

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 7, 1930

NUMBER 1

ONE OF THE SWEET OLD CHAPTERS

By Alice B. Curtis

Let us read a sweet old chapter
When the dew lies on the flowers;
For the heart is most receptive
In the quiet morning hours;
It may be a Psalm from David,
Or a lesson from Saint Paul,
A vision from the prophets,
Or the story of man's fall.

But o'er and o'er we read of Him,
The blessed Son of God,
Who for the love He bore mankind,
The path of suffering trod.
We need these precious chapters old,
From God's pure word of truth;
They are our staff when we grow old,
Our guide throughout our youth.

Their thoughts go with us through the day,
And make life's lessons plain.
They teach us of a blissful time,
When Christ shall come and reign.
Then read them in the morning hour;
And when the day is done
And stars are shining overhead,
We'll read another one.

They soothe the tired, care-worn brain,
The jaded nerves find rest,
Life's burden seems to drop from us,
That through the day oppressed.
We pray that God will guide our feet
Along life's changeful way,
And lead us to the better land
Of everlasting day.

His lovingkindness reaches us;
We share His sovereign grace;
We long to be with Him we love,
And see our Father's face.
We feel that He is near to us,
And will His watchcare keep,
When we shall fold our weary hands
And lie in quiet sleep.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

But as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy temple." — Psalm 5:7.

OUR BIBLE WORK

WITH OCTOBER THE SIXTH, our Bible Training Class for 1930-31 begins. According to the last report received from the different ones expressing their intentions, this class will be the largest of any to date. Ten had indicated desire of taking up this Bible work, but two have found it inopportune at this time.

This phase of our work builds for Christian and church strength for years and decades to come. Those who take up the work are investing their time and strength with a view to a life service for the Master. Those from far and near who unite to make this work possible are giving from the fruits of their labors in service to God.

In one thing all are urged to unite: in earnest, daily prayer to God that He will guide students, instructors, and contributors to the end that this Bible Training Class work shall redound to the glory and honor of God.

WORSHIP

"The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him."

CREATED MAN IS DEPENDENT upon many different things for his growth, and for his attainment unto those heights for which he was made opportune. He must look to the earth for bread and meat to sustain him. He is dependent upon the air for oxygen which furnishes body heat. He draws from the sun, from the earth, and from all of his environments.

Likewise, and of far more importance, must man come in touch with the Creator, himself, if he is to rise to that height which God in His plans has made possible. One of the most direct ways for man to come in touch with his Maker is by the practice of true, spiritual worship of Him.

Man grows to understand best those with whom he associates most constantly and most closely. Likewise, man comes to understand and appreciate God most as he comes into closest contact with Him. One phase of that contact he can gather by the careful and understanding study of His Word; another phase of it is experienced by the spirit of God being placed upon and around him. But there is still another phase of contact with God that can come in no other way than by the true and earnest worship of God by the individual.

As habitual respect and honor to one's parents is required principally for the benefit of the child, so worship of God is required chiefly for the good of the worshiper. As God provided manna to Israel that Israel might be strengthened and enabled to accomplish her national goal, so worship has been ordained of God that man might be strengthened and enabled to mold his life after the pattern of God's Son.

Worship, like bread, and air, and water, is provided man for man's good. Nor should man be as greedy to accumulate and lay by in store those natural foods for the body as much as he should be greedy to gather in of and fill his storehouse with the Bread of Heaven.

God seeks spiritual worshippers that spiritual worshippers may become God-like.

ASSEMBLINGS

"Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; . . . Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." — Hebrews 10:23-25.

FROM EARLIEST TIMES, God has instructed that men should assemble together before Him. Israel could not expect to receive the benefits of her feast days by observing them domestically in their respective homes. She was to have her people assemble in one gathering before the Lord, and thus encourage and inspire each other in those festal services. So also, under Christ, Christians from the earliest days of Christianity have been taught and exhorted to assemble for the mutual strength and steadfastness of faith, and to do so the more often as they see the day of the Lord approaching.

On every hand our times bristle with evidences of the rapidly approaching end of this Gentile day, therefore, evidences, also, of the approaching day of our Savior. Accordingly, all those who would be Christians in deed and in truth are exhorted to assemble together frequently in the name of our Lord, not only for individual benefit, but for mutual uplift as well.

That such assemblings are to the end that the individuals may be strengthened in the inner man is evident from the Scriptures. This is not a formal duty which one should perform in a routine manner, but rather a duty for individual uplift in godliness. Christian assemblies should be assemblies for worship equally, if not more, than assemblies for Scripture study and Scripture analysis. The study and the analysis should not be neglected — they, too, are essential; neither should worship be neglected. In fact, worship, so long as it is intelligent and spiritual worship, is of equal or greater importance than some other engagements of an assembly.

The opportunity of assembling for worship and study upon that day of the week — Sunday — which throughout the Christian world has been set aside by many governments as a holiday, on which to commemorate the resurrection of our Savior, is one of the Christian's greatest opportunities and blessings. Would that each could cultivate and develop such closeness with his heavenly Father and with his Savior that he would deny every interfering matter that claims priority over that of assembling ourselves together.

THE SOURCES OF ST. PAUL'S PEDAGOGY

RACIAL INFLUENCES

SAUL OF TARSUS was conspicuously a son of his race. He could well say that he was a Hebrew of the Hebrews. He had advanced in the religion of the Jews beyond many who were of equal age with him in his nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the traditions of his fathers. His whole training had been geared to the watchwords, "Learn — teach; teach — learn." To him, as to all the sons of Israel, piety and education were inseparable. Education was the handmaid of religion; religion was the sponsor of education.

The principles of his religion and his education were the product of a remarkable history and are preserved in a unique literature. A study of this literature should reveal to us some of the sources of his pedagogy. The Bible as a whole may be described not only as "centuries of intense experience made poignantly articulate"; it is an educational code, and its history is a history of education. "The genius of the Hebrew lay in his masterful absorbing function, by which he transformed and transfigured the products thereof in the alembic of his soul. Whatever served this instinct was utilized and sublimated. He religionized everything into an ethical monotheism and preserved it immortally in a Book, and with his pedagogical instinct, made his Holy God the world's Educator."

Saul had inherited from his race a strongly didactic nature. He was true to type. Edersheim's characterization of this "peculiar people" well befits him: "Excitable, impulsive, quick, sharp-witted, imaginative; fond of parable, pithy sayings, acute distinctions or pungent wit; reverent towards God and man, respectful in the presence of age; enthusiastic of learning and of superior mental endowments; most delicately sensitive in regard to the feelings of others; zealous; with intensely warm Eastern nature, ready to have each prejudice aroused; hasty and violent in passion but quickly assuaged."

He fell heir to a unique educational ideal. As a Pharisee he was brought up to consider the study and observance of the Laws of Jehovah as the supreme aim in life. "The honor of father and mother, acts of benevolence and kindness, hospitality to strangers, visiting the sick, devotions in prayer, promotion of peace among man and man, and study in general, remain intact against the exigencies of the world to come, but the study of the law outweighs them all."

This fundamental aim was to be attained, according to Josephus, by instruction in words and by exercises in practice. The method of Saul's education thus combined the theoretical and the practical, learning with doing. It made its appeal to the whole man: to the spirit — "The fear of Jehovah is the beginning of knowledge"; to the mind — "First learn, then understand"; to the body — "Not learning, but doing is the principal thing." It therefore called for a response from the whole man: the emotions, the intellect, and the will. It involved feeling, thinking, acting.

His education had sought not only to combine instruction in the positive truths of the ancestral faith with preparation for the practical duties of life, but it also had made these positive truths the controlling and dominating discipline both of the theoretical and the practical. It was religio-centric! Saul had therefore inherited the unique contribution of ancient Israel to the treasure-house of education, namely, the principle of religious culture as the organizing center of all education, and as the ruling discipline for the cultivation of character and life.

In his reverent survey of the history of his race, Saul could not but have been appreciably influenced by the personalities and principles of the great master teachers of his fathers. What a succession of teachers Israel had! They represented almost every type of leadership among his people: the Legislator, the Priest, the Psalmist, the Prophet, the Scribe, the Wise! Their combined contributions to the cause of moral and intellectual culture provide "a ca-

(Continued on page 7)

THE PRECIOUS BLOOD OF CHRIST

OF ALL THE TITLES which may adorn a page, none can be more appealing or more satisfying to the human heart (when rightly understood) than this. "The precious blood of Christ" has to do with the most near and the most distant needs of men, the greatest external and the most secretly internal of their actions and thoughts. When we say, "The precious blood of Christ," we have described the most precious object in God's sight, for it involves His dearly beloved and only begotten Son, and the most precious of His gifts to men, for all we are and have and hope for is dependent upon it.

Simon Peter had made a good confession when the Lord asked the twelve, "But whom say ye that I am?" For he answered promptly, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." This confession the Lord said was the rock upon which He would build His church. That is to say, everyone to be acceptable as a member of His church must make this confession, believing in his heart, and making confession with his mouth. Rom. 10:9, 10. And Peter then and there was given the "keys" of the kingdom of heaven. Matt. 16:13-19.

First Peter used the "key" to admit the Jews, when on the day of Pentecost he was constituted by the Holy Spirit the chief spokesman for the risen Lord. He called upon all (and there were thousands of listeners) to repent and believe the gospel, accepting Jesus as both Lord and Christ. Acts 2:14-40. The remission of sins was the prime need of the Jews, and here it was offered freely in the name of the Lord Jesus. Acts 2:38. The other "key" was used about three and a half years later, when Peter was sent to preach repentance and the forgiveness of sins to the first Gentile hearers — Cornelius and his household. Both Jew and Gentile were accepted on the same terms, and the Holy Spirit was poured out on all the believers. Acts 2:38, 39; 10:30-34; Eph. 1:13.

TO THE JEW FIRST

Our Lord's ministry, and the ministry of the disciples during His presence with them on earth, was confined to the Israelites living in Palestine and those who came up to the Holy Land from abroad to observe the prescribed feasts. But after our Lord's death and resurrection the disciples were sent to make disciples of all nationalities. The Jews were to hear first, because special promises had been given them, and Jesus was the One foretold in the prophets who should be their King and Leader. The kingdom of heaven was preached to them, and they were given every encouragement to enter into all that was implied in that term. Jesus came to His own, and as many as received Him were given the privilege of becoming the sons of God. John 1:11 and 12.

It is quite understandable, then, that in writing the wonderful epistle of which the words quoted form a part, the apostle addressed first the believers in his own nation, the Jews. And his message was for all believing Jews wherever resident. He calls them the "strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia;" more literally, "the sojourners of the Dispersion," referring to the Jews living scattered about in the Gentile countries. But, as may be seen by reading his two letters, Peter's message is

ALSO TO THE GENTILE

The dispersion of the Jews among the Gentiles, dating principally from the time of Nebuchadnezzar's invasions, resulted (in the course of successive centuries, under the Medo-Persian, Grecian and Roman conquests) in their settling in all the provinces of the empire. We can see from the book of the Acts of the Apostles that the gospel messengers found Jews wherever they went. This dispersion of the Jews was of benefit to the Gentiles, in that it placed in their midst representatives of the true God. Where the Jews observed their law, and lived as nearly as possible blameless lives, their Gentile neighbors would take note, and thus some proselytes were made to the Jewish faith.

When the council was held by the apostles at Jerusalem to determine the proper attitude toward the law of the Gentile converts to Christianity, this benefit was referred to: "For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every day." So that the Gentiles were in a position to know the ordinances of the law on the things mentioned in Acts 15:20, 28, 29; and any not already familiar with the Jewish method of slaughtering meat to avoid eating the blood could easily inform themselves. The prohibition against blood was not a new thing when given at Sinai; for the Lord had given Noah the same prohibition. Gen. 9:3, 4. As stated in Leviticus 17:11, "The life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul."

So we see that while for health's sake the eating of blood, and of things strangled (which prevents the blood from being drained out), is to be avoided, there is even a deeper reason; namely, that God required of them various offerings for thanksgiving, and also offerings by the priests to make atonement for sins by the offering of animal sacrifices, the blood of which would be sprinkled upon the altar, and once a year upon the Mercy Seat in the Inner Sanctuary. Lev. 4; 5; 16; Heb. 9:7. The advantage to the Gentiles in having the Jews living among them was not only in respect of morals and cleanliness, and the making of proselytes or converts to Judaism, but more especially, after the gospel began to be preached, in helping them to understand the ritual of the law which the gospel showed to have been largely typical in character.

If the Jews as Jews failed to realize the limitations of the law and the inability of the blood of bulls and of goats to take away sins, the gospel made these things clear to those of the nation who were willing to give attention to the apostolic preaching. The apostles and first disciples were Jews familiar with the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms, and the Gentile converts were advantaged by association with believers well acquainted with the Scriptures and versed in the meaning of the offerings now seen to have been types of our Lord Jesus Christ and His work.

So we say again, it is not surprising that the Apostle Peter, in writing a general epistle to the church as a whole, should first address it to the believing brethren who belonged to the Dispersion but were now "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 1:2. Then in chapter 2, after describing the church as built up of "lively (or living) stones," a "spiritual house," and as constituting "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people," the apostle brings in the Gentiles, and shows that believers from them are accepted.

Commenting on this prophecy concerning "a peculiar people," Peter quotes it as now applicable to the called from among the Gentiles; for he says: "Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God; which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." 1 Peter 2:10. This was the state of the Gentile nations up to the time the gospel was sent to them: they were not the people of God, the Jews only being recognized under that term (Ex. 19:3-6; Amos 3:1, 2); the Gentiles, on the other hand, were "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Eph. 2:12. Something occurred which altered this status of the Gentiles, and Paul as well as Peter tells us what it was: "But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes (i. e., in the period preceding the preaching of Jesus) were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ." Eph. 2:13.

Thus the great power of the blood of Christ is testified to by both these inspired apostles of the Lamb. The blood of Christ had power to change the position in God's sight of both Jew and Gentile, notwithstanding the differences in their history, training and manner of life. Therefore, the apostles in their preaching and writings were commissioned to preach the same gospel to all peoples and all nations alike — salvation through faith in the precious blood of Christ. — The New Covenant Advocate.

"WE ARE LIKE A VAST CHAIN of mountain peaks. Some of us have our heads in the clouds always, up among the eternal snows. Thunders boom about us, lightning rives us, storm and sleet beat upon us. There is a rumbling on some distant peak and we know that it rains there, too. That is all we ever know. We are not quite sure when our neighbors are happy or when they are troubled; when there is sun or when there is storm. The secret forces on the interior of the mountain work on unceasingly. The distance hides it all. We never get near enough to another peak to see the scars upon the surface, to know of the dead timber and the dried streams, the marks of avalanches and glacial drift, the precipices and the pitfalls, the barren wastes. In blue, shimmering distance the peaks are veiled, and all seem fair but our own."

PROOF

"Prove all things: hold fast that which is good."

PROOF! PROOF! is the cry of our generation, not knowing what it asks. God can neither be demonstrated nor argued down. If we could prove God in the manner of a theorem of geometry, He would not be the God we need or seek. He is God just because a proof that would put Him beyond reach of all possible cavil is impossible — just because He can and does confirm himself against all denials and contradictions, being himself the Author of the issues which prompt these denials and contradictions. Also, such proof as men demand is by nature a compulsion; and nowhere is compulsion more out of place than in the life of faith — since God and the soul must be free. Argument is both unnecessary and unworthy; only insight can show the way. — Joseph Fort Newton in "The Christian World."

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE

RECOGNIZE THE BIBLE AS GOD-INSPIRED. Second Timothy 3:16. The Bible is in a class by itself, distinct from all other books. Approach it with reverence and faith. Believe that it is God's Word. Some one has said: "The real Bible student never places a question mark where God has placed a period." Accept the whole Bible.

Accept the Bible in the Spirit. 1 Cor. 3:16. The natural man cannot receive the message of the Bible, for it is spiritually discerned. We must be in tune before we can get the message. The Holy Spirit must be our teacher, giving understanding, and unfolding the Word to us. "Lean not to thine own understanding" when studying the Bible.

Take the message into your own life. Psalms 119:11. When you read the Bible, try to remember it. Memorize it. And then apply it to yourself — not to John or Sue. Open your heart for the flood-light of God's Word. Apply its reproof and correction; take its promises and treasure them. Read the Bible, not primarily to get material for lessons or talks, nor to amass knowledge about it, but read it first of all as God's message to you.

Always be a learner. Matt. 11:29. Take the attitude of Mary — sit at the Master's feet. Never answer back, or question, but accept it as unquestionably as a child. No matter how much you may learn, you never come to the last lesson. There is always much more ahead.

Rightly Divide the Word. 2 Tim. 2:15. Much need not be said. We have only to look around us to see the pitiful condition of those who have rushed in and read carelessly. The Bible is its own best commentary — read it and compare it with itself; sift and weigh and ponder, and go thoughtfully in your study.

Obey implicitly. Heb. 5:8, 9. "Light obeyed, increased light; light resisted, darkest night." As God brings some new command to your attention, obey instantly. It is the only safe rule for progress. — Selected.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE INSIGHT OF THE PURE IN HEART

A CALL TO PRAISE

Sunday, October 12 — Psalm 67.

"O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth." — V. 4.

JESUS SAID THAT the pure in heart are "happy", for they shall see God. These verses of David's reflect the same joy, showing the reason for it in the fact that righteousness and justice shall prevail in the day when God shall rule. The seventy-second Psalm also portrays these same happy conditions when "all nations shall call him blessed," and the whole earth shall be filled with His glory. Truly, the anticipation is just cause for praise to God from all His children.

SIMEON THE RIGHTEOUS

Monday, October 13 — Luke 2:25-35.

"For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people." — VV. 30, 31.

ALL THE GLORIOUS anticipation which we have of the future, when every trace of evil shall be wiped from the face of the earth, when men shall dwell together in peace and harmony, and all is perfection, centers round one person only. And that One is none other than Jesus, the Christ. Simeon recognized this truth when his eyes beheld the infant Savior. A thoughtful reading will disclose much depth of meaning in the few words he uttered on that occasion.

ANNA THE PROPHETESS

Tuesday, October 14 — Luke 2:36-39.

"And she coming in that instant gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem." — V. 38.

FOR LONG, WEARY YEARS faithful Jewish hearts had waited for the Messiah who was to redeem them from the just, but cruel fate that had befallen them because of sin. The birth of this One was indeed "good tidings of great joy." But comparatively only few accepted Him, Anna, the aged prophetess, being one of the few. Joseph of Arimathea was another who "waited for the kingdom of God," Mark 15:43. Cleophas, brother-in-law of Mary, Jesus' mother, said that he believed Jesus was the One who was to redeem Israel. Luke 24:21. Thus all down through the ages, to those who truly love God, insight is given into God's purposes for men through the gift of His Son.

PURE HEARTS IN HOLY PLACES

Wednesday, October 15 — Psalm 24.

"He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation." — V. 5.

THE CONTEMPLATION of these wonderful blessings would avail us naught, if we did not put ourselves in the way of receiving of their benefits. Psalm 1 and Psalm 15 also tell us who they are that shall receive of God's bountiful provision for His children. Let us prayerfully study His word that we may know what He desires of us, and then go forward in Christian obedience.

SEEING THE INVISIBLE

Thursday, October 16 — 2 Kings 6:8-17.

"Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." — V. 16.

THIS LITTLE STORY OF ELISHA and his servant illustrates how God cared for His prophet in times of danger. Elisha seemed to realize God's protecting care, for he prayed God to open the eyes of the servant that he might also know that "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him." Psa. 34:7. Are we justified in relying upon God's protection today?

SEEING THE ETERNAL

Friday, October 17 — 2 Corinthians 4:8-18.

"Though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." — V. 16.

PAUL SPEAKS OFTEN of the outward man and the inward man. The outward man is the one we all see, the fleshly, carnal nature that finally ends in death. The inward man is the "new man" which we put on at baptism and which is "renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him." Col. 3:10. By continually denying supremacy to the outward man, and yielding to the dictates of the inward man, we will gradually be transformed, no longer serving self, but serving God, in the strength of our Savior. Read Rom. 7 and 8.

SEEING HIS FACE

Saturday, October 18 — Revelation 22:1-7.

"Behold, I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." — V. 7.

THE READINGS OF THE WEEK all tend toward the joyful realization of the blessings God has in store for the pure in heart. To know how we may attain to these is the duty of each and every Christian. By learning what God's desires are for us, and daily building character in that direction, we will finally reach the goal of the pure in heart — seeing God. — M. G.

"Lord, whence are those blood-drops all of the way
That mark out the mountain's track?"

"They were shed for one who had gone astray Ere the Shepherd could bring him back."

"Lord, whence are Thy hands so rent and torn?"

"They were pierced tonight by many a thorn."

THE SOURCES OF ST. PAUL'S PEDAGOGY

(Continued from page 3)

tena of pedagogic principles without a parallel in ancient literature."

There was Moses, who won for himself the well-deserved title, "The Father of Wisdom." He possessed forty-nine of the fifty divisions of wisdom. His personality fairly radiated the truth which he communicated. As the mouth-piece of Jehovah, he taught "by power of a tremendous and impressive example," in public and in private, by word and symbol, by command and by act. He sagaciously sensed the significance of critical situations, and courageously shaped them to beneficent ends. To every Israelite he was as a prince among teachers. He was Israel's greatest schoolmaster. His influence on Saul's pedagogical sense, therefore, was not a little. Paul refers to Moses (or quotes him) twenty-five times. When he stood before King Agrippa he based his defense on the fact that he "stood unto this day, testifying both to small and great, saying nothing but what the prophets and Moses did say should come." To Saul, Moses as a teacher, "mighty in his words and works," was significantly real.

The Priests exercised with their priestly function a powerful educative influence. Their long spotless linen robes and solemn bearing clothed them with peculiar dignity. They projected the spiritual into the secular and the secular into the spiritual (sometimes at the baneful expense of the spiritual). When they were faithful in teaching ordinances, the law of Jehovah, worship, and the fear of Jehovah, they "strengthened moral conscience, softened public manners, and educated society." They taught by symbol and ceremony, by giving practical advice, and in presiding over judicial matters. Their appeal was not so much to the conscience as to the feelings; not so much to the imagination as to the emotions. On this basis they sought to educate the will. "Keep the Law, carefully observe the ceremonies," was their never varying exhortation to the nation and individual alike. They added their speech to the educative voices of the past that rang in the ears of Saul of Tarsus. But they exercised their influence on Saul also, in person. "Then Paul took men, and the next day, purifying himself with them, went into the temple, declaring the fulfillment of the days of purification, until the offering was offered for every one of them."

No less was the educative influence of the Psalmists. It was in the sublimity and tenderness of expression of the Psalms that Saul learned and was prepared to teach the "universal language of religious emotion." "The beauty of image, boldness of expression, and the brevity and elegance of Hebrew poetry would render it wonderfully suitable to the romantic fervor of the youthful mind, more especially as to those characteristics are added, with uncommon freedom of metaphor and vividness of ornament, the blending of references to the natural objects of the country, the occupation of the people, the history of their nation, and the manners of common life. The parallelisms of sentiment in the sacred hymns must greatly have assisted the learner in committing those hymns to memory."

— From The Pedagogy of St. Paul, by Kuist.

GUTENBERG BIBLE IN LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

PACKED IN A STRONG TRUNK and secured with many seals, one of the three existing perfect copies of the Gutenberg Bible printed on vellum was quite recently brought from Europe in the personal custody of Dr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian, and placed in the Library of Congress. It was one of the first important products of the Gutenberg press after the invention of printing.

The whole edition consisted of thirty copies on vellum and six times that number on paper. The exact date of its issue is not known, but it was prior to August 24, 1456. The other two perfect copies known to be in existence are in the national libraries at London and Paris.

The copy now acquired by the Library of Congress was discovered more than a century ago in the Benedictine abbey of Saint Blasius in the Black Forest. Moved from place to place in the turbulent years following the French Revolution, it was sold four years ago to Dr. Vollbehr by the abbot of St. Paul for a quarter of a million dollars which the ecclesiastic wished to spend on his monastery.

Under authority granted by the last session of Congress, it has now been acquired as one of the priceless literary treasures of our own national library. As soon as necessary arrangements can be made, it will be placed on exhibit near a famous portrait of Gutenberg painted by an unknown artist probably in the eighteenth century. — The Protestant.

A PARENTS' PRAYER

God bless our little ones tonight,
Our little ones — and Thine.
Protect their slumber by Thy might.
Grant them Thy peace divine.
Help us no duty to forget
We owe to them or Thee,
And leave us nothing to regret
In years that are to be.

God bless our little ones tonight,
Our little ones — and Thine.
Help us to rear them true, and right,
And clean, and strong, and fine.
Lead them in ways more beautiful
Than we have ever seen,
And make them each more dutiful
Than we have ever been.

— Clarence E. Flynn.

THE MILLENNIUM

AS RELATED TO THE CHURCH

By F. L. Austin

JUST AS CHRIST WAS MADE PERFECT through suffering, Hebrews 5:8, before He reached the millennial age of the occupancy of His throne, so the church must be made ready for her position with Christ, preparatory to the introduction of the millennial age. In order then to get a mental vision of the church as it is related to the millennium, it seems best that we study the church from the beginning of its establishment by Christ.

Parables and other figures of speech are used in great variation throughout the Bible to illustrate given and particular truths. For instance, the kingdom of God is illustrated by numerous parables: the sower, good seed, mustard seed, measures of meal, treasures hid in a field, a merchant man, a net, a householder, etc. The wide range of illustrations is used each to illustrate some particular phase of the kingdom. As a whole, the kingdom, in one phase or another, is like unto these illustrations. So also the church of God. Different biblical illustrations are used to explain the standing, and the position, and the purpose of the church.

Ephesians five definitely explains that in a particular sense the church stands before Christ as a wife stands before her husband. Christ in a special manner died for the church, Eph. 5:25-27. This does not even suggest that Christ died only for the church. Indeed, He died for all. But the benefit to be bestowed upon the church, as a result of the Savior's death, is vastly greater than the benefits to be bestowed on others.

In a special way Christ left His Father that He might be joined unto the church, Eph. 5:31, of which in the following verse Paul expressly states, "I speak concerning Christ and the church."

This verse 31 is a distinct reference to Gen. 2:24, which latter verse describes the relative position of Adam and Eve. God first created Adam, then out of Adam He created the woman. Likewise, God first created Christ; now and since, out of Christ He is creating the church. Again as the woman was created for the man, 1 Cor. 11:8, 9, so is the church created for Christ, Eph. 5:27. And also as Eve was made like unto her husband in matter, like in inheritance of all things, so in God's purpose is the church made like unto the second Adam. Also as Eve was made joint heir with Adam of the fullness of that which Adam received from the Father in the beginning, so is the church in God's purpose made joint heir with Christ of all that Christ received from His Father, Rom. 8:17.

A brief enlargement of the previous statements may be of advantage. Christ in His resurrection was declared to be free from the dominion of death. Death shall have no more dominion over Him, Rom. 6:9. Never again can an individual or a nation take the life of Jesus. He is beyond man's power, even beyond the power of death. In this He is immortal, 2 Tim. 1:9, 10; that is, He is not liable to death. He is incorruptible; that is, it is impossible that either morally or physically He should corrode, corrupt, decay. He is spiritual, 1 Cor. 15:45; that is, He is motivated, sustained, nourished, in every way kept by God's power.

In like manner, the church, in God's purpose, is to be changed from the present mortal nature of its individual members to immortal nature, 1 Cor. 15:53. The state of corruptibility is to be changed to a state of incorruptibility, 1 Cor. 15:52, 53. In this manner, the present state of susceptibility to death is to be changed to a state when the church shall no more taste of death, 1 Cor. 15:54-57. And the church will partake of the spiritual nature and status and standing of Christ, its Head, 1 Cor. 15:44-49. The church, which is to stand related to Christ similarly as Eve was related to Adam, is to be "fashioned like unto his glorious body," Phil. 3:20, 21. Also, she is to be made joint heirs with Christ as well as to be glorified together with Him, Rom. 8:17. Joint heirship with Christ must of necessity make the church an heir, a joint heir with Christ "of all things," Heb. 1:2.

Some of the "all things" of which Christ was made Heir are interesting to recall. To Christ, the Father has given the power "to have life in himself," John 5:26, not merely to live for a limited period, but to possess in himself the power of life. To be joint heirs with Christ necessitates that the church shall likewise have this power within herself. This is confirmed in such statements as Luke 20:36; Rom. 6:6-11. To Christ hath been committed the judgment of all men, John 5:27. That the church is joint heir with Him in this particular is assured by Titus 2:12. To Christ has been given the power to raise the dead. That the church will be joint workers with Christ in this vast redemption of sin's captives is most pleasing indeed.

The millennium is not so much a date of time as it is a status of conditions. The date is merely the time when these conditions shall begin to prevail. The millennium conditions are dependent upon Christ and Christ's perfected church. Before the church can engage with Christ in the judgment rule of the world, she must herself have been brought to her fullness with Christ.

All this is clearly revealed in such passages as 1 Thess. 4:13-17. Christ leaves His Father's throne and from mid-heaven calls "with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God," awakens from death those of His people who are sleeping. He changes those who remain alive and gathers both the raised and the changed living ones to meet Him in the air.

The writer then proceeds in the following verses (next chapter) to assure that these things and many others will be unexpected by the great world of wickedness and wrath. It is only the church who is to be called out and fashioned like unto Christ at that time. The world at that time will be in the condition described in 1 Thess. 5.

Christ in Matt. 16:27 foretells that He is to "come in the glory of his father with his angels." In Matt. 25:31 Jesus declares, "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." Rev. 20:4 refers to Christ introducing the millennium by reigning over the earth. Like Adam, who must of necessity be possessed of his bride, Eve, before he could proceed to endeavor to execute the commands of God of Gen. 1:26-28, so Christ raises, changes, glorifies, makes like unto himself, His church, which in a sense is to Him as a bride to her husband, preparatory for this reign of the thousand years.

The millennium, then, as it is related to the church sees the church in her perfected, glorified state at its inception. She is not then to be changed, but having been changed, proceeds with Christ to exercise world-wide judgment. She is not then to be given life; but having received life of Christ, proceeds with Him to administer life. She is not then to be taught and ruled unto righteousness; but having been made righteous by Christ, she proceeds with Christ to rule in righteousness throughout the millennial day.

The house of Aaron was to assist Aaron in waiting upon the tabernacle of God and in making atonement for the nation of Israel, Num. 8:19, and with Aaron was made to inherit God, Num. 18:20, not to inherit with the twelve tribes of Israel. So the church having been given to Christ is made to inherit, with Christ, God and all God's gifts to His Son, and no longer to be heirs with the world of God's gifts to its people. Not now, but in the millennium will the fullness of this inheritance begin to be realized. The status of the church in the great day of Christ's reign will be that of assistant to her Lord, not that of being tried, and tested, and weighed for acceptance.

PRAY AND DO

The following truth-stored verses were received from A. Leonard Brady of Los Angeles. They were probably clipped from the "Fraternal Visitor" of England by his father, A. E. Brady of Birmingham, England. We regret that the author's name is not known. — Ed.

"No answer comes to those who pray
 And idly stand,
 And wait for stones to roll away
 At God's command.
 He will not break the binding cords
 Upon us laid,
 If we depend on pleading words
 And do not aid.
 But he that prayeth and is strong
 In faith and deed,
 And toileth earnestly, 'ere long
 He will succeed."

TO GET AN IDEA of what a billion is and what the world war cost in money, consider the fact that if a person started at one and counted every hour of his life, he could never count a billion. — S. E. H.

THE TRIAL OF YOUR FAITH

ISRAEL HAD TAKEN THEIR JOURNEY from Succoth, and were encamped at Etham, in the edge of the wilderness, when the Lord said, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon: before it shall ye encamp by the sea."

When at Etham the children of Israel were in direct line for Horeb, the mount of God, and, had they continued their course as it would seem they had planned, they might have gone forward without having to cross the sea. This was the natural course for them to have continued. But here the Lord intervened and instructed that they turn short to the right and march toward the sea. Nothing but faith could have prompted Moses to follow this instruction, as to all natural reason, it would have seemed the height of folly, for this way led them to a place where they would be shut in on every side. To the one side of them was the craggy, impassable range, Pi-hahiroth; to the other was Migdol and Baal-zephon, which some have supposed were forts and garrisons of the Egyptians; to their front was the sea, and, soon to put in their appearance, at the rear was the raging host of Pharaoh.

How different is faith from sight, and how far it is beyond reason! For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are His ways above our ways, and His thoughts above our thoughts. The life of faith is very different from the life known by the ordinary man. Abraham went out not knowing whither he went, but he knew God had spoken. He believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness. The same was now true in the life of the pilgrim Israelites. It was indeed to be the obedience of faith on their part, for in no sense was it a natural plan that led them to this place.

And does not this bring a lesson to us? How often have we started out full of encouragement and hope, and it has seemed that all before us would be but clear sailing toward the desire of our souls, in compliance with the will of God. But, alas, how suddenly all has changed, and we have found ourselves shut in on every side. Reason would suggest disaster, tell us we had missed the way we should have gone, and the adversary would accuse and seek to torment. Have we yet learned that God has His hand in the shaping of our lives, and plans our way? Can we rest where sight cannot see, believing that all things work together for good to them that love God? There may be another time in our experience when we will find ourselves hedged in on every side, and when none other than God can let us out. But He is able. And only experience can be our proper teacher in the wonderful school of faith.

But Israel became confused when they found themselves shut in on every side, and heard the approaching chariots of Pharaoh and his host. And we are not blaming them. Neither does God seem to blame them at this time. His blame of them came after He had many times proved His willingness and ability to meet their need, and yet they would not learn. God does not reject us for our ignorance of Him and of His plan. When He first begins to teach us, He knows we are but dust and need to learn; but He is provoked when He finds that, however many times He may prove himself, He is yet doubted and reproached.

Poor Israel had ample natural cause for fear, and did fear. Let us look at them. They were a great host, but they were trudging, unarmed, undisciplined, escaping slaves. For so long they had known nothing but bondage; they had been born in the homes of helpless servitude; and now their former over-lords and task-masters, together with a mighty armed force, were rushing down upon them. Was not that a proper occasion for fear? But God, whose wisdom had planned their way, had taken all of that into consideration. This was to be their first step in learning discipline, and learning the way of faith, under the Captain of their salvation.

Ah, brother, when we came to God, we too were unschooled in the ways of holy war. But the man of God is to be a soldier, and fight the good fight of faith with weapons which are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. Paul, as well as Israel, felt his weakness to meet the foe, and confessed, "And I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling." But divine training taught him to trust where he could not see, and to rely on God, who enabled him also to testify, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Thank God for the power of God right in the midst of seeming impossibilities!

In their confession and stress, Israel did not forget to call upon God. But, with their prayers, they poured out also a volume of accusation against God's servant Moses, blaming him for all the misfortune which seemed so evidently to have befallen them. Here was weakness, a weakness which is yet often found. It seems natural for one, if he is giving way to unbelief, instead of exerting faith to blame another for all his unfortunate state. But when we find one who is not making the spiritual progress he should, blaming another because he is not free, and blessed, we may usually, if not always, know that the person himself has lost sight of the Lord, and not because of others. It is God who brings us into the straitened place, and He does so that we may learn to pray and to trust. "Is any afflicted, let him pray." Poor Moses, was he to blame because God was thus leading Israel?

Beware of unbelief. War against it from the first day of your surrender to the living God. It is a dangerous and poisonous tree, and grows luxuriously in the soil of test and trial. In their trial, Israel lost all sight of the manifest presence of the Lord among them. All they could see was their hedged in condition, and that they were being rapidly pursued by a malignant enemy. They blamed the holy man of God, whom the Lord had sent to be to them a deliverer. Yet, all this time, just as clear as ever before, stood the cloudy pillar by day and the pillar of fire by night. Had they but looked up, they would have seen it, and by it, have recognized that God was in the way they took, and, if blame were to be placed, it must be upon Him, and not upon His servant Moses.

If we have been walking with God and seeking His will, no matter how dark the way may become, nor what may be the seeming hindrances to advancement, God is right there with us, having said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." And the truth is we are losing nothing, and are really in no danger, for the test of faith is to greatly enrich our walk, and inheritance. "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

Too much value has been put upon the way one feels, the joy and sunshine of the Christian life. These have their place, but the joy of faith outshines them all. It was this joy of faith in the life of Jesus that enabled Him to so triumphantly endure the cross, despising the shame. He looked forward and saw the joy set before Him. When Daniel had learned the way of faith, he could rest his soul on the bosom of God, even when thrown to the lions. So it was also with Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego, when they were to be cast into the fiery furnace. Throughout the Bible we see faith shining above the darkness of its opponent unbelief. May the Lord help us to once and forever consecrate our entire lives to Him, and count it done; to get everything upon His altar, and keep it there. Then, when causes for discouragement and doubt arise, knowing we have done what we could, let us trust through whatever experience we may have to pass, for God has begun a good work in us, and will finish it. — Selected by Madeline Gardiner.

THERE WAS NO ROOM FOR CHRIST in the inn; have you room for Him in your heart?

A PRAYER FOR TODAY

"O GOD, GIVE ME STRENGTH to live another day; let me not turn coward before its difficulties, or prove recreant to its duties. Let me not lose faith in myself, in my fellow men or in Thee; keep me sweet and sound at heart, in spite of ingratitude, treachery or meanness.

"Preserve me, O my Father, from minding little stings, or giving them. Help me to keep my heart clean, and to live so honestly and fearlessly that no outward failure can dishearten me, or take away the joy of conscious integrity. Open wide the eyes of my soul, that I may see good in all things.

"Grant, this day, some new vision of Thy truth. Inspire me with the spirit of joy and gladness, and make me a cup of strength to suffering souls. All this I ask in the name of the strong Deliverer: Amen."

A prayer for the clean page of life, for every day. Learn it by heart. Then God help us all to practice it.

— M. A. Woodward.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee. Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"INASMUCH AS YE HAVE DONE IT UNTO ONE OF THE LEAST OF THESE MY BRETHREN, YE HAVE DONE IT UNTO ME." — MATTHEW 25:40.

A MESSAGE FOR ILLINOIS BEREANS

ONCE MORE THE ILLINOIS BEREANS are back from their conference with new ideas and plenty of pep and energy for the new year's work.

There is plenty to do and if we will all work together we can make this the best year yet. The officers are ready to work but they must have the help of every Berean. Remember, we stand for unity, truth and righteousness.

Here are a few of the things that you can do to help:

If your class needs help of any kind let your president; Bro. Elmer Goekler of Marshall, know about it, and he will be glad to help you.

When you receive report cards to be filled out or letters to be answered, act promptly. Other societies want to know what your society is doing. Your secretary cannot tell them unless you report to her.

Do you know of anyone who is sick, lonely or in sorrow? Have any of your friends been baptized lately? If so, send word to the chairman of our sunshine committee, Sr. Dorothy W. Lyon, 215 N. First St., Rockford. She will be glad to have you cooperate with her.

Sr. Elizabeth Ford, 305 E. Fellows St., Dixon, is chairman of the literary committee. If you get a letter from her asking for an article, don't say, "I can't," but do your best.

Do you know of any children who do not belong to a junior Berean society? If so, write to Sr. Ednah Cooper, Ripley. She will take care of them.

Don't forget Sr. Anna Drew, 629 N. Galena Ave., Dixon. She is our state conference treasurer. She is always glad to receive any help that you are able to give her, no matter how small, to assist in carrying on the state work. No matter how much you do to help in her work, you will always be willing to admit when you receive her answering letter that she has done much more for you.

Work hard in your own society! Let us each one try to make our own society the best in the state.

How many new societies are you and I going to help organize this year? If you know of any group of people whom you think would be interested, get in touch with the Illinois Berean president.

Let us start the year right by working together!

Edna Wood, Secretary, Marshall.

DENYING SELF

THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY there are those who are suffering from lack of the necessities of life. There are those among our brethren who are not going to have enough food to keep their health or enough clothing and fuel to keep them warm during the severe winter months ahead, unless they receive help from someone.

As we go to our comfortable homes each day, let us think about these people. Let us think about them continually during the month of October. We should forego all luxuries such as ice cream sodas, gum, peanuts, magazines and countless other things, but we should go still farther. Those of us who live in cities can set our alarm clocks just a little earlier in order to walk those few blocks and thus put that dime in the pot. Those of us who cook our own meals should plan occasionally to substitute the cheaper foods for the more expensive and save the difference. Others who eat in restaurants can forego desserts and expensive meats. You will be able to think of countless places where you can cut a little off.

Money thus saved is put into the relief fund and wisely disbursed by Sr. Orpha Sanford, who is chairman of that committee. This will be a hard winter with so many unemployed. Cannot you and I see that our brethren are taken care of? I think we will.

WANTED

A Bible dictionary. If anyone has a Bible dictionary that is not being used and is only taking up needed room on the shelf, the Chicago Bereans can make good use of it. We are collecting a little library of reference books for use in our study. If you are able to help in a good cause, please correspond with the secretary, Miss Grace Laning, 4833 N. Keystone Ave., Chicago.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 18; California, 9; Indiana, 6; Nebraska, 2; Ohio, 4; Minnesota, 2; Michigan, 2; Florida, 1; Louisiana, 1; Arkansas, 1; Missouri, 1; Virginia, 1; New York, 1; Texas, 1; Alabama, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

SIMEON AND ANNA

"And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ."

MARY AND JOSEPH stayed with their little baby boy in Bethlehem for eight days. Then Joseph said to Mary: "It is time to take the baby to the house of God to give him to God and to name him." So they took the baby up to the house of God and they called his name Jesus, as the angel had told them.

Mary brought two little doves to sacrifice on the altar to God, to show how happy she was that God had given her a son. That was what they always did in those days when a baby boy was born.

While they were waiting there in the house of God, an old man came up to them. His name was Simeon. He was a very good man and he went very often to the house of God to pray. All of his life he had been waiting and hoping for the great Man of God that the people wanted. And at last God had told him that before he died, he should see this Man of God.

That very day Simeon came up to the temple to pray. While he was there he saw Mary and her baby boy. And all at once Simeon knew that this was the baby for whom he had been waiting and hoping so many years.

So Simeon went over to Mary and took the baby in his arms. Then he prayed to God and thanked Him, because he had lived to see the great Man of God. And he said that now he had lived long enough and was ready to die. These were the words he said: "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people."

While Simeon was speaking, there came up an old woman, whose name was Anna. She was a good woman, and she spent every day in the house of God, praying that the great Man of God might come soon. As soon as she saw the child, she also gave thanks to God and said: "This is the child for whom all the people have been waiting."

So Mary knew that the things that the angel had said to her were true, and that her baby was to be the greatest man of God that there ever was or ever can be. For He would show the people what God was like, and how God loved them. — From Boys and Girls of the Bible.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Locate the temple in the city of Jerusalem.
2. Read Luke 2:25 to 38.
3. Learn Luke 2:34.
4. Copy: Simeon — Holy Ghost told him Jesus was the Savior. Anna — prophetess who recognized the Savior.

COURAGE

"We may have courage, all of us,
To start at honor's call,
To meet a foe, protect a friend,
Or face a cannon ball,
To show the world one hero lives,
The foremost in the fight, —
But do we always manifest
The courage to do right?"

WHAT CHRIST SAID

I said, "Let me walk in the fields."
He said, "No, walk in the town."
I said, "There are no flowers there."
He said, "No flowers, but a crown."

I said, "But the air is thick,
And the fogs are veiling the sun."
He answered, "Yet souls are sick,
And souls in the dark undone."

I pleaded for time to be given.
He said, "Is it hard to decide?
It will not seem hard at even
To have followed the steps of your Guide."

I cast one look at the fields,
Then set my face to the town.
He said, "My child, do you yield?
Will you leave the flowers for the crown?"

Then into His hand went mine,
And into my heart came He;
And I walk in a light divine
The path I had feared to see.

— George MacDonald.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON III. — October 19, 1930

SIMEON AND ANNA

Luke 2:25-39

Devotional Reading: Psalm 84:1-7

GOLDEN TEXT

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. — Matthew 5:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Insight of the Pure in Heart.

Basic Truth. The pure in heart shall see God. Matt. 5:8.

Outline. I. How Wisdom Depends Upon Character. II. Purifying the Heart. III. Being Like Jesus.

I. How Wisdom Depends Upon Character. Character is what one is at heart. One's thoughts are determined by his character. He who sails the ocean throughout life is a sailor. By no stretch of the imagination could one think of him as being a grain farmer. His wisdom must necessarily pertain first to the life of a seaman—his problems, his opportunities, his failures, his successes.

Simeon was a man of God. Through frequent communion with Him and the daily study of God's works, by daily worship, service, and attention he had come to be filled with a wisdom of the Father. His constant attention to God made him to be a worshiper of Him. That was his character. His wisdom of necessity conformed to his character. It was just as impossible for Simeon to have the character of a thief and the wisdom of a thief as it would be for a life-long sailor to have the character of a farmer and the wisdom pertaining to farmer's problems.

Our hopes and ideals in early life put into practice and form, have made us what we are, have determined our characters. Each is filled and surrounded with a wisdom that conforms to what he is, to his character.

II. Purifying the Heart. Purifying "unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" as a purpose for which the Savior "gave himself" is one of Paul's instructions in Titus 2:14. To cleanse and purify one's heart-thoughts necessitates that the character itself shall be a house of purity. The selfish, the sinful, the criminal characters cannot possibly be homes of pure thoughts or of pure lives. To the end our Savior revealed that His whole life was pure and clean like unto the life of His Father. Neither in thought, word, nor deed did He diverge from those of God. In no particular was He tainted with anything ungodly. He was pure.

To purify our hearts is to develop them in thought, word and deed like unto the heart of our Savior and of our God. This is accomplished by —

1. Believing in Him by His gospel;
2. By obeying His teachings, conforming to His instruction;
3. By becoming Christians in fact: in aim, in ideal, in service, in thought, in life interest.

Such character would be Christian; such Christian would be like unto Christ, pure,

"Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John 3:3.

III. Being Like Jesus. Anna's long years in the temple of God, Simeon's faithful ministrations in the temple of God brought them to be like God in life's purposes.

Faithful and continuous living with Christ can but bring the individual in life's ideals and purposes to be like Him. Such likeness draws forth the love of the Father calling us "the sons of God," 1 John 3:1. Even then "I doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." John 3:2.

Only those who live close to the Master can sense the purity of His life.

Only those who strive for that purity can touch the richness of insight into His life.

This, in part, explains Christ's words, "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God", Matt. 5:8.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

"So May I See the Consolation": This was a common expression among the Jews who were waiting and looking for the coming of the Messiah. When He came were they ready to receive Him? Did their expectation for Christ's first advent make them faithful and active in doing Christian work? What effect will a firm belief in Christ's second coming have upon those possessing such a hope?

Met Jesus in the Temple: Simeon and Anna saw Jesus for the first time in the temple. It was God's meeting place with Israel. The temple service is past, but we have our church buildings as places of worship and can meet God and Jesus there.

Teachers, emphasize the need of regular church worship. Heb. 10:25. Are people who regularly attend church more active in church work than those who attend on special occasions? Can we be good Christians and not attend church regularly when and where possible?

Told Others the Good News: They did not hide their light under a bushel, but shared with others the joy of salvation. Did they set a good example? How can we best tell others of Christ's soon coming? Is the second coming of Christ the most important part of our message, or are there other truths that are more important? — C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Happy the pure (in heart); for they will behold God." — Matt. 5:8, Diag.

The beatitudes, coming from the lips of Jesus, should carry great weight; and indeed they do, for each one is a sermon within itself.

The promise in this one reveals some of the enjoyment Christians will realize if they keep themselves unspotted from the world.

Paul, in writing to Timothy, admonishes him to "Keep thyself pure." If it was good for Timothy to keep himself pure, it is just as good for each one of us to do likewise. Christ was pure, and we who purify ourselves shall be like Him, and when He comes, we shall see Him as He is. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Simeon's Testimony.

As Simeon held Mary's babe of a few days in his arms, he saw, by the Holy Spirit, more than an infant. He saw the Lord's salvation which He had prepared before the face of all people. He saw, in the little form that lay in his arms, the body prepared by the Father for the full expression of His fullness, which fullness is grace and truth. He saw the prepared body growing and unfolding, and with each unfolding expressing grace and truth, their victory over ignorance and the drawing power of the flesh toward sin. He saw the babe in finished perfection, the Man, Christ Jesus, a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of God's people, Israel.

Having seen all this in the child Jesus, Simeon was ready to die, peaceful and content in the assurance of God's salvation for Israel and mankind. — A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: How to Know Jesus.

The story of Simeon and Anna is a very interesting one. These two came into the temple at the same time that Joseph and Mary brought the Babe. They had been students of the Old Testament prophecies for many years. What had they learned concerning Jesus? Can you give some of these references? So thoroughly had they acquainted themselves with the Scriptures that they recognized Jesus instantly as the One born to be the Savior of the world. Simeon said He was "a light to lighten the Gentiles," and Jesus himself said, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

We may know many of the prophecies concerning Him and be able to recite chapter and verse, but if we do not know what He can do for us personally, it will not help us much. If we want that Light to guide us over the pathway of life, shedding His beams into the dark and uncertain places and finally leading us to God's eternal home, we will study His Word and learn what Jesus wants us to do. And then we will gladly and willingly obey.

— M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Day by day, in every way, things are looking brighter in our work here. The Berean classes on Thursday night are showing a marked increase, last week's attendance being 63.

The Sunday School attendance on September 28 was 158, and the morning church attendance, 80, with the evening about 70.

This is being written previous to October 5, which is our Rally Day. Real plans are under way and we hope to be able to wire in for this same issue of The Herald figures that will show a healthy percentage of increase over the average of the previous three months. In fact we hope our percentage of increase will be the largest among our churches. A Sunday School contest called the "Silver and Gold Contest" begins on Rally Day to extend through the quarter. Pins with silver and gold stars divide the sides.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

THE TELEGRAM

Here is the telegram which came, giving the report of Rally Day at Grand Rapids:

"Average Sunday School attendance for previous quarter, 130. Rally Day, 218. Morning sermon, 95. Evening, 76. Baptisms, 2. Everybody happy and full of enthusiasm. Hope other churches were equally blessed today. "The Grand Rapids Church."

Will any of our other Sunday Schools be able to send in a better report than this for their Rally Day?

OCTOBER FIFTH AT ROCKFORD

We had the pleasure of addressing the little church at Rockford, Illinois, on Sunday, October 5, at two services. Although of only recent birth as an organization, a spirit of co-operation and earnest endeavor is manifest among them, and they are arranging their services so as to be attractive and beneficial to the congregation and visitors, which is not always manifest in older churches. Rockford truly appears to be a fruitful field and faithful, earnest work will reap its own reward.

Paul M. Hatch.

HILLISBURG CHURCH HOMECOMING

Sunday, September 28, was the homecoming at the Hillisburg (Indiana) church. Sunday School was held at 10:00 a. m., preaching at 11:00 a. m., and 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. At 2:00 p. m. we had the pleasure of baptizing Bro. and Sr. Paul New into Christ. Bro. and Sr. New have been attending Sunday School and preaching at Hillisburg for some time and we are glad to welcome them into Christ. They have several children that we hope will obey in the future.

J. H. Anderson.

SEND THEM TO US

If all Sunday Schools and churches will send in a report of their Rally Day activities, it will be of interest to our readers. Give us your average attendance for the past three months (omitting the Sunday you may have had Conference) and your attendance for Rally Day. Remember, Grand Rapids has set a figure for us all to exceed, if possible. Let's hear from each one of you.

RALLY DAY AT DIXON

Sunday, October 12, will be Rally Day at the Dixon church. Morning services as usual, with Sunday School at 9:45 and preaching at eleven o'clock by the pastor, Bro. L. E. Conner.

A basket dinner will be enjoyed at noon in the basement of the church; and at 2:30 p. m. a Rally Day program will be given. Evening sermon at 7:30. All are cordially invited to come to Dixon and spend the day with us, October 12.

Mrs. Grace Drew, Sec.

A BAPTISM

In writing the report of the conference at Arkansas City, Kansas, we failed to report the baptism of Mrs. Essie Smith Poulson of Texas, who has been here for some time visiting her parents, Bro. and Sr. William Smith, of this place. On September 1st a few gathered at the beautiful Walnut River, and Bro. Vaughn Long baptized her into the all-saving name of Jesus. Our prayers go with Sr. Poulson that she will always be true to Him who called her out of darkness into light.

Dora Morgan, Sec.

INDIANA SEPTEMBER REPORT

Sermons: Pleasant View, 1; Rensselaer, 2; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Hillisburg, 7.

Baptisms: 2.

Money received: Sr. Porter, $1.00; Pleasant View, $10.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $15.00; North Salem, $6.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; Hillisburg, $25.00; Conference Board, $17.50. Expense: $14.50.

J. H. Anderson.

FALL CONFERENCE AT MORA

The Minnesota Fall Conference was held at Mora with a good attendance of the local people, and quite a number from a distance. Elders present were Sydney Magaw, Clyde Randall, Fred Daubanton, Ray Abbott, and John Denchfield. The trend of the preaching was of the nearness of the coming of Christ and His kingdom. May God help all of us that have named His name to be faithful until He comes.

The ladies of the Mora church served the noon meals at the church. This little group is doing very nicely, and has high hopes of soon having the church building moved to town. They know they will have a much better chance to grow when they get this done.

May God continue to bless and help these faithful ones.

Mrs. Thomas M. Savage, Cor. Sec.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

The local Ladies' Aid Society of the Church of God is taking the responsibility of having the church basement ceiled.

Sunday, October 12th, is set for Sunday School and Church Rally Day.

On Sunday morning September 12th, Elder C. E. Randall of Mora, spoke for us, his subject being, "The Law."

Funeral services were conducted on Saturday, September 27th, at the church, for Mrs.

Theodore Avery. Mrs. Avery was born in Farmland, Indiana, but for twenty-seven years has lived near Eden Valley, in which time she won many friends. She was a quiet woman, a member of the Christian Church, and her death brings sorrow to many.

At nine o'clock p. m., Saturday, September 27th, it was our privilege to unite in marriage Mr. Louis Blomker and Miss Esther Fischer, both young folks of near Eden Valley. We wish them a happy life together and the keeping of a godly home.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

The ladies of the Brush Creek sewing class had a pleasant day with Sr. Deborah Pearson last Tuesday, September 30, when they met with her, as is their usual custom on each Tuesday, to quilt. This day they came with joyful hearts, and a covered dish dinner, in commemoration of Sr. Pearson's eighty-first birthday. What a wonderful help Sr. Pearson has been to the ladies, having pieced at least fifteen quilts for the class, which have been quilted and sold for the benefit of the church. In the three years that the class has been sewing, it has carpeted the church and is now working steadily toward new seats as their goal. What an inspiration Sr. Pearson has been to us! May she be spared many years with health, was the sincere wish of each one as they departed.

RALLY DAY AT ROCKFORD

October 12 is Rally Day at Rockford, Ill. A program is being arranged by the Sunday School which will be of interest to all. You are cordially invited to come and rally round Rockford.

OREGON CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

October 12 is Rally Day for the Oregon Church and Sunday School. The Sunday School is divided into two sides—the blues and the whites—under Sr. Winfrey as captain, and Sisters Ray Maysilles and Paul C. Johnson as leaders. A friendly contest is being engaged in to see which side brings in the greatest number of attendants for Rally Day. Railroad tickets to the Church of God Sunday School are adding spice to the contest. All those who are not registered with another Sunday School or Church for October 12 are cordially invited to attend at Oregon. A warm welcome awaits you.

HOUSTON - PEARSON

Sr. Pearl Pearson and John Houston were quietly married in Covington, Kentucky, August 30. Sr. Pearl is one of our girls of sterling character, and she has charge of the intermediate class in our Sunday School. Mr. Houston is a fine young man with a responsible position with the Frigidaire Company.

They have established their home in Dayton and the best wishes of the Brush Creek church go with them.

HERALD RECEIPTS

C. H. Belshaw; Mrs. Laura Briggs; Lillias Sweeney; Mrs. Norman LaMunion; Mrs. J. E. Lawrence; Mrs. Lillian Ralton; Mrs. H. A. Knapp; Mrs. Lucy Robinson; C. B. Compton; F. W. Huber; Lottie E. Young.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Been trying so hard to get past the 300 post . . . made it last week . . . now at No. 323. . . . I'm keeping right on, and know I'll get to my goal some time. . . . Give me a good push. . . . Give me lots of steam. . . . All ready to go. No. 500 in sight just ahead of me. . . . All together now — let's go!

Everybody! Sign! Solicit! Watch!

DOLLAR-A-MONTH PLEDGES

New Pledges have been received during the past week from two organizations — The Ladies' League of Rensselaer, Indiana, and the Grand Rapids (Michigan) Berean society. One morning's mail brought 16 new pledges from committeeman, Sr. Lulu Stilson of Plymouth, Indiana. That's fine, Sr. Stilson, the biggest number to date sent in by one committeeman at one time. New Pledges received since September 29, are as follows:

Indiana	17	California	6
New York	5	Nebraska	5
Michigan	3	Texas	2
Iowa	2	Missouri	1
Ohio	7	Ontario	1

MRS JOHN GOW

Alice May Crowe was born near Paisley, Bruce county, Ontario, Canada. She moved with her parents to Howard county, Nebraska, in 1881, and was united in marriage to John Gow, February 14, 1882. Mrs. Gow is survived by her husband, John Gow, two daughters, Miss Mattie V. of Omaha; Mrs. Minnie Perkins of Muskogee, Oklahoma; two sons, W. J. of Farwell, Nebraska; P. E. of Gary, Indiana; ten grandchildren, four sisters, and two brothers. One sister, Mrs. George Welsh, and one brother, the late W. L. Crowe, preceded her in death.

Funeral services were conducted by Elder Almus Adams, who spoke words of comfort on the resurrection and she was laid away to sleep until Jesus calls her.

Mrs. Gow was baptized by Almus Adams in 1895, and remained true to the faith to the time of her death. All who knew her loved her for her cheerful, unselfish disposition. The large crowd that attended funeral services and the many beautiful floral offerings bore testimony of the high esteem in which she was held. She will be missed in the home and church. But we grieve not as those who have no hope.

MRS. HARRIET ROSSER

Harriet Thomas was born in England on April 17, 1853. Her girlhood days were spent in the old country. On April 24, 1876, she was married to Joseph T. Rosser. To this union were born five children, Herbert, Albert, Gertrude, Emily and Edith, the last two dying in infancy. In 1885 the Rossers came to America and took up their residence in Cleveland, Ohio, which has remained their home during the forty-five years that have since passed.

Soon after coming to this country Sr. Rosser came to believe in the great and precious promises of God, and was baptized into the saving name of her Lord. Ever after she was a faithful member of the Church of God, and found one of her greatest joys in the fellowship of the church services and the brethren.

Death resulted from a paralytic stroke and she fell asleep in Jesus on September 20, 1930. Surviving her are her beloved husband, one son, Herbert, and one brother, John Thomas, all of Cleveland.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer from parlors on E. 55th St., near their home of many years. The home had been broken up shortly before upon Sr. Rosser's being stricken, and almost at the same time Bro. Rosser, who had been our senior elder at the church for many years became unbalanced and had to be committed to the state asylum at Newburgh. They had been most devoted to each other throughout life, and it was pathetic that they should have to be separated when life was so near its close, and that he should not be able to see her laid away, or even to know of her going. But it was best so, and we trust the waiting time will not be long. After presenting to the assembled mourners and friends the scriptural hope of resurrection, we laid her to sleep in Highland Park Cemetery until the Master calls to glory and immortality.

M. W. Lyon.

WHAT HER RESTITUTION HERALD IS DOING

To the N. B. I.

Dear Friends: Perhaps you have sometimes wondered what good The Herald sent to me week by week has accomplished.

After we have read and often re-read it, I pass it on. For over six years it has gone steadily into the same home, bringing much comfort and truth to the dear ones. At first husband and wife shared it together, sickness making it impossible for either to attend church.

Eighteen months ago death took the husband and a brother came to share his sister's loneliness and sorrow. As soon as he became well acquainted with The Restitution Herald, he told me he did not know that a church paper existed that taught so much truth.

Not only does he enjoy it himself, but he shows and talks about it to all who will listen. At present he is very ill, and may soon pass on, but he says he has never had such a good spiritual experience in his life before as he has enjoyed since being shut away from the outside world with his Bible and The Restitution Herald.

His sister said in the darkest moments The Herald always has a personal appeal for her.

May your prayers follow these new subscriptions. I wish I could say they are truly interested. The last two are growing away from the church of their youth and not finding anything worth while to replace it.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. W. Houston.

P. S. Beginning with October I will join the One-Dollar-A-Month Club.

Sr. Jessie Wilson's new address is 501 North Laramie Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

THE BOOK OF HAGGAI

By Lyman Booth

THE PROPHETS, whose writings have hitherto engaged our attention, lived before, or during the Babylonian captivity, and referred to it in most of their predictions; but the three that follow prophesied after the return of the Jews to their own land. Haggai delivered all the messages recorded here within four months. They relate mainly to the rebuilding of the temple, and contain reproofs, exhortations and encouragements respecting that undertaking. Predictions of Christ and His kingdom connected them with the final and universal prevalence of the gospel. The apostle Paul quotes Haggai to prove that the prophets foretold one great revolution in the external state of the church, which would shortly take place and only one. Compare 2:6, 7 with Heb. 12:26-27.

Haggai, meaning Festive, first of the prophets after the Exile was contemporary with Zerubbabel and Joshua, who led those who returned from Babylon. Though mentioned with Zechariah, Ezra 5:1; 6:14, he was in all probability much older than his brother prophet, and had seen the glory of the old temple before its destruction (2:3). He was inspired by God to arouse the people to support Zerubbabel and Joshua in building the temple, after the work had been suspended fourteen years in consequence of a counter edict obtained by the Samaritans from Artaxerxes.

He prophesied during the second year of Darius Hystaspes, B. C. 520. He severely rebuked them for their neglect in rebuilding the Temple, and roused them into activity, whereupon they received the promise of Jehovah's presence and aid (chap. 1:1-15). Yet with all, they became despondent and Haggai assured them that the latter glory of the house would exceed the former, and it would be filled with the desirable things of all nations (2:1-9). Two months later he addressed them again, explaining past calamities as the fruit of sin, and promising henceforth a rich blessing (2:10-19). This was followed by a final address, in which he predicted the overthrow of the surrounding nations and the preservation of Judah (2:20-23).

The book is very appropriately divided into four divisions. First, in chapter 1, he rebukes the apathy of the people in not devoting themselves in earnest to the great work of restoration, and in listening to those who sought to persuade them that the time was not opportune for continuing the enterprise. Second, in chapter 2:1-9, he encourages them with the assurance that the glory of the latter temple should be greater than that of the former. Third, chapter 2:10-19, he promises them that from the day they commence in earnest the work of restoration, the defective harvests will cease, and the years of drought and famine shall be changed into blessing. The fourth, chapter 2:20-23, contains a special word of encouragement for Zerubbabel to be up and doing in rebuilding the temple. His key-words are good advice to all men and we would do well to heed them.

Be strong, be strong, be strong (2:4), consider your ways, consider, consider (1:5, 7; 2:15, 18).

Two passages of this prophecy find allusion in the New Testament. His words concerning "the shaking of the heavens and the earth," are quoted by Paul in Heb. 12:26; and the promise to Zerubbabel that he should be as a signet ring on the right hand, was accomplished when his name stood enshrined in both the genealogies of our Lord as one through whom "the sure mercies of David" were preserved to the house of David. Matt. 1:12; Luke 3:27.

FOLLOWING AFAR

THERE ARE MANY MEN who follow Christ when He is popular; when His demands are not forbidding; when it is good business or politics to follow Him and get on the band wagon. But it is another thing to see Him quit Gethsemane, readily surrendering to the clamoring mob, which leads Him away to the road to Golgotha. Wouldn't it be foolish to be identified with a lost cause? Why not be sensible and look out for number one?

The march of Christianity is very slow because those who follow afar off are too much concerned about the consequences this following may involve. Very careful they are that they do not compromise themselves. Better be prepared to run if it becomes necessary. For it is not pleasant to bear a cross or go to Golgotha. Too many churchmen and churchwomen find the world with its business and pleasure, its stocks, bonds and profits, its pride and comforts, very agreeable and desirable, though they admit its sensuality and self-indulgence, its selfishness and meanness, its crime and evil. Yet it is too alluring a place to forsake — for a promise!

Poor Peter! Because he followed "from afar", he was tempted and became weak and denied and made a fool of himself. For the same reason that they stand aloof and will not become identified with the church and its ideals, men oft fail in their Christianity and in temptation yield and the world has the laugh on them. Let them go out into the night and weep. May they find the way back, and may they find the courage to say: "Lord, I am a sinful man. Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee." — Selected by Madeline Gardiner.

ANNUITY BONDS

For information regarding advantages of Annuity Bonds over Wills in making final gifts for the furtherance of our Gospel labors, address,

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
OREGON ILLINOIS

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 14, 1930

NUMBER 2

Your Redemption Draweth Nigh

By Samuel E. Haney

“Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice.”

IN REFERRING TO THE AFFAIRS of this life and world, involving time, in a previous article we considered the wisdom of living in the “now”; the avoidance of mentally dwelling in the future. But our text has to do with the affairs of a loftier life, and the world to come: the kingdom of God — eternity. Therefore, we shall here consider not only the wisdom of delving into a future that lies beyond this age of trouble, anxiety, sorrow, sickness, pain and death, but the logical aspiration also of the spiritual-begotten saints, “through the gospel.”

God has lifted us to a higher plane where we can observe things unseen by natural vision, causing the things of this sin-cursed world to appear comparatively trivial. Hence we can rejoice, while in the midst of numerous every-day portentous events that we know are bringing us nearer to a “city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.” Heb. 11:10. Paul explains the wherefore in Phil. 3:3: “For we are the circumcision which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.”

The “always” of our text is the Christian’s enigma to solve and utilize as did Paul. Viewed cursorily, weeping and rejoicing appear incompatible. But people weep with joy as well as with sorrow and pain. Jesus said, John 16:20, “Ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.” Verses 19 and 21 give two reasons for this weeping; one, the Lord’s absence, the other, “A woman in travail has sorrow, but joy follows when a man is born into the world.” These and other interruptions of the Christian’s joy are motivated by love for the Lord, His commandments and laws.

In the midst of the Christian’s sorrow, suffering and anxiety, the new creature in Christ Jesus is “always rejoicing” in the sure Word of God, namely, “The word of the Lord endureth for ever . . . For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven . . . Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and for ever.” 1 Peter 1:25; Psa. 119:25; Heb. 13:8. These are the basic truths upon which the consecrated Christian rejoices continuously. “He will not fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. For God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble,” Psa. 46.

It would be well for Christians who are not always rejoicing in the glorious hope of the gospel, these days, to give more attention to their heavenly Father’s Word, and proportionately less to self and to the affairs of this world. They would thus discover the cause of their periodic lack of rejoicing, and the necessity of moving up closer to the Lord, the source of permanent joy for the soul, and of strength for the body and the spirit: a genuine panacea of a life that this blind, deluded world knows naught of, as its ideas of joy appeal to the natural (flesh) man while the Christian’s joy is such as appeals to the new creature in Christ Jesus with whom he is destined ere long to be. A deficiency in this respect should tend to disqualify the bride to meet the bridegroom — “Lamps without oil.”

If Paul and his co-apostles could rejoice, in their day, in anticipation of the Bridegroom’s return, surely we should, in our day, in which prophecy, chronology and current events focus and synchronize. Humanly, it is difficult to conceive how Paul could rejoice while enduring the trials cited in 2 Cor. 11:23-33, that is, “In stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in death oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils by robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings

(Continued on page 26)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand are pleasures for evermore."

"THEY THAT WILL BE RICH fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition."

NO VOCATION IS EASIER than fault-finding. No talent, no brains, no self-denial, no character, no aim, no capital, are required to establish and maintain the Grumbling Business.

"BIG JOBS USUALLY GO to men who prove their ability to outgrow smaller ones." This is true in Christian service equally as in the business world.

CHRISTIANITY IS THE BIGGEST BUSINESS in the world. It is the business of making one's old nature subservient to the will of Christ, permitting Him to remold it into an image like unto himself. It is the business of transforming the ways of man to the ways of God. It is the business of doing God's work in God's way, ever striving for the accomplishment of God's purposes in the earth and in man.

No person can engage in any other business that can be compared in its results with the results that are certain to obtain from the business of Christianity.

"THE MASTER IS HERE and calleth for thee."

LOVE OF MONEY

MONEY IS BUT A MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE. It represents value. Of itself, unused, it is valueless. With it man buys and sells any one or all of the resources which God has created for man. The love of money, then, expresses man's love of the things temporal which God has provided for man — lands, materials, gems, pleasures and all other man-pleasing things. Paul informs Timothy that it is the love or greed or lust for these things that is at the bottom of all evil, all crime.

How strongly this is being verified throughout the world. That principle which was true in Paul's day is equally true today. Attorney General Mitchell has told us to the effect that in his observation the desire of financial gain is at the bottom either directly or indirectly of practically all crime.

The rapid strides which man has been making in utilizing the laws and forces of nature that they should serve him more fully and bring to him more of the riches provided by God, and the fearful increase of crime that follows in the wake of these strides, indicate again the depth of the truth of this statement of Paul.

It behooves Christians as never before to carefully analyze the business activities of the day and to separate the right and proper methods from those that are wrong and criminal. There is little doubt in the minds of many but that much of the present-day system of commerce is wrong in principle equally with the commerce of the pool room, of the race track, or of any other form of gambling. It has been introduced in an effort to gain money. Many of those wrong things have come to be so common and ordinary that Christians frequently take up with them without the slightest thought of the wrong that is in them and of the destruction and perdition to which they inevitably lead.

JESUS IS THE WAY.

THE PSALMS

IT WAS AFTER THE SAVIOR'S resurrection. He was in the upper room. His appearance had been a surprise to the apostles. He ate in order to prove to them that He was a reality in their midst. With all the wisdom and knowledge and understanding which His new resurrection, immortal, incorruptible, spiritual existence bestowed upon Him, "He said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning me."

He gave the Psalms the same importance that He did the law of Moses and the prophets. The Psalms are one of the chief sources of information concerning Christ. Perhaps one of the reasons that few people get no more as pertaining to Christ out of the Psalms than they do is because David frequently wrote as of himself. In Psalm 16 David apparently speaks of himself throughout, but Peter in Acts 2:27-31 interprets portions of that Psalm as applicable to Christ. Again, Psalms 2:7 would at first be read to apply to the writer, but Paul in Acts 13:33 applies that Psalm to Christ and His resurrection; while in v. 35 he applies Psalm 16:10 to Christ.

By carefully studying David's Psalms and discerning the application that may properly be made to Him who is greater than David, one will find very many truths that are most beautifully applied to our Lord and Master. There is a richness in the book of Psalms for the Christian, if he studies deeply into their import and meaning.

DEATH AND HELL

By C. W. Dean

CHRISTENDOM HAS BECOME so thoroughly indoctrinated with the paganish ideas of death and hell that it is practically impossible to get church members to consider the subject as it really is in the Scriptures. Traditions and prejudice have warned to regard with suspicion and reject all teaching on the subject different from which they have been taught. In fact, to think of the venerable doctrine of the church on this subject being false, strikes them as blasphemous. The most mysterious thought existing in Christendom is that of eternal torment "for some poor misguided soul."

The subject of death presents an enigma, a mystery, an impenetrable darkness, on which the innumerable opinions and philosophies of men have failed to throw one single illuminating ray of light. With the world so full of babbling voices, giving forth a vast variety of conflicting opinions, the earnest truth seeker finds himself bewildered rather than enlightened. It is obvious to every serious mind that, unless there is an ultimate, authoritative standard to which we may appeal for the solution of this problem, it would be useless to continue our study any further. And it is evident to all that the subject cannot be settled by appealing to the belief of any man, society, denomination, or decree of church councils. Our only hope lies in pursuing the study in accord with the Sacred Scriptures, the authority given by God for its solution.

By taking a glance through the literature of Christendom and church hymns, and noting the constant use of such terms as "immortal soul", "never dying soul", "departed soul", "endless woe", "everlasting torment", one who has never studied the Scriptures on this subject, would be led to believe that they are filled with such expressions. But what a shock to know that such teaching finds no countenance in the Scriptures. Take the word "immortal" for example. It is found in our King James Bible but one time, and there it is applied to God. The word is aphtharto in the Greek, and should be rendered "incorruptible". The text, correctly rendered in harmony with the original, reads: "Now to the King of the eons, the incorruptible, invisible, only wise God, be honor and glory for the eons of the eons. Amen". 1 Tim. 1:17.

As the word aphtharto or "incorruptible", is here applied to God as one of His attributes, it is odious presumption to apply it to mankind. Man is never spoken of as immortal in God's Word. The word "soul" in the King James Version occurs 488 times; it is found in the Old Testament 430 times, and 58 times in the New Testament. But in no instance is it ever associated with, or said to be, immortal or deathless. On the contrary, the Scriptures speak of the "soul" fainting, dying, expiring, in the hand of the grave, or buried in the grave, destroyed, with nine texts speaking of dead souls!

The Scriptures never speak of man, or any part of man, as being immortal. On the contrary, wherever, in the universe, life is manifested, of whatever kind, God is always the fountain of it. Paul emphasized this truth to Athenian philosophers when he said, "He is existing not far from each of us, for in Him we are living and moving, and are." Acts 17:28. Therefore, life, being, or existence, in the absolute, is an attribute of God, and all creatures are dependent on God for the life they have.

Our minds have been so completely filled with the idea of immortality that we are loath to think that the teachings of Christendom are false on their doctrine of immortality. But regardless of all that we have been taught, we must face the fact that the word, "immortality", is used but five times in our Bible, or King James Version. Rom. 2:7; 1 Cor. 15:53-54; 1 Tim. 6:16; 2 Tim. 1:10. Three of these occurrences have the Greek athanasia, which means "deathlessness," or "immortality" (1 Cor. 15:53-54; 1 Tim. 6:16), while the other two have the Greek aphtharsia, and should be rendered "incorruption" (Rom. 2:7; 2 Tim. 1:10). One reference is sufficient to settle the question for all who accept the Scriptures in their exactness of expression as final.

"Unto the advent of our Lord Jesus Christ: which in his own times he shall show, who is the blessed and only

(Continued on page 23)

A WONDERFUL MAN

By Lottie E. Young

HERO WORSHIP doubtless enters into the life of every boy. Happy is the home where "daddy" is the first one to be looked up to; where "my father can do that easily" is on the lips of the child when thinking of something big to be accomplished. Later on it will likely be someone in school who can play ball better, or throw a stone farther than the rest of the boys. When high school and college days come, it may be the orator of the class, or the young man who can write the best thesis, which will call forth the desire to be able to do as this hero does. Later on, it may be daring aviators or swimmers, soldiers or sailors who will receive the homage.

But the closer acquaintance we have with any of these ideals reveals as much weakness as strength in them. Of all the persons who have ever lived only One can claim the title, "WONDERFUL", given Him seven hundred years before His birth — the Man, Christ Jesus.

He must have had a wonderful body that could withstand the severe strain put upon it during His earthly ministry. He was brought up in a poor man's house and while there may have been sufficient food, it was doubtless of a type producing bone and muscle rather than the fat which some consider necessary. Pictures invariably represent Him as weak, delicate, and looking more like a sickly woman than the virile man He must have been. These are only the imaginations of men's brains and do not represent the most wonderful Man the world has ever seen.

Nowhere in the records do we find Him physically unsound. He must have been strong in muscle and sinew to overthrow the tables of the money changers. And then think of the hundreds of miles He walked up and down Palestine, a very hilly land! How many could have stood the constant pressure of the crowds always desiring something? The record says there was not time for the Master and His disciples to eat. Think of the long hours spent in fasting and prayer, with little sleep. Nothing weak or cowardly in Jesus Christ! What He said He meant, and what He meant He did not hesitate to say. He sets us an example of manliness, and in himself proves that Christianity is manly enough for men.

Further, He had a sound mind as well as a sound body. How remarkably intelligent, quick and alert He was at twelve years of age when He astonished the hoary old Doctors of the Jewish Law with His knowledge of it, and His wise interpretation! All through His ministry we hear the wonder expressed, "Whence hath this man wisdom, seeing he never learned letters?"

He was a wonderful Friend and Teacher to the twelve poor and unlearned men whom He chose to be His immediate followers, training these fishermen, tax collectors, etc., so that they could witness for Him before the rich and powerful, and boldly declare when told under pain of severe punishment to say nothing more of this Friend, "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

He had a manly heart as well as a loving and sympathetic nature. If you want to find the highest and best type of mankind, "Look unto Jesus" and you will find it in Him. Being a Christian never lowers manhood, but elevates it.

He was wonderful in His faithfulness and obedience to God. He could say of His relation to His Father, "I do always those things which please him." Knowing the awful suffering which was before Him at Jerusalem if He persisted in the sacrifice which would make Him "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," "He steadfastly set his face" to go there. In regard to His disciples the Book says "He loved them to the end." It is easy to love when others love you, but to continue faithful to a high ideal when you meet with opposition, stupidity, and even treachery, is more than the best of humanity can do. After their desertion of Him in the Garden of Gethsemane and at the mockery of a trial, hearing the lies of Peter, and knowing that Judas had betrayed Him, He could still say, "Father, forgive them." After His resurrection, He sent a tender message to Peter, and even prepared breakfast for His followers when they had had a discouraging night on the sea, catching no fish, and were tired and hungry.

I heard recently of a man who had lived to be ninety-eight years of age, and then said, "I do not want to die, as I have not finished my work." But Jesus Christ, who did not live a third of that time, was wonderful in this respect also, as His last recorded words are, "It is finished." His life seemed a failure, and doubtless the rulers of the Jews thought they had finally rid themselves of One "who troubled Israel." But the work Jesus finished on the cross nearly two thousand years ago still applies to the "whosoever cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out."

Why should not more boys and men, who admire strength of body, clearness of vision, courage to state convictions in the face of opposition, and other manly qualities, see in Jesus Christ the one supreme Hero of the ages, and take a more vital interest in our churches, ever striving to imitate the One who is the same yesterday, today and forever. When He comes again it will be as Judge, not Sacrifice. Now is the day of salvation. Soon the door will be shut, and the awful words pronounced, "I never knew you, depart from me."

Accept Jesus Christ as your Savior now, and in the future have a place in the kingdom with the most wonderful Being who ever lived.

Eternal life cannot be merited on our part, but through faith in Christ Jesus it is promised to the faithful; to them that have implicit confidence in Christ. Jesus our Lord is the Author or cause of eternal salvation unto all that obey Him. And we join the Apostle in praising God for the boon of eternal life. "Thanks be unto God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

SHADOWS OF EVENTIDE

By M. W. Lyon

TWENTY-SIX HUNDRED years ago God made a prediction through the prophet Amos: "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old: . . . and I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them . . . and I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God." Amos 9:11-15.

That the prophet was speaking of our own day is not difficult to realize when we observe political developments in Palestine during the past decade. Judea's resurrection to new political life after her sleep of centuries is the miracle of the ages. The city of David is undoubtedly being restored to resume its ancient place as the capital of re-gathered Israel. It was our Lord himself who said, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled." That the holy city is once more passing into the control of the Jew is an unerring sign to those who "have eyes to see" that the day of Gentile power in the earth is fast drawing to its close.

This is one of the shadows of the approaching eventide of man's rule on earth. There are many others, all pointing in the same direction. In "the time of the end," said Daniel, "many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." Twentieth century travel and transportation, and unprecedented facilities for education and learning identify our day as the one of which Daniel spoke.

Our top-heavy financial system which makes the rich richer and the poor poorer was foretold by the apostle James, when he speaks of those who "have heaped treasure together in the last days."

The religious apostasy, unbelief, and meaningless formalism, the pleasure-mad populace thronging to places of amusement, the breakdown of respect for law and its resulting harvest of all kinds of crime, the general licentiousness of the people, the universal corruption in government, all of these are signs of the times which have been foretold by the old Book to warn us of the time of the end. Man's day has almost reached its end. The lengthening shadows cast by its setting sun fall across our pathway constantly.

And in the midst of the strife and anxiety attending the death-watch of human misrule, the voice of the Prophet of Galilee comes to us across the troubled centuries: "When ye see all these things come to pass, lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh."

Christian, awake! Watch! That voice, which once stilled a tempest on Galilee's waves, is soon to speak peace to the nations, and bring in everlasting righteousness.

— From Golden Rule News.

THE SOURCES ST. PAUL'S PEDAGOGY

THE PROPHETS TOO MADE their contribution to the teaching ideal that built itself up into the consciousness of Saul. Like lofty peaks and majestic pyramids, the Prophets arose above the common plane of ordinary life into strong religious and pedagogical perspective speech. They faced the task of opening blind eyes and deaf ears to the perception of truth. Theirs was the mission to impel weak wills to right living. They rubbed shoulders with their fellows and knew and understood them. They knew how to teach. They won attention not only because their enthusiasm was contagious, but because they called for and expected it.

They introduced their lessons with: "Ho!" "Come near!" "Hear ye!" "Behold!" "Listen!" "Awake!" "Arise, shine!" They utilized likely occasions to impart truth. They found concrete illustrations from life all about them, from nature and from history. They used pointed questions to probe sluggish minds. They proceeded from the known to the unknown. They used proverbs, parables, figures of speech, to accommodate their truth to the understanding of their hearers. They employed visions, symbols, object lessons, and dramatic actions to stir the imagination and touch the conscience. They cast their messages into acrostics and poetic form, choosing the meter best adapted to their message. They atmosphered all their contacts with a tremendous earnestness.

The Prophets met adverse situations with a courage that defied their antagonists. They spoke not because they had to say something, but because they had something to say. They were the spokesmen of Jehovah. They clothed their words with a ring of authority that made their message glow with conviction. Who can read their messages without being stirred and thrilled, unless one's eyes, too, are dull, and one's ears heavy? Surely the alert mind of Saul not only grasped their tremendous truths, but read also the message of the personalities that gave form and living expression to those truths.

Deissmann says: "The real characteristic of the man, the prophetic force of his religious experience and the energy of his practical piety have been only too often underestimated." He places Paul with the prophets, and likens him especially to Amos, the herdsman of Tekoa. That Paul spoke "as one of the prophets" is seen in his discourses, especially in that given in the synagogue at Antioch of Pisidia.

The Scribes started a stream in its course that in Saul's time flowed like a mighty river. "Political, social, and religious life came to be dominated by a burdensome system of traditions, laws, and minute regulations, the external form of which, instead of the spirit and underlying principles, came to be the focus of interest and attention." Thus Saul, "a Pharisee, a son of Pharisees," was borne along by this mighty current which affected both his religious and educational principles. Besides the Bible, this vast aggregate of Hebrew lore and knowledge now in the process of accumulation became the content of his education, as we shall see.

The influence of Israel's ancient wise men on Saul's pedagogy should not be underestimated. "Gifted with a rare prudence and penetration, King Solomon is prominent not as the founder of an order of the Wise, but rather as the most conspicuous representative of that practical cleverness which Semitic antiquity designated as wisdom." When Saul of Tarsus studied the Book of Proverbs, he had in his hands a repository of rich pedagogic experience, the oldest known text-book on pedagogy. Here are sentences on education which were not written for one age but for all time. Here he found all life and all education regarded as a disciplinary process.

The Wisdom Literature cemented and reenforced the foundation of that remarkable superstructure which finally was organized into the school system of the Talmud, which even in Saul's day was already exercising a strong influence, and which largely environed and shaped the training of Saul; a foundation to which Legislator, Priest, Psalmist, Prophet, Scribe, and Sage, each as an instrument of his holy God, has contributed. This superstructure was first domestic, then scholastic, in the training it afforded. — From The Pedagogy of St. Paul by Kuist.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ALPHABET

A's the Attendance for which we should yearn,
B is the Bible from which we all learn,
C's the Companionship, beautiful state,
D's the Decision to never be late,
E is the Effort we make to attend,
F is the Faith we may have to defend,
G is the Giving by which a class grows,
H is the Happiness giving bestows,
I is the Interest, intense and sincere,
J is for Jewels of wisdom we hear,
K is for Keeness we quickly acquire,
L is the Lessons which always inspire,
M is the Mission for which the class stands,
N is the Number that meet these demands,
O is the Optimists, like a spring breeze,
P is the Pessimists, get rid of these,
Q is for Questions which each scholar plies,
R's the Rejoinder our teacher supplies,
S is the Service in which we delight,
T is the Teacher who leads us aright,
U is the Usefulness all try to learn,
V is the Value we find at each turn,
W's the Welcome we give and receive,
X is the 'Xtension in which we believe,
Y is the Youth, fat and thin, long and tall,
Z is the Zeal that we show for it all.

— Boy's World.

ALCOHOL AND THE OPERATOR

The following article, taken from the Highway Accident Prevention Series No. 36, will be found to be of interest to our readers.

ABOUT TWENTY-THREE MILLION motor cars and trucks are registered in the United States, enough to carry all the people of the nation at one time if they did not mind a little crowding or carrying the babies and small children on the lap. If this could be done no one would be injured while walking across the street or road! But there would still be need for careful drivers. Here is what the Rhode Island State Motor Vehicle Department has to say as to one way of increasing American safety from automobile accidents.

"'Drunken driving' appears to be the general classification of arrests made where the operator of a motor vehicle has been indulging in alcoholic beverages.

"To the average person the term 'drunk' applies to the gibbering, maudlin, staggering 'sot' whose reasoning powers have been blotted out by alcohol. Contact with such a person is generally avoided by all, due to fear, pity or ridicule.

BRAIN QUICKLY AFFECTED

"It is a concensus of medical opinion that alcohol in the human system affects the brain much more quickly than any other part of the body. It is also a generally established fact that the effects of alcohol on the human brain, even when present in small quantities, cannot be forecast. The effect of even one drink of alcoholic liquor is very uncertain in its reaction on the human brain.

"Analyzing 432 arrests made during the first 9 months of 1927 where alcoholic drivers were involved, it was found that 246 arrests were made for erratic or abnormal operation; 113 arrests followed a property accident; 66 arrests followed an accident with injuries to some person and 7 arrests were made following the occurrence of fatality.

FEW DRIVERS ACTUALLY DRUNK

"Examinations by physicians disclosed sluggish mental reactions, lack of physical coordination, which, coupled with rapid pulse, coated tongue, dilated eye pupils and other symptoms of the physiological reaction of alcohol on the human system evident to the eye of the trained physician, leave him no other recourse than pronounce the operator as being under the influence of intoxicating liquor to such an extent as to be unfit to drive a motor vehicle.

"No one can deny the fact that a person is unfit and unsafe to be an operator of a motor vehicle when his thinking apparatus is in slow speed and his muscle and brain are not on a close working basis.

"In the average case, but two or three drinks caused all the trouble, and placed the operator in the class termed 'Drunken Drivers' with its resultant drastic penalties.

EVEN ONE DRINK MAY LEAD TO TROUBLE

"To keep out of this class, operators should remember that even one drink containing alcohol may cause physical or mental reactions which will class them as unfit to operate. Even some minor act of omission or commission may lead to police inquiry and then if the odor of alcohol from one drink is noted by the officer he has no other course than to require an examination by a physician and then the one drink may land you in the police jail as a drunken driver and the loss of driver's license.

"The danger of taking even one drink of alcoholic liquor should be plainly apparent to any person reading this article. Our suggestion is to avoid any possible trouble by never driving a motor vehicle if you have had a drink of any kind which contained alcohol."

DEATH AND HELL

(Continued from page 19)

Potentate, the King of kings, the Lord of lords; who alone hath immortality." 1 Tim. 6:14-16.

"Who alone hath immortality", speaks of Christ. He was raised from among the dead, made firstfruits of those who are reposing, was quickened, made alive, or vivified. He alone has immortality, with the glory of deathlessness shining forth from Him, with an intensity beyond the possibility of human perception. This should settle the question concerning immortality. Christ alone, as the great Firstfruit has immortality.

The teaching of the immortality of the soul, or deathless soul, or never-dying soul, had its origin in the garden of Eden. Jehovah God said: "If you eat of the tree of knowledge of good and evil you shall surely die." In answer to this, Satan said: "You shall not surely die." And mankind has been duped into believing and preaching Satan's error rather than God's truth.

Paul writes: "Even as through one man (Adam) sin entered into the world, and through sin, death, and thus death came through into all mankind, on which all sinned." Rom. 5:12. This Scripture reveals that Jehovah's decree in the garden stands in spite of Satan and his ministers of error, and man's delusion. Paul writes further: "That Christ was manifested through His advent to abolish death and illuminate life and incorruption through the gospel." 2 Tim. 1:10. All of this shows that man is mortal, subject to death, and will receive immortality or incorruption only through Christ.

Adam enthroned death through sin; now death is sin. Christ was pure, harmless, holy, undefiled and separate from sinners. Yet God made Him to be sin. Christ was begotten of God; He could not sin as the seed of God remained in Him. Yet God made Him sin through death. Therefore death is sin. And there is nothing immortal about the Adamic posterity. To get a clear grasp of the scriptural meaning of death, we must go back to the creation of man and consider every act and element that entered into the creation by which he became a living soul.

(To be continued)

BEST THOUGHTS FROM CONFERENCE CLASSES

By Elizabeth Parker

This paper was prepared and handed in immediately after General Conference, but was mislaid and just came to light. — Assistant Editor.

ONE MUST STUDY DILIGENTLY to comprehend the plans and mysteries of God. The spiritually minded man is able to comprehend God's plan and mysteries; he possesses the peace which passeth all understanding. The worldly man cannot understand the spiritual man — his faith — his peace of mind.

Judge not now, but wait for the judgment of the Lord.

God provides a means of overcoming our temptations if we only look for it.

Talents are bestowed for the profit of others as well as yourself.

Every church member is a necessary part of the church and is held responsible for its actions.

A prayer, although given in a reverent attitude, if not understood by the giver, is, to say the least, disconcerting.

God's plan is a marvelous plan. It is a perfect example of precise organization.

No other book than the Bible has a greater appeal to better living.

The value of baptism is the admission of faith in the resurrection.

One should advance and develop spiritually, as well as in other ways.

The church of God is a household of faith; it is characterized first, by what it believes, second, by what it does.

One must believe that Christ is the firstfruits of resurrection; we are to follow.

Faith is an essential of a Christian.

Beliefs held by the Church of God:

God is.

Christ is the Son of God.

The certainty of the resurrection and the establishment of the kingdom on earth.

Every thought, word and deed should be to the glory of God.

Good works alone save no one; we must accept Jesus Christ.

If we have true faith, repentance follows.

If you get the wrong basic thought of God's work, you are bound to reach the wrong conclusion.

The correct order of becoming a Christian is first, belief, second, repentance, and third, baptism.

THAT BEST PORTION of a good man's life; his little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love.

— Wordsworth.

I HAVE SEEN THE SEA

"To know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge."

A little child was playing by the shore of the broad blue sea,
And oft he looked away across the waves, so wonderingly.

It was a new entrancing sight to him, that watery waste,
The tossing billows breaking on the sand with foam wreaths graced.

And often in his distant inland home, with childish glee,
The boy would say to young and older friends, "I have seen the sea!"

And so he had; the child made no mistake, his words were true;

But yet, how much of ocean's vast expanse had met his view?

Only the waves that rippled on the shore; while far away,
The broad Atlantic in its depth and strength beyond him lay.

And thus we say we know the love of Christ; and so we do;
'Tis exaggeration or mistake, but sweetly true.

But ah! how much of that unfathomed love do we yet know?
Only the ripples on the shores of time, the nearer flow.

The mighty ocean of redeeming love rolls deep and wide,
Filling eternity, and heaven, and earth, with its vast tide.

We know it by sweet experience now; yet shall explore Its breadth and length, its depth and height of grace, for evermore. — E. R. V.

THE BOOK OF ZECHARIAH

By Lyman Booth

ZECHARIAH, WHICH MEANS, "whom Jehovah remembers," was the son of Berechiah and grandson of Iddo. Ezra 5:1; 6:14. Iddo was the head of one of the priestly houses (Nehemiah 12:4-16), and as he returned from the exile with Zechariah, the prophet must have been a young man when he commenced his work. He was contemporary with Haggai, and he began to prophesy two months after him (Zech. 1:1), and continued two years, encouraging the Jews to prosecute the rebuilding of the national sanctuary. It is probable that he continued to exercise his prophetic office during a much longer time, though the visions and predictions in the latter part of the book are not dated.

Various traditions concerning him have been published but they are, in general, improbable, so that no more is known of him, than what is recorded in the Scriptures, and may be seen by consulting the marginal references on the verses in which his name is given. His prophetic character and usefulness are recorded by Ezra in 5:1, 2 and 6:14, and his book is repeatedly quoted and referred to, and thus sanctioned as the word of God, in the New Testament. Compare 9:9 with Matt. 21:4, 5 and John 12:14-16; Zech. 11:12, 13 with Matt. 27:7-10; Zech. 10 with John 19:34-37 and Rev. 1:7; Zech. 7 with Matt. 26:31; Mark 14:27. The numerous and extraordinary prophecies which his book contains demonstrate sufficiently that the prophet "spoke as he was moved by the Holy Spirit." Many of these have been undeniably and most wonderfully accomplished; and the rest, though considered by some most peculiarly obscure, on careful consideration will be found to foretell the same future events, sometimes under other emblems, with the most remarkable predictions, both in the Old and New Testaments.

He has been styled the "sun" among the minor prophets; and the time is drawing near when the propriety of the title will be fully demonstrated. After general warnings and exhortations to repentance, the prophet foretells the completion of the temple, the rebuilding, replenishing, security, and prosperity of Jerusalem and other cities of Judah, and the judgments of God on the enemies of His people. But in doing this, under the types of Zerubbabel and Joshua, and by using figurative language, he predicts the coming of Christ, our King and High Priest, the establishment of His kingdom, the building of His spiritual temple, the conversion of the Gentiles (1:4, 6). By the vision of a flying roll and an ephah, he shows the judgments which should come on the wicked Jews, and the oppressed state of the nation after they had filled up the measure of their sins.

Interspersed with warnings and exhortations, other prophecies follow of prosperity and enlargement to Jerusalem; till at length, the strong nations of all languages would become the worshipers of Jehovah, and join themselves to His people, chapters 7 and 8. The events occurring to the surrounding nations and to the Jews, between the completion of the temple and the coming of Christ, are next foretold in figurative intimations of the prevalence of His gospel, by the triumphs of His apostles and humble servants (9 and 10).

After these are given descriptions of the destruction of the temple, the rejection of the nations that oppressed Jerusalem and the church. Then follows the opening of a bright scene to our view by prophecies of the conversion of the nations to their crucified Savior, the humility, zeal, and excellence of the new converts, and the final ruin of idolatry and all false religion (11; 12; 13:1-5).

Zechariah speaks more explicitly of the death of Christ as our Sacrifice. He also speaks of the tremendous judgments which would be inflicted on the unbelieving Jew; the preservation of a remnant, through fiery trials, and their conversion; the taking and destruction of Jerusalem to be against her; the removal of hindrances that the Gentiles followed by the ruin of the nations which had fought might gain the favor of God with Israel; the establishment of the church in primitive times. (Continued next week)

THE MILLENNIUM

By F. L. Austin

"And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." — Revelation 20:4.

IN ONE QUICK GLANCE this scripture brings us to the coronation of our Lord and Master. The throne promised Him in Luke 1:32, 33 is here occupied. David's throne is reestablished. The chosen nation of God is returned to the direct oversight of Heaven and Christ is King of kings and Lord of lords.

The fullness of the statement of Rev. 11:15: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ" is here realized. He begins His reign.

With Him, already having been proven and tested, page 8, are those who have been raised for Him. They "live again". Having given their lives "for my sake" (Matt. 10:39; 16:25, 26; Mark 8:35-37; Luke 9:24; John 12:25), they have found it again. Their lives have been given back to them. Not only do they live again, but they reign "with Christ a thousand years."

Naturally the query comes, "Where do Christ and His raised ones reign?" Jesus himself records an answer in Matt. 25:31: "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations." He reigns from His throne; the one given Him, "the throne of his father David." Luke 1:32.

Not just Israel, the chosen nation, will be before Him, but all nations. Not just the righteous, but all people. Nor will those nations who are then gathered before Christ be subjected during that thousand years to "the great dragon . . . , that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world" (Rev. 12:9), for that dragon will be bound, Rev. 20:2, during the thousand years of Christ's reign.

To the prophets of old God gave various words of information regarding this reign of restitution. Isaiah saw the word of the Lord and gave it to us, 2:2, as follows: "It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it." Capital cities, the places where the thrones of the nations were situated, were in early times frequently located on the hilltops, the elevations of the nation. Isaiah says that the mountain of the Lord's house, the house of His rule, His throne, is to be exalted, established above all other similar houses and possessions.

Further, he says that all nations shall flow unto it. That this prophecy has never been fulfilled is evidence that it must be fulfilled before the nations or the earth come to be righteous. Righteousness will, under His reign be developed: "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Isaiah here informs us that untaught and unlearned nations "shall go" up to the Lord's house, and that the Lord "will teach" them, and that they "will walk in his paths."

The process is the process of restoring the nations of earth from their wayward ways of sin and ungodliness to the righteous ways of God. It is the same thought as is given to us by the Savior in Matt. 25:32 and on — "Before him shall be gathered all nations." It is the time following Christ's second coming. It is the time when He sits on the throne given Him of His Father. Luke 1:33. It is the time when He occupies the throne to reign, even for a thousand years.

But Isaiah 2:3 goes further. He says that, "out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." He tells us from whence it is that this word goes forth. Therefore he locates the place of the throne, of the rule. It is at Zion. It is that place where David's throne formerly was. It is the same place where David's throne was overturned, Ezek. 21:25-27, and David's throne or authority or government was to be no more "until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him". The Savior occupies that restored throne. He rules. Nations come to Him for instruction. Learning of Him they turn to beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks. It is because of His teachings, because of His rule and authority that, "neither shall they learn war any more."

This reign of Christ is a reign of restoration. The Scriptures nowhere teach that this reign is a reign over people already made righteous. Rather it is a reign of correction. Jeremiah speaks of it in chapter 23:5-8 as follows: "I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely." He is not to be a Moses to lead "the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt", but He is to be the living Lord who is to bring up and lead "the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them." His is a work of bringing Israel back to obedience unto God. It is to be a rule of subjugating Israel and those Gentile nations who go up to learn of Him.

Thus when Christ comes to occupy His throne for a millennial reign, the kingdom of God begins to grow. It will grow and enlarge until it fills the whole earth. The church will be His assistant. To "reign with him" is to engage with Him in the marvelous work of first, delivering Israel from her captivity among the nations and second, of teaching her, building her up into righteous obedience unto God's Son.

When Peter was instructing the people on the day of Pentecost, he explained some things in the language of Acts 3:20, 21, "He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Christ is the great Restorer. He is to restore even the earth itself, so that it shall yet radiate with the beauty and glory of Eden.

But before that restitution can be accomplished, He must restore earth's inhabitants to obedience unto God, to loyalty unto Him. And so at once when He comes in His glory and occupies the throne given to Him by God, He exercises His sovereignty in the process of restoring God's chosen nation and such other nations as will turn to the God of heaven for direction. Those nations that will not accept of the Savior's rule "shall perish: yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted". Isaiah 60:12.

What a marvelous era will the era of millennium be! It will see the Master who was able to rebuke the stormy winds and waters, who was able with a word to exterminate leprosy, whose very presence caused soldiers with swords and staves to fall backwards to the ground, exercising His sovereignty to the end that the nations that listen to His guidance may be classed as sheep, Matt. 25:34, and made to "inherit the kingdom."

What gladness, what joy should thrill every Christian's life and heart as he comes to realize the approach of that day when Christ shall begin to rule! What joy and gladness will the earth awaken unto as it awakens from its day of sin and darkness unto the great day of righteousness and light through Jesus Christ!

May the great rule of Christ hasten rapidly. May the day of restitution rush forward. May those who today are faithful in and unto Christ gladly anticipate the dawn of that era when, with the Master, they can be sent out as were apostles of old to do the Savior's bidding, to perform for Him works of restitution, to have a hand in the remolding of earth and its fulness.

Because of these wonderful pictures of the coming age, we exclaim with John on Patmos, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

THE POWERS THAT BE

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JOHN E. WEEKS, governor of Vermont, is drawing to a close. Last week, speaking to a Sunday School class at Colchester, Vermont, the Governor declared that if his administration has been a success, "it has been due to my asking in the governor's chamber each morning before I started the day's work, the guidance of Almighty God. To Him belongs the credit." — Christian Herald.

YOUR REDEMPTION DRAWETH NIGH

(Continued from front page)

often, in cold and nakedness, etc."

Paul reveals the mystery of his rejoicing while enduring all his distressful experience and his ultimate success in winning a "crown of life". 1 Cor. 9:26, 27, "Well, I run without swerving; I do not plant my blows upon the empty air — no, I maul and master my body, in case, after preaching to other people, I am disqualified myself." Moffatt.

Dear Reader, are you mastering, "keeping under", your body? Or are you allowing your body (fleshly desires) to master your mind? If the latter is true, your Christian status will prove untenable in combating with the "fiery trials" you are facing (1 Peter 4:12, 13), for in the very nature of things spiritual, it is impossible to rejoice in the Lord and the gospel while the spirit of the world, "a law (satanic) is warring against the law of your mind," Rom. 7:23 — thus occupying the throne of your hearts.

THE ONLY WAY to have a friend is to be one. — Emerson.

THE PLACE WE FILL

A UNIT PURPOSE fills the earth with unlimited scope by the hands of the Creator, the infinite God, infinitely wise. A reason was behind all His creation. God created man because He needed man in His eternal purpose. There is no other reason for man's existence. We cannot hope to penetrate all the devious ways of God's purpose, but God needs men today just as much as when the morning stars sang together. For if we ponder, we will see a unit idea stretching off into the distances of eternity.

God made men that they might seek after Him, for man is the only creature of God's handiwork that can intelligently serve Him. He was created that he might understand God and worship Him. And God reveals His purposes to those who seek after Him. God does not desire compulsory service but He wants the service of those who turn to Him with delight, those who are willing to be led by His hand.

It has been said that God does not need man, but man needs God. But is this altogether true? God cannot accomplish the infinite purposes of eternity without man. And we have been called into the church for His special work. Never fear, God's work will go on, even though we do not do our part, for He will find some one else to do it. But we will suffer unfathomable loss.

In the intricate plan of the Father, we cannot fathom just where we will fit, but rest assured God needs us. Throughout eternity God has a work for each to do. Whatever or wherever you are, give yourself freely to Him.

"God Needs Men," by G. Eldred Marsh.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"AND JESUS SAID UNTO HER, NEITHER DO I CONDEMN THEE: GO, AND SIN NO MORE."

If I could only see the road you came,
With all the jagged rocks and crooked ways,
I might more kindly think of your missteps,
And only praise.

If I could know the heartaches you have felt,
The longings for the things that never came;
I would not misconstrue your erring then,
Nor even blame.

— Carrie Joy in Nautilus.

DARE WE NOT TRUST?

NOT A DAY PASSES but the words and actions of those about us fail to meet with our approval. So often this is because we do not understand the real motive. Modesty and pride do not permit the flaunting of one's virtues, and left in ignorance we continue to wound others by our unjust criticism. We criticize on the grounds that it is deserved, and though this may be true, is it not better to try to encourage one to nobler action by placing our confidence and trust in him?

"We see through a glass darkly," being mortal. It is not possible for us to know all the heartaches and struggles of others, any more than it is for them to know ours. If the curtain could be lifted upon our lives and everyone shown the contributing factors and circumstances that make us what we are surely the result would be a kindlier, more sympathetic brotherhood, which could be more fitly called "the Body of Christ."

A boy was once ridiculed by his companions, who dubbed him "Scotch" and a "poor sport" because he failed to spend his money freely in contributing to the school's activities. Yet even while they were scoffing, there was a poor widow who was immeasurably grateful to him. A great burden of worry had been lifted from her shoulders when her coal bin had been filled that day.

There are so many things that we cannot know. We see the outward crust of a man. One is ill-tempered and disagreeable, but perhaps physical pain or mental torture lies beneath it. Another appears so jovial in the face of disaster that they say of him, "He doesn't care"; whereas he may care so deeply that he is resorting to laughter as a disguise for the depth of his feeling.

On the street one day a woman repeatedly reprimanded her child because his footsteps lagged and he would not hurry. She finally turned to punish him before she discovered that something was wrong with his foot, and removing his shoe she found a large stone. We could find many stones to remove if we would only look for them, and make allowance for many others of which only the Father above has knowledge. It is only with such forbearance that we can gain confidences and form true friendships; only through alleviating the cares of others can we lighten the particular cross that we ourselves have to bear.

Can we not, as Bereans, try to overlook the petty differences that arise among us? "Charity suffereth long and is kind." Let us forget faults and failures. Perhaps the erring one has not failed in God's sight. There is so much to be commended in each one of our brothers and sisters — so much to be respected and admired. If Christ, being without sin, is able to love all and forgive all, how much more so should we, who perhaps fall much farther short of the mark of perfection than the one whom we would criticize!

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 18; California, 9; Indiana, 6; Nebraska, 3; Ohio, 4; Minnesota, 2; Michigan, 2; Florida, 1; Louisiana, 1; Arkansas, 1; Missouri, 1; Virginia, 1; New York, 1; Texas, 1; Alabama, 1.

COUNT YOUR MANY BLESSINGS. At a meeting in Toronto for the aged and helpless, Mr. Alexander, the great leader of congregational singing, leaned over and asked an invalid on a stretcher near the platform, "What is your favorite hymn?"

She had been brought to the service in an ambulance. Her lower limbs were paralyzed. She had not left her bed for four years. What do you suppose she said her favorite hymn was? "Count Your Many Blessings."

"But have you any to count?" ventured Mr. Alexander. "Thousands of them," was her prompt reply. — Sel.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

"For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

TODAY, EVERYWHERE, you hear people discussing the success or failure of one of our national laws. This law is called the Eighteenth Amendment, and has to do with the liquor traffic. It is sometimes called the law of prohibition.

But whether the law is right or wrong depends not on the law itself, but upon the people themselves living in this country. It depends upon you — it depends upon me.

Are we observing the Christian Law? The Christian Law is the Golden Rule, or the law of love. If we hurt others, or do things that weaken our own bodies, we are not keeping the law of love.

If we "walk in the Spirit" we live the way God wants us to live. We try to think kindly of others, and help others in every way we can.

The Bible says that the fruits of the Spirit are love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance.

Joy means we must be cheerful, and find pleasure in the way of right. Peace is restfulness, quiet — not worrying, but trusting in God's goodness. Longsuffering is being patient, enduring the temptations and trials that come as bravely as possible. When the temptations come we must stop and say to ourselves, "What would Jesus do?" and keep that thought right before us.

Gentleness is kindness and thoughtfulness — thinking of and for the comfort and ease of others.

Faith is your belief — your trust in God's Word, His promises and care.

Meekness means not always putting yourself and your interests first; not boasting or bragging about what you have, or what you can do.

Temperance means not going to extremes — not overdoing — not overeating. It means doing nothing that will hurt your body or mind, or someone else.

A sound mind in a sound body is the greatest gift you can present to God for His service.

THINK! Are you courageous enough to say, "No," when tempted to do wrong?

BIBLE FACT

Who slew eight hundred men at one time?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Galatians 5:19-21.
2. Memorize Galatians 5:22 and 23.
3. Find all the verses you can about drinking strong drink.

PLUCK

"What we call Luck
Is simply Pluck,
And doing things over and over;
Courage and will
Perseverance and skill
Are the four leaves of Luck's clover."

THE POLL ON PROHIBITION

MANY BOYS ARE BEING CONFUSED by the results of the poll recently made by The Literary Digest. There are a few facts about this you should keep in mind where the results are being considered.

First of all, this poll was launched after months of the most vigorous campaign that the wets have put on in a long time. The newspapers have been "crowded with endless columns of anti-prohibition editorials, stories, cartoons and heavily colored news items holding national prohibition up to ridicule and contempt."

The method of selecting the names to whom ballots are sent weights the whole procedure against those who favor the Eighteenth Amendment, for the names are taken from the telephone books, and lists of owners of automobiles. This shuts out about ninety percent of the women voters and a large number of young men and women because the telephones and automobiles are usually in the names of husbands and fathers. Neither is there any way to check these ballots to discover how many repeaters will vote.

It must be remembered that although The Digest's straw votes on presidential elections have been quite accurate, their vote in 1922 went far astray. The vote taken that summer went three-to-two wet, whereas the following fall the dries elected a Congress that was four-to-one dry.

— R. A. Burkhardt.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." — Proverbs 20:1.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON IV. — October 26, 1930

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

Galatians 5:13-26

Devotional Reading: Romans 14:13-21

GOLDEN TEXT

And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things.
— 1 Corinthians 9:25.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Prohibition.

Outline. I. The Universal Law of Prohibition. II. Results of Prohibition.

I. The Universal Law of Prohibition. The first law God gave to man was a prohibitory law, Gen. 2:17. This prohibitory law was given to benefit man with a largeness of liberty in life. Prohibition is found throughout God's Book.

A large portion of the law of the nation is prohibitory. Prohibition is enacted against practices of all kinds denying the right of one individual trespassing unjustly upon the rights or privileges of others. Legal prohibition is effective against theft, robbery, murder, trespassing, both in private and in public; against suicide, unjust destruction of one's own belongings, the use of narcotics, drugs, etc., to personal injury, the use of liquors, as also other things which injure the individual or make the individual a menace to society. Such prohibition is universally recognized, excepting by those who are Bolshevik in principle, as being in harmony with God's laws and as being altogether righteous and beneficial to mankind.

II. Results of Prohibition. Passing by those phases of prohibition that are accepted by all we come to prohibition of liquor as being enforced in the United States.

David G. Redinger, resident engineer, and President R. H. Ballard of the Southern California Edison Company, state that,

"The Eighteenth Amendment has undoubtedly lessened labor turnover. The ordinary worker stays on the job two or three times as long as formerly.

"The men are now saving their money. Not long ago the company officials sent representatives of its investment department to interview men.

"It was quite a surprise to us to find that not only was far more stock sold than was anticipated, but that of that amount more than THREE-FOURTHS was paid for in cash!"

A laborer in the Sperry Flour Company declared: "Listen, buddy, I used to cash my check in a saloon every Saturday night, see? Now the wife gets it. I used to wear work shirts and overalls on Sunday. Now I wear a real suit and a silk shirt and a white collar. I never used to see shows; now we see 'em. I can remember when th' kids had never had a ride in an auto; now we got one, an' it costs me less'n 2 cents to ride to work when it used to cost me a nickel on the street cars. Me — I'm dry!"

Mr. Nicholls of the Nicholls Grain and Milling Company: "The difference in the men of today and the men of pre-prohibition times is decidedly noticeable. Their efficiency is much higher. Nearly every one of our employees owns an automobile. How many workers owned horses and buggies in the old days? A good many of our employees are paying on homes; it used to be that they'd rent miserable shacks and live in them any old way. Not today, for the personal cleanliness of the worker has risen to a new standard."

G. E. Gaylord, superintendent of the Los Angeles division of the Southern Pacific declared: "Prohibition has been a material help to us and to our men. We used to have our share of trouble, despite Rule G and other stringent regulations as to sobriety. There isn't any doubt or question as to the improvement. There is much greater efficiency on the job, and the men are more contented. More money is going home, and with more money, better conditions result. And there are more men in the Los Angeles division who own their own homes than in any other division on the road."

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Personal Liberty: There is a growing tendency on the part of many people to think of "personal liberty" from a selfish standpoint. Personal liberty allows of freedom only so far as the rights and liberties of others are not affected or impaired. Will personal liberty allow and justify full and unrestricted use of the following:

Strong drink? Tobacco?

Discuss whether or not these habits can be indulged in without affecting the rights of others? What effect will they have on

The user?

His influence?

His Offspring?

Self-control: Self-control is of more importance than personal liberty. Self-control leads one into a freedom; while personal liberty enslaves one to habits. Class should discuss ways in which self-control should be practiced. Can self-control be accomplished in our own strength, or must we seek help from God in overcoming the passions and desires of the flesh? — C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And Every Combatant is temperate in all things." 1 Cor. 9:25, Diag.

The International Sunday School Committee uses this translation: "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things."

The Diaglott tells us, "The apostle alludes to the course of training to which each was subjected who contended for the prize given at the Isthmian games, which were celebrated among the Corinthians. The training regulated their diet, their hours of exercise and rest, the restraint of passions, the kind of exercise, etc. The thought in the other translation I would say is that temperance is self-control. If one has perfect self-control he need not fall because of the many temptations that allure him to drink, or the use of narcotics in any form.

If it is necessary for the athlete to practice such self-control and endure such rigorous training to win the game, how much more necessary is it for the Christian to practice the same self-control and train to win the race of life. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Works and Grace.

In 1 Corinthians 9 Paul says, "I run . . . I fight . . . I keep under my body and bring it into subjection". No language could express effort with a definite purpose more strongly than do these words of Paul. The epistles of Paul are pervaded with exhortations TO DO the works of righteousness. Neither give place to the devil; walk not as other Gentiles; put away lying; be angry and sin not; let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth; be not drunk with wine, are examples. There is no phase of right conduct and right thinking that Paul does not command and exhort. Such words from Paul veto the idea that the doctrine of salvation by grace without works (which likewise pervades his writings) is against righteousness. Since commands and exhortations to do the works of righteousness and the doctrine of salvation by grace without works both come from Paul with equal fervor and strength, there is a vital relationship between the two, not contradiction. And Paul knew this relationship by experience.

Before he had been touched by the grace of God through Christ, he had served God with a pure conscience from his forefathers; he was blameless as concerns the righteousness which is in the law. But when the grace of God in Christ touched his life, he knew that neither the sincere service nor the blamelessness was salvation. He knew that salvation is a condition of mind, and heart, and body far beyond the reach of sincerity and good works. He knew also that salvation by grace without works does set aside sincerity and good works, for under grace he felt within himself a greater urge toward both than he had ever felt under the fear and restraint of the law. Before grace he was a recluse in a Jewish temple. It was after grace had touched him that Paul went among men of all classes urging and commanding good works through the grace of the Christ's power. — A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

RALLY DAYS

Percentages of increase for Rally Day attendance have been coming in from some of our churches and Sunday Schools. Cleveland (Ohio) and Grand Rapids (Mich.) observed Rally Day on October 5; Rockford, Dixon and Oregon (Ill.) and Burr Oak (Ind.) on October 12. Figures have not yet all been received, but we have the following on hand:

Cleveland, Ohio, 58 percent increase.
Grand Rapids, Mich., 68 percent increase.
Oregon, Ill., 100.2 percent increase.

Oregon church and Sunday School experienced a wonderful Rally Day on October 12 both morning and evening. The average attendance for the past quarter was 47.5 and our Rally Day attendance was 96 for Sunday School and 100 at church service. The evening attendance was 68. The primary department of the Sunday School gave a short program, and the morning sermon by Bro. Austin was given especially for the young people. Our Rally Day effort will be continued during the quarter and much enthusiasm is being displayed by the Blues and the Whites.

RALLY DAY AT GOLDEN RULE CHURCH

Our average attendance for the last three months, including conference Sundays, was 108. Our attendance on Rally Day was 171. Mattie Agard, Sec.

That's fine, Cleveland! "Including conference Sundays," probably means the two Sundays of General Conference when several of Golden Rule's Regulars were at Oregon.

In the absence of Bro. Austin, the services at Oregon, Illinois, will be conducted by Bro. Richard LeCrone in the morning and by Bro. John Denchfield in the evening, on Sunday, October 19.

A letter from Dr. Gertrude Logan of St. Louis, Missouri, informs us that she is nicely recovering from a recent serious sickness. Sr. Logan thanks the Father for her release from the serious state in which she was.

A post card tells us that Bro. Harlan Bell has been committed to the hospital on account of appendicitis. We pray that his stay there will be short indeed and that his recovery will be complete and full strength early returned to him.

The editor, with others, was privileged up on Sunday afternoon to attend Rally Day exercises by the children of the Sunday School at the Dixon, Illinois, church. A beautiful program revealed much talent which promises to be of great value to the church in coming years.

REPORT FROM BLAIR, NEBRASKA

On Sunday evening, October 5, Bro. Almus Adams closed a week of meeting at the Blair Church of God. During the afternoon he baptized seven, who added their names to our church roll. They are, Mrs. Robert Johns, Russell, Arnold, Byron, Janice and Mary Johns and Wm. Patterson.

We are planning a full day for October 12 as Rally Day and will send in a report of it later.

Mrs. Birdie Krogh,

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION WORK

Your home office is more than pleased because of recent developments.

First, the reports coming from all directions regarding the Rally Day activities are the best that have ever come to this office. There has been an awakening, a zest and a mind to work as never before. This only shows some of the possibilities. May it encourage all to visualize the opportunities of the many communities and to occupy them to the full.

Second, the responses to the Treasurer's appeal for 1,000 Dollar-A-Month contributions, while they are yet far from the goal, are nevertheless sufficient to greatly ease the financial strain at the home office. About last Easter time the Secretary explained through the columns of The Herald that 1,000 Dollar-A-Month pledges would relieve the office from the continual financial handicap. He further explained that during the summer, as in former years, there was liable to be the usual financial drought. It resulted in just that way and it took hours and hours of time and great percentages of energy in order to manage the finances for the summer months. But with the beginning of October this was partly relieved and the mind has been partly released for more devotion to religious activity.

Third, we want to inform all that our Greenhouse has made definite advancement during the past year. Local business men and patrons tell us that the house and the crops never looked better in the history of the Greenhouse. Mr. Moore deserves the appreciation of all for his persevering, untiring devotion to the end that he might accomplish what all have said that the Greenhouse should accomplish. He has worked under serious handicap unknown to any but a few and yet in spite of this the showing today is very encouraging. Unless there is a continuation of unforeseen and unexpected drawbacks such as there were throughout the winter months last year, the Greenhouse should bring to us this year that revenue of increase that should justly be expected.

F. L. Austin, Sec'y.

New Pledges were received last week from the following states:

Oklahoma	2	Ohio	3
Michigan	1	New York	1
Indiana	1	Iowa	1
	Illinois		1

The following organizations have pledged to the One Dollar-A-Month Club since last recording:

Lawrenceville (Ohio) church and Sunshine class; and the Golden Rule Bereans, Golden Rule Sunday School, Intermediate Girls' class, Intermediate Boys' class, Junior Intermediate Boys' class and the Adult class, all of Golden Rule Church, Cleveland, Ohio.

The figures are not yet complete, but we believe that the palm goes to Ohio for the greatest number of pledges to date to the Dollar-A-Month Club, and to the Golden Rule Church for the greatest number from an individual church. Bro. Lyon has certainly organized his forces in a most efficient manner. Definite totals will be published in next week's issue. So there will be plenty of time for other states to bring their number up to or beyond Ohio's number. Let's see which state will be ahead next week.

ONE THOUSAND OUR GOAL

The Treasurer was pleased to see so many pledges reported in last week's Herald. Thanks to all the committeemen who are working so faithfully and to the brotherhood at large who are responding to the cause.

The time has been extended. Our goal still is ONE THOUSAND! We must all work until the goal is reached.

The N. B. I. Secretary and other workers can already see the good accomplished by the systematic pledges. It is a relief to know that the brotherhood at large are contributing regularly and that 333 members are already supporting the work. This number wants to be boosted as rapidly as possible until our goal is reached.

We will soon have the number of pledges classified according to states and churches within the state. Probably a little friendly contest can be put on between the various states, so that our goal may be realized as quickly as possible.

Let me again urge one and all to consider the plan carefully and prayerfully and make your pledge at once. Hand it to the committeeman in your community or mail it to the N. B. I. office. Let us all work together and boost the Lord's work.

L. T. Hanson, Treas.

REPORT OF QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

On Saturday and Sunday, September 27 and 28, the Iowa brethren met at Pleasant Prairie church, between Sac City and Lake View, for the first Quarterly Conference of the year. Although there were not as many in attendance from a distance as we would have liked to have seen, those who were there had a feast of good things, both spiritual and physical.

Sermons were preached on Saturday night and Sunday morning, afternoon and evening, by the state evangelist, J. W. Williams, who gave some fine, helpful truths to think about and remember, especially to those who do not have the opportunity of getting together with those of "like precious faith", as some of those present are more or less isolated. A fine picnic dinner at the church was enjoyed by all, and all the visiting brethren join in thanking the Pleasant Prairie folks for their splendid hospitality.

The date and location of the next Quarterly Conference have not yet been announced, but will doubtless be near the center of the state, some time during the winter. Announcement will be given in due time through The Restitution Herald.

Mayme Jones, Sec.

REMEMBER BRO. JUDD

From his bed where he probably will be confined for some time, Bro. R. H. Judd of 111 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ontario, writes that on Friday, September 26, he was run into by an auto and his foot bones were badly broken as also two breaks in one ankle. The doctor tells him that it will be no little time that he will have to remain off his foot. This is a difficult position for one to be in who feels that he needs to be earning wages every day possible.

We feel certain that we are justified in conveying to Bro. Judd the sympathy and prayers of The Herald family. A line from different ones to Bro. Judd will undoubtedly be much appreciated.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

FALL MEETING AT CASEY

The Fall Meeting near Casey, Illinois, will be held from October 21 to November 3, with Bro. J. W. Williams as speaker the first week and Bro. L. E. Conner assisting him the second week. There will be Bible class each afternoon. All those finding it possible to come are invited to attend and enjoy these meetings with us.

Come one! Come all!

Mary J. Lansbery; Sec.

DEDICATION SERVICE AT RIPLEY

The brethren of the Ripley (Illinois) congregation have remodeled their church building and added several needed improvements to it. Next Sunday, October 19, they will hold a Rededication Service. Bro. Austin will conduct the services morning and evening. A welcome is extended to all who may find it possible to come and benefit by these services.

SERVICES AT PLUM RIVER

Next Sunday, October 19, is the regular Sunday for services with the congregation at the Plum River (Illinois) church. Bro. Paul C. Johnson expects to be with them both morning and evening. Those living nearby are invited to attend these meetings.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Special efforts were put forth to make our Rally Day a success, and it proved to be a very happy and inspiring day. The Sunday School attendance at 218 was the high mark of the season, and the first additions to the church under the new pastorate were Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hotchkiss, a splendid young couple beginning to rear a family and living not far from the church. They first became interested in the truth during the ministry of Bro. Patrick, and the church now rejoices to have their fellowship and cooperation.

Our three-month Sunday School contest has opened and all are wearing either gold or silver stars. We are expecting some good results from this, but the church building will have to be larger before many more can be properly accommodated. Surely God will provide some means of making this possible before very long.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

THE TRAINING CLASS NEWS

On Wednesday, October 8, the Training Class met at the dormitory for the purpose of organizing to carry on their business affairs for the coming school term. Clarence Lapp was elected President and Business Manager, Harvey Krogh was elected Vice-president and Assistant Business Manager. John Denehfield was chosen Secretary and Richard LeCrone, Treasurer.

Ways and means were discussed to meet the needs of the class at the present time. It was decided that expenses for rent, light, heat, water and food supplies should be pooled.

Sr. J. W. Cooper and daughters are doing the cooking and house work while Gerald Cooper, the son, has charge of the furnace and odd jobs about the place.

At present we are in need of a cook stove and a couple of small dressers. Several of the boys are still looking for part time work. If anyone in or near Oregon could aid the class in this respect it would be appreciated very much. Also if anyone has fruits, meats, vegetables or any other kind of foodstuffs that we may use to advantage they will all be gladly accepted. This would be a good way to help the Training Class.

Thank you!

MARY JANE ALEXANDER

Mary Jane Jarrell was born in Hancock county, Mississippi, on January 8, 1875, and died at her home in Hammond Louisiana, on September 25, 1930. She was married on May 25, 1890, to Antoine Alexander, who preceded her in death. To this union were born twelve children, two of which died in infancy. Her oldest son, Clarence, died in young manhood.

She leaves to mourn her death, three sons: J. Terry, Britton and Archie; and six daughters: Misses Corinne and Ruchie, Mrs. G. G. Landry, Mrs. Chas. Bloomquist, Mrs. Mahlon Baucle and Mrs. Warren Landry, all of Hammond. She also leaves several brothers and sisters and a host of friends.

She was baptized in January, 1914, by W. L. Crowe and has been a very faithful worker in the Church of God at Hammond, where she will be greatly missed.

During her last hours of consciousness she called all of her family and some of her neighbors to her bedside and asked Bro. Albert Siple to tell them of her faith and hope which she loved so much to work for during her life.

She was laid to rest in the cemetery near Hammond beside her husband and children, where she quietly sleeps awaiting the morning of the resurrection.

MRS. G. W. TODD

Ginevra Elder was born in Richardson county, Wisconsin, August 31, 1858, and died at her home near Moorefield, Nebraska, September 22, 1930. She was married to G. W. Todd on October 26, 1884, at Nelson, Nebraska. To this union were born six children: Gertie, who died in infancy; Delbert H. of North Platte; Mrs. Maude McLaughlin; Mrs. Vella Herdon; Verne E.; and Murton E., all of Moorefield.

She leaves to mourn her death, her husband, five children, twelve grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, four sisters, two brothers and a host of other relatives and friends.

When about eighteen she was baptized in the Christian church to which she belonged until later years when she united with the Church of God at Moorefield. She was a most ideal example of Christian character and a mother's love, ever devoted to her home and friends.

The sympathy of the entire neighborhood is most sincerely extended to the bereaved husband and children and grandchildren, who will miss the pleasant word and smile of "Mother" when they go home.

She was laid to rest in the Moorefield cemetery, September 24, Rev. E. E. Giesler officiating. She rests there to await the call of her Master on the morning of the resurrection.

Bro. Siple was called to Eldorado, Illinois, last week because of the death of Sr. Mary Davenport.

The Niagara Falls Annual Meeting will be held over Sunday, October 26. Bro. Austin expects to be present. All are invited to attend.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Lily M. Hobson; J. E. Orchard; Ada M. Eldridge; Mrs. Ed. Twibell; W. T. White; Frank Switzer; D. E. Prutzman; Ida F. Orm; Earl Reinhard.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

SPIRITUAL WEAPONS

TRUE FREEDOM

Monday, October 20 — Galatians 5:13-15.

"For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." — V. 14.

IN THIS FIFTH CHAPTER, Paul points out to the Galatian brethren the contrast between slavery and freedom. He explains that in trying to keep the law of Moses, they became slaves, because they could not keep that law. Thus were they continually under bondage to it. But in Christ they were made free. "Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart . . . and thy neighbour as thyself," was God's new law to them and in keeping that perfectly they were keeping the whole law. In keeping the new law of love, the "thou shalt not's" of the old law no longer troubled them. Why? Because "love worketh no ill to his neighbour."

SPIRITUAL FREEDOM

Tuesday, October 21 — Galatians 5:16-26.

"But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law." — V. 18.

IF A WEALTHY MAN were to buy a slave and then set him free, the most natural thing in the world for the former slave to do would be to serve gladly and willingly the one who has purchased for him his freedom. Christ has bought us and set us free from the bondage of sin and death. When we come to fully realize the depth of our debt to Him, we will gladly and willingly do our utmost to serve and please Him. And He asks us to crucify our old desires and walk in the way which He has shown us by His own life. It's a glad service, not a burdensome one, this spiritual freedom in Christ.

RESPONSIBILITY

Wednesday, October 22 — Genesis 4:9-15.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" — V. 9.

IF WE GRASP THE FULL meaning of the second commandment, we will realize that the influence shed forth by our lives is an ever widening circle. I may only influence a few within my own circle by the things that I do and say, but each of them, in turn, influences others. And thus the responsibility really comes back to me. If I am careful to manifest the fruits of the Spirit in my daily intercourse with my associates, radiating love, joy, peace, kindness, charity, these in turn will show at least a portion of that to others of their associates. Self-control becomes a joyful privilege, not a burdensome duty, when viewed in this light.

MY NEIGHBOR

Thursday, October 23 — Luke 10:29-37.

"Go, and do thou likewise." — V. 37.

BY THIS LITTLE STORY, Jesus sought to teach the inquiring lawyer that any whom we may chance to meet is our neighbor. Not only in caring for him in misfortune or distress is our duty to our neighbor emphasized by the Savior, but in the little things of every day. Am I careful in my daily intercourse with him to show him kindness, consideration, charity and forbearance in all his weaknesses, realizing that my own shortcomings are just as great as his, though perhaps of a different nature? Do I seek by the unspoken example of my life, to point him to the Christ, the Savior of all?

THE PURPOSE OF LAW

Friday, October 24 — 1 Timothy 1:5-11.

"Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient." — V. 9.

THE ONE WHO IS DESIROUS of serving Christ needs not to be told, "Thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal", etc., for his life will be devoted to serving God by serving his fellow men. One who loves God above all else, and his neighbor as himself, needs not the restraint that is put upon him by law, for he does not go into forbidden paths, nor does he desire to perpetrate any harm against another.

RESPECT FOR RULERS

Saturday, October 25 — Romans 13:1-7.

"Render therefore to all their dues." — V. 7.

IN THESE DAYS of open flaunting of the law, if respect for authority were taught to our children, there would not be such conditions to contend with in the next generation. Perhaps, as Christians, we are guilty of not rendering due respect to those in command oftentimes because they themselves are not always Christians. This fact does not free us from this injunction. God asks of us to render to Him the sincere worship and reverence that is due Him, and to those in authority, obedience to their laws, no more, no less.

MUTUAL HELPFULNESS

Sunday, October 26 — Romans 14:13-31.

"Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way." V. 13.

THESE VERSES FORM A VERY PERTINENT conclusion to the thought of the readings for the week. How easy it is to judge another and how erring that judgment very often is! This is brought so clearly to our attention many times long after we have passed judgment upon another, when the true circumstances come to light or the prompting motive of certain actions is made known to us.

Let's extend to our brother the same quality and measure of Christian charity that we desire for ourselves.—M. G.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 21, 1930

NUMBER 3

THE MILLENNIUM

By F. L. Austin

AS MANY ROADS OF THE DESERT converge upon the oasis where travelers stop and rest and recruit under the verdure of its fertility, as other roads lead from such an inland island across the remaining portion of the desert to fertile fields beyond, so the millennium stands out in the revealed purposes and plans of God as a period which is to be vivified by the presence and influences of Christ upon which all previous plans and works of God converge and from which all roads lead unto the perfected new heavens and new earth.

Many are the problems of the world which will never know their solutions until the pathway of each several problem terminates at the millennial reign of Christ. Nor is the millennium the end of the journey. It is but the oasis where new life and vigor will be assimilated preparatory for the journey across the little season intervening between that and the new heavens and new earth.

Some of the biblical revelation which pertains to the millennial period as understood by the writer, has been referred to on page 25. Many more scriptures bearing out the same line of instruction might in addition be cited. In order for one to gather unto himself the beauties of God's plans and purposes, it behooves him to study most carefully God's Word with a view to distinguishing correctly between the various lines of God's activity and to arrive at that understanding of God which is His own intention. Every failure to rightly apply scriptures as they relate to the millennial age mars the beauties of God's work of that period. The words of Jeremiah 4:23-31 are by some applied to the millennium. But those words of God were addressed to "Judah and Jerusalem." V. 3. Jeremiah was exhorting God's chosen people to flee their ways of idolatry and of rebelliousness against God and to turn unto Him who had manifested himself so abundantly and graciously unto them. But they would not listen. Beginning with verse 19, Jeremiah portrays to them the results upon Jerusalem and Judea of their persistent opposition to God.

It is undoubtedly true that the punishment here revealed was very largely brought upon Jerusalem by the events that followed soon. The great Babylonish army came upon the city and upon Judea and overthrew all, took them captive and did to that chosen region all that the heart of the king chose to do. If there be anything of that punishment that still remains for future time, the reader may well turn to Revelation 17 and 18 where he will find Babylon specifically mentioned and named as "that great city, which reigneth over the kingdoms of the earth."

It is this power which guides the beastly kingdom of chapter 17 that aids in making war upon and with everything that bears the name of God and of His Son. And it is this same Babylon which in chapter 18 is to be "utterly burned with fire." Her greatness is to be reduced; the whole region is to be thrown into confusion and trembling; the whole land will be overturned and made empty.

But it is plainly evident that these things cannot refer to the period of the millennium. In so far as Jeremiah 4 was fulfilled in the days of Jeremiah, that far it is impossible to assign the punishment to the millennium period; and in so far as that punishment may yet be meted out in accordance with Revelation 17 and 18, it cannot be assigned to the period of the millennium for the reason that Revelation 19 begins, "After these things I heard" alleluia and rejoicings.

John next witnessed in his vision the marriage of the lamb and the great war that followed. See verses 17 to 21, all of which precede in date the events of Rev. 20. Analyzing Revelation 20 it will be seen that the angel which comes down from heaven and binds the dragon comes to the earth itself. No other region is even indicated. In verse 4 the thrones, and they that sat upon them, are spoken of with no other inference than that they are thrones like unto those that have been in common mention. They are thrones of earth. The judgment is judgment relative to earth itself. The reign that follows, verse 4, is for "a thousand years."

"The rest of the dead," verse 5, are the dead of the

(Continued on page 42)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." — Matthew 25:13.

OF WHAT DOES TRUE, Christian service consist? Does it consist of promoting one's own church congregation that it may by arithmetical and geometrical calculations be known to be increasing? Or does it consist of putting into practice in one's own life those teachings and directions of the Master which are peculiar to the new man in Christ Jesus? Does the manifestation in practice of those characteristics which our Savior and His apostles taught Christians to observe bestow light and encouragement upon the surrounding world and tend to lead its people unto Him who is "the way, the truth, and the life"?

DOES CHRISTIANITY CONSIST of Christian devotion and service and action, or of the gaining of an intellectual grasp of God's plans and purposes? If both, which is the more important; or in other words, what portion of a Christian's time should be given to each phase?

REMEMBER — CHRISTMAS is not Christmas without Christ.

BROOKS WELL SAID — "Prayer is the key of the day and the lock of the night."

"REMEMBER NOW thy Creator in the days of thy youth."
— Ecclesiastes 12:1.

JESUS, ADDRESSING HIS DISCIPLES, said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." His reasoning is clear — there is no other way provided whereby His followers may ever be with Him.

"IF YE KNOW THESE THINGS, happy are ye if ye do them." The things Jesus referred to were those in His preceding statements in John 13:16 — "The servant is not greater than his lord; neither is he that is sent greater than he that sent him." Both statements are equally true today and should be of vital interest to every follower of Christ.

"Prepare to meet thy God."

ADVANCEMENT

IT IS ESPECIALLY GRATIFYING TO NOTE the advancement of the church labors in different sections of the country. Just as none of us liveth to himself, and "no man dieth to himself," so in no particular community is church activity advanced to itself alone or retarded to itself alone. The condition of religious fervor and activity in any given community affects other communities for better or for worse.

It is gratifying to know of the effort that the Ripley, Illinois, congregation has been putting forth in the remodeling of their church building. Ripley has been holding up the work for many years past. If we remember correctly, our late Elder Stevenson, who over fifty years ago was known from coast to coast for his pulpit oratory, is buried in the little cemetery but a short distance from the Ripley building. Let us all praise God for the fervor and advancement of the work at Ripley, Illinois.

It also gladdens the heart to know of the activity and fervor in the church labors at Grand Rapids, Michigan. According to all indications from various reports, it looks as though Bro. Siple, the new pastor at Grand Rapids, is entering into the work with an enthusiasm and zest beyond even that of former years. Let us all hope that this congregation, which after only three years in its new building finds itself already crowded, may soon discover a way to treble its present seating accommodation and thus care for its rapidly growing Sunday School and church attendance. When you realize that there were as many standing up around the walls of the Grand Rapids church building a week ago as there were sitting and that every seat was occupied, you will understand that Grand Rapids has a problem on its hands. All honor to the true, devoted workers of this church.

Seven baptisms were recently reported at the little church at Blair, Nebraska. What a beautiful showing that is! If not another thing should be accomplished in the lifetime of those now diligently engaged in labor, and if these seven conversions result in the salvation of each, a wonderful work shall have been accomplished in Blair.

We cannot undertake to speak of all of the congregations around the country, for that would be too large a task, but the little congregation at Kokomo, Indiana, deserves recognition. With a small membership devotedly led forward in earnestness, this membership long since outgrew the accommodations which it had been able to provide and for a year past has been hoping for some method whereby it might erect a new building. May the energy be continued. May prayer and service not be retrenched, and may we soon hear that the Kokomo church has found ways and means to accomplish what it feels urgently necessary to accomplish.

We were also gladdened recently to learn that Casey, Illinois, has decided to continue its pulpit work through the coming winter. Heretofore on account of local conditions, Casey has felt compelled to discontinue winter work. A step forward has been taken this year.

And so in different fields advancement is noted. May it all redound to the honor of our Father and of His Son.

DEATH AND HELL

By C. W. Dean

(Continued from last week)

GOD SAID, "Let us make man." In the creation scene which follows, God takes the soil of the ground and forms a man, perfect and complete in all his parts, yet lifeless. The heart is there, but it is not beating; the blood, or fluid is there, but it is not flowing; the brain is there, but it is not thinking. The man has eyes, but does not see; ears, but does not hear. In fact the complete organism is there. But there is no sensation, no imagination, conscience, memory, reason or affection, simply a lifeless body.

But when God breathed the breath of the living into the nostrils of this lifeless body, the man became a living soul. He could see, smell, hear, taste and feel. He was a sentient, intelligent being. The soul was not breathed into the man, but was the result of the union of the breath of life, the spirit, with the body. According to the Scriptures, there is no existence of the soul apart from the union of the breath of life with the body. The breath of life must be united with the body before there can be any soul or sensation.

After a consideration of man's creation, we may now profit by a reverent consideration of the scriptural explanation of his dissolution in death. The Scriptures tell us that at death "the spirit returns to God who gave it" (Eccl. 12:7), the body returns to the soil (Gen. 3:19), and the soul returns to the unseen, sheol or hades (Psalm 42:15). The wise man dies, the fool and the brutish man likewise. Job said, "Thou wilt bring me to death" (Job 30:23). Death is a complete dissolution and return to the original state in which the elements existed before their unification to make a man a living soul.

"For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave (sheol, the unseen), who shall give thee thanks?" Psalm 6:5. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth (or soil); in that very day his thoughts perish." Psalm 146:4. "The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not anything." Eccl. 9:5. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol, unseen), whither thou goest." Eccl. 9:10. According to the Scriptures, neither man as a whole, or any part of him, enters a new or unknown condition in death, but all returns to the state from whence it emerged when life was imparted.

"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Apart from this Scripture records two exceptions. For the elect's sake some flesh shall be saved (Mark 13:20). And all shall not sleep, but all will be changed (1 Cor. 15:51; 1 Thess. 4:17).

It is astonishing to note the various ideas attached to the word "hell" in the English language. It has become a vile, contemptible, odious by-word attached to many slang expressions. But as we are concerned in this study about the word in its original significance, we will give no space to the usage to which it has been corrupted. The word is of Saxon origin, and is derived from the verb helan, and was spelled hele, helle, heile, and helan. In this original state, it means simply to cover up, conceal, or hide. The word "hell" has been translated, or used to translate four different words in the Scriptures, one Hebrew and three Greek — sheol, hades, gehenna and tartarus. We will now give study to each.

SHEOL

The word, sheol, occurs sixty-five times in the Hebrew scriptures, and has been rendered into English thirty-one times, "grave", and thirty-one times, "hell", and three times, "the pit".

In the Greek scriptures, or New Testament, we find hades used by the Holy Spirit to convey the idea of sheol in the Hebrew. Hebrew, as we are aware, had no human usage to corrupt it before being incorporated in the Scriptures. All knowledge of Hebrew starts with the Scriptures. They are the fountain and head of that language, for there is no previous literature behind them. Consequently, the usage of words in the Hebrew scriptures establishes their meaning beyond any quibble or doubt. But when we study

(Continued on page 39)

VOICES FROM THE PAST

By M. A. Woodward

IN LOOKING OVER OLD PAPERS this week, I came across an old Restitution of June 1, 1904, with several very good articles written by old veterans of the cross, some of whom have laid their armor down for the sweet rest and hope of the resurrection. I wondered if it would not be a pleasant hour spent with these dear faithful ones of long ago.

Here is one from J. Cameron; another is to the Bereans of Illinois, by S. J. Lindsay; and Table Talk by Hattie E. Pate. Another article is "Our Prospective King and Kingdom" by G. D. Zollars. Lloyd Lee opens the heart to God's great discoveries. "True Thoughts of God" from Methodist Recorder is splendid.

The editorials were written by those who are now sleeping, M. Joblin, a giant in the Faith, but so meek, a splendid expounder of God's truths, dear old Brother Chaplin, so long Editor, and Brother and Sister Wince who spent so many hours, sacrificing and writing and working for the faith they loved so much.

The Bible School idea, which had its beginning in Indiana, was taken up by Bro. Lindsay in Illinois. What a joy it must be to anyone to realize the good that has come from his thought of getting the young and old to studying God's Word in class work! About thirty years has gone by but every year since has been used in the study of that wonderful Word of God, and all can see the immeasurable good since then. It has resulted in many breaking away from the world and devoting their lives to God and His work. It has been the means of uniting the north and south, the east and west in a work that only God can estimate. And in spite of many hindrances, it is going on to the glory of God.

Now let us read from these dear old writers, some of whom are resting from their labors, awaiting the call of the Captain of their salvation.

A HALF GOSPEL

By J. Cameron

IN Rainbow for March, 1872, an article "Divine Remedy for the World's Woes," contains the following:

"For many ages only a Half Gospel has been preached even by those who professed earnest regard to the evangelistic and puritanic element; and when we remember that even this half gospel — 'the sufferings of Christ' without His return in glory to subdue and rule the world, was obscured by the preposterous belief that man by nature is immortal . . . it is absolutely astonishing to think that it had so many adherents. Nothing but the grace of God — the power of God's blessed Spirit — can account for the fact that an instrumentality only half of whose power was wielded . . . could produce such sublime results. Making all necessary deductions for formalists, hypocrites . . . it is unquestionable that the actual number of the heavenly family, including those that sleep, is very large. Compared with the enormous masses of the world . . . they are but a little flock; still they are enough to form the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb, and to shine forth in power and glory as the royal priesthood . . ."

It has to be noted that only a "half gospel" preached and believed signifies a "half gospel" lost or ignored, and that, according to the Rainbow this missing half of the gospel consisted of certain millenarian teachings which the magazine had been for years worthily maintaining, although apart from their true gospel aspect as "the gospel of the kingdom of God." What is especially noteworthy, it is acknowledged by the Rainbow that "the sufferings of Christ" are only "half a gospel"; but the sad and strange thing is that the other "half" is not supplied to the readers as the true supplement to the "half" which was preached, but simply in the form of certain fulfillments of prophecy having important relations to the "gospel of the kingdom."

Speaking of evangelical bodies the Rainbow had said, "Their existence as churches is the visible and external testimony to the fact that the doctrine of Christ crucified has laid hold upon the minds and hearts of millions of the human race, and brought them into peaceful and loving relationship with the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." The truth of the latter clause here is extremely problematical, although it need not be disputed that millions have been brought to a form of discipleship far short the discipleship of New Testament times, and marked by one strong feature of the apostasy, namely, gross ignorance of the missing "half" of the gospel.

It need not be a matter of surprise, however, if the gospel of the kingdom of God, in its salvation aspect should be ignored by those professing evangelistic principles, even though these should be held in connection with Millenarianism. In the first century a "falling away" from the faith was already begun. The apostle Paul had special occasion to doubt the steadfastness of the disciples at Corinth. He wrote, "I fear lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in the Anointed." 2 Cor. 11:3, 4. He predicted that of "their own selves," the elders at Ephesus, "should men arise" . . . "to draw away disciples after them." And he wrote to Timothy: "This thou knowest that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me, of whom are Phygelles and Hermogones." He was therefore extremely concerned in counteracting such influences.

To the same Corinthians he wrote, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of the Anointed."

From such testimonies as these the reader need have no hesitation in concluding that any gospel with the fundamental "half" left out, is "another gospel," and "perversion of the gospel of Christ." "Subtilty" is by no means a quality of human nature which was confined to the days of Paul. It is as common now as it was then.

The writer has had called to mind certain queries in which it had been suggested that the proclamation, "The kingdom of God is at hand," was not the gospel in its entirety, and that certain things which were in their nature gospel were therefore "the gospel." Certainly during the public preaching of John and Jesus "The kingdom of God is at hand," was the gospel in its entirety. The death and resurrection of Jesus became appended to it afterwards. Some things in their nature gospel were not "the gospel." When Gabriel was sent to Zacharias to intimate the birth of a son, he said, "I am sent to show thee these glad tidings," literally "gospel." No one affirms from this that the birth of John the Baptist was "the gospel." Timothy brought "good tidings" of "the faith and love" of the Thessalonians to Paul — literally "gospel" — this was not "the gospel."

When our Lord appointed the twelve and the seventy He gave them their message in most specific terms — "As ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of God is at hand." There was nothing indefinite about this message. It cannot be alleged that the twelve and the seventy had any authority to add to the message by making any comments or discourse of their own. It was different in the case of John and Jesus, who were invested with divine authority in their prophetic character. Much valuable instruction given by them is to be found in the gospel history. But their proclamation of the gospel message is to be carefully distinguished from their general teachings.

The Rainbow seems to give an indication, in an incidental manner, as to how the evangelistic preaching of "a half gospel" might have been supplemented. It is said, "If intelligent Christian men would but think sometimes a little outside the lines of received theology, with Isaiah and Paul for their guides . . . with Daniel and John as their clear-sighted companions, what grand, what splendid sights, they would see." That is, they would learn to theorize concerning the Millennium, the Antichrist, etc. But what if they had also taken Matthew, and Mark, and Luke, and John, from whom to obtain their information as to what the other "half" of the gospel consisted in, they might be enabled to replace in its proper fundamental position that lost "half gospel" which the Rainbow only saw in some of its Millenarian relations. "The lines of received theology" have in great part been inherited from a past apostasy, and cannot be allowed to stop the way of such a desire to walk in the "old paths" trodden by the first preachers of the gospel.

TO THE BEREANS OF ILLINOIS

AT THE QUARTERLY MEETING held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible School this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense — at least the chief item of expense — will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, Illinois.

TABLE TALK

By Hattie E. Pate

DOES THE QUESTION ever arise in your minds, dear brothers and sisters, as to what are desirable and essential states of mind for acceptable worship? There are many answers for this, such as, a knowledge of God's Word, firm faith, humility, fixedness of mind and fidelity.

In order that our worship might be acceptable in the sight of our Father, we must watch ourselves continually. There must be a high standard and a firm resolve to do what is right, let the consequences follow. Certainly God has given us a perfect Example, like as we are, yet without sin. Jesus knew He was to be King of the Jews, and He kept the flesh under subjection, by the help of His Father. Now each one of us has the promise: "To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne."

We too may become kings and priests to God, if we rather suffer affliction with His people than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. I have said, we must set a high standard. Each day we should consecrate our lives anew to Him in whom we live and move and have our being. If we succumb to temptation, leave undone the duties of a Christian, and do those things we ought not to do, we know that we have an Advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ the righteous. As Peter said in his second epistle, speaking to the brethren, "Therefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth."

Daily, almost hourly, we ought to be reminded of the things that pertain to the kingdom of God, for there is a constant struggle between right and wrong. Paul says, "When I would do good, evil is ever present with me," and Jesus has said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me."

Again He comforts the disciples against tribulation: "These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." In order to worship acceptably, we must overcome our fleshly instincts as they rise each day, strive to set forth a character becoming a Christian.

A vexation arises, and our expressions of impatience hinder others from taking it patiently. Disappointment, ailment, or even weather, depresses us, and our look of depression hinders others from maintaining a cheerful, and thoughtful spirit. We say an unkind thing, and another is hindered in learning the lesson of charity that thinketh no evil. We say a provoking thing, and our sister or brother is hindered in that day's effort to be meek. How sadly, too, we may hinder without word or act! For wrong feeling is more infectious than wrong doing: especially the various phases of ill temper — gloominess, touchiness, instability — do we not know how catching these are?

But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherein He loved us, even when we were dead in sins, has quickened us together with Christ and has raised us up together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, that in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His favor in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

May each of us go from this assembly today with a firm resolve to worship our Heavenly Father and honor Him at all times.

OUR PROSPECTIVE KING AND KINGDOM

By G. D. Zollers

“HE HATH GIVEN him a name that is above every name.”

As we ponder over the national changes and the sensational movements in the human arena, led by the famous and renowned of earth, we fondly antedate the timely coming of the Illustrious One, whose majesty shall eclipse all national prowess and glory. This name, so superior in merit and worth, is not made prominent in the “public journals,” nor is His adequacy as a tried and loyal warrior noted in the catalogue of conquests, but His will be the ultimate, transcendent achievement that will lull all military storms and cause contestants to stand in awe of His glorious presence.

He is controlling the governments of earth in His exalted position, as in His career of humiliation He controlled the roaring elements in the lone and dismal night on Galilee. When the “sea and the waves shall be roaring, and men's hearts failing them for fear,” His Majesty will again appear amid the shock of the storm, and the trembling nations will hear when His voice of unlimited power shall again address His chosen toilers: “It is I; be not afraid.”

Oh, name above every name, and power superior to all the combinations of human forces though skillfully trained and cultured, whose transition from the thorn-crowned warrior of earth to the celestial coronation, swaying all the elements of the natural world and the “armies of heaven” as well! “He hath given him a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and every tongue confess that he is Lord to the glory of God the Father.”

Blessed are they whose names are enrolled among His warriors, and whose vigilant eyes can “discern the signs of the times,” and can discriminate clearly between the precious and the vile, who amid the clamor of earth and time are raising the ensign of the cross and proving their identity with their once “lowly,” but now “exalted Lord.” In the midst of national contests and blood and carnage, they are commanded to lift up their heads, for their redemption draweth nigh.

The perils amid the darkness of the night are precursors of the fast approaching day. “The sea and the waves roaring” is symbolic of human commotions, the culminating paroxysms of sin in the polluted veins of humanity, when “the nations shall be angry,” as they charge in the deadly fray. The close observer cannot fail to discern the “signs of the times,” and if these thrilling events do not awaken the energies of the church to redeem her waning power, she will find her deplorable position at the “midnight cry,” in the ranks of the foolish virgins.

GOD'S GREAT DISCOVERIES

THE BUSINESS OF DISCOVERY in the natural world is to clear away hindrances and to make channels for forces which were long ago reposed in nature, right under our hands and so near that they actually touch us. Just as the great discoveries in electricity consist in giving direction to the mighty power that it may become a thing of service rather than a means of destruction, so the chief business of religion is to clear away the difficulties in the divine path so that God may work naturally in the hearts of men.

—Lloyd Lee.

TRUE THOUGHTS OF GOD

IT IS FAR MORE IMPORTANT to possess true thoughts of God than it is to be in possession of other knowledge that comes through observation and experience. Is it, after all, such an impossible thing to have true conceptions of God? And yet our true conceptions, it must be admitted, come very short of actually and fully measuring God in His person and attributes.

The loving and tender thought of a little child toward God is a true and beautiful thought; so is the feeling of the same child toward those he at the fireside calls father and mother. The thought in both instances is immature and childish, but it is, as far as it goes, true. It does no violence to the character of the heavenly Father or the earthly parents. But this true thought of the child will grow larger and more comprehensive as the years go by and its powers of conception are unfolded and disciplined; but it will be no more true than is that of the child in the nursery kneeling down by its cot and repeating the beautiful prayers of infancy.

This is what is meant when it is said there is nothing in this world so important as that our thoughts of God be true thoughts; that is, such as do no violence to His loving and gracious and fatherly nature, and such as we can take with us in all the times to come. The child which has mastered the alphabet or primer will always have need of its letters and its easy words, though in its maturity it may have become both scholarly and learned. The little lessons of God we have now mastered in this school house of time will always be helpful, if they are true to God.

And so the words written by the prophets descriptive of God's loving and watchful care and fatherhood are as valuable as though they had been written today, with all the light of the intervening years to shed radiance upon them. And this is so, for they are true — true yesterday, today, and forever. The truth about God changes not, though all things else change and pass away.—Methodist Recorder.

DEATH AND HELL

(Continued from page 35)

the Greek word hades, we are confronted with the fact that it had been in use by the Greeks for centuries, and was of natural consequence, in harmony with their mythological traditions. It has become the embodiment of Satan's lie, "Thou shalt not surely die." To the Greek, hades was the world of darkness, the spirit world, or intermediate state, as it is used by spiritists today, symbolizing and spiritualizing, which permeates the orthodox theology.

For truth seekers, a consideration of the evidence which the Holy Spirit lays before us should settle the question. Compare Acts 2:27-31, in which hades is used by the Spirit as the equivalent of the Hebrew sheol in the quotation of Psalm 16:10, which is a divine commentary that hades in the Greek scriptures is to embody the meaning of sheol in the Hebrew scriptures.

HADES

We may also be profited by a study of the literal meaning of the Greek word, hades, apart from any traditions, through its component elements. It is made up of the element a, which is a prefix, equivalent to UN, or not, and idein, meaning, "to perceive." These united, give us the unquestionable significance of the word in its purity: "not to perceive, or the unseen." This definition is in strict accord with divine usage of the words, both sheol and hades, in the Scriptures.

The body returns to the soil; the spirit, the source of life, returns to God; and the soul, or sensation, returns to the unseen — sheol or hades. A point very helpful in this study is the fact that the soul only is coupled with sheol or hades. The spirit is never associated with either sheol or hades. The body is never related to sheol or hades except in the extraordinary cases of the sons of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, who went down alive into sheol, and Jonah, who found his sheol in the great fish.

In contrast with this, the soul is definitely spoken of as being in sheol (Psalm 16:10; 30:3; 49:15; 86:13; 89:48); and in hades (Acts 2:27-31). In confirmation of this evidence is the fact that in every context the thought is always concerned with sensation "which corresponds to the soul" when the reference is to humanity.

Our next word in the Greek scriptures in the study of hell, is gehenna. (To be continued)

TO BE GLAD OF LIFE because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions, but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's, except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ — these are little guide-posts on the footpath to peace! — Selected.

AFTER THE STORM

There is a peace which cometh after sorrow,
Of hope surrendered, not of hope fulfilled;
A peace that looketh not upon tomorrow,
But calmly on the tempest that is stilled.

A peace that lives, not now in joy's excesses,
Nor in the happy life of love secure,
But in th' unerring strength the heart possesses,
Of conflicts won while learning to endure.

A peace there is in sacrifice secluded,
A life subdued, from will and passion free;
'Tis not the peace that over Eden brooded,
But that which triumphed in Gethsemane.

—A Selection.

ADAM'S PENALTY

By R. H. Judd

WITH REFERENCE to the penalty threatened to Adam I have long since come to the conclusion that the general ideas of both Conditionalist and "Orthodox" are wrong in their interpretation of it. I am convinced that Adam was a man with like passions as ourselves, and that the threat — "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" — meant precisely the same as it would mean to any man today. It was not a threat of natural death, but a threat to cut short his natural life, as in the case of any man under sentence of death today, with the date set for his execution.

Further proof that such is the correct understanding is that the word "day" could not possibly be any other than a natural day of twenty-four hours. It could not be a day of one thousand years, for Adam did not live even one of such days. The verse plainly distinguishes between the day in which Adam ate the fruit and other days of his natural life, which could not be done under the aforesaid theory.

The penalty was not carried out, nor is there any record that it was. See Jer. 18:7-10 and Ezek. 18:21, 22, 27. The man who repents is forgiven, and God repented of the evil He said He would do. The fact that Adam repented is proved by his acceptance of the skins. But lest he should "live for ever" in sin, he was turned out of the garden. See Gen. 3:22. The logical conclusion is that access to the tree of life would have been given in due time.

That Adam died in the day is entirely assumed. Scripture nowhere states it. Then why should we? Scripture does tell us when Adam died. But strange to say, men say that Adam died, when God does not say one word about it. And when God says that Adam died, men do their utmost to try and prove that it is not death at all.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

FROM WEAKNESS TO STRENGTH

PETER'S CONFESSION

Monday, October 27 — Mark 8:27-30.

"And Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ." — V. 29.

THE WOMAN AT JACOB'S WELL said unto Jesus, John 4:25, "I know that Messiah cometh, which is called Christ." The scriptures of Moses, of the prophets and Psalms had taught her this. She was confident that the Messiah was to appear. After having heard some of the Savior's words and after having experienced some of His revelations to her, she went into the city and asked her neighbors, v. 29, "Come, see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?"

Peter had followed Him many days. He had heard many words from the Master, seen many miracles. Peter was bold to announce, "Thou art the Christ."

PETER'S PRESUMPTION

Tuesday, October 28 — Luke 22:31-34.

"Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat." — V. 31.

IT WAS JESUS WHO WARNED SIMON. His statement, "Satan hath desired to have you," does not refer particularly to Peter, but to the twelve apostles, the word "you" being plural, not singular. His desire was to sift the apostles.

Contrary to the first thought on reading this text, the word "sift" is that particular word which refers to the sifting out of the wheat to get rid of the good, to leave the tares. Coming to realize Satan's purpose, Peter made bold to assure Jesus, "I am ready to go with thee, both into prison, and to death."

How much Peter is like you and me today! We think we know ourselves. We feel that nothing can deflect us from our purposes in Christ, and like Peter we depend upon the thoughts that arise from our flesh. Peter forgot. The same evening in answer to the questions of the maidens, he thrice denied the Master, even though the question as to punishment therefor had not been mentioned. It could truly be said of Peter, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak."

Would that Peter had and that all Christians would depend more upon Heaven and less upon the decisions of the earthly.

PETER'S DENIAL

Wednesday, October 29 — John 18:19-27.

"Woman, I know him not." — Luke 22:57.

PETER'S DENIAL OF HAVING been with Jesus was more than a mere denial as to what he himself had, or had not, done. His denial was really a denial of Christ himself — a denial of Christ's power, of Christ's authority and position, of His Sonship. He denied the Master. Such denial, had it come from his heart would have been the same as completely and forever turning away from the Master. But it is evident that Peter was falsifying when he denied his Lord. At heart he did not deny Him. He tried to convince his accusers that he was not a follower of the Messiah. Such a false claim revealed Peter's great weakness.

For Peter to try to stand as one opposed to Christ when at heart he was thoroughly for Him was not only difficult for Peter, but was also a blow, so to speak, in the face of the Master. As now, so then, our Lord seeks people to serve Him who are willing to serve in the presence of any company whatsoever. He wants people to stand openly and above board for Him.

Denial of the Master was not a privilege peculiar to Peter. The same opportunity is open today. It is sad to realize that today also many, who before the Lord desire to be known to Him, when in the company of His opponents are ever too ready, not only to remain wrongfully silent as regards due praise unto our Lord, but are ready to even deny their allegiance to Him.

PETER'S MISSION

Thursday, October 30 — John 21:15-23.

"He saith unto him, Feed my lambs." — V. 15.

ALL OF THE SADNESS of the Savior's life was not to be seen in the judgment hall, nor at Calvary. When He came to the time to leave this world, to leave behind those newly coming to follow Him and even those longer in the way, namely, His lambs and His sheep, it was a sad day to the Savior. Many were the evils that surrounded the flock from which the Shepherd had been called to the right hand of God. Jesus in a measure provided for His sheep. To Peter He said, "Feed my lambs."

Here the word "feed" does not stop with the mere thought of conveying portions of food to the mouth. The Savior used a larger word, one with more meaning. It means, "Shepherd my sheep." Such feeding did not pertain to the natural man, but to the new man in Christ. It was this new creature for whom Peter was to care.

He who today volunteers to do likewise, bears a responsibility, second to none, for man before God. To so shepherd followers of Christ is to work the works of God with a view to glorifying the Father and His Son by the works wrought.

PETER'S MESSAGE

Friday, October 31 — Acts 2:14-21.

"And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams." — Verse 17.

God had previously poured out His Spirit principally upon Israel. Moses and the prophets were Israelites. The Spirit of God upon them had given to the world that master book termed by man, the Old Testament. It had given a nation which, when loyal, was second to none. Lastly, it had given to the world a Savior of the tribe of Judah. But Peter announced that the day had arrived when God's prophecy through Joel, His spokesman, should be fulfilled and that God would no longer restrict the outpouring of His Spirit to Israel, for He would pour out of His Spirit upon all nations, all flesh.

PETER'S COURAGE

Saturday, November 1 — Acts 4:13-22.

"But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

PETER'S DIFFIDENCE which was manifested in the judgment hall is manifested here no more. The beauty of faith is striking. Neither the judgment of his neighbors nor their threats, nor their power as officers of the law weakened Peter in his declaration in behalf of the Master. Peter had been wonderfully confirmed. He was strong for the Lord. He revealed that attitude that is evidently most proper for Christians of all times to reveal.

HAVING THE MIND OF CHRIST

Sunday, November 2 — Philippians 2:1-11.

"If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfil ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." — VV. 1, 2.

ONE'S WHOLE LIFE CAREER is determined step by step by his mind. As he thinketh, so is he. Paul exhorts Christians to partake of the mind of Christ. Having that mind Christians will go forward in like service with and for Christ. Service never fails to reveal the mind.

THE BOOK OF ZECHARIAH

By Lyman Booth

(Continued from last week)

THE STATE OF THINGS IN GENERAL during the succeeding ages, to the restoration of the Jews, and the rebuilding again of their city, and the arrival of the millennium, when all the nations will be either destroyed or become worshipers of God, and the cause of holiness will prevail throughout the entire world are found in chapters 13 and 14. This is, in general, the outline of the book, as I view it, though I may differ much with many others in their views concerning its interpretation.

The object which Zechariah had in view was the same as that of Haggai which was to rouse the people from their lethargy, but his style is somewhat different. While the rebuilding of the temple was going on, he received in vision a message by which he sought to arouse in the people a national enthusiasm for the great work. His prophecy is flavored with Persian imagery on account, perhaps, of his being in exile among the Persians for so many years.

The book may be divided into three parts, the first from chapters 1 to 6; the second, chapters 7 and 8; the third, chapters 9 to 14. Part one narrates a series of visions, the vision of the angel hidden among the myrtle trees, 1:7-17; vision two, four horns and four smiths, symbolizing the approaching judgment of the heathen, 1:18-21, R. V. Vision three shows a man with a measuring line enlarging the boundaries of Jerusalem, symbolizing the inclusion of the Gentiles, 2:1-9; vision four, the cleansing of the priesthood, and the appearance of the Branch, chapter three.

Vision five includes the golden candelabrum fed by the two olive trees, symbolizing the rebuilding of the temple and the future glorification of the church, by the unction of the Holy Spirit. 4:1-14. In vision six we see the flying roll, bringing vengeance on the ungodly. 5:1-4. Vision seven portrays the woman pressed in the ephah and borne eastward, symbolizing the repression and final banishment of idolatry. 5:5-11. Vision eight shows the four chariots issuing from the two brazen mountains, or the course of Divine Providence. 6:1-8. Vision nine reveals the crowning of Joshua, the high priest, a type of the union of the regal and priestly offices of the Branch. 6:9-15.

Part two: after the last vision there is a pause in his prophetic activity. But in the fourth year of Darius, about 518 B. C., the word of the Lord came again to Zechariah. The people of Beth-el send two messengers, 7:2, whose Assyrian names, Sharezer and Regem-melech (friend of the king) reveal traces of the captivity, to put a question about fasting on other days than those prescribed by the Mosaic law. The prophet explains to them the nature of a true fast by command of the Lord (7) and the conversions of fasts into feasts of joy and gladness, when many nations shall encourage each other to go and worship at Jerusalem (8).

Part three presents greater difficulties than the rest of the book. Some writers hold that the chapters it covers are really earlier than the prophet's time. Others claim that there is not evidence enough to prove such a claim, and that the difficulty would still exist even if we were to place them back in Hosea's day. Chapter 9 describes the future destiny of the Jewish worship, and the coming of their King as the Prince of Peace, who shall win the Gentiles to himself while engaged in delivering Israel from the oppressors.

Chapter ten shows that Israel will share with Judah in the coming prosperity, being restored as from Egypt. Chapter 11 attributes the troubles which had befallen them to their rejection of the Messiah, whom they had merely valued at the price of a slave. Chapters 11 to 14 give a pictorial description of the process of restitution, presenting a bright prospect when the Holy City should be purified and the nations should acknowledge Jehovah and worship Him there.

The references in the New Testament to this prophet are many and are important. The lowly One comes riding on an ass (Zech. 9:9) is quoted in Matt. 21:4, 5 and John 12:14-16; the betrayal of the Good Shepherd (11:12, 13) for thirty pieces of silver, in Matt. 27:9; they shall "look upon me whom they have pierced" (12:10, R. V.), in John 19:37; the fate of the Shepherd of the sheep (13:7-9) in Matt. 26:31 and Mark 14:27.

While parts of the book are difficult of interpretation owing to the conciseness of the diction, the numerous symbols and the peculiar character of its Messianic references, yet mysterious as many of these representations are, the general purport is not to be mistaken.

BUYING MAKES CRIME

Declared Hon. William D. Mitchell in his First Public pronouncement as U. S. Attorney General.

"Most crimes are committed to obtain money: bank robberies, postal frauds, counterfeiting, frauds against the Government, violations of the anti-narcotic statute and the National Prohibition Act and various others that might be named, all for the purposes of gain; but there is one essential point that distinguishes some of these offenses from others.

"In respect to some crimes, money is gained from victims by fraud or force.

THE GREAT DIFFICULTY IN LAW ENFORCEMENT is not with these crimes. The difficulty is with those crimes where GAIN COMES TO THE LAW BREAKER by the voluntary act of those who buy from him illicit goods.

"This is the distinguishing feature of offenses against the National Prohibition Act.

The bootlegger is in the business for gain, and the gain results

BECAUSE THERE ARE THOSE WHO ARE WILLING TO BUY.

"Let me quote from the President's Inaugural Address," continued the United States Attorney General. "The President said:

'A large responsibility rests directly upon our citizens.

THERE WOULD BE LITTLE TRAFFIC IN ILLEGAL LIQUOR IF ONLY CRIMINALS
PATRONIZED IT.

'We must awake to the fact that this patronage from large numbers of lawabiding citizens is supplying the rewards and stimulating crime.

IF CITIZENS DO NOT LIKE A LAW
THEIR DUTY AS HONEST MEN AND WOMEN
IS TO DISCOURAGE ITS VIOLATION.' "

THERE ARE 31,536,000 seconds in a year. How many of these seconds are we dedicating to the Lord with whom we expect to spend eternity? and how many to self-gratification? Does the former get a niggardly half? — S. E. H.

THE MILLENNIUM

(Continued from front page)

earth. The scene of the activity of Satan who "shall be loosed," verse 7, "when the thousand years are expired" is definitely and positively an activity on the earth. This loosing is not during the thousand years but after the millennium years. Those deceived by him, verse 9, go up "on the breadth of the earth."

In fact, there is no other inference than that the whole picture takes place on the earth. It is impossible if this be true to apply Jeremiah 4:23 to the period of the thousand years. Especially is this true if the interpretation of Jeremiah 4:23-28 is to be understood as teaching that the earth will be uninhabited, a desolate, fire-destroyed region during the millennium. Also Revelation 20 definitely states that the fire and destruction that is prophesied of the earth in the future takes place, not before or during, nor immediately after the thousand years, but that this judgment of fire will not follow until after Satan, having been loosed, verse 7, shall have deceived the nations, verse 8, and they shall have gathered around "the beloved city." Verse 9.

Nor will the complete results of this judgment follow then, immediately. Rather, the "great white throne" scene of verse 11 follows the events of verses 7 to 19 and the resurrection of all takes place thereafter. Verse 12. A period of judgment then follows and after that yet the rebellious and ungodly are destroyed in "the lake of fire." Verse 14.

The chapter itself forbids any interpretation of Jeremiah 4:23, or of any other scripture, that would apply destruction and waste to the period of the thousand years spoken of in Revelation 20. The same might be said concerning Jeremiah 25:33. While the text distinctly refers to the punishment and captivity that was to result from Babylon's oppression of Judah, yet should anyone think to apply that prophecy differently, it would be impossible to apply it to the thousand years' reign of Christ in harmony with the teachings of Revelation 20:4-6.

The same should be noted as regards 2 Peter 3:5-10. The destruction of the earth there spoken of is in harmony with the revealed word of Revelation 20 when we associate it, not with the period of the thousand years, but with the period that intervenes between the close of the thousand years, verse 7, and the new heaven and the new earth.

To the writer it appears that he who would sully the thousand years of Satan's bondage and of Christ's reign with a condition like unto that prophesied in Jeremiah 4:23-28 or of 2 Peter 3:6-10, fails to recognize the redemptive plan of God and the glories of God's work.

That there will be much of world-wide tribulation, much of international confusion and devastation before the coming of Christ to sit upon the throne of His glory with His perfected church by His side, is abundantly taught in the Scripture. But for man to confuse this period which precedes the millennium with the millennium period is to miss greatly the beauties and comforts of God's prophesied work.

Let us consider all these things in the order and in the arrangement that are indicated by the Scriptures themselves.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"THE TEMPLE OF GOD IS HOLY, WHICH TEMPLE YE ARE."—FIRST CORINTHIANS 3:17

THE TEMPLE OF GOD

INTO THE KEEPING of each one of us has been given a wonderful possession — a human body. There are but few of the large majority who appreciate the value of their lives or take any special care to preserve them. If one has a valuable watch he takes every precaution to handle it carefully, wind it regularly, and is extremely careful that its delicate mechanism is not damaged. Yet the same one may never give a thought to the care that he gives his own body, a much more complicated and valuable creation. Its delicate composition and intricate mechanism will always be a mystery to mortal man, yet it is not without strength and endurance. The One who gave it meant that it should be cared for and protected. It is our duty to see that we do all in our power to keep ourselves fit, that we may be able to give our full measure of service.

We can do much to keep our bodies healthy. Hygienic literature is available to everyone and there is no excuse for ignorance. We should avoid bad habits, intemperate eating, harmful drugs, tobacco, etc. They tear down our resistance. Dissipation wrecks our health and makes us unfit for the work that we have to do. There are many who wreck their lives by attempting to do more than they are physically able. This may be a Christian work done in the Master's service, but we can be of far greater service by conserving a part of our health and energy to use in later years.

Greatest things take longest in development. Don't take foolish chances with your lives, nor with the talents that God has given you. Every gift of God is for a purpose and if we squander these gifts foolishly we cannot expect to receive them again. Worth while results cannot be accomplished without an effort. While some insects reach their full size in a few hours, they live only for a day; an elephant is a long time in reaching its maturity, but it may live to be hundreds of years old. Webster worked thirty-six years before he completed his dictionary. It has endured. We must not become discouraged if we do not see the results of our labors as quickly as some. We are building for eternity.

Fire and water are good servants but poor masters. The passions given to man are quite necessary to his development but if overexercised often prove to be his destruction. Passion for money can lead one to resort to dishonesty in obtaining it, and its possession will too frequently make one forget the way that it is meant to be used. We see passion for power taking away humility and kindness. Passion for art and beauty becomes exaggerated to the neglect of the lowly and necessary things of life. Desire for knowledge may become so great a passion that in the search for it one does not have time to apply it and so never gains that greater quality — wisdom.

We should play in our lives but not with them. God surely means for us to be happy. Has He not given us a beautiful hope to brighten the way and make us rejoice? He also provides means whereby we may mix recreation and diversion with the cares and worries of the day. I cannot believe that God would condemn anyone for indulging in healthy sports and clean pleasures. Without a little fun our minds become warped and we cannot work willingly or as efficiently.

However we should never forget that our minds are a part of that temple of God. We must above all things keep them free from unclean thoughts, jealousy and hatred. Our minds must have a little recreation, but let it be of a type so clean that it leaves no shadow of a doubt as to its advisability. Avoid those companions who lessen the desire to serve God and draw us away from spiritual things. Only by so doing can we present our bodies "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God."

"The company in which you learn the most, will be least expensive to you."— Washington.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 18; California, 9; Indiana, 6; Nebraska, 3; Ohio, 4; Minnesota, 2; Michigan, 2; Florida, 1; Louisiana, 1; Arkansas, 1; Missouri, 1; Virginia, 1; New York, 1; Texas, 1; Alabama, 1.

EVERY PERSON OUGHT TO GO to church to get away from himself.

"A GOOD TIME TO BE RELIGIOUS is when you don't feel like it."

THE CHRISTIAN on his knees sees more than the philosopher on tip toes.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

SIMON PETER

And Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ."

PETER WAS AN UNLEARNED FISHERMAN. But Jesus recognized Peter's faithfulness and true worth, and so He called him to be a "fisher of men". And Peter grew in understanding, and truly loved his Master.

One day Jesus was walking with His disciples. All at once He said, "Whom do men say that I am?"

They answered, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets."

Whereupon Jesus asked: "But whom say ye that I am?"

Then Peter quickly answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

At this reply Jesus told Peter that he was surely blessed and that God only could have told him what to say. Jesus told Peter that great blessing had come to him and that he would receive even greater blessings.

Then Jesus told the disciples about the dreadful things that were to happen to Him. He was to suffer, be rejected and put to death. It was too much for Peter to bear.

The Lord told Peter that he had prayed for him that his faith would not fail. Moreover, when his confidence was restored he was to help strengthen his brethren. However Peter was confident of his strength, and gallantly declared that he was ready to go to prison or even to death for his Lord. But Jesus, loving Peter, yet knowing the limit of his strength said, "Peter, the cock shall not crow this day, before that thou shalt thrice deny that thou knowest me."

That night Jesus was taken prisoner, and Peter, in his zeal, cut off the ear of one of the soldiers. Jesus healed the ear at once. And Peter, not knowing what else to do, followed with the crowd.

While the false trial was in session Peter stood without, warming himself. Someone near said, "Art not thou also one of his disciples?"

But Peter denied it, saying, "I am not."

Soon a relative of the soldier whose ear had been cut off said to Peter, "Did not I see thee in the garden with him?" And as Peter denied this, the cock crew and Peter remembered what Jesus had said.

Jesus understood Peter better than he did himself, and forgave him this sign of weakness. After Jesus was resurrected, one morning He went down to the seashore near where the fishermen were fishing. He told them to cast their net into the sea. They did so, and the net was filled. And when they came to shore they saw a fire of coals, and fish cooking over the fire. Then Jesus told them to eat the fish and bread that was also there.

When the breakfast was eaten Jesus said to Peter, "Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these?"

"Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee," replied Peter.

Then, "Feed my lambs," said Jesus. Again Jesus asked Peter if he loved Him; and at Peter's reply said, "Feed my sheep."

Even the third time Jesus asked the same question. Peter felt grieved this time and answered, "Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee."

And even again Jesus said, "Feed my sheep." And Peter understood that Jesus meant others who would be followers of Jesus.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Acts 2.
2. Learn Matthew 16:16.
3. Find five other things about Peter that are not told in this story.
4. Copy:—Peter, a disciple of Jesus. Leader in the church.

THANKFULNESS

WHAT LITTLE FOLKS CAN DO

Little songs, all full of joy, little lips can sing;
Little voices, soft and sweet, may their tribute bring:
Little verses can express what we wish to tell
Of a loving care that keeps little folks so well.

Kindly on us little ones beams a Father's smile;
Tender care and watchfulness guard us all the while;
For the pleasant things we have, clothing, shelter, food,
We would, in our happy songs, show our gratitude.

A FULL SERMON

"Ethel," said the Bishop to the little girl, "you seem to be a bright little girl. Can you repeat a verse from the Bible?"

"I'll say I can."

"Well, my dear, let us have it."

"The Lord is my shepherd — I should not worry."

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON V. — November 2, 1930

SIMON PETER

Mark 8:27-29; Luke 22:31-34; John 18:25-27; 21:15-17

Devotional Reading: Philippians 2:1-11

GOLDEN TEXT

Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus. — Acts 4:13.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. From Weakness to Strength.

Basic Truth. "Christ Jesus . . . emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; . . . he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death. Wherefore also God highly exalted him, . . ." — Phil. 2:5-11, R. V.

Outline. I. All Strength Comes From Heaven. II. How Christ Gives Strength. III. Peter Became Strong.

I. All Strength Comes From Heaven. The greatness of this truth is grandly expressed by Isa. 64:8: "O LORD, Thou art our Father; we are the clay, and Thou our Potter; and we are the work of Thy hand." — C. B. In the beginning "God formed", i. e., molded, gave shape and outline to "man", Gen. 2:7. Yet though perfectly formed, man was entirely without strength. He was utter weakness. He had not so much strength as is required for the beating of the heart, nor for the performance of breathing. It was God who breathed or conveyed into him the force or strength of living.

Napoleon, as a newborn babe, though possessing the undeveloped faculties for a great man, was nevertheless, as a babe, utterly helpless and, in himself, unable.

Jesus in the manger at Bethlehem was as weak as weakness itself.

All power, whether pertaining to the physical, to the mental, or to the spiritual, originates with God. It has been, is, and will be distributed by Him.

On the day of his ascension Jesus told His apostles, Acts 1:8, "Ye shall receive power (Gr., dunamis, i. e., strength, ability, force) after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." God's Spirit conveyed to them such power for service as was requisite.

It was strength from God, not from Isaiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, that enabled these or other prophets to declare great past or future truths. They, as all others, "out of weakness were made strong," Heb. 11:34.

Christ, as no other, grasped the fullness of this truth. He accepted the weakness of His creation, nor deigned like Adam to endeavor to seize strength. He acceded to utter weakness, even to the weakness of death realizing that from such a void of strength God could raise and exalt Him to all power. Heb. 2:5-9. "Though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God." — 2 Cor. 13:4.

II. How Christ Gives Strength. Having exemplified the strength of God as manifested in His miracles, Christ drew others into a faith unto himself. Though of less degree, yet such faith in principle was like unto the faith of Christ which motivated Him unto obedience to God even unto death. Such faith in man is justification for God to implant added strength and power.

In such way Jesus leads to God. Coming to God, Jesus the great Mediator, through intercession and administration, acquires for those of such faith, spirit from God for strength, for ability unto all faithful living before the Father. "Though we are weak with him, yet we shall live with him from God's power." — 2 Cor. 13:4, Diag.

III. Peter Became Strong. Peter must first sense his own weakness. He who deems himself strong in himself is incapable of accepting the strength of God. The vigorous, enthusiastic and impulsive Simon must be brought to understand that weak, sin-scarred self was wholly powerless. Though Simon in his weakness knew it not, Jesus by His God-given mental strength revealed it to him that Satan was about to sift the apostles, Luke 22:31. The Savior's words revealed further that He was really concerned as to Peter's outcome under such sifting. He prayed "concerning" (so the Gr.) Peter's faith. If his faith should remain constant, then Peter would be found able. But if his faith should fail, i. e., cease, leave him, then Peter was in danger. Peter's blasphemy before the damsels in the hall of judgment, John 18:25-27, revealed the rising of self-strength in the impulsive man. He thought to rely upon his own power. Peter's bitter weeping, Luke 22:62, revealed his depth of repentance. His race to the opened sepulchre, John 20:3, 4, speaks of the constancy of his faith and of his deep longing for his Master. Thrice did he declare to the Master, John 21:15-17, his affection for Him. Result: cognizant of his own weakness, turning to the Master, power from on high came upon him and as on others. Acts 2:1-4. This power was renewed day by day throughout their Christian experiences, always strengthening them for speech, for work, for influence according to their needs. As is the case with all others, so with Peter, out of weakness was he made strong. Heb. 11:34.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Peter, the Strong.

Peter was the flower of flesh strength among the twelve. He was bold and fearless even to the drawing of one sword against constituted authority in defense of loved ones and self. He was self-confident, always first to declare his unflinching belief in Jesus, and ready to rebuke the Master when His decisions were contrary to what was reasonable to him. He was patriotic. He was loyal to ideals and friends to the laying down of his life. He was ambitious. He was a hard worker. He possessed all the best qualities of flesh life.

But this beautiful flower of flesh strength was broken by the Potter who chose him. The sword was made to hang at his side, a futile thing. His bold avowals of belief were cancelled by three hot and angry denials when circumstances declared Jesus to be a weakling and impostor.

Thus broken and weak, Peter stood before the resurrected Christ and received from Him, through forgiveness, the Christ's own strength, a strength which made him able to feed sheep and lambs, instead of seeking a seat of glory in the kingdom; a strength that enabled him to appear in the role of weakling by refusing all recourse to the sword and its destruction.

As the beautiful strength of Peter was broken that he might receive the strength of the Christ, so must the flesh strength of all who desire discipleship under Jesus be broken, that they might draw upon His perfect strength.

— A. K.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Peter is one of the outstanding characters of the New Testament, not only in works, but by way of example. Notice some of his characteristics as given below and show how they can be used to one's advantage or to his injury:

Outspoken Courageous Energetic
Impulsive
Willing to try.

Peter's many errors and mistakes are very prominent and should contain some very helpful lessons to all by assisting us in avoiding those things which were stumbling-stones to him. His denial of the Master should be especially emphasized. Bring out by discussion ways in which we deny Christ. Can it be said that we deny Christ when we deny or reject portions of His Word? There was one outstanding characteristic of Peter and that was his willingness to repent of his wrongs. His mistakes were incentives for greater effort.

Blackboard Sermonette:

Peter

- was always willing to try;
- became strong through weakness;
- never let defeat defeat him;
- proved Christ's willingness to forgive;
- triumphed as a Christian by repeated effort. — C. E. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

RALLY DAY AT EDEN VALLEY

Eden Valley's Rally Day was held Sunday, October 12, with Pastor Sydney Magaw conducting both preaching services. The Sunday School attendance was 161, morning service attendance, 210, and evening service attendance, 112, making a total attendance of 483. Vernice L. Ruhn, S. S. Sec.

GOOD NEWS FROM CLEVELAND

We have good news to report from "The Church of the Golden Rule" Sunday School. We had a record attendance on Rally Day of 171 (our previous high mark being 161) and an offering of $15.59. Average attendance for previous quarter was 113, average offering, $8.59.

Twenty-two members of the Sunday School received their second year pins for attendance; seven of those who received pins were teachers.

Starting September 9, 1928, with an enrollment of 84 members, the following month we inaugurated the Crown and Cross pin merit system for attendance. So approximately 26 percent of our first enrollment of two years ago received their reward for attendance. Grand Rapids, we hand you the banner for Rally Day, but beat the above record for consistency.

Yours for the success of our Master's work,
W. J. Halls, Supt.

ANOTHER GOOD RALLY DAY

Rally Day at the South Bend, Indiana, church was observed on October 5. We had Bro. Cedric Pope of Cortland, Illinois, with us for two sermons. Bro. Pope presents lessons in practical living in a very forceful way. After the morning services of Sunday School, preaching and communion, a pot luck dinner was spread at the home of Sr. Lydia Railsback and Bro. and Sr. Lynn Leighty. Afternoon services were held at this home.

Fifty-three were present at the morning church service which is about twenty-five percent more than we have had.

The South Bend Senior Bereans are resuming their weekly classes and the Ladies' Aid—the Golden Rule Society—are also at work again under the leadership of Mrs. Bert Thompson.

Idona Romine.

THE GRAND RAPIDS CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Next Sunday, October 26, is the fourth anniversary of the Grand Rapids Church. To properly observe the occasion a special and full day is planned. Pot luck dinner will be served in the basement, and an afternoon service held in addition to the regular Sunday meetings. Special music and other features will help to brighten the day, and an urgent invitation is extended to those living at a distance, as well as nearby, to come and help us celebrate. Remember that the church is located at the corner of Jefferson and Abbie Streets, S. E.

Our Sunday School numbered 200 on October 12, which was only 18 less than Rally Day itself.

A healthy, contented spirit of labor is found in the air, and all are doing their best to hold aloft the gospel in a Christian spirit.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

DIXON ACTIVITIES

After a rest of about two months, the ladies' sewing circle has begun its work for the holiday season. Friday, October 10, they met at the home of Miss Mary Goodyear for an all-day meeting. A delicious scramble dinner was partaken of at noon.

This circle makes and sells many aprons, fancy work and other articles, and we are now preparing for a two-day sale, which will be held in one of the vacant store buildings some time in November. The proceeds from these sales are used to help the church work, and to aid in other useful ways.

We trust that God will guide us in our work for the coming year, and that much may be done to honor His name. Jessie Ford, Sec.

The "Happy Thought" class of the Dixon church accompanied by their teacher, Mrs. Eckert, hiked to Assembly Park Saturday afternoon where foot ball and other games were played, after which a "weenie" and marshmallow roast was enjoyed.

Rally Day was held at Dixon on October 12, and proved to be of much interest and enjoyment to all. Much credit is due the committee in charge, for the beautiful appearance of the interior of the church. Willing hands had garnered the beauties of autumn, a wealth of flowers, glowing leaves and vines, and so arranged them, that a veritable bower of loveliness greeted the eyes of all those entering the church.

Sunday classes were well attended, sixty-five being present. Sickness in several cases made it impossible for quite a number to attend.

Bro. Conner was present and surely gave encouragement and inspiration to all, with a wonderful discourse on Repentance. Over seventy were present to enjoy this service.

A basket dinner was appreciated to the fullest extent by members and friends in the basement of the church. At two-thirty a program, given by the younger members of the Sunday School, was enjoyed by a large number of interested spectators. The excellence of the program, due to the untiring labor of the teachers in charge, and the eager cooperation of each child, made the afternoon service a very pleasing one.

Evening service brought out a goodly number, over seventy being present, to hear some more of the good things from God's Word so ably presented by Bro. Conner, thus closing the day's services. Rally Day will long be remembered in Dixon, for its pleasant associates, interest, enjoyment and spiritual uplift.

Edith E. Miller, Sec.

CHICAGO SERVICES

Sunday School and church services will be held at the Austin-Whitehead home at 5439 Ohio St., on October 26. This is a new venture on the part of the Chicago church. Will all members in Chicago and vicinity put forth an effort to be present. Bro. Paul C. Johnson will be the speaker. Grace Laning, Sec.

ADELINE, ILLINOIS

On Sunday, October 26, Bro. Paul Hatch will be with the brethren at Adeline, Illinois. We hope that these folks will give him a warm reception and receive with open hearts the messages which he has to give to them. All of our members in that vicinity are urged to be out with as many others as they can possibly bring. Make this your Rally Day.

NEWS FROM HERE AND THERE

We are glad to learn that Bro. J. H. Anderson was announced for the Brumfield, Kentucky, church over Tuesday, October 14. We trust that a goodly number greeted him at that place.

We learn that Bro. P. L. Curtis is now in Louisville, Kentucky, and that Sr. Quincy Carpenter of Brumfield, Kentucky, was the guest of Sr. Amy Weaver of Louisville.

Word reaches the office that Sr. Harriet E. Boice of 1009 S. Wright St., Champaign, Illinois, has been in poor health for some time. However Sr. Boice writes that she is busy getting out a new volume of the "Visitor". Many Herald readers will be glad to be able to secure another work from the pen of Sr. Boice.

