Him, who in every sense is our next of kin and whose as such was not only the right but the power to redeem, His radiant love has been transforming the heart and soul of the world from its chill of sin and death to its glory of righteousness and life. Generation after generation has been touchingly remodeled by His penetrating influence and power. The world today is not the world that it would have been had it not been for the birth and life of God's Son. The reader's individual life, his circumstance, his outlook and opportunity are all changed, raised far above what they would have been had it not been for our Master.

Were there no other blessing in store, no future life, no immortality, no new earth to be wrapped round and round again with the glories of God—were there none of these, I say, yet the influence of the life of Christ upon the world as it has been and is being effective, is a blessing far, far outweighing every effort and every labor that it has cost man to conform to and accept of the truths of the Son of God.

LINCOLN

ERE THESE LINES will be read we shall have passed the anniversary of Lincoln's birth. We can truly say that the United States of today is not the country that it would have been had not Lincoln, in his quiet, yet forceful way, taken the stand which he did take and executed the work which he executed. From Gulf to Lakes the United States has been made better, has been given valued conscience, has been given cleaner vision because of the life of the martyred president.

But what we are most interested in right now is to catch a glimpse of the part that Christianity had to do in the life of that stalwart man. Do we, as a people and a nation, owe anything of honor and homage to God because of Christian faith which led the nation's chief through dismal hours made dark and drear by the enforced problems impenetrable by unaided human power? Would that there were some manner by which we might gather an approximate reckoning of the effort of those repeated periods of prayer, of those moments when Lincoln is said to have entered his closet, closed his door and prayed to the Father which seeth in secret, but rewards openly.

How much of real worth, of worth that might be reckoned in terms of dollars, of worth that could be reckoned in terms of new conditions, new circumstances—how much of real worth to the generation of today was that Christian faith which was put into practice and transformed into action by Abraham Lincoln!

WASHINGTON

ANOTHER ANNIVERSARY will be observed on February 22. Schools of the nation will have their thoughts directed to a study and a remembrance of the Father of our Country. Again we can correctly say that the United States of America would not have been what it is today had it not been for this man. By some wonderful method known only to God himself, the power of influence radiating from one person to another, shapening, polishing, perfecting the lives of many, has been in operation from the beginning. According to this great law the life of Washington, as also the lives of many others in many nations, has had an influence, a determining influence, upon millions and millions, both in his own day and in days following.

As we pause a moment to contemplate this another great man, even though human, we wish again to bring the mind's attention to the great question, "How and to what extent did our Lord and Savior influence this man and to what extent does the generation of today owe its consequent advantages to Christianity?" He who paused in winter's wind and kneeled in prayer on the river's ice—how much was his life shapened and were his actions influenced by the God in whom he trusted, and by the Savior whose hand he pleadingly sought?

Is it not true that Jesus has in part made His life felt to the world and to its nations through men and women which we call great? Is it not true that every unbiased mind the world over can but see that Christianity has thus effected a molding, shapening, and modifying of life far beyond the ability of the finite to contemplate? Is it not true that the benefits and blessings of our Lord and Master can be traced through every one of such men and women to whom we are here referring? Is it not true that financial advantages, domestic comforts, national prosperities, in spite of all the wrong that has been perpetrated, have come to all of us as a fruitage of the life of Christ our Savior? Is it not true that, even if there were no further prospect of blessing from Christ than what we already experience, to Christianity we could well afford to pay our highest tax and to devote our truest service?

Let us then consider more carefully our status. Without withdrawing any of the honor belonging to these characters, let us stop to realize that one of the principal reasons of their greatness, of their success, of their benefits to us is that they are men and women who have closely held their Lord and Master, and who have diligently sought Him as Leader in their own life's actions.

IMMATERIALITY

The following article on Immateriality is a favorite of Bro. Jeremiah Conaway's. Some years ago he clipped it from "The Restitution" and pasted it on the fly-leaf of his Bible. Bro. Conaway has been for many years an able defender of the faith once delivered to the saints. He is now past ninety years of age and while he is not able to attend services very regularly, his mind dwells upon Scripture themes and he quotes texts with surprising accuracy.—Mrs. E. C. Railsback.

IMMATERIALITY is but another name for nonentity. It is the negative of all things and beings—of all existence. It has no way to manifest itself to any intelligence in heaven or on earth. Neither God, angels, nor men could possibly conceive of it as substance, being or thing. It possesses no property or power by which to make itself manifest to any intelligent being in this universe. Reason and analogy can never scan it, or ever conceive of it. Revelation never revealed it, nor do any of our senses witness its existence. It cannot be seen, felt, heard, tasted, or smelled, even by the strongest organs, or the most acute sensibilities. It is neither liquid nor solid, soft nor hard; it can neither expand nor contract. In short, it can exert no influence whatever; it can neither act, nor be acted upon. Being nonexistent, it possesses not one desirable property, faculty or use. Yet, strange to say, immateriality is the modern Christian's God, his anticipated heaven, his immortal self—his all!

O sectarianism! O atheism! O annihilation! Who can perceive the nice shades of difference between the one and the other? They seem alike, all but in name. The atheist has no God; the sectarian has a God without body or parts. Who can define the difference? For our part, we do not perceive a difference of a single hair; they both claim to be the negative of all things which exist and both are equally powerless and unknown. The atheist has no after life, or conscious existence beyond the grave; the sectarian has one, but it is immaterial, like his God; and without body or parts. Here again both are negative and both arrive at the same point. Their faith and hope amount to the same, only it is expressed by different terms.

Again, the atheist has no heaven in eternity; the sectarian has one, but it is immaterial in all its properties, and is therefore the negative of all riches and substances. Here again they are equal and arrive at the same point. As we do not envy them the possession of all they claim, we will now leave them in the quiet and undisturbed enjoyment of the same, and proceed to examine the portion still left for the despised materialists to enjoy.

What is God? He is a material, organized intelligence, possessing both body and parts. He is in the form of man, and is the model, or standard of perfection to which man is destined to attain, He being the great Father and Head of the family. What is Jesus Christ? He is the Son of God, and in every way like the Father, being in the brightness of His Father's glory, and the expressed image of His Person. He is a material intelligence with body, parts and passions—possessing immortal flesh and bones.

What are men? They are the offspring of Adam. They are capable of receiving intelligence and exaltation to such a degree as to be raised from the dead with a body like that of Jesus Christ, and to possess immortal flesh and bones. Thus perfected, they will possess the material universe, that is, the earth, as their everlasting inheritance. With these hopes and prospects before us, we say to the Christian world who hold to immateriality, that they are welcome to their God—their life, their heaven, and their all. They claim nothing but that which we throw away. Therefore, there is no ground of contention between us.

GOD'S WONDROUS GRACE

Our gracious Lord, to Thee we raise,
Ere morning dawns, our hymn of praise.
At noon when all around is bright,
We thank Thee for the glorious light.
And when at e'en our labors cease,
We thank Thee for the boon of peace.
But, oh, when from Thy holy Word
We glean the truth that man who erred
Through human frailty, may become Like Thee, divine, our lips are dumb:
Dumb, for no words can e'er proclaim
The joy we feel who own Thy Name;
But prostrate, Lord, before Thy face
Our hearts salute Thy Wondrous Grace.

—John Balfour.

COMING

---

"What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." "For ye know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing or in the morning."

It may be in the evening when the work of the day is done,
And you have time to sit in the twilight, and to watch the sinking sun;

While the long bright day dies slowly over the sea,
And the hour grows quiet and holy with thoughts of Me;
While you hear the village children passing along the street,
Among these thronging footsteps may come the sound of My feet:

Therefore I tell you, watch! by the light of the evening star,
When the room is growing dusky as the clouds afar;
Let the door be on the latch in your home,
For it may be through the gloaming, I will come.

NO MORE CURSE

By E. O. Stewart

---

WHAT COULD BE more inspiring, more uplifting, or more consoling to a downtrodden, sin-cursed, groaning creation than to have the assurance from one who can not lie, that "there shall be no more curse"!

No doubt John gazed with wondrous joy upon the scene spread before him, as his eyes were turned from the present groaning creation with its teeming millions of suffering humanity, into the radiant, sun-bright, clime and verdant shores of the resored Paradise of God. In that good land he saw no cripples plodding their way with crutch or cane. He saw no blind or deaf people. And the doctor and the undertaker had to find some other occupation, for sickness and death were among the former things that had passed away.

Tears of joy cloud my vision as I write, "And God shall wipe all tears from their eyes." When our heavenly Father shall forever remove sin, He will have then removed the cause of tears. Isaiah, speaking of that day says, "The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35:10.

When God heard the groaning and saw the afflictions of Israel in the land of Egypt, He sent Moses to deliver them, Exodus 2. The blood of the pascal lamb was shed in Egypt. The blood was a token of God's pledge to deliver Israel from bondage.

In like manner, the whole creation is now groaning under bondage, and Paul declares that the creation shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption, Rom. 8. Ere long that groaning shall be heard by the same God who heard the groanings of Israel; and Christ, the Prophet like unto Moses, shall be sent to deliver it from the bondage of sin.

Lord, hasten that day!

A SAFE GUIDE

---

By Lydia A. Railsback

---

IF A STRANGER should visit Mammoth Cave in Kentucky or a similar place in any other part of the world, he would be very foolish to undertake to explore it alone, or even enter the very beginning of it without the assistance of one who is on guard to accompany tourists and others who come to seek the beauties God in His wisdom has placed there. The stranger must have the advice and instruction of the one who leads the way into the different rooms and crevices and points out the different objects of interest.

Autoists, in driving through strange places or on unknown roads, often carry a map with them. Without this map, they have no way of knowing condition of roads, nor which road leads to their destination. If the driver has no road map, he must watch the sign posts for information.

So it is on life's journey. Every step of the highway is new and must be explored as we go along. No one that has traveled it before can come back to direct us on the way; but we have a Guidebook to tell us every step of the way. Jesus has gone before and has left sign posts to direct us if we but look for them. There is no need to get lost or step aside, if we faithfully follow our elder Brother.

He tells us in Matthew 7:13, 14, in a part of that Sermon on the Mount, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Having entered the "strait gate" by believing that Jesus is the Son of God, and being baptized into His name, a walk "in newness of life" will be begun.

In this newness of life we are told, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." 2 Tim. 2:15.

"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of His might. Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."—Eph. 6:10-11, 14-17.

The Book of books is the Christian's Guide. It alone is the only safe one to follow, and by following it closely we will reach our desired destination, "eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

OUR FATHER'S BUSINESS

By S. E. Haney

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchantman, seeking goodly pearls; who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it". Matt. 13:45. "He finds one most costly pearl; he goes away; and though it costs all he has, he buys it". V. 46, Weymouth.

JESUS REVEALS THE KERNEL of this parable when He says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God". All who persistently "seek" are sure to find. But for various reasons all who find do not purchase. Many seemingly think God conducts a five and ten cent store, and upon discovering everything scheduled one price, that is, "all ye have", they seek the exit. God has nothing worth having that is cheap or easy for the natural man to obtain.

Many prospective purchasers get an overwhelming shock when informed God does business on the installment plan. They get another jolt by trying to dicker and compromise with God on price. A certain rich ruler once tried this scheme, but when, in effect, he was informed that the heavenly mart was not a brokerage office doing business on a margin basis, he became "very sorrowful: for he was very rich". Luke 18:18-25. Doubtless the rich young man was privileged a mental picture of the inestimable glory of the "goodly pearl". But O, the price! Perhaps he thought, "a bird in hand was worth two in the bush". Nothing short of regeneration will enable a person to barter visibility for invisibility—to walk by faith instead of by sight.

What does Jesus mean by, "sold all that he had, and bought it"? If He means strictly a financial proposition we poor fellows who have nothing to sell should have a slim chance of attaining our greatest aspiration. I believe, however, the Lord is here referring to the heart and mind rather than material possessions; the keeping of our hearts clear of covetousness, the spirit of which is more dangerous than actual possession. Paul says, "But THOSE WISHING to be rich fall into a temptation, and a snare, and into many foolish and injurious Desires, which sink Man into Destruction and utter Ruin". 1 Tim. 6:9, Emph. Diag.

No! Money and personal property are not the only mediums of exchange in buying this "goodly pearl". Had Jesus depended upon the disposal of His possessions He would not now have a "name which is above every name", for sixty-eight cents is all we know of His ever having, and He had to perform a miracle to get that. Matt. 17:24-27. And yet Jesus did give and in His giving, He sets us examples with which we are quite familiar. What He said to Philip applies to us, namely, "The day following, Jesus would go forth unto Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me". Philip followed Jesus in person, but we are commanded to follow Him in spirit and by His teachings, which admonish us to give "all we have", in the way of our earthly affection, desires and aspirations, ever "looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God". Heb. 12:2.

Perhaps you ask what the writer means by "installment plan". Let Peter answer: "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ . . . As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby". 2 Peter 3:18; 1 Peter 2:2. Paul also explains: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling". Like a student in mathematics who begins with  $2 \times 2 = 4$  and ends in astronomy, a person in the school of Christ first learns he is a sinner by heredity, Job 25:4; Psa. 51:5; second, he repents. Third, he seeks forgiveness and conversion; fourth, is baptized—consecrated. He is now able to imbibe geometry and trigonometry, as it were,—sanctification and justification (John 17:19; Romans 8:29), which prepare him for his final degree—glorification.

And yet, while Paul had acquired all these phases of salvation we hear him crying out (Phil. 3:8), ". . . that I may win Christ". Isn't this the bridal spirit striving to woo the Bridegroom's affection—"the chiefest among ten thousand"? Cant. 5:9-16. Isn't it just like the woman who finally selects her life mate from among her admirers? How she lavishes her affection on him by making a study of his likes and dislikes and acting accordingly. Dear reader, have we achieved this degree in the school of Christ? The graduating period is drawing nigh. Shall we be found worthy our diplomas: glorification?

Some pupils make more rapid progress than others in meeting their installments. It is said of Jerry McAully, the reformed drunkard, that he was instrumental in the conversion of more sinners during the first year following his conversion than were all the D.D.'s. in New York City during the same period of time. And there is now an ex-convict at the head of the China Mission in "Chinatown"—New York City—who is doing a still greater work.

The great mass of people dubbed Christians seldom meet their first installment. They remind us of children on a beach playing in sand with little buckets and shovels. When they get ankle deep in water they imagine they are having a whale of a time. The allegory holds good in the spiritual world. Mature Christians are aware of the hallucinations preventing unregenerate people from fully appreciating what God has appropriated for them by the sacrifice of His Son and what it means to have their souls deluged by heavenly blessings until they take a plunge into the unfathomable depth of God's love. It is here that man discovers the "pearl of great price", and hastens to dispose of "all that he has", and buys it. And then the Lord responds by giving man a deed of conveyance by opening the windows of heaven, and pouring him out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

To this end let us ever heed God's commandment to Joshua (1:7), "Only be thou strong and very courageous". "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil".—Paul, Eph. 6:10, 11.

RETURNING TO JERUSALEM TO JESUS

PART 2

By M. A. Woodward

DOCTOR ROBERT SPEERS CONTINUES, "This was Paul's view. He lifted up in his own life and for all human life that ever-living, everywhere available Christ." Somerville says in St. Paul's Conception of Christ, "The past circumstances of the earthly Jesus have comparatively little interest for Paul, now that, as exalted, Christ has entered on a present activity in the hearts of men, in which He reenacts in their experience what was most vital in His historical career and repeats in them all that was most distinctive in His own divine life."

How I would like to give you the whole of Dr. Robert Speers' grand thoughts; but it is too long for a paper article. However I must give this: "First we need to return to the simplicity of Christ. This is one of Paul's few references to the great elemental, intellectual, moral and spiritual qualities of Jesus. It is amazing that Paul alludes so little to the character of Christ. His epistles are full of moral appeal. After every one of his great theological flights he comes close home to ethical issues of men's lives in their human temptations and relationships and to the social problems which they face, and he appeals for the highest Christian life and character."

I sometimes think the reason Paul did not enter more fully into powerful appeals to his followers to look at the beautiful Christ was because he had so much to do to get people to think of Him at all. He brought the power and willingness of Christ to forgive sin, as that was the greatest thing to overcome. They did not love Christ, but as far as they knew Him it was but to hate Him. He had all he could do to make his prejudiced hearers listen to the why of Christ's coming to this world. He could plead His power to save, and gradually drop a ray of the beauty of His life so they could not help but see Jesus as He really was, the wonderful, flawless, powerful, beautiful Christ.

Here is something Dr. Speers brings to us, worth our notice and study: "The New Testament knows no limit to the authority of Christ. It uses five different Greek words, all of which are translated by the one word, Master, in our English translation of the Bible, and each of these words has a different significance. We need to go back to them and to accept unreservedly the full mastery of Christ which they involve.

"The first of these words is the simple word, Teacher. It is used in the original in the passage which reads in our Bibles, 'They say unto him, Rabbi (which is to say, being interpreted, Master) where dwellest thou?' And Mary used it in its Hebrew form in that hour of glorious reassurance at the open grave when Jesus said to her, 'Mary,' and she turned herself and said unto him, 'Rabboni,' which, as John explains is to say, 'Master'.

"The second word means literally, 'Leader', and it is used in a passage full of meaning for us in all our organized and administrative church life. 'Neither be ye called masters (i.e., leaders), for one is your Master (i.e., Leader) even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant.'

"The third word means literally superintendent or overseer, the one who directs and whose word of direction is authoritative and absolute. It is the word used in Luke's gospel: 'Master, we have toiled all night and taken nothing, nevertheless at thy word we will let down the nets', with the sure and rich result that follows obedience. 'Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name and we forbade him, for he followed not with us'. On these last two occasions Jesus rebuked His disciples for conduct discordant with the title by which they called Him. His mastery meant trust and not fear, unity and not disunion. Those who called Him Master in any sense must accept the authority and meaning of His mastery.

"The fourth word is the most familiar and frequent of all, the word which is usually translated, Lord, but which in our King James version is rightly translated Master also, as in our Lord's word in the sermon on the mount above the inevitableness and exclusiveness of our moral self-alignments, 'No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.' There are no double loyalties for Christians.

"The fifth word which our New Testament translates, Master, is most striking of all. It is the Greek word, despotes, and I suppose our best equivalent for it would be, emperor. Let us translate it so in the three passages where it occurs. 'There are certain men,' writes Jude, 'who deny the very Lord God and our Emperor, Jesus Christ.' 'There were false prophets among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you denying even the Emperor that bought them,' said Peter. 'But,' declares Paul, 'if a man purge himself from these (i.e., from earthliness and dishonor) he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Emperor's use.'

"What a rich and joyful recognition we have in the New Testament of this unlimited and all-comprehending authority of Jesus. Men brought themselves and all that they had and all that they were and all that they might ever hope for to their only Lord and Master and laid it at His feet. In this regard let us turn to Jerusalem and Jesus today. Let us do it in the church and behold what convictions we shall work among men as they see our love and order. They will desire a part in such fellowship of brotherly love and dutiful obedience. Let us do it and behold the results in the abundant stream of adequate resources for all the work of the church at home and abroad. Let us do it and feel again the holy jubilant life and power of our unity in that great Head 'from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.' " We need such an Emperor and His name is Jesus the Christ!

These extracts are by the gracious favor of our dear Sister Young, who left them with me on her return from abroad,

COMMISSIONED BY JESUS

WALK WORTHY OF YOUR VOCATION

Sunday, February 16—Ephesians 4:1-16.

"I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called."—V. 1.

ABRAMHAM, MOSES, DAVID, Peter, John, Paul, Christ also, were called of God. They were called out of and away from the natural ways of carnal man. Each was called to a special vocation. No two of those vocations were exactly alike. There was one point, however, in which all were the same, namely, that each should "walk worthy of the vocation" to which he was called. The Christian is as definitely and truly called out and called to a vocation as were any of those above mentioned. As God sustained Abraham in his faithful service, sustained Moses, David, sustained all, so He has promised through Jesus to be with those who accept the Christian call, even to the end of the world.

JESUS CALLS TWELVE

Monday, February 17—Matthew 10:1-4.

"He gave them power."—V. 1.

Twelve sturdy men stepped from their boats, from their desks, from whatever occupation was theirs and, of their own free will, responded to the Savior's call. They set out to follow and to obey Him. How one's mind harks back to Abraham as he in Ur of the Chaldees laid down his tools, bade adieu to the old home place and turned his face to follow the pathway that would be indicated by the Father.

Here also, no sooner did these apostles forsake all to follow the Messiah than "He gave them power (authority)". He sent them on a mission. He authorized them on that mission to do His work; He authorized them to do works which were beyond the ability of the common man, works which would astonish all. But in carrying out this authorization, they could not do other than to exalt the name of Him who sent them. His name, His cause, His kingdom were being emphasized in word and deed by those commissioned.

How like the Father who authorized Moses, David, even His own Son, Jesus! What they did was under Heaven's commission.

THE COMMISSION TO THE TWELVE

Tuesday, February 18—Matthew 10:5-15.

"And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give."—VV. 7, 8.

Not only in word but also in accomplishment were the twelve to carry out their commission. The great truth which they were to bear was, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." The manner in which they were to bear this was first by word, then they were to follow that word by their accomplishments: "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils". Authority such as no human king had ever exercised would thus be exercised by those twelve who went forth under the authority of Jesus, whose name they exalted. Surely a kingdom under such an authority could not be lightly considered!

THE TWELVE EXHORTED

Wednesday, February 19—Matthew 10:16-23.

"And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that endureth to the end shall be saved."—V. 22.

Their vocation was not an idle one. The transformation of the world was in its inception. Theirs was to accompany in point of time, their Master. It was theirs to blaze the trail, to open a new pathway, to reveal newly discovered truths, newly realized purposes of God. Human nature would oppose them. Jealousies, personal ambitions, self-praise would cause many to emphatically oppose the apostles. Jesus exhorted them to continue to the end. Their vocation was most worthy. The ultimate result would benefit all. Thus the price of service, even though it would require self sacrifice, was to "walk worthy".

Walk worthy of your vocation, was the underlying truth in the Savior's exhortation.

THE GOAL TO BE REALIZED

Thursday, February 20—Matthew 10:24-33.

"Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my Father which is in heaven."—V. 32.

Having revealed to them that they would meet many and serious obstacles from those to whom they were sent, Jesus reveals the consequences that await at the end of the journey. To those who "walk worthy" of their vocation, the Savior promises acknowledgment before His Father. But those who walk unworthily will be disowned by Jesus before His Father. One possible goal is the goal of eternal establishment in all the righteousness of God's setting. The other possible goal is that of an outcast, denied and disowned by God the Father and by Christ the Savior. Again the exhortation of Paul rings loudly, "Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called".

THE GREAT PURPOSE IN THE CHRISTIAN'S CALL

Friday, February 21—Luke 9:49-56.

"For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them."—V. 56.

Not to judge as to another one's call by Christ, but to judge as to one's own faithfulness to the call that comes to

AN INTERESTING NARRATIVE

THE BOOK OF ESTHER

By Lyman Booth

THE PRINCIPAL character mentioned in this book is Esther from whom it receives its name. The prevailing sentiment is that it was written by Mordecai, and that it was inserted in the canon of Scripture by Ezra and his assistants or by their successors, but as to this there are various opinions among learned writers. The Jews have always held it in great veneration; and since the feast of Purim, (9:26-32) is observed by them to this day, we have no reason to doubt the authenticity of the narrative as written. It may have been written after all the other books of the Old Testament, though learned men differ in this respect.

This little book contains an incident in the history of those Israelites who did not return from the captivity. It has always been considered by both the Jews and Christians as canonical. One peculiarity of its contents is that it does not contain the name of God or Jehovah. There may be two reasons for the omission. First, it was intended to be read in the Jewish homes during fasting, and it was considered more reverential to omit direct mention of the name of Deity under such circumstances. Second, this omission, perhaps, was designed. Facts well known to Bible students concerning the worshipers of Jehovah, such as the wicked plot formed for the extirpation of the Jewish population of the one hundred twenty-seven provinces of Persia, and the wonderful deliverance were thus simply stated, in order that every reader might judge for himself whether or not the facts did not demonstrate the God of the Jews to be the Ruler of the universe. Had this conclusion been mentioned to a Gentile by a Jew, it might have excited prejudice to such an extent as to imperil the Jew's life. Hence their reticence in mentioning the name either verbally or in writing. Be that as it may, we must let the narrative speak for itself.

Several additional chapters are found in the Apocrypha, but they never were in the Hebrew text, and the Jews never received them. They principally contain additions or repetitions, no doubt intended to embellish the history, but which, in fact, destroy its simplicity and beauty. Some things in them cannot be reconciled with the times and circumstances which the history relates. The preceding books form a specimen of the Lord's care of His people in Judah; while this book shows His special favor to the nation at large. Many of those who continued to reside in foreign countries were censurable in that respect; notwithstanding this, He would not leave the nation in the hand of their enemies, or deprive them of His mercy and favor.

The book opens in the third year of Ahasuerus, who is now generally believed to have been Xerxes, and who reigned B.C. 485 to 464. The feasting mentioned (1:2) may have been only the prelude to his expedition of invasion against Greece, which expedition ended in the seventh year (2:16).

