The Bible and the Modern World

A Sup-to-date as television, as authoritative as a decision of the Supreme Court, as definite as a chemical reaction, and as indispensable to an intelligent understanding of world happenings as today's newspaper, is the oldest and the most revered Book known to mankind, the Bible!

This remarkable volume occupies a position in history that is altogether unique. No other literary production has approached the Bible in the influence it has exerted on the general cultural progress of the race. No other book has been so widely distributed. There remains scarcely a corner of the earth in which it has not been published in the local vernacular. From east to west, from north to south, wherever the restless feet of civilized man have wandered, the Holy Scriptures have kept pace with his advance. Generally, in fact, the Bible in the hands of courageous pioneers of Christianity has led the way.

The Word of God provided the first incentive to universal education and formed the corner stone of the leading universities of the world. To further its teachings and to advance its cause these great institutions of learning were originally established. To the writer it has freely and generously contributed of its splendid treasures of poetic and dramatic expression to the great enrichment of the product of his pen. It has inspired the painter, the sculptor, the musician, and even the architect to put forth their noblest effort for the beautification of the world.

But it is not of these powerful influences for good which the Bible has exerted in the past that I would speak, but of the fresh and vital message for the world today, which is specially addressed to us moderns "upon whom the ends of the world are come."

That such a message from God to His people is a practical necessity at this time is clearly apparent, for we are facing right now conditions which threaten the success of Christian work in all its diversified phases. We are wandering in a maze of uncertainties and perplexities out of which only the wisdom of God can surely lead us. We are lost, and the heavenly Father alone knows the way out. He alone can see the end from the beginning. He alone is able to snatch victory from the very jaws of defeat.

Not only is a message concerning the

Not only is a message concerning the times in which we live of obvious necessity to the church, but the world also stands in dire need of an assuring and enlightening revelation such as the Lord alone can give.

The most indifferent of observers is forced to acknowledge that the social, economic, and political situation of organized governments today is exceedingly unstable. No one can foresee at what moment some unfortunate event will throw the nations again at each other's throats.

It is equally apparent that the statesmen upon whom we depend for guidance are quite as perplexed and anxious as is the general public. They are promising, hoping, and experimenting in a thousand different ways, to keep the restless and rebellious masses quieted for a little while. But some of them are honest enough to candidly admit that they can see no way out of our troubles.

Now here is exactly where the Bible enters the picture in a way that should be more effective and impressive than ever before. For the old Book has a satisfactory answer to every problem. It provides protection against every hidden danger. It affords deliverance for all who will enter the ark of safety to which it so plainly points the way.

In the first place, the prophetic Word provides an adequate analysis of world conditions as we see them. It gives us a comprehensive outline of what is occurring and suggests the cause of each happening. With the Bible open before us we can read our (Please turn to Page Ten)

A Diet of Husks

"He would fain have filled his belly with the husks ... and no man gave unto him."—Luke 15:16.

New York, Sept. 18.—The well known American churchman, Daniel A. Poling, in an article in The Literary Digest, gives an interesting and illuminating account of his recent tour through Europe which was undertaken for the purpose of determining the religious conditions prevailing on the continent.

He found the spiritual situation as interpreted by the formalistic churches to be almost everywhere encouraging. The Roman Catholic Church, strange to say, is increasing the more rapidly in those countries where it is no longer the State church, that is, where it is no longer recognized and supported by the political government. Another equally surprising development in that body is the tendency manifested everywhere to meet under conditions of greater or lesser degrees of fraternity with Protestant and Jewish bodies. Dr. Poling reports that a mission of the Oxford Movement was held in Paris last June at which more than five hundred Catholics were in attendance, and the services were under the joint leadership of Catholics and Protestants.

The writer further declares that "the Scandinavian countries are experiencing a religious awakening. The State Churches (Lutheran) have been crowded during the last winter. There is a gripping fervor in the messages of both State Church and Free Church clergymen not apparent four years ago."

In Poland, France, and Spain a similar interest in religion is manifested, particular attention being shown to matters of a mystical or supernatural nature.

England alone seems to present a different picture. Dr. Fort Newton, a distinguished clergyman of the United States, who was pastor for several years in City Temple, London, is quoted as follows: "Religiously, it is a dry time in England. Never have I seen such dearth and deadness. My impression is that the Anglican Church is dead, and knows it, and that the Free Churches are dead, and do not know it, but they are finding it out."

It is evident that the condition in England closely parallels that in this country, if Dr. Newton has analyzed the situation correctly, for we find that while church membership here seems to be increasing, actual attendance and interest in religion are falling off.

There can be little doubt that the great masses of mankind throughout the world are hungering for God. They are thirsting for the water of life. But it is also apparent from the very confusion observable in religious circles that most of them are not finding that for which they seek. The general situation seems to be preparatory to the condition predicted as to exist under the man of sin, when men "shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it" (Amos 8:12). While this condition prevails it provides a most splendid time for the Church of God to spread the glad tidings of a coming Savior with increasing force.

Artillery of Heaven

"The same day . . . it rained fire and brimstone from heaven."—Luke 17:29.

OAKLAND, Calif., Sept. 27.—A startling experience was encountered by the passengers on a big air liner when a dazzling meteor flashed through the skies in close proximity early this morning east of this city. The dangerous visitor came so close that the pilot of the plane, acting on impulse, banked sharply in an effort to avoid being struck. The meteor exploded apparently but a few hundred yards from the ship, which was not struck by its falling particles. That it was an unusually large mass of red-hot material is evidenced by the fact that a truck driver who witnessed the explosion and heard the roar of the motors of the plane reported to the police by telephone that a blazing airplane had fallen.

According to the best authorities on the subject, chemically meteors have the same composition as our earth, "the chief constituent being nickel iron." They come from unknown points beyond the earth's atmosphere, their origin or actual source not being definitely known. Their explosion is said to be caused by the speed with which they pass through the air, the heat thus generated resulting in chemical reactions that reduce them to fragments.

It is repeatedly declared in the Scriptures that fire from heaven will play a very great part in the destruction that is to come upon the ungodly at the close of the tribulation (Mal. 4:1; Joel 2:30-32; 2 Peter 3:7, 10-12; 2 Thess. 1:7-10). Who knows but that the fire here predicted may not in part at least be a vast meteoric shower sent by God for this very purpose?

The Bond of the Covenant

By Norman John MacLeod

"And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant."-Ezek. 20:37.

OF ALL the subjects with which the Scriptures deal, perhaps none is so constantly mentioned as that of the "covenant." So important are the matters discussed under the heading of the covenant that many people fail to grasp the significance of them. Furthermore, because there are some eight covenants upon which the various writers expound their messages, confusion often results from a study of the covenants. Often when a writer refers to the covenant he may mean any one of several covenants. becomes necessary therefore to understand just which covenant is being mentioned. The Jews were often confused by thinking of the Davidic covenant only, when the prophets often referred to the Abrahamic covenant, or the Mosaic covenant, or some other. Because Isaiah told of the glorious promises of the Davidic covenant, the Jews thought that with the coming of Christ they should immediately receive national redemption. Christ, the Redeemer, meant to them one who would relieve them from the yoke of Roman bondage: did not Isaiah say that "the government shall be upon his shoulder"? Surely, they thought, the government of Christ would certainly be impossible if the Roman Government should continue.

They did not understand, as many people nowadays, that Jesus the Christ was a part of the covenant with Abraham, the Mosaic covenant (sometimes called the old covenant, and sometimes referred to in its renewed form as the covenant of the land of Moab), and the Davidic covenant. He was the promised Seed of Abraham; He became the Curse (for us) of the Mosaic covenant, and the great reestablished Tabernacle of the Davidic Covenant.

EZEKIEL AND THE DAVIDIC COVENANT

Seldom does Ezekiel speak of the Davidie covenant. Only when that awe-inspiring rapture peculiar to the prophets breaks into his narrative do we find Ezekiel referring to the "Branch." The glories of the Great Ruler, of the Prince of Peace, of the time when "a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment," are not the refrain of Ezekiel as they are of Isaiah. The other two covenants are the ones about which Ezekiel is primarily concerned: the Mosaic and the new covenants. Practically the entire volume of Ezekiel is concerned with the blessing and the curse of the Mosaic covenant, and the making of the new covenant with Israel

THE OLD COVENANT

In the book of Deuteronomy Moses set forth (in the covenant of the land of Moab) the detailed blessing and curse of the old covenant. From the twenty-seventh to the thirtieth chapters and beyond, Moses told of the terrible curses that would come upon the Israelites if they turned aside from God's commandments, and of the blessings that would come upon them if they kept those commandments. From that he turned to prediction to tell of the curses and the blessings that would in the future come upon them. In those chapters he set the stage for all the writing prophets afterward. In the latter part of the book of Deuteronomy we find the summary of almost the entire remaining portion of the Bible. Israel accepted the responsibilities of that covenant even as their fathers had at Sinai:

the blessings and the curses pronounced upon the children of Israel have followed from that moment until the present, and are yet to be completed in the future. Of these Isaiah and Jeremiah treated. And of these Ezekiel treated.

Israel recognizes no other covenant. The Jews still live under the traditions of the Mosaic covenant. which was renewed before the new generation went over into Canaan under the leadership of Joshua. They are abiding under the curses that were set forth at that time by Moses. When, in the land of their exile, they return to the Lord, then will the blessings come upon them: under no other circumstances will God restore them to their own. To the Jew the Abrahamic covenant and the Mosaic are all one. They look for the Savior under the Davidic, failing to recognize Him in the promises to Abraham.

STILL CURSES REMAIN

When Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt he told them that then was to be fulfilled the promise made to Abraham of the land that should be theirs. They were to go to the "land flowing with milk and honey" that had been promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They still are looking to the fulfillment of the promise of the land: Mr. Rothenberg stated in our hearing that they were going back to occupy the whole Near East (according to the statement that the land from the Nile to the Euphrates should be theirs, Gen. 15:18). But still curses remain for many of those that are returning. Ezekiel speaks of the days when they shall return: God is going to plead with them in the wilderness of the people, as He pled with their fathers in the wilderness of Sinai; and then: "I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant." Throughout this whole passage Ezekiel is using poetic form: the parallelism of Hebrew poetry carries parallel thoughts. Following the above passage he uses the same parallelism: first, "And I will purge out from among you the rebels"; and then the parallel thought: "and them that transgress against me." In the thirtyseventh verse the two thoughts which are parallel are: "And I will cause you to pass under the rod," and: "and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant."

THE BOND OF THE COVENANT

What is that bond of the covenant? What is the process of bringing the Israelites into the bond? If we go into the meaning of the word we find it signifies tradition, or regulations. Ezekiel says, speaking for God, these words, then: "And I will bring you into the laws of the covenant." What were those laws? If you do right: blessing; if you do wrong: curse! That is the burden of the thought of the whole prophecy. Israel is going to be brought under trials that will purge out from among them the ones who are not fit for the kingdom of God, those who fall by the wayside when trials come upon them. They are going to be removed from Israel before the acceptance finally of that "new" covenant: the one that has been with them which they have not understood from the time it was given, that the whole world should be blessed in Abraham.

Why does God deal so peculiarly with Israel? Why are they to be purged? Why are the evil ones among them to be weeded out? Because God will no more allow His name to be polluted among them in the land when the kingdom is set up: "Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and

The Coming of Christ

"I SEE Rufus A. Curtis declares in this interesting sixpage folder you gave me the other day that the coming of Christ is a divine necessity," said John Almen when he met his friend Peter Everready on Sunday afternoon. "This author puts up a very logical argument in my estimation," Mr. Almen added.

"Yes," agreed Mr. Everready, "I look upon that little tract as one of the best of those put out by the National Bible Institution of Oregon, Illinois. It seems to me that the writer is correct in his statement when he says that the veracity of God's Word requires that Christ shall come again. He quotes so many texts from the Bible that promise very definitely that the Lord will come again just as He went away that He must do so to prove the faithfulness of God and the truth of His Word."

"But beyond this, that is, beyond the verification of the truth of the Bible and the faithfulness of God in keeping His promises, just why is it so important that the Lord should come?" asked Mr. Almen.

"Our author answers that question very clearly, it seems to me," responded Mr. Everready, turning to the fifth page of the folder. "Here Mr. Curtis says that 'the establishment of the kingdom of God as the fifth universal kingdom on earth is dependent upon "the Son of man" coming "with the clouds of heaven" to inaugurate His endless reign of righteousness over His "possession"—"the uttermost parts of the earth." And then to support his assertion he refers the reader to such passages as Daniel 2:44; 7:13, 14; together with the second and the seventy-second Psalm.

"And notice, John," continued Mr. Everready, "how the coming of the Lord is connected up with the central thought of the gospel, the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth. That glorious event cannot occur unless the Lord returns personally and visibly to the earth."

"Yes, I see that very plainly," responded his friend. "And I notice Mr. Curtis declares that the coming of Christ brings rewards to both righteous and impenitent. I have become quite concerned, since I have been studying the Bible with you, about the final destiny of the wicked. I find it hard to believe that God is to torture them forever. Such an idea seems altogether repugnant to the character of the God of love."

"I see you are beginning to work some things out for yourself, John," replied his companion. "Mr. Curtis answers your problem briefly in this little tract by stating, with strong biblical support, that 'the retribution of the incorrigibly wicked is not taking place in some remote hell of conscious suffering,' but that they are reserved 'unto the day of judgment to be punished.'

"I see my time is up and I must run along home, but before I go I want to leave this folder with you to read. It is entitled What Do the Scriptures Teach? and treats more fully of the question we have been discussing, that is, the punishment of the wicked."

Man's Greatest Love Story

THIS seems to have been a unique book even at the time it was written. It is now one of the most beautiful and pleasing idyllic narratives ever written. This type of literature is called an idyl since it describes purpose in writing the book, and one should read the entire story carefully as he keeps this in mind. The following considerations may help to arrive at the values of this splendid little book:

in simple rustic fashion a scene in common life without presenting unusual heroic or dramatic effort. It is the setting forth of a reflective situation rather than a complicated movement leading to an animated climax. Hardly is there to be found a better example of this style of literary expression. The common reader finds it strangely appealing in its sincere protrayal of true loyalty and devotion in humble life.

DATE OF THE BOOK

There is no reliable data outside of the book establishing the time of its composition. So we are left largely to the evidences found in the book itself. The events are mentioned in 1:1 as occurring "in the days when the judges judged." But the expression suggests a long interval between the events and the writing about them. It indicates that there had been a change in the Government since the time of the judges. In the statement of a custom it says it was in vogue 'in a former time,' referring to the time of this event. Thus in 4:7 the taking off of a shoe and giving it to another sealed an agreement for the transference of property and with it the rights of a childless widow. Should the man who was the nearest of kin refuse to marry the widow, he should remove his shoe and give it to the next nearest relative, who now had the right to marry the woman. The elders of the city became the witnesses instead of having the transaction recorded in a written document. The case of Ruth was according to this old custom, but the custom had been changed by the time this book was written.

Again, the present position of the book of Ruth is not that of the Hebrew Canon of the Old Testament, which places Ruth after the Song of Solomon in the division called the Kethubim or Hagiographa. Had the book been in existence near the time of the book of Judges, it would undoubtedly have been put in the same part of the Jewish Canon, and probably where it is now in our Bibles, next to the book of Judges.

Further, the book itself contains the genealogy of David, which fits so well in the book that one can but feel that the book was written with that fact well in mind. This would place the writing of the book probably after the times of David.

PURPOSE OF THE BOOK

It is quite probable that the author had more than one

- 1. The Hebrew people, like ourselves, are fond of well told stories, as the many examples in the book of Genesis and elsewhere abundantly reveal. Such stories were often recited by trained story-tellers at feasts and other local and national assemblies. This was a leading ancient method of educating the youth in the history and teachings of the fathers.
- 2. The Moabites, of whom the heroine of the story was a noble representative, were neighbors and distant kinsmen of the Hebrews. Often they were rivals and even enemies in war, when ambitious leaders incited their followers to unfriendly attacks. But the real statesmen on either side wished to maintain peace and mutual good will. As an example, David placed his parents under the protection of the king of Moab when the former was pursued so ruthlessly by Saul. So any influence that would enhance this friendliness was greatly to be desired. Probably the story of Ruth was told among the Moabites also as revealing the kindness of each group toward the other.
- 3. In Israel, a brother-in-law of a childless widow was expected to take his brother's place as her husband, and regard the first male child in the new family as the heir of the dead brother's estate, in order to perpetuate the brother's name in the family. This was called a levirate marriage; i.e., brother-in-law marriage (Deut. 25:5-10). This was not the one here represented, since neither Boaz nor the other kinsman was a brother of Mahlon. But the likeness points to another law or custom of the time of Ruth, when any near relative was considered eligible. This law illustrated the old-time kinship affection.
- 4. The concluding statement of the book, showing the genealogy of Ruth as culminating in the person of King David, is too prominent not to be one of the chief objects of the book itself. It had not been given due prominence in 1 Samuel 16, where his family was first mentioned, and, as 1 Chronicles 2:9-15 had not yet been written, it is thought that this story is one of the many Davidic stories after the great king's conspicuous reign to give the background of his life and that of his ancestry.
- 5. Others have called attention to the rigid regulations of Deuteronomy 23:3, and the severe application of them in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah, after the return of the Jews from Babylon. It has been suggested that some writer, perhaps a lover of the free, open life of the old days, revolting against the exclusiveness of this new law, wrote

This Business of Living

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

"O Lord, by these things men live, and in all these things is the life of my spirit: so wilt thou recover me, and make me to live. . . . The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day: the father to the children shall make known thy truth."—Isaiah 38:16, 19.

THERE is much for us to learn in our short lifetime. Of the more important things we need to learn how to live. We should first have the proper outlook on life. To some it is only pastime; to others life is a joke, and they do not appreciate the gift of God. There are those to whom life is a burden, and may the Lord bestow His comfort and power upon them.

Living should be a business to every one of us. Here is the important thing when going into a certain business. You have to know something about it. The farmer who knew nothing about the time to plant his corn might think the Lord was against him if his crop was frozen when it began to start ears. The doctor must know something about anatomy before he can diagnose a case, let alone cure the patient. The merchant must know how to buy before he can sell at a profit. Even in the business of being a Christian one must know his Bible and practice its teaching or he will not be a good Christian.

Therefore, to live we must know the principles and rules of life. God laid down some laws in the very beginning that most men know and which all should comprehend. Paul very briefly states one of the greatest of the laws of living in Galatians 6:7: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Even men who lived many hundreds of years before Christ were aware of that eternal fact, for one of Job's friends said, "Even as I have seen, they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same."—Job 4:8. Solomon, the wisest of men, had the same thought when he said, "He that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity."

Adam sowed sin and reaped death. One of his own sons slew the other. That old law of sowing and reaping is just as much in force today as it was when God ordered it so. If one should doubt it, have him touch his hand to a hot stove. The sin, then the suffering; the deed, and then the reward.

There is one phase of the rule for this business of living which very closely touches our religion. "He that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." When we do things simply for temporal gain we are sowing to the flesh. If we reap of the flesh nothing but corruption, we should do nothing merely to please ourselves or satisfy the flesh. Whether we are plowing corn or washing dishes or preaching or even going on a vacation, we should heed the words of the Apostle. "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—1 Cor. 10:31. "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. . . . And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men."—Col. 3:17. 23.

In the Pharisees of Jesus' day (and also of today) we have an example of those who sow to the flesh. They loved to give alms where all could see and glorify them. They stood in the street corner to pray, that they might be seen of men. They loved the greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, "Rabbi, Rabbi." They were sowing to the flesh. Jesus called them hypocrites, and a hypocrite's reward shall they receive.

When we sow to the Spirit we do things and do them in a manner that our virtues grow and our characters are strengthened. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature."—2 Cor. 5:17. Something new is formed, a mind that is spoken of as spiritual, a desire to serve God; and our bodies become the temple of God. When we sow to the Spirit we are feeding that new creation, which is sometimes spoken of as the inner man.

"Men shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God." You need food for your physical structure, but you also need food for your spiritual side, food for the soul, as we sometimes express it. We need food that we may grow and receive the reward of a full-grown servant of the Master.

A rule concerning sowing is found in the letter to the Corinthians. "But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."—2 Cor. 9:6. The words of Jesus before make firm Paul's statement. "Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6:38.

Let us study these principles of life as the Bible so clearly gives and learn better how to live. Let us make "living" a business. Did you ever study yourself and see just what you were making of your life? If you have never done so, just analyze yourself from the three angles: as you see yourself, as others see you, and as God sees you. If you are living to please God and doing all to His glory, you may be sure you are sowing to the Spirit and you shall reap of the Spirit everlasting life.

A Man Against the Sky

"On a hill far away stood an old rugged cross,
The emblem of suffering and shame;.
And I love that old cross where the dearest and best
For a world of lost sinners was slain."

So sings the poet. But on the hill, silhouetted against the sky, stark and glaring with the brazen sun beating down upon the faces of the condemned, there on Golgotha, the Place of a Skull, between two criminals justly condemned to die, hangs the Son of God.

What a picture! What suggestions come to us as we view that scene from a vantage point of twenty centuries removed! There the cross, despised, stained with the blood of a dying Savior, buying back the redemption of a lost mankind, stands outlined against the sky—on a hill.

How could they who passed by wagging their heads and saying, "He saved others; himself he cannot save," understand this central figure when He said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me"? Could it mean anything else than a criminal hanging on a cross to them? What is there about this cross so rough and rugged, upon which the greatest tragedy of the world was enacted, which then was so ignominious, so accursed, that it has lost its ugliness, its curse, and shame and has become a thing of wondrous beauty and something to be cherished? Why should it be accursed and why should a man who could help men and heal them of diseases and who could ever restore even from the dead be accused of having a devil and of being blasphemous when the blasphemy was on the side of His enemies? . . .

GLORY FROM HORROR

As His followers gaze upon the darkness of that picture, the picture changes to light, its ugliness to beauty; the curse of Golgotha blossoms into the fragrance of Calvary, and its glory transcends in the hearts and lives of those believing disciples.

Can you see the tragedy and suffering? the faces of evil men fanatic with the traditions of their religion and with grim satisfaction showing upon their countenances as they watch a man die upon a rude, roughhewn, despised, and accursed cross? And as one group gaze its ugliness disappears, the axe marks smooth out, the spikes that nailed our lives to the cross, that pinioned Him, become pinions of love to hold us, and the crown becomes studded with gems and jewels which sparkle, refract, and scintillate with iridescent light while its ugliness and despair, a symbol of everything evil, becomes a glorious monument that assumes a thing of beauty, symmetry, and strength. The stream which flowed from His side becomes a cleansing fountain. The hands that were nailed to the wood are the hands that hold us close to the heart of God.

How much did Paul comprehend when he said, "He made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him," and all this ending in the victory from the beginning to an everlasting accomplishment?

FEAR AND HYPOCRISY

Why should this one of the three crosses stand out more than the others? And why should it bring such a satisfaction to these priests and elders that they could gloat over the triumph of an unarmed man, without guile, without resistance, and who was such a champion of the needy? Was it because this man had overridden the traditions of the church? Had He trodden upon the toes of those sanctified hypocrites? Was it because He had seen under the guise of their hypocrisy the real measure of this group who were too ashamed and too cowardly to do their own killing, but under the plea of their law were perfectly willing to have the Roman Government do what their own law prevented them from doing? Where in all the world on the pages of history can we find any meaner or more desperate, dastardly, wicked people than the self-righteous? The better than thou! It is usually this class who do more to halt the progress of Christianity than any other.

The man against the sky—on a hill. Man of sorrows. What a name! We read that Joseph of Arimathea, a devout believer, begged the body of Christ, took it down, and buried it in his own tomb. At sundown all three were taken down. Then as the night shades fell upon that distant scene, as Calvary stood out in the darkened shadows, grim and ghastly against the background of the clouds and half-hidden moon, those three crosses stood out silently like specters. No excited mobs loitered about that hill. The conviction of a righteous and innocent man has filled them with awe and terror as the shades of superstition and morbid fear haunt that hill with phantom spirits and evil forebodings.

THE MEANING OF CALVARY

What do the cross and the man against the sky mean to us? Does Golgotha, the Place of a Skull, does Calvary, mean anything besides justice for a man guilty of crime or does it mean that Jesus, the man against the sky, died on that cross to save a lost world and in it all included me, also?

Those three crosses mean that on one cross a man died in sin. On another a man died saved from sin, but on the third a man died because of sin. Each of us is dying on one of those crosses. Perhaps on two of them. We may die in our sin, we may die saved from sin, but also we may die because of sin. Jesus said the time would come that men would kill His disciples for the truth. And by the same token that same spirit is killing men today.

The cross once the emblem of death has come to mean life with all that must exact for giving life: suffering, the valley of shadow, the hour of sorrow which comes to THE RESTITUTION HERALD all mankind and which came to Jesus for what He must give in order that a more abundant life might come.

THE SIGN

He said that as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness so the Son of man must be lifted up. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." In the wilderness it was look and live. Life for a look. Now it is believe and live. He was lifted up in ignominy and shame on earth to be exalted in heaven, where He sits on the right hand of God as Priest and Mediator and will be crowned King of kings when He comes a second time without sin unto salvation.

The Jews were ever seeking a sign. Should not the sign of the brazen serpent of the wilderness have been a sign? Should Christ not have been to them the life they sought from the garden even until now?

Are we among those that pass by and wag our heads and say, "He saved others; himself he cannot save"?...

Where does tragedy end and idealism begin? Where does the cross lose its curse and justice and mercy begin? When it was nailed to the cross—in the man against the sky—on a hill.

SAVED BY THE CROSS

Sin leaves its ugly sear and stain, but the wounds on His thorn-covered brow, the nail prints on His hands and feet, and the spear thrust gash in His side will be the passport into the kingdom. It will then be that the sears become beauty marks because we have been forgiven and consciousness remains with us as a reminder that we are saved by the cross of Calvary.

The cross was not beautiful. It was built for criminals, but in the hands of the sculptor the marble bust of Galatea becomes a living stone and speaks. And like the gifts of Abel, it still speaks.

The story of Sir Launfal is that when he started out on his search for the Holy Grail, haughty, arrogant, and proud, not far from the palace he came upon a ragged leper. He threw him a gold coin with contumely. The beggar resented the donation in the spirit in which it was given. But after years of search without success, careworn and travel-stained, but experienced and softened, he came upon what he thought a bundle of rags. Coming nearer, he saw the bundle move. Thinking it was the same leper, he drew from his purse, not a gold coin, because he had only silver left, but the silver coin. He thought to see the face of the leper, but instead he saw the face of the Master. He had not found the cup from which the Master had drunk—but he had found the Master Himself.

Shall we also sing with the poet?

"So I'll cherish the old rugged cross,
Till my trophies at last I lay down;
I will cling to the old rugged cross,
And exchange it some day for a crown."

Libra in Present Truth Messenger.

CHRIST SUPREME

JUDGED by human standards the life of Christ was a failure. He amassed no wealth. No honors were heaped upon Him. While men marveled at His teachings they were unable to understand Him. They thought Him crazy or in league with Beelzebub. When He described His kingdom men could not see beyond the Roman Empire. Even His chosen disciples could not understand Him. In the most shameful and painful way they put Him to death as a criminal. Taken from the cross, His body was placed in a tomb, and night overshadowed the world. It looked as if the very name of Christ would be blotted from the world. Standing under the darkened sky, who could dream that, overcoming all obstacles, His name would be above every name?

No name is so potent, so far-reaching, so all-conquering as the name of Jesus. Great as may be our admiration for men of genius, we cannot worship them. The arts render homage to Jesus. The cross has sparkled in the crown, gleamed in the warrior's shield, dropped on the bosom of beauty, glittered on the spires of temples, swung from the robes of priests, bent o'er gilded shrines, been borne aloft on banners, and been precious in the hour of death.

Far above all written literature, far above the supreme products of the mind, far above the creations of art, there is a realm bright as the light, serene as the pearl—the realm of spiritual affection. Here He is enthroned. Here He has a peculiar right to reign. Here we discover His crowning glory.

The supremacy of Jesus is seen in His power over the soul. Millions have enthroned Him as the King of kings and Lord of lords. Here all great men fail. We admire them but cannot adore them. We love to think of Milton in an age of darkness, of evil tongues, and with dangers compassing round, gazing on the bright countenance of truth in the quiet air of delightful studies; we love to think of Chateaubriand in a day of warring elements, of blackest unbelief, throwing down before the French people his "Genius of Christianity." We love to think of Howard leaving his elegant retreat and moving among criminals and outcasts, to elevate, ennoble, and save. We love to think of Hannah More and Florence Nightingale diffusing sweetness as the sun diffuses light; but we cannot worship them. We immortalize them in history, poetry, and song, but they are not the objects of our worship. One man represents science, another philosophy, another literature, another music, another painting, another military genius, but in the serenest mood of the soul we turn to Jesus and find in Him all answers to our questions and acknowledge His supremacy. His name is transporting to the church militant, and will be the richest chord in the harmony of the church triumphant. Supreme in literature, supreme in art, supreme in the realm of affection, supreme in the holy temple of the soul, He will be supreme in science and His universal supremacy will be acknowledged by a reverent world.—Selected.

Why I Believe

THAT it is a part of prophetic expectation that there should be a heralding of the near coming of Christ far enough previous to the actual event for widespread reaction to come is well understood by those who are conversant with the language of Peter. There must needs be a premature heralding of the immediacy of the advent to give basis for the scornful cry, "Where is the promise of his coming?" Men whose fathers heard the alarm in the Advent movement of the early forties of the last century mock today because the heralded changes have not come. Based upon a misunderstanding of prophecy with regard to time as it was, the movement . . . . . . was nevertheless foreseen in the Book and therefore fulfills its purpose—"that the scripture might be fulfilled."

That declaration of the immediate return of Christ was premature, for He did not come as expected, but that it was abortive is hardly true to fact, in that that heralding of His coming was the means under God of winning countless souls to Christ, of maintaining the faith of many more, and of writing again into the creeds of Christendom the doctrine of the second coming of the blessed Christ.

I believe the premonitory signs of Matthew 24:29 are yet future because it is to me the only reasonable belief in the light of the evidences and because the affirmation of their fulfillment in the past has become to me untenable.

There is no absurdity in affirming the continuing of time until every orderly bit of the prophetic Word has found its complete fulfillment, but a tremendous absurdity in continuously stretching an interpretation intended to cover only a few months or years at the most until it has covered one half of a century—with the end of the process not yet in sight.

The specific signs of Matthew 24 are, I believe, the final signs in that sign-period mentioned by Luke, a period which we may well have entered with the beginning of the ending of the "treading down" of Jerusalem by the Gentiles as a result of the Great War of 1914-18.

On the face of the record these specific signs follow one another in a mighty cascade of tokens affirming His coming to be "at the doors." With not a hint that they shall be used as a warning by gospel preachers to the world at large for a final ingathering of souls, they are distinctly presented by the Master as signs to notify the watchful that He is at hand for their deliverance. There will be no time when they begin to appear for the world to hear the gospel before the age ends, neither for an unfaithful church to be warned. Such to me seems to be the force of the language.

The opening of the sixth seal was accepted by our fathers as marking events identical with those of Matthew 24:29. That seal opens with a great earthquake which convulses heaven and earth. The sun is darkened, the moon becomes as blood, the stars fall from heaven, and the heaven itself departs as a scroll while every mountain and island are moved out of their places, and the high and low among men hide themselves and cry, "The great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?"

To hold the two records to be identical and yet to separate the convulsion and rolling up of the heavens from the physical signs in earth, sun, moon, and stars is to work a tremendous injustice to the words of Jesus in the Revelation, given, as they were, evidently to supplement and explain His previous statement recorded by Matthew. The sixth seal presents an earthquake which ends the present day of grace and reveals the throne and Him seated upon it, bringing men to the great day of His wrath. The entire story is bound together. While earth reels under the convulsion of a terrible seismic disturbance, unprecedented in all the annals of time, all creation feels its effects and the heavens split asunder to reveal Him who comes as Judge.

Our fathers believed that the opening of the sixth seal was marked by the great earthquake of Lisbon and the darkening of the sun in 1780 and allied events, and true to their promise expected the Lord's immediate advent. Their words can hardly be bent to permit the passing of many years between those events and the advent.

Nothing can be gained by seeking to cling to the theory in the face of results: for what once bound us together and became the driving force of a movement which belted the earth with its message now drives us to the four winds. It was above everything else the belief that He was "nigh, even at the doors" which sent our people forth with such passion and self-forgetfulness. But time has proven Him not to have been "nigh, even at the doors," and every passing year further discredits the theory and writes its awful havoc in our denominational life, for there is no challenge to preach or believe a message which time has discredited.

Allow the premonitory signs to be yet future, and events fall into orderly shape without strain, and the message receives a dignity which for some time has been lacking.

One does not delay the coming of Christ by putting His sayings in proper sequence. We have been extremely eager not to "delay" His coming but have found nothing doubtful in proclaiming Him as coming years ahead of schedule. With the signs and the tribulation which precedes them (and therefore all that goes with them) still future, the coming of the Master is not delayed indefinitely. Rather there are evidences which seem to proclaim not uncertainly that the time of trouble now impends, and when it breaks there will be no doubt that it is here, and the church will know quite definitely what must come to pass ere the heavens part to reveal the majesty of our precious and all-glorious Lord.

Certainly He is not "nigh, even at the doors" today, for a bridegroom coming for his bride, a nobleman returning to reckon with his servants, a judge coming to sit in judgment upon the enemies of righteousness does not tarry on the doorstool with his hand upon the latch. He comes in immediately, and carries out his program with dispatch.

How far-fetched is an argument which allows men to teach that Jesus has been "nigh, even at the doors" for half a century of time and yet will not allow that Jesus can be "nigh" at all if one admits that there is yet a prophetic program to be fulfilled ere He can come—a program which may well find fulfillment in a few years of time.

There is a vast difference between the phrases "nigh, even at the doors" and "draweth nigh." The latter may take years to bring the consummation, the former may well convey just what our fathers believed—an immediate return.

Much better admit that it may yet take time to accomplish the fullness of the age than to continue to proclaim Him coming at any moment in the face of the program of the Book—and it leaves us less for which to apologize.

MAN'S GREATEST LOVE STORY

this story to show that even David, Israel's most beloved king, descended from Moabitish ancestry himself, and that David's great-grandmother was none other than the saintly Ruth the Moabitess, long famed now in Israel, and, like Tamar and Rahab and the wives of Joseph and Moses, a representative of an outside, or foreign, people. It only indicates that not all Israel consented, without opposition, to laws that tended to set aside the free, primitive life of the past.

Thus the author of this greatly admired story may have had several purposes in mind at the time of writing. But we shall be inclined to feel that the religious nature of the book moved him most in its composition. Unquestionably it was this motive that led most of the writers of the Old Testament to express their views and interpretations in this extraordinary body of ancient writings. No other nation succeeded so well in impressing its religion upon its youth and the world.

THE BOND OF THE COVENANT

hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me: but pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols."—Ezek. 20:39. Such is the bond of the Mosaic covenant, the old covenant. What is the bond of the new? The Gentiles are concerned with the old covenant only insomuch as it is a lesson for them of what God was doing with the nation of Israel.

NEW COVENANT BONDS

Are there no curses under the new covenant? Will

God pour out only blessings upon the world through the covenant which was made with Abraham, ratified with Christ, and will be set up when Christ returns? Let us read: "For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness. and darkness, and tempest, . . . but ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, . . . and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant. . . . See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven."-Heb. 12:18ff. But under the old covenant if a man disobeyed he had no chance for forgiveness, but received only condemnation. Christ, however, became a curse for us by going to His terrible death on "a tree." If we become Christ's, and rely upon Him, there becomes a new bond for the new covenant. Those bonds are not bonds of chastening, of purging with the sword, but of love, mercy, and forgiveness. The bonds of the new covenant are those that draw us in love to the throne of grace to obtain mercy for the misdeeds that have been ours in the past.

newspapers, our magazines, and our books understandingly and listen to the addresses that come over the air and give to each event its proper value in the great unfolding scheme of current history.

The plans of men are of necessity chaotic. The purposes of God are orderly. Men do not know where they are going, they are merely "on the way." The great King of the universe has His path of progress clearly mapped out far in advance, in fact, from the beginning to the end of time, yes, and on into the ceaseless eons of eternity when time shall be no more! God knows where He is going, and why, and when! No sudden changes will be made in His plans. They will all be carried out exactly on schedule just as He has promised through the apostles and prophets in His Word.

And this vital information concerning the present and the future work of Jehovah has been recorded in the Bible, "written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope."

This great blessing has not been brought to us, however, for our own selfish pleasure and comfort of mind, but that it may be published broadcast throughout the suffering world. God would have all men "come to the knowledge of the truth"!

This great task of making men happy by bringing to them the possibility of eternal deliverance from sin and trouble and death has been committed to us. May God help us to prove faithful to the trust He has so evidently placed in us!

Are the Scriptures Inspired?

"Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees."—Isaiah 35:3.

Have we been misled and mistaken in placing our confidence in the Bible? So many today are denying its inspiration and declaring its teachings false. But this is only one of the proofs that we have that the Scriptures are inspired of God and are infallible. For the Bible itself says that "in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils."

No other book ever written has called forth such intensity of feeling for or against it. Those who love it and believe all that it teaches are willing to defend its truths with their very lives. Those who hate it will go to any extremes to destroy faith in it. Could it be that those who hate it do so because they do not understand its teachings? A thorough knowledge of the Bible is bound to produce love for it, and the greater the knowledge the deeper the love.

The Bible is truly "the" Book of books, and derives its name from a word meaning "books." Millions of copies of it have been sold and it still continues to be the best seller. It has been translated into 936 different languages and dialects and has been taken into nearly every country on the face of the globe.

Not only is it the Book of books, but it is also a book of books, and bears within itself proof of divine origin. It consists of sixty-six books written by thirty-six different men in three languages—Hebrew, Chaldaic, and Greek. The whole period occupied in compilation was approximately seventeen hundred years, with four hundred years elapsing between the Old and New Testaments.

Men from various walks of life did the writing under varied circumstances. Among its writers were a king, peasant, priest, tax collector, doctor, general, nobleman, lawyer, and statesman. Moses was brought up in a king's palace in all the learning of the Egyptians. Paul was taught at the feet of Gamaliel, the greatest teacher of the time. Amos was among the herdsmen of Tekoa, while Peter, James, and John were fishermen. Daniel was a statesman at the court of Babylon, and David was himself a king.

Paul did much of his writing while in prison, John while in exile on the Isle of Patmos. Ezekiel wrote while a Babylonian captive, Daniel while serving at the court of Nebuchadnezzar. Isaiah wrote what he saw in vision concerning Judah and Jerusalem. The heavens were opened and Ezekiel saw visions of God which he wrote. The Word of the Lord came to Hosea, Joel, Jonah, and others in a way which is not definitely stated. Luke says he was an eyewitness of the things he records. Each writer did his part very likely in ignorance of what the others had written.

But with all this diversity of time, language, writers, and conditions there is a most marvelous harmony and agreement. The Bible is not a collection of books upon unrelated subjects, but all the writers combine to one end. One grand central theme is carried throughout. No part is contradictory or antagonistic to any other part.

Give all these facts due consideration and surely only one conclusion can be reached, that there must have been one guiding power over all. Many writers, but only one author, for "all scripture is given by inspiration of God." Even though the Bible did not contain these exact words in regard to itself, it contains within itself sufficient evidence to prove its divine authorship.—Miss Lucille Le Crone, Helena, Oklahoma.

Sowing and Reaping

One cannot sow to the Spirit before being begotten of the Spirit. James 1:18: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures." According to this scripture, we are begotten by the Word of God. We hear the Word, and we believe and are baptized and brought into the family of God. Acts 8: 12: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women."

Sowing to the flesh means the same as walking after the flesh. Romans 8:1: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." And of minding the things of the flesh Romans 8:5 says, "For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit." In Galatians 6:7 and 8 Paul is warning those who continue to walk after the flesh after they have been begotten of the Spirit. We can deceive ourselves, but we cannot deceive God. "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not," is the Apostle's admonition to all who are seeking for glory, honor, and eternal life.