Sr. Myrtle Cooper and her two daughters and son who are spending the winter in Oregon, making a home for the members of the Bible Training Class, could not refrain from returning to Ripley, Illinois, over last Sunday to attend the rededication of the Ripley church and to visit the poor bachelor husband and father. We do not blame them.

LOS ANGELES

Sr. Agnes Murray, of 301 N. Euclid Ave., Pasadena, is in a very critical condition, with a brain affection. She was removed to the hospital on October third.

Bro. and Sr. Orchard are very nicely situated under the new arrangement. The niece who is caring for them seems to have the happy faculty of keeping everyone smiling and contented.

Bro. J. Conaway, who is nearing the ninety-first anniversary of his birth, had a fall recently which caused him to be confined to his couch for several days, but he thinks he has now overcome its effects.

Sr. Emma Railsback accompanied Bro. and Sr. Austin Seroggs to Red Bluff in September, where they visited Bro. and Sr. Howard Moore. Austin and Jessie traveled on north for a vacation in Oregon where they visited old friends and enjoyed trips to Crater Lake, Columbia River highway, and Mt. Hood. On the return trip they were privileged to see a sunset at Golden Gate. It was a beautiful sight.

NIAGARA FALLS ANNUAL MEETING

Sunday, October 26, is the date set for the annual meeting at Niagara Falls, New York. Bro. Austin will be present to conduct the services. You will be benefited by being in attendance. Come!

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

The writer was privileged to be with the Marshall, Illinois, brethren from September 23 to September 28, beginning services on Thursday night and holding through until Sunday evening. Fairly good audiences were present at each service. I was glad to make an intimate acquaintance in that field where my grandfather Hatch labored many years ago.

Paul M. Hatch.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

DOLLAR-A-MONTH BY STATES

We give herewith a list of the Dollar-A-Month pledges classified by states:

Illinois	84	Virginia	5
California	34	Wisconsin	4
Indiana	34	Ontario	4
Ohio	33	Kansas	4
Nebraska	19	Oklahoma	3
Iowa	17	Wyoming	3
New York	10	Oregon	3
Louisiana	9	Florida	2
Michigan	9	Pennsylvania	1
Minnesota	8	Maryland	1
Texas	7	South Dakota	1
Washington	7	Colorado	1
Missouri	6	Idaho	1
Maryland	1

JAMES CASSEN

James Cassen was born at White Plains, New York, September 22, 1866. The family later settled in Black Hawk county, Iowa, in Eagle township, where he was married to Miss Eliza M. Gifford, February 24, 1892. The couple lived on the farm in that vicinity for over twenty years, then retired to Waterloo sixteen years ago to care for Mrs. Cassen's aging parents.

A few months ago Bro. Cassen suffered a stroke of apoplexy and was in a serious condition for several weeks. He was taken to the hospital and returned home apparently in much improved health, and with every prospect of restoration to normal condition, but the end came suddenly and unexpectedly from heart failure on October 2, 1930, at midnight, after only three hours of failing strength. A few weeks ago it was the writer's happy privilege to immerse him into the saving name of Christ Jesus, and this comforting event is a solace to the survivors, who are his widow and his three brothers, Thomas B., John F., and Edward, all of Sioux City.

His specialty was friendship, and rich and poor, common and aristocratic, all felt the charm of his hospitality and cheer. He was a sincere man of honor and virtue, and was a special friend of the writer, which made it harder to speak at the funeral, which was held at the Kistner mortuary, Sunday afternoon, October 5, after which we laid him to rest in Elmwood cemetery till the Lord of life shall come.

J. W. Williams.

MARY DAVENPORT

Mary McKelligott, daughter of John and Susan McKelligott, was born on January 27, 1855, in Galatin county, Illinois, and died on October 6, 1930. On November 1, 1882, she was married to George Davenport, and to this union two children were born, both of which survive her. They are Randall, with whom she had made her life for the past eleven years, and Mrs. Rhoda Leithliter.

Mrs. Davenport was left a widow by the death of her husband on February 5, 1922. She leaves to mourn her loss, two children, seven grandchildren, and a host of friends and admirers. On Thanksgiving Day, 1921, Mrs. Davenport yielded her heart and life in obedience to her Lord, and was baptized in the likeness of Jesus' death, burial and resurrection. From then till the hour of death she lived a devoted, consecrated Christian life, and fell asleep with the firm assurance of the resurrection of the dead.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer from the home and a nearby church on Wednesday afternoon, October 8, and Sr. Davenport was laid quietly to rest in Wesley cemetery.

F. E. Siple.

Bro. Sidney Jackson and wife, who were visiting at Golden Rule Home for a few days, awoke at four o'clock Monday morning, October 20, to find their little baby boy (two months old) a very sick child. The doctor was immediately called, but the baby was gone before he arrived.

Bro. Austin will officiate at the Farrell undertaking parlor, Tuesday morning, after which Sr. Jackson will accompany the parents to their lonely home in Waterloo, Iowa.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

Change of Address.—When ordering change of address be sure to send us both old and new addresses.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. W. Hadicke; Mrs. Harriet Reed; Mrs. Carrie E. Hilsabeck; Mrs. Martha Platts; M. J. Osborn; D. W. Kirkpatrick; Ethel Walrath Chesnut; Emma C. Railsback; Mrs. J. H. Williams; Floyd Kessler; Mrs. Ethel Johnson; Mrs. Roscoe Dunbar.

M. A. Woodward.

THE WAY OF SALVATION

By Samuel E. Haney

"Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." — Acts 16:30, 31.

THIS REALISTIC DRAMA was enacted in a prison of Philippi, a chief city of Macedonia. Paul and Silas had been thrust into the inner prison for preaching the gospel. The jailer's agonized question was caused by a great earthquake that shook the foundation of the prison and elicited the inspired reply.

The most common mistake of Christendom is the belief that the reply of Paul and Silas to the jailer — "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" — constitutes the alpha and the omega — the beginning and the ending of salvation. The underlying thought is that Christ's vicarious death was an acquittal (release) of their condemnatory status with God, based largely on Rom. 5:18 and 6:23 — "Even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life . . . For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

The man of the street overlooks the fact that, while Christ's death is a general acquittal of the condemnation brought about by the fall, he must qualify himself as being worthy of this free gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord. He must first be brought to see the necessity of co-operating with God's great sacrifice in his behalf, before he can constantly sing:

"I need Thee every hour, stay Thou nearby; Temptations lose their power when Thou art nigh."

If man is saved and justified by belief only, he is immune from the danger of temptations. And if a man is saved and prepared for either the "sleep" of death or translation by simply believing, how verbose were the words of Jesus in Mark 13:36, 37, "Watch, in case he comes suddenly and finds you asleep. Watch: I say it to you, and I say it to all." Moffatt. Why the trouble of keeping awake and watching if by simply believing we are saved and prepared to meet the Bridegroom? "Devils also believe, and tremble"; and many people are doing likewise when they ought to be rejoicing. Unconverted and unconsecrated people believe, but they are not prepared for the change (1 Cor. 15:51) which is due at His return. Read again 2 Thess. 1:7-10. People holding to this error have but little desire to make progress; many are standing on the same spot they did forty years ago.

Suppose a young man desirous of becoming an important officer in the U. S. army should ask, "What must I do first?" He would be told to enlist. And then his promotions would depend upon his obedience to the rules and orders from his superior officers, his application to duty and the efficiency of his work. He would also be told that "many" enlist, but "few" become officers. So he is ever zealous to achieve the approval of the head of his profession, his goal being the insignia of a general.

Thus in similitude is the Christian's warfare. Paul describes it in this manner, 2 Tim. 2:3-5, "As a good soldier of Christ Jesus accept your share of suffering. Every one who serves as a soldier keeps himself from becoming entangled in the world's business — so that he may satisfy the officer who enlisted him. And if any one takes part in an athletic contest, he gets no prize unless he obeys the rules." Weymouth. The Christian's warfare is a continuous battle from start to finish, desertion (everlasting death, Luke 9:62) being the only means of exemption.

A deserter regrets he ever transferred his "affection" (Col. 3:2) from earthly to heavenly things, and takes back his ardor that the "old man" may again be coddled. But the consecrated Christian will weather the storms of these days because he ever looks to God for help, "For God is able to make him stand," Rom. 14:4, having fully surrendered self and all, which makes heavenly strength ever accessible to him. The man who is not willing to give up all, and follow Jesus has not the reciprocal love of 1 Cor. 13 — he doesn't rightly appreciate what Heaven has done for him.

Paul's life, as a conspicuous example, with myriad others, is worthy of emulation. He was converted; he believed; was baptized, "and labored more abundantly than they all." His consecration reads thus, "But for Christ's sake I have learned to count my former gains a loss; indeed I count anything a loss, compared to the supreme value of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord. For his sake I have lost everything (I count it all the veriest refuse) in order to gain Christ and be found at death in him, possessing no legal righteousness of my own, but the righteousness of faith in Christ, the divine righteousness that rests on faith." Phil. 3:8, 9, Moffatt.

Thus he continues, explaining that he was not yet saved — sure of salvation, "Not that I have already attained this or am already perfect, but I press forward to appropriate it, because I have been appropriated myself by Christ Jesus. Brethren, I for one do not consider myself to have appropriated this; my one thought is, by forgetting what lies behind me and straining to what lies before me, to press on to the goal for the prize of God's high call in Christ Jesus."

How easy in these days salvation has become! It is like traveling by railroad — purchase a ticket; be seated upon a nicely upholstered seat and enjoy the scenery and the association of others traveling our way, everything having been settled at the ticket window. The spider said to the fly, "Step in and see what a beautiful parlor I have." The fly strolls in, and the spider enjoys the feast.

The one who is rejoicing in anticipation of the happiness of the next age could more profitably utilize his excess mental energy by watching, and keeping his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame (Rev. 16:15); ever remembering that there is but one "WAY" of escape from the pending trouble such as never was. That way is, by keeping himself unspotted from the world. James 1:27; Romans 12:2.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 28, 1930

NUMBER 4

A TIMELY WARNING

By G. Eldred Marsh

"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith." — 1 Timothy 4:1.

AN ALARMING DECREASE in church membership is being reported from all quarters of the world. Dr. Charles Aked, recently returned from a European tour, told his congregation in All Souls' Congregational Church, Los Angeles, that "The church has witnessed a decided depression everywhere since the war. There are millions of people, I am sorry to say, who have a total disregard of the church or its value as an agency of righteousness. . . There are few outstanding preachers in Great Britain with large congregations and the smaller churches are rapidly dying out. I see no bright side of the picture for at least two generations, unless something unforeseen happens to restore the world's faith in those who are preaching the gospel."

In our own country the condition is growing steadily worse. In 1880, according to government reports, seventy-three percent of our population were church members. In 1925, forty-five years later, but thirty-two percent were connected with the churches. This decline in religious interest does not confine itself to Christianity, for there is a widespread falling away from all of the leading non-Christian religious systems as well. In many quarters organized efforts are being made to destroy all forms of religious worship, Christian, Jewish, Mohamédan, or otherwise.

As disciples of the Lord, however, we are chiefly concerned with the Christian phase of the great apostasy. Impressive and numerous are the predictions and warnings of the apostles pertaining to the cause and significance of this latter-day development in the religious world. Paul, writing of these events, says, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, . . . traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away." 2 Timothy 3:1-5.

This is more than a prediction, more than a sign of the last days: it is a solemn warning to the Church of God today to "turn away" from those who seek to lead it astray from the simple truths of the historic faith. Continuing his description of future conditions in the church, he says, "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of. . ." 2 Timothy 3:13-14.

The necessity of voicing this warning is found in the succeeding chapter: "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." 2 Timothy 4:3-4.

Peter echoes the warning and the admonition of his "beloved brother Paul": "There shall be false teachers among you" (that is, within the church itself), "who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon (Continued on page 58)

A NEW SERIES

Our readers will anticipate with much interest the new series of articles by Bro. Marsh, the first of which is given here. This series will comprise such subjects as, "The Jewish Faith of the Early Church," "The Faith of the Church Fathers," the belief of our church people in Scotland, England and America, and kindred topics.

These articles represent the work of the author through several years of study and we know that you will find them worthy of your attention. You will not want to miss one of them.

— Assistant Editor.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

“Let not mercy and truth forsake thee: bind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart: so shalt thou find favour and good understanding in the sight of God and man.”—Proverbs 3:3, 4.

THE GOSPEL IS NOT SOMETHING to be bandied about by various contenders. It is God's own recipe for salvation. He who aids another in his understanding and application of the gospel to his true life, not only aids man but God himself.

SIXTY-FIVE THOUSAND MASSACRED by the Communistic bandits of China is the gist of the news that flashed in on the twenty-second. Regardless of where the doctrine of communism originated, it is well for the Christian student to realize the rapid spread which it is making throughout the world. Wherever this agitation goes, atheism, godlessness and all like things become rampant. As godlessness increases, preparation advances toward that day when there will be a great willingness to band together under one great head of lawlessness, which head shall be both inclined and encouraged to set itself up, declaring itself to be God and demanding that all, both small and great, shall heed its commands and render devotions to its cause. Rev. 13:2-8 and other like scriptures indicate to the end that this or something similar will soon arrive.

THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN is at its height. Men and women everywhere are soliciting votes that will place them respectively in seats of power. Endurance tests, both physical and financial are being pressed to the limit with a view to success. Organization, cooperation, everything is being done in order to achieve victory.

What lessons for Christians! No Christian is knowingly trying to get the world of men and women to one and all vote for the Master. This is far from the facts. But Christians are supposed to be endeavoring to promote and to strengthen the great cause of Christ and of salvation. It should be their bounden duty, not only to strive for higher ground upon which each worker may stand, but also that they should the more fully and effectively interest multitudes of others in the cause itself.

Queer, isn't it, that many a so-called Christian will devote months of time and hundreds and thousands of dollars in a common political campaign, and if a loser, he feels that after all he has been rewarded for his devotion. But if that same Christian were urged to devote an equal portion of time and energy and an equal amount of money value to the cause of Christian advancement, no matter how favorable results were his, he would too often feel that he had made bitter sacrifice.

Christians! Awake! Stop for a moment to realize that the cause which you have in name at least espoused is the greatest cause before the face of man. No other cause known to the human race is worthy of so much of your best energy and time, so much of your financial ability, so large a token of your heart's devotion as is the cause of Christian truth, the gospel of salvation.

Would that we could unify our efforts, systematize our labors, concentrate on our drives and this with the strongest, loyal acclaim due our Master, all with a view to doing severally our little parts in the great cause which God has placed before us.

GOLIATH

THE PHILISTINES HAD COME UP against the Israelites. Saul was the anointed king of Israel. David had been anointed to succeed Saul, but had not yet taken the throne.

According to an occasional custom of the day, one man from each side sometimes entered upon the area between the two armies and they fought a duel with the understanding that the side of him who in the duel was victor should be the victorious army. Goliath, a man of giant stature, marched boastfully toward the center, challenging Israel to send one of its men out and settle all in a duel. The inexperienced lad, David, who had but recently been anointed, heard the challenge and for the honor of his God, moved by faith in his God, stepped out to accept the challenge. Neither sword nor spear was in his hand — nought but the little innocent sling which was an insult to the giant. The battle was fought. The youth was victor. The giant was beheaded. The Philistines were frustrated. God's chosen nation was advanced.

How like the closing days of this age! The great world is steadily rising up against the cause of God and therefore against the effort of His people. He who is to be the future King has already been anointed. The throne will not be occupied by Him until He shall have come at His Father's bidding.

In the meantime, yea, long ago, after He was by the Father anointed, He engaged in the great duel against sin. Not with spear, nor sword, nor staff, but with His own being, He marched out upon the battlefield of death and voluntarily submitted to Calvary. With but little time intervening he quickly arose triumphant over death and over every phase of sin. The duel was fought. The Son of David, even David's Lord, the Son of God, was victor. Indeed He was victor over "him that had the power of death, that is, the devil," Heb. 2:14. Because of this victory, the people of God have been exalted to first position in the presence of Jehovah.

Just as every Israelite rejoiced in the opportunity for advancement as a result of David's championship over the giant, so today every one who really looks to God should rejoice in the opportunity of advancement because of the championship of Christ, the greater David, over the greater giant, sin and death. Let us never be untrue to Him who gained for us the victory.

DEATH AND HELL

By C. W. Dean

GEHENNA

THE WORD gehenna OCCURS TWELVE TIMES, and is translated "hell" in every instance. Matt. 5:22, 29, 30; 10:28; 18:9; 23:15, 33; Mark 9:43, 45, 47; Luke 12:5; James 3:6. It is evidently not a Greek word, as it does not occur in any classic author. It seems to be the Grecian mode of spelling the Hebrew words which mean, "The Ravine of Hinnom." There is nothing Greek about it except the letters. Our translators had no more authority for translating gehenna, "hell", than they would have had for translating Sodom or Gomorrah, "hell". The word is seldom translated in foreign versions.

Originally the ravine of the son of Hinnom was a vale on the southwestern side of Jerusalem, planted with trees and beautiful with fountains, watered by the torrent Kedron. Later for idolatrous worship, the kings of Judah erected there a brazen image of Molech (1 Kings 11:7; Acts 7:43), which had the face of a calf, and a body resembling a man in sitting posture with extended arms. Here the Jews, accustomed to sacrificing doves and rams, calves and bulls, idolatrously sacrificed their own children. The valley is also called Tophet (Jer. 7:31), meaning a destruction and abomination. Others derive it from toph, meaning a drum, because the perpetrators of these horrible sacrifices beat drums, so that the shrieks of the infants who were being burned in the arms of the image could not be heard.

Later, king Josiah caused this ravine to be polluted and made a place of desecration. "And he defiled Tophet, which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech." 2 Kings 23:10. It became the incinerator for all the filth and garbage of the city, together with the carcasses of beasts and the unburied bodies of criminals who had been executed. Continual fires were necessary in order to consume these, lest the putrefaction should infect the air. There the worms or maggots were ever feeding on the portions of the corrupted bodies not yet consumed by the fire. Thus the valley became a place of loathing and abhorrence.

It is with this significance that Christ related it to transgressors of Jehovah's law in the future day of the millennial kingdom. At that time, the least infraction of the law will receive immediate adjudication, and those deserving of death will be executed and the whole body cast into the fire of Gehenna (Matt. 5:22, 29, 30; Isaiah 66:24). Hence the admonition of Christ to the sons of Israel: "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna." Matt. 10:28.

With the kingdom of the heavens at hand in the days of the Lord, and in the future during the time of great tribulation, many of the sons of Israel will be killed because of the testimony of Jesus and because of the word of God. Yet with the establishment of the kingdom they will be resurrected to priestly sovereignty and enjoy the good things promised them in that era. Under the reign of Messiah, transgressors of the law will not only be executed, but the soul (the seat of sensation by which they enjoy the fullness of the blessings of the kingdom) and body will be destroyed in Gehenna. Such a judgment gives them no further right to the blessings of the kingdom, and the Jews, to whom these teachings of Christ were addressed, apprehended the truth it involved, and the shame and abhorrence that would be the portion of those coming under the accursed judgment (Daniel 12:2).

TARTARUS

The word, tartarus, occurs only once in the Greek scriptures and has been translated, "hell", by our translators. Let us read it. "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to tartarus, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." 2 Peter 2:4. Of these same angels, Jude speaks. Let us read it: "And the angels which kept not their first estate,

(Continued on page 58)

THE LORD'S GIFT TO MAN

By M. A. Woodward

ON SUNDAY MORNING, September seventh, as I listened to my son's very instructive sermon on "The Christ," I did wish so much that my ears were quick enough to catch every sentence. But as they were not, I caught myself several times filling in the gaps with thoughts that would keep thronging in my mind. I very much desired to give a synopsis of his sermon, but having missed so much I am just going to give what I can remember and add my own along the way.

The text alone filled me with more than my mind could hold. Isaiah 7:14 was the text, "The Lord himself shall give you a sign." The thought thrilled me, that God himself, 768 years before His purpose was to be fulfilled, should feel the necessity of calling attention to such a sign. It must have been a very necessary sign, for listen to His warning to the house of David in the thirteenth verse: "Hear ye now, O house of David; Is it a small thing for you to weary man, but will ye weary my God also? Therefore (for a reason) the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" — "God with us," Matt. 1:23.

But God had been with His people for many years. Was He to be more to the whole world in the future than ever before? Moses had lived in God's very presence through many trying scenes, one especially when after Aaron, his brother and helper had died, God sent the fiery serpents among the rebellious Israelites to punish their sins of disobedience. They only were saved by looking at the wonderful sign of the cross which God told Moses to make.

Isaiah visioned this wondrous Babe of Bethlehem. God had taught that "man of God", Abraham, what sacrifice meant, and the same infinite God had stayed the father's hand that he should not take the life of his beloved Isaac.

God listened and heard Elisha's prayer that the young man's eyes should be opened, that he might see the mountain fastnesses filled with horses and chariots of fire to strengthen his heart amidst the impending foe, to show His might and power, and how this same God could rule the hosts of heaven and the hearts of men.

All this! And now what more could the world need? But it did need more. It needed Immanuel, God with us.

All the rest of the way through the weary pilgrimage of life would that Son bring the blessings, the joys, the sweet peace and rest to the children of God. Are we willing to be watchers with Him? to be true, loyal workers? Are we His children, chosen because we have been "holden by his right hand" and found faithful to the end of life?

How beautifully the Psalmist portrays God's wisdom to us. Listen: "For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether. Thou hast beset me behind and before. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it. Whither shall I go from thy spirit? Or whither shall I flee from thy presence?

If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in hell (grave), behold, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. . . . How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God: how great is the sum of them."

Wondrous Protector! Wonderful Father!

Still we seek for more, for the golden promise is like strands of diamonds in the prophet Isaiah's mind. He saw the glorious Helper so near. The Lord himself, One no less than Jehovah, is to give this wonderful gift to man, the blessed "Son of man."

Let us sing again:

"Savior, lead me lest I stray;
Gently lead me all the way,
I am safe when by Thy side,
I will in Thy love abide."

And, beloveds, we are not safe away from His presence. God help us to be patient. Leaning on Him for strength, not on ourselves, we are safe. God help us.

THE HORNET SONG

When the Canaanites hardened their hearts against God,
And grieved Him because of their sin,
God sent along hornets to bring them to time
And to help His own people to win.
The hornets persuaded them that it was best
To move quick and not to go slow;
They did not compel them to go 'gainst their will,
But they just made them willing to go.

When Moses was sent to lead Israel out
Into Canaan's rich, fruit-bearing land,
They rebelled 'gainst His spirit and worshiped a calf,
And refused to obey God's command.
God did not compel them to go to the land,
Which with wine, milk and honey did flow;
But fed them on manna for forty long years,
Till He got them all ready to go.

When Jonah was sent to the work of the Lord,
The outlook was not very bright;
He never had tried such a hard thing before,
So he shirked and ran back from the fight.
God sent a big fish then to swallow him up;
The story I'm sure you all know;
He didn't compel him to go 'gainst his will,
But He just made him willing to go.

When Balaam was sent with the Prince of Moab,
He wanted things run his own way;
But his mule, ever faithful, spoke at the right time,
Made him willing God's voice to obey.
God can use any man, since He used Balaam's mule,
For He is Almighty you know;
He doesn't compel us to go 'gainst our will,
But He just makes us willing to go.

— Selected by A. N. Hartlan.

ONE FAMILY

By T. C. Eggerking

“FOR AS THE BODY is one and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.” 1 Cor. 12:12, 13.

We read, “It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing,” John 6, and truly have you ever seen a robust, healthy looking individual without expression or fire in his eye? What a useless object he is and well do we know of the great hulking husband ruled by a little slip of a wife.

Therefore, if the flesh profits nothing, why cling so tightly to our family tree, nationality and general social standing? Of course we bear names that the world knows us by, but that is according to the flesh. When we are baptized we put on a Name — the name of a Spirit — Divinity! All are baptized into one name, born again of water and spirit, not flesh. Even as all born of the same flesh (one family group) have one family name, so those born of water and spirit likewise have one family name. They are truly one family.

Do the Scriptures teach “no scisms in the body,” 1 Cor. 12, “the same care, one for another”? Do they eliminate all fleshly lines — Jew or Greek, bond or free? Gal. 3. Do they not clearly point out that all are truly “one”? John 17. Are we not admonished to “serve one another”? John 13.

Now then, we read that he who will not work should not eat, 2 Thess. 3, and that one should not be eased and another burdened, 2 Cor. 8:13-15. And even as Paul labored so as to be chargeable to none, so should we also strive to maintain an independent station in life — dependent only upon God. 1 Thess. 1:9. But, when adversity strikes and one or more members weaken, then, I say, comes the opportunity for demonstrating the “one family” spirit. Is this easy? Not for the writer, I can assure you, but the triumph of the Spirit is assured where the desire of the heart is sincere. I press forward.

There is but “one faith, one hope, one baptism,” Eph. 4. All are of one Father and therefore one family, so to speak.

Jesus said He came in His Father’s name, John 5. What is the name He came in? Was it not “Jesus Christ”? Therefore if He came in the name of Jesus Christ, was the “firstborn among many brethren” (Rom. 8) not named after the Father of us all, those in Christ?

According to the flesh, the child takes its male parent’s name. So the “firstborn” and all the others born of the Spirit later take the name of the Spirit revealed in the New Covenant between God and man — even the name of God Almighty — Jesus Christ. That name, Jesus Christ, could not have been according to the flesh; for no marriage took place. The line would have started and stopped with the “firstborn”. But it did not, for child after child was born, of water and the Spirit. All bear the same name — the name of one big family — that name “above every name”, that name at which “every knee shall bow”? Phil. 2. To whom only should man bow the knee? To his equal, mankind, or to Divinity, his Creator — God?

THE FOREST’S BEAUTY

THE FOREST’S LEAVES again mottle the landscape with their myriad hues of beauteous colors. Mountain sides are bedecked with a grandeur of glory far beyond the ability of the most artistic of human minds to depict. The valleys, the banks of the gurgling brooks, all of them bespeak the grandeurs of nature. And nature bespeaks the majesty of God.

Midsummer’s burning heat withered and prematurely ripened many acres of leaf and plant and while it drew scars that are now visible across these beauteous landscapes, yet those effects are seen in but scars. Even though thus marred, the landscape of today is a grandeur that is unspeakable by man.

With it all we are brought to the season of the last of harvests. The goodness of God to His creatures is again being sounded. While many homes and individuals have suffered because of the stress of times in different localities, yet the picture thrown across the ways of humanity is, on the whole, one of goodness and blessing from the Father.

We are again brought to the season of Thanksgiving. With it we are urged, both by Christian duty and by national custom, to prepare for a giving of thanks to our God. Accordingly we are asking all those who unite with us in this gospel service to at once make ready a Thanksgiving that may be poured out at the assigned season therefor.

Let us have for our own good two phases of this giving of thanks. We ask that all readers of THE HERALD, who find it opportune, will at once mail to THE HERALD for publication in its Thanksgiving number a brief note or prayer expressive of thankfulness to God for His abundant goodness to the children of men.

Also, we ask that all those who feel it a service to the Father will again unite in contributing to our annual Thanksgiving fund for the furtherance of our General Conference labors.

While some have been handicapped and restricted by the condition of business, others have been favored with a continuance of God’s blessings, and in some instances have even been enriched more than formerly. Let all in proportion to their blessings pour forth a Thanksgiving offering for the furtherance of our gospel labors in various directions. May this be in addition to the regular quota which every one endeavors to present for the Master’s work.

May this Thanksgiving offering of pen and coin be abundant and result in honor to our Father and to His Son.

F. L. Austin.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THOMAS THE HONEST DOUBTER

THOMAS DESPAIRING

Monday, November 3 — John 11:11-16.

“Then said Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow disciples, Let us also go, that we may die with him.” — V. 16.

JESUS HAD SEVERAL TIMES told His apostles that He must suffer death at the hands of man. More and more were the Jews rising against the Master. When Jesus announced that He was going to the tomb of Lazarus, Thomas, anticipating that it might mean the death of his Lord, exhorted the other disciples that they might also go, and die with Him. This reveals the real heart-thought of Thomas. In thought he shrank not. He would follow the Master to life's end.

THOMAS INQUIRING

Tuesday, November 4 — John 14:1-7.

“Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?” — V. 5.

“WE KNOW NOT whither thou goest” expresses the reason for the inquiry of Thomas. With an unsettled mind, a mind that had no knowledge of what might be expected, Thomas would make honest inquiry. The answer came quickly, “I am the way.” This is the same way that Saul, the persecutor, mentioned in Acts 9:2. If he found anyone in that way, he purposed committing them for punishment. “The way” was the way of Christ, who was also “the truth and the life.”

THOMAS CONVINCED

Wednesday, November 5 — John 20:24-29.

“And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.” — V. 28.

FIRST THOMAS HEARD the voice speaking to him; it was the same voice which he had heard before. He looked upon the Speaker; it was the same face which he had oft looked upon. He touched the nail prints with his own hands; they were there. Everything became evidence to him that this was none other than He whom Thomas had seen dying upon the cross. His was no longer the evidence conveyed to him by others; it came to him direct. Evidence to him meant action; for, apparently, when Thomas was convinced, he moved.

THOMAS ENLIGHTENED

Thursday, November 6 — John 21:1-8.

“And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.” — V. 6.

THOMAS WAS ONE of those who had been in the boat on the Sea of Galilee all night fishing. Nothing had been caught. Someone stood on the shore. He called. They answered. The voice came from the shore to cast the net around on the other side of the ship. It was done. The net was full of fishes.

“It is the Lord,” was John's spontaneous remark. Immediately the disciples rushed for shore. They found the Master, and saw new and enlightening evidences of the Savior's life and power and greatness. Increasing conviction fell upon all.

PRAYER FOR BELIEF

Friday, November 7 — Mark 9:21-29.

“Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.” — V. 23.

DOUBT WAS REMOVED in the minds of Christ's hearers by the evidences which He presented to convince them of the truthfulness of His words and works. Conviction is the one only thing that supplants doubt. In this way faith takes the place of doubt. “Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief,” was the great statement of v. 24.

Its strength of meaning in all of its fullness is just as appropriate today as in any day of the world. Belief is that one only victory that overcomes the world. Faith, put to the test, brings new evidences which, in turn, increase faith. As with Thomas and his fellow-disciples, so with present day disciples of Christ, faith needs to be put to the test, put to work that it may continue both healthy and true and that it may increase the more.

THE CURE FOR DOUBT

Saturday, November 8 — John 7:10-18.

“If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.” — V. 17.

HE WHO DETERMINES TO DO God's will “shall know of the doctrine.” God does not leave such an one in doubt. He gives him to know.

To completely eliminate one's own will and to seek only the will of God or of His Son is one of the most difficult things. Many imagine that they are seeking and appropriating God's will, when in reality they eventually discover that they were merely seeking God's support to execute their own wills. Truly, to seek God and His will above self is to place one's self in a position where God can have full direction of the man and where God can reveal himself most fully. Such revelation can but erase all doubt in the mind of him who is truly seeking God.

THE MIND OF WISDOM

Sunday, November 9 — Proverbs 3:13-18.

“Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding.” — V. 13.

FULL WISDOM AND UNDERSTANDING must of necessity entirely remove all doubt. "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom." The wisdom of which the wise man here speaks is undoubtedly the wisdom of God and not the wisdom of finite man. Its value is referred to in the verses following. It is more than silver or gold. It is more than rubies. It is that which when possessed lengthens life and surrounds man with pleasantness and peace. It was by wisdom that the Lord "founded the earth." No doubt was in His mind as to the outcome.

LAMPS DO NOT TALK, but they do shine. A lighthouse sounds no drum; it beats no gong; and yet far over the waters its friendly spark is seen. So let your actions shine out your religion. Let the main sermon of your life be illustrated by your conduct. — Spurgeon.

GOD'S FOREKNOWN PLAN

By E. O. Stewart

I LOVE TO BELIEVE IN A GOD of order — One who could see the end from the beginning; One who knows all His works from the beginning, and hath set aside certain dispensations in which to accomplish certain ends. "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning."

"Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God and there is none like me; declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure: calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country: yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it. Hearken unto me ye stout hearted, that are far from righteousness . . . it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry, and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory." Isaiah 46:9 to 13.

GOD HAD A PLAN BEFORE THE WORLD BEGAN

Listen to the voice of wisdom on this very point. "The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was . . . While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the fields, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. When he prepared the heavens I was there." Prov. 8:22-27.

God's way was marked out, and wisely planned, even before He made the earth, according to wisdom's claim. He possessed her in the beginning of His way, His plan, before His works of old.

Did He plan wisely? Did He foresee the entrance of sin into the world, and plan to exterminate it through the sacrifice of His Son? Or, did sin steal its way into the universe without His knowledge of it, and force Him to change His plan?

Such a claim would reduce Him to a God of experiment, leaving Him to guess at the final outcome. For if sin entered without His foreknowledge, and caused Him to change His original plan, who knows but that such may happen again, and upset all of His wonderful already foretold plan of the infinite ages to come?

Let us begin with the birth of Christ and run back through the ages and see if we cannot find that God had a foreordained plan to be accomplished through His Son Jesus Christ.

The angel told Joseph that Mary should bring forth a Son and they should call His name Jesus, for He should save His people from their sins. Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Lord by the prophet, saying, "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emanuel." Matt. 1:21-23; Isa. 7:14.

How did God know that He would save His people from their sins? How did He foreknow that Christ would eat butter and honey until He should know to refuse the evil and choose the good?

If God was able to tell seven hundred and fifty years before Christ was born, just what He would eat that He might know to refuse the evil and choose the good, why should He not also foreknow just which tree Adam would eat of? I just wonder how God had become so wise as to foretell this, and so ignorant as to which course Adam would pursue. Please read Isa. 7:15 and be convinced.

But, says one, if God knew Adam would sin, why did He put him on trial? I will answer that by asking, Why did He put Christ on trial, after swearing and would not repent, that after foretelling in Isa. 42:4, that He should be a priest forever, after the order of Melchizedek? Psa. 110:4. Why put Him to the test? Why put Him on trial after foretelling that the government shall be upon His shoulders, and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace? Why test Him after telling Abraham two thousand years before Christ was born, "All the land which thou seest, unto thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever"? Gen. 13:14-15. The Seed was Christ. (Gal. 3:16.) Why have Him pass through the test after foretelling four thousand years before He was born and tested, that He shall bruise the serpent's head? How did God know all this, if it is necessary for Him to first try a man to know what He will do?

The whole thing is summed up in 1 Peter 1:20. Christ was foreordained before the foundation of the world, and He came to do the will of His Father. And Paul says that God hath made known unto us the mystery of His will according to His good pleasure; "that in the dispensation of the fullness of times, he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and on earth, even in him." Eph. 1:9, 10.

God grant that we may be able to open the fountain of knowledge, and give to the readers those glorious truths for which they are hungering and thirsting. — Selected by A. N. Harlan.

IN HIS CARE

When the early morning breaking,
 Slumber from my eyelids shaking,
 Comes the blessed thought with waking,
 I am in His keeping.
 Day advances, labor bringing,
 Care, her mantle 'round me flinging,
 Yet midst all my soul keeps singing,
 "I am in His care."

Sometimes dark clouds hang o'er me,
 Not one step I see before me,
 Still, my Savior, I adore Thee,
 I am in His keeping.
 I can trust His hand to guide me,
 'Neath His wings He'll safely hide me,
 And no harm can e'er betide me,
 "I am in His care."

Gentle eventide is nearing,
 Light from heaven disappearing,
 Still the blessed thought so cheering,
 I am in His keeping.
 Now night's curtains gather 'round me,
 Yet its dangers have not found me,
 For His angel guards surround me,
 "I am in His care."

— Mrs. C. H. Morris.

THE FINAL BOOK OF THE OLD TESTAMENT

By Lyman Booth

THE NAME OF THIS PROPHET signifies "My Angel," or "My Messenger," and is the same word that Malachi used concerning the forerunner of Christ, and nearly the same that he used about Christ himself. (3:1). Perhaps he was called Malachi with reference to these predictions, as well as to his prophetic office; and probably he had another name. He seems to have been the last of the prophets whose writings were transmitted to posterity, and to have been contemporary with Nehemiah, or to have lived shortly after his time.

The scope of Malachi's prophecy was to reprove and to reform many abuses that prevailed among the Jews, and especially the priests; to announce the near approach of the Messiah; to declare the effects of His coming to men of different characters; and to teach the people in what manner they ought to wait and prepare for that event. But it also contains predictions of the calling of the Gentiles and the extensive proclamation of the gospel.

Probably the prophetic office ceased with Malachi or was suspended till the coming of Christ, which was about four hundred years later. As this prophet particularly foretold the ministry of John the Baptist and the speedy coming of Christ, he is very frequently quoted or referred to in the New Testament.

Malachi was the last and is therefore called, "The Seal of the Prophets." His name is probably a contraction of Malachijah, as Abi (2 Kings 18:2) is contracted from Abijah (2 Chron. 29:1). Of his personal history there seems to be no record of a single fact. It seems probable that he was of the priestly order, or had close relations with the priesthood.

As to the time of his writing, the internal evidence favors the thought of his having written in the period after the exile, after Ezra was dead and the second immigration of captives had taken place. The indications point to the days when Nehemiah was absent twelve years at the court of Artaxerxes. The abuses which that governor had sought to check had broken out afresh, and the mixed marriages and the profanity of the priests had again become conspicuous. Compare Mal. 2:8 with Neh. 13:15-29; Mal. 2:10, 16 with Neh. 13:23-27. We may, therefore, place the beginning of his prophecy about 420 B. C. Thus we see that he stood in the same relation to Nehemiah during the latter portion of his work at Jerusalem that Haggai and Zechariah had occupied to Zerubbabel.

In the Seventy and the Vulgate, the Book consists of four chapters, as in our version, but in the Hebrew chapters three and four form but one. After dwelling on the affection of God for Judah as a loving Father and Ruler of His people, he rebukes the priests as the leaders of the spiritual deflection (1:2-9). He rebuked mixed marriages and divorces, portrayed by the deserted wives weeping at the altar (2:10-16). He predicted the coming of a faithful Messenger who shall carry out a sifting of the true ore from the dross in Israel, purge their silver and gold as in a furnace. He bids them remember Moses, who had given the law, revived by Nehemiah and Ezra, and look forward "to the coming of Elijah before the great and dreadful day of the Lord." Chapter 2:17 and 4:6. In this manner the last prophet of the Old Dispensation closes with the promise of the forerunner of the New.

In the New Testament we have three very prominent references to the prophecy of Malachi. His prediction of the Messenger of the Covenant (3:1), is found in Mark 1:2; Luke 1:76; 7:27. The coming of the prophet Elijah (4:5), is referred to in Matt. 11:14 and 17:12. The approach of the day of the Lord (4:1-3), is described in Matt. 3:12; also the love of God for Jacob in preference to Esau (1:2, 3), in Rom. 9:13.

Thus the Old Testament closes with predictions of the Messiah, and the New opens with the record of their fulfillment.

THE SEVEN SCIENTIFIC achievements which have been designated as the seven wonders of the modern world are wireless telegraphy and telephony, the automobile and locomotive, the airplane, the discovery of radium, the discovery of anesthetics, antiseptics and antitoxins, spectrum analysis, the discovery of x-rays and ultra-violet rays.

— S. E. Haney.

THE MILLENNIUM

By F. L. Austin

IT SEEMS TO BE A DIFFICULT THING for the human mind to explore the Word of God and discover its truths and accept them without wittingly or unwittingly drawing round about them some of the cocoons that are spun by man's own imagination. The finite mind is proved to be incapable of grasping very much of the revealed purposes of the Infinite. We grasp thoughts of God apparently only so far as we, in our finite ability, are able to analyze them according to what seems to be our own standard of reasonableness.

Accordingly many of God's rich truths are nullified either by being enclosed in man-made cocoons, never to be opened, or are blocked off by man who then detours over some crooked and rough circuit around the truths. This analysis is not by the writer applied to others more than to self. But rather with the intent that one and all may endeavor with honesty to check up his conclusions with the Bible in an effort to eliminate everything that is found to be out of harmony with the sacred Word.

Two long established conclusions of man have made it impossible for those holding these to advance in their Bible study through the period of the millennium without detouring around portions of God's Word. One such conclusion is that, today being the day of salvation, when Christ returns He will gather out those who are true to Him and obliterate the balance of the human race. Another conclusion is that man being by nature immortal, passes to his reward at the time of death, or to his punishment at the time of death, that the coming of Christ to reign and judge can have little bearing upon the plan of salvation. It is the first thought that we wish to consider today.

Peter, writing to Christians, even to Jewish Christians, explaining where Christianity advances them as well as Gentile Christians, in favor with God, says in 2 Peter 3:7-12, that "the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." Also that "the heavens shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This prophecy has been assumed to belong to the beginning of the millennium. It is said that this burning will take place at the coming of Christ; that the earth, having been completely burned up, will be a desolate, barren, uninhabited region during the thousand years of Christ's reign.

The apparent reason for this conclusion seems to be the above mentioned thought, namely, that when Christ comes He gathers unto himself all whom He will save and destroys all the balance. Therefore there is no one for Him to reign over. Therefore the earth must of necessity, according to such conclusion, be barren and waste. But the sacred Word is clear and plain in its outline to the contrary.

The fire of which Peter speaks is referred to again in Rev. 20:9, "Fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them." Also, the beast, the false prophet and Satan are each committed to this same fire. Also, death and hell and those whose names shall not be "found written in the book of life" shall be cast into the same fire. Here is the destruction of the present heaven and earth. It is to be destroyed similarly as was the former heaven and earth destroyed by water, 2 Peter 3:6, that is, the wickedness, the wrong, the curse is to be purged from it, though the terra firma, the globe, the earth, as earth, is to remain. Compare 2 Peter 3:6; Gen. 7 and 8; Rev. 20:9 to 21:1.

But the Bible distinctly states that it is "when the thousand years are expired", Rev. 20:7, that Satan is to be loosed and that the devouring fire shall come upon earth. It is beyond the thousand years, not at its beginning. It is during the little season that shall prevail after the expiration of the millennium and before the new heavens and new earth are declared. The new heavens and new earth of Rev. 21:1 are quite evidently the same as the new heavens and new earth of 2 Peter 3:13.

The error in misplacing this judgment execution of God has led to the greater error of nullifying the rule and reign of Christ over the nations of the earth preparatory to this great judgment scene and the new earth that shall follow.

THE NEW HEAVENS AND NEW EARTH

The indescribable beauties of John's picture of God's new order, Rev. 21 and 22, reveal a few things which the finite mind seemingly ought to grasp. He distinctly assures that in this new order "the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people." Continuing, John reveals in verse 4, "There shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain," and in 22:3, "There shall be no more curse."

These descriptive conditions that shall prevail in the new earth cannot possibly be dated as preceding the destruction of the great judgment process of Rev. 20. For that process brings in abundance of death, and destruction, and sorrow, and pain, and curse. Therefore the new earth of Rev. 21 and 22 must be understood as following the destruction of Rev. 20:7-15.

CHRIST'S REIGN

Again, Isaiah tells of a day in which the word of the Lord should go forth from Jerusalem. At that time God will judge among many nations and shall rebuke many people. He distinctly says that "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah 2:3-5.

Some object by criticizing that it is the nations who are going to declare these things, but Isaiah asserts that "many people shall come and say." Isaiah tells what they are definitely going to do. He tells specifically what the results will be and why the results will attain. The reason is because of the word and the law of the Lord issuing from Jerusalem. Few doubt but that the reason why the law and the word of Jehovah shall then issue forth from Jerusalem is that the Lord's Anointed, David's Son, Luke 1:32, 33, will then have returned, will occupy "the throne of his father David," and that some of the nations learning of Him will proceed as spoken by Isaiah.

Two things are certain. This could not take place in the new heavens and new earth, for the conditions here revealed are in process of consummation, but in the new heavens and new earth the conditions will have been accomplished. Second, these things could not develop without Christ occupying the throne given Him of God. He will not occupy that throne until He returns. He returns at the beginning of the thousand years.

Certain ones, Rev. 20:4-6, will live and reign with Him during that time. Isaiah 2; Amos 8:11-15; Jer. 31:31-34; 23:5-8; Micah 4:1-4 and many other prophecies depend upon the return of Christ and of His occupancy of His throne for fulfillment. That they must each and all be fulfilled prior to the new earth is evident because of the impossibility of these fulfillments taking place after the establishment of the new earth. The only time when they fit into God's Word is the time of the thousand years' reign of Christ, the period when, Rev. 20, He shall reign a thousand years.

THE MOSQUITO has twenty-two teeth of which we are reminded the instant it bites. There are many little sins that are considered too small to have sharp teeth. But unlike the mosquito their bite is not always recognized until the whole soul becomes infected. — S. E. H.

A TIMELY WARNING

(Continued from front page)

themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." 2 Peter 2:1-2.

The apostle concludes his admonition in the third chapter: "Ye therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also be led away with the error of the wicked, and fall from your own steadfastness." 2 Peter 3:17.

Brethren of the Church of God: when these predictions, which are to occur just before the Lord comes (2 Thessalonians 2:1-15), are being definitely fulfilled around us, and among us, when we see a growing tendency in the church to regard as nonessential the great fundamental truths of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God, when "many" are following the pernicious ways of indifference, uncertainty, and doubt, it is high time that the Church of God be aroused to a sense of her danger, and exhorted to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." Jude 3.

"That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ." Ephesians 4:14-15.

DEATH AND HELL

(Continued from page 51)

but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." Jude 6.

These passages speak of angels or messengers and not men, nor mankind; and they do not refer to a final state, but to a place where they are kept in imperceptible bonds under gloom for the judgment of the great day. There is not the faintest intimation of any torment in tartarus, but simply a temporary dungeon where sinning angels, or messengers are kept for chastening judgment at the great white throne. There is not the slightest suggestion in text or context of the Scriptures that tartarus carries the horrible conception which "hell" brings to the minds of people in general, and there is not the slightest justification for so translating it. It is simply forcing ideas into God's Word which He never intended to be there, and must be accounted for by those who, knowing better, continue to spread error among the Lord's people.

Second Peter 2:4 is a favorite passage of some to prove that sinful mankind is in a hell of torture. This passage does not refer to man or mankind but to sinning angels. The Scripture leaves no room for quibble or doubt. "For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing. For Christ hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God; being put to death in the flesh, yet quickened by the Spirit; by which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." 1 Peter 3:17-20. They are the same that Peter mentions in his second epistle (2:4) who were thrust down to the gloomy caverns of tartarus, and also the angels of Jude's epistle. This identifies them with the sixth chapter of Genesis (Gen. 6:1-4).

The conventional idea of "hell" should never be thought of in connection with the passages where gehenna is used, likewise tartarus. To do so is a monstrous perversion of the idea conveyed by the original term. Our next word in the Greek scriptures in the study of "hell" is the "lake of fire."

THE GREATEST DEPTH in the Pacific Ocean is 32,088 feet, or more than six miles, near Mindano, Philippine Islands. While Mount Everest of the Himalayas in Nepal is the highest peak in the world, 29,140 feet, or nearly six miles. What a peculiar looking world this should be were all surface water removed! It would be, however, in keeping with the ups and downs of human life. But there are scriptures indicating quite noticeably a pending readjustment of earth's and man's incongruities. Recent numerous earthquakes and volcanic eruptions are also indicative of the former and of the soon return of earth's King of kings, resulting in the eradication of sin, of the latter. — S. E. Haney.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"THEREFORE IF ANY MAN BE IN CHRIST, HE IS A NEW CREATURE." — SECOND CORINTHIANS 5:17.

THE DIVIDING LINE

WE VERY OFTEN DIVIDE humanity into two classes. We speak of the rich and the poor, the aristocrat and plebeian, or the educated and the ignorant. But in none of these divisions is there a distinct dividing line. However, when we classify men as Christians we have one definite line to separate the two classes: they are either "in Christ" or "out of Christ", according to the Scripture.

To be "in Christ" one must needs have been baptized as a believer in Christ and the Word of God. Baptism, then, though seemingly a simple act, constitutes the dividing line, because it expresses absolute belief.

Being "in Christ" immediately places one on a separate plane. Past sins are erased; Christ becomes a Mediator so there is the privilege of communing with God; succeeding sins can be forgiven; and one becomes an heir to all the promises of God. Also, through submission and obedience, one's attitude is changed so that he can accept the guidance of God's Spirit through His Word.

Being "in Christ" does not signify that one is saved, but a righteous life must follow. Being "out of Christ" does not mean one is not righteous; yet he has not fulfilled his whole duty. He is on the unsaved side of the line where he has not the temporal blessings of God, nor the title to the kingdom of God. Mildred Stantial, Los Angeles.

CLEVELAND SOCIETY BOOMS

FOR THE FIRST TIME in the three and a half years of its existence, the Cleveland Berean Society appears to have found itself, and is beginning to become a real influence in the church. A reorganization was made after the summer vacation; a membership committee was appointed; and printed programs for the coming three months were distributed. These programs provide a special feature in the way of entertainment for about five minutes each week, sometimes a poem, sometimes a solo, or duet, or some other attraction, varied each week.

In five weeks the enrollment has jumped 350 percent and is still climbing. The first meeting of the season was on September 5, with 10 present. This is about the general average for years back. The record since then is: Sept. 12, 12; Sept. 19, 24; Sept. 26, 21; Oct. 3, 27; Oct. 10, 38; and Oct. 17, 41.

Ten new members were added to the register of the senior class on the night of Oct. 10. A junior class was organized Sept. 12. On Oct. 17 both juniors and seniors had grown to such an extent that both had to be divided, making one class for the small girls, one for the small boys, and the original senior class of advanced young people, from which the adult members, numbering 11, were removed to form a fourth class.

Enthusiasm is high, and everyone is encouraged over the new life which the Berean Society has been showing. We are looking for another record breaking attendance next Friday night. Plans are under way for a Hallowe'en party which will be given Oct. 31. Each Berean will have the privilege of inviting one guest, and admission will be by ticket only. Other social activities are planned from time to time. A Berean society, rightly managed, can be a most effective factor in building up a church, and we are encouraged to hope ours may become just that. M. W. Lyon, Sec.

ILLINOIS BEREANS

OCTOBER IS SELF-DENIAL MONTH. On the last day of the month we are to send all the money that we have saved either to our local treasurers or to the state treasurer, Sister Esta Starbuck, 420 South Third St., Rockford. We trust that all of you have found real pleasure and satisfaction in the sacrifices you have made.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

IT WAS OUR INTENTION to conclude this little contest with this issue. So many have written expressing their interest in its progress, however, that we have decided to start over and continue for another six months. This will give any of you who have become discouraged because other states were so far ahead an excellent chance to take the lead. No one is ahead of you now, so don't delay in sending your contributions. Notices, reports and communications will give just as much credit as long articles.

Results for the past six months are: Illinois, 18; California, 10; Ohio, 5; Indiana, 6; Nebraska, 3; Minnesota, 2; Michigan, 2; Florida, 1; Louisiana, 1; Arkansas, 1; Missouri, 1; Virginia, 1; New York, 1; Texas, 1; Alabama, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THOMAS

"And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God."

HOW OFTEN HAVE YOU HEARD people say, "Oh, he is a doubting Thomas," or "She is a doubting Thomas"? Do you know how people have come to say that?

As you know, Jesus selected twelve men to help Him in His ministry. Among these twelve helpers was one called Thomas, or Didymus. He is first mentioned when Jesus told the disciples that Lazarus was dead. Jesus said, "Let us go unto him."

Lazarus had lived in Bethany, a small village not far from Jerusalem. To go to Bethany meant danger for Jesus, as the Jews were seeking to stone Him. Stoning meant death, so when Jesus suggested they go to Bethany it meant they might all suffer death. Evidently, Thomas loved Jesus very much and was ready to die with or for Him, for he said to the other disciples, "Let us also go, that we may die with him." There was not any doubt in that resolution.

Thomas was present on the night of the "Last Supper". Jesus was talking about the events soon coming to pass, and that He would leave them and go where they could not come. He said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know."

But Thomas seemed not to understand; for he said, "Lord, we know not whither thou goest, and how can we know the way?"

Jesus replied, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."

Thomas asked a vital question and we are glad that he did. We now know that by being baptized into Jesus we become a part of Him, and through Him we come to the Father.

The next mention of Thomas is after Jesus was resurrected. The disciples were discouraged and had gone back to their usual occupations. When Jesus came to them the first time, Thomas was not present. And when he came in later, one of the disciples said to him, "We have seen the Lord!"

But Thomas had probably become so hopeless it seemed impossible that Jesus could have come to life again. He said, "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe."

And eight days later Thomas was given this very opportunity. The disciples were together, Thomas also, when again Jesus stood in their midst and said, "Peace be unto you." And to Thomas He said, "Reach hither thy finger and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing."

How delighted Thomas must have been! He exclaimed, "My Lord and my God!" There was no doubt now.

Jesus said, "Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."

So you see why we say anyone is a "doubting Thomas" when he does not believe. But Thomas did believe, and gladly, when the evidence was presented. He really wanted to be sure.

The last mention of Thomas is when Jesus appears to the disciples at the Sea of Tiberias.

Let us not doubt, but have faith in the words of the Master and the Book of Life.

THINK! Do we wilfully doubt, or do we believe?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Locate Bethany and the Sea of Tiberias.
2. Read John 21.
3. Learn John 20:29.
4. Copy:— Thomas (Didymus) one of the twelve disciples, believed when shown evidence.

"The books which help you most are those which make you think!" — Parker.

JUST ONE BOOK

When Sir Walter Scott was dying, he said to his secretary: Give me the Book." "What book?" asked the secretary. "There's just one Book," replied Sir Walter, "the Bible!" Truly in the "making of many books there is no end," but there is just one Book that stands out apart from all the others. The Bible is not "a" book, but the Book.

"There's just one Book for the tender years,
One Book alone for guiding
The little feet through the joys and fears
That unknown ways are hiding.
There's just one Book,

"There's just one Book for life's gladness;
One Book for the toilsome days;
One Book that can cure life's sadness;
One Book that can voice life's praise.
There's just one Book,

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON VI. — November 9, 1930

T H O M A S

John 11:14-16; 14:5-8; 20:24-29; 21:1, 2

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 3:13-20

GOLDEN TEXT

And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. — John 20:28.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Honest Doubter.

Basic Truth. "The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens." — Prov. 3:19.

Outline. I. Doubt. II. The Value and Peril of Doubt. III. Learning to Trust Jesus.

I. Doubt. When used in the sense of honestly questioning the correctness of a presentation, doubt becomes one of the valuable experiences in life. Possibly at every step of advancement on the way from the cradle to the grave, one moves forward on the reliance of convincing evidence. The child, first urged to jump to the father's arms, doubts.

Honest doubt seeks to organize ways and means to discover the right. At the burning bush, Moses at first was a doubter. Before Pharaoh, Aaron and Moses, at first, were doubters. At the base of the burning mountain, Israel doubted. Thomas doubted. These and many other Bible examples prove the value of doubt, providing the doubter is open and anxious for truth.

II. The Value and Peril of Doubt. To doubt is to be open, ready for truth. Saul the persecuter was not a doubter; he was an opposer. Better, usually, a Thomas than a Saul. Thomas, because doubting, came to see much greater evidence and testimony of the truth of that which he doubted. His unbelief was not necessarily disbelief.

III. Learning to Trust Jesus. More than learning to walk on the water, Peter was learning to trust when, Matt. 14:28, 33, he asked Jesus to bid him to come out of the boat. Peter, v. 29, "walked on the water" "but when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid." The boisterous winds, the rolling waves in their physical greatness and strength of movement at once created a doubt in the mind of Peter as to the ability of his Savior to protect him.

Time and again the works of our Savior committed the people before Him to the test of their trust or faith in Him. Witness Matt. 9:29, "According to your faith be it unto you." There is no doubt in true faith. Doubt has been vanquished. Matt. 9:22 reveals the same truth: "Thy faith hath made thee whole." Again, Luke 7:50, "Thy faith hath saved thee." Learning to trust Jesus is climbing the stairway of doubt to the floor of implicit faith and placing all upon Him.

So it was with Thomas. He would go and die with Him, John 11:16; but he didn't. He would go to the judgment hall with Him; but, like the others, he failed to appear for Him. He would go to the cross with Him; but he was likely with those disciples who stood in the distance. Now at resurrection it was too much for his faith. Being beyond comprehension, he could not place faith therein till he had experienced the touch of the Savior's hand and of His side. His schooling was finished; his confidence was complete; his adoration was overpowering. "My Lord and my God."

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Doubting: Thomas is called a "doubter", yet he was honest and sincere. He was the kind that "prove all things". There are many today that are doubters, who in reality are deniers. In the majority of cases doubting is but to deny. Show how one can doubt

- God;
- Christ;
- The Word;
- Resurrection;
- Parents.

When Thomas had seen his Lord, he not only believed, but publicly acknowledged Him as "My Lord and my God." It is one thing to believe and a vastly different thing to confess. Confession gives life to belief. Discuss how we can confess Christ. It would be well for members of the class to tell of ways in which they have been most successful in acknowledging and testifying of Christ to the unsaved and winning them for Christ.

Blackboard Sermonette:

- Doubting
- despoils confidence;
 - might be easier, but is never safe;
 - may be popular, but never a reason;
 - is a stepping-stone to unbelief;
 - is truth's greatest enemy. — C. E. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Belief in Jesus.

A short time before crucifixion Jesus said to the twelve, "I came forth from the Father . . . I leave the world and go to the Father." The disciples' confidence in the man Jesus responded quickly, "Now we are sure . . . by this we believe that thou camest forth from God." But Jesus rejected this confidence in himself as a man. He said, "Do ye now believe? Behold the hour is now come when ye shall be scattered every man to his own and shall leave me alone."

Jesus did not seek belief in himself as a man. He was living and the mission it was to work in the life of man. But He knew that man man. He sought belief in the resurrected life could not experience such belief without the evidence tangible to the physical senses that physical death and resurrection would furnish. Without that evidence, only He and the Father could know of the inner life He was living. The words of Thomas, "I will not believe except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails," shows how utterly dependent the disciples were on their physical senses for conviction and belief. Their early assurance that Jesus was from God counted for nothing when circumstances made it appear that the man Jesus was accepting the role of weakling and impostor.

The quick response of Thomas, "My Lord and my God," after he had seen the nail prints, is but the spontaneous belief in the resurrection life that was made possible to man for the first time by the resurrection of Jesus. But through the word of the twelve who had physical contact with resurrection life, belief without seeing has been made possible to you and me. And this belief is more "blessed" (happy) than was the belief experienced by the twelve, just as a blazed trail is more happy to the traveler than an unbroken forest. — A. K.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Doubting Thomas.

You have often heard the expression, "I'll not believe it until I see it." This may be a good attitude to have about some things, but yet it shows that there is doubt in our minds.

It did not matter to Thomas, one of the twelve apostles, if the other apostles did say they had seen Jesus. Thomas said, "Except I see the nail prints, and put my fingers in the nail prints in His hands and side, I will not believe." Is it any wonder he is often called doubting Thomas?

But are we any better than Thomas? How many times do we offer prayer to the Father and have away back in our minds a great big doubt whether our prayer will ever be answered. We trust fully as long as things go well, but let things go wrong and see how quickly we begin to doubt. We actually feel, "Does it pay to be a Christian?"

Jesus said, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet believe." Let us believe, without doubt, that it pays to serve Jesus each step of the way. — V. C. T.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God!" — John 20:28.

Thomas is spoken of the country over as "Doubting Thomas." With him, seeing was believing. When he was convinced by seeing he was willing to believe and acknowledge Christ by exclaiming, "My Lord and my God!"

There are still doubters the world over, and some just like Thomas, because they have not seen, they will not believe. They forget that they never saw Washington, Jefferson and many others, whom they believe to be just as history describes them. But they think they should see the Christ to believe in Him. This is a sad mistake, for Christ said to Thomas, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." — L. A. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

DEDICATION SERVICE AT RIPLEY

The Church of God at Ripley, Illinois, spent one of the best days in its history, Sunday, October 19. Bro. Austin was with us and delivered a dedication sermon on Sunday morning, followed with communion service.

The church, with its remodeling and touch of paint, new paper, electric lights, etc., gave a very inviting appearance. Some of our members from a distance who were here are Bro. and Sr. Hightower, Golden; Sr. Emma Swan, Quincy; Sr. Helen Schafer, Springfield, Mo.; Bro. and Sr. Wm. McGraw and children and Sr. Elizabeth Parker, Macomb.

At seven o'clock Sunday evening the children and young people gave a short program, followed by the evening sermon on "Signs of the Times." A large crowd attended each service. When the invitation was extended Elna Schafer of Springfield, Mo., expressed her desire to be baptized in the all-saving name of Jesus. Her wish was complied with Monday morning in the little creek below the church. That evening a fellowship meeting was held at the church and with glad hearts she was given the right hand of fellowship. And as we parted all gave God the thanks for being able to have again met in Christian service.

Tessa Laning, Sec.

NOVEMBER SECOND AT ROCKFORD

The congregation at Rockford, Ill., will hold its regular preaching service next Sunday, November 2, at 1904 N. Main St. Bro. Paul Hatch is the speaker. This wide-awake group has Sunday School every Sunday morning and Berean meeting every Friday evening at the regular meeting place. All those finding it possible to attend will receive much benefit as well as a warm welcome.

TRAINING CLASS NEWS

In answer to our announcement of immediate needs of the Class we have been helped very materially during the past week. Sr. Paul Friebe of the Oregon congregation has loaned us a small cook stove with an oven. She has also offered to do our washing, gratis, providing we dry and iron it ourselves. Thank you very much, Sr. Friebe. We appreciate your spirit of giving.

We are indebted to Bro. Austin for the use of his furniture, some others also having given us some. Sr. Pearl Hatten has offered to do our mending, for which we are also most appreciative.

May we say to those who love the Lord and wish to see this work go forward, the giving of services and of the things that help supply our temporal needs, form an inspiration to work harder than ever before that we may prepare ourselves for service to others in the work of the Master.

We wish to thank you one and all for this help and we pray that God will richly bless you.

Bible Training Class.

DOLLAR-A MONTH PLEDGES

The following new pledges have been received since October 14:

Minnesota, 2; Iowa, 2; Nebraska, 1; Illinois, 2; New York, 1; Ontario, 1.

An error was made in the number of pledges reported in last Herald for Wisconsin. The number should be 9. Beg your pardon, Wisconsin!

COME TO THEIR RESCUE

On account of the business depression and the number of men out of work there will be many demands made this winter on all charitable organizations. These organizations are preparing to meet any demands that may be made on them to feed, clothe and house families who are in need.

The effect of this depression is being felt among our Church of God people also. Are we going to be able to meet this need? Some of our people have been so kind to cooperate in the relief work in the past that I am hopeful that we will be, but with conditions as they exist at the present time I think this winter will mean hardships for many more than usual. I have found more families reported to me as being in need at this time of the year than ever before.

Perhaps some of you have never helped in this work of caring for our unfortunate ones in the church and are preparing for comforts in your own home for the winter. I am going to ask you to think of the ones who on account of sickness and other worthy causes can see no comfort ahead of them. You who are living in a warm climate and do not have the cold winters to contend with, will you not also be among the faithful ones that are helping to carry this work on, so that we will be prepared to take care of our own? We can be engaged in no greater work for God than this.

We should not overlook those of our number who may need assistance and do not let their wants be known. I am asking your cooperation in this. If you find any such families, please let me know.

The joy and comfort that has been given to our unfortunate ones from the donations given will never be known in this life, but we know some day God will reveal all things and then we will know.

Please send donations and communications to my address.

Mrs. Orpha Sanford,
5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois.
Chairman of National Berean Relief Committee of the Church of God.

AT OREGON, ILLINOIS

We were favored on Sunday morning, October 19, with a fine sermon from Bro. Richard LeCrone. He gave us some good thoughts concerning the ancient people of God to whom Jehovah gave such rich promises, if they would wisely walk in the path He had marked out for them. Because they did not, God turned to other hearts who rejoiced to know God had come to them through His Son, the dear Christ, offering them salvation, teaching them the way of life. Bro. LeCrone concluded with a plea to all to accept the call from the Master and gain eternal life.

In the evening Bro. Denchfield wrapped the love of Christ around all his thoughts, exhorting all to accept the love awaiting those who will seek and find the Christ, who has promised all His faithful children, a home in his restored earth.

May God bless our boys who have consecrated their lives to the work of the ministry. May many souls be saved by their faithful, honest service.

M. A. Woodward.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

On Sunday, October 19, the church cooperated to the fullest possible extent with the quarterly conference held at Dutton, where Bro. Jas. A. Patrick was the principal speaker. Our regular services were all conducted at the home church, but some went to Dutton for the entire day and nearly all drove down for the afternoon.

The Grand Rapids church was glad to have Bro. Patrick come and speak in their pulpit on Sunday night, making it possible for many in the neighborhood to hear him again.

As these words are being written plans are being worked out for a big church birthday for our anniversary, October 26, which we hope to report next week. A special offering is to be taken toward the church debt on that occasion.

Social events for the various ages will be staged at the Hallowe'en season. The Dorcas society is sponsoring an adult social at the pastor's home, 50 Cherryvale Drive, for Friday night, October 31.

The work is progressing steadily, with every evidence of the church family becoming more and more firmly united for the cause, and for this we are humbly thankful to our heavenly Father.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

"THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS"

"The Rich Man and Lazarus" in the name of a twelve page tract by Bro. J. H. Anderson which was recently printed in The Herald shop. Bro. Anderson gives very clearly his views on this parable which is so generally misinterpreted. Copies may be obtained at Five Cents each from Mrs. Mabel Edney, Dana, North Carolina.

It is expected that another tract by Bro. Anderson will be published soon on "Present Events in the Light of Prophecy" or "The Cause of the Present Unrest, and the Remedy." Further announcement will be made later.

HERALD RECEIPTS

G. E. Coats; Mrs. J. F. Richardson; Etta S. Elton; Mrs. Ida Eastman; Mrs. L. J. Sweet; Alice A. Blyth; Mrs. Tennie Long; Mrs. Fred Paisley; Lillian A. Greiner; Claus Storjohann; A. L. Corbaley; Mrs. A. Balch; Mrs. Eliza Cassen; Mrs. Hugh Longman; Mrs. Will Scott; Mrs. James Brush.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

When I reach the goal it will be because you — a thousand of you — have helped me along. And when that goal has been reached and the Gospel work which I am to do is done, it will not be I who has done it, but you, with a small portion of what the Giver of All has given to each one.

Remember! I progress only so far as I am pushed by YOU!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

TRACTS AND BOOKS

TRACTS

Name	Pages	Dozen	100
The Reasons Why	2	$0.05	$0.30
Essential Truths	1	.05	.30
God's Promises, by Anna E. Drew	2	.05	.30
The Resurrection, by S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
Obedience	2	.05	.30
The Baptist Confession of Faith	2	.05	.30
Who Owns the Wool?	4	.05	.30
The Coming of Christ, S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
What Is a Christian, J. W. Williams	4	.10	.60
Where Do We Go When We Die?	4	.10	.60
Immortality of the Human Soul	4	.10	.60
Shall Never Die	4	.10	.60
The Voice of Prophecy	4	.10	.60
Immortality	4	.10	.60
Did Christ Pre-exist? R. H. Judd	4	.10	.60
The Thief on the Cross, F. E. Siple	4	.10	.60
What Do the Scriptures Teach? Judd	6	.15	.90
What Must I Do to Be Saved?	4	.10	.60
Hell, What Is It	8	.20	1.25
The Coming of Christ, R. A. Curtis	6	.20	1.25
The Rich Man and Lazarus, F. E. Siple	8	.20	1.25
A Few Thoughts	8	.20	1.25
Baptism, S. J. Lindsay	8	.20	1.50

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen	100
God, R. H. Judd	16	.04	.30	1.75
The First Resurrection, Wm. Leask	20	.05	.40	3.00
A Letter to a Friend	32	.10	1.00	8.00
Where Are the Dead?	36	.05	.50	4.00

Name

Pages Each Dozen

The Resurrection, J. L. Wince (For cost of Postage)	32	.03	.12
--	----	-----	-----

BOOKS

Name

Pages Each Per 6

Death Reigned from Adam to Moses, paper cover	58	$0.10
Sin, A. H. Zilmer, paper covers	84	.25
Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	$1.25
Book of Revelation Made Easy to Understand, Ancient Mysteries, George Johnston	116	.50
W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	1.25
Christ in the Old Testament, R. H. Judd, paper	88	.40
The Way of Life Eternal, Lyman Booth, paper	88	.40
Student's Text Book, Wilson, board cloth	200	.45	2.60
The Visitor, Boice, paper	212	.50
The Mystery of Iniquity, Booth, paper	220	.75
Pine Woods Bible Class, Wilson, board cloth, Emphatic Diaglott, Benjamin Wilson	480	.85	5.00
Neatly bound, and in clear type,			2.50

THE GOSPEL IN SONG

A Book of 287 well-printed Gospel Hymns

	Each Postpaid	Per 10 Postpaid	Per 100 Not Postpaid
Manila	$0.40	$3.60	$30.00
Flexible Cloth	.45	4.00	33.00
Board Cloth	.50	4.50	40.00

PROHIBITION IN RUSSIA

NOT OF LIQUOR, BUT OF WORSHIP OF GOD

By Mary A. Gesin

IN THE COLUMNS OF THE CHICAGO Tribune of October 20, we read that prohibition of religion in Russia is similar to prohibition of liquor in the United States. The Rev. Mr. Prokhanoff, president of the all-Russian Evangelical Christian Union, the largest Protestant group in that country, is quoted as saying that "religious persecution under the leadership of the bolshevik organization, Besboshniki — Godless — has made religion contraband throughout Russia."

This same gentleman, who has visited America several times, says that many of the clergy are "bootlegging" religion in Russia, and that they run greater risks in so doing than do those who carry on illegal traffic in liquor in this country. For the latter risk merely fines, and they have plenty of money to pay these fines, or short terms of imprisonment; while Russian religious leaders face death from starvation, exile in the lumber camps of the far north, and what is worse, the dread uncertainty of the lot that may befall their dear ones, helpless women and children.

"In the early years of bolshevism, the communists concentrated their attacks against the orthodox church, and the Protestant religion was left comparatively in peace," continues the clergyman. "Later the godless organization widened its attack, seeking to discredit the churches by inviting priests and preachers to engage in debates before the workers. This popularized the church and when the campaign failed, terrible persecutions resulted, thousands of churches were closed, and the leaders exiled. Rome under Nero was a summer resort compared to Moscow of today!"

Under such terrifying circumstances it became impossible to print any sort of religious literature and former methods had to be abandoned. Their only recourse was to "bootleg" religion, and conduct services secretly. And the persecution that immediately followed and still insidiously pursues them as a baleful specter, merely shows the fear and hatred with which the Reds regard religion.

And do they permit these atrocities to chill their ardor? Many of the worshipers of God have become more devout than ever, according to this fearless Protestant leader. And they will risk torture, starvation, even death, to continue the privilege, gathering together in secret meeting places underground.

In our own country we are heartsick over the prevalence of crime, disregard of law, the outlook of suffering ahead because of unemployment, and like conditions. But we are still permitted to worship God in the manner that we choose. Are we zealous in Christian service? Do we appreciate our religious liberty? Perhaps because of the very fact of our free access to it, we have become lukewarm toward our religion.

Let us visualize our attitude if we knew that on January

1, 1931, we would be compelled to forego attendance at all public services, to hide our Bibles, to close our Sunday Schools. The prospect is appalling, isn't it, fellow workers in the cause of Christ? We think life would hardly be worth living without freedom to honor our heavenly Father and teach others the wonderful gospel of Christ.

As we see these conditions gathering thickly over the world as a dark pall, let us increase our faith in God and redouble our zeal in His cause. Just because we are not restricted in our worship let's not go at it half-heartedly. Let us serve each day as though that day were our last in which to serve and honor Him. God's promises are sure and His rewards are certain if we prove faithful.

"CHRISTIANITY IS THE MOST EXTENSIVE of all pipe-lines. Its system of distribution reaches to the ends of the world. . . . Every Christian is a necessary link in the process. There must be no stoppage in any life. The blessed current must flow on, and we must count it our deepest disgrace, having received the love of God through our Savior, not to pass it on to others." — Christian Herald.

THE GREAT HYPOCRISY

By Senator Arthur Capper

THERE IS NO GREATER HYPOCRISY in this country than the declaration of the wets that they are for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and also opposed to the return of the saloon.

EITHER PROHIBITION OR SALOON

If you are for prohibition you are against the saloon.

If you are against prohibition you are for the saloon.

The lawless fight that is being waged against the Eighteenth Amendment; the fight that is being waged to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment — both are being waged by those who desire the return of the saloon.

The legalized sale of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes means the return of the saloon. Making Uncle Sam the bartender, or allowing the states to become bartenders, would not change the situation. You would still have the saloon, with all its accompanying evils.

The issue is clear cut. It cannot be evaded. It must be faced squarely. We will have the saloon.

NO MIDDLE GROUND

Under prohibition we ultimately will have law observance or we will have the return of the saloon.

There is no middle ground, and the thinking man who tells you there is a middle ground, by which we can have legalized liquor sales without the place of sale, is a hypocrite.

The unthinking man or woman who preaches repeal of the prohibitory amendment and prohibition laws, without the return of the saloon, is simply the dupe of smarter people who want the manufacture and sale of liquor legalized.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 4, 1930

NUMBER 5

THE JUDGMENT

By F. L. Austin

"He hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead."

THE SUBJECT OF THE MILLENNIUM which has been briefly treated in the last few preceding issues of THE HERALD is a subject which is intimately connected with that of the judgment.

Judgment is the act of the judge. The Bible student should endeavor to understand the biblical usage of these words rather than the current political usage. Altogether too many times readers of the Bible look upon judgment as some great punishment placed upon a class by a decree from Heaven.

In the writer's mind from early youth judgment, at first thought, always reminded him of the prevailing doctrine of eternal torment after death. It is a common inference, both from pulpit and from press, that the eternal, unending fires of hell and the inexpressible suffering of those who are cast thereinto reveal God's judgment upon sinful man. While the writer has never believed that this was in harmony with Bible teaching and has never believed that the dead are so treated, yet it is such a prevailing opinion among the churches that this thought first flashes over the writer's mind whenever he hears people speak of judgment.

A second thought, one that follows the first, has been that death, the sentence pronounced upon Adam for sin, Genesis 2, is the judgment of God. This is but a modified expression of the former more prevalent thought. For a number of years the writer presumed that this latter thought was the correct one. But as soon as he began to study the Bible for himself, he quickly came to the conclusion that this too was equally erroneous with the thought that hell and purgatory were expressive of God's judgment. Let us proceed to investigate the Bible and discover the usage of the word "judgment".

First, as illustration of biblical use, the reader is asked to turn to Heb. 8:1-4 and carefully note that the old Mosaic tabernacle and its services were illustrative of a following "true tabernacle" and its services; that the priest of the former tabernacle was illustrative of the priest of the true tabernacle. Again, turning to Heb. 9:1 and following, this lesson is emphasized the more. Also another lesson is therein brought out, namely, verses 7-12, that the entrance of the priest into the holy of holies upon the day of Atonement, while illustrative of the entrance of Christ into the holy of holies of the true tabernacle, yet it was not accurately illustrative in that it was impossible under the old to fully and completely illustrate the new.

Again, Heb. 10:1, the law itself was "a shadow" or illustration of things yet to come. Paul, in Rom. 15:4, tells us that "whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning". And in 1 Cor. 10:11, referring to several matters which precede, he says, "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples." By these and other texts the writer is made to believe that things spiritual are better understood when they have been illustrated by things fleshly, and that the illustrations under the programs of the first tabernacle and of the Mosaic law and of the Israelitish nation are not only instructive in fact, but are also illustrative of God's method of procedure under the new and spiritual development.

God's usage of the judges following the liberation of Israel from Egypt and from the wilderness is, in the writer's opinion, illustrative of God's usage of the term as it is applied to Him whom God has designated to be Judge of both the living and the dead. The reader is therefore asked to go back to the book of Judges and there discover the Bible usage of the work of God's judges.

"The anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, . . ." Judges 2:14 here declares God's attitude toward the Israelites and His consequent dealings with them. Because

(Continued on page 71)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"These were written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name."—John 20:31.

TRUTHS FOR WHICH THE HERALD STANDS

THE RESTITUTION HERALD exists and is published for the purpose of declaring certain tenets which are most truly believed by the people who are responsible for THE HERALD. The majority of these tenets have been held for many years. They have come to be believed as a result of a biblical study and research.

Those who have banded themselves together for the purpose of proclaiming these truths do not deign to think that they have comprehended and recognized all biblical truth. But they do feel most earnestly that certain important truths of the Bible should, for the benefit of all readers, be emphasized and widely proclaimed.

The people behind THE HERALD are anxious to grow in truth. They are anxious to advance toward a fullness of knowledge of God. To this end every encouragement is given that students of the Bible will present newly discovered thoughts. It is desirous that they will offer these for the careful consideration of HERALD readers. But should those thoughts newly presented prove, by a more thorough investigation of scriptures, to be erroneous in the candid judgment of those fostering THE HERALD, it then seems proper that THE HERALD should discontinue the advocacy of such new thoughts.

GOD

The first and fundamental thought which THE HERALD stands for is God in all of His greatness and sovereignty as outlined in the Bible. THE HERALD advocates that God "is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him". Heb. 11:6. We believe that God is Creator and Master of all things. At no time does THE HERALD uphold any thought entering its columns to the contrary.

MAN

We believe that man is the creature of God. As such, he is completely under the sovereignty of God. In the exercise of His sovereignty over man God, in man's beginning, extended to him the privilege of choosing one of two lines of action: to obey God and live, or to disobey God and die. In His sovereignty, God allowed man his own choice and informed him of the result of each choice as it would work out under the sovereignty of his Maker.

MORTALITY

Contrary to all mythological teachings of the ancient Egyptians, Syrians, Grecians and others, and contrary to the prevailing opinion of many recent, though earnest, people, we believe that the Bible teaches that God created man as a mortal being; that in every particular he was in his creation subject to death; that God's sovereignty pronounced death as the eventual wage of sin. Gen. 3:19; Rom. 4:12; James 1:15. We believe that the cutting off of life by death is the punishment which God in His sovereignty placed upon man for sin.

JESUS

We believe that Jesus is the creature of God and as such is God's Son. He is termed, 1 Cor. 15:45, "the last Adam" in distinction from "the first man Adam" who lost his life because of his sin. Jesus was created by God that He might be man's Savior, Matt. 1:21, from the death into which he was committed because of his sin, Luke 9:56. Accordingly Jesus is called man's Lifegiver. Rom. 6:23. He is more than that. He is also the Resurrection and the Life. John 11:25. Death, unto which sin consigned man by God's edict, is under God's announced provision discontinued only by a resurrection therefrom. Resurrection is the only revealed way of God for curtailing or discontinuing death, and that resurrection power has been by God in His sovereignty committed to Jesus. John 5:21; 6:39, 40, 44.

DOMINION AND AUTHORITY

The dominion which God, in Gen. 1:26-28, tendered to Adam for himself and for his posterity was by Adam's sin discontinued. In sinning Adam disqualified himself therefor. To Jesus, because that He loved righteousness and hated iniquity, Heb. 1:9, has been assigned the throne and the dominion even "for ever and ever", Heb. 1:8. In Him God's "kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions (rulers, margin) shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7:27. His dominion shall be, Psa. 72:8, "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth". Read Psa. 72:1-19. In His rule God has designated Him to become "King of kings, and Lord of lords".—Rev. 19:16.

Thus through His Son Jesus, whom He anointed for King, God will exercise His sovereign power over man.

BELIEF

Not only with Adam in Genesis 2, but also under Christ as well as formerly under Moses, God has made all promises and assurances unto man conditional upon man's voluntary belief in Him. God, in His sovereignty, because of the sin of Adam, pronounced death upon Adam and upon Adam's posterity, Rom. 5:12. Likewise because of Christ's righteousness, God assured resurrection and return to life for all those who had fallen under the wage of sin. But the benefits of that life through Christ are, by God, apportioned in accordance with faith of the individual receiving the benefits.

Just as Adam's blessing of life and posterity were dependent upon his faith in and obedience to God, so even resurrected life shall have its lasting blessing and prosperity dependent upon the individual's faith in and obedience to God. In no sense, do we find the Bible to teach that God purposes and determines life unending unto all. Rather, in each individual such life or salvation is made conditional upon his personal attitude and standing before God.

In this light, the promise of John 5:28, 29 is readily understood. Telling of the resurrection, Jesus says, "They that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." He distinguishes here between those raised. One type will be raised unto life, another type unto judgment, as the word "damnation" here means. This is more clearly referred to in Rev. 2:12. In reading this scripture we must necessarily keep in mind the period of time referred to. It is after Christ shall have come again and shall have raised a certain type who will "reign with him a thousand years,"

v. 6. It is after "the thousand years are expired," v. 7, that v. 12 pertains. The resurrection here spoken of in v. 12 is evidently unto judgment. Following that resurrection, it is evident by the following verses that some will fail of registering their names in the book of life, v. 15, and as a result will again come under God's punishment for sin.

Everywhere we find the sacred promises made upon condition that man by his faith in and obedience to his Creator comes to be worthy of God's blessings and gifts.

OTHER TRUTHS

There are many other Bible truths for which THE HERALD clearly stands, but these are mentioned for the benefit of readers, new and old, that they may realize anew what the editorial policy of THE RESTITUTION HERALD is, as indicated by the vast majority of the people who are behind this work.

It is hoped that the foregoing will set some of these things clearly before new readers.

The doctrines of eternal torment after death, of reward for the righteous previous to the coming of Christ and previous to the resurrection from the dead, of predestination in the sense that God has predestined and ordered the end of every individual, of universal salvation or universal reconciliation, or of any other doctrine that distinctly contradicts the above mentioned doctrines which HERALD promoters earnestly believe to be biblical, these views are not sustained nor encouraged by this publication.

THE WRITTEN WORD

A MISSIONARY IN BRAZIL, Mr. Harold Cook, writes: "On a journey I met an old man sixty odd years of age. His was a most interesting case. Prior to the meeting at which he heard me preach, he had only attended some three or four meetings in all his life, and these only during the last two or three months. Yet his knowledge of the gospel was astonishing, and is explained by the fact that about twenty years ago he came into possession of a Bible, and as a result of which he was seriously converted. His is a remarkable case of the Holy Spirit working in the heart of a man, illuminating the Word of God and revealing salvation to an obedient heart. For this man was far from anyone who could explain it to him and it was many years before he even discovered where he could get in touch with other Christians. Yet he not only found salvation, but grew in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus. He is a single man without family or relatives, and by trade a traveling stone mason. During all these years he has been evangelizing among the people to whom his work took him. Like the blind man, he just told what he knew, and wherever he went his Bible went too. It is not surprising that in conversation his phraseology had acquired a biblical turn." — Selected.

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT

EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT is not necessarily everlasting misery or torment. Thus a fine, a whipping, an imprisonment, a scolding, as well as death, are all punishments of a kind. Which kind does God mean? That is the question.

His Word says: "The wages of sin is death," Romans 6:23; "Whosoever believeth (in Christ) shall not perish," John 3:16; "shall be punished with everlasting destruction," 2 Thess. 1:9; and numerous similar statements.

Moreover everlasting punishment represents a completed transaction, in contrast with punishing, which implies a process. Therefore just as everlasting redemption means a completed redemption and not that we are eternally being redeemed; so sinners are not eternally dying or being tormented, but will be eternally dead or punished, after judgment.

In order to make these terms — death, perish, destruction — fit in with "suffering", the natural immortality of the soul has first to be assumed, and each word made to mean the opposite of what it says. Thus death is made to mean life in misery, perishing and destruction, to mean preservation. This is both adding to and altering the written Word. — J. Balfour.

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING?

By M. A. Woodward

FOR MANY GENERATIONS this question has been asked, and perhaps it is asked more earnestly today than ever before, because of present unheard of conditions. If we believe that the infinite God planned this life and was interested in its plan, would we ask the question?

Man has spoiled God's plan in many ways, and caused the great surge of tortured minds to wonder what it is all for. We forget that these discouragements and disappointments are but stepping-stones in the upward way. God wants us to be happy or He would not have devised so many ways for us to find happiness. Happiness is a by-product and comes to us in the daily walks of life, when we have done our best to merit it.

Life is filled with opportunities for all of us to help each other in the little things of life. It is not by any means always necessary to reach into the pocket and hand out dollars and cents. Life is more than "meat and drink." It is worth everything to know that you have met true friendship; that you can rely upon one you dare to trust.

If our aim in life is above the sordid, selfish pleasures, an aim to make the best of present opportunities, an aim to do our part with God's help, life will be to us well worth living. But if we are selfish, unappreciative, willful, not willing to take the blessings offered us, our path will not be rosy, but will be, by our own conduct, strewn with many thorns. Our days will be full of bitterness, with nothing to blame but our own waywardness and lack of true spirituality.

We are here for some good purpose. God will change our condition when He needs us in some other place. If we do not make good use of our present life and its opportunities, I am afraid of what the future will bring to us. For it will not help us any to look beyond this life for more peaceful days, more joy, unless we live here and now worthy of more joy, worthy of the home God is preparing for those who merit it.

The dear Christ said, "I go to prepare a place for you." That prepared place is for a prepared people. Are we ready for it? Or have we forgotten the words, "He that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, etc."? Have we tried to be among the overcomers? Are we living in God's blessed sunshine, or are we always behind the clouds in an attitude of sour despair?

Let us remember that "our capacity for enjoyment in the next life will be increased in proportion to our capacity for making the most of every experience that comes our way, here and now. To be given the chance to help in God's great work is a great honor. Since life is that opportunity, dare we say that it is not worth living?"

We can all make our lives well worth living, if we only will. And in making this life worth while, we are assured of the next life also.

THE FORE OF FOREKNOWLEDGE

By Alta King

A LARGE ENGINEERING FEAT is to be accomplished. The engineer, before beginning his work, visualizes the finished product, and not only the finished product, but the methods and the instrumentalities by which it is to be accomplished. He "foreknows" his work in the process of becoming and in its finished status.

In order to thus foreknow his work, he must do two things. First, he must study to know the materials and the tools he is going to have to work with, and the laws that govern them. Second, he must plan accurately and logically the development of his work in accordance with his materials and tools and the laws that govern them. No foreknowledge is possible without this background of knowledge and fore-planning, or foreordination. Foreknowledge of that which "is-to-be", based on definite knowledge of that which "is" and on fore-planning, is necessary to the engineer's final victory in his work. Coupled with two other factors, this assures him victory.

These other two factors are: first, power within himself to keep the unfolding of his plan by and under his determined will; second, such love for the work of his hands as will enable him to persevere with patience to the finish. To such an engineer, and to such an engineer alone, will the materials and instruments yield their full service toward the consummation of the work to be accomplished. To such an engineer comes victory.

Thus it is with God and His work, except that where the engineer is finite in his foreknowledge because of finite knowledge of materials and laws, finite fore-planning and finite power to will and love, God is infinitely infinite.

God conceived of a great purpose. That purpose was to create a universe that should show forth His own fulness — the fulness of the power, wisdom and love that resided within himself. The finish, the fulness of such a creation could be nothing short of man in His own image and likeness. God foreknew such a universe, headed by Man in His image and likeness, at the time He conceived of it as a purpose. He foreknew it in every step of its becoming. He foreknew it finished. He now thus foreknows it. He foreknows it first, because He knows the materials with which He works and the laws that govern them — knows them not with the knowledge that is the engineer's through study, but with the intimate and exact knowledge of the Creator of the materials and the Maker of the laws; second, because He fore-ordered, fore-planned, His activity before He raised a finger to do.

This solid, scientific foreknowledge, based on knowledge of facts and on fore-ordering, is the Alpha and Omega of God's victory in His purpose. This foreknowledge, coupled with His power to keep the unfolding of His plan by and under the mighty force of His determined will, and coupled also with His mighty love for the works of His hands that begets the perseverance and the patience of the ages, leaves no room for failure in any detail of His purpose.

Man is the chiefest of the materials God is working with and through, to reveal His own fulness. Man contributes most to the final consummation of God's purpose when he becomes conscious of the mighty and flawless power, and wisdom, and love that are His. For only through such consciousness can there be faith that is proof against doubts, in the face of so much in which human vision and reason can see only lack of wisdom, and power, and love. Only through such consciousness does man yield his all into the keeping of God. And only in man thus yielded does God work the fulness of himself in grace and truth.

He who is keenly sensitive to the wrongs, and hurts, and ugliness that are in the world, and he who is tested as by fire because these are here in conflict with the right and beautiful, can testify to the necessity of this consciousness of God in foreordination and its foreknowledge as the only bulwark of faith.

This consciousness of God comes to us with definite clarity in the person and in the work of Jesus, the fulness of God made flesh. Only as we yield to all of God as manifested in Jesus, can we render to God the full reverence and faith that are His due, and contribute most to the consummation of His purpose.

IT WILL BITE AS LONG AS IT IS ABLE TO BARK

NOTHING SHORT OF UNLIMITED liquor ever did satisfy the liquor business.

It opposed the total abstinence movement and pleaded for moderation with sneers.

It opposed temperance instruction in the schools.

It systematically opposed every law imposing restraint upon the grosser evils of the saloon business; at every stage prating of personal liberty.

It opposed every form of local option, favoring instead what it had formerly opposed, namely, restrictive regulation.

It opposed public dispensaries which it now cites as models of propriety.

It opposed state prohibition, urging instead the divine right of local option.

It systematically haunted the borders of prohibition states with a flood of illicit traffic and a horde of law-breakers and bootleggers.

At no stage did it ever fail to violate the law, any law, wholesale. Now it raves at national prohibition, crying out hypocritically for license, local option, state prohibition, strict regulation, state-controlled dispensaries — for heaven's sake, anything it used to hate. And now as always it breeds bootlegging and all forms of lawlessness, and boasts of its patriotism in doing so.

Just one thing and only one thing will satisfy it. That thing is utter freedom to besot the nation for the profit which a base and inhuman avarice can get out of the business.

That is the monster we are dealing with, and there is no point of compromise at which it will consent to behave itself with moral decency. While it exists, the nation is in danger. — The Baptist.

“It is not the length but the strength of the prayer that counts.”

WHAT IS BEST

We do not know! Thou knowest!
As children in the dark
We lift our hearts, our hands to Thee,
And find a rest, an ark;
We trust Thee in our ignorance,
O Wise, O Good, O Strong;
And though the shades encompass us
We find Thee with our song.

We think we know! Thou knowest!
We dream and hope and plan,
And make mistakes, and sigh to know
How frail and weak is man;
But Thou, from the beginning,
Canst see the end of all,
We rest upon Thy knowledge,
Father, on whom we call.

We do not know the best for us,
And so we strive in vain;
And for our sowing often reap
A harvest dire of pain;
We fall and fall, and then at last
We cry to Thee for aid,
And only rest when Thou dost say,
“ ’Tis I, be not afraid.”

O God, we would be wiser yet,
And only pray: “Choose Thou.
Lead as one leads the little ones,
We are Thy children now,”
And day by day, and step by step,
We need Thy guiding hand;
Oh, let us cling to Thee until
We reach the safe homeland.

And then let days be fair or dark,
The journey short or long,
Our hearts will rest in comfort,
And we will sing our song;
Since Thou dost know, our ignorance
And weakness matter not,
We trust in Thy great love, O God,
And Thou dost choose our lot.

— Marrianna Farningham.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE GOSPEL FOR GENTILES AS WELL AS FOR JEWS

THE BELIEVING CENTURION

Monday, November 10 — Matthew 8:5-13.

"The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed."

THE CENTURION WAS A ROMAN CAPTAIN over a company of Roman soldiers. Though with the Savior very little, yet he learned what the Jews were slow to learn, that Jesus was Savior, not only of Jews and Israelites, but of all who turned to God through Him. The centurion's faith was beautifully evidenced by his approach to the Savior. He didn't ask for the Savior's presence; he asked only for the Savior's saving power.

The Master recognized not only the righteousness of the centurion's request, but also the righteousness of His own service to Gentiles. The Master's reply was, "Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee." Evidently the centurion fully believed, for "his servant was healed in the selfsame hour."

THE NINEVITES

Tuesday, November 11 — Jonah 4:6-11.

"Then said the Lord, Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night: and should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?" VV. 10, 11.

GRANTING THAT JONAH was a good sample of humanity as a whole, the conclusion is certain that God was justified in pouring out His blessing upon the people of Nineveh. Selfish Jonah rejoiced when the gourd sprang up to shade him from the noonday heat. He was grieved when the shade was removed. How much more should he have rejoiced when God's wisdom prepared a shade and blessing for the foreign Gentiles in Nineveh.

ALL OF ONE BLOOD

Wednesday, November 12 — Acts 17:22-28.

"And he hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek after the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us." VV. 26, 27.

THOUGH STRANGERS and foreigners to one another, all are known and acknowledged by the God of heaven. Jews and Gentiles were alike made by Him. Though God called Israel to be a chosen nation before Him, the call was not made in the sense of rejecting other nations, but rather in the sense of exalting the chosen nation. In no sense did God thus remove others from Him, rather, through the uplifting of Israel, He purposed to draw all nearer to himself.

PETER'S VISION

Thursday, November 13 — Acts 10:9-16.

"And the voice spake unto him again the second time, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." — V. 15.

"WHAT GOD HATH CLEANSED" is a word of deep meaning. He has provided One, His only begotten Son, that by Him all who believe may receive cleansing.

Peter was an ardent follower of our Master. He was also an avowed Hebrew of the Hebrews. He had failed to realize that Israel's position of exaltation did not in any way remove other nations farther from their Creator. Failing thus, he boasted himself of being more desirable by God than were Gentiles. In the lesson of this scripture, He came to learn that God is not partial to any man who accepts of His cleansing power in Christ Jesus.

Nor was this truth alone for Peter. It is of equal value to all people who will allow themselves faith in Christ.

PETER'S OBEDIENCE

Friday, November 14 — Acts 10:24-29.

"And he said unto them, Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean." — V. 28.

HOW MUCH BRIGHTER and larger must the world have appeared to Peter after he learned his lesson from God: "God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean". In sin all are unclean. Cleansed from sin by Christ our Lord, none are unclean. The cleansing is from God and His Son; it cannot be wrought by man upon his fellow. All are dependent upon Christ for it. Therefore no man is justified in looking upon a fellow man as common or unclean. For whenever the other properly approaches his Master his uncleanness is removed; his sins are forgiven; and the blessings of God through Christ await him.

PETER'S WORDS

Saturday, November 15 — Acts 10:34-43.

"Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons." V. 34.

IT IS NOT THE PERSON that God respects; it is the person's attitude before God. Every son and daughter of Adam were equally affected by the punishment placed upon Adam for his sin. Likewise every son and daughter of Adam were, to a degree, equally affected by God's righteousness placed upon Christ for obedience. In addition to this, each person is responsible for his own particular sins before God, or for his own particular obedience to God. The blessings for such obedience are provided through Christ, "that through his name, whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins."

THE JUDGMENT

(Continued from front page)

of their wrong, God himself, "delivered them" and "sold them" and "was against them". This expresses His punishment upon them. The punishment was because of Israel's disobedience to God, because of her rebellion and transgression.

The sixteenth verse continues with the thought, "Nevertheless the LORD raised up judges, which delivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them." In delivering them out of the hands of their spoilers the judges delivered (saved) them from the punishment placed upon them by God. It was all God's arrangement. He himself punished them for their wrongs. Then, after they repented, He raised up judges for the purpose of delivering them therefrom. The judges were then to continue over Israel.

The statement in Judges 2 seems to be a statement of principle. It refers to no specific instance. Coming to chapter 3 a specific instance is referred to which is in full harmony with the principle stated in chapter 2, "The children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD", v. 7; God "sold them into the hand of Cushanrishathaim", v. 8. "When the children of Israel cried unto the LORD, the LORD raised up a deliverer to the children of Israel, who delivered them", v. 9. Because of their repentance God raised up a judge. The first work of the judge was to deliver them from the punishment which God had placed over them. After having delivered them, the judge taught them and led them, "and the land had rest forty years", v. 11.

But this deliverance and this leading did not prohibit the people from afterward turning away from God. In fact, as soon as the judge had died, "the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the LORD", v. 12. Because of this God punished them. He punished them for the evil they then did, for the attitude which they maintained before Him. As a result, "the children of Israel served Eglon, the king of Moab, eighteen years", v. 14. "But when the children of Israel cried unto the Lord, the Lord raised them up a deliverer", v. 15. By him they were freed from their punishment. The punishment was discontinued. He did not sit in trial over them for the wrong which they had done before God punished them. God had attended to that and had punished them for their wrong. All that Ehud, the judge, did was to deliver them from that punishment and then to lead, teach, direct them in the ways of God so long as he remained judge.

Judges 4 continues with further illustrations of this same kind. The principle seems to be established, that God is able to punish His people for their wrong. He did not create judges to sit in trial upon the people, but rather He created judges to be their saviors, their deliverers, at such time as they in their repentance called unto the Lord for mercy.

Coming to the New Testament, we ask the question whether or not Christ is to be a Judge like unto them; whether or not His first work is that of deliverance which is to be followed up with instruction in the ways of God and with blessings upon those obeying and with chastenings upon those disobeying; whether or not Christ is to sit as a trial Judge, according to the meaning of the term as used politically today, to try the people for the things which they have done in long centuries past? It is necessary that the answers to these questions be postponed till another time, but let us here consider one phase of the answer.

"The wages of sin is death." Rom. 6:23. Death was God's punishment for sin. The gospel has been sent out into all the world. This gospel teaches the purposes and the goodnesses of God. By it certain ones are awakened from sin and turned toward the Father and toward His Son. Because of faith in God and in Christ, they voluntarily repent of the ways of man and turn imploringly to the ways of God. They turn to God's Son. They turn to Christ whom God has already lifted up as Savior and Leader. Sin is upon them. Sin's punishment both attends and, to the end, awaits them. Christ at once delivers them from condemnation and frees them unto service for himself. Paul expresses this thought beautifully in Rom. 6:4 by saying, "Even so we also should walk in newness of life".

Perhaps Col. 2:12 is even more expressive of this deliverance: "Ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God." This coming forth from condemnation, rising to a new life, following after the Savior even while we continue in mortality is indeed a wonderful deliverance. That deliverance is made effective in connection with man's repentance, calling upon God, turning to Him. From the moment of such deliverance, the individual Christian is under the guidance and instruction and watch care of Christ. Christ is the Judge. As Judge He has freed the individual from his Adamic condemnation, has delivered him to be, as it were, "a new creature" in Christ, 2 Cor. 5:17, and has brought him under the guidance of himself the Judge.

True, the punishment of sin is death. It was pronounced by God, first upon Adam, Gen. 2:17; 3:19; Rom. 5:12; James 1:15. It is not time yet for deliverance from that death, but it is time for deliverance from the condemnation of sin, Rom. 8:1-3. And because of such deliverance and of loyalty to the Master, all such are assured that when deliverance from death shall take place at the resurrection, they shall stand altogether approved before Christ, the Judge and before God, the Father.

Thus today the church is made up of those who have been delivered by Him who is Judge over all. They are delivered because of their repentance. Having been delivered, they are under the guidance of the Judge.

In a future article we may consider Christ as the One who shall judge the world.

THAT BLESSED HOPE

By Alice B. Curtis

God gives us hope, a living hope,
To cheer life's weary way,
And make the path the Christian walks,
Grow brighter day by day.
The blessed hope, the gospel hope,
For it Paul wore a chain,
For it he lived, and for it died,
The Christian's prize to gain.

Hope whispers of the blessings great
God has for us in store,
Joy, peace and love, eternal life,
And many, many more.
God gives the precious seeds of truth,
From which hope's flowers grow,
And her sweet blossoms deck the paths,
Alike of high and low.

The flowers of hope we cherish here
Time's changes will not blast,
And we their fruitage shall enjoy,
In Paradise at last.
Hope sets the eastern skies aglow,
With portents of the day,
When the millennium shall dawn,
And Christ on earth hold sway.

Christ's coming is the Christian's hope,
He comes, the Prince of peace,
And all that mars the present life,
In His blest reign shall cease.
Hope thou in God, and wear a crown
That Christ will give some day
To those who for His coming hope,
And watch, and work, and pray.

SALT IN CHARACTER

THERE IS A LOFTIER AMBITION than merely to stand high in the world. It is to stoop down and lift mankind a little higher. There is a nobler character than that which is merely incorruptible. It is the character which acts as an antidote and preventive of corruption.

Fearlessly to speak the words which bear witness to righteousness and truth and purity; patiently to do the deeds which strengthen virtue and kindle hope in your fellow men; generously to lend a hand to those who are trying to climb upward; faithfully to give your support and your personal help to the efforts which tend to elevate and purify the human life of the world — that is what it means to have salt in your character! — H. V. D.

THE PROPHECY OF ZECHARIAH

THE FUTURE FORETOLD

THAT THE HORSES AND CHARIOTS of the vision given to Zechariah in the sixth chapter are appropriate symbols of God's sovereignty over and defence of His people whom He had delivered from Babylon and settled again in their own land is illustrated in 2 Kings 6:8-12. The king of Syria had sent horses and chariots and men to take Elisha prisoner, because Elisha, being a prophet of God, was able to give warnings to the king of Israel of the movements of any invading army. Hence a quiet raid was planned to remove the prophet from Samaria to Syria. They came by night, and surrounded the city of Dothan, where Elisha was.

When Elisha's servant rose next morning and saw the city surrounded he was afraid. Elisha said to him, "Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." In demonstration of this truth, and in answer to Elisha's prayer, the young man was given a vision; "and behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." 2 Kings 6:16, 17.

Thus was God's protective power symbolized, for none of these horses and chariots of fire was actually used in Elisha's defence. Elisha was saved by a miraculous blinding of the invaders, and by strategy. For, when they could not see, he led them easily to the king of Israel in the midst of Samaria. The king would have despatched them at once, but Elisha pled for their lives, and they were provisioned and sent away to return to the king of Syria.

Thus God protected both Elisha and the kingdom of Israel from the Syrians. The Psalmist had written: "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." Psalm 34:7. The difference between Israel when they were obedient and the other nations was that the latter leaned on an arm of flesh, while the Israelites relied on the power of God. See 2 Chronicles 32:7, 8.

We also, although living in a different age and under a different covenant, do well to see by faith the horses and chariots of God arrayed in our defence when we are obedient to His will. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Romans 8:31; Psalm 118:6; Hebrews 13:6.

"The young man's heart was filled with fear
When he beheld the foe so near;
'Alas! what shall we do?' he cried;
His Master, strong in faith, replied:
'Then fear ye not, fresh courage take,
The God ye serve will ne'er forsake;
Though now unseen, around us lies
God's mighty army of the skies.'"

In verse 8 of Zechariah 6, we have the statement that God's Spirit had been quieted in the north country. Leeser's translation of the Hebrew reads: "have quieted (the indignation of) my spirit." God sought no more to punish the nations of the north for their ravages of the Holy Land.

That incident was now closed. Compare Judges 8:3, margin.

This vision was evidently intended as an assurance to the Jews that God would watch over them and protect them from outside interference and would also assist them in the maintenance of peace and order among themselves. And doubtless, as with other of the Lord's providential dealings, the length of this peace and security would rest largely with themselves, according to the terms of their covenant, that if they were obedient and walked in harmony with God they should be prospered in every way. Leviticus 26:40-45 shows God's mercy to be extended to them during and following their captivity in Babylon and their repentance for their sins.

The Jews by the favor of God were thus granted a great opportunity to turn over a new leaf, abandon former wrong practices, and worship Him in the new temple with sincerity and good will.

JOSHUA CROWNED

Joshua, the high priest, had been indicated in the vision of chapter 3 as the first of a line of rulers over Israel who should occupy the double office of High Priest and Ruler, in the latter respect taking the place of the kings who in the first place had been craved contrary to God's knowledge and protests concerning what would be best for them as a theocratic nation. 1 Samuel 8:1-22. It was desirable that Joshua be installed in this office in the presence of witnesses. This was accomplished after the manner described in verses 9-15 of Zechariah 6.

Who were Heldai, Tobijah, and Jedaiah, who had come from Babylon, who were called as witnesses? (Verse 10.) They were Jews who belonged to "the captivity," a name given to the Jews taken captive to Babylon and their descendants, many of whom remained resident there notwithstanding the opening of the holy land to resettlement. The description sounds as though they were recent arrivals and would likely be returning. They might have been merchants regularly traveling back and forth, and hence in a good position to tell the Jews still in Babylon what was taking place in the homeland. Or they might have belonged to the priestly tribe, and hence been in touch with Zechariah, who also belonged to that tribe. Nehemiah 12:4; Zechariah 1:1.

Some commentators think the name Helem, or Chelem, in verse 14, is another form of the name Heldai, or Cheldai, in verse 10. Hen, or Chen, verse 14, may be another form of Josiah, verse 10, or may be the name of another son of Zephaniah, at whose house these persons were asked to meet Zechariah the prophet.

Nothing is said as to the source of the gold and silver used to make the crowns, whether they were brought from Babylon by the three men named, as gifts to the temple and used by Zechariah for this purpose, or whether Zechariah provided the precious metals from other sources. Perhaps it is not material, but one would think it likely, seeing they were to be used for this very special and sacred purpose, that the metals had been offerings at the temple.

The object in having many crowns seems to be explained by verse 14, which states that three were to remain in the custody of the men come from Babylon who were witnesses of the crowning, and one in the custody of a son of Zephaniah, at whose house the crowning took place. Whether these four crowns were ultimately to be laid up as memorials at the temple, or whether other crowns had been made for that purpose, is not clear, since the total number of crowns made is not stated, nor is it clear whether an equal number of gold and of silver crowns were made, or whether each crown combined silver and gold in its manufacture. Young's translation and the Revised Version have "a crown" in verses 11 and 14, but Leeser's translation has "crowns," as in the Authorized Version.

For our part we see no objection to the crowning of Joshua the high priest with four crowns, one for Judah, one for Benjamin, one for the Levitical tribe, and one for a memorial to be laid up in the temple, or even to represent the four winds, or four quarters of the earth, thus being symbolical of the universal reign of the Coming One. Several crowns would not be out of harmony with the modern commemorative medals, of value later if required in establishing the event commemorated.

Moses was told to place in the ark of the tabernacle Aaron's rod that budded and a bowl of manna, miraculously preserved from corrupting, as memorials of God's dealings with Israel. Hebrews 9:4. To place in the temple one or more of the crowns set upon the head of Joshua would be useful evidence in later times that he had been thus placed by the Lord at the head of the kingdom as well as of the priesthood, that he was a type of "the Branch." Zechariah 6:12. — Selected.

OUR HIGH PRIEST

The work of Jesus as High Priest is not confined to the offering of the Sacrifice for man's redemption. He is not High Priest after the order of Aaron, each of whom died and was in turn succeeded by another. Our Lord is High Priest after the order of Melchisedec, to whom Abraham paid tithes, who was both a king and a priest, and to whom we have no record of a successor.

Our High Priest, like Melchisedec, is a King as well as a Priest and will have no successor. "Wherefore," says Hebrews 7:25, "he is able also to save them to the uttermost who come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." No one need fear to enter into the high calling, "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Hebrews 4:15.

Our Lord's supreme love for us did not cease with His death on the cross. He can be and is now most sympathetic and loving, and is ever willing to plead for our forgiveness before God, if we only confess our sins. 1 John 1:9; 2:1. — Selected.

YOUTH'S CHOICE

IT IS SAID that when Benjamin Franklin was Minister of the United States in France, he was spending an evening with a company of literary people, and the conversation drifted on to oriental life. He read to them the story of Ruth and they were so charmed with its beautiful simplicity that they eagerly asked in what book the story was found. They were very much surprised when Mr. Franklin told them it was a portion of sacred Scripture.

There is certainly a fascination about this story that calls forth our admiration. And although the characters lived in the remote past, the whole scene lies amidst the commonest walks of life, and its lessons are valuable and instructive.

Look at the story as recorded. Elimelech and Naomi, with their two sons, are compelled, by the famine in the land, to seek a new home. They, therefore, went into the country of Moab and dwelt there ten years. In the meantime, and it would appear soon after they settled, Elimelech died, and Naomi is left with her two sons. Then they marry two Moabitish maidens, and afterward they both die, and their young wives are left to the care of Naomi, both being childless.

In the midst of their grief, Naomi decides to return to her own land and kindred. Orpah and Ruth join her, and together they set out for the land of Judah. It would seem that Naomi had her doubts as to the wisdom of the two young women going with her into what would be to them a strange land, surrounded with a strange people, and strange religious customs.

How far they had gone I do not know, but having taken a judicious view of the material side of the subject, Naomi approaches them with a view of persuading them to return to their own people. At first they both decide to continue the journey with her, but after further persuasion Orpah decides to return. She therefore gives Naomi the farewell kiss and departs. "But Ruth clave unto her." Then Naomi pleads with Ruth alone, and entreats her to join her sister-in-law, and go back to her own people and their gods.

Now we have in Ruth's reply, and final decision, one of the most beautiful declarations of love and loyalty to be found in the old world history. Look at each sentence!

"And Ruth said, Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me."

Such a firm but loving declaration of loyalty silenced Naomi, and the two went together until they arrived at Bethlehem.

Ponder well the lessons of Ruth's choice, young people of today, and I venture to hope you will be profited thereby. Take the lesson of surrender. To give up the old life with its associations, and that which is dear, with no brighter prospect, is no easy matter.

I do not know where it took place. I have thought that probably they had reached the boundary line, ready to cross over; but be that as it may, there stands this brave Moabitish woman between the old life and the new. By a strong, courageous decision she surrenders all — the land of her birth, her family ties and affections — and resolves to cling to, and accompany, her grief-stricken mother-in-law, into the new life — unknown and untried. In that surrender she reveals a character of no mean quality. What a depth of nature! How deeply she is rooted in the rich soil of true humanity.

No wonder she is chosen and brought into the line of progenitors of the Lord Jesus Christ. Nothing shallow and superficial about her, like those we see around us today, and which the Great Teacher so truly described in the parable of the Sower, as lacking depth.

How many young women we see, whose whole being is on the surface, and who have no hidden springs welling up within them. They are trees decked with showy blossoms and plenty of foliage, but on which no golden fruit is seen. We have many Orpahs, that can give a cheap kiss of farewell rather than face an unknown morrow; but very few Ruths, who can sacrifice all on the altar for another's sake, not knowing what the result will be.

It calls forth all the strength of character to decide for the right, and to abide by that decision. O, that some who read these lines would step out and face the unknown with unflinching courage, prompted by a love and loyalty for the Lord Jesus Christ, as Ruth did for Naomi.

It is worth while to ask, What is the secret of such a surrender? Of course there are to be found secondary motives, but what is the great central motive? It is Love. Is there anything stronger than home and loved ones and earthly ambitions, that force us to toil, to struggle, to sacrifice all? I answer, with the apostle Paul, Yes! — "The love of Christ" is stronger — it "constraineth us." That love transforms us from the selfishness of our human nature, into the sacrifice ready for the altar. Nothing else can do it but the love of Christ for us.

Let your prayer be:

"Each moment draw from earth away
My heart, that lowly waits Thy call;
Speak to my inmost soul, and say,
I am thy Love, thy God, thy All.
To feel Thy power, to hear Thy voice,
To taste Thy love, be all my choice."

"THE WORD news aptly describes the world's happenings. Each letter stands for one of the points of the compass. N for North, E for East, W for West and S for South.

"The Gosel is the Good News for every part of the world. This will be fully realized when they come from the North and the South and the East and the West to sit down with Christ in the Kingdom of God when it is established upon the earth at the return of Christ."

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"OUT OF THE ABUNDANCE OF THE HEART THE MOUTH SPEAKETH." — MATTHEW 12:34.

BEREAN LEADERSHIP

THERE ARE MANY who are born leaders. They are used to taking the initiative wherever groups of people get together. When called upon to lead Berean classes they do so easily, instinctively. There are many of us for whom it is more difficult to direct the minds of the class. There is no one who is so poor a leader that he can not improve himself with a little thought and effort.

In order to be successful, a leader must have confidence in himself and gain the confidence of the class. This necessitates having studied the lesson well beforehand. This means more than having read over the lesson, looked up the references, and answered all the questions satisfactorily. In studying the lesson the one who intends to lead it should bear in mind his class and every individual member.

A good leader must know his class. Very often one can answer a question or discuss a topic much better than the rest because of his personal experiences or its direct application to himself. Unless a leader realizes this much of the interest is lost by simply going down the line and asking each a question in his turn.

The lesson books have been prepared merely as an outline to encourage further thought and study. Keeping this in mind we should not try to hasten through the lesson. Much more good can be accomplished by taking only one paragraph, studying it until its hidden truths are found and making the knowledge thus gained practical by applying it to our lives, than by covering many pages from which we gain no wisdom. However this does not mean that the class should wander off onto any subject that anyone happens to feel like talking about. It is the duty of the leader to see that all discussion is pertinent to the lesson under consideration; otherwise, the outlines are of no use.

A good leader does not do all the talking, nor does he allow one member to monopolize the floor. There are always those who are backward about speaking in public. There are those who think that their thoughts are not worth expressing. Unless the leader encourages them their very excellent ideas are often never known. If we wait for volunteers one or two will do all the talking and others will never be heard from.

Before we go further we might say a few words to the rest of the class as well as to the leader. It takes a great deal of courage for one who has had very little experience to speak up in class when there are older, more experienced members present. The thing that he says may sound queer to some of the others; it may have little or no value. If someone laughs at it, though, or throws it aside as ridiculous as is often done, that one may never venture another suggestion. Valuable members have been known to leave a class for that reason alone. Make everyone feel that he knows just as much and that his opinion is just as valuable as the one sitting next to him and the results will be much more gratifying.

It is not necessary to settle every point of discussion in class. We need not agree in every minor detail. If a leader can arouse sufficient interest to promote in each one a desire to study, he has led his lesson well. For if one hears several different viewpoints expressed, and then gives the question careful thought and diligent study he will undoubtedly be able to form for himself a satisfactory conclusion.

FOR ONE WEEK

"LIFE IS TOO SHORT to be wasted in saying mean things about other people. Did you ever go a whole week without speaking unkindly to or about anybody? It isn't easy. It's astonishing the number of harsh things we say without actually meaning to make others uncomfortable.

"Try to take a generous view of other people's actions; even if you can't bring yourself to think kindly, at least hold your tongue. It is nearly all a matter of habit. You get in the way of making spiteful remarks without realizing how much harm it does you.

"Just try the scheme of refraining from unkind criticism. Try it for a week, anyway. It can't hurt you and it may do you a world of good."

A REORGANIZED CLASS

The Bereans of Oregon, Illinois, have recently reorganized their society under new leadership, and they are going forward with renewed zeal and enthusiasm. They are studying book number two. These Bereans are also sponsors for the social activities of the church. A full report of this organization will be given next week.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

"And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these things have I observed from my youth."

WE ALL WANT TO HAVE A PLACE in God's kingdom. What must we do to receive such a part? Almost similar was the question a rich young man asked of Jesus.

One day Jesus was walking along the way when a young man ran up to Him, knelt at His feet and asked, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" He seemed very much in earnest and as though he truly desired to become a follower of Jesus.

Jesus replied, "Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God." Then Jesus continued, "Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother."

The young man answered, "Yes, Master, I have observed these commandments all my life."

Jesus looked at him and loved him. He then said, "There is only one thing you lack. You have too many earthly treasures. Go sell your goods, and give to the poor and then you shall have treasure in heaven, and come, take up the cross, and follow me."

But the young man loved his wealth, enjoyed his comfort, and thought of what it would mean to give it all up for hardships and suffering. It all meant so much to him that he could not choose the life of those who followed Jesus. Instead, he became very sad, and went back to his old life.

You see he was thinking only of the present instead of the future life, not appreciating how much more life eternal meant, and that it cannot be bought with money.

Jesus looked around and then said to His disciples, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!" And when the disciples seemed astonished, He added, "Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God."

"Well, who can be saved then?" asked the disciples.

Jesus answered, "With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible."

Did Jesus say it was wrong to have riches? Not if they are rightly used, but some treasure friendship, social life and position like the young man did his riches. If one has riches, what an opportunity for helping those less fortunate!

Think! Are we using what we have to help others?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Mark 10:23-31 and 1 Timothy 6:3-10.
2. Learn second part of Mark 10:24.
3. Copy: The Rich Young Ruler loved comfort and ease more than eternal life.

THANKFULNESS

THANKSGIVING

We're thankful on Thanksgiving Day
For peace and plenty, rest and play;
For all the things that God will give
And the pleasant life we live.

We're thankful to our very heart
That all of us can do our part;
The God above is very kind;
He enriches our body and our mind.
Yes, we're thankful for everything
Given to us by God our King.

— Frank Daniels Marne, ten years old.

John Martin Magazine.

ALMOST REASON

Some time since, a pair of sparrows, which had built in the thatch roof of a house, in England, were observed to continue their regular visits to the nest, long after the time when the young birds take flight.

This unusual circumstance continued throughout the year, and, in the winter, the gentleman who had all along observed them, determined to investigate the cause.

He therefore mounted a ladder, and found one of the young ones detained a prisoner by means of a string of worsted which formed a part of the nest, it having become accidentally twisted around the leg. Being thus incapacitated from procuring its own sustenance, it had been fed by the continued exertion of its parents. — Selected.

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Matthew 1:5 and all of Ruth.
2. Learn Ruth 1:16-17.
3. Make map showing Bethlehem and Moab.
4. Make outline of story of Ruth.
5. Copy — Ruth — Moabitess — daughter-in-law of Naomi, became wife of Boaz — mother of Obed — great-grandmother of king David. (Faith, love, courage.)

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON VII. — November 16, 1930

THE BELIEVING CENTURION

Matthew 8:5-13

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 60:1-9

GOLDEN TEXT

And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God. — Luke 13:29.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Gospel Door Opened to All People.

Basic Truth. "Yea all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him." — Psa. 72:11.

Outline. I. The Open Door of Faith. II. Overcoming Racial Prejudice. III. The Gospel for All Creatures.

I. The Open Door of Faith. The limitations of God's blessings to the house of Israel and to those who became naturalized thereto, pertained to God's nation under Moses, not to the gospel of salvation. Before Israel God drove the nations out of Palestine — in Christ God calls in the nations. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." — Mark 16:15. I. e., to creatures of every race and nation, not necessarily to each individual creature. "God so loved the world," not just Israel, "that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever" — of all the world, Jew and Gentile — "believeth" might be saved, John 3:16.

Whosoever Will May Come. That the gospel door is open to whoever chooses to enter thereinto is clearly taught in Scripture. John 3:16, declares that God "gave his only begotten Son" in order that "whosoever believeth in him should" "have everlasting life." Two things are outstanding in this scripture. First, that God opened the door to whosoever would choose to enter. Second, that the responsibility for entering is placed upon the individual. These truths are emphasized by the doings of the apostles as taught in the Acts. In Acts 2 Peter proclaimed the gospel to thousands. Each one was not only at liberty, but was invited to accept the gospel overtures. Those who did were enrolled in the church. Peter, Paul and others journeyed from place to place preaching the gospel, receiving and baptizing those who chose to enter by faith in Christ because of the gospel. Gentiles and Jews, men and women, of Asia and Europe were, by belief in Christ, accepted by these inspired men.

II. Overcoming Racial Prejudice. Racial prejudices seem to be inborn in the human nature. It is one of the difficult tasks of life to overcome them. The Jewish people who so opposed Christ's receiving Gentiles is but an example. The apostles were equally prejudiced.

Peter was granted a vision of a sheet in which were all manner of four-footed beasts and creeping things being let down from heaven. Acts 10. He was, in the vision, commanded to "arise, slay and eat." Many of these beasts were, under the instruction of the Mosaic law, unclean. Peter's answer was, "Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean." V. 14. Immediately a voice spoke to Peter saying, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."

The same day Peter, a Jew, was sent for to go to Cornelius, a Gentile, and to preach the gospel of Christ unto him. Peter complied, for, v. 28, "God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean." Peter was by the Father cured of his racial prejudice against Gentiles. From that time forward he proclaimed the gospel freely to all men. At first he was "astonished" "because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost."

The Father having thus shown Peter that His gifts are alike unto all races, neither Peter nor those following can, in loyalty to God, establish racial difference as determining the proclamation of the gospel.

III. The Gospel for All Creatures. God loves the-world. John 3:16. Christ gave himself for the sins of the world. 1 John 2:2. The gospel "is the power of God unto salvation." Rom. 1:16. The door of salvation was by God opened because of God's love for man and because of man's utter inability in his own strength to rise unto salvation. Through a life of intense experiences and test Jesus proved himself to God and man as loyal and faithful in every particular unto His Father. The foremost service required of Him was that He would redeem, save and rule believing man. To this He consecrated himself even unto death.

The gospel of Jesus Christ reveals this love of God, this loyalty of Christ together with His love for man as also the victory of the Savior in resurrection and ascension. It further declares that whosoever believeth in this victorious Christ shall be saved. To this end "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation."

It is for all creatures. The Israelite is not God's specially gospel-chosen person. God's joy would be that all men would be saved. 1 Tim. 2:4. He is no respecter of persons. His offer is made to all. The Savior's death was equally effective unto all. The crux of the whole question now rests upon the individual — WILL HE BELIEVE?

As you and I are a part of God's world the question comes straight to us — WILL YOU BELIEVE? WILL I BELIEVE? God has opened the door, the Master points it out to us, bids us enter, yes, has opened and smoothed the way leading up to the door. The next move is yours and mine. Before God moves again with reference to us, we as individuals, must move toward Him. After we shall have moved, then God in proper time through His Son will render further valuable assistance.

The door is open. Let us move into it.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Burden Bearer: Christ is truly a Burden Bearer. He is touched with the feelings of our infirmities. Life would be much sweeter for the individual if he would but heed His call, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Christ is willing to do for the individual what the individual is willing to have Him do. Name some of the burdens of life, which Christ is willing and can help a person to bear.

Faith: Faith brings the rewards; it compensates a hundredfold; it inspires the individual and causes others who see its fruit to desire its inspiration. The righteousness of God is revealed from "faith to faith." Class can profitably discuss type and kind of faith that reveals the "righteousness of God."

Coming Joy: Our lesson today reveals a "day" when the ancient worthies, following resurrection, are to inherit the kingdom of God and others are to come from the east and west and sit down IN the kingdom. Emphasize different ways in which this joy is to be realized.

Blackboard Sermonette:

Joy

- cannot be kept to self;
- sometimes comes through sorrow;
- from hope helps to bear the crosses;
- from the natural cannot equal joy from the spiritual;
- tempers the ill winds that blow against us. — C. E. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic. The Centurion's Faith.

A bit of nice reasoning is beneath the faith expressed by the Gentile centurion. Here was a man of authority, whose word was obeyed by servants without his personal presence. The centurion knew that Jesus was a man of authority much greater than his own. How simple to reason that since the lesser authority's word is carried out without the physical presence of the authority, much more would the greater Authority's word be carried out without His physical presence.

The centurion reasoned from things tangible to the physical senses and gained an insight into things intangible to the physical senses. Jesus used the same reasoning to give man a conception of the Father. What man among you would give a stone? Consider the lilies of the field, etc.

Faith is that thinking which bridges the gap between the visible, physical world and the invisible, spiritual world. Faith-thinking is not devoid of reasoning. Rather, faith is the flower of reasoning, refined and balanced by love. — A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

OUR THANKSGIVING

The giving of thanks is expressive in more ways than one. By the invalid upon the bed, thanks can be stated earnestly and expressively by word of mouth. By the earnest, strong, energetic young man or young woman, true thanksgiving is expressed by word of mouth when confirmed by actions and deeds in accordance therewith.

Our government will call upon the citizens of the nation to pause for a day to express thanks to our Father in heaven. As Christians we are again soliciting that we shall express thanks as strong, robust servants of Christ, both by word of mouth and by deed and action.

Again we ask in behalf of our Father and His Son that Herald readers will to the greatest extent possible, mail a Thanksgiving contribution for the promotion of our gospel work. We have been making this a yearly custom for some years past and urge that it may be kept up for years to come. Let us make Thanksgiving for 1930 a Thanksgiving of earnest work, strengthened by abundant means with which to carry the work far afield.

F. L. Austin, Secretary for National Bible Institution.

Sr. Franklin Moore of Ransomville, New York, is in Memorial Hospital at Niagara Falls under the physician's observation. We pray God's blessings to attend her.

Word has just come that Sr. Gideon Logan of Edwardsburg, Michigan, will probably undergo an operation for removal of goitre. Our prayers are requested in her behalf. Let us remember her and others at the throne of grace.

We learn that Sr. Long of the Holbrook, Nebraska, church is in the hospital that the physicians may the better study her condition. We pray that her sickness may be of short duration and that her recovery to health may be speedy.

Hallowe'en day was made pleasant to the people of Golden Rule Home by little tokens from Sr. Leila Whitehead of Chicago, who is always busy doing those little things which mean so much to others. It was made doubly pleasant to the people of the Home by like little tokens also from Sr. Jackson and others.

A letter from Bro. Judd, 111 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ontario, states that while he is improving nicely from the injury of a recently crushed foot, yet he is suffering no little pain. His physician tells him that practically every bone in his foot was crushed when he was run down on the street by an auto.

"Will have to send this by air mail or it will not get there by November 1. Enclosed please find check." The above extract shows the importance which Bro. and Sr. Enos Elton of Tustin, Calif., place upon the work of the N. B. I. They believe in remitting their intentions to the gospel work as promptly as they would take care of any other financial matter.

FROM BRUMFIELD, KENTUCKY

On October 14 Bro. J. H. Anderson, with his daughter, Maggie, and son, Harold, and Sr. Thomas of Michigantown, Indiana, on their way to the Carolinas, stopped over and gave the Brumfield church a sermon. Sr. Amy Weaver was present at this service and was a visitor of the writer from Monday night until Saturday.

On Bro. Anderson's return trip he gave another sermon which was greeted by a good sized audience. Our brother, Ben Carpenter, of Oregon, Illinois, was present at this service, and is now having a week's vacation in his old Kentucky home, wandering over the hills where he spent his boyhood days.

We appreciate visitors from other states and communities. Thank you! Call again.
Quiney L. Carpenter.

A THANKSGIVING ISSUE

The issue of The Restitution Herald of November 25th will be a Thanksgiving issue. In it we would like to publish the greatest possible number of short, earnest statements of praise and thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father for His wonderful goodness unto the children of men throughout this, another year. We solicit such statements from all of our readers and ask that they reach us before November 20. Make them short so that we can get the largest possible number into the Thanksgiving issue.

F. L. Austin, Editor.

REASON FOR GRATITUDE

The church at Oregon, Illinois, has reason to be humbly grateful to our heavenly Father for the unmeasured blessings which He has been pouring out to us. Beginning with Rally Day, October 12, a very noticeable spiritual uplift has been present in all departments.

In the Sunday School, an increase has been made in every class, both in new membership and in regularity of attendance. On Sunday, November 2, 40 members were cited as having been present every Sunday in October, and a small award was given those of the primary department.

The church services have also displayed an added interest, showing a great increase in attendance by members and non-members. An especially appreciated feature is the music, with Sr. Rogers at the organ and Sr. Winfrey at the piano. These two are now organizing a junior choir which will add to our services. The chorus of male voices is also enjoyed by all. Flowers are provided each Sunday in turn by members, both resident and non-resident, which add beauty to the services.

Our Pastor, Bro. Austin, is most grateful to the heavenly Father for the spirit of cooperation manifested and for the blessings which have been showered upon us by the Giver of all good.

DIXON ACTIVITIES

The Church of God at Dixon, Illinois, had a very successful day, Sunday, October 26. There were sixty happy and wide-awake folks at Sunday School. A marked increase in attendance and interest has been noted during the past several weeks.

Over forty people listened to Bro. Conner's very interesting and instructive sermon at the morning service. Special music by the senior choir was much enjoyed.

In the evening there was an attendance of fifty-two to listen to another wonderful sermon, and the junior choir helped very much to add to the enjoyment of the occasion.

God has surely blessed us in many, many ways, and we are ever ready to sing praises unto Him.
Grace Drew, Sec.

On Friday, October 24 the Ladies Aid Society at Dixon, met at the home of Mrs. Charles Miller. As usual the ladies were busy making the different articles which will be on sale November 21 and 22 in the store building formerly occupied by the Public Drug Co.

Friday, October 31, the society was invited to meet at the home of Mrs. Lester Payne. A pleasant surprise greeted the ladies at noon, when they were invited to the dining room to partake of a dinner prepared by the hostess, for they were expecting only sandwiches and coffee. The decorations were in keeping with Halloween.

It may be of interest to some to know that these busy workers now have completed one hundred aprons, many pairs of pillow cases, linen towels, fancy-work and other novelties. We trust that God will guide us in this work.
Jessie Ford, Sec.

The Little Sunbeams' Class met on November 1, in the church basement for a Halloween party. Pumpkins, black cats, witches, etc., were the decorations used. The little folks were entertained with Halloween games and stunts. After the games, delicious refreshments were served and the children departed for their homes after a merry afternoon.
Grace Drew, Sec.

AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Bro. Paul M. Hatch will be with the brethren at Ripley next Saturday evening and Sunday, November 8 and 9. All those living in the vicinity are invited to attend these meetings. Sunday School is held every Sunday morning at ten o'clock. Preaching services come on every second Saturday evening and Sunday of the month.

MEETINGS AT ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

Beginning with Tuesday evening, November 11, Bro. Paul Hatch will conduct a series of meetings at the church at Eldorado, to continue for ten days or more. Your attendance at these services will be of especial encouragement to the speaker and the brethren at that place. So if all those living within a distance making it possible to attend, will do so we feel sure it will result in much good to all in the furtherance of God's work.

Sisters Evelyn Austin and Leila Whitehead, with their friend, Mrs. Johnson, of Chicago, spent the past week end at Oregon. Sr. Woodward returned home with them.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

When I reach the goal it will be because you — a thousand of you — have helped me along. And when that goal has been reached and the Gospel work which I am to do is done, it will not be I who has done it, but you, with a small portion of what the Giver of All has given to each one.

Remember! I progress only so far as I am pushed by YOU!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

FROM BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Word comes from Blair, Nebraska, that Sr. Dorothy Krogh, who was a member of the Bible Training Class last year, spoke for the congregation there on Sunday morning, October 26. She remained at home this year to assist her mother and also to help with the church work there and they appreciate her efforts very much. A new roof has lately been added to the church building.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Our fourth anniversary, which was celebrated on Sunday, October 26, was an overwhelming success in every way. The hearts of all were full as the results of the day continued to unfold. The Sunday School numbered in its classes 207 people without counting some visitors, so it was practically equal to Rally Day itself. The preaching services were even more largely attended than Rally Day, the little auditorium being full morning, afternoon and night.

About one hundred and thirty were served dinner in the basement, and it was a real family reunion in many ways. The large birthday cake, measuring some twenty inches long, fourteen inches wide and seven high, made by Sr. Woodburn, was the most beautiful one the writer ever saw.

At the afternoon service a birthday offering was taken toward the church debt. The Dorcas Society made a donation, and then presented a pair of pants, under the multitudinous patches of which was found almost fifty dollars. The Sunday School, Berean Society and some Sunday School classes also made contributions, and as a result two hundred dollars and interest were paid on the church debt, bringing the total down to $400.00 now.

The most encouraging part of laboring with this kind of a group of people is that they are willing to make almost any sacrifice of time or effort or of their limited means to see that the cause is advanced. If we were not willing to make these same sacrifices with them, we would feel unworthy of the place we are occupying.

We all read with interest the report from Cleveland in The Herald of October 21, and we congratulate them on their record of regularity of attendance.

F. E. Siple, pastor.

INDIANA REPORT FOR OCTOBER

Sermons: Pleasant View, 7; Rensselaer, 2; Hillisburg, 2; Brumfield, Ky., 2; Guthrie Grove, S. C., 4; Welcome, S. C., 1; Dana, N. C., 5.

Money received in Indiana: Pleasant View, $34.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Hillisburg, $22.00; Sr. Edith Mann, $2.50. Expense: $13.50.

Note: After paying expense of a special meeting the Pleasant View church and friends of the truth made us a present of $17.00, for which we are thankful. In our last visit south we found the interest still good. They had just received the tract on our sermon on "The Rich Man and Lazarus". About four hundred copies were sold in the first two weeks. They sell at five cents per copy.

Another tract will soon be out on "Present Conditions — the Cause and the Remedy as Outlined in the Bible." This sermon was taken down by Sr. Mabel Edney, Dana, North Carolina. Write her or the writer, Michigantown, Indiana, for copies. They will sell for about ten cents, the money to be used to pay for other tracts. Bro. J. H. Stepp, Dana, North Carolina, has charge of this work.

J. H. Anderson.

DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

The following states have added new members to the Dollar-A-Month Club: Michigan, 1; Louisiana, 3; Kentucky, 1; Illinois, 1; Oregon, 2; New York, 1.

Our first "recruit" from Kentucky comes in the person of Sr. Amy Weaver, who has lately joined our Club. She is our genial cook at General Conference, known to many of us.

MRS. WARREN J. BURCH

Margaret Lucinda Tye was born, July 9, 1861, to Peter and Margaret Jane Tye in Coschocton county, Ohio. She was one of eleven children of which six survive to mourn their loss: William, Mrs. Sarah Four, Mrs. Malinda Fenton and Mrs. George Ives of Mishawaka; Oliver and Mrs. Harry Davis of South Bend.

She was married to David Snyder on October 6, 1878, to which union were born four children, one of whom survives, Wm. A. Snyder of Chicago. On December 15, 1906 she was united in marriage to Warren J. Burch of Tyner, Indiana, who, together with two stepsons, Chester and Lawrence, and a host of other relatives and friends survives.

She was baptized about twenty years ago by Elder D. E. VanVactor and was a member of the North Salem Church of God. She was a firm believer in the doctrines concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus the Christ and fell asleep on October 27, 1930, with the blessed hope of life through a resurrection of the dead.

Interment was made in the Tyner cemetery following services by Bro. F. L. Austin, in the Christian Church nearby.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." — Matt. 16:16.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Russell Shearer; Hora Donahower; Rufus Curtis; Mrs. E. C. Lakin; A. C. Boyer; Miss S. H. Michell; J. E. Miller; Mrs. Amy Weaver; Frank C. Dielman; W. A. Hicks; Ferne Moore; B. F. Cook; Mrs. Wm. McWilliams; Mrs. Louise McRoberts; Wm. H. Boyer; C. W. Dean; Mrs. Viola Kuhns; Mrs. Allan Claypool; Mattie Benjamin; Mrs. Terese Martindale; Enos E. Elton; Ethel Davenport; Lawrence Howell; Miss Mary Doll; Mrs. Emma Upton; Grover Gordon; Mrs. Thomas Welton; Mrs. W. H. Holland.

THE NEW TESTAMENT

By Lyman Booth

HAVING COMMENTED BRIEFLY upon each of the books of the Old Testament, we now pass on to the consideration of those of the New. We omit, for the present, the thirteen divisions of the Apocrypha, further than to state that, though considered by many of the most eminent students of ancient literature as not belonging to the Sacred Canon and therefore forming no part of the Holy Scriptures, however true their conclusions may be, all will admit that they contain much good and instructive reading, whether divinely inspired or appropriated from the writings of men who wrote as they were directed by the Holy Spirit.

The Church, from earliest antiquity, has called this part of the Scriptures on which we now enter, "The New Testament," or "The New Covenant," because the original may be translated either way. Sometimes it signifies a stipulation or contract between two or more parties. It is called the New Testament to distinguish it from those Scriptures which were written before our Lord's advent, and to which He so frequently referred. Those were given under what is commonly called the Old Dispensation; these under the New and better dispensation.

The Mosaic Law, the national covenant made with Israel and the Levitical priesthood, formed, as some have been pleased to call it, an edition of both the covenant of works and the covenant of grace. But at the coming of Christ, the end being answered, it was seemingly set aside. The Christian dispensation, containing clearer light and greater encouragement, and not being attended by burdensome ceremonies, or clouded with types and shadows, or restricted to any country or nation, formed a new edition of the covenant of grace. This dispensation is called the "New Covenant of Grace," or the "New Testament," with reference to the death of Christ, the Testator.

The history contained in this part of the Scriptures is an exact counterpart of the prophecies, promises and types of the Old, in respect to its grand subject, the great Redeemer, His kingdom, and the salvation of the world. An enlightened student of the Old Testament Scriptures before the coming of Christ must have expected such events and changes as the New records. The reason that the Jews and the apostles in particular, for a time, did not expect such events and changes in the form in which they occurred, is that their understanding was not opened to comprehend the Scriptures. This is manifestly clear to one who devotes a careful and constant examination of the Sacred Volume, diligently comparing one part with another.

While it is possible and perhaps not very difficult to form a connected narrative of all the main outlines of the history contained in the New Testament from the records of the Old, it is evident that such was rarely, if ever, done. The person of the Redeemer, as Emanuel, His descent in human nature from Judah and from David, His miraculous conception, His humble birth at Bethlehem, His character, miracles and doctrine, the reception given Him by His countrymen, the unparalleled contempt and enmity shown Him; the manner and circumstances of His death and burial even to the very minute details, the end and design of His suffering on the cross, His resurrection and ascension, the pouring out of the Holy Spirit, the conversion of multitudes, the wilful and obstinate unbelief and opposition of the Jewish nation, the severe judgment of God on them for these crimes, the destruction of Jerusalem, the temple, the calling of the Gentiles, and we may say the state of the Church during all the intervening years till the consummation of all things, all these might be related in the words of the prophets by substituting the past for the future tense in some instances.

Indeed, to a very marked degree the two divisions of Scripture agree, confirming and illustrating each other. It is worthy of especial remark that the writers of the New Testament always quote and refer to the Old as being divinely inspired or as "the oracles of God," or as "the scriptures that cannot be broken;" and never, as if they supposed any part to be the words of uninspired men. The New Testament does not make its claim to divine revelation wholly on the strength of the Old and the evidences by which it is confirmed. While Christ and His apostles frequently appealed to the ancient scriptures and showed that "thus it was written and thus it must be," they confirmed their teachings and combated the prejudices of their hearers by the most undeniable miracles, wrought in open daylight and before vast multitudes of astonished people.

It is utterly inconceivable that Christianity could have made its way in the world by the obscure men who proclaimed it against the bitter opposition made to it, except it had been thus confirmed, and that beyond the possibility of a doubt.

The prophecies of our Lord and His apostles, interspersed through the books of the different writers of the New Testament, which have been fulfilled during the intervening centuries, form a clear and undeniable demonstration of their divine authority. A variety of other proofs, both external and internal, might be given, but a mere hint here will suffice to show that the New Testament stands on its own basis, and not upon the grounds of the Old, as some contend.

The writers of the New Testament speak of themselves and of each other as divinely inspired. See Rom. 10:14-17; 16:25, 26; 1 Cor. 1:21; 2:7-10; Eph. 3:3-5; 1 Thess. 2:13; 2 Peter 2:15, 16; 1 John 4:6. If the New Testament writers were not divinely inspired where is our standard of faith and practice? How do we know what the doctrine of Christianity was? How may we distinguish it from all false doctrine? If any person should be inclined to think that he could impose a claim upon the people of being divinely inspired and that it is not necessary to produce any proof of his inspiration, let him first consider whether or not the making of a simple claim to divine inspiration would not be exposing his veracity to impeachment and render him unworthy of credit in all other matters.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 11, 1930

NUMBER 6

The Day of Reckoning Is at Hand

By Samuel E. Haney

"But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer." — 1 Peter 4:7.

THE GRAVE IMPORTANCE of sobriety (cool headedness) in the Christian's warfare is recognized when we consider the extent to which the natural man is lacking in steadiness of purpose, perseverance, self-restraint and chastity, hence, the Spirit's warning through the apostles. Let us therefore read and meditate upon the admonition, for this is indispensable in our day — "the end of all things".

"Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober ('keep cool', Moffatt), and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 1:13.

"Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." 1 Peter 5:8. Moffatt's version reads, "Keep cool, keep awake. Your enemy the devil prowls like a roaring lion, looking out for someone to devour."

"But speak thou the things which befit the sound doctrine: that aged men be temperate, grave, sober minded, sound in faith, in love, in patience: that aged women likewise be reverent in demeanor, not slanderers nor enslaved to much wine, teachers of that which is good; that they may train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed." Titus 2:1-5, R. V.

Inebriety (drunkenness) whether literal or figurative is the reverse of literal or figurative sobriety. In other words, Babylon's "wine" (Rev. 18:3) has a more ill and lasting effect on the spiritual, mental and moral phases of man than has the worse product that bootleggers turn out. And the effect on the intellect of both the acute and obtuse, the cultured and illiterate is the same — simply drunk, displaying a deficiency of normal control of faculties, ceasing to be grave and thoughtful.

This condition is as prevalent in Christendom as it is in heathendom. But the heathen, not having access to God's Word, is excusable, while the professing Christian possessing a functional mind hasn't a justifiable plea for even clemency. It is dangerous to trifle with God's Word: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:7, 8. While this drunken state of Christendom, to say nothing of avowed heathendom, is manifest in every functional phase of life — religion, society, politics, business and finance — and the devil's decoction is of many flavors, being prepared to satisfy the most fastidious, an individual person is occasionally seen standing aloof from its delirious effect.

A glance into the religious world is like looking into a kaleidoscope: the slightest move of the instrument changing the whole aspect, notwithstanding Paul's advice found in 1 Cor. 1:10 and Phil. 2:14: "Brothers, for the sake of our Lord Jesus Christ I beg of you to drop these party-cries. There must be no cliques among you; you must regain your common temper and attitude. In all that you do, avoid grumbling and disputing." Moffatt. The writer has heard it said from the platform by laymen, "You can become partly saved in this age and afterwards finish up in the millennium." "You can have your choice between being an 'overcomer' and reigning with Christ, or get 'everlasting life' in the next age." "God's plan for the present age doesn't appeal to my wife — she believes she can make wonderful progress under King Jesus."

How absurd! when we consider the precise order of all God's works! It is inspiring to try envisaging the incomprehensible glory of the next age — wonderful incentive! But beyond this it is none of our concern, at present. The Christian's chief business NOW is to make his calling and election sure, and to help others before death or the re-

(Continued on page 90)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

READERS OF THE HERALD will be distressed to learn that the Editor, our beloved Bro. Austin, is ill, being confined to his bed at his home, 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Illinois. We know that the prayers of all will ascend to our heavenly Father that he may be returned to health and vigor and that he may be spared many more years to proclaim the gospel by voice and pen and by the unspoken example of his life.

THE LORD IS OUR STRENGTH

"For the battle is not yours, but God's."—2 Chron. 20:15.

THE MOABITES, THE AMMONITES and others had come up against Judah to battle. Word was brought to the king, Jehoshaphat, and he "feared, and set himself to seek the Lord."

In his distress their king implored God's aid in overpowering the enemy in these words, "O our God, wilt thou not judge them? for we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do: but our eyes are upon thee." 2 Chron. 20:12.

The reassuring voice of Jehovah came back through the prophet Jahaziel, "Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours, but God's. Ye shall not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, stand ye still, and see the salvation of the Lord."

The same God, who had battled for them countless times before, would once more array himself on their side. In the morning when they went forth to fight, their king exhorted them to "believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established."

NOT YOURS, BUT GOD'S

How many times in life does the Christian come to just such a place as this! Confronted by difficulties that he in his own puny strength cannot surmount, hemmed in by obstacles greater than he had ever foreseen, he comes to realize that of himself he can do nothing.

Incompetent and despairing, he is about to yield. Then does the reassuring voice of his Father come to him, bidding him to remember that "the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous and his ears are open unto their prayers." 1 Peter 3:12.

When we come to realize our own weakness, our inability to conquer sin or to go forward in Christian service because of certain hindrances in our path, as Jehovah bade the Israelites, so the Captain of our salvation bids us

STAND YE STILL

If we can come to trust Him so perfectly that we are willing to stand still, then it is that we will "see the salvation of the Lord." He bids us, "Fear not, nor be dismayed; . . . for the Lord will be with you." 2 Chron. 20:17.

In these troublous days, when the affairs of nations, as well as individuals, are beset with difficulties and disasters, how wonderfully blessed are those who put their complete dependence upon God! When events of such nature come thick and fast, bewildering His faithful followers so that they know not what to do, let us never forget to implore that aid He is so willing to give and to say,

OUR EYES ARE UPON THEE

He will not fail to answer when we call upon Him, for did He not promise, "My lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail"? Psalm 89:33.

When we experience just such times in our lives that He does come to our aid and when we realize He has helped us to overcome, let us not forget to thank Him and to say, as did Judah,

"Praise the Lord; for his mercy endureth for ever."

— M. G.

THE POWER OF INTERCESSION

The weary ones had rest, the sick had joy that day,

And wondered how —

The plowman singing at his work had prayed,

"God help them now."

Alone in foreign lands, they wondered how

Their feeble words had power —

At home the Christians, two or three, had met

To pray an hour.

So we are always wondering, wondering long,

Because we do not see

Some one, unknown perhaps, and far away,

On bended knee. — Selected.

DEATH AND HELL

By C. W. Dean

THE LAKE OF FIRE

THE PHRASE, "the lake of fire", occurs five times in the scroll of the Revelation, or the Unveiling, and in only two of these occurrences is there said to be consciousness and torment. With this distinction emphasized by the Holy Spirit, it will be wisdom to give careful study to this subject. For the wild beast, false prophet and Satan, the lake of fire is eonian torment. Rev. 19:20; 20:10. For irreverent mankind, those not found written in the book of life, it is the second death. Rev. 20:14-15; 21:8.

In these scriptures (Rev. 19:20 and 20:10) we find that three individuals, Satan, the beast, and false prophet, who never come before the "great white throne judgment", are the only ones said to be tormented for the eons of the eons, or the ages of the ages, in the lake of fire. The beast and the false prophet are superhuman, the minions of Satan, for Satan gives them all their power and authority. The beast had been wounded unto death, and was recalled to life. Rev. 13:3. The false prophet was endowed with power to give spirit to the image of the beast. Rev. 13:11-15. This is scriptural evidence that they possess vitality unknown to other mortals, which is secured by lawlessly yielding themselves to Satan. This superhuman, miraculous vitality, by which they are enabled to command the wondering worship of mankind, becomes the cause of the severest and longest punishment in the Scriptures. They are taken and cast into the fiery lake alive, and exist in its torment for the eons of the eons, that is, until the consummation, when death is abolished.

It is the height of folly to insist and teach that this eonian torment is to be applied to mankind, that it is to be the portion or doom of all unbelievers, even infants, and the heathen. All will be judged and paid their due according to the just judgment of God. But to apply eternal, or everlasting, or eonian torment to mortal mankind is simply forcing man-made doctrines into the Word of God. Eonian bonds of gloom in "tartarus" is applied to superhuman beings, "Angels". Eonian torment in the "lake of fire" is applied to superhuman beings. But here, Rev. 20:14-15 and 21:8, we learn by a discriminating study of the Scriptures, the doom of those not found written in the book of life. Let us read these verses.

These scriptures tell us that, after the great and small have been judged before the great white throne judgment and paid their due, those not found written in the scroll of life were cast into the lake of fire, "which is the second death". There is no need for anyone to incriminate himself by insisting on the doctrine of "eternal torment" for wicked mankind here. The Scriptures state, unequivocally, an torment for the wild beast, the false prophet, and Satan that they are returned to death. God himself has given us

His own explanation. It is the second death. Therefore it can be nothing more than a repetition of the first, and as the first death was simply a complete dissolution and return to the state of unconsciousness, so will be the second death. It is never said to be torment or punishment for mankind in the Scriptures. God says it is the second death. This should be final for all truth lovers.

The Scriptures do not teach a conscious intermediate state between death and resurrection for mankind. Neither do they teach that there is a place now in existence where the wicked dead are in torment. Furthermore, the passages referring to future judgment give positive statements that, in the just judgment of God, all will be paid or judged, in accord with their acts. In no instance is everlasting punishment or eternal torment so much as hinted at in the Scriptures in their purity.

The pagan idea of "hell" should never have been allowed to defile the pages of Holy Writ. There is no word in all the original Scriptures, Hebrew or Greek, which carries the significance of hell according to the ideas taught and believed in Christendom today. Such teachings have been forced into the Bible by heathen dogmas and false translations, and on these orthodoxy depends to propagate the error. And by such teaching, they have blotted the character of the God of infinite love, and robbed the Atonement of infinite value.

By the discriminating study of God's Word concerning death and hell, we find that death is a return. The spirit returns to God who gave it; the body returns to the soil; the soul returns to the unseen. In death, man is in a state of complete dissolution and unconsciousness; the dead know nothing whatever. All mankind, saints and sinners alike, are thus returned to death, when the breath of the living is withdrawn from them. In this state they remain until they hear the voice of Him who calls them forth to life at the resurrection.

In the Greek Scriptures, hades means unseen, or imperceptible, and in the Hebrew the Holy Spirit uses sheol as the equivalent of hades. Only the soul, or sensation is connected with hades; the spirit, never. Gehenna speaks of the ravine of Hinnom on the south side of Jerusalem, where the refuse and the bodies of dead animals were incinerated. Criminals, executed for transgression of the law, were cast into the fires of Gehenna. The portion of the bodies not consumed by the fires was infested by the worms or maggots, which became an abhorrence to all flesh.

Tartarus is the temporary dungeon or prison of sinning messengers or angels, reserved for chastening judgment at the great white throne judgment. The lake of fire is eonian, who are superhuman beings; and the second death for irreverent mankind, those not found written in the scroll of life.

IN THE HOUSE OF THE LORD

By T. C. Eggerking

"Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself: that where I am there ye may be also."

THAT DAVID LOOKED FORWARD to a resurrection, is proved by the quotation above from the twenty-third Psalm, and that the "House of the Lord" is the household of Israel is also clear, for the hope of Christ was not yet revealed.

But there is a great spiritual significance revealed in the twenty-third Psalm. The first few verses of John fourteen quoted above reveal the heavenly calling concealed in the thought of dwelling in the "house of the Lord forever."

We, of the royal household, 1 Peter 2, await His coming — that day when He shall "descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God," when the "dead in Christ shall rise first" and we which are "alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet (note, He does not fully descend) the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4.

Oh, what a day to contemplate! That day when this "corruptible" puts on "incorruption"; when this "mortal" puts on immortality"; when "death is swallowed up in victory"; when we who have borne the "image of the earthy" (mankind) shall bear the image of the "heavenly"; when the spiritual body, 1 Cor. 15, will replace the earthly vessel now our portion; when the fullness of the great Spirit will replace the littleness of our own fleshly minds — I say, what a day, what a day of days that will be!

Paul prayed that they might know what was the "hope of their calling", Eph. 1, for he knew that if the brilliancy of the promise would penetrate deeply into their understanding, they, with him, would say, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be accounted of." Rom. 8. He knew that they, too, would "count all things but dung" that they might win Christ, that they would forget those things behind and press forward toward the prize — the "high calling", Phil. 3, in Christ. His hope was that they also would fight a good fight, would "keep the faith" and that for them also a "crown of righteousness" would be awaiting wherewith they should be glorified at "that day". 2 Tim. 4.

Yea, He has gone to prepare a place for us, but He will return. 2 Peter 3. What a glorious thing it is to see prophecy being fulfilled, to see the dawn beginning to break; to realize the fact that the "night is far spent", that the weeping which may "endure for a night" is to be replaced with the joy that "cometh in the morning." Psalm 30. There is even the possibility, though no man knoweth the hour, that we may be numbered among those alive when He shall come!

So, then, let us not be weary in well doing; let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, the more so as we see the day approaching. Heb. 10. The colder the wind, the closer should the sheep huddle together, lest their love wax cold (Matt. 24), because iniquity abounds.

Surely, the world loves its own and shall we do less? The charity of the world is cold, mainly done in letter, not spirit. But the fervent charity we are exhorted to have for each other is of the type that fills more than food, that warms more than fire, stimulates more than strong drink, strengthens us with might in the "inner man" and generally gives a sense of well-being difficult to adequately describe.

"Behold how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." Psa. 133. If we expect to dwell in the house of the Lord forever together, and surely there will be no schisms then, can we not dwell together a few years now without biting and devouring one another? Gal. 5.

At the birth of Christ, the words came "on earth, peace, good will toward men." The whole glad tidings are saturated with the theme of peace. "My peace I give unto you." John 14. In the world we shall have tribulation, but let us be of good cheer. He has overcome the world for us, and we stand reconciled to God. So let us be reconciled unto each other, forgiving till seventy times seven, even as we have and are constantly being forgiven trespass after trespass. 1 John 2.

At the last supper, Jesus told His disciples: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also have love one to another." His love was so great He gave His life for us. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13.

"Blessed are the peace makers." Those that would fight, let them fight everything that arises to threaten the peace of the family and let us all enjoy a little of the future bliss now, when in perfect harmony, unity and peace, we shall "dwell in the house of the Lord for ever."

"WE PREACH CHRIST CRUCIFIED." A stranger came to a great preacher after a sermon on the cross of Christ and said: "I don't like your preaching. I do not care for the cross. I think," said the stranger, "that instead of preaching the death of Christ on the cross, it would be better to preach Jesus, the teacher and example."

"Would you be willing if I preach Christ the example, to follow Him?" said the preacher. "Let us take the first step."

"All right," said the stranger.

"This," said the preacher, "is the first step. 'Who knew no sin.' Can you take that step?"

The stranger was confused, and said, "No, I do know sin. I acknowledge it."

"Then," said the preacher, "you do not need Christ for an example, you need Him for a Savior." — J. B. Smith, in Western Recorder.

THOSE THINGS THAT PLEASE GOD

By T. A. Drinkard

“And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.” — John 8:29.

I AM FULLY PERSUADED that we can gain some very valuable information by carefully considering the subject matter of this verse of Scripture.

God sent Jesus Christ into the world to do a work that no one else had ever done or could do — Jesus, the Christ, Savior of the world. Luke 2:11; John 3:16, 17. It is expressly stated that, “none of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him.” Psalm 49:7. No one was able to redeem and ransom mankind until Jesus “gave himself a ransom for all.” 1 Timothy 2:6.

God sent Jesus Christ. He was selected, chosen and qualified to do the special work for which God had previously planned. Follow the Master through childhood days to the time when, in God’s own appointed way, He came to know that He was destined to die for man; to ransom the lost world from the curse.

During that earthly service the Father was ever present with the Master, teaching Him, leading Him onward toward the consummation of His life work on the earth, His suffering and death on the cross. The Father was there while suffering prevailed on the cross. He beheld His Son as He was buried. He was there on the resurrection morning when a most glorious victory came to crown the Son of God.

During His earthly ministry, Jesus was always doing those things that pleased God. He consecrated himself to carry out the divine orders, and the end of it all was death on the cross. Isa. 53:8-10. There is no question in my mind but that it brought much joy and sunshine into His short life to be able to say, “For I do always those things that please him.” This confession seems to say that no moment ever came, no act of His was ever committed which displeased the Father.

Was it God’s will that Jesus die upon the cross? If not, why the words of Isa. 53:9-12? Did Jesus not foresee that He would die on the cross? Could He have done other than He did? Knowing all of this, can we truly say that Jesus meant for the Father to invent or devise some other way for Him to suffer than to face death on the cross when He prayed, “If it be possible, let this cup pass from me”?

Suppose the cup meant the death on the cross. Then I ask, Was it possible for it to pass? If it was not possible, why did Jesus say, “If it be possible”? Was He trying to evade the way of the cross? I do not look upon Him as such that failed to live up to God’s will, plan and purpose.

I wish we could truly say that in all things we please God.

SOLOMON’S TEMPLE

A DESCRIPTION OF THIS most beautiful of all temples may prove to be interesting as well as instructive. For its beauty, splendor, cost and size it easily obtained rank among the seven wonders of the ancient world. Thirty thousand workmen were required to cut the timbers for the building, eighty thousand to quarry and trim the stone, seventy thousand to transport the materials and more than three thousand to oversee the work.

The stones for the temple were brought partly from Lebanon, partly from the neighborhood of Bethlehem and partly from the quarries which have recently been discovered under the temple rock, and which are known by the name of the “Royal Caverns.” Hiram, king of Tyre, assisted and his assistance was doubly valuable, both from the architectural skill of his countrymen already employed in his own great buildings, and from his supply of the cedars of Lebanon, conveyed on rafts to Joppa.

The temple faced the east. The sacred inner portion was small. On the east was an oblong room, the Holy Place, measuring twenty by forty cubits (thirty by sixty feet). Back of this to the west was a room, thirty feet square, called the Most Holy Place. Here the Ark was kept.

In the Holy Place were the golden candlesticks, the room being lighted only by high windows admitting but little light. This room also contained the table of shewbread and the golden altar of incense. The Most Holy Place had no windows, but was full of dazzling light from the presence of Jehovah above the ark — the Shekinah glory.

Everywhere the woodwork was richly carved and overlaid with gold. The heavy hangings of costly cloth were brilliant with beautiful colors and adorned with rare embroideries. In front of the Holy Place was a great porch, its chief feature being two lofty pillars of bronze.

Around this sanctuary numerous chambers were built, for the use of the priests, for the storing of the temple treasures and for the various utensils necessary for the many sacrifices offered. These chambers were three stories high, and extended the building to probably 150 feet east and west by 75 feet north and south.

Around the temple was a great court to which alone the people were admitted. Here was the enormous altar of burnt offerings on which the sacrifices were consumed. Here also were a large stationary receptacle for water and ten wheeled bronze lavers that were moved to accommodate the officiating priests.

The temple was a vast picture book for the ancient Hebrews. Every feature of it was a symbol of some fundamental religious truth. In order to reconcile the spirit of the new architecture with the letter of the old law, the stones were hewn in the quarries, and after being transported were placed with reverent silence one upon another. The temple rose like an exhalation. It was a work of seven and a half years, and Solomon gave his best to its completion. — Adapted.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

WHAT FOLLOWING CHRIST MEANS

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

Monday, November 17 — Mark 10:17-22.

"Come, take up the cross, and follow me." — V. 21.

AMONG THE MANY WHO CAME to Jesus, seeking the way to life eternal, was this young man who possessed vast wealth. He had evidently been brought up with reverence for the Mosaic law. But he realized that there was something lacking, and he asked the Master to tell him what that one needful thing was. Read the Savior's answer in verse 21. It was very evident that the young man expected to be told something that he might be able to do because of his wealth. If he had not been trusting in those riches, he would have gladly disbursed them and have been willing to follow Jesus, no matter what the cost.

THE HANDICAP OF RICHES

Tuesday, November 18 — Mark 10:23-31.

"With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible." — V. 27.

TO PLEASE GOD, we must have faith in Him and the more humble we are, the greater will be our faith. The one who possesses great wealth is able to do many things with that wealth, and so is apt to pin his faith upon it. But God is able to transform the heart of such an individual, providing he is willing to let His spirit and influence control him. Jesus said, verse 30, that in exchange for a life of service to Him, God will give a hundredfold blessing in this life and life eternal hereafter. Is it worth it?

THE DANGER OF RICHES

Wednesday, November 19 — 1 Timothy 6:3-10.

"And having food and raiment, let us be therewith content." — V. 8.

PAUL, INSTRUCTING the young man Timothy, warned him against putting his trust in wealth, for therewith come many temptations. How often do we hear one who has very little of this world's goods, envying wealth, saying that he would do thus and so, if he possessed it. But it generally happens that when wealth comes suddenly, disaster, spiritually and morally, follows in its wake. Let us be content with the necessary provisions for our daily needs.

RICH IN GOOD WORKS

Thursday, November 20 — 1 Timothy 6:17-19.

"Trust . . . in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." — V. 17.

THE DAILY READING for the day is found in the story of the rich man and Lazarus, according to the International Sunday School Lesson Committee, but because of the inaptitude of this parable, we have chosen the above. Paul instructed Timothy to be rich in good works. And in this we can all be rich if we will. In his second epistle, he enumerates many ways in which the Christian may be rich in good works. Read 2 Timothy 2 and 3. And throughout the New Testament, we are exhorted to grow in ways that are pleasing to God. The rewards are immeasurable. Paul said that if we are not weary in well doing, we shall reap a reward that cannot be compared in glory.

LIVING UNTO CHRIST

Friday, November 21 — 2 Corinthians 5:11-19.

"If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature."

WHEN AN INDIVIDUAL CONSECRATES his life to Christ, his aims, his ideals, his entire outlook are different. Whereas once he served his own selfish interests, he now serves Christ. Wherein he looked after those things that brought comfort to himself, he now looks toward the well being of his neighbor. In short, he lives for Christ. Every action of his life is weighed with the thought, Will that bring honor to Him? Living unto Christ means much.

ALL TO GOD'S GLORY

Saturday, November 22 — 1 Corinthians 10:23-33.

"Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." — V. 31.

THIS THOUGHT FOLLOWS CLOSELY the one found in yesterday's reading. "Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth," v. 24, is applying the golden rule in its truest sense. "Give none offence," v. 32, also bespeaks a life truly consecrated to God. A study of Paul's life reveals that he lived the truths that he taught, hence, the power of his teaching.

BETTER THAN GOLD

Sunday, November 23 — Psalm 19:7-14.

"More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb." — V. 10.

SIX THINGS ARE NAMED here which are more to be desired than gold: the law, the testimony, the statutes, the commandment, the fear and the judgments of the Lord. And the office that each one fills is also named. These all act as warning signals to the follower of God, and "in keeping of them there is great reward."

Let us all pray that the words of our mouths and the meditations of our hearts, may be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, our Strength and our Redeemer. — M. G.

THE NEW TESTAMENT

By Lyman Booth

THE SEVERAL BOOKS which now form the New Testament were received by the early Christians as of divine authority. The greater part of them are quoted by the most ancient and eminent, and appealed to as the standard of truth. Portions of the New Testament might be collected from various writers who lived in the first two centuries. They wrote catalogues of the several books and comments on them. Both the orthodox and the heretic appealed to them, the one to praise, the other to criticize or condemn.

Lectures given in those days are still in existence, and the enemies of Christianity mention them as the authentic books of Christianity. This furnishes proof that all books of the New Testament were received and read in the assemblies of Christians before the end of the second century, except the epistle to the Hebrews, that of James, the second of Peter, the second and third of John, that of Jude and the Revelation of John. Even these or the most of them were extant and were well known, though not then accepted as divinely inspired. Some reasons may be given why the Christians hesitated respecting these books when they came under consideration; but such reasons would only show that those persons were extremely cautious and therefore not likely to be imposed upon by any spurious or forged writings.

Since the idea is entertained by many that we cannot be certain concerning the correctness of the Scriptures as we now have them after so many centuries, especially as learned men are frequently speaking of the different readings in the manuscripts or versions, in addition to the above question the following remarks may furnish some satisfactory answer. During nearly two hundred years, our present translation of the Bible has been extant; and persons of various descriptions have made new translations of the whole, or various parts. Scarcely any writer fails to mention, in one way or another, alterations which he supposes would be improvements.

It may be asked, How then can unlearned men know that our translation may be depended upon as correct in its general reading? Let him who questions the correctness of the Book remember that the various demonstrations, persons who engage in eager controversies with each other, all appeal to the same version, and in no matters of serious consequences do they object to it. All of this proves that the translation in the main is just; and that it is impossible for any party to reject it without peril, while so many eager opponents are constantly watching one another.

These facts prove the impossibility of primitive Christians corrupting the sacred records, while Jews, heretics and pagans were ready to expose alterations; and other churches would have objected to any such changes. In fact, if all the different readings were adopted the rule of truth and duty would remain the same. So that this is merely an ingenious expedient by which the enemies of the gospel try to perplex the minds of those who cannot or will not examine the subject.

Can anyone imagine that God, who sent His Son to declare the doctrine and His apostles by the assistance of the Holy Spirit to write and speak it; and who confirmed it to the world by signs and miracles, would suffer any designing person to corrupt it? It would be an absurdity to say that God repented of His goodness and kindness to the world or that He suffered wicked and designing men to rob the people of all the good He held in store for them by such untruthful assertions. Not by any means can such be the truth, for "the eyes of the Lord preserve knowledge, and he overthroweth the words of the transgressor." Prov. 22:12.

It is worthy to note that no other books were received by the primitive church as a part of divine revelation. Many other compositions were sent forth, bearing the names of the apostles or primitive teachers; but, on careful examination all were rejected as false except those found in our present New Testament.

At a very early date, the four gospels were received as the writings of the evangelists whose names they bear. Whitby says, "They are mentioned distinctly by the fathers of the second century as books well known by the name of the Gospels, and as such were read by Christians at their assemblies every Lord's day." Other gospels were published and some gained some temporary credit. They are not mentioned in the approved writings or, if mentioned, it was with disapprobation. Of such we hear Paul saying, "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. 1:8.

The inspired writers of those histories which we call the Gospels, give clear views of those things that relate to the birth, life, miracles, sermons, sufferings, death, resurrection and ascension of our Lord, in connection with His forerunner, John the Baptist, and His apostles. Their accounts vary from one another, each of them recording more fully those things which best suited his purpose or which had distinctly impressed his mind. While the variations show that they did not write in concert, they tend to confirm the evidence of the divine authority of their histories. The easy manner in which their apparent differences may be reconciled forms strong proof that they were under a supernatural guidance, and can be accounted for in no other way.

Ingenuity, industry and malice have for centuries been employed in an effort to prove the evangelists inconsistent with each other, yet not a single contradiction has been proved against them. One thing is true. These four men have done what was never done by any other authors, either before or since. They have described a perfect Being, without a single flaw, "without spot or blemish". They have given the history of One, whose spirit, word and actions were in every way exactly what they ought to have been; who always did the very thing that was proper and in the best manner; who in no instance ever deviated from the path of wisdom; who never let one virtue intrude upon another; but exercised all in perfect harmony and in exact proportion. This statement will bear the most rigid examination and defy the arguments of infidelity.

THE LORD'S PRAYER

THE FOLLOWING BEAUTIFUL COMPOSITION was found in Charleston, S. C., during the Civil War. It is printed on very heavy yellow satin, and it is quite a literary curiosity. We are indebted to Sr. A. J. Eychaner for its reproduction here.

Thou to the mercy seat our souls dost gather,
 For thou art the great God Our Father,
 To whom all praise, all honor should be given;
 For thou art the great God who art in Heaven,
 Thou, by thy wisdom, rul'st the world's whole frame;
 Forever, therefore Hallowed be thy name,
 Let never more delays divide us from
 Thy glorious grace, but let thy kingdom come;
 Let thy commands opposed be by none,
 But thy good pleasure and thy will be done,
 And let our promptness to obey, be even
 The very same in earth as 'tis in Heaven,
 Then for our souls, O Lord, we also pray,
 Thou would'st be pleased to give us this day
 The food of life, wherewith our souls are fed,
 Sufficient raiment, and our daily bread,
 With every needful thing do thou relieve us,
 And of thy mercy, pity and forgive us
 All our misdeeds, for Him whom thou didst please
 To make an offering for our trespasses,
 And forasmuch, O Lord, as we believe
 That thou wilt pardon us as we forgive,
 Let that love teach, wherewith thou doth acquaint us,
 To pardon all those who trespass against us;
 And though, sometimes, thou findest we have forgot
 This love for thee, yet help and lead us not,
 Through soul and body's want, to desperation,
 Nor let earth's gain drive us into temptation.
 Let not the soul of any true believer
 Fall in the time of trial, but deliver,
 Yea, save them from the malice of the devil,
 And in both life and death, keep us from evil,
 Thus pray we, Lord, for that of thee, from whom
 This may be had for thine is the Kingdom,
 This world is of thy work, its wondrous story,
 To thee belongs the power and the glory;
 And all thy wondrous works have ended never,
 But will remain forever and forever,
 Thus we poor creatures would confess again,
 And thus would say eternally Amen.

ASK AND IT SHALL BE GIVEN YOU

OUR LORD RETURNS HERE in the Sermon on the Mount a second time to speak of prayer. The first time He had spoken of the Father who is to be found in secret, and rewards openly, and had given us the pattern prayer (Matt. 6:5-15). Here He wants to teach us what in all Scripture is considered the chief thing in prayer: the assurance that prayer will be heard and answered.

Observe how He uses words which mean almost the same thing, and each time repeats the promise so distinctly: "Ye shall receive, ye shall find, it shall be opened unto you." He then gives as ground for such assurance the law of the kingdom: "He that asketh, receiveth; he that seeketh, findeth; to him that knocketh, it shall be opened." We cannot but feel how in this sixfold repetition He wants to impress deep on our minds this one truth, that we may and must most confidently expect an answer to our prayer. Next to the revelation of the Father's love, there is, in the whole course of the school of prayer, not a more important lesson than this: Every one that asketh, receiveth.

In the last three words the Lord uses, ask, seek, knock, a difference in meaning has been sought. If such was indeed His purpose, then the first, ASK, refers to the gifts we pray for. But I may ask and receive the gift without the Giver. SEEK is the word Scripture uses of God himself; Christ assures me that I can find himself. But it is not enough to find God in time of need, without coming to abiding fellowship.

KNOCK speaks of admission to dwell with Him and in Him. Asking and receiving the gift would thus lead to seeking and finding the Giver, and this again to the knocking and opening of the door of the Father's home and love. One thing is sure: the Lord does want us to count most certainly on it that asking, seeking, knocking, cannot be in vain. Receiving an answer, finding God, the opened heart and home of God, are certain fruits of prayer.

That the Lord should have thought it needful in so many forms to repeat the truth, is a lesson of deep import. It proves that He knows our heart, how doubt and distrust toward God are natural to us, and how easily we are inclined to rest in prayer as a religious work without an answer. He knows too how, even when we believe that God is the Hearer of prayer, believing prayer that lays hold of the promise, is something spiritual, too high and difficult for the half-hearted disciple.

He therefore at the very outset of His instruction to those who would learn to pray, sees to lodge this truth deep into their hearts: prayer does avail much; ask and ye shall receive; everyone that asketh, receiveth. This is the fixed, eternal law of the kingdom: if you ask and receive not, it must be because there is something amiss or wanting in the prayer. Hold on; let the Word and Spirit teach you to pray aright, but do not let go the confidence He seeks to waken. Everyone that asketh, receiveth.

"Ask, and it shall be given you." Christ has no might-

SOMEONE HAS SAID: "To appreciate and understand Shakespeare one must be literally saturated with it."

The same is true of the Bible. — S. E. H.

ier stimulus to persevering prayer in His school than this. As a child has to prove a sum to be correct, so the proof that we have prayed aright is, the answer. If we ask and receive not, it is because we have not learned to pray aright. Let every learner in the school of Christ therefore take the Master's word in all simplicity. Every one that asketh, receiveth. He had good reasons for speaking so unconditionally.

Let us beware of weakening the Word with our human wisdom. When He tells us heavenly things, let us believe Him. His Word will explain itself to him who believes it fully. If questions and difficulties arise, let us not seek to have them settled before we accept the Word. No; let us entrust them all to Him; it is His to solve them; our work is first and fully to accept and hold fast His promise. In our inner chamber, in the inner chamber of our heart too, let the Word be inscribed in letters of light: Everyone that asketh, receiveth.

According to this teaching of the Master, prayer consists of two parts, has two sides, a human and a Divine. The human is the asking, the Divine is the giving. Or, to look at both from the human side, there is the asking and the receiving — the two halves that make up a whole. It is as if He would tell us that we are not to rest without an answer, because it is the will of God, the rule in the Father's family that every childlike believing petition is granted.

If no answer comes, we are not to sit down in the sloth that calls itself resignation, and suppose that it is not God's will to give an answer. No; there must be something in the prayer that is not as God would have it, childlike and believing; we must seek for grace to pray so that the answer may come. It is far easier to the flesh to submit without the answer than to yield itself to be searched and purified by the Spirit, until it has learned to pray the prayer of faith.

It is one of the terrible marks of the diseased state of Christian life in these days, that there are so many who rest content without the distinct experience of answer to prayer. They pray daily; they ask many things, and trust that some of them will be heard. But they know little of direct, definite answer to prayer as the rule of daily life. And it is this the Father wills.

He seeks daily intercourse with His children in listening to and granting their petitions. He wills that I should come to Him day by day with distinct requests. He wills day by day to do for me what I ask. It was in His answer to prayer that the saints of old learned to know God as the Living One, and were stirred to praise and love (Psa. 34; 66:19; 116:1). Our Teacher waits to imprint this upon our minds. Prayer and its answer, the child asking and the father giving, belong to each other.

There may be cases in which the answer is a refusal, because the request is not according to God's Word, as when Moses asked to enter Canaan. But still, there was an answer; God did not leave His servant in uncertainty as to His will. The gods of the heathen are dumb and cannot speak. Our Father lets His child know when He cannot give him what he asks, and he withdraws his petition, even as the Son did in Gethsemane.

Both Moses, the servant, and Christ, the Son, knew that what they asked was not according to what the Lord had spoken. Their prayer was the humble supplication whether it was not possible for the decision to be changed. God will teach those who are teachable and give Him time, by His Word and Spirit, to show whether their request be according to His will or not. Let us withdraw the request, if it be not according to God's mind, or persevere till the answer come. Prayer is appointed to obtain the answer. It is in the prayer and its answer that the interchange of love between the Father and His child takes place.

How deep the estrangement of our heart from God must be, that we find it so difficult to grasp such promises! Even while we accept the words and believe their truth, the faith of the heart that fully has them and rejoices in them, comes so slowly. It is because our spiritual life is still so weak, and the capacity for taking God's thoughts is so feeble.

But let us look to Jesus to teach us as none but He can teach. If we take His words in simplicity and trust Him by His Spirit to make them within us life and power, they will so enter into our inner being that the spiritual divine reality of the truth they contain will indeed take possession of us. We shall not rest content until every petition we offer is borne heavenward on Jesus' own word: "Ask, and it shall be given you."

Beloved fellow-disciples in the school of Jesus! Let us set ourselves to learn this lesson well. Let us take these words just as they were spoken. Let us not suffer human reason to weaken their force. Let us take them as Jesus gives them and believe them. He will teach us in due time how to understand them fully; let us begin by implicitly believing them. Let us take time, as often as we pray, to listen to His voice.

Every one that asketh, receiveth. Let us not make the feeble experience of our unbelief the measure of what our faith may expect. Let us seek, not only just in our seasons of prayer, but at all times, to hold fast the joyful assurance that man's prayer on earth and God's answer in heaven are meant for each other. Let us trust Jesus to teach us so to pray that the answer can come. He will do it, if we hold fast the word He gives us today: "Ask, and ye shall receive." — From With Christ, by Murray.

THE FORBIDDEN BOOK. What zest there was in reading the forbidden Book during the reign of Queen Mary!

"They had got an English Bible," says Benjamin Franklin concerning his ancestral family, "and, to conceal and secure it, fastened it upon tapes under and within the cover of a joint-stool. When my great-great-grandfather read it to his family, he turned up the joint-stool upon his knees, turning over the leaves then under the tapes. One of the children stood at the door to give notice if he saw the apparitor coming, who was an officer of the spiritual court. In that case the stool was turned down again upon its feet, when the Bible remained concealed under it as before." — Bible Society Record.

THE ACCURACY OF THE BIBLE

AN ASTONISHING FEATURE of the Word of God is, that notwithstanding the time at which its compositions were written, and the multitudes of the topics to which it alludes, there is not one physical error — not one assertion or allusion disproved by the progress of modern science.

None of those mistakes which the science of each succeeding age discovers in the books of the preceding; above all, none of those absurdities which modern astronomy indicates in such great numbers in the writings of the ancients — in their sacred codes, in their philosophy, or even in the finest pages of the fathers of the Church — not one of those errors is to be found in any of our sacred books. Nothing there will ever contradict that which, after so many ages, the investigations of the learned world have been able to reveal to us on the state of our globe, or on that of the heavens.

Peruse with care our Scriptures, from one end to the other, to find there such spots; and while you apply yourselves to this examination, remember that it is a book which speaks of everything, which describes nature, which recites its creation, which tells of the water, of the atmosphere, of the mountains, of the animals, and of the plants. It is a book which teaches us the first revolutions of the world, and which also foretells its last. It recounts them in the circumstantial language of history; it extols them in the sublimest strains of poetry; it chants them in the charms of glowing song.

The Bible is a book that is full of oriental rapture, elevation, variety, and boldness. It is a book which speaks of the heavenly and invisible world, while it also speaks of the earth and things visible. It is a book which nearly fifty writers of every degree of cultivation, of every state, of every condition, and living through the course of fifteen hundred years, have concurred to make.

It is a book which was written in the center of Asia, in the sands of Arabia, and in the deserts of Judea; in the court of the temple of the Jews, in the music schools of the prophets of Bethel and Jericho, in the sumptuous palaces of Babylon, and on the idolatrous banks of Chebar; and, finally, in the center of the western civilization, in the midst of the Jews and of their ignorance, in the midst of polytheism and its idols, as also in the bosom of pantheism and its sad philosophy.

The Word of God is a book whose first writer had been forty years a pupil of the magicians of Egypt, in whose opinion the sun, the stars, and the elements, were endowed with intelligence, reacted on the elements, and governed the world by a perpetual alluvion. It is a book whose first writer preceded by more than nine hundred years the most ancient philosophers of ancient Greece and Asia — the Thaleses, and the Pythagorases, the Zalucuses, the Zenophons, and the Confuciuses. It is a book which carries its narrations even to the hierarchies of angels — even to the most distant epoch of the future, and the glorious scenes of the last days.

Search well among its fifty authors, its sixty-six books, its eleven hundred and eighty-nine chapters, and its thirty-one thousand one hundred seventy-three verses; search only for one of those thousands of errors which the ancients and the moderns committed when they spoke of the heavens or of the earth — of their revolutions, of the elements. Search — but you will find none! — The Rainbow, 1870.

“I AM A JEW, but I am enthralled by the luminous figure of the Nazarene.” So said Einstein, the Jewish scientist, recently. When asked if he accepted the historical existence of Jesus, he replied, “Unquestionably. His personality pulsates in every word. No myth is filled with such life.”

THE DAY OF RECKONING IS AT HAND

(Continued from front page)

turn of his Redeemer. Let not the glory of victory detract us from the strenuous work at hand. The battle is still on; it is not won until it ends.

Society beggars description. Perhaps were Lot to come back today, he should imagine the “cities of the plain” were restored. And he likely should be wondering why the two angels were not present to lead him out of the “city of Zoar” for safety. Gen. 19. But Peter’s account of Lot’s experience is not overdrawn in depicting God’s faithful children dwelling in modern Sodom and Gomorrah. “And delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked: for that righteous man dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds.” 2 Peter 2:6-9.

There are exceptions to all human rules which apply to politics. Babylon’s “wine” has made politics a misnomer, a synonym of imprudence instead of prudence, often making a sinecure position of an important office. There is no limit nor principle to a drunken man’s imaginations, a fact which is equally true of business these days — the sky being the limit when it’s possible to evade the law. And as for finance, there apparently seems to be such a juggling of figures as to cause the average citizen to conclude that the bookkeeper must be drunk.

For nigh unto six thousand years God has been very tolerant with the human race, both Christian and heathen. But the day of reckoning is at hand; and while God’s wrath is now hovering over the earth He tells us, “He will save the meek of the earth.” Psa. 76:9. But surface indications of Christendom, or “churchianity”, don’t appear very meritorious.

The one who has taken the name of Christ, Christian, has an accounting in the near future with his Creator. Leniency ends where wrath begins; they are incompatible in their administration.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"BE NOT OVERCOME OF EVIL, BUT OVERCOME EVIL WITH GOOD." — ROMANS 12:21.

OREGON, ILLINOIS, BEREAN SOCIETY REORGANIZES

ON THE EVENING OF OCTOBER TWELFTH, the young people of the Oregon church met at the regular evening hour for the purpose of reorganizing.

Clarence Lapp was elected president; Lucille LeCrone, vice-president; Ruth Gesin, secretary-treasurer; and Azalia Winfrey, pianist. The officers were installed and put to work immediately. Committees and their heads were appointed to take care of the various departments of the work.

At our first regular meeting, October 19th, we had an attendance of twelve Bereans. Since then our attendance has been on the increase and the last meeting, November 2nd, showed that our number had been doubled, making a total of twenty-four present. Everyone is putting his shoulder to the wheel and a considerable amount of interest is being shown by all. Special music each evening is adding interest to the meetings. Plans for the coming year are being made and with the help and guidance of almighty God and the cooperation of every member, we hope to make this a red-letter year for the Oregon Berean Society. C. L.

CLEVELAND AGAIN

ATTENDANCE AT OUR LAST regular meeting was forty-five, which continues the record-breaking streak started several weeks ago, being four more than the previous week. We are shooting for fifty this week.

The halloween party on October 31 was a great success. Each Berean was allowed to invite one guest, and between both members and guests there were almost one hundred present. From 7:30 to 9:00 p. m. was reserved for the Juniors, of whom about sixty were present, and for well over an hour they held sway with merry games and much laughter. Then they were given their refreshments and allowed to go home. The Seniors then had their inning, and the fun lasted until 11:00, when the party broke up. This arrangement was our first attempt to handle both Juniors and Seniors at the same time, but it worked out much better than expected. A large part of the party came masked, and this provided much enjoyment. Refreshments consisted of cider and doughnuts.

M. W. Lyon, Sec.

ILLINOIS STATE BEREAN REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER

Lanark: Membership, 4; average weekly attendance, 4; interest, good. Mrs. Almeda, Glotfelty, Sec.

Dixon: Junior, membership, 11; average weekly attendance, 9; interest, very good. Studying the Life of Christ.

Dixon: Senior, membership, 10; average weekly attendance, 6; interest, fair. Have been studying The Tabernacle of God.
Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Rockford: Membership, 24; average weekly attendance, 20; interest, good.
Harold Starbuck, Sec.

Marshall: Membership, 14; average weekly attendance, 10; interest, good. The Junior Berean work has been dropped. It seems almost impossible to do anything with this part of the work.
Edith Hendrix, Sec.

Chicago: Membership, 12; average weekly attendance, 7; interest, good.
Grace Laning, Sec.

Edna Wood, State Sec.

IF YOUR NAME is to live at all, it is so much more to have it in people's hearts than only in their brains. — O. W. H.

LAST TUESDAY thousands all over the United States went to the polls to cast their votes for the men whom they intend to support. Perhaps you were one of them. Some knew just exactly why they voted as they did. Others voted ignorantly.

There will be many times in the future when it will be necessary for each of us to make just as definite a decision as though we had entered a booth and placed an X after a certain name. Then it will be the question of whether we will serve Christ or another.

Let us not make our decisions ignorantly when the time comes, but let us be certain that the thing for which we show our favor is not in opposition to the One for whom we wish to stand.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Ohio, 2; Illinois, 2.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE BELIEVING CENTURION

"But speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed."

JESUS HAD BEEN TEACHING and healing only a little while. However, people were talking about His unusual and wonderful powers and deeds and words. Some were believing and following Him. Others were ridiculing.

Among the former was a Roman soldier, a centurion having command of a hundred men. One day Jesus went into Capernaum and as He walked along, the centurion hurried up to Him. "Lord my servant lieth at home sick with palsy, grievously tormented," said the centurion.

"I will come and heal him," said Jesus. It was surprising to find that a Gentile should believe in the power of the lowly Nazarene.

However, the centurion did sincerely believe, for he said, "Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed."

Could there be greater faith? Even Jesus marveled, saying to those near Him, "Verily I say unto you. I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel."

To the centurion He said, "Go thy way: and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee." And the servant was healed that very hour.

Today we have many people who believe in God and His Word. Yet there are many who do not, and many who are not interested enough to even think whether they believe or not. Therefore we must try to reach these two classes, and pray God to help us hold fast to our faith.

THINK! Are we believing centurions?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn Matthew 8:11.
2. Find Capernaum.
3. Read Matthew 8:5-13.
4. Copy: Centurion — Roman soldier having authority over one hundred men.

Believed in the power of Jesus.

Read Numbers 27:1, 4 about the first women who demanded their rights.

BIBLE FACT

Adino sley eight hundred men at one time. 2 Sam. 23:8.

THANKFULNESS

WE THANK THEE

"For flowers that bloom about our feet;
For tender grass, so fresh, so sweet;
For song of bird, and hum of bee;
For all things fair we hear or see,
Father in heaven, we thank Thee!

"For blue of stream and blue of sky;
For pleasant shade of branches high;
For fragrant air and cooling breeze;
For beauty of the blooming trees,
Father in heaven, we thank Thee!"

— Ralph Waldo Emerson.

THE FEAST OF TABERNACLES

(The First Thanksgiving Festival)

Adapted From the Bible

In the autumn, men gather in from field and orchard and vineyard the rich harvest, and when their storehouses are bursting with golden grain and ripened fruit their hearts go out in rejoicing and thanksgiving to God who made all that was made, and causes it to grow and bring forth fruit abundantly.

In the early days, long, long ago, the whole nation of the Israelites, men, women and children, wandered for many years through the desert and through the wilderness. They had no settled home, but dwelt in tents or tabernacles, and they had neither field nor orchard because they journeyed continually.

Yet God led them every step of the way through the wilderness and brought them at last into a good land which He had promised them. There He caused them to build again their dwellingplaces, and to plant vineyard, field and orchard. And when the people saw once more the fruitfulness of God made manifest in a plenteous harvest, they sang in their hearts: "O come, let us sing unto the Lord. Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto him with psalms."

And in honor of Him who had saved them from the wilderness and brought forth for them so rich a harvest, they kept year after year the commandment of God which had come to them. — From My Book House.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON VIII. — November 23, 1930

THE RICH YOUNG RULER

Mark 10:17-27

Devotional Reading: Psalm 19:7-14

GOLDEN TEXT

And he said unto them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me. — Luke 9:23.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Sacrifice and Eternal Life.

Basic Truth. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life that I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." — Galatians 2:20.

Outline. I. The Law of Sacrifice. II. What Following Christ Means. III. Choices Which Must Be Made.

I. The Law of Sacrifice. This law may well be considered under two divisions. First, as it relates to the natural. Second, as it relates to the spiritual.

As It Relates to the Natural: The successful agriculturalist practices this law continuously. He plows under the good crop of grass, sacrificing it that he may prepare for a better crop of grain. This sacrifice is in the end beneficial. Our colleges and universities are so many altars upon which the youth of our nation annually commit offerings of unmeasured value. They give their youthful strength and vigor, their opportunity for immediate revenue that they may reap many fold more in after life. The honey bee works its life out in about six weeks of intense service in gathering nectar during the blooming season of some climes and lays up stores for the yet unhatched bees of the colony, thus perpetuating the species in increased numbers.