The name, Esther, is of Persian origin. Her proper name was Hadassah (Myrtle, 2:7). She was reared in the home of her kinsman Mordecai, her cousin, who was also her foster father (2:7). He chose to remain in Persia, and she was selected to become the favorite wife of the Persian king in place of Vashti. Mordecai, sharing in her exaltation, was appointed one of those men who "sat at the king's gate" (2:21). While acting in this capacity he discovered a plot to assassinate the king. This he divulged to Esther who, in turn, in Mordecai's name, conveyed the information to the king. But Mordecai had a rival for the royal favor by the name of Haman, an Agagite, who was a descendant of the ancient Amalekite king. Haman, being a new favorite of the king, became jealous of Mordecai and formed a plot for the wholesale extermination of the Jewish exiles. Mordecai discovered this wicked plot, informed Esther and she, at the risk of her life, interceded with the king in behalf of her race. As a result Haman was executed on the gallows which he had caused to be erected for Mordecai, while the latter was promoted to high distinction and honor in the Persian court. (Chapters 7 and 8.)

The feast of Purim (Lots) is still observed in commemoration of their great enemy who sought through the casting of lots to find a lucky day in which to extirpate all the Jews throughout the one hundred twenty-seven provinces of Persia, 3:7. This is preceded by a strict fast on the thirteenth day of Adar or March, and the festival immediately following is celebrated with great rejoicing.

The book of Esther is recited in the synagogue, and when the reader comes to the name of Haman, the entire assembly shouts in detestation, and the conclusion of the service is followed by feasting and much merriment. The writer is not definitely known. It has been attributed to Ezra, who may have brought it from Babylon to Jerusalem. It is quite probable that Mordecai wrote it, because no one else could have possessed such minute detail as is shown in the narrative concerning the names of Haman's family and that of Esther, also the domestic details of the palace of Shushan.

Many modern writers have expressed doubt as to its belonging to the canon of Scripture, but without reason. It was at one time questioned by some of the Jewish penmen, but for a short time only. In it the allusions to Persian names and customs are very minute and accurate. The luxury and caprice of the king corresponds completely with that which profane history relates of Xerxes. And the feast of Purim is an irrefutable argument in its favor, since on no other assumption can its existence be explained. There are in existence two Greek versions containing many interpolations and additions which bear the marks of being spurious and therefore have been relegated to the Apocrypha,

A WEEKLY TALK

By C. E. Randall

FAITH

FAITH DOES NOT merely lead one to the Source of power, but brings power to the individual possessing the faith. Faith is power. The more faith one has, the more power he has. Paul in his great chapter on faith, Hebrews eleven, in speaking of men and women of great faith, also points out that they were men and women in whom God's power abode in abundance. After he has mentioned a number of people that had had great faith, he continues, "And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, and of Barak, and of Samson, and of Jephthae; of David also, and Samuel, and of the prophets who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens."

These great labors were the direct result of faith; and could have never been performed had they not possessed this type of faith. True faith has always produced good and great works. Today is no exception. But you say, "Many of those works were miracles." True enough, faith and prayer are producing miracles today as they did in the days covered by inspired writers, not necessarily of the same degree and nature, but nevertheless miracles.

A miracle has been wrought when a group of individuals pray for some wayward person and God answers those prayers and changes the heart of the person. Such is not a rare thing, but a common-place occurrence. Miracles are daily being performed by God in protecting our lives in answer to our prayers. Miracles are being done when the sick are restored to health and strength through faith and prayer.

It is undoubtedly true that we are missing many of the blessings of the Father because we are like the class of Christ's time, of whom He said, "Ye are a faithless and perverse generation." The prayer of the disciples, "Lord, increase our faith," should fall from our lips every day. Faith, real, living, active faith on the part of a few individuals can pray a dead and lifeless church into a life-saving station in a short time. Faith without works is dead.

It is a difficult thing to think of a church that claims to have saving faith and yet does not work enough during an entire year to save one person for Christ. There are a lot of our churches that haven't had a conversion in years. What's wrong? It is not the gospel, for it is still the "power of God unto salvation." It isn't because there are none to be saved, neither is it because people don't want to be saved. There are lots of folks that are hungering for salvation. The fault is with us. EVERY person that has faith in the saving power of the gospel should be able to interest at least one person every year in its message of hope and salvation. Chances are that there are a large number of our folks who never mention Christ as a Savior to those needing Him. If you are not making an impression on your fellow-laborer, your friend, your neighbor with your faith it needs increasing.

"Lord, increase our faith."

DANGER SIGNALS

By Glenn Birkey

IN THE FIFTH CHAPTER of First Thessalonians, verse twenty-two, we are told to abstain from all appearance of evil. Can we as true followers of Christ give our support to or indulge in seemingly harmless pastimes? Here is the history of two very common so-called present-day pastimes or amusements. Read them for yourself.

THE ORIGIN OF CARD PLAYING

It was first invented under the reign of Charles VI. of France, to amuse him during the intervals of the disorder which carried him to his grave—insanity. The world would have sustained no loss had his majesty been allowed to die without the devilish invention that has caused so many suicides since then.—The Illustrator.

THE ORIGIN OF THE DANCE

Gault, a French dancing master, originated the waltz in 1627. He was licentious, and gloried in the fact that he had led many girls into lives of sin. He went so low in the moral scale that in an attempt to ruin his own sister, he strangled her to death, for which he was guillotined in 1632. The first time on record that a man and woman ever danced in public was in a house of prostitution in Paris in 1842. The police sought for six years to keep it confined to the place of its birth—the red light district. It finally got into the tenement districts of Paris, and in course of time the waltz dance became general in the city of its origin. England fought the mixed dance for nine years with success. Then it gradually crept into the vice districts of England's large cities, then to the tenement quarters, and finally crossed over to America. America has improved on the grotesque and immoral by creating the two-step, the tango, the fox trot, kangaroo, bunny hug, grizzly bear, and the camel walk. This motley American zoo was recently exported to Paris, to become the vogue there, but the city that originated the bawdy-house dance has put these unspeakable vulgarities under ban of law. None but the two-step can be danced in France.—From a tract, "The Dance", by H. A. Coffman.

IT IS A GOOD AND SAFE rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, or speaking a true word, or making a friend.—John Ruskin.

Correct answers to Queries 22 came in from only one and that is our faithful Hazel Titus, Letcher, South Dakota. Thornton Cleek, who is only ten years old and in the seventh grade, in answering the sheep problem of Queries 21, made one little error which threw off the answer. It was in the number of the Songs of Solomon. Try again, Thornton, your answers are nearly always correct.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

him, this is the great lesson taught in today's reading. The Savior, not one of His called ones, is He who is able to discern whether the man who cries, "Lord, Lord", is walking worthily or otherwise. He would not have an apostle deny the fellowship of another one simply because that other one was not walking in company with the apostles. To his own Master he would stand or fall. The suggestion of the disciples to call fire from heaven and devour the stranger who used the name of Christ was repellent to the Master. His explanation was that, "The Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them". Therefore, the only way that they could walk worthily of their vocation was to instruct, correct, and encourage others, thus saving them from death and assuring them of life, which the Savior came to give.

THE GREAT COMMISSION

Saturday, February 22—Matthew 28:16-20.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

—VV. 19-20.

It was following His resurrection that our Savior spoke these words. Though He spoke them directly to His apostles, it seems altogether evident that also, through His apostles, He spoke these words to all Christians till He should come again. They were to go to all the world, not simply to Israel; they were to present the gospel to every creature, not alone to Abraham's seed according to the flesh. Everywhere men were to be taught, and being taught were to be baptized. Being baptized they were to be instructed more and more. Just as the Savior supported His twelve who had gone out under His earlier commission, so He here promises to support even to the end of the world, all who by His spirit to all who turn to Him."—Dr. Robert Speers,

"EVEN FROM EVERLASTING TO EVERLASTING, THOU ART GOD."—PSALM 90:2.

BEREAN LESSON THOUGHTS

IT HAS BEEN SAID that the word "God" strikes the keynote of the Old Testament. On opening the Bible we first see these words, "In the beginning, God created the heaven and the earth." So we think of God first as the Creator. If we went no further in our study but considered God in this one phase only we would still have considerable food for thought. With the fact in mind that God was the Creator in the beginning we associate the fact that He is eternal. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God." He is called the everlasting God. Gen. 21:33. He lives forever. Deut. 22:40.

In connection with this we might add that not only is God immortal but the term "immortal" applies to Him alone. God is often spoken of as the living God. Life is one of His attributes. He is the source of all life. In First Timothy 6:16 we are told that God only hath immortality. Man, then, does not have immortality. Christ did not have it before His death and His resurrection. If He had been immortal He could not have laid down His life and the purpose of His coming into the world could not have been accomplished. It is through His death and glorious resurrection that we have hope of putting on immortality at the resurrection, even as Christ was clothed with immortality when He arose from the dead.

It is evident that God and Christ are not the same person, Christ having died, God being immortal. It is evident too that we do not have immortality but instead are looking forward to that wonderful gift as a reward for "patient continuance in well doing".

Another attribute of God as Creator is power. This great and wonderful power is another fact that our finite minds can never fully grasp, but which has been manifested since the creation. The creation of the heaven and the earth, the creation of man upon the earth, God's dealings with Adam and Eve, with Noah and the sinful world, with Abraham, with Moses, with Pharaoh and with the Israelites and, in fact, the entire record of God's Word reveals His power and wisdom.

"David presents for us in Psa. 103, the praise of Jehovah, his God, the embodiment of all that is holy and good. This same thought is stressed in Isa. 40:27-31. Coming to the writings of the prophets we find the thought of God's fatherly care. Jer. 31:18-20; Isa. 1:2. It was used to describe God's relation to the nation as a whole." (Quoted from "God in the Old Testament.") The thought of God's fatherhood to individuals is not taught so much in the Old Testament. —Mabel Lindsay.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

THE ANNUAL ELECTION of officers was held January 8. Bro. Siple took charge of the meeting.

The former Senior Bereans decided to become a Bible Class. The Junior Bereans are now in two divisions, the Juniors and Seniors, with one set of officers. They are as follows: President, Marjorie Siple; Vice-President, Mildred Siple; Secretary and Treasurer, Elizabeth Ford.

The average attendance is 18 and the interest is very good. The coming year we hope to interest many in the service of our King and also to "grow in grace and the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

At six o'clock, Wednesday evening, Jan. 22, the Bereans met for a scramble supper in the basement of the church. After supper, the classes met for their study in the church. Sr. Lottie Young of Seattle, Washington, was present and gave a short and very interesting talk. Sr. Young has traveled extensively in the Old World.

Bro. Siple then took up the study of Romans 12, which has proved helpful to all. Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

SOUTH BEND, INDIANA

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S BEREAN CLASS of South Bend is a class of fifteen members. Each member takes a great interest in the lessons and seems eager to learn of God's truths. Each one takes a turn in teaching in order to create more interest and to give each one training in teaching. We have the meetings at the members' homes each one taking his or her turn in entertaining the class.

After the class we always have some games or contests. On February second, we met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Stilson. Just back of their house is a hill on which the class went coasting. Judging by the sounds of laughter the bumps and tumbles only added mirth to the sport. After an hour or more of fun on the hill we returned to the house where light refreshments were served.

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

EVERY DAY WE hear of or read about or see people who have great trouble. We feel very sorry for them, and wish we might help them.

Jesus was sorry for the crowds that came to Him for help, and He could help them, and He did. He went to all the cities and villages, preaching in their churches or synagogues, and healing those who were sick.

These distressed people reminded Him of a flock of sheep who had no shepherd. They seemed not to know how to care for themselves or what to do, or where to go.

Jesus said to His disciples, "The harvest truly is plentiful, but the labourers are few." That is, the people are ready to be saved, but there are so few laborers or teachers who can really tell them how salvation may be obtained. Their teachers were not sincere, and did not tell them truth.

Jesus said, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest." Praying is often doing, too, so Jesus called the twelve helpers whom He had chosen by this time, and told them that He was going to send them out as laborers. The express command was given that they should go to the Israelites only—no Gentiles or Samaritans. Jesus called His people "the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

Great power was given these twelve. They would be able to cast out unclean spirits and heal all kinds of sickness and disease, even cleanse lepers or raise the dead. This power was given them freely so they were to use it freely. They were to preach, saying, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Jesus, the King, was among them using His great power, and they were being given the opportunity of accepting Him.

Jesus said that whosoever received these disciples received Him, and if they received Him they, therefore, received God, the One who sent Him. All were to receive rewards even if they gave only a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple. That means that any little deed of kindness to another will be rewarded.

Today we cannot do all the things these men did, but we can tell about the kingdom, and do many little helpful things for those about us.

THINK!

Are we giving cups of cold water or doing kind deeds freely?

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn the names of the twelve disciples.
2. Read how each was chosen.
3. Who are Gentiles? Samaritans?
4. Learn verse 42 of the lesson.

WHO SAID?

"I will trust, and not be afraid; for the Lord JEHOVAH is my strength and my song."

LIKE GEORGE WASHINGTON

We cannot all be Washingtons
And have our birthdays celebrated;
But we can love the things he loved,
And we can hate the things he hated.

He loved the truth, he hated lies,
He minded what his Mother taught him;
And every day he tried to do
The simple duties that it brought him.

Perhaps the reason little folks
Are sometimes great when they grow taller,
Is just because, like Washington,
They do their best when they are smaller.

—The Sunbeam.

NATURE

5. Psalm 102:6-7.
6. To the beautiful wings of what bird does Job refer in enumerating the works of God?

OBEDIENCE

"Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said,
We ought to obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

"Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right. Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise."—Ephesians 6:1, 2.

"But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you."—Jeremiah 7:23.

"And Samuel said, Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams."—1 Samuel 15:22.

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

Matthew 9:35 to 11:1

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 52:7-12

GOLDEN TEXT

The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.
—Matthew 9:37, 38.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Recruiting Christian Workers.

Basic Truth. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:15-16.

Outline. I. Jesus Is the Head, the Authority. II. Selecting and Qualifying His Helpers.

I. Jesus Is the Head, the Authority. "All power (authority) is given unto me in heaven and in earth."—Jesus, Matt. 28:18. During His ministry, Jesus was swift to reveal His authority, not only over followers but over opposers, not only over man but over all animate life, visible or invisible, not only over the animate but also over the inanimate. Inanimate trees, water, wind, bread, even dead men, responded to His commands. After His resurrection God "set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come."—Eph. 1:20-21. God has authorized His Son over all of the affairs of earth.

II. Qualifications of Helpers. Just as God selected the tribe of Levi out of the whole nation of Israel and gave it to Moses and Aaron to help them in ruling Israel, so God through the gospel is selecting out of all nations individuals whom He is giving to Christ (see John 7:2, 8, 20) to assist Him in accomplishing the mighty tasks which He began in His ministry.

Believers, those who come to have implicit confidence in Jesus and who render implicit obedience, are the only ones whom He selects as helpers. "If thou believest with all thine heart" was the condition for admitting the eunuch into the Christian body and entitling him to the Christian's reward. Acts 8:37. Obedience then followed. These are the qualifications for acceptance. Then comes the qualifications for work, for work as helpers. Christ alone can fit His workers for their service. It was He who authorized and empowered His faithful apostles to do the works mentioned in this lesson. It is He alone who can authorize and enable Christian workers to do Christian work today, and who can authorize and enable them to do the far greater work of restoration in the coming age of His kingdom.

Through His gospel, Jesus graciously invites all to receive Him and to receive His reward. His invitation extends to every race and every class, none are deprived. Whosoever will, may come.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest."—Matt. 9:37, 38.

These words were used by Christ himself, when He chose the twelve and sent them out. The word, "apostle", means, "to send on a mission". In sending them forth, He warned them that they would be "as sheep in the midst of wolves", but that they must be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves". Some of their qualifications were that they must have seen Jesus and must be able to testify to what they had seen and heard.

They were to provide neither food nor clothing for themselves, and if they were arrested for what they were teaching they were not to worry about it as they would be given words with which to defend themselves.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Workers in the Kingdom.

Jesus is the Savior of the world. His kingdom will be an organization of workers for the purpose of working out the world's salvation. He is now laying deep the foundation of His kingdom by imbuing those chosen to be workers with the spirit of the kingdom's purpose and work. He is doing this partly by having brought the kingdom at hand by miracles and teaching.

A portion of the kingdom at hand is found in Matt. 9:36-38. Here Jesus presents His viewpoint of the multitudes as sheep scattered abroad having no shepherd, that His chosen workers may gain the same viewpoint. Here He prays a prayer from the depths of His heart, that the Lord of harvests will send forth laborers into His plenteous harvest—that that prayer may be implanted in the hearts of His chosen workers. No one can be a worker in the Christ's kingdom whose attitude toward the multitudes is not the Christ's attitude, and whose desire concerning it is not in harmony with His purpose. Mere dogmatic belief that Jesus is the Savior of the world is not sufficient preparation. There must be sympathy, plus desire, plus conviction that the power of the Christ is fully commensurate with His mission.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Helping to Win the World for Christ.

When Jesus came into the world and began His life work, He preached a gospel which the world had never before heard. His was a gospel of love and service, of forgiveness of enemies, of justice for the oppressed and of righteousness over all.

To further His work He chose twelve men and taught them His methods and His principles. He then sent them out to carry this message to others. What were some of the instructions He gave them? Matt. 10:5-33. They found much to do, teaching and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. But there is still much to do. Many still have not heard the message of God's love.

When will this message have reached all so that all will know Him, "from the least of them to the greatest of them"? Although this condition cannot obtain until Jesus comes again, does that relieve us of our duty to tell the glad news to others?

How may we win others to Christ besides teaching them the gospel? Which speaks louder, actions or words? Let us not forget that Jesus said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."
—M. G.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Recruiting Officer. How vividly the mind harks back to the days when the last World War thundered its announcement over the land. Like gourds of the night, recruiting officers sprang up throughout the land. With all the oratory at their command, with all the appeal that could be made for patriotism, they urged the needs of the nation upon the stalwart boys of the land, the pride of the nation's homes. Millions of men were persuaded to ignore personal, family and home interests, to shut their eyes to every possible hazard awaiting, and to volunteer to fill the ranks of the nation's armies.

Long before the war of 1914 was thought of, a Savior stood upon the rise of land in Galilee and proclaimed the good news of a kingdom which the Father, all-wise and all-powerful, pictured in all its righteous beauty for the abode of man. He did not implore man to ignore self-interest but instead, to recognize his best interest; He did not implore him to ignore the call of wife and home, but to heed that call most effectively; He did not implore him to overlook the cry of helpless children, but to recognize them more truly; He did not implore him to close his eyes to hazard, but to open it to eternal joys and to enlist in the great cause of fighting the world's battles for everlasting peace and righteousness. Such a recruiting officer was Jesus of Nazareth. His prayer still echoes from hill to hill, from shore to shore, with the same solicitous call for true workers, for noble assistants in His, the greatest battle for righteousness of all times.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Earl Gene is a happy boy born on Jan. 5 to Mr. and Mrs. Ethan Carpenter of West Danville, Kentucky.

Word has come to the office that Sr. M. J. Osborn of Culver, Indiana, is in sadness because of the death of her mother who has been a resident of the state of Washington for quite a number of years.

A check from one of our good Canadian friends amounting to $275.02 was recently contributed, specially mentioning that it was to be used in liquidating the remaining debt on the linotype.

Bro. Paul C. Johnson will be with the congregation at Plum River, Ill., on Sunday, February 16 at eleven a. m., and with the Adeline brethren in the evening.

Bro. F. E. Siple will speak for the Rockford Class at their regular place of meeting, 1904 N. Main St., Rockford, Ill., on Friday, February 14, at 7:30 p. m.

Twin girls came to grace the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Bauerle of Hammond, Louisiana, on January 30. They will be known as Marjorie Ellen and Margaret Fay. Mrs. Bauerle will be remembered as Thelma Alexander before her marriage.

AN EXCURSION

On Thursday, February 6, the Training Class and a couple of others of the N. B. I. force took advantage of a special rate offered and journeyed to Chicago to see a few of the sights. The Board of Trade, Art Institute, Field's Museum and the loop district were some of the places visited. They came back none the worse for this chapter in their education. This was the first time several of them had seen this great industrial center.

By the use of quite a number of texts of Scripture Bro. Austin on last Sunday evening gave his audience a description of the journey "To Hell and Back" which all of us must some day take unless our Savior comes quickly and changes His living ones into His likeness. Several people of the town were out to take the trip with us. We hope that they enjoyed it enough to come back each Sunday evening from now on for a month or two to get the thoughts which our pastor is preparing to give on doctrinal subjects.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

Just recently we mailed with each copy of The Herald a remittance blank for the convenience of our subscribers in sending in their renewals. We received a number of responses to these for which we are very grateful. But most of these were from those of our number who keep their subscriptions right up to date.

There are several in our files who are considerably in arrears. It has always been our policy to continue sending the paper unless notified to discontinue and so these subscriptions have been carried. Also, some of our prominent church workers have sent us subscriptions for the purpose of bringing the paper to the attention of new readers. If the latter desire to renew, please look at the label on your paper. If your subscription has expired a prompt remittance will be greatly appreciated.

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Our pastor will be with the Moorefield church every third and fourth Sundays. Services will be held morning and evening in the Union church.

Sr. Lucille LeCrone of Omaha will be with the Blair church the fourth Sunday of this month, and will speak in the morning at eleven, and afternoon at two forty-five. It is hoped that Lucille can come to Blair every third or fourth Sunday.

Do you live near Blair? Come in on each Wednesday evening to do your trading and stay over for prayer meeting. If your cupboard is empty, the Blair merchants can fill it. If your soul is empty, come to the Church of God.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

We are so glad to be able to report the baptism of Bro. F. E. Duvall on Feb. 6. At the close of our morning service on Feb. 2 he brought joy to the hearts of the whole church by standing to make known his decision.

Stalwart and dependable, he unites the home for the church and gives us an earnest and valuable worker whom we can feel to be one of us in the fullest sense.

The Dixon church growth is not rapid, but its development is steady and we thank God for a personnel of real workers.

F. E. Siple.

REPORT FOR JANUARY

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Plymouth, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Guthrie Grove, S. C., 4; Welcome, S. C., 1; Flat Rock, N. C., 1; Dana, N. C., 5.

Money received in Indiana: Pleasant View, $24.00; Plymouth, $15.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Conference Board, $6.33.

Expenses $10.33.

Note: Because of bad weather we couldn't fill our appointment at Rensselaer on the second Sunday. However, the Rensselaer church sent in their monthly dues, for which we are thankful.

J. H. Anderson.

CORRESPONDENCE

To The Restitution Herald and all the Dear Ones in Christ: I will be eighty-four years old the twenty-fourth of this month. I am very poorly, have to walk on crutches, but I am strong in the faith and hope of the soon return of our Redeemer and King, looking and waiting for His return. Then He will open the blind eyes and unstop the deaf ears and heal all our wounds. I think we are in the last days of the Gentile times and no doubt Jacob's troubles are near. The automobiles and highways are the means of running to and fro and seeking of pleasure.

I ask for the prayers of all The Herald readers.

Yours in Christ,

Jesse Harrold,

Blythedale, Missouri.

JESUS' HELPERS

Jesus had chosen twelve men, or disciples to help Him with His work. They were Simon or Peter, and his brother Andrew, James and John, sons of Zebedee, Philip and Bartholomew, Thomas and Matthew, James and Thad-daeus, Simon and Judas.

Jesus sent them out to work. He gave them power to heal all kinds of disease and sickness. He said to them, "Go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead."

When you go on a journey, you take enough clothes and money to last you until you return. But Jesus told them not to take any clothes with them, but what they wore. Now I'm sure you wonder how they secured food and clothing. These were provided by the good people to whom these men went to preach. Jesus warned them of the many dangers that they would find, but urged them to help Him in carrying on His work. They went willingly and told many people about Jesus and how they could be saved, and many believed and were baptized.

Jesus needs helpers today. Who'll be the first to want to help Him?—V. C. T.

The General Conference for the year 1930 will be held in connection with the Illinois State Conference, beginning Tuesday, July 29, and continuing over Sunday, August 10.
 F. L. Austin, Secretary.

Word has been received that the Texas Conference is to be held July 11 to 20, inclusive.

I AM CALLING YOU

I am the best friend of mankind.
 I live in the lives of the young and in the dreams of the old.
 In the minds of the greatest men on earth I find constant dwellingplace.
 I safeguard man with a friendly hand.
 I am the essence of good fellowship, friendliness and love.
 I give gifts that gold cannot buy, nor kings take away.
 I bring back the freshness of life, the spirit of youth.
 I meet you with outstretched arms and with songs of gladness.
 Some time in the future you will yearn for the touch of my friendly hand.
 I am your comforter and best friend.
 I will show you the pathway of eternal life.
 I am calling you! NOW!
 I am the CHURCH!

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

He hath achieved success who hath lived well, laughed often and loved much; who hath gained the respect of pure women and the love of little children; who hath left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem or a rescued soul; who hath never failed to appreciate the best there is in others and given the best he hath in return; whose life hath been an inspiration and whose memory a benediction.—Selected.

BROTHERLY LOVE

By F. E. Siple

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another."—John 13:34-35.

IT IS ONE MATTER TO KNOW a thing theoretically and be able to talk about it simply from the standpoint of mental intelligence. It is a vastly different matter to know a thing by experience and be able to speak from a heart that has been in actual contact with the full situation. How much more appreciative is the latter person!

All of us have been taught from childhood the beauty of brotherly love. We have studied our Bibles upon the subject, have pondered the question and mentally drawn pictures of what it all means. Illustration upon illustration has been used to explain it to others. And then suddenly, perhaps, in the progress of life, experience brings the truth home to us in a practical way that softens our hearts completely and makes us realize something of how empty our words and illustrations must have sounded in days gone by!

It is one thing to talk about how the brothers and sisters ought to constitute one large family, to enjoy each other's joys and feel each other's sorrows. It is something far sweeter than that to have actually tasted the love, fellowship and sympathy of the brotherhood while passing through problems, disappointments or sorrows that seemed almost greater than one could bear, situations, in fact, which we likely could not have faced properly at all except for the love, trust and cooperation of the brothers and sisters.