Romans 6:4: "Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."—Richard Rahn, Los Angeles.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path,"

THE LIGHT THAT NEVER GROWS DIM

TAVE any of you boys and girls ever walked along a H lonely country road on a dark night? It seemed as though you could just feel the darkness, didn't it? You stumbled over the smallest pebbles, and your foot turned in the tiniest crevices. When at last you could see the neighbor's light how glad you were! You declared you'd never go without a light again.

Of course you city boys and girls who read this page, if any of you do, have missed all such things. Bright lights stream about you from every corner. And if you've never followed behind Father carrying a bobbing lantern, you have missed a good deal.

When you were getting ready to start, Father polished up the globe and looked to see if there was plenty of oil. Then you started out, trying to step in Father's steps. The lantern showed you every crooked place in the path, every stone, and every rut. You walked right straight along without fcar, because Father knew the way and carried a light. It's fun, isn't it?

Do you know that we all can have a bright and shining light to show us the way to go and also to tell us what to do? You never heard of a light that could talk to you? Well, this light can, and it isn't Aladdin's lamp either, nor anything like that. It's the ——— guess! Yes, the Bible.

The Bible does show us the way to go and it does tell us just how to act. We all know that, but sometimes we forget. We think we'll start out without our Bible light, just as we did that time we went to the neighbor's without our lantern. And before we get to where we are going we stumble and fall. How we wish we hadn't left our Bible light at home!

Of course, you say, you can't take your Bible with you every place you go. You can take it with you every time you go to Sunday school or church, but not every place. Yes, you can, too! And I think many of you can tell me just how. I know all you Sons and Daughters of the King can tell me.

By learning many of the verses found in your Bible, to be sure! Then you will have your Bible light with you all of the time, because it will be right there in your minds and hearts, ready to be used Denever you don't know which way to go or what to do.

You know, Jesus was called the Light of the World, and yet He thought He needed the light of God's Word to show Him what to do. Can you think of one time in particular that God's Word told Him just what to say and do? If you have forgotten, look in Matthew 4. And if the Son of God needed that light surely not one of us knows enough to go without it! What do you say?

All of you who are reading this page just now, or are listening to some one read it, take your Bibles and turn to Psalm 119. This chapter is a very, very long one, and it has so many verses in it that tell us how the Bible is a light. Let's glance at it and pick out a few.

The first verse tells us about walking with God's law, or God's Word, to show us the way. Verse 11 shows how we carry our Bibles with us every day, also verse 16. Then there's verse 18; why, a light wouldn't do us any good if we kept our eyes shut and stumbled along on a dark night! Not listening to God's Word is keeping our eyes shut to our light.

Then look at verse 35. If you didn't follow the path Father took when he held the lantern that dark night, you might not have reached the neighbor's at all. And if you don't follow the way the Bible light shows you to go, you will surely lose your way. Can you find the verse that is at the top of this page?

Now go on down through the chapter and see how many more you can find. Verse 130 is a good one, isn't it? Read the very last one of all. How many of you have ever gone to look for a lost sheep? Maybe if you haven't looked for a lost sheep, you've hunted a lost chicken or some other pet. The poor thing seemed to be so glad to be found, and if you carried a light it came right toward you.

When we go on in our own selfish way and forget all about what God tells us to do, we are just like a lost sheep. And when we turn back to the light of God's Word we are happy once more. God is always waiting for us to come back and obey Him again.

The next letter in the poster we are drawing is H, and there is a good one in this very Psalm beginning with H. It tells us how we are safe if we follow our Bible light, just as we are safe when we follow the light Father carries. How many can find it? But perhaps you have picked out a better verse.

Let's keep our Bible light bright and shining.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS BIBLE

Devotional Reading: Psalm 119:41-48

GOLDEN TEXT

O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day.—Psalm 119:97

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian and His Bible.

Aim: To show the necessity of studying, understanding, and obeying the Bible.

Basic Text: "They received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily."—Acts 17:11.

I. Studying the Bible. (Acts 8:26-29.) The Bible is God's Book. The truth it contains is suited to the needs of all classes of men, but "as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are" God's thoughts higher than our thoughts, and, consequently, it is sometimes hard for us to understand them. We are commanded by Jesus to "search the scriptures" (John 5: 39), and by Paul to "study" that we may rightly "divide" and apply them (2 Tim. 2:15). It is well for us, even when going on a journey as did the eunuch, to take our Bi-bles with us and read them at every opportunity; it provides a protection against temptation. See Psa. 119:11.

tation. See Psa. 119:11.

II. Understanding the Bible. (Vv. 30-35.) The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, in which the eunuch was reading, is one of the most beautiful and blessed portions of God's Word, and it would be well for us to memorize it that we may be able to meditate upon it when we do not have a Bible at hand. The value of our Bible reading lies in the understanding we get out of it. It is advisable to talk over what we read in the Bible with some one who has studied it longer than we have and ask him to help us to understand it better. But after all, "the Bible is its own best commentary," and we should compare different passages on the same subject. Read 2 Tim. 3:14-17

III. Obeying the Bible. (Vv. 36-39.) There is little value in studying, and even in un-derstanding the Bible, unless we apply its teachings to ourselves and carry them out in our lives. The eunuch read about the Savior who was coming and Philip taught him how the prophecy he read was fulfilled in Christ, and that if he wanted to be benefited by the sacrifice of Jesus, he must not only believe what he had learned about Him, but he must show his faith in the death and resurrection of the Lord by being buried in the waters of baptism just as Jesus was buried in the grave, and coming up out of the water as the Savior came up out of the tomb at His resurrection.

GOLDEN TEXT

"O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day."-Psalm 119:97.

The Christian and his Bible should be constant companions. The eunuch had taken his Bible with him and was studying on his way That might be rather hard to do in these times of rapid transit, but there is always time to read and study God's Word if one has the inclination to do so. Make and save time for study.

TAPE ...

God's Word is the source of wisdom: it is also the source of understanding and reason. No wonder David loved it. God's Word also tells the way of salvation, but without study it reveals nothing. Of itself it is silent, but the student can find many treasures hid therein. David's example of meditating on God's Word is a splendid one to follow. God's Word can so fill the mind that evil thoughts and deeds are entirely crowded out.—L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Bible

-is the world's greatest book;

-is the only safe guide in life;

is the inspired record of God's message to man;

is as valuable as we make it by study and practice.

Bible Study. We meet God in His Word, It is a written revelation of God and His Son Jesus and Their work as it affects mankind. To know God we must know His Word and live it. The Bible is not just an ordinary book-it is the Book of books. It is written in different style and method from any other book. It is not a story book with sequence after sequence, but "line upon line; here a little, and there a little" (Isa. 28:13). Coming as it did from God, it is spiritual and can be understood or discerned only with a like spirit (1 Cor. 2:14). The eunuch could not understand the things he was reading because he was of the natural man. Intelligent Bible study requires the Spirit of God. Prayer and meditation are very essential to Bible study. Apart from these the Bible is quite a sealed Application. There is little accomplished in reading or studying the Bible unless we apply its teachings and precepts. It is assumed, however, that the honest reader will be very anxious to do this. A good example is given us in the person of the eunuch. As soon as he perceived what his duty was as revealed by the Scripture, he immediately acted. He was ready to remove any obstacle that was hindering him from obeying the Lord. Such is the result of true study of the Word. To know the Word without obeying is in itself condemnation (Jas. 4:17).—C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS How to Study the Bible

We should study the Bible reverently. As we open the Word of God we should do so with a deepened sense of its sacredness. It is God's Book, and it is a most blessed privilege we are about to enjoy as we peruse its pages. Here the Father in heaven speaks to His children in loving tenderness and promise. Recognizing God's presence in this Book, we are led to believe unquestioningly in its truth and to submit willingly to its requirements.

We should study the Bible prayerfully. "Study without prayer is atheism, and prayer without study is presumption." Parts of the Bible are "hard to be understood," and we can hope to reach their vast depths of meaning only by much prayer and meditation.

We should study the Bible daily. Like the noble Bereans (Acts 17:10-12), we should search the Scriptures daily, testing our own convictions and the religious teaching of others by this one all-sufficient Standard of Divine Truth.

We should study the Bible with understand-When in doubt as to its meaning we should not hesitate to ask the help of more experienced students of the Word, as did the eunuch whose experience is related in our lesson. Only a clear comprehension of the truth it contains can bring to us the rich reward that should be ours.

We should study the Bible joyfully. The inspired John was impressed to cry, "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein."—Rev. 1:3. The Psalmist expressed it in these words: "O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day."—Psa. 119:97. All of our hopes for the future are found in these pages. Well may Paul say, "I delight in the law of God."—Rom. 7:22.—G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Know Your Bible.

"Our Bible" is what we want to talk about today. Draw a picture of a Bible Print "HOLY BIBLE" on the cover. Draw a picture of a Bible closed.

If we never, never opened our Bible we would not know one thing that it teaches.

Draw another Bible, as large as your page will permit. Make this Bible open.

As you look at this open Bible I want to tell you a story about a man that knew his Bible.

(Here teacher is to tell the story about Philip and the eunuch as found in our Sunday school lesson, Acts 8:26-39).

Let's ask ourselves this question: Do you think God would have sent an angel to Philip to ask him to tell this man about Jesus if Philip had not known his Bible?

Now here's another question: Does God want us to know our Bible? Can we tell others about the Bible if we do not know it ourselves?

Perhaps we could ask: How can we learn about the Bible? Here's one way we learn each Sunday, the memory verse or Golden Text. Here is one for today: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." You know that's what the man said to Philip. Let's all say it together. Now let's write it in our open Bible. If you know any other verses from the Bible you may write them.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

RALLY DAY AT BURR OAK, INDIANA

The Burr Oak Church of God will hold its Rally Day program on Sunday, Oct. 7. Sunday school will convene at 10:00 a.m., followed by a sermon at 11:00 o'clock. A basket dinner will be held at noon. At 2:00 p.m. a short play or pageant will be presented, succeeded by another sermon. The evening service will start at 7:30. Bro. F. L. Austin will be the speaker of the day.

We invite all who are interested to come

We invite all who are interested to come and spend the day with us.

Gerald Osborn, Secretary.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

The Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God of California will convene in Los Angeles on October 7. The conference sessions will be preceded by a Rally Day Sunday school program in charge of Srs. Verna Rahn and Leta MacLeod, featured by items by the primary and junior classes. The morning hour will be taken up by sermons from Sr. Railsback, who will speak on the subject: "The Feast of the First Fruits"; and on a selected subject by Bro. Adamson of Pomona; followed by Communion in charge of Bro. Mac-Leod: "In the Upper Room." lunch the afternoon session will assemble at 2:00 p.m. for election of officers for the ensuing year, followed by a concluding sermon by Bro. Hammond of Anaheim: "The Spiritual Value of the Book of Revelation." Kauffman, our delegate to the General Conference, will give a report on the activities of that conference. Special music, including instrumental and vocal numbers, add flavor to the occasion.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 23, the Los Angeles church was kind enough to grant us leave to be absent from services that we might answer another call. A community church in the near-by city of Claremont invited us to give a statement of the principles which we hold so dear. They have been having an extended course in comparative religions conducted by various ministers who have been invited into the pulpit. Our testimony occupies a place at the end of the series. We feel that such opportunities should be seized. Bro. Hammond of Anaheim substituted for us during our absence.

A group of friends and relatives visited the newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Howard of Santa Monica, Calif., Sunday afternoon, Sept. 9. Mrs. Howard is the former Pearl Scherer of Palms, Calif., niece of Sr. John Saylor. On the next Sunday afternoon, Sept. 16, we held services at the home of Bro. and Sr. Rich in Long Beach. Sr. Rich, though much improved, is still unable to attend services in Los Angeles, and so we held a short service including Communion. Our sermon topic was inspired by the title of the latest book by H. G. Wells: "The Shape of Things to Come." With a great deal of pleasure we note the improvement in health of Sr. Lizzie Railsback, who fractured her hip many months ago.

MARATHON, IOWA

On September 9, the usual good audience enjoyed and, we hope, profited by hearing two very excellent sermons given by Bros. Jones and Johnson at the Boyanovsky home. The preaching services were accompanied by Sunday school.

The next meeting will be held at the Selleck home at Marathon. We trust that an equally attentive audience will greet the speakers there.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

Much increased interest and enthusiasm is being manifested in the various departments of our church work. Bro. and Sr. Cole are back home from their vacation trip to Illinois and northern Michigan, and the Berean society, of which he is President, is doing splendid work.

Next Sunday, Oct. 7, is to be Rally Day at our church, and a special combined morning service is being planted service is being planned.

Mr. Barr has the choir in full swing and some good results are anticipated this fall.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

We are pleased to report that plans are now being made to have Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago with us for our annual fall series of meetings, beginning on November 18. Bro. Austin has been one of the leading workers to develop the Brush Creek Church, especially in its early days, and we trust that at his return he may see that his work has not been in The church anticipates his coming to be vain. a pleasure and blessing. Though this is a little early and a more detailed announcement will follow, yet we would like to invite you to keep this meeting in mind as an opportunity to learn and serve. Whether far or near, we invite you to these meetings; and they will be at the Thanksgiving time of the year. So frequently brethren have told me they had a "notion" to come to a certain meeting at Brush Creek; the "notion" is appreciated, but try to get the "motion" as well. "Motion" will get you here.

After attending our services for the past two years or more, Mr. Earl Smith made public confession on Sunday morning, Sept. 16, and was baptized the same afternoon in Brush Creek. He is a middle-aged man and father of five children. He may be addressed at Dayton, Ohio, Route 5. We pray he may remain faithful to his calling.

The Sunday school and church attendance and interest are about normal. Frequently we have well above the hundred mark in Sunday school, and always near that mark when attendance is lowest. Still we know there are further blessings ahead if we are on the Lord's side, and of course we are trusting for a fruitful time at our fall meetings with the inspiring sermons of Bro. Austin.

Many of our brethren have met Sr. Edna Brewer at various conferences. We are sorry to report that it was necessary for her to undergo a serious operation and that she is only slowly recovering. However, just within the past two days her condition is considerably better, and it is hoped she will soon be well past the danger point. A card will reach her at the Troy Hospital, Troy, Ohio, Room 207.

We would also report a few words about the work at Lawrenceville. Though the membership is small and the outlook for growth not so very encouraging, yet we find it a very great pleasure to visit them once a month. They meet every Sunday for worship and are loyal to the truth. Some day, we hope, the Lord will bless this work with a new impetus.

On Tuesday morning, Sept. 25, the writer will leave the local field for the Michigan Conference at Blanchard. Bro. Clyde Pearson has offered to take us with his car, and we will be accompanied by Bros. Howard Pearson and Harry Kipp and possibly Earl Pearson. We are looking forward with joy to this meeting; it will be our first visit with the Blanchard brethren, though we have had most happy experiences with Bro. Smead, their pastor.

Sydney E. Magaw, Pastor.

HELEN FRANCES CARRUTHERS

Helen Frances Carruthers, eldest daughter and second child of Bro. and Sr. J. E. Adamson of Pomona, Calif., was born in Los Angeles March 20, 1901, and fell asleep at the Pomona Valley Community Hospital September 18, 1934, after an illness of some two months. She made her home with her parents in Pomona until after graduation from Pomona High School; after the war she was married to Harold Carruthers, who had served in the Canadian forces during the World War. To this union were born two children: Bernice Jane and Neil Harold, who, together with her husband; a brother, J. Edgar Adamson of Pomona; a sister, Mrs. William Prickett of Dallas, Texas; her father and mother; and a host of friends and relatives, survive to mourn her loss.

Brought up in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus by her parents, she early acknowledged Him as her Savior, and by her faithful life was able to lead her husband to the feet of the Lord. The group which meets at the Williams Street Chapel will greatly miss her for her activities there: she was organist for many years, and also served as Secretary-Treasurer. Being brought up in the same near neighborhood, we seemed more like brother and sister than cousins, and will miss her cheerful presence. Many will be the needy ones who will miss her kindly ministrations, likewise.

Bro. G. P. Lichty officiated at the services, which were held at the Pomona Valley Cemetery; he was assisted by the American Legion Auxiliary, of which Sr. Carruthers had been an active member. She awaits in that peaceful spot the return of our Lord and Savior when He shall come to establish His reign on earth.

WILLIAM BYRON HARROLD

William Byron Harrold, son of Jesse and Sarah Harrold, was born near Eagleville, Mo., July 18, 1867, and died at the family home in Blythedale, Mo., September 23, 1934. He spent his life on the farm near Eagleville until he moved to Blythedale with his parents in 1922.

He confessed his faith in Christ and was baptized in 1923. Billie was most devoted to his parents and a faithful friend to everyone. He is survived by his aged father, his mother having preceded him in death in 1928; also by three brothers and two sisters, Fred and Bert of Blythedale, Tom of Ridgeway, Mrs. George Huitt and Mrs. Henry Allen of near Blythedale.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon, Sept. 24. The services were conducted by the writer (of Lebanon, Ore.)

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER

Sermons and Bible lessons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 2; Hillisburg, 9; Plymouth, 1; North Salem, 1; Blush, Mo., 7. Funerals, 1; baptisms, 1. Money received in Indiana: Pleasant View, $18.75; Rensselaer, $24.60; Hillisburg, $20.83; Plymouth, $12.00; North Salem, $2.00; Conference Board, $21.15. Expenses, $16.00.

On September 17 we were called to Culver, Ind., to preach the funeral of Sr. Osborn, widow of the late Bro. Amos Osborn and mother of Bro. Mel Osborn, well known to the members of God's church in Indiana. Sr. Osborn was past 76 years of age. She will be missed by many who knew her.

On September 22, before the service at Plymouth, a party met at the Lake of the Woods, where it was our pleasure to baptize Sr. Stella Porter. She had been taught the truth by Sr. Minnie Porter, who used the tract recently gotten out, "The Pathway of Salvation."

J. H. Anderson, Indiana Evangelist.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Sr. Eva M. Logan, writing from Manchester College, North Manchester, Ind., kindly says, "I have been thankful so many times for The Restitution Herald, and I hope others receive as much enjoyment from reading it as I do." It is appreciation of this kind that causes our writers to feel that their efforts have not been in vain. We thank you, Sr. Logan, on their behalf.

Complaints sometimes reach us of the failure of subscribers to receive their papers on time. We regret that such delays occur, but as the papers are always sent out on the same day of the week the fault, if such there is, must lie with the post office department.

Sr. Ruth Sheets, wife of Elder Harry A. Sheets of Maurertown, Va., continues to improve in health since her recent operation. Her father and mother, who have been visiting at the Sheets home, have now returned to Illinois.

In preparing the mailing lists for the new Truth Seekers' Quarterly we are again reminded of the encouraging fact that several denominations aside from our own are now using the quarterly in their Sunday schools. Orders already received for the new edition have reached us from Congregational, Baptist, and Christadelphian schools. The truth of God's Word is not limited by denominational lines

We are pleased to learn in a letter from his daughter, Sr. Will Holland, Thorold, Ont., that Bro. T. H. Weldon, beloved elder of the Fonthill church, has recovered from his recent illness sufficiently to be out and enjoy the spacious lawns and gardens of his home. May he be kept by divine power for many years to come.

Sr. Levi Mick, Matron of Golden Rule Home, has been quite sick since her return from Indiana some time ago, but is showing improvement, and is again about her daily task of ministering to the needs of her "family."

By the way, let us not forget that vacuum cleaner needed by Sr. Mick to keep the Home spick and span and free from dust! We will wait with interest the result of Golden Rule Home Sunday and its offering.

Negotiations still creep slowly on with the receivers of the closed Oregon State Savings Bank. The fact that the main office of the receivers is located in Chicago, rather than in Oregon, has a tendency to delay adjustment. Our Manager assures us, however, that he is pressing the matter for final settlement and will keep us posted.

The next monthly meeting of the Executive Board of the National Bible Institution will be held in Oregon headquarters on Monday, Oct. 8. Every member of the Board is expected to be present to consider President L. E. Conner's report of his efforts to adjust the bank matter.

Our ten-cent tract packet offer continues to draw an increasing number of orders from all parts of the country. Tract distribution is an inexpensive and effective way of teaching the truth.

Bro. and Sr. Frank Moran and Bro. Edward Moran of Clinton, Iowa, were welcome visitors at the Oregon church last Sunday.

"I always turn to the prayer on the Editorial Page the first thing when the paper comes," remarked a constant reader recently. Little comments like this, whether they are favorable or unfavorable, aid the editors greatly in determining what course to pursue with regard to the various departments of the paper. We are always glad to get expressions of approval or disapproval from our readers, as the paper is theirs, and we want it conducted as nearly as possible in harmony with their desires and to the glory of God.

Our Business Manager, L. E. Conner, and his wife embraced the opportunity provided by a free fifth Sunday this month to pay a brief visit at the home of their son-in-law and daughter at Akron, Ohio.

The Near East (in this case Turkey) and the Far East (Japan) at the present seem to be flirting with each other apparently in opposition to Russia and China. The situation is worth watching by the student of prophecy.

In a letter from Sr. Ruby Randall, wife of Pastor C. E. Randall, Fonthill, Ont., we are informed of the death of Bro. A. J. Reynolds of Toronto, Ont. The passing of this splendid servant of the Lord will be felt far beyond the borders of Canada. For many years Bro. Reynolds has been a most generous contributor to every righteous effort of the Church of God regardless of where the work was going on. In addition to this he was a stalwart Christian man in the fullest and most spiritual meaning of the term. We shall miss him greatly until we meet him again in the kingdom of the Lord.

Sr. Angeline Lent of Niagara Falls, N. Y., has been confined to her bed for some time. Sr. Lent and her family have been identified with the active work of the Niagara Falls church since its organization more than half a century ago. She herself for many years served as deaconness of that congregation. We pray for her recovery.

A MAN'S LIFE

MAN'S life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Can it be possible? From the way men are seeking possessions we would not believe it. Think of what they will sacrifice and do for possessions. The cold of Alaska, the heat of the tropics, and the fevers of South African jungles do not deter them. The perils of the sea, the loneliness of the prairies, and the heights of the mountains do not stop them in their mad rush for possessions. Yet we are plainly told that these things do not constitute a man's life.

The Bible never discourages the possession of things. There is nothing against it. It does emphasize the fact that a man's life does not consist of these things. Man may have possessions, and they may not harm him. It is wrong when the things begin to possess the man. It is wrong when a man begins to estimate his life by his possessions.

A man owes something to himself. He must first of all be a Christian. This is the first and most important thing. Whether he has things or not matters little. His possession of Christ is all-important. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom." This wisdom is the kind of which the wise Solomon wrote, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Then there is the development of character. God encourages men in one kind of covetousness. He even commands it. "Covet earnestly the best gifts." Patience, meekness, gentleness, faith, lovepower to be and power to bear and power to do-are worth while. Things are trivial. Character is supremely impor-A man's life consists not in the abundance of things he possesses, but in the number and quality of the graces he acquires, the strength and beauty of the character he develops.

There are other people. Men owe something to others. The foolish man would tear down his barns and build bigger ones that he might store his goods. Selfishness is death. The selfish man is standing in the shoes of the rich fool. The trouble with the rich man was that he had the mistaken idea that possessions counted. In reality a man's life consists in helping others to possess. The best possible possession is eternal life. The best use a man can make of his time, his influence, his prayers, his efforts, is to lead others to Jesus Christ.

The poorest men in the world are not the men with the least money. The poorest men are those who become stumbling-blocks, causing others to stumble. The richest men are not those who have the most money, but those who are Christians and endeavor to lead others to the Savior, those who develop their own character and aid others in spiritual growth. Poor indeed is the man who lays up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God. Rich indeed is he who is rich in faith, rich in hope, rich in love, rich in good works—rich toward God. Whatever our financial rating may be, we may be millionaires in character and heirs of eternal glory.—Bible Faith Mission Standard.

WHY IS SYMPATHY NEEDED?

By Mary A. Woodward

SYMPATHY is offered to two friends by the editor of a certain paper. The two have lost friends, who, the writer says, have gone on before to the better land and are with Him, meaning, of course, they are with God.

Question: Why should this friend offer such deep sympathy to her other friends if their loved ones have really gone on to the better land and are with Jesus? If that is true, they are in much better condition than any friend here could place them; and we should not begrudge them the joy of being in His presence.

But is it true? Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Then why do we not go to the Fountainhead to get truth instead of to heathen mythology, or instead of depending upon our ministers to enlighten us? How is it possible for wise people, editors of religious papers, graduates of colleges, reading God's Word continually, to hold out such untruths, false doctrines, making the truths of God a lie, when our Leader has repeatedly said in His messages to the world, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead (dead, not in heaven), yet shall he live (not die, and go to heaven)"?

O dear God, how we thank Thee for opening our eyes to Thy truth, for once they were blind, but now we see. Thank God for truth! How plainly the dear Christ has opened the Scriptures for the world. No need to live in darkness, for listen to the joyful words: "The Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 16:27. You who are still believing in the immortality of the soul stop and read every word of this text over slowly and think of its force, Christ already glorified coming in the glory of His Father with His retinue of glorified angels. Can you think of what that vision will mean when you are awakened from the dead to witness it?

Christ took three disciples up into a high mountain to give them a beauteous glimpse of this same glory, and they fell upon their faces before the glorious vision, for they, being yet mortal, could not look upon such glory and stand before it. But O, praise God, our eyes will be opened upon the glory some glad day, and we will some day fall at Jesus' feet with joy unutterable and feel His precious presence and ever more realize the joy of eternal life, precious gift from Christ. May we each strive for that reward is my fervent prayer.

"We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump."

"For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord . . . shall be caught up together with them (the risen dead) in the clouds."

THE ESSENTIAL FACT

YOU believe it! I believe it! We all believe that Jesus Christ is coming back to this earth again! We may have different ideas as to how He is coming—and why—and when; but so far as the great central fact is concerned we are all agreed that Jesus Christ is coming back to this earth once more.

And, after all, that is the essential fact!

A few people in this world want Him to come A few more people do not want Him to come. While the great mass of mankind appears to be wholly indifferent to His coming.

Some people believe that Christ comes when men die, to waft the righteous at once into the presence of God and the angels in heaven, or, in the case of the wicked, to consign them to everlasting torment in hell. But they believe He is coming again.

And that undoubtedly is the essential fact!

There are others who believe that our blessed Lord will come at the end of this world or age, and that when He comes the earth is to be consumed in literal raging fire, and that none but the righteous will remain alive. But they, too, believe He is coming again.

And that, as I have said, is the essential fact!

Another group of Christian people believe that the Lord is literally, bodily, visibly, coming back to this earth again just as He went away, and that when He comes He will raise those who sleep in Him, immortalize the living saints, and eventually bring the whole wide world into submission to God the Father, so that love and brotherhood, prosperity and peace, shall forever reign throughout the vast kingdom He comes to establish among men. Yes, these, too, as do other Christians, believe that He is coming again.

And that, let me insist, is the essential fact!

We have known for a long time that Jesus Christ is coming back to this earth again. Our fathers told us about it, as our grandfathers had told them, and, as we had no reason to doubt their word, we believed that it was true. Besides this, the doctrine of our Lord's return is amply supported by the most holy book in the world, the Bible No one who believes the Bible, no one who studies its pages with understanding mind and receptive heart, doubts that the Lord is coming again. He cannot do so and believe the Bible. Further, no one who believes the Bible wants to doubt that the Lord is coming. It is one of those remarkably appealing truths that we want to believe.

Why is all this true of Christians everywhere? That is the question I would ask and answer from the Scriptures which are so full of promises relating to that event. Why is it that men and women who seek to pattern their faith on His teaching and their lives on His example want the Lord Jesus Christ to come back to this earth again?

Of course our question must be addressed to you, my fellow Christian, and to me, as we try to walk humbly in His steps. It is not intended for the world. The world could not understand it, and the world would not appreciate it. But why do you and I want Jesus to come back to the earth once more? That is the question.

First, I believe it is because of confidence—(I consciously avoid the hackneyed but more familiar word "faith"). Primarily, I say, it is because of confidence, the confidence we have in Him, that we want the Lord to return to us. It is because of the assurance we have of His sympathy, His understanding, His love, yes, and His resistless power. This is the first reason why we desire His presence on earth once more.

We have real confidence in Jesus Christ! We may have lost confidence in almost everybody else. They may all have failed us in some hour of dire need, some moment of special emergency, and we came to feel that we could trust no one fully any more. But our Lord has never failed us, nor has He failed anyone else in all the years of His blessed ministration. And we know that is true!

Confidence! Some one in whom we have unfaltering trust! What a comfort that would be! I have sat hour after hour at the bedside of a dear one who was apparently at the point of death. I knew that her life was in constant danger, but I did not know what to do to bring the relief that she must have if death was to be stayed.

The doctor came—and the doctor went away again—as doctors must who have many patients. Nurses were searce in our little town, but we had a friend at a distance who was a competent nurse, and we sent for her. She was busy at the time and could not come immediately, and so we were alone, my brother (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Church Asked to Combat Radicalism

"In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth."—2 Tim. 2:25.

LIBERTYVILLE, Ill., Sept. 29.—Charles P. Taft, son of the late President William Howard Taft, speaking as a lay worker before a conference of Episcopal ministers at Doddridge Farm near here, called upon the church to combat the atheistic radicalism that is sweeping the world at this time.

Declaring that religion provided the greatest available weapon against Communism and Socialism, Mr. Taft said:

"The radical political philosophies of Germany, Italy, and Russia are spreading in the United States and will continue to do so as long as they continue to rule in Europe. Under such philosophy individual personality is unimportant, and right there is where Christianity is opposed to such theories. Christ stressed the importance of the individual.

"While such theories dominate Europe they endanger America. The greatest weapon against them is our Christian religion. We need to prosecute our religious work, both at home and abroad, as never before. If ever the world needed religion it is today. The lay worker and cleric alike must fight against radicalism and for Christianity."

As Mr. Taft asserted, Christianity is opposed in principle to collectivism. Christianity deals with individuals rather than with humanity in mass. It recognizes the value of the unit man and changes personalities one by one into the image of Jesus Christ.

It Makes a Difference

"Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

ELGIN, Ill., Oct. 2.—Long considered an expert on mushrooms, Charles A. Reis, 42 years old, of this city, died yesterday from eating poisonous toadstools. Mr. Reis had rather prided himself on his ability to detect the difference between the edible and the poisonous variety of fungi, but his sincere belief that a toadstool was a mushroom did not change the deadly nature of the toadstool, and Mr. Reis died as a direct result of an error in belief.

A great many people say that it really makes no difference what a man believes religiously just so that he is sincere. A belief that an error is true will never make it true. Sincerity in belief never transformed a lie into the truth. May we be sure that the faith we have is founded on the Word of God and not on the traditions of men, as only the truth will make us free from the condemnation of sin.

Urges Increase in Air Forces

"Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near."—Loel 3:9.

Washington, D. C., Oet. 3.—Speaking before the Federal Aviation Committee today of the needs of the United States' air fleet, Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker predicted the coming of a struggle of greater proportions than the World War, and advocated the development of a great air force of 4,000 pilots. The Captain foresaw the movement of entire armies by air transport, and suggested that artillery and small tanks would be carried by planes behind the enemy's trenches and dropped without injury to the ground ready for an attack on the rear of the foe. It will be recalled that recently the French succeeded in firing a .75 millimeter cannon from an airplane and Capt. Rickenbacker based his prediction of the transportation of artillery and tanks in part upon the success of that experiment.

New Franco-Italian Pact

"They shall speak lies at one table; but it shall not prosper."—Dan. 11:27.

Rome, Italy, Sept. 29.—Among the confusing and frequently conflicting reports that come from all parts of Europe there is one outstanding declaration of special significance to which general credence seems to be given. It is to the effect that France and Italy have reached a "political, military, and economic accord of vast scope." It is apparent that it is directed against the expansion of Germany through anticipated attempts of that country to absorb Austria. The declared purpose of the new arrangement is to "assure the peace and security of Europe."

The student of history preceding the coming of the World War will not be over-optimistic as a result of this compact, as he will recall that a similar agreement existed between Italy, Austria, and Germany at that time, and that, with other solemn treaties made between the nations, it was consumed and forgotten under the blasting heat of actual warfare.

The Teacher's Unwritten Legacy

By Mary A. Gesin

THE regret has often been expressed by speakers and writers on the problems of educating the youth of our land that there is no time in our public school system for education that produces upright character. Since within our own fellowship there are many of our younger, as well as older, men and women following the teaching profession, perhaps a talk with these younger ones through the medium of THE HERALD might not be amiss. A talk, yes, for this does not pretend to be a treatise on present-day methods of education, nor any such clevating theme. It is merely an exchange of experiences between teachers.

Every Christian teacher (including some who do not aspire to that worthy title) acknowledges that there is no true education without character training. Regardless of the knowledge a student may have of science or of literature, he is not truly educated who has not learned how to live with his fellow man. One of the three major objectives given by many prominent educators is that of respect for the rights of others. And what is character education but just that? It's the Golden Rule in modern phraseology.

Upon the nation's teachers depends the welfare of the nation's children. For the greater part of their waking hours is spent in the schoolroom, and, if the truth must be told, many is the parent who is glad to thus shift the burden. How, then, can you, Christian teacher, best discharge that responsibility? How can you find the opportunity for character training with an already overcrowded program?

The greatest challenge that comes to the conscientious teacher is not that of training his pupils to know the correct method of proving a problem in mathematics, but to know the correct method of meeting the perplexing situations arising in his life daily. Yes, this is even the public school teacher's job, that is, if he is a teacher worthy the name. The manner in which we all meet our life situations, old or young, results in the character we build through the years. How, then, are desirable results attained?

Many are the crises the child passes in his daily life in connection with his daily lessons at school. And the attitudes that he forms toward his teacher, his chums, the members of his family, and society at large, because of his success or failure in school, are reflected in his later life. Indeed, often his ability to live acceptably (or his failure to do so) with his fellows is the direct result.

Teacher, are you sympathetic with the failing child? Do you realize that these experiences affect his confidence in himself? Do you know that the very failure he experiences in arithmetic, for instance, affects his wholesome adjustment to life in general? Thus, even when giving special aid to a slow student in any study, you are giving character training. For you are aiding the student to meet later life courageously, competently, and honestly.

Success, even in the early years, is the seed-bed for self-control, adaptability, unselfishness, and poise in later life. And conversely, irritability, sullenness, self-pity, and jealousy are the weeds that grow in the fertile fields of failure in school work. The teacher who helps his pupils succeed in their lessons goes a long way toward insuring successful character development for them. Achievement in the first naturally effects achievement in the second, other things being equal.

We all know that choice must often be left to the child or the youth, and the results of his choice be borne by him. In that way does he learn the desirability of truth-telling, of justice, of tolerance. If he learns early in life that satisfaction follows right choices, the virtues which make for upright character will be developed more and more. Guidance he needs at all times, and what better guidance can he receive than from the Christian teacher enthused with the task? The desire to practice the virtues that build honorable character may be instilled in the child by the one who practices them consistently himself. And who can do that better than the teacher who himself is taught by Christ?

True it is, we cannot hope (nor would many consider it appropriate) to teach any of the so-called dogmatic truths of the Bible. These are left to the teacher of religious education. But the public school-teacher who considers character training a part of the daily curriculum paves the way for specific teaching of the saving truths of God in an admirable manner.

The great responsibility of the teacher in the church school is a theme for a paper in itself. For we all realize that unless our boys and girls are taught to practice the principles laid down by the Master, all other learning will be inadequate. They will be left defenseless when they face the real issues of life.

All of this, we realize only too well, is the ideal; it is the standard of perfection which none of us hopes to attain in this life. We fall so far short of it ourselves, again and again. But if we did not set our standard high, there would be no growth, no development, in either ourselves or our pupils. The home environment, the heritage of intellectual capacity, many things affect the final achievement of every individual. But you, as a Christian teacher, have the strength, the love, and the knowledge of the Savior of men from which to draw.

Unconsciously the teacher imprints his own character

Desiring to Be With Christ

By David L. Norrie, M. A.

EVERY thoughtful student who is asked the meaning of some difficult verse in the Bible will deem one thing at least necessary, and that is to have a due regard to the context. Many passages of Scripture are repeatedly taken apart from their context to prove something that has no connection whatever with the subject on which the Apostle or Prophet is writing. Thus people put upon tombstones, "At evening time it shall be light," supposing that these words prove that the dead are now in the light of heaven. But as the context shows, the words point us not to the death of some aged saint, but to the great coming day of battle of God almighty (Zech. 14:1-7).

Again, in attempting to expound a Bible text, it is essential not only to consider the context, but to come to the subject with a mind well nourished with the general teachings of the Scriptures of Truth. For example, in dealing with Paul's words, "Having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better" (Phil. 1:23), we should know what the Apostle says as to the desire of his heart in all his other Epistles. We should be familiar also with his general use of the words "with Christ," or, "with the Lord," and lastly, we should notice carefully what is his subject of comparison when he speaks of departing to be with Christ as "far better." Far better than what?

Now most Christians take it for granted that Paul was simply expressing his conviction that to die was far better than to live, and therefore he desired to die. But if they would have a regard to the context, they would see that in the previous verse Paul distinctly states that he was in a strait betwixt these two things, life and death, and did not know which to choose. Now, if he knew all the time to die was far better than to live—"very far better," as the Revised Version reads it, surely a spiritually minded man would have no doubt whatever as to the choice he should make. The context, therefore, would lead us to conclude that the far better thing which Paul desired was not death.

FORBIDDEN BOON

This conclusion is confirmed by the Apostle's own words in the second chapter of this Epistle regarding Epaphroditus, who was "sick nigh unto death: but God," he says, "had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow" (ch. 2:25-30). Now if death meant departing to be with Christ, how could it be a mark of God's mercy to Epaphroditus to deprive him of this most desirable boon? And how could it be mercy to Paul to prevent Epaphroditus going to heaven, where he could render still better service to the Apostle? For such is the teaching of orthodoxy concerning the "dead in Christ." The following is one of the latest pronouncements by one of the leading preachers of our time:—"I give it as my firm conviction that all our loved ones gone before are serving the cause of the work and purpose of God among men in a better way than they ever did while sojourners here below. Does not this view light up for us many dark events in our own lives? Those whom God has wondrously blessed here, and then suddenly called away, just when we were feeling they could not be spared, have not ceased their work as we thought, but have been promoted to some higher place and work."

Now, if this were the scriptural view, death would indeed be a most desirable thing. But why then should the prospect of Epaphroditus' death fill Paul with sorrow, if it were true that the death of this trusty "companion in labour, and fellowsoldier" would mean that Paul would receive still better help than ever?

COUNTER-ARGUMENT

And further, if it be true that all the prophets and apostles and all the saints and martyrs of the ages are now in heaven furthering the work of God amongst men still better than they did when they were on earth, can orthodox teachers explain why it is that in spite of this ever-increasing army of perfectly equipped soul-winners, the work of soul-winning is meeting with less and less success as the years go on?

And what is the worth of Paul's argument in his Epistle to the Hebrews, whereby he proves Christ's superiority to all the Old Testament priests on the ground that they were not suffered to continue by reason of death? For if they, too, like the Son of God, have "passed into the heavens," and are there continuing their work, are they not able still to help and succor men in time of need (see Heb. 4: 14-16; 7:23-25)? But they are not able, for the night has come upon them in which no man can work (John 9.4); and they have all passed, not into the heavens, but into the earth, and are themselves dependent on the Son of God to come forth from the heavens to call them from their graves (John 5:28, 29). Till then they are unaware of the lapse of time, and have no share in anything that is done under the sun. For "the dead know not any thing," and "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest" (Eccl. 9:5, 10).

DEATH'S PROPER COMPANY

Surely, then, orthodox teachers have gone far astray in their views of death. The late Dr. McLaren went so far as to write concerning death that "beneath the folds of his black garment there is revealed God's last, sweetest, most triumphant angel messenger to Christian souls, and he carries in his hand the gift of a full salvation." Paul, however, brands death as an enemy that the Son of God is to destroy (1 Cor. 15:26); and he puts it in its proper company when he links it with disobedience and sin (Romans 5).