As It Relates to the Spiritual: While the cause and effect are not so easily traced in this field as they are in the former, yet they hold the same relation. God required of Israel daily and annual sacrifices if she were to receive of His spiritual blessings. Read Lev. chapters 1 to 8. When they neglected sacrifice, they erred and strayed from God; they succumbed to national captivity. As they awoke and renewed their sacrificial service to God they grew in prosperity. God's spiritual blessings accompanied them.

Christ sacrificed everything of the carnal life that He might enter into the fullness of the spiritual life. True, the spiritual follows the natural, 1 Cor. 15:46, but the spiritual nowhere in Scripture follows the natural excepting as the natural really sacrifices itself looking unto the spiritual. Nowhere in God's revealed laws does a person of the Adamic natural order, who lives merely according to the impulses of nature until death naturally over takes him, have prospect for a spiritual awakening. Such spiritual awakening at resurrection accrues only to those who during natural lifetime properly sacrifice of the present to the God of all endless life and spiritual nature. Read 2 Tim. 2:12; Col. 2:12; Gal. 2:20; Rom. 6:1-5; Col. 3:1-6; Rom. 8:16-18.

II. What Following Christ Means. It does not mean merely to trail along after Him through the hills and vales of Judea and Galilee. It does not mean merely to trail along in His thoughts, reading His teachings, soliloquizing on His achievements. It does not mean merely to stand with the crowd of friends and admirers and yield shouts of approval and praise as He in His righteousness marches through the ages. To follow Christ means for one to take in of His teachings, to put those teachings into daily and constant practice at the expense of sacrificing anything and everything in one's own life and of one's own likings that is discordant to the teachings and directions of that Savior. Such sacrifice in every instance is of God required that the one sacrificing may be made to profit.

III. Choices Which Must Be Made. "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve" pertains to the Christian fully as it pertained to the Israelites of Elijah's day. He who would enjoy eternal life must of himself:

- Choose God —
- Choose Christ —
- Choose Christ's Teachings —
- Choose to Serve Christ —
- Choose to Sacrifice Self —

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Riches: Our lesson today reveals the "deceitfulness of riches", and gives added emphasis to the statement of the apostle Paul when he says, "For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some have coveted after, they have erred from the truth, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows." Are riches always a barrier to Christian effort? Show how wealth may be used rightfully for man's good and God's glory. Discuss ways in which it becomes a curse to those possessing it. Are people who are persistently seeking after wealth and a large accumulation of goods generally actively interested in church work? Point out how many people are letting the different things mentioned below prevent them from being real, wide-awake Christians:

- Homes
- Farms
- Stock
- Factories
- Stores

Needy Ones: Christ told the rich young ruler that he must sell his goods and give to the poor. Was Christ establishing a precedent for all Christian people to follow? To what extent should those who have been blessed with wealth help the needy ones? Can a person be a Christian and see others suffer for want of temporal necessities and make no effort to help them when they are able to do so? Should the church care for the Fatherless?

 Widows?
 Afflicted?

— C. E. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

When Jesus beheld the beauty and the cleanliness of the rich young man's life in its contacts with fellowman, and likewise his seeking humility, for he said, "What lack I yet?" He loved him, and showed him his lack. He told him that he was short of perfection because his trust was in his riches instead of in God.

Jesus perceived that the young man was depending on the advantages, the privileges, the beauty, the protection, and the independence possible to wealth (especially in that time) for the beauty and the rightness of his social life. He perceived that he feared the ugliness, and the sordidness, and the slavery that were common to poverty. He perceived that he did not realize that a rich fulness, and freedom, and beauty of life was possible to him, regardless of poverty or wealth, if he would forsake all and follow Him. But the rich young man went away sorrowful when his lack was pointed out to him, so tenaciously does man cling to the assurance that the present material environment affords. — A. K.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

During Jesus' ministry on earth, we read that the common people followed Him gladly. Here and there we find a wealthy person following also. In today's lesson, a rich young ruler had heard Jesus preaching the gospel of the kingdom and he desired to enter into some of those blessings. So he came to Him and inquired the way of salvation. He said he had kept the whole law of Moses ever since he was a young boy. What was Jesus' answer to him? V. 21. Notice that Jesus could look into the young man's heart and read everything, even as though it had been written in a book. Do you think the young man obeyed Jesus?

How does the possession of riches generally affect one's character? Is the mere possessing of them wrong? God wants us to lean upon Him completely, and if we are wealthy, what are we apt to depend upon? As you grow older, you will find many times in life that you must choose between two things. Sometimes it will be duty or pleasure; sometimes, it will be following after worldly success or a life of service to God. The choice that seems for the moment to be to our best advantage often turns out to be the most unworthy.

If we would follow Jesus, we must deny ourselves of many of the things this world offers, but the rewards are so much greater that they cannot be compared. — M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

OUR THANK OFFERING

Thank Offerings have already been received from the following:

Mrs. Carrie E. Hilsabeck; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheets; Lottie E. Young.

May the Father in heaven guide us in the use to which we put the material blessings which He has showered upon us.

In rendering to our merciful heavenly Father our thanks for His unmeasured spiritual blessings to us, let us not forget to return to Him a portion also of the material blessings He has bestowed upon us. We recognize that all comes from His bountiful hand. Is it not just and right then that we use a goodly portion for His service? This has been an annual custom for years and we trust that the response this year will be generous. The many phases of the N. B. I. work will be benefited in proportion as we are thus thankful.

Bro. Stewart will begin a series of meetings at Riviera, Texas, Sunday, November 9. We shall be glad to have anyone who can to be with us.

Opal Robbins.

Bro. and Sr. A. J. Eychaner of Cedar Falls, Iowa, may now be addressed at 303 Zack St., Tampa, Florida. We trust that they will enjoy a happy and healthful sojourn there during the winter.

We regret to learn that Bro. Drinkard suffered the fracture of several ribs and some other inward injury through a fall on November 1. He will be unable to work for several weeks. We trust that his recovery will be hastened.

The regular appointment at the Plum River (Illinois) church will be filled by Bro. Paul C. Johnson, Sunday, November 16. Sunday School convenes at 10:00 a. m., sermons at 11:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. All finding it possible are urged to attend.

Bro. Earl Thayer of Rockford, Illinois, will speak for the congregation at that place, next Sunday, November 16. Services are held at 1904 N. Main St., and all are invited to attend. Sunday School every Sunday morning at 9:45 and Berean meeting every Friday evening at 7:45.

Bro. L. E. Conner recently suffered an injury when he fell from a building at his home. We understand that the injury is not of a very serious nature, but enough so that Bro. Conner was not able to fill his regular appointment on November 9 at Dixon, Illinois. We trust that he will soon be enjoying his usual good health and activity.

In the absence of Bro. Austin, the pulpit at Oregon was filled by Bro. Cecil Smead on Sunday morning, November 9, and in the evening by Sr. Lucille LeCrone. The former spoke on "The Atonement" and the latter on "God Our Strength." These two members of the N. B. I. Bible Training Class gave two very interesting and instructive talks to good sized and attentive audiences. Nevertheless we pray that our pastor will soon be able to be with us again.

VOICES FROM VIRGINIA

Sr. J. H. Andrews, who has been in the Sanatorium for the past year, is again with her family, although confined to her bed. She is a very happy woman now that she is again united with those she loves so dearly. We pray that she may gain in health and strength and eventually take her accustomed place in the family. Bro. Andrews may be addressed at 60 N. Lawton Ave., Clarendon, Virginia.

We noticed the appeal Sr. Sanford made in The Herald of recent issue and we feel that her appeal should not fall on deaf ears. There are many truly needy ones among our brethren. There will be much hardship experienced by many before spring comes. The brethren in Virginia are in hearty accord and sympathy with the worthy work of aiding the needy as the National Berean Society is doing through its servant, Sr. Sanford.

The brethren here in Virginia wish the writer to make this request and announcement. The churches of this state desire to aid their needy as far as they are able and desire to have the first opportunity to do so. Our request to the National Berean Society, and all individuals, is: If any one from the state of Virginia should request aid from you, please notify the writer, and get our O. K. before giving the requested assistance. We feel that Christian duty demands that the local church do its part first. When it is unable longer to carry the burden then the local state should do its part, a call being made to the National organization only as a last resort.

We are willing to do our part, hence this announcement and request. Won't you assist us by forwarding all calls to us?

Harry A. Sheets, Maurertown, Va.

MEETINGS AT ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

The brethren at Eldorado, under the leadership of Bro. Paul M. Hatch, will hold a series of meetings beginning on Tuesday evening, November 11, and continuing over Sunday, November 23. We trust that all will enter into these meetings and enjoy the benefits to be derived. The folks at Eldorado invite all neighboring brothers and sisters who find it possible, to attend and bring your friends. We pray that much honor to the heavenly Father may result.

GOOD WORDS FROM GRAND RAPIDS

Work at our Grand Rapids church is moving along very satisfactorily. Several have been indisposed with colds and various complaints, but our Sunday School holds above two hundred each Sunday, and the other services are well attended. It is readily seen that a larger church building is the only solution to our problem. Times are hard and our people are of limited means, but the Lord's work is the most important work in life for any of us, and hence we feel that in some way we must measure up to the wonderful opportunity God has placed before us here.

Only God himself can foresee the bounds to which such a work can be expanded. Only He can judge the influence it may have toward His coming kingdom. As a church we are praying God to guide us in all our work, in all our plans and decisions.

F. E. Siple, pastor.

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

The annual fall meeting of the Blessed Hope Church of God was held on Sunday, October 26, 1930, with Bro. F. L. Austin as speaker. It was a wonderful day from several standpoints; the weather was ideal; the sermons, inspiring and to meet with the brethren gathered from near and far was very pleasing. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

Sr. Morlan who lives only a block and a half from the church allowed us to bring our basket lunch to her home, both at noon and evening. I am sure every one is very grateful for the hospitality shown by Mr. and Mrs. Morlan. All in all it was a day long to be remembered for the words of encouragement and good music all of which makes the people look forward to another like meeting next October.

Mrs. Franklin Moore has been taken to the Memorial hospital for treatment. At the last account she seemed slightly improved. God grant that she will soon be up and about.

The Bereans gave a social at the home of Elsie Moore for Mrs. Gordon, who was leaving for Nebraska to care for her mother.

Grover Gordon, pastor.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

There were no services at the church at Fonthill on Sunday, October 26, on account of the annual meeting at Niagara Falls. Quite a number from here motored over for the day. Others would have gone but for sickness in the family.

Bro. F. L. Austin of Oregon, Illinois, was in the village looking after business interests on his way to and from the Falls meeting. He is always a welcome caller in Fonthill where he spent the best part of his life looking after the churches in this section.

The choir gave a farewell supper for Mrs. Gordon after which they all accompanied her to the train at Welland, Ontario.

Grover Gordon, pastor.

A BAPTISM

On November 5 we were privileged to make a side trip to Bloomingdale, Michigan, and baptize Mrs. Carrie Beers. Sr. Beers is a daughter of the late Sr. Worthington, so well known by our Michigan brethren. She has believed the gospel from girlhood, and now as a widow past middle life, she determines to delay no longer obedience to her Lord. May the Father guide her and give her strength for life's labors.

She may be addressed, Care Fred Banks, Bloomingdale, Michigan, Rfd. F. E. Siple.

ELLIOT-MICHENER

Mr. David Elliot and Miss Jean Michener were united in marriage October 25, at Canfield, Ontario, B. E. Newman of the United Church of Canada officiating. Bro. David is the elder son of Bro. and Sr. C. B. Elliot, of Fonthill, and is a young man highly respected in this community. The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Michener, of Beamsville, Ontario, and is a young lady of sterling qualities. They will make their home on a farm near Fonthill. Grover Gordon.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

When I reach the goal it will be because you — a thousand of you — have helped me along. And when that goal has been reached and the Gospel work which I am to do is done, it will not be I who has done it, but you, with a small portion of what the Giver of All has given to each one.

Remember! I progress only so far as I am pushed by YOU!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

The following states have added to their number of members in the Dollar-A-Month Club:

Arkansas, 1; Michigan, 1; Virginia, 1; Kansas, 2; Ohio, 1; Illinois, 1.

While only 7 was credited as belonging to the Club from Washington, yet we have one loyal member there who is personally responsible for 13 pledges. We have counted the names rather than the amounts.

Our first enlister from Arkansas is Bro. Fred C. Smith of Russellville. Perhaps you can enlist others in the ranks, Bro. Smith!

HAZEL JESSIE DAVIES

Hazel Jessie Davies, wife of Tom Davies, Jr., of Welland, Ontario, passed away at the Welland hospital on Sunday, October 26, 1930, in her twenty-fifth year, leaving a two weeks' old baby daughter, Marjorie Gwendolyn. Sr. Davies' mother died when she was just a small girl and she came to make her home with the Elliots, who mourn for her as one of their very own. On September 5, 1928, she was married to Tom Davies, Jr., who with the little daughter mourn her untimely death. Our hearts go out to Bro. Davies in his hour of bereavement. May the Father in heaven watch over and care for the little daughter that she may grow up to know Him whom to know aright is life eternal that at the resurrection morning the fond mother might receive the blessing she so much desired and strove to live for.

Funeral services were held from the Elliot home with burial in the Fonthill cemetery. Words of hope were spoken by the pastor from the text: "Behold I make all things new." Rev. 31:5. She rests from the cares of this life with the hope of hearing the call to life and immortality when the Master returns.

Grover Gordon.

MRS. GERTIE LONG

Gertie V. Williamson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beryl Williamson, was born at Columbia City, Indiana, November 8, 1871, and died at Cambridge, Nebraska, November 3, 1930.

She came to Nebraska in the spring of 1888. She was married to Mike Long on March 4, 1890, who preceded her in death nine years. They moved to the farm ten miles north of Holbrook, where she lived until the time of her death. To this union six children were born. They are: Mrs. Nora Johnson of Briggsdale, Colorado; Mrs. Hazel Quartney of Salem, Idaho; Mrs. Grover Gordon of Fonthill, Ontario; Ora, Clyde and Forrest Long of Cambridge. All were with her when the end came.

In early life she was a member of the Christian church. In the fall of 1915 she united with the Church of God, remaining a faithful member until death. Her sunny disposition and loving manner endeared her to all, and she in truth numbered her friends by her acquaintances.

Besides her children, she leaves to mourn her loss her father, two brothers, a sister, nine grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. In her death the children have lost a kind and loving mother, the church a faithful worker, and the community a helpful friend.

"O, dear mother, how we miss you!
When we see your vacant chair,
Miss you in our little circle
'Tis not home when you're not there.
But if we are only faithful,
We know that we will see you,
In that city of unending day,
And the toils of life will seem nothing
When we get to the end of the way."

Funeral services were held from the Church of God at Holbrook, Nebraska, conducted by Bro. E. E. Giesler of Moorefield. She was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the Miller cemetery to await the call of the Master.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Iola M. Martin; Leota B. Hanson; Mrs. Virgil C. Barch; Mrs. Olaf Lewis; Harry A. Sheets; Edward M. Moran; Catherine Davis; Mrs. Julia Ordnung; Mrs. H. C. Eby; Mrs. Eva Fletcher; H. L. Appleby; Mrs. E. C. Gates; John Hutchings; Clementine DeNise; C. M. Gale; Ida Jeffrey; Leland Hanson; Walter Koontz; J. C. Smith; Bernard Crofton; Emily J. Harris; Sadie Kerr; Fred Knodle; T. W. Holloway; Mrs. W. L. Robbins; Hugh Logan; Mrs. C. J. Lamberson; Elizabeth Oakley; Mrs. Martha Walls.

WILL YOU DO IT?

Do you want to express your thanks to the heavenly Father at this Thanksgiving time for all that He has done for you? We want you to and so will publish as many of these expressions as our pages will hold in the Thanksgiving number. To be sure of publication copy for this issue must be in the office by November 20.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

GOOD TIDINGS

By C. E. Lapp

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." — Luke 2:10.

THIS GREAT PROCLAMATION of glad tidings of Christ's coming was first made to the shepherds on those old Judean hills while they were keeping watch over their flocks at night. Indeed, it was glad tidings to them, for they had been taught that their Messiah was coming to deliver them from bondage and was to rule over them.

The people were at that time under Roman rule and conditions were not the best for promoting peace and tranquility. We can readily see why they were so glad because of the good tidings which the angel brought to them that night.

Good tidings! Yes, it was good tidings, even though Christ did not set the people free from the bondage of the Roman oppressors as they thought He would. Yes, good tidings, even though Christ did not set up a literal throne upon earth and rule as did the other kings of earth. His work was to be a far greater and more noble work than setting up an earthly throne.

We are thankful for the last of the proclamation, "which shall be to all people." Surely that does not exclude anyone, for it is made to all people and down through the centuries of time all peoples of the earth have been blessed mightily and caused to rejoice greatly because of His coming. The people who were looking for Christ to come the first time were no doubt somewhat disappointed when He did not set up an earthly throne and rule as the other kings of earth. Yes, in all probability they were sick at heart, but Christ came to the world to do more than to conquer earthly kingdoms and subject them to His rule. He came to do more than to set up a throne and sit upon it, with all power and authority and rule therefrom.

He came to teach men the way of God and of righteousness and of judgment to come. He came to conquer, not mankind, but to conquer sin and death and to abolish them from the face of the earth. He came to be a ransom for many that they through Him might be cleansed of all unrighteousness and be able to stand in the day of judgment.

Christ lived among men on this earth and taught them the way of right and wrong and was finally taken and crucified by His enemies. Gloom settled over those who were near and dear to Him. But God's arm was not shortened and on the third day He raised Christ from the dead. Good tidings! Yes! And down through all the ages of Christendom the good news has been proclaimed far and wide. He came not to conquer man but rather to conquer death, man's greatest enemy, the punishment for sin.

Good tidings! Yes! And you and I now have a hope of overcoming death and of being raised from the dead if we through faith accept Christ and believe that He will raise us from the dead when He comes again. He ascended into heaven and is now at the right hand of God, awaiting the day of readiness for this coming again to receive those who are ready and waiting to see Him.

Was the proclamation then true that these were good tidings of great joy for all people? Yes, friends, they were good tidings and they have been extended down to us in that Christ is coming again. May we all accept these good tidings and then proclaim them to others that they too may rejoice.

ONE WITH CHRIST

By John Denchfield

"For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ."

A FEW DAYS AGO, while at work, I had the misfortune of spraining my foot. After arriving at home and bathing it, I began to think of Paul's words as written in the twelfth chapter of First Corinthians. The apostle points out very clearly that every member of our body is dependent upon other members. He then proceeds to compare our physical body with the church, the body of Christ.

My foot was the only member which had been injured; nevertheless the entire body suffered. How true is the comparison! When one member of the body of Christ is disabled in one way or another, the entire body suffers.

It was not the fault of my foot, nor of any other member, that the accident happened. Did the other members blame the foot, or the foot the other members? No, they did not! Rather, all members worked together, harder than ever, so that the sprain might heal as quickly as possible. Soon all was progressing as nicely as ever.

In reviewing the early history of Egypt, we find that the early Egyptians regarded all classes with the same high esteem. They had realized the fact that it takes all classes to make up a nation. Then, too, another bond of fellowship was found in the fact that practically all could trace their ancestry back to Ham.

Christ is our Leader, the Head of the body, and we ought always to remember that we are members of that body. The eye is undoubtedly its most glorious member, yet our hands do not begrudge the eye its position. What would become of the body if they did? Likewise, we, in our position, must not begrudge another his position. When we do, what happens to our church, the body of Christ?

We should at all times consider the other member, encouraging him, helping him along. It may not have been his fault that he fell. Help him up, even as an injured member of the physical body is helped by the able ones.

May we be certain that we as individual members are doing everything which we, in our capacity, can do for the honor and glory of God, "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ."

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 18, 1930

NUMBER 7

Our Refuge and Our Strength

He who the rule to God hath yielded,
And evermore on Him relies,
Will be in wondrous manner shielded
In straits and all adversities;
Who in the Highest makes his stand,
Builds not his hope upon the sand.

Rest thou in God amid all changes,
Be pleased with all He may ordain —
Wait patient till what He arranges
For thy best welfare shall be plain:
God, who hath chosen us as His,
Knows best what our true welfare is.

He knows, if need be, how to measure
The hours of sunshine as of shade;
And when we wait on His good pleasure,
With heart sincere and spirit stayed,
He comes more quickly than we know,
And makes our cup to overflow.

To Him whose arm sways wide creation,
It is a light thing at His will,
To bring the great to lowly station,
And make the lowly greater still —
'Till He whose wondrous ways we know,
Who lifteth up and layeth low.

Sing, pray, and onward still be pressing,
To thine appointed work be true;
Trust Him, and tarry for His blessing,
And it shall every day be new;
Whoe'er on God his hope hath cast,
Will find Him faithful to the last.

— Selected.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"As the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

PEACE, BE STILL

WE HAVE JUST PASSED the celebration of the signing of the Armistice. Twelve years ago the words echoed and re-echoed from hilltop and plain, from city to country, "The war is over."

Well do we recall the joy that stirred all hearts, joy because no longer need our husbands and fathers, our brothers and sons give their lives on the field of battle. And those whose dear ones had already been sacrificed to satisfy the cruel monster rejoiced that others would not be called upon to endure a like terrible fate. This hideous nightmare was called, "The war to end war," and many statesmen and others believed it to be even that.

On the horizon of today we see dim forebodings of disaster and in the distance we can almost hear the rumblings of the war chariots of the nations. The world is no nearer lasting peace today than it was twelve years ago. And the wisest statesmen will admit that even as a dread plague it may break out at any moment.

How refreshing then to think of the One whose coming will bring peace over the whole earth — a peace that will be lasting, that will endure throughout eternity. When that voice echoes and re-echoes over earth's surface, the fullest joy will fill the hearts of all the faithful. The voice that bade the waves of Galilee, "Be still," will speak peace to suffering humanity and its authority will be unquestioned.

Then shall the words of the angel, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," be true in their fullest sense.

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus." — M. G.

LET US GIVE THANKS

THE DAY SET ASIDE by our President for the giving of thanks will soon be here. And no doubt many all over the land will be wondering what they have to be thankful for, because of depressing conditions that are everywhere prevalent.

Many will be apparently justified in thinking that there is not one element in their lives contributing toward thankfulness. But let us sit down and take stock of ourselves.

In just the recent past, we have enjoyed a season of affluence that has been widespread. And what always follows in its wake? Self-indulgence, pleasure-seeking, forgetfulness of God are the certain aftermath of prosperity, as history repeatedly shows us.

If this present condition tends to draw us nearer to God, though we may not be enjoying the luxuries of former times, let us rejoice. And let us give thanks to God, even though we may be suffering actual hardships as many are, for in our need we will cry unto Him. And "like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

Let us say with the Psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." — M. G.

THE PRESIDENT OF CHINA

CURRENT PERIODICALS have recently been publishing the most unusual fact that the President of that country across the sea which is experiencing such turbulent times just now, is an adherent of the Christian faith. It is the first time in history that a ruler of the yellow race, whose millions are worshipers of Confucius, is himself an avowed follower of the Christ.

"And if, in these troublous but history-making times in China, the President accepts Christianity in real earnest then," says Stanley High in Christian Herald, "With little doubt, his conversion will come, one day, to stand as the most significant single event not only of 1930, but of this present period."

The editor goes on to say that the conversion of Chiang Kai-shek may in the course of time, be regarded as of as great importance as was the conversion of Constantine the Great in the second century after Christ.

Russia is not alone in her godless organization, for China also is being swept by a fire of anti-religious fever. And this agitation is arising partly from the universities and partly from the Red propagandists. And when her President allies himself with the religion of Jesus Christ, he finds himself in the minority.

But though in the minority as far as man is concerned, what a majority as far as God and His power are concerned! For He can work miracles to bring to pass His desires and bring to naught all of man's cunning devices.

"Who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" were the words spoken by Mordecai to Queen Esther long ago, and with no great stretch of the imagination they may apply to Chiang Kai-shek. We may reasonably expect new developments in China.—M. G.

G O D I S

THE APOSTLE PAUL TELLS US, among other things, that "he that cometh to God must believe that he is." It would appear then that satisfying evidence of God's existence is essential to our salvation, for certainly no one can be expected, much less required, to believe that "he is" solely on the mere assertion or statement of a book or person. What evidence or proof therefore have we that He really is?

To me it seems that every object, animate and inanimate, that faithfully and repeatedly responds to fixed and governing powers, or is under the control of well known laws gives positive, though somewhat silent, witness to three things: design, a Designer, and an ultimate purpose. This is clearly seen in the products of man's genius and labor, from the actions of the simplest toy to that of the most intricate and elaborate machine. Unless it be the useless and nondescript production of an insane person, every man-made article bears evidence of design, be it the humble wheel barrow, or the majestic steamship. Some one has done some thinking, planning, designing. If these things speak of design, they also point to a designer, some one that did the thinking, planning, and conceived the idea. Design without a designer is outside the realm of reason. The first necessitates the second. Then, thirdly, the two testify to some purpose, or ultimate object, for their creation. Men do not study, plan, and expend time and money just for the amusement of seeing things go. There is an end in view, a result to be gained, something to be accomplished in and by the thing they create.

Now, if the productions of man testify to design, a designer, and a purpose, what of the mightier things that man has not made, and never could make, which obey laws, move with system and precision, and are governed with an accuracy finer than the most ingenious production of human hands? View the stars and planets, yea, and our own earth also, as they move majestically along in their courses, century after century, without clash or confusion. Yes, behold the hillsides and valleys; every tree, shrub, and plant, not only fitted for its own clime and soil, but producing, year by year, that with which it will perpetuate the existence of its species.

Look to yourself, O doubter, and admit, as saith Holy Writ, you are "fearfully and wonderfully made." Consider the marvelous laws within, that are in constant action, governing digestion, circulation, and respiration. Do not all these things, above, around, within, bear unimpeachable testimony to design?

Again, if the products of human design speak of a human designer, do not the marvels of heaven and earth, that no human could produce, bear testimony to a super-human—yea, a divine Designer? "IS GOD?" Yea, verily, God IS!

Once we have admitted that "God is," we face the great question of ultimate purpose or object. What did God make all these things for? What did He make man for? What is His ultimate purpose, and on what does its success, as far as it involves us, depend? Of course it takes the entire Bible to fully answer these questions. We may, however, draw a few conclusions without being too lengthy.

There is no doubt but that God's design in making man, and making Him in His own image and after His likeness, was that this crowning work of His creation might sometime become like himself undying, eternal, and that He and this created image should enjoy perpetual personal companionship. It is also evident, in view of man being placed on the earth, made out of it, and being assigned dominion over it, that it was the plan of God that it should be the place where these eternal conditions and happy associations should be located. We have to but glance around to discover that the earth, as it now exists, is no fit place for the great God to dwell. It is also clear that there is something wrong with man. Yes, all this is true. Sin, disqualifying sin, has come upon the stage of action. We have lost our right to all that God had planned for our enjoyment, and a blighting curse rests upon the earth. Yet all is not hopelessly lost. A Substitute has been provided in Jesus Christ, a Savior from sin, One who plans shortly to lift the blighting curse.

Take your Bible and carefully study the plan outlined therein. It reveals the conditions of salvation to be simply these: First, we must believe that "God is." Secondly, we must accept Jesus Christ as our personal Savior. Thirdly, we must be baptized. Fourthly, we must, by God's help, live a clean life, and God will do all the rest.

This article is written that the first of these four conditions may be made easy, the writer feeling sure that the others will readily follow when we are once convinced that "God is."—Selected.

"MEN SELDOM IMPROVE when they have no model but themselves to copy after."—Goldsmith.

"Let the saints exult in glory:

Let them sing for joy upon their beds,
Let the high praises of God be in their mouth,
And a two-edged sword in their hand;
To execute vengeance upon the nations,
And punishments upon the peoples;
To bind their kings with chains,
And their nobles with fetters of iron;
To execute upon them the judgment written:
This honor have all the saints.
Praise ye Jehovah."

THE SECRET OF BELIEVING PRAYER

THE PROMISE OF ANSWER to prayer which formed our last lesson is one of the most wonderful in all Scripture. In how many hearts it has raised the question: How ever can I attain the faith that knows that it receives all it asks?

It is this question our Lord would answer today. Ere He gave that wonderful promise to His disciples, He spoke another word, in which He points out where the faith in the answer to prayer takes its rise, and ever finds its strength. HAVE FAITH IN GOD. This word precedes the other, Have faith in the promise of an answer to prayer.

The power to believe a promise depends entirely, but not only, on faith in the promiser. Trust in the person begets trust in his word. It is only where we live and associate with God in personal, loving intercourse, where God himself is all to us, where our whole being is continually opened up and exposed to the mighty influences that are at work where His Holy Presence is revealed, that the capacity will be developed for believing that He gives whatsoever we ask.

This connection between faith in God and faith in His promise will become clear to us if we think what faith really is. It is often compared to the hand or the mouth, by which we take and appropriate what is offered to us. But it is of importance that we should understand that faith is also the ear by which I hear what is promised, the eye by which I see what is offered me. On this the power to take depends. I must hear the person who gives me the promise; the very tone of his voice gives me the promise; the very tone of his voice gives me courage to believe. I must see him. In the light of his eye and countenance all fear as to my right to take passes away. The value of the promise depends on the promiser. It is on my knowledge of what the promiser is that faith in the promise depends.

It is for this reason that Jesus, ere He gives that wonderful prayer-promise, first says, "HAVE FAITH IN GOD." That is, let thine eye be open to the living God, and gaze on Him, seeing Him who is invisible. It is through the eye that I yield myself to the influence of what is before me; I must allow it to enter, to exert its influence, to leave its impression upon my mind.

So believing God is just looking to God and what He is, allowing Him to reveal His presence, giving Him time and yielding the whole being to take in the full impression of what He is as God, with the soul opened up to receive and rejoice in the overshadowing of His love. Yes, faith is the eye to which God shows what He is and does. Through faith the light of His presence and the workings of His mighty power stream into the soul. As that which I see lives in me, so by faith God lives in me, too.

And even so faith is also the ear through which the voice of God is always heard and intercourse with Him kept up. It is through the Holy Spirit the Father speaks to us; the Son is the Word, the substance of what God says; the Spirit is the living voice. This the child of God needs to lead and guide him; the secret voice from heaven must teach him, as it taught Jesus, what to say and what to do.

An ear opened towards God, that is, a believing heart waiting on Him, to hear what He says, will hear Him speak. The words of God will not only be the words of a Book, but, proceeding from the mouth of God, they will be spirit and truth, life and power. They will bring in deed and living experience what are otherwise only thoughts. Through this opened ear the soul tarries under the influence of the life and power of God himself. As the words I hear enter the mind and dwell and work there, so through faith God enters the heart, and dwells and works there.

When faith is in full exercise as eye and ear, as the faculty of the soul by which we see and hear God, then it will be able to exercise its full power as hand and mouth, by which we appropriate God and His blessings. The power of reception will depend entirely on the power of spiritual perception. For this reason Jesus said, ere He gave the promise that God would answer believing prayer: "HAVE FAITH IN GOD." Faith is simply surrender. I yield myself to the impression the tidings I hear make on me. By faith I yield myself to the living God. His glory and love fill my heart, and have the mastery over my life.

Faith is fellowship. I give myself up to the influence of the friend who makes me a promise, and become linked to him by it. And it is when we enter into this living fellowship with God himself, in a faith that always sees and hears Him, that it becomes easy and natural to believe His promise as to prayer.

Faith in the promise is the fruit of faith in the promiser. The prayer of faith is rooted in the life of faith. And in this way the faith that prays effectually is indeed a gift of God. Not as something that He bestows or infuses at once, but in a far deeper and truer sense, as the blessed disposition or habit of soul which is wrought and grows up in us in a life of intercourse with Him. Surely for one who knows his Father well, and lives in constant close intercourse with Him, it is a simple thing to believe the promise that He will do the will of His child who lives in union with himself.

It is because very many of God's children do not understand this connection between the life of faith and the prayer of faith that their experience of the power of prayer is so limited. When they desire earnestly to obtain an answer from God, they fix their whole heart upon the promise, and try their utmost to grasp that promise in faith. When they do not succeed, they are ready to give up hope; the promise is true, but it is beyond their power to take hold of it in faith. Listen to the lesson Jesus teaches us in this day: HAVE FAITH IN GOD, the living God; let faith look to God more than the thing promised; it is His love, His power, His living presence that will waken and work the faith.

A physician would say to one asking for some means to get more strength in his arms and hands to seize and hold, that his whole constitution must be built up and strengthened. So the cure of a feeble faith is alone to be found in the invigoration of our whole spiritual life by intercourse with God. Learn to believe in God, to take hold of God, to let God take possession of thy life, and it will be easy to take hold of the promise. He that knows and trusts God finds it easy to trust the promise too.

Just note how distinctly this comes out in the saints of old. Every special exhibition of the power of faith was the fruit of a special revelation of God. See it in Abraham: "And the word of the Lord came unto Abram, saying, Fear not, Abram; I am thy shield. And he brought him forth abroad, and said . . . AND HE BELIEVED THE LORD." And later again: "The Lord appeared unto him, and said unto him, I am God Almighty. And Abram fell on his face, and God talked with him, saying, As for me, behold my covenant is with thee." It was the revelation of God himself that gave the promise its living power to enter the heart and work the faith.

Because they knew God these men of faith could not do anything but trust His promise. God's promise will be to us what God himself is. It is the man who walks before the Lord, and falls upon his face to listen while the living God speaks to him, who will really receive the promise. Though we have God's promises in the Bible, with full liberty to take them, the spiritual power is wanting, except as God himself speaks them to us. And He speaks to those who walk and live with Him. Therefore, HAVE FAITH IN GOD. Let faith be all eye and ear, the surrender to let God make His full impression, and reveal himself fully in the soul.

Count it one of the chief blessings of prayer to exercise faith in God, as the living mighty God who waits to fulfill in us all the good pleasure of His will, and the work of faith with power. See in Him the God of Love, whose delight it is to bless and impart himself. In such worship of faith in God the power will speedily come to believe the promise too: "ALL THINGS WHATSOEVER YE ASK, BELIEVE THAT YE RECEIVE." Yes, see that thou dost in faith make God thine own; the promise will be thine too.

Precious lesson that Jesus has to teach us this day. We seek God's gifts: God wants to give us himself first. We think of prayer as the power to draw down good gifts from heaven; Jesus as the means to draw ourselves up to God. We want to stand at the door and cry; Jesus would have us first enter in and realize that we are friends and children. Let us accept the teaching. Let every experience of the littleness of our faith in prayer urge us first to have and exercise more faith in the living God, and in such faith to yield ourselves to Him. A heart full of God has power for the prayer of faith. Faith in God begets faith in the promise, in the promise, too, of an answer to prayer.

Therefore, child of God, take time, take time, to bow before Him, to wait on Him, to reveal himself. Take time, and let thy soul in holy awe and worship exercise and express its faith in the Infinite One, and as He imparts himself and takes possession of thee, the prayer of faith will crown thy faith in God. — From With Christ by Murray.

DAVID AND THE CHRISTIAN

By Harvey Krogh

DAVID HAD FOUND FAVOR in the sight of God and of the people of Israel and king Saul had become very jealous. Saul was pursuing David in the wilderness of Engedi one day, and being tired, he went into a cave at the time.

"And one of the men of David said unto him, Behold, the day of which the Lord said unto thee, Behold, I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand, that thou mayest do to him as it shall seem good to thee. Then David arose, and cut off the skirt of Saul's robe privily."

It came to pass afterwards that David's conscience hurt him because he had lifted his hand against the Lord's anointed, even so little as to cut off part of his garment. King Saul was the king that God chose for Israel and the one whom God directed his priest to anoint with the sacred oil.

Can you imagine yourself paying such great respect to an enemy so completely delivered into your hands? Would your conscience hurt you if you played such a small trick as to take a piece of your enemy's garment just to let him know you spared him?

David would not let his men touch Saul and Saul arose and went out of the cave. David also arose and went out and cried after him, saying, "My lord the king." And when Saul looked back David bowed his face to the earth. Although Saul had tried many times to kill him, David did not count it against him.

David himself had been anointed to be king over Israel and knew that God would preserve him and remove Saul when it pleased Him. Therefore David put his whole trust in the Lord. He did not tempt the Lord by exposing himself or by putting himself in the way of Saul, but he allowed himself to be led of God in all that he did.

It is hard to believe that David was so meek and retiring concerning the avenging of his enemies and yet was such a mighty man. It was all because he loved the Lord and respected the man whom the Lord chose as king. David did not take matters into his own hands as we most always do. He knew that there were a thousand ways that God could remove Saul from his throne without his unsolicited help. If we could but realize more fully that if we would wait for God's direction before we take things into our own hands, we would be far more richly blessed.

May we be drawn closer to God and may our lives be enveloped by His purposes. May we make our lives as the life of David in that we will follow the Lord's leading rather than man's.

GAIUS GRACCHUS, tribune of Rome, 123 B. C., was the first to order that markers be placed at every one thousand paces along the famous Roman highways. — S. E. H.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

HOW RELIGION CHANGES ONE'S LIFE

ZACCHAEUS THE PUBLICAN

Monday, November 24 — Luke 19:1-10.

"Zacchaeus, make haste, and come down; for to day I must abide at thy house." — V. 5.

JERICHO, CITY OF PALM TREES, was about fifteen miles from Jerusalem, whither Jesus was going. Zacchaeus was a collector of Jericho's custom house. When we consider that the tax collector was not a salaried man, but one who set the taxes and received his profits by the high rates he set, we realize with just what scorn he was held by the people. And we discover, too, the reason for their murmuring, that Jesus was gone to be his guest.

During the meal Jesus evidently pointed out to His host the rule by which He wished His followers to conduct their lives, for Zacchaeus experienced a sudden change of purpose, v. 8. And Jesus, looking into the depths of his heart, knew that he was in earnest. Truly that was a wonderful day for the despised publican! Listen to His gracious words, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

A TAX COLLECTOR

Tuesday, November 25 — Luke 5:27-32.

"They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick." — V. 31.

THIS INCIDENT RELATES the calling of Matthew, or Levi, to be one of Jesus' disciples. We cannot help but admire the instantaneous response of this wealthy publican, who left all his opportunity for acquiring wealth to follow One who had no place to lay His head. Matthew was so engrossed in his new Master that he made a great feast, inviting many publicans and others, in the hope perhaps that they, too, would learn to love the Lord.

This new allegiance made as great a change in Matthew's life as it had in that of Zacchaeus. And it will make just as great a change in ours, if we are really and truly sincere in our obedience.

A TENT MAKER

Wednesday, November 26 — Acts 18:1-6.

"And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks." — V. 4.

AS WE REVIEW in our minds Paul's life, we come to realize that his conversion made the greatest change in any one's life of whom we read in Scripture. Whereas before, Paul had been persecuting and committing to prison all who followed Christ's teaching, he now endured persecution and permitted himself to be imprisoned for the sake of his Lord. He had formerly taught that Jesus was an imposter and not the Son of God. After conversion his central theme was the Christ and the power of His life, death and resurrection. His whole later life was devoted to righting the wrongs of his earlier life.

A LAWYER

Thursday, November 27 — Matthew 22:34-40.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

IN HIS MINISTRY Jesus came in contact with all classes of men. He met the rich and the poor, the great and the lowly, the proud and the humble. He sought any who felt their need of Him, for He came "not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." In this portion of Scripture, we see a lawyer inquiring of Him the greatest commandment of all. It is not recorded whether the lawyer gave his life to Jesus or not. If he did, the rewards would far surpass what little he might have sacrificed.

A JUDGE

Friday, November 28 — Exodus 18:13-20.

"And Moses said unto his father in law, Because the people come unto me to enquire of God." — V. 15.

THE READING FOR TODAY takes us back to the Old Testament to the life of Moses while the children of Israel were journeying toward the promised land. A wonderful promise to Moses is revealed in verse 19, "God shall be with thee." What marvelous changes would be wrought in many depraved lives if our judges of today would do as Moses did, "I do make them know the statutes of God, and his laws . . . and shew them the way wherein they must walk."

A day is soon approaching when all judgments will be righteous and all shall know the only true Judge.

MANY WORKERS

Saturday, November 29 — Romans 16:21-27.

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all."

IN THE SIGHT OF GOD one occupation is not esteemed above another, provided each is honorable. Many different workers were called into His service and each was honored in proportion as his heart was sincere. Many of them, no doubt, had to alter entirely their former methods of life to conform them with the teachings of their Lord. For, "God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." Acts 10:34.

HEAVENLY CITIZENSHIP

Sunday, November 30 — Psalm 15.

"He that doeth these things shall never be moved."

IF WE EXAMINE EACH of the verses in this beautiful Psalm, we will notice how wonderfully they coincide with the teachings of Jesus in His sermon on the mount. Jesus instructed, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." And He likens one that hears His sayings and does them to one whose house is founded upon a rock. Matthew 7:24.

What a wonderful security comes to the one who grasps this promise and obeys! — M. G.

"WHAT SHALL BE THE END OF THESE THINGS?"

DANIEL 12

By Virgil DeBusk

I WANT TO CALL your attention to the eighth verse of Daniel twelve, the question, "O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?" The importance of that question arrests our attention at once. We are passing through this world swiftly and the question on every man's tongue is, "What shall be the end of these things?"

The book of Daniel is a book that tells us of the end of the present order of civilization. More history is couched in these twelve short chapters than you will find in a five-foot shelf library. It is God's word concerning the whole Gentile dominion. Six specific times in the last chapter Daniel discusses "the end". He saw the end of Jerusalem; he saw its glory pass away; he witnessed the destruction of the temple; he saw the residue of people carried into captivity.

He had seen the four world governments that had come to naught, and now facing the future, as God unfolds it to him, pulling aside the curtain of all coming time, Daniel is overwhelmed and exclaims, "O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?" What shall be the end of this age? What shall be the end of governments that are yet to exist? What shall be the end of the people? and with that question his heart melts.

I'm glad we are to have an end to the present evil age. We are told that the world is full of beauty and pleasure. The poet may describe its beauty; he may write his poems about the song of birds, and the leaping, dashing cataract, rushing madly on — but I want to tell you something, this old world is going to end. It is under a curse. It is flood today and drought tomorrow; it is wealth today, and poverty tomorrow. It is music of the marriage altar today, and the funeral dirge tomorrow; today it is the happy reunion and the sad farewell tomorrow. It is wars following rumors of wars; it is tears flowing like a river. Blood crimson the highways; lawlessness reigns on every hand. It is the reign of the evil one.

I am looking and longing for the time to come when we will have a new heaven and a new earth. It will be a world in which the former things have passed away, a world in which you will never see a funeral procession; a world in which never a tear will fall; a world where there will be peace; a world where the sun will never set; paradise restored — a new heaven and a new earth!

"What shall be the end of these things?" There is one great truth that stands out as Daniel looks to the future, a rainbow that arches the sky. The difference between us and Daniel is this: we will see Babylonian corruption; we will see the reign of the evil one; we will see idolatry spreading and waving its red flag. Talk about anarchy! Daniel saw all that but he saw something else beyond the dark cloud. He saw something beyond the reign of the kings of the earth.

What did he see? He said, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms." What else, Daniel? In contrast with the kingdoms of this world, "it shall stand for ever."

Then he said, "I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame." Daniel 7:9, 11.

"I saw in the night visions," — now he is looking beyond our time; he is looking beyond the last battle that shall be fought; he is looking beyond the last flood and the last drought. "I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

ANSWER TO PRAYER

No answer comes to those who pray,
 And idly stand
 And wait for stones to roll away,
 At God's command.
 He will not break the binding cords
 Upon us laid,
 If we depend on pleading words,
 And do not aid.
 But he that prayeth and is strong
 In faith and deed;
 And toileth earnestly, ere long
 He will succeed!

— Anon — Selected by Bro.
Leonard Brady of Los Angeles.

RESTITUTION

Another day is over with the fading of the light,
Weary I lay my burdens down and bid the world good night;
The shadows on the hill tops come and go,
While in the west the sun is sinking low.

High in yon dark blue heavens the stars shine, one by one;
Clear in its silver splendor, rises the radiant moon;
Silent I raise my heart to Thee in prayer,
Light of the world that shineth everywhere.

The murmuring of the ocean falls faintly on my ear,
Where the waves are rolling inward in the distance, low and clear;
O Thou who once didst still the waves of Galilee,
Now in my waking hours, bring peace to me.

Toward thy watch towers, O Jerusalem, I turn my weary eyes,
Weary with a fervid longing for the fields of Paradise,
Where the roses and the myrtle, rich and rare,
Deck thy fair fields, and blossom everywhere.

O Salem, city of our God, thy children scattered wide,
Shall once again be gathered back unto thy side,
And all Ezekiel's solemn vision be,
A type of faithful love — fulfilled in Thee.

Helena M. Hunt.

THE GREATEST SIN. The late Dr. Torrey asked a young man whom he was trying to lead to Christ, if he knew he had committed the greatest sin possible for a man to commit. The young man was quite sure that he had not.

When questioned as to what he considered the greatest sin, he replied, "Murder."

Dr. Torrey opened his Bible to Matt. 22:37, 38, and asked him to read these verses. When he had done so, Dr. Torrey said, "If this is the first and greatest commandment, what must be the greatest sin?"

"I suppose the breaking of that commandment," replied the young man.

He was asked if he had always kept that commandment, if he had always loved God with all his heart, etc. When he confessed that he had not, he was asked, "Of what, then, are you guilty?"

He saw the point, and replied, "I have committed the greatest sin that a man can commit, but I never saw it that way before."

We thus see how perfect love in the heart is the fulfilling of the law, while the greatest sin is the sin of omission in this connection. And this may help us to understand what is meant by the new covenant law being written in the heart. — Selected.

OBEYING GOD'S WILL

By John Denchfield

"The things which are impossible with men are possible with God." — Luke 18:27.

ALL OF US REALIZE that with God, the all-powerful One, all things are possible. He who created the heavens and the earth can do all things. We also realize that, as men and women, we can of ourselves accomplish but very few and small things. We must rely continually on God to sustain us in all our difficulties.

Just as we depend upon Him to help us in all things, so we ought also to be willing to obey Him at all times. Unless we obey Him, He cannot give to us that fullness of strength which we need in order to endure.

We will remember that when the Israelites came to the border of the promised land, they sent spies ahead to bring them a report concerning the land. The spies returned and reported the land fruitful, but the enemy too large for them to cope with. Upon hearing this report, they were afraid and chose to disobey God rather than to go up against this formidable enemy between them and the promised land. They were punished for this act of disobedience by being told that they would not be allowed to enter the land. They had failed miserably because they had refused to obey the Lord.

Have we in times past refused to obey God, refused to follow when He led the way, refused to heed His directions? Yes, and the result has been failure every time.

After the Israelites had heard of the punishment which was to come upon them, they turned about and decided to take the land immediately in spite of the enemy. However God had not directed them in that decision, so that as they went, they went leaving God behind them, spurning His direction. The venture ended in disastrous defeat for Israel. Why? Because they had proceeded according to their own will.

Do we at times attempt to do certain things according to our own will? Then when we fail, do we wonder why?

Having experienced two failures, the Israelites were now content to give God full control. Consequently when the time came, God led them into the promised land where they received many blessings at His hand. Success at last was received only after they had become willing to obey God in all things.

When we allow God to rule our lives, we find that we are successful in all things. We will be able to surmount our trials, no matter how small or how great they may be.

As we continue to do His will, we will recognize His presence more and more as a part of our lives. His will will be made clearer to us so that we will have His direction in all things, at all times, for James says, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." James 4:8.

THE BOOK OF MATTHEW

By Lyman Booth

THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT have their counterpart in the old. For instance, the four gospels correspond to some extent to the Pentateuch, as they contain an account of the origin and law of the covenant; the Acts of the apostles with the historical books, especially Joshua and Judges; the twenty-one epistles with the prophets; and the Revelation with the concluding portions of Daniel and Ezekiel.

The name Gospel is applied to the four inspired histories which contain the "good tidings" of salvation through the life, death and resurrection of Jesus the Christ. The word "gospel" is the old English translation of the Greek word, Evangelium. It was used by way of euphony for "Godspel," that is, "news about God," from spelian, "to tell."

It is common usage to say four gospels, but it would be better to say one gospel under four aspects. Though given by four inspired writers, they really constitute but one gospel, as presented to the minds of four men. The first three give a general view of our Lord's life and His teaching, therefore they are called synoptical. The fourth is doctrinal.

The four books have often been supposed to have been prefigured by the four cherubim seen by Ezekiel in his vision in chapter 1: Matthew as a man; Mark as a lion; Luke as an ox; John as an eagle. The first emphasizes the kingly and human side of the life of Christ; the second, the power and fulness of His living energy; the third, His priestly and mediatorial character; the fourth, His divinity.

Little is known of Matthew's history except what he has recorded of himself. Matt. 9:9. He was the son of Alphaeus and a Hebrew. His name before he began to follow Jesus was Levi. He had been a publican, that is, a collector of tolls and customs imposed on persons and goods crossing lake Gennesaret at Capernaum. No record is made respecting him except his occupation, his call and his farewell feast. Matt. 9:10; Luke 5:29. Of these facts he mentions the first and second only, and modestly omits the third. No saying of his is on record, and he appears for the last time in Acts 1:13.

Matthew wrote mainly for his fellow countrymen. Papias, in the first half of the second century, says he wrote his account in Hebrew, that is, in the Aramaic, and the same statement is made by other writers. But very early writers whose works have come down to us use the Greek. Writing for the Jews, his great object appears to have been to portray our Lord as the fulfillment of the Old Testament promises respecting the Son of David and therefore the Heir to the Jewish kingdom.

As the Son of Abraham, He was the promised Seed in whom all nations should be blessed. Matt. 1:1. He is the one Antitype in whom all other types centered and in whom all are fulfilled: in Him the Old passes into the New Testament; the prohibitions of the law into the encouragement and liberty of the gospel; Sinai into the mount of beatitudes; the prophetic into the teaching office; the priesthood enlarged into redemption by suffering; and kingship into the supreme office of restoring a race to God's favor.

The time and place of writing are uncertain, but it is very probable that it was in Palestine sometime between A. D. 50 and 60. The book is noted for its citations from the Old Testament, which are sixty-five in number. This is expressive of the writer's purpose. The authority of the books of the Old Covenant is always taken for granted, and made the basis of all teaching concerning the kingdom of heaven. The law of Moses is represented as not done away but completely fulfilled, and the great discourses, which are such a peculiar feature of the Gospel, all bear on the work of the Messiah, as Law-giver, Judge, and King.

It is generally supposed that Matthew wrote his book about eight years after our Lord's ascension and before any other part of the New Testament was extant. Whether or not this is correct, it is certain that it was written at a very early date. Many have contended that he wrote in Hebrew, and that we have only a Greek translation of it. But eminent writers have shown satisfactorily that this is a mistake; and that the apostle wrote it in Greek, as we now have it; though they admit that he may have given a Hebrew or Syriac copy of it for use of his fellow countrymen.

He, more than any other apostle, is noted for his frequent reference to the Old Testament Scriptures. He also records more of our Lord's parables, and on the whole, seems to observe the order as to time in which the events occurred. He begins with the genealogy of Christ, in the line of Joseph, the husband of Mary, the mother of Jesus; and relates some circumstances concerning His miraculous conception, birth and infancy.

He gives a brief account of the ministry of John the Baptist; and records the baptism and temptation of Jesus, and His entrance on His public ministry. He next furnishes the narrative of His miracles and discourses, till at length he quite fully records the manner of His crucifixion, death and burial. And having given witness to His glorious resurrection and appearance to His apostles, he closes his history with a few very important words which our Lord is supposed to have spoken immediately before His ascension to heaven.

Matthew's writings are true witnesses to the Messiahship of our Lord, which he has given in the following manner: first, by His lineal descent and divine revelation at His birth, chapters 1 to 4; second, by manifestation of His three offices, Prophet, Priest and King, 5:14; third, by presenting the true nature of His kingdom and its future history, in contrast with that of the ancient times, 16:20; fourth, by His self-sacrifice and humiliation, 21:24; fifth, by prophetic revelation of the judgment of the Jewish people, and also on the world, 24 and 25; sixth, by His priestly presentation of himself as the atoning sacrifice, 26 and 27; seventh, by His exaltation and glorification at the right hand of power, 28.

TALKS ON THE WAY TO LIVE

FOR OUR YOUNGER YOUNG FOLKS

BEING!

BEFORE YOU CAN do you must be! And this is the most wonderful power any one of us possesses — the power to be. Have you not been asked many times what you are going to be when you're grown up? How generally folk believe that you can be anything you choose, tinker, tailor, soldier, sailor, etc. And there is a great deal of truth behind this idea.

The great hero, Nelson, was once returning from India as a youth, feeling ill and unhappy. He was greatly tempted to throw himself over the side of the vessel, so good for nothing did he feel. Suddenly he pulled himself together, and called upon the deeply hidden power within him — the power to be — and cried, "I will live for my country and be a hero yet!" He kept his promise, too!

It was written once of Jesus, "To as many as received him, to them gave he the power to become the sons of God." I remember how my elder brother taught me many things when I was a boy. I admired him so much. He was a sort of picture in my mind to which I worked in making myself. My elder brother gave me power to become. If a human elder brother can do that, how much more should the Divine Elder Brother be able to help us to be.

It is very wonderful how a great holy desire to be something really useful for God and for man can come to victory through the most tremendous obstacles. There was once a boy who though only nine years of age felt in his heart a great desire to be a preacher. He did not see how it could ever be and he did not know then that it was his mother's daily prayer for him. So eager was he that he used to arrange the chairs in the house, when nobody was looking, mount to a small stepladder in front of them and practice preaching.

The years went by and the boy grew very shy and nervous, was unhappy at school and used to stammer and stutter quite a lot. How could he be a preacher? he thought. His father had other plans for him and the lad was too afraid to oppose them. Worst of all, he felt he could not speak in public.

More years went by and the boy was in business. Then one day he found that his friends were saying to one another that he ought to go into the ministry. A sister took up the idea and changed his father's mind. Another friend, a Bible class teacher, spoke to the lad himself seriously about it. The boy still felt, however, that he had grown unfit for it all.

But at last he began to think that his friends knew best. So he made a start. More than once terrible difficulties loomed in the way, but each time something happened to sweep them away. Today that boy is one of the best known of England's ministers, and when I talk to him about it, he always says it was none of his doing. "God just made it happen," he says.

I wonder what God wants you to BE? Have you ever stopped to ask? Whatever else you try to be,

 "Be noble! And the nobleness that lies
 In other men, sleeping, but never dead,
 Will rise in majesty to meet thine own." — Selected.

"When over the fair name of friend or foe
 The shadow of disgrace shall fall, instead
 Of words of blame and proof of thus and so,
 Let something good be said.
 Forget not that no fellow being yet
 May fall so low but love may lift his head;
 Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet,
 If something good be said."

A FRIENDLY SUGGESTION

By R. H. Judd

VARIOUS PORTIONS of Brother Dean's article on "Death and Hell" invite thoughtful consideration, and I should like to throw out a friendly suggestion with regard to one of these.

To me, and I think to others also, the meaning of tartarus, and the condition of those in tartarus has always been a difficult question. It is my opinion (not necessarily a settled conviction) that we have, probably, a solution in the words, "spared not." "God spared not the angels that sinned." 2 Peter 2:4.

From Genesis to Revelation we are taught that it is a God-appointed principle that "the wages of sin is death." Do not the words, "spared not", express exactly the same thought? Let us note a few other scriptures where the same phraseology is employed.

In the verse following the one under consideration, namely, 2 Peter 2:5, we have "and spared not the old world, but saved Noah . . ." Here these words undoubtedly refer to the death of those who were not saved from the flood. Is it not reasonable therefore to conclude that the same words used in the preceding verse carry precisely the same meaning, namely, death?

Take another instance in Romans 8:32: "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all. . ." Here again the reference is unmistakably to death.

Thus tartarus would seem to be to the angels what sheol and hades is to the human race. Where it is located we are not informed. Sufficient for us that the law of sin and death is pronounced and carried out — one law throughout God's entire realm.

That other issues are involved in this consideration is inevitable in that we now see only "in part". But because unrevealed truth still lies ahead is no valid reason why we should not seek to comprehend and harmonize that which is revealed.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"WHATSOEVER THY HAND FINDETH TO DO, DO IT WITH THY MIGHT."

ACTIVITIES IN DIXON, ILLINOIS

THE SENIOR BEREAN CLASS of the Church of God met at the home of Elizabeth Ford, Thursday evening, October 30, for a halloween party which had been planned by their teacher, Mrs. Miller. The decorations were in keeping with halloween. The evening was happily spent with games and stunts. Several prizes were awarded to the winners of the different games. One interesting event of the evening was the appearance of a fortune teller who told the young folks' futures and departed without her identity being known. The teacher then served refreshments, assisted by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Eckert. The twenty-eight young people departed to their homes at a late hour after a pleasant evening.

On Thursday evening, October 30, the junior Bereans met at the church for a halloween party. The basement was decorated with witches, bats, pumpkins and lanterns. The children came in masquerade costumes and even a ghost appeared on the scene, who told the boys' and girls' fortunes. Games were played and a very tempting halloween luncheon was served by the teacher, Mrs. Dauntler, assisted by Mrs. Reis and Mrs. Drew. The children left for their homes at nine o'clock after an enjoyable time.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

DEAR BEREANS: I see by the Berean number of THE HERALD that you claim Mittie Chandler, Burbank, Oklahoma, as an isolated Berean.

Am enclosing one dollar dues for 1930. Will be more prompt, since I know the amount I am expected to pay.

Brother Chandler and I are just home from a visit to our old home in Burbank, where we visited with Brother and Sister J. A. McCurry and grandson, Edward Bartol, who are isolated members of the faith.

May I join with Sister Drew in believing that Berean work is "practical". Her article so perfectly describes the conditions existing thirty years ago, before Berean work was organized. I happened to be one of those to take up Berean study at that time and realize, yes, appreciate, the many helps offered the isolated. Will say that if work counts as stars Sister Anna Drew will have a goodly number in her crown of glory.

All praise to the Berean work.

Mrs. Mittie Chandler,
714 Kentucky St., Graham, Texas.

WE ARE PRINTING the above letter in hopes that more of our brethren will realize the importance of notifying those in charge of the records when you make a change of address, or when you see that the addresses on record are erroneous. Our national secretary is one of the best, and a willing and capable worker, but there is no person living who can keep his books up to date unless he has the active cooperation of every Berean who can give him the information necessary to carry on the work.

There is one other point to which we would like to call your attention. The yearly dues for isolated Bereans are one dollar a year. Our national treasurer is Miss Sybil Guthrie of Mullin, Texas. If you are interested in Berean work, if you want to be a Berean, if you think that the work is worthy of your support, why don't you send your dues to the national treasurer? There are hundreds of our members scattered over the country in localities where there is no Berean organization. Many of them would say if you asked them, if they were Bereans, "Oh yes, certainly I am a Berean." Yet they pay no dues, take no active part in the work, and in the majority of cases the society does not even know where they are.

It isn't so much that that little dollar is so badly needed, although all money put into our treasury can be used to good advantage. It is the fact that when you send in your dues with your correct address you send also a silent message which says, "You know that I am with you in the work. You know where to reach me if you need to call on me. Any time that I can be of any use in the work, I am here."

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Ohio, 1; Illinois, 3; Texas, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

ZACCHAEUS THE PUBLICAN

"Today I must abide at thy house."

IN THE CITY OF JERICHO not far from Jerusalem, there once lived a man named Zacchaeus. One day Jesus was passing through Jericho, and Zacchaeus wanted to see Him, but there was a crowd of people about Him. There was always a crowd of people about Jesus in these days, and Zacchaeus, who was not so tall as other men, could not get near Him or see Him over the heads of the people.

The people would not make way for Zacchaeus, for they were unfriendly toward him because he collected taxes and customs, and was a rich man.

Taxes were the sums of money the Jews were obliged to pay each year to the ruler of the country for the right to live in their homes. Customs were the sums of money the merchants and traders were obliged to pay for the right to sell or to carry through the country such things as silks, perfumes and oils.

The ruler of the country was not a Jew, and for this reason the Jews hated the money they were obliged to pay him and disliked the men that collected the taxes and customs for him.

Zacchaeus was so rich a man that the Jews suspected that sometimes he made them pay larger taxes than they should, and kept some of their money for himself. They suspected he had been dishonest in word and in deed.

When Zacchaeus could not see Jesus because of the crowd, he ran ahead and climbed a tree by the roadside, and waited for Jesus to pass by, for He was to pass that way.

When Jesus came to the place, He looked up at Zacchaeus, and said, "Zacchaeus, make haste, and come down; for today I must abide at thy house."

Zacchaeus made haste, and came down and received Jesus joyfully. But all the people murmured, saying, "He is gone in to lodge with a man that is a sinner."

What it was that Jesus said to Zacchaeus we shall never know. But that day while Jesus was with him there came to Zacchaeus a great love for Jesus, and a great desire to be good. And he grew sorry for every wrong and sinful thing that he had done.

Zacchaeus stood up and said to Jesus, "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and, if I have taken anything wrongfully from any man I will give back four times as much as I took from him."

Because Zacchaeus was sorry for the wrong he had done,

Jesus forgave him. And from that day Zacchaeus became a man who not only knew what was right to do, but a man who tried to do what he knew was right and was pleasing to Jesus, God's Son. It was because he loved Jesus.

— Primary Stories.

THINK! Are we receiving the Lord so joyfully?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Locate Jericho.
2. Learn Luke 19:10.
3. Read Proverbs 28:13.
4. Copy: Zacchaeus — publican, tax collector
Climbed a tree
His Lord to see.

"THE SAVIOR'S CALLING"

"Children, dear, the Savior's calling,
Calling to you to be true,
He is calling, gently calling,
Gently calling, child, to you.
"He is calling, for He loves you,
As He called in olden days,
When the children loved to hear Him
And to follow in His ways."

— Primary Stories.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING FESTIVAL

"In the fifteenth day of the seventh month when ye have gathered in the fruit of the land ye shall keep a feast unto the Lord seven days. And ye shall take you on the first day the boughs of the goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and the willows of the brook.

"Ye shall make you booths of the branches and dwell not in your houses, but in the booths for seven days, that your generation may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt. I am the Lord your God.

"And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless that are within thy gates.

"Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the Lord thy God. Because the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice!" — My Book House.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON IX. — November 30, 1930

ZACCHAEUS THE PUBLICAN

Luke 19:1-10

Devotional Reading: Psalm 15

GOLDEN TEXT

For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost. — Luke 19:10.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Christianizing Business.

Basic Truth. "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." — Col. 3:17.

Outline. I. Business Is God-Appointed. II. Making Business Christian. III. Christianity and Democratic Laws. IV. How Christianity Changes One's Life.

I. Business Is God-Appointed. "Subdue the earth and have dominion over it" was one of God's first directions to man. Gen. 1:28. To maintain the earth under man's dominion is the outstanding business of all ages. It includes every possible phase of righteous human industry. The wise man exhorted, Eccl. 9:10, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." Everywhere in Scripture God's directions have instructed man to earnest work.

Nor is work a part of the curse as some have inferred from Gen. 3:17-19. Rather the striving against thorns and thistles because of the curse made man to sense keenly the results of his sins, but work was indirectly assigned him previously to his sin. Said Jesus, John 5:17, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

II. Making Business Christian. One of earth's greatest causes of distress is, that man seeking to carry out his instinct for self-preservation and for self-provision, becomes covetously greedy, seeking his own pleasure and gratification even at the expense of cheating his fellows out of theirs. Christ introduced the truth that the greatest service to self is to labor in such righteous manner as to provide not only for self, but in so doing to properly regard and provide for others. Such procedure necessitates that the strong shall lend a helping hand to the weak, that the mentally great shall plan earnestly for the simple, that those possessed of great executive powers shall direct and rule equally to the advantage of the man unpossessed of such ability.

To Christianize business would be to establish it in all of its depth and breadth of activity, on Christ's truths. No longer could men and women be submitted to servitude in order that their master alone might profit. Acts 16:16-18. No longer could business be conducted purely for personal profit, regardless of its value to society. Acts 19:24-29. No longer could one generation waste of the earth's natural resources, thus robbing future generations of proper advantages.

On the other hand, to Christianize business is to place it upon a foundation made true and firm by God's own laws. It is to work in such truth and loyalty as will give results most edifying and elevating to the individual and to society. The facts of this are revealed by the description that shall prevail when all things are being finally brought under Christ's hand: the field and the vineyard shall produce abundantly, Amos 9:13, 14; the builder and the planter shall enjoy the works of their hands; violence and oppression shall be no more, Micah 4:1-4, for all people will respect the ways of the Lord God, v. 5; there will be no hurting or destruction throughout the domains of Christ, Isa. 11:1-9; there will be no noxious weed, no piercing thorn, Isa. 55:13. Rather, righteousness and praise, Isa. 61:11, will spring forth everywhere.

Zacchaeus became a striking example as to the manner of Christianizing his business. Like a gardener he went in with both hands, uprooted and destroyed the vicious that was in his business and guarded and maintained the righteous. A business that cannot survive such treatment is not proper for a Christian.

III. Christianity and Democratic Laws. In countries of democratic government where laws are made by the people rather than by the monarch, in proportion as such nations are Christian will they establish and enforce laws that uphold Christian righteousness. Not by the longest stretch of the imagination can political and official corruption, such as is too much practiced in our country and in our day, be associated or classified as Christian. Making business Christian must of necessity include the making and enforcing of Christian laws.

IV. How Christianity Changes One's Life. Zacchaeus, Saul of Tarsus, the executors of our Savior on the cross, are outstanding examples of changes in one's life that are brought about by Christianity. The excuses that the times in which we live or that the fashions and customs make necessary certain allowances which in themselves are unchristian, are lame indeed. Were that true, then the Christian must today allow for and adopt the rapidly growing custom of politics and business to aid and abet so-called racketeering in all lines.

No, a thousand times, no. Rather Christianity transforms the individual from such unthinkable deeds and conduct and directs him in pursuits and activities opposite in their intent.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Take Interest: The man of our lesson today was won to Christ because Christ showed an interest in him. Christ has given us some wonderful examples in personal work. The incident in today's lesson is one. Many people who have been outcasts and have gone into the utmost depths of sin have been won for Christ because some one manifested an interest in them. There are many ways in which we can show an interest in folks and in so doing win their hearts for Christ. Discuss and show how the following may help some one who feels cast down, forsaken, or in need of help:

Be kind to a man when he is down.

Extend a helping hand, give a cheery smile, and a pleasant word to those who are in need, discouraged or forsaken.

Never add a cross, further press a thorny crown, or impose another burden or speak an additional harsh word when one is already faltering or fainting beneath his heavy load.

Restitution: Zacchaeus righted the wrongs he had done when he accepted Christ, and restored fourfold all that he had taken wrongfully. It is a splendid illustration of the effect the gospel has on an individual. It transforms and makes a new man out of the old creature. Does Christianity require that we right our wrongs and correct our mistakes?

— C. E. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

A tax collector, a social outcast, eager as a child to see the great Prophet, climbed into a tree. Jesus seeing him, honored his interest and eagerness by offering, before all those who scorned him, to visit him in his home. The tax collector, used only to the scorn and hatred of his people, was rejoiced by the favor. He hastened down from the tree and received Jesus joyfully, and they started for his home. But he overheard the murmurs that began to go the rounds — Jesus was gone to be Guest with a man that was a sinner. Then Zacchaeus, fearful of losing his new Friend, stood still and anxiously and eagerly revealed to Jesus a life that was far different from the life that had been pinned upon him by the Jewish caste system. "Behold, Lord, I give half my goods to the poor and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation I restore him fourfold."

Zacchaeus had not received salvation, for he had not been touched by the Fatherhood of God through the Son and this entrance into sonship is salvation. But Jesus knew that Zacchaeus was ready to receive salvation for he had received Him joyfully as a child receives favors and had sought His approval. So He said, "This day is salvation come unto this house."

Beneath the various stigmas of man's caste system, there beats many hearts in need and loneliness that are ready to receive salvation. It is into such hearts that Jesus invites himself with the healing and comfort of His companionship and love. — A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

NOTES FROM NEAR AND FAR

We are very glad to report that Bro. Austin is convalescing nicely from his recent illness during which he had to undergo a major operation caused by an impacted wisdom tooth. Bro. Austin suffered a very great deal of pain over a prolonged period which, together with the overwork of months, has left him in a condition requiring an extended rest. However he writes that he will soon return to take up his work.

Let us thank the heavenly Father for answering our prayers and for His continued watch care over Bro. Austin and others who have been ill.

Mrs. Lola Danforth, of Dallas, Texas, is enjoying a visit with her mother, Sr. Clara Chaffee, at Golden Rule Home.

Oregon and vicinity is being canvassed for a religious census at present. The church is cooperating in this effort.

Sr. Curdella Gray of Lanark, Illinois, is convalescing nicely from her recent illness. She was able to be up and dressed for the first time on Sunday, November 16.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Oregon, Illinois, church, Thursday morning, November 27, from 8:30 to 9:30. A Thank offering will be taken for the needy of the town.

Sr. A. J. Chaplin of Arkansas City, Kansas, requests the prayers of the brethren in behalf of her mother, Grandma Reed, as she is familiarly known by a large circle of friends who have grown to love her. Her health has been failing for some time.

The family of Bro. Dale Rouch of South Bend, Indiana, has just passed through a siege of scarlet fever. Sr. Lydia Railsback was their faithful nurse during the quarantine. All are well again and the quarantine has been lifted.

Bro. and Sr. Harold Nokes and family left last week for Los Angeles, California, where they will spend the winter. Bro. Nokes' parents, Bro. and Sr. C. A. Nokes, reside there. Rockford's Sunday School and other church activities will miss them very much.

In Bro. Austin's absence members of the Bible Training Class spoke for the Oregon congregation. Bro. John Denchfield spoke in the morning and Bro. C. E. Lapp in the evening. Good sized, attentive audiences were present and enjoyed these sermons. The Junior Choir gave their first number Sunday evening which was very much enjoyed.

Latest word received from Bro. Judd is to the effect that the cast has not yet been removed from his foot in which all the bones were broken in the accident. The pain has decreased, but he is still confined to his bed, which is hard for an active person such as he is. He is occupying part of the time preparing a series of articles for The Herald which we know will prove of benefit and interest.

DOINGS IN IOWA

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls Dorcas Society met with Mrs. Charles W. Howe on November 5. Although we enjoyed the privilege of getting together and the delicious lunch which our hostess served, we did not forget that the main purpose of the organization is to earn money to erect a building on the Waterloo Camp Ground and we really accomplished considerable. Our president, Mrs. A. J. Eychaner led the devotional. It was the last meeting this year which she could attend, as Mr. and Mrs. Eychaner started on their annual trip to Florida on November 6. They just recently returned from a visit with their daughter, Mrs. J. M. Prime, in Omaha where they spent their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary.

Sr. Alta King filled the pulpit at Gladbrook on Sunday, November 2, in the absence of Bro. J. W. Williams who was called away to preach a funeral sermon.

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls Sunday School has been meeting at 10:00 o'clock each Sunday morning at the W. H. Allard home as usual. There has been preaching at 11:00 o'clock by Sr. Alta King, Bro. A. J. Eychaner, or Bro. Charles Howe.

We enjoy reading similar items about other congregations and trust that some of the readers of The Restitution Herald will enjoy these items.

Blanche A. Harland.

DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

The little man has now reached 366. Let's see if we can't push him as far as 500 by Thanksgiving Day. Then we'll have good reason for giving thanks.

New pledges have been received during the past week from the following:

Ohio, 18; Nebraska, 1; Indiana, 1.

Some of the above in Ohio are for varying amounts from 25 cents per month to $2.00 per year. All are appreciated regardless of the amounts. Your loyal cooperation is what counts. Bro. A. J. Hoke has been busy.

OUR THANK OFFERING

Since last issue Thank Offerings have been received from Mary E. Carter, Hanna M. Barber, Mary A. Woodward and Mrs. Diana Murphy. There are now eight thankful hearts who have thus expressed themselves to us. Some are thankful for the Training Class, some for The Herald, some for God's goodness to them in general ways. What are you thankful for?

THE VISITOR Mother to Son

"The Bible a True Book Revealing the Secrets of Life," is the title to the New Visitor. This book is suitable for a gift book. It contains 180 pages and is intended for a companion book to the Visitor of 1912. I am very thankful to publish this book I promised so long ago. The high cost of printing will make it an expensive book, but I will make a special rate of two for one dollar to any of our people who will send in orders at once. Address Harriet E. Boice, 1009 South Wright Street, Champaign, Illinois.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

On November 9 the Sunday School numbered 223, which is the largest attendance at a regular Sunday School session in the history of the church, surpassing even Rally Day by five. Imagine if you can 223 people assembled upstairs in our little auditorium which seats 100 people! And we have only just commenced to work. Do we need a new church?!

The opportunity which God has given to us here is the largest that can be imagined. And the writer wishes to say that in all his experience he has never seen a more faithful and energetic group of workers. May God give us wisdom to make proper decisions; grace to exercise love and kindness toward each other; and strength and courage to push forward to accomplishments far greater than ever conceived yet.

Many compliments were heard upon the choir work recently. Also much interest has been shown in the series of evening sermons on outstanding characters of the Bible, as is evidenced by the fact that the house is practically full every Sunday night, the audience averaging almost as large as the morning.

F. E. Siple.

AT ELDORADO, ILLINOIS

Bro. Paul M. Hatch is now in the midst of a series of meetings with the Eldorado brethren. All those finding it possible to attend will be both strengthened themselves and will strengthen the brethren there.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: I have just been reading The Herald, and I find so many things of interest that I am thankful it comes once a week, for it brightens our home. There is no class of this faith near here but we do the best we can to follow the teachings of Christ, praying that we may be faithful unto the end. Pray for us.

Yours in faith,
N. Goodreau.

J. J. SNODGRASS

Bro. J. J. Snodgrass was born in Clinton county, Indiana, October 6, 1858, and died November 7, 1930. He and Allie Bond were united in marriage on December 20, 1906. Bro. Snodgrass was a farmer. For many years he has been a member of the Hillisburg Church of God and treasurer of the Conference Board of the Church of God in Indiana.

Bro. Snodgrass was an upright Christian gentleman. He was ever willing to help in the Lord's work, giving freely of his money and time. He leaves the wife, two brothers, three sisters, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held by the writer on November 9, after which he was laid away to sleep until Jesus comes.

J. H. Anderson.

HERALD RECEIPTS

E. E. Giesler; Daniel N. Davis; Mrs. Nora Johnson; James Browning; Mrs. E. Platts; Vivian Magaw; M. A. Woodward; Mrs. Diana Murphy; Fred C. Smith; John W. Burget; C. W. Dean; Louise M. Imes; Mrs. J. E. Roose; W. A. Reid; Mrs. Wm. Shepley; Scrappine R. Cleek.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

100 200 300 400 500 600 700 800 900 1000

When I reach the goal it will be because you — a thousand of you — have helped me along. And when that goal has been reached and the Gospel work which I am to do is done, it will not be I who has done it, but you, with a small portion of what the Giver of All has given to each one.

Remember! I progress only so far as I am pushed by YOU!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

TRAINING CLASS NEWS

WE HAVE BEEN HAVING only one hour classes the past two weeks, owing to the absence of Bro. Austin on account of sickness. We pray that he will soon be restored to health and again take up his duties as Bible teacher of our class.

Our regular bi-monthly class meeting was held Tuesday evening, November 5. We discussed "The Purpose and Ideals of the Church."

We are now studying the kings of Judah and Israel, and are making charts showing what the various countries were doing at the same time. When they are completed we will have our Ancient History in a brief and compact form for ready reference at any time.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday are devoted to History, one hour a day under Sr. Gesin. On Thursday mornings we study English, and have a "Good Speech" box in which the errors in English made by the students are noted and corrected. Every Friday from 10 to 11 a. m. is devoted to practice sermons, the members of the class speaking in turn each week. We have been promised a history test on Tuesday morning.

Lucille LeCrone, Sec.

"THOSE WHO HAVE RENDERED the greatest service to the world asked nothing and gave everything. God will not look you over for medals, degrees, or diplomas, but scars."

— Elbert Hubbard.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

THE RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: The soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final destruction of the wicked, 2 Thess. 1:9; the restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint-heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13 the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Illinois, under the Act of March 1879.

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample Copy, Free.

Receipts.—The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

To Stop Paper.—It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

Change of Address.—When ordering a change of address be sure to send us both old and new addresses.

“IT IS I; BE NOT AFRAID”

By Cecil A. Smead

LATE ONE NIGHT, nineteen hundred years ago, a little boat was crossing the Sea of Galilee. The disciples of Jesus, in the boat, were rowing hard, but were having difficulty because of a high head wind which was piling the waters into towering waves that tossed the little boat about like a cork. They were afraid and probably wished that their Master were present. But they had left Him on the shore where, after sending the multitude away, He had gone up on a mountain to pray to His Father.

Meanwhile He had sent His disciples away across the little sea; the storm had arisen; and they were afraid. Suddenly, to make matters worse it seemed, they saw a figure moving lightly upon the surface of the water, rising and falling, bobbing up and down. It could not be human they thought; it must be a phantom. Perhaps it might be their Master. If so, He must be dead and this was His ghost; for people were superstitious then, too. At any rate, their fear was increased.

Then He called to them, “It is I; be not afraid.” Or, as the Greek words signify, “I am; be not afraid.” They were safe. He lived, and He was with them to calm the raging sea and bring them safely to shore.

Christ has gone up to heaven to be with the Father. He is our High Priest to make intercession for us. Heb. 4:14. He is coming again to receive His own unto himself that where He is, we may be also. Meanwhile He has given us a task. He has set us to cross the sea of the world, to labor in a world of sin, but to keep separate and not be engulfed in the waters of sin.

We are supported in the vicissitudes of life by the knowledge that Christ lives, and that He is coming back to earth to be with us. We know that He lives because we have the words, “It is I”, “I am”, coming to us in the every day occurrences of life. We recognize His spirit working within us. We are led to do things oftentimes that we can see no good reason for; yet later we find that those things have strengthened our faith, brought someone to Christ, or in some way have helped to bring honor to His name. It is just a manifestation to us that Christ lives and says, “I am,” that He, our High Priest, is making intercession for us.

The Israelites, waiting in the holy place of God’s tabernacle while their high priest went into the holy of holies, knew that their high priest lived because of bells around the bottom of his skirt which rang whenever he moved. We know that our High Priest lives because of the working of His spirit within us and about us. Finally, when our High Priest does come, we will recognize Him. We will know that He lives and has come to save us, because we find His words in John 14:19, “Because I live, ye shall live also.”

THE WORD OF OUR GOD

By Lucille LeCrone

WE HAVE COME TO THE TIME of the year when nature, judging by the plant life, seems to be dead. The beautiful flowers of the summer are faded and gone; the leaves have turned brown and have fallen, leaving the trees standing gaunt and bare; the grass is dry and withered. The shrubbery, although still green, has been frozen and is no longer beautiful. The beauty and the richness of all are perished.

In contrast with this picture I like to study the words of Isaiah 40:8, “The grass withereth, the flower thereof fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever.” What a contrast, and what a beautiful thought, “The word of our God shall stand for ever”!

The flowers blossomed for a short while and now are gone. Next year others will come and beautify the earth for a while, then they, too, shall pass away. Nothing can replace God’s Word. Nothing will be needed to replace it, because it shall stand forever. It does not fade, wither, nor perish and the longer we have it, the more beautiful it becomes to us.

If we have His Word hid in our hearts, no one can take it away from us. It is our possession forever. His Word has come to us through the centuries unchanged. People have tried to tear it down and destroy it. They have tried to prove that it is false and have persecuted those who believed it.

“But the word of our God shall stand for ever.” Instead of fading, it becomes brighter and dearer to us each day, because we realize that we are nearing the time when every word He has spoken shall have been fulfilled.

Let us remember then that “the grass withereth, the flower thereof fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand for ever.”

LEAVE TOMORROW WITH GOD

WOULD IT NOT BE BETTER to leave tomorrow with God? That is what is troubling men; tomorrow’s temptations, tomorrow’s difficulties, tomorrow’s burdens, tomorrow’s duties.

Martin Luther, in his autobiography, says: “I have one preacher that I love better than any other on earth; it is my little tame robin, who preaches to me daily. I put my crumbs upon my window sill, especially at night. He hops on the sill when he wants his supply, and takes as much as he desires to satisfy his need. From thence he always hops to a little tree and lifts his voice to God and sings his carol of praise and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing, and goes fast to sleep, and leaves tomorrow to look after itself. He is the best preacher that I have on earth.”

THANKSGIVING NUMBER

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 25, 1930

NUMBER 8

THANKSGIVING AND PRAISE

O sing unto the LORD a new song: sing unto the LORD, all the earth.

Sing unto the LORD, bless his name; shew forth his salvation from day to day.

Declare his glory among the heathen, his wonders among all people.

For the LORD is great, and greatly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods.

For all the gods of the nations are idols: but the LORD made the heavens.

Honour and majesty are before him: strength and beauty are in his sanctuary.

Give unto the Lord, O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD glory and strength.

Give unto the LORD the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come into his courts.

O worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness: fear before him, all the earth.

Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof.

Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice

Before the LORD: for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with truth. — Psalm 96.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"O give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name: make known his deeds among the people. Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: talk ye of all his wondrous works. Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord." — Psalm 105:1-3

THE MAGNET OF GRATITUDE

THE MAGNET IS REALLY quite a wonderful device. A workman may know that very fine particles of iron are scattered through a pile of sand. If he runs his fingers through the sand in an attempt to discover them, he will fail. But let him take a magnet and draw it through the sand, and the innumerable particles of iron will be found clinging thickly to it.

The thankless heart may be compared to the fingers in the sand. One who goes about with dismal countenance, dwelling forever on his trials and tribulations, attracts no one to himself. He does not discover any reason for gratitude in himself nor in any whom he meets. He forgets how good God is to him, forgets that He mercifully overlooks his grumblings and complaining.

But the thankful one? Ah, how different! As the magnet finds the iron, so the thankful heart finds innumerable reasons for gratitude. Such a one sees in every circumstance of life evidences of God's loving-kindness, of His tender mercies. And by his very cheerfulness he attracts others to himself, who, in turn, discover anew God's goodness to them.

If you have reason to be grateful, and who has not? let it shine out from your countenance, radiating thankfulness to all with whom you associate. Soon others will reflect your joy and find countless other reasons for gratitude to the loving heavenly Father.

"My mouth shall shew forth thy righteousness and thy salvation all the day; for I know not the numbers thereof." Psalm 71:15. — M. G.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

SURGEON, THE GREAT PREACHER, once said, "We breathe in the atmosphere of heaven by prayer, and we breathe it out again by praise."

As we stop to think of it, how true it is! The devoted follower of God can learn of Him intimately by no better means than by prayer. It is through prayer that we imbibe His Spirit, that we come close to Him. As we talk to Him daily, hourly, we grow closer to Him and He to us. Even as we come to know better an earthly friend by frequent communion with him, just so do we know our heavenly Friend.

Try as we may, physically, to inhale and not exhale, it cannot be done. In the Christian life we cannot live merely by breathing in of God's Spirit. We just must breathe it out again to those around us, if we would grow and develop as we should. And this breathing out resolves itself into praise.

"It is just as necessary that the love of God should flow in and out of the Christian as that air should flow in and out of the lungs and that the blood should flow in and out of the heart," said Spurgeon further, in commenting on prayer and praise.

Through constant communion with our Father in heaven we come to learn of Him, His goodness and mercy, His longsuffering and gentleness, His abiding strength and power. And as these things come to mean more and more to us, we cannot keep them to ourselves; we just have to tell others about them. And thus we breathe out praise to our God and to His Son, our Savior.

"For thy lovingkindness is before mine eyes: and I have walked in thy truth: that I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works." Psalm 26:3, 7.

Let us say with David, "I will bless the Lord at all times: his praise shall continually be in my mouth."

— M. G.

MAKE A JOYFUL noise unto the LORD, all ye lands. Serve the LORD with gladness: come before his presence with singing.

Know ye that the LORD he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name.

For the LORD is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations. — Psalm 100.

"O come, let us sing unto the LORD: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation."

FROM A THANKFUL HEART

THE FATHER IN HEAVEN has been good to me. As time goes on I realize more and more my dependence on Him. Without Him, we have no promise of a future life and nothing in this life. "In him we live, and move, and have our being." To me this means everything, for without Him we could not even exist. Praise His Holy Name!

I have many things for which to be thankful, such as life and health and strength and a right reason of mind with which I try to be of some little service to Him. Without Him, I could do nothing along this line and He must be given all the credit for anything I have done or still may do for Him.

His love in sending His Son into the world to give His life that we, poor mortals, might have life, means everything to those who have accepted the Christ as their Savior. It seems that no greater thing can ever be done, except the fulfilling of this promise, which will be done in the Father's own good time.

If each will pause and count the blessings that he himself enjoys and that come from the Father, no doubt they will be many more than we had thought without just pausing long enough to consider them. So dependent are we on the Father that we should not fail to acknowledge to Him our thanksgiving and praise for His tender mercies and His great love.

Lydia A. Railsback.

A THANKSGIVING SONG

"Be still, and know that I am God, and will be exalted in all the earth."

WITH OUR FINITE MIND we on this Thanksgiving of nineteen hundred and thirty, raise our heart to God in humble adoration for His great majesty, power and authority. We are so thankful for His omnipotence, His omnipresence and omniscience. In Him lie all our past, present and future blessings. Through His great love, a Redeemer was provided for all. A plan was given that we might be co-workers in the future age with Christ in blessing all families of the earth. We shall meet the ancient patriarchs and loved ones who sleep the death sleep, when all things shall be made new.

The old order shall pass away and a new one ushered in. Then, dear ones in Christ, will be indeed such a Thanksgiving that all will join in one glad anthem, "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, good will to man." For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea.

Just now we have, of course, many material blessings necessary for our present mortal existence, for which we are very, very thankful.

"When upon life's billows we are tempest tossed,
When we are discouraged, thinking all is lost;

Let us count our many blessings, name them one by one,
And it will surprise us what the Lord hath done."

So we trust each of us may prove true to our high calling in Christ Jesus and be able to sing that future Thanksgiving song.

May Moore, Nebraska.

HOW WE SHOW OUR GRATITUDE

By Lyman Booth

TO SIMPLY SAY, "I thank you," does not in common usage express any inward, heartfelt thankfulness. The expression is too often used in compliance with a common custom, merely for manner's sake, with little or no thought of duty, gratitude or obligation.

It has been a custom for many years for the President of the United States to designate the last Thursday of November as a day of national thanksgiving and praise to God for national and personal blessings received during the year. This is perfectly proper if wisely observed; but I fear that as a nation we have lost sight of the importance of the day. We have forgotten the duty we owe to Him who has favored us with so many blessings. And instead of prayer and praise, the great majority have made it an occasion for excessive feasting and undue indulgence in worldly sports. It has been wisely said that the best way to express or manifest our thankfulness is to render some worthy service in return for a gift or favor. This shows appreciation much better than lip service. They who use few words, but are constantly employed in friendly deeds will be remembered while others may be forgotten.

One who receives favors from another becomes a debtor to the other and should realize his duty to pay. We read, "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." James 1:17. Since a man can receive nothing except it be given him from Heaven, we become debtors to God and He is our most merciful Creditor.

We are therefore in duty bound to pay the debt we owe Him for the manifold blessings which we daily receive from His gracious bounty. This we can only do by voluntary and loving service.

I could not were I to try,
Count the many blessings
Which my Father doth supply;
They come unbidden, one by one,
And though I'm slow expressing
My thanks for all that He has done,
Still they come without ceasing,
And all the while increasing;
Therefore I will daily raise
My voice to thank and praise
The Giver of every good.

LET US GIVE THANKS

By Alice B. Curtis

Brief autumn days their lengthening shadows throw,
Across the threshold of the closing year;
The clouds are heavy with a threat of snow,
The woods look lone and drear.
Now Nature dons a garb of somber gray,
She that the early autumn richly gowned;
And she is wreathed with bittersweet today,
Whom June with roses crowned.

The plumed corn that grew so straight and fair,
In serried ranks like soldiers militant,
Has lost most of its sturdy, upright air,
And now stands brown and bent.
Loosed by the elfin fingers of the frost,
The last tight-clinging nuts have rattled down:
The trees their gay companionship have lost;
The birds have southward flown.

The golden pumpkins in the barn are stored,
The wheat is safely garnered in the bin,
Full presses have their wine and cider poured,
To cheer the hearts of men.
The orchard trees hold up their empty arms,
Their blushing fruit in pit and cellar lies;
And from hearth fires in cities and from farms,
Gray curls of smoke arise.

God's cattle graze upon a thousand hills;
The earth is His with all its teeming soil,
He still supplies the wasting meal, and fills
The failing cruse with oil.
The Lord is great, and merciful and good,
And every creature on His care depends;
He hears the ravens when they cry for food,
His care to all extends.

How much of love and gratitude we owe,
To Him for life and home, for love and friends;
And for the blessed hope that we shall know,
The life that never ends.
And as we thank Him for each ample store,
Let us remember those who have less cheer,
And praise Him who now, as in days of yore
With goodness crowns the year.

“THE TEST OF THANKFULNESS is really not what you have to be thankful for, but whether any one else in the world has reason to be thankful that you are living.”

“A MAN'S LIFE consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.” — Luke 12:15.

EVERY DAY A DAY OF THANKS-GIVING

By Lottie E. Young

ONE OF OUR NATIONAL HOLIDAYS is Thanksgiving Day, when men are supposed to praise the Giver of all blessings for His numerous gifts to them. But how much happier we would be, as individuals and as a nation, if we spent 364 days in thanking the Father, and just a single day in grumbling about our trials! Don't you think we would soon be so ashamed of that one day that it would slip entirely out of our calendar?

The Apostle Paul gives a wonderful remedy for the all-prevailing worry which darkens so many lives, and prevents men and women from rendering praise and thanks-giving to their heavenly Father as they should. This advice is found in Phil. 4:6: “In nothing be anxious, but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God.” And then follows the blessing which will come if this rule is heeded: “And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and your thoughts in Christ Jesus.” The four parts of each petition we make to God should consist of adoration, confession, praise and thanksgiving, or, as the Apostle Paul puts it, “giving thanks always for all things to God.”

Just what is the meaning of thanksgiving? It is the acknowledging and confessing with gladness the benefits and mercies which God has bestowed upon us. The Bible is full of this spirit of thankfulness from the days described in Genesis when men built altars and sacrificed lambs and bullocks to the God who had signally blessed them. And it will continue until the time told of by John the Revelator, when with angels the redeemed shall sing the wonderful hymn of “blessing and glory and wisdom and thanksgiving and honour and power be unto our God for ever and ever.”

The three greatest blessings for which daily thanks should be rendered is the knowledge that we have a Father in heaven who hears the faintest call of His children and answers their petitions in the best way; a Savior who was tempted and tried in all points like as we are and so knows how to help every one of us; and a Bible which clearly points out the way of salvation and promises a “crown of life” to all overcomers.

We should also be thankful for the devoted workers in the National Bible Institution who are striving to make the Church of God a praying, working and giving body. And the best way we can show our appreciation of them is by every member standing behind them and PUSHING HARD. Let us remember it is the union of Faith AND Works which accomplishes great things and will receive the Master's “well done” in the day of reckoning.

REASON FOR THANKFULNESS

TO WHOM SHOULD WE BE thankful? To father, mother, husband, wife, child, or friend? Perhaps to all of these, for their acts of love and patience. But how did we come to have these dear friends, and how did it happen that they are our friends?

God was the Giver, and in each member of this wonderful family He has implanted the gracious attribute of love. A very small word, but O! it means so much, for without it we become miserable, unkind, selfish, hard-hearted. Love molds each human trait into godlikeness. Love shines through every fault or shortcoming, and makes us thankful for these friends. It brings out our real thank offering at this time of

THANKSGIVING

We do not have to wait and think why we are thankful, for our mind quickly turns to our wise heavenly Guide. Our hearts are full of joy because we are one of the called-out ones, called when we heard the pleading voice of Jesus saying, "Come unto me all who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for you shall be filled."

We have never failed to receive what we have asked for, and we mean to follow on until we reach the end of the way and the gates eternal shall open. Then we shall see the everlasting hills of joy and peace, where we may forever be workers together with God.

He who is working out His great plan will make no mistakes. So if we strive to follow that wise plan all will be well with us. But O, how careful we must be that we do not make mistakes and lose sight of the goal. And we need not if we but stay close to the side of the Guide, and carefully read the waymarks along the road. For He has with great care had them placed in a Book so we can easily turn to them and be sure we are right, and be safely led home to Father's house where His dear Son has said He will wait for us, meeting us on the road. John 14:3. O joy unspeakable! Jesus is really coming back to claim all the faithful ones.

THE TRAINING CLASS

Again, we need not stop and wonder why we should thank God when we look around and see the Training Class, pushing ahead, seeking for more knowledge of God, more spiritual life, that they may be able to show others the path to eternal life.

The past nine years have been years of hardships in many ways, much sacrifice, sleepless nights, weary days, aching hearts, earnest prayer for guidance. There are not many who realize what these nine years have meant to the diligent workers in the National Bible Institution, working against financial odds all the time. O, if people could understand, they would be more earnest in the work. Many are and we thank God for them. Others who might do more, are just thoughtless, perhaps, and do not know the great needs. But O, we are thankful for the loyal workers, the willing ones who love the work and the truth for which it stands.

When we think of the young men who are now in the field, with their well-filled churches, and see the others working to be by their side in the blessed gospel call, we thank God and work on. The National Bible Institution has made it possible to continue publishing THE RESTITUTION HERALD, a paper we are glad to send into any home seeking for spiritual help.

Again, we thank God for the beautiful little church building in Oregon. As we enter its sacred portals, we are greeted with beautiful flowers, gifts from those who love to adorn God's house with nature's lavish treasures. The house, as it is entered, seems to open its sacred arms to welcome its people and pastor, Bro. Austin, who earnestly endeavors to lead his flock into paths of righteousness, encouraged by Sr. Rogers at the organ and her faithful choir loyally performing their part of the worship. When Bro. Austin is called away, which often happens, there stands ready the Training Class to fill the gap, a band of earnest students studying to make themselves, workmen who need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. And they give us some splendid words of gospel truth.

And O, how glad, to see the class of young boys and girls so quiet as the minister tells of God and His love, joining their young voices in praise to the God who gives them life and health. We hope in the years to come they may learn to love the God who is so good to His children.

Then the greenhouse. How thankful we are for a Christian man among the beautiful flowers at the greenhouse. A kind, gentlemanly hand is ready to grasp yours as you enter the rooms of beauty and see the wonders of nature brought out by his knowledge of botany. God bless him and spare his life for his chosen work.

GOLDEN RULE HOME

Thankful again for the beautiful home for the aged. We have a matron willing to do her part every day. And though not as strong physically as we would wish, she tries to meet the many daily cares and trials patiently and kindly, asking God to guide and temper the various winds. Many perplexing days come and God only can bring all things out right.

There, too, when the evening meal is finished, the Book of God is brought to the table and in turn each one reads and offers prayer for God's guidance and care. We thank God for a home where each one can kneel and thank Him for His many blessings.

May God keep us thankful all the time He lets us live. And may He fit us for the blessed kingdom when Jesus comes, is the prayer of Sister Woodward.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO MARK

By Lyman Booth

MARCUS WAS THE SURNAME of this writer of the second Gospel. His Hebrew name was John, the son of Mary, whose home at Jerusalem became the refuge and church of the earliest of the Christian community. Acts 12:12. He was a nephew or cousin of Barnabas and the attendant of the apostles, Paul and Barnabas, on their first mission. Acts 13:1-5. He returned home from Perga, Acts 13:13, and was not permitted by Paul to join them on their second mission. He then joined with Barnabas, but later became reconciled to Paul, Col. 4:10, who charged Timothy to bring him with him to Rome during his second imprisonment as one who was profitable unto him for the ministry. He is also mentioned in 1 Peter 5:13. Peter calls him his son, implying by that expression that Marcus had been converted by his ministry and served with him.

This Marcus or Mark was undoubtedly the writer of the Gospel in which we now enter. But whether he was or was not a different person from John surnamed Mark, of whom we read in the Acts of the apostles and in Paul's epistle, is a disputed question by many able inquirers. Acts 12:12; 13:5-13; 15:37-39; Col. 4:10; 2 Tim. 1:11. The celebrated Gratius took one side and Lardner, the other. It is however agreed that this gospel was written under the immediate direction of the apostle Peter and received by the church on his authority. The apostle John had seen the three gospels and wrote his, adding thoughts the others omitted.

Church history informs us that the Gospel by Mark had the approbation of Peter, and that Mark was instructed by him. One Papias conversed with the disciples of the apostles about the beginning of the first century. He mentions the writings of Matthew and Mark as extant and written by them. Justin Martyr, A. D. 150, mentions the Gospels as universally received. He most likely conversed with some who were old men and learned from them that the gospels were extant when they were young. Between A. D. 70 and Justin there were authors who were called "Apostolical" of whom were Clemens, Hermas, Barnabas, Ignatius. These men refer to the Gospels and Epistles.

Justin Martyr cites passages from every one of them, declaring they contained the words of Christ. Irenaeus says there were no more or less Gospels received by the church. He quotes passages from every chapter of Matthew and Luke, from fourteen chapters of Mark, and from twenty chapters of John. Tatianus, who lived in the same century, wrote a "Harmony of the Gospels," which Whitby called "the Gospel gathered out of the four Gospels."

Some have asserted that Mark merely wrote an abridged account from Matthew. He doubtless records many of the same facts and a few of the same discourses and parables which are recorded by Matthew; but he omits many things and adds others. He records some miracles more fully than Matthew. So there is no just reason to suppose that he intentionally took anything from Matthew. But he wrote such items as were especially brought to his knowledge and impressed on his mind. The coincidence seems to have arisen rather from the circumstance of the two evangelists writing the history of the same events than from any design in the mind of either. But, as it has pleased God to confirm His truth by several witnesses, it will never be improper for a humble and pious inquirer to review the same transactions as given by the evangelists which most affected his mind. While the simplicity common to them all is an internal proof, however, they may vary the narrative, that they were not left to be misguided by their personal feelings to use and depression not suited to the truth and dignity of the subject.

Mark wrote primarily for the Gentiles which is made quite evident, first, because he made no reference to the Jewish law; second, he gives no genealogy of Christ; third, he explains words which could not be understood by Gentiles, such as Boanerges (Mark 3:17), Talitha cumi (5:41), Corban (7:11); fourth, he makes explanations which Jews would not have required (1:5; 2:18 and 13:3); and, fifth, he uses Latin words which others do not.

It is probable that he did his writing at Rome and before the destruction of Jerusalem at about 63 to 70. True to his symbol, "the lion," he brings out plainly the divine power of his Lord in the fullness of his living energy. He gives only a few of his burning words of controversy and denunciation, and his lengthy discourses. He gives event after event rapidly. His favorite word is "immediately," which occurs forty-one times.

The book may be divided as follows: first, the preparation, 1:1-13; second, the works of Christ in Galilee, 1:14 to 7:23; third, the works of Christ in northern Galilee, 7:24 to 10:50; fourth, the works of Christ in Peraea, 10:1-31; fifth, the last journey to Jerusalem and the passion, 10:32 to 15:47; sixth, the resurrection and the ascension.

THANKFUL

WE HAVE AGAIN COME to the season when we wish to thank our heavenly Father for all that He has done for us during the past year.

I feel that I have many, many things for which to be thankful. I am thankful that by His help I am still in the race, and one year nearer the goal.

I am thankful for the progress of the N. B. I. work during the past year, and thankful that our heavenly Father has raised up such a spiritually minded man as Bro. Austin, one who has such a clear conception of the deeper things of God, who is giving the church the spiritual food which is needed to build us up in the most holy faith.

I trust that we are all thankful for the wonderful articles which Bro. Austin is giving us through THE HERALD.

Hanna Barber.

MARVELOUS ARE THY WORKS

By C. E. Lapp

"O praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people."

WE ARE LIVING IN A DAY and age of many marvelous wonders. Inventions of every sort are being made day after day and scientific research is bringing to light, from time to time, vast powers and forces that are being harnessed and put under the control of man to do with as he chooses. Rich deposits of metal are being unearthed; great quantities of coal and fuel have been brought to the surface of old mother earth; and thousands upon thousands of barrels of oil gush forth from beneath the surface of this old world in which we live.

We live in a world in which people rush to and fro at a terrific pace. One century ago, when the first trains were put out for public use, very few would have anything to do with them. But as time went on, people made more and more use of them until at the present time thousands upon thousands of people cross and recross the continent at a terrific rate of speed and think nothing of it.

Very little faith was shown in steamships at first, but now majestic ocean going liners carry people to every port in the world. The horseless carriage or automobile is now used the world over, on every continent, in every nation, making land travel comparatively swift and sure to what it used to be. Aviation is making great strides toward becoming one of the greatest commercial powers that now exists. Truly, we are living in a wonderful age.

But let us pause for just a brief moment in our mad rush through life and take an inventory of mankind and all his accomplishments. When we think of that wonderful power called electricity, we are speechless when told of the things that can be done with its power. Yet can man vaunt himself up and brag about the achievements accomplished by its use? Not so! God Almighty first put that power there and it was only because of His great foresight that man discovered it and has since been using it for his own needs and comforts of life.

Did not God put the different metals in the earth? Man is now bringing them forth to be used in hundreds of different ways for his use and enjoyment. Did not God furnish life for man and allow him to discover combinations of these metals that they might be built into giant industries? Has not God made it possible by certain of His laws for man to fly through the air as a bird and to carry mighty loads in heavier than air machines?

Surely, God has allowed or brought to pass all of these wonderful things and it is only because He has put all these things here for man's use and for his own welfare that he can use them. It is not because of man's greatness or wisdom or knowledge that all these things have come to pass but simply because they were put here by our God for man's benefit.

Therefore we can very aptly say with the Psalmist,

"Praise the Lord, all ye nations, praise him all ye people." For not only we as individuals have been happier, but all nations have benefited greatly because of God's goodness toward all of us.

A PRAYER OF THANKSGIVING

THE OTHER DAY I heard a man make the statement over the radio that it is almost impossible for people to pray without asking for something from God. He said he was at a church once when the pastor called on different ones in his congregation for prayers of thanksgiving. He requested them not to ask for anything in their prayers but to make them strictly prayers of thanksgiving. Their efforts, he said, were amusing because it was so hard for them to keep from asking favors of God.

If we stop and meditate we will find it not as difficult as he would have one believe, because there are so many things to thank Him for. Here is my prayer of thanksgiving.

Father in heaven, I thank Thee for Thy loving kindness, tender mercy and watch care exercised over me each day. I thank Thee for the blessings Thou hast so graciously bestowed upon me during the past year, for I recognize Thee as the Giver of every gift.

I thank Thee for the sunshine and the rain and the air I breathe; for food, for raiment, for shelter and for all the beauties of nature. I thank Thee for life with all its trials and temptations, joys and sorrows which draw me closer to Thee and make me realize that I am weak and must depend on Thee for strength.

I am thankful, dear God, that I live in a country where I can worship Thee as I think best, and can praise and honor Thee whenever I wish. I thank Thee for a healthy body and a strong mind so I can worship and serve Thee, so I can understand Thy Word and tell it to others. I thank Thee for the privilege I have of attending the Training Class and for the daily associations with those of like precious faith.

And, dear heavenly Father, I do greatly thank Thee for two dear, kind, loving parents who are always working and sacrificing for my benefit, for two dear brothers whom I love, whom I can point to with pride and say, "These are my brothers."

I thank Thee for Thy Son, Jesus Christ, who died on the cross, was buried and rose again and now sits at Thy right hand, and I thank Thee for the hope that I have in Him.

Lucille LeCrone.

"WHEN WE DEPEND upon organizations, we get what organizations can do; when we depend upon education, we get what education can do; when we depend upon man, we get what man can do. But when we depend upon prayer, we get what God can do."—Dr. A. C. Dixon.

IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS

By Samuel E. Haney

“And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us as far as Appiiforum, and The three taverns: whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage.” — Acts 28:15.

NO ONE BUT PAUL HIMSELF should be able to tell which one of his many heartrending and nerve racking experiences was the worst. Read 2 Cor. 11:23-28. But his experience leading up to our text was evidently more than even this hardened, battle-scarred warrior could have surmounted had not divine power come to his rescue — an angel of God, saying, “Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar, and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.” Acts 27:23, 24. Paul was en route to Rome, but God permitted the elements (which are subject to Satan, Eph. 2:2) to detain him three months on Melita island, amid barbarians who showed him “no little kindness,” for which God had given the Apostle power to reciprocate. Acts 28:8-10. God never fails us at a crisis. 1 Cor. 10:13. A double blessing always follows such deliverances, namely, spiritual and physical invigoration and encouragement.

As it was necessary that Jesus should “learn obedience by the things which he suffered” (Heb. 5:8) how much more essential should it be for us to do likewise? Therefore let us not look so much for exemption from conflicts as for victory in conflicts and the consequent encouragement.

It is when we think we are strong that God permits the enemy to touch our feelings or our flesh just to show us how weak, dependent and void of courage we really are.

The writer has had many arduous experiences; and can say, God has never failed to encourage him at crucial moments. One incident as a testimony of God’s love and faithfulness to His children: my wife’s tragic death on the railroad; my own and my son’s health thoroughly depleted; home broken up; both of us incapacitated for work. The crisis was at hand: utterly helpless and hopeless. It was while praying — telling God that I had reached the end, that I now placed it all into His hands for adjustment — that the postman delivered a letter from people whom I had not seen nor heard from for twenty-five years. They said, “We have heard of your great misfortune. Come up and spend some time with us on our farm.” Superfluous to say that I accepted their invitation something like a hungry dog snatches a meaty bone. Encouraged? Well I should say I was!

No, God never forsakes us (Heb. 13:5, 8), though at times He leads us through strange, pathless woods to accomplish His purpose. But we at times forsake, or forget Him at critical periods. Then He permits us to go the limit in our effort to steer our little craft through tempestuous winds and waters, as in my own case, cited. But after the lesson has become effectual we thank God, and take courage.

As the readers of THE HERALD are aware of our beloved Brother Judd’s painful accident, the following account of an incident and the brother’s subsequent remarks which I quote by permission from his letter should be interesting and instructive: “Coming home from the hospital recently, the ambulance had to await the light signals. On our right stood a fine, big limousine containing a gentleman and, I suppose, his daughter. As I lay back the young lady gave me a kindly smile, which, needless to say, I returned. She again smiled and I again smiled also. Then, as we parted, she turning northward and I eastward, she waved a pleasant goodbye which I cordially returned as best I could. We had never met. We probably never shall, but the incident brought much pleasure and certain comfort to me; for, remember, it is said of Paul, certain of the brethren met him, which engendered the comment, ‘Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage.’ He does not seem to have forgotten how that a little courtesy always cheered, strengthened and encouraged him. If we could see behind the screen of our actions, we would surely be more generous with our smiles.”

In these days when the world — and too many Christians — are wearing long, pinched facial expressions, what comfort and encouragement a smile and a little act of courtesy can accomplish.

An incident of forty-eight years ago while I was a railroad station agent in Texas comes to mind. There had been a fight, one man receiving a severe knife wound. Noticing the sufferer’s parched lips and startled eyes while the surgeon was dressing his wound I gave him a glass of cool water and a cheering smile. After recovering he called at my office, saying, “Mr. Haney, you were the only man in that crowd who had a heart and a human sense of propriety. That smile and glass of cool water did me more good, in a way, than did the doctor.”

It should be as natural for the Christian to smile as to breathe; for if he is as obedient to God’s plan of salvation and as faithful to his calling as God is to His promises, he will be as destined to meet his Savior ere long, be like Him, and forever with Him as he is of the sun to continue rising in the east and setting in the west.

“For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven,” Psa. 119:89. But should the Christian be in doubt about his status with God, it would be well for him to examine himself and ascertain the cause of his incredulity. Then, by repenting and getting right with his Creator, he will discover his face loosening up and he will be smiling without an effort. A Christian can’t avoid smiling after he once gets a vision, as it were, of God’s great throne of glory which is about to illuminate this darkened world.

“HUMAN NATURE is a curious thing. The next time you are depressed and feeling sorry for yourself, try being sorry for someone else and see how different you feel.”

FREEDOM TO WORSHIP GOD

By Richard LeCrone

AT THIS SEASON OF THE YEAR, the story of the Pilgrim fathers, and their voyage across an all but unknown ocean, and their settlement upon the shores of the new world, known as America, is fresh in the minds of everyone. We need not be reminded as to the object of their voyage, nor of the suffering which they endured to obtain that end. Their heroism was of the highest type, because the sacrifices that they made received no praise, and for their deeds of kindness and of Christian service they received no personal glory. It is partly due their heroism and toil that we possess one of the most precious heritages known to mankind, the privilege of worshiping God in the way that we believe to be most acceptable to Him.

If we thought that this freedom were in danger, every citizen of America would immediately rise up to defend it. Yet, content in the knowledge that our political freedom is secure, many of us have proceeded to encumber ourselves with worldly cares which hamper the proper worship of Jehovah quite as much as would political laws.

Jesus in expounding this important truth to the Jews who believed His teachings, said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Most of us, if asked about our freedom in religious matters, would say that we are free, for the Pilgrim fathers made us free. The Jews, to whom Christ spoke, had a similar thought in mind. They answered Him thus: "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?"

The answer which He gave them will serve as well for the "free men" of today as it did for those Jews. Listen to what He told them. "Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin." John 8:34.

"No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. 6:24.

Paul, in his letter to the Galatians, applied to himself a test which we would all do well to apply to ourselves, and with the results of that test still in mind, draw a conclusion. Paul said, "For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." I wonder if, after applying this test to ourselves, we should be able to conclude that we were serving Christ.

And again, in giving instructions to the young worker, Timothy, he said, "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." 1 Tim. 6:17. "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." Let us then bear that thought in mind, and while we are thanking God, for our material blessings, let's not forget the spiritual blessings also.

The Pilgrim fathers proclaimed a day of thanksgiving on which to thank God that their toil had been richly rewarded with good fruits. Such devoted Christians as they must have produced many of the fruits of the Spirit as well as material fruits from their fields.

This Thanksgiving Day, when we kneel down to thank God for blessings received, let us also take an inventory of our fruits of the Spirit, and see whether or not we are equally blessed spiritually. We may check these with the list found in Gal. 5:22-24 and find out in a few moments just where we stand in this respect. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law."

At this season, let us draw our example from the Pilgrim fathers, inviting our neighbors to enjoy with us the good fruits of the Spirit which God has given us according to our diligence. It may be that they will like them so well that they will cultivate some of them for themselves.

And let us remember that, while the Pilgrims left us the right to worship God as we see fit, they did not free us from sin. Only one Man can do that. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." John 8:36.

WE THANK THEE

For the gift of Thy dear Son,
Who came that we might be Nearer and dearer to the One
Whose love crowns you and me;
Father in heaven, we thank Thee.

For Thy Word, a guide in youth,
A comfort for all ages,
Shedding to all its radiant truth,
Beckoning us to its pages;
Father in heaven, we thank Thee.

For Thy forgiveness of our sin,
And strength to do Thy will;
Courage to labor others to win,
For friends and loved ones all;
Father in heaven, we thank Thee.
— M. G.

THINGS FOR WHICH I AM THANKFUL

By Rufus A. Curtis

I AM THANKFUL for the gift of life, "For in him we live, and move, and have our being," as "his offspring." Acts 17:28.

I am thankful for the environments of the life He has given me. "The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage," for He hath shown me the path of life which leads to His glorious presence, with its attendant "fulness of joy" and "pleasures for evermore." Psa. 16:69; Acts 2:28; Isa. 35:10.

I am thankful for the Bible, with its "exceeding great and precious promises," that not only affects my happiness for the "life that now is", but will affect it also for "that which is to come," in all the immensity of its unmeasured fulness. 2 Peter 1:4-11; 1 Tim. 4:8.

I am thankful to our heavenly Father, and to His beloved Son, for their love, guidance, and protection, in all life's perilous journey from the cradle to the grave. John 3:14-17; 2 Cor. 5:14, 15; Psa. 48:14; Isaiah 41:10.

Of all the things that mine eyes have seen, and mine ears have heard, nothing has brought me so much joy as "the glad tidings of the kingdom of God;" for the tidings are so good, and the joy is so great that it dwarfs into insignificance, all other news in comparison. Luke 8:1; 1 Peter 4:12-14; Luke 2:10; Hebrews 11:24-26.

I am thankful for the omens of Jesus' return to receive His saints unto himself and crown them with life eternal which has been so graciously promised, to change their heirship of the kingdom, for which they have suffered, into actual possession of the kingdom under the whole heaven, throughout the blissful ages to come. Luke 21:25-28; John 14:3; 1 John 2:25; James 2:5; 2 Timothy 2:12; Daniel 7:22, 27; Eph. 3:20, 21; 2:7.

I am thankful that the culmination of the plan of salvation, as disclosed in the Bible, will demonstrate the fact that "the Judge of all the earth" will "do right", both towards the righteous and the wicked. Gen. 18:25. "He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he." Deut. 32:4. Every act of His, in the marvelous plan of redemption, but accentuates the truth that "God is love." 1 John 4:7-11.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16; 1 John 5:9-12.

Don't Worry — But Work.
Don't Fear — But Follow.
Don't Pine — But Pray.
Don't Trouble — But Trust.

— S. L. Krebs.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PRIVILEGE

"SPEAKING TO YOURSELVES in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord; giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." Ephesians 5:19, 20.

We are living in an age that seems to be leading people away from Christ. They do not stop a moment to think how fast they are drifting away. What goal can they see in the future and be thankful for?

The few who have their eyes earnestly fixed on Jesus have much promised to them, something to live for and be thankful. It is a blessed privilege of ours to be a Christian, for we are ever being watched individually. May we be found daily tuned to psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in our hearts to the Lord.

Sr. Seraphine R. Cleek.

MY THANKSGIVING PRAYER

DEAR HEAVENLY FATHER: I thank Thee for thy manifold blessings which Thou hast showered upon me. Truly they are more than can be numbered. I thank Thee, Father, that even in my trials and difficulties Thou hast sent sunshine and Thy sustaining power and grace to help me bear it all patiently. And I praise Thee, Lord, that in all these I can see Thy hand upon me for some good.

I thank Thee, Father, the Giver of every good and perfect gift, that in times of need and strength I can ask of Thee, and Thou dost always hear and art always near. I thank Thee more than all, heavenly Father, for the gift of Thine only begotten Son, the Lord Jesus, that all who will believe on Him may have eternal life. Praise God!

Blessed Lord, guide us all by Thy holy Spirit and give me strength to live worthy of all Thy blessings. I ask it all in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Alice V. Blakesley, Sumas, Washington.
(A shut in and a helpless cripple.)

MY AIM IN LIFE

TO BE HONEST AND UPRIGHT, devoted and true; to try to do my duty to the poor and needy; to attend to my own business and let others' alone; daily to ask divine guidance and strength to keep in subjection the evil in my own members; especially do I desire a bridle for my tongue; to enjoy that wonderful peace that surpasseth understanding; to longingly hope for the soon return of my Lord and Savior; to be thankful every day of the year for the many, many blessings I enjoy, these are the things I desire most.

Lucy B. Groat.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"BLESS THE LORD, O MY SOUL, AND ALL THAT IS WITHIN ME, BLESS HIS HOLY NAME."

WE THANK THEE, O GOD

BLESSED BE THE LORD who daily loadeth us with benefits, one of the richest of which being His willingness to accept our smallest service, if offered in the right spirit, and magnify it to a place of importance in His plan. He who received, blest and expanded a small boy's lunch to satisfy the hunger of a multitude of people will assist us who are of meager ability to lay up treasures in heaven by adding His blessing to our humblest effort, thereby extending its influence far beyond the realm of this world into eternity. Let us praise Him for this. It places a halo around the "little" things which are within the reach of each and every one of us.

Madeline Gardiner, Lancaster, New York.

"O, GIVE THANKS unto the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever." When anyone does something nice for us it is natural for us to want to return that kindness if we are not wholly selfish, but do we always thank our Father for His many kindnesses to us and express our gratitude to Him?

This year we have received so many blessings that we should be very grateful and give thanks at all times for the material as well as the spiritual things which we are receiving daily.

Leota Hanson, St. Louis, Missouri.

AS THANKSGIVING APPROACHES there is one very outstanding thing that I am extremely thankful for, and that is the fact that after a long illness I have been blessed with the privilege of again working. Human words can but weakly express my gratitude to the all-wise Father for this blessing.

Elmer Goekler, Marshall, Illinois.

THERE ARE SO MANY THINGS to be thankful for — home, relatives, friends. At this time I am especially thankful for the degree of health I have, recovering from a siege of pneumonia which I had two months ago. "Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever." Revelation 7:12.

Esther Sealine, Stanhope, Iowa.

WE OFTEN FORGET to thank our heavenly Father for the wondrous beauties of nature which He has given us. I am thankful for the sunlight, the twilight, the flowers and every bit of beauty that He has so graciously given us.

Ione Patrick, Ashland, Ohio.

THE SPIRIT OF THANKSGIVING should radiate toward everything that God has given us. Should we itemize our many blessings, a true friend would be found responsible for a number of them. We may have only one friend, but when that friend proves to be as true as was Jonathan to David then we rejoice for that bond of understanding which is beyond mere words. The surest way to have a real friend is to be one. True friendship but symbolizes and reveals the great friendship of One who said, "Greater love hath no man than this."

Leona Marsh, Fort Wayne, Indiana.

AS THANKSGIVING TIME draws near, a person's thoughts turn toward God and His goodness, more than any other time in the year. We must be thankful not only in this season, but let us praise God for His kindness and mercy at all times. There are many wonderful blessings promised in the Scriptures which we may find by daily studying His holy Word. The greatest assurance of His love is the gift of eternal life through our Savior, Jesus Christ. Let us thank God for the favors which He has bestowed upon us by living a life of service to Him.

Elizabeth Ford, Dixon, Illinois.

WATERLOO - CEDAR FALLS

THE WATERLOO-CEDAR FALLS Berean Society met at the home of Mrs. Margaret Moore during September and October. They enjoyed a halloween party after the Berean lesson on the last Friday night in October. During November and December they will meet each Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Phillips.

Illinois, 5; Ohio, 3; Iowa, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Indiana, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

STEPHEN

“And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost.”

WHEN THE FIRST CHURCH was organized all the members sold their property and gave the money to the apostles to use for the needs of the organization and its poorer members. So much was given that seven wise men were chosen to distribute this fund. Among the wisest was Stephen — a man full of faith and power, and able to do great wonders and miracles among the people.

But things did not run smoothly for these Christians. There were many Jewish classes of men who did not like this growing church, so they began to find fault with it, and ordered its leaders to stop preaching. The disciples knew that they must suffer if they followed Jesus, so they continued to teach, defending their faith against all arguments.

Now Stephen was so filled with wisdom from God that he always won every dispute. The enemies then did as they had done with Jesus — hired men to say false things, as that Stephen had said things against Moses and God. They even brought him before the Council. Stephen seemed glad for this opportunity to defend his faith, for his face lighted up very brightly. (You know our faces show our thoughts and lives so plainly.)

Stephen told the Jewish Council the story of their history. He began with Abraham, then on to Joseph, Moses, and down to David and Solomon. He told them what these leaders had done for their people, yet the people always turned against God and these chosen leaders. Then he said to his listeners that they were betrayers and murderers just as their fathers had been.

This made them so angry that they gnashed their teeth; yet, that did not frighten Stephen. He kept looking right up to heaven, and had power to see the glory of God, and Jesus at God's right hand.

When he told them what he saw the crowd made a lot of noise, stopped their ears and cast Stephen out of the city.

Then the witnesses gave their clothes in charge of one Saul, and they all gathered stones and threw them at Stephen. He did not fight back, but called upon God, saying, “Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.” And just like Jesus, he asked God to forgive the people of their sin. And then he fell asleep. Thus came the death of the first Christian martyr.

THINK! Would we be brave enough to stand up like Stephen, and tell the truth?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn Acts 7:60.
2. Read 2 Corinthians 1:3-11.
3. Copy: Stephen, the first Christian Martyr.

GENEROUS

CHEERFUL GIVERS

There is a pleasure sweet in giving
Though the gift may be but small,
It may cause a ray of sunlight
O'er some pathway dark to fall;
It may bring a trace of gladness
Unto hearts that weary be;
It may stay some tide of sadness,
Let us give right cheerfully.

Though it may be but a trifle,
Whether book, or slate, or card,
It will make our hearts seem lighter,
Giving is its own reward.
If we have of an abundance,
Then on others gifts bestow,
That all whether high or lowly,
May the Christmas gladness know.

“God gives so many lovely things!
He gives the bird its feathery wings,
The butterfly its colors fair,
The bee a velvet coat to wear.
He gives the garden all its flowers,
And sun to make them grow, and showers;
Red apples from the old bent tree,
Wheat in the meadow blowing free;
He gives the shining day, and then
The quiet, starry night again.
He gives my home — a place to stay,
And laugh, and dream, and work, and play.
With pleasant rooms and windows wide,
And cozy, rosy fireside;
And books to read and folks to love me,
And His good care to watch above me.
It's like a song a person sings —
God gives so many happy things!”

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON X. — December 7, 1930

STEPHEN

Acts 6:1 to 7:60

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 53:7-12

GOLDEN TEXT

And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost. — Acts 6:5.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. An Interpretation of Christianity.

Basic Truth. "If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him." — 2 Tim. 2:12.

Outline. I. Christianity. II. Sacrifice. III. Stephen's Contribution to Christianity. IV. Standing up for Christ.

I. Christianity. Christianity as interpreted by Stephen is that quality in the individual which enables him to use his powers and forces for the honor of God and Christ, but not for personal advantage or advancement among men. Stephen and others gave evidence that a Spirit-filled man is strong beyond all associates not so filled. Peter made whole the man who was a born cripple; his prayers opened prison doors and unlocked prisoner's stocks; Spirit-filled Paul outmastered the wind, out-sailed the sailors, landed all safely ashore, defied the serpent. But these all exemplified that their Christian strength was first and foremost for the honor of Heaven through their witnessing unto sinful men.

II. Sacrifice. Again in Stephen the great principle of sacrifice is exemplified. By Stephen's sacrifice Christendom received an interpretation of Christianity which could not have otherwise been made. True, Stephen profited both in his mortal career and in his yet future resurrection life by his own Christian faith and obedience. But true again, his future surroundings can but far surpass what they would have been had he not taught the race something of the meaning of Christianity. His gentleness, forgiveness, calmness in the face of unmeasured venom of wrath reveals the sanity and composure of one filled with the Spirit of his God. All this was necessary to reveal the contrast between the natural fleshly impulses, even though under the law of God through Moses, and the mind of him who is thoroughly Christ-like. Only the latter can control and glorify the earth of mankind.

III. Stephen's Contribution to Christianity. Several points stand out prominently. One, To receive from God and use for the glory of God, not for the glory of self. Two, To recognize the fullness of one's strength and design not to usurp its power for self-service. Three, To recognize the right and stand for it even in the face of strongest opposition and, if need be, unto death. Four, Self-advancement through sacrifice to the God of righteousness.

IV. Standing up for Christ. Since the day of our Savior's ascension there has been no visible manifestation of Christ and none to stand for Him except His friends. To transform the world from the ways and likings of man to the righteous ways of Christ must, of course, be accomplished by the Master. But He accomplishes these things through those who volunteer to stand true to His cause, to defy the wrong and uphold the right. Such standing, like the stand of any good soldier, often requires sacrifice unto death. He today, who would stand for Christ, must be willing to stand, regardless of price, to the end.

Neither social standing, nor business standing, nor business success, nor personal pride, nor politics, nor any other thing, is excuse for him who would be Christian to dodge the issue, or is sufficient cause for him to deny his Master.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Fully Persuaded: Stephen was fully persuaded of his message. He believed in what he believed. His work was in all earnestness and his sermons had no uncertain sound. The teacher can well afford to stress the benefits of really believing what you believe; knowing what you know, and doing what you do.

Faithful: It can be truthfully said that he was "faithful unto death." His faith in his message inspired him to loyalty and devotion that no one has ever excelled. Make practical application of some of Stephen's characteristics as listed below:

Firmness of conviction.

Loyalty to truth.

Courageous to represent Christ.

Devotion to the unsaved.

Willingness to Forgive: The forgiving spirit which Stephen manifested when death was only a few moments away can well be emulated by all. He was not revengeful; he harbored no malice. Forgiveness is one of Christianity's greatest fruits. None need to expect forgiveness from God unless he first forgives those that have wronged him. Forgiveness begins at home. — C. E. R.

JUNIOR CLASS

The first that we learn of Stephen in the Bible is where he and six other men were appointed to look after the widows among the Christians. Acts 6:1-5.

From this time on Stephen came to be a man of great influence in the church at Jerusalem. He did many wonders and miracles. In fact, he became so great that the people came to argue with him, and try to outdo the things he did, but could not.

Stephen preached about Jesus and the things He would do. The Jews then accused him of teaching against the temple and the law.

Now read what a wonderful sermon he preached to them in Acts 7. He gave them a complete story of the Israelites from Abraham on through to Christ, and pointed out to them just where Christ stood in regard to this people. He showed them how they had sinned by their persecutions and the crucifixion of Christ.

But what was the price he had to pay for preaching this sermon? His life! He was taken outside the city by the angry mob and stoned to death. Do you think Stephen did right in telling these people of their sins, even if it did cost him his life? — V. C. T.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And they selected Stephen, a man full of faith and holy Spirit." — Acts 6:5, Diag.

Stephen was one of seven deacons chosen to look after business in the time of the Acts of the Apostles. These men were to be such as were "full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom." It is said of Stephen in particular that he was "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost." In our lesson text it speaks of his having power and doing "great wonders and miracles among the people."

Stephen was accused of blasphemy, and in defence of himself gave quite a discourse on the Israelites leading up to Christ, then condemning the Jews for what they had done. This made the Jews so angry that they stoned him to death. Stephen is considered the first martyr to the Christian faith. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Stephen, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God. His testimony was, "I see . . . the Son of man standing on the right of God." He saw God's purpose in man (spoken when He made man a living creature, of the dust of the earth, of the earth, earthy), fulfilled and finished.

Through the ages God, with infinite patience, had dealt with the "living creature" through His spoken word in law, in miracle, in rebuke, in chastisement, in exhortation, creating conceptions of truth, and justice, and love. Through His infinite wisdom, these had been preserved and handed down from generation to generation, and finally they were, in all their fullness, written in the inward parts and in the heart of Jesus who was and is the Word made flesh, the fulfillment of the new covenant which is, "I will put my law in their inward parts and write it in their hearts."

Jesus, the Word made flesh, expresses the full glory of the Father's workmanship, and from Him emanates the Father's begetting power that makes God's flesh creatures new creatures in Christ Jesus, thus fulfilling the new covenant in them also.

The conviction that Jesus the Son of man, is the Son of God at the Father's right hand, is this begetting power. It made Stephen's face shine as an angel's and it put into his mouth the words of the Son, "Lord; lay not this sin to their charge." — A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

OUR THANK OFFERINGS

We are most grateful to our heavenly Father and to the givers for the Thank Offerings that have been received for the different phases of the N. B. I. work. Since last issue the following have sent in contributions to this fund: Anna E. Sleight, Seraphine R. Cleek, Amy Johnson, J. F. Carpenter, Leila E. Whitehead, Mrs. Chas. Stedman, Moses E. Lowd, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ellis, Lucy B. Groat, Eva H. M. Fletcher, Enos and Carrie Elton, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams, Mrs. Fannie Elvey, Mrs. Mae Mick, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Dunbar, Mrs. I. H. Brown, C. E. Moore.

Readers of The Herald will be glad to know that Bro. T. A. Drinkard is slowly recovering from his recent accident. His address is Kennedale, Texas, Rt. 2, Box 99A.

Sr. Sybil Guthrie writes that Bradley Guthrie was operated on in Scott and White Hospital, Temple, Texas, on November 8, and at present is doing nicely.

In this issue you will find a subscription blank, offering The Herald at special reduced rates for Christmas gifts. When choosing your gifts do not forget The Herald as a gift for each week of the year 1931.

Next Sunday, November 30, Bro. Conner will speak for the Chicago, Illinois, congregation. For information as to time and place of these services get in touch with Bro. S. T. Kee, 4833 N. Keystone Ave., Chicago.

Readers of The Herald will be especially thankful to our heavenly Father for the gradual recovery to health of our beloved Bro. Austin. He has not yet been able to resume any part of his duties and his doctor orders a complete cessation of all work for a month at least. But we are glad to know that he feels a steady improvement each week. God does hear and answer prayer.

Bro. Harvey Krogh of the N. B. I. Training Class spoke on Sunday morning, November 23, at the Oregon (Illinois) church, and Bro. Richard LeCrone in the evening. The several students of the class have been filling the pulpit very acceptably each Sunday since Bro. Austin's illness. At the request of Bro. Austin, John Denchfield has been acting as assistant pastor. We trust that our pastor will soon be able to return, as he is missed greatly by both members and friends of the church.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

With the first week of a series of meetings nearing its close, a good interest is manifest. The meetings are to continue through Sunday, November 23rd. Sydney E. Magaw.

SERVICES AT DIXON

The Dixon brethren have preaching services by Bro. Conner every second and fourth Sundays at 11:00 o'clock and 7:30. Sunday School every Sunday at 9:45. Bro. Conner and wife expect to soon be located at Dixon permanently.

I am thankful for good health; it enables me to be useful. Anna E. Sleight.

PARK HILL (IOWA) CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Park Hill Sunday School is progressive. Rain or shine the work goes on. The Workers' Conference convened at Clark's Studio on Monday evening. There was a good attendance, and a lively interest, close attention to details, and enthusiasm was manifested during the entire session. Ways and means of improvement were discussed.

Ward Williams attended the Girls' and Boys' Conference at Newton, recently. He gave us a good report. Our Sunday School Superintendent and myself attended our County Convention on November 4, gaining much information and enthusiasm thereby. The Bible Study class met at the same place on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Hester V. Berry.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

Thanksgiving services will be held at the Church of God at Eden Valley on Thanksgiving Day at 11:00 a. m. Sydney E. Magaw.

GRAND RAPIDS IS GRATEFUL

Again on November 16 all previous records of attendance were broken when the Sunday School numbered 231, an increase of eight over the record of the previous week, and making three consecutive Sundays on each of which the records for all time were surpassed. We are wondering how many of our churches over the land who made special efforts for Rally Day have been able to continue not only to equal but to surpass that day itself.

Our annual church business meeting is scheduled for Friday night, December 5, at 7:00 o'clock, and the church is earnestly praying that God may guide in the selection of officers for the coming year.

The need for a larger building is becoming more and more pressing, and a committee has been appointed to study the matter and make recommendations to the church.

Sickness has affected our church family noticeably the past two weeks, with Sr. Rachel Moore confined to her bed with tonsillitis and Bro. Jas. Rhoades in the hospital, painfully ill with an infected kidney. Again in such matters we are asking God's direction.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

THANKFUL? YES!

I am thankful for so many things, especially that God hears and answers prayer.

Mrs. Thomas Savage.

MY THANKSGIVING

With the passing of the last twelve months we are more aware that God is good to us. To the great Giver of all we offer our thanks for our material blessings, for friends, for spiritual guidance and for the promises of His Word. Sydney E. Magaw.

THANKSGIVING

"In God is my salvation and my glory; the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God. Trust in him at all times; ye people, pour out your heart before him: God is a refuge for us." Psalm 62:7-8.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name." Psalm 100:4. Deuteronomy 33:13-16.

Mrs. H. E. Russel, Chico, Calif.

FOR PAST AND PRESENT BLESSINGS

Thanksgiving Day! For what? First, Holy Bible, Book divine. It is a Guide for this life and a hope for the future.

Second, The Restitution Herald, its efficient managers, both editorial and mechanical. Through its columns come the able writings both editorial and occasional, especially interesting to isolated readers. I am wondering if these writers and teachers will be remembered sixty or more years hence as I remember Elder Higgins with his Bible Charts, and his daughter and son-in-law, the Mansfields; later H. V. Reed, Richard Corbaley, Elder Chaplin and others at Pisgah, Antioch and Plymouth, Indiana; J. M. Stephenson, Geo. Moyer, W. P. Shockey, and others at other places.

I am especially thankful for my health at my age and that I am permitted to read the splendid words of today and remember those old time preachers and writers of my boyhood days and the hope that the words of that Old and New Bible give me.

S. T. Shirley.

Dear Brethren: I certainly want to express my thanks to a kind heavenly Father for all the blessings of the past year and to you personally, for The Herald. I wish I could send $1000, but I am poor in this world but rich in faith. For sixty years I have been a follower of the lowly Nazarene.

Your Brother in the Faith,
Moses E. Lowd, Berwick, Maine.

Another year has almost gone, never to return. I am thankful for many things. First, I am thankful for good health and that I am able to work. I am thankful that I was permitted to go to Montana to see my brother, and get home safe and sound. And I am very thankful for the good time I had at the Iowa Conference, and to the ministers for their good sermons. I want to thank you all that write for our good paper.

Amy Johnson.

Loved Ones: The word comes through the columns of our Restitution Herald for a word of testimony for our Lord. I would love to see so many messages flooding your office that they would fill the space allowed us to overflowing. I want to praise God for His goodness to our household, and for the prayers He has answered, and say that from all angles it pays to serve God. I have the witness in my heart that I am a child of His.

Praise Him, all ye people.

Mrs. Ada Huff.

It just seems that we have so much to be thankful for if we would only take a little time from the cares of life to express our thanks, that The Herald office would overflow with Thanksgiving letters.

I especially thank my heavenly Father for the privilege to work in His vineyard, and for the many good thoughts that are in The Herald each week, which add to our spiritual blessings. I am thankful also for all our temporal blessings. "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him and bless his name." Psalm 100:4.

Mrs. John Oaks,

We are truly thankful to the heavenly Father for all the blessings of life we have had during the past year and years.

Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Dunbar.

Dear Bro. Austin: I wish to say that I want to thank and praise the Giver of all good and precious gifts for all that He has done for us all through the year past. I know there are others who can express what they feel better than I can, but I desire to thank and serve Him better every day. Oh, what can we do for all He has done for us in giving His beloved Son to die for us? May many more obey and serve Him is my wish.

Your sister,
Carrie E. Hilsabeck.

The Psalmist exhorts the people to "give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever." Let us be thankful that we have a kind heavenly Father who hears and answers prayer and who has provided such a marvelous plan of salvation through His Son, Jesus Christ.

Teach us to be thankful,
Dear Father, we pray,
For all of the blessings
You send us each day.

May S. Todd.

I thank my heavenly Father for my Savior who conquered death and the grave and ascended to His Father in heaven, saying to them that were watching Him go, "Whither I go ye cannot come. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

I am watching and waiting for His return to take His father David's throne to rule and reign as King of kings and Lord of lords.

Mrs. H. B. Cramer, Portland, Oregon.

Dear Restitution Editor: I read about expressing our thanks to the heavenly Father for all that He has done for us. I will say that in the first place I thank Him for His only begotten Son who died for me. In the second place, I am thankful that I ever had a chance to learn the blessed truth; and in the third place, that I accepted Him as my Savior and that I am studying the blessed truth so that it may be well with me as to my salvation. More than all the few earthly possessions I have, I thank Him for keeping me from day to day and for my daily bread and that the people I associate with are beginning to see that I am what I say I am. I thank Him also for a disposition to love and serve Him.

Mrs. Anna D. Springer.

Thanksgiving is again at hand, and how many things we have received during this year for which we should all give thanks! All that we have and are come from our heavenly Father. We can plant and sow, but without God's sun and rain, our efforts would be fruitless.

It is not enough that we meet once a year and sing a song and say a prayer for what God has so graciously bestowed upon us. It should be the desire as well as the duty of each of us to so live throughout the year that each day will be a song of thankfulness and gratitude to our heavenly Father. And if this spirit prevails, we will willingly give of our blessings and means toward building God's kingdom.

May Thanksgiving Day be a happy, peaceful day for you and yours.

Your sister in His service,
Mae Mick.

Dear Brethren: What have we to be thankful for? Everything! We are thankful that we've had no serious illness recently and that we are in as good condition as we are. When some feel that their affairs could not be in worse shape, and when they see others much worse off, it is then that they feel thankful. Times are hard and work scarce, but we're thankful we've had as much work as we have, and been given the strength to do it.

Though we are sorry to see so much distress and suffering, yet we are thankful, for all this helps to bring nearer the appearing of our Lord and Savior. Our prayer is that He may come soon.

Enos and Carrie Elton.

Dear Brethren: We will say we have so much to be thankful for in the improvement of my husband's health, although he has some cough yet. We are far from home, in a strange land, so to speak, with none of our faith near us. We have been here eight months, have many good friends here. But how we wish we could hear a sermon of our own faith. While they are good people, we like our own. Please publish Bro. T. A. Drinkard's address. So sorry to hear of his misfortune; also sorry to hear of Bro. Austin's illness, and Sr. Gertie Long's death at Holbrook, Nebraska, as we loved her so. How we will miss the dear faces at conference if we are ever permitted to return to our home near Moorefield, Nebraska.

Your sister in the faith,
Mrs. Chas. Stedman, Miami, N. M.

Dear Restitution Friends: As you asked for Thanksgiving letters, I thought I would write and tell you how much I have to be thankful for, all through my past eighty-two years, first, for good Christian parents to guide my youthful steps. All my necessary wants have been supplied, and I have many, kind friends and loving children. As we read of the terrible things happening around us, floods, fire, mine disaster, earthquakes and crime of all sorts and we have been spared all these, I think we have great reason to be truly thankful to a kind, loving Father for protecting us from all these, and I can say that I am.

Your sister in Christ,
Mrs. E. Reighard.

Dear Household of Faith: I recently spent a very pleasant week with our dear sister in Christ, Rachel Whitecomb, known to many of The Herald readers and associated with the Hillisburg, Indiana, Church of God. She has been enjoying our wonderful California climate for almost a year. We had not enjoyed a visit together since girlhood days back when the true gospel was proclaimed in the school houses by the standard bearers who now sleep in Jesus, Brothers Stephenson, Lyon, Shaffer, my dear father, J. S. Hatch, and others. The seating capacity was taken and standing room could hardly be had in the school house, for in those days a great deal of interest was manifest.

I can see in my memory now Rachel's father, the late Joseph Thurman, who was always so enthused in the meetings, and frequently led the singing at the "Kings Corner" school house. He was a doctor and traveled many miles, bringing comfort and cheer to the sick.

Sr. Rachel is located at Elsinor, California, a little town nestled on the hillside where many afflicted come to partake of, and bathe in the healing mineral water and enjoy the high altitude which is so invigorating. We trust our sister will decide to make California her home permanently.

Yours in hope of life when Jesus comes,
Azorah M. Scroggs.

Dear Bro. Austin: The enclosed check is small compared with our thankfulness for the many rich blessings that have been ours, especially during the past few months.

Sickness, hospital and two operations have been our lot since last June, but God has blessed us most abundantly. We are all very well again, each one busily occupied with his own particular duty and above all we are happy. Now, what more could anyone ask?

We pray for those who are not so fortunate and we try to help in a substantial way in many different directions, for we fully realize there are many needy ones just now.

We aim to let our light shine so that our associates and those with whom we come in contact will know that God is our Leader and that we praise Him, trust Him and thank Him at all times.

We are not forgetting the good work Sr. Sanford is doing, either. True enough, others send her the money with which she accomplishes this work, but she gives of her time and strength and money also, and we should help her all we can. We like the suggestion offered by Bro. Sheets, that each state should care for its own, in so far as it is possible.

We ask God's blessings to rest upon all who are honestly and sincerely trying to live the Christ-like life and who "do unto others as ye would that men should do unto you."

Let us hold fast to the end, and suffer no man to take our crown from us. He will be faithful, who has promised, if we prove faithful to Him.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ellis
Margaret and Eldridge.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Ed Tomlin; Seraphine R. Cleek; M. Fetters; Mrs. P. T. Hollenback; E. S. Logan; J. F. Carpenter; Leila E. Whitehead; Vivian Magaw; Bertha Williams; Nettie S. Evans; Mrs. Frank Laning; Mrs. Wm. Laning; Lucy B. Groat; J. H. Adams; Mrs. Cora Murphy; H. J. Stadden; Mrs. F. M. McCrory; Harry Gordon; James Stillson; Mrs. A. M. Scroggs.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Receipts. — The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

To Stop Paper. — It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

GOD'S GIFT OF FRIENDS

By R. H. Judd

"Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage."

WE OFTEN SPEAK AND WRITE about the good gifts — material gifts — that come to us through the hand of God, on these memorable anniversaries. We do well to do so, for in spite of all our shortcoming, and lack of thankfulness to Him who is the Giver of all good gifts, the world's need is bountifully supplied from year to year. And but for the insatiable greed of the few, the many would have enough and to spare.

But I wonder if we have ever tried to realize the overwhelming bounteousness of God's gifts to man? Comparatively few things would supply his actual requirements even in the way of food. Should we start to enumerate the gifts of God along the avenue of his need, one is forced to give up the count in the realization that the task is impossible. But the necessity of food and raiment, while basic to the maintenance of his being, is insignificant in the light of the abundance of things, seen and unseen, which a loving Creator has supplied for his use, and the gratification of his desires which seem to have no limit to their number or horizons.

The Word of the living God tells us that "knowledge shall increase" and the last twenty-five years have superabundantly echoed the truth of these predictions. The mind of man staggers at what has been done, but it becomes almost dizzy in the attempt to visualize the things that shall be, even in the decade that lies before us.

Doubtless the reader has, like the writer, been privileged to visit some of the broad expanses of this amazing world, and to see its grandeur and its solitudes side by side. Mountain and valley, forest, stream and field, and the mirrored stillness of lake all vie, the one with the other, in proclaiming the unspoken fact that they can have no objective purpose apart from human life. Let that come upon the scene and the whole aspect is changed. The purposeful fitness of one for the other is at once visualized. But vast and valuable as are the gifts of God with which this earth is endowed, those to whom these gifts are given must, of necessity, be of value vastly greater than the whole.

In our great eagerness for the abundance of things to be possessed, have we not sometimes forgotten one of the greatest gifts bestowed by our heavenly Father, the unspeakable gift of human companionship? Valuable as any material gift may be, its usefulness is limited by the limit of its nature, appealing only to the external life. He who fitted this world with its teeming stores for the use of man, realized as no one else could the capacities with which He had endowed him. And the very greatness of the gifts given bespeak the value set by the Giver on the ones to whom they are bestowed.

.. Of only One, has it been said that "he knew what was in man." We each know something of the latent forces buried in the inmost recesses of his being, but how little have we made use of them, and how little have we sought to make the world brighter because of our presence in it. He who said, "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life," knew exactly how much of life depended on the love, joy, peace and contentment that should radiate from one to another from these unfathomable things of life.

While thanking God for His bounteous harvests, let us not forget the Giver of all good gifts, and when we welcome friend or brother, from far and near, around the festal board, above all the gifts may it be said of each, "whom when he saw he thanked God, and took courage."

HIS MERCY ENDURETH FOREVER

By Cecil A. Smead

"O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever." Psa. 136:1.

TO SHEW MERCY IS NOT ONLY to return good for evil, but to actually have the best interest of the offender at heart, and to do something in showing it. Thus, though Adam had disobeyed God and deserved only the sternest punishment, God showed mercy to him, not by continuing him in a life of disobedience to result in monstrous evil, but by promising him a deliverer who should raise him up in life after all the evil had been purged from him.

When you get right down to the justice of it, what has man done to deserve mercy? It is a free gift from God to man. Mercy has been shown man from the beginning and will continue to be shown for eternity, world without end. God is righteous, and He must be just; but His justice is tempered with mercy. He has had a purpose with mankind from the beginning. That purpose is to bless us and to make of us glorious creatures fit to bring honor and glory to Him. If through disobedience to Him, we never get in that frame of mind in which He can work the necessary changes in us, it is better for us to die and be lost forever rather than to be continued in a life of sin, misery and pain.

We can best take advantage of the Lord's mercy by getting in the proper frame of mind of amenableness to His will. Then the future will hold for us boundless possibilities of blessing and happiness in which the world will be filled with obedience to the righteousness of God.

Now, isn't the thought of God's mercy tempering His justice forever enough to make any mortal man's heart swell with gratitude toward his Creator? Isn't it enough to make him want to obey his God with every fibre of his being, to discontinue all that is unrighteous? Yes, therefore thanks be to our merciful God who has provided that "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 2, 1930

NUMBER 9

Fulfilling the Law of Christ

By Earl Thayer

BY THOSE, WHO ARE CURIOUS enough to follow the thoughts expressed in the following lines, it will soon be learned that the subject will be handled in a practical way rather than to unearth some new thought regarding the doctrine of the law. Yet, I'm thoroughly convinced that it is important for us to keep our portions of the law, as recorded in sacred writings, in a practical manner.

In the beginning there was a decree given regarding the planets in respect to each other. The sun that calls forth the sleeping plant in early springtime has been following the same course through the centuries past, nor has it deviated from its course or been belated on its circuits one fraction of minutest space or time, excepting the instances where God ordered it so. Joshua 10:12; 2 Kings 20:9-11; Isa. 38:8. The stars also rotate in respect to the earth and each other in perfect harmony. None are late and none too fast. Surely the heavens declare God's glory.

The minerals that lie buried in our own mother earth have a law unto themselves, which demands that certain kinds have an attraction for each other and are freely mixed, while another mineral might be repulsive and not be found under the same conditions at all.

The plant kingdom has its peculiar order of development, also. The garden's soil which may apparently be the same throughout will produce a beautiful rose, a luscious tomato on a vine, a golden ear of corn upon a stalk, or a cabbage head. Each one requires sunshine, air and water, yet, their lives and destinies are widely different.

If we turn to the animals we see life under a different order again. The lion, the wolf, the adder, the calf, and the gentle lamb all have their places to fill, but all these laws and orders of life do not affect us in particular as do the rules which the heavenly Father has established for the preservation and salvation of the highest type of life, which is man.

Man in general is divided into many classes, from the uncivilized cannibal to the most intelligent and well educated, but I can find only one law which affects man's salvation, whether he is Jew or Greek, bond or free, and that is the law of Christ.

Christ, the Antitype of the great law giver, left for the Christian of today some simple rules to be written in the hearts of flesh, and not carved with an iron pen upon the rock. Only a heart of flesh and love for our fellow man can perpetrate the laws given by our Savior. Before leaving the disciples our Lord gave them a beautiful commission to carry to the world: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16:15.

I hear some say that they cannot do that; that they cannot write or preach. Well, perhaps you cannot, but did you ask all your friends and neighbors out to the Sunday services, where the truth is taught or have you made your contribution to the Training Class or the general work at headquarters now that the opportunity is at hand, so those who do have the ability, desire and opportunity can go forward with the spreading of the gospel of Jesus the Christ?

Do you realize that sixty percent of your fellow citizens are completely out of harmony, and approximately thirty percent partly out of harmony with Christ? They are most surely going to be lost unless they are appealed to by you, either directly or indirectly.

Firmly do I believe that the Church of God has an important message of golden truth to bear to the world, and that we will meet the condition if we once realize that the laws laid down by Jesus demand these things of us, and that His laws must be executed. One of the greatest is this: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel."

When Cain slew Abel and then asked, "Am I my brother's keeper?" he was trying to avoid responsibility concerning his brother's welfare. Are we not avoiding the same responsibility today? Truly, I believe we are, and even in greater measure, as eternal life is far more important than the few short years of this present order of life. So often we hear the remark, "It doesn't make any difference to me what my neighbor or brother does just so he lets

(Continued on page 138)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me."—John 14:6.

COME UNTO ME

THE SEARCH FOR GOD is as old as man himself, for the instinct of worship is found in every race in its infancy. The age-old desire to please, in some way, the power that man recognizes, even in his most uncultured state, is that groping toward God which we call religion. And this instinct has been implanted in man in order that he might seek and search and find a Being higher than himself, by which he might mold his life.

In the dim centuries of the past, man saw that a power controlled the elements, bringing warmth and sunshine, rain and harvest. And in fear lest he offend this power and bring disaster upon himself and the work of his hands, he worshiped the sun, the moon, thunder, lightning, and in fact, all the elements of nature. Worship of this sort is found among all primitive peoples. The instinct upon which such a worship is founded is

THE INSTINCT OF FEAR

In their effort to avert disaster, such as drought or flood, fire or pestilence, men sought to placate the invisible power that brought these to pass. And in their efforts to appease, they went to the most terrible lengths of which they could conceive, sacrificing their children and torturing their own flesh in ways most horrifying. This worship, maintained because of fear, brought naught but sorrow and suffering. Its followers defeated their own purposes and instead of finding salvation, no hope, naught but death awaited them in the end.

Scanning the history of man, we find him displaying his urge toward religion in various ways. Always we see him trying to do something to merit the approval of the god he worshiped. And in a nation so far removed from "heathen", as was Israel, the same idea prevailed. We see them seeking to merit God's approval by works of self-righteousness. And to realize how miserably they failed, we need only to read the story of their downfall. The rich young ruler, who had kept all the commandments from his youth, went away sorrowful, rejecting the Master's way to life. The disdainful Pharisee, wrapping his cloak of good deeds about him, scorned the penitent sinner who was closer to God than he was himself.

With His coming as the Savior of man, Jesus brought to hungry humanity.

THE GOSPEL OF LOVE

Man's greatest need is not to do, but to receive, not to bring about his salvation by deeds, but by faith in Him. "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." John 6:47. He taught men that approach to God is made through understanding the Son. "For if ye had known me, ye should have known the Father also."

In knowing the Father, through the Son, one's entire outlook upon life is altered. No longer do we serve God through fear that He may bring punishment of various nature upon us. But, realizing the prompting motive of the Savior's life, we absorb that same spirit of love and it reflects itself in all our actions. Jesus said, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." John 14:21.

Peter proclaimed in unmistakable terms that the way of salvation is through Christ. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12. So easy and so plain is this way that none can fail to understand it, nor be refused admission, for Jesus assures that "him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." John 6:37. He issues to all the loving invitation, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." Matt. 11:28.

Let us cease our weary strivings after salvation, for they can but end in pride and boasting at best, and let us accept the Savior's way. The fear of failure, the desire to avert the displeasure of God fade away and are lost in the knowledge that we need only to be willing to accept His way and be led of Him and He will do the rest.

Are you walking in His way, seeking to do His will? Are you desirous of knowing Him whom to know aright is life eternal? Are you placing your trust in Him, knowing that He will unfold the path of life before your feet? If you are, you will find salvation at the end of the way.

— M. G.

THE DAWNING OF THE NEW DAY

By E. O. Stewart

"But the path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." — Prov. 4:18. "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." — 2 Peter 1:19.

THE PROPHETS OF OLD when moved upon by the Spirit of God, foresaw not only the darkness of which Peter spake, but also the dawning of the new day as well, when Israel shall be the channel through which the nations of earth shall come to see the light.

The prophet Isaiah speaks thus concerning the nation of Israel: "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people: but the Lord shall arise upon thee (Israel), and his glory shall be seen upon thee. And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising. Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. Then thou (Israel, not the church) shall see, and flow together, and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee." Isa. 60:1-5.

"And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favour have I had mercy on thee." Verse 10.

By what authority this has been interpreted to mean the glorious access of the Gentiles into the church, I cannot understand. When did God, in His wrath, ever smite the church?

"The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee, The City of the Lord; The Zion of the Holy One of Israel." Verse 14.

"Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought. For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted." Verses 11 and 12.

Those who claim to open the doors of the Church in order to receive members should certainly note carefully that the gates are not shut, day nor night.

"Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, and shalt suck the breast of kings: and thou shalt know that I the Lord am thy Saviour, and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob I will also make thy officers peace, and thine exacters righteousness. Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders: but thou shalt call thy walls Salvation, and thy gates Praise." Verses 16 and 18.

These scriptural citations certainly point to the perfect day, the day in which Israel shall be the means of blessing the obedient nations all around her, as they willingly submit to her righteous laws, given by Christ and His associate rulers, the church.

"For the Lord will have mercy on Jacob, and will yet choose Israel, and set them in their own land: and the strangers shall be joined with them, and they shall cleave to the house of Jacob. And the people shall take them, and bring them to their own place: and the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the Lord for servants and handmaids: and they shall take them captives, whose captives they were, and they shall rule over their oppressors." Isaiah 14:1, 2.

These predictions certainly point out the nation of Israel as God's means of blessing the Gentile nations in the ages to come. But before that nation can possibly rise to that glorious position, there must be a body of competent instructors selected out of all nations, known as the Body of Christ, to organize and establish them in righteousness.

This was shown in the transfiguration vision on the mount. Christ, together with Moses and Elijah, represents that body. Peter, James and John represent the nation of Israel who shall be the first nation to receive the law, "Hear ye him." They were taken up into a high mountain apart, to receive instructions, while the inhabitants were left in the valley below, knowing nothing of what was going on in the mountain top. So Christ shall descend from heaven, raise the sleeping saints, represented by Moses, and they, together with the living saints, represented by Elijah, shall be changed and caught up to meet the Lord in the air. Later He shall come with His saints to execute judgment. Then He shall call Israel into her own land and make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, just as He took Peter, James and John up in the mountain apart.

Then the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. The slumbering nations afar off shall hear His rebuke, and cease to learn war. Israel shall become a righteous nation. "And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory." Isa. 62:2.

"Thy gates shall be open continually; . . . that men may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought." Isaiah 60:11.

Let us be glad and rejoice as we see that glorious day approaching.

"Do the kindest deed you can, today;
Smile your sweetest smile, and trust, and pray;
You may be a messenger of light
To lead some poor soul from out the night;
God has oft worked miracles of grace
Through the gentle deed — the kindly face."

"ASK WHAT YE WILL"

By Lottie E. Young

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."
— John 15:7.

PRAYER IS NOT the mere saying of one's little speech to God on set occasions. It is the very breath of one's life, the outpouring of the heart's desire and the heart's gratitude to the Father. This was the Master's idea. To Jesus, prayer was simply a matter of going to the Father and unbosoming one's self to Him; going with all that is in one's heart; going with the impulses or motives which prompt a loving, dutiful child to go to his earthly father; going under the impulse of gratitude to tell Him how thankful we are; going with our burden of sin to ask His forgiveness; going with our tangled problems to get Him to untangle them; going with yearning hearts just to be with Him; going with empty hearts that He may fill them; going with broken hearts that He may heal them; going with all our real needs that He may meet them.

The Master's teaching about prayer began with the simple idea of pouring out one's heart to God as one's Father and, as a loving, trusting child, leaving everything to His wisdom and love. It ended with the assurance that if one will go to the Father in the name of Jesus (and therefore in such harmony with Jesus that He can desire of the Father only that which is in harmony with the Father's will) he will receive that which he "will".

In the Lord's prayer, we are taught that we must approach God as a child approaches his father; that God is our Father; that we are to go to Him as one of His children. And when we go to Him, we should be concerned most of all about the Father's interests and glory.

First of all, we should pray that His name may be hallowed; that He may be held in reverence by all men; that His will may be perfectly done here on earth even as it is done in heaven. Then we may ask Him to provide for our daily needs — to give us for today the bread we need for the body and the soul. We are to pray for bread, not for cake; that is, for the things we need, not for the things our appetites crave.

Then, too, we are to pray for the forgiveness of our sins, remembering while we pray that God will forgive us just as we forgive our fellow men. Then we may ask Him so to guide us that our way may not be too hard for us; that we may not be led into temptations or trials greater than we can bear, but that He may go with us and deliver us from all evil.

In all these petitions we must remember that our real interests are God's interests, that it is His kingdom for which we are praying, that all power resides in Him and all the glory belongs to Him.

God is concerned about our little needs, but it is a mistake to think of Him as an indulgent father who is willing to spoil us by giving us the things that are hurtful simply because He would not deny us. Jesus said, "Ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you."

We may not always receive what we ask for. God is your Father and He will answer your requests like a father. Will not an earthly father give his child that which is best for him? And if you, as a father, choose the best things for your children, how much more will your Father in heaven give you the best of all gifts, even the Holy Spirit, if you will but ask Him? It is plain that while Jesus here promises our prayers will be answered, His promise is conditional upon our praying to God as our Father, and it is just as plain that He means that God will answer us as a father. Our fathers give us what is best for us, and even if we ask for a stone it would not be given to us.

"Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give you." Nobody but an enemy of God could have come into this world and told the people that henceforth God would be subject to their orders, and if they wanted anything all they had to do was ask for it.

What would happen if a mother should tell her children that they can have everything they want in the house, and that she is going to do everything according to their wishes? If the baby wants a razor or the son wants to turn his room into a gambling den it will be all right. What would happen to that home and that mother's authority? What would happen to the world if God should say to all men, "Ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you"? But if Jesus did not promise that, what did He promise?

In a general way He promised that men's prayers should be answered. What men? In another place the promise is to those who "abide" in Him. What did He mean by prayer? Clearly, not the cry of beggars or of strangers, but the going of children to their father. However unworthy we might be, if we would go to God recognizing Him as our Father, submitting ourselves to His will, trusting to His knowledge of what is best for us, and desiring nothing that did not accord with His will, our prayers would be answered. That is to say, God would answer us as a Father; He would not give us what we might wish to have, but He would answer us.

In other words, according to the teaching of Jesus, there is but one way in which a man can get from God everything he desires, and that is to fall in so completely with the Master that when he goes to the Father he will not desire anything that does not harmonize with the Father's will. What He said on this point at the Lord's supper was that if the disciples would become so completely united with Him that they would have His mind in them and be dominated by His Spirit, if they would become one with Him, so that when they went to the Father they would ask in His name, that is, would ask in His Spirit as completely as if they were asking in His stead, they would receive what they asked. Being in perfect harmony with Him they would be in perfect harmony with the Father and would desire nothing that the Father did not wish to grant.

THE BOOK OF LUKE

By Lyman Booth

THE EVANGELIST, LUKE, was the companion of the Apostle Paul in all his labors and sufferings, probably till he suffered martyrdom. See Acts 16:10; 22:42; 28:7-10; Col. 4:14; 2 Tim. 4:11; Philemon 24. As he wrote the Acts of the Apostles also, concluding with an account of Paul's imprisonment at Rome, we may be sure that he had the Apostle's approval of what he did and we may justly conclude that this book was written before this event. It was written at an early period and was received by the church from the first as of divine authority.

It is not definitely known of what country Luke was a native or when he was converted to Christianity. He modestly omits saying anything about himself except when he uses the first person plural when writing Paul's history. Nothing is recorded of him till we find him with the other companions of Paul; for Lucius of Cyrene seems to have been another person (Acts 13:1).

Origen and Epiphanius say that Luke was one of the seventy disciples. If that be true, he must have been an eyewitness of many events which he has recorded, yet he seemingly says to the contrary. The most reliable tradition is that he was a Syrian, and that he first learned of Christianity at Antioch.

He first appears with Paul in Acts 16:10, on the eve of their voyage to Europe. And after quite a lengthy stay at Philippi, he accompanied him to Jerusalem (Acts 21:15-18), and shared his imprisonment at Caesarea. From thence he sailed with him on the dangerous voyage to Rome, remained with him during his first imprisonment and was with him on the eve of his martyrdom (2 Tim. 4:11).

He is called by Paul, "The Beloved Physician," and some claim that he practiced his profession at Rome, having been taken there for that purpose before his acquaintance with Paul. It is well known that the Roman physicians were servants of the great men, and it is thought that, having gained his liberty, he received a name from his patron, as was often the case among the Romans. Then on his return to Antioch in Syria, he became acquainted with Paul, embraced Christianity, was appointed to the ministry, and from that time attended Paul in his journeys.

As Paul never calls him his son as he does Timothy, it is probable that he was converted before he met Paul. It is uncertain as to his nationality, whether Jew by birth, a proselyte, or a Gentile convert. Paul's language seems to convey the last opinion, because he mentions a number of persons who saluted the Colossians, and then adds "who are of the circumcision." "These only are my fellow workers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort to me." Yet he immediately speaks in terms of praise of Epaphras and calls Luke "the beloved physician", and since he could not properly say that these persons had not been a comfort to him, it would appear that they were not of the circumcision. See Col. 4:9-14.

It is the general opinion that none of the books of the New Testament were written by Gentile converts, however able many were as preachers of the gospel. But the Scriptures furnish no such rule. The Book of Job was probably written by Elihu who was not an Israelite, and it is quite certain that Nebuchadnezzar wrote the fourth chapter of Daniel.

The sanction of the apostles and the unanimous reception accorded Luke's writings as divinely inspired and as a part of the Scriptures, are enough to satisfy any reasonable person of the genuineness of the work.

It is remarkable that in recording our Lord's words when He foretold the destruction of Jerusalem, he added some particulars not mentioned by any of the other writers which, taken with the extraordinary accomplishment during Gentile times, form an indisputable testimony that he wrote as he was moved by the Holy Spirit.

This book contains many parables, discourses, miracles and events which were omitted by the other evangelists, and several which they recorded are passed over by Luke. The historical art begins with the circumstances preceding and connected with the birth of John the Baptist, and that of Jesus himself; and it closes with a fuller account of what occurred between our Lord's resurrection and ascension than Matthew or Mark had given.

Luke was supposed to have been a man of learning before he was endued with spiritual gifts. As a writer many have thought him capable of standing in literary composition with the most profound and celebrated historians of Greece. Certainly his capabilities are proven by the literary excellence of his writings, as shown in his Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. He mentions other attempts to write a history of Christ's life which were not satisfactory. And not until he had obtained perfect understanding of all things from the very first, did he venture to compile a life of Christ, as a perfect Man, and offering himself as a Sacrifice for all mankind.

Some special features are worthy of notice. He presents our Lord as the Redeemer of the entire human race. His is the gospel of infancy and to him we are indebted for the account of the birth and childhood of Jesus and his forerunner, and for the song of Zacharias, of the blessed virgin, and of Simeon. It is also the Gospel for the Gentiles.

He gives our Lord's genealogy back to Adam (3:8) and records the parallels of Elijah being sent to the widow of Serepta (2:25, 26), and of Elisha healing the heathen leper, Naaman (4:7), also the mission of the seventy (10:1-16). It is the gospel for the despised and outcast. He gives the parable of the lost sheep, the lost coin, and the prodigal son (15:3-32). He records also the prayer of our Lord for those who crucified Him (23:34); and His comforting promise to the penitent thief (23:42) who expired with Him on the cross.

—o—

"TWO MARKS OF A CHRISTIAN — giving and forgiving."

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

HOW A PHARISEE BECAME A CHRISTIAN

SAUL'S EARLY LIFE

Monday, December 8 — Acts 22:1-5.

"Born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers." V. 3.

THE MANNER OF THE TRAINING of the Jewish youth is clearly shown in Deut. 6:4-9. And that Saul received this training in a most intensive way, we are certain. Saul enjoyed many advantages by birth. He was, as he says in Phil 3:4-6, an Israelite of the tribe of Benjamin; no foreign blood ran in his veins. His family must have been of the wealthier class, for he was sent to Jerusalem to be taught by the greatest teacher of the law of that time. Tarsus, his birthplace, was the center of Greek culture and it is more than probable that Saul received a training in Greek lore that stood him in good stead during later years when he preached in Greek territory. This we see to be the foundation for the strong, intellectual character that was Paul of later times.

SAUL'S CONVERSION

Tuesday, December 9 — Acts 22:6-15.

"And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest." — V. 8.

IMAGINE THE DRAMATIC INCIDENTS along the road to Damascus when Saul was converted. Saul said that he had lived "in all good conscience," while persecuting Christians, nevertheless he was traveling the wrong road. Acts 23:1. Jesus, whom Saul had been persecuting, here sends him the message, "Right about face, Saul." And Saul, who had been expending his energies in an attempt to wipe out Christianity, now reversed his methods and used the same energy in teaching "Christ and him crucified." His whole later life was devoted to remedying the mistakes of his earlier life.

As a Pharisee, Saul believed in resurrection, but as a Jew, he did not believe in the resurrection of Jesus. To him, that was blasphemy. But now he hears the voice of the living Christ and His words became from that moment the motive power of Saul's life.

SAUL PRAYING

Wednesday, December 10 — Acts 9:10-16.

"For he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." — V. 15.

STRICKEN WITH BLINDNESS, Saul was led by his companions to Damascus, to the house of Judas, a follower of Jesus, and one whom Saul may have been intending to arrest. How different now his attitude! Fasting and prayer occupied the three days of his blindness. A humble, penitent Saul emerged from that wonderful experience on the Damascus road. The sixteenth verse contains a hint of some of the things Saul was to suffer for the name of Jesus. But nothing seemed to daunt him, now that he was convinced of the Messiahship of the Christ.

PAUL PREACHING

Thursday, December 11 — Acts 9:17-22.

"And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God." — V. 20.

WHAT A CHANGE was brought about in Saul's life! From leadership of the persecutors, Saul now redirected his energies. The knowledge that he formerly used in an attempt to destroy Christ's followers, he now used to build them up in faith. No wonder "all that heard him were amazed." It was but natural that his sincerity should be questioned. But none of these things moved him, he "increased the more in strength . . . proving that this is very Christ." God had chosen a powerful vessel to bear His name.

PAUL'S VISION

Friday, December 12 — Acts 16:6-10.

"Come over into Macedonia, and help us." — V. 9.

IT HAD BEEN EIGHTEEN YEARS since that memorable day when the light from heaven shone down upon Saul, blinding him, and the voice of the One whom he had been persecuting accused him. They had been years filled with work of great effectiveness. Paul and Silas had just finished their second missionary journey, taking with them Timothy, who, with his mother, had been converted a year before on Paul's first visit to Lystra. They had visited all the churches which had been founded on the first tour and now they wanted to extend their work, v. 7, but the Lord had other work for them to do. Note verse 10, "Immediately we endeavoured to go." Paul's dependence upon God, gave him courage of the highest type.

PAUL PERSECUTED

Saturday, December 13 — Acts 21:27-36.

"For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, Away with him." — V. 36.

PREVIOUSLY IN THIS CHAPTER, we read of Paul's friends trying to dissuade him from going to Jerusalem. In their love for Paul they overlooked the fact that he was willing "not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." The cause of the tumult is found in verses 20 to 26. Jews who had been converted under Paul's preaching could not forget at once their zeal for the law of Moses. Paul's subsequent action in their behalf brought down upon him the ire of the mob. His address in chapter 22 is one of the most wonderful discourses on record.

PAUL'S DEFENCE

Sunday, December 14 — Acts 22:3-21.

"For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard." — V. 15.

COURAGE OF THE HIGHEST ORDER was an outstanding characteristic of Paul. But it was no mere bravado; it was a courage founded upon faith and experience. Ever since Paul had dedicated his life to Christ on that day when he was stopped in his career and directed of God, his faith had grown stronger and stronger. Each experience of life, though often entailing severe suffering, but cemented his confidence and trust in his heavenly Father.

How wonderful would be our lives could we but see in each circumstance of life God's directing hand and rest secure no matter how great the tumult surrounding us, knowing that all things will work together for good, if we are faithful. — M. G.

A PRAYER

Lord, make me strong enough to bear
My little round of anxious care.
The day returns. For this I pray:
Sufficient wisdom for the day.
Although I may not walk with kings,
Let me be big in little things.

Grace me with modesty and teach
Me kindness of thought and speech;
Let me not hasty be to chide
The children walking at my side,
And spoil with imperfections slight
The record which the day shall write.

Lord, make me big enough, I pray,
To triumph in a lesser way.
When petty disappointments rise,
Let me be patient, gentle, wise.
Missing the joy which greatness brings,
Let me not fail in little things.

Lord, I would work and neighbor here,
Too big to hate, too wise to sneer.
I would be helpful, cheerful, kind,
Gentle of speech and broad of mind.
And though not far my circle swings,
Let me be great in little things.

— Edgar A. Guest.

"WE ARE TO PRAY for bread, not for cake." So writes Sister Lottie E. Young in the article, "Ask What Ye Will."

HOW TO USE THE BIBLE

When in sorrow, read John 14.
When men fail you, read Psalm 27.
When you have sinned, read Psalm 51.
When you worry, read Matthew 6:19-34.
Before church service, read Psalm 84.
When you are in danger, read Psalm 91.
When you have the blues, read Psalm 34.
When God seems far away, read Psalm 139.
When you are discouraged, read Isaiah 40.
If you want to be fruitful, read John 15.
When doubts come upon you, try John 7:17.
When you are lonely or fearful, read Psalm 23.
When you forget your blessings, read Psalm 103.
For Jesus' idea of a Christian, read Matthew 5.
For James' idea of religion, read James 1:19-27.
When your faith needs stirring, read Hebrews 11.
When you feel down and out, read Romans 8:31-39.
When you want courage for your task, read Joshua 1.
When the world seem bigger than God, read Psalm 90.
When you want rest and peace, read Matthew 11:25-30.
When you want Christian assurance, read Rom. 8:1-30.
For Paul's secret of happiness, read Col. 3:12-17.
When you leave home for labor or travel, Psalm 121.
When you grow bitter or critical, read 1 Cor. 13.
When your prayers grow narrow or selfish, Psalm 67.
For Paul's idea of Christianity, read 2 Cor. 5:15-19.
For Paul's rules on how to get along with men, Rom. 12.
When you think of investments and returns, read Mark 10:17-31.
For a great invitation and a great opportunity, Isa. 55.
For Jesus' idea of prayer, Luke 11:1-13, Matt. 6:5-15.
For the prophet's picture of worship that counts, read Isaiah 58:1-12.
For the prophet's idea of religion, read Isa. 1:10-18 and Micah 6:6-8.
Why not follow Psalm 119:11 and hide some of these in your memory? — Prof. Harris Franklin Rall.

DO YOU EVER GET TIRED of handing out money (or being asked to) for this, that, or the other thing? For that tired feeling, read a little story from the Bishop of Nelson, New Zealand: "Two men met recently, and one asked the other for a subscription for his church. The reply was to the effect that the church was always wanting money.

"The other man replied, 'When my lad was a boy, he was costly; he always wanted boots and shoes, stockings and clothing, and wore them out fast. The older and stronger he grew, the more money had to be spent. But since he died he hasn't cost me a shilling.'

"Yes, a live church always wants money. Yes, indeed, if you want a dead church, then withhold the money. If you want a live church, growing, expanding, serving God in the community, you have got to pay the price for it in time, strength and money."

THE PEACE OF GOD

By J. W. Macallister

"And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ." — Philipians 4:7.

WE ARE LIVING IN DAYS of extreme unrest. Not only the class designated as the poor, but the upper strata of society are equally affected. For a number of years, business conditions have been fairly favorable for all classes and we have raised our standard of living.

In many cases, the things we at one time enjoyed as occasional luxuries have become, in recent years, a necessity because of our having had them so frequently in the fat years of prosperity. Now this has changed. Many are out of employment entirely. Some are working part time, and most of the ones who still are employed are dreading the possible lay off or shut down.

In addition to the financial pressure, there also is much to disturb our minds over the condition of society in general. The family circle is being undermined by insidious forces that are beyond our capacity to control. While we, as followers of the Lord, are not nearly so badly affected by this falling away, our children who have not yet reached the standard of full trust in God are coming in contact with it on all sides. They can point out the "liberties" (?) that other boys and girls "enjoy"; their freedom from restraint of parents. They are at times prompted to think and sometimes to say that we are too narrow and too rigid in our discipline.

These are only two of the conditions that affect, in some measure, all of us. There are many others that might be cited which tend to cause mental concern.

Now just what should be the attitude of the Christian in these trying times? They are here, and probably will remain for a time and we must meet them somehow. Is our faith in God going to be a benefit to us or are we going to prove we were just fair weather Christians? Is God our kind, loving Father only while the sun of prosperity, good health and happiness is shining upon us? Or is He equally our loving Father when the storms of life are raging?

When Jesus was about to depart from this earth and return to His Father, He said to His disciples in John 14:27: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. Not as the world giveth, give I unto you." There is a peace that the world gives, but alas, it comes far too infrequently and remains for too short a time to be of any real comfort to an ordinary mortal.

We can, in some measure, grasp the meaning of "the peace of God." God, knowing that in himself is vested all knowledge and power, is not in any measure disturbed by the waywardness of either man or demon. He, knowing the end from the beginning, has shown His wisdom by allowing the human family to pass through these bitter experiences to get an acquaintance with the ill effects of sin and disobedience.

He also, even before the bringing forth of the human race, made a glorious provision for the redemption and deliverance of all who would take advantage of His gracious provision. Having, in His own mind, made these plans and knowing He had the power in himself to bring them to a glorious consummation in the ages to come, and having laid help on One who was mighty, He could, of course, patiently await the working out of His plans with perfect complacency.

When Jesus gave His followers His peace, He gave them a quality of peace that would withstand the storms of life. Such a peace neither a financial stringency nor a social break down of morals or high standards could in any measure disturb. When we call to mind the recital of God's Word relative to the many varied and trying circumstances and experiences of our Master during His earthly career, we can readily see that He possessed an exceptional and unusual quality of peace.

It was because Jesus knew His heavenly Father, knew of His love, knew of His mercy, knew of His almighty power that He could go ahead and endure the contradiction of sinners, eventuating in betrayal by a friend and finally ending on the cruel cross. It was because of this knowledge and the joy that was set before Him that He faithfully carried out His Father's plans and has now become the Redeemer of the world. He will soon, thank God, be its Restorer and Deliverer, thus undoing and destroying the work of the devil.

One might have interjected the thought that it is the reception and retention of peace to our poor, disturbed, human minds that is the especial interest and desire of us all at the present time. Yes, that is true and it was and is for that definite purpose that much of God's Word was written. Just to the measure of faith that we believe and obey God's Word, just to that same measure are we enabled to possess this peace that passeth understanding.

Just how real are our thoughts, words and sentiments when we pray, "Our Father, who art in heaven"? We who have known the blessing of a good, true, human father know what love was back of father in that case. Yet our human father, no matter how much he desired to do us good and make our life happy, was in most instances handicapped by incapacity to provide.

Not so our heavenly Father, who has promised that no good thing will He withhold from him who walketh uprightly. Jesus promised, "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end". He also admonished us to take no anxious thought for food, shelter, nor raiment, knowing that God recognizes our constant need of these things. But He does insist that we seek first or give first place, prior interest, to the things pertaining to the kingdom of heaven. And if we do that, all these other temporal things will be added.

If we could just get the thought fixed and settled in our hearts, in the very fiber of our being, that our glorious heavenly Father loves us a thousandfold more than any human parent could possibly love us, and that back of that love is stored provision for all our needs, both spiritual and temporal, and that to this is added the desire and capacity to supply all our needs according to His grace, we, too, can readily grasp and receive and rest in an abiding peace, a peace the world cannot give, nor, thank God, take away.

The Apostle Paul, in Romans, gives us the assurance that all things work together for good to them who love God, to the called ones according to His purpose. We note here a very broad, sweeping promise, "All things work together for good". But we must not neglect to note its qualification that it is promised to "them that love God". Not to me because I am a member of some church, not because I have been baptized or have professed conversion, or because I occupy some honorable position in a Christian community, but because I LOVE GOD.

Loving God means much more than a mere profession of religion. It means, first, knowing God by an actual experience of having been the recipient of His bounty. We may have an intellectual knowledge of Him by reading about Him, but to actually know God we must prove to ourselves that He actually exists and that He is a Rewarder of them who diligently seek Him. And we can only occupy that desirable position by having actually laid hold upon the provisions He has made possible through His Son, Jesus Christ, and by having had the definite evidence given to us of His keeping power.

We are citing below just a few of the hundreds of precious promises on record in God's Word for our comfort and peace. Happy are we if we exercise the faith to accept them in sincerity and truth. "The Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil." 2 Thess. 3:3. "I am the Lord, the God of all flesh: is there anything too hard for me?" Jer. 32:27. "My grace is sufficient for thee, for thy strength is made perfect in weakness." 2 Cor. 12:9. "Take my yoke upon you, and ye shall find rest (peace) unto your souls." Matt. 9:29. "I will not leave you comfortless." John 14:18. "How much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?" Matt. 7:11. "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted (tried) above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." 1 Cor. 10:13. "If ye have faith and doubt not it shall be done." Matt. 21:21. "With God nothing shall be impossible." Luke 1:37. "If ye endure chastening God dealeth with you as with sons." Heb. 12:7. "There shall not a hair of your head perish. In your patience possess ye your souls." Luke 21:18, 19. "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Matt. 21:22. "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15:7.

Thus we might go on adding to the many promises here-in presented, showing God is vitally interested in His people. The only question standing between us as finite, fallen children of Adam, and the actual experiences of having these promises fulfilled in us here and now, is our faith, our belief in them.

Do we believe God when He says He will do all these things for us? Or do we read them over and say that they sound good but somehow they don't seem to be for us. Let us be honest, if we take that position, and acknowledge we are faithless and unbelieving.

But if we do actually believe God, let us rest on Him, fully believing not only that He has made these promises, but that He will fulfil them to us.

REASONS WHY ONE MAN GOES TO CHURCH

1. BECAUSE, FIRST OF ALL, I suppose, it is the habit of a lifetime. I am glad it is a habit, and see no reason for a change.

2. Because I believe in the church, its mission and work, and am willing to put my belief into action. I do not consider it consistent to profess belief in an organization and then expect the other fellow to do my part in keeping that organization alive.

3. Because even if I were not a churchman I should be unwilling to live in a community where there was no church; and if I stayed away and every one else did as I, there would be no church.

4. Because through attendance and Sabbath-keeping my general morale is built up for the week ahead.

5. Because I can always find spiritual help, and am made a better man than I should otherwise be.

6. Because I somehow feel that my presence and that of others helps my pastor to preach a better sermon; and I feel just a bit like Aaron and Hur staying up Moses' hands.

7. Because I have boys and girls whom I want to go, and I know my example, either way, will count for more than all I say.

8. Because I am familiar enough with human nature to know that people in general will go where others go — the few where few go, the many where many. I am not a crowd, but I can count for one toward a crowd; and I want to count in the right direction.

9. Because I am a member of the church and the vows of the church are upon me, and it is my duty to honor them.

10. Because the Christian church is not merely one organization among many; rather, one apart from and above all others. It is the church of Christ, founded by Him, standing for the things He stands for, and seeking to carry on His work in this world.

11. Because, with many, I believe that the supreme need of the world is a spiritual need, and that the only supply adequate to meet that need is organized thoroughgoing Christianity.

12. Because, finally and simply and most of all, I love to go. — Granite State Free Press, Lebanon, N. H.

FULFILLING THE LAW OF CHRIST

(Continued from front page)

me alone, and I am right with God." This may be true to a certain degree; but nevertheless have you gone and preached or proclaimed Christ to him? have you tried to be his keeper in a spiritual way by expressing in word, or conduct, or through some other agency, the love of Christ our Savior?

A statement is made in Galatians 6:2 regarding law. It is this: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." How many times have we failed on this point? As individual members and individual churches, is it just enough to keep ourselves and our church going, or should we give the weaker brother a lift? Really, it is a serious question whether we can complete or "fulfil" the law of Christ by just taking care of ourselves and forget about the fellow sufferer and laborer who is bearing the mid-day sun under a heavy burden. The true Christian is one who shares his resources, his joy, his sorrow, his love, and sympathy with his fellow man.

When our Savior gave the two greatest commandments His first thought was concerning God and the next one was for the neighbor. Matt. 22:37 and 39. This shows the importance of our responsibilities to God first, then to others. Again we find the thought of this second commandment brought out very forcibly in Matt. 25:40: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Yes, there are laws for each classification of mankind on the face of the earth, and it matters not how this mankind is classified, whether religiously, nationally, racially, or educationally, there is only one set of laws or commandments for the one who wishes to be Christian and that is to follow our Savior's teachings and the inspired Word of God as it reveals the Divine will concerning us in respect to our Father, His Son and our fellow man.

The Son of God recognized the value of cooperation. He sent His disciples out in pairs that they could strengthen each other. He also said that a house that was divided against itself could not stand. So we also must cooperate to the best of our ability and with the most efficiency. To do this we should not forget our opportunity to further the cause of Christ: first, through our National headquarters; second, through our state conferences; third, through our local churches. In this way we can perhaps reach more of our fellow men with the gospel than in any other way, and thus "fulfil the law of Christ," and bring untold blessings to ourselves in the future ages of joy and peace.

"If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well: but if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors. For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." James 2:8-10. Does the offending in one point mean you? Let us all strive to eradicate from our lives this one last point, which offends, and endeavor in every way to make Christ's law full and complete in ourselves and not be neglectful of others.

THE MAN IN EDEN

By T. A. Drinkard

"And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it. And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." — Genesis 2:15-17.

IS THE ABOVE RECORD verbally inspired of God? Be careful how you answer. If it is inspired can any fault be found with it? Do you accept it wholly without rejecting any phase of it? I believe it to be verbally inspired of God. If I did not I would reject the entire narration, and not only that, but the entire record as well.

Many times in life we hear those who have a new theory to mold trying to give an interpretation that calls for the foolish act of twisting the Scriptures to prove their own views. Such is all uncalled for and unwise.

The record is inspired of God or it is not. If it is not inspired of God, what good is it? It seems evident that some consider it not inspired the way they comment on it. Why not believe that God took the man that He had previously made and put him in the garden of Eden? What is so unbelievable about it anyway? Do you believe it? Why not believe that after He put the man in the garden He issued a command to him that he could freely eat of every tree of the garden except the tree of the knowledge of good and evil? Do you consider this a piece of fiction?

Possibly some wonder, as a man said to me a few days ago, "I don't see why Paul said that death was an enemy." He could not understand, because his mind was wrapped up in the theory of going to heaven at death.

Why not believe that Adam died in the very day of the eating? I believe it means what it says, and to change it just because it doesn't harmonize with one's personal views is but to prove the whole subject matter out of joint. Did God know what He was saying and doing? If so, then why should we say that He failed to carry out the death threat? We cannot fail to see the utter ruin that lies just ahead of such a position.

Our young people must reverence the Word of God, and I appeal to each one in Christ to concentrate your every effort toward more united action in this direction. Accept the record as given and teach it all along life's journey. After the battle and strife is all over you will rejoice to know that you have been loyal to the end.

To Our Dear Ones in the Good Faith: We are thankful for the privilege of having another little visit with you. We are thankful for the good papers which come to our home every week, and also for the young ministers that are filling the places that the older ones have had to vacate. May God's blessings go with them every day. And we would be thankful if their sermons could be printed in The Herald, as we haven't any preaching out here. Idaho is a lovely state, never very cold in winter. Neither is it very warm in summer. The mountain air is always cool, with cool nights to sleep. And whether it rains or not, we have more water than is needed to irrigate and no failure of a crop of any kind; for which we are more than thankful.

May God's richest blessings be many for all.
Mrs. Clark McClelland,
Boise, Idaho, Rt. 1.

SARAH ELIZABETH BURSELL

Sarah Elizabeth Bursell, passed away at her home near Medford, Oregon, on November 4th. She had been a resident of Jackson County for the past forty-seven years. Death came after an illness of four days due to paralysis.

Mrs. Bursell was born in Sweden, March 6th, 1850, and came to the United States on her wedding trip in 1868. They settled in Illinois and later moved to Omaha, Nebraska, where they resided until coming to Oregon in 1883. She was a member of the Church of God the greater part of her life.

There are left two sons, Dr. A. Bursell of Mountain View, California, and Victor Bursell of Jackson County, Oregon. There are also four grandchildren.

The above information was gleaned from a Medford, Oregon, paper. I will add that our dear sister was loved by us and welcomed us in her home which was also the home of her daughter, Sr. Ella Benson, who passed away last January. Sr. Bursell is known to many of The Herald readers.

Funeral services were conducted by Elder T. M. Jones of Ashland, Oregon. She sleeps beside her husband, the late Oliver Bursell, in Central Point Cemetery, where other saints are sleeping, waiting the call of the Master.

Yours, waiting the Nobleman from the far country,

Azorah M. Scroggs.

WARD W. ROLL

Ward W. Roll was born September 17, 1853, to Matthias and Lucy (Williams) Roll, on the old homestead at Roll, Indiana, and died July 17, 1930. His boyhood and young manhood were spent there.

On April 17, 1873, he was united in marriage to Eliza Brotherton, who died February 23, 1879. Three children were born to this union, one of whom, Netta Huffman, survives him.

On November 20, 1895 he was married to Ruth Anna Roby. Three children were born to them, two of whom, Meroy Daily and Crystal Towns, survive. Other relatives left are the widow; E. H. Roll, brother; Mrs. L. E. Vernon, stepdaughter; grandchildren, nieces and nephews.

He was baptized in Christ in 1898, becoming affiliated with the Church of God at Roll. He was not able to attend services regularly in later years, but steadfastly kept the faith for over thirty years.

Wardie, as he was affectionately known to his older friends, had been in failing health for over a year, and had been bedfast for the last seven and one-half months.

Funeral services were held at the Church of God at Roll, and he was tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery nearby. Bro. Cantwell Drabentstott officiated, assisted by Bro. Long.

WILLIAM SHEPHERD

William Shepherd, beloved husband of Sr. Harriett E. Shepherd of Redlands, California, was touched by the hand of death and tenderly laid to rest in Hillside cemetery on October 30, 1930, having just passed his eightieth birthday, which occurred on the twenty-third of that month.

Mr. Shepherd was a native of Maryport, England, the son of Jacob and Deborah Stanley Shepherd. The family came to America in 1850, locating in Darlington, Wisconsin, where he remained until he was about twenty-two years of age. In 1873 he removed to Remington, Indiana. On May 29, 1875, his marriage to Miss Harriett E. Lockwood was consummated at Rensselaer, Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd lived at Remington, with the exception of two years spent in Lafayette, until the fall of 1901, when they came to Redlands, California, where they have since made their home.

Mr. Shepherd was a man of unassuming character, was highly respected in the community of which he was a member, and has left a lasting impression for good upon all who knew him. Beside his widow, two sons survive: Robert Albert Shepherd of Glendale, California, member of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, and Dr. Ernest Stanley Shepherd, of the Carnegie Geophysical Laboratory at Washington, D. C.

One of the interesting features of the funeral service was an orchestra number, specially arranged by Mr. Shepherd's son, Robert Albert, and presented by members of the musical organization with which he is connected. Comforting words were read from the Scriptures, and prayer offered, by the pastor of the Los Angeles Church of God.

RUTH FISK

Funeral services for Miss Ruth Fisk, eighteen-year-old high school girl, were held in the Grant Funeral Home. Rev. Geo. Waters of Newkirk, Oklahoma, officiated. A group of high school girls sang three songs. Members of the senior class attended in a body. There were many beautiful offerings. Burial was in Spring Creek Cemetery near Caldwell, Kansas.

Ruth Christine Fisk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisk, was born August 25, 1912, at Deer Creek, Oklahoma. When an infant she moved with her parents to Arkansas City, Kansas, where she had since resided. She was a member of the senior class in the local high school, but was compelled to give up her school duties three weeks before her death on account of failing health. Miss Fisk attended the Sunday School of the Church of God for a number of years, in which church she was baptized. She was a possessor of a generous disposition, a kind and true friend to all. Surviving relatives are the father, Fred L. Fisk; one brother, Clinton, and one sister, Miss Lora Pearl Fisk, all of Arkansas City.