Even temptations to do wrong are resisted with much greater ease when we have the love and confidence of those who are cooperating with us, those who are expecting us to be true. Many a girl has slipped or young man gone wrong who could have been saved from it all by brotherly love. Our attention recently was called to one who attributes the fact that he has been able to keep clean under very difficult circumstances to the love and confidence of another who trusted him completely and expected him to be true. Whether it be a matter of temptation or of trial or sorrow, brotherly love is the strongest support that humans can render to each other.

Life is bound to have its ups and downs. That, really, is what makes life. The ocean has its periods of almost glassy calm and its raging, pitching storms, but neither of these conditions are the general rule. They are the exceptions. Ordinarily the ocean rolls with a moderate wave. Either of the opposite conditions is quickly observed by the sailor.

Life, too, ordinarily flows along with its common problems. There are its moderate joys and its customary disappointments,—the latter serving to make the former more sweet. But occasionally the sea of life, too, has its noticeable calm or its terrific storm. It is well for us to remember when these storms do come the words of inspiration found in First Corinthians 10:13, "There hath no temptation (trial, problem, sorrow) taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

What a comfort there is in those words. Or rather, what a comfort there is in experiencing the truth of which those words so plainly speak!

The trial may come. Yes, it is sure to come. But no trial, problem or sorrow has ever come to you but what others have also faced, and when the trial comes God also provides the means of withstanding it. This may be by miraculous gift of greater physical and mental strength of resistance, or it may be by the loving consideration of loved ones, friends, brothers and sisters, making possible the facing of a condition which would have seemed impossible.

When this latter has been the case life seems all the more worth the living. If others can be so thoughtful and kind to you and it can mean so much to you then what an inspiration there is to do your part to make life more livable and sweet for others!

Ah, indeed! Let brotherly love continue. It is worth more than rubies or gold.

His life was demanded by wicked hands of Israel's own people. Having paid that value, a proper value, it is His right and ability to redeem to David and to Abraham, as also to God himself, that peculiar treasure of the Father's that multitude of seed of Abraham.

Similarly as Israel sold herself and became a bond servant, so also Adam sold himself and by consequence the entire Adamic family. In this manner the human race became bond servants unto sin. Death resulted therefrom. Redemption is necessary if Adam and his family are ever to be reinstated into their inheritance by creation. Neither Adam nor any of his family is able to redeem himself. It must be a next of kin.

Again Jesus, the Son of Adam, the Son of God, is that next of kin. For Adam and his people Jesus has paid an equal value. As the Lamb of God He presented himself a sacrifice for those of His kin.

Glad will be that day when Jesus the Redeemer shall release back to their own, the children of Abraham and of David; back to their own, the children of Adam and of God. Well might ten thousand times ten thousand angels and thousands of thousands make glad acclaim because of this redemption!

ISRAEL'S NEW TRAGEDY

Mr. Chalmers, Editor of The Jewish Missionary Magazine, has seen in the uprisings in Palestine a deeper significance than is generally recognized by journalists, and in this article, selected from "The Sunday School Times," he presents a satisfying study of them in the light of Scripture.

THE LOCAL Palestine Government should be held to account for its supineness in permitting the Arabs to have a free hand in the riots in Palestine. Its officials were not and are not in sympathy with the aims of Zionism, and lost no love on the Jews. Yet they were there to maintain order. If the spirit of Lord Plumer, a former High Commissioner had prevailed in the local government there would have been no outbreak. Abraham Cahan, editor of The Jewish Forward (New York), has been in Palestine to study conditions there. Writing for his own paper and The New Palestine, he says:

"I hear repeatedly that the Mufti once told High Commissioner Plumer that if the Arab demands were not granted he could not be responsible for maintaining order. Thereupon Lord Plumer retorted firmly: 'Being responsible is none of your business. That's my affair. Go!' And there was no trouble."

But the weight of responsibility falls on the British home government in London. It has not adopted a clean-cut policy nor held its subordinates in Palestine accountable for the exact execution of order. Unless Britain intends to drop the Balfour Declaration from the mandatory responsibility, she must see that justice is done to all parties and must execute in all honesty the promises given the Jews. She cannot shirk her responsibility now. She is on trial before the world.

That the British Government intends to fulfill its promise to the Jews has been repeatedly stated and by each new government in London. This duty has been recognized by three leading members of the present Labor government: by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, by Arthur Henderson, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and by Lord Passfield, Colonial Secretary. But to carry out this promise will require a new plan of action faithfully executed. All lukewarm agents of the service, in England and Palestine, should be rooted out. And all criminals in Palestine should be condignly punished. Only thus can Britain regain the prestige she so suddenly lost.

ZIONISM QUICKENED

Sound public opinion in Britain will stand by the government in such a policy. From a journal in Scotland is clipped the following:

"The British mandate and the Balfour Declaration still stand. The Jews who have poured twelve millions of pounds sterling into the country, redeemed its deserts and swamps, given it schools and colleges and libraries and hospitals and factories and workshops, and incidentally made hundreds, if not thousands, of Arabs well off who were beggarly before, need have no fear that they will be either ousted or excluded from a land that was their own by the will of God seventeen hundred years before Mohammed was born."

What providence was in this outburst of Arab wrath? What meaning has it for Israel and for Christians? How will it affect the Zionist movement?

By this tragic flow of blood in Palestine God is calling the Jews to consider their ways. He has set Palestine and Israel in the forefront of the world's interest. Zionism is now no mere concern of the Jews and Great Britain. It becomes a factor in the problem of universal peace. Every land where Jews dwell, and they dwell in all lands, will acquire fresh interest in the welfare of the Jews and in their return to Palestine. Men must turn to the Scriptures for light on the vast problem of the Jew. What message has the Word on Israel and these days of her agony?

To be specific, the riots in Palestine may be intended to rouse all world Jewry to a consciousness of their relation to Palestine and to the Jewish movement thither. They call Jews with trumpet tone to take note of God in Israel's history and to hearken to His voice showing them their duty in relation to Him. God wills to rouse Israel to the claims of the Lord Jesus as their true Messiah and Redeemer. If they still refuse or neglect His warning, nevertheless He will rouse them to such sense of their relationship to Palestine that multitudes will seek to return thither. Jews must be in the land in numbers to form a state, to rebuild the temple, and to be in readiness for the fulfillment of prophecy relating to the antichrist and their connection with him. Prophecy requires an increased tempo to the Zionist return. World Jewry must not be permitted to remain absorbed in her own affairs, seeking wealth and ease. God's purposes cannot always wait.

AT THE PLACE OF THE SEA

Have you come to the Red Sea place in your life,
 Where, in spite of all you can do,
 There is no way out, there is no way back,
 There is no other way but through?
 Then wait on the Lord, with a trust serene,
 Till the night of your fear is gone;
 He will send the winds, He will heap the floods,
 When He says to your soul, "Go on!"

And His hand shall lead you through, clear through,
 Ere the watery walls roll down;
 No wave can touch you, no foe can smite,
 No mightiest sea can drown.
 The tossing billows may rear their crests,
 Their foam at your feet may break,
 But over their bed you shall walk dryshod
 In the path that your Lord shall make.

In the morning watch 'neath the lifted cloud,
 You shall see but the Lord alone,
 When He leads you forth from the place of the sea,
 To a land that you have not known;
 And your fears shall pass as your foes have passed
 You shall no more be afraid;
 You shall sing His praise in a better place,
 In a place that His hand hath made.

—Annie Johnson Flint.

ASSURED BY HIS PROMISE

By Margaret Magaw

AN APPEALING STORY IS TOLD of a father who had taken his small daughter and still younger son out into the ocean surf for a frolic. Both children, though very young, knew how to swim, having no fear of the water. The wise father had taught the children to float upon their backs, so that they could turn over and rest whenever they were tired from the strenuous exercise of swimming.

Father and children were having such an enjoyable time that he failed to notice how far out they had drifted. Realizing that the children could never swim the distance to shore without assistance, he swiftly decided upon the only plan he knew to be advisable. Taking the younger child he began the long swim to shore, leaving the little girl to float alone, with the assurance, "Daddy will come back and get you."

As swiftly as possible, considering his small encumbrance, the father swam for shore, knowing that every minute was precious, as the sun was already nearing the western horizon. As soon as possible after disposing of the little boy, he organized a rescue party who forthwith put off in row boats to search for the little girl floating somewhere out there in the waste of waters. One hour, two hours passed and still they found not a trace of her. At last as the twilight was deepening almost into darkness, they found her, a tiny speck in all that vast ocean, still calmly floating. The father, clasping her convulsively to his bosom, asked her tenderly if she was all right. "Yes, daddy," was the reply, "I am so tired, but I knew you would come back for me."

What faith that innocent child had in her earthly father! Might we not take a lesson from this little story? We are God's children floating, as it were, out in this sinful world far from the Father's celestial shore. By faith we rest upon His promises, awaiting the glad day when He shall send His Son, Jesus, to come back for us to receive us unto His loving bosom. What sublime joys await us beyond that celestial shore, we can only faintly conjecture. Suffice it to say that at the present time it is enough for us to renew our faith and courage daily to go on in service to the Master, knowing that every need will be fulfilled.

ABIDING FAITH

By Paul M. Hatch

ONE OF THE ESSENTIAL THINGS requisite to the up-building of the man of God into the full stature of the man in Christ Jesus is faith. The great apostle, in mentioning essentials to Christian being, puts faith foremost in order if not in importance. Faith, then, we would say is the first essential to the up-building of Christian hope, and Christian love, and these Christian requisites have their fruit in proportion as we have Christian faith. By abiding faith we are meaning daily and hourly faith. Not the mere fact that we believe God is true, or that He exists, or that His promises are dependable, not that, faith goes a great deal farther than that. Faith is keeping the soul in the abiding presence of God. Faith is working constantly to the up-building of the soul and the presenting of it to God as worthy of His in-dwelling spirit.

How great is our abiding faith, dear brethren? How often do we forget to do and to believe? The writer is conscious of himself that the faith of Christ's return goes neglected and begging often, days for a time; that God's great love is forgotten in the petty piquing of the day's trials. Should these things so be? Should we not be diligent about keeping the soul with strong faith resident? Faith is the strong man of the house, and if he be absent, what will happen when thieves break in and steal? The soul will be that much poorer. Let not those things that war against the soul lack the antagonist, the strong champion, faith.

To accomplish this, of keeping the soul, faith must constantly be on the alert, constantly keeping the house. Like the housewife with industrious broom, mop and dust cloth keeps the dwelling presentable to herself and her callers, so faith should be constantly working in the soul. This cannot be accomplished if she abides not in her own home, but is a busy body, and a gadder-about, meddling in things that have no edification. Strong faith keeps a tidy house and abides at home.

If then faith becomes negligent what shall we expect to happen to the soul? The soul will lust after the things of the world. The things of the world are many and various, and if these overpower and cast out faith completely from the soul then that soul, spiritually speaking, is become the habitation of things that are not of God. The things not of faith are these: desires of the world and the working of them, desires of the flesh and the working of them, summed up in the lust of the flesh, of the eye, and the pride of life. These self-satisfying desires choke out the Word of God and when that is choked out faith becomes no longer operative. Do we not see these things about us? What will be the end of those souls?

Surely, abiding faith is man's or woman's greatest boon, and if we let it be gradually discarded it will not gender the things of God and the salvation of the soul. God does not ask us to do stupendous acts of faith, to remove mountains or any such thing, but He does want to have your own soul purged that it will be worth saving. The purifying agent is Christ Jesus, and if it is not worth the saving, then like unsavory salt it will be cast forth and trodden under foot.

Let us encourage abiding faith.

A WEEKLY TALK

---

By C. E. Randall

A HOUSE OF PRAYER

GOD HAS SAID, "Mine house shall be called an house of prayer for all people." Are we making His house such? We are adepts in analyzing the sins of the world, and in pointing out the apostacy of other groups and holding them up as visible "Signs of the Times". In picking out this mote we have overlooked the beam in our own eyes. We have made our churches houses of study instead of houses of prayer.

I don't wish to detract from the value of study and research; it is needful; but we ought not to have left the other undone. What has happened to our family altars? They are broken down. It is a rare thing to find one of our families that has regular family worship. What has become of the old-fashioned cottage prayer meetings? Have they outgrown them? Why is it that only a very few of our churches have mid-week prayer meetings? Aren't they profitable? These questions are not merely interrogative, but strike at some solemn facts.

We claim to be a special people with a special message, and yet there are whole state conferences and not a prayer meeting held regularly anywhere in the state. Oh what a terrible condition! Somebody is going to be held responsible for this lamentable situation. How often do you read in THE HERALD about what a wonderful prayer service was held at some place? Do you remember reading about some starting a prayer meeting? I know why we haven't more prayer meetings. Our people are indifferent to prayer. We are not a praying people, and this is the very reason why we are not a spiritual people.

I don't want to be a fault finder. I realize it is easy to criticize, but if we have some festerous spots that need probing and cleaning out, let us take courage and seek God's aid and go to the task. A man's greatest enemy is self and our greatest foe is within our own ranks. Why is it that our folks are willing to go to a Bible study and talk ABOUT God and are not at all backward, bashful or ashamed and have a good flow of language, but when it comes to humiliate themselves and get down on their knees and talk WITH God that is out of the question? They can't think of anything to say. They are afraid of what people will say.

If there is a message that the Church of God needs today it is the message of prayer. "Lord, teach us to pray." Study will bring a mental acknowledgment of God or a "form of godliness" but will never produce the "power thereof". It isn't so much how much you know, as it is how much you practice of what you know. It is possible to have your mind crammed with truth and at the same time hold it in unrighteousness. Rom. 1:18.

Prayer is practicing. It has been said that a "prayer meeting is a true barometer of a church." There is power in prayer. Prayer changes things. It changes lives of individuals. No one knows the value and power of prayer until he has experienced it through practice. If our churches will start regular prayer services, either in the homes or church buildings and will raise up the broken family altars and humiliate themselves before God, He will prove himself still to be a God that answers prayer.

Brethren, let us face this terrible situation that exists among us and pray that God will raise up spirit-filled men and women with courage true and strong who will lead us out of this apostacy into "full life in Christ Jesus".

When we forget Christ's exaltation in our study of His earthly life, when we are so preoccupied, nay, even so fascinated with what He was that we forget what He is—when in other words, a pious historical imagination takes the place of a living religious faith, victorious consciousness is lost and in a most essential point the image of the Lord is not reproduced in the believer. This is why the Pauline point of view—if indeed it is to be called Pauline and not simply Christian—is essential. "Christianity is a religion, not merely a history, though it should be the history told by Matthew, Mark and Luke; and the chance of having the history itself appreciated for religion is that He who is its subject shall be contemplated, not in the dim distance of the past, but in the glory of His heavenly reign, and that He shall be recognized not merely as one that lived a perfect life in His own generation, but as the Giver of life eternal by His spirit to all who turn to Him."

ISRAEL'S NEW TRAGEDY

Reports that Jewish blood had been shed in Palestine stirred the Jews of the world as seldom before. Multitudes who had but a mild interest in Zionism are hardening their wills to do and dare for Zion. Even in Palestine those who suffered and the lusty pioneers in the settlements resolved anew to give their lives to the rebuilding of the home land. Tens of thousands of young Jews are organizing for a mass movement toward the shores of Palestine. Zionist organizations around the world sense the new opportunity and are rousing themselves to the larger task. It is like the fervor of a religious crusade. The pulse of Jewry is at fever heat.

The taste of blood in Palestine and the work of Arab agitators have resulted in stirring a fierce blaze of Arab resentment toward both the Jews and Great Britain. With Arab leaders this is but the beginning of a campaign that must end for them in Britain's abandonment of her national home policy for the Jews. They are working for the formation of a great Arab confederation. This must include Palestine. The hot blood of Ishmael is boiling also under a sense of injustice. Arabs consider that they have been unjustly treated by Great Britain in the matter of certain alleged promises made in 1916. They fiercely resent what they call Jewish presumption. Out of such hatred and jealousy will come new outbreaks. The Arabs are threatening this very thing. Britain will have her hands full in keeping the Arabs from cutting the throats of the Jews.

Great Britain is under the stern necessity of giving sober thought and energy to the fulfilling of her mandate obligations. The moral sense of the world, no less than Britain's own promises, requires this. She is not in Palestine for the Jews alone, she may as well acknowledge, in view of her own position on the Suez Canal. She dare not give up Palestine, even though this would accord with the desires of many Britons. Many of her own people would have her relinquish the mandate and turn it over to Italy. Lord Rothermere desires this. He says in The Daily Mail, September 12, 1929:

"Italy would be far more suitable as a Mandatory for the Middle East. . . . Italy has naval bases in the Mediterranean quite as convenient as Malta for the dispatch of forces to Palestine in case of trouble there, and her capacity for the task of governing those countries is proved by the fact that since Mussolini came to power Italy is, in many respects, the best administered country in Europe."

THE BOOK OF JOB

By Lyman Booth

BEGINNING WITH THE BOOK OF JOB, followed by the Psalms and the writings of Solomon, we enter that portion of Scripture called the "Hagiography, or sacred writings." In these parts of the sacred oracles is greater depth and more apparent difficulty than in the preceding. But the instruction, in general, is prepared more for immediate use and the benefit to be derived from the perusal of the scriptural history depends much upon our acquaintance with the books before us. We therefore begin with the book of Job, to which some learned men have devoted much time and have taken much pains to interpret as an allegory.

The prophet Ezekiel mentions Job, Noah and Daniel as three persons of eminent piety, Ezek. 14:14, 20. The Apostle James illustrates the advantages of Christian patience by the example of Job, as he has also done relative to his doctrines of faith and works by the examples of Abraham and Ahab, James 2:21-25; 5:11. There remains no reasonable doubt but that the narrative of this book is historical truth. Though we may allow with safety that as the discussions of Job and his friends are recorded in practical language, their arguments and sentiments are transmitted to us and not the exact words which they used in their conversation.

The story of Job is told at both the beginning and end of the book bearing his name. He appears on the scene as a God-fearing man, as a patriarchal magnate, distinguished for his wealth and high honor in the land of Uz, probably in the north-east of the Arabian desert, Job 1:1. Suddenly he is prostrated by a succession of calamities, stripped of his goods and children, 1:13-22. But he maintains his integrity with some drawbacks of intemperate speech, and is finally restored to health, God giving back all he had lost with much more. His friends visit him, but prove sorry comforters; in fact they provoke him to outbursts of self-justification, chapters 4 to 7. At length God speaks to him in vision, and asks him a series of questions calculated to illustrate the wisdom and power of the Most High as compared with the littleness of man, chapters 38 to 41. In this manner Job is brought to a realization of his true position and humility. He meekly acknowledges God's chastening hand and prays for his friends who were rebuked by God. Following this the blessings of God were once more shed upon His humble servant, and the latter end of Job was more prosperous and happy than the beginning.

That he was a real historical person is apparent from the scriptural references in Ezekiel 14:14, 16, 18, 20 and James 5:11, and from the further fact that the book itself specifies persons, places and circumstances in the style of true history. The book is an elaborate poem on an historical basis, as is shown by the manner of its beginning and ending, written in prose. The author of the book is quite uncertain, some ascribing it to Moses while herding Jethro's sheep in Midian, others placing it at the time of Solomon. It was written in the purest Hebrew, and shows intimacy with Egyptian and Arabian scenery and usages. Its greatest theme is the problem of evil, why the righteous suffer and the wicked prosper in worldly affairs. In the third chapter Job gives expressions of deep despair, after which three series of controversies take place, in which each of Job's friends makes an address, to which Job replies, except that one in which Zophar remains silent. Job makes the closing address to the three, 27, 28, which he follows with a striking and impressive soliloquy, 29-31. Elihu gives four discourses, 32-37, after which Jehovah speaks out of the whirlwind, 38-41, and Job becomes humble, but vindicated.

The best critics of every age have recognized the poetic merits of the book. It is especially valuable for its religious and ethical worth, setting forth as it does the being and perfections of Jehovah, the apostacy and guilt of mankind, the divine sovereignty and mercy of God, on the basis of sacrifice and penitence, the wisdom of submitting to His will, and the assurance that all will be well with His followers in the final end.

A very high authority is accorded this book. Some claim it is the most ancient book now extant in the world. The long life to which Job attained, the remains of patriarchal religion in the land of Uz, the worship of the sun and moon being the only objects of idolatrous worship mentioned in it, and no express mention made to the Law of Moses, or the wonderful works of God in Israel's behalf, give sanction to this opinion. Yet some learned writers, perceiving a similarity of sentiment between some parts of this book and passages in the Psalms and Proverbs would give it a much later date. But wise and pious men may often give the same instructions without knowing of each other's works. It may be as possible for David and Solomon to allude to this book as it was for the writer of this book to allude to their works. While the date of the events recorded therein cannot be definitely ascertained, it is very likely that Job was in his first state of prosperity between the death of Joseph and the appearance of Moses at Pharaoh's court as the deliverer of his people, Israel. The language of God, that "there was none like him in all the earth", would seem to favor the probability of this opinion, because there was no other person mentioned in Scripture during that period as flourishing to the extent as is credited to Job.

While it is not definitely agreed as to who wrote the book, some credit Job with all of it except the concluding part and others to Elihu. Still others think Moses was the author of it. The composition has also given rise to the opinion that it was written in the Arabic language. Perhaps Elihu may have written it in Arabic and Moses may have rendered it into the Hebrew. The first two chapters are, by critics, classed as prose. The style is very plain, and forms an introduction to the poetical part, which in many places is peculiarly figurative and sublime, and therefore more difficult to correctly interpret. The latter part of the last chapter contains an historical conclusion of the whole.

HE THAT BELIEVETH

By Grover Gordon

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved: but he that believeth not shall be damned (condemned)."—Mark 16:15-16.

AT FIRST GLANCE it seems hard to harmonize the foregoing statement with others such as: "that he by the grace (favor) of God should taste death for every man", Heb. 2:9; "who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time", 1 Tim. 2:6; "by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto the justification of life", Rom. 5:18; "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive". 1 Cor. 15:22, and other like passages. On investigating it will be found that there is a "Great Salvation" spoken of and also a "Common Salvation". The "Great Salvation" is found to be conditional, "he that believeth"; and it is "eternal" on the condition of obedience, "he became the author of ETERNAL SALVATION unto all them that OBEY HIM", Heb. 5:9; and "how shall we escape, if we neglect so GREAT SALVATION; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him", Heb. 2:3.

That the "Common Salvation" is unconditional is evident for "in due time Christ died for the ungodly", and "while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us". Rom. 5:6-8. But to teach that the "Common Salvation" is "eternal" brings a protest from the Apostle Paul: "Shall we continue in sin, that grace (favor) may abound? GOD FORBID. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" Rom 6:1-3.

Again to teach that the "Common Salvation" is "Eternal Salvation" and therefore unconditional, causes a laxity or looseness in conduct of which Jude thought it needful or necessary to write: "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the COMMON SALVATION, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints. For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace (favor) of God into lasciviousness, (looseness, irregular indulgence in animal desires) and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ." Jude 3-4. Then in the next verse he gives us an example how that even though we have the "Common Salvation" which is the grace (favor) of God, yet after all it may be lost and we be destroyed if we fail to believe: "I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that the Lord, having SAVED the people out of the land of Egypt, AFTERWARD DESTROYED THEM THAT BELIEVED NOT".

"For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses. But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, and whose carcasses fell in the wilderness? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief." Heb. 3:16-19. Is unbelief sin? It would seem so by the foregoing, for those that sinned fell in the wilderness and could not enter in because of unbelief. Also, "he that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." John 3:18.

John said again: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God: and that believing ye might have life through his name." John 20:30-31. We see then that by "believing" and "obeying" we become heirs with Him of "Eternal Salvation". HOW SHALL WE ESCAPE IF WE NEGLECT SO GREAT SALVATION?

"Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Heb. 4:1-2. "Let us labour (work, toil, to exert one's powers of body or mind, or both, in the prosecution of any design) therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief". Heb. 4:11.

The Israelites were all saved out of Egypt, a "salvation" common to all (unconditional), but it was not lasting, for those that believed NOT, fell or were destroyed afterward. Even so God's grace or favor has saved all men from the condemnation of the first Adam. Now it rests with man whether he will accept (believe); if not, he will be destroyed as were the Israelites. Even though Jesus paid the "ransom" for all, the "all" will not be allowed to enter "his rest" unconditionally (he that believeth) any more than those that perished in the wilderness could not enter the promised land because of unbelief.

Paul said: "And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: (against them that refuse to know God, and them who decline to hearken unto the glad message of our Lord Jesus,—Roth.) who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that BELIEVE (because our testimony among you was believed) IN THAT DAY." To read this without the phrase which is inserted in parentheses for explanation, it would read: "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." Why? "Because our testimony among you was believed." 2 Thess. 1:7-10.

TESTIMONIES OF JESUS CONCERNING HIMSELF

I AM THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE

Sunday, February 23—John 11:18-26

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he who puts faith in me, even though he die, shall live again; and no one who lives again and puts faith in me may in anywise die to the remotest age: believest thou this?—VV. 25, 26, Roth.

THE WORDS of Jesus' testimony were usually supported by His works. Having told Mary and Martha that He was the resurrection and the life, He requested them to accompany Him to the sepulchre of their brother. Here He first tested the faith of the living. Then, thanking the Father for having heard Him, He called Lazarus to life, and this was to verify the statement which He had made, "I am the resurrection and the life." Rotherham's translation of this text clarifies its meaning very much. In this Rotherham is in agreement with Alford and others.