And this is in harmony with the general teaching both of the Old and the New Testaments. "O death, I will be thy plagues" (Hosea 13:14), are words which God would never address to His "sweetest . . . angel messenger." but only to a great and irreconcilable foe. And the Bible will be searched in vain for any example of a man in health of body and mind rejoicing at the approach of death. (It may be of course that in some cases the conditions of life are so dreadful that death is regarded as a lesser evil, and therefore a welcome relief, as it was in the case of Job.) On the contrary, David writes, "Have mercy upon me, O Lord: for I am weak: O Lord, heal me; for my bones are vexed.... Oh save me for thy mercies' sake. For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?" The thirtieth Psalm shows how God had mercy on David, as He had long afterwards on Epaphroditus, and the result was a fresh outpouring of thanksgiving on David's part. A similar case is that of the good king Hezekiah, who, when told that he would die and not live, wept sore, and turned his face toward the wall, and prayed unto the Lord. And on him, too, the Lord had mercy, causing Hezekiah to thank the Lord in these words: "Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day."-Isa. 38.

The Lord Jesus Christ Himself went down into death; but the prospect of it did not fill Him with joy (except in-asmuch as He was thus fulfilling His Father's will). But His supreme joy was in contemplating the fact that God would not leave His soul in sheol (the grave), nor would suffer His Holy One to see corruption (Psalm 16:9, 10).

In 2 Corinthians 5 the Apostle Paul refers to the burdens that caused him to groan in this tabernacle; but he at once adds, "Not for that we would be unclothed," by which he evidently refers to the state of death. That is, his desire is to live rather than to die: the "clothed" state is better than the "unclothed." And from this it is evident that he did not regard death or the unclothed state as equivalent to being with Christ.

NECESSITY OF RESURRECTION

If such an idea were indeed true, and if those who have fallen asleep in Christ are now consciously enjoying the presence of Christ, what more can they have to wish or hope for? In His presence is there not fullness of joy? And what place then would there be left for the glorious hope of resurrection? Resurrection indeed becomes practically unnecessary, and we do not wonder that it is either ignored in popular teaching or openly denied. Yet it is obvious that the Scriptures, whilst accepting death as a reality, make all hope of a future life depend on resurrection. We read of some in Old Testament times who "were tortured, not accepting deliverance (not that they might go to heaven at death, but) that they might obtain a better resurrection" (Heb. 11:35). "If there be no resurrection of the dead," says Paul, "... then they also which are fallen askeep in Christ are perished."—I Cor. 15:13, 18.

Not therefore at death, but at the resurrection of the dead will the saints be ushered into the presence of the Lord. And for this the Lord must first return from heaven. even as He Himself said to His disciples before He left them: "If I go . . . I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there we may be also."-John 14:3. Paul's testimony on this point is abundantly clear. To the Colossians he writes, "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."-Col. 3:4. He tells the Romans that he, with them, is waiting for "the redemption of our body" (Rom. 8:23). Not for its dissolution, but for its redemption. And that this glorious change may be brought about he tells the Philippians that he is looking for the return from heaven of "the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory" (Phil. 3:20, 21, R. V.). When the Thessalonians were sorrowing because some of their number had fallen asleep, he comforted them, not with the thought that their loved ones had been "promoted to some higher place and work," but "by the word of the Lord" he comforted them with "these words":-"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."-1 Thess. 4:13-18. The word "so" is very emphatic in the original, and it emphasizes the fact that in this way or manner, not by our dying, but by the Lord's descent from heaven, shall the living and the dead saints enter the Lord's presence together in one grand home-going.

But the Apostle hoped to be among the living saints, and in the joy of anticipation he puts himself amongst them. Mark the pronoun he employs, "We who are alive and remain." So also in writing to the Corinthians he says, "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, . . . for the ... dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."-1 Cor. 15:51, 52. This was the hope of the Apostle's life, to be caught up to meet the Lord and changed, without dying. This hope he never gave up till almost the end, when it was evidently revealed to him at last that he would die (2 Tim. 4:6). But when he wrote to the Philippians he was still cherishing this hope of being "changed," as we have seen from chapter 3:20, 21. This was the thing that he earnestly desired. This was, in fact, the departing to be with Christ which was very far better than anything else of which he could conceive.

Parallelism

Let us now put the teaching of 2 Corinthians 5 and Philippians in parallel columns, and we shall see a delightful and instructive harmony:—

Clothed. Unclothed. Clothed Upon (2 Cor. 5).

To live. To die.

To Depart and Be With Christ (Phil. 1).

In writing to the Corinthians, as far as the first two columns are concerned, his mind is made up. He says he does not want the second one. He does not desire to be "unclothed," that is, to die. He prefers the first column. That is, he would rather live on and continue in the "clothed" state with all its burdens. But when the third alternative presents itself to his mind (column 3), it at once takes the first place in his heart. For he wished above all to be "clothed upon" with his "house from heaven," that is, when the Lord would come to fashion anew the body of his humiliation.

In writing to the Philippians, he begins by comparing the first two columns, and he has indeed some difficulty in choosing between them. Because death now, he knew, meant a martyr's death; and he also knew that such a death would glorify Christ and turn out "unto the fur-

What Do the Scriptures Teach?

"I IIAVE read with much profit as well as interest the six-page folder published by the National Bible Institution of Oregon, Illinois, which you so kindly gave me last Sunday. Mr. Strang throws a great deal of light on a proverbially dark and gloomy subject, it seems to me," were the words with which John Almen greeted his friend Peter Everready late one afternoon.

John Almen, like all men everywhere, had paid but scant attention to the foundation upon which his religious beliefs were based until his friend, Peter Everready, who was ever ready to give a biblical answer to anyone who asked him about his faith, aroused his interest in Bible study by providing him with some interesting literature. As a result of Mr. Everready's generous assistance, to his own astonishment Mr. Almen soon found himself searching "the scriptures daily" like the Bereans of old to see whether or not the things he had been taught to believe were really contained in the Bible. He had been repeatedly amazed to discover how many religious ideas, commonly held by the great mass of churchgoing people as true, were without adequate biblical support.

"The punishment of the wicked, as it was believed by the majority of the Christian world in the past, was a most repulsive doctrine, it is true," asserted Mr. Everready. "But as you will find in many instances, God's ways are not man's ways, neither are His thoughts man's thoughts. Frequently men have put their own interpretation upon the Bible based on traditional ideas which were directly opposite to the thought in the mind of the inspired writer, and consequently they have painted a picture of God that was a caricature rather than a true portrait, and which resulted in grave misrepresentation and even dishonor to Him."

"Yes," agreed Mr. Almen, "that is no doubt true. And I have often thought, as Mr. Strang puts it so clearly in his folder, that 'a very great responsibility attaches to those who seek to be expounders of God's truth!" It is so easy to lead people astray and give them a wrong conception of God."

"Much of the difficulty men have encountered in dealing with this subject has been due to the fact that they have read a different meaning into the words used in the Bible than they ordinarily convey," responded his friend. "For instance, many readers of the Bible seem to think that when it speaks of the death of the wicked it means that they shall live forever in misery! It seems to me that Mr. Strang, and his reviewer, Mr. R. H. Judd, have met this entire matter of the punishment of the wicked both fairly and scripturally," concluded Mr. Everready.

"It is apparent," responded his companion, "that the final destiny of the wicked who will not repent is to be just the reverse of what I have been tanght. Instead of existing forever in conscious misery they are to utterly perish, for according to Malachi the fourth chapter and the first verse, together with many other passages the author quotes, 'the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

"This view of the final results of sin," commented Mr. Everready thoughtfully, "is in harmony with the idea expressed in the Golden Text of the Bible, John 3:16, which says that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." From this well-loved verse it would seem that the destiny of the wicked was to perish, but that God in His love for mankind sent His Son to die on their behalf, that those who believe in Him might escape the penalty of their sin, and be granted the blessing of deathlessness through Jesus Christ."

"The discussion of this subject has been so interesting," remarked Mr. Almen, as they were about to separate, "that I would like to go into it a little more thoroughly."

"All right," said his friend, "we will take it up again soon. Perhaps this may be of help to you in the meantime," he continued. Reaching into his pocket he withdrew a pamphlet bearing the suggestive title, "Hell—What Is It?" and gave it to Mr. Almen as he bade him goodnight.

Religious News

INTERESTING comparative statistics for the Presbyterian Church in the United States for the last five years are as follows: They have 22 more ministers than in 1930; 18 fewer churches; they added 38,697 members in 1934 as against 37,784 in 1930; they have gained 15,666 members in the last five years; their Sunday school enrollment dropped 3,412 in the last five years. Giving for foreign missions dropped from $1,195,548 in 1930 to $614,553 in 1934; for home missions, in 1930 $522,370 to $289,512 in 1934; pastors' salaries dropped nearly one million in five years; current expenses one million, and building expenses nearly two million. The depression can be seen in this report but on the whole the showing is not bad.

Statistics show that there are multiplied thousands of boys between the ages of 16 and 20 roaming over the United States either because there is no work or because they are "bums" from choice. They are creating a moral problem which the Government and the church are failing to cope with. The CCC has put thousands of them to work, choosing only those who have families who need such financial assistance, but the thousands of others may constitute a future menace to the peace of society unless something is done about it.

In the first week of July, 1934, the Presbyterian Church in Korea celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. Today there is in Korea a total constituency of 316,356 with 255,286 enrolled in the Sunday schools. Last year 633,839 Scripture portions in Korean were sold, together with 66,480 New Testaments and thousands of Bibles.

A report from the Minister of Justice of Finland shows that since the repeal of prohibition their general crime has increased 44.4 per cent; illegal sale of liquor 61.3 per cent; illegal transportation of liquor 180.3 per cent; alcoholic delinquency, 69 per cent. This should spell the end of repeal in Finland if it keeps up much longer.

F. W. Burnham suggests that if you know how to:

Get religion like a Methodist,
Experience it like a Baptist,
Be sure of it like a Disciple,
Stick to it like a Lutheran,
Be proud of it like an Episcopalian,
Pay for it like a Presbyterian,
Propagate it like a Catholic,
And enjoy it like a Negro,
You will have some religion.

In a recent broadcast poll covering twenty-six states, "The Old Rugged Cross" was chosen as the most popular hymn, and the most popular hymnbook was declared to be Glorious Gospel Songs, published by the Nazarene Publishing House, edited by Haldor Lillenas.

They say repeal is a grand success. Here are the statistics on the increase of drunkenness in the early months of 1934 as against those of 1933—New York City, 55.5 per cent; Los Angeles, 95.5 per cent; Boston, 21.4 per cent; Denver, 116.6 per cent; Portland, Ore., 116.8 per cent; Worcester, Mass., 54 per cent.

The world is celebrating the Centenary of Charles Haddon Spurgeon, the "Prince of Preachers." For more than thirty years he held a congregation in London of over 12,000 people. Royalty, statesmen, and scholars as well as the common people came to the Tabernacle to hear this great and renowned preacher. He stated to a group of students that his position was what it was because of his mother and the truth of his message. When asked by an American minister the secret of his influence, he quietly replied, "My people pray for me."

Generally Jewish congregations are generous in the support of their rabbis. Salaries from $10,000 to $20,000 are said to be quite common. Small synagogues often pay their rabbis from $5,000 to $7,500 a year. It is generally understood that Jews love to make money and to save it, but we congratulate them that they are not niggardly toward their ministers. One local synagogue which wanted to be rid of its rabbi, pensioned him at $5,000 a year for the rest of his life and he hadn't reached his fiftieth year as yet, and also gave him a $25,000 insurance policy.

Generally speaking, the Federal Council of Churches is quite liberal in its views, and its pronouncements are not always accepted by those of a stricter theology. In the Reformed Church Synod which met at Grand Rapids, Michigan, recently, they voted by a vote of 141 to 32 to retain membership in the Council, yet at the same session they voted in rather veiled language what seems to the writer to be a rebuke for their liberalism. They stated that some of the Čouncil's actions put the Reformed Church in a false position, and warned that "there is a point beyond which the Reformed Church cannot cooperate."

The Church of England has forbidden the use of its pulpits to Unitarians. In the Anglican sense of the term, Unitarians are not Christians, just as in the Nazarene sense of the term. Every Protestant denomination should take the same stand.

The baccalaureate sermons of the recent month cause one to realize that there is a widespread feeling that morals need to be stressed and that the youth needs to be encouraged. Wesleyan is told, "World Needs Goals"; Brown University, "Need for Vision"; Cornell, "The Doctrine of Hope"; Wellesley, "Be Brave"; Tufts, "Moral Masteries"; Yalc, "A Plea for Moral Change"; Williams, "The Inner Life"; Harvard, "Personal Honesty"; Dartmouth, "The Pioneer Spirit."—L. # SHAKESPEARE AND THE NEW BIRTH

ONE of the full notes of emphasis in Shakespeare's plays is his belief in the second birth, which we often speak of as conversion.

Who has a better definition of conversion than Shakespeare gives of Oliver's transformation in As You Like It? Oliver was the villain who early in the play made two attempts to take the life of his younger brother, Orlando. Near the close, Oliver, having undergone a religious change, comes unawares upon the two maidens, Rosalind and Celia. Upon learning his name they cry in horror: "Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him!"

Notice the answer!

"Twas I: but 'tis not I: I do not shame

To tell you what I was, since my conversion So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am."

There's a Pauline pre-Methodist class meeting testimony and definition of conversion in one! Can it be better done?

Some of the critics affected amazement as to how Shakespeare could so suddenly change the character of the villainous Oliver and marry him to one of the heroines of the play, Celia. The critics are right. Shakespeare couldn't. That is, he couldn't change the villain's heart. But the power of Christ could. Shakespeare has but told the old, old story of the work of grace in instantaneous conversion.

DOES IT MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE?

By J. H. Williams

"Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them."—Acts 8:5.

WHEN Philip met the Ethiopian (v. 27), we find he "preached unto him Jesus." And in reference to the disciples: "When they had testified and preached the word of the Lord . . . and preached the gospel."

According to the thirty-sixth verse, Philip must have mentioned something about baptism, for when they came to a place where there was water, the eunuch wanted to know what was to hinder him from being baptized. "And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

In Matthew 16:16 we find Peter making the same confession: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." And in 1 Thessalonians 4:14 Paul says, "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

We find from these scriptures that there are certain things we must know and believe before we are in a position to be baptized. See Acts 8:12: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." And Romans 10:14: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?"

In Luke 8:1 we find it speaks of Jesus preaching the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. If some one comes to you and says, "1 have some glad tidings for you," will that do you any good if he goes his way without explaining what is meant by glad tidings? I think not. In Mark 16: 15, 16 we find Jesus has laid down three principles that must be carried out before we are in the all-saving name of our Savior: first, hear the gospel; second, believe the gospel; and third, be baptized.

therance of the gospel" (verse 12). But he did not know whether Christ would be magnified more by his life or by his death. Therefore he says, "What I shall choose I wot not." But again the mention of a third alternative (column 3) stops all discussion. To depart and be with Christ is far better, for then the Apostle's earnest expectation and hope that Christ should be magnified (verse 20) would be fully realized. For the dead in Christ and the living saints would be caught up together to meet the Lord in the air, and Christ would be "glorified in his saints, and . . . admired in all them that believe . . . in that day" (2 Thess. 1:10).

HIS HEART'S DESIRE

It is impossible for us to realize the deep feelings with which the Apostle in his lonely prison must have contemplated this blessed hope of departing to be with Christ. The word "depart" in the original (analusai) means to unloose or set free (for example, a prisoner). It is quite commonly used in classical Greek of loosening a ship from its moorings. And Paul wished to be loosed or set free from the earth. He was tied down to the earth by the body of his humiliation, and he was earnestly desiring, not to live longer on the earth, not to die and be buried in the chambers of the earth, but to be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. With this comfort he comforted others in bereavement, and in the multitude of his thoughts within him this same comfort delighted his own soul.

The Apostle did not live to see the fulfillment of his heart's desire, for soon after writing this Epistle he crowned his life's service by suffering a martyr's death. But he "died in faith," and henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give him at that day; and not to him only, but "unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Timothy 4:8).

"QUENCH NOT"

By C. E. Randall

"Quench not the Spirit."-1 Thess. 5:19.

THE majority of people are not giving expression to the powers that they possess. They are quenching or restricting the many possibilities of service that God has placed before them. When we fail to utilize the talents or gifts which God has endowed us with, we are quenching the Spirit, for these various powers can only be profitably used when moved or inspired by the Spirit of God. The Spirit of God operates in and through the talents and gifts of man when dedicated to the Lord. Quenching the Spirit is generally done through excuses. This is very plainly set forth in the parable of the great supper. When the invitation to take part in this feast was given, they all with one accord began to make excuses. We have another striking example in the case of Agrippa. After Paul had made his great defense before him, he replied: "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." He was quenching the Spirit. There is a possibility of continuing this work of quenching until we have completely neglected the great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord.

There is another sense in which every individual who fails to do with his might what his hands find to do in the service of the Lord quenches the Spirit. Whoever fails to do all that is possible is a quencher.—Church of God Messenger.

A LESSON FROM LIFE

By Norman John MacLeod

"O Love that wilt not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee;
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in Thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

THE life of the Scotch preacher, George Matheson, should be an inspiration to those of us who pity ourselves. Especially of value should its lesson be to the busy minister who feels that he is overworked. Matheson gradually lost his sight while attending university, so that before he graduated he was completely blind. His studies did not suffer: he had his lessons read to him, and graduated in good standing. The pastorate of one of the largest churches in Edinburgh became his, and with it a life of tremendous activity. He made a point of honor of answering every letter that he received on the same day he received it if possible; at a stated time every morning he tended to his correspondence. Next in order he continued his university lessons: French was one of those studies that he continued in spite of difficulties. Each afternoon he made his necessary pastoral calls to comfort and cheer those in distress, and to bring the wayward into the fold. Evenings, with the exception of Saturday, found him giving lectures in addition to his regular Sunday sermons. In his spare time he wrote innumerable magazine articles and published twelve books.

One evening he was alone in the Manse: it was known that he was undergoing severe mental suffering because of the attitude of some of the members of his congregation. No complaint came from his lips. But while the shadows were gathering in the stately mansion he wrote the song which appears in our hymnbook: "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go." When we reflect upon that busy life with its unselfish, unpitying activities we find new inspiration in the lines which read:

"O Joy that seekest me through pain, I cannot close my heart to Thee; I trace the rainbow thro' the rain, And feel the promise is not vain That morn shall tearless be."

Our Love, or His? P. P. Bliss said that he wrote the hymn, "Oh! How I love Jesus," when he was a young man. But as he grew older, he realized more and more how little is our love to the Lord compared to His love for us. In his latter years he wrote the more scriptural hymn:

"I am so glad that our Father in heaven Tells.of His love in the Book He has given, Wonderful things in the Bible I see; This is the dearest, that Jesus loves me."

GOD'S LOOKING GLASS

IN a palace in Florence there is a beautiful painting on the ceiling of a room. Art students come from everywhere to study it. They complained of the discomfort of studying the painting with their necks craned back. Finally it was decided to hang a great mirror all along one side of the room at just the right height and angle to give a perfect reflection of the painting on the ceiling. Now by looking into the mirror one can study line for line, color for color, figure for figure, all the beauty far above. That is like the Christ. God is so great, so far above us, that we find difficulty in comprehending Him. Jesus is God's looking glass, hung down here on the level of our own human life and nature. As we gaze into the personality and character of Jesus, we find reflected, line for line, character for character, attribute for attribute, all that God is.—C. H. Hewitt.

m OU}$  can get along with a wooden leg, but you can't get along with a wooden head. The physical value of man is not so much. Man as analyzed in our laboratories is worth about ninety-eight cents. Seven bars of soap, lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop, phosphorus enough to cover the heads of a thousand matches, is not so much, you see. It is brain that counts, but in order that your brain may be kept clear you must keep your body fit and well. That cannot be done if one drinks liquor. A man who has to drag around a habit that is a danger and a menace to society ought to go off to the woods and live alone. Through alcoholic stimulation a man loses his coordination. That is why liquor is no advantage to the brain. You hear people tell how they had their wits quickened for the first half hour by liquor, but they do not tell how later their body could not act in coordination with their brain. You will hear on every side men bewail the loss of their drink. of their personal rights, but the rights of the few who cannot see ahead or have the future of their nation at heart must be regulated to safeguard that great body of future citizens who are ready to step into the ranks. . . . We have not lived up to our laws, but I repeat, education is what we need to combat this condition. When we have our younger generation completely educated we will not have types to say: "Why should I not have my rights as a citizen?" It is through the boys of today that we hope to see a sound and everlasting prohibition worked in this country. If there ever was any great man who accomplished anything through the use of alcohol I would like to have the fact pointed out. . . . Keep yourselves from all entangling habits. Remember, it's the brain that counts.-Dr. Charles Mayo in the Journal of the National Educational Association.

and I, caring as best we could for Mother. But we did not know what to do should a crisis develop. We could only watch and wait and pray. And this we did day after day, our minds in a constant state of anxiety and uncertainty as to what we should do should the looked-for emergency arise.

And then one wonderful evening the old-fashioned bus drew up at our door and our friend the nurse got out and came into the house. We shook her hand without speaking, for somehow our voices failed us. Just a moment to remove her coat and slip on a uniform, and there she was moving quietly and efficiently about the sickbed! O what a relief it was to have her there! She knew exactly what to do and how to do it! With her coming hope was reborn within us! No further need for worry! Mother would be cared for intelligently and unremittingly! Our own responsibility was over! Confidence had come into our hearts!

So it is with the coming of the Lord. We have implicit confidence in Him. We know He can meet every requirement, supply every need! When He comes He will take the entire responsibility of human welfare upon His own shoulders and thereafter bear the whole load!

Our souls are sick, our hearts are sore. The disease of sin has sapped our strength and we are too weak to go on alone. We cannot help ourselves, the world cannot help us. But Jesus is coming, He's coming again! At the very thought our hearts are enthralled! New courage is born within us and we can press joyfully forward! Our fears disappear like the mists of the morning before the rising sun, for sin-sick and weary as we are we are not without hope, for "The Great Physician now is near,

The sympathizing Jesus;
He speaks, the drooping heart to cheer,
O hear the voice of Jesus!
Sweetest note in seraph song,
Sweetest name on mortal tongue,
Sweetest carol ever sung,— Jesus, blessed Jesus!"

Such is the Savior who is coming again! No wonder we want Him to come! For He is the inspirer of confidence! In His presence there can be no fear! When He comes no anxiety can touch us! No matter what threatens, no matter what happens, all will be well with us, for Jesus is coming and we'll lay our problems at His feet; we'll place our burdens on His willing shoulders!

Jesus is coming again!

and personality upon the plastic mold of the young mind. How important, then, that the teacher's character be one patterned after that of the Master Teacher and his personality be poised as was that of the Man of Galilee! I would rather be thus remembered by any who may have come under my instruction than that I had the most up-to-date methods and the most modern devices. How about you?

"Help me to live that other lives may see
Some slight reflection of my Lord in me.
I would not blaze before the world—a star,
Streaming its radiance on the earth afar;
I would not lift my head so very high
That men could say I sought to touch the sky
In my ambitious efforts to be known;
I would but seek Thy smile, and Thine alone,
And at Thy feet in sweet submission prove
The richness and the comfort of Thy love;
For love alone can turn our life to light
And make us luminous in God's own sight."

The Story of Joseph

In the land of Canaan lived Jacob, the father of twelve. sons. Joseph was the favorite son of Jacob because he was Rachel's child; so Jacob made him a coat of many colors. Joseph's brothers hated him because their father loved him more than the rest.

One night Joseph had a dream. He dreamed that they were binding sheaves in the field, and his sheaf stood upright and the others made obeisance to his sheaf. His brothers hated him more for his dreams and words; yet Joseph had another dream. He dreamed that the sun, moon, and eleven stars made obeisance to him.

Then Joseph's brothers went to Shechem to feed their father's flock, and Joseph was sent after them to see if they were well. When they saw him coming, they planned to kill him, but Reuben said, "Why not put him down into a pit and let him starve?"

After they had put him down into the pit, they saw some Ishmaelites coming; so they sold Joseph as a slave for twenty pieces of silver. They dipped his coat into a lamb's blood and told his father a wild beast had killed him.

The Ishmaelites sold him to the captain of the Egyptian guards. The Lord was with Joseph, and his master saw this and made him the overseer of his house. When the master's wife saw Joseph, she asked him to do a wicked deed; but he refused, saying he would not sin against God or his master. He fled from her, leaving his garment behind. When the master came to the house, she told him a lie about Joseph. The master believed his wife and had Joseph put in prison.

Then the chief butler and chief baker were put inprison with Joseph because they had offended the king of Egypt. One night both had dreams which they could not interpret; so they told Joseph, and he said he could interpret them because God would show him the way. The chief butler told his dream, saying a vine was before him with three branches which blossomed and brought forth ripe grapes, and Pharaoh's cup was in his hand, and he put the grapes in the cup and gave them to Pharaoh. Joseph said the interpretation of this was that in three days Pharaoh would take him back as the chief butler. Then the chief baker told his dream, saying that he had three white baskets on his head, and the birds ate out of one basket. Joseph said in three days they would take him out and hang him, and the birds would eat his flesh.

In three days things happened just as Joseph had said, and Joseph told the chief butler to remember him. When two years had passed, Pharaoh dreamed that he sat by a river and seven fat cows came up and seven lean cows came up and ate them. He had another dream that seven good ears of corn came up on one stalk and that seven poor ears of corn came up and ate them. The king was troubled, and the chief butler told him about Joseph; and he called Joseph to interpret his dream. "There shall be seven years that everyone shall have plenty and seven years there shall be a famine," said Joseph.

Pharaoh liked Joseph and saw that God was with him; so he made him ruler of Egypt. In the seven plenteous years Joseph gathered up all the food and put it in storage, and when the famine came Joseph sold food to the people.

When Jacob heard of the food in Egypt, he sent his ten sons to buy corn. They left the youngest brother Benjamin behind with their father. When they came to Egypt, Joseph recognized his brothers; but they did not know him. He accused them of being spies, but they told him they came from Canaan and they had left one brother behind. He told them that they would have to bring the youngest brother to prove that they were not spies and that they would have to leave one of the brothers behind.

On their way to Canaan they opened their sacks to feed their donkeys, and they found that their money had been put back in the sacks. They were very much afraid. When they were home, they told their father about it, and said they had to take Benjamin back with them. Their father said they could take him and asked God to bless them.

When they arrived in Egypt, Joseph was glad to see Benjamin, and they were invited to eat with him. They all bowed and made obeisance to him. When Joseph saw this, he wept. When they were eating with him, they were placed according to their birthright. They were amazed. Then they all drank and were merry.

When they got their corn, Joseph had their money replaced, and in the youngest boy's sack he put his silver cup; and when they were not gone very far, Joseph sent after them, accusing them of stealing his cup. They were taken back to Joseph and they all bowed to him. Joseph said the one that had taken the cup was to be his servant; and Joseph could not refrain longer and so he made himself known, and he told them not to be angry with themselves for doing what they had done, for he had forgiven them. He told them to bring their families and their father to live in Egypt, and he gave them clothes and many gifts. They returned to Canaan and brought their families to Egypt to live.—Virginia Easton, Long Beach, Calif.

OUR GOD HEARS US

FAR, far away, across the ocean, lived a little Japanese boy, whose name was Necsima. At the end of a beautiful day in spring he stood before a long shelf on which was a row of figures. Some of them were ugly, squat little images, others more or less beautiful. They were the gods and goddesses to which his father and mother prayed.

Somehow a strange discontent filled young Necsima's heart. As he looked at them he felt no love or worship, and strange to say, not much fear. Strange, because he knew his father felt a great fear of these images.

Not once did his parents omit the daily gift of rice to these gods. No matter how little might be left for their own meals, they brought to these silent creatures their portion. What became of it, Neesima could never quite figure out.

And now, as dusk fell about him, queer thoughts filled his mind. "Why," he said to himself, "if you tip one over, he can't even pick himself up." And stealthily he poked a finger at the largest one, tipping it over backwards.

Necsima shook his little dark head. He had his doubts about a god such as that. Quietly taking it from its place on the shelf, he stole out into the garden, and under cover of the darkness he buried it.

"Honorable god," he whispered, "if you can come out of that hole by yourself, then I will serve you always."

Many days he waited and watched, but no god came out of the hiding place in the soft earth. One morning to his surprise he saw that something had come out of the soil. And kneeling down, he gently removed the moist ground from about a long green spear.

There he found the idol exactly as he had buried it, two unblinking, unseeing eyes staring at him as before. But at the end of the long green spear a kernel of rice had started to grow. Necsima knew then that the idol had no power at all, but there was life in the tiny grain.

As the years went by and Neesima grew to be a man, he came to know and to love the God who had made the tiny seed. He learned that He is a God who hears. He learned also to love His Son, Jesus our Savior, who came into the world that men and women, boys and girls, might learn more about His Father.

Neesima taught many boys and girls of his own Japan to pray to the God who made all things, the sun and moon, the beautiful plants and flowers, and even the tiny seeds. He taught them that the idols made by their own hands must not be worshiped, for they could neither hear nor answer when they talked to them. Only the One who made all things should receive the worship of His creatures.

There is a song in our Bibles, which tells us about our God and His power and love and wisdom. It is called Psalm 104. Listen to these beautiful words:

"O Lord my God, thou art very great; ... who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain; ... who walketh upon the wings of the wind; ... who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever."

Turn the pages of your Bibles, boys and girls, and find this wonderful song. Read it for yourself. It brings before your eyes the picture of God who created all things for our good. Think of a God who "sendeth the springs into the valley"; who "causeth the grass to grow for the cattle"; who "renewest the face of the earth."

How can we help but love such a God! How can we help but serve Him! How can we refrain from telling Him our thanks! Let us join with David in this song of praise.

"O Lord, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches. . . . I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live."

But the greatest thing about our God is that, although He is so powerful and wise, He takes just as much care of the smallest as He does of the greatest of all His creations. Jesus Himself tells us that in the very next chapter following our lesson, Matthew 6.

"Behold the fowls of the air," He says, "for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?... Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

In another place, Matthew 10:29, 31, He tells us that not one sparrow falls to the ground but that the heavenly Father notices it, and that we are of much more value in His eyes than many sparrows.

David says that when he considers the heavens and all the works of God, the moon and the stars, he marvels that God is mindful of man. Yes, it is wonderful, but that is what makes our God what He is—loving and wise, tender and powerful, just and merciful, unchanging always.

THE CHRISTIAN AT PRAYER

Matthew 6:5-15; Ephesians 3:14-21

Devotional Reading: John 17:17-26

GOLDEN TEXT

Continuing instant in prayer.—Romans 12:12.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian at Prayer.

Aim: Prayer should be for simple things for ourselves and for great things for others. Basic Truth: "I intreated thy favour with my whole heart: . . . I cried unto thee; save me, and I shall keep thy testimonies."—Psa.

I. How Not to Pray. (Matt. 6:5-8.) In verses 5-8 Jesus tells His disciples how they ought not to pray. He insists that prayer must come from the heart. It must express a deep and definite desire. It must be addressed to God and not to men. God knows what we need before we ask Him, and if we pray for something we neither actually need nor seriously want, as men often do, our prayers will not be granted. It is fortunate that this is true, for sometimes we would not only be astonished, but greatly distressed, if God gave us the thing for which we asked.

II. How We Ought to Pray. (Vv. 9-13.)

Prayer is such a vital matter in our Christian experience that Jesus has given very plain instruction concerning it. He first suggests that prayers generally be offered in private, that our minds may not be distracted from the thought of God by outside influences, as is so often the ease when we pray in public. Then in the "Model Prayer" He names but one material thing as an object of prayer, bread; i.e., the necessities of our physical existence. All else contained in the Lord's Prayer has to do with the glorification of God and with our spiritual relation to Him. The heart of this wonderful petition is found in the tenth verse. If God's kingdom comes and His will is done in earth nothing else will be needed to make us supremely happy and contented.

III. A Condition of Successful Prayer. (Vv. 14, 15.) Prayer is essentially a spiritual exercise. It must therefore be approached in a devout and spiritual frame of mind. Under the old order no one was to enter the tabernacle or venture into the presence of God without first undergoing a typical heart-cleansing. In prayer we are entering into the most holy place we may know in this life. We meet with the righteous Father in heaven in prayer. All envy and malice, all grudges and ill will, must be put from us if we would enjoy true fellowship with our Lord,

GOLDEN TEXT

"In prayer persevering."-Rom. 12:12, Diag. To illustrate the benefits of persevering in prayer, Christ gave the parable of Luke 18: 1-8. Read it. Study it. Paul tells us in 1 Thessalonians 5:17 to "pray without ceasing." Not that we should be continually on our knees in supplication to God, but that we should be in a prayerful mood. A prayer is not necessarily spoken aloud. Silent prayer may be nor deaf, that a great noise need be made.

Neither are prayers always answered in the way we would like, but remember that God knows best and, as Christlike, we must be willing to abide by His will. Pray one for another, but always in the name of Christ and in the will of God. "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."-James 5:16.—L. A. R.

Praver

-life is a matter of development; -to be seen of men goes unheard;

-is for the lay members as well as for ministers:

-to be edifying must be charged with God's spirit.

Prayer of Thanksgiving. There are several types or kinds of prayer recorded in the Bible, but in nearly every case, if not every instance, thanksgiving is included in the prayer. He who is unthankful for past and present blessings is undeserving further bestowals of God's Unless we express our thanks we are very likely to become unappreciative. Whoever eats to the Lord "giveth God thanks" and whoever eats not to the Lord gives not God thanks. Thanksgiving is not limited or confined merely to the food we eat. It should embrace everything that comes from God, and that is everything (Jas. 1:17). "In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you."-1 Thess. 5: 18. With the passing of time mankind seems to be more and more unthankful.

Prayer of Confession. "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper: but whose confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."-Prov. 28:13. Confession of sins should always have an important part in our prayers. There are none that always "abstain from all appearance of evil"; therefore, we ought to give carnest heed to the scripture which says, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."-1 John 1:9. These confessions do not need to be of public nature unless the public is affected, for He who seeth in secret shall reward thee openly .- C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Prayer As Fellowship With God

In this lesson on prayer, which Jesus gave to His disciples in response to their request (Luke 11:1), He suggests the essential principles which should be incorporated in every petition we address to God, and first of them all is the recognition of His Fatherhood and nearness.

The words "our Father" bring us at once into the closest and most sympathetic fellowship with our Lord. Because this is true we just as effective, for God is neither far away may pour out our hearts before Him without fear; we may confess every sin without anxiety, for we know that "God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved" (John 3:17).

As we proceed with the study of the matchless model prayer we find ourselves coming into ever closer relationship to God.

"Thy kingdom come," we pray, and as we offer that petition we are thinking of the coming day of glory when "God himself" shall be with us and be our God. "And God shall wipe away all tears from (our) eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."—Rev. 21:4. And this inspiring hope, based on the promises of our God, brings Him very near indeed as we kneel in prayer.

"Give us this day our daily bread." we can almost see His provident hand stretched out above us ready to fill our bins and storehouses with abundant supply. This plea for "daily" supply of the material necessities of life brings God into our home and seats Him at the head of our humble board.

Were it not for our knowledge of God's great grace and mercy we would hesitate to say, "Forgive as we have forgiven!" But God is good, He knows our weakness, and grants us more than we ask or think .-- G. E. M.

Topic: How to Pray.

How many of you have a telephone in your home? For what do you use it? Here I want each one to paste a picture of a telephone on your paper. If you prefer you may draw one.

There are several ways we can talk to people when it is impossible to go see them: telcphone, telegram, letters, and even the radio.

But there is one person to whom we can talk that we need no telephone, no telegraph, no radio. It's God. He can hear us at any time from any place.

He wants us to ask Him things just as we would ask our parents. He is our Father, you know. When we talk to Him we say we Jesus' disciples once said, "Lord, teach us to pray." Our Sunday school lesson today has the prayer that Jesus gave them.

Now let's return to our picture. wires running from your telephone to the edge of the page. On each line write a sentence of the prayer. Copy the entire prayer on telephone lines.

How many already know this prayer? You who do not know it, will you learn it before next Sunday? We could write it in our open Bible.

For our memory verse, let's learn, "Lord, teach us to pray."

BLANCHARD, MICHIGAN

It was indeed a great blessing to meet with the Blanchard brethren and others of Michigan at the Fall Conference. Bro. Smead is doing a very good work at Blanchard, and the outlook for growth is good. We hope to meet these enthusiastic and hospitable brethren again.

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

The Rockford Berean Society held an interesting service on the night of September 28 in commemoration of the eighth anniversary of its organization. Following a supper which was attended by about forty of the members and their friends from Oregon and other more distant places, Paul C. Johnson, who was one who had assisted in the formation of the society, gave an address on the name and motto of the Bereaus.

A BEAUTIFUL MEMORIAL

The following is taken from the columns of "Golden Rule News," published in the interest of the Golden Rule Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio.

A magnificent now piece of church furniture now stands before the pulpit in the form of a solid walnut Communion table, matching the pulpit and woodwork of the sanctuary, and beautifully carved with appropriate design and lettering. It is the gift of Sr. Elizabeth Alldridge, presented in memory of her beloved and lately deceased husband, Bro George B. Alldridge. It was dedicated on Sunday morning, July 1, at which time the pastor took as his subject, "The Table of the Lord," speaking of the significance and meaning of the Communion service, after which the Lord's Supper was observed, and the newly decorated table put into use for its first time.

We can think of no memorial to Bro. All-dridge that could have been more beautifully appropriate than this, for, as we all know, the sacred Supper was one of the things that was nearest to his heart. May this table ever stand, bearing the emblems of the Lord's body, until the time when its need shall cease, when He Himself shall come, to fulfill all these symbols in the reality of His own Person!

DO YOU AGREE WITH MRS. ROBINS?

Renewing her subscription to the Truth Seckers' Quarterly, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Robins, Annapolis, Md., kindly says: "I like the publication the best of any general quarterly I ever studied; it is so helpful. It surely has the right name—for Truth Seckers of the Bible!"

The subscriber to this comprehensive quarterly receives for 65 cents per year more than 200 pages of closely printed, condensed, yet clearly expressed, helps, comments, and suggestions that are invaluable to both teacher and pupil. No other general quarterly of which we have knowledge equals the Truth Seekers' in the quality and in the quantity of the helpful material it provides for the study of the International Sunday School Lessons More important still, the Truth Seekers' Quarterly keeps close to the Bible in its interpretations, practical in method, and spiritual in toue,

MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

Good interest and fine attendance continue to be manifested at all our various services, Sunday school, Berean, and church. There were 106 in attendance at our last evening service, the largest of the year.

Pleased as we are with such good interest shown, yet we have even more cause to rejoice because we find that not only will people come to hear the gospel but they are willing to obey it also. It was our happy privilege the past week to baptize six into the all-saving name of Jesus and we were very much impressed with the earnestness displayed by these candidates in regard to this sacred step. Among the group baptized was a young married couple from Oklahoma, here on their vacation. They had been studying the Scriptures in the light of present-day events and becoming convinced that we were living in the last days they felt the need of obedience to Christ by baptism. Being isolated members as they are, I am sure that letters of encouragement would be appreciated by them. Their name and address is as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Murphy, Seminole, Okla., Route 2.

The names and addresses of the other four. all young people of high school age, are as follows: Miss Millie Newman, Martinsville, Ill.; Miss Esther Eddinger, Marshall, Ill., Route 4; Floyd Hamilton, Martinsville, Ill.; and John Henson, Paris, Ill.

Others have indicated their intention of being baptized later and we trust that those who have recently become members may remain true to the Master until He comes.

Harry Goekler, Pastor.

ARKANSAS CITY, KANSAS

I am happy to report that our week's meeting beginning September 23 and ending September 30, with Sr. Lucille LeCrone as pastor, was a complete success. She delivered two sermons cach Sunday and one cach evening during the week. The services were well attended, and the best of attention was given to her wonderful messages of truth.