PIONEERING WITH GOD

Not only in a strange and foreign country did Abram pioneer after reaching the land of promise, but also did he pioneer, in his experiences, in the hand of God. The ways of God's dealings with men were largely unknown, but Abram, having faith in Jehovah, committed his all to Him and launched out in every pathway indicated by the Father and journeyed to the end thereto, learning at first hand the greatness and the certainty of God's promises and experiencing from the Father blessing and help hitherto unknown. True, Abram lived this life in a strange and foreign land, but a greater truth that frequently passes unnoticed is that Abram forsook much of the habitual way of man and entered upon the unknown ways of God.

TRUE AND FALSE

Could we obtain a true and accurate photograph of our Lord and Master, it would be one of the most highly prized objects of life. Such a picture would have increased value and importance accordingly as the photograph also included true pictures of those about Him and near Him. Such pictures would instruct as words cannot. But to clip such picture from its true and proper environment and to set it, without mark or flaw, into a picture of people engaged in revelry and debauchery as though the picture really belonged there, would be the depth of infamy, the greatest of falsehood. The picture of Christ in the midst of such environment would constitute falsehood and trickery second to none.

Equally, to remove a passage of Scripture from its true and proper context as placed by inspiration and to place that scripture in the environments of the traditions of man or the dogma of the creeds of man is likewise to falsify the things taught by said scripture and to misrepresent the God of heaven who inspired that thought to be surrounded with the thoughts of His own placing.

Again, to take any one of the men of God out of those environments which God threw about them and to set them in the midst of different or contrary environment is likewise to misrepresent the lessons of God's teachings through them, severally, and to deflect the minds of men into channels and habits false to the channels and habits intended to be taught by God.

GOD'S PROMISES

The commercial and industrial world of today thrives because of the multiplicity of promises of man that are truly and capably kept. These promises reveal the value to society of those who make them. The promises are not greater than the men in whom they originate; and the men are no greater than the measure to which their promises are made good.

The world is made, largely, by the promises of God. Because of them men can confidently labor toward an unknown, though assured, future. The certainty of this future is based upon the promises of the eternal God. These promises are no greater than God himself; nor is God any greater than His promises brought to fulfillment. That man or that woman, that boy or that girl who depreciates the promises of God, depreciates God himself in his or her own estimation.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Receipts. — The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

PAUL OF TARSUS

"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

PAUL WAS THE GREATEST Christian teacher and preacher we have ever had. His letters to the Christian churches furnish us examples upon which to pattern our lives. Yet, he finished his days in a Roman prison, faith never failing. Several times before that he was placed in prison. For what? Preaching Christ!

One time he went up to Jerusalem, knowing that trouble awaited him. But, he went, nevertheless. About a week after his arrival in Jerusalem some of his enemies from Asia Minor also came to the city. When they saw Paul they immediately stirred up a riot against him and beat him. Soldiers came to find out what it was all about, and took Paul to the castle, or prison, where he would be safe from the mob.

Paul asked if he might speak to the crowd, and was allowed to speak to the people from the stairs. He said, "I am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city of Cilicia, yet taught by the great lawyer, Gamaliel." He told them that in his youth he was as ardent in his persecution as they were in theirs, that he thought that was the right way to serve God.

You see, he did not believe Jesus to be the real Son of God. He was so much in earnest that he went to the High Priest and asked for letters of authority to take to the synagogue in Damascus, that he might arrest any Christians, men or women, he found there, and bring them to Jerusalem for punishment.

But God had a better use for so zealous and hard-working a man as Saul. As he came near Damascus a light shone from heaven, and as Saul fell to the earth, he heard a voice saying to him, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?"

Saul said, "Who art thou, Lord?"

And the Lord said, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

Saul was trembling and astonished, but he said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

And the Lord told him to go into Damascus, and there he would be told what to do. When he arose, his sight was gone.

Now, the men with Saul were so surprised they couldn't speak, for they heard the voice of the Lord, but saw no one. However, they led Saul into Damascus to the house of one named Judas. Here he remained three days without sight, food or drink.

By this time Saul must have understood the kind of darkness in which he had been living, for he began to pray. Then the Lord told Ananias, a disciple in Damascus, to go to the street called Straight, and ask for Saul at the home of Judas.

Ananias, having heard that Saul was coming to do evil to the Christians, hesitated until the Lord said that He had chosen Saul to bear His name before the Gentiles, kings, and the children of Israel. Then he went to Saul, put his hands on him, and said, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost."

Immediately Saul could see. He arose and was baptized, and remained many days with the Christians at Damascus.

LONG AGO AND FAR AWAY

As the shepherds heard the angels,
Long ago and far away,
Many glad strains of heavenly music
Echo through our hearts today.

As the shepherds on the hillsides,
Long ago and far away,
Hastened forth to find the Savior,
May we seek Him, too, today.

As the stable in Judea,
Long ago and far away,
Bade Him welcome to its shelter
May we seek Him, too, today.

All the Wise men took the guidance,
Long ago and far away,
Of the star that led to Jesus,
May we do the same today.

As the Wise men brought Him presents,
Long ago and far away,
May we, too, our richest treasures
Offer unto Him today.

— Alice Crowell Hoffman.

BIBLE GAME

1. One person leaves the room. Those remaining decide on the character the other one is to guess. He may ask any question he wishes that can be answered by "Yes" or "No". The one whose answer gives the key to the correct answer is "It".

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON XI. — December 14, 1930

SAUL OF TARSUS

Acts 22:3-15

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 6:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, . . . that I may win Christ. — Philippians 3:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. From Jew to Christian.

Basic Truth. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, . . . for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." — Gal. 3:27, 28.

Outline. I. A Pharisee Became a Christian. II. Conversion: Its Nature and Effect. III. What It Means to be a Christian.

I. A Pharisee Became a Christian. Saul had been "after the most straitest sect of our religion" a Pharisee, Acts 26:5. As such he was a zealous worker for Jehovah. To accept Jesus was in Saul's estimation to reject God; for Jesus in His forward position taught and led beyond the letter into the spirit of God's law. Having become convinced that God himself exalted Jesus to supersede Moses, he at once set forth to faithfully follow Christ. Moses, Deut. 18:15, 18, 19, foretold of this change and of God's requirement to obey the new Prophet. Without denying his God, he stepped from service under the Mosaic laws to service of God under Christ. He became Christian.

II. Conversion: Its Nature and Effect. "Repent . . . and be converted." — Acts 3:19. Converted = "To turn in mind, . . . to become as it were another man." — Crit. Lex. This is a voluntary work of the individual. Saul turned his mind and heart to Christ. Such merely revealed his change of mind, of purpose, revealed a faith in Christ. "That your sins may be blotted out." This second step is wrought by Heaven. The remission of one's sins releases one from sin. To this end Peter commanded those "pricked in their heart", Acts 2:38, to "repent and be baptized . . . for the remission of sins". See Rom. 6:1-5, 18; 1 Peter 3:21; Col. 2:11, 12.

Conversion embraces the turning of the individual to Christ and through Christ the forgiving and cleansing of the turned one.

III. What It Means to be a Christian. As Christ came and taught that man should subdue himself, excepting in so far as obedience to his mind would render service to God, and inasmuch as Christ himself so lived, to be Christian means for one to accept these ideals and press unto them. Inasmuch as Christ taught and wrought forgiveness of sins and assured forgiveness to those who truly obeyed Him, to be Christian embraces the fact of forgiveness of all wrong and of being reckoned of God as righteous. Rom. 4:3, 23, 24. To be Christian associates the individual with God's plan to put down all evil and to establish fullness of righteousness through Christ.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Today we study Saul who professed but did not possess. And we also study the new man Paul who confessed and then possessed.

Why Persecutest Thou Me? Saul was not directly persecuting the person of Christ, but in opposing His word and disciples, he was opposing Christ. To persecute a follower of Christ is but to afflict Christ. Saul was an opponent of Christ because he rejected His word. Do people reject His word today? In rejecting His word do we become opposers of Him? Can we reject His word by not living it as well as by not believing it? Show how people oppose and persecute Christ's followers of today.

Possibilities: The change of Saul to the mighty apostle Paul opened to him a new field of opportunities and possibilities. The relentless persecutor was transformed into a great rescuer of humankind. Christianity offers many fields of labor, and varied and great opportunities for doing good. The class will find some helpful discussion if they will discuss the many opportunities that are open to the class to do. If you want your class to be worth while just do something worth while. It is well to study the life mistakes and successes of others, but unless we can find something that will help us do and ACT and LIVE very little has been accomplished. — C. E. R.

JUNIOR CLASS

One of the persons who saw Stephen stoned to death in our last lesson was Saul. He was very much opposed to the teachings of Jesus and the apostles. Acts 7:58.

But something happened to Saul that caused him to change his mind. One day as he was on his way to Damascus to persecute the Christians a strange thing happened. Read Acts 22 for Saul's own story of what happened. Now tell it in your own words. From this time on, Saul's name was Paul. He is one of the greatest, if not the greatest of the writers of the New Testament. All through his life he was an earnest worker and teacher for Christ. He suffered all kinds of punishments because of his faith, but remained loyal to the end. Just before his death he made this statement: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but to all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4:7-8.

How can we use Paul's life as an example for us to follow? — V. C. T.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Saul was among those who gnashed on Stephen when he said, "I see the Son of man standing on the right of God."

The Jews regarded Jesus' statement of His Sonship to God as sacrilege. They had learned well the lesson that their national history had taught them, namely, that man must not worship the works of God's hands, not even His highest work — man himself. To them Jesus' statement of His Sonship to God was a statement of man's equality with God. They would not have so interpreted Him if they had realized the facts of God's Fatherhood and of His purpose to exalt man out of the living creature status into Sonship status, bearing the Father's image and likeness. This conception of man's relationship to God would have caused them to discern in Jesus God's exaltation of man through His love and grace. It would have caused them to discern also the humility, the fellowship with God, and the reverent worship that were Jesus' because of exaltation.

Saul realized the exaltation of Jesus, the Son of man, when he heard the voice of Jesus out of heaven. Then he no longer "gnashed" on the idea of His sonship. Instead he was filled with a consciousness of God's exaltation of man and a consequent sense of humility, and fellowship, and worship in truth and Spirit. And because of this consciousness he was a chosen vessel to bear the Son's name before Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel.

— A. K.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"I esteem all things to be a loss, on account of the excellency of the knowledge of the anointed Jesus my Lord; (on whose account I suffered the loss of all things, and considered them to be vile refuse, so that I may gain Christ.)" — Phil. 3:8, Diag.

It is hard to estimate definitely the significance of a life like Paul's. More than any other, Paul made Christianity the world-religion. No other man has so profoundly influenced the religious thinking of mankind. He was the greatest man of the Apostolic Age, if not of all ages of the church. Yet he was ever the disciple and Jesus, the Master.

He was ever willing to sacrifice and suffer. His uppermost thought always seemed to be his own sinfulness and the majesty of Christ. He counted his own losses as nothing if by that he might obtain the resurrection from the dead. He pressed "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." — L. A. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

Sr. Woodward is again brightening Golden Rule Home with her presence.

Bro. Conner, who conducted services for the Chicago brethren on November 30, was called to Danville, Illinois, immediately after service because of the death of his brother.

Sr. Jessie Wilson is very nicely situated for the winter in Oakland, California, with her aunt, Sr. Thomas Wilson and family. She may be addressed at 1716 E. 20th St.

Sr. Leila Whitehead is especially happy this week because of the homecoming of her brother, Dr. Ralph Whitehead, who is ship surgeon on a steamer between New York City and Rio Janerio.

Sr. Dorothy Krogh, who was a student in the N. B. I. Training Class last year, spoke for the church at Blair, Nebraska, Sunday, November 23. Her text was taken from Luke 12:31.

Mrs. Lola Danforth of Dallas, Texas, who has been visiting her mother, Sr. Clara Chaffee, at Golden Rule Home, is visiting with her many friends at Grand Rapids, Michigan, and vicinity.

Bro. and Sr. Paul C. Johnson and Bro. and Sr. J. Arthur Johnson of Oregon, Illinois, spent Thanksgiving and the week end following with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Johnson, at Sac City, Iowa.

Bro. R. H. Judd writes that the cast on his foot has been reset, and that the doctors are much more hopeful than they were, for they feared at first he would never walk again. Bro. Judd has had a long siege of suffering since his accident eight weeks ago but is steadily gaining strength now, for which his many friends will be glad.

Thank Offerings have been received since last issue from the following: Mr. and Mrs. Leland Hanson; Jessie Wilson; Leota Hanson; Mrs. A. G. Hanson and Florence; Blair, Neb., Church; Mrs. John Cochran; Mrs. Lucy Robinson; Curdella A. Gray; Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lasher; Mrs. James Cassen; Nellie M. Blakely; Ida Vogel. These are all very deeply appreciated and will do much toward furthering our gospel work.

My heartiest thanks are hereby conveyed to one and all for the cards and letters which have been sent me during the past three weeks.

My hopes to return promptly to work have again been disappointed. My doctor, analyzing that my already strained nerves have received a shattering blow, to insure future health, requires that I must recuperate fully before being further taxed. Therefore, his advice to take, at this time, whatever rest may be necessary is being followed. At my home at 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, I will do such studying and service as I feel able, and will keep in touch with the office.

Again, I thank all for their kind words.
F. L. Austin.

DOINGS AT DIXON

The Sunday School enjoyed a good attendance, numbering 54 on November 23. As the total number enrolled is 57, this is a good attendance, and we have been keeping it near this number since Rally Day. The adult class numbered 19 last Sunday.

The church services both morning and evening were conducted by Bro. Conner, and the sermons were enjoyed by all. Sixty-four were present and enjoyed special music by the Junior choir in the morning and by the Senior in the evening. The duet, "Nailed to the Cross," added very much to the services. In the afternoon Bro. Conner conducted services at the State Colony. He was assisted by a quartette, composed of Sisters Drew and Wagner and Brothers Ford and Eckert.

The committee in charge is busy preparing the Christmas program.

The Golden Rule Bible class are enjoying the Senior Berean book, No. 2, "Life and Immortality," and wish more would come to study these good lessons with them.

Grace Drew, Sec.

THANKSGIVING AT GOLDEN RULE HOME

The Golden Rule Home family received a box of goodies, such as candy, nuts, fruit, pudding, cake, etc., from the Springfield, Ohio, Bereans for their Thanksgiving dinner. It was greatly appreciated and we tender our many thanks to these Bereans. We also received a hand decorated vase and bouquet of flowers from Sr. Ruby Randall, the former being her own work. These also are very much appreciated.

We are thankful to our blessed Lord for the many blessings given to us, individually and as a family the past year, and only hope that we may live more as He would have us live. May God's richest blessing rest upon each member of God's great family is the prayer of the Golden Rule Home Family.

Members of the Oregon congregation were very glad to have their pastor, Bro. Austin, with them again on Sunday morning, November 30, though he was not able to conduct the services. He was called out over the week end to attend to some business matters for the N. B. I., but his physician advised that a further rest of at least two weeks is absolutely necessary. We trust that he will soon be returned to his former health and vigor and be enabled to again take up his work for the Master.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

It was our pleasure to again meet with the Brush Creek Church of God near Dayton, Ohio, for a series of meetings beginning on November 9th and continuing over the 23rd. Fair attendance and interest was manifest throughout the meetings. Two were baptized, Mrs. Harold Kessler and Mrs. Springer. A number of new acquaintances were made, and we were privileged to visit in several homes where we had not been before. We are glad to report that the Brush Creek Church is indeed interested in pressing on. All show a good interest in the Bible and the many hours of visiting we had will long be remembered as a treasure.

Sydney E. Magaw.

TRAINING CLASS NOTES

Every Thursday, in addition to our English, we learn a portion of Scripture. So far we have memorized Psalms 1, 15 and 24; 1 Thess. 4:13-18; Eccl. 12:1, 13, 14; 9:5, 6, 10; Isaiah 53 and 35.

The Class furnished the flowers for the union services held in the Church of God on Thanksgiving Day. We did this in appreciation of God's continued kindness and goodness to us each day.

Sr. Ordnung and Elizabeth invited the Class and Mrs. Cooper and her two daughters to have Thanksgiving dinner with them. We greatly appreciate this and thank them kindly.

We are now studying contemporary kings and prophets of Judah and Israel. Bro. Austin expects to be back and take up his work with us again in the near future.

The boys of the Class have been taking an active part in the work of the church census of Oregon and vicinity. This census will be made the basis of a visitation campaign to be conducted largely by the women of the church.

Lucille LeCrone, Sec.

GRAND RAPIDS CHURCH All Records Fall

November 23 so far surpassed all previous records at our various services that the hearts of all were full, and their faces shining. The Sunday School numbered 251, and when the classes assembled in the auditorium for the concluding exercises every aisle was packed and the banner class, which numbered 56 little tots aged 5 to 7, had to remain standing in front of the rostrum after reciting their verse, for there was not even standing room elsewhere.

What an opportunity. And yet what a responsibility for the little band of members who have built up this church and put their all into it! May God guide that the work be carried forward in the way best for the cause of truth and righteousness.

All the other services were well attended, also, and the evening audience was the largest one to date.

For the past ten weeks the evening series on outstanding characters of the Bible has dealt with men, but beginning the first Sunday in December the subjects will be women for the rest of the year. What an inspiration there is in studying carefully the characters of those olden days.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

Oklahoma, 1; Kansas, 1; Ontario, 1; Washington, 2; Ohio, 1; Indiana, 2.

The above states have contributed to the Dollar-A-Month Club since last recording. Slowly, but surely, the number is mounting. We will finally reach the goal.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Nellie M. Blakely; Mrs. Curdella Gray; Mrs. Paul Magnus; Vernon Boggs; Bertha Williams; Mary Goodyear; Mrs. J. E. Lent; Norris Rupp.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"FOR NOW WE SEE THROUGH A GLASS, DARKLY; BUT THEN FACE TO FACE."—1 Cor. 13:12.

GOD'S GOODNESS TO MANKIND

IT IS INTERESTING TO STUDY individual pedestrians that pass on a busy down-town street. It is very strange how God made every one different from anyone else. What a complex world it is we live in, with its millions of peoples with their diversified interests and outlooks on life! Many of necessity, live in a very small circle in so far as a knowledge of the known universe is concerned.

It seems that many inventions of recent years are miracles. God honors man by working through him to provide many things that man needs in world development. God has done so many wonderful things for mankind and I am sure that not half is appreciated. Even the way of life everlasting which was provided through the gift of His Son is lightly considered. God himself is a miracle to me, without a beginning and without an ending. We mortal beings cannot comprehend this, but to think that some day, if we are doing what God wants us to do, we may be able to understand many things that seem blanks to us now.

God considers every human being in His plan. Are we half that considerate with others as well as ourselves? We try to be. People are getting more unappreciative as time goes on. We are hardly able to get along with our neighboring nations. What the world needs is a righteous leader.

God has revealed to us little about His universe. We should appreciate what He has revealed, though, because we know that with the bringing in of the new age when His Son comes back to rule the world in righteousness, we shall be like Him.

Anna Hammond, Los Angeles.

IOWA STATE BEREAN MEETING

The Iowa Bereans met at Waterloo on August 28, 1930, for their annual meeting. Business meeting was opened at nine o'clock by a song, and prayer by Bro. Jackson.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer's report was read and accepted.

The tract committee reported no tracts given out.

The literary committee reported one article written by Sr. Alta King.

The isolated committee reported no letters sent out as yet, but a list of names has been in readiness for circuit letters. The above reports were accepted.

Junior committee reported two organizations, one at Stanhope, and the other at Gladbrook. Stanhope held five meetings and Gladbrook fourteen. Motion was made that these reports be accepted. Seconded and carried.

The by-laws, as adopted in 1898, were read and suggested by-laws were read. After discussion the new by-laws were unanimously accepted as the new governing form.

Those on committees were left on their respective places for another year.

The election of officers wound up the business meeting. Sidney Jackson was re-elected president; Esther Sealine, Stanhope, vice-president; Ward Williams, Gladbrook, secretary; Blanche Harland, Cedar Falls, Treasurer.

Motion for adjournment was made, seconded and carried.

Ward Williams, Sec.

STATE LITERARY COMMITTEES

The state literary committees are appointed to assist the editor of the Berean Page in collecting material which can be used in our Berean columns. We have not had a great deal of material help in this line in the past.

The editor has often asked different ones throughout the states for contributions, sometimes specifying the kind of article desired, sometimes merely asking for a contribution, and with the exception of one or two cases has never been disappointed. Our Bereans are really quite ready to help, but until asked seem to think that their writings are unworthy of publication.

Will not the presidents of local societies, as well as the chairmen of literary committees make requests for contributions from the members of their groups? You are in a much better position to know the talent of your class than the editor. The greater the number of thoughts expressed on the page, the more interesting it will be for all of us.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 5; Ohio, 3; Iowa, 3; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Indiana, 1; California, 1.

“YE SHALL BE FREE INDEED”

By Samuel E. Haney

“If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.” — John 8:36.

A PERSON IS VOID of a justifiable excuse for not being free who has scripturally complied with the procedure befitting Christ and His apostles’ teachings, thereby meeting God’s approval of a Christian’s status, namely, belief, baptism, a consecrated and sanctified (set apart) life.

It is always in order, yes, essential in considering God’s dealings with Christians — “an holy (‘consecrated,’ Moffatt) nation” — to trace His dealings “with the pattern”, namely, fleshly Israel, which were recorded for this very purpose. See 1 Cor. 10:11.

The Jews were always prosperous and free from affliction and sickness when they “diligently hearkened to the voice of the Lord God”. Ex. 15:23-27; Num. 21:7, 8; Psa. 105:37. They were also protected from annoyance by their heathen neighbors. But whenever they affiliated with the wicked nations (heathen) their freedom automatically was changed to servitude, physical punishment and defeat in warfare. Do we not see the spiritual warfare of the “holy nation” — the Christian — similar to that of Israel’s fleshly experience?

Paul confirms and clarifies this exposition by explaining cause and effect. He first refers parenthetically to Israel under the old covenant, then to both Jew and Gentile under the new covenant in 2 Cor. 3:14-17 and 4:3, 4, thus: “But their minds were obtuse; for this day, the same veil remains over the reading of the old covenant; not discovering that it is taken away by Christ; but, even to this day, when Moses is read, a veil lies on their heart. But when it (‘a man’, R. V.) shall turn to the Lord, the veil will be taken from around it (‘taken away’, A. V.). And the Lord is the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom.” “But if, indeed, our glad tidings be veiled, they have been veiled to those who are perishing; to those unbelievers, whose minds the God of this age blinded, in order that they might not see clearly the effulgence of the glad tidings of the glory of the anointed one who is the likeness of God.” Emp. Diag.

None but the Christians who are swayed by the Spirit of the Lord are free and can see the splendor of the “glad tidings of the glory of the anointed one”. Though they are naturally under the diabolical tyranny of the spirit of this world, their minds are imbued with the spirit of discernment (1 Cor. 2:12-16) enabling them to rejoice in the promises of God as though they saw the deliverance and were already enjoying them. They are thus able to “stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage”. Gal. 5:1.

Just as Israel was a God-favored people, an exclusive nation for nineteen hundred years, God has been dealing with Christians — “an holy nation” — while in the midst of wicked (“heathen”, R. V.) nations. And like their typical brethren, Israel, they are free only to the extent of their obedience to the teachings of their respective covenants, the one, fleshly, the other, spiritual.

God explains, for it is “thus saith the Lord almighty”, how Christians can by disobedience alienate themselves from the only source of freedom, just as the case was with Israel. “Keep out of all incongruous ties with unbelievers. What have righteousness and iniquity in common, or how can light associate with darkness? What harmony can there be between Christ and Belial, or what business has a believer with an unbeliever? What compact can there be between God’s temple and idols? For we are the temple of the living God: as God hath said, I will dwell and move among them, I will be their God and they shall be my people. Therefore come away from them, separate, saith the Lord, touch not what is unclean; then I will receive you, I will be a Father to you, and you shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord almighty”. 2 Cor. 6:14-18, Moffatt.

Many of us are deprived of freedom and real wealth by the fascinating lure of the “things of this world” and social aspiration. No one can love this world (1 John 2:15) and be an heir of the kingdom of God. “Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?” James 2:5.

Paul’s idea of the Christian’s popularity, wealth and freedom is feasible, it being his appointed destiny: “Unknown but well known, dying but here I am alive, chastened but not killed, grieved but always glad, a ‘pauper’, but the means of wealth to many, without a penny but possessed of all”. 2 Cor. 6:9, 10, Moffatt.

The difficulty with many of us is our proneness to underestimate the Christian’s dignitary standing in God’s estimation, notwithstanding His many verifying statements to this effect. To adequately appreciate what it means to be “heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ” is sure to infuse such a freedom in the Christian’s heart as to make him free and joyful despite all his tribulation, whether it be of body, mind or spirit.

ANNUITY BONDS

For information regarding advantages of Annuity Bonds over Wills in making final gifts for the furtherance of our Gospel labors, address,

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
OREGON ILLINOIS

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 9, 1930

NUMBER 10

LET US GIVE EARNEST HEED

By Samuel E. Haney

"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him."

THE CONSTRUCTION OF OUR TEXT indicates a comparative significance which, by reading chapter one, including verses one and two of chapter two, becomes manifest. The comparison is found by comparing the first verse of Hebrews with the remainder of the chapter, namely, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spoke in time past unto the fathers by the prophets." The second verse of Hebrews one down to our text refers paramountly to "his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things," and incidentally to the "ministering angels". "Therefore (due to the momentous difference between living under the law and under grace) we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip."

The next verse augments the comparison by concisely stressing and clarifying conditions prior to and after Calvary, namely, "For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation." To get a clearer conception of this verse let us resort to Dr. Moffatt's version, which reads, "For if the divine word spoken by angels held good, if transgression and disobedience met with due punishment in every case."

Stephen, in Acts 7:53, refers to the law's reception; and the "due punishment" for transgression is given typically in Numbers 15:31, "Because he hath despised the word of the Lord, and hath broken his commandment, that soul shall utterly be cut off; his iniquity shall be upon him." This being the case under the law, a mere "schoolmaster," Gal. 3:24, "how shall we escape the penalty (Moffatt), if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord (Mark 1:14-15), and was confirmed unto them that heard him?" The inference, which seems clear to the writer is, to be "utterly cut off", as a result of negligence.

The importance of preparing to meet our Redeemer is incomparable with anything concerning this life or world; and yet, many of us habitually make it a secondary matter. Paul says, "Therefore, with all this host of witnesses encircling, we must strip off every handicap, strip off sin with its clinging folds, to run our appointed course steadily." Hebrews 12:1, Moffatt.

In preparing for a trip involving but a few days how carefully we go about it! Fearful of neglecting something, we are constantly thinking about the things which we imagine are necessary. And as one article after another comes to mind we lay it aside for final inspection and packing.

We have become so interested in the things of the world that we neglect to give any thought about meeting Jesus, and what neglecting to be prepared for so great a transition would mean. There will be no time for preparation when He comes, for He says, "For as the lightning, that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day. . . . Surely, I come quickly." Luke 17:24 and Rev. 22:20.

Inasmuch as fallen nature is governed by its senses and faith by the irrevocable Word of God, the former, if given control, will cause us to appear hypocritical to the world. So let us not neglect to see to it that our conversation harmonizes with our actions and Christian profession, and not for ulterior ends, but to reveal our heart's sincerity. "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ," Paul, Phil. 1:27. And also let us not neglect to keep in mind that doubt and fear are among the enemy's most "fiery darts" these days. For these inseparable vermin, doubt and fear, are ever on the watch to slip in whenever faith slips out. The Christian, given to much prayer and meditation on God's Word, should never fear nor be

(Continued on page 154)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth." — Colossians 3:1, 2.

RISEN WITH CHRIST

PAUL, IN HIS IMPRISONMENT at Rome, wrote letters to several of the churches which he had previously established. Among these was the church at Colosse, and although short, his letter to them is full of precious truth for the follower of Christ today. In the second chapter, verse 12, as elsewhere in his writings, Paul likens baptism to death. In going down into the watery grave, we are buried in the likeness of Christ's death. And, in truth, if we were left there we would, in a short time, be dead. But, he says, we "are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

In going through the ordinance of baptism, we die, figuratively, to this life. Our chief interest in life is no longer to serve self, to advance the present life, to develop the carnal nature. But we now reckon ourselves "dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:11. The revised version renders the third verse of Colossians 3 thus, "For ye died, and your life is hid with Christ in God."

Jesus went through the figure in reality. He died; but He rose again, possessed of that life that shall never end. In baptism we accomplish this in figure only. Having "put off . . . the old man which is corrupt," we "put on the new man which after God is created in righteousness." Eph. 4:22, 24. No longer serving self, we now live to serve God.

But we are not yet possessed of that life which Christ received when He arose from the literal tomb. He has opened the gates of death, being possessed himself with eternal life, and having the power to bestow that life upon all who are faithful. For we read that "when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3:2.

Paul himself was looking forward to this reward, for he says in Phil. 3:21, "We look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." And he anticipated receiving that crown of righteousness "at that day." Including others as well in the promise, he says, "And not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4:8.

May the depth of the significance of our Savior's soon return dawn upon our vision more truly each day, realizing that "every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John 3:3. — M. G.

INTO ALL TRUTH

"And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart." — Jeremiah 29:13.

GOD WILL REVEAL HIMSELF to the earnest searcher after truth. We may look longingly upon the faith, the confidence, the Christian achievements of another. But if our desire for these is sincere and strong enough, they may be ours as well. If we wish to know God, to understand His Son, and to gain eternal life, we have but to open our eyes to the truths contained in that Book of books, so easy of access to all.

Mathematics may be beyond our depth. Chemistry may be too intricate for our powers of perception. But how glad we should be that even the simplest may study His Word and God will reveal himself to the humble heart.

It is said that when Gen. Lew Wallace began his widely famed, "Ben Hur," he was in a state of mind bordering on infidelity. But when his great work was completed, he found himself deeply reverent.

Imagine, if we can, the famous author, in needed preparation for so great an undertaking, consulting many, very many authorities. And not the least of these would be the Scriptures, for "they are they which testify of me" said the Master.

Partly convinced in his mind that the Christ, about whom he wove that breath-taking story, was not the Son of God, Gen. Wallace faithfully consulted, studied, prepared comments, following endless details in bringing forth his masterpiece.

But, lo, as he labored, doubt began to intrude upon his mind; convictions became insecure. Perhaps he was wrong! Could it be possible that this Man of all men could be an imposter? And when the final chapter was written, light had dawned upon his vision. This was indeed the Son of God!

"These are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." John 20:31.

Blessed Word of truth! Let's study it more. — M. G.

GOD'S JEWEL CASE

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." — Ephesians 1:3.

SUPPOSE SOME GREAT KING were to lead you into his treasure house. From room to room he takes you, showing you his treasures. By and by he comes to the jewel room. There upon their velvet cushions flash gems of costliest kind. He picks up a gold jewel case of fabulous price and exquisite beauty. Then he begins to fill it. He moves from case to case, selecting as he moves the choicest jewel flashing from its resting place. He picks up the most beautiful pearl and drops it into the gold jewel case. He chooses a blood red garnet of enormous size and drops that in. He takes a flashing amethyst and adds that to the contents of the case.

One by one he takes the most beautiful and precious specimen of each gem he possesses and lets it fall into the jewel box. At last he lays hand upon the most beautiful diamond in the treasure house; puts it into the jewel case; snaps shut the lid and hands you the golden case with all its precious contents. All his gracious and splendid gifts to you are now in that one case. When he gives that he bestows upon you all he has for you. It is all in the jewel case, and is now all yours because you have the case.

So it is in the spiritual realm. Jesus Christ is, as it were, God precious jewel case. All His priceless spiritual treasures He has hidden in Him. Do you long for forgiveness of sins? "In him we have forgiveness." Is your soul burdened for redemption from the dark shadow of eternal death? "In him we have redemption through his blood." Would you know the peace of God which floods the redeemed soul and drives out forever the fever of its fear and soul-unrest? "He is our peace." In Him God has placed that priceless jewel, too, for you to know in its fullness when you receive Him.

Accepting Jesus Christ as your Savior is simply taking Him as God's all-comprehensive jewel case and treasure house. The rest of your Christian life will be a process of discovering and appropriating all the priceless jewels which God has placed in Him "in whom dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily."

THE PRECIOUS JEWEL OF FORGIVENESS

The Holy Spirit seems to exhaust language to describe the completeness and preciousness of remission and forgiveness of sins in Christ Jesus. "In whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of our sins" runs the glad tidings of the blessed Book. And that same Spirit turns this priceless jewel over and over again that the convicted soul may see all the flashing facets of beauty and comfort which the Spirit of Truth has there revealed. For example, the sins of him who takes Christ as his own Sin-bearer are said to be

CAST INTO THE DEPTHS OF THE SEA

As a child you have stood by the banks of the tiny brook which rippled through the meadow. How shallow it is!

The stream is but a film of water. The depths are but shoals. In those shallows all things are open and revealed. Every grain of sand is bare. Each bit of shining mica is as clear as if in the open. Every tiny pebble is uncovered. Nothing in the shallows is hidden.

Somewhat after this fashion do we too often view God's covering of our sins. It is as though He had cast them only into the shallows. But this is not where God in His grace has put them. For the Holy Spirit says of them, "Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea."

No eye can pierce into those black depths of the ocean. No ray of light illumines the darkness. No message ever comes back from that which is swallowed up in this abyss. And into such a gulf of oblivion has God cast all the sins of those who accept His Son as their Sin-bearer.

In Christ His work of remission of sins is complete. Not as into the shallow depths of the brook which murmurs through the field and valley where the eye can rest upon them and the heart grieve for them, has He cast them. Nor does it please His heart of love, nor do honor to the riches of His grace that we should sorrow over them as though they were still upon our own hearts and staining our own innermost souls. But as into sea depths shrouded by a veil of impenetrable darkness did He cast them when He put them far away in Christ.

"BLOTTED OUT AS A CLOUD"

There are invisible inks, so-called, with which you may write a message upon a sheet of paper. For a while the message stands out plain and clear. Then it fades away completely, and becomes invisible even to the keenest eye. It has been blotted out. But it is only seeming. For when you hold the paper up before the fire the message comes back again in its original form. Of that which had been apparently wholly blotted out every sentence, every word, stands out in outline black and sharp as when it was first written.

Even so are all our self-efforts to blot out the record of past sins. For a while we may seem to succeed. A steadfast will, a mind busy with the things of the world, a heart engrossed in its gaieties — a score of other things may for the while drive out the memory and the record of them in our own conscience. But the blotting out is only seeming. And under the fires of remorse and the burnings of an awakened conscience they come back again, like the faded writing, to stare us in the face and plague us with the realization of our utter failure and inability to put away even the memory of sin, much less its conscience, its guilt.

But what we cannot do, even in mind, God does perfectly and in reality. In Christ Jesus He blots out the guilt of sin "as a cloud." And what does that mean? Doubtless that our transgressions are as a cloud in their number and blackness. But may we not see in the figure the Holy Spirit uses this other and more beautiful thought, that God blots out our sins as He blots out the cloud?

Have you ever watched the blotting out of a cloud from God's heaven? Perhaps it was after the summer thunder shower. You stood and watched to see how the great black

(Continued on page 154) ---

OUR HOPE

Old earth, we know, shall have another day,
 Her trembling age, if good the voice of truth,
 Shall by the help of heaven pass away,
 And she take on again the bloom of youth;
 We hear her groans along the dying years,
 As she hath shed, like Autumn skies, her tears.

But earth! take heart! thou shalt be young again!
 And doff thy mourning sackcloth with a smile,
 Glad to forget all weariness and pain,
 And know they come not back the endless while;
 The trees shall clap their hands for very joy
 That sin and death can never more destroy.

Where are thy graveyards? emptied of their prey;
 Where are thy tears? dried by a hand Divine;
 Where are thy sorrows? they all went away
 When graves were spoiled, and saints arose to shine;
 The hills re-echo now, as these, one throng
 Rehearse their victories the plains along.

Spring now ye flowers, for winters never come;
 Be not afraid, O sky, of stormy clouds;
 Mothers! your children now are all at home,
 And looms are weaving here no coffin shrouds;
 Yonder is lifted high a kingly throne,
 And Christ is there, with all the world His own.

— E. A. Stockman.

ANSWERING A FRIENDLY SUGGESTION

By C. W. Dean

I DEEPLY APPRECIATE the "Friendly Suggestion" by Bro. Judd. The subject, "Death and Hell," is a very deep subject, and invites thoughtful consideration by all truth lovers. It gives the writer great pleasure in answering any who may offer a suggestion.

The word, "spared," does not mean death in the absolute sense. The word, "spared", as quoted by Bro. Judd is translated from the Greek, phaidomai, and in its original means, "forbear". The same word is used in 1 Cor. 7:28, and does not mean "death". It is used again in 2 Cor. 13:2. Paul did not mean death here.

Disobedience to the commandment of God was sin. By man, Adam, sin entered the world and death through sin. This is applied to mankind and not angels. Angels did not die. (Luke 20:36.) The writer has been unable to find a single scripture which would indicate that angels die in the absolute meaning of death as applied to mankind.

"And spared not the old world, but saved Noah" and seven others. 2 Peter 2:5. Noah and seven others did not die in the flood, likewise the sinning angels cast down to tartarus, to be "reserved" (not death) unto judgment. The heavens and the earth are the same as they were in the disruption, 2 Peter 3:7, and the same as in the days of Noah.

Dead angels certainly could not accept or reject, or even hear or perceive a proclamation given by Christ after He was made alive in the spirit, by the which He went and preached unto the spirits in prison. 1 Peter 3:19-20. The fact that they are called spirits assures us that they are not human. The proclamation was not made to them during our Lord's death, but after He had been made alive. These imprisoned spirits are the same that Peter mentioned in his second epistle (2:4) and the same in Jude 6, who kept not their own sovereignty and left their proper habitation, God has kept in imperceptible bonds "under gloom" (not death) for the judgment of the great day. This scripture and that of 1 Peter 3:19-20 identify the sinning angels with the sons of God of the sixth chapter of Genesis.

Now, my dear brother, you may not agree with the writer on the comments on the sixth chapter of Genesis. But inasmuch as you are open to conviction, I will try to make plain as possible my thought on it. By being plain, patient and in the spirit of brotherly love, we may both learn something to our advantage, and not hinder others by dogmatic views based on pagan theology and traditions of Christendom down through the ages.

God said that it was not good for man to be alone, so He made a woman (mankind) and brought her unto the man. Adam was a terrestrial son of God, and it was not good for him to be alone, so God gave him a wife. But when the celestial sons of God (angels) saw the daughters of the terrestrial sons, or mankind and cohabited with them they filled the earth with a race of giants. Jehovah said, "My spirit shall not abide (not strive) with man for ever (the age), in their going astray they are flesh." The nephilim (giant offspring), were in the earth in those days, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare them children: the same were the mighty men "that were of old, men of renown."

God certainly would not violate His moral laws, nor one of His commandments. Therefore, if God said that it was not good for His son, Adam, to be alone, but it was best for him to have a wife, why did God destroy the world that was, with a flood, for sons of Adam taking wives?

The solution is simple. Woman was not made or created for celestial sons, and the angels, "celestial sons", committed a sin by leaving their proper habitation and coming in unto the daughters of mankind. For that cause God commanded Noah to build an ark, and brought on a flood to destroy all flesh except that which was carried over in the ark. He cast the sinning angels down to tartarus, reserved under bonds of gloom (not bonds of death) until the day of judgment. They were disobedient spirits during the entire time it required Noah to build the ark.

We have another example of celestial sons during a celestial council with Satan among them in Job 1:6 and 2:1. The sons here referred to are not mankind. But God calls to Satan's attention the acts of Job, which applies to terrestrial sons or mankind.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE SAVIOR CHILD

THE BIRTH FORETOLD

Monday, December 15 — Isaiah 9:1-7.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

THE PROPHET, ISAIAH, UTTERED these words of glowing promise almost seven hundred fifty years before they were fulfilled, probably during the reign of Ahaz, one of the wickedest of the kings of Judah. 2 Chron. 28 tells us that Ahaz established idolatry in its most degrading forms, and because of this, God delivered him and his people over to their enemies, the Syrians. Great disaster and severe punishment overtook them, "because they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers."

Imagine then the joy these words of Isaiah must have brought to the few believing ones of that day! "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." V. 2.

THE PLACE FORETOLD

Tuesday, December 16 — Micah 5:2-9.

"But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel."

THE PROPHET MICAH was contemporary with Isaiah, both prophesying of punishment upon Judah and Israel for their idolatry. But interspersed here and there is a bright picture foretelling a time to come when One should be born who would bring in everlasting righteousness, peace and joy. How can anyone doubt the Messiahship of Jesus, if he gives the subject honest consideration, knowing that even the details of His birth were foretold with such exactitude so many centuries before they transpired?

HIS WORK FORETOLD

Wednesday, December 17 — Isaiah 61:1-6.

"To bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound . . . to comfort all that mourn."

IN COMPARING THESE VERSES with the fulfillment of them, we read, Matt. 4:23-25, that Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching, preaching, and healing, and many needy were brought unto Him to whom He ministered. Other prophecies of His work were made by Isaiah and the other writers of the Old Testament, telling of that part of His work which is yet future. In that future age, all the sick will be healed, all the dead raised, and all will learn the blessed gospel. "So shall they fear the name of the Lord from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun." Isa. 59:19.

THE BIRTH OF THE SAVIOR

Thursday, December 18 — Luke 2:1-7.

"And so it was, that, while they were there, . . . she brought forth her firstborn son." — VV. 6, 7.

JUST BEFORE THE BIRTH of the Savior, Caesar Augustus had sent forth a decree that all people, under Roman rule, must journey to the town to which their family belonged, to be enrolled. Thus Joseph and Mary must needs make the journey to Bethlehem, for this was their ancestral home, as members of the house of David, to be numbered in the census. None dared disobey the mandate of the emperor. And so was fulfilled the prophecy, studied in Tuesday's reading, that Jesus was to be born in Bethlehem instead of in the town of Nazareth where Mary and Joseph lived.

Here was given the world's first Christmas Gift — the Gift of all ages! What better gift can we give, in return, than ourselves, our lives, our all?

SHEPHERD SEEKERS

Friday, December 19 — Luke 2:8-16.

"Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us." — V. 15.

TO THE SAME FIELDS in which David had watched his father's flocks a thousand years before, came the angel of the Lord with the glorious tidings of the birth of that Savior whom David had anticipated, but whom he has not, even yet, seen. The sheep used in the temple service at Jerusalem, were kept out-of-doors the year round and it may be that this flock might have been for that purpose. Brightness always accompanied a manifestation of the presence of God — the pillar of fire guiding the wandering Israelites, the shekinah glory above the mercyseat, etc. So here, too, "the glory of the Lord shone round about them."

How much is included in the words, "A Saviour, which is Christ the Lord"! Christ — Anointed One — is the Greek word for the Hebrew, "Messiah." No wonder the lowly shepherds were reverent before the angelic chorus, singing that first "Messiah."

THE CHILD IN THE TEMPLE

Saturday, December 20 — Luke 2:40-47.

"And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers." — V. 47.

WITH SUCH A MIRACULOUS BIRTH, the attendant heavenly chorus, the warning vision to Joseph telling him how to protect the Savior from the edict of Herod, we know this was no ordinary child, but was the Son of God, the Savior of the world. Of His training as a child, we can only judge from the character of Mary, His mother, a reverent, upright and thoughtful woman.

When the Jewish youth attained the age of twelve, he was called a son of the law and at that time he put on the phylacteries. Duet. 6:4-9. Mary, without doubt, zealously kept all the commandments of Jehovah in regard to her Son. She also had told Him many interesting things both concerning the temple and Jerusalem. No wonder He tarried behind. At an early age, He was about His Father's business.

THE CHILD'S GROWTH

Sunday, December 21 — Luke 2:48-52.

"And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man." — V. 52.

WE NOTE IN THE ABOVE verse a fourfold growth. "In wisdom and stature" indicates a growth mentally and physically. "In favour with God and man" denotes accomplishments, spiritually and socially. And thus should all children grow.

How careful we all are to give our children the proper food that they may develop physically and the best education within our means for their mental growth. But, alas! too many stop there. Mary, we may be sure, developed her Boy in each of these avenues. No small reward came to her as a result of her conscientious training in that He "was subject unto them." How well for all parents, and children, too, could the parents learn this early in parenthood.

Favor with God brought favor with men. — M. G.

OUR REASONABLE SERVICE

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." — Romans 12:1.

THE WORDS OF THE ABOVE TEXT are addressed to believers who have come to God through Jesus Christ and have received the forgiveness of their sins. In order to receive this forgiveness and other blessings, here grouped together under the phrase "by the mercies of God," they must have acknowledged faith in the precious blood of Christ, represented by the wine in the Last Supper, of which our Lord himself said, "This is the new covenant in my blood." All these steps of faith and confession the brethren must have taken before they could truthfully be called "brethren."

Before believing, they were sinners under condemnation, like the rest of the world, condemned to death. The blood of Christ atoned for the sins of the whole world (1 John 2:2), and not, as some say, for the church only, since Romans 14:9 says all condemned in Adam — the dead and the living — were bought by the Lord Jesus when He paid the price on the cross.

It follows further that whatever the sacrifice of Romans 12:1 may mean, it cannot mean that the brethren were to offer their bodies as propitiatory offerings or as an atonement for anyone's sins, seeing that Jesus did it all. This is simple, too. If an account is once paid it need not be paid over again. What Jesus did "once for all", it is presumption to suppose any of us can afterwards do again, either in whole or in part.

What, then, does it mean to "present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God"?

Under the law a regular system of sacrifice was carried out by the priests at the tabernacle and later at the temple. Certain burnt offerings were to be presented every day, with extra offerings for special days. Every day also the people brought sacrifices as prescribed in the law on account of their trespasses, transgressions and sins. All these were compulsory. Other compulsory offerings were the tithes and the firstfruits.

But the Lord indicated His willingness to accept voluntary offerings also — offerings expressing the devotion of the worshiper and gratitude for the Lord's mercies. Certain animals were designated as acceptable for this purpose. And the Jew whose grateful heart prompted him to present these thank offerings received a special blessing from the Lord.

In the apostles' day a great change had taken place. Though the temple still stood at Jerusalem, the sacrifices there offered were no longer in order. The law covenant having been nailed to the cross, and a change of priesthood having been effected, the grateful heart could no longer take its voluntary offerings there with the expectation that God would accept them. The apostles repeated over and over again that the Law Covenant was ended, and that the New Covenant contains no provision for bringing sacrifices of beasts, lambs, kids, pigeons, cakes compounded with olive oil, etc. What, then, shall we as believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, grateful for the mercies of God and desiring to express that gratitude in some tangible form — what shall we bring as an offering from our grateful hearts?

The apostle answers that very natural and reasonable query: "present your bodies." How simple! How beautiful! Under the law the thank offerings were a sacrifice of sweet savor only when and because they represented the gratitude of the heart, and not because of any value in the animals themselves. And, furthermore, animal thank offerings were consistent with a general system of animal burnt offerings and sin offerings.

But now that whole ritual has been swept away, and the realities have come in, of which those ceremonies were but types. The reality that God desires from those who have experienced His mercies in the forgiveness of their sins and reconciliation with himself through the precious blood of His dear Son, and who desire to express their gratitude in a concrete and unmistakable manner — that reality is yourselves, your bodies. Instead of going through a program of frequently offered animal bodies, give your own bodies as thank offerings. No need to keep flocks and herds or to purchase from those who do, and use those bodies now and then. Your own body is always with you. Be giving it continually; use it always.

A LIVING SACRIFICE

And here is another feature of the reality, of which the animal thank offerings were only shadows. Those animals, though brought alive, were immediately slain. But the body of a Christian brought to the Lord as a thank offering continues to live. The apostle had shown (Romans 6) that the believer reckoned dead to sin is reckoned as alive toward God and righteousness. The same body that was once an instrument of sin is now, in the case of the sincere believer, an instrument of righteousness. And as such the body must be used; it must be alive in order to be used. As were the vessels of the sanctuary, and as were the children of Israel when God called them a holy people, so our bodies are sanctified, set apart, and acceptable to God as instruments of service, to carry out His will as it is made clear to our renewed and sanctified minds.

YOUR REASONABLE SERVICE

It is a reasonable arrangement because our bodies are our only means of expressing the new heart and mind He has given us. Under the New Covenant, the will of God is written on our hearts and minds, we read in 2 Corinthians, third chapter. The Holy Spirit given to us is the power of God by which this is accomplished. But we still have volition of our own. We can submit to the writing or refuse to submit.

Again, we can accept it as desirable for the mind and thoughts, but reject it as a mode of life. We can be willing to receive all God's mercies and yet use our bodies in selfish ease and enjoyment, or spend them in hard work to get worldly gain. The apostle's exhortation should arouse us from any such delusion as that God is pleased with divided service. To the Romans (8:11) he writes that God "shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Certainly he does not mean quickened or energized for worldly pursuits; he means energized, stirred up, enthused to take a more and more active part in God's service.

To present our bodies day after day, year after year, always alert and ready for the Master's use, is not an easy thing; but it is the only reasonable thing to do. It is reasonable in being only a reasonable requirement on God's part and what any reasonable person should be willing to do. It is also a reasonable service in being controlled by the mind. That is, the body is used according to a definite desire of the mind and under its direction.

We know how we are prone to say and do things hastily and then afterward say, "Oh, I did not think." Words flow out of our mouths that cause us painful regrets all our days. Sins are committed, often thoughtlessly, sometimes perversely. For these there is forgiveness, when repented of and confessed, as John tells us in his first epistle. But how much better to have our sanctified minds in control of our sanctified bodies, and both subject to the Holy Spirit of God!

"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." — From The New Covenant Advocate.

THE AFTERMATH OF THANKS-GIVING

By M. A. Woodward

WE DO NOT REALIZE, as Sister Lucille says, how many things we can thank God for instead of always going to Him for favors. We have asked many favors of Him, but, O, we are so thankful for His notice taken of those desires.

Among the most necessary favors has been for the restoring of our dear Bro. Austin to health and activity again, that he may have wisdom and strength to perform in the best way, to use the strength given him. While we know it will take time to bring back strength to those shattered nerves, we are thankful he is gaining, and willing to go back to Chicago and keep away from the work.

It is such a pleasure to note how readily the members of the Training Class take up his burdens. Brethren, far and near, I hope you will realize and understand what a help that class has been to the church work, to THE HERALD, to the gospel work. They have valiantly stood by the work, helped by articles, by letters, in many ways to keep the work moving along. We who are looking on can see the benefit, the maturing, the lessons of patient waiting they are learning. Just such experiences will broaden them in practical life, sweeten them in their prayers, feed them spiritually, build them up in the dear Christ life.

Read the different articles in the Thanksgiving number of THE HERALD. Read Sister Lucille's Thanksgiving Prayer, Brother Smead's article and Brother LeCrone's and Brother Lapp's, and the Berean Page. There are so many good things in the paper. Ought we not to be very thankful? We have Sister Young, Sister Seraphine Cleek, Brother and Sister Enos Elton, and many others, always ready to sacrifice for the work. There is Sister Alice Blakesley, too, a dear "shut in," all workers together for the dear Christ.

My eyes fill with tears of joy as I read and thank God for the loyal souls who are doing what they can for Him and the gospel work. I rejoice today that I have lived to know their faithfulness and loyalty to His work, and for the dear young lives coming into His blessed service. Many trials may await us, but may God give us all strength and love for the work while life is ours. And then we may lie down with the joy of expectancy, in the near future, of being forever with the Lord.

"THE HILLS THAT LIFT themselves highest in the darkness will first and most richly catch the glory of the rising sun." — Phillips Brooks.

"FOR SUCCESS I ask no more than this — to bear unflinching witness to the truth." — Lowell.

AT THE PLACE OF PRAYER

There were only two or three of us
 Who came to the place of prayer.
 We came in the midst of a drenching rain,
 But for that we did not care.
 For when our hymns of praise were sung,
 And our earnest prayers were said,
 The Master himself was present there,
 And gave us the Living Bread.

We saw His look in our leader's face,
 So rapt and glad and free,
 We felt His touch when our heads were bowed,
 We heard His "Come to me."
 Nobody saw Him lift the latch,
 And none unbarred the door,
 Yet peace was His token to all our hearts,
 And how could we ask for more?

Each of us felt the load of sin
 From his weary shoulders fall;
 Each of us dropped the weight of care,
 And grief that lay like a pall.
 And over our spirits a blessed calm
 Swept in from the Jasper Sea.
 And strength was ours from the toil and care
 In the days that were yet to be.

There were only two or three of us
 Who met in the place of prayer.
 Outside were struggle and toil and sin,
 But the Lord himself was there.
 He came to fulfil the pledge He gave Wherever His loved ones be,
 To stand himself in the midst of them,
 Though they count but two or three.

Then forth we fared in the bitter rain,
 And our hearts had grown so warm
 It seemed like the pelting of summer flowers,
 And not the crash of a storm.
 'Twas a time of dearest privilege
 From the Lord's right hand, we said,
 As we thought how the Master himself had come,
 And had given us the Living Bread.

— Author Unknown.

"WITH OR WITHOUT POWER!" This sign appeared recently on the wall of an unused factory in a western city: "To let, with or without power!" That notice might be attached to any life. We have the option of a powerless life or a powerful existence. Is your life supplied with power? Do the shafts move, do the belts see motion, are the wheels turning, is there any product; or are you just paying taxes and going to decay? If "power belongeth unto God," then power also belongeth to God's children. "Too much rest, rust." — Selected.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO JOHN

By Lyman Booth

JOHN, THE FOURTH EVANGELIST, the son of Zebedee and Salome and the brother of James, was one of the earliest of our Lord's disciples, the one "whom Jesus loved." John 13:23. He was, in many things distinguished among the apostles and was honored as the bosom friend of Jesus. Subsequent history has added but little to this and that little is not entitled to full credit.

It is probable that he continued to live in the neighborhood of Judea until the time drew near for its destruction, as Jesus had predicted. It is recorded that he then went into Asia and resided some years at Ephesus, was banished to the Isle of Patmos, by the Emperor Domitian, but returned to Asia after the death of that emperor and resided at Ephesus. It is said that he lived to be nearly one hundred years of age and died a natural death, being the only apostle who escaped martyrdom.

He, with his brother James, and Peter, was admitted to a closer relationship with Christ than the other apostles. Mark 14:33; Luke 8:51. He became the constant follower of our Lord and remained with Him until His crucifixion, when he received the charge or care of His mother. John 19:27. After Christ's ascension, he remained for some time at Jerusalem and labored in close union with Peter.

The current opinion of ancient writers is that he wrote his narrative at an advanced time of life, yet many modern writers disagree with that view. Tradition, however, is unanimous that he composed his gospel at the request of the churches of Asia, most probably at Ephesus, toward the close of the first century, as the summary of his oral teaching upon the life of Christ.

Bishop Westcott says, "The contents of the Gospel go far to support this view of its relatively late date. It assumes a knowledge of the substance of the synoptic narratives. It deals with later aspects of Christian life and opinion than these. It corresponds to the circumstances of a new world."

He informs us plainly what his object was in writing. "These are written, that we might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name." 20:31. For this reason he carefully selects and arranges certain scenes from the life of the Master, which, step by step, lead up to the confession of doubting Thomas, "My Lord and my God." He alone mentions the act of Peter smiting Malchus, the high priest's servant. From these observations we conclude that he disclosed that which the others failed to mention.

He alone records the resurrection of Lazarus, a most triumphant miracle. One can hardly conceive how the other evangelists could let it pass without notice. The Jews had consulted to put Lazarus to death after he had been restored to life. While Lazarus lived, the memory of the miracle would still live in Judea, while in other lands it might be published orally. The public recording of it by the evangelist, while the Jewish priests and rulers were in authority, might have exposed them to imminent danger. Therefore the Christian writers seemed to have observed profound silence until after the destruction of Jerusalem, and Lazarus had died. Then the whole matter was circumstantially left to John to relate.

The other evangelists relate the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple, and the dispersion of the Jews among other nations, just as Jesus had predicted, but John is silent on the subject. From this we may safely conclude that many of our Lord's predictions had, at that time, been fulfilled, and this with the consideration that John was appointed to be the prophet of the New Testament in respect of the church, in so far as it affects the church, and the nations as far as they are connected with it even to the end of the world, or age.

Many account for the fact that we find no express or particular prophecies in this Gospel, as in the preceding three. Neither of the other evangelists goes further back than the miraculous conception of John the Baptist, except by genealogies concerning our Lord's lineal descent from Abraham and David.

John begins his work by declaring who Jesus was. This was done to correct the notion of some heretics of those early days who denied our Lord's relation to the Deity. The testimonies of John the Baptist, as here recorded, are far more numerous and explicit in regard to the sonship, atonement, and salvation of Christ, as the "Word made flesh," and as "full of grace and truth", "from whose fulness have we all received", 1:16, "The Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," (1:29), than we have previously met with.

The beginning of our Lord's miracles and ministry from a short time after His baptism till John the Baptist was imprisoned (only about two years) is here alone recorded. One miracle, our Lord's discourse with the scribes, priests and rulers, and the great council of the nations concerning it, in the early part of His ministry, is by John alone transmitted to us. Indeed but few of the incidents and miracles of our Savior's life which are recorded by the other evangelists, are repeated by John. In the others he probably thought it best to state them more fully, thus declaring the great doctrines of Christianity in a clear light, some of which had not been fully stated.

In short, while this book was published long after, by the only surviving apostle, it was calculated to fully establish the authority of those which preceded it. It is almost entirely an original work. From about the twenty-sixth verse of the sixth chapter to the end of the eleventh, the whole is almost entirely new; and the events which preceded and made way for our Lord's crucifixion, resurrection and ascension are enriched with such a variety of new and interesting information as is admirably suited to fix the attention and impress the mind of the reader, especially that most affectionate and pathetic discourse of our Lord with His disciples just before His crucifixion, which occupies the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters and His prayer for all who should believe on Him through their word.

Our Lord's repeatedly meeting His assembled disciples, on the first day of the week; with the affecting and instructive account of Thomas' absence the first time; his obstinate incredulity; our Savior's condescension to him; Thomas' conviction, and confession of Him as his Lord and his God are not recorded elsewhere. The account of Jesus meeting His disciples at the Lake of Tiberias; His threefold rebuke of Peter who had denied Him three times, by testing his love three times and three times requesting him to show that love by feeding His sheep and lambs; with the prediction also of the manner in which Peter should, at length, glorify God; the readiness also of John to follow in the same path, and the obscure intimation that this might not be the case, all are added by John in his narrative in a simple and affecting manner.

His style is plain, simple, unaffected, and generally easily understood, and when it appears otherwise, it will be found to arise from the sublimity of his subject, of which no human language is fully sufficient to convey the meaning. Generally speaking, the reader may peruse this book with the full assurance that it is very rich in most important instructions and advice; and if we fail to grasp its riches, the fault is ours.

From the very first this book has been regarded as "The Spiritual Gospel." While the others give us mainly the external or physical acts of the Son of Man, John gives us glimpses of His inner life. His chief subject is "The Word", the promise made flesh. He reveals the Father as connecting or uniting humanity with Deity through His Word. Therefore his writings contain a much larger proportion of Christ's discourses than are contained in the others. He seems to assume that the writings of the other evangelists were known to his readers. Therefore he refers to them without repeating what they have given.

The feeding of the five thousand is the only miracle narrated by the four evangelists. Matt. 14:19, 20; Mark 6:35-41; Luke 9:12-17; John 6:5-13. John relates six which the others omit: turning water into wine, 2:1-11; healing the nobleman's son of a fever, 4:46-54; healing the impotent man at Bethesda, 5:1-9; healing the man born blind, 9:1-7; raising Lazarus, 11:43-44; the draught of fishes, 21:1-11.

John's narratives relate to events which mainly took place in Galilee, while the others are principally of events that occurred in Judea. And nearly one-third of John's is devoted to the sayings and doings as taking place in rapid succession, within the last twenty-four hours of our Lord's life.

Christ was shown to be endued with divine power at the time of His baptism by John the Baptist (1:19-34); by the first call of His disciples; 1:35-51; by His own signs and works at Cana, 2:1-11; His works at Jerusalem, 2:13-25; in Samaria at Jacob's well, 4:1-42; in Galilee, 4:43-54; by the feeding of five thousand, 6th chapter; at the feast of Tabernacles, 7th and 8th chapters; healing the man born blind, 9th and 10th; the resurrection of Lazarus, chapter 11; His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, chapter 12; by revealing His approaching departure to the Father, 14:1-31; declaring himself to be the true vine and the true source of union with the church and the abiding therein, 15:1-16. He then offers His high priestly prayer to the Father, 17; His sufferings and resurrection follow and the witnessing of His rising from the tomb by Mary Magdalene, one among the last persons to leave the cross and the first to visit the empty sepulchre.

GOD'S JEWEL CASE

(Continued from page 147)

cloud would be blotted out from the sky which it was veiling from your sight. First, there came a small patch of blue sky between the rifts in the cloud. Then another and another. And as the blue flecks multiplied the black patches grew smaller and fewer. By and by the cloud was gone, swallowed up in mid-heaven, and you were gazing once more upon the smiling, fleckless blue sky, flooded with the glory of the sunshine, and without a cloud-spot even as big as a man's hand.

But here is the marvel of that vanished cloud. It never returns. You will never see the same cloud again. It has vanished forever from God's sky. And in choosing this figure to tell us how our sins have been blotted out in Christ, the Holy Spirit has chosen the most perfect picture imaginable of the completeness and absoluteness with which the guilt of our past sins has been obliterated in Christ Jesus. In Him is remission of sins and when we receive Him that remission becomes ours to the unspeakable peace and joy of our once sin-burdened hearts.

The sea-depth burial of our sins; this blotting out of them forever as a cloud is swallowed up in the sky; this blessed forgetfulness of them by a gracious and loving God — all this is in Christ. When we receive Him we receive it all and soon come to know the conscious joy and blessedness of it in experience.

THE PRECIOUS JEWEL OF REDEMPTION

The passover lamb was a great type of redemption. All the firstborn of the Egyptians were condemned to death. But there was a way of escape for the Hebrew firstborn. A lamb was taken and slain. The blood was sprinkled on the door posts and lintels. Under that blood the Hebrew was safe. "When I see the blood, I will pass over you," was God's word of safety. In the lamb was redemption from death for the imperiled one.

So in Christ is redemption for those who trust in Him. He is our Passover. "In him we have redemption through his blood." We are "redeemed," that is, "brought back" from death because He bore the death sentence for us.

At Niagara the American Falls takes its dizzy leap over a precipice of one hundred and sixty feet. Between the face of that precipice and the great, over-leaping sheet of water which forms the fall, there is a vacant space which they call the Cave of the Winds. You remember the spot. The guides robe you from head to feet in rubber garments and go before you to lead the way. You follow slowly and cautiously as they make their way literally under the falls. By and by you reach your stopping point. There, as you stand, thousands of tons of water are rushing over that precipice, with a thunderous roar and blinding splash of spray and mist. If you were down there where it falls at the foot of the precipice you would be crushed to death in an instant by the savage impact of those thousands of tons of water which have come their long journey through the Great Lakes to take their death-leap at this spot which has been so fatal to many a poor, despairing soul. But though you stand in a spot of great seeming peril you are perfectly safe. For this great veil of watery death passes over you and spends its fury on the cruel, jagged rocks beneath. You are entirely safe because you are a passed over man.

It is a picture of the redemption which is in Christ for us. "Now is Christ our passover, sacrificed for us." Death has passed over us because it fell upon Him, the Lamb of God, in our stead. — From a Tract.

THE QUESTION of whether a Jew, on the point of death, should refuse an infusion of Gentile blood if he knows that such an operation can save him, aroused much discussion recently in London. In a hospital was a Jew who refused to allow steps to be taken that might save his life.

The donor, a member of the London blood transfusion service, was asked to come to the hospital so that the transfusion might be made. The patient, on learning that the donor was not a Jew, flatly refused to submit to the transfusion, saying he would not allow Gentile blood to flow in his veins.

LET US GIVE EARNEST HEED

(Continued from front page)

in doubt.

Many have learned, and many have yet to learn, that it is scripturally and spiritually impossible to avoid neglecting "so great salvation" while following the customs of this world and pampering the flesh instead of "serving the law of God." Paul makes the distinction thus, "So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin." Rom. 7:25.

The Christian misses "immortality", "being like him", "reigning with him", ever being with the Lord. His terror, because of his negligence, will be real when he finds his "portion with the hypocrites" during the world's "time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time"; there to share the common lot of the unregenerate world where there "shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." Matt. 24 and 25.

Let us endeavor visualizing the reality of all this. In other words, to be negligent about working out our own salvation is one way of gradually transferring our allegiance to Jesus Christ, the Prince of Life, over to Satan, the prince of death.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
14317 Darley Ave
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"GREATER LOVE HATH NO MAN THAN THIS, THAT A MAN LAY DOWN HIS LIFE FOR HIS FRIENDS." — JOHN 15:13.

OUR FATHER

MAN'S CONCEPTION of the supreme being varies greatly. We look back through the ages and history shows us the beginning of a religion among the uncivilized, barbarian tribes. They had no knowledge of God and yet they came to realize that there were powers over which they had no control.

They found that there were things that could injure them physically. Rocks would fall from the mountainside, injuring or killing one of their members. The big waters would swallow them, drown them. The lightning came down from heaven and destroyed their dwellings and even their lives. Man's estimation of his worldly goods and his stronger instinct for self-preservation caused him to resent this deeply.

He tried to punish these material things that harmed him. He shot at the waters with his bow and arrow, beat upon the rocks and defied the lightning and the thunder. When he found his efforts all to no avail he came to realize the existence of powers stronger than himself.

Man changed his methods. He tried to appease the angry spirits which he believed to inhabit these inanimate objects. He brought his treasured worldly goods and sacrificed them before these enraged gods. Often disease ravaged the bodies of these savage tribes. This, they supposed, was also the work of spirits and they instituted wierd dances and made terrible noises, thinking that by so doing they could drive away the angry one.

Thus we find the beginning of a "religion" composed chiefly of fear. The code of morals of these peoples was formed according to the punishment that they received from the great powers. They tried to appease the angry one with gifts. Fear and dread governed their lives.

As time went on man became more civilized. But throughout the Old Testament we find this element of fear and trembling. God dealt with man according to man's conception of Him. He commanded him, saying, "Thou shalt," and, "Thou shalt not." An awe and reverence were there also. They realized that many material blessings came from God. But we find a strong predominating fear of an angry God who must be appeased with burnt offerings and sacrifices.

Man's characterization of God changes with time. Our God is not a God of wrath and revenge. We think of Him as our heavenly Father, filled with love, compassion and tenderness. We think of Him as One who so loved mankind that "He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." We fear Him still, yes, but with a reverential fear of a power too great for human minds to fathom or begin to comprehend.

We love our heavenly Father and we love His Son, who made it possible for us to come to God and ask for that which we would receive. This love inspires in us a desire to serve God, not because we are afraid of the consequences if we do not, but because of an overwhelming gratitude for His love to us — for the gift of His Son. We make sacrifices, but our sacrifices are not rams and bullocks, burned with fire upon an altar. Often they are the little, trivial things of life that we want very much for ourselves but which we give to others. We serve God by serving His children. We sacrifice to Him by sacrificing to them. Our Christ gave himself a sacrifice for all mankind. As we grow in Christian endeavor there develops in us that desire to present ourselves a living sacrifice, wholly acceptable to God.

Has the Almighty changed? No, God never changes. It is only that the frail mortal mind of man is unable to comprehend the greatness of our God, or the extent of His love for mankind.

COME ON, OHIO!

We are falling behind in our number of articles on the Berean Page. We are taking great pleasure in what others are doing and learning, but we forget to add our bit of news so that others may know and enjoy with us what we are doing. I would like to see so many articles from Ohio in the next two weeks that our editor would be almost swamped with Ohio news.

Eunice Pearson, Tippecanoe City.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 5; Ohio, 3; Iowa, 3; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Indiana, 1; California, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

CHRISTMAS LESSON

MARY AND JOSEPH LIVED way up in the little village of Nazareth. However, their forefathers had lived down in Bethlehem, and it was to Bethlehem that Mary and Joseph were told to go to pay their taxes. So Joseph set his wife upon a mule and went with her many miles away.

They rode south, and south, until they came one evening to Bethlehem. Mary was very tired from her long journey and Joseph began to look around for some place where they could stay all night. He went to the inn, or hotel, and asked if there was room for them to stay that night. But there was no room there, nor in any other house, for so many others had come to Bethlehem.

However, the inn keeper said they might occupy the stable, and Mary said, "It will be better than lying out in the cold night on the desert, for I am very tired."

And that very night, out in that stable, the little baby Boy that the angel had promised to Mary was born! Mary wrapped Him up warm and laid Him in a manger.

This same night out in the country near Bethlehem, there were some shepherds. They were sleeping on the ground and keeping watch over their sheep. Some of them had gone to sleep, while others watched by their little fire.

All of a sudden, a great light shone around them. The shepherds who were awake, jumped to their feet and ran to the others and woke them, crying, "See the great light that is shining around us. What shall we do, for we are afraid?"

And the next thing they saw made them even more afraid. For right in the middle of the light stood an angel. The shepherds all fell on their faces before the angel, for they thought he had surely come to kill them.

But the angel said to them: "Be not afraid; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For there is born to you this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this is the sign unto you; you shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger."

Then suddenly there were with the angel a great many other angels from heaven. There were so many that they stretched up and up to the sky, all golden in the bright light around the shepherds. And they sang:

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will, among men."

After the angels had sung that song, they went away into heaven. Then the shepherds rose from the ground where they had fallen, wondering what all this might mean. One of them said, "Let us go now even to Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us."

They did not even stop to take care of their sheep, for the thing that had happened was so very important. They hurried straight to Bethlehem to find the baby that had been born.

At last they came to where Mary and Joseph and Jesus were resting in the stable, and told Mary all that had happened. When Mary heard their story she was happy, for she knew that she had not been mistaken in what the angel had told her, and that her baby was really going to be the greatest Man of God that there ever was or ever can be.

All the shepherds knelt around the baby and thanked God. Then they said good bye to Mary and went back to their sheep. — Selected from Boys and Girls of the Bible.

"WHAT ASKS OUR FATHER of His children, save
Justice and mercy and humility,
A reasonable service of good deeds,
Pure living, tenderness to human needs,
Reverence and trust, and prayer for light to see
The Master's footprints in our daily ways?"
— Whittier.

BIBLE GAMES

2. One person says, "I am thinking of a Bible character." The rest ask questions which can be answered by "Yes" or "No" until it is correctly guessed, when the one giving the right answer is "It".

3. Someone jumbles up the letters in a list of Bible characters, giving each one a written list. The player first solving the puzzle wins.

4. Bible Charades. Divide players into two groups and take turns acting out scenes which the others guess.

M. C. B., Marquette, Mich., in Parent's Magazine.

To all my Page Friends:

Grace, peace, and joy for the Christmas Season.

Lois Hunt.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON XII. — December 21, 1930

CHRISTMAS LESSON

Luke 2:1-20

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 3:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. — Luke 2:11.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Savior.

Basic Truth. "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." — Acts 4:12.

Outline. I. Appointed of God. II. The Manner of His Salvation. III. The Result.

I. Appointed of God. Just as Adam was appointed of God and was created by Him without any choice upon his part, so Jesus was by God created unto Mary and appointed to His labors without personal choice. Matt. at 1:23 and Luke 1:31, 34, both teach that Christ's birth was a fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy, "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." — Isa. 7:14. Thus the Savior was God-created, God-given.

II. The Manner of His Salvation. The fact that the God of the universe provided a Savior is in itself sufficient evidence that without Him those for which the Savior was provided were lost. All were lost in sin. They were lost so that none was able of self to lay hold upon the Father; lost so that one and all eventually succumbed to death, the opposite of life — death from which there had as yet been no method of reclamation. It was from this lost condition that Jesus was sent to be Savior.

Jesus found himself in "flesh and blood" like unto His brethren. Heb. 2:14. See Gal. 4:4. He "was in all points tempted like we are, yet without sin", Heb. 4:15. In giving evidence and certainty of loyalty to His Father even unto the end, He was tested unto death, "even the death of the cross." Phil. 2:8. He sacrificed His whole being in death, not because of His own sins, 1 Peter 2:23, 24, but as a burden of sins imposed from others. In His resurrection He was a new creature, a second Adam, a spiritual being, 1 Cor. 15:44, 45, crowned with glory and honor. Heb. 2:9. Thus He, by obedience to the Father, Heb. 5:8, 9, became perfect in the flesh; by death destroyed the flesh; by resurrection rose beyond it, Heb. 10:19, 20; and found himself abiding in the Holy of Holies with, and like unto, God. Heb. 6:20.

By this mighty power of righteousness and godliness, Jesus from the days of His ministry has led others in righteousness and obedience to God, away from sin toward the righteousness of the Father. At every step where man is incompetent because of his weakness, Jesus has provided assistance. First, He schools individuals in faith toward God. John 3:16; Mark 15:16. His words and works of truth and godliness have been such as to convince sober reasoning that He was God's Son and that He was competent to save man. Second, where faithful ones have fallen because of sin, He has forgiven the error and reestablished the believer's feet in righteousness. Matt. 8:16, 17; John 8:36; Luke 5:24; 1 Peter 2:24. Again, though death lays hold of all, Jesus in His mighty power assures that He will unlock the tomb, release the captive and crown faithful ones with His own glory. John 11:28, 29; 1 Thess. 4:16; Phil. 3:20, 21.

Such is salvation's manner through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Little wonder that the angels of God would announce in glad song the birth of this Savior and the prize thus given to earth.

III. The Result. We must first recognize that God is not only Creator, but that as such He is the Designator of right and wrong, of life and death. None can question His authority and power in this.

That death is a result of sin is revealed in Rom. 5:12; 6:23; Heb. 2:14; Acts 2:23. That sickness and all manner of bodily and mental slavery with attendant weaknesses and disappointments are the result of sin is taught in Matt. 8:16, 17; 9:2-5; Gal. 5:17, 19-21.

From these conditions in which man, dependent alone upon his own strength, is hopelessly and unfaithfully lost, the power of Christ has wrought salvation. This salvation can of necessity be realized but partly while sin is everywhere in the land. Complete salvation requires the destruction of sin. John 5:28, 29 with 1 Thess. 4:16, 17; Rev. 20:6, 15, and other scriptures teach that in due process of Christ's labors there will eventually be no more sinners, therefore no more sin. Rev. 21:1, 4 teach that ultimately "there shall be no more death", therefore no more sin to be punished. James 1:15. In proper time Jesus will have saved from sin in that sin will be no more. In the meantime, as a result of Christ's salvation, Christ's salvation to the believer forgives sin. Mark 2:5, and its consequence, vv. 10-12. This partial salvation is continually offered to all on the condition of faith. Such salvation is accompanied by peace of mind, loyalty to God, zealously for the right. While death is not stayed today by Christ's saving hand, yet His assurance, both by promise and by example of His power, is that His salvation will result in a resurrection of all who have by sin been shut up in death. Acts 24:14, 15; 1 Cor. 15:22; Rev. 20:12. These briefly are some of the results of Christ's salvation.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Suddenly: This great event came on the world suddenly and at an hour when they did least suspect. What an hour! The suddenness of this awe-inspiring scene must have produced an intense feeling in every one that witnessed it. What will be the effect on the world when Christ suddenly appears the second time without sin unto salvation?

Peace: The angelic song was a peace message. It declared the work of Him who is the Prince of Peace. The message of salvation is one of peace. It makes peace between God and the sinner; man and man, and eventually should Christian people try to bring about a fulfillment of the angelic message of peace? Should there be strife among those who are the "peacemakers"? Matt. 5:9. Can they be peacemakers if they strive one with another?

Praise: God seeks the praise of His creation. He is entitled to full praise from all mankind. How can we praise God? How often should we praise Him? Where should we praise Him? Ask yourself this question, "Am I praising God?" — C. E. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Timothy's Preparation.

Paul, who had served God from his forefathers with a pure conscience, discerned in Timothy the power of unfeigned faith that had been in his mother and in his grandmother. He bestowed on him the gift of the Holy Spirit through the laying of the hand of the presbytery. He remembered him without ceasing in his prayers. He exhorted him to stir up the gift that was in him by the putting on of his hands. He wrote him long letters of advice and guidance. He urged him to read and study.

Here is a brief survey of God's work from generation to generation to bring man more nearly into His image and likeness by inculcating in him faith and love. Spiritual qualities of mind and heart developed in one generation have been preserved and implanted in the next. To do this, He has brought to bear the influence of family both prenatal and postnatal; the influence of His own mind on man's thinking through His word and prayer; the influence of one man's mind upon another's through exhortation and guidance — all influences being effective toward His purpose because of that inner urge toward mental life that He gave to man at creation; and all under the influence of love manifested through Christ (first in type and shadow, later in His personal life among men) contributing from day to day toward building up the inner man in Christ Jesus. And because of the inner man in Christ Jesus headed by Jesus himself, the world is richer by far than it could ever have been under Adam's headship, even if he could have remained innocent and sinless. — A. K.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

A CHRISTMAS GIFT

Do not overlook the suggestion of The Restitution Herald as a Christmas gift to your friends. We are offering The Herald at the special rate of $1.50 per year for Christmas subscriptions. This will be a weekly reminder to your friend of your thoughtfulness, bringing cheer and inspiration and added incentive in the service of Christ. A neat greeting card with the donor's name will be mailed to your friends.

Sr. Dorothy Lyon, of Rockford, Illinois, is spending a vacation with home folks in Citronelle, Alabama, where she expects to remain for the holidays.

Bro. Austin was called to Oregon a few days last week to attend to business matters for the N. B. I. On advice of his physician, he returned to Chicago where he has since been resting and recovering from his recent serious illness. Many are the prayers that are ascending to the heavenly Father in his behalf.

New Pledges have been received from the Brush Creek, Ohio, Sunday School which took two shares in our Dollar-A-Month Club. An additional membership was also received from Kansas. Slowly, but surely, we are nearing the goal. Each one makes us that much closer to it. Have you sent your membership in yet?

HOLBROOK, NEBRASKA

On Thanksgiving Day the members of the Church of God met in the basement of the church, each bringing a well-filled basket, and enjoyed a Thanksgiving dinner together.

About 2:30 in the afternoon all proceeded to the assembly where Elder Arthur Hornaday gave a talk on, "Why Christians Should Be Thankful." A program of songs and readings by members of the Sunday School concluded the exercises of the day. A most enjoyable time was had by all present.

REGULAR SERVICES AT RIPLEY

Bro. Paul M. Hatch will, the Lord willing, be with the Ripley (Illinois) congregation next Saturday evening and Sunday, December 13 and 14. Sunday School convenes every Sunday morning at ten o'clock, followed by Berean class at eleven, except on the second Sunday of the month when Bro. Hatch is with them. Let all living nearby plan to attend these services.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO AND NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

We are glad to report that Mrs. Franklin Moore is improving and is able to be home from the hospital.

A joint business meeting of the two church boards was held at the home of Bro. and Sr. Weldon in Thorold, Ontario.

On Monday evening, December 1, at the Blessed Hope Church of God in Niagara Falls, we were made to rejoice as three young people were baptized in the name of the Savior. We recommend them very highly to the church. They are: Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rhodes and Mrs. David Elliott, all of Fonthill.

May the Father's richest blessing attend them in their Christian life, and may they always look unto Jesus as the Author and Finisher of their faith.

Grover Gordon, Pastor.

NEWS FROM WATERLOO-CEDAR FALLS

The Waterloo-Cedar Falls Dorcas Society held their December meeting at the home of Mrs. James Cassen on Wednesday, the third. The nine members and three guests who were present sewed carpet rags, made aprons, and tied a silk quilt. They also had a very pleasant afternoon visiting and enjoying the lovely lunch served by the hostess. They now have a good stock of Christmas gifts on hand which include rag rugs, hot dish holders, laundry bags, twin holders, clothes pin bags, dusting caps, and kitchen aprons. These articles vary in price from 25¢ to $1.50. Postage and insurance charges will be paid by the society for any orders by mail. All orders should be sent to Mrs. Charles Howe, 1036 Newton St., Waterloo, Iowa, who is secretary, or to Mrs. H. P. Brown, 412 Elm St., Waterloo, who is assistant Treasurer and chairman of the work committee.

Bro. J. W. Williams preached two of his good sermons for us on Sunday, November 30. The morning sermon was a practical one, dealing with the possibility of attaining righteousness during the present flesh life. The evening sermon was one on prophecy, bringing the present day signs up to date.

We expect to have Bro. Williams with us the fourth Sunday of each month during the winter months and would be glad to have anyone from out of town come who can.

The Sunday School is planning a short program for Christmas, to be in charge of Mrs. W. H. Allard and Alta King.

Mrs. J. L. Harland.

FROM FAR OFF TEXAS

Bro. E. O. Stewart dropped in on the Houston folks Friday, November 21 to 25 and gave us six sermons and Bible lessons that were meat in due season. The meetings were held in Bro. E. E. Brown's home, and were enjoyed by all. It was decided to start our class meeting again, and a meeting was called for the evening of Wednesday, December 3, to reorganize. This is our first meeting for a year and it is hoped that we can meet regularly from now on.

FROM THE BRUSH CREEK CHURCH

Our series of special meetings which began on November 9, came to a close on November 23. We were privileged to have Bro. Magaw with us again this year and much comment was heard among the brethren on the clear and forceful manner in which he presented his subjects. The weather was ideal throughout the meeting and so the attendance and interest were exceptionally good.

The church rejoiced, with Bro. Harold Kessler, when his wife accepted Jesus as her Savior and was baptized into His name on Sunday, November 16. We feel that Sr. Kessler will be of added value to the church.

We want also to introduce to the household of faith, Mrs. Anna D. Springer, General Delivery, Lancaster, Ohio. Sr. Springer has learned the glorious truth under adverse circumstances and came to Brush Creek the latter part of the meetings that she might obey Gal. 3:27-29. Sr. Springer is isolated. So, brethren, remember her with greetings and words of encouragement.

Edna Brewer, Sec.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Sickness was very pronounced among our people during the last week of November. Bro. Rhoades completed his stay at the hospital, returning home December 1. Bro. Thomas spent a few days in bed, the climax to a bronchial attack. Sr. Van Portfleet and Bro. Woodburn buried their father on December 1, and Mr. Hewett, husband of the late Sr. Hewett, was buried on the second.

In spite of all these things, and a stormy day, still the Sunday School numbered 227 on November 30, and the house was well filled for the evening service. Our people are most faithful, both young and old.

Sr. Harriet Boice, who has just published the new Visitor, has donated one thousand copies to the Grand Rapids church to be sold for fifty cents each for paying off our church debt in preparation for the much needed enlargement. We appreciate deeply Sr. Boice's interest in the cause here, and are trying to arrange plans for disposing of the books. A corps of workers will be organized to push them as rapidly as possible, and if any outside of Grand Rapids wish to help, either by ordering from us or assisting in selling, we shall be most thankful. Our treasurer, Bro. A. G. Townsend, may be addressed at 69 Oneida St., S. W., Grand Rapids, or you may address the writer at 50 Cherryvale Drive, S. W., Grand Rapids.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

MESSENGERS OF THE LORD

You who are looking for that blessed hope and the coming of our Lord, will you not be a messenger for Him at this glad Christmas time? I have invested one thousand dollars in Visitors to make it possible for you to invest one dollar in Visitors to send out before Christmas. Time is short but we can do it if we try.

Do it now! Right away! Send one dollar for two Visitors and sell these or give as a gift to someone who needs this message.

Here is your chance to make your gift, as to the Lord. Do it now and see how far, we together, can make your dollar go. Let us together help build the needed addition to the little church that Bro. Siple is pastor of in Grand Rapids, Michigan.

You know how it can be done, so send one dollar for Visitors to

Harriet E. Boice,
1009 S. Wright St., Champaign, Illinois.

REPORT FOR NOVEMBER

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 5; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Hillisburg, 3; Blush, Missouri, 5. Funerals, 1. Marriages, 1.

Money received: Pleasant View, $19.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $15.00; North Salem, $6.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; Hillisburg, $25.00; Sr. Minnie Porter, $2.00.

Expense $15.00. Due from the Conference Board, $8.00.

Note: Our special meeting at Rensselaer was brought to a close by a funeral call just as interest was getting good. After paying all expense of the meeting the church gave us a present of $15.00 for which we are thankful.

J. H. Anderson.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING

Our total Thanksgiving Offering amounted to $204.97. For this amount we are truly grateful to our Father in heaven and pray that His guidance may be over the disbursement of these funds to be used in His cause. The first Christmas Offering reached this office last week. It was from Sr. Woodward. Let's double the amount of the Thanksgiving Offering and watch the cause go forward in proportion.

BOYLE - BYERS

On Thanksgiving Day at the home of Bro. and Sr. Byers, near North Manchester, Indiana, there occurred a beautiful wedding when their daughter, Sr. Francis, was united in marriage with Mr. Boyle, of South Bend. The double ring ceremony was used. After the ceremony a bountiful supper was served. The supper was Bro. Byers' birthday supper, he being forty-six years of age that day. Mr. and Mrs. Boyle will reside in South Bend. We wish them the best of life.
J. H. Anderson.

PHILIP TRITABAUGH

Philip Tritabaugh was born in Camden Township, Carver County, Minnesota, October 14, 1881, and died on November 29, 1930. He spent his boyhood days on his father's farm in Camden. In his early manhood he was baptized and united with the Church of God, to which faith he remained faithful until death. About twenty years ago he came to Eden Valley, purchasing a farm on which he has resided since marriage. He was married to Miss Flo M. Riegal on December 25, 1917. This union was blessed with three children, Nadine, Kenneth and Wendell. Besides his wife and children he leaves to mourn his death four brothers and one sister. They are: Harry; James; and Phoebe, now

Mrs. W. H. Bates, all of Paynesville, Minnesota; Herman of Rockford, and Jacob of Fair Haven, Minnesota. Funeral services were conducted for Bro. Tritabaugh from his home and the Church of God at Eden Valley on Tuesday, December 2, by the writer. Our God, Our Redeemer, Our Hope was the subject used in bringing a message of comfort to the bereaved ones.
Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Harriet E. Boice; Frances Wynne, Mrs. S. M. Halcomb; Mrs. Emma Oaks; J. C. Wilson; Mary E. Elton; Leila E. Whitehead; Mrs. W. H. Roberts; Mrs. Daisy Nokes; J. C. Peck; Miss Zola Stedman; Mrs. Edith Burchell; J. C. Wagoner; E. W. Moses; Mrs. H. L. Davis; Mary Wolf; Vera Lewis; Mrs. H. H. Kent; Ruchie Alexander; Mrs. Page Mills.

THE GOLDEN-TEXT

"Because today was born for you, in David's city, a Savior, who is the Lord Messiah."
— Luke 2:11, Diag.

These are the words of the angel spoken to the shepherds. The Christ is a Savior not only to the shepherds, but to all mankind who will accept Him as such. For six months we have been studying noted men and women, but today we come to the One most noted of them all. He was the Founder of the Christian religion. He was devoted to His work, sincere, unselfish, loving, beneficent, and pure with such perfect and manifest purity that most persons recognize the sinlessness of His whole life. He performed miracles, healed the sick, and raised the dead. He gave His life that others might live. The crowning point of all was His resurrection and ascension to be an Advocate with the Father.—L. A. R.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD
Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

To Stop Paper.—It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

Receipts.—The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

Remember Jesus said, "Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven."—M. G.

TRACTS AND BOOKS

TRACTS

Name	Pages	Dozen	100
The Reasons Why	2	$0.05	$0.30
Essential Truths	1	.05	.30
God's Promises, by Anna E. Drew	2	.05	.30
The Resurrection, by S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
Obedience	2	.05	.30
The Baptist Confession of Faith	2	.05	.30
Who Owns the Wool?	4	.05	.30
The Coming of Christ, S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
What Is a Christian, J. W. Williams	4	.10	.60
Where Do We Go When We Die?	4	.10	.60
Immortality of the Human Soul	4	.10	.60
Shall Never Die	4	.10	.60
The Voice of Prophecy	4	.10	.60
Immortality	4	.10	.60
Did Christ Pre-exist? R. H. Judd	4	.10	.60
The Thief on the Cross, F. E. Siple	4	.10	.60
What Do the Scriptures Teach? Judd	6	.15	.90
What Must I Do to Be Saved?	4	.10	.60
Hell, What Is It	8	.20	1.25
The Coming of Christ, R. A. Curtis	6	.20	1.25
The Rich Man and Lazarus, F. E. Siple	8	.20	1.25
A Few Thoughts	8	.20	1.25
Baptism, S. J. Lindsay	8	.20	1.50

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen	100
God, R. H. Judd	16	.04	.30	1.75
The First Resurrection, Wm. Leask	20	.05	.40	3.00
A Letter to a Friend	32	.10	1.00	8.00
Where Are the Dead?	36	.05	.50	4.00

Name Pages Each Dozen

The Resurrection, J. L. Wince
(For cost of Postage) 32 .03 .12

BOOKS

Name	Pages	Each	Per 6
Death Reigned from Adam to Moses, paper cover	58	$0.10
Sin, A. H. Zilmer, paper covers	84	.25
Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	$1.25
Book of Revelation Made Easy to Understand, Ancient Mysteries, George Johnston	116	.50
W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	1.25
Christ in the Old Testament, R. H. Judd, paper	88	.40
The Way of Life Eternal, Lyman Booth, paper	88	.40
Student's Text Book, Wilson, board cloth	200	.45	2.60
The Visitor, Boice, paper	212	.50
The Mystery of Iniquity, Booth, paper	220	.75
Pine Woods Bible Class, Wilson, board cloth,	480	.85	5.00
Emphatic Diaglott, Benjamin Wilson
Neatly bound, and in clear type,			2.50

THE GOSPEL IN SONG

A Book of 287 well-printed Gospel Hymns

	Each	Per 10	Per 100
Manila	$0.40	$3.60	$30.00
Flexible Cloth	.45	4.00	33.00
Board Cloth	.50	4.50	40.00

“HE THAT HATH EARS TO HEAR LET HIM HEAR”

By Lydia Railsback

THESE WORDS ARE USED only by the One who spoke with divine authority. They were used on seven distinct occasions while Christ was on earth. Then we find the same expression used eight times in the book of Revelation.

The first time is in Luke 8:8, at the close of the first giving the parable of the sower. This parable was given on a later occasion also, when it was needed to complete the setting of the eight parables which were grouped together in Matt. 13. This expression was undoubtedly used to emphasize what had been said, and undoubtedly some were present who could understand, while others did not.

The second time is recorded in Matt. 11:15, when we are bidden to give earnest heed to the important mission of John the Baptist, and to understand that, had the people repented at his proclamation, he would have been reckoned as Elijah, the prophet, in whose “spirit and power” he was to come.

The third occasion is found in Matt. 13:9 after Jesus had repeated the parable of the sower. This parable is united with seven others, making one complete whole, to reveal the coming change of dispensations.

The fourth occasion is found in Matt. 13:43, at the end of the interpretation of the parable of the tares. These parables certainly did and still do need the opened ear.

The fifth time we find in Mark 4:23, after the application of the illustration of the lamp put under a measure, when the utterance is repeated to emphasize the fact that the Lord was revealing things which had before been hidden, concerning the secrets of the kingdom of heaven.

The sixth is in Mark also, 7:16, and is used in a different connection, but with the same solemn emphasis to call attention to the important truth the Savior was teaching.

The seventh occasion we find in Luke 14:35, and is connected with true discipleship, and counting its cost. Great multitudes were following the Master and publicans and sinners were drawing near to Him. But not all received what they heard. These the Lord likened unto salt which had lost its savour, which was neither fit for the land nor yet for the dunghill, but to be cast out.

Of the eight times found in the Book of Revelation, seven of them are found in 2:7, 11, 17, 29 and 3:6, 13, 22. These seven are concerning the churches, and each time He says, “He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.” The last time it is found in 13:9 and comes after speaking of the beast with seven heads and ten horns, describing things that will take place at that time.

We find, in every instance where this phrase is used, it comes in connection with some “hard” saying or where there seems to be a deep, hidden meaning to what is being taught, so that it really requires the understanding ear to be especially prepared for the message.

HOW DOES IT LOOK TO YOU?

By Richard LeCrone

TODAY, WHILE READING in one of our most popular magazines, an article called, “Faith and Contentment,” I became conscious that the author was telling a story which resembles that of every Christian, or at least, a large army of them.

It was the story of a man who was born into a sincere Christian family, a family which attended church regularly and took a more or less active part in church activities. As he grew a little older he became rebellious against God, not because he had any particular grievance against his Maker, but because he felt that he was hampered by his religious convictions. He thought they would take from him some adventures which he craved.

So he defied God and was much relieved to find that he was not immediately punished. He lived for some time a rather indifferent life, but was eventually brought to join a church, more through a desire for companionship with its members than because of any religious conviction.

Following his joining of the church, he made the acquaintance of a young man of winning personality and unchallenged reputation, who led anything but a godly life.

The author tells how he was punished for his transgressions and how his punishments made him bitter. Instead of recognizing them as from God who loved him, he tried to prove by them that there was no God. Then, one day, he was enabled to see his life as a whole and to recognize God’s hand through it all. This recognition was the beginning of a long, uphill fight which is still being fought in his life.

I have retold the substance of this story for the lesson which it teaches, namely, that if we could but recognize how anxious for us the Father is and how willing to help, we would never doubt Him, and we would be greatly strengthened in our Christian work.

If you have not definitely recognized God’s hand in your life, pray that you may be made to do so, for only then will you realize that He is anxious to help you. When you come to this realization, you will open your life to His guidance, and then will begin your real Christian life.

ANNUITY BONDS

For information regarding advantages of Annuity Bonds over Wills in making final gifts for the furtherance of our Gospel labors, address,

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
OREGON ILLINOIS

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 16, 1930

NUMBER 11

The Jewish Basis of Christian Faith Regeneration

By G. Eldred Marsh

*"Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee."
Romans 11:8.*

THAT HARMONY OF THOUGHT, of purpose and of spirit, unite the major divisions of the Bible is clearly apparent. But the full significance of that unity cannot be grasped until the fact is recognized that Christian faith rests entirely upon a Jewish foundation.

It is not sufficient that we acknowledge that Jews and Christians worship the same God; or that the two religions are of a common origin; or that they possess certain analogous ideas. If we are to really appreciate what Bishop Horsley termed the "Elegant adumbrations of sacred truth," as that truth is suggested rather than revealed in the unity of the Scriptures, we must come to realize that Judaism and Christianity are essentially one. We must agree that God has given to the world but one religion; that He has made a finished, coherent and altogether adequate revelation of His will concerning it in the Bible; and, consequently, that the Bible is one Book, of one authorship, inspired by one Spirit for the accomplishment of one eternal purpose. We must appreciate the fact that neither the Old Testament nor the New is complete in itself; but that the Old lays the foundation upon which the New builds; that the one rounds out and broadens the scope of truth revealed in the other.

Further, to understand its true meaning and value we must realize that this unit Volume was penned entirely by Jewish or Hebrew writers; that it was primarily intended in its major portions for Jewish readers. And therefore its literary style, its illustrations, its imagery, its appeal, are altogether Jewish in character. If we would enjoy its full beauty and be enriched by its full truth, we must read it through Jewish eyes and interpret it by Jewish minds.

To thus measure our application of the Scriptures by a Jewish "reed" will not only enable us to understand them more perfectly, but it will also have a tendency to disabuse our minds of erroneous, and often arrogant assumptions concerning the source of many ideas and expressions which have been commonly attributed exclusively to Christianity.

To limit the field of our inquiry to a single but vitally important element of Christian teaching, we will consider the question of regeneration very briefly. It is noticeable that many writers on this subject speak as though it were their conviction that spiritual apprehension of God, as it is experienced by those who have been rescued from sin and made "new creatures" in Christ Jesus, is the unique and exclusive prerogative of the Christian; that such inner renewal, such transformation of the heart, had never been known to men until the coming of the Lord. They have apparently felt that the Jewish religion was entirely a system of formalism, finding expression only in outward acts of devotion and piety, but without deep spiritual meaning.

Such phrases as "born again" (John 3:3), and "a new creature" or "a new creation" (Gal. 6:15, etc.), together with the ideas they express, so often suggested as being of Christian origin, and alone applicable to Christian theology, were both in thought and wording in common use among the Rabbins before and during the apostolic period. Of the expression, "a new creature", Dr. Marvin R. Vincent, in "Word Studies in the New Testament", remarks: "The phrase was common in Jewish writers of one brought to the knowledge of the true God. . . . The Rabbins used the word of a man converted from idolatry. He who brings a foreigner and makes him a proselyte is as if he created him".

No unprejudiced person can read the Psalms of David and not feel that here was a man who "walked with God,"

(Continued on page 170)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples." — John 13:34, 35.

A LIVING SAVIOR

"Lo, I am with you always."

OUR LAST VIEW OF THE SAVIOR is not of a suffering Savior, but a triumphant one; not of one who was dying upon the cruel cross, but one who is alive forever more. We worship not a dead Lord, but a living one, one who has been approved by His Father and is seated at His right hand.

After His triumphant victory over death, He met with His disciples, talked with them, assured them that He was even the same Lord and Master. And He gave them a task to perform for Him. Each of the four gospels ends with the commission worded differently in each instance.

Matthew tells us that Jesus had asked the eleven to meet Him on a certain mount. There He instructed them to carry the gospel news to all and He promised to be with them in all their undertakings.

Mark gives almost the same picture, showing how He instructed them to proclaim the glad tidings to others. Luke tells us that He declared them to be His witnesses to all. While John gives the specific incident where He instructed Simon Peter to feed His sheep.

After these words, the record says that He blessed them and was taken up from them, with the gracious words upon His lips that He would be with them in all that they did.

And though almost two thousand years have passed, He is with His followers yet today. His commission carries down through the ages even to us, "Preach the gospel to all," and with it goes His promise, "I will be with you in all that you do."

Let's be faithful to His trust. For soon, very soon, He will return and then He will be with us in person; the promise will be fulfilled in blessed reality!

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus." — M. G.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

"Greater love hath no man than this."

JUST NOW WE ARE IN THE MIDST of the Christmas season. On every hand, people are bustling about, suggesting, advising, pondering, selecting, in preparation for the gift giving season. Folks are just a little more tolerant of each other; strangers, laden with packages, forget to scowl because of inconveniences; a kindly spirit is in the air, pervading even the gloom of the most cynical.

And what is the reason for it? A little Babe was born over nineteen hundred years ago, in an unadorned, even rude manger.

That so simple an event could transform the world and continue to do so throughout the centuries proclaims the fact that it was no ordinary child. Unpretentious were the surroundings of His birth, but not unheralded, for a multitude of heavenly voices joined in an anthem of praise, for this was the Son of God!

If we follow the life of this One who was born to be the Savior of the world, we find that same simplicity characterizing His every act. But coupled with it was a wonderful love that reached out to all. How many times do we read the words, "And he had compassion on them"; "Go in peace"; "And he healed them".

He not only shed His life blood for others on the cross, but He gave His life each day for the sick and the suffering, the poor and the needy. A wonderful Gift from God to us, that Savior of sinners! And a wonderful Gift in the giving of himself every day of His life!

No blare of trumpets announced those marvelous cures! Without ostentation did He restore a son to his mother, a brother to his grieving sisters. Oh, that we His followers could learn the lesson! Could realize that the sincerest giving is not acclaimed from the housetops; is not measured by the amount of money expended.

If we could but put aside the thought of obligation and give to those who may be in need, perhaps not so much of material help, thus demonstrating to them a small measure of that wonderful love He has for all, how much more worthwhile would be our Christmas this year! It is the simple little things given to another because we love that one, and the giving of ourselves not only on Christmas day, but every day of the year that constitute the real gifts, the gifts of the heart. — M. G.

"IT IS NOT ENOUGH TO KNOW the story of Christmas. We must accept the teachings of Jesus; we must live with the Master; we must serve Him by winning folks to Him. Then unspeakable joy will be ours, for the King of Christmas will be the King of our lives."

IS GOD WAITING?

I WAS STANDING ON THE WALL of a great lock. Outside was a huge vessel about to enter. At my feet lay the empty lock — waiting. For what? Waiting to be filled. Away beyond lay great Lake Superior with its limitless abundance of supply, also waiting. Waiting for what? Waiting for something to be done at the lock ere the great lake could pour in its fullness.

In a moment it was done. The lock keeper reached out his hand and touched a steel lever. A little wicket gate sprang open under the magic touch. At once the water in the lock began to boil and seethe. As it seethed I saw it rapidly creeping up the walls of the lock. In a few moments the lock was full. The great gates swung open and the huge ship floated in to the lock now filled to the brim with the fullness in-poured from the waiting lake without.

Is not this a picture of a great truth about the Holy Spirit? Here are God's children, like that empty lock, waiting to be filled. And, as that great inland sea outside the lock was willing and waiting to pour its abundance into the lock, so here is God willing to pour His fullness of life into the lives of His children. But He is waiting. For what? Waiting, as the lake waited, for something to be done by us; waiting for us to reach forth and touch that tiny wicket gate of consecration through which His abundant life shall flow and fill. Is it hard to move? Does the rust of worldliness corrode it? Do the weeds and ivy vines cling about and choke it? Is the will stubborn, and slow to yield? Yet God is waiting for it.

Once it is done, He reveals himself in fullness of life even as He has promised; even as He has been all the time willing and ready to do. For all the barriers and hindrances have been upon our side; not upon His. They are the barriers not of His unwillingness, but of our unyieldedness. And so you say you got all of Christ when you were saved? Doubtless you did, but the point in issue here is not whether you got all of Christ, but did Christ get all of you? — From a Tract.

SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS

MAN IN CREATION

“And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.” Genesis 2:7.

1. Is this a true account of man's origin?
2. Where does the Scripture say that any part of man was made immortal?
3. If man was made immortal by creation, what had he to gain by partaking of the tree of life?
4. If man by creation possessed immortal life, what had he to lose by not partaking of the tree of life?
5. If man by creation already possessed the life that lives forever, why did God drive him out of the garden, after he had sinned, “lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and LIVE FOR EVER”? Genesis 3:22.

6. If Adam's penalty for disobedience was to go to an endless hell of literal fire, why did not God define it to him in terms of fire, instead of in terms of dust? Gen. 3:19.

7. If the breath of life God breathed into Adam's nostrils was an immortal never-dying soul, have all beasts also immortal never-dying souls? — since Solomon says of both man and beast, “yea, they have ALL one breath”? Eccl. 3:19.

8. If the soul or spirit of man is immortal, why did inspired men, who penned the original of soul and spirit many hundreds of times, fail to say so, at least once?

9. If man's penalty for sin is to go to hell and burn forever and ever, why did not Christ, who took and suffered man's penalty, go to hell and burn forever and ever? 2 Cor. 5:21. — From Light and Life Tracts.

THE MEASURING ROD

There are always surprises when the Measuring Rod is applied to men, and their true size and stature revealed. The Rod measures men by their motives. The humblest deeds, prompted by a pure and unselfish motive, measure larger than apparently much greater deeds which are done to be seen of men, and for the aggrandizement of self.

A LARGE AND EXCITED COMPANY of people were gathered one day on the village green. In the center stood a man with a Measuring Rod. Men and women were being brought under the Rod and their correct measures registered.

Elihu Jones was being measured. He was a wealthy man. He had given a fountain to the village with his name as donor writ large, where everybody could see it. He was a “leading” light in the community. His gifts here and there were prodigal. Everybody, including himself, had a high opinion of Mr. Jones. But as he stood beneath the Measuring Rod, he was seen to diminish. He grew smaller and smaller. Finally he grew so small and became so confused that he turned and fled from the scene.

One after another the people of the village went up to be measured, some great, some small, with surprising and exciting results.

At last the name of Mary Smith, the last of them all, was called. Only God and a few sick and needy people knew anything about Mary Smith. Reluctantly she took her place beneath the Measuring Rod. As she stood there, she was seen to increase in stature. Taller and taller she became until she reached the full measure of the Rod, which no one else had reached. Mary Smith was the greatest of them all — greatest in heart and soul, in love and service, in unselfish and kindly ministries.

The villagers looked on in mute amazement, and they heard a voice among them, which said, “Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh upon the heart.”

— Sunshine Magazine.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

By Lyman Booth

THIS BOOK IS DESCRIBED as a second treatise by Luke and commences with an inscription to Theophilus whom the evangelist addresses in his letter. It is a continuation of the life of our Lord, who through the promised outpouring of the Holy Spirit, was manifested in the preaching and deeds of the apostles. For this reason some have called it the "Gospel of the Spirit." With the book of Luke, it may be considered as one, in two parts; but the convenience of having the four gospels close together, seems to have induced Christians in early times to divide it by placing John's gospel between them.

As the history terminates with Paul's imprisonment at Rome, during two years, it may be fairly concluded that it was written within thirty-one years after our Lord's crucifixion. For we can hardly suppose that the writer would have closed so shortly and not have given more detail if he had composed it at a later date. The early reception of this book as authentic and divine, among the early Christians, has been sufficiently proved by learned men and the testimony of many ancient writers.

The circumstance which demands our attention more than any other and raises our expectations respecting it, is that it records the exact fulfillment of the ancient prophecies concerning the kingdom of the long promised Messiah, and the manner in which it should be established. It also gives those predictions or promises that Jesus gave His disciples, "while he was yet with them" and concerning the power with which they should be endued, the success which should follow their labors, and also the severe persecutions which awaited them.

There is one fact which cannot well be doubted, that is, the religion of Jesus Christ of Nazareth who died upon a cross at Jerusalem nearly two thousand years ago, was shortly thereafter published among other nations; that it was permanently established, and that the prophets had foretold that such would be the case, as to the kingdom of the Messiah. But this book is the only history which relates how this religion was first made known to the different nations.

Luke informs us that eleven men whom Jesus called to be His attendants and apostles, having continued with Him and conversed with Him after His resurrection, beheld Him go from them towards heaven till "cloud received him out of their sight". In a few days, the eleven having chosen one in the place of Judas Iscariot who had betrayed the Lord and then destroyed himself, were accompanied by a small number of disciples, and the Holy Spirit descended upon them, according to promise, enabling them to speak diverse languages, and work miracles; and in all respects qualifying them for their future labors in proclaiming the gospel among all nations.

Accordingly, without any delay, within two months from the time Jesus was crucified, under the immediate notice of His crucifiers, they began boldly to proclaim that He was risen from the dead, had ascended into heaven and was exalted at the right hand of God; that He was the promised Messiah, the Prince of Life, the Savior and Judge of the world; that as such He was entitled to full confidence, obedience and adoration. And they charged the people, the priests and rulers of murdering "the Lord of glory."

They were unarmed except by divine power; they possessed neither human learning, eloquence, nor influence, yet they had to encounter all the wisdom and ignorance, the religion and irreligion of the whole world, as well as the power of rulers and princes who opposed them. Notwithstanding all these things, they became triumphant. They employed no weapons, but simple testimony concerning the facts about things they had witnessed.

With the Jews they reasoned from the Scriptures of the Old Testament and showed how exactly these had been fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth; and they afterwards went among the Gentiles, and reasoned with them from such principles as they themselves acknowledged to be true. Proceeding in this manner, and attended everywhere by divine power, both manifested in undisputable miracles and inwardly preparing men's hearts to receive the truth, they had such marvelous success that many people, not only from among the Jews and proselytes, but also from the grossest and most licentious idolaters, became the disciples of Jesus, and the devoted worshipers and servants of the one living and only true God.

In this book we find a history of the manner in which the most extraordinary revelation that ever took place in the moral and religious state of the world was first begun. The effects of this were afterwards widely extended till Christianity became the religion of many nations and superseded the idolatries and superstitions in which they were laboring before. And if this account be true, the gospel must be true and divine. If the truth of it should be denied there is no other history in the world which can be substituted in its place.

This book is the report of friends to the cause of Christianity, but there is no counter report with which we may compare it. Neither Jewish scribes and priests, nor Gentile philosophers, historians, or moralists ever attempted to write a history of the first introduction of Christianity in an attempt to overthrow it.

The things herein recorded "were not done in a corner." Jerusalem, Caesarea, Antioch, and Ephesus, all the great and celebrated cities, even Rome, the proud capital of the world, were among the places in which miracles were wrought and wonderful success attained in full view of the most powerful opposers. These never ventured to deny the facts, though they could not account for them without allowing the truth of the gospel. We might say that the silence of the scribes and priests who were called upon to vindicate themselves from the serious charges of the most atrocious crimes, and even that of the heathen writers, in such a cause, is a plain confession that they had nothing to say.

A few modern critics, however, insinuate in a disguised manner that a very different account might be given of the triumphs of Christianity than that contained in the Scriptures; but all their observations are based on misrepresentation of the facts. The time for giving another history of these events is long since gone by and there is no visible material for compiling one. To suppose that such a religion as Christianity which plainly opposes every corrupt passion of the human mind, without making any allowance either to persons in the highest stations or to its most zealous friends, could have prevailed in the world as it has done by such instruments and means and in the face of such powerful opposition without the power of God sustaining it, is to assume a fact more incredible than all the miracles recorded in the Scriptures.

(To be continued)

HIDDEN SINS

THE DANGEROUS SIN is the hidden sin. Reproof does not reach it; rebuke does not hinder it; shame does not point her finger at it. If it were brought to the light men would loathe it and flee from it; but while it is hidden they love it, and gloat upon it.

And yet it cannot long be hid. The dead man's bones will soon scent through the whitest sepulchre. The serpent gets through fooling with its charmer, and rears its head and strikes its deadly blow. The smouldering fire breaks out at last; though sometimes God's mercy breaks in and pulls it out to save the man from the consuming flame. Many a time God exposes a man's sins that He may teach him righteousness; drags his wickedness into daylight that he may learn to hate it and forsake it; blasting a reputation in order to save a soul.

For this mercy of the Most High we may well give thanks. We are far too ignorant of ourselves. We learn too slowly the plague of our own hearts. We do not soon enough detect the heart-wanderings which, through the providence of the devil, beguile us into deadly sin. Who can understand his errors?

Ah, it is well that when we have locked up our hearts, with smouldering fires and guilty secrets within them, and have dreamed that all was safe, and pure, and right — it is well, then, that One who cannot be deceived comes to search our hearts and try our reins, and judge and chasten us in mercy, yet in power.

God knows us. He knows what is in us. He knows whither our every step turns, and whither each path leads. He knows sin whether it appears in the seed, sprout, bud, blossom, or fruit; and He hates it in every form. He tears open the fatal mass, and flinging away the smouldering embers that we hide within, He saves us from the everlasting fire.

Let our hearts ever lie open to this searching, and in our palmiest days of peace and joy let us still cry out, "Who can understand his errors? cleanse thou me from secret faults." — Selected by R. A. Curtis from Readings for Leisure Moments.

OUR CONSTANT GUIDE

"There are mysteries in life to be solved,
There are crises in life to be passed,
When the ways of the world are involved
With no haven for anchor at last;
When the sky seems to frown and appall,
But God will be with me through all.

"It has always been thus in my life,
And supported by memories dear,
I have nothing to dread in the strife
And there is naught to discourage nor fear,
As by faith I triumphant recall,
That God will be with me through all.

"Whatsoever the crisis may be,
And whatever its gain or its loss,
If it should be God's will to call me
I shall answer my name at the cross,
And before His great throne I shall fall,
For God will be with me through all."

TIME TO WAKE UP

ACCORDING TO GOVERNMENT REPORTS there were manufactured and sold in our country during June, 11,750,524,523 cigarettes. During July the total was 11,858,840,263. For the two months the sum was 23,609,364,768. They are two of the biggest months that the trade has had in its whole history. The figures are staggering. Twenty-three and three-fifth billion cigarettes! Can you visualize it?

Think of the amount of nicotine and other narcotic poisons that were injected into the American blood stream, with their ruinous, demoralizing influence from the inhalations of the smoke from these billions of coffin nails. Think of the number of women who were defeminized from the share of them that they smoked. Think of the boys and girls, stunted in body, weakened in mind, and depraved in morals by the inestimable number they smoked.

Figure up, if you can, the number of fires that were started by careless smokers of these firebrands. Imagine the number of automobile accidents with serious injuries and deaths caused by drivers made reckless from the narcotizing influence of the nicotine inhaled. To these losses and the direct cost to the smokers who bought the cigarettes — it must have been more than two hundred billion dollars for the two months.

Do you recall what nearly every one was talking about during those two months? Hard times, unemployment, poverty and things of that character. What nonsense! If people can spend $200,000,000 dollars for something that is of no food value and is actually injurious and not beneficial, what right have they to talk at the same time of poverty, hard times, etc?

As Shakespeare says, "What fools these mortals be."
— From The No-Tobacco Journal.

DAILY SCRIPTURE READINGS

THE PATTERN OF CHRISTIAN LIVING

A TRUSTWORTHY MAN

Monday, December 22 — Philippians 2:19-24.

"But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus shortly unto you." — V. 19.

PAUL FOUND IN TIMOTHY one who was worthy of confidence and one who brought him great joy, as he brings out so clearly in his letters to him. Timothy's grandmother and mother were devout women who had not failed in their responsibility to him, for we read that from a child he had known the Scriptures. And they had implanted in him an unswerving ideal of faith and righteousness. Paul here is writing to the church at Philippi, telling them that he would soon send Timothy to them, for he was anxious to hear of their welfare. This church must have had a very dear place in Paul's affections. See 1:3-6; 4:1.

A REMARKABLE MOTHER

Tuesday, December 23 — Luke 2:15-21.

"But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart." — V. 19.

TO UNDERSTAND THE REAL CHARACTER OF MARY, the mother of Jesus, one must read between the lines and do a good deal of meditating. The story contained in Luke 1:26-38 reveals several characteristics. Imagine the effect such news as Gabriel brought would have on a maiden. We know that she must have been a devout believer in the Old Testament prophecies because of her reception of the angel's announcement. Naturally the thought troubled her at first, but when it was made clear, note her quiet and reverent acceptance of the same, v. 38. Her answer to Elizabeth's words of greeting reveals that she comprehended the high honor bestowed upon her by God, vv. 46-55.

As Christian mothers, we may glean many worth while thoughts from a study of Mary.

A CHANGED MAN

Wednesday, December 24 — Acts 4:5-12.

"By the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole."

TO FIND THE REASON for the change in this man we must go back to Acts 3:1-10. This man, lame from birth, who never had known the joys and privileges of perfect health, asked an alms of Peter and John. They had no material wealth to bestow upon him, but Peter said, "Such as I have give I thee." What more valuable gift, what more wonderful thing could he have given him! Had Peter been possessor of millions, he could not have given him the equal of what he did for him. Notice the fulness of vigor that was imparted to him, the joy of life and the honor he returned to the Giver, vv. 8, 9. His first thought was to thank God for the wonderful gift he had received.

AN HONEST DOUBTER

Thursday, December 25 — John 20:24-29.

"And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God." — V. 28.

THE CHARACTER OF THOMAS is revealed by glimpses here and there in the four gospels. He was evidently not one who accepted a thing instantly, nor one who believed at once without evidence. Such are many of us and it is natural that we should be. Belief and confidence come only by experiences which we undergo. But as soon as Thomas was convinced, he unhesitatingly gave voice to his belief in these words so filled with meaning, "My Lord and my God."

Notice Jesus' commendation in verse 29, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."

A MAN OF FAITH

Friday, December 26 — Acts 6:1-8.

"We will give ourselves continually to prayer." — V. 4.

THE CHARACTER OF STEPHEN, which all students admire so thoroughly, perhaps may have been due in large measure to the fact that he was in such close communion with the Father. Stephen's faith, which enabled him to do "great wonders and miracles among the people," v. 8, finally enabled him to endure stoning, even unto death, and to freely forgive those who cast the stones. Greater faith could no man have! And that faith was received through the Holy Spirit which imparted to him the power to perform.

God is just as able and willing today to give us the full measure of faith, if we will receive it and to sustain us in all things.

A WORLD-WIDE WITNESS

Saturday, December 27 — Acts 22:12-21.

"For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard." — V. 15.

IN STUDYING THE LIVES of outstanding characters in the New Testament, Paul shines out as one well worth our attention. Because Paul prepared himself by faith and obedience, God gave him a great mission to fulfill, that of carrying the gospel to the Gentiles. Paul's obedience was of such a nature that God could and did trust him with an important task. And he was sustained in all that he did in the performance of this duty by the One who had given him the work to do.

THE PERFECT PATTERN

Sunday, December 28 — John 13.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." — V. 17.

AMONG ALL, JESUS STANDS out preeminently as the perfect Example for us to follow. In this thirteenth chapter of John, He is talking to His disciples, knowing that the time is short in which He will be able to comfort and instruct them. In all things He has laid down the pattern for them to follow. He taught them, by His own life, humility, love for one another, trust, purity and faith. And He showed them how they could measure themselves to know whether they were following His steps, vv. 34, 35. Not the least that He gave to them was peace, a peace that the world knows not. — M. G.

FROM DEATH TO LIFE

SOMEONE HAS SAID that if ever a man saw atonement for sins it was Barabbas the robber. And that is true. For Jesus Christ died instead of Barabbas. And Barabbas was released to go free.

Picture that fateful day. The Roman prison doors swing open, and he walks forth a free man. The sunshine blinds his eyes inured to prison darkness. He sees a great throng hurrying through the streets. Straightway he joins them. They are on their way to gaze upon the blackest tragedy of all time, the crucifixion of the Son of God who is dying in Barabbas' place, and where Barabbas deserves to be.

He follows the crowd. Out through the gate; up the fateful hill of Calvary; and now in front of the three crosses outlined against the sky. Immediately his eyes are riveted upon the central figure, the Man who is dying for him, Barabbas the robber. His gaze is fixed like a man in a nightmare. Nothing can turn him from that awful sight.

A friend steps up and whispers, "Barabbas, you are in danger. There are Roman soldiers all around you. You would better leave at once." But he gets no reply. For Barabbas is still drinking in that awful scene. All the while he gazes, he is seeing himself in imagination as the one who ought to be hanging where the Sufferer is nailed.

Again a friend steps up. He whispers, "Barabbas, you are in peril. The soldiers are watching you with suspicion. You may be taken at any moment. Don't you know you are a criminal? Don't you know the penalty for your crime under Rome's laws is death?"

Then Barabbas, like a man in a dream, with gaze still unwavering, with heart beating like a trip-hammer, with his intense emotion, says slowly, deliberately, intensely, "That is true. I know I committed the crime. I know I was condemned to this cruel death I now see with mine own eyes, but there hangs the Man who is dying in my place!"

Barabbas' redemption from physical death was Christ, for Christ died in his stead. And Barabbas saw that redemption take place before his own eyes. But for all men a more wonderful redemption than this is in Christ, and that is redemption from eternal death. He who believes in Christ "is passed from death unto life and shall not come into condemnation." — Selected.

MINISTERIAL LIST

FOLLOWING IS THE LIST OF MINISTERS of the Church of God who, upon request, have been recognized by the General Conference of the Church of God. Several others would be gladly included in this list should they so request.

ARKANSAS

Humphreys, R. A., Bear.
Jones, Owen, Driggs.
Weaver, C. E., Havana.

CALIFORNIA

Hammond, J. E., Anaheim, 735 Zeyn St.
Marsh, G. E., Los Angeles, 4707½ St. Elmo Drive.

FLORIDA

Geiselman, N. H., Tampa, 312 W. Hillsboro Ave.

ILLINOIS

Austin, F. L., Oregon
Johnson, Paul C., Oregon.
Johnson, J. Arthur, Oregon.
Pope, E. Cedric, Cortland.
Conner, L. E., 610 N. Brinton Ave., Dixon.
Hatch, Paul M., Harvey, Rt. 1.
Woodward, Mrs. M. A., Chicago, 5439 Ohio St.

INDIANA

Anderson, J. H., Michigantown.

IOWA

Eychaner, A. J., Cedar Falls.
Howe, C. W., Waterloo, 1036 Newton St.
Jones, A. M., Eagle Grove.
Williams, J. W., Gladbrook.

MICHIGAN

Siple, F. E., 50 Cherryvale, S. W. Grand Rapids.

MINNESOTA

Daubanton, Fred W., St. Cloud, 1434 Breckenridge Avenue.
Magaw, Sydney E., Eden Valley.
Randall, C. E., Mora.
Savage, Thomas W., Waite Park.

NEBRASKA

Cowles, J. E., Ogallala.
Giesler, E. E., Moorefield.

NEW YORK and ONTARIO

Gordon, Grover, Niagara Falls, N. Y., Fonthill, Ont.

OHIO

Lyon, M. W., Cleveland, 13705 Diana Ave.
Patrick, Jas. A., Ashland, Orange Road.

OREGON

Darby, A. W., Portland, 834 Gantenbein St., N.

TEXAS

Stewart, E. O., Sweetwater.
Drinkard, T. A., Kennedale, Rt. 2, Box 99-A.

VIRGINIA

Sheets, H. A., Maurertown.

THE SUFFICING BIBLE

If I would work, the Bible is my tool;
 Or play, it is a harp of happy sound.
 If I am ignorant, it is my school;
 If I am singing, it is solid ground.
 If I am cold, the Bible is my fire;
 And it is wings, if boldly I aspire.

When I am tired, the Bible is my bed;
 Or in the dark, the Bible is my light.
 When I am hungry, it is vital bread;
 Or fearful, it is armor for the fight.
 When I am sick, 'tis healing medicine;
 Or lonely, thronging friends I find therein.

Should I be lost, the Bible is my guide;
 Or naked, it is raiment rich and warm.
 Am I imprisoned, it is ranges wide;
 Or tempest-tossed, a shelter from the storm.
 Would I adventure, 'tis a gallant sea;
 Or would I rest, it is a flowery lea.

Does gloom oppress? The Bible is a sun;
 Or ugliness? It is a garden fair.
 Am I athirst? How cool its currents run!
 Or stifled? What a vivifying air!
 Since thus thou givest of thyself to me,
 How should I give myself, great Book, to thee!
 — Amos R. Wells.

THE JOURNEY OF LIFE

By John Denchfield

Some of our isolated readers have written to us, asking that the sermons given by members of the Training Class be occasionally reproduced in The Herald. The following is the substance of a sermon recently given at Oregon.

DO YOU REMEMBER the last trip you made? If that trip was made to see some old friend, a parent, or a sweet-heart you were undoubtedly filled with joyful anticipation during the journey.

Many years ago a beautiful, healthy, industrious maiden set out on a journey to meet the man who was to become her husband. She had been chosen, if she would, to become the bride of this man, Isaac, who had been described to her as being truly great. And so, believing those things which she had heard concerning him, Rebekah began that long, rough journey at the end of which she would meet him.

It was indeed a rough journey, taking her over mountains and across rivers for a distance of four hundred and seventy miles. Travel on the back of a camel seems to have been anything but enjoyable and though the camels were fast travelers, the journey took about twelve days. Though the trail was rough and the riding hard, Rebekah was undoubtedly very happy. She made plans, dreamed beautiful dreams, gloried in joyful anticipation, while at her side the faithful servant of Abraham continued to tell her more about Isaac, more about the glory she would soon share with him. As each long stride of the camel brought her nearer, her heart became filled almost to bursting with the joy of expectation.

At last in the distance she saw him; the camels drew nearer, still nearer; she alighted and — they met. At the end of the journey, she had come into the realization of her highest hopes, of all her joyful anticipation. She became his wife to share with him, "and he loved her."

Today you and I are on a journey, the journey of life. We have been chosen to be the bride of Christ and are journeying on to that day when we shall meet Him, that day when we shall be taken by Him to share all things with Him.

True, the trail is rough, at times very rough; the riding seems hard, sometimes even wearisome. Yet we know that just so surely as we travel, we shall come to the end of the trail, the meeting with Him. As we journey, by our side rides the Comforter telling us of the wonderful things which are in store for us when we shall reign with Him. We are filled with joy as we journey. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." Phil. 3:20. As each long stride is made we become more joyful.

We journey on continually, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." Titus 2:13. The Spirit gives us the assurance that, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." First Thessalonians 4:10-17.

At last there shall come the realization of all our hopes, on that great day when we shall meet with Him, Jesus, the Christ, our Lord and Savior to reign with Him forever in glory. We, His bride, shall share all things with Him, shall be loved by Him, shall be one with Him throughout all time.

Is the realization of all this worth the inconveniences, the apparent hardships we may be called upon to endure? Paul said, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." And if Paul who suffered so grievously could "count all things but loss," surely our anticipation so far outweighs the present that we, too, "forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before," will press forward to the reward at the end of our journey.

"RIDICULE IS BY NO MEANS the worst thing. I would rather be laughed at a hundred times than wept over once."

ARMAGEDDON YIELDS SECRETS TO SCIENTISTS

(The following article was clipped and sent to us by Sr. Gertrude Logan. Readers of The Herald will find it to be of unusual interest. The findings of science, corroborating the Word of God, serve to strengthen our faith that other prophecies will yet be fulfilled and we lift up our heads and rejoice. — Assistant Editor.)

ARMAGEDDON, THE MEETING PLACE of ancient nations, and battleground of untold centuries, is unfolding its secrets to the modern world. From half-way round the globe, men have gone to Palestine to extract new detail in the mosaic of civilization from the crumbling ruins of a mountain pass.

For a few thousand dollars, when once no money would suffice, the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, has purchased the right to excavate on the site of the storied city. Dr. James H. Breasted, head of the institute, disclosed recently how a cross section of human works in bygone centuries is slowly showing itself on the hills beneath Mount Carmel.

Stone age to Solomon to Palestine of 1930, with only the mountain peaks enduring — Armageddon is yielding visual history.

THE STORY IN REVELATIONS

It was Armageddon of which St. John the Divine wrote in Revelation: "Armageddon, the site of the last great war, when the nations are gathered together to the battle of God Almighty."

Of the city which guarded the plains-dwelling Canaanites from attack, he said:

"And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet.

"For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

"And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." Revelation 16:13-16.

It was at Armageddon where, fifteen centuries before the Savior, Canaanites and Egyptians under Thutmose III fought under the fortified hills in the first known conflict on that site.

It was Armageddon where, twenty centuries after the Savior, Lord Allenby led a British army forth to meet the Turks on a World War salient, and sent them flying back over the trail the hosts of Egypt had once taken.

But when Allenby fought, and when the expedition from the western world started its work in 1925, there were only mounds and well-tilled fields in the place of a city which looked toward the sea and the inland peaks.

Foot by foot these mounds have disclosed the presence of a dozen cities, each on the ruins of its predecessor.

The stables which Solomon constructed were unearthed in 1927. The streets along which citizens of his day traveled, the work they did, a few of the homes in which they lived, have been traced through stray markers.

TO BE FARMS AGAIN

The story of a buccaneering Egyptian who gathered a straggling army and captured Jerusalem in the tenth century before Christ has been read in the fragment of a stone tablet. The hieroglyphics have vindicated the claim, long doubted, that he succeeded in capturing the well-guarded Armageddon.

Until this year, the excavations could be done only by "halves". Part of the site had to be left uncleared, but a blanket purchase of rights from the widow of an Englishman has allowed the Oriental Institute to piece out further its historic evidence.

When the last fragments have been taken from the site of Armageddon, the land will be converted into farms once more. The newest civilization will leave its pastoral imprint on the battle-ground of the past.

THE ONLY WISE GOD

By Gerald Cooper

"Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen." — 1 Timothy 1:17.

LAST SUMMER, ON THE DAY I arrived in Oregon for the General Conference, I stood on the outside of the beautiful little church admiring it. My gaze fell upon the cornerstone which holds the above words, but I passed on inside the building without pausing to study them. When I returned to the outside again, a gentleman standing there remarked, "The church is undoubtedly dedicated properly, is it not?" I answered, "Yes," very casually, still not pausing to consider the words.

Since then I have studied that inscription and find that it has a deeper meaning than I at first thought. God is invisible, yet we can see His glory and His manifestations every day. Go out some night and observe the heavens and be convinced of the great glory of God.

God has been living forever and will live forever, while we, men, live only a short while. He is the only wise God, having created heaven and earth, and formed man of the dust of the ground. In the mountains are many thousands of tons of minerals which God has placed there allowing man to use them in his daily life.

To this great God, who in His great plan has seen fit to give us a place, who is invisible, but shows us His glory, and who is the only wise God, in fact, the only God — to Him let us give honor and glory; to Him let us give thanks and praise every day in this year and in the years to come.

THE JEWISH BASIS OF CHRISTIAN FAITH

(Continued from front page)

to whom God was a glorious reality. Peter testifies of the prophets that they were "holy men of God" who were "moved by the Holy Spirit." 2 Peter 1:21. God led them, and they walked gladly in His way.

Among the many sons of Jacob, whom the Scriptures assure us had experienced that true circumcision of the heart of which Paul speaks in Romans 2:28-29, may be mentioned the devout Simeon, who waited patiently "for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him." Luke 2:25-35. Words could not be found to express deeper spiritual feeling than is voiced in Simeon's prayer of gratitude. That fervent petition exhibits an insight into the world wide plans of Jehovah that goes far beyond the selfish, race-bound, conceptions of the Pharisees. Simeon saw in Jesus, "a light to lighten the Gentiles," as well as the "glory" of his people Israel.

Then we read of "Anna, a prophetess, . . . which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day." Luke 2:36-38. Surely this godly woman who "gave thanks also unto the Lord" when she looked upon the Babe in Mary's arms, and afterward "spoke of him to all them that looked for redemption in Israel," enjoyed true communion with her heavenly Father!

It was a Jew, and not a Christian, whom Paul describes in Romans 2:28-29. "He is not a Jew which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh. But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of man, but of God." This is a picture of one whom God recognizes as a Jew. The true Jew, like the true Christian, is one "inwardly," that is, spiritually.

A modern Jewish writer, Rabbi H. G. Enelow, D. D., addressing Jewish young people, says, "To be a true child of Israel means not only to be born of Jewish parents, but also to try to live in accord with the noble history and the great task of the Jew. The true child of Israel will seek to live a life so pure and honest and true, as one has a right to expect of one belonging to a holy people." The writer goes even further than that. He declares that the religion of the true Jew is marked by purity of heart and of motive, rather than by mere outward compliance with certain specified rites. And such was the interpretation put upon the law by Jesus himself (Mark 7:1-23).

Paul asserts very positively that the Old Testament Scriptures alone were sufficient to make one "wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." For, "all scripture is given by inspiration of God" to the end that "the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works." 2 Tim. 3:15-17. The New Testament serves the important purpose of pointing out and establishing the identity of Jesus as the Messiah, without changing or adding any substantial fact to the revelation made

So complete is the unity which Paul recognizes as existing between the faithful Israelite of the past and the "unto the fathers by the prophets."

Gentile Christian of his own day, that he freely applies to the latter promises which were originally addressed directly to the former. For instance, writing to the Corinthian church (perhaps the most largely Gentile of all the apostolic congregations), he admonishes them to faithfulness as "the ministers of God" by assuring them that "ye are the temple of God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people." 2 Cor. 6:16. This same promise was made to Israel fourteen hundred years before the birth of Christ, and is recorded in Leviticus 26:12.

It is evident that Paul looked upon the faith of the Jew and the faith of the Christian as being identical. For in his defense before Agrippa he affirms: "I continue unto this day" (to Jews and Gentiles alike, see verse 20), "witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come". Acts 26:22. The only difference between his viewpoint and that of his fellow Jews was that he saw in the Lord Jesus Christ the focal point of all the promises revealed in the past, including the eventual admission of the Gentiles into the family and blessing of God.

"There's a niche for you in the world, my friend,
A corner for you to fill;
And it waits today along life's way,
For the one with a frank, "I will"!
So, friend, be true; the world wants you
In the corner that you may fill."

— Sunshine.

GETTING READY FOR CHRISTMAS

ARE YOU WILLING TO STOOP down and consider the needs and minister to the wants of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old; to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand those who live in the same house with you, and to be of service to them; to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front, so that your shadow will fall behind you; to make a grave for your unkind thoughts, and a garden for your kindly feelings, with the gate wide open — are you willing to do all these things, even for a day?

If so, my friends, then you are getting ready for Christmas, for, after all —

Christmas living is the best kind of Christmas giving.

— Henry Van Dyke.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"ALL SCRIPTURE IS GIVEN BY INSPIRATION OF GOD, AND IS PROFITABLE FOR DOCTRINE, FOR REPROOF, FOR CORRECTION, FOR INSTRUCTION IN RIGHTEOUSNESS."

INSPIRATION OF THE BIBLE

ALL NATURE IS PROOF of the inspiration of the Bible. I do not believe that anyone who has watched a beautiful sunrise or sunset, or a star-studded sky at night, can truly doubt the existence of God or the inspiration of His Book.

The most outstanding fact proving the inspiration is the Jew. Many of the prophecies concerning him have already been fulfilled. Nation after nation has gone into obscurity, yet the Jew remains. Always we have known them as a scattered people, now we see their regathering. Hosea 3. For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king and without a prince. Afterward they shall return and seek the Lord their God. This is in the latter days. Many are now accepting Jesus as their Messiah.

The automobile is another fulfilled prophecy. Thousands of years ago when people traveled in foot-paths, Nahum gave us a perfect picture of the auto, and the wide roads over which we travel. Nahum 2:4. The aeroplane is still another fulfilled prophecy. Isaiah 60:8.

2 Timothy 3 tells us that in the last days perilous times shall come, and we see them. Men shall be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. We need only to observe to know that is true of today.

We see men's hearts failing them for looking after those things that are coming on the earth. The greater part of prophecy is history today. Let us watch.

Minnie B. Porter, Indiana.

WE LIKE TO SEE both the younger and the older members contribute to the Berean Page. The above article was contributed by one of the Bereans who has been known to all of us in the work for years. The two following articles were written by two of our younger members in Dixon. While our Berean Society is a young people's society, we are always glad to hear from anyone who is interested in the work. Then, too, we'd hate to think that anyone ever reached the stage where he was no longer one of us.

JOSEPH

JOSEPH WAS THE ELEVENTH SON of Jacob and Rachel.

He was Jacob's favorite son. This caused his brothers to become jealous of him. When he was at the age of seventeen years, while with his brothers out tending the flocks in the field, he told them of two dreams he had. These dreams showed that Joseph would have a higher place than his brothers.

Filled with jealousy they sold him to some Arabian merchants. These people in turn sold him to Potipher, Pharaoh's officer. This man put Joseph in prison. After telling the king's dream, he was freed from prison.

During a great famine he helped his family and they became a great nation. Joseph showed by his life that he was a kind, forgiving person. Gen. 37:2-5; 39:2-5; 41:14-23; 45:1.

Jane Ford, Dixon, Illinois.

ZACCHAEUS

ZACCHAEUS WAS A PUBLICAN of ancient times. He lived in a small town and was very honest and good, contrary to the fact that most publicans were dishonest and cheated the people.

One day Zacchaeus heard that Jesus was coming into his town. As he was a very short man he decided that he would climb into a tree, for a good view. Jesus knew that Zacchaeus was there and, calling him down, told him that He would be at his house for supper. Everyone said that Jesus was going to the house of a sinner. But Jesus knew that Zacchaeus was good. Then he said that he gave half his riches to the poor, and that he never cheated anyone. Jesus then said that salvation had come to his house. Zacchaeus was then satisfied.

Arleen Reis, Dixon, Illinois.

Recognizing the good often calls the better qualities of people into the open. This is true of those present as well as those who are absent. — Sunshine.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 6; Ohio, 3; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; California, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

REVIEW LESSON

"Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger." — Zephaniah 2:3.

FIT THESE CHARACTERS with the following verses:

1. Zacharias and Elisabeth, Parents of John the Baptist.
2. Mary, Mother of Jesus.
3. Anna and Simeon recognized Jesus as the Savior.
4. Simon Peter—one of the twelve disciples—leader.
5. Thomas—one of the twelve disciples—doubted.
6. Believing centurion—Roman soldier in command of one hundred men.
7. Rich young ruler—loved comfort.
8. Zacchaeus, the Publican—repented.
9. Stephen, the first Christian martyr.
10. Saul of Tarsus—greatest Christian preacher.

1. "And Joseph and his mother marveled at those things which were spoken of him." Luke 2:33.

2. "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." John 20:28.

3. "And he made haste and came down, and received him joyfully." Luke 19:6.

4. "And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Luke 3:3.

5. "And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Acts 7:60.

6. "When Jesus heard it, he marveled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." Matt. 8:10.

7. "Then he took him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word." Luke 2:28.

8. "And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God?" Mark 10:23.

9. "For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard." Acts 22:15.

10. "Lord, thou knowest all things, thou knowest that I love thee." John 21:17.

THE CHARACTER BLOCKS

Are you building a substantial character with these blocks?

DEPENDABLE	CHEERFUL
OBEDIENT	CLEAN — Mind and Body.
REVERENT - LOYAL	TEMPERATE
HONEST - FAITHFUL	PEACEFUL
LOVING - KIND	INDUSTRIOUS
THANKFUL	GENEROUS
	COURTEOUS - FRIENDLY

A SUGGESTION

One Junior class makes its own Sunday School books. Each Junior is given a blank note book of sixteen pages and cover with appropriate decorations. Each Sunday a picture illustrating the story is pasted on one page and on the other side the lesson as told by V. C. T.

(David C. Cook Publishing Co., Elgin, Illinois, will furnish these colored pictures.)

Other thoughts are added, outlines copied or verses and pictures pasted.

My New Year Wish to You All:

May this New Year bring you the peace that passeth all understanding.

Lois Hunt.

SO LONG AGO

I wish I might have seen the light
That lay across the midnight sky,
I wish I might have heard the song
Of angels, drifting sweet and high!

I wish I might have wandered through
The silent streets of Bethlehem;
When shepherds hurried from the hills —
I wish I had been one of them!

I wish that I had found the path
That ended at a stable place —
For then I might have seen the smile
That swept all pain from Mary's face.
— Margaret E. Sangster.

Who said: "By humility and the fear of the Lord are riches, and honour, and life."

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON XIII. — December 28, 1930

REVIEW

Matthew 5:3-16

Devotional Reading: Matthew 5:3-16

GOLDEN TEXT

Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus. — Philippians 2:5.

Lesson I. Luke 1:5-80.

Topic. What I Owe to My Home.

Summary. Though nearly a thousand years had passed since the course of Abijah was designated, 1 Chron. 24, yet Zacharias, a descendant of Abijah, performed the priestly offices faithfully and well. In all his ways he was righteous before God.

Such righteousness gave a double advantage. First, it made him anxious to seek the Father's help in the affairs of his home. Second, it made him susceptible to the Father's words and deeds. Not only was a son given him, but a son second only to the Son of man.

Righteous children who righteously adorn a home must almost of necessity be blessed with righteous parents. As parents, men and women owe all Christian righteousness to their homes.

Lesson II. Luke 2:15-19; John 2:1-5; 19:25-27.

Topic. Example of Motherhood.

Summary. When God created the Savior for the world, He did so under the instrumentality and influence of mothers. Not only were all of the natural instincts and traits of motherhood present with her, but she was the more enriched with those instincts and instructions which God conveyed by angelic instructions and by the power of His Spirit. The high pedestal on which God thus placed motherhood should be sufficient for all who think.

Not only in childhood, but also when He launched out into life work and when He ended His life upon the cross, the Savior prominently honored His mother before all. Her influence and molding power upon the Savior's life can but be felt throughout all ages.

Lesson III. Luke 2:25-39.

Topic. The Insight of the Pure in Heart.

Summary. Simeon and Anna had trained their hearts to twine around the heart of God. His thoughts were their thoughts. The purity of His thoughts purified them. Such purity of life guided by God's own Spirit gave them touch and wisdom as to the things of God and as to the mind and workings of God.

"If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." — James 1:5.

Lesson IV. Galatians 5:13-26.

Topic. Prohibition.

Summary. Paul writes to the Galatians correcting them on matters relating to the law of Moses and the gospel of Christ. He reveals how that under the law of Moses they were largely because of the prohibitions contained in the law, constantly under bondage and how that he who is in Christ, because of living out a life of action that is unprohibited, is in liberty. Paul shows how that it is the lustings of the flesh that are prohibited and how that it is the righteous aims of the Spirit that are unprohibited by law.

With liquor prohibition, as well as all other, to the extent that lust is prohibited in the individual and in the nation, to that extent is prohibition beneficial. As it was with God's law through Moses, the law failed because of the weakness of the flesh, so must it be expected as regards the law of man. But God did not withdraw His prohibitions simply because there were so many disobediences thereof. Likewise man should continue his prohibitions endeavoring to accomplish whatsoever good may be possible.

Lesson V. Mark 8:27-29; Luke 22:31-34; John 18:25-27; 21:15-17.

Topic. From Weakness to Strength.

Summary. "My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth." Nature, experience and the Bible are one in revealing that all earthly things are in themselves weakness. Experience and the Bible agree that all strength and power originate in and come from Jehovah. The genesis of life, the resurrection unto life, the genesis of immortal life, are alike impossible, excepting in obedience to those laws of God, the operation of which accomplish these marvelous results. Truly, all strength and power are from God.

Lesson VI. John 11:14-16; 14:5-8; 20:24-29; 21:1, 2.

Topic. The Honest Doubter.

Summary. Largely throughout all experiences of life, doubt and hesitancy precede conviction and action. So far as Thomas understood, he believed. His doubts appear to have been only in the field of insufficient evidence. Confidence, the opposite of doubt, is a state arrived at by continued experience or evidence.

The resurrection of Christ following such a violent death and delayed for so long a time was more than Thomas was able to believe. He kept his eyes and senses open for evidence. He found, he accepted, he believed, and he extolled the Savior more than did any of his comrades.

Lesson VII. Matt. 8:5-13.

Topic. The Gospel Door Opened to All People.

Summary. The centurion, a Gentile, contrary to all custom, approached Jesus of the Jews for the healing of his servant. Jesus granted his request upon the same condition as He granted like requests of others, namely, faith. Assuring that many would come from east and west to occupy with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob the coming kingdom of God, Jesus extended like blessings unto this Gentile, an alien to the commonwealth of Israel. He revealed that He had been sent not alone to Israel but alike unto all the world.

Lesson VIII. Mark 10:17-27.

Topic. Sacrifice and Eternal Life.

Summary. The young man eagerly ran and knelt before the Master as he sought an added blessing to be gratuitously handed out. Jesus revealed and analyzed to him that eternal life and all true blessings are for those only whose sacrifices warrant the blessings. By the Savior's words, retained and trusted riches make it most difficult for the possessor thereof to enter the kingdom. These warnings of the Savior should be carefully considered and reconsidered by every one who in faith is anxious to enter eternal life.

Lesson IX. Luke 19:1-10.

Topic. Christianizing Business.

Summary. The little short man, Zacchaeus, became a mighty man under God when he recognized that Christ's mission was to those of his kind equally as it was to the Israelites. Recognizing the blessings of God through Christ, Zacchaeus at once made housecleaning of his business affairs and put them into agreement with the teachings of Jesus.

Christians today probably have more influence in determining the character of the day's business than does the pulpit. Eventually the world will, under Christ, become purged and rid of every vestige of non-christian business.

Lesson X. Acts 6:7-10; 7:54-60.

Topic. An Interpretation of Christianity.

Summary. About six years after Christ's ascension the seven workers of Acts 6:5 were filled with the Holy Ghost and with power. And the word of God spread rapidly. Great numbers of the priests and of the laity of Jerusalem, because of faith, obeyed the gospel of Christ. These things angered bitterly those who saw the Mosaic religion being exchanged for that of Christianity. Stephen stood forth bravely in the faith and truth of the gospel and by his acts and his death testified of the great contrast between what religion had done for his accusers and what it had done for himself. His interpretation of Christianity resounded to distant shores and to those of distant countries.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

BITS OF NEWS FROM HERE AND THERE

Bro. M. W. Lyon's new address is 13705 Diana Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Please remember that we are always glad to send a sample copy of The Herald to any whose names and addresses are sent to us.

On Sunday, December 7, a son arrived in the family of Bro. Sydney Magaw and wife of Eden Valley, Minnesota. All are doing nicely.

We are glad to report that after nine weeks of illness, being confined to her bed all of that time, Sr. Gertrude Logan of St. Louis, Missouri, is now improving rapidly.

On page 167 of this issue will be found the list of ministers, published annually in The Herald. This is for convenience of those obtaining clergy rates.

Bro. L. E. Conner and wife are now located at 610 North Brinton Ave., Dixon, Illinois. The Dixon brethren are rejoicing over the arrival of their pastor and wife permanently in their midst.

You will find the article on the front page by Bro. Marsh worthy of your attention. This is the first in the series which was recently promised our readers. You will not want to miss one of them.

Bro. F. L. Austin is still at his home at 5439 Ohio St., Chicago, Illinois, recuperating from his recent illness. He is improving each day and expects to be back at his work very soon. He appreciates the many expressions of good will and the prayers that have been offered for him by the brothers and sisters.

Bro. R. H. Judd writes us that his brother, Dr. F. H. Judd, a medical missionary to China, has had to flee his station at Jao-cheo; his hospital has been looted and everything lost, including instruments and personal belongings. Bro. Judd adds that if anyone cares to assist Dr. Judd financially, he will be glad to forward same to him.

I am thankful to our heavenly Father for friends and loved ones, and for the promise that He will send Jesus, whom the heavens must receive until the restitution of all things which He has spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began. I am anxiously waiting for that time.

Sarah E. Smith, Portland, Oregon.

The new quarterly for the first quarter of 1931 will soon be in the mail. If you have not already sent in your order, please do so at once. We are always glad to mail out a sample copy of this quarterly to a friend who may be interested in it. Be sure and notify us of any change in address.

New Dollar-A-Month Pledges have been received as follows:

California, 1; Kansas, 1; Missouri, 5.

The five pledges from Missouri were taken by one individual.

Do not overlook this opportunity of serving in a large way. By the small pledge of $1 per month from many, the cause of the gospel is advanced very materially.

REJOICING IN WASHINGTON

As the year is drawing to a close, and we look backward over the work accomplished in the Master's service, it looks pitifully small to what we wish it might have been. However we rejoice and feel thankful to our heavenly Father that a few more names have been added to our number during that time. On the twenty-third of November Steve Borry was obedient in baptism, and that evening the members met at our home for the ordinances, and extended to him the right hand of fellowship.

A. L. Corbaley.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Work is now being pushed rapidly on the Christmas program which is to be staged on Tuesday evening, the twenty-third. Much interest is being shown in this work.

The annual business meeting of the church was held on Friday, the fifth, and a splendid spirit prevailed. A new constitution was adopted and the officers were chosen to carry the work during 1931. It was also voted unanimously to enlarge our building on the present lots as soon as possible rather than move to a different site. A committee has been working hard on plans for the new church, and if financial arrangements can be made we hope that another year will see this splendid group of workers in a house of God that will give them ample room and accommodations for using their abilities to the full.

The Grand Rapids church extends Christmas greetings to the brotherhood at large.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

ROCKFORD CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

The Rockford Sunday School will hold its Christmas program at the McFarlane Children's Home, 1920 N. Main St., on Monday, December 22, at 7:30 p. m. This meeting place is the next building north of the one where services are usually held. Quite a number of the children of this home are members of our Rockford Sunday School. We are sure this will be worth your presence. All are invited.

PLUM RIVER SERVICES

Bro. Paul Hatch will speak for the Plum River (Illinois) congregation next Sunday morning, December 21, at eleven o'clock. Bro. Paul C. Johnson will be the evening speaker. All living nearby are urged to attend these meetings.

MRS. J. C. WHITTEN

Sally J. Whitten, daughter of P. G. and Eliza M. Smith, was born in Warren County, Indiana, November 11, 1849, and died in her home in West Lebanon, Indiana, December 5, 1930. Sixty-four years ago she united with the Church of God under the teaching of Elder R. V. Lyons. Since that time she has been a faithful member of the church, ever ready to support the work.

On September 19, 1869, she and Joseph C. Whitten were united in the holy state of matrimony. To this union one son, who died in infancy, was born. Sr. Whitten leaves her husband, one sister, and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held in the home of the writer on December 7. Sr. Whitten had selected Psalms 17:15 for the text. After the service she was laid away in the cemetery south of her home to sleep until Jesus comes.

J. H. Anderson.

JULIA ELLEN BALSLEY

Julia Ellen, daughter of Ira and Emily Vernon, was born June 27, 1857, in Grant County, Indiana. When about eleven years of age she moved with her parents, to Blackford County, Indiana, where she resided the remaining years of her life.

She was united in marriage on September 8, 1879, with Jacob Balsley, to which union three children — one son and two daughters — were born, the son dying in childhood. The daughters, Mrs. J. C. Swindler of Ft. Wayne, and Mrs. Sylvia Farr of Blackford County, with their father, the husband, are left to mourn the loss of a faithful and true wife and mother, who fell asleep in Christ on December 1, 1930, in the seventy-fourth year of her age.

She was baptized into Christ on June 8, 1909, from which date to the end of her devoted life she was a faithful member of the Church of God at Roll, Indiana. This little body, with the bereaved family, will feel the loss of this good woman most keenly. But they sorrow not without hope.

After appropriate services, we laid her to rest for awhile.

L. E. Conner.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Vivian Magaw; Lilian Railton; M. Fetters; Anderson Drake; Mrs. S. A. Dorris; Mrs. T. W. Davidson; R. A. Miner; Mrs. P. T. Hollenback; I. E. Arnold; Mrs. Lucy Robinson; Mrs. Belle Hartman; George Jones; Mrs. James Sanford; Mrs. Charles Evans; Lottie E. Young; Mrs. L. H. Ralston; C. N. Adams; Elizabeth Dauterich; Alice L. Beavers; Mrs. James Donaly; H. J. Edmister; Mrs. Rose Barton; R. S. Brewer; Earl Wheelock; A. L. Corbaley; Glenn Corbaley; Sarah E. Smith.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

To Stop Paper. — It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation,

COME, LET US WORSHIP!

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."—Heb. 10:25.

The following mentioned churches extend to friends who may be traveling through or visiting in their respective communities an invitation to unite with them in sacred worship.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

South Lawn Park Church of God

Jefferson Avenue S. E.

F. E. Siple, Pastor

50 Cherryvale Drive., S. W.

Sunday School 10:00 A.M.
 Morning Worship 11:00 A.M.
 Young People's League 6:30 P.M.
 Evening Service 7:30 P.M.
 Bible Study, Thursday 7:30 P.M.

NORTH SALEM CHURCH OF GOD

Five miles north of Plymouth

J. H. Anderson, Pastor

Preaching every Third Sunday 2:30 P.M.

HILLISBURG CHURCH OF GOD

Three miles east of Michigantown, Indiana

J. H. Anderson, Pastor

Sunday School, every Sunday 10:00 A.M.
 Bro. Geo. Finney, Superintendent
 Preaching every Fourth Sunday 11:00 A.M.
 7:30 P.M.

PLEASANT VIEW CHURCH OF GOD

Hedrick, Warren Co., Indiana

J. H. Anderson, Pastor

Sunday School every Sunday 10:00 A.M.
 Preaching every First Sunday 11:00 A.M.
 7:30 P.M.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH OF GOD

Plymouth, Indiana

Preaching every Third Sunday 11:00 A.M.
 By J. H. Anderson

BURR OAK CHURCH OF GOD

Burr Oak, Indiana

Sunday School every Sunday 10:00 A.M.
 Preaching every Third Sunday 7:30 P.M.
 By J. H. Anderson

RENSSELAER CHURCH OF GOD

J. H. Anderson, Pastor

Rensselaer, Indiana

Preaching every Second Sunday 11:00 A.M.
 7:30 P.M.

CHURCH OF GOD — ABRAHAMIC FAITH

1244 S. Jay, Kokomo, Ind.

Sunday School every Sunday 9:30 a. m.
 Preaching every first Sunday by Bro.
 Vaughn Long, 10:45 a. m., 7:30 p. m.
 Preaching every third Sunday by Bro.
 Cantwell Drabensstott, 10:45 a. m., 7:30 p. m.
 Berean Study on every second, fourth and fifth Sundays at 7:30 p. m.

BROWNTOWN, VIRGINIA

Harry A. Sheets, Pastor

Public Worship (fifth Sundays and by special appointment) 11:00 a. m. & 7:30 p. m.

MAURERTOWN, VIRGINIA

Harry A. Sheets, Pastor

Sunday School (each Sunday) 10:00 a. m.
 Public Service (second and fourth Sundays each month) 11:00 a. m. & 7:30 p. m.
 Berean (first and third Sundays each month) 11:00 a. m.
 Wednesday evening Prayer Service and Bible
 Study in the homes at eight o'clock.

SEVEN FOUNTAINS, VIRGINIA

Harry A. Sheets, Pastor

Sunday School 10:00 a. m.
 Public Worship (first and third Sundays only) 11:00 a. m. & 7:30 p. m.

EDEN VALLEY, MINNESOTA

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor

Sunday School 10:00 a. m.
 Morning Service 11:00 a. m.
 Berean Studies, Wednesday 8:00 P. M.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

Sunday School 10:30 a. m.
 Berean Meeting 6:45 p. m.
 Evening Service 7:45 p. m.
 Prayer and Study (Wednesday) 7:45 p. m.

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

Blessed Hope Church of God

1926 Tenth St.

Grover Gordon, Pastor

Sunday School 10:00 a. m.
 Morning Worship 11:00 a. m.
 Bible Study, Thursday evening 7:45 p. m.
 Berean Class, every other Tuesday 8:00 p. m.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO, CANADA

Fonthill Church of God

Grover Gordon, Pastor

Sunday School 6:30 p. m.
 Evening Worship 7:30 p. m.
 Berean Class, every other Tuesday 8:00 p. m.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

Church of the Golden Rule

13905 Diana Ave.

M. W. Lyon, Pastor

Sunday School 9:30 A.M.
 Morning Worship 10:45 A.M.
 Evening Worship 8:00 P.M.
 Prayer Meeting, Thursday, 7:30 P. M.
 Berean Class, Friday 8:00 P.M.

BRUSH CREEK CHURCH OF GOD

Near West Milton, Ohio

Sunday School every Sunday 9:45 a. m.
 Bro. John Garard, Superintendent
 Berean Class at home of Sr. Worley on Cozy Corner on Friday 7:45 p. m.
 Berean Class at Dayton, Friday 8:00 p. m.
 A. J. Hoke, Presiding Elder
 21 Ashwood Ave., Dayton, Ohio

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

264 W. 42nd St.

G. Eldred Marsh, Pastor

4707 1-2 St. Elmo Drive

Sunday School 10:00 a. m.
 Morning Worship and Sermon 11:00 a. m.
 Communion is observed on the first Sunday of the month, at which time also a preaching service is held in the afternoon at 2:30. Alternate Bible classes and Berean meetings are held each Wednesday, 7:45 p. m., at the home of Bro. E. C. Railsback, 1020 S. Burlington Ave.

LYNWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Services are held on the second and fourth Sundays of the month, at 2:30 p. m., in the home of Bro. J. A. Squires, 3161 Carlin Ave.
 Preaching by Pastor G. E. Marsh.

PASADENA, CALIFORNIA

Bible study is conducted each Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and each Tuesday evening at 7:30, by Bro. S. G. Elton, at the home of Bro.
 John Reid, 301 N. Euclid Ave.

CORVALLIS, OREGON

Sunday School each Sunday, 10:30 a. m.

OREGON, ILLINOIS

F. L. Austin, Pastor

Sunday Bible School 10:00 A.M.
 Morning Worship 11:00 A.M.
 Berean Meeting 6:30 P.M.
 Evening Worship 7:30 P.M.
 Prayer Meeting, Thursday 7:45 P.M.

RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Sunday School every Sunday at 10:00 a. m.
 Preaching on Saturday evening and Sunday morning and evening over each second Sunday.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

L. E. Conner, Pastor, 610 N. Brinton Ave.

Sunday School 9:45 A.M.
 On the second and fourth Sundays of each month there are sermons at 11:00 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m.
 Wednesday evening service 7:30

SALEM CHURCH

Ten miles northwest of Marshall, Illinois.

Sunday School 10:30 a. m.
 Berean Meeting on Sunday 8:00 p. m.

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

Services at 1904 N. Main St.

Sunday School every Sunday 9:45 a. m.
 Berean Meeting every Friday at 7:45 p. m.
 Preaching each first Sunday morning and evening.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Sunday School each second and fourth
 Sunday 10:00 a. m.
 Preaching each fourth Sunday 11:00 a. m.

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Sunday School every Sunday at 10:00 a. m.
 Berean Class every Sunday.

MOOREFIELD, NEBRASKA

E. E. Giesler, Pastor

Sunday School every Sunday 10:00 a. m.
 Prayer Meeting Wednesday evening. Preaching morning and evening of every third and fourth Sundays at the Union church.

HOLBROOK, NEBRASKA

Sunday School, each Sunday, 10:30 a. m.
 Berean Meeting each Sunday, 7:30 p. m.

The Bible class is instructed by Bro. Arthur Hornaday, a Bible student of marked ability. Traveling brethren sincerely welcome.

LYSTRA CHURCH OF GOD

Near Abilene, Texas

Preaching every fourth Saturday night and on Sunday at 11:00 a. m. E. O. Stewart, Pastor.

PALAVA, TEXAS

Preaching every first Sunday 11:00 a. m.
 Berean Class every Sunday 10:30 a. m.

Bible Study each Thursday night in Sweetwater 7:30 p. m.
 E. O. Stewart, Pastor; W. A. Hall, Teacher.

MULLIN, TEXAS

Preaching each second Saturday night and Sunday. E. O. Stewart, Pastor.

NEW HOPE CHURCH OF GOD

Near Westbrook, Texas

Preaching every third Saturday night and on Sunday at 11:00 a. m. E. O. Stewart, Pastor.

DID THE SERPENT SPEAK THE TRUTH?

By Alma Orr

IN THE BEGINNING God created the heaven and the earth. The third day He caused the earth to bring forth grass and other vegetation, including all kinds of trees. Genesis 2:9 tells us that "out of the ground made the Lord to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food." Since "every tree" includes all trees without any exception, no other tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food could grow out of the ground.

The text says, further, "The tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil." Also means, in addition to. The tree of life and the tree of knowledge of good and evil were in addition to the trees which grew out of the ground, which were said to be every tree. Therefore the tree of life and the tree of knowledge of good and evil could not have been literal trees.

The place where these trees were planted was called the Garden of Eden. This could not mean a small field as we understand the term garden but must have been applied to the whole earth, as all manner of trees grew there and some trees require one climate and some another. The garden was planted eastward with no bounds mentioned. Go eastward far enough and one comes back to the starting place.

When Adam was placed in the garden, God forbade him to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil lest he die. God made this emphatic by saying, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Eve also understood the restriction as we find her repeating it to the serpent (Gen. 3:3). The serpent replied to her, saying, "Ye shall not surely die." Did he speak the truth?

There are some who say the penalty is not carried out. They say that God repented of the evil He said He would do. I find no scripture that says God repented of this threatened punishment. The Scripture does say, "I am the Lord, I change not." Mal. 3:6.

We read in 1 Timothy 2:14 that Eve was deceived. If the penalty was not enforced and she did not die the day she sinned, she could not have been deceived when the serpent said she would not surely die.

From the study of the Scripture we find there are two kinds of death and that one can be dead while he yet lives. "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." 1 Tim. 5:6. "Let the dead bury their dead." Luke 9:10. "He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." John 5:24. One dead person could not bury another if both were physically dead; neither can one who is physically dead hear and believe.

Since Adam continued to live physically after the transgression, we must conclude that the threatened punishment was not physical, but spiritual death. The instant he sinned, he became spiritually dead. He would have died physically, if he had not sinned, because as time was counted, he would have grown old. "Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Heb. 8:13. He would have died, but the Spirit of God dwelling in him would have raised him to a spiritual, immortal life.

POSSESSING OUR POSSESSIONS

A CERTAIN MAN PLANNED to leave a southern port for a trip by coastwise steamer to a metropolis. He did not have much money, and he wanted to save all he could to have wherewithal to spend when he reached the great city. So he decided to save money on his meals. With this in view he laid in a generous supply of crackers, cheese, and dried herring to meet his needs.

The voyage began, and with it his self-made dietary started. Day after day, for breakfast, lunch and dinner he stuck to his self-appointed menu. True, it kept him alive, but it was woefully monotonous.

On the last day out, as they were approaching their destination, he was promenading the deck. The fragrant aroma of a fine meal exhaled from the dining room so overpoweringly that he succumbed to the lure of it. Stepping up to a traveling acquaintance he had formed upon the voyage, he said: "What do you suppose it would cost me to go in there and eat a real meal today?"

"Let me see your ticket," was the response. The hungry man pulled out the slip in which he had invested his money at the start of the voyage, and handed it to his friend. The latter scanned it a few moments. Then he passed it back without a word. But his finger was pointing to a magic sentence printed in the body of the ticket, which read like this:

"Meals and Berth Included!"

We smile at the poor fellow who was cheated out of the choicest viands an ocean steamship menu could freely offer because of sheer failure to "possess his possessions," by appropriating what already belonged to him, having been bought and paid for in advance.

But men are vastly more foolish than even this, in the spiritual realm. They want forgiveness. It is in Christ Jesus, bought and paid for by His own precious blood. They long for redemption. It too is in Him, waiting only for their free acceptance as a gift from God. They seek eternal life. It is "the gift of God in Christ Jesus" to all who will accept it by faith.

They are spiritual paupers, when they might be millionaires in Christ Jesus. The god of this world has blinded their eyes so that they do not reach forth and appropriate the precious jewels of spiritual wealth which God has put in Christ Jesus for every one who will claim them.

"As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." — A Selection.

CHRISTMAS NUMBER
THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 23, 1930

NUMBER 12

May the Joy That Is to Be Found in Knowledge of the Soon Return of the Christ Be Yours in the Fullest Measure as We Celebrate the Anniversary of His Birth

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him." — 1 John 4:9.

UNTO YOU IS BORN A SAVIOR

AND THERE WERE IN THE SAME COUNTRY shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flocks by night.

"And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

"And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

THIS HEAVENLY MESSAGE announced a matter entirely new to the world. Such a Savior had never before been announced. He was born that day. His birth was of such great importance that the Father sent "the angel of the Lord" with the news. Though the earth was asleep to its significant meaning, Heaven was thrilled because of the event. Indeed, "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God" suddenly appeared in the starlit dome with the glad and all-important message, saying:

"Glory, in highest realms, to God;

And, on earth, peace, among men of good will."

— Emphatic Testament.

"UNTO YOU." Heaven was specific in its appointment. That new-born Savior was unto those people of God. They also were in need. That forward step in the unfolding of God's plans was, first, presented and offered unto people of His "chosen nation."

Those same "glad tidings" were later to "be to all people". The new-born Savior was as much needed by all as He was needed by Israel. And, in due course, He was to be (and has been) presented unto all mankind.

"IS BORN." Not a renewed but a new life was then and there introduced by God's angelic messenger. That new-born One was a Savior. He was "Christ the Lord," that is, "Jehovah's Christ." Jehovah had previously anointed others for various positions — Aaron, David, many — but none had been anointed to be Savior.

His birth was not, in itself, particularly wonderful. There was no salvation in it. Rather, it introduced Him to a life and field of service from which salvation was to result. Salvation was the end in view. His birth was an assurance that the time was at hand for the world to have the Savior, long prophesied, even Jehovah's Anointed. No wonder that all Heaven was gladdened because that "unto you is born this day" a Savior.

"A SAVIOUR." This word told that people — and "all people" — that they were lost. The hour of Christ's birth was the hour when a Savior was first presented to man. All who lived previously lived in a time when there was no savior. His birth was another manifestation of God's love to man. No wonder the angel rushed to the watching shepherds, and that a host of angels gathered in the midnight air and unloosed their songs of joy.

Wondrous Gift indeed was the Gift of God to a lost world! A Gift of such value it was that "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God" joined the angelic messenger and sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

What meaning in that word "Saviour"! Lost and helpless man was to see "the salvation of God". From that which he was impotent to escape, God's strong arm — in Jesus, His Son — was to aid, aid mightily. In this a new day had dawned for man. New hope, extending out beyond the range of man's vision unto eternity, brightly beamed before him.

Salvation had been foretold by God; the prophets had exhorted the people regarding it. But that day, with the birth of Jesus, the work of salvation had been commenced by God. He who that night lay in Bethlehem and who would become the Savior "is born this day in the city of David."

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

MAY ALL THOSE JOYS which deeply enrich the Christian life, be yours, Dear Reader, upon this anniversary of the Savior's birth.

THE SONG IN OUR HEARTS

A BEAUTIFUL STORY IS TOLD in Samuel Harkness' book, The Christian, of the shepherds of Bethlehem, when the choir of heavenly voices burst into that wonderful melody on the night our Savior was born. The following night, as they sat around their fire discussing those startling events, each one in turn tried to recall the tune that the angels had sung. But none could hum it.

It was the most beautiful music they had ever heard and now it had escaped them! Said one, "It would seem as if it had been all a dream, except that the Babe is really at the inn, and they say that wise men from the East brought Him gifts just after we left."

As they sat there far into the night, a faint bleat came to their ears from over yonder hillside and they knew that a lamb had been lost and they had not missed it. The youngest of them jumped up and exclaimed, "I'll go and get it." The older ones tried to dissuade him from his errand of mercy, saying that there was a cruel patch of thorns and a stony climb before he would reach the spot.

The night was dark, but nothing daunted, the young lad started, knowing that if he did not make haste the wolves would reach there before him. A long and difficult task it proved to be, but always he was encouraged by the faint bleat that came to him from distant hill.

One hour, two hours passed; and stumbling into the midst of the sleepy shepherds came the lad, carrying the lamb in his arms. Arms and legs were torn and bleeding, but a song was on his lips! "When I picked up the lamb, the angel's song came to me and I have been singing it all the way back," he said. From then on he became known as the singing shepherd and everywhere he went, he sang the beautiful song.

The years slipped by and the Babe of Bethlehem became a man, one who did only kindly deeds, healing the sick, opening blind eyes and even raising the dead. One day one of His followers asked Him to come and see a sight which had touched his heart — a blind beggar who sang a beautiful song.

So the Master, ever on errands of mercy, went to the place where the blind singer sat and He touched the sightless eyes. Rapt indeed was the expression on the face of the beggar as He saw the Savior, He who had been the Babe of Bethlehem!

"Where did you learn that song?" asked the Christ. And in worshipful attitude he told Him the story of the night so long ago and how he had kept the song, not only in his heart, but on his lips through all the sadness of his later life.

A beautiful story, truly, though partly the figment of the author's brain, but one that contains a precious thought for us today.

We, too, may find each day errands of mercy on which we may go, and in the doing of these we will be sure to find a blessing. Despite outward circumstances, we can carry a song in our hearts, and on our lips a song of joy because a Savior was given to us that first Christmas night. And after the sorrows that may come our way are passed, if we carry His love in our hearts throughout life we will meet Him face to face and receive a gift from Him to which naught else may be compared, even life eternal with Him.

— M. G.

KNOWING HIM BETTER

By Lottie E. Young

ONCE AGAIN THE CHRISTMAS TIME is here, and the whole so-called Christian world is preparing to celebrate it. In what way? Mainly in getting and giving, eating, drinking, and having a general good time. Not so many years ago when families were large, with sons and daughters scattered over the surrounding country, it was the day of the year when a united family again became children with their children. But now it is often, "Let's get dinner down town on Christmas; take a run out to see the old folks, and get home for a show or dance in the evening."

There is nothing specially wrong in this, but should not followers of Christ in this "Benjamin among the nations" have something higher to look forward to and remember afterward of this anniversary? Do we read the story of the advent of the One who came as a babe, lived as a man, died a martyr, and ascended to the throne of God, as none ever did before or since, after uttering the statement, "All power is given to me in heaven and earth," as a twice told tale with which we are so familiar that we can see no beauty in it? Or, like Thomas of old, do we bow in admiration and say, "My Lord and my God"?

How can we learn to know more of the matchless One? Only through the Bible account of His life. And how few of us can even quote correctly perhaps a dozen of His sayings! David could say, "Thy word have I hid in my heart," and Paul tells us, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." There is plenty of head knowledge nowadays in the world, but there is no promise in the Bible of salvation to those where "knowledge puffeth up", only to those who are "increasing in the knowledge of God" and who "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour."

We are apt to think ourselves a vastly superior people to the Chinese, East Indians, Siamese, etc., and perhaps we are in worldly wisdom. Yet missionaries who have returned from these lands tell of the avidity with which these people study the Word of God once they have accepted the Savior as the great Example they should follow. Children learn a verse a day of the Scriptures, with five verses on Sunday, whole chapters of the Bible being recited by older ones, and lives are utterly changed.

We are a nation surfeited with every kind of a book. Let us get back to the Book of books, and may our knowledge of Jesus Christ as He was, is, and is to be, grow increasingly every day of 1931, is my Christmas wish.

GOD'S GIFT IN JESUS CHRIST

By R. H. Judd

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort."—2 Corinthians 1:3, R. V.

THE ABOVE TEXT at first sight may seem to be a little unusual and perhaps unsuitable for a Christmas message, but to the writer it contains much that may be made a source of blessing to each one of us.

How well we all know the eagerness with which we have looked forward to becoming personally acquainted with the members of a family, one of whose members we have had the privilege of knowing intimately and the knowledge of whom has ripened into a deep and lasting friendship. Knowing our friend, we instinctively picture in our mind's eye everything that we can think of with reference to the character and personality of each member of that family. It is natural for us to think that, in his various aspects, he shows forth something, though perhaps in a lesser degree, of the distinctive traits that are predominant in each.

And with what keen relish do we look forward to the hope of some day meeting with the father of such a friend as ours. We picture him to be the embodiment of all the striking features that have so drawn forth our warm-hearted and deep seated attachment to his son. We may many times before we knew his son, have caught meager glimpses of his father's personality from others who have been privileged to be messengers of his, or had in some way come into close relationship with him. But not until we met his son could we really visualize what that father was like, or how faithfully, both in word and action, did that son manifest through himself the father we longed to know.

With what freshness then at this Christmas time must the Scripture message come to us concerning "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort."

Jesus Christ, during His earthly ministry, gave us a conception of God, never met with before in the world's history. Yet no message was more naturally and beautifully given—the message that God was His Father and ours also. In every circumstance of life, it was His delight to mention His Father's name. His frequent, natural and simple use of the words "my Father" in reference to God must have been a matter of striking interest to all who heard Him. And the manner and occasion of their use would in every instance draw forth an understanding of God because of its close relationship to human need.

Nothing like it in the annals of religion before or since has appeared in the world's history. When speaking to His own disciples, He graciously linked himself with them, and then it was, "Our Father which art in heaven." When human need was most individual and most pressing, it was, "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of these things."

That the coming and birth of Jesus Christ was directly due to "the Father of mercies" is beautifully told in Luke 1:77-78, R. V. There we are told that it was John's mission to "give knowledge of salvation unto his people in the remission of their sins." And why? Because of the "tender mercy (margin, heart of mercy) of our God (the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ) whereby the Day-spring (or Sunrising) from on high shall visit us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and to guide our feet in the way of peace." "Peace on earth and good will to men."

How true it is that Christ came not to do His own will, but "the will of him that sent him." His whole life, from the cradle to the grave, was the embodiment of His Father's will. His very name, given to Him before His birth—the name of JESUS (Savior), proclaimed that even in this He was His Father's representative, and that it was the Father who sent the Son to be the Savior of the world.

In the words of the Old Testament, He was the One through whom "all flesh shall know that I the Lord am thy Saviour and thy Redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob." Isa. 49:26. So He (God) was their Savior. In all their affliction He was afflicted; in His love and in His pity, He redeemed them; and He bare them and carried them all the days of old. So true was this that John, the beloved disciple, echoed the thought in his memorable epistle where he says, "We have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world."

Still another characteristic of the Father abundantly represented in the Son is that of comfort—"the God of all comfort". Who can read those heart-touching words in Isaiah 61 and not realize that it was God—the God of all comfort—who was making himself known through Jesus Christ? "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; . . . to comfort all that mourn; . . . to give the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

Let us then "give thanks unto the God of gods; for his mercy endureth for ever," and let us never forget that it was GOD who "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The Gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ His Son. We surely then have abundant reason to join with the angels in singing praise that "unto you is born this day in the city of David a SAVIOUR, which is CHRIST THE LORD."

—o—

"'GIVING IS LIVING,' the angel said,
'To feed the hungry, sweet charity's bread.'
'And must I keep giving, and giving again?'
My selfish and querulous answer ran.
'Ah, no!' said the angel; his look pierced me through,
'Just give till the Master stops giving to you.'"

—Edwin Markham.

THE GIFT OF GOD TO CHRIST

By Cecil A. Smead

WHEN THE LORD DELIVERED the children of Israel out of Egypt He saved their firstborn alive when all the rest of the firstborn in Egypt died. Consequently, He looked on the firstborn of Israel as especially set apart for Him. They owed their lives to the Lord more particularly than the rest of Israel in that they would have died with the rest of the firstborn in Egypt if the Lord had not intervened. The firstborn, then, being devoted to God, were bound to do His service. But the Lord traded them for the whole tribe of Levi.

“And I, behold, I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the firstborn that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine; because all the firstborn are mine; for on the day that I smote all the firstborn in the land of Egypt I hallowed unto me all the firstborn in Israel, both man and beast: mine shall they be: I am the Lord.” Numbers 3:12, 13.

The Lord took the Levites and gave them to Aaron, the high priest. “And thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.” Numbers 3:9. We read also that the Levites were presented to the high priest to minister unto him, and to keep the charge of the tabernacle. Numbers 3. They were to be used in service to do all the manual labor required around the tabernacle.

Now, we are told in Hebrews that Jesus Christ, our High Priest, is “a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.” Hebrews 8:2. Moses made the tabernacle from a pattern given to him by the Lord. Hebrews 8:5. Moses pitched the tabernacle on earth to model after the heavenly tabernacle pitched by the Lord. The details, so explicitly given to Moses, correspond as accurately as is possible for earthly things to represent heavenly, with the details of the spiritual tabernacle pitched by the Lord himself. Christ is the High Priest of that tabernacle. “But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building.” Hebrews 9:11.

Therefore, seeing that Jesus Christ is that great High Priest of the spiritual tabernacle, He must have a people to correspond with the Levites and to do the service in the spiritual tabernacle. Such a people would be a gift from the Lord as the Levites were. We do indeed find such a class, as we see from John 17.

Listen to the prayer of Jesus: “I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word. That they all may be one. I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine.”

Thus we see that the church is the gift of God to the High Priest, Christ. As the Levites were given for service, so the church of the firstborn is given for service. As each Levite had a certain prescribed duty to perform, so has each member of the church. As we find in 1 Corinthians 12: “There are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit. For the body is not one member, but many. But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they were all one member, where were the body? But now are they many members, yet but one body. And God hath set some

Gifts

Outside, the stars, inside, the lights,
More glowing than on other nights,
And each small house is fragrant now
With holly wreath, and cedar bough;
And Love, in visible vestments takes
New shining forms, new gracious shapes.

In red beribboned gifts it walks,
Through written words it lives and talks;
Our tongues are all too slow to tell
The Love our warm hearts know so well.
Lord, may our gifts tomorrow say
To others what our hearts would say.

Lord, may they be the symbols of Thy great, undying, boundless love:
The greatest love of all the earth:
A fire, kindled at Thy birth,
An unquenched fire, burning yet,
Lest our forgetful hearts forget.
— Grace Roll Crowell.

in the church, first apostles, secondarily, prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.”

Are we the gift of God to Christ? First we must be given to God in order that He might turn and give us to the High Priest for service. God has given all those who correspond to the Levites to Christ. They are bound to do a certain service; they are bound to keep the service of the tabernacle in order that atonement might be made for those of the people of the world, outside the service of the tabernacle, who repent of their evil ways and desire to come to God.

If the church keeps the way (Continued on page 186)

THAT GREAT POWER OF THE GOSPEL

By Glenn M. Birkey

PAUL SAID TO THE CHRISTIANS in Rome, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." If we will but stop and think of the marvelous change that comes over one who has experienced that power of God through the gospel of Christ whose birth is being heralded to the ends of the earth at this time, we would certainly consider it to be a wonderful privilege to have the opportunity to become a joint heir with Him in the near future.

I was very much impressed by the record of a happening in the state penitentiary at Michigan City, Indiana, as told in The Jewish Hope, which illustrates the point I am trying to impress. Here it is:

A CHRISTMAS GIFT AND WHAT CAME OF IT

SOME YEARS AGO, while conducting a series of meetings in Michigan City, I was invited to preach to the convicts at the state prison situated at that point. I sat on the platform with the governor of the prison, and watched the prisoners march in, seven hundred and six men, young and old. They marched in lockstep, every man's hand on the shoulder of the man before him. At the word of command they sat down and fixed their eyes on a deadline, a white mark painted on the wall above the platform. Among that large number of convicts were seventy-six "lifers" — men who had been committed to prison for life for the crime of murder.

After the singing, I arose to preach, but could hardly speak for weeping. Disregarding all rules of the prison, in my earnestness to help my poor, fallen brethren, I left the platform and walked down the aisle among the men, taking now one, now another by the hand, and praying with him. Every heart was melted, and we all wept together. At the end of the row of men who were committed for murder, sat a man who more than his fellows seemed marked by sin's blighting hand. His face was seamed and rigid with scars and marks of vice and sin. He looked as though he might be a demon incarnate, if once aroused to anger. I placed my arm about his shoulder, and together we wept and prayed.

When the service was over the governor said to me:

"Well, Kain, do you know that you have broken the rules of the prison in leaving the platform?"

"Yes," I answered; "but, governor, I never could brook any rule while preaching, and I did want to get close to the poor, despairing fellows and pray with them."

"Do you remember," said the governor, "the man at the end of the seat in the lifer's row, whom you prayed with? Would you like to hear his history?"

"Yes," I answered, "gladly."

"Well," said the governor, "here it is in brief: Tom Galson was sent here about eight years ago for the crime of murder. He was without doubt one of the most desperate and vicious characters we had ever received and, as we expected, gave us a great deal of trouble.

"One Christmas Eve, about six years ago, duty compelled me to spend the night at the prison instead of at home, as I had anticipated. Early in the morning, while it was yet quite dark, I left the prison for my home, my pockets bulging with presents for my little girl. It was a bitter cold morning, and I buttoned my overcoat tight up to protect myself from the cutting wind which swept in from over the lake.

"As I hurried along, I thought I saw somebody skulking in the shadow of the prison wall. I stopped and looked a little more closely, and then saw a little girl, wretchedly clothed in a thin dress, her stockingless feet thrust into a pair of shoes much the worse for wear. In her hand she held, tightly clasped, a small paper bundle. Wondering who she was, and why she was out so early in the morning, and yet too weary to be much interested, I hurried on. Bye and bye I felt rather than heard that I was being followed. I stopped short and whirled about, and there before me stood the same wretched child.

"'What do you want?' I asked sharply.

"'Are you the governor of the prison?'

"'Yes,' I answered; 'what do you want?'

"'Have you — does Tom Galson live there?' Her voice trembled and broke with repressed tears.

"'Yes. Who are you? Why are you not at home?'

"'Please, sir, I haven't any home. Mama died in the poorhouse two weeks ago, an' she told me just before she died that Papa — that Tom Galson — was in the prison, and she thought that maybe he would like to see his little girl, now that Mama's dead. Please, can't you let me see my Papa? Today's Christmas, an' I want to give him a little present.'

"'No,' I replied quickly, 'you'll have to wait until visitors' day,' and with that I started on.

"I had not gone many steps until I felt a hand pulling at my coat, while a pleading, sobbing voice cried, 'Please don't go!'

"I stopped once more, and looked down into the pinched and beseeching face before me. Great tears were brimming in her eyes, while her little chin quivered and trembled.

"'Mister,' she said, 'if your little girl was me, and your girl's mama had died in the poorhouse, an' her Papa was in the prison, an' she had no place to go an' no one to love her, don't you think she would like to see her Papa? If it was Christmas, an' your little girl came to me, if I was governor of the prison, an' asked me to please let her see her Papa an' give him a Christmas present, don't — don't you think I would say, 'Yes'?'"

"By this time a great lump was in my throat, and my eyes were swimming in tears. I answered:

"'Yes, my little girl, I think you would, and you, too, shall see your papa;' and, taking her by the hand, I hurried back to the prison, thinking of my own little fair-haired girl in my own happy home.

"Once in the office I bade her come close to a warm stove, while I sent a guard to bring No. 37 from his cell. In a few minutes he came, wondering what was wanted. As soon as he was ushered into the office he saw the little girl. His face clouded with an angry frown, and in a gruff, savage tone, he snapped out:

“ ‘Nellie, what are you doing here? What do you want? Go back to your mother.’

“ ‘Please, Papa,’ sobbed the little girl, ‘Mamma’s dead. She died two weeks ago in the poorhouse, an’ before she died she told me to take care of little Jimmie, ’cause you loved Jimmie, she said, an’—an’ she told me to tell you she loved you, too; but Papa,’ and here her voice broke in tears, ‘Jimmie died, too, last week, an’ now I am all alone, an’ today’s Christmas, Papa, an’—an’ I thought maybe as you loved Jimmie you would like a little Christmas present from him.’

“ ‘Here she unrolled the little bundle she held in her hand, until she came to a little package of tissue paper, from which she took out a little yellow curl, and put it in her father’s hand, saying as she did so, ‘I cut it from Jimmie’s head, Papa, just before they buried him.’

“ ‘No 37 by this time was sobbing like a child, and so was I. Stooping down, 37 picked up the little girl, and pressed her convulsively to his breast, while his great frame shook with suppressed emotion.

“ ‘The scene was too sacred for me to look upon, so I softly opened the door and left father and daughter alone. At the end of an hour I returned. No 37 sat near the stove, with his little daughter on his knee. He looked at me sheepishly for a moment, and then said, ‘Governor, I haven’t any money,’ then suddenly stripping off his prison jacket, he said, ‘For God’s sake don’t let my little girl go out this bitter day with that thin dress. Let me give her this coat. I’ll do anything; I’ll be a man; please, governor, let me cover her with this coat.’

“ ‘Tears were streaming down the face of the hardened man.

“ ‘No, Galson,’ I said, ‘keep your coat. Your little girl shall not suffer. I’ll take her to my home, and see what my wife can do for her.’

“ ‘God bless you, sir,’ sobbed Galson.

“ ‘I took the little girl to my home. She remained with us for a number of years, growing into a beautiful Christian character. Tom Galson also became a Christian, and never gave us a moment’s trouble.’

A year ago I visited the prison again.

The governor said to me:

“ ‘Kain, would you like to see Tom Galson, whose story I told you a few years ago?’

“ ‘Yes, I would.’

The governor took me through the city, down a quiet street, and stopping before a modest, neat home, rapped at the door. The knock was answered by a bright, cheerful woman, who greeted the governor with utmost cordiality. We stepped in, and then the governor introduced me to Nellie and her father, who because of his thorough reformation had received pardon and was now living an upright, Christian life with his daughter, whose little Christmas gift had broken his heart. — Evangelist Kain.

CELEBRATION OF CHRISTMAS

By Lydia A. Railsback

CHRISTMAS, THE FEAST OF CHRIST’S BIRTH, is observed by the church annually on the twenty-fifth of December. At first it was the custom of the church to celebrate the death of a noted person, rather than his birth. This being the case, the birth of Christ was not celebrated until the fourth century.

To me the birth of a great character means much more than his death, unless the death be that of a martyr to his cause. The birth is the beginning; life holds great possibilities. The death simply ends all so far as this life is concerned, unless it be the death of a martyr by which the cause for which he died is greatly benefited. Without the birth there could be no greatness, for death ordinarily is but the closing of the career.

Most Christian churches celebrate the great festival of Christ’s birth in some way, and practically the entire community in Christian countries, including Jews and non-church going people nominally classed with the Christian population, join in its social observance.

We prize the holly and mistletoe for decorations, not realizing they relate more to paganism than to Christianity. The custom of making Christmas presents is also derived from heathen usage; but both these have become consecrated by usage, and contribute much to the joy of the festival. The sending of Christmas cards is of comparatively recent date, not going back more than fifty years. The Christmas tree has been traced to the Romans, but many nationalities of our own country now use it.

So much for the history of Christmas. Now what does Christmas mean to the human family? It means that the first Christmas Gift is greater than any human can bestow upon another. It means that the world has a Savior if it accepts Him. It means that the love of God has been shed abroad throughout the world. It means that, “God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.”

What more could it mean than this? The One whose birth we celebrate died that we might live. Do we comprehend it?

Why do we celebrate Christmas? Is it to show our great love for the Master, or do we crucify Him anew by our worldly lusts? Do we endeavor in our Christmas activities to bring those about us closer to the Savior, or do we drive them away from Him by our thoughtless actions? Do we teach by precept and by example what we have learned of the blessed Savior?

Let us live the Christmas spirit, not for one short day only, but let us spread abroad throughout the year what Christmas means to all them who love and serve and obey Him.

TRAINING CLASS CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS

IN RETURN FOR HIS GIFT

By C. E. Lapp

CHRISTMAS WILL SOON BE HERE again and many all over the land will be reunited in that spirit of giving that has prevailed for a great many years. Hearts all over the country are made happy because of some small token of remembrance given by a friend. Christmas comes and goes, and more times than not we fail to meditate upon the greatness of the occasion.

Many of the practices we follow at the present time are handed down from idolatrous pagan beliefs that existed hundreds of years ago. The Romans used to call the day, Saturnalia, in worshiping the sun. Feasts and gifts were the order of the day. Farther north some even made sacrifices of men and beasts to Odin and Thor, their gods. The Goths and Saxons called this time of the year the Yuletide, hence the expression of the yule log. In England the Christmas season was spent in dancing, drinking, playing cards and putting on stage plays.

Our present idea is somewhat similar in many ways and is, to a certain extent, a mixture of part of the foregoing. It is different only in the fact that our feasts and gifts are made to the gods of pleasure and self. We think mostly of ourselves, our immediate friends, and the pleasures we hope to enjoy on Christmas day.

The fable of Santa Claus is perpetuated from generation to generation. It is only a myth, yet how much happiness for thousands of children depends upon it. Many children would be very unhappy if their belief in Santa Claus were taken from them, yet they are being taught nothing better.

Let us now turn from the false to the true, from the imitation to the genuine. About two thousand years ago in the little town of Bethlehem there was born a Child. Angels from heaven announced His birth to the shepherds on those old Judean hills as they watched their flocks by night. A very bright star led the way for the wise men as they journeyed from the East. Men bowed the knee to this Babe and gave gifts and worshiped Him.