ART THOU HE?

Monday, February 24—Matthew 11:1-6.

Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?—V. 3.

THESE ARE THE WORDS of John in his prison cell. He was anxious for evidence that He whom he had announced as the Lamb of God was truly that One. The Lord's reply to John's messenger was, "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, and the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them." These results being in fulfillment of prophetic utterances by Isaiah, 35:4-6; 42:7, were His testimonies to verify that He was the One who was to come. The Savior gave no verbal testimony in proof of His status. He cited only the fruits of His life.

COME UNTO ME

Tuesday, February 25—Matthew 11:25-30.

Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest . . .—VV. 28-30.

ALREADY THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS of Jesus were evidence that He knew the Father as none other knew Him and that He was known of the Father as He was known of none other. This status of the Lord before the Father was one to which He invited His followers. To this end He bade them to "come unto me". It is noticeable that the Savior's promise was that He would "give" them rest. Just as the Father had given Jesus rest, so He would give rest to those who would come to Him. He asked them to take His yoke, the instrument with which He was able to accomplish more and to accomplish it with more ease; and verse 29 seems to tell of what that yoke was made, namely, meekness and lowliness in heart. By assuming this yoke, this burden-bearer, this load-carrier, "ye shall find rest unto your souls".

Throughout all the annals of time none other ever undertook to give rest unto those who would follow.

LORD OF THE SABBATH

Wednesday, February 26—Matthew 12:1-8.

For the Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath day.—V. 8.

THE SAVIOR had testified, v. 6, that He was "greater than the temple". This would make Him Lord of the temple. He testified, v. 42, that He was "greater than Solomon". Here He testified that He was "Lord of the sabbath day". The occasion was one of traveling through the corn field with His disciples. Contrary to the Pharisaic emendations of the law, His disciples plucked the ears of corn, shelled, that is, threshed, them in their hands, and ate. This shelling, corresponding to the threshing, was by the onlookers magnified as an offense against God's law of the sabbath. It all gave the Savior opportunity to testify of His lordship. This He did and cited instances in the lives of David and the priests to verify that He was "blameless".

THE SON OF THE LIVING GOD

Thursday, February 27—Matthew 16:13-20

Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.—V. 17.

IT WAS SIMON PETER who had said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus approved his statement. Some had thought that Jesus was John the Baptist or Elias, or Jeremias, or another prophet. But Jesus informed Peter that God had revealed unto him the truth regarding the person of Himself. Further Jesus testified that it was "upon this rock" that He would build His church. The rock referred to is, undoubtedly, the rock of truth, namely, that He was "the Son of the living God".

THE SON OF MAN

Friday, February 28—John 1:43-51.

Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.—V. 15.

EACH TITLE of Jesus indicates a particular position which He occupies. As Redeemer, His labors are along one line, as King, they are along another line; as Son of God, Jesus must execute certain things, but as Son of man, He must execute other things. That He is both Son of God and Son of man, the Scriptures frequently state. In today's reading by the knowledge which He evidently had by inspiration, He testified to Nathanael of His own ability and position. To Nathanael, who with others had been aroused through prophetic utterances to anticipate the coming One, the Savior's utterances were evidence that He was that One. Then the Savior gave this added testimony to the effect that He was the Son of man, announcing that Nathanael would somewhere see the angels of God ascending and descending upon Him.

THE WAY, THE TRUTH, AND THE LIFE

COMING AGAIN

Saturday, March 1—John 14:1-11.

I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.—V. 3.

THIS IS ONE of those outstanding testimonies of the Savior concerning himself. He had been telling His disciples that He must suffer many things; that "one of you shall betray me", 13:21; that "whither I go, ye cannot come", 13:33. And now He tells them that "He "will come again", that they might be where He was. During His absence there must be a separation, "ye cannot come", but when He comes again there will be a union, "where I am, there ye may be also". The whole of this is based upon the other truth of which Jesus testified, "I am the way, the truth, and the life". To the end that all might recognize this great fact, He had been a time with them, revealing himself unto them that they might know Him and that knowing Him and seeing Him, they might know the Father also. Such knowledge and recognition upon the part of those following the Master would bring the followers to accept His truth, to walk in His ways, to attain unto His life, to be acceptable by Him when He shall come again to receive faithful ones unto himself.

GOD'S LOVE FOR US

By M. A. Woodward

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

SUNDAY MORNING, January twenty-six, brought together a goodly number of interested ones to hear Bro. Siple give his thoughts on the above text. We were especially glad to see so many Bereans present, and to realize their interest in the subject. And well might they be interested, for his subject of God's gift is of eternal interest to all who realize how much the gift is worth, even eternal life.

We have just passed the most wonderful of all seasons of gift giving. Usually we find ourselves giving the most expensive presents to those we love best. God gave us the example; He gave us the most precious, most wonderful Gift in His possession, and the One which would benefit the most people. He gave that which would be of most lasting benefit to all who would accept the gift. The whole world needed a remedy for sin, a world that would not be touched with anything less than the very best, a Christ, to be the sacrifice for sin. Now we can realize what our text means when we read, "For God SO loved the world". He SO loved. How, SO loved? Loved it so well that He gave the best-loved treasure He had to give, that you and I, unworthy as we are, might be saved. And oh, how little I fear the most of us realize its worth, or just what those words meant to the world, to Christ, to God. I wish all might have heard Bro. Siple as he entreated us to seek this helpful Savior, this love God so willingly gave for us, that after the weary days of this life are past, we might rest in Him who is now, as ever, the Resurrection and the Life.

How we mourn for the loved ones taken from us by death, but to die such a death! See, His mother standing by, looking at Him! Listen, is it the moaning of the winds, the surging of the mad mob, or is it the piteous wail of a heart-broken mother? Does she realize now what Simeon meant when he held the infant Jesus in his arms and said to her, "Yea, a sword shall pierce through thine own soul also, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed." For the sword pierced deep when that last agonizing cry filled the air, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me." Oh, God had not forsaken His Son. No, but it was the last terrible moment of the finished life, the sacrifice had been complete, and "It is finished" proved God's gift had left nothing undone for the salvation of mankind except the after glory of resurrection which was to be such a glorious consummation of God's gift to man. The heart-broken mother could go home with John now and be comforted. Had John, had mother forgotten what He had said, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up again." If they had not forgotten, what a comfort it would have been to them now, and to all the world; for that Christ life being raised is the promise, beloveds, to you and me of eternal life at His coming.

Why will not the world see that and realize all He meant when He said, "I am the resurrection and the life," instead of making Him a false Christ and insisting we receive our reward at death? God meant much more for the world than sending His Beloved here to suffer, and He gave us all the proof we need to keep us in the truth respecting our future life. But the majority of people love the mythologies of Egypt better than the proof of God. Christ's resurrection did not give us life, but it did give us the promise of it. Adam's disobedience placed death on mankind and Christ's resurrection gave us hope from God, for He SO loved us as to do all that was done.

He is still away preparing a place for a prepared people. "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Not at death, but when Jesus comes, "for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." Oh, glorious awakening! O, loving Christ, O, merciful God, how we thank Thee for that love that SO loved. God help us to be worthy the awakening.

"I KNOW THAT THERE IS NO GOOD IN THEM, BUT FOR A MAN TO REJOICE, AND TO DO GOOD IN HIS LIFE."—Eccl. 3:12.

TWO WEEKS AGO we spoke of continuing a certain line of thought, and as we come this week with some particular meditations in mind it is almost with a spirit of reverence that we recognize the real value of time.

On one of 1930's beautiful calendars I saw these words, "Life's most wonderful gift to man—a year of time." Yes, time is indeed an inestimable treasure, and we either use it, to the honor and praise of God who gives it, or we waste it lavishly and shamefully.

How can we apportion the little span of time that is ours so as to use it to the best advantage?

The wisest man of olden times once stated, "To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven." And then Solomon went on to enumerate some of the common experiences of a lifetime. Planting, plucking up; killing, healing; breaking down, building up; weeping, laughing; mourning, dancing; embracing, refraining from embracing; rending, sewing; keeping silence, speaking; loving, hating; warring, enjoying peace—there is a time, says Solomon, for each of these.

God is so fair and just in His requirements of man. He says, through Paul, "Study to show thyself approved unto God", but it would be wrong for us to study continually to the neglect of other necessary tasks of life. Likewise it would be just as wrong if we let other duties crowd out the communion with God through His Word and through prayer which gives us strength and guidance to press on.

There is work to do, but God wants us to have some playtime to balance the labor. There must be some recreation in the course of our day if we would do our best work for God. Life has its share of tears for each of us, yet there is time for laughter and light-heartedness.

The true Christian wisely plans his time so that his life may be rounded out in such way as to have served God through his fellowmen best when the sunset of life arrives.

God very beautifully has appointed time for everything necessary in our lives. Oh, that we might recognize this truth and avail ourselves of every opportunity to make each hour of each day acceptable to our Father in heaven! "For man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them."

Let us live so that we may not be taken unaware whenever our time may come.

We quote the wise man again for the secret of it all: "What profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboreth? . . . I know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life."

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

THE CLASS at Rockford continues to grow in attendance and enthusiasm. Our preaching service nearly every two weeks adds greatly to the spiritual advancement of the faithful little group here.

We have just organized a Junior Berean class which meets at the same time each Friday evening that the senior class meets. It is under the able leadership, temporarily, of Sister Verna Thayer. We expect to have a permanent teacher soon.

Seven boys and girls make up this junior class which, judging from the first meeting, promises to be a real, live, wide-awake addition to our work here.

TRAINING CHILDREN IN WORSHIP

In the religious education of children it becomes a pertinent problem as to just how we shall make worship available to them so that they may gain the development of character which worship alone can contribute. It is recognized that, in common with all mankind, children have a natural tendency toward worship. But this does not cancel our responsibility. The fact that children want and need to worship is no indication that they know how to worship. It is our task to provide children with a language through which they may express themselves in worship, a language which will express for them their ideals and aspirations—those things so difficult for them to put into words—and to provide them with a training which will meet their growing and developing needs and capacities.

JESUS TEACHING ABOUT HIMSELF

WHO IS JESUS? How do you answer that question? What did God say when Jesus was baptized? How does Jesus himself answer the question when two of John's disciples come to Him?

John had preached that One should come who would be very great. He had baptized Jesus, and yet he must have wondered if he had been mistaken. We wonder why John asked. Perhaps he expected Jesus to be a great King and have a showy court. Yet the things Jesus did were greater than any king could do, and John heard about these things as he waited in Herod's prison.

The two disciples of John said, "Art thou He that should come, or do we look for another?" Jesus answered by telling them to go and show John the things which they heard and saw. What were these things they saw? Blind people made to see; lame people to walk, lepers cured, the dead raised up, and the gospel preached. No one else could do such wonderful things. And Jesus could do these things because God gave Him power to do so.

Jesus really shows us what God must be like. He said, "No man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."

This is not easy to understand, but we believe these things because we have faith in God and in Jesus. And they taught the humble and lowly. Jesus said, "I am meek and lowly in heart." How many of us want to be meek and lowly?

Jesus is also kind, merciful—all that is good; and He is willing to help us when we sorrow or have trouble if we but let Him. His invitation was and is, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Could anything be more comforting? Will you accept His invitation?

"Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

THINK! Jesus is God's own Son, meek and lowly; using His power to help all.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn the Golden Text, Matthew 11:28.
2. Read Isaiah 61:1, 2—first thought. See it fulfilled in Luke 4:16-21.

3. Matthew 16:13-20; John 1:45-49; John 1:29.

CHARACTER BLOCK

REVERENT

Are you reverent concerning God's name, His house, His Word, His Son? Do you respect the things that belong to Him, and try to be careful with them? How often we hear people speak carelessly of the teachings of God, the Bible, taking God's name in vain, swearing, making fun of others who are trying to live a Christian life. Many use God's house for everything else but a place in which to worship. How few come to service with the truly reverent spirit of worship! Let us take heed!

Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us,
Footprints on the sands of Time.

Footprints that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er life's common main,
A forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall take heart again.

—Longfellow.

Who said: "And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds"?

NATURE FACT

6. Job refers in Job 30:13 to the wings of a peacock.
7. What tree does Hosea mention in speaking of the false judgments of Israel?

NIGHT AND DAY

When I run about all day,
When I kneel at night to pray,
God sees.

When I'm dreaming in the dark,
When I lie awake and hark,
God sees.

Need I ever know a fear?
Night and day my Father's near;
God sees.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 61:1-10

GOLDEN TEXT

Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matthew 11:28.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Our Lord's Testimony Concerning Himself.

Basic Truth. "I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true."—John 5:32.

Outline. I. The Testimony of Works. II. The Testimony of Prophets. III. The Testimony of His Own Words. IV. The Testimony of Prayer.

I. The Testimony of Works. From Christianity's first prisoner came the query to Jesus, "Who art thou?" The Savior did not presume to answer for himself. He gave no testimony in His own behalf. Instead, He cited the messengers to the works which they themselves had seen and heard. Throughout His life, the Savior's works stood out before the multitude for friend and foe. So evident were they of Him that at the close of His career it was necessary for His persecutors to hire false witnesses in accusation. His works testified so strongly for Him that none could truthfully deny Him.

II. The Testimony of the Prophets. The words of the prophets made more clear the works of Christ. It was not so much the fact of the miracles: the fact that the blind saw, or that the deaf heard, or the dead were raised, as it was the fact that those works were in strict accordance with prophetic utterances concerning them. The prophet Isaiah, 35:5, looking forward to the days of the Savior, speaks of the opening of the blind eyes, of deaf ears. In doing these works, the Savior fulfilled the prophetic testimonies. Had He performed ever so many miracles and omitted those that were predicted, He could not have claimed the testimony of the prophet. Isaiah 53:4, 5, distinctly tells that He bore our griefs and carried our sorrows. Citing the same scripture, Matthew, in 8:16, 17, reveals that Jesus in casting "out the spirits with his words" and healing "all that were sick", fulfilled Isaiah's prediction. Thus, the prophetic voice echoing across the centuries preceding, attested the accuracy of the Christ's life.

III. The Testimony of His Own Words. As in work, so in word, Jesus testified that He had been sent from the Father. In John 8:28 His word is, "When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." At John 5:30 He testified, "I speak not my own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." Again He says, John 3:11, "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness." Again, as testifying directly of His own activities, it is recorded in Matt. 8:16, 17, "He cast out the spirits with his words, and healed all the sick: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet." Thus, through all His life, through all His activities, the Savior's words testified of His works, to the end that those about Him might come to realize that He was the One of whom the voice from heaven spake saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."—Matt. 3:17.

IV. The Testimony of Prayer. In His prayers our Savior recognized God as Father and as Doer of all things. The Father's answers to the Savior's prayers furnished the strongest testimony regarding Jesus. The Creator of all things, in complying with the voice of His Son, assures every observer of the Son's claims and standing. See Matt. 11:25-27; John 11:41, 42; 17:1-26, and others.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Master of the Organ. Who has not sat in the home and heard from the lips of the radio, or better still sat in the auditorium and listened to awe-inspiring strains rolling forth from a great organ? Silent as the rock of ages stood that organ in all its massiveness without vibrant tone or pleading voice until the master sat before it. Nor even then could one imagine the contents, the possibilities, till with deft touch the master began with hand and foot to intelligently manipulate its mechanism. A thousand faces were cheered, were calmed, were brought to tears or praise by the symphony and harmony revealed. Not a word did the master say, not a look met the eyes of the people! His every attention was upon the instrument before him; his every thought upon the operation; his every hope upon the results brought forth. The work was finished, the great organ closed its voice. Spontaneously a thousand throats and a thousand pairs of hands acclaimed the master of the organ. He testified, not by word, not by glance, but by work well done, by service to the people.

So, too, did our Master. With great multitudes before Him of lame and halt and crooked, of palsied and blind and deaf, of sick and dying and dead, the Savior touched them with His hands of mighty power and with His voice of tender love brought them forth to health and strength and sight and hearing and life. "Glory to God!" was shouted forth by the united voice of the multitudes. Jesus testified of himself, not by words of self-praise, but by works.

That same Jesus still lives. He is still anxious that sin-sick man will approach to the touch of His redeeming hand.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Anointing of Jesus.

Jesus is the Christ, that is, God has anointed Him to be the King of Israel. The purpose of this anointing to kingship is stated by Jesus when He applies Isa. 61:1, 2 to himself—"The Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek, to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

The rest of Isa. 61 reveals the further purpose of Jesus' mission to Israel as a nation, which is summed up in verse 11—"For as the earth bringeth forth her bud . . . so the Lord God will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all nations."

The purpose for which God has anointed Jesus to kingship over Israel gives His kingship a unique meaning. Man's viewpoint of kingship is stated by Jesus, in Mark 10:42, to be that of exercising lordship and authority over the ruled ones. In direct contrast to this, the purpose of Jesus kingship is the salvation of the ones ruled over, through the ministry of teaching, of healing, of freeing and of comforting.

It was to work in His chosen ones this change in their viewpoint of kingship that Jesus brought His kingdom at hand by His preaching and works.—A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Who Jesus Was.

We have learned during this quarter of the birth of Jesus; His growth from youth into manhood; His entering into His life work, that of proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom. His fame spread rapidly abroad. People brought unto Him the sick and afflicted that He might heal them. The common people heard Him gladly.

As news of Him began to reach from one to another, they asked each other who He was. They knew no ordinary mortal could do the things that He had done. Sometimes they came to Him with the question. One day He said to Peter, "Whom say men that I am?" What was Peter's answer? Matt. 16:13-20. What was Nathanael's testimony of Him? John 1:45-49. What did John call Him? John 1:29. What did He say of himself? knew himself to be the Son of God? Isa. 9:6, 7 and 61:1-4 give us a glimpse of His mission to the world. He was the Friend of sinners, the Healer of diseases, the Preacher of righteousness, the Worker of miracles, the King of the Jews, the Savior of the world because He was the Son of God.

Let us honor Him above all others.—M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Recent word from the home of Sr. Brewer of Byron Center, Michigan, stated that she was lying very low. She had taken no nourishment for two or three days.

Bro. F. A. Stilson notified the office a few days ago that he had accepted a request to supply in the South Bend schools for the balance of the school year. We take it that he is engaged again in the position which he resigned when he entered the office of the National Bible Institution, if not the same position, one similar to it. We are glad with him for this opening.

BOARD MEETING

By request of the Secretary, the President, Bro. Marsh, called a meeting of the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution to convene at its office, February 11. It was known that Bro. Marsh could not be present. Bro. Stilson was unable to leave a new position which he had just accepted. Present: Bro. Randall from Grand Rapids, Bro. Siple from Dixon, and the Secretary. The entire activity of the National Bible Institution was carefully reviewed. The work done during the past fall on advice of the members of the Board was considered, the financial management was checked. The visiting members of the Board approved of the activity in each phase of the work and directed the Executive to continue the program along the lines being followed. It was specially observed that Mr. Moore, who on October 1st, was engaged as grower at the Greenhouse, had made an apparent substantial improvement throughout the houses. No changes were made in the program of the year.

BRO. GORDON REPORTS Niagara Falls, New York

Sr. D. W. Brown has been on the sick list for the past three or four weeks. On Sunday evening, February 9, she was taken to the Memorial Hospital to undergo a surgical operation the next morning. Latest word received was that she had recovered from the anesthetic. We pray that God will soon restore her to good health.

We were very much pleased with the increased attendance at church services on Sunday, last, February 9.

The Berean class held its annual business meeting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lent on the night of January 31, when new officers were elected. We have a membership of sixteen and have been quite an active class. The next meeting will be held at the home of Sr. Elsie Moore. A scramble supper is scheduled for that time, as it is the social evening which is a monthly event.

Sr. Emms was on the sick list for a few days last week, but is much improved at last report.

Fonthill, Ontario

Sr. T. A. Weldon has gone to Toronto to spend a month or so. Bro. and Sr. Weldon will be greatly missed from church services as their seat is seldom vacant.

The Bereans had their lesson and social evening at the home of Sr. Railton on Tuesday, February 3. There were twenty-four present; several visitors were among the number.

The daughters of the late Bro. and Sr. Summers have presented the church with three nice oak chairs with leather upholstery for the pulpit. The gift was made as a memorial to their parents who were faithful members of the Fonthill church. A Memorial and Dedication service will be held some time later when the ladies return from Florida where they are spending the winter.

OFFERINGS

We have been receiving during the past few weeks some miscellaneous offerings besides the regular monthly contributions of some of our loyal brethren. Aunt Mary Renner sends in another "Thank Offering" of $5.00; Norman John McLeod, a contribution to the General Fund, $20.00; Sr. E. C. Railsback, $100.00 for use in the Training Class work, and F. E. Siple, $50.00 for the General Fund.

To all these, as well as to those who are as regular as the calendar in their offerings, we wish to express our gratitude. May the Father abundantly bless all.

GOLDEN RULE CLASS NEWS Kokomo, Indiana

The Golden Rule Class of the Church of God at Kokomo held its annual election of officers, Sunday, February 9, after the Sunday School service. A revised constitution was adopted. Officers for the year are: President, Robert Harvey; Vice-President, Laurence Carpenter; Secretary, Helen Gray; Assistant Secretary, Mamie Gray; Treasurer, Kathryn Gray. Committees: Welfare, Lawrence Carpenter, Alice Benje, Ladema Ward, Chas. Martin; Social, Chas. Martin, Elsie Martin, Mary Whitticker. Class Teacher, D. G. Harvey was retained.

The Golden Rule Class (Senior) of the Kokomo Sunday School was organized on April 17, 1929, under the leadership of Sr. Vada Harvey, with eight members. D. G. Harvey was chosen as teacher. During the past year the class has grown to a membership of twenty-six with attendance from twelve to nineteen at Sunday School.

We have also organized a Berean Class for night study which meets the second and fourth Sundays of each month at 7:30 p. m., when we have no church service. Much interest is displayed by the young people. We are glad to report the baptism of one of our number, Bro. Chas. Martin, on January 5, of this year. Edgar Harvey.

HOME MEETING IN CHICAGO

Bro. F. E. Siple expects to be with the Chicago congregation on Sunday, February 23. This service will be held at the home of Sr. Mae Borneman, 625 N. Long Ave., at 10:30 a. m. All those who find it possible are urged to be present.

NEBRASKA NOTES

Sr. Lucille LeCrone will speak in the morning and afternoon of the fourth Sunday of this month at the Blair church.

The Willing Workers of Kennard sent a box of clothing to Sr. Sanford to be used in charity work.

The different religious orders of Moorefield have united in order to be able to carry on. The prospects for work there are fine.

NORTHWEST QUARTERLY MEETING

The Quarterly Meeting of the Northwest Conference will be held at Felida on March 1 and 2.

All come who can and enjoy these good services. Ethel McIrvin, Ass't Sec'y.

WAYSIDE NOTES

At Kewanee, Illinois, on February 7, we found Sr. Phyllis Wood improved but still unable to sit up. She has appreciated very deeply the many cards and letters sent. We trust she will soon be up and going.

Services were held that night at the Howell home and a splendid audience was present.

Ripley, which is a small, inland village with three churches, was having lots of religious activity on our recent trip there. Evangelistic campaigns were in progress at the Methodist and Christian churches, but in spite of this and the further fact that roads were none too good our services were well attended on Saturday night and Sunday.

Bro. and Sr. Lewis Ralston and family have moved into the Ripley neighborhood and it is good to have them where they can cooperate with all the services.

Our Dixon Berean Society has been reorganized this winter, and is doing splendid work. We have both Junior and Senior departments among the young folks, and also on Wednesday nights the adults have a Bible class taught by the pastor. This class is studying the book of First Corinthians.

F. E. Siple.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Several of our members have been on the sick list the past fortnight, but generally speaking the members of the congregation are quite well at this writing.

The Sunday School officers and teachers gave a banquet in the church basement, Friday evening, February 7, and each one invited an adult that was not a regular attendant at Sunday School. The purpose of the gathering was to interest more adults in Sunday School work. The effort was well worth while.

The Dorcas Society gave a Valentine party for its members last Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Van Portfleet. The event was well attended and will stand out as one of our most successful social gatherings of the year.

If there are any of our church members over the country who are considering a change of residence we would like to have you think of Grand Rapids, especially so, if you are contemplating to move where there is no church of ours. We invite communications in regard to locating here. Simply send a note of inquiry to the pastor at 3734 Keyes Ave., S. E., Rt. 11, Grand Rapids.

C. C. CRONBAUGH

C. C. Cronbaugh was the fourth son of John and Sarah Noaker Cronbaugh, and was born at Coldwater, Mich., Oct. 14, 1845. When he was nine years of age his parents emigrated with their seven sons to Iowa, settling in Honey Creek Township, Iowa County, where they experienced all the hardships of pioneer life, and helped to make the Koszta community the flourishing community it is at the present time. Educationally, the sons in the family had only such meager advantages as were afforded by the primitive rural schools that were later provided by the settlers, but he availed himself of that which, united with an aggressive and ambitious character, made him a self-educated man. He came to take an active interest in community and political affairs, and in later life was elected to the State Legislature, serving in the thirty-fifth General Assembly in 1913.

He was married to Miss Mary C. Norton, Dec. 23, 1877, and to them four children were born, Bertha, who died in infancy; Mrs. Lanie Mabel Kiger, Albert R., and Clifford C., all of Iowa County.

They lived at the old farm until twenty years ago when they retired to Marengo where the couple lived till the end of life, Mrs. Cronbaugh having died on April 14, 1928.