September 30 was a joyful day with us. Three young ladics confossed Jesus as their personal Savior, and were buried with Him in baptism. Bro. Waters performed the haptismal rites. A basket dinner followed in the church basement, where assembled with the local church were brethren and sisters from Milan, Kan.; Caldwell, Kan.; Attica, Kan.; and Oklahoma City, Okla. At 3:00 p. m. Communion services were conducted, and the young converts fellowshiped into the church. At 6:30 Sr. LeCrone met with the young people of the church and organized a junior Brean class. At 7:30 was her sermon. Her subject was "Paradise Lost—Paradise Regained." This closed a splendid meeting, one long to be remembered.

NIAGARA DISTRICT

It has been some time since I have reported personally to The Herald concerning our work in this section of the country. We have been working along the best we knew how, reaching forward whenever we could and enlarging the borders of our tents. Everyone is doing his bit to help along. Peace, quietness, and harmony are our happy lot. We are happy in the Lord over here even though separated from our sister churches by several hundred miles.

Bro. Rennard recently reported an encouraging gain at the Falls. The following Sunday, or Sept. 23, four came forward for baptism at the close of the service at Fonthill. Three of these were fruits of our Welland efforts: Sr. Spry, Sr. Brown and daughter Betty. It has been in Sr. Spry's home that we have been holding our preaching services for several months. Sr. Brown has been onf our most faithful workers since we started our meetings in Welland last fall. Sr. Holland presented herself for re-immersion, feeling that she did not properly understand the step she originally took.

At the close of the service last Sunday evening these were baptized into Jesus Christ, and will be received into the church next Sunday.

Our hearts were given further cause for repicing when three more presented themselves to the Lord as the invitation was given last Sunday. These three are: Bro. and Sr. Peter Stauding and Margaret Bell. All are members of the Truth Seekers' Class and very faithful too. It was our privilege to unite
"Pete and Ethel" Standing in marriage this past summer, and now it makes us very happy to help to unite them to the Lord. These three will be haptized at our service next Sunday.
We are anticipating several more taking this step in the very near future. Pray for us, brethren.

Inasmuch as an error occurred in the report from the Falls which stated two granddaughters rather than grandchildren, we will include their names and addresses along with those reported this time: Viola and Linford, Jr., Moore, 1832 Linwood Ave., Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. Charlotte Spry, Sr., 111 N. Main, Welland, Ont.; Mrs. Pearl Brown and daughter Betty, General Delivery. Welland; Mrs. Irene Holland, Thorold, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Standing, Thorold (Beaverdams Rt.); Miss Margaret Bell, Thorold.

We pray the Father's richest blessing to rest upon these in their new relationship and bid them welcome into the family of God.

C. E. Randall, Pastor.

Little Miss Jane Kerr who will make her home with her grandmother at Corvallis and attend school here has been on the sick list.

The Bible study class has completed its study of the Revelation. The new lessons will deal with history of the Bible.

Bro. J. C. Wilson has spent the summer months with relatives in Missouri.

Bros. Delbert, Elmer, Platt, and Burrell Hathaway were members of a hunting party which went to southern Oregon last week. Three of the brothers each brought home a

Plans are being made by Corvallis members to attend the quarterly conference at Felida. A daughter was born September 24 to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kerr. Mother and daughter are at the Klammath Falls Hospital.

The "Plain Truth," edited by the Rev. H. W. Armstrong of station KORE has been a

After reading "The Wonder of the Book," by Dyson Hague, M. How can anyone doubt that the Bible is the Word of God?

ARTHUR JAMES REYNOLDS

We were called to Salina, Ont., on Thursday, Sept. 20, to conduct the funeral of one of our early members of the Church of God in Canada. Bro. Reynolds about a half century ago embraced the gospel of the kingdom as then proclaimed and set forth by that great patriarch of the Church of God, Elder R. V. Lyon, and was baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus for the remission of sins. This new-found truth never lost its appeal with Bro. Reynolds but became the bulwark of his life.

The services were held in the old Hogarth home which has been a haven of rest for many of the early ministers and evangelists of the church. The esteem and respect with which the deceased was held were evidenced by the large attendance and floral offerings. There were five other ministers besides the writer from various parts of the province that assisted in the service. The subject of our discourse was the second coming of Christ and the resurrection.

Bro. Reynolds was born to Joseph and Ann Coon Reynolds near Salina on August 23, 1843. He was married to Elizabeth Jane Hogarth. Four children graced this family circle. Sr. Reynolds died several years ago. Later he married Josephine M. Burry, who was very devoted and gave every attention a faithful companion could render. Our sympathies are extended to the family in their hour of sorrow.

ALICE CURTIS

Alice Beatrice Curtis, whose maiden name was Chaplin, was born near Lockport, Ill., on February 22, 1864. In her youth she taught school at Fort Wayne, Ind. On October 27, 1886, she was married to Rufus Curtis of Miami County, Ohio; to which union were born four children, Elsie Frances, Helen Marion, Arthur Clyde, and Philip Lester. For many years she lived a most devoted Christian life and remained a faithful member of the Brush Creek Church of God until her death. Frequently her articles and poems appeared in The Restitution Herald.

Death came to her on September 25, 1934, at the Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton, Ohio Funeral services were conducted by the writer on Thursday, Sept. 27, at the Curtis home in Dayton, and the Brush Creek Church of God. Her husband, the four children, seven grand-children, and many others grieve the passing of Sr. Curtis, but hope to see her in the kingdom of God.

Please send all remittances by postal money order rather than by personal checks, as we are compelled to pay a high rate of exchange to get checks cashed.

RECOMMENDING PASTORS AND EVANGELISTS

An occasional request reaches us from individuals who desire to engage in evangelistic or other church work that requires the cooperation of the brotherhood at large, that we publish the fact that they are willing to aid local churches or brethren in this way. We are always glad to assist in furthering the gospel in every possible way, and consequently we often publish such announcements. But our authority to do this is limited by the will of the General Conference. We are not permitted to recommend in this way anyone who has not been named to us by some local church or state conference as qualified and otherwise worthy of serving the church in a public or private capacity. This requirement was placed upon us by the conference by general consent to protect the brethren from the appeals of those whom they do not know are prepared to render the service they offer to perform.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

The offering of the Oregon church on Golden Rule Home Sunday which will be applied to the purchase of a vacuum cleaner for the Home was a generous one. It will not take more than two or three others of like amount to provide the cleaner desired. We await with interest reports from other congregations.

From her home in far-away Idaho, Sr. Sid Martin sends a generous tithe together with a comment on the editorial on the Berean Page of September 25, concerning which she says: "The article makes me happy to read, and it causes me to understand how little praise is due to ourselves when we tithe." (Better look that article up and see what Sr. Martin means.—Ed.)

We learn that Bro. John Denchfield, graduate of the Bible Training Class, has taken on a new dignity together with the distinguished title of "father" recently. Bro. and Sr. Denchfield of Minnesota became the parents of a daughter, Darlene Rose, on September 25. We wish for the young lady a long and happy life of Christian service.

Sr. Mary A. Woodward of Chicago writes heartily approving the change in the form of our editorial method, stating that it has long been her belief that more good could be accomplished by the Editor if he would devote his attention to doctrinal and prophetic articles to a greater extent than the limits of the Editorial Page permitted.

Bro. H. S. Lasher, Burlington Flats, N. Y., informs us that he is planning to leave soon for Florida to spend the winter. He believes the sunshine of the South will be of benefit to Sr. Lasher's health. He says that the growth on her breast from which she has been suffering for a long time seems to be diminishing, and he attributes her improvement to answered prayer. They hope to meet Bro. and Sr. Harry A. Sheets and other brethren in Virginia on their journey. Their address in Florida will be Deerfield.

In the death of Isaac Fish of Maxwell, Iowa, whose obituary will appear in our next issue, the church in that state has lost one of its most devoted and faithful members. Bro. Fish came of a long line of believers and proved true to the family traditions by bringing his family up in the faith and leaving them a rich heritage of truth to hand down to their children. We hope to see Bro. Fish soon in the presence of the Lord.

Bro. and Sr. T. J. Ellis of Waterloo, Iowa, and their son Eldridge were guests of the Oregon church over Rally Day. They remained for the business meeting of the Board of the National Bible Institution which was held on Monday afternoon.

Norman John MacLeod, pastor of the Los Angeles Church of God, announces his subjects for the present month will be: "Building the House of God" (I4th), "The Shape of Things to Come" (21st), and "When Iniquity Shall Have an End" (28th). His subjects to and including December 30 have been sent this office and will be announced month by month. Other ministers would do well to take a leaf from his book.

The heart of the Editor was made to rejoice in sympathy with that of Pastor Harry Gockler of the Salem Church near Marshall, Ill., when he read of the six baptisms that were recently performed by this energetic young minister. It is an unusual thing for a man to succeed in interesting the public and in building up a church in his home locality. But such is Bro. Gockler's experience; for the Salem Church is but a short walk from his childhood home. May God bless those who have taken upon themselves the sacred name of Jesus Christ.

Bro. J. E. Lent, Rt. 1, Ridgeville, Ont., writes that he is contemplating making a trip through a part of the United States this fall or winter and would be glad to call on some of our isolated brethren en route.

THE REALITY OF THE INVISIBLE

THERE are those that apparently cannot realize the reality of that which they cannot see. Before thinking of God, the devil, or the angels, let us consider something we use in everyday life—the radio.

Sometimes I sing before a little instrument (microphone) which is connected with various coils, lights, wires, etc. My friends sit in their homes. They, too, are near instruments, though these are of a different kind. They listen. They say they hear me sing. How is it? There are no connections between our instruments. They may be a thousand miles away and still hear me sing if there be not too much interference or static. Of course, there is one thing necessary—their instruments must be "in tune" with the instrument where I am. The words I speak or sing have weight and form and are able to travel through the air. You and I cannot see them go. We cannot feel them; we cannot hear them without the aid of the wonderful radio. The radio has taught us that the air is full of noises that we had not known nor realized were there.

Consider again. What enables you to hear me when I talk with you face to face? If you are deaf, you may have learned to read my lips. If not, the word that I speak, upon striking your eardrums, is received and sent on to your brain, where it is recognized. Such an experience would be impossible, if it were not for the fact that each word—yes, each sound—has its own different weight and shape. Pictures of our words have been taken in sand and on phonographs. No two words are alike, yet each one is real.

What a wonderful Creator we have! Our Creator makes no two leaves alike, no two snowflakes alike; He counts the hairs of my head and giveth weight and shape to the words that I speak.

We may not know all things or even begin to understand most of those things that we see and hear, but this we do know, that in God "are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (Col. 2:3).

Why should we think that the heavenly beings were made of the same material from which we are made? Is it not enough to know that they are real?

Doctors have tried in vain to find our capacity for God, which we know exists. But that does not alter the fact that though we may not find it, there is in each individual a capacity for God, which makes man different from the beast. We know that it is real, for we see the results. We cannot see the wind but we can both feel it and see that which it does. So with man, we cannot see the workings and thoughts of God within him but we can see the results.

"Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever... As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby."—1 Peter 1:23; 2:2. Brethren, please do not uproot the plants of God's planting in your soul. Truly our hearts are God's garden in which reality grows.

Let us believe though we do not understand. God may Praise the Lord for His goodness to the children of men.—A. D. Mackintosh in The Bible Advocate.

WE are living in a civilization which is very rapidly going to pieces. There may be a dreadful fate in store for many young people . . . You may be shot, or maimed and smashed, you may be scourged or starved before your lives run out. The world as we know it is visibly collapsing. Every week there is something tumbling down, or something breaking up, and it is impossible to say how far this ruin will extend.—H. G. Wells.

CHURCH MEMBER OR CHRISTIAN?

By C. E. Lapp

OFTENTIMES the question comes to the individual, "Are you a Christian?" and in the majority of instances the answer is: "I am a member of a certain church." . Too often we have been followers of churches and their teaching rather than followers of the Savior, the one who loved righteousness and hated iniquity. We think just a little sin will amount to nothing, but Paul said to abstain from the very appearance of evil. "For even hereunto were ye called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth."—1 Peter 2:21, 22.

The hypocrite is not our example, neither the ungodly, but Jesus. How long must we live in order to see that the Bible means what it says? Jesus was continually about His Father's business from early childhood. Are we? Or does our business take all our time and crowd His to one side? He was meek and lowly in heart. We? Proud, self-willed, and seeking the vain glory of men. He was merciful. We condemn, judge, and find fault with others, and try to hide our own corruptness by pointing to their sins. Jesus was compassionate and even those in the depths of sin were forgiven because of His great love.

He was willing and did forgive even those who caused His death, but there are church members who through their own stubbornness and pride are bringing reproach upon the name of Christ. They are living lives of hypocrisy and throwing all hope of eternal life away just because they are unwilling to forgive others. Jesus spoke in Mark 11:25, 26: "And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have ought against any: that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. But if ye do not forgive, neither will your Father which is in heaven forgive your trespasses."—The Beacon.

Kindling Flames in Europe

THE streets of Marseilles were bright with fluttering flags and waving banners and lined with cheering crowds which were watching the colorful reception being accorded King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia on his arrival in France to pay an important official visit to that republic.

The two Governments had looked forward hopefully to the event for some time, trusting that it would result in two beneficent international accomplishments. In the first place they expected that the visit of the King would serve to strengthen the ties of friendship that bound the two nations together, which ties had been more or less strained since the conclusion of the World War and the signing of the unsatisfactory treaty of peace in Versailles, on June 28, 1919.

In the second place it was thought that through personal consultation between the political leaders of France and Jugo-Slavia steps might be taken to bring about a more friendly feeling between the latter country and Italy and thus a possible cause of war between them be averted at least for a time. Altogether, the meeting of King Alexander and the representatives of the French Government had been looked forward to as an event fraught with much promise, not only to the three nations immediately concerned, but to the entire world.

But how frail is the cord on which hang the most cherished hopes of men! Less than five min- (Please turn to Page Nine)

Abreast of the Times

Renew Jewish Persecution

"I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them."—Isaiah 66:4.

LUXEMBURG, Oct. 5.—Fear again stalks in the homes of Jews throughout Germany as a result of the spectacular boycott of Jewish shops in Nucrnberg during the recent Nazi Party congress held there. Although dire punishment was threatened to be inflicted on any member of the Nazi Party who interfered with the Jewish shops in any way, yet observers assert that shops were boycotted and pickets posted who warned the possible customers from entering, with the constantly repeated words, "Jewish shop!" and nothing was done about it.

An American correspondent called on a number of shopkeepers but was kept under constant observation of Nazi pickets, and whatever conversation he held with the Jewish proprietors was carried on in a loud voice by both the visitor and the Jews in order that they might avoid the charge of having made "treasonable statements."

Pastors Assail Hitler's Rule

"Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

Berlin, Germany, Oct. 14.—Thousands of people made their way to church today apprehensively, "like early Christians in the catacombs," reports the Associated Press. Sixteen thousand pastors, driven to open rebellion by the dictatorial policy of Reichbishop Mueller and that of Dr. August Jaeger, Commissioner of Protestant Churches in Prussia, issued a manifesto holding these men responsible for what they termed "the triumph of violence and hypocrisy."

Charging that the gospel had been nullified through the restrictions placed upon Protestant teaching and teachers by the commission, the manifesto declared that the work of Satan was being done by it. "The church regime has violated the constitutional church government, and talks of peace, a believing church, and all its churches are using political force to gain their ends. It splits Bavaria's united church into two parts, but still it talks of unity. It denies the Ten Commandments and employs lies against truth and robbery against justice. Still it talks of Bible and creed. Caprice and falschood have gained the upper hand in the church."

Rev. Martin Niemoeller, one of the most popular ministers of Germany, in a scathing discourse directed against the government control of churches, asserted that a "reign of terror existed," and said it was "ghastly and shocking how a few persons calling themselves Protestant Christians are persecuting the congregation of Christ."

Dictators cannot brook opposition from any source. In Russia the Government determined on the banishment of all religion. In Germany, where dictatorship realizes that religion is too deeply entrenched in the affections of the people to be really cradicated, an effort is being made to force all denominations into one body which is to be controlled entirely by appointees of the Government. This is a condition that may be expected to develop in other lands as the ending of Gentile times draws near. The Antichrist and liberty of conscience will have nothing in common between them.

Japanese Army for Socialism

"They proceed from evil to evil, and they know not me, saith the Lord."—Jeremiah 9:3.

Tokyo, Japan, Oct. 13.—Considerable excitement prevailed in Government circles when it became known that the Japanese War Office had issued an official pamphlet setting forth the Army's views on national defense and including it in recommendations for economic reform for the entire country. According to The Literary Digest the part of the pamphlet which so surprised Government leaders outside of the Army was the fact that recommendations bordering on the establishment of State Socialism were made. A small section of the Japanese people were prosperous without working, it was declared, while the majority were in distress, "resulting in setting one class against another."

Machine Must Be Disciplined

"Engines, invented by cunning men." - 2 Chronicles 26:15.

NAPLES, Italy, Oct. 12.—Speaking before the Italian Association for the Advancement of Science, Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless, declared that civilized man cannot replace the machine with handwork "without walking backward along the march of civilization. It is discipline of the machine we must obtain," asserted the father of radio.

Apprehended for What?

By R. H. Judd

ONE cannot fail to realize that the man who wrote these words was a man of deep conviction on whichever side he chose to engage. Earnest in thought, sincere in purpose, strong in action, nothing would be allowed to stand between him and the fulfillment of his ambitions. Of one thing he was convinced, viz.,

"no man liveth unto himself." He believed that every man's life does and should influence those with whom he comes in contact.

Not satisfied with the ordinary level of human attainment, he aspired to great things, and succeeded in his aspirations. He boasted, and it was no small boast, not only that he was a Hebrew—one of the chosen race—but that he was a "Hebrew of the Hebrews," distinctive, head and shoulders above others, and he rejoiced in the fact that he was "known by all the Jews." As touching the law—the most revered profession in all the land because of its close association with Moses, the great law-giver—he claimed to be a Pharisce. He made that claim, not only because he was so by generations of lineal descent (see Acts 23:7, R. V.), but on the ground that his own actions had contributed to his high position, for had he not "lived a Pharisee"?

Incidental statements of this kind force us, almost unwillingly, to the conclusion that the Pharisees were a highly respected class, and that generally speaking they were men of culture and refinement and were looked upon as "good men." This fact is well brought out in Paul's assertion that "as touching the righteousness of the law" he "was found blameless."

That these things had been "gains" (plural; see margin) to him Paul himself frankly admitted, and had it not been that the attention of the nation had been focused on other things during the strenuous days of Christ, there is no telling to what he might have attained. Even after those days there are glimpses in the story that give ground for the belief that Paul still aspired to further achievements. That in addition to these "gains" of culture and position Paul had been a man of considerable means is not an unnatural conclusion, though perhaps overlooked, when we call to mind the words concerning Felix the governor. So astute a man would never have "expected that money would have been given him of Paul" unless he had some reason to believe it either was or had been in the possession of the person from whom he expected it.

Gathering up the threads of evidence, we see that each one of these "things" were in Paul's estimation real

"Howbeit what things were gain to me, these have I counted loss for Christ."—Phil. 3:7, R. V. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, . . . if by any means I may attain unto the resurrection from the dead."—Phil. 3:10, 11, R. V. "But I press on, if so be that I may apprehend that for which also I was apprehended by Christ Jesus."—Phil. 3:12, R. V.

"gains" worth the having. We can picture him as he mentally reviewed the strenuous course of his life which brought them into being. We can, with these thoughts in mind, realize the intense earnestness of his assertions as given at the head of this paper, for the purpose as he says, "that I may gain Christ."

Note the change in the Revised Version from "win Christ" to "gain Christ," for it is significant. We may win a prize, but it may not always be to our gain. Paul was never that kind of a man. He never left the substance to go after the shadow. He admitted that his former life had been one of "gains," but so convinced was he that to "gain Christ" was a gain equal to them all that he counted other things but loss. Why? Step by step he leads us to the answer. "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, . . . if by any means I may attain unto the resurrection from (among) the dead." We notice the emphasis (see Emphatic Diaglott) he places on the personal pronoun, for fifteen times in as many verses does he use it; and perhaps we see a tinge of selfishness in the expressed desire. Certain it is Paul realized that some would not rise, but would "remain in the congregation of the dead," and with the earnestness of his nature he did not want to be among those. Life to him had been a series of "gains," and he believed that it would not cease to be so in the life to come. He believed, as Christ did, that eternal life was for the purpose of knowing God (John 17:3) and Jesus Christ whom God had sent, and he believed that life could not stand still with such a purpose in view. To him it meant life without limit, for otherwise it could be nothing short of a return to death, which is the "wages of sin," and certain acknowledgment that sin had not been conquered. Yes, Paul wanted life. But again the question arises, Why? For himself only? Listen:

"That I may apprehend that for which also I was apprehended by Christ Jesus." Two purposes with two results are clearly indicated here by the word "also." If there is any doubt about it the Revised Version margin makes it clear beyond question.

Paul's remark that he was "apprehended by Christ Jesus" will appeal to most of us as a reference to his conversion. It is true that he was apprehended that he might have eternal life; but reading the verse over carefully, thoughtfully, and prayerfully, one realizes that just as the end in view is always greater than the means used, so in Paul's conversion there was in view something still greater than the conversion of Paul. For what, then, was Paul apprehended? Our text as above and Acts 9:15 give us the answer, viz., that others may be apprehended by him. Does it not remind us of the words of Christ, whom he so longed to follow—"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word."

We each of us thank God for our conversion to the gospel of Christ, but have we realized that, as in the case of Paul, God has in our conversion some greater purpose in view if we will but allow ourselves to be the channel of blessing.

Literal Translations

M ANY are those who are always going to the Greek or Hebrew to get the "literal translation" of these languages, thinking thereby to get a better meaning of the language of the Old and New Testaments. They are certain that getting a "literal translation" will sustain them in their claim for some peculiar notion! Many readers listening to these so-called translators giving the "literal" rendering are at once swept off their feet, for they are sure if it is a "literal translation," it will give us the exact thought that was in the minds of those who originally gave us the Hebrew and Greek manuscripts.

Of course, pretty nearly all the readers of our religious papers are ignorant of Hebrew and Greek; and such swallow "hook, line, and sinker," all such explanations as are built on a "literal translation," with the extraordinary hunger of folks who are, as the Ephesians were, always looking for something "new"! Often, serious errors come on account of all such explanations, and much harm is done.

Now, what is "literal translation"? In translating, we transfer the thoughts and ideas from one language to another. Translation has been defined by authorities as: "The act of expressing the words of one language by the words of another."

Now, since each language has idioms, all its own, it has often been very difficult to find words in another language in which to express exactly all the shades of thought and meaning of this language. It is for this reason all translations are imperfect.

The assumption that Jesus spoke in the Greek is very well supported, better than many think. Now, as the various translators rendered the Greek into English, many delicate shades of meaning were absolutely and altogether lost. This is not the fault of our Lord, nor the fault of the translators, for it is a splendid example of proving the utter impossibility of representing every shade of thought through the medium of written words. Is it not altogether true that we, as we write to our friends, do not always—cannot always—convey our exact meaning in mere words? This will be seen more and more to be true, the more we study Greek, Hebrew, or any other language.

There are many of these idioms of other languages that make no sense at all to us, if rendered literally!

All we can do is to use a corresponding idiom in our language; and in doing so, very fine shades of meaning are lost in the transit. In fact, it has been found utterly impracticable to make any translation literal throughout, for to be "literal" the translation must be according to the letter, or exact words. And as the exact words in other languages have acquired a meaning which the corresponding word in English has not yet acquired, we could never learn from our English lexicons what was the real and exact meaning intended.

When such idioms occur, they must be translated in such a way that the meaning of the original will be as clear as possible. And when that is done, we are often very far from the or a "literal translation." And so, whatever anyone may say contrariwise, a literal translation is often very misleading, and really no translation at all! For the original meaning has been lost in the process of rendering it.

Here are a few illustrations: In the German we have this idiom literally translated: "The book allows itself to be read." Let the English reader take any comfort in a literal rendering of that, if he can! Literally, every book allows itself to be read. How could it be prevented? But, were we to give the real meaning, we would render it: "The book is worth reading." The English reader now understands just what every native-born German does by the other phrase. This free translation brings sense; the "literal" does not. Again: "She will remain sitting." This is the literal all right; but the meaning is: "She will remain unmarried." Again, "Dear Fatherland, no danger thine." This is a very fair attempt at the German, but the idiom is not expressed as yet. "Dear Fatherland, may you be quiet as a babe is quiet on a mother's breast." The thought of "danger" is there all right, but the thought of resting on a mother's breast so that the mother absolutely protects the one resting, is the thought.

The French (speaking of two horses) say: "He who made one, made the other." This is literal all right, but it isn't giving the meaning, which is, "He made the two horses just alike."

Take the Hebrew (Gen. 14:10): "Now the vale of Siddim was slimepits, slimepits." Now, how can we render that literally, and get the sense? We can't! A free translation is: "Now the vale of Siddim was full of slimepits." There is your meaning! The native Jew might have understood the other better, but we understand it better this way. In Exodus we read: "Thou shalt anoint them, (Aaron and his sons), and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's of-

Some Protestant Bible Revisions

UNTIL Pope Pius X commissioned the Order of Benedictines to revise the text of the Vulgate, a revision which is now going on, the 1598 Clementine edition of Jerome's version of the Bible, known as the Vulgate, and which is the formally authorized version of the Roman Catholic Church, had been subjected to no revision. During these three hundred years several revisions of the English Bible in use among Protestants have been made—the latest being the work authorized by the American committee of revision and completed in 1901.

England was behind the other Christian countries in having a Bible in her own tongue. In Egypt, Armenia, and Rome the people almost from the earliest days of Christianity had read the Scriptures in their own tongue, but in England the Latin Bible held sway, and as the mass of the people could not read Latin, the appeal of the church was made largely through pictures, miracle plays, songs, and music, while its strength lay in its ceremonials and moral discipline.

WYCLIFFE'S VERSION

The Bible as a whole was never translated into Anglo-Saxon, though metrical paraphrases of some of its parts appeared as early as the seventh century. The first of these poetic renderings of the Scriptures was made by Caedmon, a monk of Whitby, England. In the eighth century appeared Bede's rendering of the Gospel of John and the Lord's Prayer, and other paraphrases made by different ecclesiastics. In the tenth century Alfred the Good interlined a Latin manuscript with translations of the Exodus into Anglo-Saxon and there were other renderings of different books and three Anglo-Norman translations of the Gospels.

But John Wycliffe's translation was the first complete English rendering of the Bible. He was assisted in his work by the Vice Chancellor of Oxford and a revision of his translation was published in 1388, just sixty-seven years before the first book printed in Europe with movable types was published.

Wyckliffe or Wiclif or Wycliffe—it is spelled in many ways—and his assistants knew little of Hebrew or Greek. The source of his Bible was the Latin Vulgate. As the only English version before Tyndall's, which was printed nearly 150 years later, it was freely copied and irresponsibly revised. Elaborate versions were made for the monasteries and for the libraries of dukes and princes, and Fox bears witness that the common people, too, were eager to read it, some of them giving as much as $200 in our money and others giving a load of hay for a few chapters of James or Paul in English.

EARLY CHANGES

Wycliffe's political theories regarding the independence of the Church of England from the Church of Rome were far in advance of his day. In his doctrines he really belonged with the reformers who lived two centuries later than he. His writings, largely of a controversial character, gave shape and impetus to the movement by which the Anglo-Saxon, with an admixture of Latin and French words, was becoming the modern English language. He has been called the morning star of English prose as Chaucer has been called the morning star of English poetry. Forty years after his burial his bones were taken from his grave, publicly burned, and the ashes cast into the river Swift. Wordsworth used the scattering of his ashes as symbolic of the spreading of his doctrine in the lines—

"As thou these ashes, little brook, will bear
Into the Avon—Avon to the tide
Of Severn, Severn to the narrow seas,
Into main ocean they—this deed accurst
An emblem yields to friends and enemies
How the bold teacher's doctrine, sanctified
By truth, shall spread throughout the world dispersed."

Between the appearance of this first English Bible of John Wycliffe's in the fourteenth century—a Bible in manuscript form, which therefore could not be freely circulated—and the publication of Tyndall's Bible in 1525, the printing press, making possible the easy multiplication of books, had been invented. The first book, finely printed in Europe, was a Latin Bible. Before Tyndall's English Bible appeared the other European countries—Germany, Italy, France, Flanders, Spain, Holland, and Bohemia—had their vernacular Bibles in print, so England was slow in giving to its people the Scriptures in a language which they could understand.

Portions were printed by Caxton in 1483, when he translated stories of Bible characters from the French into English, and distributed the translations in printed form.

TYNDALL AND MATTHEWS

William Tyndall, a priest of the English Church, was the first to act on the belief that England needed a Bible translated from the original Greek and Hebrew into the language of the people. His work brought him into disfavor with Tunstall, the Bishop of London, and after a while he understood that "not only was there no rowne in my lorde of London's palace to translate the New Testament, but also that there was no place to do it in all Englonde." Repulsed in his native land, he went to Worms, Germany, where in 1525 appeared his first edition of the New Testament in English. Despite ecclesiastical prohibition, it circulated widely in England and during the years which intervened between this and 1536, at which time he was taken, strangled to death, and then burned in Belgium, near Brussels, he added to it, though he did not complete the Bible. In his work he relied mainly on the Hebrew and Greek Testaments, though he did not discard the Latin Vulgate, and the criticism has been made that he was too strongly guided by Luther's German Bible. Tyndall did not live to complete the translation of the entire Bible.

The first complete English Bible was the work of Myles Coverdale, an Augustinian friar. He undertook the work at the suggestion of Thomas Cromwell, Minister of State to Henry VIII. He did not translate from the original Hebrew and Greek as had Tyndall, but made large use of Tyndall's work from the original, which, with the German Zurich Bible of 1529, was his chief guide. He really revised and secured circulation for Tyndall's New Testament. The first edition of his Bible appearing in 1535 was not suppressed by the Government, which proves that the popular demand for the Scriptures was making itself felt. The second edition, ready in 1537, was printed with the King's most precious license, being the second Bible to receive it. The first to be thus authorized by the King was the Bible edited and published by John Rogers, under the name of Thomas Matthew, in 1537. The Matthews Bible was a compilation of Tyndall's and Coverdale's translations made by Rogers, whose work was that of an editor.

CROMWELL AND CRANMER

The notes in the Matthews Bible did not please Cromwell, so he commissioned Richard Taverner to revise it. Taverner's task was to tone down the notes and to improve the English. His revision was the first published by the King's printer, yet, despite this, it appears to have exercised little influence on later Protestant editions.

Seven years before the Council of Trent decreed that the Latin version of the Bible in current use—the Vulgate—should be the authentic version for the Roman Catholic Church, Cromwell authorized Coverdale to bring forth a revised English version, which, from its size, has since been known as the Great Bible. Before this the Convocation of Canterbury had petitioned for an authorized version without marginal notes, which in some of the editions had proved offensive. Archbishop Cranmer had divided an existing version among the higher clergy for revision, and Coverdale introduced into the Great Bible, which had as its basis the Matthews version, corrections made by these bishops. The Great Bible had a preface by Cranmer and bore the notice: "This is the Bible appointed to the use of the churches."

Even with the appearance of these many revisions of the Bible in English, the general reading of the book was not encouraged. Several restrictions were placed on Tyndall's, Wyeliffe's, and other Bibles which were ordered to be burned. The rigid laws account for the fact that few copies of these early Bibles and Testaments are in existence and that of those extant many are mutilated.

AUTHORIZED TRANSLATIONS

During the religious persecutions in the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth many English, both Catholic and Protestant, had to seek asylum in foreign lands. Some of the Protestant faith drifted to Geneva, where a company of Genevan pastors, among them John Knox, Myles Coverdale, and William Whittingham, brother-in-law of Calvin, published what is known as the Genevan Bible.

This Genevan Bible became the Scotch authorized version and was so superior to the Great Bible in use in the English Church that a revision of the latter was undertaken. The work of translation and correction was divided among the bishops of the English Church, hence, when published, it was known as the Bishop's Bible. It received the authorization of the Southern Convocation, but though the clergy used it in the churches, was never given popular approval.

No one seemed satisfied with it and as King James was equally dissatisfied with the Scotch authorized edition, the Genevan Bible, he was ready to yield to the appeal for another version. Executed under the King's orders, this version aimed to be nonsectarian within the limits of Protestantism. Among the conditions laid down for its preparation was that it should be made chiefly by scholars, and fifty-four men were chosen by King James I on the recommendation of the universities of Cambridge and Oxford. Forty-seven of these, all linguists, worked for several years. They worked in companies, each man translating the parts assigned to his group and then submitting his translation to his associates. At the close of their labors the whole work was revised by members from each group. In 1611 their work, the King James Version, was published. Though known as the Authorized Version, it has never been formally sanctioned by any authority, ecclesiastical or temporal. Westcott in his History of the English Bible says: "A revision which embodied the ripe fruits of nearly a century of labor and appealed to the religious instinct of a great Christian people gained by its own internal character a vital authority which could never be secured by any edict of sovereign rulers." In their work the men who prepared the King James Version consulted Tyndall, Matthew, Coverdale, the Great Bible, and the Genevan-all of the noteworthy English versions. Nevertheless, the King James Version encountered severe criticism and was revised in 1629. There had been so many revisions in the sixteenth century that it was well that a period of inactivity should follow. In the nineteenth century the growth of the scientific spirit, together with a notable advance in studies bearing on the Bible, made another revision seem advisable. A revision committee of the Convocation of Canterbury appointed two companies of English scholars, members of the Church of England and nonconformists, to do the necessary work. One committee was to revise the Old Testament and the other the New Testament.

LAST RECENSION

Of important religious bodies, only Roman Catholics had no share in the work. Cardinal Newman was invited but declined. American scholars were invited to join in the work and two committees were organized in this country in connection with the American Bible Society and began work on the same lines as the English revisers in 1872. The American revisers promised to give their moral support to the Revised Version published in England and not to issue a rival edition for fourteen years. The American and English committees exchanged suggestions. When the English Revision Company published the New Testament in 1881 and the Old Testament in 1884, it made public acknowledgment of the help given to it by the American committees. The English revision committees having completed their work disbanded, but the American committees continued their organization and made preparations for the publication of the American Revised Edition. The Americans kept their promise to refrain from publication for fourteen years but in 1901 that time limit had expired and the American Standard Edition of the Revised Edition of the King James Version was published.

Ninety per cent of the words in the King James Version are of Saxon origin, showing the strong influence of Wycliffe and of Tyndall, who fixed the standard of the literary style, determining that it should be popular rather than academic. Save in the matter of spelling and of some refinement owing to the development of the language,

Hell-What Is It?

"I AM rather glad that we did not meet for study last week," was the somewhat disconcerting greeting with which John Almen met his friend, Peter Everready, one afternoon last week.

"What's the matter, John?" replied Mr. Everready. "Have you changed your mind about wanting to study the subject we suggested at our last meeting?"

"No," said Mr. Almen, "that is not the reason. But as I read that little folder you left me, Hell—What Is It? I saw at once that it would take more than a week for me to follow out all of the references given and to thoroughly digest their meaning. You will have to be a little patient with me, Peter; I'm pretty slow about taking up with new ideas, especially about religion," he continued. "I don't suppose you can realize how hard it is for one to give up old conceptions and beliefs which he was taught in childhood, even when the error of such ideas is clearly pointed out."

"On the other hand, John," said his friend gravely, "I can thoroughly sympathize with you in your difficulty. I, too, was raised to believe that the Christian would go immediately to heaven when he died and the wicked to a literal burning hell. I remember well how surprised I was at what I thought to be the preacher's ignorance of the Bible when I heard a minister of the Church of God declare emphatically that the righteous were not promised a place in heaven when they died, nor would the wicked suffer consciously forever in a hell of literal fire. I will tell you sometime how I was forced by the Word of God to change my mind about it."

"The first thing that struck me as strange in this little tract, which I notice is published by the National Bible Institution of Oregon, Illinois, the same organization that has gotten out the other interesting folders you have given me, was the text with which the outline began. It surprised me so much that though it is printed in full I turned to my Bible to verify the language."

The opening passage which had aroused Mr. Almen's amazement was from Acts 2:31, and read: "He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption."

"What was it in this familiar text that caused your astonishment?" asked Mr. Everready.

"Why, the idea that Christ, the spotless Lamb of God, had gone to hell when He died! Of course I knew the 'Apostles' Creed' says, 'He descended into hell'; but although I had repeated the creed hundreds of times the force of the expression never struck me before. Why should Christ be required to go to the place of torment when He had done no wrong? That was what surprised me."

"And did my little tract help you out of your difficulty?" asked the other.

"It surely did!" asserted Mr. Almen emphatically. "That is," he amended, "it did after I had reached a point in my study where I was willing to believe what was obviously the true meaning both of this text and the 'Apostles' Creed' originally. When I looked the word 'hell' up in my big Young's Concordance and found that it came from the Hebrew word sheol in the Old Testament, and was translated 'hell' thirty-one times and 'grave' thirty-one times, I began to understand what Peter and the compilers of the Creed meant when they said Christ descended into hell. They simply meant that He died and was buried. that He went into the grave. This fact was made still more apparent when I noticed that both the Creed and the statement by Peter connected the thought of hell with that of Jesus' bodily resurrection from the grave. Yes, Peter," he concluded, "I am beginning to get a more biblical understanding of what and where hell is!"

"If, as Paul declares so strongly in Romans 6:23, 'the wages of sin is death,' then what could be more logical than to believe what we are told in Psalm 49:14, that 'like sheep they are laid in the grave (sheel, the same word translated 'hell' thirty-one times); death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning.' Of course this latter expression would signify that the upright would be called forth from their graves in the morning of the resurrection just as Jesus was," suggested Mr. Everready.

Here the friends parted, but with the assurance that they would meet again soon to consider equally important scriptural matters.

FUNDAMENTAL TRUTHS OF THE BIBLE

By J. G. Haupt

**R EMEMBER now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." This expression is perhaps the most fundamental in the whole Bible. It is the great foundation truth upon which rests the whole Word of God. What is known as the Lord's Prayer: "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven," contains the same fundamental thought.

On my last attendance at church services the pastor led in this prayer, using the words, "And lead us not into temptation." At this point my words were, "Lead us, but not into temptation." The Bible is clear in stating that God tempteth no man. God leads no one into temptation. Men and women may tempt each other, gold and other valuables may sometimes tempt, even our desires at times tempt, but God never leads us into temptation.

A fine hymn reads,

"Yield not to temptation,
For yielding is sin;
Each victory will help you
Some other to win."

The temptation is not a sin, but the yielding to it is opposed to rightcourness.

The Passover feast was an important occasion. It became a fundamental to all the Israelites to observe the Passover at the stated time each year. On several occasions they were permitted to postpone this feast for one month, but its importance did not cease until the Jewish people lost their existence as a nation, and were scattered to the four ends of the earth. It was after the crucifixion of the Messiah, the Christ, that we read of the Jewish prime minister of Queen Candace of Ethiopia, who made the long tedious journey from the capital to Jerusalem to attend the Passover feast. His being a eunuch did not lessen his faith in the laws of his land, for he carried with him the books of the Jewish people, including Isaiah, and read them earnestly while reclining in his chariot. The evangelist Philip came upon him at the logical moment, asking him, "What readest thou? Understandest thou what thou readest?" The reply showed that the words of Isaiah were dark to the eunuch. Beginning at the same scripture, Philip made plain to him the words of the Prophet as relating to the Christ. Getting into the chariot together, the two men studied the passage with care. They passed over a stream when the eunuch proved his understanding by saying, "See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" Going into the water after a full statement by the eunuch, Philip baptized him.

Bapto is the Greek word for "dipping," baptizo for more than mere dipping, as shown by the words of Philip.

The eunuch believed with all his heart that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God; so baptism was permissible.

The purity of the Coptic religion has continued to the present day. It speaks well for the effectiveness of Philip's missionary work.

JESUS IS COMING

By Abbie A. Howard

Jesus is coming—the signs now we see
In the sun, moon, and stars; in the earth and the sea,
Fulfilling the word of Him who once trod
On the earth as a servant—the dear Son of God.

Jesus is coming—almighty to save!
And bring up His people who sleep in the grave;
Then with their Redeemer to Zion they'll come Immortal—no more in sadness to roam.

Jesus is coming—His friends to receive From out the great mass who refuse to believe The glorious tidings of His coming reign Upon this same earth where once He was slain.