Why all these differences from that of the birth of any other child? Because it was Christ who was to be the Savior of all mankind. It was Christ who was to redeem from the wages of sin those of the earth who would accept Him.

Christ was God's Gift to the world and truly there has never been so great a gift given before or since from the beginning of time. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." If God gave

His only Son, Christ, to be an atonement for our sins, we should give ourselves wholeheartedly unto Him.

If we give ourselves unto Christ with only one thought in view, to live as He would have us, then can we feel the true spirit of Christmas in our hearts.

CHRISTMAS THANKSGIVING

By Harvey Krogh

AS WE NEAR THE TIME of Christmas we are filled with the spirit of giving gifts to our friends and relatives. I believe we should also be full of the true spirit of thanksgiving as well. For on Christmas, that day on which we commemorate the birth of our Lord, we have most to be thankful for of all the gifts ever given to us.

Did it ever occur to you that it would be terribly lonely on earth if there were no God and you knew that you had nothing to trust in but yourself? The world does not love you, but it loves what you have. Chance would rule and determine whether or not you would live tomorrow. There would be nothing to give justice, nothing to keep right above wrong. But we all know there is a true and merciful God that watches over the works of His hand. Therefore we have all for which to be thankful.

You remember that after the flood God said, "My spirit it will not always strive with man," and from that time He let man go his own way. Indeed He chose out a people, Israel, for himself, but the world was like those which Paul spoke of in Ephesians 2:12: "At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world."

If we did not have Christ, we would have no hope and be without God in the world, for it is through Christ that we may approach the Father. But we have Christ as our Mediator between us and God, who has promised us all things if we will only come to Him and ask. Through Christ the grace of God is greater than our finite minds may comprehend. God's mercy and forgiveness are unbounded, for if the sins that we commit daily were held against us, we would not even be worthy to call on His holy name. Each day, when we ask, we are forgiven for the many little things that we do that are contrary to the will of God.

Therefore let us be exceedingly thankful for Christ, for it is through Him that we may come to our Father for the blessings, and it is His great sacrifice that makes us free from sin and heirs of God's kingdom.

WHY THE CHRISTMAS TREE

By Richard LeCrone

ANY TIMES I HAVE MADE the following query, "I wonder how we came by the custom of decorating a fir tree on Christmas?" I have never received a satisfactory reply until I stumbled upon the answer, quite by accident, while reading the introduction to a book called, "Christmas", written by Robert Haven Schauffler. I found the information so interesting and instructive that I decided to copy a portion of it for the benefit of any who might be interested in the origin of the above mentioned widely practiced custom. The following is copied directly from Mr. Schauffler's book.

"The pagan nations of antiquity always had a tendency to worship the sun, under different names, as the giver of light and life. And their festivals in its honor took place near the winter solstice, the shortest day in the year, when the sun in December begins its upward course, thrilling men with the first distant promise of spring. This holiday was called "Saturnalia" among the Romans and was marked by great merriment and license which extended even to the slaves. There were feasting and gifts and the houses were hung with evergreens.

"A more barbarous form of these rejoicings took place among the rude peoples of the north where great blocks of wood blazed in honor of Odin and Thor, and sacrifices of men and cattle were made to them. Mistletoe was cut then from the sacred oaks with a golden sickle by the Prince of Druids, between whom and the fire worshipers of Persia there was an affinity both in character and customs.

"The ancient Goths and Saxons called this festival Yule, which is preserved to us in the Scottish word for Christmas and also in the name of the Yule Log. The ancient Teutons celebrated the season by decking a fir tree, for they thought of the sun, riding higher and higher in the heavens, as the spreading and blossoming of a great tree. Thus our own Christmas fir was decked as a symbol of the celestial sun tree. The lights, according to Professor Schwartz, represent the flashes of lightning overhead; the golden apples, nuts and balls symbolize the sun, the moon and the stars; while the little animals hung in the branches betoken sacrifices made in gratitude to the sun god.

"As Christianity replaced paganism, the Christians, in the tolerant spirit of their Master, adopted these beautiful old usages, merely changing their spirit."

It is interesting to know that our modern Christmas trees have their beginnings in ancient paganism. It is just another instance where Christianity has chosen the good of this world and rejected the evil. There is just one safe rule for the Christian to remember when he is celebrating the birth of Christ, or any other event. This rule is found in the fourteenth chapter of Romans, the sixth to the ninth verses.

"He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks. For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's. For to this end Christ both died and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living."

OUR STAR

By Gerald L. Cooper

ABOUT TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO there came riding into Jerusalem wise men from the east, saying: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." These wise men had traveled, perhaps, five hundred miles with only that bright star to guide them. They had probably come from different parts of the country and joined together in a common purpose, that of seeking the Lord. What great trust they put in the star that led them over desert wastes and mountains to Jerusalem and went before them to Bethlehem to where He lay! There they presented to Him gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh.

We, too, have a star that is guiding us every day to a reward equally as great as that of the wise men, that of reigning with Christ forever. Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, is our Star. The great example that He set when He was on this earth is one that we could very profitably follow.

You will remember that Christ as early as the age of twelve was in the temple, listening to the doctors and teachers there. After He was baptized He went into the wilderness where He was tempted forty days and nights. After this, feeling sure that He was now ready for His duties, He began to preach.

The rest of His life was filled with miracles and teachings. Then because He was doing His Father's will and teaching the people, and also because He said that He was the King of the Jews, He was persecuted greatly, finally being condemned falsely and crucified. After three days and three nights had passed, He arose and later ascended to heaven where He is interceding for us.

Emerson, the great essayist, said: "Hitch your wagon to a star." If you set your goal very high you will attain greater heights even if you don't reach your goal. We, as Christians, can get a deeper meaning from this. Let us take Christ as our Star and try to live as He did. And although it is impossible to be as perfect as Christ was, we shall be better Christians for the effort.

Let us ever plod onward as the wise men did, following Christ, our Star, to that time when we shall be in glory, reigning with Him in His eternal kingdom.

THE STAR OF BETHLEHEM

By Lucille LeCrone

THE STORY OF THE BIRTH of the Christ Child is one that we never tire of hearing. In fact, it becomes dearer to us and means more to us each time we read it. Each time we read it over carefully and prayerfully some new fact is revealed to us.

In Matthew 2:2 we have these words of the wise men, "We have seen his star in the east, and have come to worship him." Going down to the ninth and tenth verses we read, "And, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."

Much has been said about this star. Some maintain that it was a new star, purposely created to guide the wise men to the Messiah. Some think it was the same light which appeared unto the shepherds and that the wise men were able to see it from where they were. Others think it was an angel clothed with a luminous body in the form of a star. Still others believe it was the Holy Ghost in the form of a star, as it took the form of a dove when it descended upon Christ at His baptism.

All these are only conjectures and guesses. The Bible does not reveal to us just what kind of a star it was and it really doesn't matter. The point we wish to consider is that it led them to Christ.

May we compare ourselves to that star? Christ says, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." No matter whether we are a big star or a little star, a bright star or a dim star, if we let our light shine always before men, some time, someone will see it and thereby will be led to Christ.

The wise men rejoiced when they saw the star. We rejoiced when the light of truth was revealed unto us. Others, too, will rejoice if by our light they come to a knowledge of the truth.

The wise men worshiped Christ and offered Him gifts when they had found Him. As we come to the celebration of this wonderful event, let us not forget our gifts for the King. And may we keep our lights shining so that we, too, may guide someone to Christ.

NO ROOM!

"And still the same old tale is told again:

The world is full of greed and gain and glee;
And has no room for God because of them.

Lord, though my heart be filled with joy and pain,
Grant that it ne'er may find no room for Thee,
Like that benighted inn at Bethlehem!"

POTATO DAY

By Evelyn H. Austin

"TOMORROW IS POTATO DAY. Each child is asked to bring at least one potato to school in aid of the needy of our neighborhood."

The above was the instruction recently given to the pupils of one of Chicago's grade schools.

Think of it! Trying to help Chicago's needy thousands by bringing one potato each!

In they came, toting their potatoes. And when the potatoes were put together, forty bushels was the measure!

This is an example of the vast accumulation possible from small things.

New York City's great Woolworth building is not the accumulation of dimes. Rather, it was made possible by each ten cent sale. The mammoth Wrigley building of Chicago was constructed out of the profits on five cent sales of chewing gum.

Our strength for religious work could be greatly increased if one and all would frequently contribute their littles.

This is the principle that the Treasurer of the National Bible Institution has been working on in soliciting for a mere one dollar per month from the many. Why not be one of many to help him put this across?

Send in your "potato".

THE GIFT OF GOD TO CHRIST

(Continued from page 181)

of the Lord you may be sure the Lord will keep the church. Once one has entered the true church, he has certain duties to perform, and he can expect to receive a certain reward. The way to enter the church is to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ with a true heart, and to keep His commandments. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." John 14:6. By coming through Christ, we give ourselves to God. God in turn gives us to the High Priest, Jesus Christ.

Therefore, once we have entered the true church, we have a certain duty as members. We know what the duty is through the Holy Spirit. Whatever our duty is, we are a part of the glorious body of Christ. We are all one body. Jesus Christ is our Lord and Master. He has willed that "by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13:35.

We give gifts to others that they may rejoice. If we are the gift to Christ from God, we ought to so do and act that He may rejoice in us. Therefore, let each of us so do his work that the church will move in harmony to do the service of the Lord. Let us be one in purpose and in action that Jesus Christ our Lord and Master may rejoice in us, His gift.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"UNTO US A CHILD IS BORN; UNTO US A SON IS GIVEN." — ISAIAH 9:6.

THE RED AND GREEN

SOME NIGHTS AGO, I stood on the corner of West Boulevard and Venice gazing up at one of the phenomena familiar to the student of astronomy. Two stars there were, standing alone in the sky at an inconceivable distance; one red, and the other, much the fainter, green. As I watched, the green star slowly faded from sight until, to the casual glance, the red hung there alone in solitary splendor. A minute passed, and a second and almost instantaneous transformation took place; the red star disappeared totally and permanently, while the green blazed forth once more in all its lonely glory.

When afterwards considering this peculiarity of light and vision, I remembered the age-old symbolism attached to the two colors — green representative of purity, red indicative of worldliness — and I thought then of how green had been brought into the world by the birth of the Christ and of how red has battled that green and has almost overcome it. Then came the triumph of the green, and I thought of how the Christ will triumph over sin upon His return to a red-ruled earth and of how commercialized selfishness and pride will be defeated by altruism and by humility. Then will the green be victorious for eternity, the red being blotted out never to be seen again.

At present, our Christmas is but a descendant of the ancient heathen customs. It is used to gain, not to give; for giving is granting something unto someone who one knows can return nothing but gratitude. Glibly do our magazine writers speak of our three billion dollar Christmas, yet how much of that vast sum goes to release the poverty-stricken from their poverty; how much to help the unhappy to find happiness? The street decorations of which we are so proud, the window ornaments of huge department stores, the gifts we buy for those richer than ourselves — these are but a hollow mockery of that which we would commemorate.

It is for us, then, to make of Christmas in the future a time of giving, not of exchange; and to remember as we do so those matchless words of the Christ, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Arlen Marsh.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

TEEMING THOUSANDS jostle one another in the streets; happy, animated faces are seen everywhere; strangers speak good-naturedly and there is a general atmosphere of friendship and good will. Larders are stocked, preparatory to feasting. Ask the reason for the celebration, the happiness and friendliness and you will be told, "It is the Christmas spirit."

What is this spirit of Christmas? Christmas is a day set aside to commemorate the birth of the Christ-child, the One who came into the world to lift it from the depth of sin and sorrow and death to which it had sunk.

Is it because they are expressing their gratitude to the Father for the gift of His Son that people honor this season? Is it to thank the Son for the beauty which His life manifested? No! Many deny the existence of a Father above and speak of His Son as a mere man. They celebrate Christmas because others do. It is a pleasing custom.

However, the most outstanding characteristic of Christ's life has been preserved in the holiday atmosphere today. His entire life was spent in giving to others. He gave food and drink, sight, hearing and health, solace and cheer, strength, encouragement and peace. He gave everything and asked for nothing. His greatest gift was that of life to mankind, at the price of His own on the cross.

We celebrate His birthday in giving. Our paltry gifts to our friends look cheap in comparison to those of Christ. And yet, because we give, there comes that happiness that we see at no other time of the year, for it is only through bestowing good things on others that we receive true happiness. Let us always remember that "the gift without the giver is bare," and give ourselves with our gifts, thus increasing their value immeasurably.

Could we but live the principle of real self-sacrifice, the whole year, and not just a few short weeks, would be filled with good will and happiness.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 6; Ohio, 3; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 2; California, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JOY TO THE WORLD

ZACHARIAS WAS AN OLD man. All his life he and his wife, Elisabeth, a cousin of Mary, the mother of Jesus, had been wishing for a child.

One day while Zacharias was performing his priestly duties in the temple, an angel appeared to him, near the altar. He told him that soon he would have a baby boy, and that he should call his name John.

What wonderful news to Zacharias! However, he doubted a little the word of the messenger of the Lord; and, therefore, the angel said that he should be dumb until all these things were fulfilled. With these words the angel vanished.

When Zacharias finished with his work he went out to speak to the people. To his surprise he could not talk. From his appearance the people knew he had seen a vision.

In time the baby boy was born, and all the relatives and neighbors came to name him. Some wanted to call him Zacharias, but Elisabeth said his name should be John. After a short argument, they decided to ask Zacharias. He made signs for them to bring writing material, and he wrote upon the tablet that he should be called John.

Immediately Zacharias could speak and began praising God. People came from all around to hear the words of God which were spoken by Zacharias. Many prophecies were concerning the birth of Jesus and His work, and of John's purpose on earth.

John came to prepare the way for Jesus.

William Hunt.

Are We preparing the way for the second coming of Jesus?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Find other stories in the Bible where angels appeared to men.
2. Read of John's work.
3. Read how he baptized Jesus.
4. Learn Luke 1:16.
5. Copy: John, the Baptist—son of Zacharias and Elisabeth— forerunner of Jesus.

"WHEN YOU LISTEN to the bells at Christmas time it may interest you to know that the largest bell in the world is the 'Great Paul' bell in St. Paul's Cathedral in England. It was cast in 1881 and weighs eight and one-half tons. It is nearly nine feet tall and its tone is E-flat."

WELCOME THE NEW YEAR

Fling wide the doors, the New Year comes!
Make him as welcome as you may.
For he, in turn, will bring bright hours,
And many a happy, joyous day.

Let us resolve to honor him
By being kindly, staunch and true,
And through him honor God above
In everything that we may do.

— Harvey Peake.

FROM THE CARPENTER'S SHOP

IN THE DAYS of old Jerusalem there was a boy of twelve who realized that he had reached the age when he must think for himself, and make his own decisions. With no false ideas of independence, he went back to his home and workshop, and did the things his parents thought best, but he began that day to live his own life and to make plans for helping the world. He was not ambitious to be rich or famous. He would not engage in brawls, but he hated evil, cruelty, injustice, and hypocrisy.

When he grew to manhood, he healed sick people, comforted the sorrowful, pitied those who did wrong, divided his food with the hungry, and made friends with children. He loved the sea and boats, the hills and fields, flowers and birds. He was brave in danger, patient when persecuted, and heroic in temptation. He was pure in heart, and so loving and unselfish that millions of people who never saw him loved him, and hundreds laid down their lives for him.

He preached short sermons, but never wrote a book. You could easily commit to memory all his recorded words. He died penniless, and yet we celebrate his birthday, which we call Christmas, throughout the world. We date our letters from the year he was born; our laws are founded on his teachings; we offer in our Congress and Parliaments prayers in his name.

The history of his life is printed in more than five hundred languages. Kings and emperors and presidents and judges, statesmen and scholars, peasants and slaves, declare this to be the greatest and best of all books.

Thousands of magnificent buildings have been erected to his honor—abbeys, cathedrals, and churches. Our greater colleges were dedicated to this poor boy who never went to college, never left his own little country, and died when he was thirty-three years old—all because he was perfect in the sight of God, his Father.

To this wonderful, perfect boy and man, and the work he began, you and I should dedicate our lives. — Sunshine.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON I. — January 4, 1931

THE BIRTH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

Luke 1

Devotional Reading: Luke 1:68-79

GOLDEN TEXT

And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways. — Luke 1:76.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Herald of the Coming King.

Basic Truth. "And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the Highest: for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways." — Luke 1:76.

Outline. I. John the Forerunner. II. Preparing the Way of the Lord.

I. John the Forerunner. One of the most significant characters in all history is John the Baptist. He was definitely marked out by God and chosen for his great work even prior to his birth. In this he was like the great Jeremiah (1:4-5). He was a child of promise, as Isaac was, and also like Isaac, his coming into the world was a miracle, he being born when his parents were very old. In character he was like the fiery Elijah, so much so that many people actually believed that he was Elijah, and made it necessary for him to issue a denial of the rumor. The stern, wild, solitary life he led, the passion he had for righteousness, his dramatic and sudden appearance, his bitter denunciation of wickedness, and especially in royalty, all bear striking resemblance to Elijah.

But in work and mission itself he stands alone and apart from all prophets before and since, for his it was to be the link between the Old Testament and the New, the announcer of the impending transition to a new day, the herald who goes before the face of the King. He was the last of the prophets of the Old Covenant, and stands at the threshold of the New to introduce the world to its long promised Messiah. All the prophets since the world began had spoken of the coming Redeemer, had described in glowing terms His work and the success that would crown it: John announces His arrival! What feelings must have surged within his breast on that historic day when he stood on the bank of the Jordan watching the approach of the Savior and made that pronouncement for which the ages had waited, "Behold, the lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world!"

He was the "voice of one crying in the wilderness and saying, Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Our Lord speaks of himself as a Sower of seed; John was the plowman who prepared His ground. He turned the "heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to the fathers", arousing the people from their sin-filled lives and awaking the consciousness of the nation to their need of the coming Savior. The mighty conversion which attended his preaching turned the minds and hearts of Israel toward God, and made they ready to receive their Messiah when He should presently appear.

II. Preparing the Way of the Lord. What more noble work could be conceived than that which was John's, preparing the way of the Lord? Yet in a peculiar sense followers of the Christ may also be His forerunners. We can have in some degree the honor that came to John. For we can break the ground for the sowing of the gospel seed even though we cannot do all the actual sowing. We can soften the hearts of men toward God and His truth by the noble example of our lives, by dealing justly and kindly with our fellows and exemplifying the teachings of Christ. In all our contacts with men we may pave the way for the Master's approach to them, and for their acceptance of Him. And if we fail to do this we have missed the highest privilege that life can give to mortal man.

There is still another sense in which we may be literally heralds of the King, as was John. If we believe He is soon to come again, then it is ours to go before Him to announce His second coming to the world, as John did at His first coming. Every believer may be an Elijah to herald the Lord's return.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Character and Mission of John.

John the Baptist (the Baptizer) was a prophet and of him, Jesus said, there was no greater. He was to prepare the way of the Lord. In his work he was fearless and his life was consecrated to the task he was set to do. We judge his message was very forceful, for the Scriptures say, "There went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins." Matt. 3:5.

Although he had a noble and exalted work to do, he was humble and estimated himself as only a "voice"; "the voice of one crying in the wilderness"; and he said there was One coming after him who was mightier than he and whose glory would increase while his decreased.

His message was, "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." "Reform! because the Royal Majesty of the heavens has appeared." — Diag. — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Preparing the Way for Jesus.

The world never needed a Savior more than it did when Jesus was born. Herod, the Great, who ruled Palestine at that time, was among the most wicked of Roman governors. So jealous was he of his power that he even had two of his own sons strangled for fear they might take the throne from him. The Roman world lived a life of luxury and wickedness and to provide for their excesses, they robbed and oppressed the poor of Judea and other provinces. No wonder the Jews looked longingly toward the coming of a Messiah!

It was at such a time as this that an angel appeared to Zacharias, as he was performing his priestly duties in the temple, and told him that he was to have a son who should "make ready a people prepared for the Lord." Luke 1:17. Burdened as they were by wicked rulers, it must have been joyful news to them that the Messiah was really soon to come. But they needed some one to prepare their hearts and minds to receive Him, someone to lift from them the weight of despair that had settled down over them, and point them to the better day. John, the Baptist, was chosen for this express purpose. Wonderful opportunity and great responsibility were his!

How may we prepare the way for Jesus?
— M. G.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A Mission: John's mission was to "prepare the way of the Lord." God had outlined this work. It was a divine mission.

God

- called John;
- prepared him;
- gave him a message;
- gave him strength to deliver it;
- never left nor forsook him.

God's abiding presence with John is evidence of His closeness to all His messengers. Was John a special messenger or was he one of many? Does God have messengers today? If so, what are their qualifications? To what extent does God back them up with His power?

Discuss whether or not social welfare work, such as assisting the poor and needy, and aiding in juvenile delinquency and similar activities can be considered work to which God calls an individual. It is doubtful if a church can present a well-balanced labor, if it neglects the social welfare of the people living within the area of its activity. Truth is vital, but labor and action are essential.

If your class wants a mission which the heavenly Father will be pleased to bless, interest yourselves in some delinquent boy or girl, help some wayward person or assist a dependent or needy one. — C. E. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

The workers at headquarters of the National Bible Institution send greetings at this Christmas season to the brothers and sisters over the country who are unitedly and faithfully serving the One whose birth we celebrate.

FROM HERE AND THERE

Bro. and Sr. E. A. Campbell, of Hammond, Louisiana, are the proud parents of a fine baby boy, born December first. He was given the name of E. A. Junior. Congratulations!

Bro. and Sr. H. S. Lasher, who have been in northern Michigan and New York since last spring, are now on their homeward journey, and may be addressed at Deerfield, Florida. We pray God's guidance over them on their way home.

Word has been received that Bro. Victor Smith of Bristol, Indiana, has been very seriously ill for the past two months. He is just beginning to sit up in a chair and receive a few visitors. We trust that he will gain in strength each day.

James Rogers, who is a student at the University of Arizona, arrived home December 21 to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rogers, at Oregon, Illinois. He assisted with the music at the Sunday School Christmas program, December 22.

Ernest M. Gesin, who is also a student at Tucson, arrived home December 22, and will spend the holidays with his wife, who is night supervisor at the Dixon Hospital, and his parents and sisters at Oregon, Illinois.

Members of the Training Class left December 19 to spend Christmas at various places. Bro. C. E. Lapp went with Sr. Cooper and son and daughters to Ripley, Illinois. Bro. Cecil Smead journeyed with Harvey Krogh and Richard and Lucille LeCrone to spend Christmas in Nebraska.

John Denchfield left for his home at St. Cloud, Minnesota, December 16. We expect Bro. Lapp will speak for the Ripley folks several times during his stay with them. The Nebraska young folks no doubt will also speak at their home churches.

The church at Oregon, Illinois, were very glad to have their pastor, Bro. Austin, with them again last Sunday for the first time since his recent illness of six weeks' duration.

Bro. R. H. Judd sends Christmas greetings and his gratitude to the many brothers and sisters who have sent him words of cheer during convalescence from his recent accident.

During the time that Bro. Austin has had to be away from the office because of his recent illness, I have received so many letters from brothers and sisters all over the country containing kindly words of appreciation and helpfulness. You cannot imagine how much these messages have meant to me, giving encouragement and strength. Just a few words from one here and another there, but revealing a bond of fellowship uniting us all in one family. Since it is not possible to answer all of these personally, I take this means of saying, "Thank you," and I trust you will find just such joy and strength coming back to you.

Mary A. Gesin.

FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Skeels of 1216 East-ern Ave., S. E., Grand Rapids, Michigan, will pass the fiftieth milestone in their wedded life on Thursday, December 25. They were both born in Jamestown, Michigan, seventy-one years ago, but have resided in Grand Rapids the past thirty-five years. Both enjoy excellent health. Mrs. Skeels is the only member of a family of nine children that has lived to celebrate her and her husband's "Golden Wedding Day." Thursday afternoon will be "open house" for all their friends and relatives. In the evening a social gathering will be held for the pastor and members of the South Lawn Park Church of God, also including members of the Dorcas Society.

Dear Christmas Readers: The following are a few lines copied from the Christian Herald:

"I know a woman who has ever so little money. She works very hard just to live. She has one small, narrow room in a small, narrow house on a dim city street. But always at Christmas time she sends beautiful postal cards to her friends—friends who are oddly assorted. For some of the woman's friends are society folk; some are waitresses in cheap restaurants; some janitors and some great business executives.

"On these Christmas cards she writes always the same message, the same message to each friend. She writes—"I love you." She does more than write the words. She actually means them.

"This woman holds the key to the real treasure house of Christmas. For she has discovered that love is the greatest Christmas gift of all.

"Oh, if you can truly write to your friends that you love them on Christmas, and that you are wishing them well, you will be giving them something finer than jewels or silken garments. You will be giving them something more precious than anything that can be bought in any shop! You will be giving them something that is a definite reflection of the glory that was born in a manger—of the love that Christ held in His Baby soul even on that very first Christmas day!"

The thought is that it is not necessary to give expensive Christmas gifts. So often the real thought of Christmas is lost. Give something inexpensive or a Christmas card, with the Christmas spirit.

Jesus is our great Gift, a Gift of love. When we give, we should always keep this in mind. Jesus is God's great Gift of love to mankind that through Him we may have salvation. Praise His name!

Your sister in His name,

Jessie M. Wilson.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Lucy B. Groat; Mrs. James Kessler; Vivian Magaw; Mrs. Louis H. Ralston; C. N. Adams; Flora E. Hogue; Mrs. A. P. Leamon; D. B. Jackson; Eva H. M. Fletcher; Mrs. Helen Schafer; G. Bottolfs; I. M. Abbott; Lois Hunt; Mrs. T. J. Ellis; David F. Beck; Alta King; S. T. Shirley; Elsie Bradley; Mrs. Lydia A. Mathes; James Moore; W. A. Wilson; Leroy Hiatt; Mrs. Nellie Ling; J. H. Williams; E. L. McDaniel; Mrs. Wm. Laning; D. F. Prime.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

December 14 was another record breaker for us, the Sunday School secretary reporting 262, which is eleven more than our previous high. If we can raise the funds to build our new church next summer, we predict a Sunday School of 500 by Christmas one year hence. And these hundreds of eager children and young people flock there with open hearts and minds to learn of Jesus and His love, and the hope of the coming kingdom.

At this writing all efforts are being expended on the Christmas program for Tuesday night, December 23, and the committees are working hard to present the true Christmas thought in spite of cramped quarters.

The Grand Rapids church is extending heartfelt Christmas greetings to the brotherhood at large, with an earnest prayer that the incoming year may be one in which we can all serve more effectively than ever before.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

OREGON

Bro. A. W. Darby, of Portland, held meetings at Corvallis over the week-end. He was accompanied by Sisters Darby and Cramer.

Bro. R. L. Morgan and family of Cloverdale spent Thanksgiving with relatives at Corvallis.

Miss Alice Wilson of Los Angeles, California, spent a week visiting her parents, Bro. and Sr. J. C. Wilson, and other relatives at Corvallis and Lebanon, Oregon. On November 30, Miss Wilson became the bride of Mr. Eash at Chicago, Illinois.

Carl Barber, son of Sr. Edith Barber, underwent a minor operation recently. He is getting along very well.

The quarterly meeting of the Northwestern Conference will be held January 3 and 4, 1931, at Corvallis, Oregon. Plans are being made for a lively meeting. Everybody welcome.

Bro. H. B. Hathaway is spending several weeks with his daughter at Klamath Falls.

Sr. Julia A. Barber of Conway, Kansas, is a patient at the McPherson Hospital. Miss Barber is eighty-one years of age.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

Receipts.—The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

CHRISTMAS MEDITATIONS

THE BIRTH AND WORK OF THE MESSIAH

By Rufus A. Curtis

AS THE USUAL FESTIVAL, kept as a memorial of the birth of Christ is here, our minds take a retrospective view of the little town of Bethlehem, and the miraculous events that transpired there nineteen centuries ago, when a Savior came to earth's suffering children.

What surges of gladness pulsate through our being as we study the angel's message on that memorable occasion! "Fear not; for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Luke 2:10, 11; Acts 4:12; John 4:14.

His mission was "to seek and to save that which was lost." Luke 19:10. His compassion embraced the multitude, "because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd." Matt. 9:36.

When we contemplate our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, and realize that He voluntarily laid down His life for us, while we were yet sinners, should we not reciprocate His love, with all the ardor of our being, seeing "that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again"? Heb. 13:20, 21; John 10:15-18; 1 John 4:19; 2 Cor. 5:14, 15.

Other things of world-wide importance besides the nativity of Christ Jesus, are closely linked to the little town of Bethlehem, even the royal rights of the virgin-born Emmanuel, prophesied of by Isaiah, as the "child" born, and "son" given, upon whose shoulders the theocratic kingdom of the world to come should rest. Matt. 1:23; Luke 1:31-33; Heb. 2:5; Psa. 2:1-8; 72:8-11; 88:34-37; Isa. 9:6 and 7.

"But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel: whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." Micah 5:2; Matt. 19:27-29; Luke 1:32, 33.

Of all the gifts sent unto men, for the perfecting of the saints, none can compare with the gift of God's "only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Eph. 4:8, 11-16; John 3:14 to 16.

God's eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord, can never be consummated until Jesus shall "appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Eph. 3:11; Gen. 1:27, 28; Isa. 45:18; Prov. 2:21, 22; 10:30; 11:31; Isa. 60:21; Heb. 9:28. The second advent is complementary to the first. The one is essential to the other.

With kaleidoscopic swiftness, the sure word of prophecy points from the Child wrapped in swaddling clothes, and born in a manger, to the Lord of hosts who "shall reign in mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously." Psa. 2:1-9; Isa. 55:8-11; 2:3, 4; 24:23; Luke 2:12; 2 Peter 1:19-21. He will not come "as a lamb to the slaughter," but as "King of kings, and Lord of lords." Isa. 53:7; Rev. 19:16.

We are on the threshold of momentous events. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand, let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armour of light." Rom. 13:11, 12.

Across the receding centuries of waiting, watching, and praying for the return of the absent Nobleman, He has graciously sent us this hope-inspiring message: "I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you." "I will come again." 1 Thess. 1:10; Mark 13:32-37; Rev. 22:20; Luke 19:15; John 14:3, 18.

"A TOKEN OF CHRIST'S humility was the choice of lowly shepherds to receive the announcement of His birth rather than the great of earth. They were simple folk, busy folk, thoughtful folk. God gives His message to such even today."

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

By F. A. Stilson

"JOY TO THE WORLD" is being caroled all over the land at this season of the year and the spirit of Christmas permeates the whole atmosphere of our commercial, social and religious life. Little children are wearing a brighter smile than usual as the star of hope beams brightly on their little faces, which in turn reflect the Christmas spirit to all the world. Hope is begotten anew within the bosom of everyone in whom dwells the love of those made dear by the ties of blood and bonds of friendship.

It is the great festive season and rich and poor alike live in the joyous hope of added dainties to the more common necessities of life. So surely and firmly does the spirit of the season take hold of the lives of persons that it is not uncommon to learn of crimes that have been committed for the sole purpose of bringing Christmas joy to some one held dear.

But to the vast majority it is "X mas" and not "Christmas"; for we find its influence as surely reaching Jew and non-Christian as well as professed Christians. Therefore, to such it is a spirit of X-mas in which the Christ is crowded out just as He was crowded out of the inn on the day of His birth.

To the believer, Christ is in the foreground of the picture. And as on that first Christmas morning when the curtain of heaven was drawn a little way, and "a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men", so those who keep this season in a way which shall please our heavenly Father, will be found praising and glorifying God for the precious Gift of His Son, the Christ, our Savior.

THE SONG AND THE STAR

Upon a hill, its ancient site,
The town of Bethlehem stands,
Its quaint and flat-roofed homes look out,
O'er distant pasture lands.
There shepherds lead their flocks by day,
And watch them through the night;
But to their vision never comes,
An angel pure and bright.

Men hear no more the angel's song,
They heard at Jesus' birth;
But those sweet words of peace and joy,
Have swept around the earth;
And we look from this world of strife,
To a coming age of peace,
When man with man shall not contend,
And the din of war shall cease.

We have no need of Bethlehem's star,
To guide us to the Lord,
For we can see Him in the light,
Of God's revealing Word.
The glorious stars shine evermore,
And by the light of them,
Wise men today may travel o'er,
The road to Bethlehem.

That little town is dear to all,
But none need journey there
To find the Lord; for those who seek
Can find Him anywhere.
Now is the time to come to Him,
And from sin's ways to part;
Prepare a throne where He may reign
Within your loving heart.

Your Christmas will be blessed then,
A day of joy and cheer,
And hope and peace will go with you,
Through every passing year.
Live for the Lord who gave His life,
That you might ransomed be,
Tell others of His wondrous love
For lost humanity.

— Alice B. Curtis.

THE LIGHT THAT IT SHED

There, in the solemn hush of night,
Hermon in snowy splendor towered;
And Hebron gladdened in the light
Which on her russet brow was showered.

Low coursing, in the dark blue sky,
A new-born orb resplendent shone;
The light of Jove was paled thereby,
And Venus into shade was thrown.

Not as some blazing meteor flies,
But see! majestically slow,
It sails along the Orient sky,
And gives the night a morning's glow!

The travelers on the pathless hills
With bold surmise the star survey;
And cry, while joy each bosom thrills,
"It leads the way! It leads the way!"

While thus their trust in heaven they proved,
Unseen, bright angels o'er them bent,
The morning stars in music moved,
And that sphered light before them went!

Above the Syrian plains it passed,
And rained upon the land a flood
Of silvery radiance, till at last
O'er Bethlehem's white-robed slopes it stood.

The Magi — with their gifts of gold,
And frankincense and myrrh — then sought
The heavenly Babe, by bards of old
Forespoke in strains from seraphs caught!

They found Him in a manger laid;
They knelt before Him, and adored;
The regal look His brow displayed
Told plainly here was Christ the Lord!

— W. B. Haseltine.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 30, 1930

NUMBER 13

The New Year

The new year is fast approaching,
With a future that's unknown;
We have trusted in our Savior
Through the years as they have flown.
Should it be a year of gladness,
Of rejoicing, and of gain,
Or a year that brings us testing,
Disappointment and of pain;
We will never fail to trust Him
For our pathway that's unseen,
For He'll lead us through the shadows,
Into pastures that are green.

We are waiting for the morning
That will bring earth's needed King;
For this night so filled with sorrow,
To an end, He then will bring.
While we wait, He bears our burdens,
And our grief He gladly shares,
For His wathful eye is on us,
For He loves us, and He cares.
Soon His kingdom He'll establish,
That creation's groans may cease,
He'll make an end of sin and suffering,
And bring in everlasting peace.

— Mrs. H. H. Kent.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." — Philippians 3:13, 14.

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-ONE

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-ONE YEARS from the birth of Christ — His first advent; one year nearer His return — His second advent!

How the heart of the one who loves the Savior thrills at the thought of His coming again. Were it not for the hope He left with us that He would come again, only half the joy would be found in the story of the Savior's life.

The record of His birth, His ministry of healing and forgiveness among the sick and the sinful of old Judea is indeed a wonderful reality, and one that touches the heart strings of even the most hardened. But it would be difficult to apply the beauty and the wonder of it to ourselves did we not know in our inmost beings that soon He will return.

Soon He will return and dispense that healing and that forgiveness to all who seek it. Not only the few who came to Him, or sent word for Him to come to them, as in days of old, will feel His touch of blessing. But all over the world, those who stand in need, who realize their own inability to redeem themselves from the power of sin, will receive cleansing from His gracious hand.

Then shall the earth be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Wondrous day for all! Even as the prophets of old waited patiently and hopefully for His first coming, proclaiming it to those about them, let us eagerly and joyfully await His second coming, spreading the glad tidings to needy humanity today.

"So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Hebrews 9:28. Who knows but that the year nineteen hundred and thirty-one may be the year of His return? Let us be among those who "look for him". — M. G.

TAKING STOCK

THE END OF ANOTHER YEAR is here. Another year has come and gone and its record has been set. We cannot change a single event; nor can we alter one of its incidents.

The year, with all of its decisions, its mistakes, its successes and failures is rolled up, as it were, in a scroll and sealed with an unseen hand.

We cannot retrace our steps and erase any one of the incidents of the past year, but there is one thing that we can do. And that is, we can profit by those things which now, as we look back on them, we wish had been different.

As we sit and meditate, retrospectively viewing the events of the past twelve months, we must confess there are many, very many dark spots in their history, with only too few high lights. How we wish there were more of the bright ones, and not so many of the dark; less of those of which we are ashamed and more of those which bring honor to the name, Christian.

Paul, whose life was filled with activity of the most varied character, and who called himself chief of sinners, though he realized fully the depth of his weakness, yet had the courage to look forward, "forgetting those things which are behind." And he gives us courage to "come boldly unto the throne of grace," and receive forgiveness from our understanding High Priest, who is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities."

At the portal of this spotless New Year, let us go forward not trusting in our own ability to conquer our evil tendencies and to do that which is upright. But let us acknowledge, with Paul, that we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us. Then will we be able at the end of the year to look back and discover more spiritual growth, more Christian advancement than in the year just closed.

— M. G.

THE JOY OF LIFE

"The joy of life is living it and doing things of worth,
In making bright and fruitful all the barren spots of earth,
In facing odds and mastering them and rising from defeat,
And making true what once was false, and what was bitter, sweet.
For only he knows perfect joy whose little bit of soil
Is richer ground than what it was when he began to toil."

THE FIELD IS THE WORLD

OFTEN MEN MAKE PROMISES with no intention whatever of fulfilling them, or well knowing they will not be able to do so owing to circumstances. Politicians are numerous who will make any sort of promise for the sake of catching votes. Conscientious persons are usually chary of making promises, owing to the uncertainties of life.

But when we come to the promises of God we are on different ground. No promise is made that He cannot fulfill, and none are given unless He purposes to fulfill them and will fulfill them. No matter how many thousands of years ago the promise was given, it is certain of fulfillment. Thousand of years elapsed between the promise of Genesis 3:15 and the coming of the promised One who should bruise the serpent's head; but, like stars in a dark sky, the long interval was punctuated with other promises encouraging to faith, and God's people grasped those promises and believed them and rejoiced in hope. John 8:56 and Hebrews 11:10, 27, 39.

A promise given to Noah just after the flood comes to mind now as we look over the field which is the world. A flood had covered the earth and blotted out "the world that then was." 2 Peter 3:6. But Noah and his family had been saved in the ark, and on the subsidence of the flood waters they again took up their residence upon the earth. Thus a new "world" or "order of things," began and the Lord gave certain assurances or promises regarding the future. He set His bow in the clouds, so that every time men see the rainbow they will be reminded of His promise; and (speaking after the manner of men) God said He would be reminded of it also — "And I will remember my covenant, which is between you and me and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh." Genesis 9:8-17. This promise God has kept up to the present, and we have not the slightest doubt that it will be kept to all eternity.

THE FLOOD AN ESTABLISHED FACT

Before the flood many ridiculed the idea. Since the flood many evidences are to be seen that it actually occurred, such as the finding of animals preserved in Arctic ice, with green food still in their mouths, showing they had been overtaken by some cataclysm. Our Lord vouched for the flood, and as the Son of God His word should be sufficient to establish it as an actual occurrence as described in Genesis. Nevertheless, it is fashionable today to adopt a skeptical mien and dismiss it as an invention of the ancients. They would have us believe that God never sent a flood, and that His promise, sealed as it was by the rainbow, is only another "myth."

As if in answer to the skeptics, the Lord recently made available another line of evidence to justify the faith of His children in the biblical account. Excavators at Ur of the Chaldees found underneath the ruins of the city remains of human bodies. Beneath that layer of earth they came to a stratum of waterborne clay eight feet thick which no human hand could have placed there. Underneath the eight feet of clay were found more human remains.

In the opinion of the archaeologists no more convincing evidence of the great flood described in Genesis could reasonably be asked for. The Lord has, as it were, made earth and clay to cry out when men refused to hear the voice of His Word.

SEED TIME AND HARVEST

In connection with the promise that there should never again be such a flood of waters, God gave assurance to Noah and to all men that life on the earth would continue. For its continuance regular succession of the seasons would be required, with seed time and harvest for the production of the necessary grains and other foodstuffs for the support of the population which would descend from Noah and his sons. God's plan was not abandoned because of the flood. His purpose still was that the earth should be filled with human beings. Certainly up to the present there has been no failure in the succession of the seasons, the regular service of sun, moon, and stars, with rain and other provision for seasonal crops. The fact that we can take Genesis 8:22 as a definite promise for all time is comforting in this day when every now and again some scientist gives out that the world's food supply is inadequate and that presently all mankind will die of starvation.

The Lord never guaranteed a splendid crop wherever and whenever sown. There was a famine in Canaan, the promised land, while Jacob in faith still wandered up and down it. But there was "corn in Egypt," sufficient to supply the wants of all. It was merely a matter of going after it. It was a question not so much of food as of transportation. Genesis 41:53-57; 42:1-3, 25, 26; 43:1, 2; 44:1.

A high Chinese official, with a western education and modern outlook, recently expressed the view that the recurring famines in China were due not so much to crop failures (the principal crop being rice) as to primitive methods of transportation, mostly man power. These were good enough when the population was small, but entirely inadequate to present requirements. When relief was provided in a recent famine to succor all the starving, many died while food was on the way. An ideal of the newer China is a country checkered with railways fed by roads and no more famine.

Wars often have an aftermath of famine due to failure to plant crops. This was the cause of famine in Russia a few years ago. But there was an abundant supply of wheat in the world, and though some died before they could be reached, thousands were saved by relief agencies.

Drought is beneficial to the soil, especially where cropping has been continuous. It destroys pests and rests the ground. The whole fault is with man in not providing against the dry cycles to be expected, and allowing himself to depend too much on one line of produce. Imperfect weather conditions are undoubtedly part of the curse under which the whole creation groans, and when drought and flood come there is bound to be distress.

YET WILL WE NOT FEAR

Men's hearts failing them for fear is one of the "signs"
(Continued on page 199)

THE NEW COMMANDMENT

"A new commandment I give unto you,"
Says Jesus, our Master and Lord,
"That ye love one another, as I have loved you,
In thought, in deed, and in word."
"As I have loved you"! O companions of faith,
Is it hard the dear Christ to obey?
When the love in His life and the love in His death
So brightens for us the rough way?
Is it hard that we love through temptation and wrong
The "little ones" bound to our side,
So that by our service and tenderest care,
They may in the Father abide?
He loved His disciples, O depth of that love,
That the lost with His precious blood bought,
And back from the mountains and pitiless rain,
The poor, straying wanderers brought.
He loved them in blessing, and loved in reproof,
With words of sweet comfort and prayer;
By "clothing", by healing, by teaching the things
That He from the Father did bear.
He loved by forgiving, and so should we love,
Lest we be o'ertaken and fall,
And no hand in our weakness be reached us to save
Though loud in our anguish we call.
Let us never forget, "As I have loved you";
For soon the dear Master will come,
To choose for himself who have heeded His words,
And to take them with Him to His home!

— S. Roxana Wince.

THE BOOK OF ACTS

By Lyman Booth

(Continued from a previous issue)

WE MUST NOT EXPECT a full and complete history of the labors and successes of the apostles and primitive evangelists; a specimen alone is given for our consideration. After the pouring out of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost and the first success which followed the labors of the apostles, they met with much suffering. Little is recorded in the Scriptures concerning most of them. Indeed, the names of some are not mentioned after the first chapter, yet we may reasonably believe that they labored and suffered as the others did, though most of the ancient records and traditions concerning them are so mixed with fiction as not to be entitled to much credit.

Some other laborers were likewise noted, as Stephen, the first martyr, Philip, the evangelist, Barnabas, Silas and others. The conversion of Saul, the persecutor, with his subsequent labors, sufferings, and magnificent triumphs, as the apostle of the Gentiles, occupies a large portion of the New Testament, while the mention of the other apostles is brief. Peter, the apostle of the circumcision, was chosen to instruct Cornelius and his friends, who were the firstfruits from among the Gentiles. The martyrdom of James, the brother of John, is very briefly related.

The labors of Paul are recorded in a very copious manner though the events of several years are condensed into two or three chapters. After Luke, the historian, joined the apostle and became his most faithful companion, he is somewhat more circumstantial, yet the epistles of Paul prove that his labors, persecutions and successes, were vastly greater, and the instructions he gave his converts far more particular, than a cursory reading of this history would lead one to suppose. At the same time, the remarkable coincidence is of such a nature as never could have taken place if both the history and the epistles had not been genuine.

This book contains a specimen of true believers, as illustrating genuine Christianity in its nature and effects. And it should be carefully noted that in every age all those multitudes who are commonly called Christians, yet show no resemblance to this specimen, will be driven away as chaff at the final and decisive day.

There are some special features worthy of note. It has been called the "Book of Origins." It gives the first sketch of the formation and spread of the Christian church. It tells of the first apostolic miracle, the first apostolic sermon, the rise of ecclesiastical organization, the first persecution, the first martyr, the first Gentile convert, the first European church.

Its contents can be appropriately divided into first, the acts of Peter (chapter 1 to 13:3), and second, the acts of Paul (13:4 to 25). In the acts of Peter we find related the birth of the Christian church and its spread to Samaria, comprising first, the foundation and progress of the church in Jerusalem and Judea (1:8) and second, the first persecution and extension to Samaria, and also to the first Gentile, Cornelius (8:1 to 9:18). Third, we find the second persecution and the foundation of the church at Antioch (11:19 and 13:3).

The Acts of Paul tells of the extension of the church to the Gentiles, Paul's call and first journey (13:4 and 15:5); second, the council of Jerusalem, fixing terms of admission (15); third, Paul's second journey (13:36 and 18:22); fourth, third journey of Paul (18:23 and 21:17); fifth, Paul's imprisonment at Caesarea, and voyage to Rome (21:18 to 28).

Thus we can trace the progress and spread of Christianity among the nations. The same statements as regards the offer of the "Glad tidings" to the human race which we notice in Luke, are maintained in the Acts, only the prophecy, type and parables in the Acts are converted into fulfillment and history. Though the book treats of varied events, yet to use the words of Bishop Lightfoot, "No ancient work affords so many points, so many tests of veracity."

THE SOURCE OF STRENGTH

By Samuel E. Haney

PAUL, FINDING CERTAIN DISCIPLES at Ephesus, asked them, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost (Spirit) since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus."

As to God's plan of man's reception and retention of the Holy Spirit, nothing could be more explicit than this. And the necessity and effectualness of Paul's instructions are as explicitly set forth by the Lord. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned (condemned, R. V.)" Mark 16:16.

"In the name of the Lord Jesus," is the one pivotal point of man's redemption — his only chance of eternal life. Jesus says (John 10:1), "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door ('I am the door of the sheep,' v. 7) into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

In the above there are several important questions involved which are worthy of our most serious consideration. But we shall confine ourselves to the two contending spirits which are swaying mankind, namely, the spirit of the world, emanating from Satan, and the Holy Spirit, emanating from God. One should think that the Spirit of God would triumph in the heart of man, but biblical history records what on the surface appears as ignominious defeat for God, inasmuch as there have been but mere remnants saved after God's elimination of all under the control of the adversary. In Noah's day but eight souls were saved from the deluge. In Lot's day but three were saved from the destructive "brimstone and fire." In A. D. 69, after God had been dealing with His typical people for nineteen hundred years, His wrath was poured out upon the disobedient Jews (John 1:1) by the greatest holocaust in history when 1,250,000 souls perished; a mere remnant being saved during the apostle's presence.

And now after nineteen hundred years of the Christian era, we see the whole human race, 1,900,000,000 souls, facing God's wrath, as Jesus, His apostles and all the holy prophets predicted. And heaven only knows what the number of the remnant will be this time! But, as God showed no pity on man in the cases cited, neither will He in the trouble that now has the race in an incipient grip of a "time of trouble, such as never was," Isa. 13:18. Read the whole chapter. Many in the near future will take Mrs. Job's advice to her husband, and "curse God and die", their "lips" being soiled by "sin." Job 2:9, 10.

Notwithstanding all this, we may be sure that in the final analysis it will be seen that God has been Master of the situation all down the ages; and that every person who had loved his Creator and obeyed His commandments as conveyed by the Holy Spirit through the prophets, His Son and the apostles, will have been saved, the incorrigible being destroyed, whom Job and David portray thus, "What is man, that he should be clean? and he which is born of woman, that he should be righteous? Behold, he putteth no trust in his saints; yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight: how much more abominable and filthy is man, which drinketh iniquity like water?" Job 15:14-16. He (the ungodly) thinks in his insolence that God never punishes; his thoughts amount to this, "There is no God at all. The dealings of thy justice high are far beyond his sight." Psa. 10:4, 5, Moffatt. Hence many who today are turning deaf ears to God's Word when expounded to them, will in the near future find themselves blaspheming God for what they will be calling His injustice, for His restraining hand (power) will then have been entirely withdrawn.

We have been noting to what the absence of God's control of man through the influence of the Holy Spirit leads. Now we briefly observe, as far as it is possible for words to describe, what the Holy Spirit can accomplish when it gets into the heart of fallen man, illuminating his soul and invigorating his body. Finite man's greatest efforts in this direction can achieve but a partial of the whole, though he were to write volumes. There are some chapters and many verses, which taken singly, should suffice in conveying sufficient of the Holy Spirit's attributes to arouse the lukewarm, indifferent Christian during these "perilous times". Jesus informs us of our source of strength and comfort by saying (John 14:26), "But the comforter, which is the Holy Ghost (Spirit), whom the father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."

Now this Holy Spirit, which is given in lieu of our Lord's absence (John 14:16), is conspicuously manifested throughout the twenty-third Psalm as the representative of the eternal Shepherd. For the present, therefore, let us confine our quest of the Spirit's diversified office to this inspiring Psalm as translated by Dr. Moffatt.

"The Eternal shepherds me, I lack for nothing; He makes me lie in meadows green, he leads me to refreshing streams, and revives life in me. He guides me by true paths, as he himself is true. My road may run through a glen of gloom, but I fear no harm, for thou art beside me; thy club, thy staff — they give me courage. Thou art my host, spreading a feast for me, while my foes have to look on! Thou hast poured oil upon my head, my cup is brimming over; yes, and all through my life goodness and kindness wait on me, the Eternal's guest, within his household evermore."

While the acquirement of the Holy Spirit is very expensive, even the crucifixion of "self with Christ" (Rom. 6:6), symbolizing death of the "old man" — fallen nature — its recipients are sure to receive an overwhelming blessing such as will not be a third cousin to the original Pentecostal Blessing.

BLACK DEATH, DREAD DISEASE

MAY SCOURGE WORLD AGAIN

IN EUROPE, HALF A WORLD AWAY from where we now sit, a series of events are in progress that may well make the blood run cold. Black, foggy clouds, that evidently had their beginning in Belgium, have arisen to cover the western half of the continent, to extend to Spain and to England, to be-fog vessels. In those clouds rides some awful death—the more terrible because it is so mysterious. Scores have perished. Hundreds are in hospitals. The malady is checked, at least temporarily, but mystified and nervous physicians anxiously await a new outbreak.

What is it? Some thought it the effect of gas-clouds, released from long-buried ammunition dumps. Some offered the theory that it was an epidemic of bronchial trouble, befalling those who worked in mines. But the most interesting, most blood-chilling thought of all is that the Black Death, that laid waste the world seven hundred years ago, is again loose to claim its drastic toll of human lives.

The conditions, the symptoms, are the same. A thick fog, rainy weather, vapor-laden atmosphere, best bred that devastating plague of the Middle Ages. And now, as then, the victims show fever, eruptions on the skin, final agonies, and a quick death.

It is a contagious disease, quickly transmitted from the sick to the sound, and few lived through it in those other days. No pestilence ever traveled so far or slew so many in all history. Is it destined to return to scourge mankind?

The Black Death had its inception in China in the year 1333, some fifteen years before it took fast hold on Europe.

That genteel and long-drawn conflict, the Hundred Years' War, was afoot on the marches of France. Not in all its hundred years did it tally the deaths that the dread plague boasted in but one. There is no certain measure of its victims. Some estimated 25,000,000 in western Europe alone, and that is a conservative figure. We know not how many died in Asia, in Africa, in the semi-civilized Russian steppes.

But we do know that Pope Clement, at Avignon, consecrated the Rhone in order that corpses could be cast in without further ado; graveyards were glutted with the dead, and many lay where they had fallen, for the sound and the living fled from them. Into England, whose arms had been victorious against France, the sickness spread. Here, as elsewhere, it was preceded by a leaden cloud, a foggy, rainy season, weeks in extent.

Men died, and women and children, the baron of the castle, the franklin on the farm, the villein in his wattle-and-daub cottage. All breathed the same polluted reek and all died the same death of corruption. Of those who were stricken none recovered, and the illness was ever the same—gross boils, raving, and the black blotches which gave its name to the disease. All through the winter the dead rotted by the wayside for want of someone to bury them. In many a village no single man was left alive. Then at last the spring came, with sunshine and health and lightness and laughter—the greenest, sweetest, tenderest spring that England had ever known—but only half of England could know it. The other half had passed away with the great purple cloud.

The Scotch, proud and canny, took this opportunity to invade their distressed enemies; the rotting English army met them in battle, and the plague that they carried slew more than the sword. Almost to the Arctic circle went the Black Death, taking the life of man and beast wherever it went.

And so ends the story of the greatest plague on earth—unless, as some claim, its story is yet unfinished.

Perhaps the Black Death has returned to earth again; perhaps it will again hold dread sway, striking down a full tithe and more of the race of man. Modern medicine, sanitation, all knowledge and science, are arrayed against such a possibility. But still a chill steals over any man who ponders the thought.—Selected by Mrs. A. J. Chaplin.

THE RELIGIOUS TRAINING OF CHILDREN

FROM THE LESSON on the childhood of Jesus, we may derive the following fundamental principles of religious education:

1. The development of body and mind must accompany the development of the soul.
2. No one of these elements of the complete life must be allowed to withdraw from the others their proper share of attention. For instance, if health is neglected, both mind and soul suffer; and, on the other hand, if athletics and physical sports attract too much attention, as they often do with modern youth, the mind is neglected, and the things of the spirit are quite overlooked.
3. The social side of life must receive its fair amount of attention. Christ's education in Nazareth was far more healthful and natural than the solitary life of John the Baptist in the wilderness.
4. The home is the center of religious education. No one can estimate the profound influence of Joseph and Mary over the child, Jesus.
5. The church must work with the home in the training of the children. Christ's love of the temple and the synagogue was a marked feature of His life.
6. Obedience is the necessary basis of any education worth the name. If the Lord of heaven and earth gladly submitted to the will of two Palestine peasants, what folly is the rebellious attitude of many modern youths toward their father and mother!
7. Religious education means steady progress. We must never be content with less than constant advancement.
8. The Partner of all religious teachers is the heavenly Father, whose blessing on their work will alone insure success.—Peloubet's Notes.

WHAT DID YOU GET FOR CHRISTMAS?

THE FREQUENCY WITH WHICH this question is asked and answered in the days just after Christmas prompts the writer to suggest the value of enumerating the gifts God has given us in His Son.

"When he ascended on high, he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men." Not only in the general sense has the heavenly Father given gifts, but in a special and individual way. Numerous passages come to mind concerning these individual gifts, and, even as in the gifts that come to us from our human friends, there is often a lack of appreciation of the gift our Father has given. How many of the gifts received at Christmas will be laid away and forgotten, or passed on to some one else as being of no value to the original recipient?

While this attitude may be justified in respect of the "anything for a present" way in which so many gifts are distributed at Christmas, when we think of the gifts of God each one is especially appropriate and valuable. Think of the expressions used in this connection, "to each according to his several ability," "gifts differing according to the grace that was given unto us," "to each one is given the manifestation of the Spirit to profit withal," "dividing to each one severally even as he will." These all indicate careful thought on the part of the Giver.

The great apostle in writing to his beloved Timothy urged him to "stir up the gift of God which is in thee." How it rejoices us when we have given a gift that is of such value as to become indispensable to one we love, used daily, and bringing joy and satisfaction. Yet how many of us realize how it must grieve our heavenly Father to have us lightly throw aside the gift of His love, or even reproach Him because He has not seen fit to give us the same gift that some brother or sister has received. In the diversity and the sharing of the gifts how much greater joy there would be than as if each child had just one gift and that exactly like the others. Is it not as much sin for us to depreciate our gift as it is to be proud-spirited and exalt our own gift over those of our brethren?

"What did you get for Christmas?" Stop and consider what special gift God has given to you, rejoice in it, use it. What new interest would be added to our task if all the talents and gifts were brought out and assembled for the edification of the family! In his admonition to Timothy to "stir up the gift," Paul goes on to say, "For God gave us not a spirit of fearfulness; but of power and love and discipline." Why should one fear to use his gift? It will only grow the more beautiful with usage.

On the other side of the picture, when a child does not use his gift the Father takes it away and gives to some one who will appreciate it. "For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not, even that which he hath shall be taken away."

"Stir up the gift of God which is in thee." — Selected.

GOD'S MESSAGE

THE MESSAGE OF LIFE is a message of peace to an alienated race. Adam brought death upon himself and all his posterity. The second Adam — the Lord from heaven — came to effect reconciliation, to make atonement, "by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men." The free gift has truly come upon all, that is, it is freely offered to all who will accept. But no unjustified sinner can ever receive this gift of life. We must first be "reconciled to God through the death of his Son," then, "much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life."

The matter is very fully treated of in that most profound of all Paul's profound arguments, in the fifth chapter of Romans. Dr. Alexander Whyte says regarding this chapter, that it is just these two men, Adam and Christ, with their sin and their justification, which so stumble our evolutionists.

It is evident that the "Fall" was no myth, as so many are teaching today, or Paul would never have penned that glorious chapter, which he triumphantly concludes thus: "Moreover the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound: that as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord." — From The Words of Eternal Life by Woodruff.

"WHEN WE SAY, 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' we put self in the background." — H. M. B.

THE FIELD IS THE WORLD

(Continued from page 195)

the Scriptures give us relative to the last times. At present there is apprehension on many sides in regard to Communist activities. Yet thus far these have been largely held in check in the rest of the world, while the Communist experiment in Russia is being worked out, with its system of soviets, commissars, and nationalization of industry. In view of its bloody introduction there and the threats of Communists to repeat the same process in other countries, one's heart might well fail for fear.

The Russian monarchy was a mountain "carried into the midst of the sea." The Psalmist says that even in those circumstances God's people will not fear. Why not? Because "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." Let us put our trust in Him, come what may. At the same time we must remember that sensationalism is the order of the day, and that calamitous events and political strife are often exaggerated to make flaring headlines. The Lord's people are "not in darkness," therefore they may well set an example of calmness and patience in the midst of confusion. Psalm 46. — The New Covenant Advocate.

GREETINGS FOR THE THE NEW YEAR

We are standing on the threshold of a newly opened door,
And are now about to enter where we've never trod before.

A new year is just dawning in its fair and dewy light,
While the old is surely vanishing into the misty night.

We have left the fields behind us in the which we scattered grain,

And are pressing on to pastures new, without regret, or pain,

Trusting we'll be true to God, and in our daily service
bold,

And our sowing and our toiling here will yield an hundredfold.

We are happy as we welcome all the new year with its dawn,

And we ring the old out quickly; for we're glad that it is gone.

We are looking forth for new things, and we'll hail the golden day,

When the Lord brings in the New Year, which shall never pass away. — Author Unknown.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD

THE DOCTRINE OF THE RESURRECTION of the dead is one of the grand truths of the Scriptures. Why should it be thought a thing incredible that God should raise the dead? It is no more wonderful than the creation of man. "With God all things are possible," — when He speaks the word it must come to pass. (Gen. 1:3.) Even Jesus while in the flesh could do all things in His Father's name or power, although He did not then possess "all power in heaven and earth," but almighty power was only delegated to Him; yet whatsoever He spake in His Father's name came to pass. The centurion who was strong in faith, said, "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed" — and it was so. When Jesus called Lazarus from the dead, he that was dead immediately came forth. When He rebuked the winds and the sea, they obeyed Him.

On a certain occasion the Sadducees, who did not believe in a resurrection, came to the Master concerning this doctrine, to confound Him, when He not only refuted them, but also plainly told them why they greatly erred, saying, "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures nor the power of God." — Matt. 22:22-29. The same reasons can be assigned for the skepticism of our times. The great Gentile Apostle said: "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised;" again, "If the dead rise not, let us eat and drink; for tomorrow we die."

Mary and Martha, her sister, believed in a literal resurrection of the dead. This is apparent from the account of the resurrection of their brother Lazarus — "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died," was the language of the sisters; and Martha, in replying to the comforting words of Jesus, who indeed spake the truth, saying, "Thy brother shall live again," said: "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." — John 11:21-44.

In both the Old and New Testaments are found narratives where the dead were restored to life, and in every instance it was done through or by the power of God, which power was delegated to certain persons chosen or set apart for particular purposes. Not one case is on record where mortal man ever raised the dead in his own name. Elijah, in raising the widow's son, cried unto the Lord, and said: "O Lord, my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul (breath of life, see context) come into him again;" and he revived. And Elijah took the child and delivered him unto his mother. And Elijah said, "See, thy son liveth." And the woman said to Elijah: "Now by this I know that thou art a man of God, that the word of the Lord in thy mouth is truth." — 1 Kings 17:17-24.

Elisha, in restoring to life the Shunamite's son, prayed to the Lord before he could raise him from the dead. See 2 Kings 4:32-36. The circumstance where a dead man revived on being let down into the sepulchre of Elisha, by coming in contact with the prophet's bones, is wonderful. We believe the record of it, and also that it was supernatural. (2 Kings 13:21.)

Even Jesus himself did everything in His Father's name while in the mortal state, as we have elsewhere observed. He plainly said that He could do nothing of himself, but that He came in His Father's name or power. (John 5:19-43.) Therefore, before raising Lazarus, He prayed to His Father as a testimony that the act would be done in the name of His Father whom He represented.

Now let us consider the acts of the apostles, and learn by what power or in what name they wrought miracles. After the resurrection of Jesus He sent them forth in His own name: "As my Father hath sent me, even so (in like manner) send I you." — John 20:21. Therefore the apostles did whatsoever they did in word or deed "all in the name of the Lord Jesus; insomuch that the rulers of the Jews charged them not to teach in this name." The Lord Jesus since His resurrection from the dead is no longer dependent upon any one for sustenance. Having received the divine nature, He is immortal, and having received "all power in heaven and in earth," He is almighty. (Rev. 1:8.)

When the Athenians heard the apostle Paul preach of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked. Many today do likewise, because they cannot conceive how the dead can be raised. Instead of believing the Word of God, they give heed to fables and theories which entirely discard the glorious doctrine of the resurrection; for according to the promulgated fables of this time the resurrection is superfluous, as death is made the entrance into a higher realm of being. Horrible delusion! Appropriately may the words of Jesus be cited: "They err, not knowing the scriptures nor the power of God.”

A resurrection unto eternal life can only be appreciated when we are convinced that death means death, and life means life. According to the Scriptures a resurrection from the dead is the only means of a future life. Therefore the resurrection of Jesus was the pivot doctrine in the precepts of the apostles. Of course, the exaltation of Jesus is embraced in His resurrection, for they are inseparable, as all the promises of God were fulfilled in the resurrection of Jesus. (Read carefully Acts 13:32-41; 1 Cor. 1:30, 31; 2 Cor. 1:20; Eph. 1:19-23; Phil. 2:7-11; Col. 2:3, 9, 10; Heb. 1:3-9; 5:7-10; 1 Peter 1:22.)

The instances mentioned plainly prove that the power of God is unlimited. In the case of Jesus He not only was restored to life, but He was made after the “power of an endless life;” death hath no more dominion over Him. What a vast difference in Jesus prior and after His resurrection. The Apostle through the spirit calls Him “the firstborn from the dead;” that is, after this distinctive order, for He is the “only begotten Son of God,” after the order of an endless life. (Heb. 7:16; Rom. 6:9, 10; Rev. 1:18; Col. 1:18; Acts 13:33.)

The Scriptures teach an unconditional resurrection from the dead; all are justified to a restoration to life in their order (Rom. 5:18; 1 Cor. 15:23); but this does not imply a resurrection to Eternal Life — in the likeness of the Lord Jesus. The resurrection unto immortality is conditional. (See Mark 16:16; John 3:16; Rom. 6:5; etc.)

The first death will be disturbed in all cases. Jesus said: “Marvel not, for the hour cometh in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment.” John 5:28, 29. Jude, the servant of the Lord, positively asserts a future judgment of the wicked; that they will be convicted of all their ungodly works and hard speeches uttered against the Lord. Jude 15; also see 2 Thess. 1:6-10; 2 Peter 2:9, 10.

To claim that something in man continues to have a living entity after death implies a denial that Jesus the Christ is the Resurrection and the Life — the Giver of eternal life; but to believe the Bible doctrine of the resurrection of the dead justifies God. Jesus said: “I come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.” This abundant life was made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. 2 Tim. 1:10. Hence the apostle John truly said: “This life (eternal) is in the Son.”

Job’s hope of a future life was through a resurrection from the dead. He asked, “If a man die, shall he live again?” and prophetically answered his own question. See Job 14:14 and compare with 19:25, 26. He hoped to live again. The Redeemer is alive forever more (Rom. 6:9; Rev. 1:18), and in due time Job with all the saints shall awake in the latter day, when the Lord shall stand upon the earth. — 1 Cor. 15:23; 1 Thess. 4:13-18; 2 Tim. 4:8; Heb. 11:39, 40; Acts 1:10, 11. — The Witness.

“THE MAN IN EDEN”

By R. H. Judd

THE ARTICLE UNDER THE ABOVE CAPTION in the December second issue is so manifestly a reply to mine, entitled, “Adam’s Penalty”, in a recent number that I feel the editor will allow me space for a few kindly remarks.

First let me say that I had been wanting to write to Bro. Drinkard to express my sympathy with him in his sickness, but having been in bed myself over eight weeks and still at considerable inconvenience, I have not succeeded in my wish.

I cannot but regret somewhat the tone of our brother’s criticisms. Surely he, or other readers of THE HERALD have not had cause, all the years of my association with our magazine, to doubt my belief in the inspiration of God’s Word. Nor can any one of them, I think, rightly accuse me of being among those who “twist the Scripture to prove their own view.” I lay no claim to originality to the views I expressed in that article — at any rate the main idea. I believe with all my heart the record as expressed in Gen. 2:15-17, quoted by our good brother — every word of it.

In answer to his question, “Why not believe that Adam died in the very day of eating?”, I would say, because I find no Scripture that states that Adam died on that day. I do find Scripture record of Adam’s death many years later. If my brother can produce the Scripture, then no considerable time will intervene before THE HERALD has my acknowledgment of the fact.

I have not questioned, nor do I question a single statement in the two verses cited. One does not doubt the fact that God threatened death to Adam “in the day”, but we have abundant evidence in Scripture that God has sometimes “repented of the evil” He said He would do, and we have also in the verses I quoted, Jer. 18:7-10; Ezek. 18:21, 22, 27, definite scriptural statement that God does so repent. In view of these facts, and that there is not one iota of scriptural statement or evidence that Adam died “in the day,” but rather that he lived long after it, one would in all humility ask our brother to reconsider his serious charges.

It may be well to give definite scriptural statement where God did act on the principle mentioned. Let the reader turn to Jonah 3:4. There we have quite as definite prediction regarding Nineveh as the one made with respect to Adam. Then turn to verses nine and ten where the language used is almost identical to that used in Jeremiah and Ezekiel already referred to.

Another point of similarity in the narratives is at least suggested to my mind by the record. Both instances were cases of life and death (see Jonah 3:9, “perish not”), and the parties in each showed they recognized this, Adam and Eve by accepting the skins of animals slain, and the Ninevites by abstaining from food and drink (the sources of life), in recognition that they had forfeited their lives. All that was required of Jonah was to stay by God's Word and leave the consequences with God.

Why does our brother head his article, "The Man in Eden"? Are we to infer that he believes that Adam died in Eden? If the popular idea (which seemingly our brother holds) that Adam died the moment he sinned is correct, then are we not confronted with the inevitable fact that even Eden is not immune from death? Surely, "utter ruin lies just ahead of such a position".

I would most heartily concur in the words of our beloved brother: "Accept the record as given (italics mine), and teach it all along life's pathway." The record nowhere states that Adam died "in the day". Then why teach it? The foregoing remarks in no sense mitigate the truth that "death passed upon all men" as the result of Adam's transgression.

IT IS INTERESTING TO KNOW that the Vulgate is a Latin translation of the Bible, completed in A. D. 405. The term, "Vulgate," means, "commonly received translation."

— S. E. H.

LOOKING FOR THAT BLESSED HOPE

By E. O. Stewart

"FOR THE GRACE OF GOD that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men, teaching us, that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works."

"These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee." Titus 2:10, 15.

Paul, knowing as he did the importance of the work to be accomplished in the present age that of calling out a people to be associated with Christ in the great work of the future ages, tells us plainly that in order to be counted worthy of such an exalted position we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.

Suppose we neglect our duty and fall short of our calling, how shall we escape? Shall we neglect our duty, and after so doing, depend upon the suggestion made by the devil to Christ, when he asked Him to gratify the lust of His eyes by casting himself down from the temple, saying, "It is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands shall they bear thee up, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone."

The devil quoted Scripture, but he misapplied it. He tried to induce the Savior to do wrong by cunningly twisting the passage from its true meaning, thus, "Go ahead and do wrong. God is merciful; He will not let you fall; He has promised to protect you by His divine power as it is written."

Upon this very kind of reasoning is built up the doctrine of the impossibility of apostacy. Men will claim one cannot fall after he is once in Christ.

Jesus said, "I am the vine and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, the Father taketh away. Every branch in me that beareth fruit, the Father purgeth it, that it may bear more fruit." John 15:1 and 2.

Some people stay out of the church because they believe that God expects them to live a life of sinless perfection. They remain out in the world because they feel that they cannot live up to the Bible requirements. Such people have set a standard on Christian living that entirely excludes the work of Christ as Advocate, or Mediator.

We are commanded not to sin, that is true. But if we sin, we have an Advocate with the Father. 1 John 2:1. A person who lives a life of sinless perfection would not need purging. So God does not expect one to live a life of sinless perfection. The fact that He appointed Christ as our Advocate is positive proof that He does not expect sinless perfection.

The law of the spirit of life in Christ provides an Advocate. And if we use the Advocate when we make mistakes, we are thus honoring both the Father and the Son in their respective official positions. We have by so doing fulfilled the requirements of the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and the Father pronounces us righteous.

Thus our hope grows brighter and brighter. Our path becomes a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. It is then that we can rejoice in tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience and patience, experience and experience, hope.

Hope spans the stream of death and guides our frail bark over the dark, sullen stream to mansions of rest. In that goodly land we behold no tear dimmed eyes. The long, dark night of sin is in the past with all of its heartrending scenes.

The Savior smiles in triumph as He stands upon the verdant shore of the once lost, but then restored, paradise of God. His beaming countenance thrills every blood-bought soul as He displays the keys of death and hell, proclaiming, "I can shut and no man can open. I can open and none can shut."

Heavenly voices announce the glorious news, that the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and His Christ. Every creature in heaven and on earth is praising Him, as He presents to His Father the once lost dominion.

The new Jerusalem appears in all surpassing glory. The moon shines forth as the sun and the sun shall be as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of His people, and healeth the stroke of their wound. Isaiah 30:26.

No wonder John says, "And there shall be no night there." "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"LET US RUN WITH PATIENCE THE RACE SET BEFORE US. — HEBREWS 12:1.

If all the cares and all the tears,
And all the joys of coming years
Should be revealed to us in one short day,
Our strength would ebb, our hearts would fail,
All efforts seem of no avail.
In our confusion we'd be lost along the way.

But since God knows the way we fall
He gives us strength to cope with all
The difficulties which He knows we'll meet.
Courageously we go our way —
Present ourselves anew each day
A living sacrifice at Jesus' feet.

ANOTHER YEAR LIES BEHIND US. Not one day nor one hour of 1930 can be changed now. There have been obstacles and difficulties along the way. If we have failed in meeting them we can only ask forgiveness and strength, that as we forge onward we may not again be found wanting. If we have met some of the emergencies which confront the Christian with unfaltering courage and wise judgment, it means that we have gained just that much strength for future needs.

A new year lies ahead of us. Not one unkind word or ignoble thought or wrong action yet mars the beauty of its days. If it were only possible to keep it as pure until the end as it is at the beginning!

Before the year begins we know that there shall be failures. It must be so because we are all human, carnal beings. It is not for us to be perfect, but it IS for us to come just as close to the mark of perfection as is possible.

Too many people stack up lists of good resolutions at the beginning of the year, which reach such proportions that it would be a physical impossibility to live up to all of them. We cannot reach the goal ahead by going forward in one leap, but must "run with patience the race set before us."

Let us make our good resolutions — as many as possible — but learn to keep them one at a time. When the keeping of a few becomes a habit we can then begin to think of adopting new ones. Otherwise we will reach the end of 1931, only to look back and see that in our haste to do everything we have accomplished nothing.

AS A STARTER, may we suggest that every Berean firmly resolve to study the lessons diligently before class time and make every possible effort to be present at all classes.

A REMINDER

ON JANUARY FIRST, dues for the past six months should be sent in by the different Berean organizations, as follows:

State treasurers send one-half of the state dues to the national treasurer; local societies send one-half of the dues to the state treasurer; local societies where there is no state society send one-half the dues to the national treasurer; isolated members send one dollar into the national treasury.

These dues are those which have been paid since the first of July.

THIS REMINDS US that a good resolution for Bereans to make and an easy one to keep might be, "Pay dues when due."

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

THE BEREANS OF BLAIR meet every Sunday evening at the church at seven-thirty. Their average attendance is about twelve, with interest and cooperation very good. Sr. Dorothy Krogh is an able assistant in this work.

"Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." — Titus 2:13.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 6; Ohio, 3; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 2; California, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

JOSEPH AND MARY AND JESUS lived in Nazareth, a little town in the hills of Galilee.

Joseph was a carpenter. He built furniture for the houses in Nazareth. The houses were all made with flat roofs and with stairs going up on the outside. So after the day's work was over, Mary and Joseph and Jesus would most likely go up to the roof and watch the sunset.

Sometimes Jesus would go into Joseph's carpenter shop and ask if He might help build something, and Joseph would give Jesus tools and show Him how to work.

And I am sure Jesus helped His mother, too. He most likely took their big pitcher and went down to the little spring for water. Then He surely helped with the fire and simple housekeeping, and took care of the little children in the household. We are told that Jesus had several brothers and sisters. Then Jesus had school to attend and lessons to learn. All Jewish children were taught the Scriptures—the law and the prophets—and some wore parts of them bound on their foreheads.

And we must think that Jesus was a real boy and played the games that boys of that time played, and was a friend and had friends even as you children today. But I cannot think of Him being rude or quarrelsome, or unkind, can you?

We know that He loved the flowers, and hills and all nature, because in His later teaching He speaks of them, and uses them as illustrations in His lessons.

There was only a little house or church called a synagogue in Nazareth, and it was the custom of Jesus to go there every sabbath.

Imagine how His heart beat when He was told that He was old enough to go to Jerusalem and worship in the great temple there! He was twelve years old.

Nearly all the people of Nazareth went up for this feast time. They saddled their mules and took food for several days, sleeping out under the stars at night.

Finally they came to the great city of Jerusalem, with its high walls all about it. There were soldiers with swords and shields, and priests with long, white robes, and many, many people. Some of them found room in the houses and hotels or with friends, while others camped out near the temple.

This building was the most wonderful Jesus had seen. One side of it was toward the east where the sun rose, and this side was covered with gold, and shone so that it could be seen for miles and miles. All the other sides were made of white marble with a great deal of gold trimming. Inside was the altar where the priests offered sacrifices to God. The time was spent in feasting, visiting, and worship in the temple.

Finally the time came for the crowds to return to their homes. Mary and Joseph packed all their equipment and started out with their friends. All day long they did not see Jesus, but said, "Oh, He must be with His friends in another part of the caravan."

But when the night overtook them, they realized that something was wrong; and not finding Jesus in the caravan, they hurried back to Jerusalem. There they searched and searched, enquiring of their relatives, but no trace of the missing boy!

And then, what do you think? Mary happened to remember the temple, and went there, and surely enough, Jesus was in the House of God. How glad she was to see Him! But imagine her surprise when she saw Him talking to the great teachers, asking them questions, and answering their questions. The learned doctors seemed very interested, and really astonished at His understanding.

However much Mary loved Jesus, yet she had been so concerned for His welfare that she naturally had to reprove Him a little. She said, "Son, why hast thou dealt so with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing."

Jesus replied, "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" Mary did not understand just what Jesus meant by those words. Nevertheless, He went home with them to Nazareth and continued to increase in "wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man".

Do we try to grow in wisdom, health and favor with God and man?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Make a list of the qualities Jesus must have shown as a boy.
2. Tell how you can be like the boy, Jesus.
3. Locate Jerusalem and Nazareth.
4. Learn Luke 2:52.
5. Copy: Jesus and the Doctors in the Temple at Jerusalem. Jesus—twelve years old.

SIRIUS, THE "DOG STAR," is the brightest star in the heavens; but Jesus, who is soon to be King over all the earth, will be the brightest Star of this earth planet.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON II. — January 11, 1931

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

Luke 2

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 11:1-9

GOLDEN TEXT

And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man. — Luke 2:52.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Jesus' Appeal to Childhood.

Basic Truth. "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Prov. 22:6.

Outline. I. The Boy Jesus. II. Keeping Up With the Children. III. Jesus as the Ideal of Childhood.

I. The Boy Jesus. Jesus' appeal to childhood is that He himself was a child. Perhaps that is why, when He became a man, He said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." For He was a real Boy.

We are told very little directly concerning Jesus' boyhood, but there is much that we may learn indirectly. The statement that a tree is known by its fruits is never more applicable than to a child's home training. So we know the Lord was brought up in the way that children ought to go. We also know something of the strict Jewish educational requirements. They knew their Bibles thoroughly, and the training in it began long before the age of six.

It may seem strange that a boy could be in favor with God and man both, yet in spite of all the sentiment to the contrary, the boy who lives a clean, upright, godly life is respected and admired even by those who may not be of that type themselves. Jesus never wronged nor took advantage of His playmates; He never told a smutty story; He never cheated when no one was looking, nor stooped to a lie. And always He was obedient to the desires of His parents. So He commanded the good favor of His human associates as well as that of His heavenly Father.

II. Keeping up With the Children. The parents of Jesus are not the only ones who have experienced difficulty in keeping their eye on the children. Parents who are continually worried frantic for fear that Junior will get out of their sight might take a lesson from Mary and Joseph. Though they sought the Christ-child anxiously when He was left behind in the temple, yet their fears were little justified, for they had taught Him to be trustworthy, and to do right for right's sake.

Wise indeed is the parent whose training of his children has been such that they will delight in seeking his counsel in choosing their companions, their amusements, their careers, and not be compelled to sneak away from home to avoid his displeasure. The parent who can command his child's admiration and sympathy will have no fears for his child when he is "on his own." And the child who has learned to love and obey both his earthly and heavenly parents will never conduct himself away from home in an unworthy manner or do anything he could be ashamed of. This is the glory of Jesus' boyhood education in the things of God.

III. Jesus as the Ideal of Childhood. Lives are ennobled or disgraced by the ideals which they follow. Too often the ideal of childhood is brute force which is personified in physical strength. Again it may be that swearing or smoking or drinking or unscrupulous living may be the ideal held up to boyhood and girlhood. Unless a tendency in this direction is counteracted by home environment, these low ideals are very likely to be acquired from associates. It is just as easy to set the ideal of the Boy Jesus before the child, and how much more worth while! Let the children follow Him in their younger years, and the mature years will hold no terrors for fathers and mothers.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Today's lesson deals with a little boy named Jesus. His life from infancy to ascension is one of example. The interest of the Child's parents in His well-being is worthy of emulation. Our children today are our biggest concern. Parents are neglecting the children. There are 36,000,000 boys and girls in the United States that are growing up without religious instruction or training. It is impossible to realize the future result.

TELL		PRECEPT
TEACH	the child by	COMMAND
TRAIN		EXAMPLE

Help the children to be honest, true and Christian men and women of tomorrow. Our children need models rather than critics. Their characters will not be formed by chance, but by early training. You are shaping them now.

Discuss the effects home life has on the child; his associates. Will family worship have any lasting effect and influence on the children? Do you think children would be better off if parents spent more time at home? Discuss ways in which home life can be made attractive for the young people, so that they will not seek all their amusement away from home. — C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Jesus advanced in wisdom, and in manliness, and in favor with God and men."
Luke 2:52, Diag.

Jesus, in many ways, was like any other normal child. He grew, He learned, He worked and, no doubt, He played just as most other boys of His time. As He grew, He increased in wisdom more than the ordinary boy, for He realized that the Father had a great work for Him to do and without doubt He was given wisdom from above which far exceeded the wisdom of other boys.

It was by this wisdom that He was able to stand among the doctors, both asking and answering questions. No wonder He grew in favor! He was doing God's will, therefore, He grew in God's favor. Men saw His manliness, heard His questions and answers and were attracted by His knowledge. He also was obedient to His parents and that helps a boy to be likeable, and so He grew in favor with men. This is a splendid example that boys and girls would do well to imitate.

— L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: About My Father's Business.

At a very early age Jesus came to realize that His first duty was to His heavenly Father. "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

His parents did not understand Him, but He returned with them to Nazareth. Here among the hills of Galilee, in a village so obscure as not to be mentioned in the Old Testament, the years of the youthful Jesus were spent until He arrived at the age of thirty.

Tell how the child of God can be about the Father's business. Explain "doing all to the glory of God." At about what age do you think one should be "about my Father's business"? — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: The Boy Jesus.

The golden text shows four ways in which Jesus grew and these are the same ways in which all of us should grow. "Wisdom and stature" represent growth in mind and in body. "Favor with God and man" tells of growth spiritually and socially. Discuss in class these four directions of growth.

What sort of training did all Jewish children receive? Deut. 6:4-9. Was Mary the sort of mother who would train her child in ways pleasing unto God? The chief text book for children in that day was the Old Testament, and Jesus must have been well versed in its contents, for He often asked His hearers, "Have ye not read?" No wonder He was able at twelve years of age to confound even the doctors and lawyers! Find here Jesus' first recorded sentence.

"Favor with God" reveals to us that His Father's special watch care was over Jesus, protecting Him from the sin surrounding His boyhood, guiding and directing Him throughout His childhood. Such a child could not help but grow in favor with man also, for he would be loving, unselfish, helpful and kind to all.

What boy would not like to be such a boy as Jesus was! — M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

FROM ALL OVER THE LAND

Bro. and Sr. J. Arthur Johnson, of Oregon, Illinois, spent the Christmas holidays with relatives at Culver, Indiana.

Bro. and Sr. Frederick Claussen and Sr. Pearl Hatten of Oregon, Illinois, spent the Christmas holidays with relatives at Culver, Indiana.

Bro. F. E. Siple, pastor of the South Lawn Park Church of Grand Rapids, Michigan, left Sunday evening, last, for points in the southland, including a visit to his home town, Hammond, Louisiana.

The series of Sunday evening sermons on the subject of The Millennium, which the pastor announced to begin on November 9, is now announced to begin on Sunday evening, January 4, at the Oregon Church.

Bro. M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Golden Rule Church of Cleveland, Ohio, and his sister, Sr. Margaret Lyon of Chicago, are spending the beginning of the New Year with their parents, Bro. and Sr. J. S. Lyon, of Citronelle, Alabama.

The good news arrives that Bro. R. H. Judd, of 111 Milverton Blvd., Toronto, Ontario, expects soon to be able to dispense with the use of his crutches. We are thankful with him to the Father that his recovery from his serious injury has been so rapid.

Sr. VanDer Weele, of Argos, Indiana, writes us that her mother, Sr. John Cochran, is in Kelly Hospital in Argos, recovering from a very serious operation. She stood the operation fine and is as well as can be expected. A letter or card of cheer from her friends will be of much comfort. And we ask your prayers to the Father in heaven for her recovery.

Sr. Elsie Cullen and family of the Oregon, Illinois, congregation were the recipients of several Christmas remembrances, among them being a box of fruit and groceries from the Oregon Bereans. Sr. Cullen is a widow who is endeavoring to train her daughter and four young sons in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. She wishes to express her gratitude for these evidences of thoughtfulness.

For the many, many Christmas greetings and good wishes from near and far we wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the senders.

May the blessings of the Father rest upon all—and upon all The Herald family—and may the coming year add much of Christian strength and comfort, is the prayer of F. L. and E. H. Austin.

GOLDEN RULE HOME CHRISTMAS

The Golden Rule Home family were gladdened by the arrival of Christmas gifts of various nature, among them being a quilt from Sr. Graham of Concordia, Kansas; candy from Sisters Leila Whitehead of Chicago and Elta Fitz of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; a turkey for their dinner from Bro. and Sr. F. L. Austin, and four quarts of grape juice from Sr. Hardesty, of Oregon. On the afternoon of the twenty-fourth, the pupils of the fourth grade of the public school sang carols at the Home and presented two baskets of fruit, all of which greatly cheered the Home folks.

CHRISTMAS OFFERINGS

Christmas offerings have been received from the following, totaling $112.25.

Mrs. Mary Woodward; Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ellis; A Sister; David F. Beck; D. B. Jackson; Mrs. Mary Sweet; Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Dunbar; Deborah Pearson; Mrs. R. A. Robinson; Elizabeth Williams and Mother; Mrs. Clara Stinnette; Enos and Carrie Elton; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Tilton; Leota B. Hanson; Verna Himmelright for self and also in memory of her mother.

These offerings are greatly appreciated, as also the spirit of cooperation which prompted the givers. The Lord will add His blessing.

DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

We now have 377 members in our Dollar-A-Month Club. Another organization has joined the Club—the Brush Creek, Ohio, Sunday School. They have paid in advance for two shares. Many of the Sunday Schools and Berean Societies of our churches over the land are now members of the Club. If each individual member and each organization would join, what a great stride forward could be made in the labors of the N. B. I. during the year 1931! Did you read Evelyn Austin's Potato Story in the Christmas number? If you didn't, do so at once. And then—respond with your "potato"—at once, today! You will find it on page 186 of that number.

MEETINGS IN TEXAS

The second week in November we began a meeting at Riviera. A splendid interest prevailed throughout the meeting. During the meeting Bernice Robbins made the good confession and was baptized.

Leaving Riviera we went to Houston and held a few meetings at Bro. E. Brown's, with good interest. Thence we went to Ater, where we had a good meeting, considering weather conditions. We expect to be there for ten days in March.

We came to Mullin and preached there the fourth Sunday night. We will be there each second Sunday and hope much good may be accomplished. I believe the church condition is some better over the state. E. O. Stewart

A CHURCH PROBLEM

Three new members, adults, were recently enrolled at the South Lawn Park Church of God, Jefferson and Abbie Streets, Grand Rapids, Michigan. This church is situated in a rapidly growing district in South Grand Rapids. When built some five years ago it was about the first church in that section. Other churches are being added. The substantial little building erected by the South Lawn Park Church is already greatly overcrowded, and the hard working brotherhood of that church is being sorely pressed in its earnest effort to grasp its opportunity for gathering others into the gospel fold and for accommodating the many children and young people in its Sunday School. Right now a church of double the capacity of the present building is needed, while at the present rate of growth of the district, another four or five years and the capacity of the present church should be quadrupled. But the present building is yet not quite paid for.

That brotherhood is certainly facing a problem in Christian service. It is hoping—even against hope—that in some way it can next spring begin a much needed enlargement of its present building. First it is striving to efface the $500 indebtedness remaining against the present structure—this in addition to maintaining the current running expenses, which latter are, in themselves, heavy for a small membership. Then it is facing the larger problem of meeting the costs of enlargement which will amount to $20,000 or more. There is one encouraging feature about it all, namely, South Lawn Park Church has some real workers who, in the face of every obstacle and of every drawback, forge ahead. They pray; they work; they pay. May God bless that labor to His honor.

WATERLOO-CEDAR FALLS CHURCH ORGANIZATION

The Church of God at Waterloo and Cedar Falls, Iowa, has recently perfected a church organization. With a view of working in a scriptural manner as far as possible, the following simple working rules were adopted:

Article I. This organization shall be called the "Church of God in Christ Jesus" of Waterloo and Cedar Falls.

Article II. Its purpose is "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ."

Article III. The Bible alone shall be our only rule of faith and conduct.

Article VI. Membership shall consist of all of the Body of Christ who desire to cooperate according to the purpose and rules herein set forth.

Article V. The officers of the organization shall consist of elders, deacons and deaconesses, selected according to scriptural requirements. 1 Timothy 3:1-12 and Titus 1:5-9.

The elders must have charge of the spiritual work of the church, being able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers. Titus 1:9.

The deacons and deaconesses are to have charge of the temporal work of the church, each doing the work for which he is best qualified. Acts 6:1-4 and Romans 16:1.

The elders, deacons and deaconesses shall be selected by the body, from among its members, subject to the approval of the evangelist.

The same shall organize themselves into a working unit.

The following were acknowledged as being qualified for these offices: Elders: A. J. Eychaner, Herman Hunt and C. W. Howe; deacon: Leonard Harland; deaconesses: Mrs. Eychaner, Mrs. Cassen, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Allard, Mrs. Howe and Miss King. From this board the following active officers were selected: President, C. W. Howe; Vice-president, Herman Hunt; Secretary, Florence Allard; Treasurer, Adelle Howe.

We feel that a definite organized effort is a step forward toward greater service. We are having preaching services every Sunday. All who can are cordially invited to attend. We meet at the home of Bro. and Sr. Allard, Cedar Heights. Sunday School at ten o'clock and preaching at eleven.

It might be worthy of mention that our Sunday School attendance this year is running a little higher than it did a year ago. While the gain is not great, it should be a good indication.

May we solicit the prayers of the brethren for the advancement of the work at Waterloo and Cedar Falls. Charles W. Howe.

DIXON CHURCH SERVICES

Services at the Dixon Church on Sunday, December 14, were well attended. Bro. Conner's sermons are wonderful. We had preaching services on December 21 also, with good attendance, but plenty of room for more. We miss your presence, and you are missing some good sermons.

Sunday School services are very good, the attendance remaining about the same each Sunday. The contest that was held between the Truth Seekers' Class and the Gideon Band was won by the Gideon Band. The teachers are Sr. Anna Drew of the girls' class, and Sr. Dauntler of the boys' class. The Sunday School is growing both in interest and membership, and we are hoping for a larger growth during the coming year.

At this season we should pause and give thanks to our heavenly Father for His many blessings.

Grace Drew.

A very interesting Christmas program was given at the Dixon Church, Tuesday night, December 23. The church was filled to its capacity, making it necessary to place chairs in the aisles. The committee in charge feel amply repaid for their efforts.

The first part of the program consisted of recitations, dialogs and songs by the younger members. The play, "The Street of Hearts," which was presented during the last half of the program by fifteen members of the Sunday School, was very well rendered. This is a supposition story of Joseph and Mary seeking a haven for the birth of the Christ-child on that first Christmas Eve—a little play with a great big lesson. The members of the cast and chorus are to be congratulated on the way in which they presented this beautiful little play.

After the program, gifts were distributed from the beautifully decorated tree, which was enjoyed by old and young alike.

Several Oregon members were in attendance.

ROBERT L. WOOD

Robert L. Wood, son of Daniel L. and Catharine A. Wood, was born in Chicago, Illinois, April 6, 1844, and died at his home in Riverside, California, December 12, 1930. He was married at Chana, Illinois, May 10, 1881, to Miss Olive Booth, who, with a nephew, Laurence E. Wilson of Kansas City, Kansas, survives him.

Until eight years ago Mr. and Mrs. Wood made their home in Chicago, where he was engaged in the builder's trade. Removing to the Pacific coast in 1922, they located in Riverside, where they have since resided. Mr. Wood was beloved by all who knew him for his sunny disposition and friendliness. His health has been declining for several years, and he fell quietly and painlessly asleep, with his beloved wife at his side, after a long and pleasant life in her companionship.

The funeral sermon, delivered by the writer, was based on Deuteronomy 33:27: "Underneath are the Everlasting Arms," and was concluded with the following verses:

We will carry our trouble to Him
Who will help us our burden to bear;
We will tell Him our heartache and anguish;
He will all of our sorrow share.

For He sees and knows our distresses,
And His heart is o'erflowing with love;
And His arms are extended in blessing,
As He watches from heaven above.

So we'll trust to the care of the Father,
The dear one we place 'neath the sod;
For we know that he rests in the keeping
Of a kind and a merciful God!

G. Eldred Marsh.

HERALD RECEIPTS

G. L. Gillespie; Mrs. W. H. Eidemiller; Mrs. Edith Miller; Mrs. Albert Railton; W. D. Tilton.

Sr. F. L. Austin is spending this week at Oregon, Illinois, where her presence is very much appreciated by members and friends of the church.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

Receipts.—The change of date on address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

To Stop Paper.—It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

TRACTS AND BOOKS

TRACTS

Name	Pages	Dozen	100
The Reasons Why	2	$0.05	$0.30
Essential Truths	1	.05	.30
God's Promises, by Anna E. Drew	2	.05	.30
The Resurrection, by S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
Obedience	2	.05	.30
The Baptist Confession of Faith	2	.05	.30
Who Owns the Wool?	4	.05	.30
The Coming of Christ, S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
What Is a Christian, J. W. Williams	4	.10	.60
Where Do We Go When We Die?	4	.10	.60
Immortality of the Human Soul	4	.10	.60
Shall Never Die	4	.10	.60
The Voice of Prophecy	4	.10	.60
Immortality	4	.10	.60
Did Christ Pre-exist? R. H. Judd	4	.10	.60
The Thief on the Cross, F. E. Siple	4	.10	.60
What Do the Scriptures Teach? Judd	6	.15	.90
What Must I Do to Be Saved?	4	.10	.60
Hell, What Is It	8	.20	1.25
The Coming of Christ, R. A. Curtis	6	.20	1.25
The Rich Man and Lazarus, F. E. Siple	8	.20	1.25
A Few Thoughts	8	.20	1.25
Baptism, S. J. Lindsay	8	.20	1.50

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen	100
God, R. H. Judd	16	.04	.30	1.75
The First Resurrection, Wm. Leask	20	.05	.40	3.00
A Letter to a Friend	32	.10	1.00	8.00
Where Are the Dead?	36	.05	.50	4.00

Name

Pages Each Dozen

The Resurrection, J. L. Wince
(For cost of Postage) 32 .03 .12

BOOKS

Name	Pages	Each	Per 6
Death Reigned from Adam to Moses, paper cover	58	$0.10
Sin, A. H. Zilmer, paper covers	84	.25
Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	$1.25
Book of Revelation Made Easy to Understand, Ancient Mysteries, George Johnston	116	.50
W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	1.25
Christ in the Old Testament, R. H. Judd, paper	38	.40
The Way of Life Eternal, Lyman Booth, paper	88	.40
Student's Text Book, Wilson, board cloth	200	.45	2.60
The Visitor, Boice, paper	212	.50
The Mystery of Iniquity, Booth, paper	220	.75
Pine Woods Bible Class, Wilson, board cloth,	480	.85	5.00
Emphatic Diaglott, Benjamin Wilson
Neatly bound, and in clear type,			2.50

THE GOSPEL IN SONG

A Book of 287 well-printed Gospel Hymns

	Each	Per 10	Per 100
	Postpaid	Postpaid	Not Postpaid
Manila	$0.40	$3.60	$30.00
Flexible Cloth	.45	4.00	33.00
Board Cloth	.50	4.50	40.00

WHAT THE BIBLE SAYS ABOUT ITSELF

By Dessie M. Fox

THE WORD, BIBLE, is derived from the Greek word, biblia, meaning books; also biblos, the inner bark of the papyrus on which the ancients wrote. The Bible is a collection of sacred writings or Holy Scriptures of the Christians.

Now according to 2 Timothy 3:16, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Therefore, the Bible, the Holy Scriptures is given to the Christian people as a guide by which to live.

The Bible has two main divisions, one for the Jews and Christians, and one for the Christians only. The Jewish religion is represented as a compact between God and the Jews. The Christian religion is a new compact between God and the human race.

The earliest and most famous version is the Greek translation which was written by the Alexandrian Greeks before 130 B. C. different parts being done at different times. This translation was adopted by the early Christian church and by the Jews themselves. It has always held an important place in regard to the interpretation and history of the Bible.

The most important Latin version is the Vulgate, executed by Jerome, partly on the basis of the original Hebrew and completed in 415 A. D. The printed editions of the Hebrew Bible are numerous. The first edition of the entire Hebrew Bible was printed in 1488. The Brescian edition of 1494 was used by Luther in making the Greek translation.

The books of the New Testament were written in Greek, except Matthew, which is thought by some scholars to have been written in Hebrew. The three oldest manuscripts are the Sinaitic, discovered by Tischendorf in a convent on Mt. Sinai in 1850, and assigned to the fourth century; the Vatican of Rome, of similar date; the Alexandrian, in the British Museum, assigned to the fifth century.

The division of the text of the New Testament into chapters and verses was later than the Old Testament, but it is unknown by whom and when. The English and German translations are the most celebrated; the first English translation of the New Testament being executed by William Tyndahl in 1525.

In the reign of James I, Hugh Broughton, a Hebrew scholar, insisted that a new translation of the Bible was necessary and during a conference at Hampton Court, the king accepted the suggestion. The work was undertaken by forty-seven scholars divided into six groups, two meeting at Westminster, two at Oxford, and two at Cambridge, while a general committee, meeting in London, revised portions of the translation finished by each group. The revision was begun in 1607 and completed in 1611. This translation is thought to be the most accurate and the style to be better than any other version.

THE THREE FORCES

IT IS A FACT WELL KNOWN to science that it takes three simultaneous influences to make a seed germinate in the soil. It must have heat, moisture, and air; when these three things come at the same time, the long dormant seed instantly springs to life and fulfills its destiny. If one of these is lacking, the grain will never become a plant.

So it is with man in his threefold being—spiritual, mental and physical. The possibilities of greatness are latent in him, but if one of these forces is missing, he will remain as a seed in desert soil, packed with superb possibilities but barren and fruitless. — Selected.

ANOTHER YEAR WITH THEE

"Another year is dawning!
Dear Master, let it be
In working or in waiting
Another year with Thee.

"Another year of leaning
Upon Thy loving breast,
Of ever-deepening trustfulness,
Of quiet, happy rest.

"Another year of mercies,
Of faithfulness and grace;
Another year of gladness
In the shining of Thy face.

"Another year of progress,
Another year of praise;
Another year of proving Thy presence all the days."
— Frances Ridley Havergal.

ANNUITY BONDS

For information regarding advantages of Annuity Bonds over Wills in making final gifts for the furtherance of our Gospel labors, address,

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
OREGON ILLINOIS

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 6, 1931

NUMBER 14

Obedience Rather Than Sacrifice

By C. E. Lapp

“For thou desirest not sacrifice; else would I give it: thou delightest not in burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.”—Psa. 51:16, 17.

AFTER THE ISRAELITES were delivered out of the land of Egypt, the Lord gave them the law through Moses at Mount Sinai. By the law they were instructed how they were to serve the Lord. Different sins were named with the results and the judgment or punishment that was to be executed on those committing the sin. These sins had to be forgiven because God could not tolerate sin.

The curse that was placed upon the world for sin was the punishment of death. God provided a way of escape for the people by having them to confess their sins and then to place them upon the head of some animal. After being placed upon the animal it was sacrificed and the sin was atoned for.

Several hundred years passed by and the children of Israel came into the promised land. They were being led by God all the time, but other nations had kings to rule over them and the Israelites wanted to be like other nations. So God chose a very common man to become their king. He was a tall man, head and shoulders above all others, and of one of the least of the tribes.

After Saul was anointed king, God told him to go and utterly destroy every living thing with the Amalekites because of their wickedness toward Israel. Saul set out to do this, but disobeyed in that he did not destroy them utterly. He brought back the king, Agag, along with some of the best sheep and oxen, saying they were to be for sacrifices unto the Lord. Samuel rebuked him, and said, “Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.” Because of the sin Saul committed the kingdom was taken from his house and given to the house of David. There were many other instances in the Old Testament where people were severely punished because of disobedience to God’s word.

Human nature does not change even through the ages of time. Christ, in His sermon on the mount, gave special commandments for us, as His followers, to obey. The first and greatest commandment was that we should love the Lord with all our hearts and mind and body. We profess that we love Him and yet, do we? Do we give Him first place in our lives? Do we give Him first place with our money? Do we give Him first place in our time and first place with our talents?

When we give the things of this life and the things of the world all of our attention and time, do we not break the first and greatest commandment? Are we not just as evil in God’s sight as was Saul when he disobeyed? Saul disobeyed and the kingdom of Israel was taken from him. Saul’s sin was in not doing as God told him. Perhaps he thought, in his heart, that the fine sheep and oxen which he reserved contrary to God’s direction, would make a pleasing sacrifice in the eyes of God and the people. He did not see that the most pleasing thing to God is obedience.

We have a heritage with Christ if we will but do as we are commanded. Christ said, “Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.” Therefore we can see very clearly from the words of Christ that not every one shall be received who calls upon His name but only those who do the will of God. Is not the heritage we have in Christ of far greater importance than anything that can be acquired in this world? Do we not think too lightly of the life to come and sometimes put too much emphasis on the things of this world?

Let us remember that the time is far spent, and soon Christ, our Lord and Savior, will come to receive us out of this world. If we are to be children of God, then we must obey His teachings or He will not receive us when He comes.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March 1879.

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor.

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them . . . and teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

THE YEAR OF OUR LORD, 1931

A GAIN IT IS INTERESTING to emphasize to the attention of all Christian people the fact that the entire correspondence and business of the world, so far as that business originates in Christian countries, is based upon and dated from the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ. The influence of our Savior's name and life upon the world has had very much more effect and been attended with far greater consequences than the effect or consequences upon Christian life only. He who would think lightly of our Lord and Master must at least recognize one ever visible truth, namely, every crime, every false testimony, every illegal or ungodly transaction, as well as every Christian or every true occurrence in life, bears testimony to national and individual recognition of our Lord and Savior in the datings of the records of such events.

With this fact emblazoned everywhere along the pathways of life's activities, ought not the Christian to enhance the meaning and value of the truth by his living testimony in honor of Bethlehem's child?

FROM THE INDIVIDUAL TO THE WHOLE

MANY OF US UNDERSTAND that Christ appeals to the individual; that the gospel of Jesus Christ is offered to the person and not to the state or to the nation as was the covenant of Moses. Salvation is for the individual, not for the mass. Belief must be by the individual, not by the group. The fruitage of such belief goes to the individual. All this is most true. Scripture is very definite in this matter.

But it is also true that the gospel reaches out indirectly unto the whole. The whole earth not only has to date received untold blessings from the gospel to the individual, but the day is coming in the which the gospel of Jesus Christ will completely revolutionize the earth. Nations will cease war; unrighteousness will forever pass; righteousness will be by all and in all; the whole earth will be beautified and enriched by the operation of the gospel of Christ.

With this undeniable fact as evident to the Christian as is the brightly shining noonday sun, it would seem that Christianity thrusts upon the individual a responsibility to ever convey the benefits of the gospel to those beyond. Had Christ never taught the love of God to others, none others would have known to have embraced that love. Had early Christians never sacrificed themselves in their efforts to teach the truths of the gospel of Christ to the ungodly and unbelieving, Christianity would never have spread over the earth as it has. If those of former centuries have sacrificed home and life in their eagerness to be loyal soldiers for Christ and have accomplished much in the proclamation of the gospel to every creature, then we Christians of the year 1931 should not hesitate to dedicate our entire beings and our entire ability of service to further that work which has been so long promoted, sometimes with the sacrifice of blood and life itself.

The whole of God's future day is to be Christian. There will be no exception. The fullness of that day will be the result of Christ's personal efforts during His ministry, plus the results of the efforts of individual Christians throughout the centuries, climaxed by the work of the Savior and His church when the Savior shall have returned.

May 1931 find you and me individually zealous in Christian thought and Christian service. May it find us active in word and deed in proclaiming the gospel to those near and far, to the full of our abilities.

DEMANDS OF OUR LORD

MAN'S LITTLE MIND, so finite and of such small capacity, is undoubtedly excused by the great Infinite for its failure to grasp many of the outstanding and revealed truths of God. One of these momentous fact-truths that seems to have been overlooked is that God did not make man in Genesis 1:26 merely and only for man's own enjoyment.

Instantly God had created him, He at once made certain demands of him. He was to "multiply and replenish and subdue the earth and have dominion over it." God made man for a purpose. He had an end in view. The attainment of that end demanded the activity of created man.

Another outstanding truth-fact is that Christ in providing salvation for the individual did so, not simply to please the person, but did so that the saved man and the saved woman might be qualified and empowered to work with Him the great works of God. That Christian who feels satisfied and content because that he feels he himself is saved and that there is no further reason for him to be concerned, is quite likely not a Christian.

Jesus called Peter and James and John and others to himself and at once demanded of them that they should go forward and serve for others. That demand has not lessened through the centuries. The same demand of Jesus is made of Christians today as was made in Judea and Galilee.

Jesus saves that the saved may save others.

May 1931 awaken Christians to the fact of the Lord's demands upon them. And may 1931 Christians keep themselves aloof from that company of "falling away" ones.

A LIVING FAITH IS ESSENTIAL TO SALVATION

By Rufus A. Curtis

TO HAVE FAITH IN GOD is to implicitly "believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Mark 11:22; Heb. 11:6. Without this steadfast, unmoveable confidence in God, and His exceeding great and precious promises, that links the past with the limitless future, it is impossible to please Him. 1 Cor. 15:58; 2 Peter 1:4-11; Rom. 15:4.

It is a perilous thing to disbelieve God's words, for "he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, that God hath given to us, eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." 1 John 5:9-12; Isa. 45:9; John 20:31. He that believeth has "set to his seal that God is true." John 3:36. Fearful indeed will be the doom of the unbelieving. Jude 12, 13.

Faith in the immutable things of the Abrahamic covenant, is the sure and steadfast cable, that links us to hope's anchor of the soul, "by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us," in the gospel preached before "unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." Heb. 6:13-20; Gal. 3:6-9, 16, 24-29; Rom. 4:3, 9, 16, 23, 24.

It avails nothing for salvation purposes, for any man, or even an angel from heaven to preach "any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you," wrote Paul, being divinely inspired. An accursed and perverted gospel, cannot bring salvation to its deluded votaries. Gal. 1:6-12. Error has no sanctifying power whatever. The truth alone can set us free. John 8:32, 36.

No wonder inspiration gives us such a graphic portrayal of the false teachers, and their final doom. Phil. 3:18, 19; 2 Peter 2:1-22.

"The gospel of Christ," Paul declares, "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith." Rom. 1:16 17. Our faith is counted to us for righteousness, as Abraham's was. Rom. 4:16, 20-25. It would be as feasible to expect a living person without breath, as to expect a living faith without action.

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked, or destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works."

Those who would be made perfect, with that illustrious galaxy of faith's victors, enumerated by Paul in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, must "fight the good fight of faith," that they may "lay hold on eternal life," "when the chief shepherd shall appear." Heb. 11: 1 John 4:5; 1 Tim. 6:12; 1 Peter 5:4; Rev. 2:10.

As there is but one door into the sheepfold, and that door is Christ, how essential it is that we have a rock foundation upon which to build! John 10:1-15; Luke 6:47-49.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." 2 Cor. 13:5. "Stand fast in the faith," and "earnestly contend" for it. 1 Cor. 16:13; Jude 3; John 18:8.

In the language of E. B. Grimes:

"What is any work worth,
Unless it's worthily done?
What is any honor worth,
Unless it's nobly won?
What is any wealth worth,
Unless it's justly earned?
What is even love worth,
Unless it is returned?"

"What is any hope worth,
Unless it's high of aim?
What is selfish effort worth,
With its fleeting game?
What is any way worth,
Unless it's bravely trod?
What is life, itself, worth,
Without a faith in God?"

THE BRIDE'S SECRET

I have a secret — my lips may not speak
 The joy which my heart doth hide,
 As I ponder the word of my risen Lord,
 That He's coming again — for His bride.
 Will He come midst the cares of the busy day?
 In the first solemn watch of the night?
 In the awful hush of the midnight hour?
 In the early morning light?

Our Lord shall descend, with the victor's shout,
 For His waiting ones below;
 The dead shall be raised and the living changed
 In an hour that we cannot know.
 Then the spotless church and the sinless Christ
 United shall be for aye —
 Oh, the Rose of Sharon shall blossom sweet
 On that wonderful wedding day!

Have you donned your robe? Has it been made white
 In the Fountain that's free for all?
 Is your lamp all trimmed and burning bright?
 Are you ready, if He should call?
 Oh, put on your garment of righteousness,
 And watch through the gathering gloom!
 Though the Bridegroom tarry, His word is true;
 Be ready: He will surely come! — A. E. H.

THE LORD WILL REJOICE OVER THEE

By Samuel E. Haney

"No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord; and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." — Isaiah 54:17.

THESE ARE THE WORDS of the eternal One, the "I AM," of whom no one has a right to change to the, I was. For this eternal One keeps His word wherever it produces faith. Were such promises made us by finite man, how deficient of solace we should be when most in need! a broken stick when facing mountains!

Surely we are the "Eternal's guests, within his household evermore," for whom David prayed: "Guard us as thine own eye, hide us under the shadow of thy wings, from the ungodly who would harry us, the eager enemies that encircle us. Their hearts are closed to pity, their words are insolent; at every step they dog us, alert to pull us down, like lions longing to devour, like lions lurking for their prey. Up, O Eternal, face them, crush them; let thy sword save us from ungodly men! May thy hand slay them, O Eternal, sweep them out of the world!" Psalm 17:8-14, Moffatt.

The foregoing should cause us to adequately appreciate our heavenly Father's love for us and His interest in our spiritual welfare. O what a privilege "to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." Col. 1:12.

We are not to expect exemption from the enemy's weapons; but our faith in God's Word should make the weapon's intended effects — be what they may — unprosperous; a fact well demonstrated by Job's experience. Every effort having failed of its purpose, the old patriarch was caused to cry out, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." Job came out more than conqueror, for by his faith in God the devil's weapons produced diametrically opposite effects from what was intended. It was and still is in this way that Job and all of us get the alloy burned out of us, and become "more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir" (Isa. 13:12) — in God's sight.

Some day it is going to be generally known that Satan and all his emissaries — both spiritual and human — have inadvertently been God's lapidaries, chiseling away the crude protruding, jagged phases of our fallen nature; shaping and polishing us so as to respectively fit and adorn our heavenly Father's kingdom. But, O, how grievous is the accomplishment! and how prone we are to flinch, and desire to be released from the merciless lapidaries.

We read (Heb. 12:11), "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceful fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." (Italics mine.) James says (1:2), "Greet it as pure joy, my brothers, when you come across any sort of trial," Moffatt. And God says (Rev. 3:19), "I reprove and discipline those whom I love; so be in warm earnest and repent." Moffatt.

The world's present spirit of hatred toward the divine standard of righteousness and justice is manifestly the same as when King Darius made Daniel chief president over the hundred and twenty princes. An irrevocable conspiracy was immediately formed to deceive the king and to kill Daniel. But the scheme became a boomerang. Daniel continued "praying and making supplication before his God" despite the "law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not." He was cast into the den of lions. To the king's query in the morning: "Is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?" Daniel replied, "My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lion's mouths, that they have not hurt me." The prophet was taken out of the den unscathed and his conspirators with their children and wives were cast into it and destroyed. The king was made to acknowledge Daniel's God to be the eternal God. And Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius and Cyrus.

A conspiracy similar in purpose was engendered against Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego when they disregarded the king's edict by nonchalantly informing him, "Our God is able to deliver us from the fiery furnace" — unharmed. Faith in God's protecting arm was the secret of their courage, which was exemplified thus, there was one (a fourth man) "like the Son of God" with them.

While the devil's vengeful spirit toward God's children is not being appeased by physical lions and fire today, it is keenly felt and clearly manifested otherwise. Yes, dear ones, we are in the midst of the enemy's lions and fiery furnaces. But be assured that no harm can come to us, the new creatures in Christ Jesus, though the lions do rave and the fire crackle and the heat become white hot, for One mighty to save is continuously with us. Matt. 28:20.

The analogy between the Jews' and the Christians' experiences is further enhanced by Satan's emissaries whom he uses in inventing weapons to torment and militate God's children. Paul reminds us of how these credulous dupes are facing a sad awakening as the consequence of their conduct (2 Thess. 1:6, 7), "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you who are troubled, rest with us." Moffatt puts it this way, "You are suffering for the realm of God, and He means to make you worthy of it — since God considers it but just to repay with trouble those who trouble you, and repay you who are troubled (as well as us) with rest and relief."

Sweet rest is enjoyed only by God's children these evil days; the spirit of the world having closed the door against all others; for they know not Jesus the source of heavenly rest. To those who are willing to pay the price, self-abasement and worldly affection, He says, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

And ere long God is going to exult and sing over us as the result of our resting in His dear Son (Zeph. 3:17), "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy; he will rest in his love; he will joy over thee with singing" — "Exult over thee with shouts of triumph." Roth. "Exult with a festal song." Moffatt.

Dear reader: Is not the anticipation of hearing and seeing our loving, heavenly Father so exultingly happy over us as to triumphantly sing and shout, sufficient to relieve us of fear and doubt in every trial and tribulation? Yes, ought it not enable us to both subdue and transpose every "weapon" that is formed against us?

RESOLUTION

"IF I SHOULD DISCOVER a weakness in a friend, or happen to hear a story which is not to another's credit; or if a misstep has been made and atoned for, I will not pass it on.

"If I am a little more clear sighted, or better informed than the rest, and discover a wrong in another, I will keep the knowledge to myself, and let the world think as well of him as it can." — Selected by Anna B. Eychaner.

OUR HIGH PRIEST

I. THE CONDITIONS of Christ's Priesthood. Heb. 5:1. Christ took upon Him the seed of Abraham. Heb. 2:14-16. He became the son of Abraham and was made in all points like unto His brethren, that He might become a merciful and faithful High Priest in things pertaining to God. Had He not become a man, He could not have become a priest.

Christ was appointed a High Priest. Heb. 3:1. The high priests of old were designated, appointed, separated unto priestly office. Christ was also appointed a High Priest forever after the order of Melchisedec.

Christ was an High Priest in things pertaining to God. Heb. 2:17, 18. In order to fully represent us before God, Christ was made like unto His brethren. He can succor us in that He himself was tempted, but without sin. As a man He passed, apart from sin, through much the same experiences that we, His brethren, meet every day: hunger, weariness, pain, misunderstandings, petty trials, big temptations.

II. The Offering of Christ, as Priest. Heb. 9:11-14. In the earthly tabernacle the blood of goats and calves was typical, looking forward to Jesus Christ. He fulfilled these types. Christ entered the holy place and opened up a new and living way. Read Heb. 9:7-24; 10:19-22.

III. Offerings, Fulfilled in Christ. 1 Peter 1:19, 20. Willing sacrifice. Heb. 10:5-10. Spotless Offering. See Exodus 12:5; Heb. 9:14. Christ offered His own blood. Heb. 9:12.

An acceptable offering. Heb. 13:20. After Christ had died, God brought Him forth from the dead — He accepted the work which Christ accomplished on the cross. Heb. 10:12. See Phil. 2:9.

IV. An Intercessory High Priest. Heb. 7:24, 25. Christ, our High Priest, presents our cause. Heb. 9:24. He will cleanse us. Provision is made for us to walk a blameless life; victory over the world, the flesh and the devil is possible to all believers. But if we slip, 1 John 2:1 and 1:9, He will give grace in time of need. Read Heb. 4:15, 16 and 1 Cor. 10:13.

V. The Priestly Accomplishments. Heb. 10:10, 14.

a. We are perfected forever by the offering of the cross, and always so reckoned by the risen and seated Lord. There are many things in our daily walk that may greatly grieve the Spirit of Christ; but our standing is perfected forever. This High Priest is also our great Shepherd, and His work is to make us "perfect in every good work to do his will." Thus Christ seeks to bring our state up to our standing, and to lead us on to perfection in our daily walk and life.

b. We are sanctified (set apart) through the offering of the body of Christ once for all. And as we have been so set apart, let us make it real in our lives, "suffering without the camp" with Him, bearing His reproach. Read Hebrews 2:10, 11.

c. We are glorified through the work of Christ our risen High Priest. Rom. 8:30, 31; John 17:24 and 22. — Selected.

THE PAULINE EPISTLES

INTRODUCTORY TO THE EPISTLES IN GENERAL
AND THOSE OF PAUL IN PARTICULAR

By Lyman Booth

WE NOW ENTER into the consideration of that part of the New Testament called, "The Pauline Epistles." The twenty-one letters form a unique collection among the sacred books of the world. The Vedas, the Koran, the Zend-Avesta, the writings of Confucius contain no letters. They are either poems, philosophical discourses, or legendary histories, but they never appear in the epistolary form.

Letters between churches and those men who founded them were no new thing in the apostolic age. From very early times the scattered Jewish communities had thus corresponded with each other and when synagogues arose in the cities of Asia Minor, Greece and Italy, emissaries, carrying letters to various points, constantly passed to and fro. In this manner the apostles found a ready means for the conveyance of their correspondence with the churches which they organized.

Certain facts concerning many variations plainly characterize all of the epistles, especially those written by Paul. He first gives a greeting which emphasizes the keynote of the letter; second, an outpouring of thanksgiving for some favor shown by the church addressed; third, follows a portion dealing with some doctrinal point; fourth, a practical section flowing out of the doctrine which has been developed; fifth, persons addressed, salutations, and messages; sixth, a brief autographic conclusion in proof of the epistle.

The chronological order of his letters is not, to me, of so much importance as the truths they contain. Yet many think it is of considerable importance and therefore we give the following which is considered by eminent students to be the proper order. First, those written before his first imprisonment at Rome are First and Second Thessalonians in 52 and 53 A. D., respectively at Corinth. First Corinthians was written at Ephesus in the spring of 57; Second Corinthians, at Macedonia, in the summer of 57. Galatians and Romans at Corinth in 58. Those during his first imprisonment are: Philippians at Rome in 62; Colossians at Rome in 63; Philemon and Ephesians at Rome in 63 and the Epistle to the Hebrews written in Italy in 63. Those written after the first imprisonment are: First Timothy written at Macedonia in 64 or 67; Titus in 64 or 67 at Macedonia, and Second Timothy in 66 or 68 at Rome during his second imprisonment.

Not wishing to weary the reader's patience, I desire now to quote at length from Whitly, as I consider his words better than anything I might offer.

"The epistles are letters, written either to individuals or to particular churches, or to several churches, or circular letters to the churches in general. It is supposed that they were all written by one or other of the apostles, and excepting the Epistle to the Hebrews and the epistle ascribed to John, each has the name of an apostle affixed to it. The apostle Paul's name is affixed to thirteen of them and the Epistle to the Hebrews has been generally ascribed to him; Peter's name to two and one each to John, Jude and James.

"Now if they were actually written by the apostles, what reason can there be in the opinion which many maintain, that they are not to be considered as of equal authority with the Gospels? The Gospels indeed record the words and actions of Christ; but the human testimony by which these words and actions were recorded might even be thought inferior to that of the apostles, for neither Mark nor Luke were apostles; and we have as full proof that the epistles were inspired, as that the Gospels were.

"Various reasons may be assigned, as to why many truths should be more obscurely delivered during our Lord's ministry than afterward, concerning which He gave positive instructions; and where are we to look for the full and explicit declarations of "the whole counsel of God" but in the writings of those whom the Lord Jesus selected as the depositaries of His doctrines, to whom He gave the keys of the kingdom of heaven; to whom He promised the gift of the Holy Spirit, "to teach them all things, and lead them into all truth"; whom He sent to make known His Gospel, even as the Father had sent Him? If the doctrines as taught by the apostles, was the unadulterated and entire truth of God and altogether of divine authority, why should it not be so when committed to writing?

"It must also be observed that it is impossible that we can know what the apostles preached except from what they themselves wrote, or what others wrote concerning them. And can we suppose that their own writings are of less authority, than the writings of others on the same subjects? If there be any ground for making this distinction between the Gospels and the apostolical writings, how is the church, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, to discover this distinction? It therefore follows that what the apostles have delivered in these epistles as necessary to be believed or done by Christians must be as necessary to be believed and practiced in order to salvation as what was personally taught by Christ himself and is contained in the Gospels.

"Most of the epistles, especially those written by Paul, were written to the churches, the planting of which is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. And the history so tallies with them, even in the most minute particulars, and evidently without the least design or aim at coinciding with the other writers that the more carefully they are examined and compared with the history, the clearer it will appear, that both are genuine. This has been shown clearly by Dr. Paley in his work; and I am of the opinion that all the genius and care of any number of the most able writers who ever lived would be wholly insufficient to forge a history and a number of epistles, so frank and artless, and yet make the one completely confirm the other."

(To be continued)

“WAIT ON THE LORD”

NATURE AND GOD

I 'M LIVING AGAIN a visit with my little girl, who isn't very little, quite the contrary. But since she came to us at birth, such a darling baby, she has always been just that, our little girl. The visit is one of many and each one a delight, bringing peace and gladness.

It was not always so. For a few years there was much pain, such as only fathers and mothers know, when youth is trying its wings. When new forces come into being, we call it the adolescent age. The many Saturdays and Saturday nights, Sundays and Sunday nights, which through all her days I had taught her belonged to God, when I knew not where she was or with whom! I prayed over and over again, "Loving Father, keep my little girl," and turned and went to sleep.

I had tried everything I knew and now I left it all with God. He kept her as only He could keep; brought her safely through dangers that even now I tremble at their remembrance. He not only kept her from dangers, but kept her clean. And the years of patient teaching are now bearing fruit.

Over and over again the lessons of Christian observances blossom forth: always to speak kindly of people or not at all, to be kind to the aged, unfortunates, etc., meeting her wifely duties, keeping her home as only a Christian girl, taught from the Holy Scriptures, could. How my heart rejoices in the goodness of God!

My thoughts go back to a Psalm of David. "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?" Read the entire chapter (Psalm 27) and renew your confidence in David's God. Think with David, "Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear."

When at times we think God has forsaken us, and doesn't answer our prayers as we think He should, let us remember to "wait on the Lord, wait, I say, on the Lord."

— From one who has learned to trust.

WHAT A CONTRAST!

THEOLOGIAN'S TELL US THAT MAN is an "endless being," and will therefore live as long as God will live. Whom shall we believe, men, or God, in His Word? Here is the contrast that tells the story:

JEHOVAH	MAN
Lives forever. Deut. 32:40.	Of few days. Job 14:1.
Everlasting to everlasting. Psa. 90:2.	Life a handbreadth. Psa. 39:5.
King of eternity. Jeremiah 10:10, margin.	In a moment goes down. Job 21:13.
Living Father. John 6:57.	Corruptible man. Romans 1:23.
Ancient of days. Daniel 7:9.	Days a shadow. Ecclesiastes 6:12.
King immortal. 1 Timothy 1:17.	Mortal man. Job 14:17.
Only hath immortality. 1 Timothy 6:15, 16.	Man is vainly. Psalm 39:11.

— Selected.

THERE ARE MEN WHO GLORIFY nature and rail at God. They honor nature's laws as just, and complain of God's judgments as cruel and severe. They believe in a god more merciful than the God of the Bible. They cannot believe in a God who drowned the world, burned Sodom, and will punish sin and destroy sinners at the end. They believe in the "god of nature".

But what do they gain by the change? Are not "the laws of nature," as they term them, as immutable as those inscribed on tables of stone? Do not fires burn; floods overwhelm; waters drown; earthquakes swallow up; lightnings blast; tornadoes desolate; tempests destroy; sunbeams scorch; frosts congeal; diseases waste; pains rack; sorrows pierce; and calamities afflict mankind? Are not toil, and labor, and hunger, and famine, and pestilence, and all the nameless agonies of dying men in accordance with the "laws of nature"?

They gain just this: they put away the chastisement of a Father and fling themselves amid the revolving glarings of an almighty machine that crushes them in the dust, and then grinds them to powder. They have the same facts they had before, with no possible relief from them. They retain every trouble, and reject every consolation. They have the same realities of sin, and sorrow, and penalty. They have only blotted out mercy, made penitence vain, and forgiveness and peace impossible. They have kept the disease and flung away the remedy.

Let then the infidel glory in the fact that he has preserved his death warrant, and burnt up the pardon that might have cancelled it; that he has kept every sorrow of earth, and rejected every joy of the age to come. But let the Christian rejoice that he possesses every real blessing that the ungodly man can boast of, and added to them all, he has the presence of a divine Father, and the sympathy of an almighty Friend, who, while He reproves in righteousness and punishes in justice, yet pardons with such infinite and compassionate love that the heart of the penitent turns to Him with tears, as to the only Savior, saying, "There is forgiveness with thee that thou mayest be feared." — Selected by Alice B. Curtis.

"MY BROTHERS, Christian men, I utter a plea for your boys and girls. Give them some of your time. Try and find out what it is God meant when He sent your boy into the world. He meant something, and if you listen to him, though the prattle be but baby prattle, if you watch him, though all his work is play, you will find out if you want to. And when you have discovered the possibility, remember that no God-created capacity in any child can be perfectly responsible and fulfilled save as the whole child nature is developed in the fear of the Lord. The first thing, the most important thing, is that your children should climb from their faith in you and love for you, to faith in God and love for God." — G. Campbell Morgan.

WORSHIP

All people that on earth do dwell,
Sing to the Lord with cheerful voice;
Him serve with fear, His praise forth tell,
Come ye before Him, and rejoice.

The Lord, ye know, is God indeed,
Without our aid He did us make;
We are His flock, He doth us feed,
And for His sheep He doth us take.

O enter then His gates with praise,
Approach with joy His courts unto:
Praise, laud, and bless His name always,
For it is seemly so to do.

For why? the Lord our God is good,
His mercy is forever sure;
His truth at all times firmly stood,
And shall from age to age endure.

— William Kethe.

THE SHIP'S PILOT

By John Denchfield

OUR LIVES HAVE MANY TIMES been compared to ships at sea. Just as a ship sets out on its journey over the trackless sea, so we set out and travel from day to day on the great journey of life.

Every ship, small or great, must have a pilot. Though the ship may be complete in itself, it needs someone to guide it through the many dangerous passages, around the shoals and away from the rocky reefs. Without its pilot a ship, no matter how strong it may be, is doomed to destruction.

We, as ships on the great sea of life, need a pilot to guide us safely through our many trials and temptations, that we may not become stranded or wrecked by the shoals and reefs of sin. Jesus, the Christ, is the greatest Pilot the world has ever known. Have you ever heard of any other who could calm a raging sea with just the words, "Peace, be still," as our Lord did?

Whether on the sea or in the hearts of men, Jesus is the greatest of all pilots. We hear His words, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." John 14:27. We recognize His divine presence and all is well. We are at rest; for Jesus, our Pilot, is with us.

A ship must be kept in perfect alignment if it would travel easily and smoothly. Every part of the ship, fore and aft, from the hold to the topmast, must be under the control of its pilot. Unless all is under his control, the pilot cannot guide the ship, no matter how much he may try.

Our lives, our every desire, our every thought must be in subjection to our Master if we would have Him guide us in all things. We must allow Him to pilot us if we wish to be directed to the Haven of Rest, to life with Him, reigning with Him forever more. He cannot guide us unless we give Him absolutely full control.

First we must accept Him as our Pilot and then we must allow Him to guide us. Where are we? Have we accepted Him? If we have, are we subjecting our will to His? Are we giving our Pilot full control?

BRILLIANT GEMS IN GLORY

By Cecil Smead

THERE WERE TWELVE STONES on the breastplate of judgment which Aaron, the high priest, wore into the oracle of God's presence, the holy of holies. Each stone represented a tribe of Israel. The holy of holies was a little room with neither window nor lamp. The glory of the Lord was its sole but unsurpassable light. Precious stones glitter and blaze in accordance with the brightness of the light they reflect. Consequently, when those gems on the breastplate of the high priest were struck by the rays from the radiant glory of God, they blazed forth the more intensely in splendor.

According to the Epistle to the Hebrews, Jesus Christ is our High Priest. He has gone into heaven itself, the holy of holies of God's presence, there to make intercession for us. He, as High Priest, is bearing the breastplate of judgment with its brilliant gems to be bathed in the purest of splendor from the throne of God. If we are those jewels on that breastplate, lit by that ineffable glory, it is because Jesus Christ has taken away our transgressions and has washed us clean in His pure blood. Henceforth, we are sanctified to dwell where those shining rays from the God of heaven can light upon us. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. 4:16.

It is only when we realize our true status as sinners that we can accept Christ's cleansing blood, and that He can present us sanctified before the throne of grace to the God of Glory. When we realize our own insufficiency, and the all-sufficiency of Christ, then it is that we know that to come boldly means to come courageously, with confidence in Christ, but at the same time, thankfully and humbly be-

(Continued on page 218)

WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED?

THIS MOMENTOUS QUESTION was asked by the jailor of old. Acts 16:30. The Apostle Paul and Silas, his co-laborer, replied "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." The above expressions were not only rote words in their tongue, a mere mechanical repetition, as it were, without exercise of the understanding, but they knew whereof they spake, for it is written: "They spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house" — they qualified what it meant to believe on the Lord Jesus.

It is essential to salvation to believe on Jesus as Lord; therefore the apostles always preached the exaltation of Jesus. In the discourse of the apostle Peter on the day of Pentecost, the gist of his sermon was the exaltation of Jesus — that "God hath made this same Jesus . . . both Lord and Christ." When the multitude understood this doctrine they were pricked in their heart, and the sequel shows that they believed, for they asked what they should do; how they should ratify their faith in the Lord Jesus.

"Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit: . . . then they that gladly received his word were baptized."

Philip, the evangelist, preached "Christ" to the Samaritans, and when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, associated with the name of Jesus Christ, they, like the multitude on the day of Pentecost, obeyed the injunction of baptism in the name of Jesus Christ.

The eunuch also belongs to the same category. Philip preached to him "Jesus", and when the eunuch believed with all his heart there was no hindrance for him to enter into a covenant relationship with the "Son of God," whom he confessed, and Philip immersed him, doubtless, in the same name he did the Samaritans, as we have no record that Philip immersed in any other name but in the name of Jesus Christ.

Saul of Tarsus, after he became acquainted with the Lord Jesus, was also baptized, calling on the name of the Lord, and subsequently taught immersion in His name. See Acts 19:5; Rom. 6:3-5; Col. 3:17.

Cornelius, the centurion, and all that were with him, when they heard the testimony of the apostle Peter, who spoke the same things to the Gentiles as he did to the Jews, namely, that "Jesus is Lord of all;" that God ordained Him the Judge of quick and dead; that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins — they also were baptized. Acts 10:48.

While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Spirit confirmed the testimony, and the Gentiles gave evidence of a quickened mind, and began to magnify God. Then Peter commanded them to be immersed (like the Jews — Acts 2:38) in the name of the Lord — "in the name of Jesus Christ." — R. V.

What shall we say more? We might speak of Lydia, Apollos, Crispus, the Bereans and the Corinthians.

Now, we have shown from the Scriptures the order, namely: hear and believe the doctrine of the exaltation of Jesus, then be immersed in His name for the remission of sins. Having thus become covenantly related with the Lord, it is enjoined to remain loyal to the end, "grounded and settled, and not be moved away from the hope of the gospel," in order to receive the promise — eternal life (Col. 1:23). — From The Witness, 1889.

FEAR NOT

By Gerald L. Cooper

"And he answered, Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them."

THE SYRIANS WERE WARRING against Israel, and Elisha, the prophet, warned the Israelitish king each time against them. The Syrian king came to know of it and he sent a host to put Elisha to death. When Elisha's servant saw the host he said, "Alas, my master! How shall we do?"

It was then that Elisha said the above words. To prove to the young man that this was true, he prayed to God to open his eyes that he might see. The Lord opened the eyes of the young man and he saw horses and chariots of fire in the mountains surrounding Elisha.

Elisha then prayed for God to smite the Syrians blind. He did so and Elisha, deceiving them, led them out to Samaria to the king of Israel. Then in place of allowing the king to smite them, he gave them food and sent them away.

God was with Noah at the time of the flood, saving him and his family and destroying the rest of the people. He was with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, promising each of them that He would bless the nation of the land through him.

God proved to Moses that He was with him when He caused Moses' rod to turn to a serpent. Later He proved to the children of Israel that He was with them when He guided them safely to the promised land through the leadership of Moses and Joshua.

He was with the judges that ruled the Israelites and with David and Solomon. Each time He showed them that He was more than were their enemies. Sometimes He showed them by a miracle and other times by His spirit.

God is also with us; He shows His guidance every day. He keeps us under His wing away from the cares of the world. He allows us to gather to worship Him while in other countries Christians are being persecuted. He gives us all of our temporal needs, such as food, clothing and shelter.

Let us earnestly consider whether we are worthy of this care. If we aren't, let us get busy and accomplish something for our God who is so graciously kind to us.

UNTRANSLATED WORDS OF JESUS

SOME YEARS AGO the late Dr. George H. Morrison met, in Glasgow, General Agha Petros, Commander-in-Chief of the Assyrian Forces during the World War, and had an interesting conversation with him, being most interested by the news that at his home, away up in the mountains behind Nineveh, they still speak the very language that the Lord spoke.

Sometimes the children of General Petros, like other bairns, are a little unwilling to get up in the morning, and if it happens to be one of the girls his wife will go to the bedroom, and say, "Talitha cumi," which means, "Daughter, it's time to get up." Sometimes, again, when his children come home from school they find the house door shut, and if nobody comes immediately to open it they shout for admittance, and what they shout is a word very familiar to Gospel readers — "Ephphatha." "But," says Doctor Morrison, "I think the last thing he told us was even more interesting. He said this, 'Supposing my wife and I go out some afternoon, and we leave the family at home, and then, suppose we make more calls than we intended, and we are late in getting home. Of course, in this country the little children would not mind in the least, but in that country they are never quite safe, and when the darkness comes the children get anxious, and so when I come to the door the children say, "Lama sabachthani? Father, what has kept you, where have you been, why have you left us like this?'" "

Turn up once more the twenty-seventh chapter of Saint Matthew, forty-sixth verse, where you read, "And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Just as if our Lord were a little child beginning to get frightened, feeling all alone, and crying out to his father, "Where are you? Why are you not at home? We are very lonely without you." — The World's Crisis.

THE VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS

"LUKE INDICATES THE IMPORTANCE of the beginning of John's public ministry by enumerating the rulers at the time: first, the ruler of the Roman Empire, Tiberius, who succeeded Augustus; then the governor of Judea, Pontius Pilate, who succeeded Archelaus, deposed by the Romans; Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great, who reigned over Galilee in the north of Palestine and Perea, east of the Jordan; finally the Jewish religious rulers, Annas, regarded by the Jews as legitimate high priest, and his son-in-law, Caiaphas, made high priest by the Romans. With this personnel, the student should become familiar, for it is the situation during our Lord's ministry." — Peloubet's Notes.

WHERE IS THE PROFIT?

WHEN CHARLEMAGNE DIED they did this. They carried him into his sepulchre; they seated him on a throne of ivory inlaid with gold and set with precious jewels; they clothed him in purple robes of royalty; on his head they put a jeweled crown, on his finger a signet ring, in his hand a sceptre, symbolic of his power; on his lap a scroll chronicling his deeds and recording his victories on the battlefield. And they sealed the tomb of Charlemagne.

Ages and ages after, they broke the seal of the tomb. Time had eaten and gnawed the flesh from the bones, and there on the ivory throne inlaid with gold and set with precious stones, sat a skeleton. At his feet was lying a heap of dust which at one time had been his flesh and robes. His crown had dropped down onto his bony shoulders; his ring had slipped from his finger. Time had gnawed the hand that had grasped the sceptre and all were lying on the floor, and as they fell the scroll unrolled and his hand had fallen open and was pointing to the words:

"What will it profit a man if he gain the world and lose his own soul." — Selected.

BRILLIANT GEMS IN GLORY

(Continued from page 216)

cause of such infinite mercy.

Whenever we enter the church to worship, singing praises, praying, devoutly hearing, and whenever we pray, we feel as though the gems adorning our High Priest's breastplate are being especially displayed for the inspection of God. Those favored gems must blaze right back with increased splendor, if that were possible. We also must glow within and without with increased reverence at the honor done us. His glory lights us within to a white heat, and outwardly our attitude, our countenances, glow with that fire of devoutness which is always the effect upon those in the presence of God.

There are those around the throne of God in heaven who constantly pay homage to Him, crying, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come." Rev. 4:8.

Christ is always in God's presence; the breastplate is always in God's presence; we are always in God's presence. But in church and in prayer we are being especially held up for God's inspection, and for His glory to shine upon us. If we truly are those brilliant gems in the ineffable glory, we too should burn within with devotion and reverence. That song of holiness should fill our innermost being with the music of reverence. With our hearts so bubbling over, our faces should be luminous with that glory which comes from God alone. Our actions should show it.

Let us thank God for His mercy. Let us thank Jesus Christ because He loves us and wants, O so much, to hold us up to the gaze of His Father, that we might be filled with that light which cannot be hid.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"FOLLOW AFTER CHARITY, AND DESIRE SPIRITUAL GIFTS; BUT RATHER THAT YE MAY PROPHESEY." — 1 CORINTHIANS 14:1.

SPIRITUAL GROWTH

A RECENT SUBJECT in a sociology class was that of the religious organization. Three environments mentioned with which we deal in life were the physical, the social, and the spiritual. It was doubted whether the spiritual should be included here, some expressing the belief that spirituality is mere imagination. One can imagine almost anything that he desires and determines. He can imagine pain, sorrow, happiness or spiritual things — whatever comes to him. I believe that we do have spiritual environment and that it comes through prayer and study of the Word of God.

The mind must be enlightened by divine truth before it can discern the things which are spiritual. It is perhaps characteristic of the times we now live in that the spiritual side is less developed than formerly. This side of our lives must be developed through an earnest, willing and continued effort; otherwise the promised grace and the knowledge of God is not obtainable. If God is all, and in all, the material and the spiritual should blend together, rather than there being a segregation or elimination. This will be demonstrated in the age to come.

The genuine Christian will so develop the physical, the social and the spiritual that together they will glorify God's name now. The absence of the spiritual renders the individual self-righteous and unable to comprehend the grace and truth which God now extends through Jesus Christ.

THE TONGUE

TWO OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS deal with the sins of the tongue. When you go to a doctor, the tongue is the first thing he wants to see. Evidently it has something to do with your health. The apostle James says it "Defileth the whole body". When dealing with the tongue you have a subject that is in everybody's mouth. God scattered mankind at Babel by touching the tongue and again at Pentecost when re-making mankind. God said more about the third commandment than any other. Swearing is professing your loyalty to Satan.

No great man is a great talker; it takes twice as much brains to keep your mouth shut. It is the weakest wheel that creaks and groans the most. Don't believe everything you hear about people. It may not be so. Act toward the accused one as you would want him to act toward you, under similar circumstances. You can whisper away a reputation by a question or a shrug of the shoulders. Talking about the Golden Rule is not keeping it. To listen to gossip is as bad as to do it. Where there is no wood the fire goes out. Conversation is the test of character. The world needs a generation of good conversationalists. — Selected.

FINDING MYSELF

ALONG A PATHWAY that leads to Florida's "Singing Tower" is a tablet bearing this inscription: "I come here to find myself." It is so easy to get lost in the world. Along the pathway of life stands the church. It asks you to come in and find yourself. It is so easy to get lost in materialism, doubt and unbelief; lost in selfishness and pride and lust. The church will help you find your way back to God, faith and hope; to find your true self.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

THE CLEVELAND SOCIETY celebrated the Thanksgiving season by making up a basket for some of the needy families of the neighborhood. Each member brought some article of food to contribute to the basket. It was found that there was enough to furnish Thanksgiving dinners to three families.

A Christmas party was held on the night of December 12. The attendance was about sixty-five. Each one brought a ten cent gift which was exchanged with someone else.

The last three months of the year have been highly successful, and interest has greatly increased.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 6; Ohio, 4; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 2; California, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

JOHN THE BAPTIST was the son of Elisabeth and Zacharias, and the cousin of Jesus. The Bible tells us very little of his boyhood. It does say that John was to touch no wine nor strong drink, and that he "was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel."

Several years passed by, when all at once John appeared, coming from the wilderness preaching a new doctrine. He lived very simply, eating very plain food and wearing very plain clothing, but his message attracted the attention of all Judea, even Jerusalem, and many came to hear him.

What was this message? "There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water; but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost."

And who was the One mightier? Jesus. John was not one bit jealous of Jesus. Instead, he felt very humble and unworthy in comparison.

And what did John mean by, "I have baptized you with water"? Why, he told the people that if they were sorry for the wrong things they had done, they could go down into the water and be baptized. Thus, they were clean again, as if their sins had been washed away, and then they were ready to start out on a new life. In this way, in their faith, the people were being prepared to receive Jesus, when He should appear.

Multitudes came to hear him, and were baptized. He did not spare their feelings, but spoke to them very plainly. He even called them vipers, and asked who had warned them to run away from the wrath to come upon them as evil doers.

These Jews seemed to think they could live as wickedly as they pleased and yet be saved, because they were children of Abraham. But John said God could raise up children to Abraham from stones. He warned them to repent and do good. He compared them to trees; the trees which did not bear good fruit were cut down and burned up.

The people were greatly impressed. They said, "What shall we do then?"

John replied, "If you have two coats, give one to someone who has none. If you have food, divide it with someone who is in need."

Even the publicans came to be baptized and asked, "What shall we do?" John told them to take no more than was really due them.

To the soldiers he answered, "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages."

The prophets had foretold this just as it had worked out: "Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

DO WE?

— make ready for Jesus as John has advised?

SOMETHING TO DO

- (1) Write the things John told these people to do.
- (2) Learn Luke 3:11.
- (3) Copy Luke 3:14.

WE BELIEVE

1 Corinthians 14:37

PRAY AND TRUST

We know when we talk to our Savior, He hears;
If we are abiding in Him, then no fears
Nor worry what happens to us through the years;
After we pray we'll trust.

We can't view the path lying on far ahead;
'Tis Jesus who sees all the way we must tread;
He promised to lead us — away with our dread;
After we pray we'll trust.

Sometimes even though we ask things in His will,
Our Lord knows it best and delays to fulfill;
Then may we have faith in abundance, until
After we pray we'll trust.

Oh, let us look up and rejoice just to know
Our Savior is near, guides the way that we go;
No matter what comes, life at last He'll bestow,
After we pray and trust.

— Ella I. Brown.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON III. — January 18, 1931

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

Luke 3

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 40:3-11

GOLDEN TEXT

Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. — Luke 3:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Gospel of Repentance.

Basic Truth. "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Luke 13:3.

Outline. I. The Message of John. II. The Need for True Repentance.

I. The Message of John. The man who had been such a remarkable child in his infancy is living up to his reputation. He suddenly appears upon the scene of smug ease, soft living, corruption and wickedness to challenge the people's disregard for the laws of right living. With scathing words which burned deeply into the hearts of his hearers, he shocked them into repentance or else into enmity.

The work of the Savior would undoubtedly have been much more difficult had it not been for the ministry of John the Baptist. Not until man has a consciousness of sin will he begin to seek a Savior. John could not forgive their sins, but he could and did stir up in them a keen consciousness of the need for forgiveness, and thus made them ready to hear the message of the Christ, their true Leader who would indeed cleanse them of all iniquity.

The message of John is brutally frank and right to the point. He does not beat about the bush. He is disturbingly specific in defining what he means by the broad term, "sin." In unmistakable terms he tells them that their boasted Abrahamic lineage is so much bunk unless they cease to disgrace that noble ancestor by their unscrupulous living.

II. The Need for True Repentance. If John were here today it is quite probable that he would find as much occasion for stinging denunciation of standards of living as he did in his own day. The American people have been aptly described as needing a sense of sin. It is probable that there has seldom been a time in the world's history when the people as a whole have been so unscrupulous in their conduct, so brazenly defiant of all standards of decency and right. No doubt the startling decline in religious interest is due to this very fact. When people lose their sense of sin they feel no necessity for religion.

We need a John the Baptist today to call the people to repentance. What would John say to the grafting office-holders of our day, or to the grasping millionaires, or the robber corporations which oppress the working men? What would be his attitude toward the system that enables money to be the criterion of a man's worth, and that permits crime and lawlessness and class injustices without number, and trafficking in drink and narcotic drugs and human souls to go almost unchallenged?

What would he have to say to the unabashed divorce of our day that makes Herod look like a piker, to the deceit and selfishness and wanton cruelty of their sins, and the deliberate and wilful corruption of our youth by cigarette advertisers and producers of vile pictures?

Every believer can be a John. There is a crying need for a fresh proclamation of the gospel of repentance. Arouse people to a recognition of their sins, and lead them to the Christ before it is too late.

"We hear nothing further of Zacharias and Elisabeth; doubtless they both died before their great son came to maturity. We learn from Luke 1:80 that John early withdrew to the wilderness south of Judea, stretching eastward to the Dead Sea, a region so desolate that the Jews called it, 'The Abomination of Desolation.' Travelers who have passed over and through it tell us that it is destitute of all animal life, save a chance vulture or fox. For the most part, it is a waste of sand, swept by wild winds.

"In this great and terrible wilderness, John supported himself by eating locusts — the literal insect, which is still greatly esteemed by the natives — and wild honey, which abounded in the crevices of the rocks. A cave, like that in which David and his men often found refuge, sufficed him for a home, and the water of the streams which hurried to the Dead Sea, his beverage. Can we wonder that under such a regimen he grew strong? Here he found quiet and leisure to think and to pray. Here the Spirit of God brooded over him, and made of him a great prophet."

— Peloubet's Notes.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

John's message was simple and plain, yet it was sufficient to meet the needs of all classes of people. He prepared the people for Christ's first advent.

We must prepare them for His second advent.

John's message was plain direct practical for all classes.

Should such characteristics mark the preaching of the gospel today? John was humble, brave and zealous. Show how these traits can be developed in an individual and their effects upon the preaching of the gospel.

Make a list of the doctrines taught by John and compare them with the teachings of your own church. Were his teachings along practical lines or did they embrace some of the deeper doctrines of Scripture? Compare his style and methods of preaching with those used today. Would his methods be adaptable to present day conditions? — C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Produce, therefore, fruits worthy of reformation." — Luke 3:8, Diag.

This was spoken to the Pharisees and Sadducees who came out to where John was baptizing to find out who he was. He called them a generation of vipers, and asked them, "Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" Then he gave them the admonition of our text.

Had the Pharisees and Sadducees produced "fruits meet for repentance," as Matt. 3:8 puts it, or "fruits worthy of reformation", as the Diaglott has it, they no doubt would have treated Jesus in an entirely different manner from what they did. Instead of continually trying to trap Him, they would have been believers in Him and followers of Him.

Christ says in the Sermon on the Mount, "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." The Pharisees and Sadducees were known by lack of fruit. The Christian is easily discerned by the fruit that he constantly brings forth. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic. A Courageous Reformer.

For an example of true Christian courage, we find a most excellent one in John the Baptist. He was deeply impressed with the enormity of sin against God, and the hopelessness of sinners, unless a higher power intervened. With this conviction, and with a command from God coming to him in the desert, he went into all the adjacent country of the Jordan, calling men to repent.

"O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" seem harsh words, but they reveal a character which has the true conviction that he dare be in the right with God. He knew that those men needed plainness of speech and that baptism would avail nothing when only an outward show of repentance was manifested. Read also his answers to others in verses ten to fourteen.

But the greatest courage is shown in his conduct and replies, as recorded in John 1:19-23. He might have received glory and honor not his, but he answered, "I am not the Christ," and, "I am not Elias," but, "the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord." — F. A. S.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

DOLLAR-A-MONTH PLEDGES

Another year has commenced and in planning our work for 1931 it would be well for all Christians to plan for the furthering of the Lord's work. The National Bible Institution Board is still counting on 1000 individual subscription to the Dollar-A-Month Club so that the religious work — your work and mine — publishing The Herald and the Sunday School quarterlies and conducting the Bible Training Class — may be carried on properly.

I wonder if the brethren realize how little it is of the National Organization to ask of the brotherhood at large to carry on the work? Do you realize what a responsibility the executive-secretary and the other members of the Board have? If you do, I believe each one will consider the matter very carefully and prayerfully at this New Year and send in your Club membership immediately. It only means one dollar each month to you, but with cooperation 1000 clubbers could assure the financial backing to carry on our work.

The treasurer of the Board cannot raise this money by writing articles concerning the need unless each individual applies the appeal personally and responds with a pledge, as well as trying to interest others. The treasurer needs a representative in each community to present the work and assist the Board in securing the one thousand members. If you feel you can aid in this all-important task, write, and blanks and information will be sent.

Join the Club today and watch the progress toward the goal in coming Heralds.

Wishing you a Happy New Year,
Leland T. Hanson, Franklin Grove, Illinois.

Bro. Grover Gordon stopped overnight in Oregon on New Year's Day on his way homeward. His presence was appreciated at prayer meeting.

The week end of January 10th and 11th is the time for the regular monthly preaching service at the Ripley, Illinois, church. Let all in that vicinity be out to receive the messages.

Bro. Eugene M. Hall of Woodland, Michigan, Sr. Jessie Upton, of Geneva, Ohio, and Sr. Rena Endsley of Melbeta, Nebraska, have recently fallen asleep in Jesus. Obituaries will appear in a later issue.

A series of evangelistic meetings is planned for Hammond, Louisiana, beginning January 6 and likely continuing until the 25th. Bro. M. W. Lyon of Cleveland, Ohio, will conduct the first part of the meeting and Bro. F. E. Siple of Grand Rapids, Michigan, the last part. The full cooperation of all who can be present is urged.

Dear Friends: I would like to take this way of thanking each one of the members of the Golden Rule Home for their kindness and friendliness to me on my recent visit to the Home, to visit my mother, Mrs. Clara Chaffee, who is a charter member there. Each one made me feel at home and the matron, Mrs. Jackson, certainly does her part to make the Home a pleasant place in which to live.

I send best wishes to every one connected with the Home, and to the wonderful young people of the Training Class, for a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Mrs. Lola Chaffee Danforth.

SIPLE - LYON

The Herald is in receipt of the announcement of the marriage of Sr. Dorothy W. Lyon and Bro. F. E. Siple on New Year's Day at the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. J. S. Lyon of Citronelle, Alabama. The ceremony was performed by Bro. M. W. Lyon. The bride and groom are well known to our church people over the country, and The Herald extends to them best wishes for a long life of happiness and usefulness in the Master's service. The church at Grand Rapids will find in their pastor's wife a very efficient helper in the many departments of their work.

A GOLDEN WEDDING

Bro. Richard Skeels, esteemed first elder of the Grand Rapids church, and his good wife celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Christmas Day. And what a happy occasion it was for all!

During the afternoon open house was kept for friends in general, and dozens upon dozens took advantage of the opportunity. Then in the evening at 7:30 the church friends were invited in. More than forty were present to enjoy the social time and sit at the long table with the happy couple. The wedding cake was found to be not only a matter of art and beauty, but very delicious as well.

The institution of marriage is indeed exalted by such a beautiful example as this couple has given, and all wish them many more happy years together.

F. E. Siple.

DIXON'S DOINGS

On Sunday, December 28, Bro. Conner was with us again with two good sermons. We certainly enjoy Bro. Conner's talks, and we pray that the Father will give him health and strength to preach the gospel message throughout the years to come.

Our Sunday School is working hard to increase the attendance the coming year. We have enrolled at present, 72. The attendance last Sunday was 57. Some of the children were unable to come on account of sickness. May the Father's blessings be with these children and restore them to good health again.

The Gideon Band which won the contest were entertained by the Truth Seekers' Class, the girls giving a party for the boys on December 29. Games were the amusement for the evening. Prizes were also won by some. The table decorations were in keeping with the Christmas season. Sisters Dauntler and Drew were also present.

SOCIAL AT HOLBROOK

A very pleasant social evening was spent in the basement of the church at Holbrook, Nebraska, on Saturday, December 20, when forty-six friends and relatives of Bro. Arthur Hornaday came to spend the evening in honor of his birthday. The event was a surprise to Bro. Hornaday, as he was asked to come to the church for a Board meeting and upon arrival was greeted by his many friends. The occasion was also a pound social in honor of Bro. and Sr. Hornaday and they were the recipients of many useful presents. The basement was decorated in keeping with the holiday season and after a social evening a delicious lunch which was brought by the ladies, was served about ten o'clock, after which all departed home wishing Bro. Hornaday many more birthdays.

WELCOME TO BRO. AND SR. CONNER

On Thursday evening, December 18, the members of the Dixon church held a social in the basement rooms of the church in honor of Bro. and Sr. Conner, to extend to them our hearty welcome and to express pleasure in having them with us in our church work, and in coming to make their home in Dixon. A large number of members were present to enjoy meeting our pastor and wife. A most appetizing and bountiful dinner was served by the committee in charge, who deserve much credit for the beautiful appearance of the tables which were decorated in Christmas colors, with center pieces representing a chimney with Santa Claus and his pack of toys. These, with red candles, gleaming silver and shining glassware, were lovely and brought forth many expressions of delight and appreciation.

After the dinner, the tables were cleared and room made to play games, in which all took a part, and a thoroughly good time was enjoyed by everyone. The hours passed so quickly, that it was time to go home all too soon.

We are looking forward to many more such pleasant evenings of social companionship among our members during the winter.

Bro. and Sr. Conner are now at home with us, and are well pleased with their surroundings. We are sure the work will grow and be blessed with such helpers here with us.

Edith E. Miller.

INTERESTING WORK AT KOSZTA, IOWA

Under the leadership of Mrs. Mabel Kiger, the church at this place is moving forward actively. The women have a Dorcas Circle, and are holding monthly meetings to raise money to build a church. It is planned to make it log cabin style, as a main highway runs by the site, and it is hoped that the rural attraction may add interest to the work.

Those of the Sunday School who are present every Sunday on time and with a studied lesson in the last quarter of the year are to receive a reward. Several so far are in line for it. The members of the Sunday School are also reading the books from Matthew to Revelation by February 1, and all who do will be rewarded. After reading Matthew they took an examination, and thinking others might be interested, we give the questions used in the test, as follows:

1. What do the following suggest to you about Jesus: Bethlehem? Nazareth? Carpenter? Jordan? Sea of Galilee?
2. Who was sent before him to prepare the way? Name four others who were prominent in the events of His life, besides apostles.
3. Name five apostles.
4. Name five miracles.
5. Name five parables.
6. Name five thoughts from the Sermon on the Mount, by either quoting the verses or giving the thought in your own words.
7. Make two lists of the following names, by putting the friends of Jesus in one list and His enemies in the other: John the Baptist, Pilate, Pharisees, Herod, Joseph, Matthew, the wise men, High Priest, Thomas, Andrew.
8. Tell about the birth of Jesus.
9. Tell about His death.
10. Tell about His resurrection.

J. W. Williams.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody! Sign! Solicit! Watch!

A FAREWELL AND A WELCOME

"God be with you till we meet again," are the words that have been sung by Protestant Christians everywhere, especially when bidding farewell to one whom they have learned to love. But never did the above words make a people feel more sorrowful than when we sang them in our church at Niagara Falls last Sunday morning, when the congregation bade adieu to our beloved brother and pastor, Grover Gordon, who is leaving us after a year and a half of consecrated service to return to his former home in Nebraska. We regret very much that he finds it necessary to leave us after so short a stay here. But he assured us that he was not going to entirely give up preaching the gospel, for which we thank the heavenly Father because such men are needed to carry on the work.

Especially will our young people miss Bro. Gordon, for they all loved him and he loved them. Also we older ones realize that we have lost a dear friend and a good Bible student. We have often wondered and marvelled at the way in which he could make the Word of God so plain and simple so that all could understand. We never went from any service that he conducted but what we were satisfied he had rightly divided the Word of Truth. And in addition, he would go down into the mine of God's Word and bring up jewels that we never thought, or knew, were there. I would just like to add that if ever Bro. Gordon is traveling in your vicinity never be ashamed to invite him to occupy your pulpit.

So we bade our beloved brother farewell, but still hope that we shall have the happy privilege of seeing him again in the not distant future. And, if not here, may we meet in that everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, is the prayer of our church at Niagara Falls.

"When we asunder part,

It gives us inward pain.

But we shall still be joined in heart
And hope to meet again."

And now a few words about our new pastor, Bro. Clyde Randall. We think ourselves very fortunate indeed that we have been able to secure his services for a while, and also know that the work will continue without having to wait for a pastor, as Bro. Randall was here before Bro. Gordon left us. This brother needs no introduction to the brethren at large, as he has been a minister for several years and a contributor to The Herald. We are glad to welcome him in our midst and I hope that the brethren at Niagara Falls and Fonthill will give him all the support they possibly can.

Yours for the cause of Christ,
George T. Rennard, Niagara Falls, N. Y.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

A most wonderful Christmas gift was presented to our church by having three adults make the good confession and apply for church membership. Two, Mr. Ray Moore and Durwood York, were buried in baptism at the church on Friday night, December 26. The third, Mrs. Lyle Doan, requests an open water baptism and will be taken care of in the near future. How glad we all are to have these good people enter the ranks to help us hold aloft the banner.

Sunday School numbered 250 again on December 21. An unusual feature of the attendance contest between wearers of gold stars and of the silvers is that although the contest has been three months in length with the figures running into the thousands, yet with only one more Sunday left the Golds were in the lead by only 15. It has been very interesting to observe how the children and young people enjoy inviting others to come, and how successful they are.

A most splendid Christmas program was rendered on Tuesday night, the twenty-third, to a packed to overflowing house.

Bro. C. E. Randall, former pastor, enroute to Niagara Falls, stopped off over night on the twenty-sixth and was present at the baptismal service.

The Christmas week came to a busy close, and all were preparing to undertake their tasks for the beginning of the New Year. The new officers take charge at this time.

Splendid crowds were present at all services on December 28, and following the evening sermon a large group assisted in giving the pastor a warm send-off as he started driving toward Dixie Land. Various signs covered the car, and a few old shoes dangled from the rear.

Bro. Paul Hatch is taking care of the services during January, while the pastor is in the South, and we hope to be back ready for better service than ever before February first.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

REPORT FOR DECEMBER

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 2; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Hillisburg, 2. Funerals, 1.

Money received: Pleasant View, $17.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $15.00; North Salem, $6.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; Hillisburg, $25.00; Forest Stilson, $1.00. Expense: $16.30.

Due me from Conference Board for November, $8.00; for December, $13.30.

Note: At the close of the service at Burr Oak, Bro. Weaver, in behalf of the Burr Oak church, presented us with a nice bed quilt and a lot of other things to be used in the home. Thanks, Burr Oak.

Last Sunday the sisters of the Hillisburg church gave us a nice treat of food, for which we are thankful. We are having a fine Sunday School at Hillisburg under the leadership of Bro. George Finney. We are also glad to report a good Sunday School at Burr Oak, and at Pleasant View. May the Lord bless the work in 1931, as He did in 1930, is my prayer.

J. H. Anderson.

FONTHILL AND NIAGARA FALLS

The Niagara Falls church gave their Christmas program on Sunday, December 21, at the regular Sunday School hour. Even though we were slow in starting to prepare a program, it was an inspiration to see what was accomplished when all took hold and did their part.

The Christmas program of the Fonthill church was held on Monday, December 22. It was a scriptural account of Jesus, "Before He Came"—"When He Came"—"After He Came," with the choir taking part with appropriate songs.

Bro. C. E. Randall has been secured to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of the pastor. He will have charge of the work at these two points until the annual May meeting.

In closing our ministry with the Fonthill and Niagara Falls churches, we wish to say that never have we met with deeper love and more loyal consideration than from these brethren. The time spent with them has been most enjoyable and I will always look back to it as the most profitable and educational period of my life.

May God keep these congregations and fill them for more extensive service.

Grover Gordon.

THE DEVOTIONAL USE OF THE BIBLE

THE DEVOTIONAL VALUE of the Bible lies in its power to bring men into fellowship with God, to develop Christ-likeness, and to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit.

It is not sufficient that the child have an intelligent knowledge of the facts of the Bible, its dates, the authorship, the order of the books, etc. The Word of God must be brought to bear upon the life of the child to the end that he shall be brought into fellowship with God; to know God as the loving Father, and Jesus Christ as his personal Savior.

Through what means and methods of devotional Bible study shall the Word of God be brought to bear upon the life of the child that he may eventually enter into the deep experiences of the Word? In other words, how shall parents and teachers aid the child in discovering and appropriating in actual life the truths of the Bible?

One of the first requisites is that the instructor have a correct knowledge of the Bible — what it is, how it came to us, and the message it contains.

Mere reading of the Word is not sufficient. It has been said that no man can read the Word of God and be the same as before — all of which is true. But to really learn and know the message of the Bible — to apply its truths, one must really study; study diligently, persistently, tirelessly.

This in turn involves two essential factors, namely:

1. Methods of Bible study.
2. The right spirit and attitude.

METHODS OF BIBLE STUDY

1. The best and most accurate version with such standard versions as will aid in a clearer and better understanding of the Word.

2. The time should be when the mind is rested and in the best condition for study.

3. A specified time, a period definitely and sacredly set apart for the studying of the Word and meditation.

4. The readings should be systematic and regular. The portions selected with a definite purpose in view. To read large portions at one sitting is a plan to be commended and encouraged. This plan sustains the interest and affords a connected view.

5. Helps, such as photographs, models, pictures of great paintings, stories of travel in the Orient, etc., should be used.

SELECTION OF MATERIAL

The Scripture portions selected should be such as are suited to the devotional life of the child.

Regarding this Weigle says: "The material varies in its devotional values. Most important in childhood and adolescence are the life and teachings of Jesus. These present God near to the child as a Father, call forth admiration and awaken penitence, bring him under the spell of the Son of God, who communed with His Father naturally and constantly, and so lead to follow in the Master's train. Next to the gospels come the great Psalms. Here are the world's classics in the literature of devotion, and many of them lend themselves naturally to the experiences and needs of a child. After these will come the personal and practical portions of the epistles, followed by the great chapters in Deuteronomy, the flaming utterances of the prophets, and such narrative portions of both Testaments as best help one to realize the presence and goodness of God.

The child's interest and needs vary. To the beginner, stories dealing with the home and with God's ways in nature may be told, after the method of the kindergarten. In the primary department the experiences of school give a wider range, and the child will learn to read for himself passages dealing with the simple truths concerning God and His ways with men. This training will be broadened during the Junior years, when the child's social instincts begin to expand and he becomes a hero-worshiper. We shall seek then to imbue him with the spirit of moral heroism, and help him to acquire right habits and to understand the duty and the joy of service.

"Intermediate pupils are facing personal decision, and their readings should stimulate them to definite consecration to Christ and empower them for effective Christian living. The senior's interests will center around practical decisions, clear thinking, the settling of doubts and direct training in various forms of Christian activity. At every stage the material must be on the plane of the child's interests and experiences and desires if it is to be fruitful, rising year by year until he has worked out a satisfactory adjustment to himself, to society and to God."

The second essential factor in Bible study is the right spirit and attitude.

If the priceless treasures of Holy Writ are to be opened up to us, we must approach the Word in the spirit of a learner, in humbleness of mind, ready and willing to receive instruction. One must enter upon the study of the Word of God in a spirit of faith that his study will be rewarded.

There must also be a spirit of prayerfulness. Still another essential element is that of determination and perseverance. And last, but not least, there must be the spirit of obedience. Truths revealed involving duties must find expression in conduct.

Parents can further the child's devotional use of the Bible by setting the right example in the home. Read the Book reverently, simply and as a pleasure, rather than a stern duty. Children should be taught to handle the Bible reverently. A friend — now sleeping in Christ — never allowed any book, paper, magazine, or anything else, to be placed on top of the Bible.

Children should be encouraged to memorize portions — not simply single texts — but whole passages. These should be carefully chosen with a view of their vocational value.

— From Messiah's Advocate.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 13, 1931

NUMBER 15

THE JUDGMENT

By F. L. Austin

God "now commandeth all men everywhere to repent: because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." — Acts 17:30, 31.

THE APPOINTMENT OF THE JUDGE by God over Israel always followed God's punishment for sin. He did not ask the judge to indicate what the punishment should be. That, God himself had already attended to. The judge was raised up to deliver a repentant people and having delivered them to lead, encourage and strengthen them, and to build them in righteousness before God.

As long as they followed the directions of the judge, prosperity attended them. But when for any reason they failed to follow the admonitions of the judge, then God again took matters into His own hand and punished them anew. The judge revealed Israel's righteousness and Israel's sin. God rewarded Israel for righteousness, punished Israel for sin.

The reader is again asked to studiously and prayerfully review the principles of judgment as used by God and as revealed in the book of Judges. On page 71 the question was asked as to whether Christ is to be Judge like unto those whom God placed over Israel. In studying the Scriptures with a view to an answer to this query, the reader is asked to withhold decision and to prayerfully and candidly study the subject in an earnest effort to understand it from God's reasoning rather than from his own.

Our text above announces the fact that God has "appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." It is clear from the whole text that the Judge there referred to is none other than Christ. Writing to his son in the Lord, Paul says, 2 Tim. 4:1, "I charge thee therefore before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." He distinctly writes that this work of judgment both of the living and the dead shall take place at Christ's appearing.

The usual teaching, so far as the writer has observed, is to the effect that when Christ comes He, as Judge, will look over the records of each individual's past life and will adjudge as to whether that individual is worthy of life or of further punishment. But if God, in providing judges for Israel, did so in accordance with a principle of His own righteousness, then we must understand that God never appoints a judge to determine whether past conduct of an individual deserves reward or punishment.

If the old covenant principle of judgment as practiced by God was a "shadow" or an "ensample" or a "figure" of judgment under the new covenant, then it will be impossible for us to expect that Christ will review the lives of those who have previously lived and determine as to what their rewards or punishments shall be. In fact, such procedure would be discordant in the light of other scripture. For when Christ appears the second time to earth, He will already have caught away "to meet the Lord in the air" those who from death shall have been awakened, "with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God." — 2 Thess. 4:16, 17. True Christians "which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds."

These two groups, forming one company, shall have met the Lord in the air before "his appearing". Such will already have experienced the glorious fulfillment of Paul's word in Philippians 3:20, 21, that Christ "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Certainly such shall have already been rewarded. Christ as a trial-judge will not review their lives and indicate reward or punishment for them. Rather, as was indicated on page 71, their judgment progresses now, in this

(Continued on page 234)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

"Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark 9:23.

FAITH

A LETTER WAS RECENTLY received from one who had for years been presuming that she was exercising faith. But on reviewing her experiences and her circumstances and upon further studying the Scriptures on this theme, the sister has come to believe that what she had presumed to be faith was far short thereof.

"I have come to the conclusion that my faith was that I must see before I could believe, but that was wrong. 'Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen', Heb. 11:1. I thought, 'Have I been in ignorance in regard to faith?' I have never seen it in the light I do now. I feel now I must step out on God's promises, take Him at His word, . . . believing in faith that He has healed me, take my eye off of body symptoms and feelings, directing it fully upon God."

Has not the sister herein correctly analyzed faith? Mark quotes Jesus as saying, 11:24, "Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them."

Does not this answer the query that arises when, on reading of some of Christ's miraculous powers, we read that the one upon whom the Savior was working, cried with a loud voice as the miracle was being wrought? Why so cry? Evidently because of pain. Why pain? Evidently because the person believing moved, acted, stepped out, before any evidences had appeared in consequence of the Savior's words.

Jesus spoke to the maimed one and immediately the maimed one undertook to move and act. To do so produced pain. But to do so in spite of pain was evidence of the person's faith. The results of Christ's words followed.

Peter told the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple to "Rise and walk". Not waiting for his limbs to straighten, not waiting for his ankles to strengthen, not waiting to learn how to walk, the lame man immediately jumped up, leaping and praising. He did not wait for evidence. Faith moved him to act, as though the inspired word of blessing had already accomplished its purpose. He received. So Christ taught: "Believe that ye receive and ye shall have."

We often wonder if this little point is not the stumbling block before the face of many who seek to grow in faith.

We wait for the accomplishment before we even move. We wait for full results before we comply. It is scripturally evident that this is not God's way. He who has faith must necessarily act. He must act even in the face of seeming insurmountable conditions.

The priests marched forward to the waters of Jordan, even stepping into the water, in faith that they were to cross over on dry land. But the water did not begin to recede until after the faith of Israel had been attested by the march on toward, even into the stream. Then the waters receded.

Our sister's thought should be emphasized again and again, and proclaimed to all people.

THE NATION-WRECKING STONE

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S VISION was that of the symbols of four successive empires, Dan. 2. The head of gold represented the king and kingdom of Babylon, the breast of silver represented the kingdom of Persia. The brass, the iron and clay respectively represented other succeeding kingdoms. Before the feet of the image were materialized into national existence the head had wasted away.

Nebuchadnezzar saw a stone. It was cut out of a mountain without hands. It grew till it filled the whole earth. In verse forty-four, Daniel interprets this "mountain" to be another kingdom. At first it was diminutive, the size of a stone. The writer believes that this stone, later mountain, represented God's nation Israel that was and is to supplant all other nations.

The question arises, Is this carving of the stone out of the mountain going on at present? Is Israel being "carved" out from the nations of the world; being at the present time built up to stand alone on its own identity? Is the regathering of the Jews to the Land of Promise a work of this kind? Are we approaching that day when earth's kingdoms are to be shattered by the "stone" kingdom?

We can at least recognize the fact that God's chosen people, the descendants of Abraham, are at last reviving as a nation. The present condition of the world's nations, each one maneuvering for position for mastery, certainly reveals them as failing to stand together even as iron and clay fail to adhere. All in all, one is constrained to feel that with unadhering nations and with growing Israel, the world is approaching the fulfillment of the wrecking of the nations by the smiting stone.

And this emphasizes the near return of Him who is to be King and Leader in that great day of the wrecking of Gentile power and of the establishment of Israel.

Conditional Immortality

ONE WHO IS IMMORTAL is in every way incorruptible, without possibility of perishing or dying. The Scriptures plainly teach conditional immortality, but the theory of inherent immortality cannot be sustained by them; therefore, it is untrue.

All persons with mature and unbiased minds, in face of scriptural evidence, must admit that man was created entirely mortal, that immortality is the gift of God, not in Adam, but in Christ Jesus (Rom. 6:23).

Taking the Scriptures for the criterion, we will now proceed to prove that man was created entirely mortal. Man is the noblest of all the creatures of the earth, life being more fully manifest through him than through the rest of the living creatures. Nevertheless, man was made of the same material and has the same kind of life common to all living creatures on the face of the earth. God said, "Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle and creeping thing and beast of the earth after his kind: and it was so." "Out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air." Gen. 1:24; 2:19.

The Lord God "formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life" (Gen. 2:7), and in addressing Adam said: "for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19). The Lord God also said, through the mouth of the prophet, in speaking of both man and beast: "All go unto one place; all are of dust, and all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:20). If Adam possessed inherent immortality, why then prevent him from taking of the tree of life, seeing that an immortal being cannot perish (Gen. 3:22-24)? According to the Scriptures all living creatures have one breath or the same kind of life. It is written: "All flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man: all in whose nostrils was the breath of life . . . every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and creeping things, and the fowl of heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark." Gen. 7:21-23.

The apostles also plainly taught conditional immortality, and that it pertained to the future state of man. (See Rom. 2:7; 1 Cor. 15:46-57; Phil. 3:20, 21; 2 Peter 1:4; 1 John 3:2; Jude 21.) The Lord Jesus is the only creature who hath immortality. He (not Adam, the first) brought an immortal life to light (1 Tim. 6:16; 2 Tim. 1:10; Heb. 5:9). Although Adam was created in the image of God, after His likeness — that is to say, in form — he was similar to God (James 3:9), unlike in this respect to all other creatures, for there was not found an helpmeet for him until Eve was created and brought to Adam, who immediately recognized in her a creature like himself. In fact, Adam was only "the figure of him that was to come." Rom. 5:14.

There is but One who is the express image of God, who also dwells in the brightness of His glory, namely, Jesus the Christ (Heb. 1:3; 1 Tim. 6:16; 1:17). Jesus was first made a little lower than the angels, being subject to death, and, consequently, mortal; and while in the likeness and fashion of man He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death. Wherefore, also, God highly exalted Him above the angels, crowned Him with honor and glory, and set Him over the works of His hands — made Him Lord of all.

According to the Scriptures, mortal man can receive immortality from the Son of God only, He having received life in himself and the power to give it to whom He will. God fulfilled all His promises in the Son, and committed all things unto Him; therefore, the apostle said: "In him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power" — "Christ is all and in all."

The Spirit (Jesus — 2 Cor. 3:17; 1 Cor. 15:45) saith: "To him that overcometh with I give to eat of the tree of life." "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish". Rev. 2:7; John 10:27, 28. How plainly the Scriptures teach that the Son of God is the Giver of eternal life; or, in other words, that we can receive immortality from Him only.

It is not enough to simply believe that man is mortal, but it is also essential to salvation to believe in Jesus, according to the Scriptures. According to the precepts of the apostles (and they were the mouthpieces of the Lord — Matt. 10:20), the conditions of salvation are as follows: believe with all our heart that Jesus hath been highly exalted; that He is both Lord and Christ; then confirm this faith by immersion in His name, for the remission of sins, and receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. Continue faithful to the end in order to be clothed with immortality. — The Witness.

THE SAVIOR'S HANDS

A pair of little hands I see,
Two chubby infant's hands, so wee,
Clutching sweet Mary's face in glee.

Two boyish hands, sturdy and brown,
Holding the plane in Nazareth town,
In Joseph's shop as the sun goes down.

Two hands of youth, now older grown
Folded in prayer by a rugged stone
Out on the hillside, all alone.

A young man's hands, toil-worn and strong,
Seeking to aid in the restless throng
The helpless victims of sin and wrong.

Two tired hands, 'neath the olive tree
In the Garden of gray Gethsemane
Clasped, for my sin, in agony.

Two outstretched hands on a cross of wood,
From cruel nail wounds red with blood,
Invite a lost world back to God.

Oh! hands of the crucified Christ divine,
Take, take in Thine hands these hands of mine,
Until they shall thrill with the power of Thine.

— Selected by Louise E. May

THE PAULINE EPISTLES

By Lyman Booth

(Continued from last week)

IF EVER THERE WERE a number of books that contain unmistakable and internal evidence of being genuine so that no reasonable person, after a diligent examination of them could doubt it, these are the books. If the epistles be genuine, they must be inspired and they therefore prove the divine origin of Christianity. Our Lord not only foretold His death and resurrection, and that, before the destruction of Jerusalem and in that generation, the gospel should be preached extensively, but He promised to invest His apostles with miraculous powers, especially with the gift of tongues, in order to confirm His teaching.

I now challenge all skeptics to show whether anything of like nature was ever undertaken by other authors of any doctrine or religion; whether they ever gave to their followers any promise of supernatural powers and had that promise fulfilled? No such thing was ever done except by our Lord Jesus Christ. The apostles, especially Paul, continually referred to those promises and their fulfillment. They called the attention of the churches to these things as facts which were known to some of the members who had experienced the gift of miraculous powers and who had also conferred the same upon others. They point to them as proof of their doctrine, and gave instruction in respect to them, and reprov'd some of them for instances of misconduct in that regard.

If we accept these epistles as genuine, and the gifts publicly exercised on many occasions and that all knew them to be so, how can any one entertain a shadow of a doubt? If these things be true, were not Christ's promises made before His death fulfilled after His resurrection? Who can doubt but that Christianity is from God? Is it not unreasonable to suppose that the writers who received and exercised these powers were left without the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, in addressing the churches on the most important doctrinal subjects and transmitting them to future generations throughout the world?

The epistles in general are written in plain terms which show that if genuine, they must have been known by the churches to which they were addressed during the life of the writers. But can it be thought that such facts were spoken of as undeniable during the lives of those writers, and at the same time, none of their opposers knowing that no such facts had taken place, should publicly deny them?

It is well known that most of the epistles were known at a very early period, to other churches, as the writings of the apostles whose names they bear. For some translations and copies of them were made in other languages and the churches, with one consent, readily acknowledged them as the word of God. It is not of record that any opposers of Christianity ever denied that they were the genuine writings of the apostles and the standard principles of Christianity. But had these epistles been brought forward after the death of the writer, when no one, either in the church to which they were addressed or to other churches, had ever heard of them, can it be supposed other than that they would have been rejected as false?

It is evident that such a claim would have been absurd and the imposition would have been made manifest. If they had not been known during the life of the writers, then at what time and in what manner could it have been possible to have obtained credit for them as apostolical writings, and to have successfully palmed them to the church?

A few of the epistles were not, at first, received by the churches as genuine, but this only indicates their extreme caution in accepting all writings. These were the letter to the Hebrews, not bearing the name of Paul, that also of James, which was at that time considered somewhat at variance to the doctrines as taught by Paul; the second epistle of Peter, which probably was not known until after his martyrdom, although he had referred to Paul's letter (see 2 Peter 3:15). Another is the second and third epistles of John in which he only styles himself, "The Elder". Besides these epistles there were many other writings which were by some, for a time, admitted as apostolical, but upon fuller investigation were rejected and most of them have been entirely lost.

(To be continued)

CHRISTIAN CONTENTMENT

"For I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content." Philippians 6:11.

WHAT A WONDERFUL state of mind for anyone to be in — to be content under all circumstances; to have such confidence in God's ability to fully provide for all his needs, that he could rest, quiet and contented, believing that everything would turn out for his good.

It says a great deal for Paul's wonderful faith in God when he could make such a statement after all he had been through. Not one of us could write our names under the experiences related by Paul in 2 Cor. 11:24-33. (Read.) What a tribute to his submission to his Father's will to be able to say, "I have learned to be content."

Yet Christians should all be content in mind. When we realize all that has been done for us, when we remember Christ's sacrifice for us, when we look forward to the great promises stored up for us in the future, we should indeed be a contented people. Although at present we find ourselves in lowly and humble circumstances, we are urged in Romans 13:1, 3, "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil."

We are to accept the position and station in which we find ourselves in this life, because we have set before us such a glorious future. We can apply to ourselves the statement found in the story of the Prodigal Son — the statement made by that happy father to the son that staid at home with him, and who was displeased at the merry-making on the occasion of his brother's return — "Son thou art ever with me, and all that is mine is thine." Think of it — all the beauties and treasures and future glories of our heavenly Father and our Lord Jesus Christ are promised to those that believe on Him, and who love Him and serve Him.

I do not think, however, that it is intended that this thought should limit our scope of action in any way. It does not mean that we should sit down with folded hands and make no attempt to improve our present circumstances or position, for the same apostle says in another place (1 Thess. 4:11-12), "And that ye study to be quiet, and to do your own business, and to work with your hands, even as we charged you, that ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and may have need of nothing." Also, "Be not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," and "whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

We are encouraged, therefore, to put forward our best efforts in whatsoever sphere of labor we are engaged. And it is good that we should endeavor to advance ourselves in our business life, provided we see to it that in so doing we do not crowd out of our lives all thought of Christ, and leave ourselves with no time to do His service. We must avoid the tendency to offer Him only our "spare" time.

I do not read into this statement of Paul's that we are expected just to accept all things as inevitable. We have all been through times of depression and sorrow — times when everything seems to go wrong. I know that now, with unemployment so prevalent, there are some who have cause to feel anything but happy and contented. It is indeed hard, in these circumstances, to look on the bright side and to believe that eventually all things will work out for our good, and that in any case "the Lord will provide."

Possibly there are some of us that find it difficult to be contented with our lot, largely because we find ourselves making comparisons between our position and that of our neighbors. Because one of our friends has certain things and we have not, we may be inclined to become somewhat disgruntled, and rebel against circumstances which have placed us in a less favored position than others. When we consider this aspect of our lives and experiences, we begin to realize the necessity of the Mosaic law, "Thou shalt not covet."

It is possible, by looking beyond the present to anticipate the joys of a future, free from all matters which detract from our present well being. It should be possible, and we know from experience that it is possible, to look on present conditions in the light of 2 Cor. 4:17-18, "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory: while we look not at the things which are seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

There is no doubt that contentment is not a characteristic of the present times; and indeed, under existing trying and strenuous conditions, only those who feel the satisfying influence and power of Christ can really face the future with any degree of confidence and contentment. We know that people who have yielded themselves up to Christ's influence and have learned to trust fully and completely in Him, though they are in extremely poor circumstances and even in direst need, are often much more contented with their lot than others who are well supplied with this world's goods, but have not as yet found the greatest treasure of all — a peaceful and quiet contentment in the realization that all is really well with them.

Let us read from 1 Tim. 6:6-10: "But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. And having food and raiment let us therewith be content. But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some covet after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

We realize, I am sure, from our own observations, how true this is. There are countless numbers who, judged by human standards, should be perfectly happy and contented. They seem to have the wherewithal to gratify their every desire, but this very condition appears at times to go hand in hand with a growing discontent which I am sure can only be allayed by close contact with the Lord Jesus Christ. It is a glorious truth and reality that there is provided, just for the asking, an antidote for every unhappy and discontented mind.

The trouble is that many people do not realize that they are actually in a state of discontent. They believe they have everything that should make for contentment, but all the same they are continually reaching out for something else in an endeavor to satisfy an insatiable and undefinable longing. This is something like the story which is told of a man who had a very nice piece of land, and who let it become known that he would give it to the first person who proved that he was absolutely contented. But to all who applied to him he would say, "If you are really contented with your present state of affairs, what do you want with my field?"

Let us thank our heavenly Father that He has offered us wonderful gifts which can fully satisfy us, and that, if we ask in faith, He will not withdraw His offer, but will heap on us more blessings than we deserve.

And yet, paradoxical as the statement may seem, there are two things wherein Christians should never be contented. These are: (1) our standing as Christians in the eyes of the world; and (2) the service we are rendering for Christ. Possibly the second statement is comprehensive enough to embrace the first, for undoubtedly we must serve Christ before the world, if we are even to be known as His followers. But I desire to apply the question of service more particularly to church activities.

There is always a danger in a church for many people to be quite content to let the other fellow do the work. It is too easy to adopt an attitude of smug complacency, and to think that when we have accepted Christ and joined the church, we have done everything needful, and all that is required is to sit back and enjoy our worship of Christ and the fellowship of other believers.

The live church is the church that has for its members those who are anxious and in earnest to do something definite to help in the work of the Lord. There is need for all to direct their energies into some avenue of service, and this applies particularly to young Christians. The mere fact of having some active part in church work is a wonderful stimulus in our Christian walk, and a great help in meeting and overcoming the many outside influences and temptation of the present day.

I am sure that if we participate in any branch of church work, and earnestly and prayerfully try to do something definite in the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ, we shall attain some measure of the contentment which should be in the heart of every follower of Christ. Even if it be admitted that we cannot all take part individually, let us all remember that we are just as surely serving our Master by regular attendance at as many services as possible. And by our prayers and support we may be an encouragement to the various speakers and to the church officers.

It is said that Napoleon gave all his soldiers, after a famous battle, a simple medal, inscribed with the sentence, "I was there," and the name of the battle; yet money could not buy from his veterans this little memorial of their part in his campaign. To have been a soldier in the service of God, under the leadership of the Lord Jesus Christ, will in itself be honor enough and will bring its own satisfaction.

To return to the consideration of Paul and to the statement he was able to make on the subject of contentment, we realize he was brought into this state of mind after a life of long and strenuous service for his Lord and Master. Only the realization of the joy of such service and the future reward it carried could enable him truthfully to say, "I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."

May we all realize the happiness to be found in actively engaging in the Lord's work, that we may in due time earn His "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Therein will be found complete contentment, in the contemplation of which may we now find the stimulus and desire to serve Him more fully. — J. Thomson in The Bible Standard. Selected by A. C. Boyer.

ARE THESE RESULTS WORTH WHILE?

DOCTOR HAVEN EMERSON, from facts shown by the United States Census Bureau, compares the years from 1920 to 1926 with the pre-prohibition years of 1910 to 1916.

1. The death rate from alcoholism fell to 19 percent of the pre-prohibition rate and in spite of subsequent rises the rate is now less than 75 percent of the pre-prohibition rate.
2. The death rate from cirrhosis of the liver fell to 54.3 percent and has never been nearer than 57.4 percent of the pre-prohibition rate.
3. The general death rate (all ages, all causes) has for the entire post-prohibition period been at a lower level than in any single year before prohibition.
4. The tuberculosis death rate has fallen at all ages and for both sexes and for both Whites and Negroes faster than for any previous period.
5. Admissions to mental-disease hospitals for alcoholic psychoses have been at a lower rate in proportion to admissions since prohibition than for any previous similar period of time.
6. There has been apparently a reduction in the incidence of cases of drug addiction coming under hospital care at the same time that there has been a reduction in hospital admissions for acute alcoholism.
7. There has been less delinquency from alcoholism, fewer crimes against chastity, and less brutality to and neglect of children.
8. There has been an increase in the proportion of all children who have continued in school beyond the minimum grades required by law.
9. A large proportion of the commercial, philanthropic, state and other institutions for the care of alcoholic patients has been closed since prohibition.

A COMPLETE REDEMPTION

THERE ARE SEVEN GREAT FACTS about Redemption. These seven facts cover all there is of it. That is to say: all of Redemption's phases can be put under these seven heads.

I. The Conception of Redemption. Where did this plan originate? The Word tells us it originated in and with God: "According as he (God) hath chosen us in him (Christ) before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love" (Eph. 1:4).

The fall was no surprise sprung on God! His foreknowledge spans more than a few years! He saw in Adam not success but failure, so He provided an ideal man—the God-man—in whom He chose us, and that, thousands of years before Christ was born.

In such sweeping foreknowledge God saw it all. He is not dependent on us to learn something! He made us, and He knows our value, our "frame", and what He could get from such poor material at best.

II. The Accomplishment of Redemption. It must be entrusted to some one, but to whom? It was entrusted, as the Word says, to Christ Jesus: "Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place (heaven itself, Heb. 9:24), having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Heb. 9:12).

God entrusted the accomplishment to His Son, and His Son "obtained redemption for us." He was entrusted with such a wonderfully great task. He alone could be entrusted with it. He knew the plan and the mind of God.

III. The Administration of Redemption. To whom was this administration committed? The Word says to the Spirit: "Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with (by the way of) the Holy Spirit, sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into" (1 Peter 1:12).

The administrator is not the church as is so often taught, nor the preacher, nor the ability of poor mortal man; the administrator is the energizing Spirit of God! That Comforter, Advocate, Paraclete, is the only administrator, and he oversees all the details of the administration. This is a rebuke to modern ecclesiasticism with its pomp and pride, its learning and emphasis of human ability. The Spirit of God administers. Do not forget it, brother, sister.