Mr. Cronbaugh was a member of the Church of God for many years of his later life, and kept his faith to the end. He was a man of very firm convictions, religiously, as well as politically, and was open in his avowal of all his principles, and a very strong advocate of any cause he espoused. He was a friend of the common people, and his strong friendship for everybody he knew made him very popular. He recently said that he knew every man in Iowa County. He will, therefore, be greatly and widely missed from his accustomed place. He was the last survivor of his generation of immediate relatives, his six brothers having all gone to their rest before him.

He leaves his three children, thirteen grandchildren, one great-grandchild and a very large circle of relatives of his own name and others, with his many friends, to miss and mourn his departure.

Burial was made at the Koszta Cemetery, after services in the Presbyterian Church at Marengo, by the writer.

J. W. Williams.

PALESTINE

O sacred land! o'er vale and hill
Sweet voices seem to echo still;
Thy mountains rise, thy rivers flow,
Replete with tales of long ago;
And o'er the outline of thy seas,
The waves, tossed by the passing breeze,
Perchance this moment, as of yore,
Break with sweet music on the shore.

Here was the Savior's humble birth;
And, in His ministry on earth,
He trod on foot from place to place,
The sick to heal, the poor to bless.
And never tale of other land,
Nor fiction strange, nor poet grand,
Can move the hearts of young or old
Like that sweet story simply told.

Arab and Turk, each babbling tongue
Of rude barbarian, Gentile throng,
Know little of the dust they tread,
That round them lie the mighty dead.
For many a patriarch, many a seer,
Hold still their silent resting here,
And wait the illustrious day that brings
The coming of the King of kings.

EDITORIAL

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. He will not suffer thy feet to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber."—Psalm 121:1-3.

CHRISTIANITY

CHRISTIANITY IS MANY-SIDED. One of its first and most important phases is the conversion of the individual from the sinfulness and lustfulness of the Adamic nature into the righteousness and spirituality of the nature of the risen Christ. This, perhaps, is its most important phase. It has to do with the present. That conversion must take place in the growing and maturing of the individual. It is far more than a claim made by mere outward appearance or word of mouth. It consists of a real, definite, positive, actual, devotion of the intents and purposes of one's life to the discovery of the mind of Christ and to the consecration of one's whole being to the adoption of that mind.

A second phase of Christianity points the Christian forward to the ultimate ends and realizations afforded by God. It points him forward to the second coming of Christ, to the immortalization of both dead and living Christians, to the change that is assured those who shall be fashioned like unto the glorious body of our Lord. But this phase can only be the fruitage of the first above mentioned.

Another phase of Christianity places the whole Christian system in contrast with the world system of our day. In a sense Christianity is seen and recognized by this contrast. In a sense Christian problems are similarly in contrast with world problems, therefore in a sense it becomes more or less edifying and necessary for the Christian to give frequent consideration to world affairs.

THE WORLD OF TODAY

BECAUSE OF THE FACT that scriptural prophecy instructs that the world as organized and operated by man following his carnal reasonings and senses, is to come to an end and that the world will yet come to be an activity, organized under the direction of Christ, it therefore comes to be most advantageous to the Christian to occasionally review the world from the view point of worldly attainment and condition. This is not with any thought of pessimistically pointing out the discrepancies and errors present, but wholly with a view of diagnosing the body politic and social from the standpoint of its relation to God's plans and purposes.

With a view to this end it is desired to bring to the attention of Herald readers some of the results of the studies of George Sylvester Viereck, an article from whom is found in the Saturday Evening Post of February 8th. Mr. Viereck writes after having visited many of the capitals of Europe and America, after having interviewed numbers of the leading men of position in these various centers, after having gathered data from different annual almanacs and other volumes which treat of the questions under consideration.

Writing from the point of view of the military condition of the world today, this writer for the Saturday Evening Post, first takes up the national indebtedness of different nations only to find that on the whole the indebtedness occasioned by militarism is very far in excess of what it has ever been. Speaking of England, he tells us that interest on the public debt of that nation "absorbs 60% . . . of the entire budget of England". That is to say, the public debt, much more than half of which was occasioned by militarism, requires more than half of all that is annually expended by the government just for interest payment only. Referring to France, he says that like interest requires 39% of her budget.

Discussing some of these military facts with a personal friend who is active in the League of Nations, this writer in answer to a question whether there had really been no reduction in armaments, received from this military friend this reply, "Figures speak for themselves." Then after speaking further this diplomatic friend is said to have added, "In this case they lie by creating undue optimism. Nearly every country secrets expenses for military purposes under deceptive headings."

The lesson intended to be learned from this is that the vast figures that are published to the world are the figures that are left after various prunings and trimmings and deductions have been made so as to present figures for only such phases of militarism as cannot possibly be charged to other bureaus of activity. This truth is explained in the words, "These statistics published in the military annual of the League of Nations may tell the truth. But it is not the whole truth." Then follows the explanation as to why it did not reveal the whole truth and as to why it is practically impossible for figures to reveal all of the truth. Compared with the national incomes of the various nations, the conversation between the writer of the Saturday Evening Post and his diplomatic friend brought out statements to this effect; namely, that Belgium today spends 7.81% of her income on her present military activity. Albania spends approximately 36.6%, Bulgaria, 16.7%. The percentages for other nations outside the rank of first class nations are given. Coming to France, she "admittedly appropriates 28.9% of her budget to maintain military supremacy." Turkey "devotes 40% of her budget to resuscitate the military prestige of her caliphs." After finishing the last above figures, the diplomatic friend of the writer is quoted as continuing, "These percentages tell the story more completely than any attempt to state the actual figures, which, being based upon fluctuating currencies and changing price indexes, are necessarily always misleading."

The world of today is overloaded with indebtedness and with current financial obligations necessitated by past military activity and by prospects of future necessity. In every nation feverish preparation to keep abreast of the progressive development of other nations is taxing the minds of the best statesmen and taxing the exchequers of all. Continuing, this Philadelphia magazine makes the statement, "I hope that the negotiations initiated by President Hoover and Ramsay Mac Donald will lead to a general limitation of armaments. It is possible that even an understanding on the sea may lead to an understanding on land. But if no agreement is reached for the limitation of navalism, militarism will run riot on the Continent. If the Five Power Parley fails, Europe will continue to arm with feverish speed on land and sea for the next war."

Many figures and statistics are given in the dozen columns which this article fills, and which the readers of THE HERALD should read in full. The writer includes a lengthy statement as to the rapidly growing Red Army of the Near and Far East. He refers to this ever increasing army as like unto a plague of locusts rising up over the land.

Further space will not be taken to refer to the world of today, excepting to call the attention of Christians to the fact that the prophecy of our Savior, of Daniel, of Paul, of John in the Revelation, and of others, to the certainty of a political convulsion that shall take place in the period of the end of this dispensation, is, in spite of every earnest and diligent effort of most honest statesmen, surging forward in preparation. God's Word regarding these things should be relied upon more than all the combined words of humanitarian statesmen to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Our world of today is nearing its finis. It will be replaced by the world of tomorrow under the leadership of God's Son, appointed to that great and glorious work. The Christian should profit much by the facts that are developing ever more rapidly. His faith should become ever deeper; his hopes should become increasingly brighter; his consecration to his Master should become ever more complete and permanent.

ISRAEL'S NEW TRAGEDY

By E. C. Chalmers

BRITAIN'S PLACE IN EZEKIEL 38

THE CLEAR WORDS of prophecy show Britain in Palestine when the great Russo-Teutonic-Mongolian invasion takes place, Ezekiel 38:13—"Sheba, and Dedan,"—tribes of Arabia; so that the Arabs will then be again allies of Britain—"and the merchants of Tarshish"—a modern maritime power, Britain—"with all the young lions thereof"—colonies of Britain, her far-flung empire; note the British lion symbol, joined with her sea power over 2,500 years ago—"shall say unto thee,"—to Russia's prince—"Art thou come to take a spoil?"

What complications may grow out of the present situation only the future will reveal. Back of the turmoil in the Holy Land greedy nations are sitting on their haunches waiting to seize the potential riches of Palestine. Jewish wealth in the future will tempt these nations. Then will come the great war of Armageddon. British Empire and the antichrist against Russia and her Czar, the fall of earth's armies, and the final release of Israel from Gentile oppression.

It is gladly granted that the Zionist movement has made great success on worldly lines in Palestine. The work of reclamation and rebuilding has been finely done. The foundation for a real peasant life, the strength of a nation, has been solidly laid. Broad steps toward national culture have been firmly taken. The language of a noble people is already formed and growing on their tongues.

But the solid spiritual basis of enduring individual and national life is lacking. Zionism seeks to go on without God. This is the supreme cause of Israel's troubles in Palestine and elsewhere. Neglect of God and rejection of the Lord Jesus have laid the people open to their foes. Reform Judaism and modern science had driven great crowds of Jews to unbelief in the Scriptures and to atheism. Out of the ranks of such men came many Zionist leaders. The new philosophy of Zionism, propounded by Moses Hess and others in the mid-nineteenth century, formed men willing to undertake the rebuilding of a nation by themselves without seeking help from God. From such an atmosphere Zionism emerged to lift a proud face to the world and lead Israel's oppressed to Palestine.

To sense the spirit of great multitudes of Jews today, one needs only to quote from an article on Egypt in The New Palestine of June 3, 1929, by Louis Golding, a brilliant English Jewish writer:

"Here is Egypt, whither Joseph was sold by the Ishmaelites. Here was the first ghetto, the first Golus ("exile"). For a time things went well, as they went well for a time in Spain and Germany and America. But the rancor came and the fury, because there were people whose blood and whose eyes were alive. And God delivered them. But He has thought fit that now they should deliver themselves.

AGAINST A THORN

Once I heard a song of sweetness,
 As it cleft the morning air,
 Sounding in its blest completeness,
 Like a tender, pleading prayer;
 And I sought to find the singer,
 Whence the wondrous song was borne
 And I found a bird, sore wounded,
 Pinioned by a cruel thorn.

I have seen a soul in sadness,
 While its wings with pain were furl'd,
 Giving hope, and cheer and gladness
 That should bless a weeping world;
 And I knew that life of sweetness,
 Was of pain and sorrow borne,
 And a stricken soul was singing,
 With its heart against a thorn.

Ye are told of One who loved you,
 Of a Savior crucified;
 Ye are told of nails that pinioned,
 And a spear that pierced His side;
 Ye are told of cruel scourging,
 Of a Savior bearing scorn,
 And He died for your salvation,
 With His brow against a thorn.

Ye "are not above the Master."
 Will you breathe a sweet refrain?
 And His Grace will be sufficient
 When your heart is pierced with pain.
 Will you live to bless His loved ones,
 Though your life be bruised and torn,
 Like the bird that sang so sweetly,
 With its heart against a thorn?

THE BOOK OF JOB

By Lyman Booth

IT CANNOT BE CLEARLY SHOWN that this book contains any prophecies, properly speaking, for those passages which might be mentioned as prophetic may also be classed as a profession of faith in the promised Redeemer, and a future resurrection (19:25 and 14:14). The book opens with an account of Job's piety and prosperity, the charge of hypocrisy and selfishness which the adversary lodged against him, and permission to reduce Job to the deepest distress as a trial of his integrity. It relates how his former friends who witnessed his misery were led to condemn him as a wicked man.

This charge gave rise to a heated controversy, to which I have previously referred, as to whether or not heavy afflictions prove one to be pious or hypocritical. In an effort to prove this point, it was argued by all parties with much earnestness; and many excellent things were said, but in it all there was a sad mixture of human infirmity. When they failed to arrive at an agreement upon the subject, Elihu, who had been a patient listener, modestly and solemnly interfered. First he censured the disputants for condemning Job without just cause. He also reproved Job for his eagerness to justify himself, for by doing so he reflected, unthoughtedly, upon God's justice. While he was thus addressing Job the Lord himself spoke out of a whirlwind who, by a manifestation of His majesty and glory, made Job conscious of the fact that his presumption was wrong, and thereby caused him to humble himself as a polluted sinner. This accomplished, the Lord then justified Job of the charge of hypocrisy, and also condemned the language and conduct of his friends. After deciding the controversy favorable to Job, the Lord appointed him to sacrifice and intercede in his friends' behalf that they might be forgiven.

While there are various opinions as to the origin of this book, Jewish tradition ascribes it to the patriarchal age and regards it as based upon reliable, historical incidents. Others of a later date claim it is a parable or a philosophical fiction. Modern critics of different schools agree in the view that it is a theological discussion of very high merit and that it is founded upon an historical basis. One of the peculiar things about the book is that we do not find in all of its forty-two chapters a single reference to the history of Israel. It is claimed there are references to Adam and the fall (chapters 31 and 33), but none to any subsequent event recorded in the Scriptures unless we except 20:23, which may have slight resemblance to the punishment connected with supplying quails in the desert.

It is claimed by some eminent writers that modern research furnishes some light on the subject. First, the Assyrian tablets bear witness to astronomical knowledge in the cities in the Euphrates valley as far advanced as those mentioned in the book of Job, perhaps as early as B. C. 3000. Second, Assyrian monuments prove that nomadic tribes made numerous invasions at as early a period. Third, the animals and monsters, except the leviathan, which Job employed as illustrations, are precisely like those found on Babylonian monuments, but the Jews of Palestine were not familiar with them. Behemoth and Leviathan, the hippopotamus and crocodile, though both were natives of Egypt, would, most likely, be known to Arabia Petraea, whose mines were worked by Egyptian labor two thousand years before the exodus. Some may think this is going back to a date too near the days of creation. I merely give them as the opinion of some very eminent writers and critics and the reader may judge for himself as to their correctness.

Further we find names and customs in the book which point to the patriarchal age, but not in its earliest stage, since many offices which are here appointed to servants, formerly were held by children of the family. The language is more nearly like the Arabic than that of any Hebrew work, and the book contains many Chaldaisms which were used in an early style of literature of a very remote period, recalling the oldest portions of the Pentateuch, the Psalms, the Proverbs, and the Song of Deborah. If we compare it with some of the compositions of Moses (Ex. 15; Deut. 22) we will find them identical in phraseology. Hence some favor the supposition that Moses wrote the book, or else he found the original during his forty years residence in Midian, to which he may have added the introductory and closing portions and left it in its present form. However correct that opinion may be, those portions bear much stronger resemblance to the Pentateuch than to any other writings. They breathe the same spirit and seem to belong to the same period as the rest of the book, the main difference being that Job is more poetical.

As regards its antiquity, most modern critics are almost unanimous in putting forth the view that the poetical part of the book, except Elihu's speech, is the work of one author, though they differ about the prose portions. Upon the whole we deem it wise to leave it as an unsettled question, and study the book as it is. It may be analyzed as follows: first, the introduction (1:2) consists of a narrative in prose, giving the cause and extent of Job's sufferings, and his patient endurance of them.

Second, the dialogue between Job and his would-be comforters, given in poetical style, the theme of which is the cause of human suffering. His friends affirm it to be sin, and exhort him to repentance. Job vehemently denies the allegation, appeals to facts, and resents the unkindness of his friends. Job's complaint is followed by speeches of Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar and are successively answered by Job (chapters 4 to 14). Each of the three friends makes a second speech and Job replies to them (15 to 21), followed by a speech by Eliphaz and Bildad with Job's answer to each (22 to 31). Zophar remains silent. Probably they were not familiar with the proverb (Proverbs 15:1) which says, "A soft answer turneth away wrath; but grievous words stir up anger," a saying well worth remembering by all, at all times.

Third, the argument of Elihu that sufferings are remedial and for the good of the one afflicted which was followed by a reproof to Job for his self-justification, and a seeming defiance of God's government, with a glowing description of His wonderful works in the world of nature (32 to 37).

Fourth, an address of the Almighty himself out of the whirlwind by which He revealed His power and wisdom, concluding with Job's most humble confession and penitence (37 to 42:6).

Fifth, a prose conclusion describing the close of Job's life in peace and prosperity (42:7-17). Be it remembered, that Ezekiel (14:14) and James (5:1) speak of Job as a real person and they class him with other holy men.

In my younger years I admired the book for the purity of its expressions; but now I see more than the beauty of its language. To those who are tempted and sorely tried and afflicted there is in it a lesson of caution and encouragement. It sheds a halo of light upon the wisdom and power of God; it furnishes an eminent type of the extreme sufferings of a crucified and glorified Savior. It furnishes a pattern for the Christian while "passing through much tribulation", as he progresses on his pilgrimage toward the kingdom of God, and it is full of important instruction.

The dialogue between Job and his three friends provides an impressive lesson for those who are given to acrimonious disputes upon religious doctrines and shows the ill effects of such heated contentions. Those four men seemingly forgot their piety and argued till they became angry. Each censured and condemned the other, saying things that were irreverent. They lost their temper, and for the time, their better judgment, and their efforts to arrive at a settlement would have proven futile had not the Lord intervened with a much better method for deciding the controversy. I have witnessed similar scenes where men were more at variance at the end of an argument than at the beginning.

THE HOLY SPIRIT

By Jas. A. Patrick

IN THE JANUARY fourteenth issue of THE HERALD, Bro. Austin gave us a good article on "Studying to Divide the Word". Before receiving that article I had blocked out the following, and although Bro. Austin has stolen a good deal of my thunder, I will send the article along anyway, hoping that it may do some good.

Is the Holy Spirit a person? Most of the professing world would answer, "Yes"; and would call you pagan or atheist if you denied it. What is the truth of the matter?

To be sure the personal pronouns are used in the Authorized Version in speaking of the Holy Spirit, and for that reason people contend very strongly that the Holy Spirit is a person. But in the Emphatic Diaglott in John 14 where the personal pronoun is applied to the Holy Spirit, these pronouns are translated "it", and the 17th verse in the Diaglott reads, "The Spirit of Truth, which the world cannot receive, because it beholds it not, nor knows it; but you know it; because it abides with you, and will be in you." It sounds more reasonable to say, "it (the power of God) will be in you", than to say, "He (personal Holy Spirit) will be in you," doesn't it? How could a personal Holy Spirit be in the disciples?

The angel's words to Mary, Luke 1:35, present a difficulty if we say the Holy Spirit is a person. When Mary was told she should have a son, she asked, "How shall this be, seeing I know not a man." The angel answered, "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." "That holy thing" couldn't have been called the Son of God, if the Holy Spirit is a person. Would not that "holy thing" have been the Son of the Holy Spirit, if the Holy Spirit is a person?

ISRAEL'S NEW TRAGEDY

It is better so. A drained swamp is more meritorious than a pillar of cloud by day and fire by night. To eat the bread sown by your hands, and reaped by your hands, and ground into flour by you, and baked in the oven you yourself have constructed, is nobler than to get down upon your knees to eat a dish of ready-made manna."

A FORETASTE OF ANTICHRIST'S REIGN

What a commentary on such belittling of the divine providence that in three months thousands of Zionist Jews in Palestine had to eat the manna of that providence sent them from beyond the seas!

This riot of mad passion in Palestine is not the beginning of Israel's final sorrow. That lies in the future. But it is a kind of rehearsal of what the Jews will experience under the Antichrist and it is a warning against that awful day. The student of Israel's disobedience to God and of God's way of subduing Israel to himself finds certain fearful Scriptures that depict the terrible agony to restored Zion of the coming struggle of the nations over Israel and Israel's land. In addition to the persecution by the Antichrist, described in Jeremiah 30:7; Daniel 12:1; Matthew 24:21, and other passages, prophecy records beforehand an invasion of Palestine by a mighty alliance of powers from the north and east (Ezek. 38). The resulting conflict between this combination and the forces under the Antichrist will make of Palestine a house of slaughter and of Jerusalem a refining furnace for the Zionist Jews.

What the Jews in the land will endure is told in Zechariah 13:8, 9. It is of deep significance that this passage follows the prediction in verse 7 of the death of the Shepherd Messiah, clearly described as a man and as Jehovah's equal. Connected with that death as moral consequence is the scattering of the guilty nation and the protection of Christ's disciples, the "little ones". The doom of two-thirds of restored Israel is seen in verse eight, cut off by war, famine, and pestilence: "And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the Lord, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein." That there will be famine in the land is clear when one realizes that the invading armies will consume all the fruits of the field. Also God foretells in Ezekiel 22:24, "Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation." That day of indignation is the time of the Great Tribulation, when the two witnesses of Revelation eleven prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, during which they "have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy." These years of no rain will bring intense famine on the land.

What becomes of that third part of Palestine Jewry left in the land? Verse nine of Zechariah thirteen tells the terrible story: "And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, The Lord is my God."

What is the furnace? One must go to Ezekiel 22:17-22 for the agonizing story: "Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become dross (rust): all they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the furnace; they are even the dross of silver. Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem. As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in my anger and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you."

Can anything be more terrible? Jerusalem is the furnace; Israel is the gold and the silver; Jehovah is the smith who himself blows on the fire to melt out of the gold and silver the dross, the pride, and the unbelief and bitterness of Israel toward their Lord Jesus Christ. If any milder means would do the work, God would use them. But nothing less will serve the purpose of Jehovah. How He pities His people! How gladly would He save them by love and pity. But they will not hear. Therefore the refiner's fire and fuller's soap.

The riots are a rehearsal indeed. The sudden attacks, the savage brutality, the slashing of children, cutting off fingers and hands, the ravishing of women, the looting, the burning of homes, — all is there, as so vividly set forth in Zechariah fourteen. Oh, that the Jews would see and humbly bow to the Lord their God!

As the furnace fires approach their fiercest intensity the agonized remnant in Jerusalem cries out in the words of Isaiah 64:1, "Oh, that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence, as when the melting fire burneth, the fire causeth the waters to boil, to make thy name known to thine adversaries, that the nations may tremble at thy presence"! Then he answers their cry, as in Zechariah 14:3, 4, "Then shall the Lord go forth, and fight against those nations as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley" (for the escape of the beleaguered people, as the next verse shows). Revelation 19:11 reveals the heavens opened and a glorious Rider on a white horse coming forth for vengeance and deliverance. At this time shall Zechariah 12:10 be fulfilled, "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him." This marks the conversion of the nucleus of the Jewish nation at Jerusalem. This conversion is recorded in Revelation 11:13, "And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven."

Thus ends the age-long unbelief and the rebellion of Israel. The remnant of Israel still among the nations turns in humble repentance to their mighty Redeemer and He leads them to their own land.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

TAKE HEED HOW YE HEAR

THE LORD KNOWETH THEM THAT ARE HIS
Sunday, March 2 — 2 Timothy 2:15-26.

"So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." — Romans 10:17.

ONE'S WHOLE STANDING before God is dependent upon the way in which he hears. To listen to God speak, to hear His words as God would have them to be heard, to rightly divide that word, is for one to commit his life most closely to God. One's hearing determines his line of thought. In proportion as he gives heed to the things of right, the things of God, in that proportion does he direct his life after the life of our Savior. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he," is the statement of the wise man in Proverbs 23:7. The Lord knoweth them that are His.

LET HIM HEAR

Monday, March 3 — Matthew 13:1-9.

"Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." — V. 9.

It has been claimed by some that where there is no listening ear there is no sound. It is probably unquestioned that where there is no comprehending ear there is no instruction. Jesus taught an important lesson in the parable. Like all of Christ's lessons and like all of the lessons of God, this lesson was important to man only as man had ears which he used for hearing. True, the apostles who had such ears failed to understand the lesson, but Jesus, because of the fact that their ears were voluntarily turned toward Him, revealed to them the lesson in the parable of the sower. And so also today, he who turns his ears anxiously toward the voice of the God of heaven will have them filled with the lessons of God.

THE LESSON TAUGHT

Tuesday, March 4 — Matthew 13:18-23.

"Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower." — V. 18.

Jesus turns to those who had ears to hear and reveals to them the thing which He would have them hear. He classifies people into four groups: those who hear the sound but entirely ignore the meaning; those who hear and gather momentarily the meaning but who are wholly unheeding; those who hear and heed the meaning temporarily but submerge all higher truth for gratification of the person; and those who hear and apply themselves to the things heard, molding and shapening themselves into harmony therewith. Only the latter take heed how they hear.

THE PERIL OF PREOCCUPATION

Wednesday, March 5 — Luke 21:29-36.

"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is at hand."
— V. 31.

Jesus had given the parable of the fig tree. The truth proclaimed thereby is that when the tree shoots forth its buds one knows that spring and summer are near at hand. The same truth applies to the oncoming of the greater seasons of God, that is, the season of the coming age. There are certain conditions of life that will manifest themselves as visibly and as positively as do the conditions of the tree manifest the oncoming of spring. The trees declare with emphatic voice that summer is nigh. The signs of the times of our day are declaring in unmistakable speech that the coming of the Lord is nigh and that soon the age of His rule will be ushered in. The lesson is clear, the voice is decisive: take heed how ye hear!

THE PERIL OF REFUSING TO HEAR

Thursday, March 6 — Zechariah 7:8-14.

"But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear." — V. 11.

The result of refusal upon the part of those whom God addressed through Zechariah is seen in vv. 13, 14. Because they "did not hear" therefore when they had fallen into their sorrows, God says, "And I did not hear." Rather, He "scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not." Nor was this, their end, any more severe or any more literal than will be the end of those who today purposely close their ears to the voice of God's instruction. God's voice is given that men may profit thereby. Man's ears are given that he may be able to receive the voice and to take heed to its instruction.

COUNTING THE COST

Friday, March 7 — Luke 14:25-35.

"For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient to finish it?" — V. 28.

God's Word indicates the way, it indicates also the goal at the end of the road. To travel the way outlined and to attain unto the goal presented requires continuous and persevering effort of the one who listens and heeds. Failure to count the cost is possibly one of the greatest of reasons for so many of man's failures. He who hears, understands, diligently sets himself to attain, is assured of the Father's constant watchcare, of the Savior's constant help, and of victory through Christ. It is he who does not consecrate himself to the task revealed by the instructing voice that fails most bitterly.