Jesus is coming—sinner, list to His voice; Believe ye the gospel, be baptized and rejoice, And lay up your treasures, where thieves cannot come, For Jesus is coming to give us a home.

Come to the fountain, wash, and be clean, Come to the Savior—"strong to redeem." Hasten, O mortal—or you will be left! Hide in the Rock, for dying men cleft.

Why will you linger—time rushes on! Soon will the day of mercy be gone. Then you may call, but He will refuse If you too long that mercy abuse.

Come, dying sinner, come while you may; Cease your rebellion, begin now to pray; Lay down your weapons, humble your soul; Believe ye the gospel, wash, and be whole.

Why will you pander to pride and to lust, You who so soon may lie down in the dust? Pause, dying mortal, think of your doom, E'er death shall drag you down to the tomb.

Jesus is coming; but should He delay, Children, let us not cease to watch and to pray. With lamps trimmed and burning let us wait for our Lord, That we may be ready for the promised reward.

GRACE

By Gertrude M. Logan

WAS the grace shown to Noah, Lot, Joseph, and to all down to Christ different from that manifested during the Gospel Age? It seems to me that it is the same shown in different ways according to results desired in each case.

Paul's purpose in his arguments with the Jews was to turn their minds away from the law covenant, which could not give life and had fulfilled its mission, and to remind them of the everlasting covenant given to Abraham. "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Since we never were under the law covenant, it does not concern us, and it is only through the grace of God that we will be able to lay hold of the everlasting covenant.

Of course, the way of grace is not a "double track" now any more than that laid down for Abraham was a "double track." There is only one path laid down for those in Christ, viz., to walk according to the Spirit. If we are so doing, we will bear the fruit of the Spirit: "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meckness, temperance: against such there is no law." If we fail in any of these things, and we all do, we have an advocate at the throne of grace.

While we are reckoned new creatures in Christ now, we will not actually be until we are made immortal at the resurrection, having been faithful unto death (Rev. 2:10).

Paul says in Romans 16:17, "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." If I have said anything contrary to the doctrine, I shall be more than glad if some one will point it out in a Christlike spirit.

Let us strive toward unity in these terrible days when we know not how long we will be given an opportunity to qualify for the glorious position of "the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." When we see all this turmoil and strife all over the world, we should strive to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and . . . run with patience the race that is set before us" (Heb. 12:1).

TAKE TIME

Take time to breathe a morning prayer, asking God to keep you from evil, and use you for His glory during the day.

Take time to read a few verses from God's Word each day!

Take time to be pleasant. A bright smile or a pleasant word falls like sunbeams upon the hearts of those around us.

Take time to be polite. Politeness, even to an inferior, is no compromise of dignity.—Christian Observer

utes after the kingly dictator of Jugo-Slavia had joined the French notables, Foreign Minister Jean Louis Barthou and Gen. Alfonse Georges of the French Superior War Council, in the official automobile, hopes of both nations were temporarily, at least, shattered by the bullets of an assassin.

As the brilliant parade proceeded through the congested streets, protected on either side by double lines of city police and two squadrons of mounted republican guards, a man dashed through the cordon of the King's guardians and poured a fusillade of shots into the car.

The King was wounded three times and died within an hour. Both Foreign Minister Barthou and Gen. Georges were likewise so seriously injured that they also succumbed a short time thereafter. Thus in an instant of time the entire European, if not the entire world, picture having to do with the possibility of bringing about permanent peace by international agreement was resolved into a chaotic and meaningless jumble of lurid colors.

No event probably since the World War has contained more sinister possibilities than that which has just occurred, for the King of Jugo-Slavia has long been looked upon as one of the strongest influences for peace in the Balkan Peninsula, which has always been the most trouble-some section of the world. King Alexander has been called the possessor of "one of the three most important lives in Europe."

A correspondent of the International News Service asserts in a copyrighted cablegram that in a recent interview with "one of the most prominent statesmen of Central Europe" the statesman declared that his greatest fear for the peace of the continent was the possibility of the assassination of the monarch of Jugo-Slavia. He said he feared that should the King's death occur "Jugo-Slavia might blow up, the Balkans blow up, and Europe blow up."

The gravest concern is being shown over the tragedy in all capitals, and unconfirmed rumors are pouring in from the countries bordering on Jugo-Slavia of the mobilization of troops and of other warlike preparations. That the possibility of another general war has been immeasurably increased by the event is everywhere conceded.

It is of special significance to the student of prophecy that King Alexander was one of an increasing number of absolute dictators who have arisen since the World War, and whose activities seem to be contributing to the preparations for the coming of that great antichristian dictator, sometimes referred to as "the man of sin."

It is also worthy of note that these autocratic rulers are arising in various parts of the old Roman Empire, the center of the territory to be ruled by the Antichrist in the future. Whether this new order of "kings" will eventually result in the division of former Roman provinces into exactly ten parts, represented by the ten toes of the metallic image of Daniel, remains to be seen. But such a development is certainly within the bounds of possibility.

One of the most interesting of these basic changes that have occurred in government since the war is seen in the gradual but unmistakable disappearance of true democracies. With the almost universal overturning of thrones which both preceded and followed the war it was generally supposed that absolutism was dead and buried forever, but time has proved the fallacy of that conclusion. Dictators now govern more than half of all the peoples of the earth with an absolute authority that was never exceeded by any monarch of past ages.

The obvious willingness of the masses to submit to such autocratic rulership is indicative of the easy conquest the Antichrist will achieve when he sets up his government in imitation of the soon-to-be-established kingdom of Christ.

As we review the situation that has now arisen in Europe as the result of the death of King Alexander we are met everywhere with such headlines as these: "Mussolini Fears for the Peace of Europe"; "France Works Hard to Avert Break With Jugo-Slavia"; "Political Situation in Spain Greatly Aggravated by Alexander's Death"; "Radicals Encouraged, Hope to Overthrow Austrian Republic."

Just a little over a week ago Premier Mussolini in a speech before a vast assembly in Rome declared his serious regret over the anti-Italian attitude manifested by many Jugo-Slavian newspapers. At the same time he said that while he hoped to live at peace with his national neighbors on all sides the Italian nation must prepare itself for the war he predicted could not long be put off. He further asserted that it would give him great satisfaction if the delegates to the disarmament conference would openly confess their utter failure and return to their homes with no intention of ever resuming their efforts to restrict the military development of the nations of the world.

The eleven-year-old Prince Peter, second son of King Alexander, has already been declared King of Jugo-Slavia in his father's stead. But neither this young boy nor any regency that may be appointed to direct the political course of his country can hope to exert the influence Alexander possessed either in domestic or in international affairs.

Herein is seen one of the great weaknesses of dictatorial governments. Dictators maintain their power only by the force of their own personalities. No successor can be appointed to take their places who will be able to take up the reins with as firm a hand as did the original rulers. This has been repeatedly revealed in history from the days of Alexander the Great to the moment a few weeks ago when Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of Austria fell at the hands of an assassin. Personal popularity is the basis on which all dictatorships rest, and when the one in whom the people trust is killed, or should he for some reason lose his popularity with his people, the government of which he was the head inevitably falls.

This condition will be observed in the termination of the government of the man of sin as suggested by Daniel. After describing the remarkable success that was to attend his efforts for a long period of time the Prophet declares with dramatic suddenness, "Yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him."—Dan. 11:45. And there Daniel's prophecy leaves him, abandoned by his once willing supporters, forgotten and deserted by those whom he had enriched with the plunder of war. The last glimpse we eatch of this arrogant pretender to the rulership of the world closely resembles the last days of Pompey, another world conqueror, whom history pictures finally as fleeing alone from his enemies, "a defeated and despairing fugitive" forsaken and despised by all mankind.

Watchfulness and prayer, coupled with increased zeal in spreading the gospel of the coming King of kings, should animate every follower of the Lord Jesus Christ at a time like this.

SOME BIBLE REVISIONS

it has not so far departed from the first English Bible—that of Wycliffe, as may be seen in the extract from a manuscript of the fourteenth century.

LITERAL TRANSLATIONS

fice."—Ex. 28:3, 41. This is clear is it not? It is a free translation, however. Literally, it is "Thou shalt fill their hand."

In the Greek we have the words of Jesus regarding John the Baptist, and Christ attributes them to "children sitting in the market place": "We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not beaten the breast."—Matt. 11:17. But this literal rendering doesn't convey our Lord's thought. A freer translation, "lamented," does. Those people expressed their grief by beating the breast. We do not.

In the words of Jesus (in Matt. 18:6; Mark 9:42): "the millstone of an ass," we have the literal translation; but without the explanation that must go with it, viz., the large millstone turned by an ass at the mill, grinding flour, the language is obscure. Most of the millstones were turned by "maid servants," and were small. Some were large, and were therefore turned by an ass. When translated "a great millstone," the meaning is at once made clear to us.—The Messiah's Advocate.

Abraham

Abraham was looked unto as a righteous person because he believed in God. We who have been baptized into Christ are all one with Christ Jesus. Therefore we are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promises made to him by God.

The Lord promised Abraham the land of Canaan and that from him should come a great nation that would be blessed and that Abraham should become a great man. To get this land, he must leave his father's home, his country, and his kindred. So Abraham departed as he was told, taking with him his wife Sarah and his brother's son Lot. Abraham was then seventy-five years old.

When the three arrived in Canaan the Lord said, "Look to the north, south, east, and west; for all the land which thou seest I give to thee and thy seed." The Lord promised Abraham a son, and at the age of 100 Sarah gave to him a son, Isaac.

When Isaac had grown up to a young man, God tempted Abraham and his faith, saying, "Take thine only son and go into the land of Moriah and offer him as a burnt offering upon a mountain."

So Abraham rose early the next morning and departed, taking with him two men, Isaac, and some wood for the fire. On the third day they arrived at the mountain. Abraham built an altar and Isaac said, "Father, here we have the altar; but where is the lamb to offer?" And Abraham said, "My son, God will provide for Himself a lamb."

Then he bound his son and laid him on the altar. Here he drew his knife to slay his son. Then an angel came, saying, "Abraham, Abraham, lay not thine hand upon him, for thou fearest God and hast not withheld thy son."

Then, seeing a ram caught in the bushes by his horns, he offered him instead of his son. And the Lord said, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed because thou hast obeyed My voice."

Just after this incident Sarah died at the age of 127. Abraham mourned greatly over her death.

He was getting old and stricken in age, but he had been blessed in all things by God. So Abraham thought, then said to the head servant, "Go from the land of Canaan into my country to my kindred and bring a wife for my son Isaac. If the girl will not follow you, then you are free from my oath to do as you please."

So the servant departed, taking some men and ten camels. When he came to the city he made the camels kneel by a well of water. For at this time of the evening the young girls came to draw water. And, behold, Rebecca came to the well. She was very pretty. The servant asked of her a drink of water. She gladly gave it to him. When he had finished drinking, she said, "I will draw water for thy camels until they are filled."

When they had finished the servant gave her jewels and asked, "Whose daughter art thou? And is there room in thy house for me and mine to lodge?"

She answered, "I am the daughter of Bethuel. We have both food and lodging for you and yours."

So they entered the house. When food was set before him, he said, "I cannot eat until I have told my errand." He began, "I am Abraham's servant. I was sent to bring to him a wife for his only son, Isaac. I now ask for thy daughter Rebecca."

The father spoke and said, "Behold, Rebecca is before thee; take her."

So the servant brought forth jewels of silver and gold and pretties for Rebecca and precious things for her mother and brothers. The next morning the mother asked to let Rebecca stay at home for about ten days more before she departed. After this time they departed.

When they came to the land where Abraham dwelt Rebecca saw a man coming to meet them. She asked of the servant who he was. The servant said, "It is Isaac, the master's son." At this Rebecca veiled her face and alighted from her camel. And the servant told Isaac all he had done. So Isaac took Rebecca to his mother's tent. She became his wife. He loved her, so they lived happily.

Abraham died at the age of 175.—Millicent Perle, Long Beach, California.

REFLECTING THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

EVERY one of you, I presume, has at one time or another taken a mirror and reflected the light of the sun on some person or object. If you reflect the light into another's eyes, that person is dazzled by it, and it's rather an impolite thing to do. However, all of it is more or less harmless mischief.

Today I am thinking of another light—the greatest light that ever shone on earth—Jesus. And another mirror—a mirror that shows not only what is to be seen on the surface, but what is hidden—the Bible.

If you will take Jesus for your light and the Bible for your mirror, you will learn some things that will surprise you very much. For, by shining the light of Jesus' perfect life into the Bible, you will see just exactly what sort of person He wants you to be. And the light of Jesus' life does almost dazzle you by its purity, its loveliness, its perfection.

You know, it would be merely a beautiful story if God intended us only to read about His Son and the life He lived among the fishermen of Galilee and the herdsmen of Judæa. But the best part of that life is that, if we will try to pattern ours after it, we, too, shall receive immortal life, as God's obedient Son did at His resurrection.

And so the things we are learning each week about God and about our Savior, we must try to put into practice every day. In this way we will be reflecting some of that marvelous light shining from Jesus' life into the lives of those around us, as well as our own. And gradually everything will be changed.

If you have been living on Sulky Street, you will move to Sunny Street. Those who used to live on Grumble Road will be found now in Pleasant Place. Coward Court will be deserted, and Hero Highway filled. The naughty boys and girls who lived on Cruel Street will hurry over to Kindness Avenue. Greedy Glen will not look like such a good place to live in as Generous Boulevard, nor Lying Lane as Truth Thoroughfare.

And all of this will happen if you take that mirror we spoke of and look into it to see what sort of life Jesus lived and what sort of life He wants you to live.

Some of us don't realize that we are grumbling most of the time. We complain because we haven't the finest football in school, or the best dress, or the nicest shoes. Do you know, Jesus, the only Son of the owner of everything, had not even a home He could call His own? And yet He never grumbled; we know that,

Some one does something mean to us, and we just wait for a good chance to pay it back good and plenty. Jesus said, "Father, forgive them," about the ones who nailed Him to the cross and left Him to die!

Just see how the light of Jesus' life, if we shine it upon our own, puts ours to shame. We could take everything He did and we'd find it just as true and pure and kind.

In this letter Paul wrote to his church at Ephesus, part of which is our lesson for today, he had been telling them that they ought to compare their lives with Christ's. Verse 20 says, "Ye have not so learned Christ."

Verses 31 and 32 are not in your quarterly, but they sum up the whole lesson so nicely. Open your Bibles to the right place and find them. Aren't they easy to understand?

We have all been guilty, I think, of those things named in verse 31. There are six bad traits listed. Let's each one of us make up our minds we won't show any of them from this minute on. My, how much happier we'll all be, as well as everyone about us, if we only stick to it.

Verse 32 will be easy, after we have mastered the one before it. We just can't help being kind and forgiving and tender-hearted, if we make up our minds not to quarrel, not to be jealous, not to speak evil of others.

How do we do all this? Simply by our own will power? No, indeed, it's just impossible with the best of us to do that.

But, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," said Paul, and so can you, and so can I, and so can all of us.

"Jesus is our Pattern; let us strive each day
To be like Him, sinless, and His will obey;
Loving, gentle, kindly, helping where we might,
Let us be like Jesus, always doing right.

"Jesus is our Pattern; tempted though we be, He will help us daily gain the victory; He like us was tempted, yet did never sin; Through His matchless power we may also win."

E is the next letter in your poster, and there is a good verse in Proverbs 20:11.

The Sunday School Lesson From Truth Seekers' Quarterly

LESSON 4.—October 28, 1934

THE CHRISTIAN STANDARD OF LIFE

Ephesians 4:17 to 5:21

Devotional Reading: Colossians 3:12-17

GOLDEN TEXT

And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit.—Ephesians 5:18.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian's Standard of Life. Aim: The Christian should avoid the very appearance of evil.

appearance or evil.

Basic Truth: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Rom. 12:21.

I. The Old Man of Sin. (Eph. 4:17:22.) Paul in this lesson compares the sinner before his conversion to an "old man" whose entire life has been so given over to wickedness that his conscience has become hardened and he no longer feels any inclination to do better. He suggests that men in that condition have reached a state in which they love the vile and immoral practices in which they engage so much that they seek for these things "with greediness." Surely in such a condition as this they are helpless and hopeless so far as recovery from it is concerned! They no longer want to change their lives; they love the evil and hate the good. It is evident, then, that they are "without strength" (Rom. 5:6) to help themselves, and only God's grace, extended to them through the gospel, can reach and rescue them (Rom. 5:8).

II. The New Man of Righteousness. (Vv. 23-27.) Righteousness and unrighteonsness have their origin in a state of mind. A deed is made righteous or unrighteous by the thought or motive that prompted it. So Paul commands us that we should "be renewed in the spirit of (our) mind, putting on the new man," and turn away from our former thoughts and works of iniquity. He goes into detail. We must no longer lie, be controlled by anger, or become drunken. All these things mark the "old man" of sin, while truth, forgiveness, and sobriety are the qualities shown by the "new man" in Christ Jesus.

III. Source of the Christian's Joy. (Eph. 5:15-21.) Having no knowledge of the spiritual sources of joy to be found in rightcousness in Christ, the worldly man seeks for relief from the tedium of life by indulging in intoxicants which deaden his sensibilities to the hopeless condition around him. He knows such relief is but temporary and that it leads to but greater distress when its effect wears off. On the other hand, the Christian finds lasting joy in fellowship with Christ and His people, and his heart overflows in constant hymns of praise and thanksgiving unto God for the many blessings he receives.

GOLDEN TEXT

"And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit."-Eph.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."—Prov. 20:1. Quite a contrast between being drunk on anything and being filled with the Spirit of God. As far from one is the other as the east is from the west. One is godly, the other sinful. Do not be deceived by strong drink; "God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7).

Be wise. Do not sow to the flesh and reap corruption; but learn of God and live for Him. Sow to the Spirit, that is, live near the Father, accept His Son as your Savior; then live as He would have you do, which is sowing to the Spirit; then reap life everlasting as promised in Galatians 6:8,--L, A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

 is darkened when alienated from God; -devoted to greediness and uncleanness is usually past feeling; of happiness is the way of peace and neighborliness.

-of the new man gives no quarters to the devil:

Christians Different. Christians must be and are different from people of the world in their habits and conduct in life. Their standards are on a higher and nobler plane of life. The first verse of our lesson enjoins us not to walk as "other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind"; on the contrary, we must "walk circumspectly," redeeming the time. The lusts of the flesh which are corrupt and deceitful and which belong to the "old man" must be put off if we are to put on the new man which is created in righteousness and true holiness. Such not only means temperance but in many instances demands absolute abstinence. "Abstain from all appearance of evil" is no idle saying. It is the Christian way, and unless we are willing to walk this way we have no right to the name and title "Christian." Exemplary Life. The Christian's life is an exemplary life. Writing to the Thessalonians Paul said: "Ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia."-1 Thess. 1:7. Is it possible for Christians to be examples of "purity" and still be slaves to certain filthy habits as are worldly people (1 Tim. 4:12)? Do you believe it is possible for Christians to be examples in conversation and use corrupt and filthy communications as do worldly people (Col. 3:8; Eph. 4:29)? The lives of the majority of professing Christians are so much like these of the world that there is very little exemplary about them .-- C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Evils to Be Overcome

The teaching of Christ and the apostles is specific. Their language is plain so that all can understand its meaning. They "call a spade, a spade," as the old saying has it. So in this lesson the Apostle does not simply reprove sin in the abstract, but he goes into detail, pointing out certain evil actions which the Christian must put behind him if he would be a true follower of his Master.

Among other things he speaks of those whose minds are filled with vile thoughts to such an extent that their hearts are hardened against that which is good. He suggests in another place that they are "despisers of those that are good" (2 Tim. 3:3), and warns the disciples not to fall into their ungodly ways. Thought is the basis of action. If we permit unclean thoughts to hold lodgment in our minds they may lead to equally sinful practices in time. Not only that, but they will kill out whatever desire we have for purity and truth.

Put away lying and speak the truth, says the Apostle, "for we are members one of an-other." That is, Christians are united in the body of Christ; each is a part of the other; so one part should not lie to another part of the body of the Lord!

The Christian should, and may, find his greatest joy in the fellowship of the church. The hope of its members is one hope; the faith of the entire body is a unit faith; all are looking, praying, to the same end, that they may together obtain an eternal inheritance in the kingdom of God. Therefore, let us lift our voices in unison, thanking God for these blessings we hold in common one with another .- G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Some Rules of Living.

How many brought their pictures of little boys and girls that I asked for last Sunday? If all do not have pictures I have several here. We will each cut out a picture and paste it on a sheet of paper. A boy will paste a picture of a little boy; and a girl, a picture of a little girl. Paste it on one side of paper.

Here in front of you, I hold this book, the Bible. In it you can find some things that will make us better girls and boys. We will call them "Rules of Living." We'll copy that at the top of the pages upon which we pasted our pictures.

As I read these verses I wish each of you will write in a few words what you get from the verse that tells us what we should do.

(Teacher reads: Eph. 4:32; 2 Tim. 2:15; Col. 3:20; 4:2; Eph. 6:2; 5:9, 10; any others that teacher may select. It would be well to let children suggest or try to find others to write at the side of the picture.)

Now we have our rules of living taken from the Bible. Let's each one see how many of the rules we can keep this week. Next Sunday we will take time to talk about them and how each one carried out his rules.

Any one of these verses may be learned as a memory verse. Perhaps each child would prefer to select his favorite one .-- V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

PLANS FOR NORTHWESTERN IOWA

The next Sunday school and church service in northwestern Iowa will be held at the Carl Bjurklund home near Webb on October 21. On November 4, similar services will be held at the Sam Titus residence near Varina. And on November 18, a meeting will convene at the Frank Garton home near Marathon. Speakers for the three occasions are not yet determined. Mrs. Anna Boyanovsky.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE EXTENDED BY REQUEST

The meeting started Tuesday evening, Sept. 25, at the Blanchard church, Bro. C. A. Smead, the local pastor, preached the first three nights due to the unavoidable absence of Bro. S. E. Magaw. Bro. Magaw arrived Friday afternoon accompanied by Bros. Harry Kipp, and Earl, Clyde, and Howard Pearson, a male quartet from his church in Brush Creek, Ohio, who furnished special music.

Sunday was a big day with Sunday school, followed by a sermon by Bro. Smead. At 2:00 p. m., Pres. William Hanson called a short business meeting which was followed by a wonderful sermon on "Remove Not the Aucient Laudmarks Which Your Pathers Have Set " by Bro, Magaw. The young people derived especial benefit from his evening sermon, "When the Golden Bowl Is Broken."

The church was decorated with about twenty baskets of beautiful flowers and Bro. Magaw's chart of the ages, which was very interesting. Dinner and supper were served in true Blanchard style by the Ladies' Aid. Members and friends were in attendance from Dayton, Ohio; Wyman, Sylvester, Grand Rapids, Dutton, and St. Louis, Mich.

The interest and attendance were good and the meeting was continued by request until Wednesday evening, Oct. 3. The good may be attributed in part to the work of Bro. Smead in the past year.

We all enjoyed Bro. Magaw and hope it may be our privilege to have him with us Bee Slocum, Secretary. again.

BAPTISM AT BLANCHARD

The Church of God here considers itself highly honored in having such a splendid representation at the State Fall Conference just closed here. It has been greatly blessed by the meetings. The church was filled to capacity several times, much interest was aroused, and we will be looking forward to more baptisms in the future to grow out of these meetings. We want to express our appreciation to all who helped to make this meeting a success, and to the many who are so interested in the work here. Especially do we appreciate Bro. Magaw and his helpful and able way of presenting the gospel.

On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 7, it was our distinct pleasure to baptize Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, Blanchard, into the name of Christ. This entire family is now one in Christ Jesus. May the Lord give her and her family a rich spiritual blessing until He comes.

C. A. Smead, Pastor.

CHANGE IN SERVICES AT RIPLEY

The church work here is progressing nicely. We have preaching services every Sunday now. Bro. C. E. Lapp preaches the second, third. and fourth Sundays and Bro. Gerald L. Cooper the first and third Sundays of each month. Prayer meeting is held each Wednesday evening.

Mary Jo Anne came to make her home with Bro. and Sr. Alfred Hetrick, October 9. This is their second daughter, Sr. Emma Paisley, who has been in the hospital, was able to return home Tuesday. She is somewhat improved.

Sr. Helen Lewis has been ill for six weeks. Sr. Myrtle Cooper remains about the same. She is able to be up a small share of the time. We pray that these may soon be back among us and that God's blessing may rest upon

The orchestra, composed of some of the young men of our Sunday school, will make their first public appearance some time in the near future.

We are planning a Rally Day program to be given during the month of October.

Sr. Lapp has been in Ohio at the bedside of her mother for some time. We are trusting that she may soon return to us.

May the Father continue to bless us in His Ednah Cooper, Secretary.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

Margaret J. Donaly ($6); Jessic M. B. Kauffman; Mary Calkins; Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Railsback; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Miller ($3); Eva L. Page.

GRAND RAPIDS RALLY

The Tuesday night devotional meetings have been very successfully held at the various homes the past six months, and it has been decided to continue this program this winter. Next week we plan to drive out to Marne and hold the service with our beloved Sr. Craig.

Sr. Schooley, who has been in poor health the past several months, is still far from well; and Bro. Clyde Thomas, our genial and efficient head deacon, is suffering from an attack which we fear to be appendicitis.

A young people's class in Berean had twenty-one members present on its opening night, Oct. 4. This is a mixed class of high school age, taught by Sr. Siple.

October 7 was Rally Day at our church, and a very inspiring day it was. Beautiful fall weather prevailed, and the Sunday school classes registered 285. Immediately following Sunday school was a combined service, and there was hardly standing room enough for the people present. Various classes and members of the Sunday school contributed toward the program with songs, recitations, and other features, and the paster gave a short review of the lessons of the last quarter. Bro. Stevens, our Sunday school Superintendent, has a right to feel thankful to God for the success of the day.

We are now working out plans for Anniversary Sunday, Oct. 28. A basket dinner will be enjoyed at the church with afternoon service following. Friends from a distance are cordially invited to worship with us on that occasion.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

DIXON, ILLINOIS

Sunday, Oct. 7, 1934, being the eighth anniversary of the dedication of the Dixon church, the morning services were devoted to a program fitting to the occasion. The history of the beginning of the church was given, commencing with the year 1860, when John Becker and family, who were believers of the faith as taught by the Word of God, moved to Dixon from Chicago. Later they sent for H. V. Reed, then a young minister of the same faith, to come to Dixon and hold a series of meetings.

From this meeting, and several others held at different times by Mr. Reed, a small group of believers were assembled, and through the years that have followed, this little body of faithful ones continued to meet in worship in lodge halls and also in private homes.

In 1926 the members felt a desire for a place of their own in which to worship, and through the efforts and sacrifice of all, a little church building was erected and dedicated in October, 1926.

Following the reading of the church history. music was enjoyed, and then followed a report of the Sunday school and its activities during the last eight years, a very encouraging report to all, as it has shown a steady, healthy growth, and is at present a live, active body of members, also a source of inspiration and courage to those who have so earnestly striven for its success.

Next followed a report of the Bereans, said members meeting every Wednesday evening, and composed of all ages; the study of Bible truths are taken up, and prove of much bencfit to all attending these services.

Last, but not least, came the report of the Ladies' Aid or Sewing Circle, as it is sometimes called. This report was of much interest to all and brought out clearly the work the Aid is doing all the time in various ways to help in the cause of the needy and also that of our dear Lord and Master, who lived the example for us to follow, "Do good unto others."

Following the reading of this report, music was enjoyed and then Communion services were conducted.

Bro. Conner announced that Sunday, 1, was set apart for Golden Rule Home Day, and was being observed by all churches of our faith, and the evening services would be devoted to this part of the day's program.

A picnic dinner was held at noon in the church basement which everyone enjoyed, with many good things to eat.

At services in the evening, in observance of Golden Rule Home Day, Bro. Conner gave a very good talk on homes, and what was required to make them the dearest place on earth to all. He also gave a very good explanation of what the Golden Rule Home at Oregon was for, and told of its many advantages and the comfort and blessing it is to those desiring a home of peace and comfort in their declining years.

Sunday was a beautiful day, and the attendance very good. Some of the ladies, with autumn leaves and flowers, had transformed the front of the church into a very bower of beauty which was very much admired and enjoyed by all. So with the interesting reports, music, and the lovely flowers and delicious dinner, everyone felt that the day had been one of enjoyment and inspiration.

Mrs. Edith Miller.

GOD'S TWO GREAT WITNESSES

One of the most interesting tracts that has reached us in many months has just come from the press under the title, "God's Two Great Witnesses, or, The Bible and Nature in Harmony." It is the work of J. H. Anderson, who presents conclusive evidence based on the universal testimony of the Bible and nature of the truth of God's Word.

"To understand the testimony of nature," the author declares, "one must find the key furnished by the Bible that will give the meaning of nature's voice." He then draws a striking analogy from nature of the harmony and beauty of the purposes of God in redemption as they are revealed in the Bible.

The covenants, the nature and destiny of man, and the coming of the Lord as taught in the Scriptures are taken up in sequence and discussed in an able and convincing manner. Do not fail to send to the author for a supply of these tracts to give to high school and college students. The price is ten cents each. Address all orders to J. II. Anderson, Michigantown, Ind.

CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

The first Quarterly Conference of the year met at the Los Angeles church Sunday, the 7th of October, with a capacity attendance, filling the little church, some coming from Fresno, Visalia, Hanford, Ventura, Riverside, Pasadena, Norco, Long Beach, Santa Ana and other places. It seemed good to see so many from far and near gathering themselves in God's house to worship and praise His most holy name.

The Sunday school, though small, gave a spleudid program of appropriate recitations and songs, directed by Sr. Leta MacLeod. The worship hour followed with Sr. Emma Railsback giving one of her good instructive talks, this time a most interesting subject, "Feast of the First Fruits," and she made it so plain one lougs for that great day when all shall assemble together for the feast of the tabernacle. A special solo, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," was beautifully sung by a young man whose name I did not know. Bro. Norman MacLeod followed with his sermon, "Some Historical Interpretations," which was very inspiring; so many of his sermons make us want to read our newspapers and magazines along with the Word of God, as he always blends in history with God's plan. The Communion gives us the spiritual food we all so much need to help give us strength through these days of so much uncertainty, and yet to us of the household, days of encouragement. A picule dinner in South Park was another feast of good things,

We all assembled at 2:00 for a business meeting, the election of officers and Board for Bro. J. E. Adamson, Vice President; Bro. J. E. Adamson, Vice President; Sr. Jessie M. B. Kauffman, Secretary; and Bro. J. E. Hammond, Treasurer. Bros. S. G. Elton and W. A. Reid were reelected for another year and Bros. Wilson Calkins and John Saylor for two years. The body voted to have the next conference the second Sunday in January, the place to be decided by the Executive Board. After the business meeting, Bro. Hammond with the aid of his chart gave as his lesson, "Spiritual Value of Revelation." Bro. Hammond is a sincere student of the Bible and his enthusiasm in delivering his sermons helps us to feel proud of the knowledge we have of God's Word and plan. Meeting was closed singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Jessie M. B. Kauffman, Secretary, California State Conference.

PLUM RIVER CHURCH REPAIRED

Rally Day was observed in our church on Sunday, Oct. 7, with a few special musical numbers. We had an attendance of 22 in the morning and 16 in the evening. We hope to liave regular Sunday evening services from now on, as the meetings have been somewhat irregular for some time, but interest is picking up again.

Things are fairly booming here in the way of improving the church building. A new chimney, which was much needed, is being built and we lack only a small amount of having it paid for.

The building needs paint very badly, in fact there isn't much left on it any more. Some one must have gotten the Christmas spirit early and played Santa Claus, for on Sunday, Sept. 30, two large cans of paint and a can of oil were found in the church. So now we all have to get the old paint brushes around and with a little muscular energy we'll have a better looking church.

We are very thankful for all these blessings. Greetings to all the brethren, and may they all find peace and joy and happiness in working in the Master's vineyard till He comes Mildred L. Crofton, Secretary.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

David Horton Murphy is his name, and he arrived September 21, 1934, at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Zenas Murphy in Kansas, Ill., and when he has gotten his bearing a little he will probably refer to them as "Father and Mother." We congratulate the young gentleman, for we know he has become a member of a real Christian home and no one could have a finer start in life than that,

One of the strongest and most interesting articles that has reached us on the value of types and shadows will appear in an early issue from the pen of Sr. Emma C. Railsback, entitled, "Israel's Feasts in Type and Anti-This is an article worthy of the attentype." tion of the deepest students of the Word. Watch for it.

Last Sunday the paster of the Oregon, Ill., church gave the second of a series of Sunday evening studies on "The Bible and the Modern World," his theme being, "The Bible and the End of the World." In connection with his sermon he discussed the possible prophetical significance of the assassination of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia. Next Sunday evening he will speak on "The Bible and the Social Gospel."

After a very busy "vacation" spent at various conferences and Bible schools in the Central West, Bro. S. J. Lindsay is again at home at 502 Ash Ave., Tempe, Ariz. During the summer he visited ten places, gave seventy sermons or Bible lessons, and five were baptized as a result of the work performed.

IN MEMORY OF WILLIAM BYRAM HARROLD

The recent death of Bro. William Byram Harrold at Blythedale, Mo., takes from the ranks of the faithful another defender of the truth.

Not long will be his sleep, for very soon our Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first.

Bro, "Billy" (as he was known by all) and I were young people together in the home town of Blythedale and I know that he possessed the traits of a true Christian. He was baptized about ten years ago by Bro. J. C. Wilson while the latter was holding services in Missouri.

His father, Bro. Jesse Harrold, is still a faithful contender for the truth and a constant reader of The Restitution Herald, although over eighty years of age.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to Bro. "Billy's" family and assure them that the time will not be long until our blessed Lord and Savior will return to claim His own. May we who mourn for him live worthy lives that we may meet him in that glad day.

"God pities His children, He cares for His own, With love true and tender no mortal hath known.

Where'er you may wander, whate'er you may do,

O dear one, remember He careth for you.

"Do trials oppress you too great to be borne? O think of the Suf'rer encircled with thorn. Do loved ones you cherish lie hidden from view?

One friend yet remaineth who careth for you.

"God sees all your sorrow, He hears when you pray; By tears are you blinded? He'll point out the way.

Perplexed, do you wonder what course to pursue?

There's One who can guide you, He careth for you."

From one who admired Bro. "Billy's" fine, clean character.

Edith Wilson Barber.

ARE WE READY FOR THE AGE TO COME?

By Mary A. Woodward

H OW beautifully Paul brings the thought of the "ages to come" into this second chapter of Ephesians. As I read the chapter down to the tenth verse, my whole being was thrilled with his words. I quickly asked myself, Am I ready to be admitted into these blessed ages?

Just open your Bibles and read carefully from Ephesians 2:1 to 10. "For we are his workmanship," or inheritance. Think what this would mean to each of us. The Apostle is speaking of the ages to come. If we are a part of His (Christ's) workmanship, we must belong to the promised inheritance. Then how ought we to use the time given us?

I presume the answer would be, Use it as we honestly believe Christ desires His workers to do. Living with Christ, as one expresses it, is a beautiful adventure; and he adds, "It does not take much of a man to be a true Christian, but it takes all there is of him." And O how much that means. To live the true life our profession requires us to live takes all there is of us. It asks us to flee from what we are to what we really wish to be.

A Hindu searching for truth said to one who had realized the joy of believing God, "You have found God," and he added, "By your energy and joyful happiness you show it."

How true that we often show the joy of our lives in our faces. How many of us are showing Christ in our conversation and true Christian life? Do we stop to ask ourselves, Am I truly living the life God wants me to; am I a vertical Christian? For there is a difference between a horizontal Christian and a vertical Christian: one is looking straight ahead; and we should do that, but not always—we must look up often, be vertical Christians, for there is no such thing as being converted without its bringing us nearer to God, and the nearer we can get to that divine power the more truly are we converted.

Luther said a man is never a Christian, he is only becoming one. In other words, to be Christians means to be new creatures in Christ Jesus. How much that means, for we are never Christians truly unless we have become new creatures in Him. Then we may become fitly framed together and grow into a holy temple in the Lord, for conversion is growth, conversion is a creative power, that power to create in another that solid happiness in which human life is transformed. As we look up, we seem to look into the face of our Helper, for by this we find sin, worry, and defeat dropping from our lives and we feel the birth of a new dominant affection, by which we know that God is to us all in all, even as Mary and Martha felt when through Christ's words the God-power was felt as those magnificent words rang out, "Lazarus, come forth." See those two sisters hurry to the brother, loosing the grave-clothes as Jesus gave the command, "Loose him, and let him go." See the dear Christ take his hands and lead him to his home.

O glorious Christ, Thou hast shown Thy matchless love while here working out the destinies of men. What will it be when in the ages to come God will show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Jesus Christ? He is taking and has taken great pains to show us the way of life more perfectly, and how are we showing our love or gratitude for it all? If in true service to Him, how He rejoices! If not, what bitterness of soul He must have. O friends of Jesus, come to the front, and be seen and heard for His sacred cause. Be ready for the ages to come.

PRAYER AS FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD

By Harry A. Sheets

PRAYER, as it is too often practiced, reminds us of Joseph's coat. To the hypocrite it is a cloak. To the self-righteous it is a means of advertising. To the selfish it is an approach to a divine Santa Claus. To some it is a formality; and to others it is an obligation. To the consecrated it is a privilege, a fellowship, a communion, with a loving Father.

Prayer rightly practiced is evidence of consecration, a measure of one's devotion. It is doubtful if one ever prayed more than Jesus; yet it would seem that He needed it the least. To Him prayer was rest and food. He told His disciples that He had meat that they knew not of. Prayer preceded His temptation in the wilderness as Gethsemane preceded Calvary. The first Adam did not pray before his temptation, and his strength was insufficient.

Prayer reveals nothing to God. He knows the thought of our heart and the extent of our needs even before we pray. Prayer, then, is for the sole pleasure and benefit of the child of God. It is a drawing near to God. It "tunes in" our life with His. It makes resonance between Him and us and permits the flow of His Spirit energy to us, bringing its load of comfort, strength, and blessing so necessary to our spiritual development and guidance.

Prayer should always be to God. Christ never requested that prayer be made to Him, but He did say: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son."—John 14:13. The fallacy of praying to Mary, Peter, or Paul is apparent from the words of David. "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God."—Psalm 146:3-5.

ISRAEL'S FEASTS

IN TYPE AND ANTITYPE

By Emma C. Railsback

"THREE times in a year shall all thy males appear before the Lord thy God . . . : in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and they shall not appear before the Lord empty."—Deut. 16:16. "Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year."—Ex. 23:14. "Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord God."—Ex. 23:17. "Thrice in the year shall all your men children appear before the Lord God, the God of Israel."—Ex. 34:23.

As can readily be seen, this obligatory assembling of all the males of Israel three times in the year would leave their lands and homes in a defenseless condition before their idolatrous and greedy neighbors and enemies, on all sides, ready to oppress them, but God gave them a promise of special protection during these feasts, saying, "Neither shall any man desire thy land when thou shalt go up to appear before the Lord thy God thrice in the year."

Many reasons are given by commentators for the purpose of this oft-repeated commandment of God unto Israel. One is that it would be essential to the promotion of uniformity of worship; another, the prevention of idolatry; another, the promotion of commerce among the twelve tribes; etc. But to those who understand the Apostle's statement that these things happened unto them for ensamples or types, and were written for our admonition on whom the ends of the age are come (1 Cor. 10:11) a much more important purpose comes to view, that of foreshadowing and emphasizing great fundamental doctrinal truths.