IV. The Proclamation of Redemption. The matter of proclaiming redemption was delegated to the church of God: "That repentance and remission of sins should be preached (proclaimed) in his name (that is, by his authority) among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24:47).

That the church has made a mess of proclamation at times, and cluttered up the program, somewhat, is patent to all thinkers. But, the Administrator knows all this, and so the gospel has been proclaimed "among all nations", there being always truth enough proclaimed to save. But before the church could carry the gospel and proclaim it, the preachers must "tarry" in Jerusalem for the endowment. And this they did, and that alone fitted them to tell effectively what they knew.

V. The Desideration of Redemption. What was it? The answer as the Word has it, is, the accumulation of human sin: "The Lord hath laid on him (Christ) the (accumulated) iniquity of us all" (Isa. 53:6).

Sin accumulated throughout the centuries, brought a desire for redemption. Jehovah made to meet on Christ the iniquity of us all. All iniquity accumulated on Him, and that accumulation was the energy of a desire for help!

VI. The Appropriation of Redemption. What is it? The responsibility of every man and woman—every sinner. The Word says: "When John had first preached before his (Christ's) coming (at his first advent) the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel" (Acts 13:24).

Men and women, as they hear the gospel, must accept it, and thus appropriate it. In no other way can they derive the benefits from the proclamation of the gospel.

VII. The Consummation of Redemption. When is it? and what is it? It is the translation of the living and the resurrection of the dead, with the transformation of both, at our Lord's second coming: "Who shall change (not exchange) our vile (humiliated) body, that it may be fashioned like unto his (Christ's) glorious body, according to the working (divine energy) whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself" (Phil. 3:20-21). Our citizenship (franchise, polity) is in heaven, from whence—not, in which!—we look for the Savior.

At this juncture comes glorification and the consummation, and at no other epoch. — Selected.

THE NEW YEAR

FREIGHTED WITH LAUGHTER and tears, success and defeat, shine and storm, the old year has joined the long list of things that have ceased to be. But a glad new year, bright and young and hopeful, fresh from the hand of God, is at hand. And what does it mean to the poor, plodding children of men?

It means opportunity. It means another chance. It means that we can "try again." The page as yet is clean and white.

If we are wise, we will be careful and cautious as to what we write on this new page. We should study the old record and weed out those things that cause us regret, the evil thought, the unkind word, the deed of anger and revenge, the unworthy motive, the ignoble aim.

Shall we not fill this splendid new year so full of things that are fine and pure and good, that all little, hurtful elements will be crowded out?

Make it your biggest year! Load it with Christian service, with deeds of love. What you get is a small matter. What you give—this indeed is priceless. For, like the cargo of an outbound ship, the thoughts, words, deeds of 1931 will await you till Jesus comes.—Selected from Foursquare Crusader, by Jessie M. Wilson.

ABIDE IN ME

That mystic word of Thine, O sovereign Lord!
Is all too pure, too high, too deep for me;
Weary of striving, and with longing faint,
I breathe it back again in prayer to Thee.

Abide in me—o'ershadow by Thy love
Each half-formed purpose and dark thought of sin;
Quench, ere it rise, each selfish, low desire,
And keep my soul as Thine—calm and divine.

As some rare perfume in a vase of clay
Pervades it with a fragrance not its own—
So, when Thou dwellest in a mortal soul,
All heaven's own sweetness seems around it thrown.

The soul alone, like a neglected harp,
Grows out of tune, and needs that hand divine;
Dwell Thou within it, tune and touch the chords,
Till every note and string shall answer Thine.

Abide in me: there have been moments pure,
When I have seen Thy face and felt Thy power;
Then evil lost its grasp, and, passion hushed,
Owned the divine enchantment of the hour.

These were but seasons beautiful and rare;
Abide in me—and they shall ever be;
I pray Thee now, fulfil my earnest prayer,
Come and abide in me, and I in Thee.
—Harriett Beecher Stowe.

HOLD FAST

By M. A. Woodward

A LITTLE CHILD was falling from a perilous height. The father saw her danger and called to her, "Hold fast, darling, I am coming." She held fast and soon the loving father caught her in his arms of love and saved her.

So the dear God calls to us, "Hold fast, dear child, I am coming, coming to catch you away from the tempter's power, away from these troublous times of trial. Only hold fast a little longer and you will hear the trumpet's sound, and the angel's triumphant song of glad victory over death and sin."

O, glad day! And while we watch and pray, let us be patient during the days of trial that are sure to come. For not a day will pass but some trial will meet you, and you will be tempted to retaliate with bitter words which would only fan the already kindled flame and spoil the entire day.

The Apostle James had the same experience we are having, I think, or he would not have given us these warning words, "Let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath; for the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God. For if any man among you seemeth to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain."

There is always One who can and will keep us from falling if we ask Him. "Unto him that is able to keep you from falling" be glory and power forever. Praise God for His keeping power!

Our thoughts (thank God for brains to think with!) run quickly along life's tangled paths, and we know we are not to think, or plan our lives along any other one's life lines, but keep our own lives clean and true. What others do should not concern us only as we try to help them make life better. Let us remember we cannot be saved ourselves by other's failures or merits, but we must work out our own salvation with God's help. So we must not sit down discouraged and despondent because some who make a display of prayers do not always live up to their words. They may be sincere and honest, we must not judge. Leave that all to God, and press on and try to hit the mark of His high calling. Keep our minds on our own lives' lessons, and see how God will help us work them out.

God knows your thoughts, and how weary you are, trying to keep sweet amid the many trials. So hard it is sometimes to forgive and forget that you almost sink down in despair, and you say, "It's no use, there are no real, honest, loyal Christians." You cry out, "O dear God, what do they all mean, when they pray for love and patience, and never practice what they pray for?" Then stop and think, "Is it I, myself, who has lost the way? Am I looking for too much in my fellow travelers? Is it I that am too hasty, have not enough patience?"

Ah me, how much the dear Father has to bear with us, and still He loved us enough to see His only Son suffer and die for us. We hear one who passed through many trials say: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you. But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad with exceeding joy."

These trials are often fitting us for the promised glories of the soon coming Christ if we only hold fast. Can you not hear Him saying, "Hold fast, beloved, I am coming, coming to lift you up and carry you to safety, away from the trials and temptations of this present age"?

Again we lift our eyes to the dear Father's throne and plead, "Dear God, help us that we may hold thy promises with a firmer grasp and learn to meet life's trials and annoyances patiently, lovingly, holding fast all the time." These are the times we must strive to not only build ourselves up in His love and faith, but try also to help others to be firm and strong in the Lord that the church of the living God may grow in strength.

God help us to live that others may not be discouraged because of our lives, but that all may feel that we are trying to live so we may hear His, "Well done, enter into the joys of thy Lord." "Hold fast till I come."

THE AFFECTIONS OF THE NEW MAN

By Samuel E. Haney

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." — Colossians 3:1-4.

THIS LITTLE CONJUNCTION, "if", standing alone, places the whole text in the subjunctive (conditional) mode. It also paves the way for doubt, of which James says, "For let not that man (who doubts) think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord." Thus it behooves us to habitually eliminate doubt from our Christian lives, thereby avoiding all the misery it entails.

The phrase, "ye then", meaning, "as a consequence," modifies the doubting "if" by taking us back to chapter 2:12, "Buried with him in baptism . . . risen with him through the faith of the operation of God", etc., thereby becoming changed creatures. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." 2 Cor. 5:17. It is this new creature which is admonished to seek those things which are above; which is sure to be done if faith heartily responds to the operation of God, in the baptismal sacrament.

Having thus been buried with Christ in baptism and risen with Him through faith, the Christian now becomes attached to the life-giving Vine (John 15:5, 6; Rom. 8:2) through the operation of the Spirit; hence, the transformation from the "old" to "new" things. These things which the Christian is told to seek and set his affection on did not appear to his former natural state of mind and heart which is now reckoned a corpse — buried in the watery grave; a transaction that causes him to be as eagerly in pursuit of things above as ducks are for water.

With these facts before us it should be an easy task to discriminate between the Christian in name and the Christian in fact. We frequently meet with people who are daily in anticipation of meeting the Lord in the air while they are as much affiliated with the things, customs and spirit of the world as puppies are of play — a self-evident fact that they have not undergone a change of heart and thought; and that they still remain both in and of the world.

It is this militant class of Christians who have not complied with Romans 6:3, "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" They are ever striving to divide their affection between self, the world and God. To thus mince the issue one must necessarily decide to obey certain teachings and to reject certain other teachings of the Bible. And it is to be expected that the adversary of our souls sees to it that the teachings ignored may be likened unto what corn is to the ear and cream is to milk, leaving a diet of husks and skim milk. The effect of this in time of trouble is aptly expressed in Isaiah 24:16: "My leanness, my leanness, woe unto me!"

Three basal texts are frequently classed inconsiderate: Mark 16:16, "He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned (condemned, R. V.)"; John 3:18, 36 and Galatians 3:26, 27. These and similar texts show that while believing is the result of comprehension it is ineffectual when unaccompanied by baptism, which fact accounts for devils trembling when they believe. James 2:19. Ah, yes, better not to know Christ and His mission than to know Him and not to obey Him.

The conditions of becoming sons and daughters of God are often overlooked or ignored. "What agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6:16-18.

"Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born again ('from above', Moffatt), he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3:3. God's word is as inviolate today as it was nineteen centuries ago, 1 Peter 1:23; a fact that will soon be sadly appreciated by many when "Christ, who is our life, shall appear." Then it will be seen that our good works and knowledge, unaccompanied by obedience and practicality, will be unavailable.

Let us, for convenience, consider entrance into God's kingdom from a monetary viewpoint. We shall suppose that originally God set an admission fee into His kingdom of $100,000, which was considered in our Lord's generation as reasonable. But O, what a shrinkage in price Christendom's stock market quotation gives us as we glance over man-made Christianity — nominal! Today seemingly many imagine they can slip through into the kingdom on a plugged counterfeit nickel in one hand and a ticket of admission into a filthy sex moving picture dive in the other hand.

"Then shall ye also appear with him in glory." The time is very close when it shall be proved that those indicated by the "ye" had "given up all to follow Jesus", and had been "made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." Having tired of the devil's husks of this world, they succeeded in finding their way to the Shepherd of their souls, there to ever feast at God's symposium board of love and grace so succinctly expressed by the Psalmist:

"The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

100 200 300 400 500 600 700 800 900 1000

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever."

THE JUDGMENT

(Continued from front page)

life, following the time of their repentance and consequent deliverance into the liberty "wherewith Christ made" them free.

Of whom then, may we seriously ask, is Paul speaking when he says that the Lord Jesus "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing"? Certainly not of those who already shall have been glorified. There is but one other class, namely, those who remain. Of this class Paul says in Acts 17:30, 31, "He (God) hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained." Notice that it is "the world" whom "that man," even Jesus, is to judge.

If He does this in harmony with the principle as recorded in the book of Judges, the first work of Christ the Judge will be to deliver. So far as the living are concerned, deliverance must depend upon individual repentance. Of this we may well take time to speak more largely in another article. Of the dead His first work must be to raise them. While such deliverance is promised to all the Adamic family yet it is not, in itself, salvation.

Deliverance of Israel by Othniel, Judges 3:8-11, did not signify Israel's salvation. It merely signified that the punishment which God had placed upon Israel was being removed and that Israel was again encouraged to live, true and loyal, unto God the Father. No force was exerted; the choice was still left to Israel's own free will. She could choose for God or she could choose for lust and self.

Thus the writer understands the Scripture to teach of Christ. So far as judgment of the dead, Christ will deliver them. Death, God's punishment for sin, will be lifted, and the people exhorted to live after God's desire.

But just as Israel, when refusing to follow the admonitions of her judge, was sold again in punishment for sin, so those who refuse to record their names in the book of life, Rev. 20:12-15, will again find their way into death. Perhaps not the Adamic death. From that they will have been delivered. But death for their own rebellion against God — the second death.

Judgment then points not necessarily to punishment. Rather it points to certain deliverance — deliverance which shall be attended by leadership and rulership worthy of man's obedience. This, in turn, is to be followed certainly by punishment for sin, even death, upon such as refuse that leadership and that sovereignty.

Following this the book of Revelation at once introduces the dawn of "the new heavens and the new earth."

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTION reports 300,000 oil wells located in nineteen different states with a daily production of about 2,500,000 barrels. In addition they produce millions of cubic feet of natural gas. Many other nations have their quota of wells. Petroleum, as a commercial commodity, was discovered seventy years ago. Is it unreasonable to expect the release of all this pent up oil and gas to have a tendency to weaken the earth's crust, particularly at thin places, causing a natural liberation of these elements and a superficial spontaneous combustion ere long? Is blind humanity here doing to the foundation of its earthly house what blind Samson did to the lords of the Philistines by pulling away the pillars of the house, killing thousands of men and women? Judges 16.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"BUT HE SAID UNTO THEM, I HAVE MEAT TO EAT THAT YE KNOW NOT OF."—JOHN 4:32.

OUR BREAD AND MEAT

IN THE FOURTH CHAPTER OF JOHN'S gospel is related the story of how Christ's disciples came to Him at the close of a long day spent in traveling, and besought Him, saying, "Master, eat", for they knew that He must be weary and hungry. But the Master gave this answer, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of."

How many times Christ relied on this "meat" for the strength that He needed! The work that was His to do required much more than ordinary bread, meat and water to sustain Him. In the first verses of John 4, we read of His meeting the Samaritan woman at the well. In His conversation with her He said, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst." John 4:13, 14.

We go our way through life, day by day eating and drinking. For awhile the ordinary food that we eat seems to satisfy our bodily needs. We no longer hunger and thirst; we are refreshed and strengthened. The satisfaction is only temporary, however. And there come times when we feel the need of something more than earthly food, when no amount of it is sufficient to supply the strength that we need. It is then that we must partake of the Bread of Life and the Living Water. It is these that carry us safely on through the turmoil and strife of life, that keep us going onward, when the last ounce of physical endurance seems exhausted.

The Master said, "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work." That was Christ's mission. The importance of it was so tremendous that at times He went forward in the performance of His duties without any other sustenance.

What is our meat? Why is the mission of so great importance that we must work unceasingly until the night overtakes us, if need be, disregarding the physical urge to do otherwise? The Master tells us in John 4:35, "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are already white to harvest."

Dare we ignore the fact that the golden grain is ripe and ready for the harvest? Dare we say that there are sufficient workers in the field and that our help is not needed in gathering the sheaves? There is work for every one—every Berean. When we realize the importance of the special work that lies ahead of us—work that we and no other can do—though we may even lack those things that seem necessary to human existence, we will be able to say to the world, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of."

"THEREFORE SAID HE unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers ARE few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest." Luke 10:2.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

THE BRUSH CREEK BEREAN SOCIETY met at the home of Sister Callie Worley on December 2, 1930. The following officers were duly elected: President, Floyd Kessler; vice-president, Harold Pearson; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Charles Pearson.

A motion was made by Brother James Kessler, seconded by Sister Ella Pearson that the society pay a percent of their back dues. The motion was carried. Another motion made and acted upon, was that the society have a social once a month for the members of the society and for anyone belonging to the church.

The time set for the social was January 1, 1931, but because of its inconvenience to some was changed to New Year's Eve.

A motion was made by Sister Ruth Pearson that we have a roll call at each meeting answered by a Bible memory verse. This motion was also carried.

Luella Underwood, Sec.

"SHUTTING THE EYES to the danger signal does not clear the tracks."

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 6; Ohio, 5; Iowa, 3; California, 3; Indiana, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JESUS TEMPTED

JESUS WAS BAPTIZED in the Jordan river, and He must have been down in the water; for the Bible says that after He was baptized He "went up straightway out of the water."

And what do you think happened then? The heavens were opened unto Him, and He saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him. Then a voice, God's voice, proclaimed, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Soon Jesus went into the wilderness—a dreary place—and fasted there forty days and forty nights. Imagine how weak He must have been after living forty days without food!

Matthew tells us that the tempter came to Jesus in His weakened condition and said, "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." But Jesus knew that the evil one was merely tempting Him; and, hungry as He was, refused to make a show of His being God's Son, or His own power. Rather, He repeated a verse from Scripture, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Then again the devil took Him up into the holy city, and setting Him on a pinnacle of the temple, said, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down." And he quoted Scripture, too,— "He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands shall they bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone."

Again Jesus refused to yield to temptation, and again repeated Scripture — "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

A third time the evil one appeared. This time he took Jesus up into a very high mountain, and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world. Then Satan said, "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." But Jesus did not want to worship evil nor recognize its power, nor become Ruler of the world until God gave Him the kingdom. Therefore Jesus said to the tempter, "Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

By this time Satan saw that it was no use: he could not tempt Jesus, nor influence Him to yield to temptation, no matter how powerful, so he left Jesus.

Then angels came and ministered unto God's own Son.

ARE WE fighting temptations? Can you quote Scripture?

SOMETHING TO DO

Read Deuteronomy 8:3; 6:11; 6:13; 10:20.

Learn the replies of Jesus.

Write three temptations you have.

How are you fighting them?

WE BELIEVE

The Bible is the Word of God — "For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." — 2 Peter 1:21.

A KIND WORD WHEN YOU CAN

Do you know a heart that hungers
For a word of love and cheer?
There are many such about us —
It may be that one is near.
Look around you. If you find it,
Speak the word that's needed so;
And your own heart may be strengthened
By the help that you bestow.

It may be that someone falters
On the brink of sin and wrong,
And a word from you might save him —
Help to make the tempted strong.
Look around you, O my brother!
What a sin is yours and mine
If we see that help is needed
And we give no friendly sign.

Never think kind words are wasted —
Bread on waters cast are they;
And it may be we shall find them
Coming back to us some day —
Coming back when sorely needed,
In a time of sharp distress,
So, my friend, let's give them freely;
Gift and giver God will bless.

— Selected

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON IV. — January 25, 1931

JESUS TEMPTED

Luke 3:21 to 4:30

Devotional Reading: Romans 8:31-39

GOLDEN TEXT

For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted. — Hebrews 2:18.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Gaining the Victory Over Self.

Basic Truth. "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Mark 8:36.

Outline. I. The Possibilities in Temptation. II. The Source of Overcoming Strength.

I. The Possibilities in Temptation. Temptations are either stepping stones or stumbling stones. They are indispensable to the formation of character. Without being tempted Jesus could never have been proven worthy of becoming the world's Redeemer. Just as our bodies grow strong only through their exercise in overcoming adverse forces, so our characters are developed only through meeting and overcoming temptations. If we can say, "Get thee behind me, Satan", to every allure-ment of the world, following the example of our Lord, then indeed will the world be ours; we will have gained the great victory over self.

But the temptation has opportunities just as large in the other direction. If the battle be lost, and we ourselves overcome, then all is lost, both the present world that we thought to gain and that one which is to come. This is the danger that must be run. The insidious suggestion that came to Christ in His temptations was that the good things held forth for His taking could be obtained only in the way suggested. This is where the greatest deceit lies, for there is another way, as Jesus was wise enough to know. It is the way of service to God, to high aims. The devil promised Him the kingdoms of the world if He would worship him. But Jesus knew they were His anyway; why should He sell himself to gain His own? So it often is with us. We are constantly seeking kingdoms; kingdoms of pleasure, kingdoms of comfort, kingdoms of power, kingdoms of success and of happiness.

"But all of these kingdoms may be sought satanically, or they may be sought divinely. The kingdom of the home, for instance, may be taken from God, with love and purity, or from the devil, with polygamy once and with divorce now. God may give us wealth, through industry and human helpfulness; or Satan may give it, through cruel oppression and despicable knavery. Beauty, art, literature, music, power, all may be degraded, are degraded if received from the hands of the evil one. For devil and God both offer us good things; but the one couples them with low aims and the other with high. The one tempts us to gain them by worshiping wickedness and the other insists that they can really be won only through noble and strenuous endeavor, the unselfish service of man and God. Which method will you choose?" — Peloubet's Notes.

II. The Source of Overcoming Strength. Vital as it is that we conquer temptations to sin, the task is an impossible one unless we enlist the help of God who alone is able to give us the victory. Let no man think he is strong enough to withstand in his own ability. Even Christ, pure as He was, went up to the mount of temptation girded with the Holy Spirit, and it is questionable whether even He could have prevailed without that supernatural aid. Observe the weapon He freely used — the Scriptures. Whenever a doubt would assail Him, then some appropriate text of Scripture would flash into His mind to answer that doubt. Learn from the Master. Fill your mind with the Bible. Know it so well that you will be armed against every possible kind of temptation. This is the significance of our Golden Text. He who once gained the victory over self will give us the victory also, if we are but true to Him.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Temptation.

Because Jesus, who was untainted by sin, was tempted in all points as we are tempted, and yet without sin, we have a High Priest who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities. Through His temptation, He obtained a knowledge of the power of evil and could truly sympathize with and help those who are tempted.

All of us are tempted, but, unlike the Savior, we yield thereto and thereby sin. The Christian's warfare is a strife to overcome temptation which he is able to do only in part, for everyone is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. But thanks be to God, we have One seated at His right hand, there interceding in our behalf. Read James 1:13-14 and discuss in the light of 1 John 2:16. — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: How to Overcome Temptation.

Each day of our lives we meet temptations in one form or another. Let us study the temptations that Jesus met and see how He conquered them and perhaps that will help us.

The first temptation came to His body through hunger. He had eaten nothing for forty days. The round flat stones at His feet must have suggested the small loaves of that time. Jesus must have begun to realize that He had unusual power, and that He could turn the stones into bread, if He desired. What was His answer? Where in the Old Testament had He read this?

What was the second temptation? the third? Just before this, after Jesus' baptism, a voice from heaven had recognized Him as the Son of God. Now the devil said, "If thou be the Son of God," trying to make Him doubt. What was His answer to this? In each instance, He did not hesitate, for He realized that God was with Him at all times to strengthen and keep Him true, if He depended upon Him.

When we are tempted to do wrong, if we will only remember that we "can do all things through Christ", we will grow in strength and power to overcome. Each little temptation conquered makes us stronger and more able to fight the big temptations that come later in life. And that is how character is built, little by little, growing each day more like our perfect Pattern, the Christ. — M. G.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Temptation is common to man. To some it seems to be a blessing, to others, a curse. By it many are strengthened; many more are weakened. When does temptation strengthen a person? When does it weaken?

Does temptation from the following sources weaken or strengthen a person?

- Strong Drink
- Tobacco
- Drugs
- Gambling

Class may add others to list.

In your opinion which is the better way of combating temptation, removing the cause or allowing the evil to exist and overcoming it? Does God ever tempt anyone? Should we?

Some practical thoughts can be brought out by the class in discussing the following from both negative and positive sides. Which of the following is the greater evil,

- Yielding to temptation?
- or
- Tempting another?

In our country where a democratic form of government exists, can a person take a passive or indifferent attitude toward social evils which exist throughout the land, and which are tempting and ruining hundreds of thousands of boys and girls, and still be guiltless and free from their blood? Ezek. 33:1-7.

— C. E. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

ABOUT FINANCES

The monthly financial and business records of the N. B. I. indicate that this institution during the year 1930 has been made to feel its share of the financial depression that is throughout the nation and the world. That is to say, it has been impossible for those in charge to achieve that degree of progress that was desired. The figures for the year cannot be given yet, but will be presented in fuller detail this year than in former years.

It has been noticed by reading religious statistics from other sources that the religious work of the country has been suffering, in some instances, very severely. Many people have been deprived of contributing to their religious organizations as formerly; while those who might be able to contribute have in many instances contributed no more than in previous years, and in some instances less. This necessitates that religious work must suffer as do purely business enterprises.

Thinking of the financial depression over the country and the resultant handicap to religious effort, we are reminded of a little story. John and Susan were each given two nickels, one for Sunday School and the other to spend for candy on the way home. Hurrying along to Sunday School with the thought in mind of the treat on the way home, small John stubbed his toe and went sprawling. One of the nickles went spinning out of his grasp, down through a crack in the sidewalk. "There goes the Lord's nickel, Susan!" exclaimed the boy.

Even though our incomes may be much smaller than formerly, let's not feel that it's the "Lord's nickel" that is lacking.—M. G.

SERVICES AT RIPLEY

During the Christmas vacation the members of the Church of God at Ripley enjoyed visiting with the Cooper family, also meeting Bro. Clarence Lapp who accompanied them home. While here Bro. Lapp spoke to us, delivering seven sermons. As he was still with us the first Sunday of January he filled our January appointment then instead of the second Sunday, which is our regular Sunday each month.

All who are interested take notice that February 8 will be our next regular appointment. Come, let's worship together.

Tessa Laning, Secretary.

OREGON SUNDAY SCHOOL

Our Sunday School at Oregon, Illinois, has certainly made some forward strides during the past quarter. The average attendance for the third quarter, July to September, was 47.5. The average attendance for the fourth quarter, October to December, was 77.2. There were 23 who were present every Sunday during the past three months and we enrolled 37 new members during that time. This growth necessitated a rearrangement and three new classes were organized on Sunday, January 11.

On the first Sunday of the New Year, when all of the Training Class and some others were away for the holidays, our attendance numbered 99. Since our Sunday School was the winner of the challenge sent out by Grand Rapids for Rally Day, we seem to have gained new interest and enthusiasm.

Ethel Johnson, Secretary.

GOOD NEWS FROM LOS ANGELES

On Sunday morning, January 4, a business meeting of the church was held with our pastor, Bro. G. E. Marsh, presiding by request.

The following officers were elected: Elders, J. E. Hammond and E. C. Railsback; Deacons, C. L. McCallister and W. A. Ward; Secretary, Emma C. Railsback; Treasurer, John Saylor.

After the election the following emergency resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote, namely, To provide for the legal transaction of business by this congregation, including the purchase, holding and disposal of real estate or other property, Be it resolved that a board of trustees be immediately elected, consisting of five members; said trustees to hold office for a period of one year from the date of their election, or until their successors are duly elected.

Be it resolved further that it shall be the duty of such trustees to hold in trust for the Church of God in Christ Jesus at Los Angeles, California, all property of said church; and to retain, or operate, or convey, or transfer, any or all of such properties or funds in any way or ways the church by vote may indicate; and to fulfill all other duties usually devolving on such trustees.

In accordance with the above resolution, the following named brethren were elected to serve the church as trustees for the ensuing year; namely, John Saylor, E. E. Crundwell, E. C. Railsback, C. L. McCallister and J. E. Hammond.

The church is looking diligently for a lot on which to build a new church and all are anxiously looking forward to participation in the new undertaking.

Sr. Grace Marsh has been devoting much time and effort to developing the singing ability of our young people and we have recently been favored with some splendid duets and quartettes.

Many of our older members have been kept from attending services recently by illness or the infirmities of age. Among these are Bro. and Sr. Scroggs, Bro. and Sr. Conaway, Bro. and Sr. Corbaley, Bro. and Sr. Nokes, Bro. and Sr. Wilson and Bro. Jackson. Bro. and Sr. Orchard were able to be present on January 4 for the first time for several weeks. We miss them very much and trust that all may be spared to help us promote the gospel work until our King comes.

Bro. and Sr. Saylor and son, Wesley, have been spending the holiday season with friends and relatives in Arizona.

Sr. Gertrude Johns met with a serious accident to her right hand recently by trying to close a stubborn faucet and having the enamel break in her hand and sever an artery. It has temporarily incapacitated her for performing her full duties at the bank where she is employed.

Our isolated friends in San Francisco, Bro. and Sr. B. F. Cook, have been shut-ins for some time owing to Bro. Cook's illness. Remember these dear ones at the throne of grace and also with a cheering letter. Their address is 2201 Lake Street.

Bro. Hathaway of Oregon called on some of the brotherhood in Los Angeles and Pomona recently during a brief trip to Southern California. We found him an able and earnest defender of Scripture truths.

Through instruction from Bro. F. A. Stillson recently we were happy to locate in Glendale, Sr. Marie Anderson, a former worker in the Master's vineyard in Indiana. We are enrolling her as one of our regular workers. We are also placing on our roll her son, Bro. Albert L. Anderson, who is at present located in China with the U. S. Navy.

Our ladies aid society is meeting regularly and working diligently to create a fund to help finance our proposed new church building. Most of our meetings are devoted to quilting and we have the promise of work to keep us busy for three months. Sr. Squires being unable to attend our meetings kindly does work at home for the society, which we appreciate very much.

Bro. L. H. Nokes and family are spending the winter with his parents, Bro. and Sr. C. A. Nokes. We trust they will decide to remain permanently and become workers together with us.

TRAINING CLASS NEWS

Last week Sr. J. W. Cooper and family and Clarence Lapp returned from Ripley, Illinois, after spending a very delightful Christmas vacation. Old Hank, the Ford, was loaded to capacity with good things to eat which were donated by the Ripley church folk. Besides all the apples, meat, butter and other eatables, these good people are sending up a barrel of fruit and canned beef.

We wish to thank the Ripley folks one and all for these donations and for the fine spirit of help and cooperation. And more than all, we wish to thank our heavenly Father. We hope and pray we may all be able to make a visit to this church soon.

Training Class.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The splendid work that has been accomplished here continues unabated, as a full house of children and older people gathered on the first Sunday in January for Sunday School. The church services were also well attended, both morning and evening.

Bro. Arlie Townsend and Sr. Clyde Thomas are on the sick list. Bro. Townsend has been threatened with pneumonia but we are glad to report he is on the gain at the present writing.

"Present Conditions in the Light of Prophecy, the Cause and the Result," is the title of a new 24 page tract by Bro. J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Indiana. These may be obtained at ten cents each from the author or from J. H. Stepp, Dana, North Carolina.

"Ancient Mysteries," by George Johnston, is an interesting book of 116 pages. Copies may be obtained from the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois, or from the author, 198 Howland Ave., Toronto, Ontario, at fifty cents each.

Sr. Van Der Weele of Argos, Ind., writes that her mother, Sr. John Cochran, is now at home with her, recovering nicely from her recent serious operation.

INDIANA NOTICE

Will those who are members of the Indiana Conference please take notice that the appointment as Treasurer of Mrs. Flora Prior, Rensselaer, Indiana, has been made to succeed our beloved Brother J. J. Snodgrass.

All remittances for the Conference Board should now be sent to her.

Floyd A. Stilson, President.

SIPLE - LYON

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized on New Year's Day when Sr. Dorothy Lyon, of Rockford, Illinois, became the bride of Bro. Frank E. Siple, of Grand Rapids, Michigan. The ceremony was performed by the bride's brother, at two in the afternoon, at the old home in Citronelle, Alabama. A perfect southern winter day, warm with sunshine, and a bridal bower of ferns, flowers and youpon, formed an ideal setting for the happy occasion.

Bro. Siple made the trip from Grand Rapids by auto, the writer and his sister, Margaret, joining him at Indianapolis. Present at the wedding were the bride's parents, her aged grandmother, now over ninety-one, who was brought downstairs from her bed of ten years for the ceremony, her two sisters and an aunt and cousin from New Orleans; the groom's mother, a sister, Ella, and a brother, Albert, from his old home at Hammond, Louisiana, and a few close friends from Citronelle.

The ceremony was preceded by three solos, "At Dawning" and "If I But Knew," sung by the writer, and, "O Promise Me," sung by Miss Welcome Macon, of Citronelle, whose mother, Mrs. H. W. Macon, accompanied her on the piano, and also played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

Immediately following the ceremony the happy couple left on a wedding tour through Florida, to extend through the middle of January.

Bro. Siple is one of our most widely known and best loved ministers, and his bride has also been active in church service for years. The many friends of both throughout the country will join in wishing for them not only the greatest happiness in their new life together, but also that in their united labors for the Master they will be able to accomplish greater and more effective service for Him with the people to whom they will minister.

M. W. Lyon

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brothers and Sisters: I am so glad to read the good articles the young people of the Training Class are writing for The Herald. To me it is a cause for thanksgiving to see these young folks so diligently searching the Scriptures.

How many there are who have not heard the angel's message to the humble shepherds: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

May God bless the Christian workers everywhere and give them grace to keep the vision of the glory that is to come ever before them.

May we, the whole household of faith, do our part as far as in us lies to hold up the hands of those that are ministering to us spiritual things. Let us study the words of David in 1 Samuel 30:24, "But as his part is that goeth down to battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff, they shall part alike." So to us that give of our "stuff" to help bear the gospel message, we will in no wise lose our reward.

In these times of stress it is not always easy, but the more is the need. We should lift up our heads and rejoice, for the time of harvest draweth nigh.

Ida Vogel.

EUGENE M. HALL

Eugene M. Hall, the eldest son of Martha Jane and Milton Endicott Hall, was born at Lamont, Ottawa County, Michigan, on June 1, 1865. In 1885 he was married to Claudine Olmstead, who died in 1901. To this union were born five sons, four of whom are living: Walter Bert, of Sodus, New York; Robert O., of Wellsville, New York; Fred E. and Mortimer O., of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

On January 10, 1905, he was married to Ethel M. Coats of Coats Grove, Michigan. Soon after marriage they purchased a forty-acre farm in Woodland, Michigan, on which they built a comfortable and attractive home. Both were lovers of trees and flowers and they made of the place a garden spot of beauty as well as a home. Fifteen years ago Mr. Hall suffered a stroke which left him partially paralyzed. In spite of this handicap, by grim determination and boundless ambition he kept at the hard tasks incident to general farming and fruit growing to the end, when most men would have given up to helplessness and inaction.

In 1909, after an all-night battle with self, he yielded to his convictions and was baptized by Bro. S. J. Lindsay. He believed in a practical Christianity which expresses itself in good deeds and in helping others. Generous and hospitable, he endeared himself to the family and friends, by whom he will be greatly missed. He departed this life on December 19, 1930, after two weeks of illness following a second stroke which, from the first, almost completely paralyzed him. Under all circumstances he was ready and anxious to go. His only regret was the separation.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer from the late home, on Sunday afternoon, December 21. A large concourse of friends paid their last respects, and parted hoping to meet again at the resurrection.

F. E. Siple.

FRED EARL CHAPMAN

Fred Earl Chapman, the sixth child of a family of nine children born to Jacob and Alverda Chapman, was born September 3, 1880, in Camden Township, Schuyler County, Illinois, and spent his entire life, except two years in McDonough County, in the neighborhood of his birth. On January 20, 1904, he was united in marriage with Pauline Leslie Campbell. To this union were born two children, Mildred Amanda and Maurice LeRoy, both of whom have helped the wife and mother to do all that was in their power to care for a kind and loving father and husband during his last illness.

On January 29, 1911, he was baptized by Bro. S. J. Lindsay, and has lived true to his faith until he fell asleep on January 4, to await the resurrection. During his entire sickness from cancer of the liver which lasted for eighteen weeks, he bore his suffering with patience. His thought being for the comfort of his family, he tried as long as strength would permit to make the home more comfortable and convenient.

The deceased was a kind and loving husband and father, a beloved son and brother, and a good neighbor, whom to know was to love. He leaves to mourn his loss a beloved wife; two children at home; an aged mother, Mrs. Alverda Chapman of Camden, Illinois; three sisters, Mrs. Martha Valentine of Pleasant Plains; Mrs. Victoria Hardin of Huntsville; and Mrs. Hettie Mae Vincent of Camden; four brothers, John E. and Jesse Delbert of Camden; Willie Frank of Galesburg; and Artie Beach of Rushville, besides other relatives and friends. A father and an infant brother preceded him in death. Funeral services were conducted on January 6 by Bro. F. L. Austin.

JESSIE I. UPTON

Jessie I. Elton, youngest daughter of George and Iley Elton, was born on August 28, 1862. When sixteen years of age she was baptized into Christ by J. M. Stephenson. On April 29, 1896, she was united in marriage to Wm. W. Upton, to which union three daughters were born, one dying in infancy, the other two, Iley and Tibbie still living.

She fell asleep in her home near Geneva, Ohio, December 29, 1930, leaving surviving, of her immediate family, her husband, the two daughters above named, now Mrs. Virgil Barch, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. David Hicks, of West Virginia; one brother, Scott Elton, of Pasadena, California; one sister, Mrs. Fannie Saunders, of Cleveland, Ohio; and five grandchildren, to mourn the loss of an exceptionally faithful and devoted wife and mother.

Sr. Upton was a devoted Christian woman in her home and elsewhere. She was firm and uncompromising in her convictions of truth and righteousness, but tolerant and charitable with others who might not be able to live up to her high standard of Christian thought and conduct. She was modest, kind and pleasant, and always ready with words and deeds of sympathy and comfort for those in trouble or sorrow, and was earnest and liberal with her means in supporting whatever and whoever she believed to be worthy and entitled to her assistance. And as the sun sets at the close of a beautiful and perfect day, even so, at the end of a beautiful life well spent she fell asleep, to rest and await the coming of the Lord, "the resurrection and the life."

L. E. Conner.

RENA BELLE ENDSLEY

Rena Belle Clement Endsley was born January 21, 1854 in Kentucky, just across the line from Rising Sun, Indiana. She departed this life near Melbeta, Nebraska, on December 19, 1930. At the age of sixteen she went with her parents, M. B. and Mary Clement, to Missouri. There and in Iowa she finished her high school and college education, teaching there a few years, then following a sister to western Nebraska, teaching there two years.

On November 18, 1888, she was united in marriage to Charles Endsley. To this union three children were born: Clinton dying in infancy, Willis at the age of eleven. A daughter, Mrs. Mary Claire Wright, the only surviving child, lives in San Diego, California, but she was with her mother the last eight weeks.

Mrs. Endsley and her husband united with the Church of God at Redington, Nebraska, in November 1898, and to this belief she has ever lived faithful. Besides her daughter she leaves two grand-children, also several nieces and nephews and a host of friends to mourn her loss. She was a dearly loved person by all who knew her, for she was always scattering sunshine and cheer wherever she went.

The funeral service was held in the Redington church, Rev. Louis H. Kaub, officiating. The service was conducted exactly as Mrs. Endsley had requested.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. W. I. Barber; Mrs. J. W. Dismukes; Mrs. Catherine Townsend; Mrs. G. R. Booth; Mrs. Thomas Pascoe; Mrs. T. V. Blyth; George Rennard; Lee Sutherland; Mrs. Newton Davis; Mrs. Martha Taylor; Mrs. Jennie Baker; Mrs. J. Tiecher; Silas Claypool; Mrs. Ray Maysilles; Mrs. G. V. Misner; O. P. Clough; S. Ada Stadden.

Mrs. H. E. Russel; Mrs. Wm. Hardesty; Earl Koontz; Mrs. Sadie Clark; H. L. Barnett; Mrs. Tryphena Ball; Mattie Benjamin; Thomas A. Mann; G. A. Brown; Mrs. Hedvie Jackson; Mary F. Cooke; E. Dorothy Magaw; Mrs. W. H. Poole; Faye L. Brown.

“A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM”

By Harry A. Sheets

“FOR YEARS OUR HOUSEHOLD served the Lord, till at last I began to find a much ‘easier’ path to tread, and as time went on I grew deeper and deeper in sin. A few months ago I was taken ill, but still held out. I used to say I would not be a death-bed coward. At last, something began to work quietly upon me; when I would pass the church I used to attend the thought would arise, ‘If I could only go in there and sing as before.’ Then, on Sunday evenings I would sit down with the children and think how I would like to teach them some hymns. Still, Satan persuaded, ‘Not just now.’

“We had a darling little baby just fifteen and a half months old, and during my illness I just lived for this little treasure. Doctors said, when she was about to come into the world, she would not live. But she was a perfect child, and our love for her was exceeding great. One day a little swelling came under her eyes, and although she was quite happy, in three days she had fallen asleep.

“I had been praying for her recovery, and a few hours before she passed away she became very bright. The doctor was overjoyed. I thought God had answered my prayer, so I sat beside her, with my head in my hands, and thanked God. I then sang, ‘Look and Live’, to her; but alas! she was gone in a few hours.

“I had promised God so often to return, and still kept putting it off. Then I was sitting face to face with God, my little one taken. Oh! how may I see her again? I was in my sins. At last the picture of my dear Lord Jesus on the cross came before me. I wept bitterly, and I laid all my sins on the cross. Now our home is serving the Lord and longing for His return, when we shall see our loved one.

“Friends, do not delay. Now is the time; some other day may mean never. This little child’s mission is ended. She is now free from earth’s sorrows. Whilst we deeply mourn her loss, we thank God for His loving kindness in bringing us back to the cross, where Jesus the Lamb was slain for our sins. If He had not died for you and me, we could never again see the child we love so well. ‘Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning.’”

The above is copied from The Bible Standard, and was written by one L. M. We have taken the liberty to pass it on to the readers of THE RESTITUTION HERALD because we feel that it touches upon a home condition that is becoming prevalent in the United States. We wonder how many homes there are in the land where God is not worshiped, and where the children are not given any definite training in Christian living and service.

Recently this case came to my notice. A young Christian man, who is a worker in the church, and who is looking for the soon coming of Christ, said something like this, “I was raised in a Christian home. My father and mother were devoted to God. I can remember when they would get up early on Sunday morning, do up the work and drive several miles in a wagon to a schoolhouse where there were church services. I can recollect when mother would read at night and father would then lead in prayer before we went to our beds. We used to help keep a Sunday School and young people’s class going, father often doing the teaching. I enjoyed doing what I could and even now I look back to those days with a feeling of joy and satisfaction. But it is changed now and it makes me feel sad.

“I visited my old home recently after being away several years. It has been nearly ten years since I started to make my own way. I was delighted to see my father and mother and my brothers and sisters. All looked the same but older. I was filled with joy at this reunion until — Sunday came. There was no going to church or Sunday School. I was partly prepared for this shock because there was no longer any evening devotion.

“The pang in my heart was increased when I was told that my father had taken to swearing, and that my brother at home was using cigarettes. True, they didn’t do these things while I was around and I would not have known if it had not been for other people telling me. I had a good time, but now I feel lonesome and alone. I saw father and mother and the rest, but I didn’t see the old home life I used to know. The home I knew had no swearing in it, neither was there one that used tobacco in any form. All is changed now. Do you see why I feel that I visited my parents and not my home?”

Our sympathy cannot but go out to this young Christian friend. He is striving to win a place in Christ’s eternal kingdom and his love for his parents and his brothers and sisters is so great that he wants them to so live that they, too, may be in that kingdom to share the eternal joys with the rest of earth’s redeemed. It is almost taking the joy out of life to realize that he may be separated from them during the ages of the ages.

“One shall be taken and another left” are words filled with tragedy, heart-rending sorrow, eternal separation. Father, mother, suppose you are left and your cherished son or daughter is taken — will you be happy over the separation? Son and daughter, suppose your mother, who has always had your clothes ready for you and who has always done the hundred-and-one little things for you, should be the one that is taken? Would you miss the one who has leaned over you so often when you were sick, doing the little tasks of kindness and love that helped you to be well again? Would it be pleasant to ponder: “Mother is gone and I am to be separated from her forever”?

It is time for us to ponder these things in all seriousness, for Jesus knew when He sorrowfully said: “There shall be weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth.” But even that extreme sorrow won’t change things then. “Now is the day of salvation.”

We are sending these two stories with the prayer that they may reach some backsliding Christian, or some heretofore unresponsive person, and cause him to say in his heart, “I will serve the Lord.”

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 20, 1931

NUMBER 16

The Gospel of Judgment

By F. L. Austin

“Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.”—Revelation 20:6.

THERE IS GOOD NEWS in all of God's dealings with mankind. Nothing that the Father does relative to man but that is done for man's good. As such it is gospel, good news. He does not always work that which seems to be good for the individual and yet it is unquestioned but that even the chastisement of an individual may result in blessings to man.

Jesus is to “judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom.”—2 Tim. 4:1. The quick are the living. He is to judge the living and the dead. In accordance with the statement on page 234, it is desired to study in this article Christ's judgment of the living “at his appearing.”

This judgment, as also the judgment of the dead, will without doubt be conducted in harmony with the same principles as found revealed in Judges 3 and onward. God's principle of judgment is there revealed. Judgment consists first of the deliverance from punishment of those suffering the punishments of God for their past wrong doings. Those punishments continue until repentance of the one punished materializes. With repentance and petition the judge releases the punished, proceeds to judge the released person according as he gives heed to the judge. Likewise, we contemplate, will Christ's judgment of the living proceed “at his appearing.”

One thing should be kept attentively in mind, namely; the church is to be caught away “in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air,” 1 Thess. 4:17. This is a group gathering, a group that will be caught away. It will take place when, v. 16, “the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God.”

This group will be made up of those who are raised from the dead together with the living Christians of the time. These people are being judged through this gospel age. Following repentance, they are released, delivered, from the bondage of sin, by the Master; they are receiving His word and giving heed thereto; they are being judged by the Master throughout their Christian discipleship. Death or His appearance terminates their period of judgment. When He comes their judgment ends and they are caught away in one body to meet Him, to receive their allotment, their reward.

But when the church shall have been caught away, the living millions of earth who have been following the way of man, giving heed to the counsels of the ungodly, will be under a bondage and chastening of a time of “tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no nor ever shall be.” Matt. 24. Earth's nations will be under one federated head, Rev. 13:1-8, which head will blatantly blaspheme God and will demand the worship of all living upon the earth. His position will be that of the climax of all ungodliness in these latter days. It will be the throne of antichrist, the seat of the dragon, the culmination of all the wickedness of the ways of man throughout the centuries.

To be under servitude to this power, captive under his blasphemous commands, will be the punishment of all those who in any degree of heart are not in sympathy with this mighty power of world wide federation. Such is the captivity, the punishment under which any who would be God-fearing will find themselves “at his appearing.” Nor will this include those of the church, for the church will already have been caught away to meet the Lord.

To be delivered from this position even after the church will have been completed, after the bride and the bridegroom will have met, will be the glorious opportunity of

(Continued on page 250)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

"In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."—Romans 8:37.

HE STRENGTHENETH ME

PAUL WAS WRITING to the Philippian brethren. He had passed through some distressing experiences. However, he reassured the brethren that it was all right, that he was contented. He says, 4:13, "I have strength for anything through Him who gives me power." Weymouth.

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." What a glorious position to hold! In fact, is not that the position that every child of God should occupy?

What spiritual activity and development can anyone accomplish without the strength of Christ? Carnality can be wrought by carnal self, but what spirituality can the carnal successfully engage in without strength of the spiritual?

Spirituality is not limited to formal worship. Eating, drinking, working, playing, all necessary things, can be performed spiritually as well as carnally. Similar to prayer, engaged in "as we ought", so the engagement in, or the performance of, any and everything requires strength of Christ. Romans 8:26.

As the perfect machine requires imparted power if it is to operate, as "wonderfully made" man requires "life" if he is to act, so he who is spiritual requires spiritual power if he is to perform as God would have His children do.

Are you operating "through Christ which strengtheneth" you? If so, you too can do "all things" which He may place before you to do "in his name."

CONTINUANCE

GOD IS GOING "to render to every man according to his deeds." As regards "eternal life," He is going to render it, Rom. 2:7, "to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality." But, note, the requirement is for "patient continuance"—throughout life.

.Continuance, perseverance, is likewise a prerequisite as regards every Christian principle. THE HERALD editor frequently fears lest he may seem to be lacking this principle in some of his presentations. Again he fears lest he sometimes presses things too far. He is "in a strait betwixt two."

PRAYER CIRCLE

For some months the matter of prayer has not been especially emphasized in THE HERALD. This, lest it would to some seem that this basic truth were being unduly pressed. It is earnestly felt that prayer is one of those truths which should be constantly emphasized in every Christian life.

Our sinless and guileless Savior was prone to depart by himself and spend much time in prayer with God. The Christian can ill afford not to "continue" in prayer. To learn to pray, Luke 11:1, requires not only reading of God's Word, but frequent counsel with God. Continuance!

TITHING

This is another topic that THE HERALD editor is convinced should be constantly emphasized to Christians' minds. Tithing, in short, is to regard that God has a partnership interest in every business undertaking of man. God provides man with life, strength, earth for home and for planting, rain, sunshine, winter, summer—everything.

Tithing is but a continual daily reminder that God is all things to us, that to Him is due our all.

Again, God's "continuance" of blessing upon those who carefully give themselves to "continuance" of tithing is in "continuance" of evidence.

Let us continue in the practice of every good thing.

CHRISTIANITY

CHRISTIANITY, though in itself spiritual in character, is, nevertheless, a potent power in the shaping of world affairs. It has been so from its beginning. Not a nation into whose life Christianity has been injected but what has been materially affected thereby! Who can tell what the effect would be upon our nation and the world were Christianity to be effaced?

The purer, the more perfect, Christianity is, the deeper and stronger is its influence upon the people. The more people there are who heartily and sincerely embrace true Christianity, the more widespread will be its influence upon mankind.

Christ died for himself and for mankind.

Christianity is for the saving of self and for the benefit of all others. It is twofold in its responsibility. Not by adapting itself to world problems but by maintaining it in its greatest possible purity, by aiming to attain to its highest spiritual ideals, will it best satisfy its responsibilities both to self and toward others.

We pray God's guidance that as individuals and as a church we shall all advance toward Christian perfection throughout 1931.

A FALLING AWAY FIRST

SO WROTE PAUL in 2 Thessalonians 2:3, to the church at Thessalonica. How often we hear this cited as sufficient reason for Christian indolence! "What is the use of working so hard and doing so much and expecting so much when we are definitely told that there is to be this falling away?" is an often heard expostulation.

But, take notice! That falling away is foretold, not of the world but of the professed Christian. It is his "falling away" from pure living and from devoted service that makes it possible for "that man of sin" to enter and get foothold. "Except there come a falling away first" "that man of sin" will not be manifested.

Such falling away is nothing short of a crime against spirituality, against Christ, against God. It will certainly receive its merited punishment.

Brother, sister: No matter how many, nor how far, others may fall away from Christ, you and I must be faithful and active if we would gain the prize. God holds out no acceptable excuse for us to fall away from fully accepting every Christian opportunity of service and of advancement. Difficulties may increase as others fall away, but that condition only requires greater sacrifice of us. If you would gain the prize you must remain true—you must serve with that zeal that results from loving "the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind."

THE N. B. I. AND YOU

LAST SPRING Bro. Austin, the Executive-Secretary, conceived the idea of the One Thousand Dollar-A-Month Club campaign. Exhortations were made in THE HERALD for joiners to this club with a few responding. Then at one of the business sessions of General Conference last summer, about fifty were added to the Club. Interest became more apparent; committeemen were appointed, and returned to their homes determined to reach their goal. On account, perhaps, of the depression in business, the goal has not been reached as yet, although some of the committeemen have been working at their utmost.

You may ask what this is to be used for. It is to be used for the purpose of furthering the Lord's work in every manner. Surely, some one phase of the N. B. I. work affects you personally. Surely, there is one department that you are more interested in than another. This is but natural and by contributing to the work at large you can help that particular department.

This organization is surely one that should receive aid from its members everywhere. Many would not hesitate to spend many dollars in one lump for something of the world, yet when it comes to contributing to gospel work they balk at the idea of giving even one dollar.

One dollar a month is a very small sum to be spent in this work. Think of it in terms of cents, if you wish: twenty-five cents a week. Perhaps it would mean one less movie, one less soda or one less magazine, but it would also mean that you were doing something for the cause of Christ.

Think it over! If you have not yet joined this Dollar-A-Month Club, get in touch with a committeeman near you or the headquarters in Oregon, Illinois. It may be that the very dollar you send, will go to your favorite phase of the work.

Let's get busy!

A Club Member.

AS YOU THINK, you travel. You are today where your thoughts have brought you; you will be tomorrow where your thoughts take you. You cannot escape the result of your thoughts. You will realize the vision of your heart, be it base or beautiful or a mixture of both, for you will always gravitate toward that which you, secretly, must love. Into your hands will be placed the exact results of your thoughts; you will receive that which you earn—no more, no less. Whatever your present environment may be, you will fall, remain, or rise with your thoughts, your vision, your ideal. You will become as small as your controlling desire, as great as your dominant aspiration. — Selected.

A NEW RESOLUTION

I AM GOING TO CALL selfishness a disease, and what a dreadful disease it is. Each day it gets worse and worse and in time a selfish individual forgets his fellowmen. He is not willing to give his services or his money, if he happens to be in such circumstances, because someone else who is considered prosperous and able did not do the same.

As we have just turned over another leaf in the book of time, why not resolve to get out of the selfish old rut and place others before ourselves in everything we do. I am sure that when the great Judge comes the unselfish will be repaid.

Frances Rossiter.

SATISFIED

By Alice B. Curtis

Not now, not here while yet the earth is groaning
Beneath the heavy burden of the curse,
And sinful men instead of growing better,
In these last days are growing worse and worse;
We see the mark of Time on all about us,
We meet with disappointment, wrong and strife,
How can we, where our joys and sorrows mingle,
Be satisfied with this imperfect life?

Here Death has no regard for age or station,
All, all beneath his mandate stern must bow;
He frees the servant from the bonds of labor,
And strikes the diadem from kingly brow.
Not always on the mountain tops we journey,
In the clear sunlight of our Father's smile;
Our way lies often through the shadowed valley,
Where Sorrow walks with us for many a mile.

The cross we bear sometimes seems very heavy,
And we grow weary at the eventide;
Our eyes are dim with looking for the Master;
Without Him how can we be satisfied?
The time is near when sin's reign shall be over,
Soon from the earth the curse shall lifted be;
Soon, soon the Lord will come in clouds of glory,
To crown His bride with immortality.

Within that country whither we are trending
No sorrow, death or evil shall betide;
There drinking of the river of God's pleasure,
O, there, and then we shall be satisfied.
Then follow in the footsteps of the Savior,
Press ever closer to the heavenly Guide;
And when we shall awaken in His likeness,
Ah, then, we know we shall be satisfied.

MY WISHES FOR YOU

By Lottie E. Young

EVERYBODY WHO READS this has very likely said, "Happy New Year," many times. But what did you really mean by it? I will divide my New Year wish into four parts, sincerely trusting that every member of THE RESTITUTION HERALD family may make for themselves just the kind of a year I wish.

First I would wish improved physical health for 1931. How few of us can say, "I am perfectly well," and yet how much depends on good health, if we want to accomplish the work we would like to do! There's a good time coming when pains and aches will have vanished forever, but that will not be until the Great Physician returns to make us whole. So may no accidents nor operations come into your lives, and the other discomforts only be "light afflictions."

Then I would wish for you an abundance of good friends, not only acquaintances, but those on whom you can depend in time of trouble and the world seems turned upside down.

"Make new friends, but keep the old,

They are silver; these are gold," is very true, and most of us realize the soundness of the saying, "There are no friends like old friends." We also know old friends are constantly leaving us by the cruel hand of death, and if we do not make new ones, the world will become a lonely place for us some day.

So do not forget the visit you have intended to make, but have put off for some reason, to one you love. Or if that is not possible, just send a letter, showing that you still think of and love your friends. If we hope to spend eternity with brothers and sisters who love the Lord Jesus Christ, let us begin to get acquainted with them now. So try to increase your list of loved ones.

Extend also your love to the friends who live on your book shelves, and don't be content with just what you see in the newspapers and current magazines, but learn to know more fully the wisdom of those whose writings have survived long years. By setting aside fifteen or twenty minutes each day we can, even in the busiest life, accomplish much if we study (not skim) through some worth while book of history, travels or science. You will be astonished how much can be learned in this way if you do it constantly and earnestly. Books are the best friends, and we are never lonesome if we know the contents of the works of good writers.

Then, above all, I give a wish for your spiritual life that it may be broader and sweeter than ever before. Try each day to do something that will make somebody else happy, and don't mind if it should happen to be a seemingly little thing, remembering that the apostle James' definition of true religion is to "visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction" as well as to keep oneself "unspotted from the world."

Study your Bible more and talk more frequently to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. Remember the necessity of assembling with those of like precious faith whenever possible. Try to interest others in the "Blessed Hope", and give a helping hand to those who are struggling under discouragements.

These wishes of mine must be resolutions of yours before they will amount to anything, but if they are carried out you will truly be able to say when 1932 comes around, "What a happy year the last has been!"

"MAN IS NEVER GREATER than when he is looking forward watchfully, looking backward gratefully, looking upward humbly, and looking downward helpfully."

— S. W. Grafflin.

GOSPEL PREACHING

IT IS NOT ALWAYS GOSPEL that is delivered from the pulpit. A man may preach very sensibly concerning the divine perfection and authority of God's government and laws. He may set forth general obligations to duty and obedience. He may inculcate the amiableness of virtue in general, or of particular virtues, and may present many worthy examples for men's encouragement and excitement.

He may earnestly call on men to repent of their sins, and reform the general disposition of their hearts and conduct. He may inculcate this with all earnestness and action that would entitle him to the character of the complete orator. The composition may be very skillful; the language eloquent and pathetic; and the preacher may be so greatly applauded that it may be sometimes said, "He hath his reward."

Not only may the ears of the hearers be tickled, but their minds may be agreeably entertained with sentiments that are in themselves just, and with many a good thought. Yet, in all this, there may be nothing by which a soul that labors and is heavy laden, may be relieved and refreshed; nothing by which a serious soul may be directed to the proper source of sanctification. A discourse may have in it much truth that is consistent with the gospel, and presupposed by it, and yet have nothing in it of the gospel properly so-called.

Of such a discourse, with all its advantage of sentiments and expression, it may be said as the apostle says of the law, "It is weak through the flesh." The corruption of nature, in which sin hath dominion, is too strong for logic, rhetoric and philosophy; too strong for refined speculation; too strong for the greatest oratory.

The gospel, the good news, the good message of God's grace and mercy to the lost, told by those who have been enlightened and led to present and conscious justification, rest, and peace, by its divine power, is mightier and better than all these words of men's wisdom; and the gospel preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, is the grand means by which the flinty heart is broken and the guilty sinner saved. The subtle theories of the worldly and refined, are worthless when the burdened soul stands face to face with its sins and with its God. It needs a better way than human wisdom can devise, even a way that has been opened by "the shedding of blood," by which sinners may approach their God, and the lost wanderer find his refuge from the coming storm.

He who has known this way of peace and rest, and knows it now, and can tell from a joyful heart the story of a dying Savior and a loving God, has a message more potent than the wisdom of the wise, or the understanding of the prudent; a message which has been life to many a guilty, dying soul; a message of which the chief of sinners himself could say, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

—Selected by R. A. Curtis from the writings of H. L. Hastings.

"LO, I AM WITH YOU"

By M. A. Woodward

FOR EVERY CROSS that we meet along life's way, the risen Christ is near with help and blessing. For every cross there is a promise of strength to endure.

Is the cross one of temptation? "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

Is the cross one of sorrow? "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me."

Is the cross one of haunting fear? "Perfect love casteth out fear." "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee."

Is it a cross of loneliness? "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Is it the cross of baffling circumstances? "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world."

Is it the cross of physical illness? "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness."

Is it the cross of fear of death? "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live."

Is it the cross of sin? "If we confess our sin, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sin, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

"Dear Father of us all, we thank Thee for the gift of life, with all its opportunities to suffer, and to learn, and to love, and to serve. We thank Thee for Thy Son, Jesus the Christ, for His life, for His death upon the cross, for His resurrection, and for His living presence with us.

"Bless, dear Father, those who are bearing life's crosses. May they be given strength to bear them bravely, with unwavering faith in Thy love and wisdom. Bless the sick, dear Father, and grant to them Thy healing.

"Bless those who have wandered far in the ways of sin. May they know at this hour that the Christ died to save, and now offers forgiveness and new life.

"In the name of Jesus the Christ, we ask it. Amen."

As we take up the burden of life for another week, may we find these words of promise and the prayer by Henrietta Heron a help. May we feel sure God's words are always true and to be relied upon. In this thought, we may always find comfort and joy. For the weary ones who have asked our prayers, be assured the throne of God was sought and we rest with the assurance He will answer. Weary Souls, lean heavily on the everlasting Arm; it is strong to deliver you.

IT IS INTERESTING to know that the world contains two million lepers, who are sorely in need of the great Physician. — S. E. H.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CHURCH AT OREGON, ILLINOIS

INASMUCH AS THE DOINGS of the local church at Oregon have an indirect bearing upon the Illinois State Conference and upon the General Conference, both of which annually meet at Oregon and partake of the hospitality of the local church and its provisions; and to the end that one and all may the more fully realize the cooperation which the Oregon church is striving to render in every direction, it is thought well to publish reports of the work of the past year as read at the annual business meeting, Thursday evening, January 15.

The Sunday School increased in membership from 72 to 111. 41 new members were brought in during the year while only 2 members were lost. By far the most of the increase was made during the last quarter of 1930.

The Berean Class is a difficult phase of the work to maintain in proper activity, the class becoming shattered by the spring and mid-summer migration of its members.

The Ladies Aid continues to carry forward its activities.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

Membership January 15, 1930:

Resident	67
Non-resident	28	95

Added during year:

By baptism	3
By letter	17	20
		115

Subtracted during year:

By death	0
By letter	23	23

Membership January 15, 1931:

Resident	70
Non-resident	22	92

Several of the non-resident members live at a distance and while retaining membership, have not for years taken any active part in local church work.

FINANCIAL REPORT FOR CURRENT OPERATION

Balance on hand $ 1.25

Receipts

From 37 members by monthly contributions as per pledges (Six of these pledges also are delinquent to the amount of $31.00.)	$1463.22
From 6 members by regular monthly contributions till discontinued by removal, etc.	40.00
From 11 members by occasional contributions (No contributions from 41 members)	102.02
From Sunday School
By collections	$188.70
By Birthday Collections	18.21	206.91
(S. S. classes collected additionally for their own uses $90.74)
From Free Will Offering Box		13.84
Total Receipts		1825.99
Grand Total		1827.24

Disbursements

Pulpit	900.00
Benevolences	6.75
Flowers	25.75
Lights	45.00
Heat	27.97
Caretaker	18.60
Rent for State Conf. Dormitory for S. S.	116.67
Insurance	135.12
Repairs on Dormitory Furnace	163.33
Choir	15.26
Sunday School	94.96
Church Census Campaign	9.00
Local Miscellaneous	29.23
Paid Ill. Conf. Treasurer (Budget)	173.75
Paid to National Bible Institution (Budget)	144.06
Balance on hand	21.79
	1927.24
Total	1927.24
Less Accounts Payable	100.00
	1827.24

FOR BUILDING FUND

Receipts

Bequeathed by the late Sr. Emma Burroughs	$2000.00
Paid by 56 members (39 families)	$3336.40
Paid by 12 non-resident members (7 families)	399.05
Paid by one member of another Church of God	300.00
Paid by 11 members of other Churches of God	110.00
Paid by 26 non-member Citizens	205.34
Received by local offering accumulations	402.50
Ladies Aid	275.00
Children's Banks	30.52
Received for sale of old furnace, tools, etc.	33.00
Interest on portion received previously	144.20
	7236.01

Total	7236.01
Notes Payable	4900.00
	12136.01

Cost of Rebuilding

Labor	5219.36
Materials	4689.26
Furnishings	1204.78
Miscellaneous	981.92
	12095.32

Total	12095.32
Balance on hand	40.69
	12136.01

To the above cost of building should be added the following material contributions:

Cost of Building	12095.32
Mr. and Mrs. F. Rogers:
Pipe-voiced Organ	1600.00
Golden Rule S. S. Class and Schiller Piano Company:
Schiller Grand Piano	800.00
Friends:
Tables	20.00
	2420.00

Building and Furnishings 14515.32

Elizabeth Ordnung, Treasurer.

In accordance with an understanding among the ministers at a ministerial session during the period of the General Conference four or five years ago, when it was agreed to favor a Budget System of finances among the churches, the Oregon church at its first annual business meeting thereafter adopted the system. Accordingly the church treasurer has regularly remitted to the Illinois State Conference treasurer and to the General Conference, monthly, such portions of receipts as agreed upon. But inasmuch as no other church has adopted the Budget System, the Oregon church, at its last meeting, and much against the pleasure of a large proportion of its members, decided, almost unanimously, to discontinue the Budget System of finances.

The newly chosen secretary is Miss Ruth Gesin, and Miss Elizabeth Ordnung was re-elected treasurer.

Ethel Johnson, Retiring Secretary.

ANCIENT ARMAGEDDON PLAIN COMES INTO AMERICAN HANDS

WE LEARN from the New York Times that when Armageddon was recently purchased for the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars that one of the most ancient battlefields of the world passed into the hands of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. The inside walls of the great Karnak Temple of Amon record that as far back as fifteen hundred years before the Christian era a decisive battle was fought at Megiddo, the ancient name for Armageddon. The last of a long line of battles was waged there by Lord Allenby in the World War.

In ancient times Megiddo was the great stronghold of Palestine over which the nations of the East battled. It crowned a prominence on the northern slopes of Mount Carmel, and from it could be gained an impressive panorama of the plain. It also commanded a view of the pass coming from the south which led into Northern Palestine and Syria.

The bold promontory of Mount Carmel stood in the path of ancient armies. It projected into the sea, extended south-eastward toward the Jordan Valley and cut transversely across the north-and-south ridges of Palestine. Such a ridge was the natural barrier which an enemy in the south would wish to hold against an Asiatic invasion from the north. Similarly it was the line of defense of an Asiatic army trying to halt the march of an Egyptian invasion from the south.

Thus in the World War the Turkish forces from the north held Mount Carmel against the northward advance of General Allenby's army. The Mysore Lancers of the British forces rode over the rocky slopes held sacred by the memory of Elijah, while the Jodhpur Lancers galloped into the town, swept through the streets in a picturesque fight and captured a large number of Turks. For a brief pause the advanced forces halted on the great battlefield of Palestine, Esdraelon, the ancient plain of Megiddo.

This modern campaign was an extraordinary repetition of the ancient military operations of the young Pharaoh Thutmos III., who threw his cavalry through the pass of Megiddo in the first years of the fifteenth century B. C.

When Napoleon passed through the plain of Megiddo after his defeat at Acre, he encountered a Mohammedan army of 35,000 men. With only 4,000 men the French general fought a noted battle in which the smaller force gained a complete victory.

As far back as 1903 excavations were begun at Armageddon under the direction of Dr. G. Schumacker, but operations were suspended in 1905. The present work under Dr. Breasted was undertaken in July 1925.—Selected.

REPORT OF PRINT SHOP FOR THE YEAR 1930

WE SUBMIT herewith a statement of the activities of the Print Shop for the year 1930, as also a statement as regards THE HERALD and the Truth Seekers' S. S. Quarterly, the account of which has heretofore been run in with the account of Books and Publishing. By these reports it will readily be seen that the Print Shop, operating upon a strictly business basis, charging the N. B. I. what any other print shop would charge for printing THE HERALD, the quarterlies, tracts, etc., operated at a gain; but that the loss on THE HERALD and quarterlies and tracts more than consumes the profit of the Print Shop.

Total Sales (Charges entered for printing for year 1930)		7044.39
Purchases (paper, ink, etc.)	1058.29
Salaries of Printers	2925.30
Light, Heat, Phone & Water	288.73
Miscellaneous Expense (Including postage on Herald, advertising freight, express, telegraph)	322.08
Repair	94.57
Taxes	51.60
Equipment	16.46
Insurance, Paid	18.20
Total Cost of Operation		4775.23

Gain 2269.16

With this should be read the report of the cost of handling our Books and Publishing, and the report of The Herald. Books and Publishing include the S. S. Quarterlies, Song Books, Tracts, Bibles, etc.

Books and Publishing
Books and Publishing Sales		1485.68
Books and Publishing Purchases (including books, Bibles, Sunday School supplies, Truth Seekers' Quarterlies)		1072.19
Gain		413.49
Total Gain		2682.65
Herald Cost (including printing of Herald, solicitation cards, order blanks, Income from Subscriptions)	3712.84	2313.06
Loss		1399.78
Grand Total Gain		1282.87

(These reports are subject to correction when the closing of the books for the year shall have been completed.)

The above report shows a final gain. However, the following explanation should be made. The cost of bookkeeping, correspondence, editing, proofreading and some of the folding and mailing of THE HERALD has been charged against the office. Were these all charged against the Print Shop, it is a conservative estimate that another $1300 per year would have to be added to cost. And the stationery and postage used in the interest of Publishing, including the sending of hundreds of statements for overdue subscriptions, would amount to another $100 or $200.

If to anyone the foregoing report is not clear, we shall be glad to hear from such direct.

F. L. Austin, Secretary.

COME

By John L. Wince

Holy, humble Nazarene!
Whom our eyes have never seen,
Look'd for, longed for hast Thou been.

Bridegroom of the waiting bride —
She whom thou hast purified
By the blood from out Thy side,

Come, in answer to her prayer;
Robe her in her garments fair;
Let her in Thy glory share.

Sweetly as the morning light,
Bursting through the shades of night,
Come in splendor to our sight.

Come with glory, and with grace;
Lift us to Thy heav'nly place;
There to see Thy smiling face.

Oh, the rapture of that day!
When the mortal fades away
From the Spirit's piercing ray.

Happy, I, to taste and feel,
The immortal Spirit's thrill,
Purging out the mortal ill.

Then beyond to live and be,
In the freedom of the free;
In eternal harmony.

Through the age of ages long,
Joining with the holy throng;
Chorusing the heav'nly song.

There beneath the cloudless skies,
In the new earth paradise,
Wondrous scenes shall greet our eyes.

“THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST—Why is it not preached? We would venture the opinion that there are four reasons for this great neglect in the church today — because of ignorance of the Scriptures on this great subject; because of prejudice; because of the articles of belief or adopted creeds of denominations; and because it has been supplanted by the pagan and papal dogma of natural immortality and the false dogma that goes with it, of ghostly existence in death.”—Dr. Clarence S. Weis, in The World's Crisis.

JESUS AND THE JEW

By Sidney Jackson

“AND I WILL make of thee a great nation. . .” These words, spoken to Abram four thousand years ago, might seem, in the light of our modern viewpoints, almost pitifully humorous, were it not for the magnificent background given us by the Jew.

As we look upon a member of this race, chosen of God in ages past, it is not unlikely that most of us, if not all, are prone to feel ourselves slightly elevated above his position in life. We think of the Jew as the greedy Shylock of Shakespearian literature, grasping to the last for gain. We see the dejected poverty of the Jewish tenement district, yet we miss the picture of an entire race being crushed and bruised by the constant pressure of public opinion.

The cruel persecution of the Jew in the various countries of Europe has relentlessly carried itself into the very beings of this great melting pot and the ostracism of the very blood of Jesus Christ continues. Yet from these trodden people we have received the very basic thought of our beautiful religion. What would our religious beliefs amount to if it were not for the monotheistic basis of our belief?

Through the ages history has repeated itself and the numerous religions, based upon the weakness of polytheism, have fallen into decay. Sect after sect and belief after belief have vanished, leaving little or no mark on the sands of time, but the ego of the great Jehovah God, I AM THAT I AM, has continued. Perhaps it seems strange that this oneness should show such strength, until one can vision the master Mind which conceived, created and rules the universe.

When we vision the tremendous power back of the picture, we can realize of how little avail would be our efforts to oppose. It might seem also, that our will to work in accordance with God's plan might prove just as little of aid. Yet, when that power, which is in us, is visualized as a part of a mechanism so great, so infinite, it can be recognized as lending to that impelling force which has moved slowly but forcefully down through the years.

The Jews were chosen of God four thousand years ago. Since that time they have risen to a mighty kingdom, a powerful religion and a strong ecclesiastical body. And after departing from the dictates of God they refused their Messiah and have been scattered to the ends of the earth. Yet, they have remained separate, as a whole, living to themselves, worshiping their God according to His dictates; not breaking their racial characteristics by intermarriage nor their religious inbreedings by following after each and every sect leader with a new fantasy.

Is not this what is meant in the challenge, “Be ye separate”? Can we not profit by the Jewish vantage? Let us be separate from the world. We cannot lose. Those in the past who have been of the common group have passed into decay. Those who have received the vision of the true God have received a gift beyond all price. If it were all wrong and there were no gift of life eternal in the future, the peace of mind in the present would be ample return for the belief in Jehovah.

Then how much we owe the Hebrews, the people who presented us with the opportunity to know God in the close relationship of a loving Father who gave His Son that the world might be saved.

Did Jesus Christ give up His life in vain? Did God fail in His choice of a nation to be for Him a kingdom of priests? Obviously the fulfillment of His great plan and incidentally the full establishment of this nation have not yet come. Yet they are coming fast. The chosen people of God are coming to the acceptance of Jesus Christ in an ever increasing degree.

The vision of the prophets of old and the Christ of Calvary is being brought to pass. With it is coming the time when the Christ spirit in the purest form will permeate the uttermost parts of the earth. Christ, himself, will have returned to take the guiding rein.

No words could so completely sum up the conditions of the awakening world as these of Rabbi Lazaron, an intellect of renown among the Jews of today: "Jesus, the Man, is the object of the love of Jew and Christian alike. . . . When You died, most unselfish of men, You died as a Jewish martyr; not the first nor yet the last of many Jewish martyrs. You sprang from our loins. We understand You, Jesus. . . . It is your people who know and understand you best!"

MEDITATION

LIFE'S CROSSES are our opportunities, if we will have them so. We may learn to know more about God and His laws in one moment of supreme self-sacrifice and devotion, than by years of mere intellectual study.

It is sometimes only when our own plans lie trampled in the dust that we begin to be willing for God's plan to prevail in our lives. We are near to the solution of all life's problems when we can say of God's gifts and withholdings: "Unless this thing is consistent with the highest good of all concerned, I do not want it, and if it is, I can trust God's law to establish it."

"How often do we feel that some power mightier than the human will is checking us, thwarting our well-laid plans. This mysterious power is in the hands of a loving Father who uses it only in order to give us our opportunity to bring our lives into harmony with the perfect plan.

God's plan unfolds. We need not be anxious about the days that are to be. We need not strain to force things to pass. The better way is to commit our way to the Lord; trust also in Him; keep our hands busy with the tasks nearest at hand; and know in our hearts that He will bring things to pass.—Henrietta Heron.

HOW FAR IS THE EAST FROM THE WEST?

By C. E. Lapp

HOW HIGH is the heaven above the earth? Has finite man in all the years of learning and study, with all the science and astronomy with which to make calculations and measure distance been able in even the slightest degree to fix the number of miles between heaven and earth?

David said in the one hundred third Psalm, "For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him." How true are these words of David! God's mercy was extended to David many times and he realized it. When he sinned and caused another man to be put in the front of the battle, God forgave him because he repented in sackcloth and ashes.

After the Israelites were brought out of Egypt and across the Red Sea were they not the first ones to turn away from God in the wilderness? When Moses went up into Mount Sinai, the people took all their rings and gold of every sort and made a golden calf and worshiped it. Did God forgive them and have mercy on them even though they went into idolatry? Much more; He fed them and cared for them all the time of their wilderness wanderings.

Heaven is high above the earth and no one can measure the greatness or even imagine its extent. Neither can the mercy of God be measured to those that fear Him. Because of Moses' fear, God was merciful to the Israelites. How far is the east from the west? Is there any possible way of measuring that distance? No, not that anyone has ever been able to discover. "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

We read also that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Is there any man who thinks he is free from the guilt of sin? Or what man is there who thinks so highly of himself that he considers himself above the curse of sin?

We must realize that we have all sinned and are subject to the wages of sin, even death. The beautiful thought contained in this Psalm is not the fact of sin, but that as far as the east is from the west so far away has God put our transgressions or sins.

God deals with us much the same as a father deals with his child. When a child does something wrong the father is not displeased so much with the child as with the wrong that he has done. The child is often punished, not for the gratification of the father's wrath but that the child might grow to do right and his character strengthened.

Many, many times we are brought low and sometimes even sickness and death come into our homes. Why? Is it possible that God is testing or chastising us and is trying to lead us into the straight and narrow path? God knows that we are weak and mortal, and as a father helps his child to get up when he has fallen, so our heavenly Father lifts us out of the slime-pits of sin to walk on a higher plane.

THE MAN IN EDEN

By C. W. Dean

THE WRITER WAS VERY MUCH interested in the articles of the above title which appeared in the December second and thirtieth issues. And for the sake of the truth which we love so dearly, I hope that the Editor will allow me the space for comments on the same.

Quoting from the Hebrew original the last sentence of Gen. 2:17 reads as follows: "In the day thou eatest thereof, dying, thou shalt surely die." The word "die" is translated from the Hebrew word muth, meaning "to die". Therefore the day that Adam did eat of the fruit of that tree he became a dying man and he did die at the age of eight hundred thirty years. Adam was warned that in the day that he ate of the fruit of a certain tree, he would become a dying man, "dying, thou shalt surely die".

In order to get a better understanding of the proper rendering let us glance at Luke 23:43. The dying thief had said, "Jesus, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Christ answered and said, "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." The thief is not yet in "paradise"; he did not go to heaven. If he did, he arrived forty-three days ahead of Christ. For Christ spent three days and nights in the heart of the earth, and forty days on earth with His disciples (Acts 1:3). The kingdoms of this world have not yet become the kingdom of our Lord (Rev. 11:15), nor has the Davidic kingdom yet been set up on earth. Consequently the thief is in his grave, awaiting his resurrection and place in the kingdom as promised.

God did not tell Adam that it would mean instant death to him the very day in which he would eat of the fruit of that tree, but God said unto Adam, "In the day thou eatest thereof, dying, thou shalt surely die." Therefore that very day in which Adam did eat thereof he became a dying man. But he lived at least eight hundred years after he had eaten thereof.

Adam never was spiritual (1 Cor. 15:46); consequently he could not die a spiritual death. Adam was physical. If any man ever died a "spiritual" death the Scriptures fail to record such. The first Adam became a living soul (physical body) which was sown in corruption. The last Adam became a life-giving spirit. His body saw no corruption. Therefore if any man ever died a spiritual death, it was Christ.

Both old and young people must reverence the Word of God. God has only two responsible men. Only two men have radically affected the history of the race. All other acts are included in their respective acts of disobedience or obedience. The states and dispositions of flesh or spirit which motivate the acts of all other men have their sources in one or the other of these two. No man can do more harm than did Adam. He inflicted more injury than any other. He slew more men than any other, for he slew them all.

By one disobedience he sent himself and his progeny tobogganing to destruction.

Only the last Adam can affect as many as the first Adam did, yet He accomplishes more, for He not only counteracts the first man's deeds of destruction, but also all its direst consequences. In the first Adam, all are dying. In the last Adam, all (the same all) will be made alive.

THE GOSPEL OF JUDGMENT

(Continued from front page)

those who will yet cry unto the Lord. The Judge of all the earth will be exercising His power. It is He who will be releasing individuals from such thralldom, though He will not be releasing them from the environment thereof.

The records of the opening of the seals of Revelation 6 teaches us much as to that people. Under the opening of seal five, v. 9, is found record of those who "were slain for the word of God." They will stand out for God, even in the face of this world-wide power that will demand the worship of every living thing. Like Daniel praying on the housetop, that people will refuse to worship the beast or his image. As a result they, like unto Christians of today, will be delivered from God's condemnation of sin and will be released unto the righteous approval of God; yet they will physically suffer punishment imposed on them by this power. They may possibly all be compelled to suffer death. Compare Rev. 13:7.

Space forbids the carrying of this thought to its end. Isaiah speaks of it forcibly in chapter 13:6-11. Joel refers to it in chapter 3:9-17. Likewise, Micah, Zechariah, Malachi, Paul in 2 Thess., chapters 1 and 2, and others refer strikingly to events of this judgment.

The result is clearly seen in Rev. 20:4-6. Those who shall have been "beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God and which had not worshipped the beast" shall live and reign "with Christ a thousand years." These are the ones who in Rev. 6:9-11 refuse to worship the beast and for such refusal are slain, all because of their testimony "for the word of God."

We have been speaking of the living largely as individuals, but we must not forget that individuals compose nations. The first nation as such to be delivered at that time is the nation of God's chosen people, Israel. Out from the great world upheaval of the day Israel, in sufficient numbers to constitute a nation, will turn to Jehovah's Son, will acclaim, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us."—Isa. 25.

It is from this judgment period preceding the sunrise of the millennium that the chosen nation, Israel, will be aroused to its position before Jehovah and will welcome "the desire of all nations." Hab. 2:7. Following such repentance their deliverance from Gentile bondage will be rapidly accomplished, and with Him and under Him, they will enter the millennial reign of Christ and of those who reign with Him.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"AS EVERY MAN HATH RECEIVED THE GIFT, EVEN SO MINISTER THE SAME ONE TO ANOTHER, AS GOOD STEWARDS OF THE MANIFOLD GRACE OF GOD."—1 PETER 4:10.

GIVING AND RECEIVING

AT THE FOOT OF A MOUNT in Palestine is a spot where one can say, "Here did Jesus sit and rest and talk." This spot is at the curb of Jacob's well. To the cooling waters of this sacred well the Samaritans still come as they did in Jesus' day. Nineteen hundred years ago Jesus came to this well, tired and weary, and sat down to rest. His disciples had gone to the city to buy meat and He asked a drink of a Samaritan woman who came to the well to draw water.

There are two points about His talk which throw light upon His message. It was He who opened the conversation by asking for a drink. This was no idle request, for He was thirsty. We might say that by miraculous means He could have brought up water from the well; but His whole history proves that He would not have done so. Not even on the cross would He perform a miracle on His own behalf. The water in the well was below His reach; He needed the woman's help. It is easy to imagine a world in which the Divine would be independent of the human, but this world is not that kind.

There are some sacred qualities in the personalities of every man and woman which the Almighty needs. These qualities should be developed and made useful. The generosity of the Samaritan woman, her willingness to do a favor for a stranger, her capacity to rise above inherited prejudice—all these were essential to obtain the blessing Jesus had for her.

Jesus said to her, "If thou knowest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldst have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water." He did give, but not until she herself had given.

The religion He taught was a religion of reciprocity. God needs our help. If we would receive the abundance of His gifts, we must make our own gifts first. "But how can I make a gift?" you ask. Jesus' answer is, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Sarah Manuwal, Bremen, Indiana.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive."

A REQUEST

DEAR BEREANS, and members of our Indiana Bible School and State Conference, let us resolve to do more in the Master's service in 1931 than we have in the past. The editor of our Berean page will be glad to receive articles from our Hoosier state and I know that your state literary committee will be greatly pleased to see many contributions. We cannot expect many blessings without a little sacrifice on our part.

Remember, that a cooling drink from Jacob's well and a little talk with Jesus brought living water to the woman of Samaria. I am taking this opportunity to ask that all leaders of the various classes in our state insist that some one of their classes sends in an article, also report of their work, for publication on the Berean page.

Sarah Manuwal, Bremen, Indiana.

A CORRECTION

IN THE ISSUE of January 6 we published an article, "Spiritual Growth," but omitted the writer's name. The contributor was Miss Martha Hammond, California. The editor begs your pardon.

NEWS FROM OHIO

ON JANUARY SECOND the Dayton Bereans assembled at the home of Bro. and Sr. E. J. Demmitt for their regular lesson period and election of officers for the coming year. With Samuel Hoke as our new president; Edgar Demmitt, vice-president; Louise Brewer, secretary; and Emma Garrard, treasurer; we hope to accomplish much in the year of 1931.

It had previously been voted to affiliate with the National Berean Society and application has been sent in to the secretary. We also had a very interesting discussion on the need of prayer and thought it would be a good thing for each member to be able to offer prayer publicly; so we have planned to include this practice along with our regular study.

May the Berean classes grow and the work prosper everywhere, is our prayer. Louise Brewer, Secretary.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

WE SELDOM THINK OF JESUS as a physician or doctor, but He went about healing many sufferers of whom no record was kept.

One sabbath Jesus was in the synagogue, as was His habit. Then He and four of His disciples went into Simon Peter's house where Simon's mother-in-law was very sick with a fever. When Jesus was told about her illness, He took her by the hand and lifted her up, and she became so well that at once she ministered unto them.

When the people heard of these miracles, is it any wonder that they came to Jesus for help? By evening a great crowd had gathered, and Jesus healed many other sick people. Was not that a busy day—a busy sabbath?

The next morning Jesus arose early and went out into a quiet place that He might pray without being disturbed. However, so many sought Jesus that Simon and other helpers finally found Him and said, "All men seek for thee."

Then Jesus answered, "Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth." And they did go on into all the other towns of Galilee, preaching and healing.

At one place a leper came to Jesus, begging that he be made clean. Leprosy was such a terrible and contagious disease that anyone afflicted with it had to live away from other people.

Jesus always felt sorry for those who were in trouble, so He naturally felt sorry for this poor leper, and cleansed him from the dreadful disease. He told him to show himself to the priest and make sacrifices, as the law required, but not to tell other people. But as soon as the man saw that he was healed he was so happy and grateful that he told everybody.

Soon it became impossible for Jesus to walk on the streets because of the crowds that followed Him. Then Jesus went out into the country, but still the needy continued to come.

What a wonderful Savior! And what a wonderful time there will be when He returns and there is no more sickness and no more sorrow!

DO WE allow Jesus to heal our hurts and illnesses?

FACT

THINK! Are you watching? Am I watching?

TATTLETALE

"EVERYBODY WILL CALL you a tattletale if you tell Miss Amy," said Jenny.

"But we can't help Peter ourselves, and somebody must know," replied Glenn.

"That's what I say," added Martin. "Besides, it wouldn't be tattling to get even with anybody, because big Tom Perkins never bothers us. I'll go with you, Glenn."

"Tom Perkins never bothers any boy or girl whose father and mother are at home, or where there is a dog in the yard," explained Jenny. "He picks on little boys and girls. Maybe you boys are right about telling. But you wouldn't like it, if the rest called you tattletale."

"It won't hurt us to be called names if we get Tom frightened so he will let the little first-graders alone," said Glenn. "I'm going, and I'm going right now."

The very next day, when little Peter was hurrying home from school for fear of Tom Perkins, he met a policeman leading Tom down the street. And that was the end of the little children's troubles. The next day the principal of the Happy Hours building went into every room to make a little talk about tattling.

"It is wrong to tell on others to get even, or for spite," she said, "but when you can make right a wrong that others are suffering, then come as quickly as you can and tell."

—Selected.

COURAGE

Dear God, please help my heart to know
That heroes do not always fight
In armor, or with swords to show
That they uphold the good and right.
The truest hero can endure
Without resentment, and he knows
That victory is made more sure
By gentle words instead of blows.

The truest hero does not cease
In goodly efforts day by day.
He loves his God, his life and peace,
And scatters kindness on his way.
He lives to make a better world;
A chance to serve he will not miss.
His flag of honor is unfurled.
God, make me truly brave like this.

—From John Martin Magazine.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON V. — February 1, 1931

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

Luke 4:31 to 5:39

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 53:1-6

GOLDEN TEXT

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. — Isaiah 53:4.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Jesus' Conquest of Disease.

Basic Truth. "And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick: the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity." — Isaiah 33:24.

I. The Ministry of Healing. The Messiah of Israel at work! That is the picture we see in the lesson of today. John had announced His coming as One who was mightier than he. And truly, what mighty works He did perform. He who had indignantly refused to use His power in the wilderness for His own benefit or fame, now pours it out without stint when it will bring blessing to fellow man! His prophetic mission was to bless all the families of the earth. And almost the first thing He does is to bring relief from disease to those around Him.

The curse of sickness is almost beyond estimation. Even in our own country it causes the loss of untold millions of dollars annually, to say nothing of the pain and anguish, tears and death that follow in its train. In the Eastern countries where medical care is almost unknown, its ravages are much more widespread and serious. It is therefore the most natural thing that health should be one of our most cherished blessings.

When therefore the promised One comes healing men of their diseases He establishes a contact with the sympathies of His people as in no other way. That is a tangible, visible blessing that can readily be appreciated. The recorded cases of Jesus' healing are many of them pathetic in the extreme, in the supreme joy which is brought to those who had shortly before been in the depths of despair. But every one of these instances is probably but one of a multitude. Only a very small part of His mighty works are recorded. When we remember the number of times the record says, "There came great multitudes unto him, with divers diseases, and he healed them all," we have just a little suggestion only of the stupendous ministry of healing our Savior wrought during His brief earthly sojourn.

II. Hope for the Afflicted. "Himself took our infirmities, and bare our diseases," he came for multitudes during our Savior's lifetime more than a form of words. It was translated into a living reality in their own experience — in their own flesh. But even then the ones He was able to reach and heal were only a drop in the bucket as far as the world was concerned. Does He have any significance to other suffering peoples — to those of our day? Oh, the thrill, the ecstasy of those prophetic words of Isaiah, "Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped," and all the other blessed promises of the coming day! For the great Physician is coming back, this time to complete the work He began so long ago in Galilee, and shall banish from the face of the whole earth the scourge of disease. O what a hope for all who suffer now!

"It requires but a cursory view of the East to give a new understanding of the Bible pictures of the halt, maimed, blind and diseased needing cure. My earliest walk in the Arab quarter of Alexandria showed me in one hour more blind beggars, more children with sightless eyes, more hopeless cripples than I had seen in my life before. Palestine now, as doubtless was the case in the days of our Lord, seems fairly overrun with those afflicted by one form or another of bodily ailment. They throng the entrance ways to Jerusalem, the paths to Gethsemane and the Mount of Olives." — Peloubet's Notes.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows." — Isaiah 53:4.

This prophecy of Christ was spoken about seven hundred years before His birth. How truly it has been fulfilled, and is being fulfilled every day. If we put our trust in Him and rely upon Him for help, we will find that "he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us."

"He", no one else did this for us. Jesus does or did more than simply heal diseases. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanses us from all sin." Sin is the worst disease that has stricken humanity, and to be cleansed from that means life eternal. He shed His blood for us, and "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

— L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

In studying Jesus today, we see Him revealed as the "Great Physician," the Healer of the ills of man. No other phase of Christ's work came as close to the hearts of men as His ministry of healing.

Sympathetic: His heart of sympathy went out to the suffering, afflicted and diseased. Humanity in affliction needs sympathy. True Christianity is sympathetic. After studying this lesson, emulate the "Great Physician" and visit some shut-in, or afflicted person and give expression to sympathy. Watch the results, both in self and the patient.

Helper: Sympathy warms the heart and cheers the mind, but it stops there. Christ went beyond the sympathetic. He was a Helper; He healed; He aided. His usefulness was carried into the lives of others. Real living is living for others. Each member of the class suggest some way in which he can help someone in the community who is needing aid of some kind. Whatever you do, do all in the name of Jesus.

Unboastful: His acts were for others' good and not for self-glory or praise. The joy of serving is lost when boasting begins. Seek to help for others' good and not for the plaudits of men. Start a class campaign against boasting. — C. E. R.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Jesus Heals.

Luke, the writer of the Book of Luke, was a great physician. Do you know what a physician is? He is a doctor, one for whom you send to cure you when you are sick. Luke being a great doctor, liked to think of Jesus as being like a great Doctor. Of course Jesus did not heal with medicine, but by His word.

The first part of our lesson tells about Jesus healing Simon's mother-in-law. Read verses 38 and 39. Tell what picture you see there of Jesus as a great Doctor. Read the remainder of the lesson. Name all the things that Jesus did. Tell how these things made Him great.

Why do you think Jesus healed these people? Because He wanted to show to us just a glimpse of what will happen in the future when He comes again to this earth. The Bible says there will be no sickness or death there.

What does Jesus do for us that we might call Him our great Physician? — V. C. T.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Great Physician.

Jesus went about doing good and healing all manner of diseases. "Now when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him; and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them." Luke 4:40.

His healing was one hundred percent perfect, for He healed every one of them. This is better than medical science. But His greatest work was not that of healing human ills and weaknesses.

His greatest work was that of healing the disease of sin, for He could as easily say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee," as "Take up thy bed and walk."

"They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." All have sinned and come short of the glory of God, all need the great Physician, Jesus Christ. — F. A. S.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS

On page 247 will be found a financial report of the Print Shop of the N. B. I. for the year 1930. And on page 246 a report of the financial activities of the Oregon church and the cost of its remodeling. These should prove of interest and instruction to our readers.

Mr. and Mrs. John MacDonald of Lander, Wyoming, are the proud parents of a son who arrived on January 5. He will be known as John Jr. Sr. MacDonald will be remembered as Ella Hanson, prominent among the young people of Illinois a few years ago.

The N. B. I. office wishes to publicly thank those who have been contributing funds in addition to the Dollar-A-Month program. These make it possible to more nearly maintain our program of work. Again, we thank you.

On the last page of this issue will be found an article, entitled, "What Is Man?" by Bro. R. H. Judd. This is the first in a series of articles which we are sure will prove to be of interest to our readers.

Bro. J. H. Anderson spoke at the Christian Church at Lucerne, Indiana, on Saturday evening, January 17. His subject was, "Signs of the Times."

Bro. and Sr. Wm. C. McGraw, Betty and Billy, of Macomb, Illinois, were welcome visitors in Rockford and Oregon over the past week end.

Bro. C. E. Lapp of the Training Class spoke for the Plum River (Illinois) brethren on Sunday, January 18.

A NEW TRACT

Bro. J. H. Anderson's tract on "Present Conditions in the Light of Prophecy" is now ready. The price is ten cents per copy. In this tract Bro. Anderson points out the present conditions and the cause and the remedy. The tracts may be ordered of J. H. Stepp, Dana, North Carolina, or of the author at Michigantown, Indiana.

GOLDEN RULE CHURCH

Cleveland, Ohio

On Tuesday evening, December 23, the Sunday School gave its Christmas entertainment to a packed church auditorium. We say packed because our church normally seats about two hundred, and on this occasion we made room for two hundred and seventy-five.

It was judged by those present the best festival our Sunday School has given and showed the real hard work and zeal not only of the officers and teachers but of those who took part—our boys and girls and members of our Bereans. We must not forget to mention our newly organized orchestra which helped so splendidly with the music.

—Yesterday, January 11, we had an attendance of one, hundred and seventy, only one less than our previous record on "Children's Day."

We are praying and working for still greater attendances and achievements in our Lord's work, and hope to go over two hundred shortly.

W. J. Halls,

MOOREFIELD, NEBRASKA

Our services are as follows: Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. Morning Worship, 11:00 a. m. Evening Service, 7:30. Prayer Meeting on Wednesday evening and chorus practice on Thursday evening. We moved here last June and have been having regular services every Sunday since. The attendance has been fine all the time.

The average attendance at Sunday School last year was 103 1-2. The average attendance for the first six months of the year was 86, and for the last six months it was 120. The biggest number that attended any one month of the year was 714 in June.

I have baptized nine since coming here and have three candidates to baptize now. We have a broad field with great possibilities, and many loyal supporters of the truth.

Yours in the Master's service,
E. E. Giesler, Pastor.

GRAND RAPIDS CHURCH NEWS

Sr. Ella Rose is not recovering from her recent illness as rapidly as friends had hoped. She is spending the winter with her son at 2107 Horton Ave. S. E.

Bro. Arlie Townsend is suffering with acute arthritis following his siege of flu. He is reported to be on the gain.

Bro. and Sr. Holly had a narrow escape from death last Sunday afternoon when they were overcome with coke gas which escaped from the furnace. Sr. Holly was unconscious when found, and it was some time before she regained consciousness.

Bro. Paul Hatch, who is filling Bro. Siple's pulpit while he is away, is very busy calling on the membership here, trying to get acquainted with us all.

Bro. and Sr. F. E. Siple are now visiting Bro. Siple's mother in Hammond, Louisiana.
Mrs. Wm. Hanson.

OREGON IN THE WEST

Bro. Maurice Kerr, who was ill for some time with pneumonia was recently discharged from the hospital.

A party of Corvallis people, including Bro. and Sr. D. H. Hathaway, and daughters, Doris Jean, Lucille and Irene, Bro. H. B. Hathaway and Mrs. Platt G. Hathaway, motored to Los Angeles, California, where they spent the holidays. The party visited relatives and friends in many of the southern cities, making their headquarters while there at the home of Sr. Tremain. They attended church services at the home of Bro. and Sr. Railsback.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Nordyke attended the quarterly conference at Corvallis. Sr. Nordyke was formerly Zilda Hathaway.

Sr. Minnie Rogers of Eugene has been ill. Bro. and Sr. J. C. Wilson attended the quarterly meetings at Corvallis. Bro. Wilson has been confined to his bed for four weeks because of a sprained back.

Sr. Anna Cady spent the holiday season with sons and a daughter in Portland. She spent some time at the home of Bro. and Sr. A. W. Darby and while there had the pleasure of visiting again with Sr. Golda Ehmer of Menlo, Washington, and Sr. Alice Prior of Portland, daughters of Bro. Darby.

Sr. W. I. Barber and family have moved to 1553 Adams St., Corvallis, Oregon.

CHICAGO SERVICES

Bro. L. E. Conner expects to be with the Chicago brethren on January 25. Sunday School opens at ten o'clock and preaching service comes at eleven. These services will be conducted in the Austin-Whitehead home at 5439 Ohio Street. All are welcome.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

The quarterly meeting of the Northwestern Conference was held January 3 and 4, 1931, at Corvallis, Oregon. Bro. J. C. Wilson opened the meeting, using as his text, John 17:3, "Glorify thou me with the glory which I had with thee before the world was".

Sunday School was held at ten o'clock, following which a discourse was given on the "Priesthood". Bro. Wilson, speaking at the evening service, closed the meeting with a sermon on "The Mark of the Beast". This was just the kind of a talk that we of the latter times need. It is very important that we who have rendered obedience to God through baptism be careful that we are not deceived by the beast which is in the earth today. The mark may be social, political or religious.

The attendance averaged twelve. We hope that the members of Washington and other parts of Oregon will realize that it is essential that they attend these meetings and lend their assistance by their presence to the efforts put forth by the ministers and other members to bring the gospel to the people of Oregon and Washington.

Our prayer is for the soon coming of our Lord, the holy One of Israel and the Redeemer of the world.

Gladys Barber, Secretary.

FONTHILL ACTIVITIES

Bro. Weldon, first elder of the Fonthill church has been confined to his bed for the past month with a severe attack of muscular rheumatism.

Sr. Haincs' father has also been bedfast of late with apoplexy. Other members have been sick for short periods. The prayers of the congregation daily ascend for the Father's blessings to attend these needy ones.

The annual meeting of the Fonthill church and Sunday School was held on Wednesday afternoon, January 14. A splendid spirit prevailed throughout the entire session. Besides the regular officers, Sr. Irene Holland was chosen as church reporter for The Herald columns.

The editor of one of our daily papers has requested our pastor to furnish his publication with a synopsis of his sermons. This will mean wide advertising for our church work. Our Bible study classes have been very interesting of late. The studies are held every other week at the different homes.

Plans are beginning to be made for our Annual May Meeting. We would be glad to have any of our church people from a distance also begin to plan to come and unite with us in this annual feast of spiritual things.

After a very sad parting with Bro. Gordon, Bro. Clyde Randall of Minnesota has come here to Fonthill to be our pastor. He has been with us now for about three weeks and is endearing himself to all by his genial manner and earnest efforts. We pray that God will guide, guard and direct him in all his undertakings.

Irene Holland,

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody! Sign! Solicit! Watch!

GROWTH AT DIXON

Services at the Dixon church on January 11 were good. Bro. Conner gave two very good sermons. The subject for the morning sermon was "The Gospel of Christ and its Value to the World." The evening sermon was, "Why Should We Worship God?" From now on our regular preaching days will be the first and third Sundays of the month.

Sunday School services are more encouraging in every way. The Little Sunbeams' class, taught by Sr. Ford, has been divided, with Sr. Wagner teaching the Little Sunbeams and Sr. Ford the older children, and they are busy trying to find a name for their class. The Truth Seekers' class, and the Gideon Band are also starting another class contest, an airplane race to last three months. The Adult class numbered 21, which is the best we have had to date. The lessons are well studied, everyone taking part to search the Scriptures to learn the truth.

On January 4 the following officers were elected for the coming year: Superintendent, Bro. John Roberts; Assistant Superintendent, Bro. Duvall; Secretary, Sr. Grace Drew; Treasurer, Sr. Lila Wagner.

Sr. Ada Drew has the honor of being the only one not missing a Sunday last year. Alice Myers, Sr. Dauntler and Bro. Dauntler, who was our superintendent last year, missed one Sunday.

We pray the Father's blessing may be with each and every one in the Sunday Schools and churches everywhere, that we may continue to be His followers and do what Jesus told His disciples to do in Matthew 5:16, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Grace Drew, Secretary.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Lottie Young; Frank Smalley; V. C. Railsback; Mrs. Amy Johnson; E. D. Eaton; R. A. Humphreys; George O. Renner; Harry A. Sheets; Elmer Winfrey; Mrs. J. G. Haupt; Mrs. Margaret Allen; F. H. Seymour; W. O. Jenter; Mrs. M. L. Decounter; Otto Mommensen; Mrs. G. B. Gaspar; Mrs. L. E. Marston; Chas. Anderson; Irena Margrave; Mrs. W. J. Scott; N. S. Westfall; Mrs. R. V. Gardiner; Mrs. C. Seely; J. A. Squires; Mrs. H. C. Starbuck; Rachel M. Whitcomb; Milton Long; Hanna M. Barber.

THE HERALD APPRECIATED

Dear Editors and Friends: Our weekly Herald is a faithful messenger, as usual brimful, so to speak, of good things for "the inner man." The closing article of the January 6 issue is the cap stone. It is entitled, "The Devotional Use of the Bible", and manifests a diligent study of that blessed Book.

For more than a month the writer has suffered with a swollen and painful foot, caused by wearing a tight shoe. I am not able to go about as usual, but have had a mental feast. Sr. H. H. Kent sent me some excellent tracts, and Sr. Harriet E. Boice, a "Visitor". We are thankful to God for you brethren.

Yours in hope of life,
R. A. Humphreys.

"For by what he has suffered, having been tried, he is able to assist those who are tried."
—Hebrews 2:18, Diag.

HE SWARE BY HIMSELF

"Because he could swear by no greater, he sware by himself", is the striking statement made by the apostle in Heb. 6:13. And the thing which God sware to Abram was, "Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee." Heb. 6:14. Herein the apostle refers back to the days of Abram as he was pioneering with God. Going down from Mount Moriah after having offered, in principle, his son Isaac upon the altar, Jehovah made this covenant unto Abram, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

This promise still stands, awaiting its fullest answer. The world itself is dependent upon the absolute and complete answer to that promise. He who removes the promise from its proper setting, he who lessens it in its meaning can but be lessening in his own esteem God himself and can but be blinding his fellow men to the true greatness of Almighty God.

But men of faith, today as in all days, base their all upon the certainty of this and other promises of God. They maintain them in the very setting in which they were placed by the Father himself. And they in true faith look forward in anticipation of the grandeur of that day when the promises shall have been executed and their facts stand out in grandeur among men.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

To Stop Paper. — It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

ANNUITY BONDS

There is no better way to preserve one's capital for use during life and at the same time dedicate it to the Master's use after one's death than by a National Bible Institution Annuity Bond.

Write NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION, Oregon, Illinois, for information.

Any Amount - Much or Little

WHAT IS MAN?

By R. H. Judd

"The Lord hath made everything for its own end (or purpose, margin)."—Prov. 16:4, R. V. "And God said, Let us make man in our image after our likeness; and let him have dominion . . . over all the earth."—Gen. 1:26. "And God said, 'Replenish the earth and subdue it.'"—Gen. 1:28. "The earth hath he given to the children of men."—Psa. 115:16.

THROUGHOUT LIFE'S EXPERIENCE, all of us who have given any thought at all to the things that surround us in their multiplicity of form, composition and surroundings, have been more than amazed at the wonderful adaptability of everything to a specific purpose, and the suitability of its environment. In our texts as given above we have God's own statements that everything is thus ordered. So well known and appreciated are these facts that in all walks of life that have their basis on any one of the multiple subdivisions that go to make up the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms, recognition of the necessity of cooperating with nature's purpose before progress can be achieved has been increasingly taken into account.

We have but to enter into the history of each of these three great divisions in order to find that overwhelming proofs demonstrate that design and purpose enter into everything that God has made. It is well known that many of the wonderful inventions, especially the mechanical, have been gained from the marvelous anatomy that occurs in unending variety of corporate life, the bodily organisms of each individual of any species being perfectly adapted to its needs and its circumstances. Both together demonstrate the special purpose or purposes of each in its natural state.

But another fact stands out in clear and unmistakable evidence that all are created with a higher purpose than that which is apparent on the surface. Beautifully adapted as is each created object—animate or inanimate—to its immediate surroundings, and perfect within its own prescribed circumference, there lies latent in each a capacity of development that can only be attained by a controlling force independent and external to it, a fact in itself affording unmistakable proof that the coming of man was the objective pre-arranged purpose.

This may, perhaps, be best illustrated by what we know of man's development of nature in the vegetable kingdom, such as for instance the tomato in the sphere of human achievement and the rose in another, which are only samples from an endless variety of attainment and possibilities yet to be realized. The same truth is well understood in what is known as the mineral kingdom, particularly in the class belonging to it under the name of chemistry. Vast powers lie hidden and have been hidden for millenniums only awaiting the external controlling power of man.

Only during a fraction of man's tenure of the earth has there been the faintest realization of the vast illimitable resources which it contains, to say nothing of the possibilities which may result from innumerable and varied combinations, each and all acting according to laws, the nature of which must be ascertained by earnest and increasing research. This is a further proof of the purpose to make man so that the man and his environment would be appropriately suited to each other.

Again let us look at man's environment from another angle and see if we have not still further evidence in answer to the momentous question that we have asked at the head of this article. Perhaps the phase we are about to consider is the one that should have had our first attention. We think that none will dispute the assumed fact that man's adaptability to his sphere on earth is reasonably conclusive proof that the earth was created with a view to his habitation, and his accompanying needs and pleasures, even if the mere facts of his sustenance in being are for the moment the only consideration.

The preparation of a habitation, and the nature of a variety of the supply of the requirements for sustenance in it inevitably bespeak the nature of the occupant and the estimation of the value in which it is held. If the commonly supposed idea that man's body is but the shell which he inhabits, then the age-long preparation of the earth for man looms up as a huge and tremendous hoax, for everything in nature in its boundless supplies conforms to man's needs as we see him and know him, and nothing at all is provided for the immaterial phantom of popular belief.

We have only to look at nature in its teeming supplies and its endless and amazing variety to measure in some slight degree the value placed on the man God had made, or rather was about to make, when He fashioned this earth for his habitation, who but for the facts of sin and death might, even according to human assertion, revel unceasingly in the glories that are now and that are yet to be revealed.

All these things point to the indubitable fact that man, as we see him and know him, was, in his original purity, the being whom the Creator designed to carry out and fulfill the evident purposes for which the earth itself was prepared. He is indeed "fearfully and wonderfully made" and eminently adapted, in his perfect state, for working in harmony with all other created things. He is endowed with attributes, active and latent, almost unbounded in their scope, so that he may exercise dominion "over all the earth," and "subdue it," as he is beginning to do this day according to divine command. Sin alone stands as the impenetrable bar to his progress, cutting him off in the midst of his days, and frustrating his insatiable ambitions.

The more we know our real friends the more dearly we love them, and this is emphatically true in the case of the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother." How near are we to Paul's conception of the One for whom he suffered the loss of all things that he might win Christ and be found in Him? Hear what the great apostle to the Gentiles says: "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings."

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, JANUARY 27, 1931

NUMBER 17

GOD'S TIMES

By F. L. Austin

"But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night."—1 Thessalonians 5:1, 2.

GOD'S CALENDAR OF THE AGES is evidently just as definite and accurate as is man's calendar of the year. Yea, more so! Man's devices are always full of error; God's, never.

For seventy years Daniel had been in servitude to Babylon and Medo-Persia. Memories of childhood in the Holy City were vivid upon his mind. The words of God's prophet, Jeremiah, were before him. He looked; he studied; he computed.

"This whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon seventy years." "When seventy years are accomplished, I will punish the king of Babylon." So wrote Jeremiah in 25:11, 12-14.

Again he wrote, 29:10-14, "For thus saith the LORD, That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place."

It was the first year of the reign of Darius. By "books" Daniel understood the number of the years. Nearly seventy had been numbered since the overthrow of the Holy City. According to Jeremiah's word, the desolations of Jerusalem would continue seventy years. See Daniel 9:2.

Daniel set his "face unto the LORD God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fastings, and sackcloth, and ashes." God's time of "seventy years" was well nigh completed. His time was definite and sure. Such a prayer of confession and supplication as that of Daniel, as recorded in 9:3-19, is seldom recorded in the Bible.

The sins of all Israel were by him confessed. Forgiveness was implored. Restoration was pleaded. "O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord hearken and do; defer not, for thine own sake, O my God: for thy city and thy people are called by thy name."

While he was yet praying, verse 20, while he was yet "speaking in prayer," verse 21, Gabriel (see chapter 8:16) touched him, and said, verses 22 and 23, "O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding, . . . understand the matter."

Gabriel, an archangel, had been sent to faithful Daniel to give him clear understanding. He was to speak in plain words, words of ready understanding. Surely, Gabriel can be relied upon as able and qualified so to do. What Gabriel said needs no interpretation by finite man.

"Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city, to"—accomplish six several things. This is Gabriel's statement to Daniel. Notice that his words pertain to Daniel's "people" and to Daniel's "holy city". The six several items pertain both to the people and the city. Not to the people mingled in some foreign city; nor to the Holy City inhabited by some foreign people, but to Israel and Jerusalem. What Gabriel said pertained to Israel in her own promised city and land. It pertained to her home-dwelling, not to her foreign captivity.

The "seventy years" of which Jeremiah had spoken pertained to God's time for her captivity. He did not refer to her home-coming. Therefore Jeremiah's seventy years and Gabriel's "seventy weeks" were different time periods of God—the first pertaining to captivity, the latter to home-dwelling.

God's time periods are many and in great variety of length. The word, "weeks", is strictly English. The word that Gabriel used meant "sevens". Because seven days constitute an English week, the English translators called it "weeks", but Gabriel said, "sevens".

God computes one of his times in terms of seven days. Compare Genesis 1, et al. He computed another "time" in

(Continued on page 266)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

JESUS IS COMING

LET NOT YOUR HEART be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know."—Jesus, John 14:1-4.

"For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Jesus, Matthew 16:27.

"And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Luke, Acts 1:9-11.

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure."—1 John 3:1-3.

"For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."—Paul, Philippians 3:20, 21.

"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."—Paul, 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18.

"He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly."—Jesus, Revelation 22:20.

"Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus."—John, Revelation 22:20.

WHAT IT MEANS

THE COMING OF JESUS is of different import to different groups. To the church, it means salvation in all the fullness of the meaning of that word. Its members will be changed and fashioned like unto His glorious body: this mortal will be made immortal, and this corruptible will be made incorruptible. They will be "glorified together with him."—Romans 8:17.

To Israel, His coming means the reestablishment of their nation, with Him as King upon the throne of his father David.—Luke 1:33. Jacob's time of trouble, Jeremiah 30:7, will purge the nation of much of its dross; the sealing of God, Rev. 7:1-8, will establish a nucleus of God-fearing people, and God, through Christ, will be the hope of His people. Joel 3:17.

To the Gentile world, His coming will be the introduction of the Millennium, during which time many nations will come to Israel at Jerusalem and will learn of God and of His ways. Wars will be made to cease; the curse will begin to recede; righteousness will grow. At last, the righteous will be continued; the wicked will be cut off.

To earth, His coming means the beginning of that new era the end of which will find the whole earth filled with the glory of the Lord. Numbers 14:21.

"The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing. . . . The parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water." Isa. 35.

"For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind. And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the Lord." Isa. 65.

"Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

BLESSING FOLLOWS SERVICE

By Cecil A. Smead

"As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."—1 Kings 17:1.

WITH THESE WORDS ELIJAH announced to the surprised Ahab the Lord's punishment on His people who had turned away their hearts from Him in their mad pursuit after wickedness and idolatry. Yet, withal, it showed the grace of God. The punishment was to make them realize their mistakes, to bring them back to Him. If it failed it was because of the hardness of men's hearts.

But, thanks be to God, it did not completely fail: a remnant was saved. "Yet have I left me seven thou and in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." 1 Kings 19:18. Tribulation worked as a refiner's fire to purify the dross and disclose the gold.

For a period of three and one-half years the Lord withheld the dew and the rain. During that time He hid and preserved His faithful prophet, Elijah, until the time came for further work to be done. First, the Lord sent ravens to feed Elijah where he remained hid by a mountain stream near the Jordan River. Then when the drought became so severe that the stream dried up, He sent Elijah to a widow of a certain city in the coasts of Sidon. "Behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee." 1 Kings 17:9.

The famine had been so severe on this woman that, when Elijah found her, she was out gathering fuel to bake her last cake in order that she and her son might eat it and die. Elijah, direct from the wilderness clothed in his rough prophet's garb, must have made an appearance like unto a worthless vagrant. He demanded her last morsel in the name of the Lord.

What modern housewife would be disposed to invite such in to partake of food out of her plenty? Yet this woman was called upon to relinquish the only food that stood between her family and starvation. True, one more meal would make no appreciable difference to her; she was on the verge of starvation anyway. What difference did a few more hours make? But did you ever try to reason with a hungry man when there is prospect of food in sight? I tell you, that next meal looms large on his horizon.

True, also, this woman was promised in the name of Jehovah that her provisions would be constantly replenished if she obeyed. But she had to first bake Elijah a cake and bring it to him. "Make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son. For thus saith the Lord God of Israel, The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the Lord sendeth rain upon the earth." 1 Kings 17:13-14.

After bringing him the cake, the woman went back to her empty larder supposing this man were false, — but no, glory to God, she found her larder replenished. She and her boy were saved. Her faith had saved them. They had a never-failing supply from God as long as the drought continued. She had exercised faith. He had rewarded.

She had to prove herself first. She had to lay all she had in the hands of God. She had to exercise the faith to break the shell that God's blessings might come forth. She gave her last bit and withheld nothing. Truly, it can be said of her that she received in return "good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over." Luke 6:38.

O, gracious Father, open our minds to the truth of the principle contained in this story. Touch our hearts, as Thou didst that of the woman, that we too may surrender our earthly possessions to Thee, that whatsoever Thou dost require of us, we may do it, and in so doing invoke the glorious power of Thy grace to shine upon us, we ask, in the name of our Lord Jesus. Amen.

LOVE THINE ENEMY

By Ednah Cooper

TWO MEN who had been friends from childhood had a misunderstanding which caused them to become bitter enemies. They had no associations together in any way, although they were neighbors, their farms adjoining.

One night in the winter time, when the roads were almost impassable, the small child of the one had a serious accident. The other, knowing the need of his old time friend, offered his assistance and was the means of saving the child's life.

We, as true followers of Christ, should be willing to do as this neighbor did for his enemy. God intended for us to have that spirit of forgiveness in our hearts.

Jesus commands us in Matthew 5:43-45, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust."

God, in His great love for mankind, gave His only begotten Son for us, while we were yet in sin. He bestows the blessings of life on the sinner the same as on the righteous. Unless we, too, are willing to have the spirit of forgiveness in our hearts toward those who are our enemies, we are no better than sinners, for they love those who love them, and are more than ready to harm their opposers.

May we each one have the love of God in our hearts, so that we will be ready to assist all those in need, whether enemies or friends. Thereby we may gain a place in the kingdom of God.

THE PAULINE EPISTLES

By Lyman Booth

THE EPISTOLARY PART of the New Testament, while it more fully shows the accomplishment of the ancient prophecies concerning the kingdom than even the historical part does, contains also some very remarkable prophecies, several of which have had as remarkable accomplishment; but some remain to be fulfilled. See Romans 11; 2 Thess. 2:1-12; 1 Tim. 4:1-3; 2 Tim. 3:1-5; 2 Peter 2; 7; 3. This also constitutes unmistakable proof that they were written by inspiration of that God who sees the end from the beginning.

We find that the writers of these epistles speak of each other and of themselves as delivering the truth to mankind by the authority of God himself. There may be some exceptions to this (see Rom. 6:19; 3:5; Gal. 3:15), and even these seem to more fully establish the general rule. For why should an apostle intimate that he only gave his own opinion and not a divine injunction in three particular cases unless requesting his readers to allow that, in all other cases, he spoke as moved by the Holy Spirit? Therefore if anyone should doubt the authority of the writers of the epistles, they must either accept or reject them in full. There can be no other alternative.

The open attacks of infidels do little more injury to the cause of truth than is done by half-hearted confessions of some professed Christians who admit that the epistles are the genuine productions of the apostles, but that there may be mistakes in them. Such plausible statements contain no standard of truth, no way of determining between the true doctrine and the false, no divinely appointed exhibition of the Christian religion with which we must compare all others and admit or reject, as they agree or disagree with it.

The doctrines peculiar to the gospel are more clearly shown and explained and their practical tendency is more clearly stated than in the historical books. The truths which are contained therein and which have been brought forth have been kept in mind through this exposition. Therefore it will be unnecessary to answer those who have striven to reconcile this part of the Scriptures with other systems. It may be proper, however, to state that Dr. Taylor's key to the Epistle to the Romans and the comments by Mr. Locke on several of the epistles give little light, but on the contrary seem to darken counsel by "words without wisdom."

If, as some claim, the various terms used in the Scripture concerning Israel as a nation should be in the same or nearly the same sense applied to Christians under the teaching of the New Testament, where will we find the type and antitype? How then can we distinguish between Israel after the flesh and the believers, or true Israel?

Some of the epistles were written on special occasions and some were not. Those special occasions were of such nature that they gave the most favorable opportunity for correctly explaining doctrines, precepts and the giving of admonitions and counsels of the greatest importance to the church of Christ for all time. The oft repeated notion that we have nothing to do with a certain portion of Scripture, because it was written on some special occasion is well calculated to render the Word of God of no effect.

We commence with the epistles of Paul who wrote, as well as labored, more abundantly than all the other apostles. Of his epistles, fourteen are given for our instruction. His writings are the product of a sound and matured judgment, a talent for clear reasoning, a keen imagination and the most fervent appreciation. And why should this not be so, seeing he was guided by the Holy Spirit?

His letter to the Romans is given first place in our Bible, though others were written before. It was addressed to the Christians who resided in the capital city of the Roman empire. It is one of the longest and most comprehensive of all his writings. It is not definitely known who first preached the gospel at Rome, but some suggest it might have been some of those Jews who were converted on the day of Pentecost. Paul had not previously been to Rome, but he thought it wise to employ this method to firmly establish the believers in the faith, and to caution them against false teachers.

This epistle is the only book of Scripture in which the gospel is presented in a perfect, systematical method. After the introduction, he opens the subject by showing man's relation to God, his Creator, and his apostasy from His worship and service. He also proceeds to prove the sinfulness of both Jews and Gentiles, and the impossibility of any man justifying himself before God simply by his own obedience. But he proceeds to state the means of our salvation by the mercy of God, through the redemption of His Son, also the way of justification by faith. This he illustrates and demonstrates fully; and then proceeds to prove that this way of justification is very clearly connected with sanctification.

He next states the Christian's experience and conflicts, and exhibits his character, hopes and privileges. He then turns our thoughts back to the source of all these heavenly blessings in the election and love and mercy of God. After having answered the objections to his doctrines and after discussing several questions respecting the calling of the Gentiles and the rejection of the Jews, he applies the whole discourse by a number of precepts, practical exhortations and instructions. Having given some particulars suited to those times, he concludes with affectionate salutations, cautions and prayer, and then closes the letter by ascribing glory to God our Savior, through Jesus Christ.

“BEFORE WE CAN BRING HAPPINESS to others we must first be happy ourselves; nor will happiness abide within us unless we confer it on others. If there be a smile upon our lips, those around us will soon smile, too, and our happiness will become the truer and deeper as we see others are happy.” — Maeterlinck.

CALLED AND CHOSEN

By Samuel E. Hancy

"And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest."

ISAIAH SAYS, "All thy children shall be taught of the Lord." No ambiguity about these prophecies. But the writer recognizes a mark of distinction between knowledge of God and a saving compliance with God's plan of salvation. The more intelligently and carefully one reads the Bible and studies human nature, the more pronounced becomes this fact.

At some period, or periods, in God's plan every person is to have a "taste of the good word of God" and a knowledge of Christ, his Savior (Heb. 6:5), as it is written, "Who will have all ('willeth all', Roth.; 'desires all', Moffatt) men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." 1 Tim. 2:4. Notice the word "taste"—not a thorough knowledge. Six hundred million souls are now thus blessed in various manners and degrees.

In modern times the tendency of Bible students is to swing the pendulum along doctrinal lines to extremes. Some insist that ninety percent of the race will be lost and ten percent saved, while others are as persistent that all mankind including the devil and all the fallen angels will be saved. But there is a profitable medium between these extremes for the unbiased and open-minded student who accepts Christ, the Holy Spirit and his own sanctified common sense as his only reliable preceptors.

"Many are called ('invited,' Diag.), but few are chosen", or selected. Matt. 22:14. The writer does not share the prevalent thought of the term "called", during the Christian era, to be the same as it was applied to the apostles. He believes man to be the initiative of his own "call" or selection. Man becomes convinced by the gospel message of the fact that by natural birth he is a sinner, and in need of a Savior; and he accepts Jesus Christ as such by assuming his Savior's name, Christian. A somewhat similar line of reasoning seems applicable to the term "chosen". Man, by his personal efforts and alliance with God, becomes qualified to be of the "chosen" by meriting the exalted position or honor.

The responsibility of even a desultory knowledge of God and His Son is rarely perceived in these days. Hence, many take the name "Christian" for some fancied or selfish purpose, either by blindly subscribing to their parents' religious persuasion, for social aggrandizement, or perchance motivated by hopes of a life of dignity and sinecure. Thus, the "many" who are "called", or enlightened become so irrespective of their degree of sincerity, diversified purposes or intelligence.

It is from this large, heterogeneous group of professing Christians that but few sufficiently appreciate their "calling" as to sincerely enter the school of Christ and there qualify themselves to be of the "few chosen" ones. And now the period of discrimination between the called and the potentially chosen ones is manifesting itself by an increasing spirit of antipathy on the part of the called, or nominals.

The fact that history has been repeating itself during the Christian era should be patent to Bible students. For instance, the law was given to all the Jews—many—as a "schoolmaster" (Gal. 3:24) to prepare them to meet their Messiah. But few were finally prepared, chosen. The same thing has obtained during the Christian era: the "called", enlightened, have been privileged (invited) to enter the school of Christ, there to prepare themselves to meet their Redeemer at His second advent. But few have cared to avail themselves of this heavenly favor, the many being content with a rudimentary knowledge, enchanted as they have allowed themselves to become by the flesh and the frivolous, transitory things of this world. Prophecy depicts them somewhat obscurely, "Seven women of that day (literally, a period of time, as, in Washington's day) shall seize a single (one) man, crying, We will earn our living, we will clothe ourselves, but only let us bear your name (Christian), to save us from disgrace"! Isa. 4:1, Moffatt.

The question here arises, will those being called, taking the name "Christian" and recognizing the phenomenon signs of the times, yet ignoring their profession and the portent of these signs, have another (protracted) chance of being saved in a future age? The wise man says in Proverbs 21:16, "The man that wandereth out of the way of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead,"—"will find his rest among the dead below," Moffatt. Paul says (Heb. 12:14), "Follow peace with all men, and holiness (consecration, Moffatt), without which no man shall see God." Note 2 Peter 2:20-22.

It appears to the writer (but not dogmatically) that the man having even an elementary knowledge of the truth and postponing until a future age putting his knowledge to practical use is taking foolhardy chances of escaping a Gehenna plunge into eternity. Procrastination can be more than a thief of time; it is scripturally possible for it to rob a man of everlasting life.

There are twelve hundred million people living and countless billions in the dust who have never heard of the proffered opportunity of everlasting life appropriated for all mankind through the cross of Christ. These have not had even a vague knowledge of God's sacrifice of His Son in their behalf, "who gave himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."

God forgives the penitent of his sins (1 John 1:9), but will He forgive us for trifling with the precious blood of His Son—making the blood a common thing? Thus they ignore the mediation of Christ, the only "way" of life to which Paul refers by saying, "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God," meaning, without an intercessor.

—o—
 "STEWARDSHIP PUTS the Golden Rule in business in place of the Rule of Gold."

DON'T BLOW SMOKE IN HIS FACE

By C. E. Lapp

"Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

THE FOREGOING STATEMENT was made by Solomon; the man of the Bible who is pointed out as having had great wisdom. In fact, his wisdom was of God and people marveled at Solomon's many wise deeds and acts while he was king of Israel. Truly, Solomon must have been a wise king. If he was considered wise at his time, then we might very well profit by his advice at this present time.

He said, "Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth." How many of the youth of our own nation remember God as they really should? How many are turning away to follow after every conceivable pleasure the world affords and are giving their time, their talents, their energy, their money and even their very life just trying to have a good time. They do not realize that the pleasures of this world vanish as a mist in the air and that only the things of God are lasting. They do not realize that God has prepared something far above man and far more lasting than the things of man.

How then should we remember our God and Creator? Is there any set time or condition in which we should remember Him? Solomon said to remember Him while we are young and before the days come in which we will be so wrapped up in the things of this world and the evil that is in it that we forget about God and forget about doing as He bids us. Don't you suppose God is pleased when the young boy or girl in childish faith turns to Him and accepts His Son Jesus Christ before he or she has plunged into sin and has drunk its bitter dregs?

Some say, "I expect to be a Christian some time and serve the Lord, but I want to wait until I have grown more mature in years." They might be likened to a long, white candle that has never been touched by a fire of any sort. The candle is lit and slowly but surely the candle melts. It gets shorter and shorter and the wax runs down its sides and makes it all dirty and ugly. At first it gives a light that shines a considerable distance but as it burns shorter the light does not carry as far and finally it becomes very short and gives a very small light. People are just that way. They want to use the best part of their lives for themselves and then when they are old and can do very little for the Lord, they turn to Him and offer a life that is very near to the grave. A young person with all of life before him can accomplish much more for the Lord by a full life of service than can an old person with only a few short years of life left.

Perhaps a young life with all of its fullness, all of its opportunities and all of its strength is thrown away for the perishing things of this world. Then when life is nearing its end, when the best has been used for self and selfish desires and one is going down the western side of life's hill, God is expected by many to redeem from sin and bless abundantly. That, in itself, is just like burning the candle to the end and then blowing the smoke in His face.

All over this nation of ours there is a call for young blood and for young minds and hearts in every branch of activity, whether it be commercial, whether it be social, whether it be scientific. The finest and best of the land are called and urged to participate because of the new ideas gained day by day from them.

God, through His Son, is calling the young of heart, the young of mind, the active, the fearless to be servants of His and to spread and proclaim the gospel to all. Young man, or young woman, let us each and every one turn to the heavenly Father while we are young and let us give Him the best that there is in us. We sometimes fear lest we shall suffer for want of the things of this world, but cannot the great God of all the universe supply little, insignificant you and me with the necessities of life? He can do that and even more than we have ever dared hope or dream. He has prepared a reward far greater than any earthly reward, even eternal life.

Let us each and every one remember our Creator in the days of our youth that we may give a lifetime of service to His cause.

YOUR TRUST

"Judas Iscariot . . . having the bag took away what was put therein."

IT WAS JESUS CHRIST who gave Judas the bag, making him the treasurer of the Twelve. Why did Jesus put that temptation in the way of Judas? Did He not know that the man of Kerioth was a potential thief? Surely, for "He knew what was in man." But He also knew that Judas was a potential honest man, a potential Christian hero. By making him a member of the Twelve, our Lord did not make him a thief and a traitor. Indeed, He gave Judas the best chance for nobility he could possibly have had. Judas had no one but himself to blame when he failed in his great opportunity.

And so it is with every charge committed to any one of us. We can find in it an opportunity for failure, for disloyalty, for sin, or we can make it a chance for glorious success. All depends on our obedience to Jesus Christ. If we are His friends, if we live so close to Him as to absorb His ideals and gain His power, then every charge He gives us will be a step upward, developing us for larger service.

We see in ourselves, our Master, possibilities of even the ultimate shame, such as that of Judas. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. Be near to us at all times, most of all when we are self-sufficient and would be by ourselves. Put tests upon us, but, oh, help us to bear them.—Selected.

THE MAN IN EDEN

By T. A. Drinkard

I AM SINCERELY GLAD to know that my article of recent date under the above caption has caused a little interest to be manifested. If my criticisms seem a little harsh, kindly remember that I have no personal ill will toward anyone, and realizing the trend of our times I write with the one aim in mind to please God. I appreciate Bro. Judd's criticism, even though a portion of it did not cover the position I hold to be true, but one which he thinks I take. Allow me to briefly state the position I hold as being true.

Adam was put into the garden of Eden. (Gen. 2:8.) He had access to all the trees of the garden except one. (Gen. 2:16, 17.) He ate the forbidden fruit in Eden. (Gen. 3:6.) He disobeyed God's law in Eden, hence sinned. (Gen. 3:11, 12; 1 John 3:4.) God drove him out of Eden. (Gen. 3:23, 24.) He died out of Eden. (Gen. 5:5.)

I have never taken the untenable position that Adam died the moment he sinned, nor that he died in Eden. I do contend however that he died the very day he ate the forbidden fruit. To deny it is but to say that God did not know just what Adam planned to do when He (God) made this statement (Gen. 2:17), and after God found out just what Adam was going to do, and did do, He had to change His plan.

Kindly overlook any seemingly unkind thought given. I am only contending for the scriptural account as I see it. I appreciate the teaching of Jer. 18:7-10; Ezek. 21, 22 and 27; Jonah 3:4, 9, but to my mind they have no connection with the point being considered.

Are the words of Gen. 2:16, 17 inspired? This is a fundamental question and that is the reason I presented it. I cannot doubt the great wisdom of God, and to start the record out at the beginning with an inaccurate account is but to entangle ourselves in a difficulty that we cannot unravel.

Our brother says, "We have abundant evidence in Scripture that God has sometimes repented of the evil He said He would do." Was death with which He threatened Adam an evil? Is there any Scripture to sustain the thought that God repented of inflicting the death threat upon Adam? To me the question of inflicting the death threatened is not the point involved, but the time when inflicted, whether in the day he transgressed, or at a later date. That is the point under consideration.

Does our brother use the word, "repent", in the sense that God changed or decided not to cause Adam to die during a twenty-four hour day? Kindly note the force of these words, "For I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Mal. 3:6. "I change not" fully assures me that "known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world." Acts 15:18.

In Acts 15:18 it is shown that God knew what He was about to do in Gen. 2:16, 17. Hence it can truly be said of Him that He does not change. I have always looked upon God as being unchangeable in His plan. I have from the days of early manhood to the present, recognized in God the power to foreknow and understand, "declaring the end from the beginning." Isa. 46:9, 10. Adam heard, disobeyed, sinned, and died in the day of Gen. 2:17. But I do not look upon this day as being one of only twenty-four hours.

Take a good look at the address label on your paper or wrapper. If the date indicated shows that you are in arrears, please remit soon. Thank you!

CONFLICTING IDEALS

By Lydia Railsback

THERE IS AN OLD saying something like this, "Hitch your wagon to a star, and climb to it." In other words, if one would attain to a certain position or reach a desired goal, he must have that point in mind and strain every nerve to accomplish his aim.

Most persons have some sort of an ideal, that is, some one they wish to be like or something which they wish to accomplish. Some ideals are undoubtedly of the lowest type; others may be to acquire great riches, and drive fine automobiles and be the envy of their fellow beings, or make a great worldly display in some other way. But there is another class whose sole ambition is to serve the Master in simplicity and to gain that rich reward, eternal life.

Dissipation and sin usually go with the worldly minded. Meekness, longsuffering and charity are characteristics of the followers of the Christ.

The Israelites were admonished time and time again to fear the Lord and serve Him. But their ideals seem to have been to be like other people, and so to idol worship they would turn and forget the God that had delivered them from bondage.

The Christian is told to keep himself unspotted from the world, James 1:27, but so many, many times one drifts back into the ways of sin, forgetting that he was once washed in the blood of the Lamb! What a pity!

When Christ was tempted He was able and prepared to say, "It is written," and thereby put the enemy to flight. So many times when we are tempted, we forget all about the Scriptures, and fall into the snare of the tempter. Were our ideals set high enough, and our eyes kept constantly on the means of reaching the goal, would this be so?

Christ was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. Heb. 4:15. While I would not say that Christians can be sinless, I do say that we have this assurance, that if we do sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the Righteous. 1 John 2:1.

F A I T H

Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart; light breaketh by and by,"
Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees 'neath winter's field of snow
The silver harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says, "Tomorrow," "The Unknown,"
"The Future," trusts in a Power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when the eyelids close
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

Away with unbelief!
For day by day, unconsciously,
The heart lives by that faith the lips deny,
God knoweth why.—Adapted.

ISRAEL'S REGATHERING

By Emma C. Railsback

"Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and will keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock."—Jeremiah 31:10.

JEHOVAH, SPEAKING THROUGH the prophet, exhorts the nations to hearken to an important message. It is so important that he commands that it be declared in the isles afar off.

This is the message: Just as sure as God has scattered Israel, and made them a curse, a hissing and a reproach among all nations (which fact cannot be successfully denied by anyone), just that sure may we be that He will gather them again and keep them as a shepherd doth his flock.

He will watch over them to plant and to build. He will gather them out of all countries and cause them to dwell safely. He will plant them in the land that He had promised to Abraham and to his seed.

He will give them a new heart and take away their stony heart. He will make an everlasting covenant with them that He will no more turn away from them, but will put His law in their inward parts and will write it in their hearts.

Then they will not need to teach their brethren to know the Lord, for all shall know Him, from the least unto the greatest. They will no longer be able to say, "The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge" or that they have inherited a tendency to sin because of Adam's transgression. But everyone shall die for his own iniquity then.

Then the kingdom will have been restored unto Israel. Acts 1:6. Then the twelve apostles shall sit upon twelve throne, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. But God is not doing all this for Israel's sake, but for His holy name's sake, which Israel has profaned among the nations.

This great message that Jehovah commanded to be proclaimed among the nations, even to the isles afar off, is the gospel, the good news of the kingdom of God. It is the power that God uses for calling out a people to be joint heirs or co-rulers with Christ.

God has turned to the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name. They, with all the sleeping saints of former ages, will be made perfect when Christ comes to establish His right to the throne of David and to reign over the house of Israel forever. If we do not comprehend this great truth we have heard only a part of the gospel that saves.

When this has taken place, then God's new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah will be in operation. Then the firstborn company—the new order of priests—will have been taken out and made perfect, and they will be able to sing, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every people, kindred, nation and tongue, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

Then many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and ten men out of all languages of the nations shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, "We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you." Then the law shall go forth from Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

Then Israel shall build houses and inhabit them and plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them and shall long enjoy the work of their hands, for there shall be nothing to hurt nor destroy in all God's holy mountain or kingdom.

SO DOING

PHILIP HENRY, one day calling on a tanner, found him so busy tanning a hide that he was not aware of his visitor's approach until he was tapped on the back.

The man, starting in confusion, exclaimed, "Sir, I am ashamed you find me thus."

"Nay," replied Philip Henry, "may the Lord Jesus when He comes find me discharging with the same faithfulness and zeal the duties of my calling."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Bro. Jas. A. Patrick submits the following article from his pen as it appeared in the Ashland (Ohio) Times-Gazette on January 10.

THERE WERE TWO PICTURES in the Times-Gazette of Monday, December nineteenth, which were interesting, and in the light of God's Word of truth, striking.

The one on the first page was of Tom Dorsey, a poor shoe cobbler, who was compelled by extreme poverty to give his children away. Grief stricken though he was, poverty knew no mercy, and the children had to go.

The other picture was of Helen Lee Eames Doherty at her coming out party. This party cost in the neighborhood of a million dollars.

There are many debutantes, and the Tom Dorseys are innumerable.

Now to the words of the old Book: "Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fullness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and her daughter, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy." Ezek. 16:49.

Any pride in the world today? The coming out parties are not the only affairs on which money is spent so lavishly. Most anything will do to make a big show and satisfy the pride of the human heart.

Fullness of bread? That's the strange thing about it; such an abundance on the one hand and such abject poverty on the other.

"And abundance of idleness was in her." The unemployment situation has become so acute and dangerous, that the governments of the world are taking cognizance of it and are trying desperately to relieve it.

President Hoover said that the people must not suffer, but the Tom Dorseys still give their children away. "Neither did she strengthen the hands of the needy."

It seems, according to opinion in Europe, that the people of America don't know what hard times mean. The Literary Digest comments upon some German editorials as follows: "What do Americans know about hard times? This question is asked with ironic laughter by various German editors who are convinced that Germany has learned more about them than any other country in the world.

"Conditions in the United States, they say, if you must talk about depression, are so much better than in Europe that they reek of prosperity."

Again I turn to the old Book: "As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of man . . . Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; . . . But the same day Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." Luke 17:26-30.

Are not conditions very similar today to those that obtained in Sodom as described by Ezekiel in the verse quoted in the foregoing? If so, are we in the days when the Son of man shall be revealed?

HAVING THE MIND OF CHRIST

WHAT A THEME IS THIS—the mind of Christ in us! Angels are ambitious to understand that mind. Who of us can go to the summit of it? Who of us can probe its depths? You can never exhaust the meaning in the words of Jesus. Those words are forever passing into proverbs, and still new meanings are constantly developing. But here is our instruction: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Phil. 2:5. It has been the purpose of God in all eternity that every member of His church should be "conformed to the image of his Son."

Notwithstanding the supreme heights of Christ's mind and the sordidness of our own, there is not one of us who may not today begin the letting go of his sordidness, and the attainment of the spiritual heights. Both processes will be accomplished step by step. This is not only wholly possible, but we are told to do it.

There are two outstanding phases of the mind of Christ which must forever hold our attention. They are His unselfishness and His meekness.

What step comes first? This is pointed out in Romans 12:1. We are to present ourselves as a holy sacrifice unto God. But precisely what is to be done, and how?

(a) "Be not conformed to this world." That is, be not conformed to the injustice, the untruthfulness, the impurity, the avarice, and slander, and lovelessness of the world.

(b) "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." That means a renewal showing itself not in outward appearance alone, but in the very core and root of the being, a renewal accomplished by Him who knows what is in man. This is a great gospel. It invites us to become nothing less than a new creation.

One effect of this renewal is, that we are able to prove (or, discern) what is the good and acceptable and perfect will of God. The supreme purpose and pleasure of Jesus in the world was to do that will of God (John 4:34). It is not possible for the worldling to discern the will of God; but after his renewal he can do this; and since the mind of Christ coincided with the will of God, by discerning that will, he can apprehend the mind of Christ.

We have the mind of Christ (1 Cor. 2:16). His mind is revealed to us in His ministry of unselfish devotion, in His teachings, and in His promises. We see it in His unhesitating sacrifice. The gospels reveal His mind as seeing the truth face to face; loving the good without a struggle; choosing the right without hesitation; contriving without complaint to take the sinner's place.

We are capable of absorbing the mind of Christ, and making it ours (2 Cor. 3:18). As we gaze at Christ through the medium of the gospel, the image which we see of Him fixes itself upon our mind and heart. Thus we are changed gradually "from glory to glory", as we more and more approach and attain the excellence of Christ. If any limit has been set for the extent of this glorious transformation, I do not know what it is. Who shall say that eternity itself will exhaust the scope of it? — Selected.

"I AND MY FATHER ARE ONE"

JOHN 10:30

THE HUSBAND and wife are one, Eph. 5:31, and are commonly spoken of as one, yet no one misunderstands the meaning. Two workmen laboring at a common task are one, 1 Cor. 3:8. The whole group of believers in Christ are one, though they be scattered the world around, 1 Cor. 12:12-20.

So Christ on earth and God in far heaven were also one, John 17:1. Jesus did not pray, John 17:11-23, for all believers to be merged into one person. Read his language carefully. Nor did he mean in John 10:30 that He and His Father were one person. If so, then He would not have been praying at all. The unity of Christ and the Father is one of the most beautiful things in the Bible. No word did He utter that was not prompted from above. John 14:10.

Jesus is now, and shall always be subject to God. 1 Cor. 15:27-28. He says of himself, "My Father is greater than I." God is not a man, but Jesus was. Acts 2:22; 1 Tim. 2:5. Jesus acknowledged Him as the only God. He calls Him, "My Father and my God." John 20:17; Rev. 3:12. To Him He prayed. Matt. 26:39; John 17.

God is immortal, 1 Tim. 1:17. That which is immortal cannot die; but Jesus died, 1 Cor. 1:15. God is almighty, Gen. 17:1; Luke 1:2, 7. Jesus was wholly dependent upon God, John 5:19-30; 8:28. God is all wise, 1 John 3:20. Jesus was limited in knowledge, Luke 2:52; Mark 13:32.

God is invisible; Jesus has been seen, 1 John 1:1. God is immune to human passions, James 1:13. Jesus was tempted in all points like as we are, Heb. 4:15. God is above all, Eph. 4:6. He is greater than Jesus, John 14:28; 1 Cor. 3:22, 23; 11:3. God is highest. Luke 1:32, 76; 6:35. Jesus is now and shall always be subject to God, 1 Cor. 15:27-28.

The Holy Spirit is the power or influence of God. The Spirit of God is as much a part of God as His word, or His wisdom. It is one with Him, Acts 5:3, 4, 9; 13:2, just as your spirit is one with you, yet they are not separate persons. By it God created the world; by it prophecy was written.

The Holy Spirit exhibits characteristics of an influence rather than that of a person. It is poured out, Acts 2:17; Isaiah 32:15. It fills houses and people, Acts 2:24. It is shed on believers, Titus 3:5, 6. It is breathed, John 20:22. Christ was anointed with it; believers drink of it; the apostles were baptized with it. Jesus was begotten by it.

God is the Father; Jesus is the Son. How could anyone be his own father or his own son? The Holy Spirit is the power of God which He sheds on believers. — Selected by Mrs. A. J. Chaplin.

AN AIRPLANE flying two miles a minute would take twenty million years to reach the nearest star. So it isn't likely we shall ever visit our starry neighbors by airplane. S. E.H.

THE CHURCH OF GOD

By Hanna Barber

WHEN ASKED to what church I belong, different people have said, "O, we all belong to the church of God."

Then why add another name? Did anyone ever hear of the Methodist Church of God; the Russellite Church of God; or the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Church of God?

There is one faith, one hope, one baptism. Eph. 4:5. There is one church, the church of God. No other name need be added to this, as it is called the church of God several places in the Bible.

The sacred portals of the church of God building in which this church body meets, should be kept free from all worldly amusements. If we take the world into the church it will die, perhaps not in numbers, but spiritually. This church building should be a place set apart where we can go and worship God and feel His presence there.

Dear reader, are you a member of this church body? Eph. 1:23. If not, now it the time to accept Christ as your Savior, and get into the ark. This age will soon close and the church glorified, and those not in Christ will be left outside in the storm.

Some may say that they cannot live a Christian life. Some time ago I was talking to a man about becoming a Christian and he said he was afraid he could not live a Christian life. And it is true, he could not if he depended on himself. Peter said he would not deny Christ. He depended on self. God is the Potter; we are the clay. It is only as we yield ourselves in His hands, that we can be shaped into goodly vessels fit for the Master's use.

"IF YOU REALLY WISH TO GET a thoroughly accurate picture of your own real self, if you seriously wish to determine your own intrinsic worth, just make a little written memorandum for one day of where your thoughts go when you chance to turn them loose, even if it is only a few seconds.

"Tell me what you think and I'll tell you what you are, for you do what you think and you are what you do."

GOD'S TIMES

(Continued from front page)

terms of seven years. Lev. 25:1-7. Another "time" He computes in terms of "seven times seven years", that is, "forty and nine years". Lev. 25:8. The query, then, is: Which "seven" (called "week") did Gabriel use when he made Daniel "understand"?

For the interesting answer to this query and for the study of its application, we must await a later time.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"THOSE THINGS, WHICH YE HAVE BOTH LEARNED, AND RECEIVED, AND HEARD, AND SEEN IN ME, DO: AND THE GOD OF PEACE SHALL BE WITH YOU."—PHIL. 4:9.

ILLINOIS BEREAN REPORT FOR OCTOBER

Ripley: Membership, 22; average weekly attendance, 17. Only had one meeting in October. Repairing church.
Mrs. Geo. Nell, Sec.

Chicago: Membership, 12; average weekly attendance, 7; interest, yes, very good. The Chicago class is very interested and working hard.
Grace Laning, Sec.

Lanark: Membership, 4; average weekly attendance, 4; interest, good.
Mrs. Almeda Glotfelty, Sec.

Dixon (Senior): Membership, 14; average weekly attendance, 8; interest, good. Studying about the resurrection.
Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Dixon (Junior): Membership, 12; average weekly attendance, 11; interest, very good. Studying lessons about the disciples.
Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Marshall: Membership, 15; average weekly attendance, 14; interest, good. Studying lessons about "Life" and "Death".
Edith Hendrix, Sec.
Edna Wood, State Sec.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

LOOKING BACK over the past three months' activities of our Cleveland society, we feel that we have been blessed, not only by such a large and ever increasing attendance, but also by the interest shown by our members in the study of God's most precious Word.

Some of the junior and senior members gave a short play at our Sunday School Christmas festival, entitled, "Lonely Hearts". It was admirably presented and speaks for the progress being made.

We wish all of our Bereans in America a spiritually prosperous new year and may God help us to be the means through which He will bring others to Him.

A Cleveland Member.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

THE FIRST SOCIAL and business meeting of the Brush Creek Berean society was held December 31, 1930, at the home of Bro. and Sr. James Kessler. It was in the nature of a watch party and all enjoyed pop corn and apples as they waited the approach of the new year.

Tuesday evening, January 6, the regular Berean class met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Klepinger, near Phillipsburg. Although it was several miles from our regular meeting place, there were about twenty who attended and all enjoyed a study of "Prayer". The senior class was led by Bro. Clyde Pearson and the junior class by Bro. Harold Pearson. Before her marriage Sr. Klepinger was Pauline Kessler. She and her husband have recently established their home and it was the first visit there for many. All hope that it shall not be the last and ask God's blessing upon their new home.
Eunice Pearson, Sec.

THE BEREAN classes of Dixon, Illinois, met January 7 and elected their officers. The following were chosen: Glen Rutherford, President; Jean Ford, Vice-president and Elizabeth Ford, Secretary and Treasurer.

The junior class has been divided into two classes, one for boys and girls from 9 to 13 and the other for those under 9. Sr. Agnes Eckert is the teacher of the older junior class and Sr. Grace Drew, the younger. Sr. Edith Miller is the teacher of the senior Bereans.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

WHEN GENERAL BOOTH was asked what had been the secret of his success, he replied: "I will tell you the secret—God has had all there was in me. There have been men with greater brains than I, men with greater opportunities. But from the day I got the poor of London on my heart, and a vision of what Jesus Christ could do for them, I made up my mind that God should have all of William Booth there was. If anything has been achieved, it is because God has all the adoration of my heart, all the power of my will, and all the influence of my life."—Selected.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 7; Ohio, 7; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 3; California, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JESUS THE WORLD'S TEACHER

“LITTLE CHILDREN, love one another.” This was the message of the greatest Teacher. And who was this greatest Teacher? Our own Jesus.

Jesus had called out His helpers and was now preparing them to continue teaching after He would go to heaven. They were all gathered on the mountain side.

Love was the subject of this sermon. It is easy enough to love our friends, but Jesus said, “Love your enemies; do good to them which hate you; bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.”

What does that all mean? Simply this, return good for evil rather than try to “get even”. Help others, even if they do not appreciate it, or, are unkind to you. “Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.” Jesus not only taught this but lived it. On the cross He asked God to forgive the people who had crucified Him. Stephen, likewise, prayed God to forgive those who had stoned him.

The Golden Rule is the expression of real love. “And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.” Treat other people the way you would like them to treat you.

Love is shown in giving. “Freely give.” Jesus said to “give to every man that asketh of thee,” and do not ask for the return of your gift. Do not give to those alone who are able to give you back something as nice or nicer, but rather give to those in need who will not be able to repay you. God will reward you, and you will be His true children—like Him in kindness and mercy. And what hope would any of us have if we did not have God’s mercy?

Jesus also said that if you give “it shall be given unto you, good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over.” That is big reward, is it not?

We must show our love in kindly thought, too. We must not judge others and say they are entirely wrong. Perhaps if we understood all the circumstances we would see they were right, or not to be blamed. We are all more or less blind, and if we trust entirely to ourselves without our Father’s “light” we would all “fall into the ditch.”

All are equal in God’s sight. He loves each one and wants each to see the best in the other. His advice is to look to ourselves first, to see if we are trying to do right, and not always finding fault with the other person and blaming him or her for any trouble. Jesus said to take the big piece of wood out of our own eye before trying to take the little piece out of someone else’s eye. If we do that, we will see God’s way more clearly and be ready to serve Him in the way of love.

DO WE love as Jesus commands us to love?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Learn Luke 6:31, 38.
2. Recount the deeds of Jesus in Luke 5 and 6.
3. Read Luke 23 and 24 and Acts 7:60.
4. Write all the things Jesus tells us to do in this lesson.

We believe: The coming of Christ is near. John 14:1-3.

A NEW YEAR'S PRAYER

“Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer.”—Psalm 19:14.

“DEAR GOD: Through all the days of this new year, may I remember how important are the thoughts of my heart and the words of my lips. Help me to be unselfish and kind toward all the people I shall meet and to say no word that is not pleasant and good. Let me not forget, in work, in study, or in play, that the best way to please Thee, is to be loving and helpful to my family, my schoolmates, and my friends. Amen.”—Selected.

A WISH

I wish you all the worthiness
I’ve ever wished I might possess;
I wish you, be you girl or boy,
A boundless store of righteous joy.

I wish you strength, I wish you health
And wealth, if you have longed for wealth;
I wish you gladness and good cheer—
Not for today—but all the year.

I wish you, be you young or old,
A heart that never shall grow cold;
And, be you great or be you small,
I wish you charity for all.

—S. E. Kiser.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON VI. — February 8, 1931

JESUS THE WORLD'S TEACHER

Luke 6

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 3:13-18

GOLDEN TEXT

And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

— Luke 6:31.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Living by the Golden Rule.

Basic Truth. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." — Matt. 7:12.

I. The Teachings of Jesus. The works of healing the Savior performed during His ministry had to do solely with the present life. His works of teaching, on the other hand, had to do with eternity and eternal things. It is in His teachings that He rises to the glorious heights of mastery. They startle us out of our accustomed rut of thinking, refresh us with their beautiful simplicity, challenge us with a new ideal of life, inspire us to greater and nobler aspirations.

It was to get the people to hear His teachings that He did His mighty works. The people saw only the sensory satisfaction they might obtain from His hands; they little cared for the words of wisdom that came from His lips. He constantly had this great apathy to overcome. And even now to a large extent Christian people, to say nothing of the world in general, have at best but a limited conception of the real import of what the Master taught.

II. The Golden Rule. The rule of conduct contained in the Golden Text is so eminently just and fair that it has been hailed everywhere as the model of conduct between man and man. Religious and social organizations, welfare societies, even business and secular institutions have adopted its name, which, wherever men congregate, has come to be known as the Golden Rule; and many of them have endeavored to practice it. Many people who make no profession of Christianity are proud to have it known that they follow the Golden Rule. This may be a bit inconsistent on their part, but it effectively demonstrates the worth of the Master's teachings.

We as a people have chosen to make it very prominent in our various organizations. We have our Golden Rule Home, and there are Golden Rule Churches, Sunday School classes, Sewing Circles and other organizations. In all of this we acknowledge the excellence of those teachings enunciated by Jesus Christ our Lord and Head.

III. The Golden Rule in Practice is quite often a very different thing than the Golden Rule in name. If we bear the name, how scrupulously ought we to live up to it in our every act! "The world has a right to judge Christians by their fidelity to the Golden Rule. We must observe it in such matters as the prompt payment of bills and wages and all other debts. We must observe it in kindly judgments of others and in gentle replies to harsh words. We must heed it in generous response to need and in liberal giving to good causes. We must heed it in our personal peacefulness and in our national avoidance of war. We must be true to the Golden Rule in all our relations with servants, subordinates, assistants, children, the poor, the unfortunate, the weak, the stranger and the alien. We must put ourselves in the place of each one of these, and consider how we should like to be treated if we were they. It is not too much to say that the honest observance of the Golden Rule would abolish labor troubles, remove the causes of political dissension, and put an end to war, and make a prompt reality of the angels' Christmas song over the Bethlehem fields." — Peloubet's Notes.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A Great Teacher: Jesus was a great Teacher in every sense of the word. He used the three great principles of teaching, precept, command and example. Sunday School teachers can profitably study His style and methods. A brief outline of some of the outstanding pedagogic principles used by the Master are given below:

1. He understood His pupils.
 - a. His lessons were adapted to their needs.
 - b. They were expressed in terms which they could understand.
 2. His methods were unexcelled.
 - a. His teachings were direct and very short.
 - b. Every thought was a progressive step toward a climax.
 - c. He never went beyond a climax, no matter how soon reached.
 - d. The spirit in which His teachings were given was firm, yet loving.
 - e. Illustrations were used considerably and were of common, everyday circumstance.
 - f. He used the question method a great deal.
 3. He knew His subject matter.
 - a. "He taught as one having authority."
 - b. "All were astonished at his understanding and answers."
 - c. He quoted extensively from the Old Scriptures.
 4. He lived what He taught.
 - a. He taught love — He loved.
 - b. He taught purity — He was pure.
 - c. He taught faithfulness — He was faithful.
 - d. He taught prayer — He prayed.
 - e. He taught sacrifice — He sacrificed.
- His teaching was His living — His living was His teaching.

A Great Teacher was He;
A fine Pattern for you and me.
Great methods did He use,
Why the same should we refuse?
— C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And as you would that men should do to you, do in like manner to them." — Luke 6:31, Diag.

This is the Golden Rule, and is also recorded in Matt. 7:13, a part of the Sermon on the Mount. After Christ had been teaching His disciples for some little time, He sums up by saying, "Therefore," giving His reason for this Golden Rule. Knowing that this is Christ's instructions, Christians should endeavor to live up to it.

So many people now say, "Do to others, as they would do to you, but do it first." This may be all right for the world, but not for Christians. Christians are followers of Christ, and that is far from what Christ would do. He is the great Teacher and has given us this Golden Rule for our benefit. Let us profit by it. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: The Golden Rule.

Verses 27 to 30 picture to us the golden rule of love; i. e., Love your enemies; turn the other cheek; and freely give. Love is the central theme of Christ's teachings. God so loved the world that He sent Jesus on His mission of love. He commands that His followers exhibit the same love to all men.

Verses 31 to 35 picture the golden rule of mutual action and reaction. Act as you would have others act without waiting for them to act first and great will be your reward.

Verses 36 to 38 contain the golden rule of mercy. God is a God of mercy, as also was Jesus. "Be ye merciful, even as your Father is merciful." — F. A. S.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Jesus Teaches "The Golden Rule."

You have all gone to school. Think of some teacher you loved very, very much. Why did you love this teacher more than all the others? When Jesus was here on earth He was a Teacher. Yes, He is called, "The Master Teacher." There has never been, nor will there ever be, a greater teacher.

Now, for today, just think that Jesus is your Teacher. The lesson He has assigned for you to study is Luke 6:27-42. The verse He wants you to learn is Luke 6:31. Learn it for Jesus. Now tell all the ways that you think you can carry out this verse for Jesus.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

LOOK AT YOUR ADDRESS LABEL

To those who have been remitting for The Herald we express our appreciation. Many subscriptions are expiring this month and if you are able to promptly send us the amount due, it will save much time and expense. If you are not able to send at once, but wish The Herald continued, a line to that effect will simplify matters. Don't forget to look at your address label.

FROM HERE AND THERE

The Golden Rule Home family was the recipient of a bushel of delicious fruit, sent last week by Bro. and Sr. Eychaner who are spending the winter in Florida. Many thanks, Bro. and Sr. Eychaner.

There is a considerable amount of light sickness around Oregon. It is called "flu". The N. B. I. bookkeeper has been off all the week. Consequently the continuation of the annual report had to be postponed.

All are fairly well at Golden Rule Home.

Word from Bro. A. G. Townsend of Grand Rapids is that he is a little improved from the severe attack of arthritis which has caused him much suffering.

Sr. F. L. Austin is recovering at her home in Chicago from an attack of "flu". Sr. Leila Whitehead, who was stricken later, is also reported changing for the better.

Bro. and Sr. Glynn Starbuck, accompanied by Bro. Starbuck's parents, Bro. and Sr. H. C. Starbuck, of Rockford, Illinois, left last week for a visit with relatives at Cleveland, Ohio.

Six new pledges to the Dollar-A-Month Club were received last week. These were from Ontario, Wisconsin and Illinois. Read "Religious Racketeering" on the back page of this issue, and join the Club.

Because of sickness among the Chicago members, Bro. L. E. Conner did not speak there last Sunday, January 25.

YOUR POTATO

Thank you, brother and sister from the southland, for your "potato" received last week. Remember the story of the potatoes brought in by the school children? All together they amounted to forty bushels. God will bless the giver and the gift, when given from a true heart.

GOD FIRST

"The times are hard here as elsewhere," writes the wife of one of our pastors, in connection with a remittance for eleven Dollar-A-Month pledges. "One couple has no present income except from a small flock of chickens. But they do not fail on their pledge. May God bless those who are so faithful."

So say we! It is inspiring to know of the true, loyal and faithful souls who place God first. Would that all professed Christians could realize the real joy of such loyalty to God. That He can and does bless the remainder beyond all reach of the unblest whole is often experienced by many.

GOD FIRST!

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Sunday, January 18, was the ninety-first birthday anniversary of Bro. Samuel Osborn, of Culver, Indiana.

It was celebrated by a family gathering of the daughter, Mrs. James Shearer, and family, and grandchildren, including Mr. Lester Fetters and family of Bourbon; Mrs. Harry Sanders and family of Milford; Mrs. Amos Osborn, Mr. John Cromley of Culver, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Osborn and family. Besides the eighteen dinner guests, several relatives and friends called at various hours of the day to offer best wishes and congratulations.

Bro. Osborn's eyesight and hearing are not very good, but he is able to get about town and call on friends. He has attended most of the services during the winter at the Burr Oak church, where he has been an active member in earlier days.

RELIEF WORK

Perhaps it would be interesting to the readers of The Restitution Herald to know something about what the Berean Relief Committee of the Church of God is doing during the present crisis, especially those who are interested in the relief work and are helping to support it, and also those who would like to help and are not financially able to do so.

As we all know, this winter is one of unusual distress on account of unemployment and failure of crops. When the cold weather started our families who were in need were provided with means to purchase groceries, fuel, clothing and other necessary things. Nice, warm comforters, made and donated by individuals and aid societies, were given where they were needed. Also, children's winter clothing was provided for in the same way. Some very good worn garments have been distributed.

The funds I received to be used especially for Christmas were used to send Christmas cheer into some blighted homes of our brethren, especially where there were children, and I have received very touching letters of deep gratitude from these families.

Now new calls are coming in. A report given by Albert Evans, Assistant National Director of Disaster Relief for the Red Cross, graphically describes the suffering of the drought area. The Red Cross, he said, is aiding thousands of families there, and from others we learn that the Red Cross is pitifully insufficient to give the help needed; that there are now thousands of people who are close to starvation in this drought area, with a likelihood of there being more before the end of the winter. And we have members of the Church of God among this number. These are the ones who are asking for aid now. I have given them some help, but have been unable to give them all they need.

I am sure you who have donated toward this work feel thankful for the good your help has done and will be glad to know that at this time of distress and suffering, we are making an effort to take care of our own brethren who are among the distressed ones.

Words are inadequate to express my appreciation of the cooperation I have received in this work and am trusting in the Lord for direction in handling the funds in my care.

Mrs. Orpha Sanford,
Chairman of National Berean Relief Committee, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

TRAINING CLASS NEWS

At the last class meeting new officers were elected for the following three months. They are: President, Cecil Smcad; Vice-president, Lucille LeCrone; Secretary, Harvey Krogh; Treasurer, Richard LeCrone.

Last Monday we were glad to have Ednah Cooper join our class as a new student. She plans to be with us the rest of the year.

At our class meeting on January 26, we held a debate on the subject of resurrection.

Harvey Krogh, Sec.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Brothers Singer, Felker and Weldon, the sick of our community, are showing some improvement. Bro. Singer has been confined to his bed for several weeks with a severe attack of shingles, but was resting easier the last week received.

Bro. Randall is at present spending the greater part of his time at the home of Bro. Weldon, where he does a very great deal to assist the family in caring for Bro. Weldon. The rheumatism has made him painfully stiff and sore, and in moving from one position to another, he always desires Bro. Randall to do the lifting, as he seems to hurt him much less than anyone else.

Sr. Eastman of Fenwick has been spending the last week with her daughter at Niagara Falls.

The choir met at the home of Sr. Railton on Wednesday night, where a very profitable and pleasant evening was spent.

Our Sunday night sermons are being greatly enjoyed and well attended. Several new faces were noticed in the congregation last Sunday night.

GLADBROOK, IOWA

Christmas exercises were held at the Park Hill church on Tuesday evening, December 23. A real Christmas program was given, with many taking part, which was a great success. We never want to miss these occasions.

The Bible study class meets regularly every Tuesday evening, with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reinhard, keeping up its usual interest.

The Berean class holds its regular sessions on Thursday evening of each week at G. W. Berry's. Good attendance, attention, interest and enthusiasm, show how the members are progressing.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Eccl. 12:1.

Mrs. H. V. Berry.

WORK AT KOKOMO, INDIANA

Our Sunday School is still going good, the average attendance for the third quarter being 67. We won the contest with the Hillisburg church. The fourth quarter's average was 53. On the first day of the New Year our attendance was 53. We have had no preaching since last March at which time Bro. Vaughn Long was called here to conduct a funeral, and gave us two sermons.

There have been fourteen baptized here since we started four years ago. We feel like there might be some more who would respond to baptism if we could only have a few meetings, but we are not financially able to pay a minister. We hope to see labor conditions better in the near future. Bro. Lindsay has offered to give us a week's meetings

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

when he returns home. We are looking forward to that time with great pleasure.

Our Christmas entertainment was the best we have ever put on. There were 66 who took part in the program. The senior class gave a pageant, "The City Beautiful," which was very impressive.

In regard to the quilt we made for sale, I wish to state that it went to Mrs. Etta Lawrence of Kokomo, not a member of our church here. It brought a profit of $23.25, which we put into our building fund.

Mrs. O. J. Parker.

DOINGS AT DIXON

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gorman, who were recently married, were very pleasantly surprised by about thirty members of the Church of God, Thursday evening, January 22. Although completely surprised, Mrs. Gorman soon made the guests feel at home, and all had a very merry time. Several contests and games were played, which made the evening pass all too quickly. Just before luncheon was served, Bro. L. E. Conner, with a few well-chosen words, presented Mr. and Mrs. Gorman with a lovely end table and vase, as a token of the love and esteem with which this worthy couple is held. After partaking of delicious refreshments, the guests departed for their homes, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Gorman many years of happy wedded life. Mrs. Gorman, before her marriage, was Sr. Ella Biddle, and has been a tireless worker in the church and sewing circle for many years.

Grace Drew, Sec.

AT CLEVELAND

We have again had the great pleasure of welcoming Bro. Jas. A. Patrick of Ashland, Ohio, in our midst, as he was asked to fill the vacancy left by Bro. Lyon, who is away on a vacation, of which he is truly deserving.

Bro. Patrick has been with us for the past three Sundays and we have found all of his sermons to be very interesting, which has always been the case whenever we have heard him.

We are well pleased with the results we are encountering in our church and especially the Sunday School, as our attendance seems to be increasing steadily.

All of the organizations in connection with the church have again resumed their work for the new year with renewed vigor after the holiday vacation. The Ladies Aid society is planning another supper for Thursday, January 29, and hope it will be a success, as the suppers usually are, since the people in the neighborhood of our church have become very much interested in its activities.

Effie K. Jones, Clerk.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Helen M. Doll; Anna E. Drew; Gilbert Bottolfs; John Denehfield; Levi Gabrielson; Herman Dickel; Ernest Poole; Mrs. Marie Anderson; W. J. Halls; Mrs. Sizenstock; Amy Ritenour; Mrs. Allen Johnson; Mrs. Clara Stewart; Miss Mary Hogarth; A. J. Reynolds; Mrs. Laura M. Pascoe; Mrs. O. J. Dorsey; M. C. Brake; Levi Coffin; W. E. Wharton; Zenas Murphy; Mrs. Ada Huff.

TO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

This year's study closes the Uniform Lessons cycle of 1926-1931. The lessons of the first two quarters of the year are based upon the record in the book of Luke. The last two quarters' lessons are taken from the Acts and the Epistles. Thus throughout the year, we follow closely the life of the Savior and that of the noblest of His disciples; and we are brought in contact with the rich truths contained in the Epistles.

THE ULTIMATE PURPOSE

Above all, every teacher should remember the ultimate purpose of all religious teaching, that of leading the pupil to Christ. Abstract teaching and disconnected stories of the Bible are of no lasting benefit unless the truths contained therein are applied to the individual lives of each pupil.

The truly consecrated teacher will be interested personally in each one; he will desire to follow him from the primary class to adult life. And he will rejoice when he sees the fruition of his labor in the obedience by baptism into the saving name of Jesus. Nor will the teacher's zeal terminate at this step in the life of his pupil. He will encourage and assist the "babe in Christ," each step of the way, by precept and by the unspoken example of his life. A wonderfully precious responsibility is that of the teacher!

As teachers, let us prepare ourselves by study and prayer to make the most of our opportunities. — M. G.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

To Stop Paper. — It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

ANNUITY BONDS

There is no better way to preserve one's capital for use during life and at the same time dedicate it to the Master's use after one's death than by a National Bible Institution Annuity Bond. Write NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION, Oregon, Illinois, for information.

Any Amount . . . Much or Little

RELIGIOUS RACKETEERING

By Richard LeCrone

WE READ OF THE UNDERWORLD, that in nearly every large city there is carried on what is known as a racket. The term is simply another term for unlawful business methods. In most instances, according to those who have studied their methods, it is carried on similarly to the following:

Some representative of the gang will go to the head of the firm and make a proposition something like this: "For $5000 a month, I will agree to see that your establishment and goods are protected against raids from gangland." The system is well known, and the business man understands that for the stated sum that particular gang will refrain from operating upon the property of his firm. The sum is usually paid in preference to risking annoyance and loss at the hands of the gang.

Drives for money for religious work have come to be looked upon by many as a mild form of legal racketeering. If they give to such a cause at all, it is given grudgingly, and then only to satisfy the desire to be let alone. Their attitude seems to be, "Here's a dime, now get away and quit bothering me." To such a one, it is as racketeering, for he receives absolutely nothing for his money.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Christ was a Gift; Christianity is a gift.

The racketeer offers to sell his "services" to his unlucky victim, and if he will not buy, he turns upon him and destroys. In other words, he delivers or condemns at will, all for the sake of extorting money from his "client".

How different the gift of God! For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." John 3:17. It wasn't a matter of the world's accepting Him or He would condemn the world. But it was a real deliverance, for they were already condemned.

"He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil." John 3:18, 19.

We are told that the Word of God is a light which can brighten the dark places. The National Bible Institution is an organization of the churches who have banded together for the purpose of carrying on a phase of the work of carrying the light, of spreading the gospel, which they believe can be carried out more effectively by working together than it could be done by working individually. This work is carried on largely by free will contributions and has been hampered in the past because these contributions were spasmodic and irregular. The workers could not lay definite plans because they did not know what they would have to work with.

There has been a plan worked out which, if carried out, will eliminate these hindrances and assure them of the finances with which to carry out their phase of the spreading of the Gospel. This plan is known as the "Dollar-A-Month Club". By this plan, each member of the Club agrees to give one dollar a month for the support of the General Conference work. The goal for the present is one thousand members. Such an income would greatly increase the efficiency of the present workers and also allow for other lines of endeavor.

When we urge you to join the Dollar-A-Month Club, it isn't because we wish to take your money away from you. But we are giving you an opportunity to assist in spreading this glorious gift, which God has so generously given to us—the Gospel of Christ, and the hope of eternal life.

If you are one of the many who tithe, why not set aside one dollar of your tithing money each month for this work? The following lines selected from The Churchman express so well our duty in the matter of giving.

One-tenth of ripened grain,
One-tenth of tree and vine,
One-tenth of all the yield
From ten-tenths, rain or shine.

One-tenth of lowing herds
That browse on hill and plain,
One-tenth of bleating flocks
For ten-tenths shine and rain.

One-tenth of all increase
From counting room and mart,
One-tenth that science yields,
One-tenth of every art.

One-tenth of loom and press,
One-tenth of mill and mine,
One-tenth of every craft
Wrought out by gifts of Thine.

One-tenth of glowing words
That glowing dollars hold,
One-tenth of written thoughts
That turn to shining gold.

One-tenth! and dost Thou, Lord,
But ask this meager loan,
When all the earth is Thine,
And all we have Thine own?

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 3, 1931

NUMBER 18

The Adamic Penalty

By Rufus A. Curtis

ACCORDING TO THE INSPIRED Mosaic account of the creation of man, we are informed that "the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the Lord God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil."

After describing a river that watered the garden, and the river's four heads into which it was parted, the divine record informs us that "the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it. And the Lord commanded the man saying, Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Genesis 2:7-9, 15-17.

Believing this to be a literal account of a physical, organized being, termed man, placed in a real garden, in which labor would be required "to dress it and to keep it," it would seem to the writer that it is very inconsistent to assert that some of the trees in the garden were literal, and others were not. In order to develop character in the occupants of this beautiful garden and to test their loyalty to their Maker, could there have been instituted a simpler, easier test of obedience, than the one that was imposed upon Adam and Eve? They failed to prove loyal to their trust, and in so doing became amenable to the threatened penalty.

WAS THE PENALTY REAL, OR ILLUSIVE?

"In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die"; or according to the Hebrew marginal reading, "dying thou shalt die". Genesis 2:17. According to biblical scholars, in nine cases out of ten, the marginal reading is preferable to the textual. The thought that this reading seems to convey is that Adam would from that time forth be mortal or subject to death. He would be approaching his doom, day by day, through the gradual process of "dying", which would eventually terminate his living existence, as a sentient being.

The record informs us, "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died." Genesis 5:5. To the writer, it would seem to be incongruous to assume that the penalty was not inflicted, as threatened, or that it was commuted to something less than the threatened penalty would imply.

"God is not a man that he should lie; neither the son of man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" Numbers 23:19.

"But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." 2 Peter 3:8; Psalm 90:4.

With this chronological data to enlighten us might not the expression used in Genesis 2:17, "in the day", be, in a measure at least, comparable to the same expression found in the fourth verse, implying an extended period of time? Unquestionably God had planned to populate the earth with descendants of Adam and Eve. (Genesis 1:28 and Isaiah 45:18.)

Not wishing to be dogmatic, it seems more than probable to the writer, that Adam's violation of God's command and the infliction of the penalty for disobedience occurred in the period of the Lord's "one day", of "a thousand years".

The penalty pronounced upon Adam for disobedience could not have been spiritual death, for Adam did not have spiritual life to lose. He was "of the earth; earthy"; "natural", and not "spiritual". 1 Cor. 15:45-49. "The flesh" life, and "the Spirit" life, are not synonymous terms. (John 3:6.) The divine order, is first the natural,

(Continued on page 282)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879
 F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

“My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father’s hand.”

THE WORLD’S VICTOR

WRITING TO CHRISTIANS the apostle at 1 John 5:4 declares, “This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith”. It is faith, faith in God, faith in Christ that sets the forces into activity with a view to the accomplishment of God’s ways and purposes. It was faith in God that made the Master active day after day in His furtherance of the cause of truth, in His battles against the cause of wrong. It was His faith that gave to an unsaved world a Savior. It was His faith that overpowered death with life. It was His faith that enabled Him to work the works for the accomplishment of all these things.

It is the true Christian’s faith that keeps him ever pushing and moving the wheels of Christian progress forward, upward, toward the goal.

Eventually, in due time, God’s time, complete universal victories will be achieved. Your faith, brother, my faith, have of God a place and a part in that achievement. The world is going to be conquered. God is going to do it. He is doing it in part by that faith of His people which prompts their every labor of love, service, devotion, sacrifice.

GOD’S EAGLE EYE AND POWERFUL HAND

WHEN THE ISRAELITES were journeying from Egyptian bondage toward liberty in Palestine, they encountered an enemy in the people of the Midianites. At Numbers 31:1-4, “the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, . . . of every tribe a thousand”. Accordingly one thousand from each of the several tribes were gathered out by God to “avenge the LORD of Midian”. When the battle was over, verses 48-50, the officers reported, “Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our charge, and there lacketh not one man of us”. God’s watchful eye and powerful hand had protected every man whom He had called out for that work of His.

In Revelation 7 an angel was directed to stay the “four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea”, that they should not proceed until “we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads”. John thereafter heard the number that were sealed, even one hundred forty-four thousand. Of every several twelve tribes of Israel, twelve thousand were taken. After this sealing the forces of catastrophe went on with mighty devastations. The stormy days of the horses and riders sent out by the opening of the former seals, chapter 6, continued.

The nations of earth rapidly grew into a federated whole, under one great and powerful head, a head which commanded all people on earth to worship him even in his blasphemy against the God of heaven, Revelation 13. Another political power arose performing mighty miracles of deception, commanding all to worship the formerly mentioned beast and commanding all to be sealed with the beast’s name, or his mark, or his number, and commanding that all who should not thus recognize the beast should be slain. The time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation was seen in vision by John during this period of time.

As the clouds were rifted for a moment and the sunshine pierced through, John saw, Revelation 14, the one hundred forty-four thousand sealed ones of Israel unmolested, unscarred, unafraid and in full number. God’s powerful eye and mighty hand had guarded and protected them through all the conflicts, conflicts the like of which were never pictured in history and never otherwise pictured in Scripture.

God’s power over man’s enemies is unlimited. His strength is as great and potent to protect as it is to lead out in new ways and into new accomplishments.

The apostle tells us in 1 Cor. 10:13, “God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape that ye may be able to bear it”. He who looks longingly to become a Christian, or he who is endeavoring to live the Christian life should look frequently upon the wonderful demonstrations of God’s power to protect, to lead, to give victory.

The twelve thousand Israelites were helpless to protect themselves that no man should be thrust by the darts of the Midianites. The one hundred forty-four thousand sealed ones, who will in a near future day face the onslaughts of the mighty antichrist, working with the mighty political head of the day, will be wholly unable to give self protection.

Likewise, the Christian of today is far too weak to protect himself from the testings and temptings thrown around him by sin and by the forces of evil. But that God who guarded ancient Israel, who has promised to guard in days to come, is also present with His same mighty power, together with our Lord and Savior of like power, to guard and strengthen and give victory to all who commit themselves to His keeping care.

The Penalty Imposed on Adam

THE MAN IN EDEN

By R. H. Judd

FIRST IMPULSES are not always the best, and not always second thoughts. The writer was at first inclined to leave the subject, feeling that he had already said sufficient without unduly pressing to the front what seemed to him, and still seems, to be the only logical conclusion when all the facts are considered. Second thoughts took a different turn. Sensing the importance of the matter because of its fundamental aspects, he started to "train his guns", and they were not few, in royal order of numerical sequence. But having had experience that what is a cannon to one may be but a popgun to another and that a militant attitude often frustrates its own purpose, he again faced the matter for the third time.

Realizing that the question had aroused genuine interest, and that each one's views were represented by those who had expressed themselves in various issues of THE HERALD and by more than one correspondent to himself, the conclusion was reached that it might be advisable to review the differing standpoints and to ascertain to what extent they tally with facts and harmonize with Scripture. By so doing no individual person will intentionally be specified, for all must acknowledge the absolute sincerity of the brethren and the sisters who are thus represented. It is hoped also they will accept the thanks due to them for having assisted in arousing interest in so important a matter.

The first view presented differing from mine was that Adam died in the very day in which he ate the fruit, the writer expressing that view, feeling that the threatened penalty—"in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die"—was so emphatic, so clear and so precise that to doubt its execution would seem like doubting the God who had pronounced it. But both Scripture and fact are against such a view, and one fact that is fatal is sufficient to nullify any view on any given subject.

That Adam died in the day is nowhere stated in Scripture. In fact the contrary is practically affirmed by the definite statement that "all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years, and he died." While it is true that in this instance Scripture does not make the actual statement that God "repented of the evil he said he would do", the statement that "Adam lived" is equivalent to it.

The death that is so often called "spiritual death" is never mentioned in Scripture, and it is questionable if even the idea is correct or even implied, and it is therefore unsuitable ground on which to build foundation truth. The death mentioned in such scriptures as 1 Tim. 5:6 and Luke 9:60 is equally well explained, if not indeed better, as a "reckoned" death, just as a man today sentenced to death is, so far as the law counts, reckoned dead while he lives. Such an explanation is both scriptural and rational, but in neither case can it be said that "the man died".

With reference to the day, the day in which he eats is so obviously distinguished from other days of his life that it leaves no room for any other conclusion than that a day in the ordinary sense is intended.

Next, we must face the fact that the threat involves an inflicted death—penal in nature, for strictly natural death does not take place under the conditions involved in the threat. Thus the argument for a literal day is still further strengthened.

Another view put forward is that God did not tell Adam that he would die in the very day he ate the fruit. Well, here is what God says: "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die". In order to support this view recourse is had to the marginal rendering, "dying thou shalt die", and Adam is supposed from that to have commenced to die from the moment he sinned, some even going further and proclaiming that Adam then fell to the blood (or corruptible) plane.

That man's nature was substantially the same when created as now (mortal) is clearly implied throughout all Scripture in such passages for example as Deut. 4:32. The marginal rendering could easily and reasonably be construed to fit in with this thought and still retain the definite threat of death in the day. It would be equivalent to saying, "You are already mortal, but your death will be a certainty in the day you eat."

Let us, however, endeavor to get at the real meaning of the phrase. Right here is a pertinent question. Why has

(Continued on page 279)

SEEDS OF TRUTH

Fair is the field now waiting the sowers;
 Barren the ground till the seed shall be cast;
 Warmed by the sunshine and moistened by showers;
 Hasten, oh, sower, ere seed time be past.

What is the seed ye will plant in the furrow?
 What do ye think at the reaping to glean?
 Harvest can bring to your sickle but sorrow,
 If at the sowing the seed be not clean.

Winnowed of chaff and of grains that are withered;
 Sifted of tares that would choke out the wheat;
 Sow but the best, if the best would be gathered,
 For as ye sow, of its yield must ye eat.

Corn can come only from good seed provided;
 Weeds can produce but of that which is sown;
 He who has cast, and the harvest abided,
 Whether of grain or of weeds, reaps his own.

Seeding of truth will return to the reaper
 Harvest in kind, with a hundredfold gain;
 Evils once sown, rooting deeper and deeper,
 Yield at the last a full harvest—of pain.

—Author Unknown.

RIPENING FOR THE HARVEST

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

PERHAPS THERE IS no time of the year that everyone is more interested in than the harvest time. The world is interested always in the harvest, but mainly from a commercial standpoint. Christians are interested in it because it makes them think of the goodness of God in providing so many varieties of food for the welfare of mankind. Then, we are glad, in these times when there have been so many interferences with crops in the past, that God, in Noah's time, promised us that seedtime and harvest would never fail, even though there may be times and places when and where it would seem so.

Those who are familiar with the Word of God are also greatly interested in another harvest—the harvest that is to come at the end of the gospel age. Of this harvest, the Bible has much to say. The harvest time of the Bible is a great subject, but the writer's intention is to deal only with the ripening of the wheat for the harvest, which is used as an illustration by Matthew in comparing it with the maturing of the Christian and the need of preparation for entrance into the kingdom of heaven. This seems to be the central theme of our Lord's teaching, as well as that of all the prophets and apostles.

In the thirteenth chapter of Matthew, which is so full of information in regard to the harvest, we learn that "the wheat" which stands for the Christian, is gathered into God's "barn". In other words, those whom God expects to use to help Him when He sets up His kingdom on earth, are now being prepared in God's school, through a knowledge of the Scriptures and guidance of the Spirit for the work that they are to do in the future, when the kingdom is established upon earth with Christ as King. These will be caught up when Christ comes, and will be among the overcomers who will help to rule the nations with a rod of iron. That will be the only remedy. Read. Rev. 2:26, 27. Daniel tells us that the time will come upon earth when the saints shall possess the kingdom. Daniel 7:18, 22.

And now, as the harvest time progresses, we see that earth's sorrows and groanings have begun and our hearts ache for those whose lives seem almost crushed beneath the burdens they seem unable to bear because of the oppression of the unjust, and also because of what the future has in store of wrath. In fact, the struggle to maintain life from many aspects is becoming greater every year. And it is during this great time of oppression that Christians are admonished to be patient and to establish their hearts. Read James 5:7, 8.

But we who have been striving to sow good seed are not discouraged, for it quickens us to know that we shall soon be ushered into the presence of a just and holy God, for which time we have long been preparing. And yet, who would not almost shrink at the thought of meeting the Judge of all the earth? We may well ask ourselves the question, "Am I truly ready for the coming of the Lord?"

At harvest time only the ripened grain is harvested. Christ tells us in Mark 4:28, 29 that the Christian's growth is like that of an ear of corn, "first the blade, then the ear, after that, the full corn in the ear". In the next verse He goes on to tell us that "when the fruit is ripe (R. V.) immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come". This word "immediately" shows the responsibility of the mature Christian, for the maturity of other Christians, as well as the harvest itself, may depend largely upon what we are doing to scatter the truths of the Word of God. For if this scripture teaches anything, it surely teaches that the harvest will follow as soon as the grain is ripe.

There is a story told of two men who were walking through a harvest field just before the wheat was cut. One man was telling about his achievements and made the remark that he could hold up his head as high as anyone, a very common remark. At this place his companion, who was a Christian, spoke up and said, "Do you see that wheat there?" He was calling his attention to the ripened grain that had full kernels. He noticed that every stalk of wheat that had developed full kernels was hanging its head. He then showed his companion the tare, which grew so much like the wheat that they could not distinguish it from the wheat until the wheat was full grown at harvest time. It was found that the tare did not bend its head because it was empty.

What a lesson this is for all! God told David He would look to him that was of a broken and contrite spirit. Another scripture comes to mind in this connection. It is Matt. 21:44: "Whosoever shall fall on this stone (Christ) shall be broken." Those who are "in Christ", Rom. 8:1, then, are of a contrite spirit. They have surrendered to Christ, making Him their Head.

The harvest time which we are in now will tell just how and where we stand. This teaches responsibility for the mature Christian. If we are living as we should, we will not hide the light which helps to mature other Christians. Many passages impress us with our daily need.

Surely, we would not be ready, if we were engaged in worldly affairs to the neglect of the spiritual. And how much it should mean to each one of us to do our part. Suppose that most of us should fail to do our best in giving out the light, would it not mean that the harvest might be delayed because the wheat had not fully matured? Has Christ not told us in the verse above that as soon as the harvest is ripe, He will "immediately" put in the sickle? Should not that make us feel our responsibility? Are we going out to meet Him with our lamps all trimmed and bright?

Daniel tells us that in the time of the end many would be made white and purified. Dear Reader, will you be among these tried and true ones? There will be more severe testing times, no doubt, ahead of us, for we must still make the most of all worldly conditions, which are becoming increasingly bad. But let us count the cost, as we trust God to show us the way out. These tried ones are those who are to receive a "wedding garment" of imputed righteousness because they have listened to that "still small voice" instead of being mixed up with the chaos and growing confusion of this present order of things.

If you are listening to that Voice, you are progressing. You are one who thinks according to God's way, as you grow in grace and knowledge of the truth, and you are a channel of blessing to others, for we should be willing to suffer that others might see the light.

Even the weakest may help the strongest, for we all need one another in these trying times. Even though we do suffer, as we are in a world that is at war with God, still it will not be a drop in the bucket to what He suffered for us. Let us not forget that it is only as we bleed that we can bless. Hence we must needs go to the Fountain of Life daily where there is an inexhaustible supply of the living streams that are pure, and where the power of Satan which is so strong in this world cannot injure or destroy. It is here that we receive help and encouragement that smooths the pathway that might otherwise be stormy and brier-strewn. For with our affections set on things above, the living streams will constantly purify, strengthen, and protect us as we resort to them.

If those of former centuries have erred in their analyses of gospel truths and gospel procedure, it is proper for us to endeavor to correct such errors, but not to slacken in effort or in zeal for still larger and more extended proclamation of Christ's saving truths.

THE KIND OF A SUPERINTENDENT I WOULD LIKE

IN DISCUSSING this subject, I will proceed, first, to give a psychological analysis of the traits it is advisable for the typical superintendent of a typical Bible school to possess.

In the first place he should be a man—rather young if possible, but not necessarily so if his heart is young. Women can do so many, many, many things in church work that a man can't do, that it is really best to let a man have this position of great importance, unless there is no satisfactory man available. It is best not to have the pastor act in the capacity of the superintendent of the school, even though the pastor may be gifted with traits that would make him qualify as a good schoolmaster.

Our ideal superintendent ought to be a physically strong man, because it is work, being a good leader, and he has presumably worked all the week. But he ought not to come to his Sunday task tired. So he needs to have a little over-supply of pep, an unusual amount of natural energy. In short, I would pray God to give him good health.

I think he ought to be a man with no other church job. Isn't it a mistake to pile so many duties on one pair of shoulders? Really a position like that of superintendent of a Bible school is second only to the pastor's responsibility. It should never be just the task of calling the school together. It should be as big a job as he can make it.

I think he ought to be a man with a vision, and one who really wants to do the work. He may make mistakes, but any mistake is better than the mistake of filling an office like this, if a man has no heart, no desire, no ambition to put into it. He should have faith in the cause of the Bible school, see its bigness, be glad of the chance to help improve his portion of it. This kind of a man will grow. Experience will develop him, and no other kind can develop.

He ought to be a man who likes children, who learns them readily by their names, the kind of a man beside whom little Johnny likes to snuggle down, the kind of a fellow that Jim while he is entering those wonderful teens, looks up to as a pattern.

Not long ago in our school a tiny little girl of only three years had learned to say the scripture about the "wise and foolish virgins". This was quite a feat for a mere baby to perform. Our superintendent lifted her up so gently to the high platform and encouraged her to lisp it out before the whole school. You could have heard a pin drop. We strained our ears to catch the soft words. Nobody thought about the superintendent in the eagerness to hear the child. But was it not then that he showed his power and his fitness to conduct the school? The ideal superintendent can come down to the heart and understanding of every little beginner. He can take one in his arms and lift it up so that the child is the center around whom the interest of the school pivots.

He should know how to speak to children to hold their attention. He should be able to talk so they will listen, not preach over their heads. He can ward off disorder by sensing its approach and at the psychological moment spring something interesting to catch the mind of the one who would have been wayward had it not been for the superintendent's tact. He should do this so subtly that the rank and file of the school do not realize what he is doing.

He should have a sixth sense by means of which he can tell what each one of the classes is doing when he isn't there.

He should be able to get the school to quiet down when he wants it to without scolding and without making a whole lot of noise. He should never nag publicly. He ought not to keep saying before the whole school, "I hope the committee is looking after the Christmas concert," as though this were helping it along. But he should assure himself by a private interview.