DELIGHT IN GOD'S COMMANDMENTS

Saturday, March 8 — Psalm 119:9-16.

"With my whole heart have I sought thee: O let me

JUST THIS MINUTE

This is the note which accompanied the following poem: "In The Herald of January fourteenth, the article, 'The Eternal Now,' by Bro. Marsh, is so full of meaning to the thoughtful mind that it prompted me to send you this little poem from my scrap book, entitled 'Just This Minute'. It is a fitting companion piece to 'The Eternal Now' and both should be kept in memory. Surely, we should be very thankful each minute, to the Giver of life for the length of days, and the mercies that each bring to us as they pass.—Lyman Booth."

If we're thoughtful just this minute
 In whate'er we say and do,
 If we put a purpose in it
 That is honest through and through,
 We shall gladden life and give it
 Grace to make it all sublime;
 For, though life is long, we live it
 Just a minute at a time.

Just this minute we are going
 Toward the right or toward the wrong;
 Just this minute we are sowing
 Seeds of sorrow or of song.
 Just this minute we are thinking
 On the ways that lead to God,
 Or in idle dreams are sinking
 To the level of the clod.

Yesterday is gone, tomorrow
 Never comes within our grasp;
 Just this minute's joy or sorrow,
 That is all our hands may clasp.
 Just this minute! Let us take it
 As a pearl of precious price,
 And with high endeavor make it
 Fit to shine in Paradise.

—Author Unknown.

GOOD NEWS

THE GOSPEL IS beautifully summarized in John three, sixteen, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not PERISH but have everlasting life." Everlasting life does not mean everlasting happiness; nor does perish mean misery or torment. Jesus does more than rescue sinners from misery. He gives them life. If deliverance from torment is all that salvation means, then Jesus is but the Lord of happiness, the happiness Giver. But, praise God, He is more! He is the Lord of life first and the Giver of happiness afterward, and without the first we could not get the second. It is thus that Orthodoxy, so-called, builds its house on sand, while Conditionalists (life believers) have laid their foundation on THE ROCK.—John Balfour.

A WEEKLY TALK

By C. E. Randall

A PRESENT DAY MESSAGE

SOME PEOPLE spend a goodly portion of their time in worrying about tomorrow and next week and in so doing make their lives more or less unprofitable and in many cases miserable. It is also possible to spend one's Christian life in the same manner, always thinking and studying about the future and what Christ is going to do with certain classes of people during given periods of time, neglecting the present and overlooking the marvelous work Christ is doing today. It is true that hope is produced by a knowledge of the future, but in bringing this hope to man, we must also build him a strong foundation upon which this hope can rest. Such a foundation comes from what may be termed, "A Present Day Message", that is, a message that reveals Christ in His work of TODAY.

In every generation that is past when man had sunk to a low level in sin and God sent a special messenger or group to such, He gave them a message peculiar to and adapted for the people of their day and time. It was in substance then a present day message. Noah was called to deliver a message of warning and repentance to the antedeluvians, and it concerned them and them alone. There isn't anything that would indicate that it pertained to the Sodomites or any other group of people that lived thereafter, other than in antitype.

Likewise was Moses: his message was one of deliverance for those needing deliverance, even the children of Israel. And the succeeding men that came as God's spokesmen delivered messages that concerned the people with whom they were working. Even the Christ came to His OWN people and His message was outstanding in its then present day character. He went about healing the sick and in various ways alleviating their sufferings and saying, "Repent ye for the kingdom of God is at hand."

It is human nature to want to peer into the future and view its many mysteries. This longing was shared by the prophets and righteous men of ages past. "For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye shall see and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them."—Matt. 13:17. Their work did not concern future generations but had to do with the needs of their fellow men.

Our task today centers around the men and women now living, easing their pains and bearing a PRESENT DAY message of salvation. When we can rise to the demands of the hour and supply the needs of suffering humanity and fill the void in the life of each individual with the Christ, then and only then will we be giving "meat in due season". There is sweet satisfaction in pondering over the joys of coming glory in the ages that are to follow, but how much more excellent is the life that finds happiness and enjoyment in LIVING AND DOING for Christ and humanity TODAY!

THE POWER OF THE WORD

By Samuel E. Haney

SO THEN FAITH COMETH BY HEARING, and hearing by the word of God." Romans 10:17. Other versions read, "by the word of Christ." But as Jesus explains, it is the Word of God, John 14:24, "He that loveth me not keepeth not my sayings: and the word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's which sent me." Hence Jesus' reprimand, Luke 6:46, "And why call me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" has a deeper and broader significance than is generally understood.

Jesus and His apostles (John 17:20) in delivering God's final message to death-doomed humanity delivered a recapitulation of the Old and New Testaments, written by men whose minds were functioned by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. So we see it is God's Word that we are considering; and to this end let us examine a few texts relative to His commandments and admonitions, and ascertain whether we are guilty of saying, "Lord, Lord", and not doing the things which God says through His Son and other divinely appointed channels.

But first, let us have Jesus in His proper setting in God's wonderful redemptive work, which might be symbolized by a wheel, Jesus the Hub, and to its center all the spokes—lesser Bible characters—pointing. "In the beginning was the Word (the Word of God, Rev. 19:13), and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. . . . And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father), full of grace and truth." John 1:1, 2, 14.

Few ever get beyond the kindergarten and nursery (milk) phase of following the Lord when they might partake of the "strong meat", (Heb. 5:14). The explanation is that insurmountable stumblingblock, that is, a severance from self-life (old man) and the power of darkness. This cowardly servile nightmare has been a barrier to many but never more so than now. The Word of God says, "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth". Jesus said, Matt. 10:34-38, "I come not to send peace, but a sword. . . . A man's foes shall be they of his own household". In a word, getting right with God automatically gets us wrong with the natural man (flesh), the world and the devil. This, like every other phase of following Christ, is where suffering for Christ and the gospel's sake begins, namely, "Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier."

But the Word of God shall yet prevail. Man will then discover his mistakes, and get his true status in God's sight; also the way of life and happiness. Isaiah tersely explains (55:8-12), "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are my ways your ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow, from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereunto I sent it. For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: and the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands." This is what the Word of God is going to accomplish for all the people; and there is no limit as to what His Word will do for us, now, if we do not allow the flesh, the devil, and the "things of this world" to close the channel of its ingress to our hearts.

In the first chapter of Genesis the expression, "And God said", is used eight times in the creation of the earth, including the air and water. Peter refers to it thus: "That by the word of God", these things were done. But the foregoing is puny compared with other results of the Word of God, for instance, the star Antares whose diameter is estimated to be 275,000,000 miles. God's voice (power) is also manifested in the lightning, a bolt being equal to approximately 25,000,000 horsepower, which causes man's achievement of electricity to appear like lightning bugs. O feeble man, listen to the Word of God, whether it be recognized in the Word, or in the elements, or by "a still small voice". "Bless the Lord, ye his angels, that excell in strength, that do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word", for He is our God; and we are the people of His pasture, and the sheep of His hand. "Today, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart," etc.

With all reverence, the writer knows but one way to do business with God, that is, with definite frankness, and but one way to get Truth and Life, namely, the Word of God which is centered in Jesus Christ, "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come", Col. 2:3; Eph. 1:21.

Jesus epitomizes His authority and power of the Word of God by saying, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved", Jesus the Word and the Power!

QUERIES TWENTY-SIX

HELPING THE TREASURER

THE FOLLOWING problem was contributed to Queries column by Mrs. Hugh Glover, of Colorado. Thank you, Sr. Glover.

How many dollars can we raise each month if each member pays one dollar? Determine from the following:

Subtract the number of days Moses was in Mt. Sinai from the age of Abraham when Isaac was born; multiply by the depth of the trench about the altar Elijah made. Divide this by the number of stones taken from Jordan by Israel; multiply by the number of daughters of Job. Add to this the number of elders John saw around the throne; divide by the number of Leah's sons. Multiply this by the number of times Peter denied Christ; multiply by the number of rows of stones in the breastplate of the priest; divide by the age of the daughter of Jairus. Add the number of days the flood was upon the earth; divide by the number of loaves they had to feed the four thousand and multiply by the number of years Azariah reigned.

ALSO A BIBLE STUDY

1. An Israelitish leader who conquered the host of Midian.
2. A cunning hunter.
3. A prophet, a native of Elkosh.
4. One whom the Lord refused for His anointed.
5. The wife of Zebedee.
6. The second son of Kohath.
7. The chief ruler of the synagogue at Corinth.

The initials and finals of the answers will give the names of two books of the Bible.

QUOTATION: Job to his friends, Job 5:7.

The following question was submitted by one of our Queries students and has been answered by a member of the Bible Training Class.

Did Judas Iscariot have part in the communion service?

It is announced in Matthew 26:21-25 that Judas would betray Jesus. In John 13:21-30 we have a record of the announcement of the betrayal which enlarges it and states that Judas left at once. Following the announcement, the communion service of the new covenant was instituted, Matthew 26:26-29. Therefore Judas was not present and could have had no part in the service.—Cecil Smead.

PLANTS OF THE BIBLE

By Verna C. Thayer

LILY OR IRIS

ONLY ONE TRUE LILY, the scarlet martagon, is now found in Palestine. Various species of gladiolus grow among the grain, often overtopping it, and illuminating the broad fields with their various shades of pinkish purple to deep violet purple and blue, truly royal colors. Any one who stands among the wheat fields of Galilee and sees these beautiful flowers peering up in every direction above the standing corn will see at once the appropriateness of our Savior's allusion to "lilies of the fields". They have reedy stems which when dry are used for fuel and for feeding cattle.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

not wander from thy commandments."—V. 10.

No commandment or instruction given to mortal man can compare with the glorious instruction given by the God of heaven. His every word, command, statute, judgment, testimony, precept, are for man's betterment. The listening ear will listen as anxiously for the voice of God's instruction as do the sleeping roots of winter's earth listen for the beckoning voice of springtime. May it be ours to unite with the Psalmist in proclaiming, "I will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word,"

"OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN."—MATT. 19:14.

NOW AND THEN some particular incident of life brings to our realization anew the beauty of God's truth. This week that realization comes to us through the following contributions from two Junior Bereans of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

How great is the appeal of the Word of God to the simple, trusting faith of the child! Oh, that more of us might become as little children when we approach our Father by study and prayer.

June and Alberta are in Sister Ruby Randall's class at Grand Rapids. We enjoy hearing from them and would be glad if more of our young friends would follow their example and talk to us on the Berean Page.

THE STORY OF JOSEPH

JACOB HAD many sons, but he had one he loved more than the rest; Joseph was his name. Jacob loved him so much that he made him a cloak of many colors. When his brothers found that Jacob loved Joseph more than them, they hated Joseph. They would never speak a peaceful word to him, but angry words.

One night Joseph had a dream. He dreamed that he and his brothers were binding sheaves in the field. He saw his sheaf stand up straight, and his brothers' sheaves stood around and bowed to his sheaf. Joseph told this to his brothers, and they hated him more than ever. They thought that this dream meant that he would be ruler over them, which he was in later days.

Joseph dreamed another dream. This time the sun, moon and eleven stars bowed down to him. Joseph told them this dream, which made his brothers, oh, so angry! This meant that even his mother and father would bow down to him.

One day as Joseph's brothers were caring for the sheep, Joseph's father said, "Joseph, I want you to go and see how your brothers are getting along with the sheep." So Joseph went to see his brothers. When they saw him coming they planned to kill him. They said, "Come now, let's kill Joseph and throw him into the deep pit and we will say some wild animal has devoured him." What wicked brothers!

Reuben didn't want to kill him, so he said, "Let's just throw him in the pit"; for he wanted to get him out and let him go home after a while. When Joseph came up to them, they stripped off his cloak and cast him into the deep pit.

Then they sat down to eat. As they sat there they saw a company of men coming. They were Ishmaelites. These men were going to Egypt. Judah said, "Let's not kill Joseph; let's sell him to these men."

And they did that very thing. Then they dipped Joseph's cloak in some blood and told their father that some wild animal had devoured him and this brought great sorrow to Jacob, Joseph's father.

—June Eaton, Age 11.

NOAH AND THE ARK

THE PEOPLE had continued to increase on the earth until there was a very great number of them. And would you believe it, they had all become very, very wicked, so that God decided to destroy them all from the face of the earth. No, not quite all, for there were eight, Noah and his family, that God did not want to destroy, because they were righteous.

God said to Noah, "I am going to destroy the wicked people and I don't want to destroy you and your family so you make an ark three hundred cubits long, fifty cubits wide, and thirty cubits high. I am going to send a flood upon the earth. Take your three sons and their wives and two of every kind of animal, into the ark."

Noah did as God said. He went into the ark and God shut the door. It rained and rained for forty days and forty nights but Noah and his family were safely protected in the ark.

One day after it had quit raining, Noah sent out a dove, but it returned because it had no place for shelter. After seven days he sent out another one and it returned with an olive leaf in its mouth. He knew then the waters were going down so he waited seven more days and sent out another dove, but this one did not return. So Noah knew the waters were gone down. Soon he heard a voice from heaven and God said, "Noah, you may go out of the ark."

Noah and his family obeyed as God said.

THE SOWER

BY THE SEA OF GALILEE many, many years ago, Jesus came to teach the people about a time coming when He would reign here on earth as King, and everything would be peace and happiness. This teaching He called the Word of the Kingdom and His method of teaching was by word pictures. Most all children like pictures, and grown people, too, so Jesus perhaps took this way to reveal the things He wanted the people to learn. The Bible calls them parables and both in their way of illustration mean the same thing.

The picture before us is about a sower that went forth to sow. He scattered seeds promiscuously over all kinds of ground. Some seed fell by the wayside. Some fell on stony ground; some among thorns; and some fell upon good ground. It would seem that the sower was very extravagant with this precious seed, to waste so much of it on such poor ground, but you see we have not yet seen all that is in the picture.

This good seed was the word or gospel of the kingdom that I just told you Jesus and His apostles went everywhere teaching. The field is the world, and the different kinds of soil are the different kinds of people to whom the word of the kingdom has gone. We must sow the good seed everywhere. Jesus was not telling people about sowing seeds as something they knew nothing about, but he was making a comparison so as to teach them to be careful about how they were receiving the word. Were they going to be wayside people, stony ground people or why were they listening to Him? Only the seed that fell upon good ground brought forth a harvest.

From the lesson I think Jesus knew just what kind of soil His words were falling upon, for He finished His lesson by saying, "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear." When His disciples asked Him why He spoke to them in parables, He said, "This people's heart is waxed gross and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and be converted and I should heal them." We should be very careful to hear the word, so we may not do as those people who would not heed the teachings of Jesus. While they came in great numbers to hear Him teach, a large number closed their eyes and ears, lest they should see and believe. We should be sure that we are not among that number. Let us ask our heavenly Father to guide us into all truth, that we may receive the Word in good and honest hearts, and bear much fruit for the Master's service.

—Mrs. A. J. Chaplin.

THINK! What kind of ground are we?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Draw pictures to illustrate each part of the parable.
2. Read Zechariah 7:8-14.
3. Learn Psalm 119:9-16.

REVERENCE

At the time of the Passover Jesus went up to Jerusalem, and when He went to the temple, do you remember what He found there? The courts were filled with oxen, sheep and doves which the people were buying and selling to use in their sacrifices. At little tables sat the money changers—honest changers, perhaps. And when Jesus saw and heard all the commotion, He made a scourge of small cords and drove them all out of the temple—men and animals, overturned the tables and poured out the money. Then He said, "Take these things hence: make not my Father's house an house of merchandise." Thus Jesus taught reverence for God's house.

THE PARABLE OF THE SOWER

Matthew 13:1-23

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 3:13-18

GOLDEN TEXT

Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.—Matthew 13:9.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Take Heed How Ye Hear.

Basic Truth. "And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."—Rev. 22:17. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether the gods your fathers served . . . As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."—Josh. 24:15.

Outline. I. Whosoever Will. II. He That Hath Ears. III. Take Heed How Ye Hear.

I. Whosoever Will. In Adam our forefather, God made all men alike; in the earth God gave all men alike; in Christ, the Redeemer, God provided alike for all men; in His Word, He has granted all alike, "He so loved the world", not selected individuals, but all, "that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth should not perish."—John 3:16. "Whosoever" has been the word and the principle extended throughout the ages. The responsibility of choosing has been placed by God upon man. This responsibility of choosing pertains to the people to whom He offered the kingdom concerning which the parable relates, also to the people to whom in their time He has offered church relationship. "God is no respecter of persons." The difference in individuals results from their choosing.

II. He that Hath Ears to Hear, Let Him Hear. The Bible records these words as coming from the lips of Jesus only. On seven different occasions He used them during His ministry, and eight times they were uttered to John on the Isle of Patmos. In each instance they call emphatic attention to a matter of importance. Here the important matter is that the kingdom of heaven is to be established in the earth as a result of the word of the kingdom being broadcast throughout the earth. Some will receive it as the beaten road of man would receive the farmer's seed; others will receive it as stony ground covered with shallow earth receives seed; others will receive it as ground infested with noxious weed and thorn accepts the sower's scattering; while others will gladly receive it in the proper way. The verbs of this parable indicate that the ground itself is active, i. e., responsible for the way in which it regards the sown word.

God created man with ears—He was no respecter of persons. It is sin working in the race that dulls and deafens many ears. Ears thus deadened by sin are deafened not by the wish of God, but in spite of His wish, therefore, the responsibility for such deafness is placed upon the deaf one.

The strict application of the Savior's parable belongs to Israel of His day. It was to them that the kingdom was offered; few accepted the word. Instead they crucified Him who was appointed for King.

III. Take Heed How Ye Hear. In great measure man has the choosing, within the limitations prescribed by God, of his own destiny. Elijah taught the Baal worshipers to choose for themselves whom they would worship, whether God or one of the man-exalted idol-deities of the day. He warned them to take heed of their choosing. Jesus also warned His Israelitish kinsmen to choose for themselves ways different from those chosen by Chorazin, Bethsaida, Tyre, Capernaum, or similar others. He warned them to carefully hear God and follow His words.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Musical Ear. Hearing is marvelous. It is made possible by a tiny, delicate organ, called the Organ of Corti, which is very like a harp with innumerable strings. Each string is adjusted so as to receive a particular shade of tone. If this organ is perfectly developed and unmarred, one is able to detect the minutest variation in sound. He then has a perfect musical ear. If this organ be injured in part, then the person is unable to catch all tones and is non-musical. The sound waves are present, but he does not correctly distinguish them.

Jesus taught the same with reference to His words. He likened people's understandings to different types of soil. The sower sowed the seed on all types of soils. But some soil was trodden down, would not receive His word; other soil was stony or filled with thorns; a portion of the soil was receptive to the seed. Just as the unresponsive soil is to the seed, so is the unkept ear to the Word of God. There is but one true Standard to which one should attune his ear, his understanding. That standard is God and His Word.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Who hath ears to hear, let him hear"—Matt. 13:9.

These words were used by Christ and never by any one else. He used them on seven different occasions, seemingly to stress what He had been teaching.

The first time He used them is found in Luke 8:8 at the close of the parable of the sower, which was given before He sent out the twelve. The second time is recorded in Matt. 11:15 after the calling of the twelve. The third occasion is the one in our lesson when He repeats the parable of the sower. The fourth time is found in Matt. 13:43 at the end of the explanation of a parable on the tares. The fifth is found in Mark 4:23 and the sixth in Mark 7:16. The seventh time is recorded in Luke 14:15 and is in connection with true discipleship, and counting the cost.

This same expression is used eight times in the book of Revelation, seven times as found in chapters 2 and 3, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches", and the eighth time in chapter 13:9.—L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Four Soils.

Jesus sat looking out over the multitudes that had come unto Him. He knew that the minds before Him were of four types—first, the mind as incapable of receiving the word of the kingdom as the packed wayside soil is of receiving seed; second, the mind somewhat receptive as is the thin soil scattered among stones; third, the mind rich in receptive power, but burdened with the things of this life as rich unkept soil is burdened with weeds; fourth, the mind rich in receptive power and, by God's care, kept unburdened by the things of this life, thus the mind which possesses the "hath" of hearing ears through which more can be added.

These conditions Jesus pictured by means of a parable. He explained the parable to the twelve because they had the "hath" of hearing ears, and it was given to them to know the mysteries of the kingdom.

What do the word of the kingdom as preached by Jesus and the kingdom at hand teach about the character, and purpose, and source of Christ's kingdom? What part of the mind-soil of the world is unresponsive by nature and environment to the word of the kingdom? What part responsive? —A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Giving Heed to Jesus' Teaching.

In preaching and in teaching, Jesus often used parables or stories to illustrate His point. In this instance, the multitude, who often followed after Him to benefit by His miracles, pressed so closely upon Him that He entered a ship that was anchored near by. The people stood upon the shore and listened while He told this story.

A man went out into his fields to sow seed. As often happens some of the seed fell upon the road side and birds came and picked it up. Some fell upon stony places where the soil was so thin that the roots could not develop, and soon it withered. Others fell where weeds grew so thickly that the plants were soon choked out. But some fell upon good soil and it grew so well that a wonderful harvest resulted. We have all seen these very things happen in our gardens and fields, haven't we?

What is the lesson which Jesus desired to teach? Read the explanation of it in Matt. 13:18-23. We see that the seed represents the word of the gospel. The different soils represent the various minds which hear the gospel. What are the weeds and stones which choke out the seed? What constitutes "good ground"? What sort of hearer gives heed to Jesus' teachings?

Let us care for our minds in such way that they will receive the good and yield a harvest of eternal life.—M. G.

NOTICE WHAT IT SAYS

This office would much appreciate having everyone check up on the address label as it appears on his Herald from week to week, and if it shows that the subscription is in arrears send in the amount due to date and enough more for another year.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE

Mail intended for the general office should be addressed to the Institution as follows: "National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois." Only personal mail should be addressed to individuals or when personal attention is desired as: "Attention (person's name)."

NOTES FROM ARKANSAS

Sister G. B. Sprinkle of Cheyenne, Wyoming, Box 702, is in bad health. A line from the faithful would be appreciated very much by her. Remember her in your prayers.

Bro. R. A. Humphreys of Bear, Arkansas, is able to make his usual visits to see his children, always pointing them to the Lamb of God for help and comfort. He spent the night of February 15th with his daughter, Mrs. Ruth H. Kinsey and family, at Meyers, Arkansas. The night previous was spent with his son, J. L. Humphreys and family of Percy, Arkansas.

The article in The Herald giving some extracts from a sermon delivered by Dr. Speers was read and appreciated, also the whole paper.

A NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Rockford Bereans are branching out into further channels of service, and beginning on Sunday, March second, they will have Sunday School each Sunday morning. On one Sunday of each month they will have preaching services by one of the members of the Training Class. Their place of worship is at 1904 North Main Street. They will also continue their former meetings, Berean class every Friday evening except on the Fridays preceding the first and third Sundays when they have preaching by Bro. Siple. We pray God's blessing on their new endeavors.

THE NEW QUARTERLY

It will soon be time for mailing out the new quarterly and it will assist us materially if you will reconfirm your orders, or if there is any change in number or address, you will notify us at once. Please do this now. We will be glad also to send samples to any you may know who may be interested.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES

Judging by the attendance at Sunday evening services, February twenty-third, it must have been homecoming at the Oregon church. Few things encourage the Pastor more than to have all the members, near and far, present whenever possible. Come again, folks.

Sr. Leila Mae Siple of Chicago spent the week end with her parents, Bro. and Sr. George Siple at Oregon, Illinois. Her assistance with the music added much to the services. Thank you, Lee.

Sr. Myrtle Cooper of our Ripley, Illinois, church, has been ill, but at last report was improving.

SISTER H. W. STADDEN

Susan E. Chapman was born in England July 16, 1849. When five years of age, in the days of sailing vessels, she came with her parents to America and settled in Cuyahoga county, Ohio.

November 20, 1871 she united in marriage with Harry W. Stadden, who preceded her in death in 1912. To this union six children were born—Harry, Jesse, Carrie, Ada, Minnie, and Mattie, all of whom survive except Jesse, who died some years ago.

She also leaves eleven grandchildren and four great grandchildren. She was a most faithful member of the Church of God for sixty years or more.

She fell asleep February 7, 1930, peacefully and quietly, as she had lived, in the 81st year of her life, ripe in years, in love and in righteousness.

Sr. Stadden was a woman of sweet and quiet disposition of outstanding gentleness and modesty, a true lover of truth and its great Author whom she served with her whole heart and being to the end of her life. Having lived well, she sleeps well, awaiting the Lord's return.

TRAINING IN WORSHIP

PRACTICALLY EVERY WORKER in the field of religious education has been faced more than once with the task of leading a group during its devotional period. Whether or not we have always achieved our goal, we can surely agree that the aim of such a period is to lead the group into fellowship with God.

Too often we fail in making our devotional periods vital and significant. We as Protestants are guilty of losing sight of the value and importance of worship. Our tendency, particularly in the past, has been to regard the devotional period as something to get through with so that we might get to the important part of our program, as something to fill in time until every one has arrived.

Since we all at some time or other have been aware of the failure of the devotional period in becoming a vital and contributing factor in our program it is necessary for us to pause to consider exactly what we mean by worship. At once we are faced with difficulty, for worship is almost too vital, too fundamental, and too comprehensive to express in a set definition.