The first of these feasts, the Passover, called also the feast of unleavened bread, was instituted just before Israel left Egypt. The death penalty had been pronounced upon all the first-born of both man and beast in all the land. God made special provision for the salvation of the first-born of Israel. The lamb slain in that feast pointed to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, and we read in 1 Corinthians 5:7 that Christ our Passover was sacrificed for us. Israel was specifically instructed that this feast was to be eaten with unleavened bread, and after they had reached Sinai another feature was added or given to be observed after they had reached the Promised Land (Lev. 23:10). "When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof. then ye shall bring a sheaf of the firstfruits of your harvest unto the priest; and he shall wave the sheaf before the Lord, to be accepted for you: on the morrow after the sabbath the priest shall wave it." Notice that this sheaf of the first fruits was waved on the morrow after the offering of the Passover lamb, foreshadowing the resurrection of Christ, the first of the first fruits. Exodus 23:19: "The first of the firstfruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the Lord thy God." Also, in Exodus 34:26 this same commandment is repeated. The paschal lamb, then, typified the crucifixion of Christ; the unleavened bread, His sinless character; and the wave sheaf, the first of the first fruits, His resurrection.

The second, or Pentecostal, feast was observed fifty days after the Passover festival. It is also called the feast of weeks, the feast of harvest, and the feast of first fruits. As recorded in Leviticus 23:17, they were to bring out of their habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals: "they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baken with leaven; they are the firstfruits unto the Lord." This feast typified the church. It was the only feast given to Israel to be observed with leaven. Leaven, being a type of sin, fore-shadowed the sin in the church. The descent of the Holy Spirit and the establishment of the first Christian church took place on the first Pentecost after the ascension of the Savior.

Perhaps the two mammoth loaves of this feast typify not only the church established at that time, this side of Calvary, but the "church in the wilderness" referred to by the martyr Stephen (Acts 7:38), those who saw Christ in type and accepted of His atoning grace, looking forward to the promise of being perfected when He comes in power and great glory. Any student of the Scriptures and of nature can readily see that there is bound to be

German Church Divided

"Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men."—Acts 5:29.

Berlin, Germany, Oct. 21.—In the profound silence maintained by their congregations Protestant pastors read from the pulpits today the "Declaration of Independence" which was signed Saturday by many ministers who have been protesting the absorption of the church by the Government. In their sermons the pastors who are seceding from the church ruled by appointees of the Hitler regime stressed that Reichsbishop Mueller and his aids have placed themselves outside Christendom by using force, violence, and lies in an effort to satisfy personal ambition.

Rescued From Hell?

"Like sheep they are laid in the grave (sheel); death shall feed on them."—Psalm 19:11.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 18.—Ministers of this city were somewhat stirred by a question that has been raised among them as a result of the request of Dr. Robert E. Cornish of Berkeley, Cal., that the Governor grant him the privilege of attempting to revive convicts executed by lethal gas.

Dr. Cornish, it will be remembered, is the scientist who has been more or less successful in his attempts to restore dogs to life which had been killed by gas, and he has applied to the governors of several states where the same method is used for the execution of criminals for permission to try the experiment on men.

The question that has so aroused the interest of the clergymen is this: Should Dr. Cornish succeed in such an experiment, would the men who are restored to life possess a soul?

Rev. Thomas Murry, Presbyterian minister, cited the resurrection of Lazarus and of others at the hands of Christ as proof that a person brought back to life would have a soul. Rev. Robert Meyer, Lutheran pastor, said these instances should be expected, as they were miracles performed by divine power, and that no ordinary mortal would be able to bring back the soul. "The soul leaves the body at the moment of death, not to be readmitted until the judgment day," he said. "It would be a sin and interference with divine law" to attempt to recall it.

Msgr. William F. O'Ryan, Roman Catholic, said: "The soul is the source of life. It would be impossible to bring back even mechanical life if one really were dead. But if one were medically dead, it would be right to revive him. The Catholic Church teaches that the soul may remain in the body three hours after apparent death."

Rabbi W. S. Friedman of the Jewish Temple Emanuel agreed with Mr. O'Ryan that what seems death may be but suspended animation, and that only such could be revived.

The Jews since they were carried away into Persian captivity have adopted the pagan doctrine of the immortality of the soul, which their leading rabbis confess they did not formerly hold, and now teach that the soul remains close to the body for four days after death takes place.

The most scriptural of all the answers given was that of Rev. Harold Scott of the University church, who said that it is impossible to separate body and soul, and resurrection if possible would be of benefit.

Let us suppose that such an experiment is successfully performed with a criminal who died unrepentant, would such an act deliver his soul from the fires of the traditionary hell and provide him with a second opportunity to seek divine favor? Or would it circumvent God's plans for his eternal punishment?

How much simpler is God's definition of "soul," that it is the man himself, who in death ceases to live, to think, to suffer, or to enjoy, but who, by a resurrection from the dead, may be fully restored to the possession of all of his faculties.

Disciples of Christ Plan New Body

"Earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."—Jude 3.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 17.—A division of major importance is seen on the horizon of the Disciples of Christ, who are now holding their International Convention in this city. To quote a newspaper correspondent on the subject: "Another Protestant denomination probably will be added to the list of more than two hundred by the time the convention closes."

Among the causes that may lead to division is the tendency to emphasize what is called the "social gospel" which has to do with moral, political, and social reforms, rather than the former doctrinal teaching of the church. "Christ never gave prominence to social or political programs," declared Dr. Thomas K. Smith of Columbus, Ind., the leader of the opposition and probable head of the proposed new body.

So Shall They Ever Blaze

By Arlen Marsh

TT IS an empty top that men have built upon a mighty leaning tower of language. It is a top purporting to be filled with promises of Utopias to come, of grandeur yet to be attained through mortal efforts. It is a top as vacuous as the incalculable reaches of the space which separates the planets from the stars.

Men's premises are faulty, and so are their conclusions. Not one thing within the world cannot be disproved by the use of the theories and philosophies to which logicians cling. Matter can neither be created nor destroyed. What, then, becomes of copper bars when dropped into hydrochloric acid? No man can tell. God is a transient figment of the imagination. What, then, is the causal force behind the universe and the infinitely greater cosmos of which this universe is the minutest part? No man can tell that, either-if the premise mentioned be considered true,

Men have erected upon their weakling thoughts a brilliant galaxy of theories. They have considered God dispassionately and as dispassionately have abolished Him. In His stead, has grown the top to all their thinking. In His stead, they have placed the cosmic rays, the impersonal Power, the gaseous nebulae, and other products of their own bemused considerations.

Like a magician drawing rabbits out of hats, humanity has drawn a great First Cause from nothing. Refusing to acknowledge the existence of a personal Deity whom they can neither see nor hear, the devotees of higher criticism, agnosticism, and Clarence Darrow have created in their own mentalities a powerful controlling agent for the universe which they dignify by calling Force.

It was the worthlessness of conclusions such as these that made King David cry ten centuries before the birth of Jesus Christ. "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." Yet, like all fools, these self-styled advocates of culture, intelligence, and cosmic understanding charge the remainder of the world with being idiots.

In the even change of seasons the atheist finds nothing but a convenient freak of nature. His mind, being unable to conceive of a God who is a person, conceives instead of a Force which is possessed of some indefinable capacity for performing the right acts at precisely the right moment in the functioning of the planets in their orbits.

From a standpoint of sheer reason, one idea is quite as happy as the other. Is not the Christian fully as justified in holding his God to be a person as the atheist in holding his to be a force? Neither can explain the origin of his own brand of deity; neither, still from the standpoint of sheer reason, can pick a flaw in the thinking of the other.

But reason of purest ray serene cannot be trusted. Debaters have been known to discuss the desirability of a > uniform marriage and divorce code for the states of the United States and, by applying different reasoning to the same facts, prove each side of the question with equal ease. The application of logic to known facts is generally misleading.

So it is with the presumed facts of the agnostic and the infidel. In a greater variety than dress designers ever shipped from Paris, the atheist clothes himself with theories to fit the latest invention, discovery, or hypothesis of some greater than he is. His mind necessarily is in a constant state of flux, and he can never say today what he will believe tomorrow. His special interpretation -Arrow-Head in The Chicago Tribune. of the genesis of the universe and everything within it may be under hot fire from his fellow seekers after wisdom who find his arguments as full of flaws as the ideas of Sinclair and his Socialists.

On the contrary, the true Christian is supported in his views of the controlling powers of the universe by the combined opinions of all other Christians. As to the problem of determining whereby the world originated he is not personally puzzled; he lays it calmly to the work of his God and considers that he has answered every question. The possibilities proposed by Millikan, Laplace, Einstein, and Darwin cannot cause his faith to waver; for he is troubled by no conflicting theories.

The Christian, furthermore, is not harried by the perennial perplexity of the atheist. His facts are fixed; the atheist's are not. What today is an accepted truth of false science is tomorrow an outworn credo, to which none but the untutored cling. These variations in scientific doc-

Still shines the sun, though shorter be his hour. Still glow the stars with revelation bright, While man alone scans from his skeptic tower Some darkly haunting specter of the night.

World Without God

"A World Without God" might well be the title given to the picture painted in the Scriptures of that brief period of awful horror that awaits the great mass of humanity just over the threshold of tomorrow! Paul speaks of the entire era preceding the sacrifice of Christ as a time in which the Gentiles

This is the first of two articles which the Editor has prepared in which he points out the menace which Communism presents to our religious, social, and political institutions, to which will be added intimations based on the Scriptures concerning the probable further development of Bolshevism and its final overthrow at the coming of Christ.

were "without God in the world" (Ephesians 2:12).

A world without God is, as the Apostle avers, a world without hope. And a world without hope is more dreadful to contemplate than the figments of a madman's dream! Yet with the passing of each succeeding year we are drawing nearer to the day when that nightmare of frightfulness will come upon the world in all of its indescribable horror.

A world without hope—a world without conscience—a world without religion—a world without love—a world without God. It is difficult for us to conceive of such a condition.

No life that has been touched by the vibrant hand of the Son of God can retain within itself the vital impulses it has received. The Spirit that shines within is a radiant spirit emitting a ceaseless flow of divine energy. These rays of power are universally diffused and their penetrating force is irresistible. The most vile of men in Christian lands, men who repudiate God and deny the truth of His Word, unconsciously to themselves, but nevertheless unmistakably, are being constantly blessed by the powerful influences radiating from Jesus Christ through His few faithful followers.

These men of the godless world cannot escape from the goodness of the Lord if they will. They are living in an atmosphere of divine love. When the wolf of want stalks through the land the Spirit of Christ is also abroad in the earth, and the charitable hand of Christian service is stretched out in sympathy and material gifts flow from its fingers, and the infidel, the scorner, and the doubter are comforted, fed, housed, and clothed as freely and as gladly as are the needy disciples of the Lord.

The men in the riotous Communist columns who bear the banners of scarlet emblazoned with blasphemous words of unbelief in God and our. Savior Jesus Christ are in many instances indebted to the followers of the Nazarene for the very clothes upon their backs and the food that keeps their families from starvation.

Such is the Spirit of the Lord as it is seen burning in the hearts of His disciples!

"While we were yet sinners," wrote the Apostle, "Christ died for us" (Rom. 5:8)!

Such has ever been the strange manner of the Son of God toward His enemies. We cannot comprehend it! The world cannot understand it! It is not human—it is divine!

It is difficult if not impossible, I repeat, for us to realize all that it would mean to live in a world without God! To take God out of the world and the influence of Christ out of the world — what direful results must inevitably follow!

Yet such is the avowed purpose of a rapidly increasing organization at the present time! This is no dream of the past nor vision of the distant future, but a menace that faces America and other Christian lands today, and which has already east its dread shadow over a large part of the earth.

Two thousand, six hundred years ago, Jehovah addressed a certain people concerning their future. "Thus saith the Lord God; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought."—Ezek. 38:10. Evil thoughts precede evil actions, and this prediction has to do with conditions which are to come to pass as the result of evil thinking in what was, when these words were spoken, the far distant future.

Now the people who were to think "an evil thought" have begun to fulfill the prediction, and the first result of their thinking is the effort they are putting forth to dethrone God in the hearts and lives of the Russian people.

Can we picture their success to the present moment? The teaching of fifty millions of children in Russia that there is no God, that there is no power higher than that of men; that Jesus Christ never actually lived, that He is but a myth, a character out of a discredited old folk tale; that all religion is composed of falsehood and deceit; that the Bible is an evil book; that there is nothing to hope for beyond this present life; that there is no sin save disloyalty to the Soviet regime; that "morality" means nothing and has no place or purpose in a modern socialistic State; that love is an indication of weakness; that home and family should be destroyed along with other pre-Communistic institutions; that the universe is the result of an accident of nature, that it has no purpose and is without intelligent control; that to pray is a crime and to have faith in God treason!

Such are some of the immediate consequences of evil thinking among the people who proudly call themselves "the Godless"!

Need I ask now why we should be interested in Russia, the country where this awful condition has arisen and from which are being sent forth a million grasping antichristian hands to draw into the recking net of atheism, hopelessness, and sin the boys and girls of America?

Paul's Final Days

By Lottie E. Young

THE fourth chapter of second Timothy records the last I known words of the Apostle Paul, written in the evening of his busy life. There are many different kinds of evenings. Some are calm, some stormy, some bright with the hope of a fine day on the morrow, others in which thunder and lightning prevail. So it is with the closing days of people, Paul's being of a stormy nature in spite of the peace he inwardly possessed. Let us picture this great man writing a farewell message to his dearly beloved disciple, Timothy. A greater miracle was never wrought than the change which transformed this one-time proud "Pharisee of the Pharisees" into the humble servant of the Lord Jesus Christ as we know him. After the strenuous life he had led for the Master one wishes he might have had a peaceful deathbed, surrounded by loving friends, but the words spoken by him years before by the Lord in a vision to Ananias-"1 will show him how many things he must suffer for my name's sake"-had to be literally fulfilled even to the manner of his death.

In Acts 20:21 this great Apostle to the Gentiles says, "But I hold not my life of any account as dear unto myself, so that I may accomplish my course, and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God"; and it was this devotion to the Great Example which clouded his last hours. In the first place he saw a great "falling away" of those who had professed faith in Jesus Christ, warning Timothy of the time when "itching ears" and "teachers after their own lusts" would be manifest, so that the question, "When the Son of man cometh, will he find faith on the earth?" would be answered in the negative.

When one thinks of all Paul endured, as shown in 2 Corinthians 11:23-27, during his missionary journeys to tell others of the Lord he was serving faithfully (and perhaps his greatest care was the daily anxiety he felt for the various churches he had founded), this knowledge of a falling away among some of his own converts must have been a sore trial and dark cloud to his peace of mind.

Then in 2 Timothy 4:10 and 14, another cloud is shown—the desertion of those who had been friends—"Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world," and "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil." Everyone knows how sad is the loss of the friendship of those on whom we have depended. Paul, in his Roman prison awaiting the tragic death which he knew would befall him, could say, "Only Luke is with me"; while on the occasion of his first trial before the bloodthirsty Emperor, Nero, he sadly said, "No one took my part, but all forsook me." So he was anxious to see his beloved "son" Timothy.

We all realize the comfort which is to be found in the presence of a friend in the time of trial, but this greatest of converts to Christianity stood alone in his last hours, even as his Master had done when those dearest to His heart forsook Him and fled.

I have stood in the Mamertine Prison in Rome, where it is said Paul was confined, and shivered in the heat of summer in the dark and damp old room where this Apostle to the Gentiles spent his last days. I can imagine how he longed for the "cloak I left at Troas" for needed warmth. Perhaps, though, for a man of Paul's scholarly attainments, he wished for his books, and especially the parchments from which he had suddenly and rudely been torn when the order for his arrest had been carried out, and so wanted Timothy to be sure and bring them to solace his long hours of idleness in the dungeon cell.

Truly, there were many shadows in the closing days of this noble man, but there were also lights which a king might envy. Paul could say confidently, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day." He was familiar with the games of the great Roman amphitheater, and he knew that it was not until all the conquerors had completed their tasks that the rewards were given out; so he adds, "And not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing," not expecting his grown of immortality until those who have been "faithful unto death" receive theirs in the great day of reckoning. And even though all earthly friends had forsaken him, he could say, "The Lord stood by me and strengthened me." And I am sure he realized the blessed truth of the words-"If God be for us, who can be against us?"

We, in these days, cannot comprehend the meaning of the bitter and awful persecutions the early followers of Jesus Christ had to suffer. The mercy of God might send them to be burned at the stake, or devoured by hungry wild beasts; it was still His mercy if it but kept them "unspotted from the world." The Apostle James could say. "Count it all joy when you fall into manifold trials"; but the thought nowadays is "safety first," and "look out for Number One," rather than the injunction of Paul to Timothy to "endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." We are in the testing time now, and may each one of us be able to say as Paul did in the first part of this letter to Timothy-"I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him"; and then his closing words may be ours also, "The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

"Till We All Come ——'

By Mary A. Gesin

HAVE you noticed that the Sunday school lessons for the current quarter present a complete unit under the theme of the Christian life, its source and its expression? Beginning with the first lesson, each succeeding one naturally and logically follows the preceding, until they form, as it were, a perfect chain of jewels representative of that matchless and altogether attractive adornment—the Christlike life, excelling in beauty every other. Let us take a view of these thirteen lessons as a completely harmonious study.

The first lesson on fellowship with Christ quite rightly focused our attention on the source and the center of the Christian life-our Lord Himself. It very properly, too, placed Him above all else, and yet not unattainable. Does not the Apostle Paul reveal to us the wonder and the glory of that position when he points out that God "raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named" (Eph. 1:20, 21)? And yet in the same book (2:4-6) he assures us that the same God "who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ . . . and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Fellowship? Of the highest order certainly! Do we, as His acknowledged followers, make the most of it?

Lesson two most naturally brought before our attention the medium through which we learn of God and His Son—the Bible—revealing to us the plan and purpose in store for those who recognize the beauty of fellowship with Christ in this life and desire that it may be enjoyed throughout eternity. Right in this lesson I trust many of you seized the opportunity of presenting one of our peculiar teachings—the manner of baptism. You no doubt also noticed that Philip's preaching Christ to the cunuch resulted in his desire for obedience. Many interesting facts about the Book of all ages might also most profitably have been exchanged in class.

We naturally have arrived at lesson three at this point. The searcher of the pages of God's Book needs guidance; he needs wisdom from above; he needs strength to continue along the path upon which he has set his feet. What is the answer? Prayer! Through the One with whom we enjoy fellowship we approach unto our God. And the Apostle again makes the manner of our approach clear: "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need"—need of counsel, of knowledge, of forgiveness, of courage, and of faith. We find it all in the Source of all help, if we only avail ourselves of His offer.

Lesson four is the one in the study of which we are engaged this week-The Christian Standard of Life. Early in our acquaintance with the Christlike life must we become familiar with its standards, its principles. would we not know where to place our aim, our goal. The key words, to my mind, seem to be these, "Ye have not so learned Christ." Following the teaching on baptism, we put off "the old man" and put on "the new man." If you give to this lesson the temperance aspect, as designed by the committee in charge of the international studies, you will find plenty of material in this our day for reproof on the ways of those whose lives are "alienated from the life of God." Colossians 3:1-4 is a key text, furnishing opportunity for more teaching of our precious truths-preparedness for the coming of our Savior, which we believe to be imminent.

The standard of the Christlike life having been placed before us, growth in that direction should logically follow, and lesson five falls nicely into line. As Jesus grew in stature, He also grew in wisdom and in favor with God and man. Here is a fine opening for the teacher of the younger classes. All young people like to have friends. How to acquire them is the problem. Show conclusively that there is no magnet comparable to the magnet of a Christian personality, and this is attained by a study of the One who set the example—Christ Himself. Knowledge of God's will and purpose enters in assuredly.

But we must hasten on. The next five lessons take up in succession the different phases for the expression of the Christlike life. For of what worth were a life if not to be lived? What value knowledge of God's plan for the world of mankind if not to be used? Living in unity with our brethren, how very much is included in the words! Caring wisely for the things of value God has entrusted to us—time, talent, material wealth, how important!

Witnessing for Christ? How did Paul do it? By giving to those who stood in need the gospel of salvation, as well as by his manner of life among them. The gospel Paul preached included much, and both of his letters to the Thessalonians are most profitably read as preparation. They contain so much of practical and doctrinal truth, as we sometimes discriminate between the terms, though there should really be no separation in our teaching. Whatever is taught is doctrinal, whether it is a point in God's future plan for this earth, or our worthiness to attain our share in that blessing.

We are all teachers. Regardless of his position in life everyone has some one who follows his example, some one for whose welfare he is responsible. "Rightly dividing the word of truth" requires much study, consecration to the task, and above all else, prayer and devotion. How fine if all the teachers of the Sunday schools of the land might, for this lesson, be in a class taught by the Master Teacher, as He taught by Galilee so long ago. But remember, we may day by day be taught of Him, though He be absent from us.

The Lord's Supper ties us to that beloved Teacher by bonds which cannot be broken, and how fitting that a lesson should follow on the meaning of that sacred ordinance. In the face of the indifference displayed today, even by professing Christians, toward the significance of our Lord's death, this finds an opportune place in the list of studies.

Coming at the Christmas season, lesson twelve brings us again the wonder and the beauty of the Savior's birth. "The Christian Home" presents a lesson applicable to all ages—to the adult, the parents' part in building a Christian home; to the younger classes, the sons' and daughters' responsibilities. The future, when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord," when all homes will be Christian, portrays a glowing picture.

And now the final lesson! The story is told of a sculptor who became acquainted with a cripple. To ease his suffering the cripple came daily to the great man's studio, watching him at work, and a firm friendship formed between the two. After a few months it became necessary for the sculptor to move to a distant city. On parting he bestowed upon his friend a statue of a perfect form which he had greatly admired. Day after day the cripple looked longingly upon the beautiful piece of marble, unconsciously stretching his own twisted limb as he gazed. In time the injured member became straight and strong once more, to the great joy of his artist friend as well as himself.

Looking upon our matchless Savior, learning His principles and teachings, striving to adjust our human frailties so that they will grow to be more and more strong and true, may we not also become more and more Christlike, "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ"? Please God it may be true of you and me.

What Shall This Man Do?

TIHIS question was once asked by Peter, one of the twelve apostles of our Savior. The Lord had just been telling Peter what He wanted him to do; and he, like most of us at the present time, was very much interested in what others were going to do. No doubt he intended to do his own work faithfully and well, but he was anxious to know if his brother was having anything to do and, if so, what it was. Now many of us, perhaps, would think that Peter's anxiety about what others should do was just the right kind of a spirit to have, that it showed his interest in the cause of God, and in his brethren, too. This, I think, is a mistake. I did not always think so. Once it was a part of my religion to ask the Lord what He was going to have my brethren and sisters do; and then worry myself into the "blues" if they did not do just what I thought the Lord wanted them to do. I have long since found that this was no part of the religion of Jesus Christ, and gave it up as a very heavy and thankless burden. I do not see half the faults or idleness of my brethren or sisters that 1 formerly did; I feel much happier in the Christian life, and I know that I can better attend to what the Lord wants me to do.

It is the most natural thing possible for us when we are interested in anything to inquire how much others are interested in it. This seemed to be Peter's first thought, "Lord, and what shall this man do?" Perhaps Peter was afraid the Lord had forgotten John, and that he would be left to wander in idleness. We cannot tell just what the Apostle's idea was in asking this question; but we can learn from it a lesson of instruction, and see it in human nature. We have no intimation, however, that ever Peter asked this question more than once; but how often do we ask it? What shall this brother do, or what is that sister doing in the cause of God? are questions often asked. Mark the Savior's gentle reproof, "What is that to thee? Follow thou me." What is it to us what our brethren and sisters do? The Master is fully competent to give to them their allotted work, and see that they accomplish it.

It is not what others shall or shall not do that is our business in the cause of God, but what we, individually, shall do. The Lord told Peter what he himself was to do. This, it would seem from the Savior's reply to his inquiry. was all it was necessary for him to know about the matter. It would be almost impossible to estimate the amount of trouble we should save ourselves if each one could, on starting in the Christian life, realize that it is with himself and not others that he is to be principally interested. There is no better way in the world to interest others in their work than for me to go quietly about mine and do it, and there is no other way that will so well bring the peace and joy that it is the Christian's privilege to have and feel from day to day. I often think one half of our Christian life, and perhaps more, is spent in carrying burdens which the Lord never intended we should touch; namely, what other people ought to do. True, Paul tells us to "provoke one another to love and good works." But how do we do this? By telling them what to do, and praying to the Lord to make them do it? I do not think this has much effect at the present day, if it ever had. In my estimation a much better way is to provoke others by doing these things ourselves. Supposing we do not know whether our brethren do these things or not, what is that to us?

The fact that it was nothing to Peter what the Savior intended John to do is proof positive that it is nothing to me what He intends my brother or sister to do. If I can find out my own work and do it with full purpose of heart, then I will be fulfilling my mission. This is what God requires of mc. If I fail to do this, no matter how interested I may be in having others do their work, or how much I may talk about my interest in the cause of God and the welfare of my brethren and sisters, I have failed, utterly failed, to do what God required of me! We can endanger our own eternal interests in watching our brethren, and then we do not help them in the least by our watchfulness. The best way to help our brethren bear their burdens is to see to it that we do our own work-just the work the Master would have us do-then others will not have our work to do. The cause of God is one, and my work is to do just all I can in that cause; no more is required, and, if I understand God's Word aright, any less will not be an acceptable service. Our God is a jealous God, He must have a whole-hearted service. I must follow my Savior, do His bidding, asking no question about what others shall do. Some may think that this would be a selfish way of living and serving God, but it is not; and I think I can safely say it is the surest way of seeing our own imperfections and enables us to cast the beam out of our own eye, so that we may see clearly to take the mote out of our brother's, that is, if we still see the mote in our brother's eye.

The Savior's reply to Peter is a passage of Scripture that has given me untold comfort and consolation. "What is that to thee? Follow thou me." This is what I am to do. Quietly, faithfully follow the Savior, believing that Jesus is able to lead my brethren and sisters as He is to lead me, and that they are just as willing to follow and do His bidding as I am, even if I do not see them follow in the line that I have marked out. It is by my own actions that I am to be judged, and not by what my brother or sister does. It is a fact in spiritual, as well as temporal, things that if we do our work well we have but little time to watch our neighbors. The more faithful we are in performing the work which the Master has given us to do, the more will we be able to see the faithfulness of our brethren and sisters, and soon it will be quite easy for us to "esteem others better than ourselves." I often think we do not half appreciate our brethren and sisters, just because we imagine we know what each one ought to do if he were interested in the cause of God. We are not satisfied with asking the Lord once, twice, nor a dozen times, "What shall this man do?" but we keep asking daily, many of us for years; and not only this, but often keep ourselves unhappy because this man or that man will not do as we think he ought to do. I speak from experience, but I thank God I am now free from such a feeling. I love to think and feel that my brethren and sisters are just as much or more engaged in their work than I am in mine. It is not necessary that I should know what work God has given them to do; enough to know that we are all engaged in the cause of our blessed Master, waiting, watching, hoping, and praying for II is glorious appearing. May the language of our hearts be—Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do? and then with joyful haste go forward to our allotted work. This will bring joy and peace to our hearts, and a fair estimate of our brethren and sisters in the Lord, and their interest in II is precious cause.—The Bible Advocate.

A GRAND THOUGHT

By Mrs. J. D. Fyfe

THE coming of Jesus to redeem His people is a grand thought. Then shall the children of all ages be united in one brotherhood of faith, all be one congregation. Oh, what a sublime celebration! The saints praising their Redeemer and singing in heavenly concord and joy that the salvation for which they hoped and looked is come.

"Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

It is not only the saints that have died, but also those who live in the flesh who believe in the precious promises and are looking for the coming of our blessed Savior, who will share in the glorious victory. Paul says, "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." "The dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

What a thought! Perhaps some who read this will never know by experience what death is. Those of God's children who are living when Jesus comes will feel a sensation, the thrill of immortality, and be transported to join the children of the resurrection. Not one that truly believes in the coming of Jesus will be left behind, for He shall send forth His angels with a great shout of a trumpet and they shall gather together His elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

How thankful we should be for what God has done for us. How earnest to find out His will and do His commandments, for He is not ashamed to be our God and Father and in Him is our strength, our hope, our joy. Let us identify ourselves with Jesus, knowing that when He shall appear we shall be like Him. Then God's children shall live in the renewed earth.

JEWS NOT LEADERS OF COMMUNISM

In a personal letter addressed to Bro. G. M. Birkey of Rochelle, Illinois, Dr. Arthur U. Michelson, founder of the First Hebrew Christian Synagogue of Los Angeles, California, corrects a serious misunderstanding that many people have entertained with regard to the attitude of the generality of the Jews toward Communism. About two years ago we published an article in THE RESTITUTION HERALD by Dr. Michelson, a talented Jewish convert to Christianity, which met with widespread approval among our readers. The edition of the paper containing it was quickly exhausted by the many orders we received for additional copies.

Dr. Michelson writes in part as follows:

"We received your kind letter and were delighted to hear from you. We thank you for your deep interest in the salvation of my people, and are praying God's richest blessings upon you and yours. I see that (many) are misled in every way in regard to the Communistic Jews, Every Christian is against Communism, and there are a lot of Jews and Gentiles who are not saved (not Christians) who are against it in the same way. It is untrue that apostate Jows are the leaders of Communism! (The emphasis is ours.—Ed.) Anyone that makes such a statement that Communism is engineered by a few apostate Jews is not informed about the situation. In every movement there are all kinds of nationalities. I remember when the revolution broke out in Germany, and there were a few Jews in it, too! They were the leaders of Socialism, but most of the leaders were Gentiles, and so it is with Communism. Millions of Jews in Russia have to suffer terribly on account of the Soviet Government. They have put the leading Jewish rabbis in prison and have closed the Jewish synagogues.

"We are living in a community of 50,000 Jews, and among them are about 2,000 who are Communists. This is chiefly among the younger generation. The reason is that Judaism cannot still the longing of our hearts and the Gentiles do not want them, so they are much inclined to a movement that promises them the same rights with others and peace and work.

"Mr. Winrod is mistaken in every way. In his articles he gives the impression that all Jews are Communistic, and that the Jews are responsible for this movement. He has made this and other statements, and sometimes he wants to express the same as I have tried to tell you here in these few lines, but 1 do not think that he is clear enough in his (explanations).

"The Jews need Jesus more than anything else today. But most of the Gentiles and the Gentile churches are not interested in the salvation of the Jews.

"Now what is the Jew doing today? He is looking for peace and work and along comes the Communistic agitators and they have the easy task of persuading them. Like so many of the unemployed, they are listening to Bolshevism, for the leaders promise them work and bread, but in reality they cannot help them.

"It is too bad that our Christian leaders are not interested in the welfare of our people, and in these days everybody seems to want to take things easy and to have a good time. What this country needs are some men and women who are not looking for money, but who want to see a revival come and who wish to have every man and woman praying!

"We pray that the Lord may direct you in this question so that you may pray for my people, that the Lord may send us another Pentecost.

"With much love in the Lord, I remain Yours in His service for Israel," (Signed) A. U. Michelson.

Our readers will recall that not long ago the Editor of this paper warned against accepting as true the unsupported statements of anyone regarding this very matter of the Jews in their relation to Communism. Misrepresentation through shallow thinking and careless investigation is indefensible on the part of a Christian writer or speaker under any circumstances; and it becomes even dangerous when it is directed against God's beloved, though backslidden, people, Israel.

Instruction in things moral and spiritual is most necessary to the making of the highest type of citizenship.

RESTITUTION

By C. E. Randall

THE Scriptures teach restitution. Not merely the resti-I tution that is to take place following the literal, personal, and second coming of Christ, but restitution for wrongdoings now. "Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother bath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift."-Matt. 5:23, 24. The teachings of this scripture are practically ignored. How often are church members who wrong their neighbors or bring the church into disrepute required to make restitution? We believe we are safe in saying that there can be no scriptural conversion and forgiveness without restitution. Further, it is as much or more the duty of the church to see that its members walk worthy the name of the Lord, as it is to get sinners outside the church to walk in the Way. If members of the church were not only expected, but required to walk in such manner as becometh Christians there would be less infractions of Christian conduct and behavior. A congregation cannot keep itself pure from others' sins when they condone by silent consent the sins of their members. Tim. 5:22 -Church of God Messenger.

sin in the church. It could not be otherwise. The fathers have eaten a sour grape and the children's teeth are set on edge, or, as the Apostle puts it in Romans 5:12, "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Then when one has been begotten to the spiritual life by hearing, believing, and obeying the gospel message he has not reached spiritual perfection at once, but must crueify the flesh daily, must add to faith, grow in grace, purify himself, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body. Much can be said concerning this Pentecostal, or feast of first fruits in reference to the church, but that is not my purpose in this present effort, but rather to show the type value of those three obligatory feasts of Israel.

The third one was the feast of tabernacles, or ingathering, when they had gathered in their labors out of the field, gathered in the corn and wine in the end of the year. "And thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates. . . . The Lord thy God shall bless thee, . . . therefore thou shalt surely rejoice."—Deut. 16:13-15. According to writings of the rabbis, this feast was the most joyous of all the festivals enjoined upon Israel. General rejoicing and thanksgiving exceeding any other observance among men of all time was this season of universal joy. Golden candlesticks were placed in the court of the temple which threw light over the whole of Jerusalem at night. Palm branches and torches were carried during the festival of singing and dancing, and everyone, including the strangers, was to rejoice. Water and wine were poured out before the Lord each day. The Jews were celebrating this feast, according to John 7, when Jesus stood and cried, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink."

Now, what is the antitype of this joyous feast? From the reasoning of the Apostle in 1 Corinthians 15:20-24 we conclude that it is the "end" resurrection. "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the (first of) firstfruits of them that slept. . . . But every man in his own order: Christ the (first of) firstfruits (the antitypical wave sheaf): afterward they that are Christ's at his coming": the church, the harvest of first fruits. Wheat and tares grow together until the harvest; the harvest is the end of the age (Matt. 13). Then the antitype of the feast, of tabernacles is the general ingathering, the "end" resurrection of the rest of the dead who live not again until the thousand years are finished. This feast will be observed with great splendor and enthusiasm throughout the entire time of restitution not only by the remnant of Israel, but by the left of all the nations of the earth. Anyone negligent or refusing to obey this commandment will be punished with drought and plagues. The Prophet Zechariah (chap. 14:16-21) has made this fact plain. But why should this feast be continued throughout the times of restitution and nothing be said about the other two? The Passover feast reached its antitype in the crucifixion and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Pentecostal or harvest feast will have reached its antitype at the second coming of Christ, and the "church of the firstborn" (Heb. 12:23) will be raised to immortality to participate in that great antitypical feast, the marriage supper of the Lamb. Those types will have served their purpose, but the third one will continue on to the end of the thousand years of restitution, when the dead, small and great, stand before God and the great "ingathering" antitype is reached.

"O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!"—Rom. 11:33.

trines have no influence upon the Christian, for God, in his opinion, remains serenely in His heaven, and the world moves on at constant pitch.

Where the atheist sees nothing but a happy chance, an intervention of some peculiar and as yet undiscovered force, the Christian sees the inviolable laws of God working in a harmony so perfect as to be beyond compare. The comet leaps through a vacuum of infinite proportions, and disappears and reappears at closely regulated intervals. Force, according to the atheist, caused that exactly guided comet to follow its tremendous course—force without reason and without a mind. Ten thousand centuries might pass, and still mere chance could not so settle the universal clock.

"Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite"—and this the atheist denies. He would as soon sing praises to Luna, goddess of the moon, as "sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving; sing praise upon the harp unto our God: who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains"—for he denies that any deity could control such things as these.

The stars of heaven will ever blaze the glory of their creator. It is inconceivable—indeed, it is altogether preposterous—to enfold the dogma that chance and chance alone established the balance of the cosmos. Forces played their part, but no force known to man has had the intelligence without external aid to develop itself into material creation. The very men who cling the closest to the idea that matter can neither be created nor destroyed deny themselves by retaiting to the forces which they foster the power to create something out of nothing—a perfected something of great complexity and of infinite expanse. Only in Christianity is there found an intelligent belief.

Berean Department

ARLEN MARSH, EDITOR

Recreational Leadership

MISS JESSIE M. B. KAUFFMAN, Physical Director of the Y. W. C. A. of Riverside, California, has prepared a suggestive program for one of those indoor social affairs that give entertainment and program committees of churches, Berean societies, and Sunday schools so much trouble. It is submitted in the hope that it will provide something new for those "wanting to have a jolly time together."

To be a successful social recreational leader, one must be enthusiastic, direct intelligently, have a good strong voice, use a whistle, have his program written on a card, and know his games. Try this at your next party in a house or hall:

- 1. Hand Shake.
- 2. Hand Squeeze.
- 3. Relay Races-pass objects; suitcase.
- 4. Stunts-swat; feed popcorn or ice cream.
- 5. Kitty-Kar Relay, or Balloon.
- 6. March Through Circles.
- 7. Pass Handkerchief.
- 8. Name states in five minutes.
- 9. Name state capitals in five minutes.
- 10 Laughing Hat.
- 11. Popularity.
- 12. Sing Taps.

DIRECTIONS

- 1. An ice-breaker. When crowd is gathering, everyone starts shaking hands; when leader blows whistle, each grabs another hand; keep it up five minutes or so. Anyone caught not shaking hands has to pay a forfeit.
- 2. Form a circle; grasp hands; one in the circle squeezes hand to right; next person squeezes hand to right, and so on until back to the first person. The leader has a watch, preferably a stop watch; as soon as the first person says, "Hold," when the final squeeze reaches him, the leader announces the number of seconds. Keep it up until the number of seconds is diminished.
- 3. Passing objects: Line up in two or more rows; pass a ball or any object down the line; turn around and pass it over heads; turn again and pass it between the feet. The row getting through first wins. Suitease relay: Have clothing in two suiteases. First ones in each row open cases, dress, and run to other end of room; come back, undress, place clothing in cases; run to first persons in their rows, touch them; they start after suiteases and repeat performance. The ones having touched the second in line go to end of lines. The line finishing first wins.
- 4. A good laugh for all: Secure a boy and girl and seat them opposite each other; give each (after blindfold-ing them) a bowl of popcorn and a spoon; have them feed each other. Ice cream can also be used. Aprons should be worn by players. Swat: Use two boys. Blindfold both, but only one is left so. Give each a bundle of papers and then turn them around and tell each to swat the other.

- 5. Place the long-legged or fat members of the crowd on kitty-kars. Inflate balloons of different colors, and have those on kitty-kars keep them in the air by blowing and so move them to the end of room.
- 6. Mark circles about three feet in circumference on the floor. Have some one play the piano. March in couples through circles. Couples caught in circles when music stops are eliminated. See which couple can march the longest. Have some "policeman" guard the circles and make couples stop if they are in the circles when music stops.
- 7. Sit in two groups with an aisle between. Start a handkerchief at end of each group, passing to each till all have had it; go back, doing same, until it comes to first persons. Or each can stand and turn completely around before giving it to the next one.
- 8. Select a girl and a boy for captains. Girl appoints two boys; boy appoints two girls. Each team is to see how many states it can name in five minutes.
  - 9. Same as 8, naming state capitals instead of states.
- 10. Two lines face each other. Leader throws hat into air. If it comes down on rim, one side laughs and tries to make the other side laugh; they cannot even smile, or they will be added to the first line. If it comes down inside up, the other side does the laughing. Object is to see which side has the greatest number when game is over.
- 11. A good mixer: March in couples in a circle. If more girls than boys, extra girls stand in center. Music plays a march. When whistle blows, girls on inside of circle move up and join the other girls, who turn and go the opposite direction from the boys, girls marching one direction and the boys the other. Whistle blows the second time, and girls grab the arms of boys; this leaves the odd girls without partners, so they try the next time. Continue so.
  - 12. Sing taps:

"Day is done; gone the sun from the Streams, from the hills, from the sky. All is well, safely rest.

God is nigh."

It is certain that, with the majority of young people, some form of social activity is an absolute necessity. The church, either directly or through its Sunday schools and Bercan societies, would do well to provide more interesting programs for its general social gatherings, if only for the benefit of its younger members.

GROWING UP LIKE JESUS

"WHEN I get big ——!" How many times have you said that, my girl, my boy? You make great plans for the things you are going to do when you are grown. You can hardly wait. Being "grown up" seems to you to be the very best time of life. And when you are grown, you are going to do wonderful deeds.

It's one of the finest things you can do—having these dreams of the great activities in which you will be engaged years from now. But you mustn't leave it all to just dreaming. You must remember that each day you are one day nearer being grown up and just a little more like the person you are going to be when you are big.