He should be above pettiness. He shouldn't mind very much when he is criticized. If he can correct any error he has made, of course he should hasten to do so. But he shouldn't be down-hearted every time he is blamed for something. Some folks think that is what a superintendent is for—to stand up and be blamed for everything that is wrong about the school. He should never lose a wink of sleep because someone doesn't like him.

He ought to always, unflinchingly praise endeavor. There are times when it is wise to do this publicly. Blessed is the man who is master of the art of appreciation, for he shall be loved.

I'd like to have this real superintendent a good singer, a sympathetic reader, a clever sportsman at picnics, an excellent student. But with whatever powers and talents he has at his command, he should know his limitations. Then he should see just whom to call on to help him. The more officers and teachers and pupils that he can get to take posts of duty in the work of the school, the greater will be the degree of interest he will arouse in the ranks. A wise leader keeps himself in the background as much as possible, while his helpers carry on.

He thinks and plans for the school between Sundays. It is in his prayers. The work is on his heart. It is his hobby. He just loves to read and study all he can about it. He talks with other superintendents. He attends conventions.

When the session opens he knows just what he is going to do. His schemes are thoroughly mapped out before he begins. But with all his preparation, he can put his plans aside in an emergency with a smile.

He is a natural-born leader and he can get the whole school interested in progress. He is a good mixer, with tact and originality. He knows enough to drop worn-out projects. He has an orderly mind and carries on his exercises according to system, yet he avoids monotony. He believes in regular teachers' meetings—and meetings that are helpful, not gossip circles. He blames himself when things go wrong, analyzing his errors, but he is not prone to discouragement. He talks the school up, not down.

He tries personally to get scholars into the church. He sees a vision of the Bible school as a feeder of the church and he is not satisfied until the boys and girls are members of the higher body. He prays in public as well as in private. He is not all the time calling on others to open the school in prayer.

As to his being present every Sunday, it is a rare case for him to be absent. But when he must be, he has his assistant notified in time to carry on effectively. A mark of a good leader is the power of making himself indispensable. He loves his church and he stands by his pastor.

Year after year he grows in power and popularity, but he knows when he has gone stale, and he doesn't hold the position too long. When he finally steps out he has a successor ready, and then he backs up his successor most helpfully, by reason of his own experience.

Is it too much to add that when Jesus comes he's going to get paid off? It does not take much imagination to make these words fit his life, "You have been faithful over a few things. I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."—Edith L. Whittemore in World's Crisis.

"O DAY OF BRIGHTNESS and true vision, dawn! O Morning Star, arise! O Prince of light, light the world, make haste, end the long darkness of humanity, and cover the earth with celestial sunshine!"—Horatius Bonar, D. D.

PAUL'S LETTER TO THE ROMANS

By Lyman Booth

THE CHURCH AT ROME was probably founded by Jews from Jerusalem who had been converted on the day of Pentecost and who, on their return to Rome, became the nucleus of a Christian congregation. Others probably were added on their banishment from Rome during the reign of Claudius (Acts 18:2). In this way we can account for the numerous salutations in the Roman letter; and we may believe that many of the persons thus saluted had met Paul during his travels or had been converted by him and then emigrated to Rome for commercial purposes, it being at that time a great trading center.

The church in that city embraced both Jews and Gentiles. In chapter 2:17 Paul says: "Behold, thou art called a Jew, and resteth in the law", and in chapter 11:13 he says, "For I speak to you Gentiles; inasmuch as I am the apostle to the Gentiles, I magnify my office." In other parts of the Epistle we find references to both Jews and Gentiles. The Jews, at that time, appear to have been numerous in Rome. Claudius Caesar banished them from that city; but in the time of Nero, when Paul arrived there, they had evidently returned, for he called together the chief of them.

It is not known by whom the gospel was first preached in Rome. It is, however, not improbable that some Jews from Rome at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, converted by the preaching of Peter, on returning to the Roman metropolis founded a Christian church there. Paul speaks of the church in Rome as follows, "I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world" (ch. 13). The church there was evidently established at a very early period. Tacitus, in speaking of the Christians when Rome was burnt during the reign of Nero (A. D. 64), says that they were "a vast multitude".

Thus we find there was much to draw Paul's thoughts toward the great city of Rome. He had planned to visit it earlier but his plan had been interrupted (Rom. 1:13). However, during his stay in Corinth, A. D. 58, the departure to Rome of Phoebe, a deaconess of Cenchreae, seemed to offer a favorable opportunity of writing to the church. Having previously written to the Galatians, his thoughts would naturally be directed toward the doctrine of true justification. Therefore he resolved to state and explain to the church of the west all the phases of the divine plan of salvation to Jews and Gentiles alike.

The problem of Jewish unbelief claimed much of his time and he endeavored to explain reasons for Israel's rejection and to make known the brighter future for the elect nation, especially because he had suffered so much himself from the malice of the Jewish party. From Aquila and Priscilla he would learn of the dispute which had arisen between the Jews and Gentiles on the then vital question of meats and the obligations of the Mosaic law.

The converts who were Jews by birth could not bring their minds to countenance any violation of the distinction between clean and unclean meats as shown in the law. Others who were Gentiles by birth would eat anything placed before them, even if it had been offered on a heathen altar. Because they could not understand Jewish prejudices in such matters, much strife and division had arisen and it was for the correction of this that Paul wrote the Roman letter.

The Epistle is easily divided into two parts, doctrinal and practical. After an affectionate greeting (1:1-15) the apostle brings forth his principal topic, the condemnation of both Jews and Gentiles as involved in the guilt of sin (1:18 and ch. 3). Next he shows how both are justified by the work of faith through Christ, which he presents in contrast with that of Adam through whose transgression death came to all men, chapters 4 and 5; and how free grace does not increase sin or discredit the law in the least (chapters 6 to 8). He next dwells on the sad condition and rejection of Israel, showing that it is only temporary, and that their future restoration under the reign of Christ involves the blessing of all Gentile nations (chapters 9 and 11).

In the practical portions he exhorts the Roman Christians to the steady cultivation of various Christian graces (chapter 12), to obedience to civil authorities (chapter 13), to mutual forbearance, especially as pertaining to meats (chapters 14 and 15).

THE PENALTY IMPOSED ON ADAM

(Continued from page 275)

not the marginal rendering entered into the text of any one of the authorized versions? Again, does the marginal rendering conflict with the text? It does not. The margin shows what is the fact, that the expression is peculiar to the Hebrew. To intensify the verb "die" it is doubled. If translated word for word it would not have been good English. Our translators seemed to think that they could best express the intensity of the Hebrew doubled verb by using the English adverb "surely".

It is not necessary to know anything of Hebrew to realize that they were right. There are numbers of such expressions in the Scriptures in which the translators have done this. Gen. 2:16 literally rendered would read, "to eat thou shalt eat". Thus we see that a word for word translation does not always convey the best or the truest sense of another tongue. An able writer says: "In one form or another this emphatic threat of punishment by death occurs in the Old Testament at least forty-seven times, and in all these occurrences the emphasis is expressed in the one language by repeating the principal term, and in the other by employing the adverb 'surely'."

If here the term indicates a lengthened period, then of course the other instances will bear the like meaning. One has but to turn to contexts to find that they forbid any such interpretation. In most, if not in all cases, an inflicted immediate death is intended—a cutting off of life.

Surely we have abundantly established that the threatened penalty meant precisely what the language of the Authorized Version conveys, and that we have both biblical and historical evidence that the threat was not carried out in the day. If the man Adam died "in the day", then according to all laws of biblical usage he must have been raised from the dead before it could be subsequently said of him that "Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years."

As to whether the Serpent lied or not, I think no one will take the stand that the Serpent spoke the truth. He denied that they would die, and so do his descendants today, but the record, "and he died", holds good in spite of their denial. Not dreaming that they would be turned out of the garden, and kept out, they may have considered that access to the tree of life would still have been open to them.

I trust that these remarks will be accepted in the kindly spirit in which they are intended.

"DR. JOHNSON, IN GIVING ADVICE to an intimate friend, said, 'Accustom your children always to tell the truth, without varying in any circumstance.' A lady who was present protested that this was too much to expect. 'For instance, in repeating another's words, relating what happened, etc., little variations will occur a thousand times a day unless one is perpetually watching,' she said. 'Then, madam, you ought to be perpetually watching,' he replied."

THE PATRIARCH'S HOPE

I know that my Redeemer lives; and at
The latter day—in person of His Christ,
His well-belov'd and ever-blessed Son,
From heaven returned—whose feet, those "blessed feet"
Shall stand upon this veritable earth,
On Olives' mount near Salem's sacred shrine.

And though this mortal frame, through sin condemned
Back to its native dust, and not alone
My skin—this loathsome skin—shall soon become
The food of deathless worms; yet in my flesh
Shall I see God—my God that doth me save.

I say not mortal flesh, for none so born
Can look on God and live. But fashioned like
The glorious body of God's Anointed Son,
Of which His saints are members all alike,
Yea, even of His flesh and of His bones.
In glorious body thus, no more by blood,
But then by Spirit filled, shall I see God.

His face I for myself, and not another,
In righteousness shall see; resplendent in
His beauty shall mine eyes behold the King,
The Sovereign Judge and Ruler of the earth.
And with His likeness when I wake, I shall Be satisfied. O Blessed Hope and sure!

—J. Cameron

WISER THAN THE CHILDREN OF LIGHT

THE SLOGAN in a recent community chest campaign for funds was, "Give till it hurts". The quota to be raised was much larger than in previous years, owing to increased demands for charity because of unemployment. The entire amount was raised in three days, and before the week which had been set aside for this drive, was over, the quota was oversubscribed. In other years it has taken three weeks or a month to raise even the stipulated amount.

The Community Chest is doing a good work in caring for the needy, the aged, orphans, cripples and all who for any reason are unable to provide for themselves. In it are included all the charitable institutions of the city. It takes a vast amount of money to carry on. Instead of each charitable organization making an individual drive for funds, one drive is made each year for the group. Then each organization receives its funds from the common treasury.

The National Bible Institution is the Community Chest of the Church of God. Through this organization a far greater work is being done than that which the Community Chest is doing. Where the charitable organizations care for the temporal needs of the individual, the church cares for their spiritual needs. Ours is indeed a far greater work.

Through THE RESTITUTION HERALD and the Truth Seekers' Quarterly we are spreading the gospel. Through the Training Class young men are being fitted to go out and teach the truth. Our aged and alone ones are being cared for in Golden Rule Home. Each is a great work and must not be allowed to fail. The National Bible Institution is the common treasury for all these. If sufficient funds are not provided, then all these groups will suffer.

If the people of the world are able to raise thousands of dollars in three days to carry on their work, how much more ought we of the church, Christ's body, be able to raise money to carry on His work?

Shall we let them put us to shame? Or will we show them that we, too, can and will give to a worthy cause? We aren't asking that you "Give till it hurts". We are asking only for one dollar a month from one thousand pledgers.

If you haven't sent your pledge yet, will you do so now? Don't be the one to keep us from reaching our goal!

—By a Club Member.

KEEP SMILING

A SMILE costs nothing, but gives much. It enriches those who receive, without making poorer those who give. It takes but a moment of time, but the memory of it sometimes lasts forever. None is so rich or mighty that he can get along without it, and none is so poor but that he can be made rich by it. A smile creates happiness in the home, fosters good will in business, and is the countersign of friendship. It brings rest to the weary, cheer to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and it is nature's best antidote for trouble. Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed, or stolen; for it is something of no value to anyone until it is given away.

Some people are too tired to give you a smile. Give them one of yours, as none needs a smile so much as he who has no more to give.—Selected by George T. Rennard.

WHY A CHURCH GETS INTO DEBT

HOW DOES A CHURCH get into debt? It's very simple—nothing easier. Given a group of members who make no pledge to the church, another group who wait till the very last to pay their pledges and then pay only when personally seen, and still another group who pledge something and never pay it, and still others who pay considerably less to the church than they spend for movies and chewing gum, and you have a church that can never stay out of debt.

—Selected.

GOD'S SEVENS

By F. L. Austin

IT TOOK MANY YEARS for me to come to the point where I could heartily say that I believe that numbers have a positive position in God's laws. At last that which was at first deemed to be more or less of a fanciful thought of man was accepted as a law of God. Not only nature, but God's Book and the ages are numerically and mathematically precise. Three, seven, twelve, forty, are some of the outstanding or prevailing numbers, both in nature and in biblical lore.

In consideration of God's sevens, let us first turn to nature and notice a few outstanding and well known laws there concerning "seven":

There are seven notes in the musical scale—three primary (the common chord) and four secondary. Every throat that sings at all is built true to this law of sound. No contrary law exists. There are many sharps and flats which modify the standard note sounds, but these are built around the true scale.

Just as all sound is produced by the vibration of air, so the vibration of light produces color. There are seven colors. These correspond to the seven musical notes. Three are primary; four are secondary. We call it nature, but again this is according to a law of God that is based on seven.

This law is also prevalent in physiology. As in sound and color other numbers are found in relation, so in physiology; but, in it all, seven has a prominent position. For instance, "The days of our years are threescore years and ten," that is, 10 times 7. Psalm 90:10. It is claimed that the whole body changes in 7 years.

One Dr. Stratton is quoted as assuring that man's pulse beats on the seven-day principle, in that the heart beats faster in the morning than in the evening for six days, but on the seventh day it beats slower. Thus man is so built that he needs rest on the seventh day. Nor can man with impunity ignore this law.

Dr. E. W. Bullinger, in his Number in Scripture, writes, on page 9:

"The various periods of gestation also are commonly a multiple of seven, either of days or weeks.

"With animals the period of gestation of —

"The mouse is 21 (3 x 7) days.

"The hare and rat, 28 (4 x 7) days.

"The cat, 56 (8 x 7) days.

"The dog, 63 (9 x 7) days.

"The lion, 98 (14 x 7) days.

"The sheep, 147 (21 x 7) days.

"With birds, the incubation of —

"The common hen is 21 (3 x 7) days.

"The duck, 28 (4 x 7) days.

"With the human species it is 280 days (or 40 x 7)."

Thus nature reveals seven in God's great, unchangeable laws.

GOD BLESSED ABRAM SEVENFOLD

Coming to the Bible, among other numbers, we find seven in many places. The meaning of the word will help in understanding its use. It is from the Hebrew root savah, meaning, "to be full, or satisfied, have enough of." Thus seven, Heb., shevah, from the root savah, has to do with fullness, completion, perfection. "On the seventh day God ended his work" and rested, ceased. His work was complete. Adding to it or taking from it was but to mar it.

Note the fullness and completeness of God's sevenfold blessing to Abram, Gen. 12:2, 3:

"I will make of thee a great nation,

"And will bless thee,

"And make thy name great;

"And thou shalt be a blessing:

"And I will bless them that bless thee,

"And curse him that curseth thee:

"And in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

The high priest was to sprinkle the blood of atonement "before the mercy seat . . . seven times."—Lev. 16:14.

There was the candlestick of seven lamps. Ex. 25:37.

In Revelation 1, 2 and 3 are mentioned —

The seven churches;

The seven stars;

The seven candlesticks.

In Revelation 4 are mentioned the seven lamps and the seven Spirits of God. In 5:12 the Lamb is worthy "to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing"—seven. There are the seven seals, the seven angels, the seven trumpets, the seven churches, the seven vials.

GABRIEL'S SEVENTY SEVENS

When the foregoing and the scores of other Bible occurrences of "seven" are solemnly weighed the "seventy sevens" of Gabriel's announcement to Daniel, 9:24, are full of meaning. Gabriel meant more than could possibly be conveyed by the word "weeks". See page 257. He was telling Daniel of God's "sevens" yet remaining for Israel and Jerusalem—that is, for Israel while inhabiting Jerusalem. She might not continue there steadily for "seventy sevens".

The "seventy sevens" might be "determined", that is, "divided", according to the root meaning of the word. And so they were, into "Seven sevens";

"Threescore and two sevens"; and

One seven.

And, by the end of the "seventy sevens", six several things were to be completed with reference to Daniel's "people", Israel, and to his "holy city", Jerusalem:

"To finish the transgression, and

"To make an end of sins, and

"To make reconciliation for iniquity, and

"To bring in everlasting righteousness, and

"To seal up the vision and prophecy, and

"To anoint the most holy."

God willing, let us pursue the study still farther.

THE GIANTS OF GENESIS

By T. A. Drinkard

"There were giants in the earth in those days: and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bare children unto them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown."—Genesis 6:4.

FOR MANY YEARS I have been a student of the Scriptures, and I have read this text many times, together with those preceding and following it, and I have never been able to see that these giants were the children of the daughters of men and heavenly angels. To me such an assumption is untenable and I want to give my reason for saying that it is.

I shall regret it if anyone misunderstands the tone of my criticism; for criticism it is. A brother said to me once, "You are too dogmatic and self-conceited." Well, that was one way to look at things, but you know that it never had occurred to me that I was, and it doesn't appear so now. Because a brother writes in a firm, argumentative way is no sign that he feels himself more important. I sometimes hesitate to write just because of this attitude on the part of some. But when I get such encouraging letters, authorized sent to me by an entire church through the secretary, commending me for the articles I had sent to THE RESTITUTION HERALD, I just try to forget the misunderstanding on the part of some.

Just recently a brother and sister wrote me, mentioning these giants of Genesis. Inasmuch as the position has been taken that they were the children of the daughters of men and heavenly angels, allow me to inquire into how such a thing could be possible. Kindly pardon me if I appear to be unkind in these remarks, but I just don't see how such a thing could happen, and why it should.

The record doesn't say that these giants were the children of women and angels. Here are the bare facts of such a position. The women were human, daughters of Adam and Eve. They were upon the mortal or earthly plane. They could and would die. But on the other hand their husbands, the angels, could not and would not die. Unite these two natures, so to speak, and you have children (giants?) that would be half human, and half not human, or one part that could die, the human part, and one part that could not die, the angelic part.

The record doesn't say that these sons of God were heavenly angels. To my mind heavenly angels cannot sin, inasmuch as they cannot die. This argument is made by the Master—that angels cannot die—in Luke 20:36.

The first to the fourth verses of Genesis 6 tell a very brief story. Here sons and daughters are mentioned; children are born; they became mighty men, men of renown. There were giants also. Why, and how were there giants? Why and how are there some men even today that are simply giants in height and size? I have seen men as tall as seven feet, and there are records to show there are men who go beyond this. It is very reasonable to conclude that in those days, before man had fallen so far into sin and corruption, that he attained large size.

The entire account concerns man, and man only. No angels of heaven are here mentioned or referred to, and to so argue is but to weave a network of difficulties which leads us nowhere, and only bewilders the minds of our young people who are faithfully studying the divine Word.

THE ADAMIC PENALTY

(Continued from front page)

or soulual life; and "afterward that which is spiritual." 1 Cor. 14:40 and 15:45-49.

To claim that these two bodily conditions of life can be possessed by any of Adam's descendants at one and the same time is not "rightly dividing the word of truth." 1 Cor. 2:13; 2 Tim. 2:15. The penalty for disobedience could not have been eternal misery in any location in the vast universe of the Creator, for that would necessarily involve eternal life; and Adam was condemned to "surely die" for his transgression. It is absolutely impossible for a mortal, corruptible man to live forever, either in happiness or misery! (Job 4:17; Rom. 1:23; Gen. 3:22-24.) Eternal life belongs to the world to come, and then only holy characters will share in its priceless worth. (Mark 10:28-30; Mark 20:35, 36; John 6:40; 1 Cor. 15:51-54; Rev. 20:6; 21:4.)

Adam's penalty consisted in his deprivation of life. He was to die for disobedience. And to die is to cease to live, or to not live. (Isaiah 38:1.)

WAS THE PENALTY ENFORCED OR COMMUTED?

Let us listen to the offended Lawmaker, as He pronounces the sentence upon the culprit: "And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3:17-19.

The tragedy of the entrance into our world of sin, suffering and death, "by one man's offence", and its terrible results, are expressed by two little monosyllables, "he died". (Gen. 5:5.) The threatened penalty was carried out. Who can question its reality? (1 Cor. 15:21, 22; Psa. 89:48.)

"Happiest they of human race,
To whom the Lord hast given grace,
To read, to heed, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way,
But better had they ne'er been born,
Who read to doubt, or read to scorn."

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"FOR THE WISDOM OF THIS WORLD IS FOOLISHNESS WITH GOD. FOR IT IS WRITTEN, HE TAKETH THE WISE IN THEIR OWN CRAFTINESS."—1 CORINTHIANS 3:19.

NEW ORGANIZATION AT HAMMOND

THE YOUNG PEOPLE of Hammond, Louisiana, met on January 18 at the home of Bro. and Sr. Warren Landry and organized a Berean society. It is to be affiliated with the national organization. We congratulate them on this forward step, which we feel certain will mean much to the church work there if faithfully supported.

The officers elected are: President, Terry Alexander, 607 N. Magnolia St.; Vice-president, Pearl Campbell, 305 E. Hanson Ave.; Secretary-treasurer, Anna Mae Bottolfs, Route 3, all of Hammond. A constitution committee was appointed, which met during the week and was to submit a constitution for adoption at the second meeting on January twenty-fifth.

Meetings are to be held weekly, at 6:30 each Sunday evening, and are to be held in rotation at the homes of the members.

There has been a Bible class held regularly at the Happy Woods schoolhouse for several years. The new class is not intended to take its place but to provide a second class for the benefit of the young people in town, some of whom are unable to get to the country often.

The young folks took advantage of the presence of three workers from the national, Bro. and Sr. F. E. Siple and the writer, and pressed them into service to assist in their organization. This is the kind of service we like to give, however, and we wish that we could do it oftener. They are enthusiastic over the new society and are hoping to grow both in numbers and in Bible knowledge. We shall watch their progress with interest.

M. W. Lyon.

ILLINOIS BEREAN REPORT FOR NOVEMBER

Oregon: Membership, 20; average weekly attendance, 20; interest, very good. Usually not less than five visitors.

Ruth Gesin, Sec.

Ripley: Membership, 26; interest, good.

Mrs. Lorene Fey, Sec.

Dixon: (Senior) Membership, 12; average weekly attendance, 6; interest, getting better and better.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Dixon: (Junior) Membership, 15; average weekly attendance, 14; interest very good.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Salem: Membership, 15; average weekly attendance, 15; interest, good.

Edith Hendrix, Sec.

ILLINOIS BEREAN REPORT FOR DECEMBER

Oregon: Membership, 20; average weekly attendance, 20; interest, very good. Usually not less than five visitors.

Ruth Gesin, Sec.

Dixon: (Senior) Membership, 12; average weekly attendance 8; interest, quite good. The lessons are very interesting, changing every time.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Dixon: (Junior) Membership, 16, average weekly attendance, 15; interest, very good.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Lanark: The class here is not holding meetings at the present time, but hope to continue soon.

Mrs. Almeda Glotfelty, Sec.

Salem: Membership, 19; average weekly attendance, 17; interest, good. We are now meeting at the various homes in and near Martinsville.

Edith Hendrix, Sec.

Edna Wood, State Sec.

CHARACTERISTICS OF SUCCESS

To be able to make use of criticism without letting it whip you.

To be able to do one's duty when one is not checked up.

To be able to carry money without spending it.

To be able to bear an injustice without retaliating.

To be able to keep at the job until it is finished.

—The City Builder.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 8; Ohio, 7; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 3; California, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Louisiana, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JESUS, THE FRIEND OF SINNERS

HOW SHALL WE treat people who have done wrong? First, think if we are absolutely right ourselves, or what we might have done in their places. Be kind to them, and try to help them. That does not mean that we will do wrong or say it is all right to sin. Forgive the mistakes of others; forget them and encourage the sorrowing one. That is the example Jesus set us.

As you know, the Pharisees were a very religious class of Jews. They lived according to the "letter" of the law, and thus felt that they were above reproach.

One of these self-righteous Pharisees invited Jesus to dine with him. As they were reclining at the table a woman came into the room. She stood at the feet of Jesus, weeping, and she washed His feet with her tears. Then she dried them with her hair, and put on them expensive ointment which she had brought in an alabaster box.

Now, this woman had not always been good, and the Pharisee knew about her. He said to himself, "If this man, Jesus, is a real prophet, He would know that she is a sinful woman."

Jesus must have known what the Pharisee thought, for He said, "Simon, I have something to say to you. Once there was a man who had two debtors. One man owed him five hundred pence, the other, fifty. They had nothing to pay, and so he forgave them both. Now, Simon, tell me which of the two will love him the more?"

Simon, the Pharisee, readily answered, "Why, the one to whom he forgave the more."

Jesus said, "Thou hast rightly judged."

Then Jesus began to compare the courtesy of the "good" Simon with that of the "bad" woman.

"Simon, when I entered your house you gave me no water to wash my feet, but she washed them with her tears and wiped them with her hair. You gave me no welcoming kiss, but she has kissed my feet repeatedly. You gave me no oil for my head, but she anointed my feet. She has many sins, but she really loves me, and is sorry for her past life."

Turning to the woman, Jesus said, "Thy sins are forgiven. Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace."

Then Simon saw that he had been caught by the question of Jesus. He realized that he had even neglected the ordinary outward courtesies of Jewish hospitality, and he knew what Jesus meant when He said, "To whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little."

How much did Simon love Jesus? The others at the table wondered at Jesus and His words, and they said to themselves, "Who is this that forgiveth sins also?"

DO WE set ourselves up as altogether right, and everyone else wrong?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Act out this story.
2. Read about the customs of Jewish hospitality.
3. Learn 1 Timothy 1:15.
4. Why did Simon not give Jesus the things mentioned?

"Wondrous love to earth Christ brought,
Tenderly each sinner sought.
Faith in Him will surely save,
For His life for us He gave."

—Junior Quarterly.

"WHATEVER TALENTS WE HAVE, those which we use are the ones that count."

H O P E

Oh, sometimes gleams upon our sight,
Through present wrong, the eternal right;
And, step by step, since time began
We see the steady gain of man.
That all of good the past hath had Remains to make our own time glad,
Our common, daily life divine,
And every land a Palestine.

Through the harsh noises of our day,
A low, sweet prelude finds its way;
Through clouds of doubt and creeds of fear,
A light is breaking, calm and clear.
Henceforth my heart shall sigh no more
For olden time and holier shore;
God's love and blessing, then and there
Are now and here and everywhere.

—J. G. Whittier.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON VII. — February 15, 1931

JESUS THE FRIEND OF SINNERS

Luke 7

Devotional Reading: Romans 5:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief. — 1 Timothy 1:15.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Jesus the Savior From Sin.

Basic Truth. "Call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins." Matthew 1:21.

Outline. I. Sin's Bondage. II. Jesus the Savior. III. Our Attitude Toward Sinners.

I. Sin's Bondage. The world has a long, long road to travel before it will come to the land of freedom. We are still bound with chains to many cruel masters. The bondage of the Israelites in Egypt is insignificant indeed compared to that of the whole human race. Yet of all these the bondage to sin is the heaviest and most grievous. The bondage of disease is not so oppressive as that of sin. Nor is the bondage of ignorance nearly as ruinous. Sin is the great fundamental curse, the root of all the others which have plagued mankind through the ages.

II. Jesus the Savior. The charge made against Jesus by Simon and all the Pharisees was that He was "a friend of publicans and sinners." Did they not know that this was His chief glory? Had they forgotten the great purpose for which He had come into the world? Had He not been the Friend of sinners, even His accusers would have had no hope.

As the world's Savior the Master stands revealed in His highest and greatest work. Note the roles in which He is progressively pictured in our lessons. First in Lesson 5 as Savior from sickness; then in Lesson 6 in a higher capacity as Savior from ignorance; today in His crowning glory of all, as Savior of sinners! The case of the woman of the lesson is an example of the way in which He deals with sin the world over. He does not shun sin and the sinner, but goes right in among them and utterly eradicates it. Well might the unbelieving observers of His day exclaim, "Who is this that forgiveth sins also?" Who indeed! He is the only One who ever will or can.

III. Our Attitude Toward Sinners. Sometimes one would think that Christ is still alone in His attitude toward sinners, so formal and cold are His followers in theirs. If Jesus came, as He said, especially to save sinners, ought we not to search our hearts and our methods to see if we are too much like the Jews of Jesus' day? "It would have been a long while before any penitent woman would have come in and wept over the feet of Gamaliel and his like. It would have been a long while before any sinful men would have found their way, in tears and yet in trust to these self-righteous hypocrites. But perfect purity somehow draws the impure, though assumed sanctity always repels them. And it is a sign, not that a man is bad, but that he is good in a Christlike fashion, if the outcasts that durst not come near your respectable people find themselves drawn to him." — Alexander Mac-laren.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Friendship: One of the choicest treasures in the world is true friendship. True friendship is faithful, dependable. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." Prov. 26:7. Friendship is founded on the following:

Love
Trustworthiness
Kindness
Helpfulness

When, and under what circumstances, should friendship be broken? Should friendship between members of the church and with people of the world be the same? Discuss the effect friendship between a Christian and non-Christian will have upon the non-Christian; the Christian.

Christians: It is well for Christians to associate with sinners and let their light shine, but they should at all times be careful not to be partakers of their sins. Always endeavor to lift them up to a higher plane of living.

Friendship

- properly developed is lasting;
- should not be lightly treated;
- is precious in the hour of need;
- that is true will suffer many wounds;
- is worth repairing if broken.

— C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"True is the word, and worthy of all reception, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." — 1 Timothy 1:15, Diag.

"A friend loveth at all times," Prov. 17:17, "And there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." 18:24. While this was spoken long before Christ was born, He has been all this and more if possible.

"A friend is one who knows all about you, and loves you still." Jesus knows all about sinners and yet He loved them to the extent that He gave His life that they might live if they would believe in Him. Jesus said, "They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Luke 5:31, 32. So we have His own words that He "came into the world to save sinners"; but those sinners must accept Him if they receive salvation.

Will we receive His word and be saved, or reject Him and suffer the consequences?

— L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Jesus, the Friend of Sinners.

The works and teachings of Jesus are full of encouragement for sinners. His coming into the world was for the purpose of being their Savior, to fulfil the law, suffer and die for them, to deliver them, both Jews and Gentiles, from sin, and bring them to that eternal salvation which is in Him.

Tender is His love and compassion to the afflicted and destitute. Gracious, full and plenteous is His mercy to all sorts of sinners, however guilty and miserable.

What exalting thoughts ought we then to have of Him, and what abasing thoughts of ourselves before Him! We should call earnestly on Him in every distress, and imitate Him in always doing good to friend and foe alike. — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Jesus the Friend of Sinners.

Tell the story found here, how the sinful woman acted when she saw Jesus. Can you imagine how she felt? The rulers or members of the upper class would have shoved her away, meanwhile, perhaps, being as wicked at heart as she was. How did Jesus treat her? Read verses 40 to 43 and tell the story in class. Why should the one who owed the more, love the more? What has that story to do with the story of the sinful woman?

Jesus, in this instance, puts Simon, the Pharisee, to shame. Simon had invited Him to dinner and he had not shown Jesus the usual courtesy of that sandy country where sandals only were worn upon the feet. The host always had his servant wash the guest's feet before a meal, and Simon had omitted this. It was also considered a mark of honor to kiss the hand or anoint the head, and Simon had done neither for his distinguished Guest. The sinful woman, whom Simon scorned, had performed all these services for Jesus with the deepest humility and Jesus was deeply touched.

Can you think of other instances where Jesus was kind and gracious to sinners? What was the purpose of Jesus' coming into the world? Luke 19:10. If He had not mingled with sinners, could He have helped them? Did He partake with them in their sin?

If He came to save sinners, that means you and me, doesn't it? Let's accept His salvation for ourselves today. — M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

WORDS OF APPRECIATION

Much as we appreciate words commending The Restitution Herald, yet we have refrained from quoting them in its columns. But when the editor was about to lay aside such a letter from Dr. Gale of Bay City, Michigan, he was reminded that perchance the readers would enjoy an occasional letter like his. For those who might thus be benefited, as are the workers in the office benefited, the following excerpt is given: "There is no paper that I know of that can compare with its teachings and practical interpretation of the Bible, as given by you and your able contributors in The Restitution Herald."

DIXON'S DOINGS

The Dixon folks were very much pleased to have Bro. Conner give them two more very good sermons on Sunday, January 25th. The attendance for morning service was very good. The wonderful weather we have should make it more encouraging to attend services. Sunday, February 15, will be our regular preaching day. Let us keep in mind Hebrews 10:25, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching."

The attendance for Sunday School numbered 52. The average attendance for January was 50. Some of the children that have had mumps are well, and happy to come to Sunday School again.

Sr. Edith Miller, who has been ill with laryngitis, is improving. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were having a vacation, spending a few weeks in Chicago, when Mrs. Miller became ill.

The "Happy Thought" class, taught by Sr. Eckert, enjoyed a picnic lunch in the church basement on Wednesday evening. They had a meeting of prayer and Bible reading and business meeting also. The officers are always busy, trying to do their duty, and live up to their class name.

Grace Drew, Sec.

ST. CLOUD, MINNESOTA

The St. Cloud church held its business meeting on January 9. After the reports were made by the different committees, election of officers was held. They are as follows: Elders, F. G. Daubanton, T. M. Savage, Sr.; Deacons, Frank Noyes, W. M. Spicer; Treasurer, Mrs. G. C. Thoms; Secretary, Mrs. Thos. M. Savage.

The preaching will be done by the elders as much as possible. Our Sunday School is doing very nicely, having sixty-two present on the morning of January 25. Mrs. Geo. Savage is the superintendent, and is working hard to improve our Sunday School, having a sand table installed for the beginners, with Mrs. John Hopkins as teacher.

Our choir has been very faithful, for which we all are grateful to them. Mrs. Palmer, our pianist, has done much by her good music to make the services pleasant and enjoyable to many. The Berean society meets every Sunday evening. We have twelve members. The Ladies Aid meets every two weeks. Mrs. Walker is our president. The Aid has helped in many ways to finance the church work.

We thank the heavenly Father for His loving care and help, and we hope all will be ready to meet the Master when He comes.

Mrs. Thos. M. Savage, Church Clerk.

AT BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Bro. Fred Jenkins is still sick. He has anemia and is unable to stand or use his limbs.

Sr. Farley is very low at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eliza Appleby at Kennard. She is in bed all of the time and growing weaker.

Sr. Emma Newell of Arlington, is very sick with pleurisy following a spell of the flu. Her mother-in-law, Sr. M. D. Newell of Blair is with her.

Grandma White was able to be at church Sunday. She has been quite a while regaining her strength after a siege of the flu early in the winter.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The pastor and wife returned on January 28 from their southern trip, having driven through twelve states, five thousand miles, with no serious difficulties, for which they feel very thankful to the heavenly Father. The various departments of the church were found in good shape, and Bro. Paul Hatch, who had so successfully filled the pulpit during the pastor's absence, returned to Chicago on the 30th.

Sr. Chas. Simpson was found threatened with an operation, and Bro. Townsend was improving after almost a month in bed.

Unemployment has been and is a serious factor with our people, but in face of it all, they are faithfully carrying on the church work.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Next Saturday evening and Sunday, February 7 and 8, are the regular appointments for services at Ripley. The Lord willing, Bro. C. E. Lapp will be the speaker and we urge all who can to be in attendance.

AND ROCKFORD

The Rockford, Illinois, brethren have secured the services of Bro. Earl Thayer as pastor there, and he will speak for them each Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. They also hold Berean meetings every Friday evening at their regular meeting place, 1904 N. Main Street. All are invited to attend these services.

AND OREGON

Church services at Oregon, Illinois, have taken on added interest and value since the beginning of the new year. A new spirit of reverence and worship pervades the morning service, and those in attendance feel greatly benefited.

The Sunday School continues to grow, and on February 1 the Rally Day attendance was equalled. Fifty-six were present every Sunday in January.

Bro. Austin has been giving a series of Sunday evening sermons on the Millennium which have been interesting to good sized audiences. The organ voluntaries by Sr. Rogers and the junior choir and men's chorus under Srs. Rogers and Winfrey add much to the services.

DID YOU DO IT

Did you look at your address label on last week's Herald? What did it say? If it showed that your subscription had expired, have you proceeded to renew?

OUR VISIT TO HAMMOND

On January 6, we opened a series of meetings at the Happy Woods Church at Hammond, Louisiana. Services were held each evening at 7:45, and the interest was very good, considering the obstacles we had to confront. On arriving in Louisiana, we found that country in the grip of an influenza epidemic, consequently many of the church people and friends were ill and the attendance was held down to rather a small figure. There was considerable rain also. But by the latter part of the meetings, which continued over January 25, many of the sick ones had recovered, and attendance had become very good.

This was the writer's first trip to Hammond. It was a unique pleasure to be able to visit the home of the famous "Pine Woods Bible Class" which was the inspiration for our late Bro. W. H. Wilson's book of the same name. The brethren there are a highly consecrated group of Christian workers, and they certainly know how to make one feel welcome. We almost ran the wheels off Bro. Arthur Bottolfs' Ford, which he kindly offered so that we could run around and see the scattered members. And not the least of the satisfactions we had was that of having mother with us on the Hammond trip, this being her first visit there since she was a girl.

One of the most encouraging features of the work there is the enthusiastic group of young people they have. They believe in large families in Louisiana, and they also believe in raising them up in the truth, which is still more important. A church like that is bound to grow. We trust the new Berean society formed by the young people in Hammond may be of real help to them in adding many more to their active group, and in encouraging mutual help in all Christian service.

Bro. Siple arrived on the 15th, to carry the meetings over the final week, and we left on the 21st for a day at the old home before returning to Cleveland. The period spent with the Hammond brethren was one of the most enjoyable we have ever spent. We pray God's richest blessing upon them in their endeavor to keep alive the witness to the glorious truths of the coming kingdom.

M. W. Lyon.

RACHEL ADAMSON McLEOD

Rachel Adamson McLeod, one of the oldest and most beloved members of the Williams Street Chapel (Church of God), Pomona, California, was called by death January 6, 1931. Sr. McLeod was born in Ontario, Canada, on June 18, 1865. She was married in Los Angeles, California, to Donald F. McLeod, and they located at once in Pomona, where they continued to make their home until the death of the husband which occurred in August, 1914, and where she remained up to the time when she, too, was stricken, forty-two years after her arrival in California.

Bro. and Sr. McLeod and all of their children were baptized believers in the gospel of the kingdom of God, the father and mother having been immersed by the Christadelphians before leaving Canada, and the four children coming into the faith in California.

In addition to the work of her church which occupied first place among her various activities, she was an influential member of the Woman's Community Club, and especially interested in the work of the Garden Beautiful Class and in the City Garden Club.

She is survived by two sons, Norman J., in Holtville, California and Roy D., in Pomona; two daughters, Mrs. Marjorie Ferrell and Mrs. Chas. A. Emery, both of Pomona; four sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Reid, Pomona; Mrs. M. Wagner, Canada; Mrs. M. Wallace, Seattle; Mrs. W. B. Bradley, Los Angeles; two brothers, William and J. E. Adamson, both of Pomona; sixteen grandchildren and one great grandchild.

The funeral sermon was delivered by Bro. G. E. Marsh, and was followed by a short memorial address by her brother, Bro. J. E. Adamson, who is pastor of the Williams Street Chapel.

HERALD RECEIPTS

C. J. Spore; Mrs. Lester Travis; J. D. Jeffries; Mrs. B. Stephenson; Dr. H. M. Gale; C. O. Krogh; Mrs. L. M. Kiger; Mrs. Mary Jackson; Warren J. Burch; E. E. Mills; Wm. Lindsay; Mrs. R. Overholt; Mrs. James Kessler; Albert Eberhardt; Helen Ridley; Mrs. Mattie Agard; Mildred Chapman; Arthur L. White; Mrs. F. F. Upton; John Fyfe; Franklin Moore; Anna Sleight; Mrs. Elias Thorene; Stephen Walker; Mrs. I. Fish; Mrs. Mary Poland; Esther Sealine; S. E. Boyer; Mrs. Edith Burke; S. P. Dismukes; Mrs. Lillian Railton; Mrs. Florie Houston; Thomas Watts; Charles Anderson; John Denehfield; Mrs. H. W. Stadden; Mrs. Anna Roll; Chas. Sudbury; M. A. Woodward.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois
Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

To Stop Paper. — It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody! Sign! Solicit! Watch!

TRACTS AND BOOKS

TRACTS

Name	Pages	Dozen	100
The Reasons Why	2	$0.05	$0.30
Essential Truths	1	.05	.30
God's Promises, by Anna E. Drew	2	.05	.30
The Resurrection, by S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
Obedience	2	.05	.30
The Baptist Confession of Faith	2	.05	.30
Who Owns the Wool?	4	.05	.30
The Coming of Christ, S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
What Is a Christian, J. W. Williams	4	.10	.60
Where Do We Go When We Die?	4	.10	.60
Immortality of the Human Soul	4	.10	.60
Shall Never Die	4	.10	.60
The Voice of Prophecy	4	.10	.60
Immortality	4	.10	.60
Did Christ Pre-exist? R. H. Judd	4	.10	.60
The Thief on the Cross, F. E. Siple	4	.10	.60
What Do the Scriptures Teach? Judd	6	.15	.90
What Must I Do to Be Saved?	4	.10	.60
Hell, What Is It	8	.20	1.25
The Coming of Christ, R. A. Curtis	6	.20	1.25
The Rich Man and Lazarus, F. E. Siple	8	.20	1.25
A Few Thoughts	8	.20	1.25
Baptism, S. J. Lindsay	8	.20	1.50

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen	100
God, R. H. Judd	16	.04	.30	1.75
The First Resurrection, Wm. Leask	20	.05	.40	3.00
A Letter to a Friend	32	.10	1.00	8.00
Where Are the Dead?	36	.05	.50	4.00

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen
The Resurrection, J. L. Wince (For cost of Postage)	32	.03	.12

BOOKS

Name	Pages	Each	Per 6
Death Reigned from Adam to Moses, paper cover	58	$0.10
Sin, A. H. Zilmer, paper covers	84	.25
Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	$1.25
Book of Revelation Made Easy to Understand, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	1.25
Ancient Mysteries, George Johnston	116	.50
Christ in the Old Testament, R. H. Judd, paper	88	.40
The Way of Life Eternal, Lyman Booth, paper	88	.40
Student's Text Book, Wilson, board cloth	200	.45	2.60
The Visitor, Boice, paper	212	.50
The Mystery of Iniquity, Booth, paper	220	.75
Pine Woods Bible Class, Wilson, board cloth,	480	.85	5.00
Emphatic Diaglott, Benjamin Wilson Neatly bound, and in clear type,			2.50

THE GOSPEL IN SONG

A Book of 287 well-printed Gospel Hymns

	Each	Per 10	Per 100
	Postpaid	Postpaid	Not Postpaid
Manila	$0.40	$3.60	$30.00
Flexible Cloth	.45	4.00	33.00
Board Cloth	.50	4.50	40.00

FOR HIMSELF

By F. L. Austin

"But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us."

CHRIST "ENTERED, once for all, into the holy places, . . . by means of His own blood."—v. 12, Diag. There was no other way for Him to enter into the Holy of Holies of the "greater and more perfect tabernacle" than "by his own blood". The "blood of goats and calves" was wholly insufficient for admittance to God's abode in the "true tabernacle."

In the tabernacle type, Exodus 26:31-33, a veil was hung before the ark: "and the veil shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy". Nor might even the high priest come "at all times into the holy place within the veil before the mercy seat, which is before the ark; that he die not," was God's caution, Lev. 16:2, to Aaron. Only on set occasions, and then by the blood of bullock or goat, vv. 11-14, 15, might God upon the mercy seat be approached.

Blood? The blood was carried in a container. The fact that the animal blood was in a container was evidence that the animal from which the blood was taken was dead. It was the high priest, Aaron, who should have died. But he could not have died and also have entered through the veil. Therefore he was instructed to make a sin offering, v. 11; see 4:1—, and carry the blood, an evidence of death, through the veil, into the Holy of holies for atonement—the covering over of sin.

Now Christ was High Priest of "the true tabernacle". It was for Him to enter into its most holy. There was a veil between Him and the most Holy, between Him and God. God might have peered through that veil, but that was not according to God's plan. It was God's plan that His Son, the true High Priest, should enter and ABIDE, continue, with himself. Most truly, Christ was to die for the sins of man, but He was also to be himself fashioned like unto His Father and abide, forever, in God's Holiest.

The intervening veil was Christ's own flesh. Heb. 10:20. For He was "made (created) of (not by) a woman". Gal. 4:4. "He was made like unto his brethren", Heb. 2:17; "He likewise took part of the same" "flesh and blood"—v. 14. The only way for Him to pass through that veil, His flesh, was by death. In flesh, His Adamic nature, He could not even enter into God's abode, to say nothing of dwelling there. He must die; He did.

In this particular He died "for himself". He must be changed from the "seed of the woman" to the very nature of God. The only way to accomplish such a change was first by the destruction of the flesh which was like unto that of His brethren, that the gift of God's nature might be His. "He entered in once (once for all time) into the holy (and throughout this chapter "holy" seems to mean Holy of holies) place" "by his own blood."—Heb. 9:12.

This, in brief, Bro. Macallister, is my answer to your kind and appreciated inquiry, as the writer's meaning of "for himself" and for mankind on page 242.

OCCUPY TILL I COME

By Lyman Booth

A CUSTOM ONCE PREVAILED in the great Roman empire, wherein the senate and later its emperors, though they were not kings, appointed men to rule as kings over certain provinces. Such appointments were made only when the party seeking the office appeared before the emperor in the city of Rome.

It was this custom which served as the groundwork of the parable in Luke 19:12-27. It is recorded that Archelaus and Antipas made the journey. Archelaus was strenuously opposed by the Jews, and they even sent a delegation to Rome to oppose his claims, because of his cruelties. They were unsuccessful at first but finally succeeded in having him removed from office, the result of their pleading: "We will not have this man to rule over us."

So we find such appointees on their return, exercising kingly authority and functioning as such among their fellow citizens, appointing their favored servants to rule over ten, five, or two cities; having power to inflict severe punishment on those who refused to recognize their authority, even putting to death the rebellious citizens.

This account runs parallel with the parable. Our Lord is the Nobleman. He has gone into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom (dominion). Though He has been away a long time, His promise to return still holds good, for He has heralded from the shining courts of heaven a most satisfying promise, "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22:12. Before He departed, He charged His servants (disciples) to occupy, or trade, or better still, be diligent in business, till He should return.

The moral to be drawn is that the greater the service, the larger the reward; conversely, no service, no reward. I often think: Which will it be with me, little, or much, or none at all? Now is the time to prepare for the final verdict. The thought should quicken to vigorous action every power within, to faithful and diligent service. There is nothing to lose. If I am His servant, my time belongs to Him, and I dare not waste it. I must occupy till He comes.

THE ONLY TIME THE LORD hears from some Christians (perhaps most of them) is when they are in trouble; which should seem to the Hosts of heaven like, "Any old port in case of a storm."—S. E. Haney.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 10, 1931

NUMBER 19

Upon Thy People and Upon Thy Holy City

By F. L. Austin

IN MAKING GOOD his assurance that Daniel was to understand the matter", Dan. 9:23, Gabriel is real specific in giving explanation. Daniel had been in captivity with his people nearly the full time of seventy years prophesied by Jeremiah 9: 2. These were years of captivity. But Gabriel came to Daniel to tell him of seventy sevens of years which Daniel's people (Judah) should spend, not in captivity, but in his "holy city". They were to be years of upbuilding, years of consummation. They were "determined", v. 24, that is, according to the root meaning of the word, "divided".

These seventy sevens were to be divided or determined into three parts. The first part was to consist of seven sevens, v. 25; the second part of sixty-two sevens and the third part of one seven, v. 27. Gabriel is specific in assigning the beginnings of these seventy sevens. They were to commence, v. 25, with "the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem".

As it is not the purpose at this time to study the chronology or the history of these seventy sevens, but rather to identify them by certain facts, we merely cite the reader to the approximate date of this commandment. It was given "in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king", to Nehemiah. Neh. 2:1, 5, 6. Usher's chronology, in the margin of the King James Bible, dates the giving of this commandment as about 445 B. C. Other chronologists give it as 454 B. C. If to 454 B. C., 29 A. D., be added to the crucifixion of our Savior, we have exactly 483 years. But Gabriel told Daniel that "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto Messiah the Prince shall be seven sevens and threescore and two sevens".—Dan. 9:25. This would be exactly 483 years. In verse 26 Gabriel continues, "and after threescore and two sevens shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself". Thus by understanding the sevens of Gabriel's prophecy to be sevens, that is, weeks of years, not of days, we find an exactness of agreement with the date of the cutting off of the Messiah in death.

True, the Bible frequently refers to sevens or weeks of days. See page 281. Also it refers to sevens of sevens of years. But neither of these latter usages would fit the case of Gabriel's announcement in so far as his prophecy has since been attested by history. That there was a commandment issued for the rebuilding of Jerusalem is a fact of history recognized by all. That the period of rebuilding the city and completing it with temple and all required seven sevens, or forty-nine years, is also a fact of history. That Judah was at Jerusalem and not in captivity during the building of those walls is also a fact of history. Thus the first "determined" period of seven sevens of years upon Daniel's people and upon Daniel's holy city is an historic fact.

Again, following the completion of the city Judah continued, as a whole, free from captivity. She continued at Jerusalem, Daniel's holy city. The things that occurred there were for both Judah and Jerusalem. The period from the finishing of the walls to the crucifixion of the Messiah, His cutting off, was threescore and two sevens of years or 434 years. All of these historical facts give confirmation to the accuracy of Gabriel's statements.

Now seven sevens and sixty-two sevens equal sixty-nine sevens. If these sixty-nine sevens or weeks, were actually fulfilled in 483 years of time, we must naturally conclude that the remaining one seven of the seventy that Gabriel announced was also to be computed in the terms of years, that is, in seven years.

In verse 24, when Gabriel said that seventy weeks (or sevens) "are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city", he did not say that they would continue consecutively, without intermission, from the time that they first started until the date of their completion. Rather, he said the reverse. He said that they "are determined", or divided. The seventy years were divided up into periods

(Continued on page 294)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

"For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

BAPTIZED INTO JESUS CHRIST

"KNOW YE NOT, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."—Rom. 6:3, 4.

It should ever be borne in mind that the Christ into whom we are baptized is the risen Christ. All there was of Him that pertained to Adam and Adam's nature was put to death on the cross. It is not into that former nature of our Master, nor into His former life, but into the new, the risen, the new-natured Christ that baptism conducts one.

The editor of New Testament in Modern Speech by R. F. Weymouth, Ernest Hampton-Cook, M. A., in a footnote relating to Romans 6:3, writes, "'Into', i. e., into association, incorporation, union with . . . All of us who have been baptized unto Christ have been baptized unto His death; i. e., to teach us the absolute necessity of becoming dead with Him, to self and sin and the world."

Just as crucifixion rendered Christ dead to His former status of life, so he who is baptized into Christ voluntarily enters into death to his own Adamic status which has so opposed God and Christ, dead to every lustful appetite that abuses God's creation, refusing that appetite permission to sway or rule in life's aims and actions.

Such baptism is not only with a view to associating the individual with Christ as to death, but also with a view of associating him with Christ as to Christ's new, i. e., risen, spiritual, immortal life.

It is peculiar and worthy of most special notice that there is no other mode mentioned in the Scriptures of introducing one "into Christ" than the mode of baptism. In the above text it reads, "so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ". In Galatians 3:27 it reads, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ". The direct inference is that those who have not been so baptized are not in Christ, have not put on Christ; while the direct teaching is that those who have been thus established into association and union with Christ are, in reverence to God and honor to His Son, obligated to consecrate all ability and opportunity in efforts to live, not after the impulses of the old man, but after the teachings and guidance of Christ, by the aid of the Holy Spirit.

"Into Christ" not only exalts one far beyond his former position, but it also unites one so closely to the Master that he in all justice should devote his whole being to exalt the Master and toward attainment unto His ways.

TRIED AND FAITHFUL

REFERRING TO THE TIMES of trouble that shall prevail throughout the earth in the days just previous to the return of Christ and to ten kings which shall then oppose Christ, John in Revelation 17:14 says, "These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is the Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful." Though all nations will at that time be united in the mighty strength of one universal federation, yet there will be individuals who will resist all that man-organized power and will-be faithful to the Lord.

Speaking of these same things and of the same day, Daniel in 11:35 says, "And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make them white, even to the time of the end". Trials and testings must reveal faithfulness or unfaithfulness.

In these present days of world-wide depression, days of intense poverty and want with some, we are daily the more tested as to our loyalty and faithfulness to Christ. These testings are revealing what appears to be loyal and true faithfulness to the Master upon the part of many different ones. Discouraging and dark as may be the outlook to certain individuals, they nevertheless are considering God and the Savior and rendering continuous service regardless of the attitude of others. And so it should be.

There are others who make one think of the little boy who started to Sunday School with two nickels given by his mother. One nickel was to be for the Sunday School collection, the other for ice cream. Trotting along the old wooden sidewalk, one nickel was accidentally dropped. It fell through a crack in the walk. Instantly, the little fellow exclaimed, "There goes the Lord's nickel".

(Continued on page 294)

GOD'S WORD VERSUS MAN'S INTERPRETATION

By Joseph Fletcher, Jr.

NEARLY EVERYBODY has at one time or another discovered that people are not willing many times to let God's Word stand at its face value. They must put their interpretation thereupon. Many times by so doing they make the Word of God void. The sad feature of this condition lies in the fact that the person does it unwittingly, without any thought of the harm that may arise.

It is from such beginnings or sowings that the present generation is reaping a harvest of unbelief, doubt and skepticism. The discarding of the Old Testament as out of date, disbelief in the many miracles of the Bible, as well as in the miraculous birth of the Savior, denying the very need of a Savior, thereby making everyone his own savior, until today the rising generation is lost in the confusion with which it is surrounded on every hand. With these conditions, combined with the many complex problems of our everyday twentieth century life staring us in the face, it behooves every follower of Christ to be very careful that he lets God's Word mean what He intends it to mean.

When the inspired Word tells us that death is an enemy, let us believe it, and not be deceived as Eve was, or believe that it is a friend, leading us to glory.

In THE RESTITUTION HERALD of December 16, 1930, on page 176, this statement is made: "Therefore the tree of life and the tree of knowledge of good and evil, could not have been literal trees." These trees are mentioned in the same verse as the other trees. Gen. 2:9. Every tree that was pleasant to the sight and good for food was to be found there. This included the tree of knowledge of good and evil and the tree of life.

Genesis 3:6 tells us that Eve saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise. She took of the fruit thereof and did eat, and gave unto her husband with her, and he did also eat. It is also called a tree in verses 11, 12 and 17.

In Genesis 3:22, God said, "Lest he put forth his hand and take of the tree of life and eat and live for ever," He drove out the man and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims and a flaming sword. The evidence is conclusive that the tree of good and evil and the tree of life were both literal trees, pleasant to look upon, bearing fruit good to eat. One contained substance or necessary elements for the building up or preservation of life, for man was mortal by nature, and in order to live forever he had to eat forever of the tree of life provided by God for that purpose. The other tree contained substance creating a change in the persons partaking of same, as in Gen. 3:7, 22.

In the same article on page 176, mention is made that the place where the trees were planted was called the Garden of Eden. This, the writer states, could not mean a

(Continued on back page)

THE LAW OF FAITH

By Cecil Smead

WHEN ABRAHAM WAS seventy-five years old, the Lord called him out from his country, and told him that He would make a great nation out of him. God saw that the whole world was turning to wickedness, and that if His purpose in mankind was to be fulfilled, He must select a people, train them, and use them as a torch to bring light to the rest of the world. Abraham had no children at this time, but that did not hinder the Lord from choosing him, because He himself is Almighty; and as John the Baptist said, "God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham."

Abraham was quite old, and his wife, Sarah, had been barren all her life, but he answered the call and followed the Lord. Several years passed and nothing had been done about it, and so one day Abraham asked the Lord about it. We find the story in Genesis 15. The Lord took him out at night, pointed to the stars, and said, "Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: so shall thy seed be."

Now, the wonderful part of it is, that in spite of the adverse circumstances which would have disheartened the ordinary man, Abraham believed what God had told him, and simply waited for God to do as He had said; therefore the Lord counted his faith to him for righteousness. This all happened many years before Abraham was circumcised. It was before Ishmael was born of the bond-woman, and Ishmael was thirteen years old when Abraham received the seal of circumcision. We see, then, that Abraham was counted as righteous long before he was circumcised. It was because of his faith; the law of faith was in operation many years before the law of circumcision.

If we follow the story of Genesis, we find that Isaac was born of Sarah and was counted as the promised seed; thus blessing came to Abraham because of his faith. Further, we read in Rom. 1:17, that the just shall live by faith. Abraham, having been counted righteous, will live by his faith; and therein is "the righteousness of God revealed." Now, we read in Rom. 4:23-24, concerning the righteousness of Abraham, that "it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead."

"Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." Rom. 3:28. The gospel of salvation skips the law entirely in its jump from Abraham to Christ. The natural seed of Abraham, through Isaac, were circumcised, and tried to keep the law; but it was impossible for them to keep it. Even if they could have kept the law, they could not have come that way into the fulness of the promise made to Abraham. "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or

(Continued on page 295)

SHELTER FROM THE STORM

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

Are you drinking at the fountain,
Where the streams of life are pure,
Where we rest in sweet contentment,
'Neath His wings and are secure?
Where we learn in deep contrition,
Of the pilgrim Christian's path;
Where the light sheds all its brightness;
Where we're hidden from His wrath.

There's foundation in that shelter,
That the storms of life can't shake.
We are building, then, a temple,
That the thoughtless cannot make.
For the tree that's in the open
Is made firm by storm and wind;
And the life that's in God's harbor,
Will stand faithful to the end.

With the angry billows roaring,
Casting foam upon the land,
Men's hearts faint and seem to fail them;
God alone can help us stand.
For the Voice that stilled the tempest,
When disciples feared the storm,
Is still Master of the billows,
And will not let us come to harm.

THE STORY OF A SONG

A GOOD MANY YEARS AGO, in a certain city, lived a very wealthy family. They had one child, a daughter, on whom they lavished all that wealth could bestow. She was a beautiful girl, talented in many ways. Especially was she gifted with a fine voice. She was also a good musician, and often entertained her friends with some of her own compositions. Take it all in all, she was a general favorite.

At a revival meeting in her home town, she was converted and she came out upon the Lord's side, to the consternation of her parents and her friends who were worldly people, and had no place in their hearts for the lowly Jesus who had become so precious to her. Her parents tried in every way to get her to abandon her profession and they enlisted her friends to help them. For this young Christian had come out from the world when she accepted Christ, and she would not do the things she had done before.

And so she stood firm in her conviction that to be a child of God one must separate himself from the world. She could not join in the foolishness of the world and take Jesus with her. If she walked in His steps, it could only be in the way of the cross.

Her parents, as a last resort to try to break down the resolutions she had made that she must forsake the world to ever be a true child of God, solicited the help of the set to which she had always belonged to assist them in giving one of the largest parties they ever had in their home. All that wealth could do was freely and lavishly done in preparation for the event.

The evening came for the party. Gayety was at its zenith. She was the same sweet, gracious girl she had always been in her home. Yet there was an aloofness about her that caused some uneasiness. Before the friends who had gathered there departed, they asked her to play and sing one of her own compositions. As she went to the piano, with all eyes upon her I just wonder if her guardian angel was not standing by her, to give her strength for the final struggle.

You all know the song she sang, though you may never have heard the story of the song:

"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All I leave to follow Thee.
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou, from hence, my all shall be.

"Perish every fond ambition,
All I've sought, and hoped, and known,
Yet how rich is my condition,
When I know the Lord's my own.

"Let the world despise, forsake me,
They have left my Savior, too,
Human looks alike deceive me,
Thou art not like man, untrue.

"And while Thou shalt smile upon me,
God of wisdom, love, and might,
Foes may hate and friends forsake me,
Show Thy face and all is bright.

"Go, then, earthly fame and treasure;
Come, disaster, scorn, and pain;
In Thy service pain is pleasure;
With Thy favor loss is gain.

"I have called Thee, Abba Father;
I have put my trust in Thee.
Stormy clouds may gather o'er me,
All must work for good to me."

As the music died away with the last echo of her voice, it is said there was not a dry eye in the room. And ere many months passed, her parents and some of her friends had accepted Christ. They found by her loyalty to Jesus that she had been with Him and learned of Him. She would rather suffer the reproach of the world than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.

Did it take courage? It most certainly did! And if anyone will be loyal to Jesus, it will take courage to meet the world. But Jesus says we are to separate ourselves from the world. 2 Cor. 6:17. The Lord has always separated those whom He called to His service.

(Continued on page 298)

A LITTLE MEMBER BOASTETH GREAT THINGS

By Samuel E. Haney

"And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing. Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly."

TO THE CHIEF priests' and elders' accusations and Pilate's vitriolic question, Jesus answered "never a word". Strange procedure, one might say, for the Founder of the Christian religion, especially so when all His precepts and examples were to be imitated by His followers. But this was an occasion when words would have been useless. Jesus knew He was the defendant in a mock trial, in modern idiom, a frame-up. Hence, any defense on His part would have been stultifying.

Isaiah referred to the Lord's silence seven hundred and twelve years prior to its occurrence. He also depicted other matters and some subsequent events of the trial. "The LORD God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned. . . . I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting." Isa. 50:4-9.

Jesus said (Matt. 10:16), "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." The world reverses this by being wise as doves and harmful as serpents. The logic of His statement is here both emphasized and exemplified.

God is dealing with a people claiming to be Christian, supposedly, a "peculiar" people—"A people who belong to Him", Moffatt; a people, supposed to know how and when to speak, and when to be silent; and who should be aware that they are in their judgment day: "It is time for the judgment to begin with the household of God." 1 Peter 4:17, Moffatt. The non-christian's and evil doer's judgment, and all that this scripturally implies, come later. Matt. 24:48-51; John 5:28, 29, R. V. Hence the import of the serpent-wise and dove-harmlessness of Jesus' admonition.

The Christian is governed by the Spirit and grace of God, imparting "the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God" (11:33), making the wisdom of the world appear foolish with God—and with those governed by God's Spirit. 1 Cor. 3:19.

Elihu told Job he had too much "fleshly wisdom" (2 Cor. 1:12); and he succeeded in making him a convert to the above facts, which was proved later in the prophet's life, "Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain: he multiplieth words without wisdom." 35:16.

The tongue! what a mischievous and troublesome little
(Continued on page 295)

PAUL'S FIRST LETTER TO THE CORINTHIANS

By Lyman Booth

THE CHURCH AT CORINTH, to whom Paul addressed two epistles, included those who resided in the adjacent country as well as those in the city. Corinth was the great center of commerce on the overland route from Rome to the East, and also between upper and lower Greece. It was situated on a narrow isthmus between Saronic and the Corinthian Gulf, and was founded at a very early period, probably by the Phoenicians. It possessed the only good harbor in that part of the country. It was the shortest and safest route. Small vessels were taken across the isthmus, while larger ones transshipped their cargoes.

All the trade of the Mediterranean passed through Corinth, so that a perpetual fair was held there from year to year, to which were added the great gatherings of the Greeks each year, mentioned by Paul in 1 Cor. 9:24-27. Because of its great commercial facilities, it became a splendid city, and at the time it was destroyed by Mummius, about 146 B. C., it was the richest city in Greece, and abounded in statues, paintings and other works of art. Cicero called it the light of all Greece. It lay in ruins for about a century, until Julius Caesar colonized it about 46 B. C., and when visited by Paul, it had again become an important city.

Its population and that of Achaia was composed mainly of colonists from Caesar's army and of slaves who had gained their freedom. Settlers from Asia Minor, returned exiles, and at this time a large influx of Jews expelled from Rome (Acts 18:2) made up its population.

The church at Corinth was founded by Paul, who went there from Macedonia and Athens about A. D. 52. His preaching in the synagogues for about a year and a half was acceptable till he boldly stated that Jesus was the Messiah. Then persecution began. The Jews arrested and dragged him before the Roman governor, Gallio (Acts 18:12). Yet he was successful in establishing a church.

His disciples were mostly of the lowly order of citizens, 1 Cor. 2, Roman freedmen, Jews and Greeks who were great admirers of Paul. While Paul was with them, peace and quiet prevailed, but after he departed, the natural and national jealousy between the factions sprang up anew and divided the church into several parties. Some remained loyal to Paul and his teaching (1:12 and 9:5), and they became scandalized by the incestuous intercourse of a few members.

It appears from 7:1 that some of the brethren had written to Paul concerning certain matters, so that he had good reasons for writing to them. Though they had written they had not mentioned the enormities of the disorders, which had crept in among them; because they all shared more or less in the blame. But he learned through other sources of

(Continued on page 298)

UPON THY PEOPLE

(Continued from front page)

for the accomplishment of different phases of God's work with Judah and Jerusalem.

Upon the occasion of the crucifixion of our Savior, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from top to bottom. Matt. 27:51. This miraculous event removed the partition separating the Holy of Holies, God's abode, profaning it and making it impossible for God thereafter to receive the Jews. His dealings with them and their holy city temporarily terminated with that event. Soon after, they were driven out of the city by the Roman powers, which even on the date of crucifixion were sovereign over the people. But the entire seventy of those sevens announced by Gabriel were to be upon Judah and upon Jerusalem.

There remains yet the last, one seven of years, during which God will have dealings with His people, Judah, in their holy city, Jerusalem. In order for the events of this last seven to take place in accordance with Gabriel's announcement, Judah must be regathered to the holy city and must be resident there for at least that period of time.

Since the days of Judah's dispersion from Jerusalem by Titus, the Roman general, about 70 A. D., the Jews have had no national or group rights within those walls once sacred to them. It is only since the World War that international gestures have been made indicating an evidence of a partial willingness of other nations for the Jews to return and to establish a sort of national status upon that holy land.

But Gabriel announced that there should be six definite accomplishments as relating to Judah and Jerusalem during those seventy years. He states it thus:

"Seventy ^{years} are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city,

- "To finish the transgression, and
- "To make an end of sins, and
- "To make reconciliation for iniquity, and
- "To bring in everlasting righteousness, and
- "To seal up the vision and prophecy, and
- "To anoint the most holy."

The accomplishment of these six several things was the assigned purpose for which the seventy sevens of years were divided or determined. It is evident to one and all that neither Judah nor Jerusalem has yet finished the transgression. It is evident that they are still transgressing. No argument need be presented as to this point. It is therefore evident that the seventy sevens have not yet expired, for within those seventy sevens Gabriel said that the transgressions were to be finished.

Again, it is evident that no "end of sins" has yet taken place. Here, then, is a second reason for the believer of God's Word to assert that the seventy sevens have not yet been finished. And so we could go through the list. Let us stop at one more.

Concerning these seventy weeks upon "thy people and upon the holy city" one purpose was "to bring in everlasting righteousness." Every Bible student is persuaded that this everlasting righteousness is to be brought in by the establishment of Christ's throne, following His second advent. This being the fact, the seventy sevens of Gabriel's announcement are to expire in connection with the return of our Lord. Sixty-nine of these sevens expired at the crucifixion of our Lord. The last one is to expire at His return.

The last seven is to be run in consecutive manner. The first division was to follow the seven sevens, another after sixty-two sevens, but no division was announced to take place within the last of the seventieth seven. Thus the seventieth or last seven, if computed according to the same scale as have been the sixty-nine sevens, must refer to the last seven years of time preceding the coming of our Lord and Master.

If God permits, it will be both helpful and pleasant to continue this study further.

COMMENT SOLICITED

DEAR HERALD: Some time ago I saw in THE HERALD an excellent exposition of 2 Corinthians 4:16, but have forgotten it. I am specially desirous of a good comment on that verse as soon as possible.

Am I correct in thinking that "man" does not occur twice in the original, and could this fact be properly used to demonstrate that the inner man is not a second individual, but that the whole man is intended?

I have my own interpretation, but I want to get the best possible, and from a better authority than myself on the Greek, and shall be glad to hear from various brethren, as different methods of stating a truth appeal to different minds.

With many thanks,

R. H. Judd,

111 Milverton Boulevard, Toronto, Ontario.

TRIED AND FAITHFUL

(Continued from Editorial Page)

So today! It is not difficult to notice grown up boys and girls who in the days of depression and of trial cry out, "There goes the Lord's portion". Whether this portion is computed in terms of nickels or in time, labor, thought, prayer, service of any sort, it makes little difference. The truth of the matter is that the more severe the trial, the more clearly is it revealed as to whether the one tried is faithful or unfaithful to the Lord.

Those whose lives lead them into the days of "trouble such as never was since there was a nation, no, nor ever shall be" will know the real meaning and value of being tried and being found faithful. Surely those of us who are passing through the lesser testings of the present day should, without exception, be found "faithful".

THE UNRULY TONGUE

(Continued from page 293)

member of our body it is! James 3. Many wars have been caused by a few words, indiscriminately or inopportunistically spoken by statesmen whose garrulity excelled their wisdom. The same folly is in evidence today between individuals and nations. Popularity, reputation, and even characters have been irrevocably ruined by the use of a few words, unguardedly uttered or written. The world, drunken with Babylon's wine, needs wisdom from above as an antidote to sober up on. Men and nations would then know when and how to talk and how to keep out of trouble.

The troubles and ludicrous explanations of many people, particularly some in high places, are often the result of being so ego-possessed as to resemble Pat's explanation of the cause of his troubles, namely: "Every time I open me mouth I put me foot in it." This jest applies equally to nations.

St. James is right. We need both bridle and bit; and a "helm" (Bible) in our hands to restrain our loquacious tongues. Jesus' silence was often more eloquent than His words. It "drew fire" from Pilate, and made many of His enemies wince by the consciousness of their guilt.

Christians often make their own burden by not carefully noting what God has said, as Jeremiah explains (23rd chapter), "Every man's word shall be his burden"—for perverting the word of the living God. Read the chapter.

David, who believed in first getting right with God, gives the Christian the only safe course to pursue (Psalm 139:23, 24). "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting." This accomplished, we, like David, can say, "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."

The beloved John's remedy to prevent troubles and to edify our brethren can't be surpassed. "My dear children, let us put our love not into words or into talk but into deeds, and make it real." 1 John 3:18, Moffatt.

"Worry weighs a man down: a kind word cheers him up." Prov. 12:25, Moffatt. "A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth: and a word spoken in due season, how good is it." Prov. 15:23. "A wise reproof laid on a willing hearer is like a golden apple laid on a silver network; a golden earring, a necklace of rare gold—an apt word is like that." Prov. 25:11, 12, Moffatt.

"I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Jesus. Were Christians to habitually heed these words, there would be less idle talk and more meditation on the only "way" of life everlasting. And were lukewarm, indifferent Christians to see that they are never out of range nor focus of God's ubiquitous scrutiny, and were they aware of the fact that they are now on trial for life or death (2 Cor. 2:15, 16), what a different mode of thinking, talking, and acting they would practice!

"To sum it all up in conclusion. Stand in awe of God, obey his orders: that is everything for every man. For in judging all life's secrets God will have every single thing before him, to decide whether it is good or evil." Eccl. 12:13, 14, Moffatt.

THE LAW OF FAITH

(Continued from page 291)

to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect." Romans 4:13-14.

"Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea we establish the law." Romans 3:31. What law do we establish? Surely, not the law of circumcision, the law of Moses? We establish the law of faith, which was God's law from the first. God has laid down many principles, principles of justice, principles of righteousness, and all those principles of nature which govern life all around us. And He has laid down the principle of faith for our salvation. "The just shall live by faith." God gives us His own righteousness when we believe on His Son Jesus, just as He gave His righteousness to Abraham when Abraham believed Him. We have become the seed of Abraham by our faith in Jesus Christ, the promised Seed of Abraham. We shall live by our faith in Jesus Christ.

But notice what Abraham did after he had been counted righteous. He had faith, and his faith determined his actions. By faith he was circumcised. We do the same when we put away the sins of the flesh. Abraham was called upon to offer up his son on the altar, when on that son depended all the promises that God had made to him. He did not falter, but went right ahead, with full confidence and belief in God. James wrote of that act, "Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect." James 2:22. "Faith without works is dead."

Works are necessary, but works do not save us. Faith saves us. We shall live because God laid down the principle of faith for our salvation. On what other principle than that could as many be saved as God's infinite purpose with mankind requires? How many could have kept the law of circumcision, even if it could have brought salvation? But many shall keep the law of faith.

Thus we see the very righteousness of God himself declared in all this. It is of faith that it might be by grace. It is God's righteousness, His grace, His love. He provided such a way that as many as possible can be saved. He is unwilling that any should be lost. It is just by faith, that is all, faith. But it is by faith that is throbbing and pulsating with life; it is a faith that is living, and growing, and bringing forth works worthy of such a faith.

May we come to understand that gracious law of faith, and put it into practice as our Father in heaven wants us to put it into practice. Faith, yes, but action, too, the outward sign of faith.

HOLD FAST

By Alice B. Curtis

The earth is filled with violence,
And with a great unrest,
For man has turned away from God,
And His commands transgressed.
Let not your lot be with these cast,
Accept God's truths and hold them fast.

We see the nations in distress,
Men wronged and kings deposed;
For human laws can never end
Man's misdeeds or his woes.
Man's long misrule will soon be past,
Like Job, your righteousness hold fast!

War never ends, its carnage dread
Ensanguines many lands;
And womanhood, like Niobe,
Forever weeping stands.
But war cannot forever last,
Christ will bring peace, 'til then, hold fast!

Though sun and moon shall veil their light,
And stars from heaven fall,
Be not dismayed, God in His might,
Controls and guides them all.
These heavenly signs shall but forecast,
Christ's advent near, hold fast! hold fast!

O, for the restitution times,
When earth shall be at rest;
And under Christ's most glorious reign,
The righteous shall be blest.
The sands of time are running fast;
The Lord is near; your faith, hold fast!

O come, Lord Jesus, quickly come,
And bring the reign of peace,
When sin and sorrow, death and tears,
Forever more shall cease.
We long to see our beauteous King,
And the "new song" in glory sing.

"THE CAUSE OF CRIME TODAY is the youth of the nation." Judge McDevitt of the Common Pleas Court No. 1, said recently. "There are fifteen million youths in this country who have no religious or home training, worship no God, and whose lives are led into channels of crime and iniquity because of a worthless mother or a criminal father.

"Add to this neglect of training and lack of religion the easy accessibility to fire arms, the motor car and the moving pictures, and you have the major reasons for the influx of crime." — Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS

By Lyman Booth

ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST, Peter said to the assembled multitude (many of whom were guilty of conspiring to put Jesus to death), "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost (Spirit)." His plain and forceful accusation of their complicity in the deed convinced them that they were guilty, and their consciences prompted them to cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" All who have read the account know the result. About three thousand were added to the church.

The great question with many is whether their sins were remitted before or after their immersion. They base their claim that they were forgiven before they were baptized upon the word "for". They hold that "for" means "because of". That is, they were baptized because of the remission of their sins. We hold that such a construction would be in direct opposition to God's universal rule in His dealings with men. His rule is obedience first, and then He grants the thing promised.

Notice the case with Naaman, who was ordered to wash seven times in Jordan and his flesh would be cleansed of the leprosy. At first he felt offended at so simple a remedy, but being persuaded by his servants to do as he was bidden, he obeyed. He did not wash because he was healed, but in order that he might be healed. He was as much a leper when he arose from the water the sixth time as he was at first. But when he had fully complied with the order, his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean.

In this story we see that nothing but perfect obedience will satisfy God's demands. Then in order to have our sins forgiven, we must first render obedience to God's rule. That rule is, first, belief in God's Word, the gospel; second, repentance or turning from sin; third, being baptized. Then we must follow with a life worthy of the name whereby we are called.

We find this to be the order which Christ gave His apostles only a few moments before His ascension. He said that all power in heaven and earth was given Him. For that reason, He commanded His apostles to go into all the world and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name (not names) of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

Teaching involves the process of imparting knowledge, or making known a certain message, and that was the same which our Lord had taught throughout the country during His ministry. See Matt. 4:25. In the seventeenth verse it is stated that He preached repentance. He first taught the gospel of the kingdom, then He required a belief in the gospel, and a turning from sin, constituting repentance, which was followed by baptism. When they were baptized their sins were forgiven, but not before complete obedience to His instructions had been rendered.

WHERE DOES YOUR PRAISE GO?

By C. E. Lapp

"O praise the Lord, all ye nations; praise him, all ye people."

SEVERAL YEARS AGO a young man flew an airplane from New York to the city of Paris in France. Hundreds of people were there to meet him and the wheels of his plane had no sooner touched the ground and stopped, than he was lifted from it bodily and carried away amid the thunderous cheers of the crowd. By the next morning, the news had flashed around the entire world, and praise and eulogies came from the lips of thousands.

There is no doubt that Lindbergh accomplished a feat that very few other men could accomplish. It was a real test of courage and skill that helped to bring him through safely. But far above all human skill or power, we can see that the great and eternal God of the heavens must have cared for that man and the plane as they flew across that great expanse of water. There is no doubt in my mind that Col. Lindbergh uttered a prayer of thanksgiving to God as he saw the lights of Paris. He was placed on a pedestal and praised to the skies by individuals and nations alike.

There is One far greater and of so much more importance than any mortal man can ever hope to be and that One is God. We all praise mortal man for some little thing he has accomplished on this earth, but God is by far more deserving of praise. Why? Because, as we find in Psalm 117, His merciful kindness is great toward us. How little we realize the kindness that God has shown us, and how seldom we stop to offer a word of prayer and thanksgiving to Him!

He was kind to us and showed us mercy in that while we were yet sinners and had no inclination whatsoever of repenting, He loved us. (John 3:16.) The wages of sin is death. All have sinned and all are under the condemnation of death. If then we had received our just deserts or justice at the hand of God, we would be like the criminal condemned to die for his sin. But remember this, that He loved us so much that He gave His only begotten Son, even Christ, to die for us, that we through Christ might be made righteous or justified. Is there not abundant reason then that we should praise the Lord?

We have yet another beautiful truth in the second verse, "and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever." We have a record both in the Bible and profane history of God's wonderful watch-care and guidance over His people. When it says, "the truth of the Lord endureth for ever", then we are led to believe that all the promises made to those who call upon His name will yet be fulfilled. He has promised, if we accept His Son Jesus and live by faith in Him, that on the resurrection day we will be given eternal life, and not only that, but we shall reign with Him and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

Things of this world perish and fade away, but God's Word shall never pass into oblivion. Have we any reason to be happy and to praise the Lord? We, as individuals, should praise Him and every nation under the starry heavens should praise Him for His merciful kindness and for the faithfulness of the Lord which endureth forever.

"TRESPASSES is the term used by our Lord for the negligences, sins and ignorances, which mark the lives, even of those who can look up into God's face and say, "Our Father". The prayer for forgiveness is linked with the petition for daily bread, which suggests that we need to plead for the one as often as we ask for the other. And our Father forgives instantly, freely, according to the riches of His grace; not meagerly, but royally, gracefully—abundantly."—Selected.

A STORY OF A HYMN

A BEAUTIFUL STORY is told concerning Charles Wesley's hymn, "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

Two Americans who were crossing the Atlantic met in the cabin on Sunday night to sing hymns. As they sang the last hymn, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," one of them heard an exceedingly rich and beautiful voice behind him. He looked around and although he did not know the face, he knew the voice; so when the music ceased, he turned and asked the man if he had not been in the Civil War. The man replied that he had been a Confederate soldier.

"Were you in such a place on such a night?" asked the first.

"Yes," he replied, "and a curious thing happened that night which this hymn has recalled to my mind.

"I was posted on sentry duty on the edge of a wood, It was a dark night and very cold, and I was a little frightened, because the enemy was supposed to be very near. About midnight, when everything was still, and I was feeling homesick, and miserable and weary, I thought I would comfort myself by praying and singing a hymn. I remember singing:

'All my trust on Thee is stayed;
All my help from Thee I bring;
Cover my defenceless head,
With the shadow of Thy wing.'

"A strange peace came down upon me, after singing that hymn, and through the long night I felt no more fear."

"Now," said the other, "listen to my story. I was a Union soldier and was in the wood that night with a party of scouts. I saw you standing, although I did not see your face. My men had concentrated their aim of their rifles upon you, waiting the word to fire; but when you sang out so sweetly:

'Cover my defenceless head,
With the shadow of Thy wing,'

I said, 'Boys, lower your rifles, we will go home.' "

Ah, truly, God was in the wood that night!—Selected.

TO THE CORINTHIANS

(Continued from page 293)

these grave irregularities.

The Epistle was written therefore not only as a reply to the inquiries of the Corinthians by letter, but in order to terminate the various corruptions in doctrine and practice which then prevailed, to overthrow the influence of false teachers and to reestablish Paul's authority in that church. By presenting general truths in a prudent manner, he made way for a direct and particular opposition to the several gross and dangerous errors, with tender words of advice, mixed with fervent exhortations and wise instructions; and he concluded with affectionate and pathetic prayers for them.

The epistle is filled with wholesome instruction, though not so sympathetic as the Roman letter. It contains as full and complete and highly interesting a discussion and demonstration of the resurrection of our Lord as may be found anywhere.

It is very evident that it was written by Paul while residing in, or near, Ephesus, and before he left that city. A number of learned writers say that it was about A. D. 55 to 57. Orasius places it in the ninth year of Claudius, while others say in the tenth, and Dr. Pearson says in the twelfth when the Jews were driven from Rome.

On his arrival at Corinth he found Aquila and Priscilla. He remained there eighteen months, and at Ephesus three years, which period Whitley says ended in A. D. 57. But the fixing of the dates is not of so much importance as the contents of the epistle. For while it contains no express prophecies, its claim to divine inspiration is not excelled by any other author of sacred writings. This is perhaps the grandest of all of Paul's writings. Perhaps the book of Romans alone can be compared with it for its marvelous treasury of sublime doctrines, duties, and merciful privileges of Christianity.

It is certain that Paul wrote the Roman epistle at Corinth during his sojourn in that flourishing city. He speaks (16:23) of Gaius as his host, and in 1 Cor. 1:14 we read that Gaius was a Corinthian Christian whom he had baptized. He also mentions Erastus (16:23) as the chamberlain of the city, and this agrees with his statement that Erastus abode at Corinth (2 Tim. 2:4). He commends Phebe unto the Roman Christians as a servant of the church at Cenchrea and requests them to receive her as becometh saints. These references make it plain that Paul wrote while at Corinth. He also states that he was about to leave there and go to Jerusalem with the contribution from Macedonia and Achaia (15:25, 26), which shows he was in or near Corinth when he wrote.

There is no dispute as to the genuineness of the epistle. Even the Tubingen School acknowledges it to have been written by Paul. It was universally received by the primitive Christians as the writing of Paul, and it was evidently used by Clement of Rome in the first century and by Polycarp, a disciple of the apostle John.

As a summary of the epistle, we might say that after a salutation and thanksgiving (1:1-9) he severely reproves the spirit of factions; he contrasts his own simple preaching with the assumption of his followers, and recites the proper relation of teacher and disciple (1:10 and 4:21). He next deals with the moral disorders in the Corinthian church, the case of incest, and going to law in heathen courts. He gives advice concerning marriage and celibacy, and instructions concerning the marriage of virgins.

Next he treats of meats offered to idols, and the heathen sacrificial feasts, and then comments on the conduct and dress of women at the public service of the church. He condemns the disorders at the Lord's supper, deals with spiritual gifts, shows that love is the greatest of all gifts, and that the gift of prophecy is superior to that of tongues.

In the fifteenth chapter he proclaims the resurrection, and he then concludes with sundry practical directions and salutations. He closes with the apostolical benediction.

THE STORY OF A SONG

(Continued from page 292)

Israel was separated from all other nations to be God's chosen and peculiar people. 1 Kings 8:53. They finally began mixing up with other nations, wanting to be like other people. God turned from them and gave them over to follow their desires.

When He called us by the gospel, and we believed and obeyed, we, too, were separated from the world through the act of baptism. And how often are we admonished to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, to love not the world, neither the things of the world.

The Lord says, "Come out from the world and be ye separate . . . and I will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord." 2 Cor. 6:11-18. If we do not come out from the world, will God receive us as sons and daughters? By a separation from the world, we are not to understand that we will not come in contact with evil in the world. But we must not conform to it nor have any complicity in the things that are not of God wherein we might be partakers of evil.

Jesus was daily in contact with the evils in the world, yet He himself was as separate from the world as the east from the west. There was no compromising, no affiliating with the world, only to do them good. He was about His Father's business, preaching the gospel. He was kindly, affectionate, ever doing the work of the heavenly Father.

I hope each member of the Church of God will ask himself this question: Am I about my Father's business? Or has the world such a hold on me that most of my time and talents are given to help the things of the world. It is a serious question. Ponder it well!

—One of THE HERALD Readers.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE RESTITUTION HERALD, $2.00 PER YEAR.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"LET YOUR LIGHT SO SHINE BEFORE MEN, THAT THEY MAY SEE YOUR GOOD WORKS, AND GLORIFY YOUR FATHER WHICH IS IN HEAVEN."

OUR WORKS

IN STUDYING THE LIVES of many of our great men in history, one is impressed with the fact that it was not what they said or what they knew that made them famous; it was what they did.

The old adage, "Action speaks louder than words", has been proved true time and again. Take Lincoln, for example; from the time he was a mere lad, struggling for a living, to the day of his death, his life was filled with service and good deeds toward his fellowmen. We do not remember him so much for what he said or knew as we do for his unselfish labors and for his accomplishments during his life.

Booker T. Washington is another example of the fact that works are more important than words. He not only believed in helping his people; he did help them by hard and unselfish labor. And always when there was something difficult to be done, he set the example by working harder than anyone else. At his death not only his people but the entire nation mourned his passing. Truly, a man's works do follow him.

Let us consider for a moment the life of the one perfect Man, Jesus Christ. Throughout His ministry, His labors of love and mercy were manifold in their extent. Everywhere He went, He healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the dumb and life to the dead. No higher tribute can be given to anyone than that given by the apostle Peter in Acts 10:38, where he said that Jesus "went about doing good".

We, as Christians, should endeavor to follow in the steps of the Master by doing works that glorify His holy name. Some persons may get the mistaken idea that just because they have been baptized and believe in Jesus Christ, that is all that is necessary. But is it? In James 1:22-24 we find these words, "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves. For if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass: for he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was."

This clearly shows that we must do more than hear the Word of God; we must do the Word of God in our lives. Truly, we must believe in Him but there must be something besides belief. In James 2:19-20, we have this significant statement, "Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble. But wilt thou know this, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" Also verse 24, "Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only".

Knowledge is fine, but there must be something besides head knowledge before we can get salvation. Recently I heard a noted minister say, "Don't talk religion in your home, live it. And if it is lived there will be little need for talking about religion."

Many people lament the fact that the young people of today fail to take an interest in church work. How can they be expected to when their own parents fail to set an example of Christian conduct? The parents may attend Sunday School part of the time and profess a belief in the God of heaven but that is as far as their activities go. They are hearers, but not doers.

Therefore, let us, as Christians, remember that it is our works more than anything else which stamps us as earnest workers for the Master. May we heed the words of Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount when He said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Harry Goekler, Illinois.

THE BEST MEDICINE for our own sorrows is the effort to heal the sorrows of someone else. However heavy our personal trials may be, we shall forget our quarrel with life and with God if we will give ourselves steadily to the endeavor to make life brighter and fuller of comfort and blessings to others.—Wiley J. Phillips.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 9; Ohio, 7; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 3; California, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Louisiana, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JESUS BEARING THE GOOD TIDINGS

“He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.”

JESUS AND HIS TWELVE helpers went throughout every city and village, preaching and telling the good news of the kingdom of God. He carried the happy message from high to low, rich and poor. And how the poor and afflicted welcomed Him! They followed Him, too, and gave as they could to the support of the Master and the needy.

Among the most ardent followers were Mary Magdalene, out of whom Jesus had cast seven devils, Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna. At that time Jewish women were not considered equal to men, but Jesus gave them real consideration. They helped in many ways of which no account is given.

One day the crowd gathered about Jesus and He told them the following parable:

“A sower went out to sow his seed. Some fell by the wayside and it was stepped upon, and the birds ate it up. Some seed fell upon a rock. It sprang up quickly, but soon withered, because its roots could get no moisture and food from the rock. Other seed fell among thorns, and when it grew up, the thorns choked it out. And yet other seed fell on good ground, and the food and moisture made the seed grow into a strong plant, which bore fruit a hundredfold.”

Then Jesus cried out, “He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.”

When the disciples asked Him what the meaning of the parable was, Jesus replied, “It is for you to understand about the kingdom of God, but many others are not to understand.”

Whereupon Jesus explained the parable to them. The seed is the Word of God. The seeds by the wayside are people who hear the Word, but evil takes it from their hearts as the birds ate the seeds. So they do not believe and do not want to be saved. The seeds that fell on the rock are people who gladly hear the Word and believe for a while, but it does not take root deeply enough into their hearts and is soon forgotten when trouble, care, or temptation comes to them.

The seeds choked by thorns are people whose love for God and His ways is choked out by the love of riches and pleasures of the world.

But the seeds of the good ground are the people who really receive God's Word in their hearts. They carefully try to learn God's plans and follow them by being good at all times in every way.

ARE WE good ground?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Draw pictures to illustrate this story.
2. Read Luke 24:10; Mark 4:1; Luke 7:18-23.
3. Learn Luke 8:15.

WE BELIEVE in the visible coming of Christ. “Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.” —Acts 1:11.

If kind words and deeds we sow,
In some life they'll root and grow;
What we sow we'll reap again,
Words of joy or words of pain.

—Junior Teacher's Quarterly

WHAT HELPED MARK

One day Mark's father had a visitor.

“You have a fine son,” said the friend.

“He is honest in school. He plays nicely with his classmates. He is always happy, and is kind to everyone.”

“Thank you,” said Mark's father. “I think there is a reason for all you have said,” he continued, “for Mark's mother and I have tried to teach him about Jesus.

“We read Bible stories to him when he was young. We have prayed with him and have helped him to pray. We have daily prayers and grace at meal time. We have helped him to read the Bible stories. We have gone with him to church. And his grandparents have helped him, too.”

“I believe that is the reason,” said the friend. “Mark is like Timothy, the young boy whom Paul loved. He had been helped by his mother and grandmother. Such boys become fine, strong men.”

“I would rather Mark grew into a fine, strong, Christian man than to have any honor that could come to him,” said Mark's father.

The name “Joseph” means “increase or addition”.

The name “Zacchaeus” means “pure, clean; just or justified”.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON VIII. — February 22, 1931

JESUS BEARING THE GOOD TIDINGS

Luke 8

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 61:1-3, 10, 11

GOLDEN TEXT

And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him. — Luke 8:1.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Sowing the Seed of the Kingdom.

Basic Truth. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." — Luke 2:10.

Outline. I. The Gospel of the Kingdom. II. "Take Heed How Ye Hear". III. Sowers of the Word.

I. The Gospel of the Kingdom. From the expression "good tidings" comes our word, "gospel." From the very beginning of His ministry Jesus proclaimed the coming of the kingdom which will bring in everlasting righteousness. Matt. 4:17, 23. It was the very essence of His preaching and teaching. It was the subject of all His parables. He placed it first among all things to seek. Matt. 6:33.

The restoration of the kingdom has been the national hope of Israel ever since the Babylonian captivity. Christ's teaching was that He would be the one to reestablish it. He bears the title, "King of the Jews." Because of it He was sent to the cross. But when He comes again it will be to wear the crown. His kingdom, in which His followers are promised a place, will be a real, political government established on the earth at His return, and which will replace the sin-infested governments of man with an eternal reign of righteousness and peace.

II. "Take Heed How Ye Hear." The gospel of the coming kingdom is freighted with more significance, more promise, for human beings than any other message that they could possibly entertain. Wise indeed are those who heed the Master's significant admonition: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. . . . take heed therefore how ye hear" (verses 8 and 18). The value of that message is as a pearl of great price. Let us not cheapen it or destroy its effect by laughing, talking, or diverting other people's attention from the Word during the sermon or Bible class. Respect the gospel Word, and remember the application of the parable.

III. Sowers of the Word. We are sowers of the Word whenever we tell the message of the kingdom to someone else. Christ is the chief Sower of seed, and after Him, preachers, teachers, evangelists, Christian parents who bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, friends who speak of their hope in the glad tidings, and Christian writers, singers, artists, and even publishers.

It is a glorious calling, thus to be fellow workers with our great Head. But remember not to be discouraged if all of your seed does not fall into good and honest hearts, if some scorn your message, and some make the start and later lose interest, and many, like Demas, forsake the truth because they love this present world.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Our lesson today is a parable. Like the rest of the parables, it concerns the kingdom. Many practical thoughts can be drawn from it.

Seed sown = Word of God.

Waysides

Stony places

Thorny places = Different classes of people.

Good ground

In sowing the seed, i.e., preaching the Word, we don't know where it is going to fall or what kind of a harvest will result. We sow in hope. Seed must be sown.

Questions for class discussion: How can we sow? Where can we sow to best advantage? How can we get the cleanest seed? In what way can we help the growing grain?

Protect your seed. The parable states that after the seed is sown the devil comes and takes away the Word. Guard against this common enemy. Protect your seed from his attacks. Study his methods.

Class discussion: How can we protect the newly planted Word from the enemy? When, where and how will he attack our efforts? Is it necessary to let him destroy the seed?

— C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"He traveled through every city and village, publishing and proclaiming the glad tidings of the kingdom of God." — Luke 8:1, Diag.

We never read of Christ being idle. The glad tidings of the kingdom of God were all important. It was He and He alone who really knew them at that time and on Him depended the spread of this news. True, the twelve were with Him, but He was the Leader, the One who knew, the One who received the knowledge from the Father, the one central figure of the group.

He did not wait for people to come to Him; but He went out among them to tell this good news. He went into the city and also to the village, none too high or too low for Him to give the message. This was indeed "glad tidings", for it meant for them to receive the coming King. It meant life to them if they accepted the message. It meant a place for them in that kingdom of which Christ was publishing the good news. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Good News of the Kingdom of God.

As Jesus went about in every city and village, He proclaimed by word and deed the "glad tidings (good news) of the kingdom of God." It had been the subject of Old Testament promise and prophecy and was now "at hand". This was "good news" for those who waited "for the consolation of Israel," Luke 2:25, and the "redemption in Jerusalem." Luke 2:38.

But, after the kingdom had been rejected and the King crucified, it was again announced that the King was ready to return, Acts 2:38; 3:19-21, on condition of national repentance of Israel. But He was again rejected by the rulers of Israel, Acts 4:17, 18, and the preachers threatened, Acts 4:21. As a result the kingdom is now in abeyance or postponed and a mediatorial work introduced, that of selecting a people for His name, the church of the living God. — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Take Heed How Ye Hear.

In this lesson, Jesus is speaking to the multitude in parables. Find out just what a parable is. Tell the story found in verses 5 to 8. Do you know what it means? Read verses 11 to 15 and see just what Jesus was teaching them. How do we hear the Word of God? When we hear it, what should we do? Will it be of any benefit to us if we just hear and keep busy with other things? What class will we be in, if we do that? Verse 14. If we hear God's Word and obey it for a time and then forget all about it, what class will we be in? Verse 13. Which is the best class and why?

Jesus was speaking to many who were farmers and they understood just how seed was sown, just how many things hindered its growth, and what conditions helped it to bring forth a great harvest. Our minds and hearts are the soil in which the Word of God finds lodging. If we do not care about His Word, or if we care about other things more, what will the result be?

Let us study and find out what Jesus has taught us and then let's obey Him as far as we can. If we do, He will help us day by day, so that we will grow more and more like Him. — M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

BLAIR, NEBRASKA

Preaching services were held Sunday morning, February 1, by Bro. Adams of Omaha. Sr. Dorothy Krogh spoke for them last Sunday morning. The Berean class is going to have a box social on February 14 to raise money for the class.

Sr. F. L. Austin, accompanied by her cousin, Evelyn VanVactor of Gary, Indiana, spent the past week end with Bro. Austin and the church folks in Oregon.

Some of the members and friends of the Oregon church invited themselves to the home of Bro. and Sr. Ray Maysilles on Friday, February 6, to spend the evening. These good folks are leaving Oregon on March first, and will be located in northeastern Mississippi, where Mr. Maysilles' work takes him. They will be greatly missed from all departments of the church and we will feel their loss deeply. Our prayers go with them to their new home.

PLUM RIVER CHURCH In Illinois

Bro. C. E. Lapp will be the speaker at this place next Sunday, February 15. Sunday School convenes at ten o'clock with speaking at eleven. The evening service begins at seven-thirty. Let all who are nearby make it convenient to be out.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Sr. McClelland has been one of the sick in our midst recently. As for the ailing brothers mentioned before, we feel they are slightly improved, but still greatly in need of your help through prayer.

We are pleased to be able to announce that Bro. J. H. Anderson of Indiana is to be the visiting minister of our Annual May Meeting.

To those who are able to come to our May Meeting, we feel we can offer two wonders, one in the natural world, and one in the spiritual world. The mighty Niagara is the natural; the glorious gospel, the spiritual.

The promise that the Father would send both the sunshine and the rain upon the just and the unjust, is surely being fulfilled here, as far as the sun is concerned. Beautiful sunshiny days are being greatly enjoyed.

Much interest is being shown in Bro. Randall's discourses and many strangers are noticed in the congregation.

DEBTS TO GOD'S WORK

Time and again The Herald office is inspired and strengthened upon receipt of money for subscription to The Herald from some who are known to have small means with which to care for life's needs. All such we heartily commend to man and God. At other times we are made to wonder what some people really think of God or man. The ease, the indifference and the flippancy with which they write, after being in arrears for Herald subscription for perhaps one or two years, and say, "We are hard up. Just discontinue the paper". There seems to be never a thought of indebtedness for the overdue subscription, never a thought that such ignoring of obligation handicaps this effort of Christian service by just that much. Just a "thank you" would help a little.

NEWS FROM NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

Sr. Franklin Moore and Sr. Moreland have been quite ill for some time past. Also Sr. Mary Wagoner had the misfortune to break her arm. We hope and pray for God's blessings to attend them.

The election of Sunday School officers was held last Sunday, February 1, many assuming the same responsibility as they did the previous year.

Elsie M. Moore has been appointed church reporter for the Niagara Falls church.

The Bereans held their last meeting with Bro. Rennard and family and were delightfully surprised at the close of the lesson to be invited into the dining room where delicious refreshments were served. His daughter well deserves credit as an expert cake maker. The next meeting will be held at 1614 Weston Ave., at which time election of officers will take place. All are enjoying the lessons under the leadership of Bro. Clyde Randall.

News has reached us that Bro. and Sr. Gordon, our former pastor and wife, have been relieved of some of their worldly goods. We hope that these goods may soon be recovered.

TRAINING CLASS NEWS

Our class has grown since you last heard from us. Two young men of Oregon, Roland Wright and Alan Deitzman, who have been attending our Sunday School and Berean class, have become interested in the work of the Training Class and have been enrolled as members.

The staff has been chosen for our annual Training Class Edition of The Restitution Herald and has begun work on the issue which is to be published some time in April.

Bro. Clarence Lapp went to Ripley, Illinois, on February 6 to hold meetings there over Sunday. He stopped over night Friday with Bro. McGraw and family at Macomb.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The first week following the return of the pastor and wife was a full one, indeed. A number of church friends dropped in suddenly one night with confetti and other things for making merry. Then on Tuesday night, February 3, nearly sixty of the adult church members and attendants gathered to extend a genuine, heartfelt reception. As an expression of their love, they brought along a beautiful walnut end table with ornamental lamp. It was an evening long to be remembered in the social life of the church, and in the hearts of the pastor and family.

Sunday School on February 1 numbered 268, and a full attendance was present for morning and evening sermons.

Bro. Townsend and Sisters Simpson and Rose are still indisposed, and many prayers are arising in their behalf. F. E. Siple, Pastor.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Morris Kent; Wm. G. Ford; M. A. Woodward; W. V. Lansbery; Leslie Edwards; Vernon Chaplin; L. E. Conner; Mrs. T. M. Savage; Mrs. Victor Smith; George Siple; Mrs. John Cochran; Arthur Gilbey; Mrs. W. H. Eidemiller; Albert Siple; Mrs. Hilding Anderson; John Sweet; I. M. Abbott; Mrs. R. L. Jones; Mrs. Connie Ramsey; Elsie M. Moore; D. L. Halstead; Frances Gillespie; Dr. Samuel Metheney; Mrs. E. M. Hall; Alice Kerr.

GOD'S WILL FOR US

"God wills a great deal of blessing to His people, which never comes to them. They do not will it, and it cannot come to them. This is the great mystery of man's creation with a free will, that God has made the execution of His will, in many things, dependent on the will of man. Of God's will revealed in His promises, so much will be fulfilled as our faith accepts. Prayer is the power by which that comes to pass which otherwise would not take place, and faith is the power by which it is decided how much of God's will shall be done in us. When once God reveals to us what He is willing to do, the responsibility for the execution of that will rests with us."—From "With Christ" by Murray.

Requests for Prayer

God has promised that if we ask, in faith believing, we shall receive. Many among our number have been petitioning the Father for restoration to health of themselves or their loved ones. Several of these have requested the prayers of the brotherhood in their behalf. By thus interceding in behalf of others, we ourselves are also drawn closer to our heavenly Father, and we are encouraged to cast out of our lives those things which would hinder the answer to prayer.

Bro. Thos. Weldon, of Thorold, Ontario, has been a great sufferer this winter and the prayers of many have ascended in his behalf.

Sr. Ruby Randall, wife of Bro. C. E. Randall, is another sufferer for whom we have been praying.

Sr. John Cochran, of Knox, Indiana, who has recently undergone a very serious operation, is another who has felt the power of prayer and requests that we continue to remember her at the throne of grace.

Several others have written in to us likewise. The names of those who so desire will be added to our prayer circle, if such requests are indicated.

May we not grow weary in prayer to our heavenly Father, but daily petition Him in behalf of those in need.

Word comes from Sr. John Cochran of Knox, Indiana, that she is sufficiently recovered to have returned from the hospital at Argos to her home. For this we all thank God. She is still weak. Sr. Cochran expresses her sincere appreciation because of the many letters and cards which she received while at the hospital. But more than that she is thankful for the prayers of the many in her behalf. She writes that she seemed to sense the strength that she derived from the Father in answer to these prayers, and further states, "I am resting my case in Him and am ready to abide His will". Would that all our readers could testify as strongly for the Master.

Dale Koontz, son of Bro. and Sr. Earl Koontz of our Oregon, Illinois, congregation, has been very sick for the past two weeks, but is now a little improved. Dale has endeared himself to all of the Sunday School scholars and teachers by his sweet and sunny disposition, and we trust he will soon fully recover.

Word has been received of the death of Bro. Thomas Hill of Blanchard, Michigan. His daughter, Sr. Jessie Marston, is in very poor health.

Bro. Chester Scott of Milbrook, Michigan, is among those of our number who are quite sick.

After a hard siege of flu, Sr. Leila Whitehead of Chicago, is convalescing nicely.

GORDON LEROY JOHNSON

Gordon Leroy Johnson was born at Hector, Minnesota, on December 22, 1922. Here he lived with his parents, brother and sister until his death on January 30, 1931.

Buddie, as he was commonly called, had attended school two years, where he made many friends among his schoolmates. He will long be remembered as one kind to other little ones about him.

He leaves to mourn his death the father and mother, Bro. and Sr. Roy Johnson, one brother, Frank, and one sister, Vivian. Among a number of other close relatives who are left, we would especially mention his uncle and aunt, Bro. and Sr. Ellsworth Johnson and their children, May, Grace and Phyllis, who have always lived with him.

The father has felt the sorrow of death among his loved ones three times now in a less number of years, having lost his father and mother not long before the death of his son.

Funeral services were conducted at the home by the writer, on Friday, January 23. Words of comfort were given the bereaved from God's Word as it relates to the age to come. Sydney E. Magaw.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.— 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

To Stop Paper.— It will be our policy to follow the general desire of our readers and to continue sending THE RESTITUTION HERALD to subscribers until notified that discontinuance is desired. Therefore, if you do not wish your paper continued, kindly write us to that effect promptly upon expiration of your subscription. When paper is ordered stopped, please remit for any arrearages on subscription.

What's the Goal?

1000 Dollar-A-Month Pledges!!

Everybody!

Sign!

Solicit!

Watch!

TRACTS AND BOOKS

TRACTS

Name	Pages	Dozen	100
The Reasons Why	2	$0.05	$0.30
Essential Truths	1	.05	.30
God's Promises, by Anna E. Drew	2	.05	.30
The Resurrection, by S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
Obedience	2	.05	.30
The Baptist Confession of Faith	2	.05	.30
Who Owns the Wool?	4	.05	.30
The Coming of Christ, S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
What Is a Christian, J. W. Williams	4	.10	.60
Where Do We Go When We Die?	4	.10	.60
Immortality of the Human Soul	4	.10	.60
Shall Never Die	4	.10	.60
The Voice of Prophecy	4	.10	.60
Immortality	4	.10	.60
Did Christ Pre-exist? R. H. Judd	4	.10	.60
The Thief on the Cross, F. E. Siple	4	.10	.60
What Do the Scriptures Teach? Judd	6	.15	.90
What Must I Do to Be Saved?	4	.10	.60
Hell, What Is It	8	.20	1.25
The Coming of Christ, R. A. Curtis	6	.20	1.25
The Rich Man and Lazarus, F. E. Siple	8	.20	1.25
A Few Thoughts	8	.20	1.25
Baptism, S. J. Lindsay	8	.20	1.50

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen	100
God, R. H. Judd	16	.04	.30	1.75
The First Resurrection, Wm. Leask	20	.05	.40	3.00
A Letter to a Friend	32	.10	1.00	8.00
Where Are the Dead?	36	.05	.50	4.00

Name

Pages Each Dozen

The Resurrection, J. L. Wince (For cost of Postage)	32	.03	.12
--	----	-----	-----

BOOKS

Name

Pages Each Per 6

Death Reigned from Adam to Moses, paper cover	58	$0.10
Sin, A. H. Zilmer, paper covers	84	.25
Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	$1.25
Book of Revelation Made Easy to Understand, W. H. Wilson, board cloth	96	.25	1.25
Ancient Mysteries, George Johnston	116	.50
Christ in the Old Testament, R. H. Judd, paper	88	.40
The Way of Life Eternal, Lyman Booth, paper	88	.40
Student's Text Book, Wilson, board cloth	200	.45	2.60
The Visitor, Boice, paper	212	.50
The Mystery of Iniquity, Booth, paper	220	.75
Pine Woods Bible Class, Wilson, board cloth, Emphatic Diaglott, Benjamin Wilson Neatly bound, and in clear type,	480	.85	5.00
		2.50

THE GOSPEL IN SONG

A Book of 287 well-printed Gospel Hymns

	Each	Per 10	Per 100
	Postpaid	Postpaid	Not Postpaid
Manila	$0.40	$3.60	$30.00
Flexible Cloth	.45	4.00	33.00
Board Cloth	.50	4.50	40.00

INTERPRETING THE WORD

(Continued from page 291)

small field, but must have been applied to the whole world with no bounds mentioned. The record of Gen. 2:8 states that God planted a garden eastward in Eden. Verse 9 tells us about the trees there, verse 10, "and a river went out of Eden to water the garden."

After eating of the fruit of the forbidden tree, our first parents were driven out of the garden of Eden. If the garden of Eden included the whole earth, I wonder where they were driven? Another thing, one must not compare the climate of the garden of Eden to our present climate, for a great change took place at the time of the flood.

In regard to the scripture, "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," the margin reads, "dying, thou shalt die." Adam, being created a mortal being, was dependent upon some agency outside of himself for continuation of life. God, having given him life to start with, planted the trees in the garden of Eden for Adam to partake of the fruits thereof, including the tree of life, for him to continue to live. When he was deprived of the fruit of the tree of life, he had no means of prolonging his life. The length of his days depended upon God's mercy toward him. So from that day he was as good as dead, dying inside of the Lord's day of one thousand years.

The person that is sentenced to die, having been found guilty of murder, is as good as dead, even if the sentence is not carried out for some time. A person, informed by a doctor that he has cancer, and nothing he can do will save his life, is as good as dead, even if he does live for some time after this.

Sin is worse than any form of cancer, is no respecter of persons, and has laid its hand upon all of Adam's posterity. "As by one man sin entered into the world and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men for that all have sinned." Rom. 5:12.

This certainly would be a dark, gloomy picture if it stopped there, but we are thankful it does not. God, having made provision for all mankind, sent His own beloved Son, "who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." Heb. 2:9. "For when we were without strength in due time Christ died for the ungodly." Rom. 5:6.

While we were yet sinners Christ died for us. "For by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous." Rom. 5:19. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Because all shall be made alive it does not of necessity mean that all shall share alike. The writer of the above declares there are different orders in resurrection, and everyone will arise in his own order, Christ the Firstfruit, those that are Christ's at His coming, then the end or rest.

There are two orders distinctly taught, a celestial or heavenly, and a terrestrial or earthly. The first man is of the earth, earthy; and as is the earthy, such are they also who are earthy. The natural body comes first; is mortal and is corruptible.

In contrast to this we read, "The last Adam was made a quickening spirit." The second man was the Lord from heaven. As is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

The spiritual body comes after the natural. "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory."

To me the Scriptures teach that there are two kinds of life, the kind we have now, the soulual as given to the first Adam, and the spiritual, the kind given to the second Adam, Christ. Those who are in Christ will receive spirit life, a celestial body and glory.

Those not in Christ, when sin and death are removed, retain the same type of life they always had, the natural or soulual. The tree of life will be restored again as it was in the garden of Eden, as recorded in Rev. 22:2.

Therefore let us lift up our heads in praise and thanksgiving for the provision God has made for the human race, especially for the provision He has made for those who are in Christ.

A FEW INTERESTING QUOTATIONS

"AS LONG AS MEN are unwilling to serve God with their understanding, they withhold from Him half His claims."

—Dr. Dale.

"THERE ARE CHRISTIANS who fear to bring their minds to bear upon their religion, lest their hearts should lose their hold upon it. Surely, there is something terrible in that. Surely, it implies a terrible misgiving and mistrust about their faith. They fear to think, lest they should cease to believe, but really it ought to be out of the heart of their thinking power that their love is born. Therefore love God with all your mind, because your mind, like the rest of you, belongs to Him, and it is not right that you should give Him only a part, to whom belongs the whole."

—Phillips Brooks.

"TO BE AFRAID that truth in any department of knowledge will press its searches too far is to distrust the living God, and to believe in the stagnant god of deism, not the living God of Christianity."—Phillips Brooks.

"LET THE SERVANTS of Christ look less on what divides, and more on what unites."

"He drew a circle that shut me out,
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout,
But love and I had the wit to win,
We drew a circle and took him in."

—Selections by R. H. Judd.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 17, 1931

NUMBER 20

WANTED—MOTHERS

By Lottie E. Young

WE ARE more or less familiar with the men of the Bible, where they lived, and what they did, but beyond knowing that certain women were the mothers or wives of some of the men, their history is comparatively unknown. And yet, thousands of years after they lived, we still love to read the stories so graphically told in the Old Testament of Sarah and Rebekah, Leah and Rachel, Ruth and Naomi, Deborah, leader of her people into battle, and Esther, the queen who risked her life to save that of the Jewish nation.

We do not know very much of the mother of Moses, although a learned man in these days puts her among the three greatest women the world has produced, because of her son. But we have quite a little insight into the life of Hannah, the mother of Samuel, last of the judges of Israel.

Divorces are often granted today for "marital infelicity" or some other high sounding title, but how hard the life of the woman must have been in the old time when she was only one of several wives of the head of the house. This was the trouble in the home of Elkanah, where two wives lived. One of them, Hannah, had no children, which in the eyes of the Hebrews was a great reproach. Naturally she was despised in the eyes of the other wife, even though her husband protested that he loved her.

One day when they were all at Shiloh, where they had gone to offer sacrifices at the tabernacle, Hannah went to the Lord about her trouble. If the Lord would only give her a son, she would not use him as a gift for her own pleasure, or comfort, or benefit in any way, but would set him apart for the service of the Lord alone.

Her faith was not misplaced, for we are told "the Lord remembered her", and the son for whom she so earnestly prayed was given. Time passed and again she stood in the tabernacle with the child she had promised to the Lord. The great offering was made, and Hannah with empty hands but a full heart turned homeward. Little Samuel passed within the gate and for a time we do not hear his name mentioned, except when his mother came up to the feast once a year and brought him a little coat of her own making.

What had this woman which few possess? Courage, born of faith, to take her domestic trouble to God, which is something few of us moderns can boast of!

Courage, also born of faith, to leave the matter entirely in His hands! For she went away, so the record stands, with a cheerful heart, "and her countenance was no more sad."

Courage to renounce all a mother's natural desires, preferences and plans for her child, and to promise to put him absolutely in God's hands to be brought up for His service!

Courage to keep that promise! Plainly she trusted in God, not only as a prayer-answering God, but as one in whose hands she could safely leave everything that was dear to her, even the dearest of all. In other words, she had developed a faith like that of her great ancestor, Abraham.

Nowadays we humans generally have the idea that we can manage our own love affairs to satisfy ourselves, and we do not ask the loving Father for any suggestions. So when domestic troubles arise, they are told to the neighbors, to the pastor, to a fortune teller, to a detective, or to a lawyer. Many go to the divorce court, but few go to God for help.

I have seen children brought to the altar and dedicated to the Lord, but their after life in the home showed very little trace of a trying to follow God's plans. The question is sometimes raised as to whether it is possible to bring up children for Christ in our modern atmosphere. I think it is provided the influence of the world's atmosphere is offset by a Christian atmosphere during the hours they spend in the home. But it takes eternal vigilance, more than most parents are willing to give for their children. In only one of the many homes I have visited has this been done, and the result has justified the confidence of the father and

(Continued on page 314)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

"He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"—Romans 8:32.

EASTER OFFERING

ONLY seven weeks till Easter, perhaps the greatest of the memorial days referring to Christ and to God's work through Him!

It is not too much to say that, according to the instruction of Scripture, the entire plan of salvation would have fallen short had it not been for the death of our Lord and Master, and had it not been for the resurrection that followed His sacrificial death. Easter is more than a gala day. It is more than a mere holiday. It is that one time in the year when, to the Christian, emphasis is given of "life and immortality" which were brought to light by the good news of the resurrection of Christ.

Resurrection was the crowning day. It was the day that exalted Christ above death and above everything that had stood in opposition to Him. A future resurrection day is the one on which all Christian hope depends. Without resurrection there is no hope. "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen."—1 Cor. 15:13.

To create within our fellow men a hope of sharing the first resurrection is perhaps one of the greatest gifts that Christians can bestow upon their fellows. Man in his hopelessness is in despair. The only possible hope that can be given him is that hope which comes through Christ our Lord.

The hope which Christ has offered pertains to life and immortality which are presented by way of the resurrection of the dead. For Christians to bestow this hope upon their fellows necessitates united cooperation in the matter of presenting the gospel of salvation to their fellows. This cooperation requires frequent and definite offerings upon the part of each one. And so we are again reminding the readers of THE HERALD of our recent annual custom of making special Easter offerings for the promotion of our Christian labors.

True, our times are difficult. Many think that they have naught to offer and yet there are others who have equally as much as in former years. Would it not be well for those who are favorably blessed to undertake as much as possible to make offerings sufficient to take care of the deficiency that would otherwise develop because of the inability of some who are financially depressed?

The Christian cause should be the last cause to suffer in time of depression. To love God with one's heart is to cling to Him and His service to the last. On the part of many this rule or this principle is the opposite from their practices. As a result all phases of our work are handicapped. To assist in removing this handicap and in enabling the work to move forward again with energy and devotion, we pray for a hearty Easter offering this year, addressed to the National Bible Institution at Oregon, Illinois. May the offering be such that it will be the means of creating the glad resurrection hope in the lives of many.

STUDIES IN ROMANS

FOR THE past four weeks studies in the book of Romans have been the order of the day in our Bible Training Class at Oregon, Illinois. Difficult as have been some of these studies, yet the membership of the class as well as the director have been presented with abundance of food for thought and of thoughts pointing toward hope. The Apostle Paul, in his great burden of love for his Christian brethren, in his letter to the Romans, endeavored most faithfully to exalt the name of his Lord, that name which was a stumbling-block to the Jews, and which was all but foolishness to the Gentiles.

He boldly announced himself in the beginning of his letter as unashamed "of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation, unto every one that believeth." Romans 1:16. There is no type of manhood that was able to shame Paul for his trust and faith in Christ. Numerous are his given reasons for this saying, as also numerous are his announced evidences of the love and power of God.

SIN

As one of the greatest reasons for man's need of a Savior, for man's need of salvation, Paul cites again and again sin and its consequences. Not only did the sin of Adam deal a deathblow to all Adam's posterity, but the sins of succeeding generations also condemn each generation on its own conduct. "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3:23.

"There is none righteous, no, not one." Rom. 3:10. Thus left to self, man, in every generation, has brought upon himself sin, and by sin, Rom. 8:12, comes death. There is no other cause of death than sin. One must conclude from reading the Scriptures as a whole that had there been no sin in the world, there would have been no death in the world.

After revealing this terrible and saddening fact to the Roman people, Paul then reveals the wonderful love of God in that He craves the faith of the individual toward himself, and that He reckons such faith as righteousness. See Romans 4:5, 24, 25. To the end that man might have faith in God as also in His Son, God gave the Son to be a Mercy Seat, a place of atonement for man. In Rom. 3:25 where we find the word "propitiation", it is in every other instance translated "mercy seat". Christ died for man. God raised Him from the dead. This great love and power of God can but inspire faith into the heart and life of every individual who really, deeply, and truly grasps the great truth of this fact.

And so, Romans teaches man the way to approach Jehovah so as to become the recipient of God's given righteousness and His given favors. Man's salvation is a gift of God. Eph. 2:5. His gift is given to those who exercise faith in Him. By faith the just shall live. Rom. 1:17. Of such a God, of such a Savior, of such a salvation, Paul was unashamed. Well might all mankind walk in these footsteps of Paul.

THE CHALLENGE TO THE CHRISTIAN

By Richard LeCrone

THE ACCOUNT of the boy David's encounter with the giant Goliath has this in common with all other Bible stories: every time we read it over we find a new truth hidden therein. As I read it the last time, I got to wondering whether or not there was any significance in the fact that the stone thrown by David flew unerringly to the only vital spot of the giant's anatomy that could not well be armored, the eyes.

May we compare the two armies, drawn up face to face in battle array, to the opposing forces in Christian life? The evil forces are represented by the army of the Philistines, as opposed to Christian influences as represented by the armies of the Israelites.

The champion of the Philistines separated himself from the army of the Philistines, and advanced a little way toward that of the Israelites. "And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are ye come out to set your battle in array? am not I a Philistine, and ye servants to Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight against me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and serve us." 1 Sam. 17:7, 8.

We know the story of how David was chosen to meet the giant, and how he went armed only with his staff, his sling and five stones. The giant, proud and boastful of his own strength, was scornful when he saw the inexperienced lad coming to meet him with his puny weapons. Hear him: "Am I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves?"

We are also familiar with David's noble reply, which has become a pattern for many Christians. "Then said David to the Philistine, Thou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield: but I come to thee in the name of the Lord of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast defied. This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand: . . . that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel." So saying, he brought into play the little sling that the giant had not even noticed, and with it he slew him.

There are many Goliaths in the world today. They present themselves to the Christian with much the same challenge that Goliath flung at the hosts of Israel. They say words to this effect: "If there be a God in heaven with power, and if He has a Son, Jesus Christ, prove it to me. I have many reasons for believing that there is not, but if you can prove to me that there is, and that He actually has a Son, Jesus Christ, then I, too, will follow Him." And so, proud and boastful, and armed with a thousand and one theories, and statements of scientific men, he defies the Christian to convince him of the truth of the gospel. He closes his ears to the arguments of Christianity on the grounds that he believes them to be effeminate and weak. There is no place in his armor that can be pierced by the staff of argument.

What, then, can the Christian do to convince him? The answer is to do as David did, hit him in the eyes. He still has that sling which the adversary has failed to reckon with—that invisible power of Christianity that must be proved by demonstration. The man of the world can refuse to listen to your arguments, but he can scarcely fail to see the demonstration of that power. It is up to the Christian, then, to get busy, and by his works to prove to the doubter the power of God and of His Son.

Twice, in the gospel of Matthew, we read that the multitudes glorified God, and both times it was because of something that they saw, rather than because of anything that they heard. In one instance, the multitudes brought him a man, sick of the palsy, to be cured, and Christ cured him. At the same time he was careful to tell them why He performed the miracle. "But that ye may know that the Son of God hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he

(Continued on page 310)

SECRET OF A HAPPY DAY

Just to let thy Father do
 What He will;
 Just to know that He is true,
 And be still;
 Just to follow hour by hour
 As He leadeth;
 Just to trust Him, this is all;
 Then the day will surely be Peaceful whatsoe'er befall,
 Bright and blessed, calm and free.

Just to trust, and yet to ask Guidance still;
 Take the training or the task
 As He will.
 Just to take loss or gain,
 As He sends it;
 Just to take the joy or pain,
 As He lends it.
 He who forms thee for His praise
 Will not miss the gracious aim;
 So today and all the days,
 Shall be molded for the same.

Just to leave in His dear hand,
 Little things,
 All we cannot understand,
 All that stings.
 Just to let Him take the care
 Sorely pressing,
 Finding all we let Him bear
 Changed to blessing.
 This is all! and yet the way
 Marked by Him who loves thee best;
 Secret of a happy day,
 Secret of His promised rest.

—Selected.

WHAT IS MAN?

No. 2

By R. H. Judd

*“And the Lord God formed man out of the dust of the ground.”—Gen. 2:7. * * “And out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air, . . . and every living creature.”—Gen. 3:19. * * “And out of the ground the Lord God made to grow every tree.”—Gen. 2:9.*

A PRIVATE correspondent was very much struck with the argument stated in the issue of January twentieth, concerning latent powers in nature awaiting the external controlling power of man to develop. He was at first inclined to the view that differences of climate would produce the results obtained, as instanced in the tomato and the rose. That climate unaided by man could not succeed thus, anyone interested in the subject can readily ascertain from competent sources.

This wonderful fact, however, will be more readily grasped, by some, by reference to the animal world. We have today numbers of varieties of pure bred poultry whose peculiar characteristics have been developed by man, and these could have come about in no other way. The same is true in the canine world. Distinct breeds exist now that did not exist less than three hundred years ago, and never could have existed apart from man's special care in blending and building up the predominant features in each. Still more noticeable, perhaps, is man's splendid success in the raising of horses suited to the hundred and one various uses to which he puts that noble animal.

Indeed, it would be hard to say in which of these last two spheres he had attained the most signal success, for both have been developed to such an extent that their faithful service and affectionate devotion to man call forth our unbounded admiration. Yet the startling truth remains that left to themselves, instead of progress there would be retrogression, a reversion back to the starting point. But for the coming of man these latent powers would have no objective purpose, and no reason for their bestowal.

Equally remarkable are the facts in the mineral world. Vast resources of power lie hidden in the bosom of the earth, each one of which by division, or in varied combinations brought about through man's undaunted research, yield up new and increasing fields of usefulness. To enumerate and specify even a few of these would fill many volumes of intense interest, and when considered separately or in combination, give overwhelming proof that their very existence unquestionably presupposes the coming of such a being as man. It also gives unimpeachable proof of the existence of a living Creator who is “wonderful in working”.

Right here a pertinent question may be asked. If God can put such wonderful powers, active and latent, in vegetable and animal life, and even in inanimate objects, which all will allow are exactly what they seem to be in the body that has been given to each by Him, why should we deny that the same God has given to man, as we see him, the powers he so abundantly manifests? Had these evidences of manifested powers ever been manifested apart from corporate existence, there might be then some force in the contentions of our “orthodox” friends that the dust-formed body is not the man. But never yet has love been manifested apart from corporate life, or hatred apart from bodily form.

Having established the fact that a being such as man, as we see him and know him, was destined to inhabit this earth, let us see what corroboration we can find in the Scriptures as proof. Does Scripture reveal him to be a tangible living corporate personality, or is he as popularly supposed an intangible immaterial entity? Whether existence in any sense can rightly be predicated of immateri-

(Continued on page 310)

FLEE FOR YOUR LIVES

By Samuel E. Haney

“Remember Lot’s wife.”—Luke 17:32.

THERE must be some very important things about the history of Lot’s wife that Jesus would have us keep in mind, for He makes it an epitomized summary of His teaching on this occasion concerning the kingdom and His return. Luke 17:22-37. And inasmuch as Paul informs us (1 Cor. 10:11), “It all happened to them by way of warning for others, and it was written down for the purpose of instructing us whose lot has been cast in the closing hours of the world,” Moffatt, it should therefore be fitting for us to investigate and learn where and how Mrs. Lot’s experience concerns the Christian, particularly in our day and generation.

We turn to Gen. 19 to get at the basis of our subject. The cities of Sodom and Gomorrah and all the inhabitants thereof were about to be destroyed, the exception, v. 15, “And when the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here; lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city.” Previous to this warning, v. 14, Lot had “gone out, and spake unto his sons in law, which married his daughters, and said, Up, get you out of this place; for the Lord will destroy this city.” But he seemed as one that mocked unto his sons in law.

There is a significant point in this history, v. 16: “And while he lingered, the men (angels) laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the Lord being merciful unto him: and they brought him forth, and set him without the city. . . . Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah, brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven. . . . But his wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt”: likely, as a memorial of these events.

Now, as all this happened as ensamples (margin, types) or, warnings, and were written for our admonition or “instruction”, it should behoove the Christian to watch, and recognize God’s signals which He has placed along the pathway of man’s redemption. Jesus emphasizes both the admonitory and the antitypical phases of this whole incident, thus (Luke 17:28-30), “Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but in the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed.”

Jesus continues, elucidating the significance of the foregoing, “Whosoever shall seek to save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life shall preserve it”. Here is an indirect reference to the revealed acts of Lot and his family, including his sons-in-law, during the presence of their angelic guests. The recorded evidence proves two things, namely, Lot recognized the heavenly messengers, and he and his relatives were perplexed over a decision whether to obey or disobey the Lord’s orders, v. 13. Note how the angels had to use physical and verbal force to get them to leave the city: “The angels hastened Lot”; “and while he lingered, the men (angels) laid hold upon his hand”. “Escape for thy life; look not behind thee”; “haste thee, escape thither; for I cannot do any thing till thou be come thither.”

Wicked as conditions were in the plain, while facing death, these God-fearing people hesitated about leaving their old abode and environments that had become so interwoven into their being as to become an integral whole of life. It was this life they sought to “save”, but they would
(Continued on page 314)

MORE THAN ENOUGH

GOD CALLED Moses unto Mount Sinai and there spoke to him, saying, “Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring me an offering: of every man that giveth it willingly with his heart ye shall take my offering. And this is the offering which ye shall take of them; gold, and silver, and brass, and blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine linen, and goat’s hair, and ram’s skins dyed red, and badger’s skins, and shittim wood . . . and let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them.” Ex. 25:2-8.

He then proceeds by telling Moses how he shall make the tabernacle, giving him the exact dimensions and specifications, not only for the tabernacle itself, but also for its furnishings.

In Exodus 36:5-7 we read: “The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the Lord commanded to make. And Moses gave commandment and they caused it to be proclaimed throughout the camp, saying, Let neither man nor woman make any more work for the offering of the sanctuary. So the people were restrained from bringing. For the stuff they had was sufficient for all the work to make it, and too much.”

The N. B. I. is asking you to give the small amount of one dollar a month to the Lord for His work. It has been estimated that if one thousand would do this, there would be sufficient funds to carry on the work. Those who love God with all their heart, with all their soul, and with all their mind will consider this a very small thing to do for Him.

Many have already responded and shown their willingness to serve Him by sending in their pledges. But I feel sure there are many others who love Him just as much and want to show their love in this way, too, who for some reason have not yet joined the Dollar-A-Month Club. If you are one of those, won’t you mail your first dollar now? Don’t put off until tomorrow what should be done today.

Won’t enough of you “give it willingly with your heart”, so that at N. B. I. headquarters they, like Moses of old, will be able to say, “The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work”?—A Dollar-A-Month Member of the Training Class.

THE CHALLENGE TO THE CHRISTIAN

(Continued from page 307)

to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And he arose, and departed to his house. But when the multitudes saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men."

Thus we see that Jesus, the Antitype of David, although He healed where David killed, made use of the same means of convincing the doubter that David did. He proved the power of God by doing. Let us, as Christians, profit by the example of these two men of God, and prove God to the world by our works of faith. Let us hit them in the eyes.

WHAT IS MAN?

(Continued from page 308)

ality is a question, but the view just stated is a prevalent one and calls for examination.

Our duty, then, is to see how man was called into being, and what Scripture represents him to be. In Gen. 2:7 we have the process named and the material from which he was formed.

"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul."

If these declarations are accepted in their plain grammatical sense there can be no room for doubt as to what man is, or the material that goes into his composition, both in lifeless form and living personality.

Before proceeding further let us consider the process by which other forms of life have been produced, and let it be particularly noticed that all are agreed that each differing form is itself the object represented by the name.

Turning then to Gen. 1:12 and 2:9 we have it clearly stated that all living forms of VEGETABLE LIFE were formed "out of the ground", trees, fruit and ornamental, being specifically mentioned and differentiated from the herb, and the grass also named. The name in each instance signifies the object.

Next in Gen. 2:19 we have precisely the same facts stated with reference to ANIMAL LIFE—"the beast of the field, the fowl of the air . . . and every living creature", and "whatever the man called every living creature that was the name thereof." (R. V.)

Is it not then an irresistible conclusion that the being "formed out of the dust of the ground", and differentiated from the rest of life by the name of "man" is in reality the object which bears the name? Every law of precedent and analogy fully corroborates this inevitable conclusion.

But we wish to bring proof upon proof, for once a thing is proved it is astonishing how quickly other proofs (not conjectures) fall into line. It will be our interesting study in further issues to consider some of these, which we think will increase in interest as we proceed.

HOLDING UP THE BRIGHT SIDE

By J. S. Lyon

IT is human depravity that causes men constantly to deplore the faults of others and the moles in their eyes, as though they had none in their own. It is the job of preachers and religious writers, however, to do somewhat along the line of criticism of human weaknesses, that remedies may be suggested and improvements made. But is it not a mistake to over emphasize the faults in the church and in its members, and to hold up too much the picture of the consequences of sin and the certainty of Divine wrath? Would it not be better to center thoughts on the beautiful promises of God and the possibilities of redemption, on those features of God's character that show forth His wondrous love and grace?

It is a certainty that the character of children is damaged when the influences around them are redolent with reproach, reprisals and "don't do its" of every kind. To praise whenever possible, to establish high ideals by example and teaching, and to be patient with failures is a far better practice. It is instinctive to want to do what is forbidden, our heritage from Eden. To forbid a child this and that is to center its thoughts on what we do not want it to think about. To get a child to admire a fine character is certain to accomplish more character building than a thousand reprimands.

When we listen to a sermon on the waywardness of man, harping on things we should have done and have not, we are quite apt to apply the whole condemnation to our neighbors or brethren, instead of to ourselves. In doing this we are prone to temporarily forget, if not entirely forget the good qualities of others. If others criticise so that it comes home to ourselves, we usually do not like it. We are irritated and displeased, instead of uplifted thereby.

However debased a person may be, he is one of God's creatures, serving some useful purpose, though often we can see none from our mortal standpoint. He is the object of Christ's mission which was to seek and save that which was lost. Whatever the present or past state of society, God has declared that it shall end in an age of delight, where every imperfection shall become perfect, every wrong shall be made right, every tongue shall give Him praise.

Let us pity, and not condemn. Let us lift up and not press down. Let us not faint at the enormities of sin, but let us rejoice that if sin abounds, grace doth more abound. The words of Paul in Romans 5:20 lead us to believe that whatever the depths of sin to which man may fall, grace in its fulness is competent to restore.

If the love of a human father is not effaced by the sins of his children and by the corrections he must administer, let us not belittle the love and power of our heavenly Father. If afflictions and sin are experiences necessary for the development of appreciation of a better state, how much better that we not criticise the working out of God's plans, but observe them with appreciation in view of the ultimate promises of God.

Let us turn men's thoughts toward these abundant and glorious promises, rather than to their own weaknesses. Their faults will be shed by the wayside as they turn to the healing light of God's precious gospel. Let us remember that in God's sight there is now no condemnation for them that are in Christ Jesus. Whatever each of us may have accomplished, little or much, it is not we that of our own initiative have done it, but the spirit of God and of Christ that is in us. If we credit our own efforts for what we do that is righteous, we disown the work of grace that Paul insists is most important.

To preach the gospel is to proclaim a joyful message, and not a doleful tirade.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE RESTITUTION HERALD, $2.00 PER YEAR.

TOMB OF JESUS

IN A LECTURE before the Archeological Association of Berlin, Dr. E. L. Sudenik of Hebrew University, Jerusalem, said that a tomb had been discovered at Jerusalem which bore the Aramaic inscription, Jeshua Bar Jehoseph, meaning, "Jesus, Son of Joseph." Dr. Sudenik was careful not to offer his own opinion that the tomb was that of Christ.

Little is known accurately concerning the tomb of Jesus. The early Christian records make little mention of it and the Bible itself pays little attention to it. The only definite description is in the Gospel according to St. John. Matthew, Mark and Luke content themselves with referring to the tomb without giving its location and pass on to the Resurrection. But in John 19:41, the location of the tomb is placed on or near the hill of Golgotha, scene of the Crucifixion.

"Now in the place where he was crucified", the text says, "there was a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid. There laid they Jesus therefore because of the Jews' preparation day; for the sepulchre was nigh at hand."

The site at present accepted generally by Christian belief is the spot in Jerusalem around which has been built the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. The selection of this site was made by Constantine, the first Christian emperor of Rome, in the fourth century after Christ, as the result of a dream and a revelation thought to have been made to his mother, Helen, later canonized by the church.

The location of this site in the heart of Jerusalem, however, has roused skepticism in the minds of scholars. Nevertheless, the place is held in great veneration by all the sects of Christianity and the church is used by them under a mandate first established by the Turkish government and later continued by the British when they took over the mandate for the Holy Land.—Selected by C. H. Netts.

THE CREATOR AND HIS WORKS

By Harvey Krogh

THE MOON, a blood red, oval ball rose from the glossy surface of a beautiful lake. And as it gradually ascended into the starry heavens, it lost its colorful hue and became an ivory sphere. Its likeness gleamed with shimmering whiteness upon the peaceful lake, and as I gazed, I thought of a verse of Scripture that I had once learned: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained; what is man that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" Psalm 8:3, 4.

Have you ever ridden in aeroplane and discovered that it is barely possible to notice a man on the ground when you are not yet far up in the air? You know how tiny a person on the sidewalk appears when viewed from the top of a high building. Man is indeed very small in comparison to the other things of God's unmeasured creation.

We cannot comprehend the depth of the sea, nor can we realize the vastness of the heavens with its countless myriads of stars, each ranking with the sun, some being much larger, though the unlimited space between hides their magnitude. God created all of these things; they are all the work of His fingers. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork."

How little man realizes that God is the Creator of all things! If God should remove His guarding hand, we should all die and return to our dust. "For in whose hand is the soul of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind." Job 12:10. Man has turned away from God and has forgotten Him, but He has not forgotten man, for His infinite love to all is too great for us to know.

And what has man done that God is mindful of him? Man has done nothing; even worse, he has gone astray and has even denied that God is the Creator. God's wrath shall be poured out upon those who blaspheme and do not worship Him, but to those who love Him and praise His holy name, He has promised the richest of His possessions, even immortal life.

If we accept Christ and obey His commandments, then we are children of God, "and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."

Looking back once more on God's works, what are we that He should visit us and thus bless us? He has been exceedingly kind and gracious toward us. Let us praise Him with all our hearts, follow Him and live nearer each day of our lives.

"THE CHRISTIAN HAS FIRST to make a good profession, and then he has to make his profession good. For two men read a Christian's life, while only one reads the Christian's Bible."

I NEVER KNEW

I never knew, before, the world
 So beautiful could be
 As I have found it since I learned
 All care to cast on Thee;
 The scales have fallen from mine eyes,
 And now the light I see.

I never knew how very dear
 My fellow men could be,
 Until I learned to help them with
 A ready sympathy;
 Their inner lives have made me know
 A broader charity.

I never knew how little things,
 As greater ones could be,
 When sanctified by love from One
 Who doth each effort see;
 But now a daily round of care
 May win a victory.

I never knew; and still, dear Lord,
 As through a glass I see,
 And perfect light can only come
 When I shall dwell with Thee;
 When in Thy likeness, I awake,
 For all eternity.

—Author Unknown.

THE SECOND LETTER TO THE CORINTHIANS

By Lyman Booth

THIS EPISTLE was called forth by the effect of the first. Soon after Paul sent it, the terrible riot occurred, headed by Demetrius, the silversmith (Acts 19). Paul, being rescued from danger, proceeded to Troas and awaited with utmost anxiety the return of Titus from Corinth. Days and weeks passed, and still no word came. Paul was weighed down with evil forebodings as to the effect of his first letter (2 Cor. 2:15). At last being unable to remain any longer in Asia, he hurried to Macedonia, and there, probably at Philippi, received news from Titus that conditions in Corinth were quite favorable.

The church in the main had bowed to his reproofs. The incestuous man had been expelled and brought to repentance; the Gentile license had been restrained; confidence between the church and himself had been renewed. But the Judaizers had been reinforced by evil men, bearing "letters of commendation" from some higher authority, and were very arrogant in their ill pursuits.

These letters had attacked him with bitter animosity, misinterpreted his motives, and contradicted his apostolic commission. Stung by such false accusations the apostle wrote a reply, probably about the summer of 57 A. D., in which, with burning words, he defended his apostolic claim, and his pure and sincere motives. At the same time he pictured a most wonderful insight into his life and character.

He rejoiced in the consolation he received from God, by which he was enabled to comfort others in trouble, affirming that both sorrows and joys contribute to salvation. He gave a full description of his preaching and suffering for the gospel, and he declared his earnest longing after eternal life. He spoke modestly of the faithful discharge of his apostolic duties and his earnest efforts to bring men to Christ.

In opposition to his enemies he vindicated his conduct and preaching. He expressed a zealous fear lest they should be corrupted and led astray from the simplicity of the gospel, and declared he was not a whit less than the chief apostle. He expressed a fear lest he should not find them such as they should be, and he exhorted them kindly to examine themselves and prepare for his contemplated coming, as he should not spare the guilty.

The Corinthian Epistles may appear to some readers less interesting than several others, because they refer mainly to the circumstances peculiar to the church at Corinth. Yet they are the more interesting, because directions, exhortations, and admonitions, which may be suited to the many, ordinary, every day incidents of life, are communicated by them. These could not be represented with the same effect in a general discourse on the great doctrines and duties of Christianity.

The most remarkable feature in this epistle is the goodness of his chosen cause, and the power of God to sustain him in it. Paul was at that time opposed by a powerful party wherein authority, reputation, and interests were mainly concerned, and who were ready to seize on everything which could be used to discredit Paul. It is wonderful to see how firmly he insisted on his apostolic authority. Without the least reservation he appealed to the miraculous powers which he had exercised at Corinth.

He never shrank from the contest, nor ever expressed any fear of some discovery being made that would prove unfavorable to the cause which he labored to sustain. With great boldness, yet modestly and meekly, with firm decision he expressly declared that his opposers were the ministers of evil, and he threatened them with miraculous judgments. As a result many of their deluded members were brought to repentance and were reestablished in the faith.

It cannot be conceived that a stronger testimony, not only of integrity, but of divine authority or inspiration can exist. If there had been anything of the nature of an imposture among the Christians, it would have been almost impossible but that their purity of conduct would have disclosed it.

The second epistle to the Corinthians is a very careful, systematic, and intellectual treatise. It is an unstudied letter, in which Paul gives vent to the natural feelings of a warm and sympathetic heart. It may be divided into five sections.

In the first, after the greetings and references to the trials through which he had passed in Asia, he defends himself from the charge of levity in delaying his intended visit (chapters 1 and 2). Second, he speaks fully on the grandeur of his apostolic mission, giving its source (3 and 4:6); then of its difficulties (4 and 7:5 and 10); next its motives (5:11 to 6:10).

Third, he warns his readers as to the danger of intercourse with heathens, and he accepts the repentance of the incestuous person (6:11 and 7:16). Fourth, he appeals to their liberality in behalf of the poor saints at Jerusalem (8:9 and 5). In defending his apostolic mission, he relates the story of his life of sacrifice and almost martyrdom on more than one occasion.

GOD HONORS THE HUMAN BODY

IN THESE DAYS when we hear on every side the Buddhist philosophy that mind is everything; mind is all, when people regard their bodies as garments to be thrown off when old and worn out by disease and never needed or desired any more forever, it is well to pause and enquire how God estimates the human body. Coming to the Bible, the only revelation of God's mind concerning this matter, we find first that God has honored the human body by recording its creation. Gen. 2:7. The Lord formed man of the dust of the ground. In this respect the body is honored above both soul and spirit, for their creation is never related. If there is a man without a body, the beginning of such a man, God never considered worth putting on record.

Second, we find that God has honored the human body by assuring it of continued existence, in that He arranged for its reproduction. Gen. 1:28. Third, God has honored the human body by calling it "man".

Is it not a scriptural fact that wherever you find a human body, you find a man? Look at that bier near the cemetery of Nain! There was a dead man being carried out, dead, but a man still. Listen while Jesus cries, "Young man, I say unto thee, Arise." So the man that died was the man that Jesus told to arise, and He restored him alive to his widowed mother.

Let us look at the grave of Lazarus. The record says that Lazarus sickened and died. Jesus came and found him dead. He said, "Where have ye laid him?" Soon He stood beside the grave. Was Lazarus there? His body was, but was the man that had died? Yes, the same man. Jesus said, "Lazarus, come forth." And he that was dead came forth.

So we find that God has honored man, the human body. And though he die, He has perfected His plan of life for the human body by a resurrection from the dead.—Selected by Mrs. A. J. Chaplin.

THE DAY DAWN

By John Denchfield

"We have also a more sure word of prophecy: whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts".—1 Peter 1:19.

A PORTION OF THE Rig Veda of the Indians, in describing the dawn, reads as follows: "She shines upon us, like a young wife, rousing every living being to go to his work. The fire had to be kindled by men; she brought light by striking down darkness. She rose up, spreading far and wide, and moving toward everyone. She grew in brightness, wearing her brilliant garment. The mother of the morning clouds, the leader of the days, she shone gold-colored, lovely to behold."

Many are the poems which have been written attempting to describe the glorious dawn. Yet, great though the writer and his words may be, they are insufficient. One must watch the approach of the dawn in all its grandeur, becoming filled with mingled feelings of delight and awe, to know its indescribable qualities.

Since almost the beginning of time, man has been looking forward to an even greater dawn, the Day Dawn, the coronation of Christ our King, which will be the actual dawn of a new day, a new world, a new kingdom in all its glory, perfection and purity.

David, the sweet psalmist of Israel, said, in his last words, "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain." 2 Sam. 23:2-4.

David was crowned as king with all great pomp and glory. People were gathered together from all of Israel to voice their acceptance and their praise unto him. David, being greatly pleased and overjoyed at the occasion, wrote a psalm in praise to his God. This, the twenty-first Psalm, points forward to the dawn, the coronation of Christ.

"The king shall joy in thy strength, O Lord, and in thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice! Thou settest a crown of pure gold on his head. For the king trusteth in the Lord and through the mercy of the Most High he shall not be moved."

Just as every night we look for the coming day, now, in this period of darkness, we look toward the coming dawn. As we journey, we mount hill after hill, always pressing on toward the goal, "the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus".

Soon the dawn will come, the crowning day of the King of kings and Lord of lords! May we all be found acceptable that we may reign and live with Him in the future glorious kingdom.

FLY FOR YOUR LIVES

(Continued from page 309)

have lost it, had they not been driven from the danger zone. Hence, they were forced to "lose their lives"—what they considered life, in order to "preserve life", or save it alive.

As a concluding thought Jesus says (Luke 17:34), "I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left." Verses 35 and 36 convey the same thought. This does not mean that one man was a Christian and the other man was not. It is simply another way of teaching the lesson of Matthew 25:2 and 10: "And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. . . . And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came: and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut."

The word "night", Luke 17:34, means the same as in John 9:4, "The night cometh, when no man can work"—faith in the blood of Jesus Christ having become entirely negligible. It should not require an exegete nor a sage to recognize conditions "in the days of Lot" to be a type of the wickedness and the unrepentant conditions of the human race today. Time being no factor with God (Rom. 4:17), the replica precedes the original picture.

All nations are rapidly approaching their doom. We are at the Laodicean period of the church, when a lukewarmness pervades the erstwhile zealous Christian: a time when Jesus is standing at the door of the hearts of His indifferent ones, saying, "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Rev. 3:14-20. To the writer this seems like the final announcement just preceding our Lord's return in person, for those prepared to meet Him. The dear Redeemer "knocks". He wants to get in, but cannot unless the "door" is opened for Him.

Angels were sent to persuade Lot and his family to flee for their lives, but Jesus comes to rescue His wandering disciples. He pleads with them to mentally and spiritually leave the doomed cities (spiritual habitation) of Babylon, ere it is too late.

Reader, should you be of the world (Babylon) don't be like Lot's sons-in-law who "mocked" and jeered their father-in-law, and refusing to leave the plain, died in the holocaust.

Paul dictates the procedure of escape in Romans 12:1, 2, "Well then, my brothers, I appeal to you by all the mercy of God to dedicate your bodies as a living sacrifice, consecrated and acceptable to God; that is your cult, a spiritual rite. Instead of being moulded to this world, have your mind renewed, and so be transformed in nature, able to make out what the will of God is, namely, what is good and acceptable to him and perfect." Moffatt.

Bible students hold different ideas about the degree of severity and duration of the "time of trouble such as never was," but there is one thing that all should agree upon, namely, that the "trouble" is already manifesting itself, and that we should "hasten", and not "linger", but "escape for our lives"; "not looking behind", having but one objective—Jesus Christ, the Ark of safety.

WANTED — MOTHERS

(Continued from front page)

mother when they devoted their baby to the service of the Lord.

In how many homes is there a family altar? In how many is the Bible studied, or are the Sunday school lessons prepared by even good sized children, even though the parents may pass in the community as "fine Christian people"? Are we not rather more desirous that our young folks should be "big money makers", or "smart politicians", rather than have them follow the advice of the apostle Paul to the young Timothy "to preach the word"?

Do you suppose Hannah ever regretted giving her baby boy to the Lord? She surely lost nothing by it, for she had the comfort of knowing that she was the mother of the greatest servant of God in her time, and that though she had given him to God, he was still her son.

In every home into which THE RESTITUTION HERALD enters, may the words of Joshua be carried out: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord".

SEEING TO ONE'S OWN

WHEN Nehemiah accomplished his great task of rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem, he applied to it most of the principles of cooperative industry. The entire work well deserves the study of modern masters of labor. And one of the fruitful rules which he used was this, that the builders should work, as far as possible, opposite their own houses. Thus they would have borne in upon them all the time that what they were doing was for the defense of their dear ones and their homes. Their wives and children would look on and encourage them in their toil. They would have a sense of personal responsibility for the work, a personal interest in it.

So in all our larger labors, for the community, the state, the nation, and the world, let us build over against our own house. All successful toil begins at home. The farthest outreach of human endeavor is only an extension of what we find hinted to us and urged upon us right in our own families.

All needs of the most distant lands are mirrored on that mimic stage. If we are not a reformer at home, let us not pretend to be a reformer abroad. If we are not builders in our own dooryard, we shall erect no worthy structure elsewhere. As we do the thing that is next to us, we shall find other things to do next to those things, and so on and out.

— Selected.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"STUDY TO SHEW THYSELF APPROVED UNTO GOD."—2 TIMOTHY 2:15.

BEREAN ORGANIZATION IN ILLINOIS

THE ILLINOIS State Berean Society has been organized for about thirty-three years. We have seven societies at the present time. Each has its own local officers and most of the meetings are held at the church once a week. The Chicago society meets once every two weeks at the homes of its members. During the winter the Salem society meets at its members' homes, generally at Martinsville.

The officers of the Illinois Berean Society are as follows: president, first and second vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer. Its committees are the literary, junior home study, and sunshine committees.

The duty of the president is to preside at the annual meeting and to carry out such duties during the year as preparing and providing stationery for each officer and chairman of each committee, informing officers and committee chairmen of his or her duties, assisting in organizing new societies, encouraging the older groups, etc. The vice-presidents assist the president whenever possible.

The secretary endeavors to keep a record of every Berean member in the state. She also tries to get a report of each society every month. In order to do this, she sends a blank to be filled out to every local secretary. These blanks are printed with space for name of society, time and place of meeting, membership, average weekly attendance, interest and remarks. The secretary carries on any correspondence that the president thinks necessary, sends reports to the national secretary, and a monthly report to the Berean editor.

The duty of the treasurer is to hold in custody the funds of the society and to pay out money upon order of the president. She also makes an annual report of all receipts and expenditures.

The chairman of the Literary committee writes to different Illinois Bereans asking them for articles for the Berean page.

The chairman of the Home Study committee teaches Bible lessons through correspondence. In order to do this, she gets in touch with children who do not belong to a junior Berean society. Each child is sent lessons, which he prepares according to instructions and sends back to his teacher. These are then graded and returned.

The Sunshine committee attempts to search out and encourage those who are sick or afflicted in any way. Often a number are asked to send letters or card showers and in some cases where one is confined unusually long, a small gift or plant is sent to help brighten the long, lonely hours. The chairman also writes letters of encouragement to those newly baptized.

The dues of each member are ten cents per month. Each local society keeps one-half and pays one-half into the state treasury.

Our work has progressed very nicely, although new societies are not being added as quickly as we would like. One society was discontinued last year. The membership seems to remain about the same while the average attendance is slightly increased. The interest seems to be fine in every society.

Edna Wood, State Secretary.

The above article was written in compliance to a request.

WHY BE A CHRISTIAN?

A CHRISTIAN is a follower of Christ. Christ came teaching glad tidings of a kingdom to be established in the earth, with himself as the King on David's restored throne. Those who heard Jesus' message, as He told it, seemed to understand and be moved by it. His followers understood also the importance of being baptized in water, in the name of Jesus, to become adopted children of God.

The Christian way of living is the best in the end. The standard is so high that but few are able to live it as perfectly as they would like. Everything that our heavenly Father asks of us to do in the Christian life is for our own good in this life, and we cannot undertake anything that offers so great a reward in the end. Perhaps the greatest gift is an endless life filled with service for God in the ages to come. We ought to love God and honor the name of Jesus.

Josephine Hammond, California, Age 14.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 10; Ohio, 7; Iowa, 3; California, 3; Indiana, 3; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Louisiana, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

JESUS helped every one He could, but there were many others who needed help. Therefore, He appointed seventy men, and sent them by twos into every city and village where He could not go. He said to them, "The harvest is great, but the labourers are few. Pray the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth labourers into his harvest."

There were many people ready to be saved, but there were so few laborers or teachers who could tell them how to be saved. Jesus compared them to lambs among wolves. The wolves were false teachers and others who opposed Jesus.

These seventy laborers were told to take no money, food or shoes. They were to salute no man and whenever they entered a house they were to say, "Peace be to this house." If they were received courteously, as was the custom among eastern people, they were to remain in that one house. That home would consequently be blessed, the blessing paying for the food and care of the disciple. They were to eat whatever was set before them, which was not easy for a Jew, because they were very particular about certain foods and how they were prepared.

But, best of all, power was given these missionaries to heal sick people and to declare that the kingdom of God was nigh. However, if any city would not receive these messengers of good news and love, the messengers were to go on their way. They were to say that they wiped the dust of the city off against the citizens. Thus the citizens would lose a wonderful blessing.

Time passed, and the seventy came back very happy, and saying, "Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." They must have been received well everywhere. This made Jesus very happy, too, and He said, "I thank thee, O Father, that you have helped these humble workers rather than the wise and great."

Jesus knew that God did what seemed best in His sight and had delivered all things to Jesus.

Our lesson tells us that "no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father, and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him." They are one, and work together. Through Jesus and His teachings we learn more of God, for Jesus came to show the love of God, His Father, to man.

DO WE receive God's helpers and their messages with joy?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Luke 9:1-6 and Luke 10:17-24.
2. Learn verse 22 of the lesson.
3. Tell what you like best in this lesson.

We Believe—the signs of Christ's return as told in Matthew 24.

A CHILD'S PRAYER

"Happy is that people whose God is the Lord."

"Dear Heavenly Father: I thank thee that I live in a country where so many of the people know and love Thee, and where our great presidents whom we honor this month set us so noble an example of faith in Thee and courage to do the right. Help me and all my friends to obey Thy laws of good will and unselfishness. May we help to make our country better by all that we do and all that we say, so that the spirit of America may be true, and brave, and kind like the spirit of Washington and of Lincoln, and so like the spirit of Christ. Amen."—Rev. R. W. Barstow.

A HAPPY DAY

A heart full of thankfulness,
A thimbleful of care;
A soul of simple hopefulness,
An early morning prayer.

A smile to greet the morning with;
A kind word as the key
To open the door and greet the day,
Whate'er it brings to thee.

A patient trust in Providence,
To sweeten all the way,
All these, combined with thoughtfulness,
Will make a happy day.

—Anonymous.

FRIENDS, in this world of hurry and work and sudden end,
If a thought comes quick of doing a kindness to a friend,
Do it that very moment! Don't put it off, don't wait!
What's the use of doing a kindness if you do it a day too late?
—Selected.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON IX. — March 1, 1931

JESUS SENDING FORTH MISSIONARIES

Luke 9:1 to 10:24

Devotional Reading: Romans 10:8-15

GOLDEN TEXT

The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest. — Luke 10:2.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Christ's Victory Program: Individual, Personal Evangelism.

Basic Truth. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16:15.

I. The Waiting Harvest. Jesus could never look at the multitudes, scattered, leaderless, purposeless, without having a great, overpowering compassion for their lost condition well up within His heart. It would seem almost as though the sin and woe in the world could never be all alleviated, there is so much everywhere. The work that Jesus was able to do, and did do, in His ministry, stupendous as that was, including all the unrecorded miracles of Jesus and His helpers, could cover only a pitifully limited territory and a brief period of years. And the grand total of all the converts His followers have been able to make through all the centuries of the church's existence is still far, far short of adequately taking care of the field. At every tick of the clock someone somewhere ends this life's course, more than 4000 every hour, day and night, and more than 100,000 every day, dying in their sins without the knowledge of the glad tidings of salvation the Savior came to proclaim!

It must have been some such thought which wrung from the loving Savior's heart the words recorded in our memory verse, and in Matt. 9:36-38: "But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then said he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest!"

II. Recognizing Our Obligation. Can we be a true servant of Jesus Christ and not share His anxiety for the souls living everywhere, dying everywhere, outside of Him? Can we see the overwhelming need that confronts every Christian believer, every church organization? Our nation today is appalled at the needs of the multitudes made destitute by the unemployment crisis. Much more ought the Church of God to be appalled at still greater multitudes who are yet destitute of life eternal because of sin! They are everywhere among us; we live with them, work with them, play with them; and what are we doing to help?

III. Organizing for Evangelism. We can never hope to reach all people, but we certainly can do more effective work than we are.

The Master himself gives us the cue, when He sends out the seventy. Personal evangelism is the answer, each believer cooperating with every other. Every Christian, however humble, ought to be a missionary to those with whom he is thrown in contact.

Churches should organize their evangelistic appeal. Don't leave it all for the minister. He is only one man, and even Christ had to appoint helpers. Multiply many times the results your pastor or evangelist can bring about by giving him a working force of faithful, devoted helpers whom he can send out into every place whither he himself would come. And above all, PRAY, as Jesus commands, that God will send forth laborers — that He will send forth you!

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Our Missionary Task. Picture in your mind, if you can, a man who has been employed to run a farm. His employer is gone for a year's tour of the world, and has left him in complete charge of the farm. He has been instructed to run it in the way that he thinks will be to his employer's best interest.

Let us watch him as he goes about his employer's business. It is early fall and he has a large field of grain which is almost ripe. Upon examination he finds that the old granary is likely to prove insufficient, and so he decides to build a new one. The plans are made; the carpenters are put to work; soon there stands upon the farm a beautiful new, modernly-equipped granary. By this time the grain is ripe and ready to harvest; he throws open the doors of the granary and says, "The granary is here; if the grain would be saved, all it has to do is come and get into the granary." Then he sits down and waits for the grain to harvest itself. I leave it to your imagination to determine how much of the grain was harvested and how his employer approved of his method of harvesting grain.

Ridiculous, isn't it? No sane man would do such a thing.

Christ, giving the parable of the man who was journeying into a far country, said to His servants, "Occupy till I come." Luke 19:13. And in appointing them over His business He said to them: "The harvest truly is great." They went forth with hearts full of the Holy Spirit, and started the harvesting that is not yet completed, the harvesting of men for Christ.

We must have churches to bring men in, and there keep them pure until the Master returns to claim them. But let us not make the same mistake as did the man in our parable, and simply throw open our church doors and expect men to harvest themselves. They must be harvested, and if they are not, we shall have to explain to our Master when He returns. — J. R. L.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the reapers are few, beseech, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send out labourers to reap it." — Luke 10:2, Diag.

Jesus, realizing how great a work there was to be done, saw the need for extra workers. His telling them to beseech the Lord that more be sent shows His feeling for a special need.

Matthew tells us that as Jesus went from place to place teaching and preaching and healing all kinds of diseases, He was moved with compassion on the multitudes that followed, for they were as sheep having no shepherd. Matt. 9:35, 36.

No wonder He realized the harvest was plentiful when such numbers followed Him. They needed care and that was why He wanted more workers to help reap the harvest, or, in other words, He wanted more helpers to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom, because people were eager to hear it just then.

— L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Laborers Together With God.

Christ stated His mission very briefly when He said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Luke 19:10. He began His work by preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Matt. 4:17. He chose twelve to help Him and sent them forth to proclaim the kingdom of God. Luke 9:2. After this, the Lord appointed seventy others, sending them out to preach the kingdom of God. Luke 10:9.

After His resurrection, He remained with His disciples forty days, instructing them in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Before ascending, He gave the commission to His disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and thereby delegated to the church the work He had begun.

And while the church is carrying on, it should have the "mind which was also in Christ Jesus," Phil. 2:5, and that is, "I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." John 5:30. "The Father hath not left me alone, for I do always those things that please him." John 8:29.

— F. A. S.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

AN INCREASE IN MEMBERSHIP

We should have mentioned some two or three weeks ago that the Bible Training class has recently had an increase in its numbers. Three young people of Oregon, finding that they had the time to give to the work, have been regular and studious attendants for the last three or four weeks. During this time the class enrollment has been ten.

ENOUGH HAS BEEN SAID

The editors of The Herald have decided to bring to a close the discussion of the penalty placed upon Adam. Manuscripts on this subject are still arriving, but we feel that sufficient has been said on both sides of the question, and studies may be more profitably pursued personally by those interested. We thank one and all for the courteous manner in which these questions have been handled.

BACK HOME

Bro. Ward Lindsay, who is in the employ of the Carnation Milk Products Company at Schulenburg, Texas, spent a few days of last week in his old home town of Oregon, Illinois, visiting with relatives and friends.

CHICAGO SERVICES

Bro. C. E. Lapp of the Training Class will speak for the Chicago congregation on Sunday, February 22.

The place of meeting will be the Austin-Whitehead home at 5439 Ohio St. A full attendance is urged.

CHANGE AT CASEY

Our preaching day at the Restitution Church, Casey, Illinois, has been changed from the first Sunday in each month to the fourth Sunday. Sunday School convenes every Sunday at 9:30 a. m.

OUR ANNUAL REPORTS

For more than two weeks past your secretary and his bookkeeper have been tracing records of former years and making necessary adjustments. This trying and tedious work has been practically completed, but during the period it has been impossible to prepare a report weekly for The Herald, and as we must now stop and work on the next Sunday School Quarterly, the full Annual Report must be postponed.

F. L. Austin.

A SURPRISE AT DIXON

On Thursday evening, February 12, a company of fifty people of the Dixon and Oregon churches gathered at the Dixon church and completely surprised Bro. L. E. Conner, pastor of the Dixon church, in honor of his seventieth birthday anniversary, which he had celebrated on February 9. The evening was spent socially and at the conclusion of the refreshments Bro. Austin gave a toast to Bro. Conner, to which he responded, telling of his early life and the struggles incident to his education.

On February 15, Bro. Conner gave the forty-fifth anniversary sermon of his ministry. The Dixon people feel greatly strengthened and encouraged by the labors of Bro. and Sr. Conner, and they anticipate a future filled with blessings under their leadership.

A NOBLE EXAMPLE

We feel that the following words from one of our elderly sisters in North Carolina should be made known to all of our readers. This sister is a subscriber to the Dollar-A-Month pledge. In sending in her February installment, she writes that she has been unable to collect the little interest money that is due her and that she has received but $2.50 income since she remitted in January. Of this she has remitted ninety cents on her Dollar-A-Month pledge.

One can but commend anyone who is thus devoted and loyal to the Master. We cannot help but wonder how many there are, young people as well as elderly ones, who throughout the year have been receiving their regular monthly or weekly salary checks, almost equal, if not quite, to the checks of former times and yet who are not contributing the least bit to Christian work. Brothers and sisters, let us each one stop again to realize something of the responsibilities and duties resting upon Christians for the dissemination of the gospel for the upbuild of others.

ENTHUSIASM FOR KOKOMO

A letter received from Sr. O. J. Parker of Kokomo, Indiana, breathes out something of the joy and gladness, of the thankfulness and appreciation to Bro. Conner for having presented his services to them over Sunday, February 8. The little church there had had no pulpit work for nearly a year. Bro. Conner reports that when he arrived Sunday morning there were 61 in attendance for Sunday School. Loyal devotion and labor have been the means of maintaining a good, lively Sunday School in Kokomo. The morning sermon was listened to by practically the same number of people; while the evening sermon was enjoyed by nearly a hundred people. Bro. Conner brings high praises regarding the efforts of the little flock at Kokomo, Indiana.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

The Grand Rapids church rejoiced on February 8 to have brothers A. K. Richardson and A. G. Townsend back at services. Bro. Richardson, one of the elders, has been a most faithful member of the cause in Michigan for many years, but for some time has been suffering from arthritis. But whenever he is able to go anywhere it is to church that he goes, and not somewhere else.

Sr. Chas. Simpson is still far from well and has recently had a thorough hospital examination. Our prayers rise on her behalf.

Church activities are moving nicely. Attendance all day on February 8 was extra large and attentive. At the evening service the Boy Scouts attended in a body.

On February 11 the pastor and wife had the opportunity of spending the day with church folks and friends at Coats Grove, where he spoke to the "Do Good to Others" club in the afternoon. Bro. Eddie Coats, for many years defender of the faith in that community, is in poor health.

All are anxiously looking forward to the opening of spring, and trusting that labor conditions will improve and remove much of the present suffering.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

INDIANA REPORT FOR JANUARY

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 2; Lucerne, 1; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Hillisburg, 2.

Money received: Pleasant View, $21.25; Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $12.00; North Salem, $6.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; Hillisburg, $25.00. From Conference Board for November and December, $20.30. Conference Board for January, $10.25.

Expense: $14.50.

Note: We want to thank Bro. Wiseley, of Argos, for help on work outside of Indiana, also Sr. Sylvester Logan, Plymouth, for a pair of nice blankets.

If you are interested in signs of the times, we still have some 24 page tracts at ten cents per copy on that subject.

J. H. Anderson,
Michigantown, Indiana.

THE TENTH ANNUAL CONFERENCE of the Church of God

That all may know well in advance the date of the next General Conference session, notice is hereby given that same will, D. V., be held at Oregon, Illinois, August 4 to 16.

In making this advance announcement, it is for the accommodation of all in making plans thereto. It is needless to say that the largest possible attendance is desired and that the greatest possible interest in and preparation for said conference will be made.

F. L. Austin, Sec'y.

THOMAS HILL

Thomas Hill, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of the Blanchard, Michigan, community passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jessie Marston, recently. Funeral services were conducted from the Church of God.

Hugh Thomas Hill, was born in Peel County, Ontario, on May 27, 1852, and died when past his seventy-eighth year. He came to Michigan in 1879, and was married to Rosetta Decker on December 17, 1881. To this union were born six daughters.

He was baptized by Elder John Bower in his early married life, and united with the Church of God. Bro. Hill was faithful with his money, with his time, in his devotion to God, for morning Bible reading and prayer were part of each day's duties. He was never too tired to get the team ready (long before autos were heard of), and the family of six daughters, himself and wife, with any guest present, were loaded in the wagon, or buggy, and driven to the place of worship, always on time for service. Such consecrated lives are sadly missed in church service, and indeed in every condition of life. But with joy we look forward to the glorious awakening, for we believe these dear ones will be among those who will be gathered at the rapture of the saints, when the dear Lord comes to make up His jewels.

Sr. Hill fell asleep on July 20, 1927, and Bro. Hill has not cared to live since, but was brave enough to do his best for all, as long as his strength held out.

He leaves to mourn his loss, one sister, Mrs. Snell, of Clare, Michigan; five daughters, Iva, Jessie, Grace and Hazel of near Blanchard, and Zelma Powell of Eureka, California, and other relatives and friends.

May the kind and merciful Father give strength to the far away daughter, and keep her true to father's God. And we pray for the invalid, but faithful daughter, Jessie, who has been so true and faithful to father all these four lonely years, since mother was taken out of their lives.

M. A. Woodward.

HUGH M. McINTURFF

Our hearts were made sad when on Saturday afternoon, January 31, 1931, death again came into our midst and took our much beloved brother and elder, H. M. McInturff. The loss to the church is equalled only by the loss to his family.

Bro. McInturff was a man devoted to his family and to his God. He lived for both to the best of his ability, creating a beautiful and inspiring home life, and admonishing loyalty to God by both word and example.

He leaves one sister, Sr. Laura McInturff, his wife, Sr. Esta McInturff, and four fine children, Robert, Eunice, Gertrude and Helen, all loyal members of the church.

In October Bro. McInturff went to the Blue Ridge Sanatorium and remained there until it was definitely known that he could not be helped. During his stay there he was joined by his sister who remained at his bedside, administering loving service until the very last. She is the last of a fine family.

One of the local papers had this to say about Bro. McInturff:

"Mr. McInturff was a man of unusual intelligence and judgment, and his advice and counsel were frequently sought by his friends and neighbors in solving their problems. He was an obedient son and a devoted husband and father. His home life was a fine example of Christian fortitude, patience, and forbearance. . . Hugh McInturff was beloved by all who knew him, and his circle of friends covered a wide scope of his native county and elsewhere, and within the bounds of his large following of friends. He was without a known enemy. . . . He leaves to his relatives and friends the memory of a well spent life, a rich heritage, and for himself he has gained the eternal reward of the faithful."

About 125 automobiles brought over five hundred of his friends to his funeral. A large percentage of these followed on to the Toms Brook Cemetery, where he was laid to rest to await the morning of the first resurrection.

Our sympathy, very best wishes, and our prayers go out to his sister and to his family. May God give them of His great comfort in this hour of their bereavement, and may He grant them strength to continue the faith with the degree of steadfastness of him whom they mourn. Harry A. Sheets.

FRANK W. GRAS

Frank W. Gras was born on February 20, 1857, and died on December 4, 1930. He was of a family of six children, four of whom are still living. Besides his wife, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Chester Vance of Woodstock, Ohio, and Miss Viola of Cincinnati; two sisters, Mrs. Robert Houston of Springfield, and Mrs. J. C. Myers of Cincinnati; two brothers, William and Herman, the latter of Springfield. Mr. Gras resided in Springfield at the time of his death. Neither he nor Mrs. Gras are members of our faith. Mrs. Gras is a sister of our late lamented brother, J. J. Hartman, of the Lawrenceville church, near Springfield.

I am sorry that the above obituary was laid aside and overlooked for so long.

Jas. A. Patrick,

MRS. CLARA UNDERWOOD

The neighborhood of the Brush Creek (Ohio) church was shocked more than it has been for some time when the news was broadcast that Sr. Clara Underwood had died very suddenly on Sunday, February 1. Sr. Underwood was born July 21, 1888. She was married to Raymond Underwood, Dec. 16, 1909. To them were born four children, Albert, Luella, George and Esther. Besides her husband and children, she leaves to mourn her death, one brother, Lorenzo W. Antonides of Argos, Indiana, besides a host of other relatives and friends. One sister died in infancy, and her parents preceded her in death a number of years ago. She lived all her life in this neighborhood, and few, if any, were better known and loved. She had been a member of the Brush Creek Church of God for a number of years and was one of its most faithful members.

We laid her to rest in the cemetery by the church to await the call of the Master.

Jas. A. Patrick,

CATHERINE RITENOUR

Catherine Ritenour was born May 22, 1847, and died January 26, 1931. Sr. Ritenour united with our church many years ago and continued in the faith to the end of her life. She was a good wife and mother, and she leaves a number of fine children, capable of upholding the noble things for which she stood. She was laid to rest in the Ritenour family graveyard in Powell's Fort Valley, there to await the resurrection call at the coming of our Master. Our sympathies are extended to all those who mourn her decease.

Harry A. Sheets.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. F. M. Cawby; J. Conaway; Mrs. Lucy Lapp; R. L. Funk; Alma Orr; Seraphine Cleek; A. K. Richardson; Mrs. A. B. Sudbury; Mrs. Cora Cole; Helen Kee; Ellen Reisener; Leona Sharp; Edwin Dopp; L. A. Crouch.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates. — 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

TRACTS AND BOOKS

TRACTS

Name	Pages	Dozen	100
The Reasons Why	2	$0.05	$0.30
Essential Truths	1	.05	.30
God's Promises, by Anna E. Drew	2	.05	.30
The Resurrection, by S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
Obedience	2	.05	.30
The Baptist Confession of Faith	2	.05	.30
Who Owns the Wool?	4	.05	.30
The Coming of Christ, S. J. Lindsay	2	.05	.30
What Is a Christian, J. W. Williams	4	.10	.60
Where Do We Go When We Die?	4	.10	.60
Immortality of the Human Soul	4	.10	.60
Shall Never Die	4	.10	.60
The Voice of Prophecy	4	.10	.60
Immortality	4	.10	.60
Did Christ Pre-exist? R. H. Judd	4	.10	.60
The Thief on the Cross, F. E. Siple	4	.10	.60
What Do the Scriptures Teach? Judd	6	.15	.90
What Must I Do to Be Saved?	4	.10	.60
Hell, What Is It	8	.20	1.25
The Coming of Christ, R. A. Curtis	8	.20	1.25
The Rich Man and Lazarus, F. E. Siple	8	.20	1.25
A Few Thoughts	8	.20	1.25
Baptism, S. J. Lindsay	8	.20	1.50

Name	Pages	Each	Dozen	100
God, R. H. Judd	16	.04	.30	1.75
The First Resurrection, Wm. Leask	20	.05	.40	3.00
A Letter to a Friend	32	.10	1.00	8.00
Where Are the Dead?	36	.05	.50	4.00

Name

Pages Each Dozen

The Resurrection, J. L. Wince
(For cost of Postage) 32 .03 .12

BOOKS

Name

Pages Each Per 6

Death Reigned from Adam to Moses, paper cover 58 $0.10
 Sin, A. H. Zilmer, paper covers 84 .25
 Destiny of Russia and Signs of the Times, W. H. Wilson, board cloth 96 .25 $1.25
 Book of Revelation Made Easy to Understand, W. H. Wilson, board cloth 96 .25 1.25
 Ancient Mysteries, George Johnston 116 .50
 Christ in the Old Testament, R. H. Judd, paper 38 .40
 The Way of Life Eternal, Lyman Booth, paper 88 .40
 Student's Text Book, Wilson, board cloth 200 .45 2.60
 The Visitor, Boice, paper 212 .50
 The Mystery of Iniquity, Booth, paper 220 .75
 Pine Woods Bible Class, Wilson, board cloth, 480 .85 5.00
 Emphatic Diaglott, Benjamin Wilson
 Neatly bound, and in clear type, 2.50

THE GOSPEL IN SONG

A Book of 287 well-printed Gospel Hymns

	Each	Per 10	Per 100
	Postpaid	Postpaid	Not Postpaid
Manila	$0.40	$3.60	$30.00
Flexible Cloth	.45	4.00	33.00
Board Cloth	.50	4.50	40.00

WATCH THAT TONGUE

IT IS YOUR TONGUE; it belongs to you, and is the only one for which you are responsible. Your neighbors' tongues may need care also, but that is their business; this is yours. See that it is properly attended to. Watch that tongue!

It needs watching. It is "an unruly evil"; watch it. It "is a fire"; watch it. It is a helm which guides the vessel; let the helmsman keep wide awake. It can bless or it can curse; it can poison or heal. It can pierce hearts and blight hopes; it can sow discord and separate chief friends. Watch that tongue!

No one but you can take care of that tongue. You are its only ruler. Your neighbors may hate it, or fear it, or wish that they could bridle it, but they cannot do it. You have the power; watch that tongue!

That tongue has already got you into trouble; it may do it again. It is "set on fire of hell". It burns up peace, blessing, reputation, and hope. It causes sad days, weary nights, tearful eyes, and heavy hearts. "If a man will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile." Watch that tongue!

It is the "glory" of man. It distinguishes him from brutes. It was bought with blood, by the Son of God. He claims it as His. It should speak His praise; misemployed, it may degrade yourself and those around you. You are charged to attend to it. Watch that tongue!

The Lord watches that tongue. "There is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether." For every idle word we must give account in the day of judgment. What will be the record of that tongue then? Watch that tongue!

Watch that tongue!

—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis.

THE ROCK, OUR REST

By Ednah Cooper

GOD is our Rock and Shelter, an abiding place where we can flee from the cares of the world. He is our Refuge in time of trouble, and a rest when we are overcome with grief. He is a God of love, to whom we may sing praises and songs of thanksgiving for all of His blessings, the Rock of our salvation.

David trusted in God as his Rock. Saul at times tried to take David's life. When he first became angry with David, after David had killed the giant of the Philistine army, he vowed in his heart to kill him. He became very wroth because the people praised David for his deed.

Saul then began to make other plans to dispose of him. He persuaded David one of his daughters for a wife, if he would go into battle against the Philistines again for him.

He was almost certain he would be killed, but David came out victorious. It was his great faith in God which helped him to gain these victories. In the eighteenth Psalm, after his deliverance from Saul and his enemies, David sang unto God and thanked Him for His goodness unto him.

Christ also trusted in God as His Rock, praying always to Him for guidance. He, too, came out victorious over all the world.

It is said that in India they have many boy merchants and the charitable of that country have placed resting stones along the way for them to rest upon, while they journey from one place to another. The story is told of a woman missionary who passed a small boy, reclining on one of these stones. She quoted the following scripture to him, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Then she invited him to the mission school. He accepted her invitation and became a pupil there. When for the first time he heard the verse beginning, "The Lord is my rock", his face brightened and he said, "That is better than any resting place, for it keeps one rested all the time."

We, like the small boy, have a resting place in God our Rock. Today if we will come unto Him and leave our burdens there, we will find rest. We find also a future rest with Christ, an everlasting abiding place.

We are warned in the third and fourth chapters of Hebrews not to let unbelief be the cause of our not entering into rest. The Israelites, because of their unbelief in God, were not permitted to enter into the promised land.

The beauties of the kingdom of God are described in the eleventh chapter of Isaiah. We read that all things will be perfect, and "his rest shall be glorious". May we each one so live that we may enter into that perfect rest!

OIL FOR THE CHRISTIAN

EVERY MACHINE MADE NEEDS OIL to insure its running smoothly. There is no use in slopping a can full of oil on a single bearing all at one time. No, it needs a little oil quite frequently — just enough and at the right time. It is just so with each life — it should be filled with the oils which the whole world needs. These oils should be given when the need is greatest, and at the opportune moment. There are those who are overflowing with oil at special times, then, for long periods, they give nothing. Treat a machine thus and the bearings will burn out and the machine will be ruined.

What are these oils that a well-rounded, Christian life should be prepared to give? We will mention a few only — there are many more:

- The Oil of Kindness,
- The Oil of Politeness,
- The Oil of Patience,
- The Oil of Thoughtfulness,
- The Oil of Christian Love.

— Selected.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, FEBRUARY 24, 1931

NUMBER 21

CHRISTIANS, AWAKE!

By Mary A. Gesin

THE HISTORY of God's chosen people, Israel, from the calling out of Abraham, to their final captivity among the nations of earth, is one filled with intense interest. God looked over the peoples of earth and saw that they were serving many gods other than himself. He yearned for a people of His own, who would follow His instruction, and so He called out a man of faith to be the father of a new nation, a "peculiar people".

With the story of their migration to Egypt because of famine and their increase in numbers and oppression at the hand of Egypt's ruler, we are all familiar. Though it might seem so, yet God had not forgotten His promise, and when the time was fully ripe, at the hand of Moses, He led them miraculously forth.

God had selected a home for His people, but this land was occupied by idol worshiping people, people who did not know God, people whose sole purpose in life was the pleasing of self. He knew that it would be disastrous for Israel to go in among these nations, live with them, and adopt their modes of life. God knew that the worship of the things of man's invention could lead only to sin and destruction.

Before He led them into Canaan, therefore, He instructed them as to the way in which they should proceed. Chapters four to eight of the book of Deuteronomy are filled with words of wisdom from the omnipotent God, who had watched over them during forty long years of wilderness wandering and had brought them to the very portals of the home He had chosen for them.

Hear God's yearning voice, "O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!" Deut. 5:29. God's commands were always for naught but their good.

But no! Israel was headstrong and wilful. Note the portent of evil falling upon them, warning of which comes in Deut. 4:15-20, and the punishment in verses 25-27. That all this did come to pass, just as God warned them it should, we have only to read their subsequent history to know.

And why did God give us through His prophets the life of Israel in such detail? Why did He show His willingness to guide, and to direct, and to bless Israel, and Israel's refusal to be led and the just punishment that followed? Listen to Paul's words in 2 Cor. 10:11: "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."

God has chosen another people in this our day to worship His name and to show forth His glory, even the followers of His Son. And He has asked them to be different from the people round about who do not serve the Lord. He has asked them to "come out from among them, and be ye separate". To these the example of Israel is given.

Again and again do we hear people say, "He does thus and so, and he is supposed to be a Christian. If that is what Christianity is, I don't want any of it!" While this is not the proper viewpoint to take, yet we cannot deny that we are responsible if we cause anyone to come to such a conclusion by any action of ours.

If our religion is worth anything to us at all, let us practice it, fellow Christians. Let us study and learn of our Master, and then apply those teachings to each day's activities. Let us put the things of God before the things of the world. Let us make His work, our duty, His command, our privilege, His requests, our joy.

If we give the world our time and our attention, we will reap the things of the world, and these are only temporary. If we follow the ways of wickedness, we may expect destruction, even as it came upon Israel, who followed the paths God warned them not to enter. But if we heed God's instruction, the rewards will be a hundredfold in this life, and in the life to come, unmeasurable honor and joy.

Christians, arise, awake! Go forward in the joy of service to our God and His Son, our Savior.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye . . . may be able to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all the fulness of God."

THE FOUNDATION

PASSING the busy corners in any of our large cities, one frequently witnesses laborers with machinery and materials driving long spiles deeply into the ground or filling deeply excavated caissons with concrete that they may secure a firm foundation upon which to erect massive and towering structures.

God's structure of immortality and righteousness for His faithful ones is no different. It, too, even more than any other structure of the world, must be erected upon a sure, unyielding, ever competent foundation.

Writing to his Corinthian brethren whom he had but a little more than a year past addressed frequently with gospel instructions, Paul in 1 Corinthians 3:11 says that for them He "laid the foundation . . . which is Jesus Christ". No other foundation can be laid, he assures. That is, Jesus is the only possible foundation in God's great creation upon which the structure of salvation and of righteousness can be successfully built.

Paul reveals the fact that many call that foundation and that teaching altogether foolish, see 1:18; that many prefer to build upon the wisdom and experience of mankind. Yet he avers that the very things which men call foolishness are by God regarded as true, substantial, and firm. Indeed these things issue forth from the Father. Jesus was the creation of Jehovah. He was God's foundation for the great superstructure of life for His people.

Would that you and I could more deeply sense the truth of these statements of Paul. Would that we could pass by the "wisdom of men" and could focus and consecrate our faith upon God and His yet unseen and unfulfilled plans and promises, that we might be built into the great building which He is constructing upon Christ.

THE TEMPLE OF GOD

WHEN Moses erected the tabernacle and when Solomon built the temple, they both built, Heb. 8:5, "according to the pattern shewed" to them. Both tabernacle and temple were erected under God's instructions for a dwelling place in the midst of the nation of Israel that they might recognize His abode with them.

Paul reveals new thoughts concerning God's temple. He says, 1 Cor. 3:16, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God?" And then he seems to emphasize the matter by stating in the following verse that "The temple of God is holy, which temple ye are". Those who by faith in the Father and in His Son consecrate and dedicate their lives in service are individually and collectively regarded by Scripture as the abiding place of God. It is only in His direct followers that God lives in the midst, not only of Israel, but of the world of today. Out from their lives, God reveals himself. Forth from them, the ways of God are manifested. Surrounding them, the power and the blessings of God are to be seen.

He dwells in them by His Spirit. His spirit is ever present in their lives. Such are ruled, are motivated by the spirit of God. So much so are they under God's leading and hand that they are to the reasonings of the world, inconsistent and foolish. And yet those of the high calling to which they have aspired, Paul by inspiration exhorts, 2 Cor. 6:17, to "come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

PLEASE! THANK YOU!

How carefully the God-fearing parent trains the little folk of the home to say "Please" when asking for things of need or of pleasure; to say "Thank you" when they have been granted their petitions, or have been given things unrequested. Day by day, the father and mother give the reminder, "Now, what do you say?" anxious that the child shall politely recognize favors or benefits received.

Should we not as carefully train these children to constantly recognize the daily gifts and blessings and kindnesses of their heavenly Father? Should they not be taught to thank Him? to ask Him to please grant His daily favors?

This training should be one of the home's diligent labors. It is the greatest of all great educations. Its end is

(Continued on page 330)

THE INWARD MAN

By Paul M. Hatch

"For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day." — 2 Corinthians 4:16.

THE QUERY of Brother Judd on this verse as to its meaning is of prime importance, and it is desirable to arrive at the truth expressed therein. The request is mainly for an interpretation of the Greek text. This shall be somewhat difficult for any of our people to answer, as very few of us are conversant with Greek grammar.

In the Greek text the word for "man" is anthropos, and "outward" is from the word exo. When we get to the words, "inward man", the word is esothern, meaning "inner", according to authority. "Man", in the authorized version, occurs in italics, which means that the word is supplied by the translators.

Reading on, we find the word, "renewed", from the Greek word anakainoo, which also seems to be an important word to observe in getting the truth in mind. This word will be further considered presently.

In order to rightly understand this verse, the whole subject matter whereof Paul is speaking should be considered. Isolate the verse from everything else and one person's opinion is as good as another, and truth is cast to the ground. However, let us consider the verse in itself.

We have evidently two men under consideration, the one perishing or wasting away, the other being renewed or built up day by day. The outward man of course is the man that is seen, and the inward, the unseen, in Paul's contrast occurring in the eighteenth verse. One is temporal and the other, eternal.

Now taking the first clause of the verse, "for which cause we faint not", we have a basis of discernment. The words, "for which cause", would naturally point us backward in the chapter to the cause. Then Paul, for some cause, was not faint, but he was deriving an inward renewal, while at the same time his outward appearance was wasting away.

This trouble that Paul was not fainting over evidently was his affliction in the service of preaching the gospel. The first and second verses of the chapter indicate this; for we read, "Therefore seeing we have this ministry, as we received mercy, we faint not; but have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God."

Furthermore, he says in verses 7 to 10, "But we have this treasure (gospel of Christ, or gospel of salvation, v. 5) in earthen vessels (outward man), that the excellency of power may be of God, and not of us. We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be manifest in our body."

Here we have the fact that Paul was ever in trouble over the preaching of the gospel and shepherding of the flocks of God, and that it was wearing and tearing down the outward man. But in that service he was also renewing the life of Christ within him, that is, the spirit and mind of

(Continued on page 330)

THE SEVEN FINAL YEARS PRECEDING THE COMING OF OUR LORD

By F. L. Austin

THESE years will be busy years — filled with the thunderous blasphemies of this old world's wickedness. During them, God also will be working; Christ will be working. They will span the world's final tremendous opposition to God and to all that may strive to serve God.

Page 294 recites some of the things that shall be consummated with the ending of that period. The accomplishments there quoted will be "upon (Daniel's) people, and upon (Daniel's) holy city."—Dan. 9:24. The fact that, after nearly eighteen centuries of absence, Daniel's people are just now returning to Daniel's holy city, makes this a strikingly interesting theme of study. Let us proceed to Gabriel's closing statement in Daniel 9:27.

This "one week" is the last one of the "seventy weeks" of v. 29. Like the others, it has to do with the Jews at Jerusalem. At its beginning a prince, v. 26, will make, or "confirm (a) covenant". ("The", preceding "covenant" is said to be absent in the original.) Till now there has been no time since the crucifixion of Jesus that this could have been fulfilled, for at no time have the Jews been in sufficient numbers at Jerusalem to engage in such a covenant. Even yet, it may be a question.

THE ABOMINATION THAT ASTOUNDETH

Whatever else that "covenant", or "league", Dan. 11:23 — 22, 28, 30, may provide for, it also provides for "the sacrifice and the oblation". In the "midst (or middle) of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease". The abomination that maketh desolate ("that astoundeth"—Emphasized Bible), (see also 8:13; 11:31; 12:11; Matt. 24:15) is thus set up. The covenant will have been broken. This condition continues to the end, that is, for three and one-half years.

This astounding abomination will be set up in the middle of the seventieth week (or, seven). First, or, at the same time, the daily sacrifice to God will have been stopped. That is, worship of God will be forcibly discontinued—"he shall CAUSE the sacrifice and the oblation to cease."

(Continued on page 326)

A PILGRIM PRAYS

So long have I been guarded by Your power,
 Up many a tangled path and stony hill,
 And now, dear Lord, through this strange darkened hour,
 Be with me still.

Be with me, for the way is long and lonely,
 I am bewildered, and I cannot see,
 But Lord, I shall not be afraid, if only
 You walk with me.

If only I can some way keep recalling
 The darkened roads I traveled in the past,
 How, after You long guarded me from falling,
 Light shone at last.

Then surely, Lord, I can go forward, knowing
 That somewhere on the hills the light will dawn,
 And I shall reach it safely, if in going
 You still lead on.—Grace Noll Crowell.