One act of worship may differ from another in time and circumstances, in content and form, and in its means of expression. And yet there must always be present that common element of a sense of fellowship with the heavenly Father. No matter what the experience, if this is lacking worship cannot be present. Not always is worship confined to a particular period, set aside and planned for that purpose; worship may be present without external symbols (though we cannot underestimate the importance of a definite time and place for worship) but always there must be that sense of awe and wonder as one comes face to face with God.

The mere recognition of the fact of God is not enough, it must be vitalized into an emotional and personal application of fellowship with God that has a direct bearing on the life of the worshiper. For example, it is not an experience in worship when one coldly expresses to himself the following facts: "That mountain is majestic. Any one who can make such a mountain is great. Therefore God is great." But when one is emotionally stirred by the grandeur and beauty of the mountain and the recognition of God's hand in its making to the extent that the fact becomes a personal appropriation, and the soul cries out, "My God, thou art very great," then truly it is an experience in worship.

The worship of a little child differs in content from that of an adult because his life experiences are different and more limited. But the essential factor in worship for children and adults alike is a recognition that God is near, real, and vital to the individual. Communion with God implies consciousness of God, and that consciousness need not be limited to any age group.

If we claim that worship is of such fundamental importance, we can well ask ourselves this practical question, "What does worship do for us?" Its benefits are many. The high privilege of entering into fellowship with the Father who "made us for himself" brings us an exalted joy and happiness, and leaves us with an abiding sense of peace and rest. More than that, it gives us a new vision of our task, a feeling of confidence and capacity because we are working not in our own strength alone. In short, worship helps us to lead our lives more joyously, efficiently, and abundantly.—Margaret M. Clemens.

WALL OF JERUSALEM REBUILT

WHAT IS PROBABLY the world's most remarkable wall has been completed. The British have rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem. Today they run the circuit of the city which is holy to Christians, Moslems and Jews.

The golden-yellow limestone of Jerusalem's walls gleams in the sun. Every one of the 34 towers stands guard, stanch and intact, as when Suleiman the Magnificent built them on the ruins of older walls. In places layers of rock representing three civilizations rise one above the other, like rock strata; Jewish beveled stone, Roman cut stones, and finally the Mohammedan blocks.

Embrasures for archers and crossbowmen fret the wall like teeth in a gear. The National Geographic Society describes Jerusalem as a mincemeat pie of strange elements set within this scalloped-edged limestone crust.

Walking around Jerusalem is like walking around a fair-sized middle western farm. The walls inclose about 200 acres of land. They stand about three stories high. Eight gates pierce the wall—or did. The Golden gate in the east wall of the temple area, the gate through which Jesus is said to have gone into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday has been closed for centuries. It never will be opened, according to the Moslems, who control the temple area.

A wall jaunt gives the visitor a bird's-eye view of Jerusalem's position and its diverse life. Looking into the ravines beyond, the walker realizes the strategic position of the city on a hill surrounded by natural "ditches" and a circle of other hills.

From the northwest walls the stroller looks into the Christian quarter, thick with religious houses overtopped by the Church of the Holy Sepulchre on the site of which Jesus is believed to have been crucified. The northeast walls enclose the Mohammedan quarter, the southeast the temple inclosure with the dome of the rock and the mosque of Aksa occupying the site of the historic temple of the Jews.

Continuing around to the south, the wailing place of the Jews comes into view in a dark alley hemmed by the temple wall and the Moslem Moghrebin slums. Next comes the Jewish quarter with domed synagogues replacing minarets, and in the southwest the Armenian quarter with its garden. The journey ends at the citadel on the site of Herod's fortress palace flanking the Jaffa gate.—Grand Rapids Press.

RICH IN FAITH

By Paul M. Hatch

RICHES ARE MOST often associated in our minds with material abundance, qualified, of course, by the subject at hand. When we think of a rich man it is of his money or his possessions. If it is soil, it is of its productive quality. If food is in mind, then we associate "rich" in our thoughts with things highly flavored and rich in fats. In every case "rich" expresses the thought of possession over and above the ordinary.

Another phase of thought in connection with riches is that the possessor can endure a prolonged series of adverse circumstances and survive. Riches in other words are a sustaining factor in adversity. Riches are therefore a much coveted possession attending this life and world. When rightly used, they are a blessing to the welfare of a country or state, but when they are diverted into channels of greed and lust, there probably is no greater destructive force.

James, in his epistle commenting upon God's selection of people for His kingdom, calls them "poor of this world, but rich in faith." Just what did he mean by that expression? We generally think of being poor as the opposite of being rich. I believe James meant by "poor of this world" as meaning those who do not put their trust in uncertain riches, though they be materially rich, those who have placed their confidence and trust in higher things.

Rich in faith would likewise mean an abundance of faith, a faith that endures through adversity. Riches we may look upon as being transitory as far as this world is concerned. They may be yours for a while then they come into the possession of some one else. They are not a part of yourself as faith can be. Faith is a primal possession and unlike material possessions, when lost it can benefit no one else. Therefore faith in God is one of the greatest possessions a person can ever have. To be rich in faith then is to have enduring faith that shows resplendent through all the trials and adversity of this life.

Jesus, in His parable of the sower, illustrates the degree of faith in likening it to various kinds of soil. He says a sower went forth to sow. In sowing, some of the seeds fell by the wayside and the fowls came and devoured them up. Some fell upon stony places where they had not much earth and forthwith they sprang up because they had no deepness of earth. When the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root they withered away. Some fell among thorns, and the thorns sprang up and choked them. But others fell on good ground and brought forth fruit, some an hundred fold, some sixty, and some thirty fold.

In explaining this parable, the Master points out that the word is the seed and people are the soil. It depends largely upon the soil the kind of harvest it will bear. In the case of the seed falling by the wayside, Jesus explains that that seed never germinated but was snatched away by the evil one. There was not enough faith present to understand and take in the word. The second class joyfully received the word, but faith is not rich enough to support it and so it dies in adversity. The third class are courting the seed of the world and as a result their faith does not contribute to the word of God and soon the soil is bearing no good seed at all. But that that fell upon good, rich ground bore harvest because of the endurance of faith.

As one grain of seed cast into good ground produces bountifully, so the good rich ground of faith produces bountifully the word-seed. The Word of God dwelling in us richly, nourished by faith-richness cannot help but bring forth an abundant crop to the glory of God and Jesus the Christ.

All of this has a cumulative effect because the greater the word dwelling in us the greater our faith becomes, and the increase in faith is productive of a bumper harvest of God's Word. To this class then is promised the kingdom and all things attending an heir. We are equal heirs together with Christ, and whatsoever Christ obtained by His faith and obedience, so shall we obtain, if we hold fast those things that God requires of us. He requires faith, rich faith, obedience to His commands, and triumph over all temptations with the help of Christ the Intercessor.

I WILL BE A FATHER UNTO YOU

HOW THE WHOLE LIFE of Paul must have been thrilled through and through as he, by inspiration, gathered the import of these wonder words recorded in his second epistle to the Corinthians, 6:16-18. He is the spokesman for God. He is speaking to the Corinthian brethren. The Corinthian brethren were weak, finite creatures like the Christians of this day. The overpowering statement from God is, I "will be a father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty". He does not stop by saying, "I will be a Father unto you," but as though to emphasize the truth, He says, "You shall be my sons and daughters." What relationship! What contact! What privileges both of Father and of sons and daughters!

How free the Father is with His requests and in revealing His wishes! How anxious should the sons and daughters be that they fill to fullness the Father's expectations of them; that they serve Him at all times; that they continue in that intimacy, in that wholesomeness, in that thorough understanding, in that freedom of approach in all times of need—what relationship is this! And all this applies to you and to me, Christian brother, sister, as in accordance with the Apostle's enjoinder we "come out from among" the things that are untrue, disloyal to God.

THE EVERLASTING GOD

HOW WEAK we are to catch the various meanings, little though they are, of the Word of God! And yet some of these meanings which seem to be trivial contain, like acorns, many great truths.

"Everlasting" is a word carrying very indefinite meaning. It may refer to but an hour of time; it may refer to time without end. As used in our caption it must of necessity refer to God who lives on and on to time unlimited. It refers to Him as One who is always constant, who is always present; One whose word of today will remain true throughout all time. It signifies that whatever time is referred to, whatever moment, the everlasting God is then present, is then active, is then exercising the fullness of His mighty, unlimited power.

"There are lords many and gods many." Constantly the world of mankind is discovering and inventing still more. Man is ever on the watch to extend his devotions in new directions, toward new ideals. He is slow to remain constant to the one, unchanging, everlasting God.

In these days of rapid change, how staunch the earnest Christian should be in maintaining before the mind of the youth, before the rushing, striving, combative whirl of business activity, the fact that God remains constant, that the everlasting God is the same today in His demands as He was yesterday, that to worship and serve that God today is but to do so in that manner that was acceptable hitherto.

Would that the Christian would become more zealously active, more thoroughly inspired in witnessing to the fact that the everlasting God is present today, is over all, is through all, is in you all. Let us praise Him who is our Creator, our constant Sustainer, our Hope to all times.

THE CHANGING WORLD

FAR DOWN THE STRAIGHT TRACK looms the approaching locomotive. As the eye watches, it seems hardly to be moving. Slowly, apparently so slowly it comes nearer and nearer. As it nears it seems to be increasing its speed. As it rushes past we marvel at the terrific rate of travel and at the terrific momentum which it has. The fact is that when it first hove into sight it was traveling equally rapidly. It was its distance and its direction directly toward us which made it appear to be traveling slowly.

The world of today is likewise traveling at a rate unrealized by its people. It is traveling toward that great day of the Lord of which prophets and apostles have told. Ever now and anon some circumstance stands out which reveals to us some of this rapidity. At the present time there is a Congressional committee investigating conditions of lawlessness. Disregarding the apparent prejudice that is being thrown up like a smoke screen, we are yet warned to the effect that practically every phase of government in practically every department from high to low has become worm-eaten through and through by that same pest which destroyed Israel in the days of Samuel—bribery. Little wonder that it is impossible under such circumstances to enforce law; little wonder that criminals cannot be detected nor punished; little wonder that the bright, promising boys and girls of our land are in the earnest years of life, being led more and more into the ravages and the plagues of investing immorality and crime.

Nor do revelations indicate that the plague is limited to the boundaries of one nation. The reverse is strongly intimated. Because of legalized bribery in principle, many high seats of authority are over-willed to sell their country and all their compatriots for that remuneration which will seemingly better their own personal conditions. In devious ways these things are working out. The international traffic in narcotics, the international dealings in finances, the international meetingplaces in the great political problems and programs, in all these byways and highways there is the strong suggestion, if not the avowed revelation, that this ever-hungry pest is selling not only the people of the government, but selling the very God of heaven, the Redeemer of man for less than the heralded thirty pieces of silver.

And with what terrific speed and momentum this condition is carrying forward the world of today! Such speed can but terminate in a great collision with the rocks of truth somewhere along the highway. Certainly, our Savior spoke more revealingly than we have been wont to receive when He, referring to the great cataclysm at the end of the way, said, Matt. 24:21, "For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not in the beginning of the world till this time; no, nor ever shall be."

E A S T E R

THE MEMORIAL OF THAT BRIGHTEST and happiest day in religious history will soon be upon us again. This occasion is being taken to urge HERALD readers to begin to temper and fit the individual life so as to be able to realize the most possible this year from the observance of Easter.

Advance preparation for any and every event is necessary if one is going to enter most fully into the spirit of the event, and if one is going to gather most completely benefits from the same. Just as he who attends services of worship upon the first day of the week reaps more from that service after he shall prepare himself in advance for the same, so he who approaches Easter will gather more of its meaning, more of its benefits, more of its object, if he reads, studies, prays, meditates, if he in every possible way works himself into the meaning and spirit of that day and that event which he is about to commemorate.

Let us begin now individually to prepare for a harvest of blessing for Easter, April 20.

SOME DIFFICULT WORDS

By Dorothy Krogh

THE WORD, HELL, is found a number of times in the Bible. In the Old Testament it is everywhere translated from the Hebrew word sheol, which is also translated "grave" and "pit". Sheol is used sixty-five times and is translated "hell" thirty-one times; "grave", thirty-one times; and "pit", three times. In the New Testament three words are translated "hell": hades, gehenna, and tartarus. Hades is the equivalent of sheol. It occurs eleven times and is translated "hell" in every instance excepting in 1 Cor. 15:55, where it is translated "grave"—"O death where is thy sting? O GRAVE where is thy victory?"

These two words, the Hebrew sheol and the Greek hades, carry the meaning of "the state or condition of the dead." We learn from Psalm 49:12-14 that all enter into sheol at death. "Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish. This their way is their folly: yet their posterity approve their sayings. Selah. Like sheep they are laid in the grave (sheol); death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave. (sheol) from their dwelling."

The Bible speaks of good men in sheol or hades as often as bad men and there is no distinction made between them. For example, it speaks of Jacob as being brought down to sheol, Genesis 44:29—"And if ye take this also from me and mischief befall him, ye shall bring my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave (sheol)." Our Savior himself is spoken of as having been in hades, Acts 2:31—"He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ that his soul was not left in hell, (hades) neither his flesh did see corruption." From this we see that the word "hell", as translated from the Hebrew word sheol in the Old Testament and from the Greek word hades in the New Testament, could have no other meaning than the condition or resting place of the dead and that all, good or bad, go into it at death.

Gehenna is found eleven times in the New Testament and in three instances is translated "hell fire" and in the other eight, "hell". It carries an altogether different meaning from hades or sheol. It comes from the Greek Ghi-Hinnom, valley of Hinnom, which was located just outside the walls of Jerusalem. In this valley a fire burned continually and here all refuse and bodies of executed criminals were consumed. Gehenna is used in reference to the fire by which the wicked will be destroyed or consumed in the day of judgment, but it by no means carries the thought of endless torture.

The Greek tartarus is used in only one instance in the Bible, 2 Peter 2:4, "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell (tartarus), and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." It refers only to "the angels that sinned" and is nowhere used in connection with man.

Thus we have seen that in all but twelve instances in the Bible "hell" refers to and is the same as the grave condition and is used interchangeably with "grave". It is a condition which all must enter at death. In eleven of the twelve instances it refers to the destruction of the wicked after the second death in the day of judgment and in the twelfth instance it refers to angels and not man.

BE FILLED WITH THE SPIRIT

By Jas. A. Patrick

IN OUR BIBLE STUDY AT HOME, Sister Patrick and I have been studying something along the line of Brother Randall's "Weekly Talk" of February fourth. We have for some time felt the need of more power in the work of the Lord. And yet, I think, we ought to be very careful about the "feelin'" business. Some of our folks have been scared out by seeing some things done by people that are called "Holy Rollers". There are people that make great claims of a second blessing, and yet we believe they have little, if any, truth. I heard one of them tell our dear old brother, Joshua Miller, that he would know what to do without the Bible at all; the Spirit would guide him.

We are told that God has chosen us "to sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth", 2 Thess. 2:13; and that we have purified our souls "in obeying the truth through the Spirit", 1 Peter 1:22. "Born (begotten) again by the word of God", v. 23; "sanctified through the truth," John 17:17. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," Rom. 8:14; and, "if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you," v. 11. Let some of our brethren, who believe that the Word is all the Spirit we have, explain the verses cited in the foregoing.

Now don't think from what I have said that I would do away with all feeling in the matter. I just wish I could attend a few meetings like we used to have in Minnesota some years ago, when one FELT the joy of service and fellowship till hearts swelled and tears wet nearly every cheek. There was no excitement, but calm joy and peace in the Holy Spirit. There was not auto-hypnotism as I fear there is so much of the time where there are such loud demonstrations.

I attended a meeting some years ago wherein people were seeking for the baptism of the Spirit. During that meeting one felt thrills or shocks similar to that of mild electrical shocks. I talked with two men afterward who said they felt them. In the meeting before the one I attended one young woman who professed to receive the power, shouted and yelled to the top of her voice. But let me give you the setting of the meeting I attended. We were grouped in a little circle in the room. The two men who led the meetings walked around the circle, keeping on opposite sides. The two men with whom I talked, and who said they felt thrills, noticed that they felt them whenever they were directly between the two leaders. One of these men was an electrician, and said he thought it was personal magnetism. He said the feeling was much like an electrical shock. I simply give you this for what it is worth. I studied the movement at that time very closely, and I could not see that the people that claimed to get the power ever had any more or better results than those that did not.

Now don't think I am trying to discourage you in seeking to be filled with the Spirit. I am not. On the other hand, I urge that we all seek a closer walk with God. Like Brother Randall, I feel that we lack the power we should have, and I am sure it will not hurt any of us if we get down on our knees and humble ourselves before God and ask Him to fill us with His Spirit.

Christ is coming soon. We don't want to be among the left ones, two in the field, one taken, the other left. The five foolish virgins had everything the wise ones had, except one thing. They didn't slumber and sleep any longer than the wise; they arose when the wise did. What was the trouble? The foolish virgins seemed honest and wanted to go in with the others, but they lacked just one thing. Most Bible students are agreed that the oil represents the Holy Spirit. It was something for which they paid a price; they had to buy it. What was the price they had to pay? What was the legal tender they were to give in exchange for it? Will some one please answer these puzzling questions?

I know that some Bible students say that the virgins of Matthew twenty-five are not the bride, but are the virgins spoken of in the forty-fifth Psalm. Let us grant this for the moment. We want to be of the bride class. Isn't it possible for us to be foolish as these virgins were, even if they are not of the bride class? Isn't it possible for us to fail in the same way? If the oil represents the Spirit, surely we need the oil. I am sure that a close study of the question of the Holy Spirit and its operations will be profitable to all of us.

"Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Luke 21:34-36.

I don't want to be dwelling on the earth at that time. Do you? I hope that we may be among the number of those that have gone to meet the Lord in the air. But we must meet the requirements or be left. May our heavenly Father help us, is my prayer.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS

PRAYER AND PRAISE

By Lyman Booth

WE NOW ATTEMPT A PARTIAL DIGEST of The Book of Psalms. Owing to a very limited knowledge of the contents of this most wonderful book, and feeling somewhat unequal to the task of giving a proper analysis of its contents, we will attempt to present only a cursory examination of the same, with the hope that the reader may be inspired to a more earnest effort to learn its teachings. If I, by this feeble effort, should be the agent to awaken a desire in the mind of only one appreciative reader to the importance of diligently studying the Holy Scriptures, with the result that he or she shall be the recipient of God's favor and promises, then I shall feel that my labor will not have been in vain.

There are many items of interest peculiar to this book, not found elsewhere in the Scriptures. It occupies the first place in the Hebrew canon, in the third division into which the canonical books were divided, Law, Prophets, and Hagiographa (sacred writings), the name given by the Hebrews to the third division of the Old Testament, containing Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Ecclesiastes, Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Lamentations and Daniel. It is the product of ancient Jewish penmen. In its fulness it belongs to no special time, for its words principally are fulfilled in Christ. It had a slow growth and its composition spans a thousand years or more of national life from Moses to Malachi.

The name in Hebrew is Tehillim or Praises, because the praises of God form its grand scope and object, to which every other subject contained in it is rendered subservient in one way or another. The name "Psalms" comes to us from the Greek, and denotes that these sacred hymns were accompanied with the psalter, harp or lute when sung; in fact from the time of David, Psalmody formed a considerable part of the daily worship at the sanctuary in unison with various instruments of music. The whole collection is often called "The Psalms of David", who, undoubtedly, was the author of the greater part of them. His name is prefixed to seventy Psalms, and he may have written many others to which his name is not prefixed. Concerning some it is not settled as to who was the author. Psalm 90 is entitled, "The Prayer of Moses, the man of God". There is internal evidence that some were written long after the time of David, even as late or even after the Babylonian captivity. By the guidance of the Holy Spirit, David employed his poetical talent in composing sacred poems, and it was he who established the Psalmody at the sanctuary. He was warranted in calling himself, "The Sweet Psalmist of Israel," and also to say, "The Spirit of the Lord was upon me, and His word was on my tongue."

From ancient times the Psalter was divided into five books by the Jews, corresponding in subject matter to the five books of the Pentateuch. The first book (1-12) contains forty-one Psalms, all of which are said to have been written by David, and are described as "Psalms of David," with the exception of the first and second chapters, which are introductory. The second book contains thirty-one chapters (42 to 72) of which eighteen are credited to David, and seven to "the sons of Korah" (42, 44 to 49). The fiftieth is ascribed to Asaph, the seventy-second to Solomon, and four are not named (43, 66, 67 and 71). The third book contains seventeen Psalms (73 to 89) of which eleven are ascribed to Asaph (73 to 83), three to the sons of Korah (84, 85 and 87), one to David (86), one to "Heman, the Ezrahite" (88), and one to "Ethan, the Ezrahite" (89). Book Four, consists of seventeen Psalms (90 to 106), of which one is said to have been written by Moses (90) and twelve by David (101 to 113). For the rest no author is named. Book five contains forty-four Psalms (107 to 150), of which 108, 110, 122, 124, 131, 133, 138, 145 are credited to David, the 127th, to Solomon. Of the remaining, the most have no title, but are marked, "A Song of Degrees". The 119th is divided into twenty-two sections of eight verses each. In the original Hebrew every verse of each section begins with the letter of the alphabet written above it, which was evidently to aid the memory in reciting it, because this Psalm is supposed to have been sung by the Israelites on their homeward journey from their exile.

Josephus informs us that the Levites were enjoined to carefully preserve at the temple all such hymns as might be composed in honor of God; and some writers claim, that the book of Psalms as we now have it, was selected from a much larger number that were divinely inspired, and therefore worthy of admission into the canon of the Holy Scriptures, while many were rejected as not being entitled to such position. However this may be, the entire book has certainly been considered as a part of the sacred oracles of God in every age, by undisputed testimony. In Acts 13: 33 Paul quotes from the second Psalm, which shows that they were arranged in the same order as they are at present.

Nearly fifty of the Psalms are quoted or referred to by New Testament writers, "David himself" said by the Holy Spirit, or "David in Spirit calls him Lord," Matt. 22: 45. Then after His resurrection, in instructing disciples, He said, "All things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me." Luke 24:44. In like manner the apostle quotes a passage from the ninety-fifth Psalm which he applies to David, as follows, "Wherefore as the Holy Ghost saith, To day if ye will hear his voice", etc. Heb. 3:7-11. In Acts 4:24, 25 we find a quotation by Peter from Psalm 2:1, 2, "Lord, thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?"

Christians generally apply the second Psalm to the Christian church. In these quotations we see plainly that Christ and His apostles acknowledged the divine inspiration of the Old Testament scriptures, the Psalms in particular. Some Jewish writers are unwilling to bestow upon David the title of prophet, but admit he had a minor degree of inspiration, according to a scale of their own design. But Peter explicitly calls him a prophet, and he was evidently entitled to that distinction as is clearly proved by the predictions which he later on recorded and which were, after many centuries, fulfilled. The several particulars concerning the descent, the kingdom and priesthood of Christ, likewise the contempt and persecution by the rabble which He endured, and the intensity and variety of His extreme sufferings, the manner of His death, resurrection, ascension and exaltation to the right hand of God, together with the success of His preaching of the gospel and the calling of the Gentiles, are not only circumstantially, but so vividly foretold in this book that a history of the events therein given might be compiled from them and in some instances with a fulness which historians seldom employ.

WHAT CHRISTIANITY MEANS TO THE WORLD

A PARABLE OF THE CHURCH

Sunday, March 9 — Ephesians 5:22-23.

"This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church." — Ephesians 5:22-23.

THE COMMON INTERESTS of the husband and the wife, the mutual love, the mutual service, the mutual aims in life, the mutual purity and devotion, these stand for the striking illustration in this beautiful parable of Paul teaching of the closeness of Christ and the church. With what true consecration and devout service should the church and the individual Christian be devoted to Christ who has given himself "that he might sanctify and cleanse" for presentation "to himself"!

TEACHING IN PARABLES

Monday, March 10 — Matthew 13:31-35.

"Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces." — Daniel 2:34.

Small indeed were Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, the seed of the kingdom first sown, but large indeed will be the nation and the kingdom which God will yet develop from that seed. Small indeed was the Babe of Bethlehem whom Paul, in Galatians 3:16, declared to be the Seed long expected, but large indeed will be His world-wide sovereignty over His kingdom that fills the whole earth.

Woman in Scripture is often used to illustrate devotion in worship. She is used to illustrate both pure worship of God and impure worship of evil. Leaven always refers to corruption. Here then in an evil way, leaven is placed into the measures of God's kingdom till the whole is corrupted. How true this has come to be!

Hail to the day when Christ shall correct all!

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

Tuesday, March 11 — Matthew 13:44-52

"Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind." — Matthew 13:47.

Three parables are here grouped together by their introductory word "again". Following them is the parable of the scribe, v. 52. These parables balance the former three which are grouped by the introductory word "another"; while those three are preceded by the parable of the sower, v. 3.

A PARABLE OF REPROOF

Wednesday, March 12 — 2 Samuel 12:1-10.

"And Nathan said to David, Thou art the man.

Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, I anointed thee king over Israel, and I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul." — 2 Samuel 12:7.

Strikingly is the unrighteousness of David toward both Uriah and his wife revealed by the figure of parable of the shepherd possessing but one lone lamb. King David's judgment, as revealed in v. 5 was fully accepted by Nathan the prophet. What a sting of rebuke when the parable was referred to David's own conduct!

A PARABLE OF HUMAN WORTH

Thursday, March 13 — Matthew 18:7-14.

"Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire." — Matthew 18:8.

Only God can rightly appraise the value of man. Through His Son He has told us in this parable that any life is worth more to God than is any member of the body worth to man, or than is any lust of life worth to him. Happy is that man who mortifies the deeds of the body that he may enrich the life for the service of God.