You know, you can't be one sort of person up to the time you are twelve or fourteen and then all of a sudden be somebody entirely different. Day by day, even from habyhood, you are building the sort of person you are going to be by and by. Each little thing you do now leaves its mark on you in such a way as to affect the person you will be when you are a man or a woman.

True it is, we all hear of people turning completely around after they are grown and being entirely different. But they have some awful battles to fight in order to change from their former ways. They have to use up so much of their energy changing their thoughts and actions from the old channels—energy they could use for doing the better things. Don't you see?

It's like trying to change the course of a stream. You've, many of you, tried to do that when you sailed a little boat you had made or tried to build a bridge or a dam. How hard it was to get the water to flow where you wanted it! It seemed bound to go back into the old course, didn't it?

Thoughts and actions are just like streams. After you think a thing a long time and act a certain way a long time, a deep channel, growing deeper all the time, forms in your body and mind. Then it's easy for thought and action to follow the usual course.

Do you see now why it is so important to start when you are very young to form right habits through thinking right thoughts and doing right actions? As you grow older it will be more and more natural for you to continue that way, until "when you are big" that will be your real self all of the time. And it will be as hard to change you into the wrong sort of person as it would be to change the course of a big river.

I hope every one of you will read, over and over, the story of the boy Jesus in our lesson for November 4. It is the only story in the Bible about Him from the time when the angels sang at His birth and the shepherds came to worship, to the time of His baptism when He was about thirty years old. Isn't it an interesting story? Let's see if we can picture it.

Remember the angel told Mary that He was God's Son and would some day be the Savior of the world as well as King on the throne of David. And don't you imagine that His mother often told Him, as He stood at her knee and begged for a story, the wonderful news which the angel had told her? Though we don't read of it, yet we can be sure she did.

Now Jesus was twelve years old, the age when a Jewish boy became what they called "a son of duty," and observed the different customs of the Hebrew law. Knowing that He was God's Son, how natural for Him to go to God's house—the temple—and learn more about His Father's "business." Ever since He had been able to think about it at all, He had, we are sure, been planning for the time when He would be hig. And now was His chance to learn more about what God expected of Him.

It seems, though, that Jesus taught those learned men more than they taught Him. For we read that all the doctors and also those standing around listening were surprised at His understanding and answers. Can you imagine some of the ways that Jesus must have kept busy in those twelve years to be the boy He was then?

How about being obedient to His mother? Willing and eager to do kind little deeds for every one? Listening quietly while His mother read to Him out of "the law"? Learning as much of that law, the Old Testament, as He could? Helping Joseph in the carpenter shop? Oh, and ever so many more things!

These are some of the ways we can be sure Jesus spent His boyhood years. We know He didn't use those years for His own pleasure selfishly, but He pleased to serve others. And He enjoyed doing it, we are certain.

He was adding to His faith, virtue; to virtue, knowledge; to knowledge, temperance; to temperance, patience; to patience, godliness; to godliness, brotherly kindness; to brotherly kindness, charity.

How many of you can repeat that table in addition? How many will try to use it?

LESSON 5. — November 4, 1934

CHRISTIAN GROWTH

Luke 2:42-52; 2 Peter 1:5-8

Devotional Reading: Proverbs 4:10-19

GOLDEN TEXT

But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—2 Peter 3:18.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Christian Growth.

Aim: Study of the Bible and putting what we learn into practice is the duty of the Christian.

Basic Truth: "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed,"-2 Tim, 2:15.

I. Growth in Knowledge. (Luke 2:42-47.) One's success in life depends upon his growth in knowledge. We must continue to learn new things or we will not be permitted to do new things. Jesus was constantly learning about God and what He wanted His Son to do, and so God gave Him more important and more interesting work to do. We should understand our Bibles better, but what we do not understand we should ask our teachers to explain, just as Jesus questioned the doctors in the temple. To read, to ask questions, and to listen to those who understand the Bible better than we do, is the way to grow in knowledge and in usefulness to God and man.

II. Putting Knowledge to Work. (Vv. 48-52.) When Mary asked Jesus why He had stayed behind them in the temple He said it was because He must be about His Father's business. What He knew and what He learned about God's will and ways was only valuable when it was put into practice. Simply to know how to do a thing means nothing unless we go ahead and do that which we have learned how to do. God expects us to use what we learn in His service. To know God's will and to do it from the heart will cause us, like Jesus, to find favor with God and man.

III. Growth in Christian Graces. (2 Pet. 1: 5-8.) Peter mentions seven qualities which we have come to call the "Christian graces." They are virtue (strength of character); knowledge (of God and of His will for us); temperance (control over our natural desires); patience (courage to wait or to contend vigorously as God may desire); godliness (Godlikeness); brotherly kindness (kindness to our neighbors and friends); and charity (love shown in willing, helpful acts and kind words). All of these things grow one out of the other, and they are all the fruitage of faith. We should try to cultivate them to show our appreciation of what God has done for us, and as a proof that we are His children.

GOLDEN TEXT

"But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."-2 Peter 3:18.

It is said that one never stands still in the Christian life; he must either grow or retard. To grow is the aim of the Christian. To be a better Christian this year than we were last is the ideal way of living. To grow in knowledge one must study and meditate on the Word of God. To grow in grace, one must abide in Christ as a branch in the vinc.

Grace is favor; so when we grow in grace, we are growing in favor with God, and what more can the Christian do to get near the Father and His Son? "Study to show thyself approved unto God" (2 Tim. 2:15) is the way to grow in knowledge. If to knowledge the other things of our lesson are added then we shall be workers together with Christ.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Christian Growth

-is essential to Christian life: cannot be separated from Bible study:

is greatly aided by regular worship;

-never exists apart from prayer; -imparts vitality to an individual or congregation. Growth Necessary. Real Christianity is ever progressive and enlarging. Each day finds the true follower of Christ increasing in the "knowledge of the Son of God"—chlarging unto the "measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ," and pressing "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." There is too much stunted Christianity if Christianity can be stunted. Keen interest is born of growth. Growth is one of the marks of Christianity. Lack of growth is creating the deluge of indifference that is drowning interest in things spiritual. "Awake, thou that sleepest," would be a good battle cry for our day. Any service rendered that is not done with all our might is not worthy the recognition of our heavenly Father, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is ne work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest."—Eecl. 9:10.

Growth Natural. Growth is a natural law. When growth ceases decay usually sets in. This is most surely true of the Christian. With regular, daily, and systematic Bible study we are bound to "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." As a man thinketh in his heart so is he—so, with a daily meditation upon God's Word with desire to apply, there must be a change wrought, and this change is growth. If after several years of Christian profession there is no appreciable growth there is something radically wrong.-C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Making Progress in Christian Living Christian living is progressive in its very nature. It is an indication of moral if not spiritual progress for one to repent and turn away from sin as one does when moved by the appeal of the gospel. It is an evidence of advancement for one to add to this knowledge as he does when he hears and believes "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." It is a forward step that one takes when he enters the waters of baptism and thereby cuts himself off from his sinful past. It is a sign of growth in character when one continues to overcome temptations that once bound him and to follow consistently in the footsteps of Jesus Christ. It will be a progressive experience indeed when the Lord comes and changes "our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body" (Phil. 3:21), and transforms us from mortal, pain-torn creatures into deathless spiritual beings possessed of the divine nature in its fullness!

In today's lesson the intellectual and bodily development of the boy Jesus is shown to have been accompanied with a correspondingly rapid growth in spiritual apprehension. Such an experience need not be limited to Christ. Under sympathetic Christian parental teaching and example our boys and girls may also be led to grow in knowledge of divine things as they grow in years and in stature .- G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: How We Grow.

We will need several pictures to work out our lesson today. We want to divide our lesson into three parts.

Part I. Have a picture of a child, and also one of a grown person. Paste these pictures on a sheet of paper. As you do this we will talk about how we grow. (Children will see at once how they grow and why they grow.)

Part II. For this part we are to have a picture of Jesus as a child and one of Jesus as a grown person. Here is where our Sunday school lesson comes in. The story of Jesus at the age of twelve should be told. Emphasize the last verse, Luke 2:52. Explain verse 51, showing how Jesus obeyed His mother.

Part III. This part of our lesson shows us how a Christian grows. Faste a picture of a child, preferably a child about twelve years of age. If you can find a picture of a baptismal service, do so, to paste by the child. Write under the picture these words: "A baptized child, plus faith, plus virtue, plus knowledge, plus temperance, plus patience, plus brotherly kindness, plus love equals a Christiau man or woman." (Teacher should give an explanation of any of these terms not familiar to children.)

The verse I think we should all learn is: "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man." This will

FALL HOMECOMING AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

The church at Ripley ("believe it or not") is planning a great homecoming gathering and Rally Day to be observed on Sunday, Oct. Everyone within driving distance is urged to be present and enjoy the day with the brethren of that place.

Attention is called to an error which appeared in our columns recently in a report reaching The Herald from a correspondent at Ripley. The corrected announcement at Ripley. The corrected announcement should read, "Bro. Gerald Cooper will preach in Ripley on the first and fifth Sundays of each month, while Bro. C. E. Lapp will conduet services on the second, third, and fourth Sundays."

ST. LOUIS CHURCH CALENDAR

A faithful little group of believers meet every Thursday evening at 1943 A Hodiamont for Bible study, and on Sunday mornings at ten o'clock for Sunday school. On Thursday evening before the first Sunday of each month C. E. Lapp of Ripley, Ill., preaches at the same place. Bro. J. H. Anderson also occasionally is able to stop off for an evening service. Brethren passing through St. Louis are cordially invited to come and worship with us.

Mrs. Claude Graham.

PATMONT SPEAKER AT MINNESOTA

CONFERENCE The Fall Conference of the Minnesota Churches of God was held with the Mora church September 21 to 23, inclusive. Attendance was not so large as had been expected, but interest was very good and there were good spiritual Bible lessons and sermons.

Speakers were Adna Hoskins of St. Cloud, Richard Le Crone of Eden Valley, and Vergil Thoms of Whipholt. In the absence of Pres. John Denchfield, Bro. A. E. Hoskins, Vice President, presided. L. R. Patmont of California, world traveler, linguist, and famous lecturer, spoke Saturday afternoon. Mr. Patmont, who chanced to be in the community, is an oldtime friend and coworker of Mr. Hoskins, who was instrumental in bringing him to speak at our conference.

A young people's rally was held Saturday evening preceding the services at the church, and Bro. Vergil Thoms gave a fine message to those assembled.

Sunday the ladies of the Mora church served bountiful meals in the church annex, and the spiritual feast was supplemented with physical austenance.

A resolution pledging cooperation with other religious organizations in a fight for cleaner movies was adopted and many signed their

LARGEST VIRGINIA CONFERENCE IN HISTORY

Since no final report of the Virginia Conference has been sent to The Restitution Herald for publication, I shall begin by telling you that our 1934 gathering together for conference and Bible study was spiritually very beneficial to all in attendance.

The Secretary's record book shows a longer list, and more meals were served in the dormitory, than in any previous year. Sr. Thayer's class alone numbered 42, most of whom were present every day and completed a most excellent work book. She knows how to teach children Bible truths in a most attractive way, a gift of surpassing value for Christian workers.

A most excellent children's program of prayer, Bible readings, and songs was rendered by the children Thursday evening during conference week.

Bro. Grover Gordon from Nebraska, with his Bible studies on "God's Progressive Plan" and the accompanying chart, his good sermons, and above all his fine Christian spirit, was well received and enjoyed by all present. We are indeed thankful to know we have such a true, faithful servant working in the vincyard of the Master in these closing days of Gentile times. Yes, Bro. and Sr. Gordon, we are glad you could be with us and assure you that you left thoughts and impressions which are profitable to the brethren, and will bring glory and praise to God and His Son.

Bro. Gordon taught two classes daily, alternating the adult and young people's classes morning and afternoon with Bro. Thaver. Bro. Thayer took up the study of the book of Hebrews in his adult class. A class of ten boys of intermediate age studied the life of Moses and the tabernacle construction and furniture. These lessons were copied in composition books and illustrated by pictures and drawings.

We were pleasingly surprised to have Sr. Belle Hartman, Bro. Finch, and Bro. and Sr. Paul Overholser from our southern Ohio churches drive in on Sunday, Aug. 19, and remain with us until the next afternoon. Sorry their time was so limited, but glad to have them stop. Hope they come again.

At the business meeting on Friday afternoon, a tentative draft of a constitution for the Conference was read by Bro. Sheets and the necessity of its adoption at a called meet ing in the early fall months was stressed. Such a meeting has been called for the first Sunday in November at Maurertown.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted in Lacy Compton, President; Garnet Coversione, Vice President; V. R. Kineheloe, Secretary; W. H. Boyer, Assistant Secretary; and W. E. Boyer, Treasurer.

The closing days of the conference were saddened by the death and funeral of Sr. Andrews, which Bro. Thayer has previously reported. Because of her deep and abiding faith in Christ and her patience in her long illness we feel sure she sleeps in Jesus.

Bro. Thayer is now preaching for the churches in Virginia the first, second, and fourth Sundays at Maurertown, the third Sunday at Dry Run in the Fort Valley. Every fifth Sunday he goes to the church at Browntown. Lyle is now getting experience in the apple industry in the famous orchards near Winehester, Va.

Bro. and Sr. Harry Sheets have recently moved to Harrisonburg, Va., where he is engaged in selling automobile paints and radios.

On the first Sunday at the morning service Bro. and Sr. Lasher of New York worshiped with us. They were on their way to Florida. We are always glad to have brothren plan to visit our church when traveling through the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia.

Thus another year of grace is passing into history, bringing us nearer to the coming of our Lord from heaven

Brethren, pray for us, that we may abide in the faith, cherish the blessed hope, and love one another, Virginia R. Kincheloe, Secretary.

PROMOTION AT ST. CLOUD

Sunday, Sept. 30, services were held at Oak Park in the home of Bro. and Sr. Henry Ryberg, where we found as usual a splendid interest and attendance. Bro. and Sr. Ryberg's three little sisters sang a beautiful number, with the older sister at the piano. At the close of the service lunch was served. Our bodies were nourished both spiritually and materially. We pray that these faithful ones will continue their efforts, for sometime a good work can be organized in this commu-

Rally and Promotion Day, Oct. 7, is golden in our lives, when we had 84 in Bible school, and the adult class of twenty in number broke the year's record. Miss Sheldon's class of juniors rendered a striking demonstration of their knowledge in last quarter's lessons. Then, after the writer's few remarks on "Study to Show Ourselves Approved Unto God," the promotion certificates were delivered.

Bro. Richard Le Crone of Eden Valley reached in the afternoon to a good number. The evening service climaxed the day by another good message with Bro. Le Crone in the pulpit. His timely remarks were inspiring to all. Outside visitors were Bro. and Sr. Green. W. F. Hoskins and wife, also the daughter of the Greenes of Eden Valley; Srs. Dennison, Stowe, Michaelson, and Bro. Stowe of Oak Park. These, coming a long distance, added greatly to the day's feast.

At the close of the day's services, fifteen came down the aisle to reconsecrate their lives in service. These dear ones, seeing the need of a better life and a service that counts, willingly presented themselves "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God."

Wednesday evening in the church we will witness a matrimonial service, uniting in its holy bonds our daughter Carol to Bro. Benjamin Hawkins, who is one of the faithful boys of the church. Report of this will follow.

We thank you for your prayers, as we pray for you, that all will grow in grace and in knowledge of the Word, for that day, the "Lord's day," is without doubt soon to come. To be ready it might be well to heed Paul's writing in 1 Corinthians 13:5, 7: "Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things."

A. E. Hoskins, Pastor.

THREE BAPTISMS IN THE NIAGARA DISTRICT

The work continues to forge ahead. On Sunday night, Oct. 14, the Fonthill church extended the right hand of fellowship and welcomed eight new members into the body of Christ. This was an inspiring seene and stimulated a great deal of enthusiasm for harder and more devoted work. This was not the only cause of rejoicing at this service. When the invitation was given at the close of the sermon on "The Way of Life." Bro. and Sr. Howard Beemer, 32 Ontario St., South, St. Catharine's, Ont., presented themselves to the Lord.

The Fonthill Church Board wishes to announce that the Fonthill church in no way sponsors or approves any evangelical efforts of J. E. Lent, Ridgeville, and that he is no longer recognized as a member of this church.

The Sunday morning service at the Falls came to a joyful close when Shirley Sullivan 3002 McKoon Ave., Niagara Falls, N. Y., offered herself to the Lord and Master. Shirley is blossoming into the springtime of youth and is giving the best of her life to the Master. Baptismal services were held at both churches Sunday, Oct. 20. We have a great deal to be happy for here and indeed we are rejoicing in the Lord. We praise God for the manifestation of His great power.

The Annual Fall Meeting of the Niagara Falls church will be held on Sunday, Oct. 30. All services at Fonthill and Welland will be cancelled for the day and all join with the Falls brethren in a spiritual feast and day of praise and fellowship. We cordially invite all who find it possible to do so to be with us on this day. We hope to be able to bring more encouraging news in the near future. In the meantime pray for us.

C. E. Randall, Pastor.

ISAAC FISH

In the death of Bro. Isaac Fish of Maxwell, Iowa, which occurred September 27, 1934, the Church of God lost one of its most valued members. Quiet and unassuming in nature as he was, nevertheless Bro. Fish exercised in his Christian character an influence for good that was felt not only in his home community but throughout the church in Iowa.

He was the son of Joseph and Harriet Fish, both of whom were faithful lifelong members of the Church of God. He was born September 30, 1862, in Wayne County, Ind., and at the age of five years was taken by his parents to Story County, Iowa, where he spent his entire adult life.

On December 29, 1886, he married Miss Flora Gearhart. Eight children graced their home in the progress of the years, all of whom were present at his bedside during his final illness. The children are Mrs. R. E. Torry and Mrs. T. A. Cummings of Colo, Iowa; Mrs. Arnold Sealine, Stanhope, Iowa; Mrs. Earl Bowen, Mrs. Harland Witmer, Mrs. E. B. Riehardson, and two sons, Lee A. and Arthur, all of Maxwell, Iowa. They together with one brother, Ora of Zearing, Iowa, twelve grandchildren, and his widow, survive him.

Bro, Fish's desire was to remain to greet his returning Lord, but such could not be, for in spite of all that medical skill and tender care could do the enemy conquered, and Bro. Fish was laid to rest to await in dreamless sleep the Master's call to life and glory.

The funeral services were conducted by his friends of many years standing, J. W. Williams of Gladbrook, Iowa, and O. J. Allard of Ccdur Falls, Iowa, assisted by Rev. B. H. Guthrie of his home city.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

On the first Sunday in November, Pastor Norman John MacLeod of the Los Angeles church will speak on "Our Sacrifice." His subject in connection with the Communion service will be "The Altar of Incense."

It pays to send our young people to the state and national conferences where they not only become acquainted with other young people of the church, but also have the opportanity to meet many whose writings appear in The Restitution Herald. Sr. Claude Graham writes that since attending conference the young people in her home "can hardly wait for the paper to come each week" to see who has written for it whom they have met at conference. It adds greatly to the interest we feel in an article if we have met the writer.

Golden Rule Home was saddened on October 11 by the death of Mrs. Mary Crowell, an old lady nearly ninety years of age, who for the past eighteen months has been a boarder at the Home. During her stay with us she endeared herself to all by her patience and cheerful nature. She was practically blind and confined to her room all the time. She had never united with any church. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor of the Oregon church and was largely attended.

Another member of Golden Rule Home whose condition at this time gives considerable anxiety is Mrs. Emma O'Byrne. She, also, is close to ninety years of age and suffering from a lingering ailment which seems to grow worse rather than better. All other members of the Home family are reasonably well, for which we are very grateful.

Pastor G. E. Marsh of the church at Oregon, Ill., has announced his subjects for October 28 as follows: In the morning he will discuss the doctrinal and spiritual teaching of a familiar hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." His evening theme will be "The Bible and Modern Socialism."

Bro. MacLeod says, "You offer a rare opportunity in your request to the ministers to outline their work for the coming months for advance publication in The Restitution Herald." We trust that more will avail themselves of this aid in advertising their work.

The church at Borr Oak, Ind., as you have seen, has added generously to the fund to be used for the purchase of a new vacuum cleaner for Golden Rule Home. A few more like that and we will place a fine new machine at the disposal of Sr. Mick, our very able Matron.

PLANS FOR GRAND RAPIDS

Sr. Craig, who has been so seriously ill, is now much improved and gives the credit to God, who answers prayers.

It is very encouraging to witness the stronger interest in our Tuesday night devotional services. Many are finding much spiritual food and strength from these meetings, and the result is a much stronger spiritual atmosphere throughout the church.

Final plans are being made for our eighth anniversary to be held next Sunday, Oct. 28. Friends from a distance are cordially invited to spend the day with us. Basket dinner at noon, with meetings morning, afternoon, and night.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

GOD'S TWO GREAT WITNESSES

One of the most interesting tracts that has reached us in many months has just come from the press under the title, "God's Two Great Witnesses, or, The Bible and Nature in Harmony." It is the work of J. H. Anderson, who presents conclusive evidence based on the universal testimony of the Bible and nature of the truth of God's Word.

"To understand the testimony of nature," the author declares, "one must find the key furnished by the Bible that will give the meaning of nature's voice." He then draws a striking analogy from nature of the harmony and beauty of the purposes of God in redemption as they are revealed in the Bible.

The covenants, the nature and destiny of man, and the coming of the Lord as taught in the Scriptures are taken up in sequence and discussed in an able and convincing manner. De not fail to send to the author for a supply of these tracts to give to high school and college students. The price is ten cents each. Address all orders to J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Ind.

CONSIDER THE FLOWERS

"CONSIDER the flowers." Jesus often did. During His boyhood in Nazareth He must often have found His way about the encircling hills. He stored His mind with nature images that later became the illustrative material of His parables. He seemed particularly sensitive to the beauty of the flowers, and to a group of everyday folk facing the usual problems of life He said, "Consider the flowers."

BEAUTY HAS A PLACE IN LIFE

The flowers may have many messages of religious significance for us today. They emphasize the place that God has given to beauty. In these days of economic stress we are tempted to measure things by their utilitarian value. We should remember the incalculable energies that work in producing beauty alone. It is a revelation of God's own love of beauty and His will that it have a place in the lives of His children. The deliberate cultivation of the appreciation of beauty, then, becomes a religious responsibility.

BEAUTY IS A FRUIT OF PROPER GROWTH

"Consider the lilies, how they grow," said Jesus. Well, how do they grow? Sometimes this text is read with the suggestion that the lily does nothing and that the Master is suggesting passiveness as a Christian virtue, but in fact, every matured bloom is a result of a definite and victorious struggle for life. There has been a reaching up toward the sun, a digging down into the earth, the assimilation and transformation of plant food, and the withstanding of storms. Of course, a lily neither toils nor spins. It is not expected to by the Creator, but it lives in accordance with the principles that govern the life of lilies, and so comes to a realization of beauty. Is it not Jesus' suggestion that the human life which is to be beautiful should be lived in accordance with certain fundamental principles of God? There is a temptation to feel that beauty can be an external thing, that we can tie on the evidences of a Christian life. We do have artificial flowers, and they serve their purpose, and often become reasonably adequate substitutes for the living thing. Yet no one for a moment would suggest that they could permanently displace the real. And so we have our tricks of speech, and our social and religious conventions, and our customs, all external and many of them in some sense artificial. They are not to be despised, but neither must they be mistaken for the beauty which is a fruit of an inner experience of fellowship with God. The life of Jesus in its perfect beauty was not the result of outward conformity to standard and custom, but to an inner fellowship with the eternal Spirit.

Too Few Good People Are Beautiful

As we have been amazed at the lavish and varied beauty of the fields, we have wondered more than once why so many of the children of God seemed unlovely. Their righteousness cannot be questioned, but they are too often lacking in that graciousness which we associate with the personality of the Master. In the passage from which our text is taken, Jesus makes three suggestions as to the reasons for the lack of beauty in the lives of those who follow Him. For some it is due to a lack of simplicity. Their lives are harassed by too many interests. They are so concerned with things that they miss life's deepest values. For others beauty is banished by anxiety. To them Jesus said, "Take no anxious thought for the morrow." Still others are made unlovely by selfishness. All the currents of their interest run inward, and so life becomes petty and stagnant.

BEAUTY WILL EVANGELIZE

We have discovered in the last few years that men can be neither frightened nor legislated into goodness. They must be allured. When Peter and Andrew left all to follow the Master it was not because they had arrived at certain mature theological convictions, nor that they were afraid of being lost, but they were captured by the strength and beauty of the personality of Jesus. They wanted to be with Him. They had seen life as it might be lived and longed to share the experience. And so today those who follow Him are under obligation to adorn the doctrine, to make goodness attractive, to win others by an interpretation in life of the beauty of the Christian gospel. We do well to pray that the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; but it cannot come by the mere exercise of will power. It will grow as the fruit of fellowship with Christ. We are changed from glory unto glory as our faces are turned toward Jesus. Let us heed the message of the flowers, and so yield our lives to Him that of us, as of Him, it may be said, "We beheld his glory . . . full of grace and truth." -Theodore P. Stephens in World's Crisis.

THE SYMBOL OF OUR BAPTISM

THE GREEK is remarkably perspicuous in construction, and definite in significance.

There are terms expressing the application of liquids in almost every conceivable manner:

Cheo, I pour; raino, I sprinkle; louo, I wash, bathe; nipto, I wash my hands or a part of my person; bathizo, I immerse or plunge, well deep, Irom bathos the bottom; rantizo, from raino, I sprinkle, shed forth; bapto, I dip, I dye; baptizo, I dip or immerse.

Now of all the words indicating the application of liquids, our Savior commanded the action contained in the last, baptizo, as expressing His will, and no other.

If the word used by Him does not mean "immerse" simply, then the Greek language possessed no word that did.

That this was the original institution is beyond a doubt, and it continued the only form of the ordinance for more than thirteen hundred years, except in cases of inability on account of sickness, or in present danger of death. In such cases it was thought that affusion would answer for baptism.—Bible Banner.

The Wonders of the Bible

By J. H. Anderson

THE BIBLE is the most wonderful book in all the world. The fact that we have this book is a wonder. God through Moses began the Bible about 1500 years B. C. and finished it through John about 100 A. D.

In which Mr. Anderson considers his opening dogmatic statement in the light of types and a wealth of Bible texts. Mr. Anderson is Indiana State Evangelist and the author of numerous tructs.

Thus it took sixteen hundred years to give to the world the Book of life. This Book has come down through the changing ages, ever up-to-date and in a world that is different from the one that the writers, who wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, lived in; and the Book is still up-to-date.

God requires that we accept this Book as His and that we believe it. "For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe." "But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." 1 Thess. 2:13; Heb. 11:6; Rom. 10:17.

In Luke 17:5 we find these words: "And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith." We, too, need to have our faith in God, in His Word, increased. With this object in view I wish to call your attention to some of the wonders of the Book. "But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."—1 Cor. 2:9, 10.

The revelation of the good things prepared by God for His people, that no eye ever saw, is given by the Holy Spirit only in the Bible (2 Peter 1:21; 1 Peter 1:8-12). These good things reveal God's love for His children, His goodness, and lead us to love Him, to repent of our sins, and increase our faith in His Word. "Or despises thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?"—Romans 2:4.

This Book provides all our food for eternal life. "But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the pourth of Cod?" "Ar newhorn below design the circums."

mouth of God." "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." Matt. 4:4; 1 Peter 2:2.

The Bible reveals the garment of righteousness that we must wear to remain in the kingdom (Rev. 19:7, 8; Rom. 10:1-3). It also points out how we can put it on (2 Cor. 5:17-21; 1 Cor. 1:30; Rom. 4:19-25). (This faith comes by hearing God's Word.) See Matthew 22:1-14.

The Bible prepares us for all good work and makes us wise unto salvation (2 Tim. 3:15-17).

As many of these wonders, good things, are revealed by the Holy Spirit in the Old Testament we want to call your attention to a number of references in the New Testament to show that the Holy Spirit gave them for our learning. He who passes by the Old Testament fails to enjoy the revelation of many of these good things: for many of these things are revealed in the Old Testament.

"For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope."—Rom. 15:4. "Now all these things happened unto them for types (marg.): and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."—I Cor. 10:11.

As God has had these things revealed unto us in the Old Testament we should search it for the revelation (John 5:39). "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law,"—Deut. 29:29.

The law given by God to Israel through Moses at Mount Sinai was a teacher and taught (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Of No Value to a Thief

"More to be desired are they than gold."-Psa. 19:10.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 23.—Thieves who broke into the Illinois Central freight house here some time last night fled without loot after prying open the only case of goods in the building, all because they did not appreciate the value of its contents. Had they appropriated to their obvious needs the goods the box contained they would very soon have restored to the owner all they had taken away. The case contained a shipment of Bibles.

Hitler to Abandon Church Control

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free."—Galatians 5:1.

Berlin, Germany, Oct. 25.—The Nazi Administration is planning to discontinue its efforts to control the religious situation in Germany. This was made apparent when Chancellor Adolf Hitler refused to allow Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller to take an oath of loyalty to him today or at any other time. It seems probable that the Nazi church movement will be altogether abandoned owing to the strong opposition it has developed everywhere. (See last week's "Abreast of the Times.")

The Chancellor evidently feared that even foreign relations might be detrimentally affected by his attempts to dominate the church, as much resentment against Germany has been aroused in Protestant countries which might have its unfavorable effect upon the German foreign market.

Alien Influence in America

"Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; . . . for they will turn away thy son from following me."—
Deuteronomy 7:3, 4.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 26.—Most of the changes in national thought which have taken place in the United States in recent years, and which have resulted in widespread disorder and disregard for law, are directly traceable to the presence in America of millions of more or less radical aliens, asserted Col. E. M. Hadley in an address before the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday. The Colonel observed with anxiety the "Communistic tendencies" of the country, and denounced the Secretary of Labor for not exercising her authority to deport criminal aliens.

He stated that the recent wave of strikes and terrorism was instigated by alien Communist agitators who had been encouraged to carry on their activities when the United States "went out of its way to recognize and shake the bloody hand of Soviet Russia. And in Washington today," he continued, "we have the backyard of Moscow."

The seeds of Communism, which is but another name for the political philosophy of the Antichrist, are being broadcast throughout the world. Watered by depression, they have developed rapidly, and already in Mexico have influenced the Government to close the churches in three states and to threaten the exclusion of all religious efforts throughout the republic.

Mexico City, Oct. 25.—Several persons were killed at Hercules, Querctaro, just outside the state capital, by police and soldiers who fired upon each other by mistake when both forces mistook the other for persons attempting to prevent the carrying out of the Governor's order to close all churches. Anti-Catholic elements, encouraged by the support of Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former President, moved to bring about the expulsion from Mexico of all archbishops and bishops.

Jews Deny "World Plan"

"The Lord shall make thee the head, and not the tail . . . . . if that thou hearken."—Deuteronomy 28:13.

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 28.—A lawsuit opens here tomorrow in which Jewish leaders hope to prove to the world the alleged falsity of the mystic document which paints Israel as seeking the domination of the world, declares a report by the Associated Press. The trial has to do with the validity of the so-called "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," to which attention has been called previously in these columns.

According to Jewish leaders these documents have gained wide circulation, and been twisted by the Nazis into a watchword of the "Jewish Peril," corresponding to the former Kaiser's "Yellow Peril." The Jews deny absolutely the alleged dreams of world dominion. They plan to bring witnesses to prove the documents are fraudulent and that no meeting of Jewish elders ever was held to devise a scheme of world hegemony. In a future issue we hope to present the Hebrew evidence and viewpoint in full.

Conquests of the Godless

IN OUR former article attention was directed to the fifty million children in Russia who are being reared not only in antichristian atmosphere fostered by the Government, but are being assiduously taught from their earliest years that there is no God. We quote the following Wrong will not always conquer, declares the Editor in this, the second of two articles on the development of atheism. For a time the spirit of the Man of Sin will be exceedingly busy, however, laying the foundations of his future kingdom of unrighteousness, which is to be destroyed at the Lord's coming.

extract from the German paper, Koelnische Zeitung.

"In almost every street one will see a 'kindergarten' sign. There the children (under eight or nine years of age) play in really nice rooms and learn to read and write. And in the kindergarten the formation of the child mind along Bolshevik lines is made to begin with the assurance in the simplest letters of the alphabet that there is no God.

... By this means, as the Bolsheviks believe, they can make some headway against the deeply religious tendencies which still persist among the masses of the Russian people."

Millions of little children are being taught that it is their patriotic duty to consecrate their youthful energies to the destruction of religion in all its forms not only in their own land but throughout the world.

Our own interest in these things would not be so great if it were not for the fact that thousands of young people reared under the atheistic influences of such schools in Russia are creeping into America. Many are entering the country legally with their parents, many more illegally without them. They are bringing with them their sacrilegious and blasphemous ideas and seeking to introduce them into our own schools and colleges. Furthermore, they are succeeding in no small measure in accomplishing their purpose.

The youth organizations of Russia have their counterparts in the United States in the "Young Communist League" and the "Young Pioneers." Some years ago the writer witnessed a Communistic demonstration in the city of Los Angeles in which the first person arrested for attacking the police was a thirteen-year-old girl who headed the procession. This little girl presented the appearance and manifested the disposition of the violently insane as she scratched the faces and tore the clothes of the officers who strove to restrain her.

Reporting a similar Communistic outburst which took place in London, England, A. C. Gaebelein, author of The Conflict of the Ages, says, "Girls hardly four feet tall used fists and fingernails as the police tore from their hands banners that advised the Boy Scouts (who were holding a great rally in London at the time) to desert that organization and join the Young Pioneers," to which they themselves belonged.

That political Communism, and its inevitable accompaniment, religious antagonism, will ever reach a dominant position in this country is to be doubted, although in the neighboring republic of Mexico it is making rapid strides. This country may never become politically Communistic throughout, although there is at the present time a decided trend in that direction. But it may become atheistic. Atheism is but a logical step beyond indifferentism in religion. And indifferentism is fostered by carelessness in doctrinal teaching. This is the thing for Christian America to fear, the conquest of positive religious convictions by general indifference.

America and American institutions were founded upon religious idealism. The bulwarks of our nation were built upon faith in God. The Bible was the original source of early American law. Its divine standards of righteousness have been the moral code of our people. It has been recognized and acknowledged as the most sacred object by our courts of justice. Our presidents and lesser officials are sworn into office with their hands upon its pages. The very roots of American independence and of American principles of government are deeply embedded in the teachings of this Book. To blast it wholly out from under the foundation of the nation would threaten the entire superstructure with destruction. "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?"

The activities of the godless, made doubly dangerous by being included in the world revolutionary program of Communism, which hopes to force religion out of all lands by law, are to be extended to all parts of the earth. God has foreseen all this—He has foretold all this! His word has gone forth and will be verified by events.

Thus far it has proven true in every detail. The Beast of the North has ventured forth time after time. But God has spoken against him, He has restrained and hindered his advance, for the God of Israel is against him and all his works. "I am against thee, O Gog," He cries in Ezekiel 38:1-4: "... and I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords."

This vast godless host has gone forth—once—twice—three times! But each time almighty God has put hooks into their mouths and drawn them back to their frozen steppes, for the time was not yet ripe for the accomplishment of their final punitive expedition against backslidden Israel when they would be employed as a means of bringing upon that people a last violent outpouring of divine judgment.

Of Russia it may be said as Paul stated of the Jews who crucified Jesus: "Because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning him."—Acts 13:27. Because the Russian leaders knew not the Lord Jesus, nor yet the prophets which their priests read each Sunday in their rich and beautiful churches and cathedrals, they, too, have fulfilled these predictions in turning against God and in preparing for the great time of trouble, in which they are to exert a leading influence.

What Russia is experiencing today all the world must pass through tomorrow! Today it is Russia without God! Tomorrow it will be the world without God! Our only hope of deliverance from this onrushing calamity is faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ and obedience to Him in baptism and a life of service!

As we look about us in peaceful America, where we can meet in safety for the worship of God, it is hard for us to realize that today there is a nation with a population larger than our own, where it is a serious offense to teach a little child to pray to God, to kneel at his mother's side and say, "Our Father which art in heaven"!

The Russian Soviet Republics cover a territory of more than eight million square miles, compared with the less than three million of the United States, and this entire vast region is governed by men who have no place in their plans for God except to (Please turn to Back Page)

"I Didn't Ask to Be Saved"

JOHN HAYNE was a young man much given to the use of profane and reckless speeches, and when the village pastor was talking to him one day about his soul's welfare, and asked him if he was not grateful for the offer of salvation, he said:

"No; why should I be? I didn't ask to be saved."

"Well, you will have to ask, or you will not share in the unspeakable blessings," replied the minister; and noticing a look of surprise now stealing over the young man's bold face, he continued:

"A young relative of mine was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, and for hours was in a state verging upon unconsciousness. After lying a long time on the damp ground, he became aware that there were voices near him, and although he could not so much as move one of his fingers, or his cyclids even, he thought he felt a hand placed upon his soft heart. Then he became aware that it was a nurse—he knew that it was a woman by her voice—pleading with the surgeon, who was on the field, to make one more effort to save some poor fellow's life. Presently he realized that he was the object of her solicitude.

"'He is so fine looking, and so strongly built,' said the nurse. 'His natural vitality must be great. Besides, sir,' she continued, in a reverent tone, 'he may have a wife, or a mother, or a sister, praying for his safety.'

"'It is no use to spend our time over him,' answered the surgeon gruffly, 'but if you wish to stay by him you can. I can do nothing more for him, and must move on. Remember if you remain you will run the risk of being left alone here in the night on the field.'

"''Very well,' replied the nurse bravely, 'I will take the risk, and do all in my power to save this fellow, and only immediate attention can avail now."

"Presently the soldier became conscious that his jaws were being gently forced open, and that some powerful stimulant had been given him. It was not long before he revived sufficiently to be carried to the hospital, and in good time he entirely recovered. His life had been saved through the prompt and faithful efforts of that devoted nurse

"Now what if I should tell you," continued the pastor, as he looked into the face of the young man who had just made the coarse and flippant speech, but who was all attention now, "what if I should tell you that that soldier was ashamed of the noble young woman who had risked so much to save his life, that he subsequently went about bragging that he had never asked her to save him, that he had not the least acquaintance with her, that he refused to acknowledge even that she had been any service to him, and never mentioned her name except in a slighting, reviling way?"

"I should say he was a mean, contemptible ingrate," replied John Hayne impulsively. "He was not fit to live; his life was not worth saving."

"Very well," said the pastor; "but this nurse by only a little temporary sacrifice of comfort on her part, at the same time being in pay of the Government, was the means of prolonging the soldier's paltry life for a few brief years in this world of care and sorrow. Jesus Christ, the divine Lord, suffered on the cross, and died for you to redeem you from sin, and now offers to make you an heir of eternal life. And I have never known you to speak of Him, or of those who try to love and follow Him, with common respect even."

"My dear sir," replied John Hayne, "I never looked at this thing in this light before. Of course an ungrateful person is the meanest person living. I promise as much as this now: I will never use the Lord's name lightly again."

The pastor did not press the subject any further at that time. He had set the young man to thinking. Not long afterwards, John Hayne was converted, and he says that little lesson on ingratitude brought him to a saving knowledge of Christ.—Sabbath Advocate.

Some Historical Interpretations

By Norman John MacLeod

"We tooked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble!"-Jeremiah 8:15.

The Bolsheviks, upon the overthrow of the Czarist regime in Russia, heaped ridicule upon the League that was formed at the end of the World War. They called it a league of cut-throats, a congress of highway robbers, a gathering of corrupt capitalists. No terms of reproach or scorn were severe enough for the Russians. They thought that the League was the worst institution extant. On the other hand those peoples who were fighting Germany thought of the Russians as the outcasts of civilization, barbarians, and murderers. But the world does change. Many things have happened since the days when the throne of the "Czar of all the Russias" tottered and fell.