THE TWO BODIES

By Gerald Cooper

A FEW weeks ago some men were putting up ice just across the river from where I live. Their shouts could be heard plainly, and a friend and myself decided to go over and see them at their work. Their work was cooperative in every manner. A few of the men were kept busy all of the time, pushing the ice into the place where it was being pulled into the ice house; others were on the inside; two teams were on the north side of the ice house, pulling the ice into it. A little pony was kept busy most of the time, pulling back the rope that pulled the ice into the house. Never was there an idle moment.

The close cooperation of these men reminded me of two bodies, namely, the body of Christ and our own bodies. Our body is a wonderful thing. What would the eye do without the feet? A person sees something afar off, but the feet carry him to this object so as to get a better view. If one member of our body is not working as it should, then the whole body is off key. Take a tooth for example. A tooth is one out of thirty-two other teeth, but let one get to aching and see how the rest of the body feels. Every member of our body must be in close harmony with every other, and all must be working together or the body will not function well.

So is the body of Christ. Every member must be in close harmony with the other or it will not function well, just as the physical body must work together. Are we doing our duty as Christians in the body of Christ? Paul says: "For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Romans 12:4, 5.

Let us strive to bring ourselves closer together in the body of Christ, working together in everything to His honor and glory.

THE TRUE AND LIVING GOD

By Lucille LeCrone

THE ANCIENT Greeks had a very strong religious institution as early as the eighth century B. C. Their religion was polytheistic; they worshiped many gods instead of one omnipotent God as we do.

Their gods were simply magnified human beings. They were supposed to be immortal, yet they suffered pain. They were lacking in power, in holiness, and even moral character. They gave way to fits of anger and jealousy. If they saw a man gaining much wealth and becoming influential, they became jealous of him because he was getting too much like them. They would then send some misfortune upon him.

The religion of the Greeks greatly influenced their whole lives. They had no Bible, but they believed that their gods spoke to them through signs such as the rustling of leaves. They had special places, called oracles, where they believed their gods manifested their presence and made known their will. The Greeks never entered upon any undertaking without first seeking the counsel of the oracle.

Religion should have a great part in our lives. In fact, it should be the main factor of our lives. We believe in a God who is real, a God who is "eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God". He is just and righteous, longsuffering, merciful and ready to forgive. He loves His people, and instead of being angry with them when they displease Him, He stands ready to forgive and to restore them to favor again.

The Greeks worshiped the gods of fire, thunder, the sea, wind, harvest, love. They personified these forces of nature and worshiped them as gods instead of worshiping the true and living God, who created and established all these things.

They seldom did anything without first consulting their gods. Yet we, who worship the true and living God, who really does guide and direct His people, fail to take advantage of the privilege that is ours. We depend entirely too much upon our own selves, making our own decisions and relying on our own strength, instead of going to Him for guidance and strength.

Their gods could never help them, because they were only the creatures of their imaginations. They had no strength, nor power. Our God is true, living, and omnipotent. He can and will strengthen us at all times, if we but ask Him. He can and will guide and direct us, if we but allow Him to do so.

If the Greeks could have enough faith in their inanimate gods to depend upon them for guidance, how much more ought we to depend upon the true and living God, the Creator of all things.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

By George B. Alldridge

IF, WHILE perusing the pages of a religious paper or journal, I notice the caption of an article referring to the signs of the times, I forbear reading any other, until I have read it; for to me the greatest question in my mind is what the indications are of my Lord's return. Any information from whatever source my mind seizes with avidity, and becomes at once intensely interested.

Jesus' chief interest and compassion centers in His church, His bride, His body, His eternal companion. Hence, in the days of His flesh, He often would take His disciples aside (Mark 6:31, 32) and like a true lover, would reveal His future plans regarding the home and the destiny awaiting His bride. John 14:1-3.

To Him, the greatest joy of His existence will be its consummation. Heb. 12:2; Luke 24:26, 27; 1 Peter 1:11. He left His fiancee to go into a far country, Matt. 25:14-19, to prepare a home and make the necessary arrangements for the making of her trousseau. Psalms 45:7-14; Rev. 19:8, 9.

He warned her before leaving, Matt. 24:5, of the temptations and snares that would beset her path and the solicitations made by false lovers to lead and entice her away from the path of virtue and rectitude. Matt. 7:14; 1 John 2:15. To strengthen her faith and hope and to patiently await His return He pointed out certain events that would transpire. Matt. 24:3-27.

Knowing by His own experience, Heb. 2:17, 18; 4:15, 16, what she must also pass through to attain perfection, He warned her and gave some of the characteristics of these false lovers or systems. 2 Thess. 2:1-4; 1 Thess. 5:1-4. But how thankful I am that He himself said, "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 25:31.

Are we watching these signs? If so, then we are making ourselves ready to welcome Him, and together, to set up God's glorious kingdom of righteousness. When a brother prays, I like to hear him pray for the peace of Jerusalem. Psalms 122:6-9. Why? Well, listen to Isaiah 49:14-16. "But Zion said, The Lord hath forsaken me, and my Lord hath forgotten me. Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before me." God loves Zion, and so does His Son, Jesus. Why? Because it is to be His dwelling place. Psalms 76:2.

Jerusalem! I too love thee. It is to become the center and in it the capitol of His coming residence. Even when I was a boy one of my favorite hymns, which always thrills me when I hear it sung, is the following:

"Jerusalem the golden
With milk and honey blest,
Beneath thy contemplation
Sink heart and voice oppressed,
I know not, O I know not
What social joys are there,
What radiance of glory,
What light beyond compare!

"They stand, those halls of Zion,
Conjubilant with song,
And bright with many an angel
And all the martyr throng,
And they who, with their Leader,
Have conquered in the fight,
Forever and forever
Are clad in robes of white.

"Jerusalem the glorious,
The glory of the elect,
Oh dear and future vision
That eager hearts expect,
New mansion of new people,
Whom God's own love and light
Promote, increase, make holy,
Identify, unite!"

Jesus often quoted the prophet Isaiah. He was very familiar with its prophecies. Compare Isaiah 13 and 61 with Matthew 24 and Luke 21. After His ascension to His Father's right hand, His vision was so enlarged that He could give His servant John on the Island of Patmos, Rev. 1:1-11, a panoramic view of events to transpire during the period of His sojourn in a far country and after His return. Hence, then anything pertaining to the capital of His coming kingdom should interest us, and merit the closest attention.

One hundred years ago men were beginning to see visions. Dan. 12:4. Sir Isaac Newton and Roger Bacon anticipated the glorious achievements of the nineteenth century. James Watt of Glasgow produced the steam engine in 1785. Foerithick of Cornwall began experimenting with a locomotive in 1804. But during the year 1830, George Stephenson produced his famous "Rocket" now in the Kensington Museum, which traveled forty-four miles an hour along the first railway, running between Liverpool and Manchester. Today, the great network of railways covering every country throughout the world, owes its existence to the brains of Watt and Stephenson.

Our brethren often quote Nahum 2:3, 4 as proof of the fulfillment of this prophecy. Fifty years ago, this appeared so; but today another instrument of man's genius I think meets this exactly—the automobile. I possess several different translations of the Scriptures, but I prefer

(Continued on page 329)

THE SEVEN FINAL YEARS

(Continued from page 323)

A host will be given, Dan. 8:12, the "little horn" power, v. 9, "against the daily sacrifice" ten hundred and forty days previously, but the "daily sacrifice" will not be "taken away", v. 11, "by him" till the "midst of the week". That is to say, the desolator will begin to trespass upon and tread down the Sanctuary, Dan. 8:13, 14, "two thousand and three hundred days" before the Sanctuary will "be cleansed" of the astounding abomination, cleansed of its downtreading.

This "time and times and the dividing of time" terminates with the giving of the dominion "to the people of the saints of the most High", the same as the seventieth week terminates, 9:27, with the bringing in of everlasting righteousness, 9:24. That is to say, Daniel 7:24-27; 8:13, 14 and 9:27 all terminate in the same time with the same event. But the "great words against the most High" of 7:25, which words are to continue for "a time and times and the dividing of time", are undoubtedly the very "abomination that maketh desolate".

These words seem to be the identical words of the beast to whom was given the power of the dragon when, in Rev. 13:5, he speaks "great things and blasphemies" and, v. 6, opens "his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven". See also verses 7, 8, 9. If these words and offences are all the same and if all terminate at the same time, introducing the same following event of the establishment of a kingdom of righteousness, then it must seem proper that the "time and times and the dividing of time" of Daniel 7:25, and the last half of the week, 9:27, and the "forty and two months" of Revelation 13:5, are different wordings describing the one and selfsame period, namely, the last half of the seventieth week that is determined upon Daniel's people and upon his holy city.

Inasmuch as Daniel 8:14 announces the cleansing, margin justification, of the sanctuary, that is, God's temple, God's abiding place, which also is what is really accomplished in 7:27 and 9:27, then the twenty-three hundred days there announced pertain to the beginning of the treading down, v. 13, by this self-magnified prince, v. 11. As the three and one-half years, that is, the last half of the seventieth week, number but twelve hundred and sixty days, then the beginning of this treading down would be ten hundred and forty days prior to the taking away of the daily sacrifice, that is, but two hundred and twenty days after the commencement of this last or seventieth week.

The high-handed blasphemy against God, Dan. 7:24-27, is to be perpetrated by the "horn" power that shall arise "after" the "ten horns" of 7:24, that is, by the "little horn" of v. 8 in which were "eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things". See also v. 20. This is to be a political power. It will supplant the preceding powers and absorb or federate them as one, under himself.

These also are characteristics of that political authority and federation of Revelation 12:1-9, to whom power is to be given "to continue forty and two months", v. 5, that is, twelve hundred and sixty days, that is, three and one-half years, that is, time, times, and the dividing of time. All measure alike as to time, all speak great blasphemy and endeavor to resist the God of heaven, all center their vengeance upon Jerusalem and the Jews, all terminate at the coming of Christ. All seem to be one and the same political power in general.

Those days will truly be days of fierce and rapid effort. Those who receive and carry "the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name", Rev. 13:17, will find themselves contaminated with direct punishments from heaven. Revelation 16:2 says that on them "fell a noisome and grievous sore", and that other plagues will increase their tortures so that, v. 10, "they gnawed their tongues for pain, and blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores".

While these conditions will burden those who unite with the blasphemer against God, those who resist such blasphemy and deny the blasphemer's authority and power, will receive the protection of Almighty God. Christ breaks forth from heaven with the declaration, Rev. 16:15, "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame". Further on at 17:14, when this federated political power "shall make war with the Lamb", "the Lamb shall overcome them: for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful". "They that are with him" will be victorious with the Lamb. They have His protection throughout, just as Israel received protection against the workings of the plagues in Egypt, plagues which were terrible upon the Egyptians.

Who or what this mighty power that shall blaspheme God will be, the writer has no known way of ascertaining. It is sufficient in his mind to realize that the Bible seems to distinctly foretell of these days and forewarn those who would be consecrated to their Master.

It should, however, be mentioned that the particular followers of Christ, who must be put to the test in these days of abomination and of desolation, are apparently not those of whom Paul says, 1 Thess. 4:16, 17, they "shall be caught up to meet the Lord in the air". It seems quite sure that those to be caught up will be called previous to these final severe testings imposed by the king and his followers, who establish the most wicked and vicious blasphemy against God of all ages, of all time.

Jesus refers in Matthew 24:15 and following, to this same "abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet" and says, v. 29, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days . . . all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory". And then, v. 42, as both a warning and one of his final exhortations he says,

"Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. . . . Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

PEACE THAT PASSETH UNDER- STANDING

By Samuel E. Haney

"For the thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me. I was not in safety, neither had I rest, neither was I quiet; yet trouble came."—Job 3:25, 26.

MOFFATT renders verse twenty-six thus: "I get no peace, I get no rest, I get no ease, only attacks of agony." Unrestrained fear begets doubt; and doubt generates trouble; and trouble incubates death dealing germs affecting man, entire. Verse twenty-six gives some of the symptoms: no peace; no rest; no ease; and attacks of agony. To use an allegory, the reason that the things we greatly fear succeed in coming upon us is that we view them through a microscope instead of through the large end of a telescope. Were we to restrict our thoughts to whatever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report, our fears should rarely materialize.

Remember that fear closes the tubes and subways of the body, while faith means free breathing, expanded pores, cells and arteries. Self-imposed misery! But we all are more or less guilty of this foolishness, it being one of the resultant effects of the fall, affecting the whole of man—mental, physical, spiritual—"for as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Prov. 23:7.

The farther man gets from his Creator, the weaker becomes his power of resistance of this innate habit, for example, fear and wrong thinking—a deteriorating habit whose origin is traceable to man's estrangement from God, his lack of divine control. This being true there is but one way to master the situation, namely, a full surrender of self and a thorough consecration to God, thus imbibing divine power to rescue us from our common enemy, which alone means victory over all evil and foolish habits.

Christians should not allow themselves to be tormented by these hideous monsters. Yet, doubtless, most of us do at times owing to physical defects, nerves, etc. It is while physically weak as the result of sickness or trouble that the enemy makes his onslaughts, to the extent that God permits. Note the type in Job 1, 2 and 3.

As God imparts wisdom to us from time to time, being desirous of its developing a character-likeness of His Son, He permits Satan to "touch" our flesh, affecting mind and spirit, to test our fidelity that we might become perfect. "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations ('any sort of trial,' Moffatt); knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing." James 1:2-4.

John says, "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth, is not perfect in love." 1 John 4:18. That John applied this to saints in normal health is apparent by the following: "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth". 3 John 2.

The Christian is peculiarly a dual person; his mind can be temporarily swayed by the flesh—lower nature—depriving him, for the time being, of the power and sweet communion of the Holy Spirit. Allow the flesh (in which "dwelleth no good thing", Rom. 7:18, 19) ten minutes use of your mind, and note the effect on the whole organic system; for health cannot exist with a disturbed mind.

The non and indifferent Christian's mind (same spiritual category) run on a single track system. They may have stealth, dual Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde mind (hypocritical), but it is always under the influence of the evil one. Such a mind knows nothing of the mind of Christ (1 Cor. 2:16). "But we have the mind of Christ", in and through our spiritual begetting. Therefore, we should be alive to the fact that it is a mistake to dignify Satan's attacks by giving them any recognition, whether they be manifested in the flesh, or through his emissary's attacks from without.

Were we to always recognize the fact that God gave His Son as a Sacrifice, to save us to the "utmost"; that His power may be supreme in our body, soul and spirit, and that all that is in the "vine", both spiritual and physical life, belong to us, the "branches", by our complying with conditions, we should not fear. Paul says, "What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? . . . Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us." Rom. 8:31-34.

When we imagine we see a mountain of trouble heading our way, we should stand aloof in "heavenly places in Christ," and let those who delight to grovel in the miasma of this sin cursed world fulfil their part of prophecy, namely, "Men swooning with panic and foreboding of what is to befall the universe", Moffatt. And while these rejecters of the only Source of safety and life—the Ark, Christ Jesus—are doing their part, let us fulfil our part, namely, "But when these things begin to happen, look up and raise up your heads, for your release is not far distant." Luke 21:26, 28, Moffatt.

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. Likewise our armor is no stronger than its weakest spot, which is our tendency to doubt, at times, some parts of God's Word. Once in doubt, fear enters in as air rushes into a punctured vacuum. So let our fear of doubt be likened unto our fear of the fangs of a venomous serpent.

And while the unregenerate world is suffering the vengeance of the serpent's fangs (sin) let us always take God at His word: "Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth (1 Peter 2:9; Psa. 46:1-7) may enter in. Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee." Isaiah 26:2, 3.

THE ONE TEST

By Cecil A. Smead

THE KINGDOM of God over Israel in the time of David was a powerful kingdom which exercised a great deal of influence over the surrounding nations. David found it a weak little state, and he made of it a powerful dominion. He was a great leader himself, and he had many able followers; there were many warriors and mighty men who participated in the establishing and enlarging of the kingdom.

We find a list of these at the end of his reign, just before the setting up of the kingdom under Solomon. (2 Samuel 23.) This list was a rehearsal of all those mighty men who had rendered faithful and loyal service to the king to the end of his reign, or as long as they had lived. It was in the nature of a final judgment, a roll of honor, after all the work had been done. It was to make honorable mention of all who were worthy of such mention. As we scan the list, we note the absence of some names which we might, at first, think should have been worthy of a place there. What was the reason for their failure? What was the test?

It seems at first thought that Joab's name should have been in that gallery of names. For Joab, the king's nephew, had done many things worthy of renown. He was the chief figure in the capture of Jerusalem, the last stronghold of the Jebusites; he was the chief captain of David's army, winning many battles for the king. Joab's brother was on the list, and so was Joab's armorbearer; but Joab himself was not there.

What was Joab's fault? The reason is found in 1 Kings 1:5-7. Although Joab had remained true to his king in the rebellion of Absalom, he proved disloyal in the rebellion of Adonijah, in the last days of David's reign. All his might, his valor, his work for David proved of no avail, when it came down to the test of his loyalty to David, his love for his king. He revealed his true self just at the last.

Before this, he had done many things which David disapproved of; but through it all, he seemed to have the best interests of his king at heart. Now, at the last, he revealed himself for what he was: true to his master as long as his master was on the ascendancy; deserting him for a younger man, when his master became old and feeble. All his mighty deeds did not put him on the honor roll; the test was loyalty, and he failed the test.

Then there was Ahithophel, the wise counselor of David. All his counsel was "as if a man enquired at the oracle of God". 2 Samuel 16:23. Ahithophel's son was on the honor list, but Ahithophel himself was not. Why? Because he had conspired with Absalom in rebellion against David. He had proved himself to be disloyal; he had shown that he did not truly love his king. Psalm 41:9 seems to refer to his action: "Yea, mine old familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me." All his worldly wisdom did not serve to put him on the honor roll. The test was his loyalty; and he proved spurious.

Now let us notice one who was on the honor roll, and justly, too—Uriah the Hittite. While Uriah was at war faithfully serving his king, David did wickedly with Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah. Then David attempted to cover his sin by bringing Uriah back from the front to go home to his wife. Uriah's answer was faithful and true to the king. He would not go home, while the rest of the nation was in war. His place was on the fighting line in his master's service and not at home enjoying the comforts of his family. Although Uriah lost his life as a result, yet he remained true to his king. The test was in his loyalty, and he proved genuine and true.

In these instances, then, it was loyalty which determined one's worthiness or unworthiness to be placed on the honor roll. Joab and Ahithophel were disloyal to David, their king. Uriah was loyal to David, his king. Loyalty was the one test. Those who were loyal to the end were honored; those who were disloyal were accursed.

So with us! "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ let him be Anathama Maranatha," or "Let him be accursed, Our Lord, Come." 1 Cor. 16:22. Our hopes, our desires, our ambitions, our whole beings should be centered in love and loyalty to Jesus, our Lord. We should desire with our whole mind the setting up of His kingdom. We should not be as Joab and Ahithophel who tried to undermine the dominion of David in betrayal of his confidence and love; but we should be as Uriah, who did his best to help establish the dominion of David. We should be earnestly expecting the dominion of Christ to be set up, and we should do everything in our power to make that kingdom a success. The test with us also is—are we loyal to Christ? Do we love Him? If we do, we have the assurance of being glorified with Christ.

"All things work together for good to those that love God", Rom. 8:28, and we know that "nothing shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Rom. 8:39. Therefore, even though we may die for the sake of Christ, as Uriah did for David, yet our names will be written where they can never be effaced, if we truly love our King.

God loves each one of us; He wants us all to be saved, and it is only when we fail to love God, that our names are erased from His roll. We love God when we love Christ; we prove our love for Christ by remaining loyal to Him. Our names shall be written on that glorious honor roll of the future, if we pass the one test of loyalty to Jesus Christ.

God wants to put our names there; Jesus does, too. It all depends on us, whether we can pass the one test. It is for you, and it is for me to prove the soundness of our love for Him by passing the test and remaining loyal to Him. Let's do it, and have our names on that glorious roll.

"MANY A MAN WHO THINKS he bears a great enterprise on his shoulders is simply round-shouldered from carrying a large load of self-conceit." — East and West.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

(Continued from page 325)

the Catholic, known as "The Douay Version". Let me quote in full.

"The shield of his mighty men is like fire, the men of the army are clad in scarlet, the reins of the chariot are flaming in the day of his preparation, and the drivers are stupefied. They are in confusion in the ways, the chariots jostle one against another in the streets; their looks are like torehes, like lightning running to and fro."

This was written seven hundred years before Christ, and who could, unless inspired by God's Holy Spirit, so vividly describe the automobile and the condition of traffic in our cities today? Please note, this was to happen in "the day of his preparation". The American standard version reads, "The chariots flash with steel in the day of his preparation". Even the very material of which the automobile is constructed is described. Stand at a busy street corner, especially when there is a "traffic jam", and can you describe the expression on the drivers' faces with a better word than "stupefied"? "Foolish" is the definition, especially if the traffic policeman hands you a ticket to appear in court.

Note again, "the reins of the chariot are flaming". Could you better describe the head and flash lights? Again, "like lightning running to and fro." Captain Malcolm Campbell, at Daytona Beach, Florida, on February 5, drove his racing auto 245 miles an hour, four miles a minute! Was there a chariot in Nahum's day that could travel any faster than fifteen miles an hour? No wonder the only thing he could compare the chariots with was lightning! Read verses 3 and 5, and see how clearly he describes liquid fire and French warfare used and practised during the Great War.

Ex-Governor Smith of New York says in today's Plain Dealer that during the year 1930 over 12,000,000 automobiles passed through the Holland Tunnel, between New York and New Jersey. If this is not running "to and fro", please tell me what it is? Now, let us turn to Isaiah 31:5. "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts protect Jerusalem, protecting and delivering, passing over and saving." Another version reads, "As birds hovering," etc.

Wonderful description written seven hundred years before Christ! The conquest of the air for many years has fascinated men, as far back as Pladud, ninth king of Britain, who lost his life in attempting to fly. At last the Wright brothers discovered the secret and gave us the airplane. Major C. M. Young, assistant secretary for aeronautics, informs us that every twenty-four hours one hundred thousand miles of scheduled service are being flown. He anticipates that during this year (1931) two hundred thousand passengers will be carried by the airplane lines of the United States. How many may be added to this representing the other countries of the world?

Suppose my grandparents who lived during the reign of Queen Victoria, 1837-1901, had read Isaiah 31:5, how much would they have gotten out of it? Probably they would have spiritualized it and said, "This means angels, for they have wings and fly like birds." At least that is how the great masters of Dante's day presented it to us in their great works of art.

But God's Spirit implanted upon the mind of His prophets things that are transpiring, probably the same as our minds are impressed at a moving picture show.

H. G. Wells, Jules Verne, Rider Haggard, and others have permitted their imagination to run riot. Most of it has been largely influenced by the discovery of science. But the prophets had no such help in their day. How many of us, if living fifty years ago, could have described the airplane as clearly as Isaiah, or even during the year 1914? And who knew the way that General Allenby would capture Jerusalem in December 1917? Read Isaiah 60:8. "Who are these, that fly as clouds and as doves to their windows?"

I understand that the German name "Fokker", applied to their airplanes is "dove"—very significant in the light of Isaiah 60:8.

Again, one hundred years ago who, after reading Rev. 16:12, "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates; and dried up the water thereof; that a way might be prepared for the kings from the rising of the sun", could have foreseen the overthrow of the Turkish empire?

Brethren, are we awake to the stupendous changes now going on in the Orient? God is speaking in clarion tones. The very social life, customs, and even religion and mode of government are changed. Recently, thirty-one men were hanged for daring to rehabilitate the Caliphs' government into power. The fez, distinctly Turkish, is gone. The veil worn by women for centuries is gone and with it polygamy, their alphabet, their calendar—all changed! In fact, Turkey as a nation is gone.

Do you realize that we are on the eve of seeing Ezekiel 39:11-16 about to be fulfilled, probably by the use of poison gas? It is said that prior to the battle of Waterloo, that Lord Dundonald gave the British Government a recipe for the manufacture and use of poison gas that would have destroyed the armies of Napoleon. The men of that day thought its use would be too cruel, and so they locked it up in the arches of Waltham Abbey. Well, everything goes in the next war. The Soviet Government of Russia knows it, and is prepared.

After reading 2 Timothy 8:1-7 and 1 Timothy 4:1-3, we can appreciate what this item culled from the Gospel Herald really means:

"The yearly cost of crime is tremendous, any way it is figured. Dr. Benjamin F. Battin of the National Surety Company is authority for the statement that crime and fraudulent financial transactions cost the people of the United States seven and a half billions annually. Some of his estimates follow:

"Embezzlement, 1 billion 2 hundred millions; burglary and similar crimes, 200 millions; forgery, 175 to 200 millions; fraudulent claims for insurance surety and cas-uality, 200 millions; fraud in real estate, 100 millions; unfair merchandise, partially from fraud in advertising, 500 millions; and worthless stocks and bonds, 500 millions."

This is the terrible picture of our day, and if Jesus does not soon come and speak again as of old, "Peace be still", and still the troubled waters of humanity, what will the end be? Thank God, we can lift up our heads and rejoice, for we know by the signs of the times, that the Sun of Righteousness is about to arise with healing in His wings. Malachi 4:2.

"Wherefore comfort one another with these words."
1 Thessalonians 5:18.

THE INWARD MAN

(Continued from page 323)

Christ as expressed in Romans eight and Philippians two.

His natural life was abating, but his spiritual life, the Christ life, was ever being built up through a certain knowledge. What that knowledge was is expressed in the fourteenth verse, "Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you."

If it had not been for the fact of resurrection ever keeping him at work for the cause of Christ, Paul might well have fainted from his manifold trials in that great service for his Master. But through it all, he was striving to put on the Christ life that he might be an example for those of his converts to pattern after.

I believe that this is about as close to the truth as can be arrived at in connection with this verse, unless it is a consideration of the word previously mentioned, anakainoo, translated "renewed". According to Young's Concordance or any similar work, this word occurs only twice in the New Testament. The other occurrence is in Col. 3:10 and is also translated "renewed", in that verse.

The third chapter of Colossians concerns itself also with two men, "the old man" and "the new man", vv. 9 and 10 Paul calls on those baptized members of the church at Colosse to mortify the members which are upon the earth, enumerating those earthly things of the old man in verses 5 to 9, because they had put off the old man, with his deeds, and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge "after the image of him that created him."

From the twelfth verse to the end of the chapter Paul tells them what to put on in having the knowledge of the new Man, that is, the Man Christ Jesus.

If this be taken as a basis of understanding of the outward man and the inward man, then the outward man, or old man, was the man of fleshly desires of which Paul was divesting himself, while at the same time he was putting on or renewing the inward man, or new man, which was the spiritual man, patterned after the life of Christ.

In either case, as spoken in these two chapters, resurrection is the key-note in Paul's anticipation of the fulness of that inward and new man.

Submitted for truth and love.

DEDICATING OURSELVES TO GOD

AMONG the luminous days which came to the children of Israel in their long and somewhat somber life, none perhaps brought more joy than the day of the dedication of Solomon's temple. It was a day of high thoughts and thrilling experiences. Low indeed must have been the Israelite whose soul was not stirred to its depths, and who was not conscious of a great uplifting.

As for Solomon, it was the high day of his life. The great work for which he had a divine commission was at last finished, and heaven was smiling upon him. He fairly trembled with pious emotion, and his joy could hardly have been greater if he had known that at that supreme moment, when he stood "before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the congregation of Israel and spread forth his hands toward heaven," he was for once the true type of that greater Son of David who was yet to come.

It was something more than grand ceremony, and dazzling display, and inspiring music that thrilled the hearts of the people as they were never thrilled before. At last the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob had a house among them, and no longer sojourned in a tent. At last they felt sure that their wanderings were at an end.

As they looked upon the foundation of the temple they felt that Israel could never be moved. Henceforth they would have a center toward which all the tribes would look and around which they would be united. One temple meant one God, one religion, one people. Henceforth it would be easier to keep together, to keep separate from the heathen world, and to keep from idols; for they had a sanctuary of their own, and what was infinitely better than idols, the presence of Jehovah himself.

All this and much more did the people see before them, and all this and much more would have come to them if they had gone straight ahead. This is a lesson for us; if our highest dreams are not realized, it is not because our dreams are too high, but because our everyday aims are so much lower than our dedication day dreams.

PLEASE! THANK YOU!

(Continued from Editorial Page)

faith—service—salvation. Surely He who is the Source of all good things should be known and recognized by every child—even more than is parent.

The Sunday School is a wonderful nursery where these lessons can be taught and practiced. Teacher, why not open your primary class with class devotional exercises, instructing and training the little tots from various homes the deep, rich truths of "Please", and "Thank You", as directed to God?

And how about the older children? Are we as polite before God as we wish our children to be before us? Brother, Sister, Let us pray.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD." — 1 THESSALONIANS 5:21.

ABOUT LESSON BOOKS

SEVERAL inquiries have been coming in about the new senior lesson books and when they would be ready. We are sorry to say that the work on these books has been so delayed that it will still be many weeks, perhaps even months, before it will be possible to obtain them. We are stating this so that those societies which are nearly through with Book 2 will not hurry too much to get finished. Sometimes societies rush through the last lessons in a book, skipping some or taking two at a time, in order to get started on the new books. If you are within 15 or 20 lessons of the end of the book, it would be well to take two weeks to a lesson if you do not finish it the first week, in order to make the book last until the new one is ready. Those societies which have finished Book 2, and have not yet used Book 1 will be able to obtain Book 1 from the Berean office, and it is suggested that this be done. If you have completed both books, it might be profitable to review some of the lessons which proved to be hardest for the class, or ones which there was not time to finish in class.

Work is progressing on the new book as rapidly as circumstances will permit, and announcement will be made through this page as soon as they are ready.

BIRTH AND CHILDHOOD OF MOSES

God's chosen people, the Israelites, were in bondage in Egypt. God had been blessing them and the king became worried for fear that at some time they would join some of their enemies and fight against Egypt and gain their freedom. So he charged the people that every son that was born to these Israelites should be thrown into the river.

About this time a baby was born and named Moses. He was a nice baby and his mother did not want to see him killed, so she hid him in the house until he was three months old. By this time he could cry harder, and she knew that he would soon be heard. She made an ark of bulrushes and covered it with pitch and, putting him in it, placed it among the flags that grew near the river's bank. She left his older sister near by to watch this little ark and the baby.

After a while the king's daughter and her maidens came down to the river to bathe. She soon discovered the ark and sent one of her maidens to get it. She found the baby crying. At once she knew that he was one of the Hebrew children.

Moses' sister, who was watching, came to the king's daughter and asked if she should go and get a nurse for the child. She was told to go, so she ran and brought the child's mother, and Pharaoh's daughter hired her as his nurse. When the child was a little older, she brought him to the king's daughter, and he became her son.

—Marcile Siple, Age 11, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

AT THE regular meeting on February 6, the following officers were elected for the coming six months: Pres., H. W. Stadden, 3415 W. 97th St.; Vice-pres., W. J. Halls, 742 E. 126th St.; Sec., M. W. Lyon, 13705 Diana Ave.; Treas., J. O. Conrad, 9234 Birchdale Ave.; Pianist, Mrs. Mattie Agard, 14624 Savannah Ave.

Interest continues very good. Our average attendance since the first of the year is 42, the highest attendance 48, and the lowest 39.

A Valentine Party is being planned for Friday the thirteenth, and a program is being prepared consisting largely of music.

M. W. Lyon, Sec.

THE Hammond Berean class wishes to take this opportunity to thank Brother and Sister F. E. Siple and Brother M. W. Lyon who so kindly assisted in the organization of our class.

Anna Mae Bottolfs, Sec.

"BRIGHTENING UP THE LIFE of someone else will put a fresh shine on your own."

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 10; Ohio, 9; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 3; California, 3; Louisiana, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1; Michigan, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

CHILDREN, suppose someone should ask you, "Who is your neighbor?" what would you say? Perhaps you would think it is Mrs. Brown or Mr. Green who live on either side of you; or the man whose farm is next to your father's.

Jesus once told a man who asked Him that question a story in order to show him who is a real, true neighbor. And this is the story, children. Listen, now, and see if, when the story is ended, you can tell who is the neighbor.

There was a man who went from Jerusalem to Jericho, a trip of about fifteen miles. He must have walked or ridden on a donkey; for there were no carriages or autos then. At any rate, he was a well dressed man and some thieves, who were along the way, took his clothes away from him and his money, too, if he had any, and hurt him badly, so that he was lying by the roadside nearly dead. He wasn't able to even get up and go on, and he needed care ever so badly.

It happened that as he lay there by the roadside, a priest from the Jewish temple came by and he saw him, but he went right on past, never even stopping to find out what was the matter. Then a Levite, one of the men who served in the temple service, came along, and he, too, saw the poor, wounded man, and went on.

After a while a man from the city of Samaria came along the road. He stopped and looked the wounded man over and was so sorry for him. He pitied the stranger, and he poured oil and healing medicines on the hurt places and put on bandages. Then he put him on the beast which he had been riding and took him to a hotel and took care of him over night.

Next day when he had to go on, this good Samaritan gave the keeper of the hotel some money so he would not turn the man out, and he told him to take care of the unfortunate man, and whatever it cost him, he would pay when he came again.

Then Jesus asked, "Now, which of the three men that went by was a neighbor to the man that was hurt by the thieves?"

Can you answer, children? If you can't look in Luke 10:37.—By Mrs. Idona Romine.

ARE WE always being real neighbors?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. Read Luke 10:37; Leviticus 19:9-18 and Mark 12:28-34.
2. Learn Luke 10:27.
3. Draw pictures to tell this story.

WE BELIEVE the coming of Christ is near. Luke 21:25-31. "And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." "Then look up, and lift up your head; for your redemption draweth nigh."

THE SENSES

Two bright little eyes to see
Beautiful things;
Two quick little ears to hear
The bird when he sings.

One queer little nose,
To smell flowers so sweet;
And one little tongue,
To taste things to eat.

Ten fingers quite small,
To touch pussy's soft hair,
These organs of sense,
God has put in my care.

—Thelma E. Lane.

HIS HELPERS

Christ has no hands but our hands, to do His work today;
He has no feet, but our feet, to lead men in His way;
He has no tongue, but our tongue, to tell men how He died;
He has no help, but our help, to bring them to His side.

We are the only Bible this careless world will read;
We are the sinner's Gospel, we are the sinner's creed;
We are the Lord's last message given in deed and word;
What if the type is crooked! What if the print is blurred!

What if our hands are busy with other tasks than His!
What if our feet are walking where sin's allurements is!
What if our tongues are speaking of things His lips would spurn!

How can we hope to help Him, and hasten His return?"

—Author Unknown.

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON X. — March 8, 1931

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

Luke 10:25-37.

Devotional Reading: Matthew 5:38-48

GOLDEN TEXT

Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the Lord. — Leviticus 19:18.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The True Spirit of Christianity.

Basic Truth. "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." Mark 12:31.

Outline. I. Thieves on the Road of Life.
II. The Danger of Religious Formalism.
III. Loving Our Neighbor.

I. Thieves on the Road of Life. The road to Jericho is not the only one upon which men are held up and robbed of all they possess. We all must travel the road to Jericho, for the dangers of life that beset us by the way are no whit less than those which beset the unfortunate traveler of the parable. "The soul, elate with joy today, tomorrow writhes in woe," writes the poet, truly for we never know what perils threaten our safety, our comfort, our very lives and those we hold dear. Just now many are in want and suffering in our country through circumstances over which they have no control. Woe is everywhere. The cry of need is sounding incessantly in our ears.

This is one of the many similar results of sin. The whole world is under its domination. This is the place where "thieves break through and steal," and always will be such until the Master returns to make of it an Eden.

II. The Danger of Religious Formalism. It is a sad commentary on the religious spirit of the times that the priest and the Levite passed by on the other side. When there is misfortune and suffering one expects to look to representatives of the church for assistance, or at least, sympathy. But coldness and scorn was all that was forthcoming for the man who fell among thieves, and the haughty leaders of the Sanhedrin were rebuked by the deeds of mercy performed by this Samaritan who was counted by them as no more than a Gentile dog.

There is grave danger that many churches in our day have forgotten the lesson of the parables. Let us beware of the formalism which builds million dollar churches in which to worship God and turns away the needy from its door; the church which is so engrossed in activities and programs that it forgets the human side of religion; and of all tendencies leading away from that warm, eager spirit of helpfulness that is always ready to lift and to help. The priest and the Levite were products of ecclesiasticism which had lost its heart. Let it not be said of our day that we passed by on the other side.

III. Loving Our Neighbor. Love erects no barriers. It knows no class or race distinction. It even embraces the enemy. If the parable of the Good Samaritan is to mean anything more than a form of words to us, we must recognize that all men are our neighbors. Selfish men develop hates and animosities and wars, and set class against class, group against group, nation against nation. The true spirit of Christianity surmounts all these, and turns the theory of loving our neighbor into a blessed reality.

"Jesus' answer to the lawyer's question, in the fewest words, is this: 'The man who needs you is your neighbor.' And we might say that the progress of the social life of mankind can be measured by the radius that extends from the heart of a man to the circumference of his beneficence. How large is your life? That radius will give you your stature. How large is your church? Measure it by that line. It is no new prescription for life, but a new application of eternal principles: love to God and love to man — and love manifests itself in acts of service."

— Peloubet's Notes.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The parable of the good Samaritan has found its way into the hearts of more people than any of the other parables. Mercy always appeals.

A Friend: When the good Samaritan came to the wounded man, "he was touched by the feelings of his infirmities." He practiced the golden rule. How many times when some one is wounded by trouble, misfortune or mistake, we play the role of the priest and Levite and pass by. When one is in need, be a friend. Cleanse the wounds, heal the sores and soothe the pains of the needy ones, and while you may not be called a good Samaritan, yet you will receive a Samaritan's reward.

Let others the office of priest desire;

And play the part of the Levite entire.

But give me the joy of soothing pain,

Of being a Samaritan in sunshine and rain.

Serving: Our mission on earth is not to be served, but to serve. This service is varied. It is not service to self, but for others and must always be submerged in love.

Help in LOVE to help.

— C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Lev. 19:18.

This saying is a part of the law given through Moses. However it is quoted a number of times in the New Testament. The lawyer quoted it in our lesson today; Christ used it on different occasions, Matt. 19:19 and 22:39; Paul quoted it in Rom. 13:9 and Gal. 5:14, and James used it in James 2:8. It is the second of the two great commandments. Matt. 22:39.

This commandment is second only to "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." In our lesson today it is the man who did the good deed that was neighbor to the other man. If this is always the case, it might be harder to be the neighbor than it would be to love the one who had been neighbor to us. It is much easier to respond to a kindness done to us as a rule than it is to be always ready to do a kindness for another, or in other words, to be neighbor to him. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

"My Father wroeth hitherto, and I work," said Jesus, and by His life gave us an example of true service which is not only the Christian's duty and at the same time a high honor, but a blessed privilege. This relationship of Christ to the Father and also of the Christian to Christ is expressed by such words as, servant, bond servant, slave, bondage, ministry, etc. Paul was proud to thus regard himself as a slave or servant of Christ, Phil. 1:1, and so are we. Jesus' time when here among men was filled with service to mankind and Paul exhorts us, "by love serve one another." Gal. 5:13.

The Samaritan is given as a true example of service. Jesus said, "Go, and do thou likewise." In 1 John 3:17, 18 we read, "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth." — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: Serving and Sharing.

The story of the Good Samaritan is a most interesting one. Be able to tell it in class. What was Jesus trying to teach? Who was keeping the golden rule, the priest, the Levite or the Samaritan? What question had the lawyer asked Jesus? Luke 10:25. How had Jesus answered the question? What did He tell the lawyer to do?

Discuss in class the different ways in which we may keep the golden rule. Read Matthew 5:38 to 48. What is the meaning of, "Resist not evil"? Explain verse 41. We can find opportunities every day of our lives for doing good to others if we will only look for them. Let's try for one week and see if we can keep the golden rule each day. After a while, it will be much easier, for the more we practice, the better we will be. Can you think of a verse that shows what reward Jesus has for those who follow Him? — M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

REQUEST FOR PRAYER

It has been requested that the name of Bro. Roll Brewer of Troy, Ohio, be added to the list of those requesting prayer. Bro. Brewer is a sufferer from a very serious disease and thus far has not received any relief from medicinal science. If the brothers and sisters who believe in prayer will remember Bro. Brewer at the throne of grace, we know that both he and those offering the prayers will be strengthened and uplifted.

ACTIVITIES AT ROCKFORD

The Church of God in Rockford meets at the W. C. T. U. Hall, 1904 N. Main St. We have Sunday School each Sunday morning at 9:45, and morning worship and sermon at 11:00 o'clock. Bro. Earl Thayer is our pastor, and his Sunday morning sermons are very much appreciated. He has given us some very helpful and inspiring sermons from the Old Testament. One, "A Special People and a Special Work", with chart showing the camp of Israel in relation to the tabernacle services, carrying out the antitype in the church and her work, was especially appreciated. The subject for February 22 was, "God's Plan of the Ages".

We have Berean class each Friday evening at 7:45. We are just finishing Senior Book No. 2, and while most of the lessons have been rather difficult, yet we have gained much good from the study of this book. We enjoyed a church social after class on February 13, in the form of a Valentine party.

Bro. and Sr. John Railton were absent from services on Friday night, the 13th, and Sunday on account of sickness. Bro. Railton is our Sunday School Superintendent and Sr. Railton teaches one of the primary classes. So needless to say they were missed and we trust they may soon be in their usual places.

The ladies of the church have a Dorcas society which meets every other Monday night at the homes of the members. Since its organization last fall, we have sent two large boxes of clothing to Mrs. Sanford to be used in her relief work.

Our church group here in Rockford is quite small, being the youngest church in Illinois; but we pray that we may be the means of bringing many to the knowledge of the truth.

We extend a cordial invitation to all to meet with us whenever possible.

AT FONTHILL, ONTARIO

Sunday night a good sized congregation listened to a sermon on Love. Many favorable and appreciative comments were heard at the close of the service.

The middle of the week found the choir spending a very enjoyable evening at the home of Bro. and Sr. Platts.

The sick of our community are as a whole improved. Being able to speak best for Bro. Weldon, we feel that he is gaining a little strength from day to day, though still quite weak. He is now able to dress and spend a few hours of each day about the house. He wishes to thank the many brothers and sisters for the prayers offered in his behalf. And the writer feels she could not conclude this report without thanking our Father for again restoring health to another member of our family, giving us stronger cause than ever to proclaim, "God does answer prayer."

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

We are glad to report that our members who have been ill are very much improved.

Bro. Clyde Randall was called to officiate at the funeral of Mr. George Langdon, father of Mrs. Kenneth Moore. Mr. Langdon, at the age of seventy-two years, died very suddenly of apoplexy.

The Bercans held their last meeting and election of officers at the home of Elsie Moore. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. The next meeting will be held at the home of Dr. Lent. The officers for the coming year are as follows: President, Elsie M. Moore; Vice president, Dan W. Brown; Secretary, Mrs. Grace Lent; Treasurer, Mrs. Moreland; Pianist, Mrs. Lyda Sullivan.

Shortly after Bro. Clyde Randall came to Niagara Falls and Fonthill, the churches here extended a call for a year beginning June 1. We are pleased to report that this call has been accepted, and Bro. Randall will remain with us another year.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Some interesting figures have recently been made public. Our Sunday School enrollment on January 1, 1930, was 163. On January 1, 1931 it was 269, showing an enrollment increase of 106 for the year. The average attendance during January of this year was 265 as opposed to the Rally Day attendance of 218 last fall. Our record attendance for all time was 282, on February 1, this year (this was incorrectly reported two weeks ago).

The above is very encouraging, as well as the steady increase in attendance at the other church services, except that our space is so limited that we are really unable to properly take care of them. We are praying that God may guide us in the way that will be best for all concerned.

The sick are improved at this time, and conditions are now in shape so that a genuine, united effort is to be made with the books which Sr. Boice sent us. We trust that God will direct the results of this effort, also.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

BAPTISM AT LOS ANGELES

After months of thoughtful consideration, and nights spent in earnest prayer, Mrs. Katherine Wilson, wife of Bro. Frank Wilson of this city, made public confession of her faith in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, and was baptized into the name of the Lord for remission of sins, Sunday, February 15, 1931. Sr. Wilson had been a member of another denomination for a great many years, and had considerable opposition to face and overcome from friends and relatives, when she made her decision. She has been a most worthy companion to her husband throughout their married life; and now the crowning glory of their experience together has been brought about by their complete union in the body of Christ.

In addition to Sr. Wilson, the church here has reason to rejoice in that several members of the body who have moved here from the East have recently signified their desire to unite with the local congregation; and on the first Sunday in March a consecration service for the reception of these new members will be held.

G. Eldred Marsh, Pastor.

ADDITIONAL LOS ANGELES NOTES

The pastor and his wife recently had the pleasure of visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Howell, near Orange, California. Sr. Howell will be remembered as Sr. Lulu White, formerly of Colo, Iowa. The home is located in Mojeska Canyon, one of many beautiful little valleys in this part of the state. We regret that Mr. and Mrs. Howell live too far from Los Angeles to attend the services there, as Sr. Howell was a very efficient worker in Iowa in the past, and her assistance would be most welcome in our Sunday School and church.

Bro. and Sr. Enos Elton and their daughter of Tustin, though isolated from the church, are still as deeply interested in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God and the coming of the Lord as they were when they were active participants in the work in Nebraska. We enjoyed very much spending a short time with them in their home, and in extending to them greetings from relatives in the east who were present at the last General Conference.

We were sorry to find Sr. C. E. Hatch of Santa Ana not so well as usual, when we called on them the other day. Bro. and Sr. Hatch, though not able to be regular attendants at the services of the church, continue to maintain the interest in the gospel which has distinguished the Hatch family for at least three generations. May God bless and keep them, until the Lord comes.

G. Eldred Marsh, Pastor.

FINANCES

It is not necessary to advise the readers of The Herald that there is a general financial depression throughout the country. Many strong financial institutions have been obliged to give up because of the extra and unexpected strain that has been placed upon them. Many other concerns have had to do extra financing in order to carry on, in hope that conditions will soon become better and thus enable them to successfully recover from their positions.

This general nation-wide condition has been noticeably affecting the National Bible Institution for a year and a half. It has affected it in this way: many who were regular contributors to the cause have felt themselves obliged to withhold or lessen their contributions. Inasmuch as the National Bible Institution is, in its religious phase, wholly dependent upon contributions, this of course, has limited our financial income.

It is not the intention of your board to allow this to injure or strain the financial standing of the National Bible Institution. The foregoing statement is made with a view to call the attention of those of our number who have not especially felt the financial strangle of the day, and to suggest to them, if they can find it opportune, that they will contribute a little more till their brethren can recover and re-cooperate. This will aid in continuing the work more nearly at its full effectiveness. In case this is not done, it will probably be necessary for your board to curb some of the activities and thus reduce the need for funds.

At our annual conference the mind and wish of the conference people as a whole is generally indicated. The work that is to be undertaken and carried out is agreed upon by the conference and the board is directed to execute the same. Thus plans are laid which, ac-ording to the usual contribution to the work, can be executed. But if we find that the strain is too heavy upon the brotherhood, it will seem better to limit the amount of work undertaken in accordance with the funds that are being contributed.

Had the Dollar-A-Month pledge been subscribed to by the 1000 which were sought, the full program could be executed for the year. But inasmuch as this pledge is, up to date, below the half-way mark, it has meant a financial shortage thus far. If this is to continue, it will be necessary to discontinue some of the overhead and thus discontinue some phases of the work.

We urge that one and all who are interested will unite in prayer and action with reference to this condition.

F. L. Austin, Exec. Sec'y.

EASTER HERALD

Judging from the response of former years, it is estimated by the office workers that another special Easter number of The Restitution Herald will not only be appreciated by the regular readers, but that it can be made beneficial to many others. If this is to be done, it will require a hearty and prompt co-operation of many. Our present plans are that the issue of March 31 will be the Easter Number. Next week's issue will contain a special insert which we ask each reader to consider and to unite with one and all by promptly returning it to this office with the names of friends or acquaintances to whom Easter copies are to be sent, together with contribution to cover expenses for these extra numbers and for the extra cost of the issue in general.

Last Sunday evening Bro. Austin gave the first of a series of pre-Easter sermons on Christ. "The Holy Child", was his subject. A good sized audience was present and listened attentively. The music by the men's chorus and the junior choir, and the organ voluntaries by Sr. Rogers are being appreciated greatly each Sunday.

NEW BEREAN BOOKS

Your attention is called to a notice concerning the new Berean books about which so many inquiries have been received. This notice will be found on the Berean page of this issue.

TITHING IN HARD TIMES

The Layman Company has twelve new bulletins on its list, including one written especially for the present day, "Tithing in Hard Times". This is the best of all times to spread the truth about tithing. Minds and hearts are open.

Send post card for pamphlet, "Teaching the Church to Tithe", containing full directions for a ten-weeks program of silent church-wide education at trifling expense. Non-profit, non-sectarian, non-legalistic, but simple, clear and workable. Address The Layman Company, 730 Rush St., Chicago, Illinois, and please mention The Restitution Herald, and give your denomination.

HERALD RECEIPTS

A. N. Harlan; Norman John McLeod; C. A. Dickinson; Herman Laning; Sylvester Logan; O. W. Umphrey; S. W. Harlan; Mrs. Mildred Huey; Sydney Magaw; Mrs. Chas. A. Harris; E. R. Drabenstott; C. R. Carr; Wm. J. Eckert; H. A. Sheets; John B. Davis; Mrs. Annie Hogan; J. W. Lent; Mrs. C. A. Bartholomew; Ashby Updike; Mrs. C. S. Prime; A. L. Corbaley; Mrs. C. M. Southwick; Mrs. Jennie McDonald; E. Louise May; Mrs. David Long.

AT GOLDEN RULE HOME YEARS YOUNG

Dinner had been called, and all were gathering around the table, ten of us. Alice had forgotten for a little that this was her birthday. But as she sat down, the cake shone so prettily before her, she clasped her hands in joy, and said, "O, I am twenty-one today". How we laughed! for she is full of fun. Her birthday is on the twenty-first, and so instead of saying she was eighty, she said she was twenty-one.

After Bro. Williamson had expressed our thanks, Alice began to repeat the ninety-first Psalm: "I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust." She went on quoting the beautiful words, saying at last, "This is my Psalm, and I think we all should claim it for its beauty and strength which we all need."

Sr. Alice Kerr is our dear, quiet boarder. She never obtrudes herself upon anyone, but sits quietly reading most of the time. For she is totally deaf, but has good eyes and reads much, mostly something of a religious nature, which she loves more than anything else. She can see the funny side of anything and when she sees us laughing, we stop and write out the event so she can laugh too.

For many years she has put her trust in the tender, helpful God, and she believes the words of the eleventh verse: "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways." She was much delighted to read her birthday cards, and she kissed the pretty handkerchief which dear Sr. Renner gave her with her card. She said, "I hope before I have another birthday the dear Lord will come," and we could all say, "Amen, Come Lord Jesus, come quickly!"

Bro. George Brown also had a birthday this week, and blew out ninety candles on his cake. He was the recipient of several cards and beautiful flowers. At Bro. Austin's request he gave us a few minutes talk Sunday morning, rehearsing some of his early day's experiences.

Just think what a time the Sunday School Secretary will have counting the pennies rattling into the birthday box, ninety and eighty. Whew! wish the birthdays were more often. It pays to have old pilgrims around, occasionally, eh? May we all be found worthy of a place in that coming kingdom is our prayer. M. A. W.

ABRAHAM SEITZ

Abraham Seitz was born in Montgomery County, Ohio, November 18, 1843, and died at his home in Clarksville, Iowa, February 10, 1931. At the age of three years he removed with his parents to Lee County, Illinois. There he grew to manhood, and from there he enlisted in Company "K", 3rd Regiment of the Illinois Cavalry, serving his country during the Civil War. Following the war, he came to Butler County, Iowa, in 1865. Here he was married to Sarah M. Patterson on April 15, 1866. Five sons came to bless their union. Two sons and the mother preceded the father and husband in death.

On July 2, 1914, he was married to Ella P. Neal, who with the remaining children, Fred Seitz of Clarksville, Iowa, Forrest Seitz of Oakland, California, and Earl Seitz of Anamosa, Iowa, together with six grandchildren and other relatives mourn his loss.

He became a member of the church in 1875, and was highly esteemed by all for his exemplary life and generosity. A regular attendant at our yearly conference, he will be greatly missed. We often held preaching services in his home. He was always blessed with good health in all his long life, till last year, when his body gave out in different ways at the same time, due to the weakness of age. His last very severe illness was short, during which he was well cared for by his wife.

Funeral services were held in the federated church at Clarksville on February 13, and he was buried in the nearby cemetery. The blessed memory of such a life is a precious heritage to leave the survivors.

J. W. Williams.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD
Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BASKET WEAVE

THE NEW BINDING FOR OXFORD BIBLES

Grained with basket weave design. Highly finished calf leather, of a dark brown color. Button clasp keeps volume closed and protected. Convenient to carry. Oxford India paper. Six maps.

This is a beautiful book for your own use or for a gift. Prices range from $4.25 to 10.50.

Write for complete descriptions.

"GETHSEMANE"

The Golden Rule Sunday School Class of the Oregon Church of God has at this time a few pictures of the painting, "Gethsemane", which shows Christ in prayer.

These pictures are very appropriate for Easter. A real value at One Dollar each.

Order from the chairman of the sales committee, John Denchfield, Oregon, Illinois.

FRIENDSHIP

By Richard LeCronc

IT HAS been said that a man's friend is one who knows all about him, and still likes him. It can be said, with equal truthfulness, that the depth of a man's friendship for another can be measured by the manner in which he receives criticism from that friend.

Man loves to be flattered, but he is most averse to having himself or his actions called into question in any way whatsoever. The man who gladly receives flattery and praise deeply resents criticism or correction, even though he knows it to be just, from any but the very closest of his friends.

Ahab, king of the ten tribes of Israel, was a man of this type. He had gathered about himself men whom he knew could be depended upon to flatter him and say nothing but good concerning him. Accordingly, when Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, suggested that they ask God concerning the joint war which they were carrying on against the Syrians, he called in four hundred of his chosen prophets. True to his expectations, they prophesied good concerning him. But Jehoshaphat, knowing what type of prophets they were, was not satisfied with their answer, and he inquired of Ahab in the following words; "Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we might enquire of him?" 1 Kings 22:7.

Then it was that Ahab revealed his true character, for he replied: "There is yet one man, Micaiah the son of Im-lah, by whom we may enquire of the Lord: but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil." 1 Kings 22:8. Ahab did not regard God as a Friend sufficiently close that he, Ahab, would tolerate criticism from Him. He went rather to those whom he knew could be depended upon to praise him in whatever he did.

Christ said, "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his Lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you."

If, then, we as Christians are friends of Christ, we should be willing to accept His criticisms of us and our mode of living as those of a friend, and without resentment. We know that a friend criticises not because of any wish to harm, but because he knows that what he has to say is for our own good, and that we will profit by listening to him.

Let us, as Christians and friends of Christ, examine ourselves in the light of His teachings to determine whether or not we are living in accordance with His instructions. If, perchance, we find that we have fallen short of the Christian ideal, and that in order to correct our errors we will have to undergo some privation or suffering, let us remember that Christ is our dearest Friend, and that He gave us the gospel and its commandments, because He loved us. He placed restrictions upon us that we might gain the greater freedom.

IS YOUR INCOME SMALLER?

By a Club Member of the Training Class

WHEN the Israelites had drifted away into idolatry after the separation of the kingdom, God sent His prophet Elijah to the people to tell them of their sin. They were turning more and more to Baal worship and were forsaking God.

Elijah was sent to Ahab, the king, to tell him of an approaching drought. After telling him that there was to be no rain, Elijah departed into the wilderness over near the Jordan River and was there fed by ravens sent from God. From there God told him to go up to a place near Mount Carmel, where a widow was to take care of him.

Elijah went to this place and saw the woman gathering sticks to build a fire. He asked her for something to eat, and she told him she had only enough for one meal for herself and her son. Elijah told her God would replenish her supply, and so she gave him to eat. True to Elijah's word, her meal and oil were replenished, and she and her son were saved from starvation.

This widow gave, not out of her abundance, but out of her poverty. She gave, not to be seen of men or for glory, but because she had faith that God would provide her with the necessary food. She was blessed in this way and Elijah, through God's power, raised her son from the dead. God can do wonderful things if we but trust Him as she did.

Several days ago an elderly sister sent in ninety cents instead of one dollar as her monthly pledge. She could not send any more because of the fact that her sole income had been only $2.50 during the entire month. And yet, many of us that have abundance in proportion to what this woman has, cannot afford to give just one small dollar to the work of the Lord each month.

Since last year at conference time the N. B. I. has been trying to raise pledges of one dollar a month from a thousand people to carry on the general work. Thus far they have about four hundred pledges. The general work will progress only in proportion as it is supported by the people.

If you can give as the widow gave to Elijah and who gave as unto the Lord, and in faith believing that God is able to supply your every need, you too will be blessed as was this woman when her son was raised from the dead.

Friends all over the land, if one sister can give ninety cents out of $2.50, how much more can the rest of us give out of what we get?

Send in your dollar and see if the Lord does not open the windows of heaven and shower His blessings upon you and give you more in return.

"AT THE FINAL RECKONING, the little things done in a loving, Christian spirit, will surprise us by the magnitude of the reward they bring." — Religious Herald.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, MARCH 3, 1931

NUMBER 22

WHAT SHALL THE END BE?

CONCERNING THOSE THAT OBEY NOT THE GOSPEL OF GOD

By Rufus A. Curtis

THE ABOVE question admits of no ambiguity. It is plainly stated and should have an answer equally explicit. But owing to the conflicting theories as to man's nature and destiny, as held by professed religionists today, their answers to the question, propounded by Peter in his first epistle (4:17), are as opposite from each other as the antipodes.

Some hold that man is endowed with immortality, hence he can never come to an end, so far as his being is concerned. But it is the condition with which his endless being is affected, that may come to an end.

It is not the part of wisdom to assume that man is immortal, and to reason from that premise that he cannot come to an end. It is best to "prove all things" before placing too much credence in any proposition, before holding fast to it. (1 Thess. 5:21; Prov. 18:17.) The moment we grasp the truth that man is "mortal", "corruptible", and liable to "perish", we will be in a favorable condition to grasp an equally important truth, that endless life will necessitate a miraculous change of nature before any of Adam's descendants will possess immortality. (Job 4:17; Rom. 1:23; John 3:14-16; 1 Cor. 15:51-54.) The Bible doctrine of conditional immortality can scatter the murky clouds of confusion that cluster around the doom of the impenitent, placed there largely by a faulty exegesis.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:7, 8.

"Perdition" awaits "ungodly men". (2 Peter 3:7, 9.) The enemies of the cross of Christ, "who mind earthly things", will eventually discover that it shall be ill with them, for the reward of their hands shall be given them, "whose end is destruction". (Isa. 3:11; Phil. 3:18, 19.) Those who wilfully reject the word of God, and put it from them, "contradicting and blaspheming," will never have the unspeakable gift of everlasting life thrust upon them. (Acts 13:44-46; 2 Cor. 9:15.) Being unworthy of everlasting life, the Bible informs us they "are worthy of death", its opposite, "for the wages of sin is death". (Rom. 6:21-23; 1:28-32.)

The question propounded by Peter (1 Peter 4:17), strongly implies to my mind that wilful rejectors of the gospel of God will some time cease to be; "for yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be". (Psa. 37:9, 10.) "But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away." Psa. 37:20.

The "unquenchable fire" of Gehenna, "will burn up the chaff", for "the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Matt. 3:12; Micah 4:1. From that time forth "they shall be as though they had not been." Obadiah 16.

But someone may say, "Will not the unrighteous class go away into everlasting punishment?" Most assuredly they will! But as our Creator beseeches us to reason together with Him (Isa. 1:18), why not follow His example, and reason together with one another upon so momentous a question as the everlasting destiny of our race? It is certainly permissible to "produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob." (Isa. 41:21.)

The language in Matthew 25:46 does not state the nature of the punishment to be inflicted upon the wicked, but only states its duration as "everlasting". We will have to look elsewhere for testimony in order to prove what the nature of the everlasting punishment will consist of. (Isa. 8:20; 1 Thess. 5:21.) In Paul's second epistle to the church at Thessalonica, both the duration and nature of the pun-

(Continued on page 344)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

“Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, . . . make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever.”

CHRISTIANITY A GOD-GIVEN BLESSING

CHRISTIANITY is for today as well as for the rewards of tomorrow. It is the fabric of God's revealed truths, turned over to man for his present day needs—for his blessings, for his guidance, for his establishment in Christ. True, its eternal rewards are deferred until tomorrow. But there is a largeness of benefit that Christianity bestows upon today.

Christianity is not man-made; it is wholly God-made. God alone, through His Son, has clearly defined its terms, its conditions, its requirements. Every amendment or change made by man is but a defacement of what God, through Christ, has presented. It is deception. Such changes strongly tend to lead man away from the very heart of the Master and more fully into the deceptive and sinful heart of man.

Listen to Paul as he by inspiration instructs his Thessalonian brethren in Christ:

“Quench not the spirit.”—1 Thess. 5:19.

This evidently is God's Spirit. It definitely teaches that God bestows of His Spirit upon followers of Christ.

Christian followers are exhorted by Paul not to dampen, or hinder, or repress the Spirit of God, as it is presented to them. Indeed, the reverse would be beneficial: to praise God for that Spirit, to joy in the Spirit, and to manifest and reveal that Spirit's influence upon and over the life.

Again, “Despise not prophesyings”—v. 20.

This word, “prophesyings”, nearly always in the New Testament carries with it the added thought of teachings.

Listen to God's words; heed His inspired teachings; walk in obedience to them.

This, too, has much to do with the proper and accurate development of the Christian in his Christianity.

Again, “And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ”—v. 23.

“Sanctify.” That is, set you aside for God's own specific service, for His work; set the individual aside from the world, away from the world's great following, unto the discovery of the will of God and to obedience thereto.

“Preserved blameless.” Without just and true accusation, preserved throughout the daily activities of life; preserved blameless in all the association of fellow beings, in all business transactions, in all social intercourse, unto all Christian enthusiasm.

“Your whole spirit and soul and body.” Your entire being, any part, any portion of which might easily slip and slide into the depths of iniquity. Preserved in every part.

This preservation is for the present day. This activity is for the present. It carries with it present day rewards, blessings, peace.

“Unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.” This preservation is to you, and when Christ shall have returned, He will be present to lead, to guide. Till then, Paul prays God that He will preserve, keep. God's Spirit is essential to this preservation. God's influence must be constantly accepted, constantly utilized.

God is building those who by faith follow His Son, into ever increased and strengthened lives, for the days when His Son shall have returned to establish everlasting righteousness.

Christianity is that enveloping environment and that inspiring influence which is for the selecting, and the sanctifying, and the upbuilding, and the preservation of such people unto God and unto God's Son.

PRAYER

AS A forceful illustration to teach His disciples “that men ought always to pray, and not to faint”, Jesus gave to them, Luke 18:1, a parable. His parable was of a most unjust judge; a judge who, according to the Jewish custom, should, among other things, look after the legal needs of widows. The parable cites a widow who repeatedly went to the appointed judge for redress against an unjust oppressor. Though the judge was so far from God and from man as to have little thought of anything but of himself, yet, lest he should be over annoyed by the frequent approaches of the needy woman, the judge is quoted as saying, “I will avenge her”.

The Lord then declares His lesson for His disciples.

(Continued on page 343)

"WHAT IS MINE IS THINE"

LIFE, that throbbing, pulsating essence that beats and surges all over this old world, comes from one fountain head, the Giver and Source of all life, God, the Creator. He it is that gives us life and makes us feel that exhilarating good health. Love, the feeling that sways the universe, and without which life would be dull and uninteresting, is from God; "God is love". Hope, faith, joy, and all those feelings which make us look ahead with joyful anticipation for something even better, are all inspired by God.

Things material, things spiritual, all that we ever had, all that we have, all that we ever hope to have—these all come from God. All that we ever were, are, or hope to be is the result of God's doings and not our own. There is nothing we can name that God did not have a hand in; His purpose is behind it all.

What is ours is His. That is why men in their religious fervor have not withheld their very lives, when called upon to give them up in the service of God. Stephen, for example, suffered and died, because in his devotion he returned the love of God with a service which brought glory to the name of God and advanced the cause of Jesus Christ. He counted his own life as nothing in comparison with all that God held out to him. Paul was beaten, persecuted, thrown into prison, and killed because he persisted in following his Lord and reciprocating the love of God, as we see from the faithful service he rendered.

Indeed, those who withheld not their very lives from the service of the Lord are numerous: Stephen, Paul, Peter, those of the persecutions of the Roman emperors, those of the Spanish Inquisition, and all those of all time who have been fired with the religious zeal of martyrdom. Others were driven into exile, became destitute, and did many mighty works in service to God, thus returning love and devotion to Him because of their realization that all they had and all that they were came from Him.

There are many who are reading this who would be ready, if called upon, to suffer persecution, many who would gladly lose their property, or suffer any loss, and many who would make the supreme sacrifice, if called upon to do it, in devoted service to God. Many would be fired with zeal in time of trouble. You, too, would be only too glad to show your love for your Master and your God then. You, too, would, say, "All that I have is Thine".

The Dollar-A-Month Club drive to obtain sufficient funds to carry on the gospel work of the National Bible Institution has been in progress for about a year. Out of the thousands who constitute our church, a few hundred have responded nobly. They are usually the ones who do not have such a great quantity of this world's goods, but they realize more keenly perhaps that what they do have comes from God.

Here we see some whose incomes average less than twenty dollars per month; yet out of those incomes each one supports himself or herself as the case may be and keeps his or her pledge paid up on time. Then besides that each one uses a part of his or her income to support the local work. You will find such ones scattered all over this land of ours, among old and young. They realize that what they do have comes from God, and they are willing to return part of it to Him to carry on the work.

Many of these Club members tithe; many of them more than tithe. If some with small incomes can do this, what can be said for the many who have received a larger share of this world's goods from the hand of the Lord, and who yet find it inconvenient to return one little dollar per month to be used in the Lord's work?

Count your blessings; name them over; you know them. Meditate on what the Lord has done for you, both spiritually and physically. How many of you love the Lord so much that you would give up all your goods for Him if necessary? How many would die for Him? Then perhaps you would give one dollar every month to be used to advance His cause.

Do you dare to say, "What is mine is Thine. Naught will I withhold"? Make that the rule of your life, and you will find that what remains with you, by the grace of God, will go much further, be it lands, money, or life itself.

— By a Club Member.

WHY A MAN SHOULD GO TO CHURCH

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S NINE REASONS

1. In this actual world, a churchless community, a community where men have abandoned and scoffed at or ignored their religious needs, is a community on the rapid down grade.

2. Church work and church attendance mean the cultivation of the habit of feeling responsibility for others.

3. There are enough holidays for most of us. Sundays differ from other holidays in the fact that there are fifty-two of them every year. Therefore, on Sundays go to church!

4. Yes, I know all the excuses. I know that one can worship the Creator in a grove of trees, or by a running brook, or in a man's own house as well as in church. But I also know, as a matter of cold fact, that the average man does not thus worship.

5. He may not hear a good sermon at church. He will hear a sermon by a good man who, with his wife, is engaged all of the week in making hard lives a little easier.

6. He will listen to and take part in reading some beautiful passages from the Bible. And if he is not familiar with the Bible, he has suffered a loss.

7. He will take part in the singing of some good hymns.

8. He will meet and nod or speak to good, quiet neighbors. He will come away feeling a little more charitable toward all the world, even toward those excessively foolish young men who regard churchgoing as a soft performance.

9. I advocate a man's joining in church work for the sake of showing his faith by his works.

BE A BOOSTER

If you think your church is best,
Tell 'em so.
If you'd have it lead the rest,
Help it grow.
When there is anything to do,
Let them always count on you,
You'll feel good when it is through,
Don't you know?

If you are used to giving knocks,
Change your style;
Throw bouquets instead of rocks,
For a while.
Boost your pastor and your church;
Knock the knocker off his perch;
Lift the stumbler from the lurch,
With a smile.

When a stranger from afar
Comes along,
Tell him who and what you are,
Make it strong.
Never flatter, never bluff,
Tell the truth, for that's enough.
Be a booster, that's the stuff,
Don't just belong.

— The Minneapolis Messenger.

TIME FOR CHURCH

A MAN whose name is well known in business and religious circles of this country tells his experience. When he was a boy, his parents lived three miles out in the country, but every Sunday the whole family drove in to attend the gospel services, including Bible school. Some Sundays he would have preferred not to go, but in good season his mother came around and said: "William, it's time to get ready for church." If he would sometimes like to get out under a tree with a new book, his mother would come along and say: "William, it's time to get ready for church." And they all went.

When he got to be eighteen years old, he went to New York to clerk in a store. Of course he felt strange there on his first Sunday in a great city, and he accepted the invitation of a fellow clerk to go out to a park and see some of the sights. As he was sitting in one of the seats there he heard as distinctly as ever his mother say, "William, it's time to get ready for church." He started and looked around as though he more than half expected to see her. But, of course, she was not there. He then went over to another section of the park, but soon again heard: "William, it's time to get ready for church." He then excused himself to the other clerk, took the street car back to the city and went to church, and has kept it up.—Selected.

THE WORTH OF A MAN

By Lydia Railsback

EVERYTHING in existence, from the smallest atom to the largest kingdom, without doubt, has some intrinsic value. Perhaps no two persons would put the same estimate on the same things, and what men think of the value of an object, whether animate or inanimate, in all probability would differ widely from God's estimate of the same thing. Man's estimation is of little consequence, when compared with the way God looks at valuation; and the only way we have of knowing what God thinks is as we glean it from the sacred Word.

When the creation was finished, the Creator pronounced everything not only good, but "very good". This included man, and so we know that he was good in the beginning. But man disobeyed his Creator, and thereby lost his high position. Then what was he worth, something or nothing?

Christ says, Luke 12:6, 7, "Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows." Compared with sparrows, a part of God's creatures, man is of far more value.

On another occasion, when Christ was being reproved by the Pharisees because He was doing things on the sabbath, we read, "And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? that they might accuse him. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep?" Matthew 12:10-12.

So compared with another of God's creatures, man takes the preference in valuation. Five sparrows sold for two farthings. We are not told the value of the sheep, but man is of much greater value than it.

Now listen to this. Man is not his own, for he was bought with a price, a price far above rubies and gold, a price unequalled by anything of which we have knowledge. And a dear price it was, as man was bought with the precious blood of Jesus. Read, 1 Cor. 6:20; Acts 19:28; 1 Peter 1:19.

For nothing else in the whole creation has there been paid such a price. Man stands at the head of the list. What is his worth? Any article is supposed to be worth its purchase price. Many times we think we are of little worth or very small in God's sight, and maybe we are, but when I think of the price that has been paid I do not believe that God, our Father, would spend so much for something that is of no value to Him.

I do not want to be puffed up nor "swellheaded", but I do think every Christian should be worth the purchase price, and that we should endeavor to live in such a manner that we may be used by the Father.

GATHERING UP THE PARTICLES

By Richard LeCrone

IT IS not uncommon to hear people say that they do not believe in the literal resurrection from the dead because they do not understand it. They say that they fail to understand how God can bring together the fragments of a human body, once it has become decomposed in death, and bind them together into a living organism once more. They point to the illustration of the man who, during the course of his travels left various parts of his anatomy in widely separated parts of the earth.

For instance, a man had a leg shot off in Europe; he had an arm amputated in China; and after losing other parts of his body in various portions of the globe, he finally died and was buried in America. Or, they point to the man who lost his life in the sea, and the sea has wafted the decomposed particles of his body into the far corners of the earth. "How," they argue, "would it be possible to gather up these tiny particles of clay from off the bed of the ocean, separate them from those of every other man, and form them again into the original man?"

We find nothing in the Bible that would seem to indicate that God would find it necessary to gather up the original particles of dust in order to reconstruct the original man. It is not the dust from which he is made that determines that a man shall be different in form and character from every other man upon the face of the earth. I do not suppose that the dust from which God formed the first man was any different from that of which all of us are composed.

In Genesis 2:7 we read: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." It was not the dust of the ground, but the combination of that with the breath of life, which made him a living soul. Surely God could have formed that same dust into different features, and could have put into that form a different nature, had He so chosen. Could He not then, at the resurrection, put the same features upon and the same breath of life within a different lump of clay than that of which the man was originally composed, and still have the same man?

Science tells us that the cells of the body gradually wear out and are replaced by new ones in such a way that we have an entirely different body every seven years. It does not follow, however, that we become a different man with new characteristics every seven years, simply because our body is composed of different cells than it was composed of seven years before. No, it is not the dust of which we are formed which determines who, and what we are. It must be something else that only God can give.

Granting, however, that it would be necessary for God to gather up the original bits of man from being scattered over the face of the earth, would it be more of a miracle than the formation of man in his present state? We will all agree that our bodies are composed of materials taken into the body through the mouth, in the form of food and drink.

All right then, whence came that orange that you ate for breakfast? Where did you get that chocolate that you drank, and from whence came the water and the milk that was used in making it? Where was the wheat raised that was made into the bread that you ate with that breakfast? From what part of the world came the pineapple that you ate for lunch, and upon what soil were the olives that you had for dinner raised?

Point out to me, if you can, the plot of ground from which the clay of which you are composed was taken. I think you will have to admit that God gathered the particles from the far corners of the earth.

SOLOMON DEDICATES THE TEMPLE

FROM the twenty-sixth chapter of First Chronicles and the twenty-sixth to the twenty-eighth verses it would seem that a fund consecrated to the future temple had been accumulating since the days of Samuel. Practically, however, there was no real movement or clearly defined purpose until the idea found fitting soil in David's mind and grew up to master him. To prepare for the building of the house of the Lord, which was to be "exceeding magnificent", was the passion of David's latter years, and when Solomon came to the throne, he found awaiting him the plans for the building, the treasure to build it, and a solemn injunction from his father to undertake the work as a commission from the Lord. The best word to be spoken of Solomon is that he accepted the task as a religious duty, and that the temple was built not only in the name of religion, but in a religious manner.

As for the temple itself there is little to be added to the description furnished us by the inspired writers. It is useless to undertake to form any conception of its appearance. That the Scriptures do not give us the information needed to form a mental picture of it is evident from the fact that no two models that architects have made from the specifications furnished are alike.

Opinions vary also as to the magnificence of the structure. By many it has been regarded as the most splendid edifice ever erected. Others have declared it unworthy of comparison with the magnificent temples of Assyria, Babylon or Egypt.

Perhaps it is nearer the truth to say that for size the temple proper was insignificant, while for magnificence it was unequalled by any religious edifice in the world. As for its size it should be remembered that it was built for God alone and not for a worshiping congregation; the congregation stood without. There was no need that the building which contained the holy of holies should be large; though the buildings and courts around the temple proper necessarily covered a great space.

(Continued on page 346)

PAUL'S LETTER TO THE GALATIANS

By Lyman Booth

STRABO tells us that Galatia was also called Gallo-Graecia, and derived its name from the Gauls. It was a comparatively small district in Asia Minor, and was occupied by the descendants of the Gauls, who advanced into Italy and Greece in the third century B. C. Driven in that direction, they forced their way into Asia Minor and were pent up in a narrow strip of land between the central ranges of mountains. At first they were barbarians, but after mingling with the Greeks, they became subject to Greek civilization and customs, and were finally made subjects of the Romans about the year 190 B. C.

They prospered financially by the constant traffic of the Armenian caravans to the Hellespont. Many Jews settled there for trading purposes, and the inhabitants became a mixture of Gauls, Greeks, Romans, and Hebrews. Their possessions were near Lycaonia, Lystra and Iconium.

It is supposed that they had retained their native tongue and customs at the time that the gospel was first preached among them. Some writers have endeavored to show it probable that this was during the first journey of Paul and Barnabas through that particular region (Acts 14); though Galatia is not mentioned, yet "the region round about Lycaonia" may be supposed to include Galatia.

Some who attempt to fix the date of their conversion to an earlier period, are not sustained by any scriptural account. It is plain, however, that the Galatians generally were idolatrous Gentiles before their conversion. The apostle was not permitted by circumstances to spend much time among them, because of his numerous appointments, yet he asserts, in a way which challenges refutation, that he conferred miraculous gifts on them.

Soon after he left them, some professed converts to Christianity who were very zealous for the Mosaic law, appeared among them, drawing them away from the true gospel, to depend on ceremonial observances, and to fruitless endeavors of establishing their own righteousness. The way in which the apostle, with the firmest decision and apparent severity, regards the false gospel, is very plainly shown by his decisive arguments. This shows that he considered the very life of Christianity at stake. Yet his opposition to this perversion of Christianity does not, in the least degree, lead him to overlook its holy and practical tendency. And in this respect, this epistle forms a striking contrast to the overzealous and vehement earnestness of numbers for a part of Christianity, while another part of equal importance is overlooked, if not treated with contempt.

Some hold different opinions as to the time this epistle was written. Most of them, however, agree that the postscript which dates it from Rome is incorrect. It is possible that it was written during the apostle's residence in Corinth; though some fix the date at the time during which the apostle resided at Antioch, after his first journey with Barnabas through Asia Minor, and after the decrees were delivered to the churches. The former opinion is more generally accepted, and indeed it is not certain that the apostle had been in Galatia before his second journey through Asia Minor. And the objection to the epistle being written at a later period, arising from the decree that had been sent by the apostle to the church, which, as some have thought, may have excused him from the necessity of it at that time, seems of little weight.

The apostle had boldly decided against the ceremonial law being imposed on the Gentile converts, but they had not shown that the Gentiles, by voluntarily submitting to it, went about to establish their own righteousness, thus virtually renouncing the gospel.

Paul and Timothy visited Galatia about A. D. 52 on his second missionary journey and preached the gospel to them. And though detained there by sickness (Gal. 4:13, 14) they converted many Jews and Gentiles (Gal. 3:27, 28). He visited the country again on his third journey (Acts 18:23). While some had been converted to Judaism, they welcomed the apostle with peculiar fervor (4:14) and received his announcement of a crucified Savior with joy and gladness.

With respect to the cause which induced Paul to write, it is quite evident from the epistle that judaizing teachers had appeared among the Galatians, after the apostle had left them, who boldly taught that it was necessary to salvation to observe the rite of circumcision, and to keep the law of Moses. It appears that those teachers at that time declared that Paul was not an original apostle, that he was not an eyewitness of the life of Christ, and had received from the church alone the authority to preach. Therefore, the epistle is largely a vindication of his independent apostolic authority, and the defense of the great doctrine of justification by faith.

Paul severely reproved them for departing from the gospel which he had preached among them, and he pronounced every one accursed who should preach a different one. He told them plainly that he had received his gospel commission directly from Jesus Christ, and that he did not go up to Jerusalem until three years thereafter, and that he saw only Peter and James while there.

He also gave an account of another visit to Jerusalem fourteen years later, at which time he had an interview with James, Cephas, and John, who extended to him the right hand of fellowship and approved of his labor among the Gentiles. He stated that at Antioch he reproved Peter for inconsistency in his conduct in respecting Jews and Gentiles. He also set forth the doctrine of justification by faith in Christ without the works of the Mosaic law (chapters 1 and 2). He remonstrated with the Galatians and charged them with turning to the works of the flesh after beginning in the Spirit.

He then showed that Abraham's justification by faith was prophetic and typical of the justification of the Gentiles by faith in Christ; that the law was a schoolmaster to bring them to Christ, who hath freed us from the curse of the law, and that now we are no longer under a schoolmaster, or under bondage, but we are the sons of God. He reminded them of their former ardent affection for him, under the allegory of the two sons of Abraham, Ishmael by the bondwoman, Agur, and Isaac by a free woman, Sarah. He showed that the children of the Sinaitic covenant (Agur) are in bondage, while the children of the free woman, the faithful in Christ, belonging to the heavenly Jerusalem, are free.

Paul exhorted the Galatians to stand fast in the liberty which Christ had given them, and stated that in depending upon circumcision for salvation, they received no benefit from Christ and were bound to keep the whole law. He warned them not to use their liberty for a cloak in which to serve the flesh, and he affirmed that "thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" is the sum of the law. He gave them a list of the deeds of the flesh, and also of the fruits of the Spirit (chapters 3, 4 and 5).

He exhorted the spiritually minded to restore anyone overtaken in a fault, and he admonished all to bear one another's burdens. He warned them against self-conceit and exhorted them not to be weary in well-doing. He dwelt extensively on the nature of Christian freedom and warned the Galatians against its abuse. He exhorted them to let faith work by love and to walk in the Spirit (5th and 6th chapters).

P R A Y E R

(Continued from Editorial Page)

God is not unjust. God longs to bless those who are true to Him.

The conclusion then is, "Shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?"

"I tell you that he will avenge them speedily."

Jesus teaches that prayer should be offered again and again; that no individual who truly feels himself in service to God and in need of God's help should ever cease presenting his petition to God.

Day after day, that petition should be repeated and emphasized.

As the petitioner thus continues, he will undoubtedly come to discover, from time to time, any errors in his motives or in his personal attitude toward God or perhaps in the thing asked, and he will earnestly correct any such errors as the days go by.

Thus his repeated prayer benefits, rectifies himself, even before he receives God's answer.

But Christ's one final assurance to such petitioners is this:

"I tell you that he will avenge them speedily."

God's recognition of and reply to the "fervent prayer of a righteous man" is assured by the Savior.

FIVE TESTS OF FRIENDSHIP

IN PORTRAYING the Sunday School lesson for March fifteenth, the following thoughts are drawn from Luke 11:1-36, giving the guiding principles leading toward fellowship with our Savior.

FRIENDSHIP IN PRAYER. Luke's form of the Lord's prayer is found in verses 1 to 4. It was given in answer to the disciples' request for instruction in the great art of prayer, and they went to the preeminent Teacher of that art. No one ever prayed as Jesus did, because no one ever came so close to the Father. No one, therefore, ever gained such wonderful and blessed results from prayer as He did.

But as through obedience we gain more of Christ's spirit and enter into fuller friendship with Him, prayer will mean ever more to us. Through that communion with Christ and the Father, through the Holy Spirit, we shall have ever more and more of the power and joy of our Lord.

FRIENDSHIP IN GIVING. A large part of Christ's teachings concern giving—God's giving to us, and our giving to God's children, verses 5-13. In no way can we draw closer to the loving heart of God, than in receiving fully what He wishes to bestow upon us, and then in freely giving to others from the store God has given to us. Our gifts are the crown of our communion with Him.

FRIENDSHIP IN SERVICE. What an offense was that of Christ's enemies when they charged that He was in league with the enemies of God, that He worked His miracles with the aid of devils, verses 14 to 26! He made it perfectly clear that He was of God by doing the works of God. We can make certain to the world our friendship with God in no other way. Our works will proclaim it.

Let us study Christ's service toward mankind. It is given for our imitation, for even the miracles, in their essentials of kindness and self-giving, may be copied by us. Are we doing the works of the Savior? Then we are His friends.

FRIENDSHIP IN OBEDIENCE. When the woman in the crowd cried out her tribute to Jesus, He answered with a call for obedience to God, verses 27 to 32. That meant also obedience to himself, as He went on to say, for He was greater than Jonah, and had the right to summon men to repent of their sins and to turn to ways of righteousness. We are Christ's friends, if we do what He commands us.

FRIENDSHIP IN PURITY. One of our Lord's most illuminating parables, though it is brief, is that of the eye, verses 33 to 36. If the eye is clear, the whole body, the entire life, is flooded with blessed sunlight, just as a brightly lighted lamp floods a room with its cheer. But if the eye is dim or blinded, then obscurity, or complete darkness fills the life, just as when, if a lamp goes out, the room is plunged into the blackness of midnight.

Keep thyself pure! Let no foulness tarnish the eye of the soul! Then shall the Light of the world pour His joyful rays into the farthest corner of your existence, and with it will come the fulness of His friendship, and the perfection of His peace and power.—Adapted from Peloubet's Notes.

PATIENT WAITING

Not now, my child—a little more rough tossing;
A little longer on the billows' foam;
A few more journeyings in the desert darkness;
And then the sunshine of thy Father's home!

Not now; for I have wanderers in the distance,
And thou must call them in with patient love;
Not now; for I have sheep upon the mountains,
And thou must follow them, where'er they rove.

Not now; for I have loved ones sad and weary;
Wilt thou not cheer them with a kindly smile?
Sick ones, who need thee in their lonely sorrow;
Wilt thou not tend them, yet a little while?

Go, with the name of Jesus, to the dying,
And speak that name in all its living power;
Why should thy fainting heart grow chill and weary?
Canst thou not watch with Me one little hour?

One little hour, and then the glorious crowning;
The golden harp strings, and the victor's palm,
One little hour! and then the hallelujah!
Eternity's long, deep thanksgiving psalm!

—Author Unknown.

WHAT SHALL THE END BE?

(Continued from front page)

ishment are clearly stated in a single verse, as follows, "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. 1:6-10.

This destruction of transgressors will be a simultaneous event. (Psa. 37:38; Isa. 1:28.) "He that being often reproveth hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy." Proverbs 10:29; 29:1. It is only "the righteous" that will go "into life" qualified by the adjective "eternal". The everlasting punishment of the wicked will consist in their aionian cutting off from life, or the deprivation of life. (Matt. 25:46.)

"The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life: but the wrath of God abideth on him." John 3:14-16, 36; 1 John 5:11, 12. Those who will not come to Christ that they might have life, must ultimately perish, or be destroyed from among the people. (John 5:40; Psa. 1:6; Isa. 41:11; Acts 3:23; 13:38-40; Mark 16:16; John 3:18.) Escape will be impossible for those who wilfully and persistently neglect Christ, and His "wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption". (Heb. 2:2, 3; 1 Cor. 1:30; John 10:1-16.)

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12; John 20:31. To receive eternal life and never perish, it is imperatively necessary to hear the Master's voice, and follow Him, who is "the way, the truth, and the life". John 10:27-29; 14:6. "For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:23; John 20:31. The goal to be finally reached will either be life or destruction. (Matt. 7:13, 14.)

God is love, and He has "set before you life and death . . . therefore choose life", that thou mayest live. 1 John 4:8; Deut. 30:19; Ezek. 33:11. "For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and lose himself, or be a castaway?" Luke 9:25.

"Lost Eden tells what God thinks of sin. The deluge and the Dead Sea repeat the story. The sacrificial offerings and the crucifixion of the Son of God reiterate the testimony. The lake of fire will close the instruction to our race."

I am glad that "the second death" can be avoided by the penitent sinner, forsaking his evil way, and "the unrighteous man his thoughts"; and returning "unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Rev. 2:11; Isa. 55:6, 7; Ezek. 18:21, 30-32; 2 Peter 3:9; Ezek. 33:11-15.

GOD'S UNIMPEACHABLE WORD

THESE are great problems before the American people. These are problems which need purity of spirit and integrity of purpose such as we have never been called for before in the history of this country. I should be afraid to go forward if I did not believe that there lay at the foundation of all our schooling and of all our thought this incomparable and unimpeachable Word of God. If we cannot derive our strength thence, there is no source from which we can derive it, and so I would bid you go forward, if I may, inspired once more with the feeling that the providence of God is the foundation of affairs, and that only those can guide, and only those can follow, who take this providence of God from the sources where it is authentically interpreted.

I beseech all my fellow believers to ponder this matter. By the blessing of God, I ascribe to Bible study the help and strength which I have had from God to pass in peace through deeper trials, in various ways, than I ever had before; and after having now above fourteen years tried this way, I can most fully, in the fear of God, commend it. A soul that has been refreshed and made happy early in the morning meets the services, the trials, and the temptations of the day with a power far different from that of one that has had no spiritual preparation.—Woodrow Wilson.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE RESTITUTION HERALD, $2.00 PER YEAR.

LOVE NEVER FAILS

By F. L. Austin

THE APOSTLE Paul had just been teaching the Corinthian brethren that the gifts of the Spirit were for the profit of the individual and for the profit of the brotherhood. In 1 Corinthians 12:7 he had concluded a reasoning by saying, "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." Weymouth's New Testament in Modern Speech words it, "A manifestation of the Spirit has been granted for the common good."

Paul has mentioned specifically different gifts of the Spirit and the purposes for which they were given. He has also referred to the fact that, just as the various members of the human body are all needed and should all cooperate in action for the common good, so the members of the body of Christ, that is, of the church of God, are all needed, and that all should cooperate for the common good of all and thus for the good of each one.

After treating to some extent these truths, the apostle begins, chapter thirteen, by illustrating that there is no gift of the Spirit which is of any value to the one giving, or by the one used, unless that person is using the same as being prompted by love. Verse one reads in the Diaglott, "If I should speak in the languages of men and of angels, but have not love, I have become sounding brass or a noisy cymbal". That is, the gift of tongues so full and complete that one could speak in all the languages of mankind and also the language of the angels, if he is not motivated in the use of that gift by love, his entire gift and power is like the noise of ringing brass, or the clang of the cymbal. It amounts to naught.

There are those today passing through Christian experiences who crave a gift of the Spirit like unto the gifts that were bestowed by the Father upon the Christians of the first century. But the great fact is that unless such a gift is utilized and energized by underlying love, the gift would be naught. This is emphasized more as Paul goes on teaching: "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor," v. 3, "and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing". The tense of the verbs here is said to have the meaning: Though I give my goods, that is, what I have and what I may ever get, to the poor. Not merely a single gift, but the result of life's work! Note that the teaching is, "It profiteth me nothing."

Paul would receive no reward of God though he should give the greatest of worldly goods to the poor, actually satisfy their hunger, actually warm their bodies with clothing—it would do Paul no good; he would derive no benefit; he would be entitled to no reward, unless such gift were prompted by love. The same is true with reference to the sacrifice. Though he would sacrifice to the full extent of presenting his own body for burning, yet if that sacrifice were not based on love—love for God and love for man—it would afford Paul no benefit.

He then comes to the thoughts of verse 8, where he makes his hearers to drink even more deeply of the meaning and value of love. "Love never faileth." That is to say, love never ceases. God is never going to cut love short. God himself, in all of His omnipotence, omniscience, and manifestation, "is love". Love is as much a part of God as it should be a part of man. All God's works are based on, are the outgrowth from love—love for His creatures. Therefore, Paul says, love never fails, that is, never ceases, never comes to an end. There never will be a time when God or His creatures can dispense with love.

But as to the gifts of the Spirit, they all cease. There comes a time when those gifts are wholly unnecessary, will be discontinued. "They shall cease". "Knowledge, it shall vanish away".

The reason for all this, Paul instructs throughout these verses of the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, is that the human race, the world, the individual are in the infancy of youth. We know only in part. "We prophesy in part." We do so because of imperfection, both of self and of others. "But when that which is perfect (complete) is come, then that which is in part will be done away." They will be discontinued.

When man is complete, when he is fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ, he will no longer need the gift of tongues, or of prophecy, or of any other spiritual gift. He himself will be perfect, complete. He will not need this aid, which Paul taught was then given to the spiritual man.

However, some things will continue. They will abide throughout all the ages of God's creation. "And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three."—V. 13. Neither God nor His creation could exist, could perform, could accomplish, without these three characteristics:

Faith! How much could the Savior accomplish by returning to this sin-cursed, crime-agonized world, if He in leaving the Father's right hand should do so with no faith, no confidence as to what He was about to undertake? Faith, which is that "victory that overcometh the world", never fails, never ceases. It will be utilized by God, by His Son, by all those who are fashioned like unto Christ, by all citizens of the kingdom of God, by all who become part and parcel of the great new earth. It abides.

Hope! The desire and the expectancy of man. Does not God desire that the earth should be made new? Does

He not desire its fullness, its righteousness, its perpetuation? Does He not expect it?

Does not the Savior desire to visit the fullness of salvation upon those who are true to Him, who are righteous before God? Does He not expect to accomplish good? Does He not hope still, with expectancy? And so, hope also is another one of the ever abiding, the eternal, the unending characteristics that is at the foundation of all of man's reward and of all man's outcome.

Love! Has the Father ceased loving His Son? Does the Savior's daily intimate contact with the Father, being at His right hand, deaden His love for His God? Do not God and His Son love as sweetly and as intently now as of yore?

Will he, who comes to the fullness of salvation in Christ, love less when he comes to be surrounded with the Savior's glory? Will he love less when he sees dead ones, small and great, rising from their long and lonely slumbers of death, appearing before the face of that Sovereign of love? I say, will the saved one, will the glorified Christian, love less in those days than now?

No, love never fails. It will never cease. The world, the ages, heaven, earth, all are permanent upon "faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

Fellow Christians, the Father having revealed to us through His beloved apostle Paul and by John and others, something of the gladness, of the magnitude, and of the value of love, as also of faith and hope, it would seem that we as individuals should exercise ourselves ever more and more to perfect, to test out, and to utilize these three great characteristics. It should never be a question of trying to compare our own personal development in these things with the development of others. Our motto should always be "Excellence", that is, that today we will each excel ourselves of yesterday, in growing up into Christ, who is our living Head in all things.

SOLOMON DEDICATES THE TEMPLE

(Continued from page 341)

At last the temple was completed, and the time of dedication arrived. It was during or immediately preceding the Feast of Tabernacles. The great day seems to have begun with a procession to the hill of Gibeon, five miles northwest of Jerusalem. There the ancient tabernacle of Moses was taken down, and all of its parts and its furniture and its vessels were borne by the Levites back to the city to be preserved in the new temple.

On returning to the city, the procession paused on Mount Zion, while the priests brought the ark from the tent which David had prepared for it, and then the great throng moved on toward the temple. On entering the outer court the multitude halted, while the priests bearing the ark passed on through the holy place into the holy of holies.

Here the ark was placed beneath the wings of the great cherubims in the center of the room. The staves were drawn forward so that the ends appeared through the veil which separated the holy of holies from the holy place, and then the priests retired. As they passed through the holy place, the great choir standing at the east side of the altar, where sacrifices were being offered without number, began to chant, "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord; for his mercy endureth for ever."

The mighty burst of harmony had scarcely reached the ears of the multitude standing looking on from without, when the cloud of glory, the cloud which the Israelites had not seen for ages—the cloud that had directed them through all their journeys in the wilderness, the cloud that enwrapped the glory of God, which no man could look upon—suddenly appeared and filled the house, driving the priests from their posts by its dazzling brightness. And all the people knew that Jehovah had taken possession of His temple.

At that moment, Solomon, standing upon the great scaffold before the altar with his face toward the holy place, recited the solemn words: "The Lord said that he would dwell in the thick darkness. I have surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever." Then turning round toward the people, he blessed the congregation, and after addressing them briefly, he knelt and spreading forth his hands toward heaven, uttered a prayer which the world will never forget.

As he arose he said: "Arise, O Lord God, into thy resting place, thou and the ark of thy strength." There was a sudden flash. A great ball of fire dropped from heaven upon the altar, instantly consuming the sacrifices that were upon it, and the glory of God again filled the house. The meaning was plain. Jehovah had not only accepted the temple, but had accepted the dedication offerings of His servants also. No wonder the people fell upon their faces. When at last they came to themselves, they rose to their feet and joined the choir as they sang praises unto the Lord, saying, "For his mercy endureth for ever." Again Solomon blessed the multitude, and the great ceremonies for the day were over.

For seven days the offerings upon the altar were continued, and there were great feasts, and all Jerusalem was filled with joy and gladness.—Selected by Lottie E. Young.

MEMORIAL SUPPER IN 1931

ACCORDING to the calendar in vogue among the Jews in our Lord's time and still followed by that people, the fifteenth day of Nisan will fall this year on Thursday, April 2, beginning at sunset, April 1. The time for the annual observance of the supper in commemoration of our Savior's death for us and for the whole world will be Wednesday, April 1, after sunset, which will be the anniversary of the institution by the Lord of the feast, on the same night in which He was betrayed.—Selected.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee. Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD." — 1 THESSALONIANS 5:21.

THE LIFE OF JOSEPH

JOSEPH was one of the most outstanding of the Bible characters of which we have a record. He was one of the twelve sons of Jacob and the most beloved by his father.

Joseph's ten brothers had taken the flocks of Jacob into the hills of Dothan to graze. Joseph was seventeen. His father sent him to Dothan, sixty-five miles away, to take a message to his brothers.

When they saw him coming at a distance they planned to throw him into a nearby pit, but in the end sold him to some passing merchantmen, who were on their way to Egypt. Joseph was again sold by the merchants to a man named Potiphar, who was an officer in the army of Pharaoh, king of Egypt.

He soon made friends with his master, who put him in charge of his whole household. But Potiphar's wife became angry with Joseph because he would not do wrong as she wanted him to do. He was then cast into prison where he remained for several years. While in prison he interpreted two dreams—one for the chief butler of King Pharaoh and one for the chief baker. Two years later the king also had a dream. The butler then thought of the young man who had interpreted his dream while he was in prison.

Joseph was clothed in new garments and then brought before the king. The king asked of Joseph if he had the power to interpret dreams. And Joseph answered, "The power is not in me, but God will give Pharaoh a good answer." Pharaoh's dream represented seven years of plenty and seven years of famine in the land of Egypt.

Pharaoh was so pleased with the interpretation of the dream that he made Joseph second to himself in all his realm.

Thus we see how a boy of humble parentage rose to a high standing with those whom he served, by always doing the things which he knew to be right and putting his trust in the true God. Let us, as members of the Berean society, try to follow the good example of Joseph.

Bradley Crundwell. Age 12, California.

"IF WE CAN HELP ANYONE to be happier or more useful, we will be just that much richer ourselves. We only really own what we use or share."

JACOB AND ESAU

TWIN sons were born to Rebekah and Isaac. The first son born was hairy and they called him Esau; the other was named Jacob. As the boys grew Esau became a great hunter, while Jacob liked to stay home with his mother. Naturally Jacob became his mother's favorite, but Isaac loved Esau.

Jacob made some pottage, and Esau came from the field feeling very hungry. The food smelled good and he asked for some of it. Jacob said to him, "If you will sell me your birthright I will give you some." Esau was so hungry that he was ready to do almost anything to get some food, so he sold Jacob his birthright.

Isaac was old and could not see, and realizing that soon he would die, he called Esau and asked him to go and kill a deer and bring him some of the meat in order that he might bless him before he died. Rebekah heard this request and made plans that Jacob, her favorite son, might receive the blessing instead of Esau. She quickly prepared some meat, disguised Jacob by placing skins of goats upon his hands and neck, and then sent him to his father. Isaac did not know that it was Jacob instead of Esau so Jacob received the blessing intended for his brother. When Isaac found he had been deceived, he felt very badly. Esau was very angry and Jacob had to flee from that country.

Later Jacob was very sorry that he and his brother were enemies and sought his brother to ask his forgiveness. When they met both were so glad to see each other that they embraced and wept over the happy meeting, and then started forward on their journey together.

Lila Benny, Age 12, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

WE ARE always glad to receive contributions from our younger members. It shows active thought and study among them, which is encouraging to young and old alike.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Illinois, 10; Ohio, 9; California, 4; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 3; Louisiana, 2; Michigan, 2; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

JESUS AMONG FRIENDS

ABOUT two miles from Jerusalem was the little village of Bethany. Here lived Lazarus, Mary, and Martha, very close friends of Jesus. When He was tired or troubled, Jesus often went to their home to rest. Mary would sit at His feet and listen eagerly to His words.

But Martha was always busy about the house. She worked hard to keep everything spotless and serve good food for her household. Perhaps she was overtired and a little nervous, so that it provoked her to have Mary sit while she worked. Anyhow, she came to Jesus, saying, "Lord, do you not care that my sister left me to serve alone? Tell her to come and help me."

Jesus replied, "Martha, you are anxious and troubled about many things. There is only one thing worth while, and Mary has chosen that better part. It cannot be taken away from her."

Now, what did Jesus mean?

It is necessary to eat and to keep things neat and clean, but how often people prepare and eat too much, and make too much fuss over the housekeeping. They do many unnecessary things. The things of God and His kingdom are so much more important and worth while.

ARE WE being Marys or Marthas?

JESUS AMONG ENEMIES

JESUS went to dine with a Pharisee who found fault with Him for not washing according to Jewish ceremony, before He sat down to eat. This gave Jesus an opportunity to reprove the greater faults of His enemies, the Pharisees.

He said, "Woe unto you Pharisees! You are clean on the outside, but your hearts are not right. You pay great attention to little things in tithing, even giving one-tenth of certain herbs, while you pay no attention to great things, really evil. You do not truly think much about the love of God. You should give time to all."

Then Jesus rebuked them for always choosing the best seats in the synagogue and making a great show in the markets. He called them hypocrites. They were not good, while they pretended to be, or wanted others to think they were.

A lawyer who sat at the table said, "Master, thus saying, thou reproachest us also."

Then Jesus did reproach them personally. He told them that they put burdens on other men that were hard to bear, burdens which they would not even touch themselves.

"Woe unto you, lawyers;" He said. "You have misinterpreted the law, and have kept others from understanding the truth."

These enemies were offended at the words of Jesus and tried to get Him to say other things—things that they might "catch him" and accuse Him of blasphemy.

ARE WE friends of Jesus or enemies of Him and of His friends?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. How were Mary and Martha rather like the Pharisees in Luke 11:42.
2. Read John 7:1-9; Matthew 10:34-39; 10:16-23; Romans 8:31-39.
3. Read John 15:14.
4. Tell how you can show that you are a friend of Jesus.

WE BELIEVE in cleanliness of life. "I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh; for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness."—Romans 6:19.

REWARDS

If you start a smile,
If you dry a tear,
If you share a load,
Drop a word of cheer;

You have spent your day
Making hours worth while,
Though your only pay
Was a kindly smile.

But that little smile
Brimmed with wishes true—
Who knows when they'll come
Bringing cheer to you!

—Selected.

"You have never seen a happy face ugly."

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON XI.—March 15, 1931

JESUS AMONG FRIENDS AND FOES

Luke 10:38 to 11:54

Devotional Reading: Psalms 86:1-7

GOLDEN TEXT

Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. — John 15:14.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. Dealing With Friends and Foes.

I. Jesus Among His Friends. Jesus had many staunch friends among His followers, but it is doubtful if any of them were as close to His heart as the little group at Bethany. Thence He repaired anon when wearied with the labors of daily contact with the mobs and being constantly in the glare of publicity.

The picture given in our lesson is a very human picture. The practical Martha, bustling around with the housework and chiding her sister just as might happen in any home; Mary, thoughtful and more quiet, exulting in the privilege of sitting at the feet of the Master and drinking in of His instruction in the words of life eternal.

It is interesting to note the different ways in which the Master deals with different people. He does not allow friendship to keep Him from saying the things that ought to be said. The truest friend is that one who tells us the truth about ourselves, even though it may not be pleasant to take at the time. So when Jesus perceives that Martha is too much absorbed in material things, he tells her so, but gently, and kindly, and I cannot but think, with a smile playing about His lips as He said it. He loves them so much that He will not withhold from them the counsel that they need.

Is Jesus your Friend? What are the things He would tell you of yourself? He would surely be frank, and would conceal nothing you ought to know. Let us be like Mary, who chose the better part, and received her Lord's approbation.

II. Jesus Among His Foes. If a man is judged by the enemies he makes, then Jesus Christ's enemies were very significant. That He made foes so bitter as they were is testimony that He was faithful in all His ministry, for He might have chosen to placate the religious leaders at the expense of faithfulness to His message. But He chose to face them fearlessly and bravely expose their hypocrisy and corruption. See Him stand in the midst of the Pharisees and scribes, hurling in their faces the epithet "hypocrite" while they gnash their teeth in rage and seek in vain for some pretext to get Him out of the way! He would not yield an inch from what was right.

The service He performed for them was the highest that could come to man, only they were too conceited in their ignorance to recognize that fact. Had they but acknowledged their misdeeds and repented, even those wicked men could have been transformed from foes into friends. The great opportunity was theirs, and they let it pass.

Who are the people against which the Master would launch His Woes if He were here today? He would doubtless find many classes in this wicked generation deserving of that stinging anathema. We can be sure His censure is fully as severe, though He be absent in person, as if He were here in the flesh. Let us number ourselves among the Master's friends. We may be either friends or enemies; it will make little difference to Him, but oh, what a world of difference it means to us!

PRACTICAL APPLICATION

Duty: The work of Jesus took Him among foes as well as friends. He never let anything or anybody stand between Him and duty. He always responded to the call of duty. No sacrifice was ever too great if duty demanded it. It is generally easy to perform a labor among friends, but when a task leads one into the enemy's territory, courage is required.

Have you ever stopped to thoroughly analyze your full duty in Christian effort? When you have done this, without that of performing the immense task, then weigh your ability to carry out your duty, and when this has been completed, mobilize your forces and abilities in a supreme effort to do your duty. God helping, your efforts will be a success.

Foes: While Jesus had many foes and worked among His foes, yet He never was a foe to any man. When He was reviled, He reviled not again. When falsely accused, He opened not His mouth. It is an ideal in character which none other has ever attained, yet many have nobly striven toward such and have reached that fineness of character that some day will hear, "Well done."

Foes

- loved will not be foes hated;
- need salvation as well as friends;
- are to be prayed for;
- can be turned into friends;
- are not always permanent enemies.

— C. E. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Among Friends and Foes.

At the beginning of this lesson, Luke 10:38, we find Jesus at the home of Mary and Martha, who were His devout friends. And as we go on into the eleventh chapter, He is with His disciples and they ask Him to teach them to pray, which He does. In teaching them, He makes an illustration of the parable of "A Friend", showing how that the "friend" will finally grant the request because of his importunity. And so with God. We must "pray without ceasing", continually ask, go to Him as a Friend, which He is, as a child goes to his father.

Beginning with the thirty-seventh verse we find Jesus talking with His foes. With them He used great plainness of speech. In verse thirty-seven the Pharisee asked Him to dine with him, which He did, but in the forty-fourth verse Jesus calls him a hypocrite.

Solomon says, "A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly," but James says, 4:4, "Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."

Therefore, remember, that whosoever of you professed Christians indulge in with eager appetites, the pleasures and enjoyments of this world, do alienate your affections from God and admit His rival into your hearts instead of Him. — F. A. S.

JUNIOR CLASS

Topic: Friend or Foe.

What is the Golden Text for today? Where is it found? Who spoke these words? Whom does "ye" stand for? Name some of the things Jesus commands us to do. From last Sunday's lesson, what would you think Jesus wants us to do?

What is a friend? The title of our lesson is, "Jesus Among Friends and Foes." In the first part of our lesson it tells about Jesus among friends. Who are the friends mentioned here? Tell why you think these people are friends of Jesus. Which do you think was His better friend, Mary or Martha?

The Pharisees were considered foes or enemies of Jesus. They were always trying to find something wrong with Jesus. Verses 42 to 46 tell why Jesus termed these men as His foes. The remaining verses, 46-52, tell why the lawyers were enemies of Jesus.

If Jesus should come quietly into our homes, would we receive Him as a friend or foe? Give reasons for your answer. — V. C. T.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"You are my friends if you do what things I command you." — John 15:14, Diag.

One is either for Christ or against Him. There is no middle ground. Those that are for Him will make every effort to do His bidding. They will want to please Him so that unconsciously they will become His friends. Mary and Martha were His friends, for they tried to please Him; the Pharisees were not His friends, as they never did His bidding and always tried to find fault with Him.

Christians are friends of Christ. The word "Christian" means follower of Christ and one could not necessarily follow Him without doing the things that He commanded. "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled (or becoming His friends), we shall be saved by his life." Romans 5:10.

— L. A. R.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

RIPLEY TO HEAR TRAINING CLASS

The members of the Training Class, ten in number, Mrs. Cooper and daughter, Margaret, will spend March 5 to 8 at Ripley, Illinois. Services will be held each evening, D. V., with three services on Sunday, sermons being given by different members of the class. The encouragement from these brethren is very much appreciated by the class, and we pray God's blessing will rest upon their efforts.

Sr. Harriet Reed, of Arkansas City, Kansas, well known and loved by many of our brothers and sisters, continues in very poor health. Her daughter, Sr. A. J. Chaplin, writes that some days she is quite comfortable, then for several days she is not able to be up. Let us remember her and those who care for her in our prayers.

Bro. Austin spoke on "Christ, the Son of God, the Son of Man," the second in a series of pre-Easter sermons last Sunday evening at Oregon, Illinois. The church was comfortably filled with a most attentive audience. After listening to this most stirring discourse, two young men, Rolland Wright and Allen Dietzman, came forward, making their decision for Christ. These young men have been students in the Training Class this winter, and the pastor and members of the church rejoice in their obedience to the Master.

NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL QUARTERLIES

We are now busily engaged in the publishing of the Sunday School Quarterly for April, May, and June. It is usual that the attendance of the Sunday Schools increases with April. Some schools that close for the winter months will open again for the spring months. These conditions usually demand more quarterlies beginning with the April number. We urge that those wishing a larger number of Truth Seekers' Sunday School Quarterlies for spring, or those who have not been taking quarterlies for the winter and wishing them for spring, will put in their orders immediately. Please do not delay one day. Your secretary, or superintendent, or leader can approximate the number needed and make the order at once. Again, please remember that toward the end of the quarter you are bound to miss some of the quarterlies. You then run short. Better make your order sufficient to take care of this regular deficit at the end of each quarter.

Please order today. The first section run through the press determines the numbers that can be supplied. This "first run" must be made soon.

EASTER OFFERING

No matter what comes—remember your God and your duty to Him. Do not shirk your obligations of service to His cause. Easter is a most propitious time for a special offering.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. A. J. Chaplin; G. A. Brown; Silas Overton; Mrs. Fannie LeCrone; James T. Fox; H. S. Hunt; Mrs. Pearl Zechiel; John F. Williams; Dorothy Hancock; T. C. Eggerking; C. E. Hatch; Mrs. E. C. Railsback; S. G. Elton; L. E. Whitehead; Philip McRae.

OUR PRAYER COLUMN

"Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God."
—Phil. 4:6. "Pray without ceasing."—1 Thess. 5:16.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER

In the closet of daily prayer, in the family circle of prayer, at the "Prayer Meeting" of the church, "always in every prayer of mine for you all", Phil. 1:4, may God-fearing believers in prayer make "request" of God "with joy" for these our brethren, who are in special need of God's blessings.

The prayers of all those who believe in specific and persevering prayer have been asked for those whose names follow. And we ask that they will respond with faithful testimony. Others will be gladly added upon request.

Sr. John Cochran,
Sr. C. E. Randall,
Bro. Roll Brewer,
Bro. Lloyd Eklund,

Knox, Indiana.
Mora, Minnesota.
Troy, Ohio.
Mora, Minnesota.

Sr. C. E. Randall has been a long sufferer, being afflicted with a severe case of arthritis. Her testimony will be found on the opposite page.

Surely Pleased

Writing in behalf of her father, Bro. Roll Brewer of Troy, Ohio, Sr. Louise Brewer says: "Sr. Gesin: Father was surely pleased to hear from you, and we have faith that our prayers will be answered, if it is for the best and is His will."

Strength and Heart for Service

To more than anything else, I attribute our successes in our cooperative work in the General Conference and the National Bible Institution to God's blessings in answer to prayer. I request that all believers in prayer will continually petition God for,

Guidance to the right performance and conduct of the work;

For much enlarged cooperation of the brotherhood in every phase of the work—spiritual, moral, and financial.

F. L. Austin, Sec'y.

FONTHILL, ONTARIO

According to reports received a very enjoyable social was held by the Bereans at the home of Sr. Railton last Friday evening.

Bro. Randall is at present residing at Sr. Railton's home.

The choir held an interesting practice at Bro. and Sr. Elliot's home the middle of the week. Easter music is receiving attention now, also selections for the May Meeting.

One and all please remember the time of our Annual May Meeting. It begins on Friday, May the twenty-ninth and continues through to Sunday the thirty-first.

Sr. McClelland has been indisposed for some time, and now we are sorry to report that her granddaughter, Marion, who resides with Sr. McClelland, is suffering with diphtheria. We all pray that God will strengthen this family in all their trouble.

NEWS FROM MORA, MINNESOTA

The work at Mora is progressing nicely. Though few in number, we are faithfully trying to do our duty in serving the Lord. We meet every Sunday evening for Bible study. There are two classes, the seniors and juniors. The interest is good and new ones have been coming in, which helps to build up. Though times are depressing we thank God for His goodness and mercy and protecting care. We have had wonderful winter weather, and we feel God has blessed the poor by giving such weather. Praise His name!

Our Ladies Aid met at the home of Sr. Graves on Wednesday afternoon, February 25. We had a splendid crowd and the afternoon was spent embroidering doilies, scarfs and pillow slips, etc.

Bro. Lloyd Eklund is at present suffering from a broken shoulder and the flu. Remember him in your prayers. Lloyd is a young man. He would be cheered with a card or a letter, junior Bereans.

Bro. A. R. Howard and Sr. Ed. Mayelin were called to the bedside of their father who suffered another stroke. He was very low, but no word has been received lately as to any change. They left last Thursday for Iowa by auto.

Sr. Arthur Ammerman is suffering from a bruised leg, received while in the poultry house gathering eggs. Her suffering is quite intense and she must spend her time on a chair. She has been active and now time seems long to her. We commit her to the Father's care.

A few neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Bro. and Sr. Fredlund on Sunday, February 22, to celebrate Sr. Fredlund's birthday. Everyone present had an enjoyable time. Pot luck dinner was served and visiting was the recreation for the afternoon. A small sum of money was presented her as a gift. Sr. Fredlund is liked by everyone who knows her. May God grant to her many more happy birthdays.

LOS ANGELES

Bro. D. B. Jackson reports that Mrs. Jackson is slowly improving from her recent illness in which no hopes were held for her recovery by the physicians. Home treatment and loving care are accomplishing much in her case.

Bro. and Sr. Wm. Laning of the Ripley, Illinois, church are spending the winter with their son, Dwight, and wife in Hollywood. We are glad to see them all at services, also Mr. and Mrs. Lee Laning. Then, too, we appreciate the help of these good sisters at our "Quilting Bees".

Bro. E. E. Rogers and family are now located in Los Angeles and we are sure that they will add more strength to our local work.

The Ladies Aid society is still busily engaged in quilting and our meetings seem to be enjoyed by members and visitors alike.

Last Sunday we were happy to welcome Sr. E. Knott, formerly of the Wenatchee, Washington, church, at our services. They have located in Huntington Park and we are looking forward to mutual benefit from our association together in the Master's work. A niece of Pastor N. D. Titchenal, of Wenatchee, was also among our visitors last Sunday. We are happy to have those of like precious faith from other localities assemble with us for worship while visiting in our beautiful but wicked city.

The distressing unemployment situation seems to have put the clamps on our church building activities for a time at least. It has been thought best to postpone purchasing the lot which has been selected until conditions are a little more favorable with some of the brethren. We seem to be living in the time spoken of in Zechariah 8:10, "No hire for man nor beast."

Bro. G. E. Marsh is constantly delving deep into God's storehouse and bringing forth truths, both new and old, for our edification and spiritual growth. At our last Lynwood meeting, he gave us some timely advice from Deuteronomy 13:1-3.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

One of the most interesting recent developments in our Grand Rapids church work has been the conscientious, organized effort to sell the books which Sr. Boice so kindly donated. Streets were worked from door to door by our faithful band and hundreds of calls made, but the results to date have not been overly encouraging.

However, this church is not that easily discouraged, and we still feel that God will open up a way for lifting the present indebtedness and enlarging our building so that we can properly care for and teach the hundreds who come to Sunday School and church.

Quite a bit of sickness has prevailed, but attendance has held up well and we feel that definite results are visible.

A musical program sponsored by the Berean society on Friday night, February 20, drew a large crowd which enjoyed the various features presented very much. Such evenings mean much to the life of a church.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

A CHANGE AT GOLDEN RULE HOME

After many months of looking around, the local members of the Board have been able to relieve Sr. Jackson from the maternity of Golden Rule Home. For over a year Sr. Jackson has been asking that she might be relieved. The nerve strain of carrying the responsibilities, plus the fact that she was alone in the position, has been too heavy for her. But she patiently continued, heart and soul, to do her best, until the Board could find someone with whom to relieve her.

Last fall it came to our attention that a Mr. and Mrs. Johnson of Mount Morris, but six miles from Oregon, who have had charge of a Home for the Brethren people of this district were making a change. After due consultation and inquiry, the Board made arrangement with them to take charge of Golden Rule Home. At first the plans were that the change could possibly be made the first of December. But it was soon seen that it would be better to wait until early in January. January 7 was the date set, but two or three days before that Mr. Johnson met with a serious accident in that one of his ankles was crushed, the joint bones being broken in several places. His recovery was rapid, and he is now able to make the move.

These good people are members of the Brethren Church. They come to us with the highest recommendation as to their faithful, devoted, earnest Christian efforts. Mrs. Johnson is regarded by all with whom she has been working for the past eight years, in the Home at Mount Morris, as especially gifted for the inside duties, and Mr. Johnson is reputed to be an excellent man for the outside work.

The change is being made upon Thursday of this week, March 5.

At this time we want to extend to Sr. Jackson our heartiest thanks and appreciation for her faithfulness in the diligent effort she has put forth to properly execute the duties of her position. She will be leaving in a few days for Waukon, Iowa, where she will take a short rest.

We also hope that Bro. and Sr. Johnson will be able to continue the work with as much satisfaction and advantage to all as has been our experience in the past.

MY TESTIMONY

By Mrs. Clyde Randall

I feel that it is my duty to God and that I owe it to Him at this time to give my testimony that it may be published in The Restitution Herald. My God bids me testify, and I must obey at His command. Willingly and gladly do I obey His command to make known that I have received health by faith in His Word. "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Mark 11:24.

It is and has been my earnest desire to have the brethren pray for me that I might be restored. Words cannot express my longings to be healed, but God in His great mercy has heard my bitter cry, and He has answered by instilling in my heart that by faith I am healed. I have stepped out on the promise of God's Word, receiving by faith a body made whole.

We must have faith in order to please Him. In the Hebrew letter, the eleventh chapter and the sixth verse, we read, "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Is faith sight? Oh, no, it is to trust God and believe what He has promised, not waiting till it has been accomplished.

You all recall the story of Joshua when God told him to take the city of Jericho. In the very beginning God said to Joshua, "See. I have given into thine hand Jericho." Joshua 6:20. In faith Joshua started out with his men, according to the directions God had given him, and they marched seven days before the walls fell and the city was taken.

Did it require faith? Oh, yes! Had Joshua just been idle and not done as God directed, the city would not have been captured. But Joshua's faith in God's word prompted him to believe. It was theirs but they must work to show their faith. When Joshua had done his part God fulfilled His word, or the thing He had promised.

God has promised me health. I, like Joshua, am marching out on God's word, by faith. When I have done my part, God will do His. I used to rejoice to think of the time when I would have perfect health, and I could testify to the Lord. But with careful and prayerful study, God has revealed to me faith, and now instead of waiting till the thing is accomplished, He bids me testify in faith to the effect of received health.

Dear ones, one and all, I still, with much earnestness, request that you all hold me up by your prayers. I feel I need your support, because through prayer great things can be accomplished. "Brethren, pray for me." Thank Him for health received by faith.

I will have difficulties, I know, but God has promised that He will never leave us nor forsake us. And with His hand in mine, I hear Him kindly whisper, "Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isaiah 41:10.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION

Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.— 51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

Receipts.— The change of date on your address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BASKET WEAVE

THE NEW BINDING FOR OXFORD BIBLES

Grained with basket weave design. Highly finished calf leather, of a dark brown color. Button clasp keeps volume closed and protected. Convenient to carry. Oxford India paper. Six maps.

This is a beautiful book for your own use or for a gift. Prices range from $4.25 to 10.50.

Write for complete descriptions.

"GETHSEMANE"

The Golden Rule Sunday School Class of the Oregon Church of God has at this time a few pictures of the painting, "Gethsemane", which shows Christ in prayer.

These pictures are very appropriate for Easter. A real value at One Dollar each.

Order from the chairman of the sales committee, John Denchfield, Oregon, Illinois.

AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?

By C. E. Lapp

SHORTLY after the creation of Adam and Eve, two sons were born to them. The name of one was Cain, and the name of the other was Abel. Abel was a man that looked after the flocks and herds and delighted in his occupation. Cain, his brother, was a farmer by practice and raised all kinds of fruits and things that belonged to the vegetable kingdom.

One day each of the men brought an offering before the Lord: Abel, a sacrifice from one of the flock, and Cain, a presentation of the products of his labor. God accepted Abel's offering and rejected Cain's, which of course made Cain angry, and he became jealous of his brother. This anger and hatred finally led to the murder of Abel by his brother, Cain.

God came to Cain one day and asked him of his brother's whereabouts. The question brought forth another question which has been used hundreds of times since, in an effort to relieve the offending one of all possible responsibility. That question Cain asked of the Lord was: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

Little did Cain realize that this question would be quoted by so many following him, who are trying, as he did, to relieve themselves of every and all responsibility concerning their brother. Little did Cain realize that almost six thousand years afterwards people would still be saying, "Am I my brother's keeper?" For people are saying the same thing today. Am I responsible for the actions of my brother?

According to the Bible, we are responsible for our brother's actions, in so far as our actions influence his life. Many times in life we do things in which there is no real harm, as far as we ourselves are concerned. But if our brother did the selfsame thing, he would be led away into sin and away from God and Christian influence. Possibly we are stronger and would be less easily led away than our weaker brother. If so, we should be careful that we do not set a bad example for those about us who might fall because of their weakness.

Paul spoke to the Corinthian brethren, in the eighth chapter of his epistle to them, about eating meat that had been offered to idols. He told them that idols were nothing; hence meat offered to idols amounted to nothing. That is, the meat neither became good nor bad, because it had been offered to idols. He also stated that a Christian who considered the meat in the same light was doing himself no harm to eat of such meat. The harm came when a weaker brother saw him eating of that meat that had been offered to idols, and it caused him to fall.

Paul very plainly tells us that if we cause a weaker brother to fall, we are sinning against Christ, because He died for that sinner as well as for us. Then if we cause a weaker one to fall because of our neglect or wrong example, we shall receive the greater condemnation, not only because our brother falls, but because we sin against Christ.

Is your life measuring up to the yardstick given by Paul? He said, "If meat maketh my brother to offend or sin, then I will eat no meat."

The great majority of us never think about our weaker brother but only about ourselves and the things that gratify our own selfish lusts. If we want to do a thing, we never stop to think about what effect it may have on some other person who is not as strong as we. We simply go ahead, regardless of others, seeking to gratify our own selfish desires.

Let us beware lest we, through our everyday living, cause some other person to fall, and thereby sin against Christ. And let us say with Paul, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." 1 Cor. 8:13.

THE ANSWER TO PRAYER

By Ednah Cooper

THE WORDS of Christ to His disciples were: "Therefore, I say unto you, What things so ever ye desire, when ye pray believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them." I wonder how many Christian people today really and truly believe and practice the above statement.

I have in mind a family, not at all rich in this world's goods, but rich in love toward each other and God. The baby daughter in the family became seriously ill. For six long weeks she lay between life and death. All that human hands could do was done for her. Kind neighbors and a good doctor cared for her.

After the first illness was over, another of a more serious nature lay hold upon her. The family doctor advised getting a nurse. Knowing the financial condition of the family, he hesitated in his request. One evening, a good brother and his wife, in the church, came and told these grief stricken parents to get a nurse for the baby, and they would gladly pay her.

Daily prayers had been offered for this child to be made well, if it was in accordance with God's will. There is no doubt in the minds of the members of this family but that God directed these people to offer their services, and thereby the child's life was saved. They asked, believing that they would receive, and they did receive.

In other instances, people sometimes pray for one thing for years. Just because they don't receive an answer at once is no sign that God has forgotten them. They must, "rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him".

When we pray to God, we must come with forgiveness in our hearts, for our fellow men. And then God can forgive us. Most of all, we must come, believing that we shall receive.

The study of prayer and its answer is one which we may carefully consider with profit.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

VOLUME 20

OREGON, ILLINOIS, MARCH 10, 1931

NUMBER 23

WHO SHALL BE ABLE TO STAND?

By Samuel E. Haney

“Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him a thousand years.”

THE HUMAN race in general and Christendom in particular are at the parting of the ways, and how few—even among enlightened Christians—give the subject adequate consideration, the mass of mankind being content by an occasional cursory thought. Man is now in a momentous period, not to be dreaded by those who are right with God, but a “time of trouble”—ere long—which will cause excruciating mental and physical suffering as the lot of all others. This condition will cause people to “seek death” and to “blaspheme God” for what they will call His injustice, disregarding the price He paid—the dearest to His heart—that a “way” might be opened for everlasting life, including detailed instructions. But God, who made the universe, will not compel man to accept His Son and to obey the Word.

Man is so accustomed to regarding his Creator as the “God of love” that he overlooks the fact that He is also the God of wrath. No one can biblically peruse this word “wrath” in both Testaments and observe man’s apathy on the subject and come to any other conclusion. Scriptural history is equally confirmatory of these godly attributes.

Let us examine a few pertinent texts, lest we become drowsy as the result of looking at others as they gape, and yawn, and even sneer at the “God of wrath” phase, which God has so numerous and forcefully exemplified, particularly in Noah’s and Lot’s days, and that which befell the Jews in 69 A. D., to which Jesus openly referred on two occasions.

“But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?” “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!” Matt. 3:7; 23:37, 38.

“From a far land they are coming, from the ends of the world—’tis the Eternal and the forces of His fury, to ruin all the earth! Shriek away! ’tis close, ’tis the Eternal’s day, as a mighty blow from the Almighty; then shall all hands grow limp, all hearts shall melt, and mortals be dismayed; seized with pangs and throes, they writhe like a woman in labour, staring each at the other aghast, their faces aflame. Here is the Eternal coming, pitiless, in anger and in blazing wrath, to lay earth desolate and destroy sinful man.” Isa. 13:5-9, Moffatt.

“But the Eternal is the real God, a living God, an everlasting King; earth trembles when He rages, no nation can endure His wrath.” Jer. 10:10, Moffatt. “Then the kings of the earth, the magnates, the generals, the rich, the strong, slaves and freemen every one of them, hid in the caves and among the rocks of the mountains, calling to the mountains and rocks, ‘Fall on us and hide us from the face of Him who is seated on the throne and from the anger of the Lamb’; for the great Day of their anger has come, and who can stand it?” Rev. 6:15-17, Moffatt.

“The nations were enraged, but thine anger has come; the time has come for the dead to be judged, the time for rewarding thy servants the prophets, and the saints who reverence thy name, both low and high, the time for destroying the destroyers of the earth.” Rev. 11:18, Moffatt. “Rejoice for this, O heavens and ye that dwell in them! But woe to earth (‘its inhabitants,’ A. V.) and sea! The devil has descended to you in fierce anger, knowing that his time is short.” Rev. 12:12, Moffatt.

“The seventh angel poured out his bowl in the air; then came a loud voice out of the temple of heaven from the

(Continued on page 356)

EDITORIAL

The Restitution Herald was entered as second class matter, October 16, 1911, at the Post Office at Oregon, Ill., under act of March, 1879

F. L. AUSTIN, Editor

MARY A. GESIN, Assistant Editor

"Give ear to my words, O Lord, consider my meditation. Hearken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray. My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee."

PRAYER

OUR hearts are touched and quickened by the sentiment that continually reaches the office as regards the efficacy and the benefits of prayer. That men ought to pray always, and not to faint, was affirmed by our Savior.

In Gethsemane's lonely garden our Savior went forward alone in prayer to God. As the intensity of the occasion came upon Him, He labored and strove in prayer and devotion to abide ever close and closer in the heart of His God. He only sought to know for certainty that He was approaching that experience in His life which was God's own purpose and intention. He asked not for relief; He sought no amendment; He merely sought God's purpose and then declared that God's wish was the one which should be respected and regarded far above His own.

Did prayer aid Him? Did prayer relieve Him of the awful ordeal?

Yes, prayer aided Him. It brought to Him an angel to give Him strength. It aided Him in firmness of decision. He went forward, not in His own power, but in the power of Jehovah.

No, prayer would not remove from Him the ordeal through which He must pass. It was God's purpose that He, God's well beloved Son, should, with the Father's consent and according to His wish present himself in behalf of the world that was resting beneath the awful condemnation of sin's curse, death. For man, for the life of man, God sought of His Son, His Son's freewill offering unto death.

No, He was not released. Yes, prayer strengthened Him.

And prayer will bring you, dear brother, sister, into a closeness of communion with God that will enable you also to say with fullness of heart, "Not my will, but thine, be done."

REJOICING

WE ARE greatly rejoiced because of the definite and substantial progress that is being made by different local churches throughout the country. Visible progress is being revealed in a material way. In every instance, so far as distant inspection is able to estimate, these material works are the works of faith. They reveal faith that is action.

Reference is made to the definite progress that has been made in the last few years in the matter of church edifices. Several new buildings have been erected. Others have been appropriately remodeled, all this with a view to providing better and more effective plants in which to promote Christian work. In addition to what has already been done, there are ground rumblings to the effect that we may, in the near future, expect a new and much needed building in a very important center.

Reference is further made to the greatly increased strength that is being manifested in the matter of noticeable increase of pastorates with our churches. These pastorates tend to establish continuous and progressive work in each church thus provided. They provide regular weekly services for the education and exhortation of the youth and the aged of the community. They give regular continuous programs that can but influence for good, not only the membership concerned, but friends and neighbors of the respective communities.

Again, the success of these efforts reveals to the membership of each respective church the fact that with earnest proper diligence and devotion, the congregations are really able to do, in a material way, far more than they had previously presumed was in their power.

Let the good work go on. Let brotherly love continue. Let faith reveal itself by the works which it materializes.

EASTER

RAPIDLY are we drawing close to another Eastertide when anew the Christian world will reconsider the ministry of our Lord, especially those days of its climax; will live again in their minds and hearts the week of our Lord's passion, His steady and unflinching advance unto the hour of His great sacrifice, when He gave His life for us. After the hard shock and the depression of thought that we experience as we ever more truly comprehend something of the

(Continued on page 362)

ANNUITY BONDS

ANNUITY bonds, taken out in favor of the National Bible Institution, have been gradually increased unto the amount of $7,500, the present balance being $6,250.

What are these amounts?

They are amounts represented by different ones who have had our religious cause at heart, who have desired to do all possible for this cause, but who have needed the use of their funds as long as they should live. By investing in an Annuity Bond, they are obtaining the yearly interest thereon, and so long as the Annuitant lives, the amounts which they respectively take out in bonds, unless otherwise authorized by them, is invested by us in high class municipal or industrial bonds.

Thus the Annuitants are protected during life with a double protection; that of the National Bible Institution plus that of the bonds which the National Bible Institution purchases. At the death of the Annuitant the amount of the bond becomes the sole property of the N. B. I.

The purchase of these bonds amounts to an outright gift to the N. B. I. for the furtherance of its religious work, with the condition of semiannual interest during the remainder of life. There is no legal interference after one's death. The gift is already complete.

There are a large number of our people who have means, and who really expect to devote a given portion of their means to this religious work. And yet they have not as yet realized the advantages of this means of procedure. We suggest that right now, as we are approaching Easter, immediate application be made for an Annuity Bond of a stated amount. Write to this office, state the amount, your age, and what you must needs expect by way of interest earnings semiannually, June 30 and December 31. Information will immediately be given by private letter relative to the matter, and the inquirer can then immediately decide whether he or she can complete the transaction.

While these Annuity Bonds are of no immediate value to the N. B. I., yet they do become valuable in time, and in the meantime they become a prospective asset which can be relied upon.

We urgently suggest that one and all who can see in the Annuity Bond the realization of their wishes, will take this matter up, if perchance a substantial Easter offering may thus be announced to the encouragement of all.

Address National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

—o—

“I believe God answers prayer,
Answers always, everywhere;
I may cast my anxious care,
Burdens I could never bear,
On the God who heareth prayer.
Never need my soul despair,
Since He bids me boldly dare
To the secret place repair,
There to prove He answers prayer.”

COMPLETE STEWARDSHIP

THE PARABLE of the Good Samaritan is one of the finest illustrations of complete and practical stewardship that we can find. It illustrates (1) the stewardship of time. The Samaritan did not hesitate to interrupt his journey and to disarrange his plans at the call of need. It further illustrates (2) the stewardship of ability. He was not a physician, but he knew the “first aid” of the day. He made good use of such skill as he had.

It also exemplifies (3) the stewardship of possessions. The Samaritan gave the use of his donkey; he gave his food; he gave his money. And all these to an entire stranger, belonging to a hostile race. And so primarily it illustrates (4) the stewardship of the love of God. The Samaritan “had compassion” on the wounded man. He carried God’s tender mercy in his heart, the mercy that had been shown to him, and that he was glad to show to others.

All these forms of stewardship should be active in the Christian life.—Adapted from Peloubet’s Notes.

—o—

AN OPEN LIFE

THE ONLY way for a man to escape being found out, is to pass for what he is. The only way to maintain a good reputation, is to have a character which deserves it. It is easier to correct our faults than to conceal them. It is easier to repent of sins than to cover them. Half the labor it costs to serve the devil on the sly will enable us to serve the Lord openly and aboveboard. Secret sin ends in public shame. Judas began with pilfering slyly, and ended with treachery and suicide, which was ‘known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem.’

An open life is the only true life. Secret sin is the great mistake of mankind. God is for the penitent, no matter how low he may have fallen, and against the hypocrite, no matter how high he has climbed. It will be small comfort for a man who plunges into hell to think, “No one suspects that I am here.”

Of all the fatal delusions which the light of the great white throne shall dispel, the delusions of those who sin in secret will be among the saddest. The dark record of their sins will be produced. The hidden stains will be revealed. “God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.”

But that day has not yet come. The longsuffering of God is salvation. Some men’s sins, confessed, pardoned, and forsaken, “are open beforehand, going before to judgment.” Let ours be thus judged in time, and put away. The Lamb of God has borne the load; let our faith take hold upon the great Sin-bearer, and rest in Him.

Then life will be a reality, and not a sham; and the heart a living power, not an empty shell. And whether men know us or not, God will know us, and prosper us, and bless us to the end.—Selected by Rufus A. Curtis.

THE GREAT TEACHER

O, the Savior's seamless garment,
Plain and useful its design,
Can it be such simple raiment,
Covered Thy dear form divine?
Not in robes of regal splendor,
Was the Son of God arrayed,
But in a plain and seamless garment,
By some humble toiler made.

To this Man of plain apparel,
Came a motly multitude,
Scribes, and Pharisees, and others,
Some self-righteous, none were good.
By the seaside, on the mountain,
And at Jacob's ancient well,
He told of His coming kingdom,
Where the pure in heart shall dwell.

Oft in parables He taught them;
Mighty miracles He wrought;
Stilled the tempest, healed diseases,
And the dead to life He brought.
As He told the gospel message,
And the hard of heart reproved,
Some were melted to contrition,
Others were to malice moved.

Still the world loves not its Savior,
Many turn away from Him,
And today but few are worthy,
To touch His plain garment's hem.
Just the "little flock" is willing To take up the Master's cross,
To endure its toil and sorrow,
And to bear its shame and loss.

Not for them the costly raiment,
Not for them the priceless gem;
He who wore the seamless garment,
An example is to them.
Soon the Savior will be coming,
In fair robes of righteousness,
And when He appears in glory,
He His "little flock" will bless.

By Alice B. Curtis

"God's love is like His sunlight, diffused throughout the heavens, catching the hills and crowning them with ruddy gold and deep purple. So it seems, it is easy for God to love some people—men and women whose faith makes them dear to Him. But the sun creeps lower, down the hillsides, further and further, until it lifts even the mists in the valley below. God loves the good, the pure, the true. But His love rises higher that it may reach down lower. And it reaches even me."

WHO SHALL BE ABLE TO STAND?

(Continued from front page)

throne, crying, 'All is over,' followed by flashes of lightning, loud blasts, peals of thunder, and a mighty earthquake, the like of which never was since man lived on the earth, such a mighty earthquake it was—the great city was shattered in three parts, the cities of the nations fell, and God remembered to give Babylon the great cup of the wine of the passion of His anger. Every island fled away, the mountains disappeared, and huge hailstones fell from heaven on men, till men blasphemed God for the plague of the hail—it was fearful." Rev. 16:17-21, Moffatt. It is interesting to read these texts from other versions.

One reason for so many minimizing the effect of God's wrath is a delusive hope of leniency which is the result of the lack of clear, unbiased recognition of the estimate God places upon the blood (life) of His dear Son—the awful price He paid for man's redemption, and the indescribable suffering endured by our Redeemer that He might become the Chief Shepherd of His humanly defenseless "sheep". No one can trifle with the precious blood of Jesus Christ with impunity. It is an everlasting life or an everlasting death proposition. Read 2 Cor. 2:15, 16.

Always remember in studying prophecy that God, and His now immortal Son, never have occasions to change their characteristics, not to alter their predictions. See Psa. 119:89; Heb. 13:8. And also remember the fact that man is facing "a time of trouble, such as never was".

However, all in due time will understand that God's abhorrence of sin and disobedience to His Word, and His appreciation of righteousness and faithfulness to be His attributive phases produced by the conflict of two contending forces, namely, sin, and God's plan for man's escape from its effect—everlasting death. Yes, history and prophecy prove God's wrath to be as severe and merciless as His love is manifested by patience and clemency—all depending upon our status with Him. Read, Gen. 6:5-13 and 7:1.

Read more about God's wrath; then visualize His love for us, so copiously manifested by the bleeding, crucified Christ that a "way" might be provided for man's escape from everlasting death and the pending trouble. Read Jeremiah 13:13-15.

Jesus desires to be both Guest and Host (John 15:7 and Rev. 3:20) to establish a spiritual relationship which is superior to the natural relationship as eternity is superior to time. It is the begetting of immortality.

"And He with us will all things share;

Since I am Christ's and Christ is mine.

Why should I have a care?

For Jesus is a Friend of mine."

"THE CUSTOM OF DATING from the birth of Christ was introduced in 526 A. D."—S. E. H.

THE LETTER TO THE EPHESIAN CHURCH

By Lyman Booth

IN REGARD to this epistle, Paley says, "While it does not appear to have ever been disputed that the epistle before us was written by Paul, yet it is well known, that a doubt has long been entertained concerning the persons to whom it was addressed. The question is founded on some ambiguity in the external evidence. Marcion, a heretic of the second century, as quoted by Tertulian, calls it, 'The epistle to the Laodiceans'. The name 'Ephesus', in the first verse, upon which world singly depends the proof that the epistle was written to the Ephesians, is not read in all the manuscripts now extant. I admit, however, that the external evidence preponderates with a manifest excess on the side of the received reading."

The same writer proceeds to argue from the internal evidence, that the epistle could hardly have been written to a people with whom Paul had resided for three years. And it must be acknowledged that in this respect it more resembles the epistle to the Romans, and that of the Colossians than those epistles which the apostle wrote to the Corinthians, Galatians, Philippians, and Thessalonians, in which there are constant allusions and appeals to what had passed when he resided among them.

The external evidence shows a decided excess in favor of the received reading and in this article is adhered to, though it may be assured that the change of the word "Ephesus" for "Laodicea", or the omission of it entirely would not detract from the abundant instruction contained in the epistle. It has been stated that if this epistle was directed to the Ephesians, it is difficult to understand how the apostle contented himself with a general salutation. But there are no particular salutations in the epistle to the Galatians, because to have sent particular salutation to individuals in churches, where the apostle was so generally and intimately known, might have offended those who were neglected. Besides, to have mentioned everyone of note would have taken too much time and space.

In writing to the Romans it was quite different. He was personally unknown to most of them, and hence he could take particular notice of all his acquaintances. The successful ministry of the apostle in that renowned and licentious city of Ephesus, and his solemn charge to the elders of the church, which were collected there, have been considered before. Some years after, he wrote this epistle during his imprisonment at Rome, and probably at the close of it, to firmly establish them in the doctrine of the gospel, to guard them against errors, to excite them to a holy conversation, and to arouse their interest in their Christian warfare.

This epistle and the two that follow it, which also were written during his imprisonment, and probably about the same time, are remarkable for a peculiar pathos and ardor or rapture, as some have called it. This is generally attributed to the extraordinary consolations enjoyed by the apostle, during his suffering for Christ's sake. His mind was, no doubt, greatly enlarged to a remarkable degree in writing to those whom he had no occasion to rebuke, and with whom he was not under the necessity of engaging in any dispute. So that entire confidence of friendship took the place of that caution, reserve, or sharpness, which were necessary in the three preceding epistles.

The title "Epistle to the Ephesians" is not found in
(Continued on page 358)

THE NEED FOR WATCHFULNESS

THERE has always been a necessity for watchfulness by the people of God. Unless interested and watchful, how can we know what is taking place around about us on every hand? The sleepy and indifferent simply cannot know; only the wide awake and alert see the trend of events. So at the close of the Jewish age only those who were awake and watching realized the presence in their midst of the Son of God, our Lord Jesus Christ.

We have heard Him described as the Sun of Righteousness, who came "to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace". Luke 1:79. Any who were blind and sleepy did not know that the Sun of Righteousness had arisen in their midst; yet much is implied in this title belonging to the Lord Jesus.

The sun is the source of light for all the earth. When the sun shines it is daytime; light abounds everywhere; it is possible to see clearly and distinctly. But when the sun goes down darkness comes; an inky blackness the eye cannot penetrate spreads over everything.

Light is associated with truth and righteousness, "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." (1 John 1:5.) Darkness is descriptive of error, wrong doing, ignorance, sin, and death; Satan being spoken of as "the power of darkness"—so dark and altogether bad that there is not a particle of light in him; all his deeds are evil.—Colossians 1:13.

Two thousand years ago, in fulfillment of the prophecy by Malachi, the Lord Jesus began to shine upon the Jewish nation, who were in the darkness of sin and death. As the natural sun gives light and is the source of light to the earth, so Christ is a powerful Light, the true Light sent from God, as the apostle John says, "which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." He said of himself, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." "I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness."—John 1:9; 8:12; 12:46.

LOVING OR HATING THE LIGHT

The Jews had been told to watch for the Light that would arise. Faithful testimony and just reproofs drew
(Continued on page 359)

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

By Ednah Cooper

THE CHRISTIAN life is often referred to as a walk. It is an active, purposeful life. Like a walk, it has a beginning, a continuance and a goal.

The walk of the Christian begins after he has repented and has been baptized into Jesus Christ. He rises from the waters of baptism to walk in newness of life. All of his habits, while he was yet in sin, are forever cast aside. He looks to Jesus for help, strength, and guidance.

While the walk is continued, there are many duties for a lively Christian. He must be submissive, not trying to rule over the other members of Christ's body with whom he associates. He must love all of his brethren, to the extent that he is willing to undergo great sacrifice for them, whenever need be.

He should abstain from the very appearance of evil. In so doing, he will cause the people of the world to see Christ in his actions, and they, influenced by his deeds, might be caused to obey their Master.

A Christian should be unselfish, always putting others before himself. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them," Jesus commanded.

Under all conditions a true Christian should be happy, joyful and contented. If there is anyone who should be all of these, it is the Christian; for he has the assurance that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord. In everything that happens in his life he should be able to see the hand of God, working for his good.

Meekness, firmness, steadfastness, gentleness, and long-suffering should also be uppermost in the heart and mind of the follower of Christ. He must ever be watchful lest he stray from the paths marked out for him.

His language should not be idle words or gossip, but the word of Christ should dwell in him. He should teach and admonish those outside of Jesus, and uplift his brethren, by songs of praise and thanksgiving unto the Lord, who has chosen him for His child.

Many and rich are the promises given to the overcomer who has walked in the ways planned for him. In Rev. 3:21 we read, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." These are the words of Christ and what a blessed promise it is! It is surely worth forsaking all worldly enjoyments.

How glorious it would be if everyone who starts the Christian walk could continue therein all of his life, so that at the close he might say as Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

May we, who have taken upon us the name of Christ, search our hearts to see if we are so living that we have made our calling and election sure. Thus will we reach our goal.

THE LETTER TO THE EPHESIAN CHURCH

(Continued from page 357)

some of the manuscripts, and from the absence of personal greetings and any indications of personal intimacy, it has been thought to have been a circular letter, of which copies were sent to several adjacent churches in the province of Roman Asia (see Col. 4:16). Ephesus was to Asia as Corinth was to Greece—the great port, to which flowed the commerce of the east and west. The inhabitants were noted for their culture in magical arts, and the fanatical worship of the Asiatic Artemis, the personification of exuberant natural production. Her temple, owing to its magnificent structure and extraordinary embellishments, was one of the wonders of the world and was the center of worship, as that of Solomon was to the Jews. But the three years' sojourn of Paul weakened its power to a great extent, till the annual Pan-Ionic festival brought about a temporary reaction (see Acts 19).

The date and object belongs to a period of Paul's first imprisonment and was written from Rome in A. D. 63. It was not evoked by any relapse or special errors on the part of the members of the church at Ephesus, but was written to firmly establish those who had left heathenism, and who had been made partakers of the foreordained election of all members of the church in general, in the holy faith. Its purpose was to contrast their present higher life with their former estate in the degradation of sin, and also to exhort them to walk in a way worthy of that high calling in Christ Jesus.

The epistle, like the Colossian letter which it greatly resembles, falls into two general divisions. Three chapters are doctrinal; three are moral and practical. Under the doctrinal, the apostle thanks God for the glorious inheritance to which the Ephesians had been called, and which had been magnified in the death, resurrection and exaltation of His Son. He also enlarges on the mystery of the call of the Gentiles to the participation in Christian privileges. He also dwells on the union of Christians with God and with each other, and prays that the Ephesians may be strengthened by the indwelling of Christ, that they might more and more realize their high vocation and its responsibilities.

In the practical section, he exhorts to unity (4:1-15), to a higher Christian work in conformity with the mind of God. He urges them to walk in the steps of Christ (4:17-32), to consecrate to Him all their actions in the various relationships of life, as husbands, wives, children, parents, slaves (5:6-10); and to put on the whole armor of God as the only safeguard against evil, in themselves and in the world around them. (6:10-24.)

THE NEED FOR WATCHFULNESS

(Continued from page 357)

the attention of the Jewish nation to himself as that Light—some to believe and accept Him as the Light of life to themselves, others (the vast majority) to hate the Light because it showed them to be evil in the sight of God. Therefore they sought to quench the Light, to put it out altogether, by bringing about the destruction of the Lord Jesus.

Our Lord caused the light to shine in Galilee and Judea by steadfastly proclaiming that the kingdom of heaven was at hand; by preaching against sin and evil doing, and by warning those in darkness to turn to the Light. This true Light burned brightly for three and a half years, never once flickering or being dulled, until He gave His life for the world, to chase away the dark night of sin and death.

The condemnation pronounced in Eden was to everlasting death. Nothing had been or could be done to lift the sentence. As a decree of God it could not and can not be altered. But by His death, on the cross, Jesus gave himself as the price to redeem or buy back the world from that condemnation which must always stand against sin. Then, having given the "ransom for all," Jesus, the true Light, was able to offer a real hope—the prospect of a resurrection and eternal life. The light of the cross is an effective means of salvation; we, looking at it, rejoice in the richness of the mercy of God who sent His beloved Son to die for us.

THE ENLIGHTENED MUST SHINE

Conditions are attached to obtaining eternal life. We must allow Christ to shine into our lives, we must accept the gift He so freely offers, by giving our hearts to Him. The heart is the very center of the being, and giving the heart to the Lord means giving ourselves entirely to Him, placing our affections on Him, making Him the very Center of our lives. When we do this the Lord enters into our hearts and minds and dwells there.

As light makes things visible to the eye, so the light of truth illuminates the eyes of our mind, revealing the grace and beauty of God's character. It lifts us up to things above, bringing eternal life so clearly to view that we can understand and grasp hold of it. And we must be constantly on the watch that we do not lose our grip.

Having received the light, the duty becomes ours to reflect it. The Lord Jesus placed this duty on all disciples. "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Matt. 5:14-16.

A candle must be lit and placed in a prominent position to shine to the best advantage; otherwise it is simply wasted, being of no use to anyone. The Christian can readily apply this to himself. The Lord Jesus has commanded us to let the light of truth shine for others to see, and they realizing its importance, in their turn come to the Lord to be illuminated with the truth. Manifestly, since this is God's way, if those who have it do not let the light shine, then others cannot see or know the glory of God.

A light is meant to shine when it is dark. The world is a very, very dark place spiritually, and the number who really love the truth is small. How carefully, then, they need to guard their lights so that they shine with a bright and steady glow.

THE ENLIGHTENED MUST WATCH AND PRAY

The Lord gave many parables showing the necessity of being awake and watchful, and faithfully carrying on the work He has given us to do. Those servants who neglect their work, or fall asleep, or injure their fellow servants will not receive His "well done". Constant prayer is needed; "Pray without ceasing."—1 Thessalonians 5:17.

All through the Christian experience a continual fight must be waged against sin, both that which arises within ourselves from our own imperfections and that which assails us from without. The Lord warned His disciples to "watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."—Matthew 26:41.

Being tempted is one thing, and to enter into temptation is another thing. All who are seeking to serve God when tempted or tried are given an opportunity to prove their love and loyalty. To have an evil suggestion placed before one is not a sin, but an opportunity to reject the wrong and triumph over it.

"Blessed is the man that endureth temptation (trial); for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."—James 1:12.—Selected.

"For the LORD is a great God, and a great King above all gods. In his hand are the deep places of the earth: the strength of the hills is his also. The sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

"O come, let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the LORD our maker. For he is our God; and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand."

"O come, let us sing unto the LORD: let us make a joyful noise unto the rock of our salvation.

—Psalm 95:1, 3-7.

ANNUITY BONDS

For information regarding advantages of Annuity Bonds over Wills in making final gifts for the furtherance of our Gospel labors, address,

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
OREGON ILLINOIS

ZIONISM GIVES PALESTINE NEW LIFE

By F. L. Austin

IN AN address before an Omaha congregation at Jewish Community Center, Mr. Jacob de Haas, a Jewish leader known internationally, called attention recently, according to a press clipping, to the fact that "the Zionist movement, which originated in 1881, has revolutionized Palestine by the impetus of the last decade." The press report quotes Mr. de Haas to the effect that "Palestine, in 1922 desolate and disease-ridden, has been transformed. Agriculture and the dairy industry flourish; more than thirty-two hundred small industries have been established; miles of modern hard-surfaced highways have been constructed; unsanitary conditions are being overcome, and the automobile and the telephone are being used widely."

Speaking of the electrical development in that land, the clipping refers to the statement of Mr. de Haas to the effect that "A hydroelectric plant with a potential power equal to that of Niagara Falls has been set up on the banks of the Jordan." Then in citing some of the other commercial advances the clipping continues, "A million dollar plant for the production of potash and valuable minerals from the waters of the Dead Sea already has shipped its first consignment of potash." Mr. de Haas is referred to as predicting "that Palestine will be self-supporting within ten years."

"Since 1922," the press report continues, "more than eighty thousand Jews from other nations have immigrated into Palestine. Their progress, however, is attended with difficulties arising from the clash of modern civilization with age-old customs. The friction between the Arabs and the Jews offers perplexing problems."

Referring to the relation of the American Jew to the Zionist project, Mr. de Haas' address is referred to as indicating "that Zion is the feeding source for the imagination, the culture, and the outlook of the modern Jew, and that curtailment of American aid is reflected in Palestine's economic condition. Only fifteen percent of the maintenance of Palestine comes from the government. Voluntary aid, mostly from America, finances the rest."

And so the great work of the restoration of Palestine forges onward! How accurately the mind of man, as inspired by the God of heaven, peered through the mists of thirty and forty centuries from the days of Abraham, and foretold of this great, impressive, and convincing rehabilitation of the Promised Land.

Well does the writer recall how the press and the rostrum pooh-poohed the thought of the effort put forth by Dr. Herzl and others in 1881, when the initiative to this move was made. Capital, statesmen, editors, lecturers were as one in thinking kindly of Dr. Herzl, and at the same time forcefully declaring the impossibility of the realization of his dream.

But God has again revealed and assured that Israel will be regathered, that this regathering will take place in the last days of Gentile dominion, as contrasted with the days of God's dominion through Israel.

The time is not far distant when once again God, working in and through Israel, will take unto himself and His beloved Son dominion over all the earth. Gentile misrule, sin's awful havoc, will be put down and from Jerusalem, from the city of our God will eventually go forth the laws and the dominion that will control old earth, "from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth".

"THE point which Jesus sought to teach in the home of Mary and Martha is the value in human life of the principle of proportion. To that which is essential, necessary, lasting, give the primacy. Enthroned that in your heart, and let the other things, the things not needful, group themselves about as they will."

AN EASTER OFFERING

AGAIN AS Secretary of the General Conference and as one who has his finger more or less upon the pulse of our Christian activity and its results, I desire to call your attention to our annual custom of Easter offerings.

By this is meant that every Christian, from the oldest in age to the youngest in age, will endeavor to come to a deeper and closer realization of Christ's unspeakable free-will offering in behalf of sinful man. That offering is of untold value and benefit to mankind and especially to those individuals who most truly accept Him.

But let no one forget that Christ's free offering was of untold and indescribable benefit to himself. There is no way for the finite mind to measure the benefits which our Savior reaped from the gift of His life. Without first laying down His flesh nature, it would have been impossible for Him to have received the Spirit nature. Without the latter, He could not have inherited His Father's unlimited life, and power, and dominion, and ability, and all things that were awaiting Him. Coming into possession of these unspeakable possessions, our Savior also is in position to extend them to His faithful followers.

As we come to the anniversary of this wonderful offering of our Lord, offering that was made at such untold cost, it seems only good and proper that every would-be Christian should seek to render for himself an offering to the Father, commensurable with his or her personal ability. Like that of the Savior, the offering should be one that can be used in the interests of others. But again like that of the Savior, the offering given in the proper spirit to God, will be of such benefit to self as could not possibly be derived in any other manner.

Let us habituate ourselves so that we will make regular and commendable offerings to our God. In this let us again remember Easter.

THE HIGHER PATRIOTISM

By G. Eldred Marsh

TODAY the American people are celebrating the one hundred ninety-ninth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the Commander in Chief of the Revolutionary forces and the first president of the United States. It is but natural at such a time that our minds should be directed to matters pertaining to patriotism and the welfare of our country.

Together with reverence for himself, with respect for parents, with devotion to duty, God has implanted in the hearts of men a love of country. Among civilized peoples love of country is as universal as is love of God and love of home. Well may the poet question:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
That never to himself hath said,
"This is my own, my native land?"

To honor the flag, to respect and to obey the laws, to cherish the institutions of the country that has given to us and to all the world so great a degree of liberty, of opportunity, and of material blessings, is but the fruitage of intelligent appreciation. It is not a sense of duty that arouses within us patriotic impulses, but an appreciative understanding of all that our country has done for us in the past, and will continue to do for us in the future. It is not mere sentiment that actuates us to stand with bared heads as the flag goes by!

How any citizen of this great country of ours can watch the caressing winds billow the folds of that grand old banner and not be thrilled with a fervency of emotion, I cannot understand. For the flag of our country means more than thirteen stripes of red and white; more than forty-eight stars in a firmament of blue! That flag stands for a principle—a principle bearing on the life, the liberty, and the eternal happiness of men—the right to worship God according to the dictates of conscience! And so long as it shall continue to protect us in the exercising of that right, so long as it shall assure to us an open Bible, the privilege of teaching it to our children, to our neighbors and to our friends, so long as it grants to us the right of peaceable assemblage for worship, that flag deserves the loyal support and honor of every American follower of the Lord Jesus Christ!

Further, speaking from an altogether human standpoint, after a comparative study of the governments of the world now in operation, I am convinced that that of the United States is the most beneficent and satisfactory of any form of human government mankind has ever known. Not perfect! No! For nothing conceived in the minds of men may be said to be perfect. But taking into account mortal limitations, I believe that the government under which we live is, in many ways, the best government under which man has ever lived, aside from the theocratic government of the kingdom of Israel.

Speaking of a government much less worthy of respect than our own, Paul said: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God."—Romans 13:1. God has ordained that civil power shall repose in the hands of established governments of men. And because God has so ordained, the laws and ordinances of the nations, when they do not conflict with the clearly expressed will of Jehovah, are binding upon the consciences of His people.

Paul speaks with his customary clarity upon the reason why God requires loyal obedience to civil law. "For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good ..."—Romans 13:3-4. To recognize in the officer of the law "a minister of God" ordained of the eternal Father for our good, is to place the matter of the Christian's observance of law, and his entire attitude toward his government upon the plane of spiritual duty toward God.

In spite of evil men being placed in positions of authority, in spite of all the errors to which human government is of necessity exposed, the rulers of our nation recognize with Gladstone that "the purpose of government is to make it easy to do right, and hard to do wrong!" And the general aim of the legislative, executive, and judicial

"MY COUNTRY!"

"My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing:"
This is our song today,
For thee we still shall pray,
Until our Lord for aye
Shall reign as King!

"My country" then shall be,
As boundless as the sea,
And war shall cease:
All men shall know the Lord,
And shall obey His Word,
His grace shall then afford
An endless peace!

"Our father's God! to Thee, Author of liberty,"
To Thee we pray:
Our lamps keep burning bright,
Our hearts pure in Thy sight,
"Protect us by Thy might",
Till that glad day!

branches of the government is directed to that end.

Paul continues to place the seal of divine approval upon hearty obedience to civil law. Referring further to those in authority, he says: "He is a minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake."—Rom. 13:4, 5. Our loyal support of our country becomes a matter of conscientious obligation to God; it becomes a spiritual service, a religious duty.

The apostle is still speaking of the Christian's attitude toward the Roman Empire, and, incidentally, toward all governments: "For this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour."—Rom. 13:6-7. Tribute, custom, fear (respect), honor—these are "due" to the authorities of whatever nation affords protection to the disciple of the Lord.

If Paul could admonish the Christians of his day to be loyal subjects of the heathen emperor of Rome, how much more should we be admonished to be loyal to the United States of America, a government that acknowledges our Bible to be the most holy of all material things, the only object worthy of a place above the flag; a government that in every court of justice holds the name of our God as supremely sacred, and provides heavy punishment for anyone who ventures to take that name in vain; a government that has placed within its fundamental law a provision guaranteeing to us and to our children the unrestricted right to worship God, and to exercise the rites of our religion!

If the Apostle to the Gentiles, looking joyfully forward to the coming of Christ and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, could at that time claim citizenship in pagan Rome, how much more should we, living under a government favorable to the Christian religion, gladly acknowledge our allegiance to that government, until the new and righteous government of the King of kings is established upon the earth in fact!

Until that glorious day shall dawn, we are required to strive for the good of the nation in which we live. "I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplication, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour."—1 Tim. 2:1-3. When we recognize our civil authorities as "ministers of God for our good," we are glad to pray for them. It should be a regular part of our worship; for in praying for them we are praying for ourselves, and for our own best interests.

The United States is one of the departments of God's future kingdom. We expect to live here throughout eternity as joint heirs with Jesus Christ of the empire of God in the earth. These very lands, over which now floats the tri-color of France, the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew of England, the stars and stripes of America, and the banners of all nations—these very lands, I say, are to "become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever," and we shall reign with Him! So we are moved to love this land of ours—ours, both present and future—and to be deeply interested in its welfare and in the welfare of its people.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, . . . and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left" (Matt. 25:31-33), I believe that this dear land of ours, will be among the first of the nations to say, "Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths".—Isa. 2:3. "My country" of today shall become "my country" of tomorrow, and the King shall place the laurel wreath of divine approval upon the standard from which floats the most gracious of all earthly banners, the Stars and Stripes of America!

May God bless and keep our country, until the King shall come! Amen.

E A S T E R

(Continued from Editorial Page)

awfulness of His death, we will then quickly enter the rejoicing occasioned by the remembrance of His resurrection.

Easter in memory of resurrection, in memory of victory over death, in memory of the first establishment of life immortal, is perhaps after all the Christian's day of greatest gladness, his day of greatest rejoicing, his day of greatest evidence of the unfailing and infallible word of God.

We pray and exhort that every church and every Sunday School of our number will immediately put forth diligent and earnest effort to provide for and realize the greatest possible amount of spiritual uplift, of encouragement to faith, of encouragement to fellow men on this day.

Let us be sponges; let us absorb every good possible of the Father, of His Son and of His Word. But in addition let us remember that this alone will do little, if any, good to any individual.

The real benefit to the Christian comes, not alone by absorbing, but by absorbing to the end that he may be the larger, and the stronger, and the more able to give, to serve, to sacrifice, to toil in the Master's vineyard.

After all service is the thing that counts. Paul's exhortation to "present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God", was not made so much for the direct benefit that would accrue to God, as for the direct and positive benefit that such a sacrifice will bring to the one who makes it.

By reading, by prayer, by worship, by devotion, by service, let us prepare to make the coming Easter most beneficial.

National Berean Department

Margaret Lyon, Editor, 124 N. Parkside Ave., Chicago, Illinois

OFFICERS OF NATIONAL BEREAN SOCIETY

M. W. Lyon, President
13705 Diana Ave.
Cleveland, Ohio

Miss Sybil Guthrie, Treasurer
Mullin, Texas

Arlen Marsh, Secretary
4707 1-2 St. Elmo Dr.
Los Angeles, California

Berean Relief Committee, Mrs. Orpha Sanford, 5424 Race Ave., Chicago, Illinois

For Berean Literature address, "The National Berean Society," Oregon, Illinois

"HASTE NOT! REST NOT! CONFLICTS PAST, GOD SHALL CROWN THY WORK AT LAST."

AN ENCOURAGING RESPONSE

DEAR BEREANS: I just received a letter from Sister Cronk and wish to extend an extract to those interested, for I know that there are many who are.

"It is hard for me to write, but we have come through the winter well thus far. I have received letters from seven different states and Canada, and such lovely letters! They would cheer anyone."

Dear Bereans, keep up the good work. This sister is worthy of all these good messages of cheer and consolation. So may it bestir us to send such messages to more lonely shut-ins. I thank you in behalf of her and the Bereans of Michigan for these letters.

Yours in Christ,
Mrs. Ada Huff,

Michigan Berean Social Correspondent.

REORGANIZATION AT RIPLEY

THE Ripley Berean class has recently reorganized, the younger children being placed in a junior class of their own.

The new officers of the senior class are: president, Lawrence Howell; vice-president, Mrs. Mary Burnett; secretary and treasurer, Lorene Fey; assistant secretary, Florence Howell.

ILLINOIS BEREAN REPORT FOR JANUARY

Dixon (Senior): Membership, 12; average weekly attendance, 6; interest, good. Studying about the makings and duties of Christians.

Dixon (Junior): Membership, 12; average weekly attendance, 11; interest, good. Studying from Matthew 14.

Dixon (Junior, second division): Membership, 6; average weekly attendance, 5; interest, very good. This is a new class of junior Bereans made up of the smaller tots.

Elizabeth Ford, Sec.

Oregon: Membership, 22; average weekly attendance, 18; interest, very good.

Ruth V. Gesin, Sec.

Ripley: Membership, 25; average weekly attendance,

17; interest, good. We have our Berean each Sunday morning except the second and last Sundays. On the second Sunday we have preaching service, and on the last Sunday we hold a social meeting.

Mrs. Lorene Fey, Sec.

Salem: As there were several cases of small pox in Martinsville, the Marshall Bereans did not meet during January.

Edna H. Wood, State Sec.

The above report is very incomplete. We would like again to stress the point that the secretaries of local societies would greatly aid our state secretary in her work, if they would send in a report of the month's work promptly. With only a printed card to fill in, it should not be such a great task for anyone and would make our state report much more interesting. We would like also to have a report from other states from time to time.

HAMMOND, LOUISIANA

The Hammond class has held five meetings since January 25, 1931, all of which have proved very interesting. There are sixteen members enrolled with an average attendance of thirteen members and five visitors.

On February 2 it was suggested that the class have a special fund for the purpose of helping to build a church, which was voted on and unanimously carried.

Everyone is enthusiastic and we hope that the interest and membership will continue to grow.

Anna Mae Bottolfs, Sec.

BEREAN PAGE CONTRIBUTIONS

Credit is given to Illinois for an article published in THE HERALD of January 20. This was "A New Resolution", by Frances Rossiter, which was published on another page, as the Berean page for that week was full.

Illinois, 13; Ohio, 9; California, 4; Iowa, 3; Indiana, 3; Louisiana, 3; Michigan, 3; Texas, 1; New York, 1; Missouri, 1.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY LOIS HUNT

THE USE AND ABUSE OF GOD'S GIFTS

JESUS wished to show the people the danger of caring too much for money or the things of this life, and so He told them a parable.

He said the ground of a certain rich man brought forth very large harvests. The man had so many good things that he was troubled to know where to put them.

He did not share with his poor neighbors; he did not even ask God what he should do with his wealth. He forgot that God gave him all his good things. He made up his mind to keep all his harvest for himself and have large barns built in which to store it.

Having such great wealth, he planned to live a long, merry life, having just as good a time as he could. But his selfish plans were spoiled, for that very night he died, and he had to leave all his wealth.

He was very poor in God's sight then, for he could take none of his treasures beyond the grave. And he had not laid up treasures in heaven.

Jesus told His disciples that they should always be ready and watching for His coming. He told them to be like faithful servants who, with their lights burning, wait for the return of their absent master.

He said that the master who would come home and find his servants watching for him, would be pleased with their faithfulness and would bless them.

Jesus said the unfaithful servant will not be found watching for him, for he will be spending his time in eating and drinking and abusing his fellows. The master will come when he is not expected, and will see his evil deeds and punish that servant for his unfaithfulness.

Jesus warns us all to be faithful about our work, so that when He comes for us, we will be ready. He says no one knows when He will come. The warning to all is, "Be ye therefore ready."

ARE WE watching and trying to be ready?

SOMETHING TO DO

1. How is this lesson a temperance lesson?
2. Read 2 Corinthians 6:14-18; Matthew 6:19-24.
3. Learn Luke 12:37.
4. Tell how a person can watch.

WE BELIEVE in clean living:

"But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Romans 6:22.

A CHILD'S MORNING PRAYER

"My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up."

Dear Father in Heaven: At the beginning of this new day, I thank Thee for the sun which always returns to light my way, for my home where I have been kept safe through the night, for my family and the friends who will be with me all this day, for work, and play, and love, and laughter. Help me not to forget Thee, but to look up often in thankfulness.

Make me strong today to do what is right. Keep me from any untruth, and from anger, and from selfishness. Let me speak no unkind word to my playmates, nor bring sorrow to my parents or friends. But when night comes, may I be happy in knowing that I have made others glad. Amen.—Rev. R. W. Barstow.

HOW TWO HEARTS WERE MENDED

"Yes you did, too!"

"I did not!"

Thus the little quarrel started,

Thus by unkind little words

Two fond friends were parted.

"I am sorry."

"So am I."

Thus the little quarrel ended,

Thus, by loving little words,

Two fond hearts were mended.

—Jewels.

"Let us be kind!

The way is long and lonely,

And human hearts are asking for this blessing only,

That we be kind.

We cannot know the grief that man may borrow,

We cannot see the souls storm-swept by sorrow,

But love can shine upon the way, today, tomorrow—

Let us be kind!"

With Our Sunday Schools

LESSON XII. — March 22, 1931

THE USE AND ABUSE OF GOD'S GIFTS

Luke 12

Devotional Reading: Matthew 6:19-24

GOLDEN TEXT

And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit. — Ephesians 5:18.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic. The Right Use of the Blessings of Life.

Basic Truth. "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then shall he reward every man according to his works." Matt. 16:26-27.

Outline. I. The Responsibility of Stewardship. II. Watching for the Master's Coming. III. Drunkenness.

I. The Responsibility of Stewardship. The rich fool of our Lord's parable is by no means alone. It would seem as though he is a type of the world in general, and strange to say, apparently, of many of our Lord's followers. The Master left His servants in charge of His goods, and each one has a work to fulfill, a stewardship to discharge. Too many people think as the rich fool did, that their lives are their own, to do with as they please.

But a false balance on the books does not denote prosperity; it merely deceives. Likewise, great wealth on earth does not necessarily indicate that all is well, if there is a deficit in the spiritual account. That was the trouble with the rich man; he perhaps did gain the whole world, but he lost his own life in the doing. And — where was the profit?

II. Watching for the Master's Coming. We are to watch for our Lord's return, not with telescope to eye, but by being always ready for Him to come, by so administering our stewardship that we would not at any time be ashamed to have Him suddenly appear and ask for an accounting. It is at His coming that His servants are all to be rewarded for the manner in which they have served. Therefore that day is the day for which Christians of all ages have longingly looked. That servant alone watches for His Lord who performs his service each day conscientiously and well. Blessed is that man, for his reward is sure when the chief Shepherd shall appear.

III. Drunkenness. It is astounding how many people who are followers of Christ uphold the drink traffic in these days. One would suppose that the consumption of alcohol was directly beneficial to a man the way some people come to the defense of drunkards. If we are to make right use of God's gifts, we certainly cannot give ourselves over to drunkenness, nor even endorse the practice on the part of others, and still call ourselves faithful and wise stewards.

The Lord Jesus Christ in many places warns us against the evils of drunkenness. He said that this will be one of the signs of His coming. We ought to by all means be watching, lest He come and find us unprepared. Let us lend our efforts against liquor, as did our Lord before us, and thus be giving meat in due season as good stewards.

If we can turn one soul from the error of his way and make him see the emptiness of his life without Christ, we shall save him from death at Jesus' coming, and the reward will be more than worth while.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Every normal person is endowed with one or more gifts. These gifts are of varying natures. The orderly use of the individual gifts of all members of a congregation will make a mighty force for righteousness. Few people use the gifts they possess. An interesting and very profitable session can be spent in surveying the gifts or talents possessed by the members of the class. Organize these forces. Put them to work in a systematic effort. Every talent will become better by usage.

Discover how many of your scholars possess one or more of the following gifts:

- A talented singer;
- Musician;
- Able to pray;
- Money maker.

Add others to list.

Point out how these gifts may be misused to one's own misfortune and the detriment of others. If people fail to use their gifts to God's glory, can it be said that they are "hiding their light under a bushel"? The sin of omission is as great as the sin of commission. Are you committing the former by failing to use your gifts in God's work? — C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"And be not drunk with wine, by which comes debauchery; but be filled with Spirit." — Ephesians 5:18.

Being "drunk with wine" or "filled with Spirit" are opposites in the extreme. The wise man tells us, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Prov. 20:1. He also says, "Be not among winebibbers; . . . for the drunken . . . shall come to poverty." And how true it is, for whoever knew a rich young man that could keep his riches and be a drunkard?

To be filled with Spirit is different. That makes for "speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." Eph. 5:19. Paul and Silas no doubt were filled with Spirit when they prayed at midnight and sang praises unto God so that the other prisoners heard them. — L. A. R.

SENIOR AND ADULT CLASSES

Topic: Obedience to Law.

It has been said that "Order is heaven's first law." Without law all would be chaos. The sun, moon and planets swing within orbits; seasons go and come; flowers bloom, fade and die, all in accordance with divinely appointed laws. Man is no exception, and being a social being, must design laws to regulate his conduct in his relation to his fellow man. As a natural outgrowth of this, we must have authority and obedience.

When man transgresses these laws, he becomes guilty and subject to the penalty. In 1 Peter 2:13 we read, "Be subject to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; whether to the king, as supreme; or unto governors, as sent by him for vengeance on evil doers and for praise to them that do well."

The Christian is also subject to another and higher law, "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." Transgression of this law is a life after the flesh which cannot please God, but is enmity against Him. The reward of obedience to the Spirit is life; the penalty of transgression is death. — F. A. S.

INTERMEDIATE CLASS

Topic: The Sin of Drunkenness and Gluttony.

The twelfth chapter of Luke describes the life of the person who lives only for himself, spending every bit of his energy in laying up wealth. A story is found in verses 16 to 20 telling of a covetous man whose fields yielded such a big harvest that he had to pull down his barns and build greater ones. Then suddenly one night, just as he had made up his mind to rest and enjoy his money, he died. What good was all his money then? It went to those who had not cared for him in life.

Suppose this man, instead of working to hoard up money, had spent his life in doing good for others whenever he had a chance, using what money he had to relieve the needy and suffering. When he came to die, he might not have much money, but what a treasure he would have in his friends and in his service to them! And he would also be "rich toward God", for in keeping God's laws he would be laying up a reward in the life to come.

To be covetous and grasping, oppressing the poor and needy, closing one's eyes to others' sorrows, is just as great a sin in God's eyes as drunkenness. We build our characters when we are young. Let us not build that sort of character. — M. G.

DOINGS AMONG THE CHURCHES

The article by G. Eldred Marsh entitled, "The Higher Patriotism", found on page 361 is the synopsis of a sermon delivered on Washington's birthday, in the church at Los Angeles of which Bro. Marsh is pastor. The accompanying song, also from the pen of Bro. Marsh, was used at the conclusion of their service. They are published at the request of several who were present. Do not overlook this interesting message.

Bro. and Sr. Chas. Stedman, who have been living in Miami, New Mexico, in an effort to improve Bro. Stedman's health, are now at home at Moorefield, Nebraska. Sr. Stedman writes that Bro. Stedman's condition was so improved that they ventured to return home. But they have been home only a month, and there has been a noticeable decline in his health. How much we need the great Physician!

Sr. Sue Williams, who is at present with her daughter, Sr. Drummond, at Ashton, Illinois, has been seriously ill with pneumonia. The last report is that she is slightly improved and the doctor states that she is out of danger, unless something unforeseen happens.

On next Sunday, March 15, Bro. C. E. Lapp expects to be with the congregation at the Plum River (Illinois) church for services both morning and evening.

TRAINING CLASS NEWS

Last week the class began the study of 2 Corinthians in their Bible work. As a side work in our English, we have been memorizing outstanding passages of Scripture. Most of the members are now able to repeat well over a hundred verses.

Last Sunday night Roland Wright and Allen Deitzman of Oregon, Illinois, our new class members, came forward in answer to Bro. Austin's invitation. They were baptized Wednesday night at the church. We are all glad that these two fine young men have taken this step which will mean so much to them in their lives.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Our church folks have been very busy canvassing the section near the church for the sale of the Visitor, and in preparing for a pancake supper to be given at the Godwin school basement on St. Patrick's Day. We surely have a loyal band of workers.

We regret to report the painful illness of our beloved Sr. Skeels for the past two weeks. Verging very close to pneumonia, the disease weakened her seriously, but we are glad to say that she seems much improved at this writing. Bro. and Sr. Skeels celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Christmas, and she has enjoyed remarkably good health, not having called a doctor for herself for twenty years. May she soon be back at her place in the church.

New faces are constantly being observed in the audience, especially at the Sunday night services, which is very encouraging to the pastor. Another lady, Mrs. Phenix, came forward for baptism on March 1, adding further joy to our group.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

Our Prayer Column

"Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God."—Phil. 4:6. "Pray without ceasing."—1 Thess. 5:16.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER

In the closet of daily prayer, in the family circle of prayer, at the "Prayer Meeting" of the church, "always in every prayer of mine for you all", Phil. 1:4, may God-fearing believers in prayer make "request" of God "with joy" for these our brethren, who are in special need of God's blessings.

The prayers of all those who believe in specific and persevering prayer have been asked for those whose names follow. And we ask that they will respond with faithful testimony. Others will be gladly added upon request.

Sr. John Cochran,	Knox, Indiana.
Sr. C. E. Randall,	Mora, Minnesota.
Bro. Roll Brewer,	Troy, Ohio.
Bro. Lloyd Eklund,	Mora, Minnesota.
Bro. Thomas Weldon,	Thorold, Ont.
Sr. Cordelia Gray	Lanark, Ill.
Sr. H. L. Leeper	Arkansas City, Kans.

Sr. Leeper requests the prayers of the brotherhood for her baby daughter, aged three months, whose life is despaired of by the doctors.

Sr. Gray who has been ill for several months is gradually growing weaker.

Brethren, let us remember these suffering ones when we petition our heavenly Father, that He will strengthen and uphold them in every trial. His grace is sufficient for every time of need, if we but call upon Him. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Prayer changes things.

GROWTH AT CLEVELAND

On Sunday the first of March, the writer had the pleasure of celebrating his second anniversary as pastor of the Church of the Golden Rule by receiving into the membership of the church five new members who had requested recognition as workers with us.

All are of mature age, and have been active workers in the Church of God for many years. They will bring to us a definite addition of working strength, and we trust the influence of their decision will be equally as far reaching in the moral effect on many others.

Those who were given the right hand of fellowship are, Sr. Jennie Salisbury, Bro. and Sr. George B. Alldridge, and Bro. and Sr. Howard H. Hawkins. May the Lord bless our united efforts unto greater accomplishments for Him.

M. W. Lyon.

INDIANA REPORT FOR FEBRUARY

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 2; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Burr Oak, 1; Hillisburg, 2.

Money received: Pleasant View, $21.00; Rensselaer, $30.00; Plymouth, $12.00; North Salem, $6.00; Burr Oak, $10.00; Hillisburg, $19.33; Conference Board, $16.17.

Expense, $14.50.

J. H. Anderson.

A FAREWELL AND A WELCOME

On Friday evening, February 27, members and friends of the church at Oregon, Illinois, to the number of fifty, assembled at Golden Rule Home to bid Sr. Mary Jackson farewell. The evening was spent socially and after light refreshments, Bro. Austin spoke of Sr. Jackson's three and one-half years of devoted service as Matron of the Home. During that time Sr. Jackson has endeared herself to all by her kindly sympathy and cheerful friendliness. As Executive-secretary, Bro. Austin gave words of praise to her for the efficient manner in which she has conducted the Home, and he stated that he regretted exceedingly that her health is such that her resignation is necessary. Bro. C. E. Lapp spoke in behalf of the Training Class, expressing the good will of the young people toward Sr. Jackson and their appreciation of her "mothering" of them during their stay at the Home last year. Bro. L. E. Conner, as a member of the General Conference Board, also gave tribute to Sr. Jackson's efficiency, in a speech which was especially appreciated by all present.

On Friday evening, March 6, brethren and friends gathered again at Golden Rule Home to welcome the new Superintendent and Matron, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Johnson. We trust that under the new management, the high standard of the Home will be upheld and that each will cooperate for the good of the other.

Sisters F. L. Austin and Leila E. Whitehead, of Chicago, and Bro. and Sr. L. E. Conner, of Dixon, were present at the farewell gathering for Sr. Mary Jackson at Golden Rule Home.

OREGON IN THE WEST

The quarterly meeting of the Northwestern Conference will be held April 4 and 5, 1931, at Felida, Washington. Everyone is invited.

We are glad to report that Sr. H. B. Cramer is gradually recovering from a stroke of paralysis. She is at the home of her daughter, Sr. A. W. Darby, 834 Gantenbein, Portland, Oregon.

Bro. and Sr. D. H. Hathaway and daughter, Hene, have returned from Felida, Washington, where they looked after business matters and visited the home of Bro. E. C. Hathaway. They were away a week.

We are glad to learn that Sr. Lela Taylor has earned another promotion. Sr. Taylor is now floor lady in charge of nine girls in a Newberry store at Los Angeles, California.

Sr. Caples of Vancouver, Washington, is ill of neuritis.

Sr. Wallace Woolf has had as a guest, her mother, Sr. Taylor.

Sr. Flora Hogue and husband are operating the Hogue Dairy, which is located several miles north of Corvallis.

We were pleasantly surprised Sunday morning when Sisters Louise Sullivan and Mimmie Rogers of Eugene, Oregon, dropped in for Sunday School. We hope that these sisters and others will make this a habit.

Miss Helen Flikart has attended Sunday School for several Sundays at the Church of God.

Bro. H. B. Hathaway has returned to Corvallis. We have just learned that Sr. Cramer will be moved to Corvallis as soon as she is able to travel. She will be at the home of Sr. Anna Cady.

NORA ALICE PATTON

Nora Alice Patton was born in Hardin County, Iowa, on May 11, 1862, and died at her home near Holbrook, Nebraska, on February 25, 1931.

She was married to Thomas Patton on February 8, 1880. To this union five children were born, four sons and one daughter: Herbert of Palisade, Neb., John, Earl and George of Holbrook, and Minnie Fletcher of Omaha. These and Myrtle Virgin of Omaha, an adopted daughter, were all with her during her last illness.

She came with her husband and family to Furnas County, in 1884. Here they resided for a year and then moved to Surprise, Neb. They returned to Furnas County in 1888 and settled near Holbrook, where she resided until death.

She united with the Church of God in 1889 and has lived a true consistent life. Besides the children she leaves four brothers and a sister: Almus Adams of Omaha; John of Longmont, Colorado; Ed. of Barter, Iowa; Mannie of Gifford, Iowa; Mrs. Cora Levee of Compton, California, several grandchildren and great-grandchildren and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held in the Church of God, conducted by Elder Grover Gordon, assisted by Bro. Arthur Hornaday. She was laid to rest in the Holbrook cemetery by the side of her husband who preceded her in death sixteen years.

DONALD STUART McLEOD

Donald Stuart McLeod, the youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Norman McLeod of Holtville, California, was stricken by diphtheria and after a very short illness died at his parents' home on February 27, 1931. Little Donald was born in Los Angeles on September 11, 1929. He is survived by his parents and three brothers: Kenneth, Malcolm, and Duncan; his grandparents, Bro. and Sr. E. C. Railsback of Los Angeles; and more distant relatives. The loss of their little son comes especially hard at this time owing to the recent bereavement of the family in the death of Bro. McLeod's mother, who died in January. The brief funeral service was held at the grave side in Pomona Cemetery.

O the wondrous, mystic power
Of the touch of little hands;
How they play upon our heart-strings
As the waters kiss the sands.
How they soothe and bless and comfort,
With each tender sweet caress,
Till the weight of daily burdens,
And our toils and cares grow less.
Now those little hands lie folded
On the pulseless snowy breast;
And we've brought him here to Jesus,
In His arms to sweetly rest.
Safely sheltered in the darkness
Till eternal morn shall break,
And the gentle voice and tender
Softly whispers, "Child! Awake!"

G. Eldred Marsh.

JOHN ELLIOTT

Bro. John Elliott, for more than thirty years a resident of California, died at his home in Santa Ana, February 23, 1931, aged 83 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Emily Elliott, and two daughters, Miss Elsie Elliott of Santa Ana, and Mrs. Mary Dahn of Waterloo, Iowa. Bro. Elliott was born in Wisconsin, November 4, 1847. While a resident of Iowa in his young manhood, he responded to the call of the gospel of the kingdom of God as presented by the Christadelphian brethren and was immersed. He continued deeply interested in all that pertained to the advancement of the cause that was so dear to his heart up to the time of his death, and was highly regarded for his sincere Christian character by all who knew him.

Early in January of the present year Bro. Elliott fell, breaking the bone of his leg just below the hip. He was removed to the hospital where the best of treatment was provided, but owing to his advanced years, he lacked the strength necessary to recover from the shock. The writer was called upon to address the numerous friends who met to pay their respect to his memory, and found a peculiarly applicable text in Psalm 37:37: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace."

G. Eldred Marsh.

MRS. W. S. TOMLINSON

Mattie S. Sutherland was born in Huron County, Ohio, March 20, 1869. She was married on July 27, 1893, to Walter S. Tomlinson, and they made their home near Cleveland, where they lived all of their married life.

Early in life she yielded obedience to the gospel of Christ, being baptized by Bro. M. Joblin in the fall of 1889. She was a niece of the late Bro. J. N. Shouards, who was one of the early defenders of the faith in this locality.

Death resulted with unexpected suddenness on March 2, 1931, from cancer, which an operation had failed to eradicate. She leaves behind to mourn her loss, her devoted husband and daughter, Ruth, one sister and two brothers.

Sr. Tomlinson was always one of the most ardent and loyal workers the Church of God had, and her cheerful presence will be sorely missed among the gatherings of the saints. When, less than two years ago, the writer enjoyed the pleasure of her company on the trip to conference at Oregon, he little realized that he would soon be called upon to serve in such an opposite capacity.

Funeral services were conducted from the home, near Chagrin Falls, Ohio, by the writer, assisted by Bro. Geo. Alldridge, on March 4. An overflowing house and a large and beautiful floral offering paid silent tribute to a life which had commanded the respect and admiration of all whom it touched. Sorrowing hands laid her gently to rest in beautiful Lakeview Cemetery, until He who is the resurrection and the life shall come to swallow up death in victory.

M. W. Lyon.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Mrs. Chloe Sims; Mrs. Eva Collins; B. Frank Boyer; Leota B. Hanson; Willis Roose; Mrs. John Taylor; Mrs. Emily Blackwell; Floyd Kessler; G. E. Coats; Mrs. Anna Wertz; Paul M. Hatch; S. T. Shirley; Mrs. H. A. Smith; Mrs. Earl Bowen.

GOSPEL IN SONG

Buy Now at Reduced Prices

Those who have never seen this collection of well printed Gospel songs should order a sample at once.

Those using this book should replace their torn and lost copies and add new copies for the spring increase of attendance in Sunday School and Worship services. Be ready with song books when the people arrive. To assist in this work, we will for a short time fill all orders at a Ten Percent Discount.

Manila Covers were 40c each; 3:60 for 10.
Now, prepaid, 35c each; 3:15 for 10.
(Only a few left)

Board Cloth Covers were—50c each; $4.50 for 10; *$40.00 per 100
Now, prepaid—

45c each; $4.00 per 10; *$35.00 per 100
* Not prepaid.
Order from

NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by
NATIONAL BIBLE INSTITUTION
Oregon, Illinois

Subscription Rates.—51 issues per annum, $2.00; 6 months, $1.00; 3 months, 50 cents. Sample copy, Free.

Receipts.—The change of date on your address label is your receipt. If date is not changed in two weeks after payment of subscription, please notify this office.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the soon coming of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church being joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BASKET WEAVE

THE NEW BINDING FOR OXFORD BIBLES

Grained with basket weave design. Highly finished calf leather, of a dark brown color. Button clasp keeps volume closed and protected. Convenient to carry. Oxford India paper. Six maps.

This is a beautiful book for your own use or for a gift. Prices range from $4.25 to 10.50.

Write for complete descriptions.

"GETHSEMANE"

The Golden Rule Sunday School Class of the Oregon Church of God has at this time a few pictures of the painting, "Gethsemane", which shows Christ in prayer.

These pictures are very appropriate for Easter. A real value at One Dollar each.

Order from the chairman of the sales committee, John Denchfield, Oregon, Illinois.

MEETING LIFE'S PROBLEMS WITH THE BIBLE

IN TAKING the Bible as your aid in meeting the problems of life, you are running no risk, making no experiment, but availing yourself of the best tested help in all the world. You are adopting the world's manual of living. The dictionaries constantly need revision and enlargement, but the Bible is as it stands, the comrade of the people of past ages, as it will be the life companion of all the generations to come.