A PARABLE OF FORGIVENESS

Friday, March 14 — Matthew 18:21-35.

"And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another." — Matthew 18:35.

Only wrong needs to be forgiven. The man of righteous ideals treasures right conduct toward himself as a thing of desired worth. It is the wrong toward him that he regards as injurious. Injury often leaves a sting of evil thought within the life of the one injured. Only by forgiving the offending one and forgiving the offense can this seed of evil be cast from the life of the one injured.

A PARABLE OF RESPONSIBILITY

Saturday, March 15 — Luke 19:12-24.

"Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." — John 15:14.

Just as the world's political ruler cannot trust his servants unless they shall faithfully execute for him his program, so our Lord and Master cannot trust His professed followers unless they shall diligently seek to know His wish and shall diligently endeavor to execute the same even during the Master's absence.

To be friends of the Master is a vast privilege. May we earn this wonderful term of endearment, "my friends", by following faithfully all His requests and executing carefully all His commands.

GO, SIN NO MORE

By J. Arthur Johnson

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." "Where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?" "Neither do I condemn thee: Go, and sin no more."

HOW TYPICAL OF JESUS! We see Him here in all the tenderness of His forgiving spirit — "Neither do I condemn thee." How true to the purpose for which He was sent into the world: "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."

Here was one who had sinned. The law said she should die; she was condemned already. Condemnation had long since been established. God needed no further witnesses to make that sure. These wicked Pharisees were only too glad to carry away some faltering one from their midst and lend their polluted hands to casting the stones that should wound and bruise and kill. They had forgotten their own mistakes, had forgotten that they, too, were deserving of the stones they so ruthlessly cast at others.

But here was One whose purpose was different. He would not stone, condemn, kill; He had come that men might have life and have it more abundantly. How should He, then, unite with these wicked ones and send them on their journey for the devil to again rejoice in that through sin and death God's creation had been marred. Nay, He could not do that. He came to save.

Yes, Jesus came to save, and this woman needed that salvation. Jesus saw; He knew; He understood the pleadings in that repentant breast. Oh, that she could walk her path over again and leave the sin undone! Yet, according to the law she must die. Should she? How was He to answer? The decision was in His hands; His vote was the deciding one. No one else remained. He was sole Judge. What was the judgment to be? Was there any way to avoid the stoning?

Yes, thank God, He was the way! He forgave. He took her sins upon himself. He would bear them in his own body on the tree. And now He began His work — "Neither do I condemn thee. Go". Be free, enjoy life still! Our hearts beat faster for joy as we read those words. She is free from the guilt of sin, free from the resultant death.

"Go." Shall this one merely go, go forth from this Judge with her freedom, go back into the ways of her former living—the ways of sin, of condemnation, of death? Ah, no! The Master's work is not finished yet: it is His to keep her from a return to that from which He has just rescued—condemnation, death, the ways of sin. He must direct, He must lead the way. He did lead the way. We hear His words ring out, "Go, and sin no more."

Shall we change the scene? Suppose we take our place before the Judge, Where do I stand? Where do you stand? Have we ever transgressed? Have we broken the law? "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

How beautiful those words of the Master as they come to us, "Neither do I condemn thee." What a wonderful Savior—to free us from the penalty of all that guilt! Let us thank Him! Let us praise Him! Let us follow Him! And let us place our lives at His disposal, listening with hearing ears as He speaks on, "Go, and sin no more."

MODERN BIBLICAL CRITICISM

IT IS NOTHING less than confounding to a man who knows Jesus Christ, and lives in communion with God and His Word, to look into the monographs set forth today under the name of Biblical criticism. You see once more the blind and stolid Pompey boldly stalking into the Holy of Holies, and finding nothing there—nothing on the spot where Isaiah, seven hundred years before, had beheld the vision of the six-winged seraphim veiling their faces in the presence of the Most Holy One.

Let us, then, resolutely demand of ourselves and all others, as the first condition of Biblical criticism, that the critic himself shall be a devout man of God. When a party of scholars, whether English or German, or French, undertake to analyze and reduce to their elements the books of the Old Testament or the New, but who, notwithstanding marvelous linguistic acuteness, often remind you, in their contemptuous tones and utter lack of tenderness, of nothing so much as a gang of anatomists engaged in the dissection of a dead dog—only not always in equal seriousness of purpose; it ought not to require much insistence to persuade Christians that no unquestioning submission is due to such criticisms.

The holiness and elevation of spirit, from first to last, in the Old and New Testament writings and tone of good faith that prevails everywhere, is a matter on which readers of moral intelligence can judge for themselves, even in early life. And when great scholars prove themselves insensible to this tone of sanctity, sincerity, and reverence for God, which not only Ezra, but all the prophets, uniformly display—or dismiss it as cant—they naturally incur the suspicion both of learned and unlearned who have retained their moral perceptions in a Christian condition.

Depent upon it, no rogue, literary or ecclesiastical, had anything to do with writing the histories of the patriarchs, or of Joseph, or the Book of Deuteronomy—the perpetual marvel of holy, divine life and power.—Selected from the writings of Edward White, in The Bible Standard—Rufus A. Curtis.

"God never would send you the darkness
If He felt you could bear the light;
But you would not cling to His guiding hand
If the way were always bright.
And you would not care to walk by faith,
Could you always walk by sight,"

THY WILL NOT MINE

Laid on Thy altar, O my Lord divine,
 Accept this gift today, for Jesus' sake,
 I have no jewels to adorn Thy shrine,
 Nor any world-famed sacrifice to make;
 But here I bring within my trembling hand,
 This will of mine — a thing that seemeth small,
 And Thou alone, O Lord, canst understand,
 How when I yield Thee this, I yield my all.

Hidden therein, thy searching gaze can see
 Struggles of passion, visions of delight,
 All that I have, or aim, or fain would be,
 Deep love, fond hopes, and longings infinite,
 It hath been wet with tears, and dimmed with sighs,
 Clenched in my grasp till beauty it hath none;
 Now from Thy footstool, where it vanquished lies
 The prayer ascendeth, may Thy will be done.

Take it, O Father, e'er my courage fail,
 And merge it so in Thine own will that e'en
 If in some desperate hour my cries prevail,
 And Thou give back my gift, it may have been
 So changed, so purified, so fair have grown,
 So one with Thee, so filled with peace divine,
 I may not know or feel it as mine own,
 But gaining back my will, may find it Thine.

—Van Dyke.

A WEEKLY TALK

By C. E. Randall

SPIRIT AND LETTER

THERE IS A TWO-FOLD WAY of interpreting God's Word. One has to do with the letter of the Word and the other, the spirit. It is possible and often times the case that one or the other of these is slighted in the interpretation and application of Scripture. In reading the Word with the aim in mind to secure a theoretical or theological understanding the tendency is to interpret it from the standpoint of the letter. There is no salvation or any particular grace to be received from such an effort. The apostle well said, "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." Folks that are trusting in a mere knowledge of the written Word are going to be terribly disappointed when the "day of reckoning" comes.

The letter of the Word is not the life-producing element. It has its value and cannot be disassociated from salvation but is secondary or subordinate to the spirit of the Word. A message that deals strictly with the letter of the Word may be interesting, but is seldom convicting. It lacks that power that penetrates into the inner recesses of a person's life. There isn't any reaction, unless it be a debative one. It finds its appeal in the technical and interpretive side of life.

The spirit of the Word works differently. It not only appeals but convicts and takes hold of the spiritual inclinations imbedded in every person. It produces LIFE and POWER and develops that transforming process necessary in every life. It is practical and useful for every purpose, circumstance and necessity of life. The spirit of the Word is more flexible and easier of interpretation than the letter. The letter of the law prohibited David from going into the holy place and eating the shewbread; but when he was hungry and in need, the spirit of the law allowed him this privilege which was forbidden by the letter. The spirit goes in and takes hold of the desire and motives with which the letter never deals.

As a people we have been seeking truth in the abstract or its interpretative side as it relates to the LETTER and overlooking the spirit and the life of the Word. These two latter elements are the ones that create power and activity in the individual. You may say, "Life has to do with the future, or eternal life." True, but His Word produces life a hundred-fold now and in the world to come everlasting life. The message that deals with the letter of the Word and overlooks the spirit and the life is a partial one and one that cannot hope to reap more than partial results. You let a person interpret the Word in its two-fold aspect, letter and spirit, and make rigid application of the same and you will find a person endowed with so much Christian energy that he can't help but DO things.

We have been and are under-nourished and the reason is simply because we have been whittling away at the wood too much and failing to get the sap or juice. Christ said, "I am the vine, ye are the branches." The same sap or juice that is in the vine generates into the branches. The sap that is in this Christ vine is the spirit and if you are not getting this life there is something wrong. Christ was active, healthy and at all times a fruit producer and the branches are going to be of the same kind and quality. You can't be a dead branch and belong to the Christ.

I don't want to be too critical in these weekly talks, but I do pray and trust that God will wake us up from our slumbers. Why are so many of our ministers off in some secluded section of the country, preaching a sermon now and then and holding three or four Bible conferences a year? and at the same time I ask, why are so many of our churches hanging out shingles, "NO SERVICES"; "NO SUNDAY SCHOOL"; "NO PRAYER MEETINGS"; "Meetings Closed for Winter"; No Meetings During the Spring Thaw"; "No Meetings During Busy Summer Season"; etc.? A live and active message must come from a live and active source. Lord, teach us to work. The spirit of the Word will give us life, but the letter never will.

It is horrifying to think of the condition of our work and see the little that was accomplished over the country last year. You say, "We can't expect to with our message. There is to be a falling away in the last days." Don't deceive yourself with such reasoning and lay down on the job. The trouble was a lot of us didn't half try.

Our next talk will deal with the whitened harvest. Watch for it.

THE CALLING OF A NATION

By Cecil A. Smead

“IN THE BEGINNING God created the heaven and the earth.” Thus God commenced His great work of eternity in connection with man and the earth. Ever since then God has been building up and perfecting this world and man gradually but surely. At first we find man, in Genesis, living in peace and contentment in the Garden of Eden. But man, by his disobedience, lost his happy home and ever since has lived and died with the hope of its future restoration. When God saw the evil depths to which man had fallen, He immediately commenced the great work of selecting out from among mankind those who were willing and desirous of obeying Him. Even as He drove our first parents from Eden, God promised them a Seed who should redeem them from sin and death. From that time God began to choose a nation from which should come forty centuries later, that Redeemer who is Jesus Christ.

From the creation in Genesis man began to drift farther and farther away from God, until, at the end of sixteen centuries, God could not in His righteousness countenance such wicked beings. Therefore He destroyed man from the face of the earth by a flood of waters. The only ones He saved alive were Noah and his family who were perfect in their generations and were upright before God.

Just as soon as men began to increase on the earth after the flood, they again began to fall away from God and do evil. Therefore God divided them and scattered them over the earth. But He chose Abraham to be the progenitor of His chosen people. He promised Abraham a bounteous land and a Seed in whom all nations of the earth should be blessed. He chose Abraham because Abraham believed God and God counted it to him for righteousness.

From the seed of Abraham, God chose Isaac, the second son; from that of Isaac, He chose Jacob, the second son. For the express purpose of emphasizing His special blessing, God always chose a later son, not the first, even from the beginning when he chose righteous Abel, the second son of Adam. In that way God shows that He has cast off His first created son, Adam, with all his disobedience, and that He has chosen His second created Son, Jesus Christ, with all of His obedience.

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob each received the promise; but the promise was not fulfilled while any of them lived. God must first make a great nation of the children of Jacob, or Israel. So, leading them down into Egypt and keeping them there for over two hundred years, He made a great nation of them. Then, when the Egyptians oppressed His people, God redeemed them with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm, and showed forth His wondrous providence for those whom He chose to be His people.

After He redeemed them from Egypt God gave His people a perfect law through Moses, His servant. Then God went with His people in person to train and perfect them so that they would obey Him and look to Him with faith. They turned from Him again and again, but when they repented, He always took them back. He fed them; He clothed them; He drove out their enemies from before them. For forty years He led them in the wilderness.

Finally, when their confidence in Him had been perfected, He brought them down to the east bank of the swollen River Jordan, and ordered them to cross that river and possess the land that He had given them. That was the final test. The people proved equal to the occasion. They marched upon the waters of the river and the waters receded from before them to allow them to pass. They marched upon their enemies and God smote the enemies before them. The sun stood still while the Lord fought in the day of battle. The elements did the bidding of the Lord to the end that the wicked inhabitants of the land should be driven out from before Israel, the chosen nation of God. Very soon the people possessed the promised land and the Lord God divided it among them as He had promised them.

When they proved true to Him, He blessed them; and not before they proved true to Him did He bless them. Again, after their descendants fell away from the Lord and left off from serving Him, God withdrew His blessings from them and was compelled to punish them. Again and again He received them back, and again and again they fell away from Him.

There is yet a day in the future when the children of Israel will be gathered together to serve the Lord in spirit and in truth. When that day comes, the Lord will bless them as they never have been blessed before, and not only them but us also who are one with Christ and therefore part of the seed of Abraham and heirs according to the promise.

The Lord has been perfecting His people throughout the ages that are past. His great work is yet going on and will continue to go on until perfection is reached. We each have an opportunity to obey the Lord, to willingly become subject to His will, and to allow Him to bring us to that stage of perfection that in His own righteousness He can own us as His peculiar people and shower upon us blessings rich and unnumbered. That opportunity is ours through Jesus Christ whom the Lord sent to redeem His people, to redeem those who will obey the Lord with pure hearts and unflinching steps. If we have the courage and the faith, and if we obey the Lord, He will do the rest. He will redeem us.

HE LEADETH US:

To living fountains of water.	Through the wilderness.
Beside still waters.	Through the deep.
In green pastures.	In the right way.
Through the depths.	In a plain path.
Safely.	To the rock that is higher.

QUOTATION: Samuel to Saul, 1 Sam. 13:14.

Move over, folks, we have a new guest at our round-table. Meet Miss Louise Brewer, Queries Family. We'll put her between Ruth Tomlinson and Gladys Barber. And the reason we've missed Hazel Titus lately is she's been sick. But we are glad she is better now.

M. A. W. (you all know who she is) says in answer to Queries 25 that Rev. 7:17 is a beautiful expression of God's love and Christ's tender care for His own. And I think she knows because that love and watchcare has been over her for many years and through many experiences.

AN ARTIFICIAL AGE

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

IT HAS BEEN SAID that some years ago a man started to write a book on the subject, "The World Is Passing Away", but that he did not complete it. Had he lived in our day and age he would have had plenty to write about, for not only those who study their Bibles but even worldly men see the instability of our present systems. We are living in a materialistic age when enjoyment comes through the senses. Little of the religion of today reaches the heart. The Bible seems to be studied, but many times it is studied only to be argued, so we cannot expect to see the results that would come if we studied it to find its hidden truths that we might help others and feed the flock of God.

Fashions, manners and customs which are closely followed by the ungodly, are changing constantly. Should a crisis come, people who follow them would have nothing to cling to. Yes, we are living in an artificial world of startling changes. We know not what a day may bring forth. Something that has startled the world this year may be rejected by next year or even sooner. Many people are tied to the world and its changes, which the Bible says will pass away.

Nothing can be depended upon but the Bible and with this few seem to be very well acquainted. There is dissatisfaction and unrest everywhere and each year it seems to take on an increasing rate, but yet it comes so gradually, that the people who do not see the significance of our times, cannot discern these things. The speed rate that was looked at with fear a few years ago has become so common that the ordinary person thinks nothing about it now. Most people are not satisfied unless they follow the crowd. Only the brave go in single file and are not concerned if they are called peculiar for doing so. The Bible says that this unrest will increase as we near the end of the age. "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked".

We are not only living in an artificial age, when people are not what they seem to be, but in an age of covetousness, when all seem to be dissatisfied with what they have, envying their neighbors and copying after them. Everything that makes a big display is catered to. Many people seem to be living on their emotions and feeding on excitement. When a nation does this it usually stops thinking; it does not last long but is apt to go the way Rome went. Only those things that are founded upon the Word of God are enduring. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Isa. 26:13,

FROM THE WEST

DEAR BEREANS: These are the days of God's preparation. These are the days of our schooling under the Christ for a future cooperation with Him in the kingdom age to accomplish the most wonderful work ever known, for Christ and humanity. As we meditate on conditions today and see the indifference, coldness, even scorning of the places of worship and of God's blessed Word, how our hearts yearn for those of the blessed truth, to encourage, to cheer, to sympathize and urge on to faithfulness and true confidence in Christ and His promises.

How we would like to reach out to our isolated ones, our shut-ins, the sick and afflicted ones — to all those who are discouraged with the tiresome troubles and perplexities of daily life — and say, "Press on, dear soul, the goal is near!" Yes, yes, let's go often and unceasingly to God in consecrated prayer.

Desire is prayer, and God knows our hearts' desire anywhere, whether on bended knee, about our work, in the crowded room, or on the bed of sickness. We can lift our mind to God and live in constant harmony with Him, and experience that peace of mind that passeth understanding.

Friends, it's time we were demonstrating real heartfelt works or fruits of the spirit, if we are to meet Jesus soon. Read Bro. Randall's articles on prayer in the HERALD and Sr. Woodward's exhortations. They are every one essential for a devoted Christian. It's one thing, friends, to be a professor of religion, and quite another thing to be a possessor of it, able to demonstrate the fruits of the spirit.

Praise God for the wonderful privilege of enjoying a heart filled with love, joy, peace, in Christ Jesus. We can quote with the Psalmist: "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust." Psa. 91:1-2.

Bereans, we who are on the Social Correspondence Committee desire to be of help to any and all of our brothers and sisters in Christ. They who live among strangers to the covenants of promise — how they do appreciate an occasional letter from some one of like precious faith! We seem to need the fellowship of others. So it would seem that our life should be such that others, seeing us, shall know we have been with Christ and learned of Him.

If any reader should know of anyone who would enjoy some of our Social Correspondence letters, please send the name and address to our Social Correspondence chairman, Mrs. Lilian Railton, Fonthill, Ontario, Canada. She will see that they get the necessary message. Do this, please, and help her.

May Moore.

JANUARY ILLINOIS STATE BEREAN REPORT

Berean reports, with the exception of one or two, come in fine. Keep them coming.

Oregon: Membership, 25; average weekly attendance, 12; 2 visitors. Interest good.

Chicago: Membership, 15; average weekly attendance, 10 or 12. Meetings have been resumed after having been temporarily discontinued until the weather settled.

Ripley: Membership, 18; Average weekly attendance, 9. Interest fair.

Dixon: Membership, 22; average weekly attendance, 18. Interest very good. Socials are enjoyed once in a while and our aim is to teach others the truth.

Salem: Membership, 25; average weekly attendance, 12. Interest good. Weather has been bad, therefore our meetings have been very irregular.

Rockford: Membership, 17; average weekly attendance, 15. Interest keeps up splendidly, so much so that you are liable to hear bigger things from Rockford soon.

Edna Wood, Secretary.

CLEVELAND BEREANS

At a meeting of the Golden Rule Berean Society, of Cleveland, Ohio, on February 14, the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months. President, W. H. Halls; Vice-Pres., Harvey Roden; Secretary, M. W. Lyon; Treasurer, Mary Milburn; Pianist, Mrs. Mattie Agard.

The Cleveland society has not been growing as it ought, so a social was held the middle of January to which a number of the young people of the neighborhood were invited, and a good time was enjoyed by all. This resulted in some increase in attendance which it is hoped may be made permanent by diligent cooperation on the part of the present members. Meetings are held on Friday nights at eight o'clock.

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

JESUS LOVED PEOPLE. He loved them so much that He tried to teach them by stories how to be kind and fit themselves to be in the kingdom with Him. He turned no one away; rich and poor, good and bad were treated kindly by Him.

But some behaved very much like naughty children. They were jealous and proud. They did not have the right feeling in their hearts and were just watching and listening to find some fault. They could not understand Jesus, for they were unwilling to be taught.

Jesus knew that they were thinking unkindly of Him so He began teaching them parables. Now the bad ones could not understand, for a parable makes people think. They would not think or study, only to find fault. The good ones that really loved the great Teacher would come to Him afterwards if they could not think what He meant.

Now these parable stories that Jesus told were like nuts. The parable, like the shell, covers up the kernel. To find the good part one must crack the shell. Those who really want the kernel will work and get it, but those who are not willing to crack the shell will never get it. The shell keeps the meat nice and fresh and clean for people when they are ready to eat it. The shell also hides the meat from those who do not care for it.

A sermon could be preached on each one of these parables in today's lesson. We have not space enough to tell about each one. Have mother read them from the Bible to you and help you find the kernel in each one. The knowing about God's kingdom is very precious, a treasure, a pearl of great price to those who are getting ready. The kingdom like the mustard seed and the leaven will grow and become very great.

Jesus told of a man who sowed good seed in his field. While he was asleep an enemy came and sowed tares, or bad seeds. When the seeds came up the servants noticed the bad plants and told the master. "Shall we pull them up?" they asked. "No," said the master, "Let them grow together till harvest, when we shall separate them, destroy the bad and put the good into my barn."

Jesus meant that good and bad people will live together till He comes back again, for the happy kingdom time, where all will be peace and joy. The good people will all be with Him then, but the bad ones cannot see Jesus.

Daisy Nokes.

THINK! Are we trying our best to have a part in God's kingdom?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Make a list of the things to which the kingdom is compared.
2. Read Proverbs 3:19-26.

REVERENCE

Beautiful ground on which we tread,
Beautiful heavens above our heads,
Beautiful flowers and beautiful trees,
Beautiful land and beautiful seas.

Beautiful sun that shines so bright,
Beautiful stars with glittering light;
Beautiful summer, beautiful spring,
Beautiful birds that merrily sing.

Beautiful drops of pearly dew,
Beautiful hills and vales to view,
Beautiful herbs that scent the air,
Beautiful things grow everywhere.

Beautiful everything around,
Beautiful grass to deck the ground,
Beautiful fields and woods so green,
Beautiful birds and blossoms seen.

Beautiful flower and beautiful leaf,
Beautiful world, though full of grief,
Beautiful every tiny blade,
Beautiful all that God hath made.

—Selected.

"O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our maker. For he is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand."

—Psalms 95:6, 7.

SPRING PRAYER

Hear us thank Thee, kindest Friend,
For the springtime Thou dost send;
For the warm sunshine and rain;
For the birds that sing again;
For the sky so clear and blue;
For our Savior, too.

Help me in my heart to thank Thee;
Help me with my lips to praise Thee;
May I to each playmate be
Kind, as Thou hast been to me.

PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

Matthew 13:24-52

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 3:19-26

GOLDEN TEXT

For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.—Romans 14:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. What Christianity Means to the World.

Basic Truth. "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ."—Rev. 11:15.

Outline. I. Its Beginning. II. Development. III. Its Consummation.

I. Its Beginning. Without confusing the subject of the kingdom of heaven of which Christ was teaching with that of the Christian church, let us study the kingdom from the viewpoint of Christianity.

Christianity was introduced by Christ during His ministry. Previous thereto it was not known. His was to receive the world as He found it and build it as the Father directed.

II. Its Development. In the series of parables in Matt. 13 Jesus taught the development of the kingdom under the influence of His teachings. (The kingdom had been started centuries before.) In one sense His words were seeds, the individuals were the ground or soil which was to receive or reject the seed and to bring forth fruit after its kind.

In another sense the kingdom itself was likened unto a seed, even the smallest. It would grow until it should become the largest of its kind, the largest of all kingdoms. In another sense the kingdom was afflicted with leaven which would work until the whole was corrupted. (Later it will be purified and restored.) Other phases of the kingdom were like the hidden treasure, the pearl of great price, the net of fishes.

Throughout, the great lesson is that of growth from the condition in which the Savior found it unto its final condition of perfection and greatness.

III. Its Consummation. Jesus has not at this place described the consummation. Daniel foretold, 2:35, that it should fill "the whole earth". At 7:13, 14, Daniel taught that the kingdom of the "son of man" should break down all other kingdoms and that it would be everlasting. Psalm 72:1-8 teaches that the finished kingdom will flourish in righteousness and in "abundance of peace" unto the ends of the earth. While Jesus taught in Matt. 31:25-46 that the righteous of His kingdom will live forever.

This great accomplishment is being wrought by Christ through Christianity. To the Christian individual, Christianity means that the individual Christian will live with Christ, John 14:19; will be glorified together with Him, Rom. 8:17; "will be fashioned like unto his glorious body", Phil. 3:20, 21; will rule with Him, 2 Tim. 2:12; will be "joint heir" with Him, Rom. 8:17.

Christianity means that the world will be revolutionized, permeated with the teachings and Spirit of Christ; that the kingdom under the whole heavens will be brought into obedience unto Christ, and filled with the righteousness of Christ and God. Christianity, through the church, 2 Tim. 2:12, will, in the coming age, cleanse the kingdom of sin and of the curse. Rev. 21:3-5 and 22:3; and fill the earth with the glory of the Lord, Num. 14:21.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Majesty of Old Sol. Night's blackness fades to dark, then light gray, finally to dawn and daylight as Old Sol comes rushing up from the eastern depths of morn. What does he stand for? To night's revelers, he is the enemy which halts debauchery by the thrust of his piercing rays; to the righteous, he is the friend which lightens the pathway and the field for activity. To friend and foe, he spreads his indispensable light which gives life to grass, to herb, to beast, to fowl, to all. He melts the winter's snow; he sprouts the spring seed; he ripens the summer fruit, the fall grain; he comforts the sick! He is indispensable to the progress of man.