Russia knocks at the door at Geneva, and the nations there present admit her as a worthy companion. What has wrought the transformation? What has eaused the "leopard's spots" to change? Have the Russian people suddenly, overnight as it were, become civilized? How have the one-time "barbarians" taken on a different aspect in the eyes of the world? Have the other nations changed so as to make Russia more like them? Or, rather, has political expedient spoken to the nations on both sides? What things have happened to make the change?

Several events in the world have strangely coincided. Our President returned from a trip to the Hawaiian Islands: the fleet returned to Pacific waters in spite of the fact that it was withdrawn as a friendly gesture to Japan. Japan has withdrawn from the League of Nations. Italy is preparing for a great "unknown" war. Italy and France agreed to get along with one another until a treaty which is already prepared shall be signed next year. Japan and Turkey ally themselves after several years of efforts at rapprochement. These things seem strange indeed on the surface.

Japan and Russia are playing "hide and seek" figuratively with the League of Nations. Japan's withdrawal from the League has been one of the factors in drawing Russia to Geneva. Russia, like the United States, entered "unofficially" into many of the negotiations that went on there. She was especially concerned (as Czarist Russia also was) in the problem of "disarmament." Russia, because of her lack of naval power and because of her great land and air power, is a powerful factor in any armament discussions. She is always desirous of having her neighbors on the continent of Europe reduce their navies. (The Czar was the originator of The Hague Conferences for that purpose.) Any "disarmament" discussions always stir the "colossus of Asia." But these are not the only considerations.

France always finds it convenient to locate allies on the eastern side of Germany. If Poland is "on the map," she is usually in close alliance with France. Napoleon I recreated Poland when he was master of Europe. France and the United States saw to it that Poland was recreated in 1919. But, Poland has allied herself with Germany, much to the chagrin of France. France must, therefore, find another friend. And that friend could be none other than the "barbarian" Russian. By joining the League of Nations, Russia makes herself one of the "good" nations, one of the guarantors of the "fruits of victory." How strange that Russia should come in to secure the existence of the "succession nations" of the Near East, and of Eastern Europe. Only by gaining some concession could Russia deign to join her erstwhile enemies, to guarantee the security of France. Russia has become almost completely an Asiatic nation by the adjustments of the Treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Versailles. (The latter treaty little aftered the map made by the former.) Russian interests center more clearly in the field of the Far East. Siberia becomes more important in the Russian scheme of things. Definition of spheres of influence of Russia and Japan in Manchuokuo and Mongolia become paramount. Russia is trying to gain security for her Far Eastern dominions, just as France is trying to gain security for her German frontier. With Japan out of the League of Nations, Russia might be able to find some friends there among the former friends of Japan. Russian policy ever since the war has been to hold tight rather than advance into new territory. Consolidation rather than expansion has been the watchword of Russian policy, because the rest of the world was against her. That policy has brought her friends in most unexpected quarters in Asia: in India, Sinkiang, and China. But other changes have made Russia acceptable in the eyes of the world.

Bolshevism is not the naughty word that it was some years ago. Moscow has received a generous supply of whitewash even here in America. Difficult as may be the process of changing hatreds and prejudices of whole nations, the thing is accomplished with surprising dexterity. We formerly thought of the Russian as embodying everything that was unlovely, uncouth, and generally uncivilized. That was when we were stirred by the outrages committed by the Russians upon some of the downtrodden Balkan peoples. The threat to British dominance in India had its influence upon our thinking here in the United States. During the period of the Russo-Japanese War (1904-6) the Russians became even worse in our general opinion. The terrible "bear that walks like a man" would

Like Him Who Was Different

REDUCED to its simplest terms, the call to the Christian life is a call to become like One who was altogether different from the men of His time—or of any time. Jesus of Nazareth was "different." From whatever angle one views Him as the Gospels reveal Him moving among the people of His own times the striking thing about Jesus is His difference. He simply does not fit into His own times at any point. The more we study Him and His times the more we are impressed with that difference.

Think of how He differed from the religious leaders of His day. The Pharisees, for instance, put compliance with the rabbinical law above everything else, even human welfare. Jesus, on the other hand, while He always observed honored customs where no principle was concerned, deliberately broke with tradition every time it interfered with the highest good of man. The scribes were mere copyists. Jesus was "not as the scribes" but spake "as one having authority."

Think of how He differed from the "society leaders." The Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans; but Jesus did not hesitate to sit at a public well by the side of an outcast Samaritan woman that He might lead her into a knowledge of truth. The Jews would not eat with Roman tax-gatherers and others classed as "sinners" merely because they did not conform to Jewish rites; but Jesus freely accepted their hospitality. Many demanded that a religious teacher should lead a life of asceticism; but Jesus mingled with the people in their social gatherings.

Think of how He differed from political leaders. They were constantly endeavoring to stir up the masses against Rome; but Jesus said. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." Their ambition was to establish a temporal kingdom with the Messiah as king, sitting on the throne of David; but Jesus fled from them when they sought to make Him king. They placed their dependence upon force and strategy and sagacity; but Jesus commanded, "Put up thy sword," and taught that "blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Think of how He differed even from His disciples. They were constantly actuated by the desire for place and power; but Jesus said, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister," and He took a towel and girded Himself and washed their feet! They said, "Be it far from thee," when He suggested that He must suffer and die; but Jesus set His face steadfastly toward Jerusalem, confident that only as He was "lifted up" as a loving sacrifice could the world be won from sin to God. They would call down fire from heaven upon men who would not extend hospitality to them, but Jesus looked down upon those who crucified Him and said, "Father, forgive them." In short, the people of His day put first their own selfish desires, the furtherance of their own interests, the establishment of their own opinions and prejudiees, the dominance of their own wills; but Jesus put first the will of His Father in heaven, even though the doing of that will led Him through Gethsemane to Calvary's cross. He was absolutely different from the people of His times, even from the best of those who called themselves His disciples.

Jesus was also wholly different from the common views and opinions and attitudes of our own times-very different even from the finest and highest type of twentieth century Christian discipleship. The typical and dominant attitude of men in the most enlightened Christian civilization of our own era is still far short of the attitude of Jesus. We still contend for our own ways. We still teach, "Look out for Number One." We still call men fools if they wear themselves out in unselfish service. We still argue that nothing but loss can follow whole-hearted acceptance and application of the principles which controlled the life of Jesus. The difference between the typical way of life and the Jesus way is strikingly set forth in a stirring little poem by Jessica Nelson North, entitled "A Warning." She depicts first the well known point of view of the world, a point of view endorsed in theory by many Christians and in practice by many more, and then in two startling lines, the point of view of Jesus:

"Draw in the latchstring, lad, and close the door,
Lest those who faint without from toil and pain
Should rob thee of thine own too meager store.
Can one poor crust sustain those famished forms?
Can one poor shelter save them from the storms?
And surely those who wait and watch in vain
Shall turn and rend thee when thou hast no more;
So draw the latchstring in and close the door.
There was a man who flung it open wide—
But he was crucified!"

Yes, Jesus was "different." That will be freely admitted. But here is the truth which is so difficult for us to accept: The call of the Christian life is a call to be like Him who was different.

Suppose all men were like Jesus, instead of being what they are. Suppose all grasping for gain should give place to loving service. Suppose all struggle for supremacy of whatever kind should disappear and that all men lived "not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Suppose that instead of trying by force to compel men to conform to our conception of "a Christian nation" all should actually live the life of love that Jesus lived. Would we not then have a truly Christian world? And do we not wish it were that kind of a world? Then why not sacrifice every other thing to the dominant purpose to become like Him who was different? "Never man spake as this man," were the words of His disciples.—Bible Faith Mission Standard.

Absent From the Body

Ry David L. Norrie, M. A.

IT IS the generally accepted doctrine of Christendom that the dead in Christ are not truly dead at all, but are alive in heaven in a state of conscious bliss. The popular view, in fact, cannot be better stated than in the words of the poet who said:

"There is no death; what seems so is transition."

But the Scriptures never explain away the fact of death in this fashion. They accept death as a reality, and instead of saying, "There is no death," they speak of a time still future when "death shall be no more" (Rev. 21:4, R. V.).

MISUSE OF THE BIBLE

One noticeable result of the popular view is the widespread forsaking of the language of Scripture on this subject. It is well known, for example, that the Scriptures, in recording anyone's death, use repeatedly such words as these, "He fell asleep" (see Acts 7:60). But before me, as I write, there is lying an In Memoriam card, which begins as follows:

"In Memory of ### Who awoke into life."

When C. II. Spurgeon died at Mentone, the following telegram was sent to his anxious congregation: "Our beloved pastor entered heaven at 11:15 on Sunday night." The words are certainly in striking contrast to Peter's statement on the day of Pentecost that "David is not ascended into the heavens," but on the contrary, "he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day" (Acts 2:29, 34).

The late Dr. Joseph Parker put the word "ascended" instead of "died" in the inscription on his wife's coffin, and outside the City Temple he announced her death by the following notice: "She is not here: she is risen: she met her Lord face to face on Thursday night at half past nine." We know of only One in Scripture concerning whom it was said, "He is not here: He is risen," and that was our Lord Himself; and of Him the words were uttered not when He died, but when He lived again on the morning of His resurrection, and His tomb was found empty.

But there are some who go yet further than this in their misuse of Bible language, for I read recently an obituary notice which stated that a certain good man had been "translated." Enoch is the only one in the Bible to whom this word is applied, and we read that he "was translated that he should not see death." We read further that he "was not found, because God had translated him" (Heb. 11:5). No tombstone was ever put up bearing the inscription—"Here lies Enoch"; but it is more than probable that this recent case of so-called translation would be proved in a law court to be a case of simple burial after all.

Paul told Timothy to divide rightly the Word of truth (2 Tim. 2:15). But through failure to observe this precept men are applying to the state of death the language which Scripture writers use to describe the glorious life that will be entered upon at the resurrection. We are repeatedly reading in religious magazines how this or that servant of God has "gone to his reward," and this in spite of Christ's statement in Luke 14:14—"Thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection." Or again when some one has just been laid to rest in the grave, we will hear the officiating clergyman speak of "our brother who is now in glory," albeit the chapter from which he has just been reading states that "it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory" (1 Cor. 15:43); and it is not till the resurrection, when Christ our life shall appear, that we also shall appear with Him in glory (Col. 3:4),

2 Corintilians 5:8

Now, is there no foundation in Scripture for the current belief concerning the state of the dead in Christ?

Paul's words in 2 Corinthians 5:8, which form the title of this tract, are perhaps those most commonly quoted to prove that death is only a change of life to the believer. "Absent from the body, . . . present with the Lord"—surely, we are told, that makes it plain that death is simply a transition, and that the saint passes out of the body and goes straight into the Lord's presence. We grant that the words might well be used to support the doctrine if the doctrine itself were true. The first essential is to have a foundation of sound doctrine, and for this purpose we do well to turn to the book of Genesis and learn first what life and death are according to the Word of God.

DEFINITIONS

In Genesis 2:7 we read—"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." This is very simple, and we learn that—

- 1. Man was made of the dust, but as yet he had no life.
- 2. God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and the result was that
  - 3. Man became a living soul.

We would naturally infer that as the breath of life was what made man live, the withdrawal of that breath would make him cease to live. And this indeed is just what death is. For in Psalm 104:29 we read, "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust." "If he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath," said Elihu, "all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust" (Job 34:14, 15). Again what happens at death is thus described in Ecclesiastes 12:7, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit (or breath) shall return unto God who gave it."

Now it is evident that at death something goes to God. But it is not the man, but only the breath which made the man live. Popular theology virtually rewrites Genesis 2:7 to suit its theories, and what most people around us believe is something like this: God made a body of the dust of the ground, and breathed a man into it. Then it is believed that this man leaves the body at death, and (if he is a good man) returns to God. Thus it is that 2 Corinthians 5:8 seems to fit this view, for the man is now supposed to be absent from the body, and present with the Lord.

But we wish to emphasize that both in the Old and the New Testaments we never read of anything but the spirit or breath returning to God at death. And the spirit is not the man. Man's personality is identified in Scripture with his body. Before ever the spirit or breath is mentioned we read that God formed man of the dust. He was as yet a lifeless man, but he is called MAN. It was not a body merely which a man was presently going to inhabit. But it was a lifeless man whom God was about to make alive by breathing into him the spirit or breath of life. According to Job 14:10, man dies and wastes away when he gives up the ghost, that is, when he yields up the spirit or breath; and in harmony with this, when Stephen had prayed to the Lord to receive his spirit, he fell asleep, and devout men carried Stephen to his burial (Acts 7:59; 8:2). Jesus also, our Lord, who in all things was made like unto His brethren, commended His spirit to His Father, and then we are told He yielded up His spirit (Matt. 27:50, R. V.), thus truly dying for our sins. Theology teaches that Christ came down from heaven, took upon Him a body in the likeness of sinful flesh, cast off that body on the cross, and returned to heaven. In what sense, then, did Christ Himself die? Clearly He did not die at all according to popular teaching. But certainly He died "according to the scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3).

Now the question is, Do we believe what God says or what man says? I have done nothing but let the Scriptures speak for themselves, and much more evidence to the same effect might be given to prove that death is a reality, and that what dies is the man himself.

FUTURE INCORRUPTIBILITY

What, then, does Paul mean when he says we are "willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord"?

He could not have been speaking of death, for our study has just shown us that at death (that is, when God withdrew His breath from the Apostle), he would be carried, as Stephen was, to his grave, and not to heaven.

Besides, Paul himself taught repeatedly elsewhere, as Christ had taught before him, that it was only when the Lord Himself returned from heaven that the saints would be ushered into His presence. "If I go and prepare a place for you," said Christ, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3). By His second coming He cannot mean the death of the believer. The Lord's glorious appearing, which Paul would fain hasten, and which he calls a blessed hope, is surely an utterly different thing from the gloom of death, whose coming even orthodox Christians try by every possible means to prevent. When death had come into the church at Thessalonica, the Apostle sent them a message of comfort. But he did not tell them that the Lord had come for the departed saints, or that they were now absent from the body, and present with the Lord. He did speak about being "for ever with the Lord," but he made that blessed experience depend absolutely on His second coming. "I would not have you to be ignorant ...' he says, "concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. . . . For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, ... and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (1 Thess. 4:13-17). The word "so" is very emphatic and means "in this way." Not, then, by their dying, but by Christ's coming, would they be present with Him.

Now, if Paul's hope and consolation for himself was to be present with the Lord when he died, as many think, why did he tell the Thessalonians that their dead friends would have to wait till the resurrection? Were they not all members of the one body? And as there was one body, was there not also one hope (Eph. 4:4)? Assuredly so, and they would all be "caught up together to meet the Lord" at His coming.

We are satisfied, therefore, that Paul could not be cherishing any private hope of going to heaven at death, when he said he was "willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord."

IN VIEW OF THE CONTEXT

Let us remember that these words are found in one of his early Epistles, when the possibility of his living till Christ appeared was very present to his thoughts. And it is in the light of this hope that his words must be understood.

Let us examine the context of the passage, and we shall find how beautifully it harmonizes with his teaching elsewhere regarding the one hope of the church.

"We that are in this tabernacle," he says, "do groan, being burdened" (2 Cor. 5:4), a statement which will doubtless find an echo in many hearts today. It is, of course, a figure of speech. Paul likens his body to a tabernacle or tent. He presently changes the figure and speaks of it as clothing. But the meaning is simple. He is speaking of this present life, and it is a life during which he oftentimes groans and is burdened.

Now it is of the utmost importance to note that the Apostle does not want to be houseless, but to exchange his present house for a new and glorious eternal house, a building of God. By this he means the new and glorified body which he would receive at the coming of the Lord. He does not wish to be divested of his clothing and be naked (and by this figure he represents the state of death), but he desires to be clothed upon with his house from heaven (verse 2). Now in harmony with this he says in Philippians 3:20, 21 (R. V.), "Our citizenship is in heaven; whence also we wait for a Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall fashion anew the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory."

The Apostle Paul knew of no other life for the believer than "the life that now is" and "that which is to come" (1 Tim. 4:8); the one is the present temporary life which we already possess, the other is the future eternal life of which we are heirs and for which we hope (Matt. 19:29; Titus 1:2). The present life is lived in a "natural" body; the future life will be lived in a "spiritual" body (1 Cor. 15:44). The Scriptures know nothing of any DISEMBODIED life for men. If Paul had expressed a desire simply to be absent from the body, we might have supposed that he referred to some disembodied state of existence. But when he says his desire is to be "absent from the body, and  $t\phi$ be present with the Lord," we are forced to conclude that he wished to be absent from this body of humiliation, and to be present with the Lord in the body which the Lord' would fashion anew for him at His coming.

CORRUPTION VS. INCORRUPTION

We can see now why the Apostle says, "Whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord."-2 Cor. 5:6. How could be enter the Lord's presence in this body of humiliation? He had once had a glimpse of his Lord's glory on the road to Damaseus, and the sight had blinded him and struck him down to the earth. So, too, the Apostle John, who had once lain on the bosom of the Lord Jesus in the days when His glory was veiled, fell down at His feet as one dead when that same Jesus unveiled His glory to him in the Isle of Patmos (Rev. 1:17), But John had a confidence that he would yet look upon his glorified Lord without fear, and the reason for his confidence was that "when he shall appear, we shall be like him" (1 John 3:2). Not then in the dress of this mortal flesh, but in a new and glorified body like unto "the body of his glory" will the saints be presented to the King. For if "there is a natural body, . . . there is a spiritual body. . . . Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual" (1 Cor. 15: 44-46). "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption."-Verse 50. There must be a change, and the change will be on that glorious day of resurrection when this mortal puts on immortality, and this corruptible puts on incorruption (verse 53). Not death, but the victory over death by resurrection, or still better by translation, was the Apostle's hope. He knew that if the Lord delayed His coming mortality would soon be swallowed up of death, and hence he longed not to be unclothed (that is, to die), but to be clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of LIFE (2 Cor. 5:4). Verse 3 is a fine expression of the Apostle's yearning desire to live on till Christ came: "If so be," he says, "that being clothed (when the Lord returns) we shall not be found naked." If the Lord's coming should indeed find him unclothed or naked (that is, in the state of death), other passages show us that resurrection was his hope, when death would be swallowed up in victory (1 Cor. 15:54). But better far was the other swallowing up, even the swallowing up of this mortal life by a glorious immortality without dying at all.

NEW WEIGHTS FOR OLD

In 2 Corinthians 4, which should not be separated from chapter 5, the Apostle had spoken much of his mortal body and the sufferings if had endured. What a poor battered body it must have been. Nothing indeed but the excellency of God's power could have sustained it. The stoning, the cruel scourgings, and all the other terrible experiences of which he speaks in his eleventh chapter, had doubtless left their marks on the fragile earthen vessel. There were the marks, too, of care, for the care of all the churches came daily upon him, and withal there was his thorn in the flesh that he knew would never depart from him till he himself departed to be with Christ, when the grace that now enabled him to bear and to rejoice in his sufferings would be crowned with glory unspeakable, and these sufferings would vanish like a dream in the night. "I reckon," he once said as he thought of it, "that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us" (Rom. 8:18). But the earthen vessel could not contain the fullness of that glory, any more than new wine could be put into old wine skins. How gladly, therefore, would the Apostle exchange the old body for the new one in which he would be free forever from all "weariness and painfulness, and hunger and thirst"; when the burdens that now made him groan would be exchanged for an eternal weight of glory that would make him sing for joy; when his thorn in the flesh would no more buffet him, and when no chains would again bind him save those that bound his heart to the heart of his Redeemer.

Such was the constraining power of that Redeemer's love that service for Him even in this mortal flesh was glorious. But whilst Paul greatly rejoiced in such service, yet this consideration was ever present to his thoughts: Whilst he was at home in this body he was absent from the Lord; and he was willing rather to have done with this body of humiliation in which the service of an absent Lord was so sweet, and to receive a new and glorified body in which he could be at home with the Lord and serve Him in His presence forever.

HOW TO STUDY THE BIBLE

Bu H. A. Sheets

IN our study of the Bible we must remember that it is a collection of books written by inspired men to meet some need of mankind. Some messages were to a captive people struggling for freedom. Some were to wicked Gentile people, and other messages were warnings of punishment which would surely follow future transgressions. There are messages to the Jew, the Gentile, and to the church of God. There are probably no two books or epistles which were written with the same object in view.

Knowing these facts, it becomes obvious that we cannot read the Bible as we would some novel. To know God's Word we must study the Bible by subjects. A good Bible student once told us that he started to study the Bible by reading it through. After he had read it through six times he could read better but discovered he had learned very little. One must study by subjects. To do this a good concordance is a very necessary help, although one can get much help from the marginal references. A good concordance, such as Young's or Strong's, will not only aid in study by subjects, but will give much added information about words, their uses and meanings.

Let us take baptism for an example. A concordance will give every reference to baptism. When these are looked up one will discover that baptism always followed acceptance of the gospel and repentance. One will discover that it was always administered in the name of Jesus Christ. He will find baptism likened to death and burial, which would lead to the conclusion that single immersion constituted baptism. If one still wondered if sprinkling was baptism the concordance would show that "baptism" meant "to dip" or "to immerse"; then by turning to the word "sprinkle" and looking up all references where the word is used one would discover that it was never associated with baptism. Thus one would discover that the Bible in no way authorizes sprinkling as baptism. By following this procedure one can soon learn to rightly divide the Word of God.

COMBATING COMMUNISM

According to Scott Pearson, a London journalist, everywhere that Communists have preached atheism in England, a society known as "The Christian Evidence Society" is preaching Christ.

Pearson says, "This is a most successful Christian organization, whose speakers have conquered the Communistic parts of London with their presentation of facts to show the way to God. They deserve their success largely because their Secretary, a well known religious writer—C. L. Drawbridge by name—gives his time to this work, day and night, freely. His men are drawn from every social sphere."

THE WONDERS OF THE BIBLE

in types. "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith."—Gal. 3:24. "Now all these things happened unto them for types (marg.): and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."—1 Cor. 10:11.

"For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect."—Heb. 10:1. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."—Col. 2:16, 17.

It takes three things to make a shadow: first, a light; second, an object; third, something to catch the shadow. Christ is the light; and the good things to come, things of the kingdom, the object. Christ shining on the good things of the kingdom to come threw their shadow back, and it was caught by the law. So by looking back to the law we see a shadow of the good things that the Holy Spirit reveals that God has prepared for those that love Him (1 Cor. 2:9-16). As the law contains a shadow of future good things, it follows that the giving of the law foreshadows the bringing in of those good things or the setting up of the kingdom: for it is in the kingdom that we find the antitype, the good things to come (Isa. 25:6-10).

Angels and righteous men of past ages have had a desire to see these things, but no mortal eye ever saw them; yet God has revealed them by the Holy Spirit to the students of His Word (Matt. 13:16, 17; 1 Peter 1:8-12; 1 Cor. 2:9-16).

The journey of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land is a type of our journey to the kingdom (1 Cor. 10: 1·13). All the good things God promised them will be ours when we see the good things to come. "For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will be withhold from them that walk uprightly."—Psalm 84:11.

However, we are taught in the Bible that to reach the kingdom we must go through much tribulation. "Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter the kingdom of God."—Acts 14:22. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

Thank God our trials will soon be over, but the good things that He has prepared for those that love Him are eternal.

In our next article we will consider the giving of the law as a shadow of the good things to come in the kingdom.

No Greater Infamy

No political tirade is necessary to see in the nomination of Upton Sinclair, turncoat Socialist, to the governorship of California the greatest infamy ever committed against the historic religious principles of this nation.

For the American people ever have stood for freedom of speech, thought, and religion; and Upton Sinclair is the incarnate opponent of all this. The entire Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments, of the United States Constitution guarantees unlicensed religious liberty.

To quote from one of the numerous Sinclair books: "From that time on Christianity has been what I have shown in this book, the enemy of social progress." "But now the social revolution is coming; coming upon swift wings—it may be here before this book sees the light. And who knows but then we may see in America that wonderful sight which we saw in Russia, when Christian monks assembled and burned their holy books, and petitioned the State to take them in as citizens and human beings."

On the contrary, of course, Mr. Sinclair issued this statement in the same volume: "This book will be denounced from one end of Christendom to the other as the work of a blasphemous infidel. Yet it stands in the direct line of the Christian tradition; written by a man who was brought up in the church, and loved it with all his heart and soul. . . . A man who thinks of Jesus more frequently and with more devotion than he thinks of any other man that lives or has lived; and who has but one purpose in all that he says and does, to bring into reality the dream that Jesus dreamed of peace on earth and good will toward men."

Mr. Sinclair suffers from an egomania so pronounced that one wonders why he has not been examined by an alienist long since. He is, nevertheless, merely a symbol of the modern trend to the Left, a trend which, if unchecked, can result in nothing save the near or total abolition of Christian thinking from the earth.

Were all the political machines of the world heated to positive incandescence in pouring out arguments to prevent the election of Sinclair, were all the churches to devote their time to nothing but white-hot diatribes against this type of Antichrist, there would still not be a sufficient expression against the downright blasphemy of the utterances of him and his fellows.

Jesus Christ taught peace and good will; He did not dream them. Jesus Christ, endued with infinite wisdom and a capacity for never making a mistake, knew precisely when His teachings would assume a concrete form. The kingdom of God, which was to be the incarnation of everything good and the eternal abolition of everything evil, was coming as certainly as sunrise follows sunset.

Sinclair is a mark of the preparation for the Antichrist, whose rule will cover in atheistic splendor the greater proportion of the surface of the earth. Sinclair himself is nothing. It is what he represents that is a danger both to the church and to the nation.

"Every church is necessarily a money machine, holding and administering property." This is Sinclair's argument. This is the argument of every Socialist and Bolshevik since the world began. And is there any crime in it? God Himself, contrary to Sinclair's most ardent speeches, ordained the church as the possessor of property of every sort, the recipient of every form of gift. The church, in Jesus' teaching, was the ruler of the nation, not the nation of the church.

Our fathers died that liberty might live. And Sinclair and all his ilk are determined that liberty shall die. The Messiah of the world endured the greatest ignominy and the most excruciating agony that freedom could hold sway. And Sinclair and those he represents hold forth against every principle that Jesus ever taught.

"Woe unto you, Doctors of Divinity and Methodists, hypocrites! For you send missionaries to Africa to make one convert, and when you have made him, he is twice as much a child of hell as yourselves."

Such empty shibboleths as these place the stamp of an ignorance upon Sinclair that astounds one with its vastness. It was the church, seeking converts, that discovered and built America into what it is today. It was the church that brought civilization, comfort, and prosperity where superstition, savagery, and poverty had reigned before. It was the church that gave Sinclair the freedom to speak as he might please.

Sinclair, in effect, is one of the signs of the times. Politically, he is important; but religiously—and we are concerned primarily with the religious aspects of the matter—he is outstanding. For, opposed to his own asseveration, his doctrines are not "in the direct line of the Christian tradition," but are the exact antithesis of everything that tradition represents.

Sinclair, in common with those who follow after him, is a worshiper of self—already noted as an egomaniac. God, whose wishes he purports to venerate, never suggested that man, through his own unaided thought, would succeed in establishing Utopia, perfection in government, economics, and society.

The salvation of the earth rests not with Sinclair, nor with any of his principles, but with the kingdom God has promised to set up—a kingdom which will be essentially capitalistic. No plan, not even EPIC, if it be of human origin, can eircumvent that fact.

THE GOOD NEWS JESUS BROUGHT

DON'T you like to be the one to carry a happy message to another? Isn't it fun, when something specially nice is going to happen, to have Mother ask you to run over and tell Grandma all about it? You feel just like a king or a queen dispensing good fortune to those about you. You bring smiles and happiness, where before there were cares and worries, and light hearts in place of heavy ones.

Now that word "gospel," which you read so often in God's Book, means just that—good news, glad message, tidings of joy. And who was the one chosen particularly to earry this happy news to others? Jesus, of course; God, His Father, chose Him, and the message was a most important, as well as a very happy, one.

The news, naturally, would be something about God's people. Also, it would be something in which Jesus, His Son, as well as Himself, was concerned. And further, if it were really good news, it would tell them something they were longing to hear, something that would make their heavy hearts light, their sad faces bright. Let's see if we can find out what it was.

Do any of you know where the verse at the top of the page is found? Yes, it's from the "Beatitudes," or "Blesseds," as we sometimes call them. (And that word "Beatitudes" also means "happy.") They are found in the sermon Jesus gave on the mountain side, and are in the early chapters of Matthew's book—five, six, and seven. Turn to the place in your Bibles, girls and boys.

Right here may I pause just a moment to ask you always to get your Bibles and read them along with your Children's Page? If Mother or some one else reads to you, always ask for the Bible along with The Herald. You'll learn so much more that way about the wonderful things there are in God's own Book that He wants you to know.

All right, let's turn to our "Blesseds." Look in the chapter just before, verses 23 to 25. Now we can find out something about that good news Jesus was telling. It was good news about God's kingdom. That's very easy to understand, isn't it?

God's kingdom, we all know, was in the promised land of Palestine, or Israel. If you are not sure of that, look back in 1 Chronicles 28:5; it's found in other places also, but that one is very plain. We know, too, that God's kingdom came to an end because the people no longer followed Him, but worshiped idols instead.

But there's something that every one doesn't know, and that is that God is going to have His kingdom and His King on earth again, some time soon, we believe. And another thing, His kingdom won't be only in the land of Palestine, but it will include the whole earth, even our own beloved country.

But what makes us say that's good news? Isn't the United States good enough for us? We can worship God as we think right, and we have fine schools. Yes, but look at those verses again in Matthew 4.

While Jesus preached about God's kingdom, He showed the people what it would be like by healing the sick, restoring the blind and deaf, curing the crippled, and bringing happiness to all. We don't have any one that can do that for everybody even here in our own good country. Some cannot be healed by the very best of doctors.

Now when something very, very nice is going to happen to us, we generally have to do something to deserve it, don't we? We must help Mother get ready for those guests we love to have come, and we must make things just as pleasant as possible for everybody, both before they arrive and after.

Well, it's the same way with God's good news. If we want to share in it, there are some things we must do to be worthy of that honor. I wonder what sort of people He'll have in His kingdom? If Jesus is to be the King, and we know He is, we will have to be the kind of people He'll want around Him. And if He went about doing good while He spread the glad tidings, we will have to try to follow His example.

There are nine happy traits named in our lesson that those who wish to be in God's kingdom must begin now to cultivate. When you cultivate flowers, you tend them very carefully. You keep the soil soft and moist, and you keep the weeds all pulled out. Let's think of these nine traits as good, strong plants, and the kind deeds we must do as the blossoms. The more you cultivate smiles, the lovelier your disposition will be; the more you practice gentleness, the sweeter your thoughts will grow, and so on.

Then, when King Jesus comes, as we know He is, we'll be ready for Him, and He will have some good news for us to carry to those who haven't already heard it.

Did you add the letter C to your poster last week? This week we add H, the next letter in the word, Christian. Look at 1 John 3:16.

LESSON 6. — November 11, 1934

THE CHRISTIAN CITIZEN

Galatians 5:13-26

Devotional Reading: Micah 4:1-5

GOLDEN TEXT

All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.—Matthew 26:52.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian Citizen.

Aim: The one who lives in harmony with the teaching of Christ is the most useful citizen of his country.

Basic Truth: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."-Gal. 6:7.

I. The Cause of War. (Gal. 5:13-18.) Nations are made up of human beings. They exhibit the composite qualities of their individual citizens. A State whose people are actuated in their individual lives wholly by selfishness and pride will manifest in its international relations those same governing principles. Those business men who "devour one another" in the accomplishment of their selfish ends will find in time that those whom they choose to make and to enforce the laws which regulate commerce will also "consume" them with taxation. Selfishness and pride are the most prolific causes of war.

II. The Works of the Flesh. (Vv. 19-21.) It is obvious that much of the cost of government is made necessary by crime. "The works of the flesh" named by Paul in this lesson cost the expenditures required to maintain our courts, lawvers, penal institutions, and most of our insane asylums, together with the military and naval arms of the Government. Sin is expensive. The total eradication of these "works" will be accomplished when the kingdom of God is established in the earth, but not before.

III, The Fruit of the Spirit. (Vv. 22-26.) No lawyer is needed to plead the cause of one who "walks in the Spirit." No law exists that condemns him for the fruit he bears. He is seen to be from the standpoint of usefulness the most valuable member of society. Peter declares that civil officers of the law are appointed, and approved of God, not only "for the punishment of evildoers," but "for the praise of them that do well" (1 Pet. 2:14). If the rulers of the nations possessed the qualities exhibited by the Christian, there would be no war, for the same elements of character that make the followers of Christ good fathers and mothers, sons and daughters, also make men and women good, useful, peace-loving, and law-abiding citizens.

GOLDEN TEXT

"All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."-Matt. 26:52.

These were Christ's words to Peter when he drew his sword and cut off the ear of the servant of the high priest at the time of the betraval, but it has been so from the beginning. In Genesis 9:6 we find, "Whose sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." Again, in Exodus 21:12, "He that smitch a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death." Then, in Leviticus 24:17: "And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death."

Our sword should be "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God" (Eph. 6:17). "For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twocdged sword."-Heb. 4:12. Let us all learn to use the sword of the Spirit.-L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Christian Citizens

-express Christian ideals; embody the motives for peace; are the backbones of leading nations; -lead in all reform movements; -exalt all nations where they live.

Christian Citizens. The national benefits that come to a nation because of its Christian citizens are fittingly described in Proverbs 14:34. "Rightcourness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people." Lack of this type of savoring and leading influence among the nations of the world today is causing them to retrogress. Christian citizens respect and obey the laws of their country. Their lives are such that it is never necessary to legislate laws or enactments against them. "Against such there is no law." The ideal Christian is an ideal citizen. He makes prayers and supplications for kings and for all that are in authority and keeps in mind and puts others in mind to be subject to principalities and powers and to obey magistrates (1 Tim. 2:1, 2; Titus 3:1).

Peace Advocates. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."-Matt. 5:9. Christians are real advocates of peace. They live peaceably with all men; therefore, their teachings on peace are practical and applicable. Among the fruits of the spirit which are produced by Christians is listed peace. To be a true follower of the Prince of Peace one must be an advocate of and practice peace. There is folly, however, in shouting, "Peace, peace; when there is no peace" (Jer. 8:11; 14:13-15).

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Thinking Peace Instead of War

Like everything else connected with God's far-flung plans for world redemption, the attainment of universal and lasting peace is a progressive accomplishment. No part of the plan will be brought about out of its turn, World peace will come, warfare will cease, and permanent harmony at last prevail among all nations; but such a happy condition will not come through unaided human agencies, however lofty their purposes may be.

The peace promised for this age is that which the individual believer in the gospel experiences when he finds in Jesus Christ a Deliverer from sin. Then he knows a "peace which passeth all understanding," but it is a peace of heart which the world cannot expe rience.

Peace of this kind is a mental condition which may be built up and strengthened by prayer and meditation. Like immortality (Rom. 2:7), the peace of God is something for which we must seek if we would obtain it. So Peter admonishes: "He that will love life, and see good days, let him . . . eschew evil, and do good; let him seek peace, and ensue it."-1 Pet. 3:10, 11.

Thinking peace one toward another will aid the Christian materially in living "peaceably with all men" (Rom. 12:18), and in putting into practice the advice the Apostle gave to Timothy when he said: "Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart."-2 Tim. 2:22. The things we think about the most we come in time to do habitually, and to think peace will lead to actions leading toward peace.

If the nations could develop a peace-seeking attitude toward each other, rather than a self seeking and suspicious one, strife might be brought to an end and good will be made enduring. We know, however, that nothing but the coming of the Prince of Peace and the establishment of His kingdom in the earth will be able to work such a complete and lasting change as this -G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: How to Be a Christian Citizen.

Jesus gave us two important rules which we should all remember: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God"; "thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."

Just think what kind of world this would be if everyone would follow these two rules. (Have children talk about how they think the world would be.)

We would all be ideal Christian citizens if we lived according to these rules.

For our work today we are going to study the "do's" and "don't's" given us in our Sunday school lesson.

Divide your paper in half. On the first part at the top write, "Do to Be Christian Citizen." In verses 22 and 23 of our lesson are the "do's." (If your children are small, instead of using these, have children tell things we should do, or if children prefer to do it.) Write these words on the first half of the paper.

On the second half write, "Do Not to Be a Christian Citizen," The words to be written in this part will be found in verses 19, 20, and 21 of our lesson. (Again teacher and class may prefer to work out their own list.)

As we like to think of a flag in connection with being a citizen, let us draw the Christian flag on our page between our "Do and Don't Rules."

We will learn the two rules Jesus gave us as given at beginning of lesson .-- V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

RALLY DAY AT HOLBROOK

October 21 was Rally Day for the Church of God at Holbrook, Neb.

The weather was ideal and the attendance was above the une hundred mark.

Sunday school began at 10:00 a.m. Preaching by Bro. Grover Gordon at 11:00, basket dinner in the basement at noon, and a program of songs and recitations at 2:00 p.m. composed a very pleasant and profitable day.

A ten and a half pound daughter arrived at the home of Bro. and Sr. Charles Hornaday Wednesday, Oct. 17. The little miss has been named Mary Lou.

Received unsigned.

GRAND RAPIDS TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

In appreciation to God, who has almost miraculously restored Sr. Craig from her recent serious illness, our group is motoring to her farm near Marne for the devotional service next Tuesday night.

Plans are all set for the church anniversary next Sunday. Eight years ago our little church was erected. The intervening years have seen many changes, some dependable brothers and sisters falling in death and other new faces coming to enlarge the group. Some have worked hard and made many sacrifices. As in the case of most churches, there have been both joys and sorrows, good things and bad, encouragement and discouragement. But through it all God's hand has been evident, and we feel grateful that He has brought us through each experience and now stretches out the future for us to use in labor.

Sr. Hanson of Lebanon, Ill., mother of Bro. William Hanson, was a visitor at our Sunday school October 21. F. E. Siple, Pastor.

SERVICES AT FELIDA

October 11, we went to Felida, Wash., and had a meeting that night and on Friday night. On Saturday there were three meetings; also on Sunday, with lunch in the basement on Sunday, Brethren were present from Corvallis, Gladstone, and Portland, Ore., and Vancouver and Menlo, Wash.

At this meeting a subscription was taken to make repairs on the church building; also, arrangement was made for a younger preacher than the writer, who has been in this field since May, 1906.

The electric lights installed just before this meeting are a help to the eyes of the old as well as an improvement in the looks of the church.

A. T. Harlan died September 1, 1934, at the Multinoma Hospital, Portland, Ore., aged 70. Mr. Harlan had been a sufferer for many years, having been injured while working in a logging camp. He was baptized by the writer at Corvallis, Ore., in 1928.
On October 8 I was called to Vancouver,

Wash., to conduct the funeral service for Rachel Nugent, who died at the home of her son George near Felida, Wash., aged 90.

I was called back to Vancouver on the 10th to conduct the service for Ida May McIrvin, who died at Tacoma, Wash., on the 7th at the age of 70.

pioneers of that place. A. W. Darby.

PRAYER STRESSED AT FONTHILL CHURCH

Our hearts were gladdened again on Sunday, Oct. 21, when four more were baptized. Three of these were reported in our last writeup as having presented themselves for this step of obedience. The fourth one, Sr. Lila Smith, Ridgeville, Ont., responded to the gospel call on Sunday night and yielded herself to the Lord. Lila has been considering this action for some time. She is a member of our Truth Seekers' Class and has taken an active part for several months. We welcome these into the body of Christ and bid them Godspeed in their new course of life.

We have adopted a new plan in the general assembly of our Sunday school, Truth Seekers' Class, and our weekly Bible class, whereby turns are taken in offering prayer. For some time members of the young people's class have been offering prayer at Sunday school, and each session of the class is opened with prayer by one of the members. We are booked at present for weeks ahead, and the nice part about it-none refuse, but all accept gladly, and we have been amazed at the wonderful prayers these young people offer. We expect to have this same plan in operation in the other fields.

Everything is in readiness for our All-Day Meeting at the Falls church. A large attendance is expected. Our work at the Falls is being expanded. Our next report will cover this additional work. Plans are also in the drafting for the organization of a Sunday school at Welland.

Word just reaches us that Bro. Ernest Shute is confined to the bed with pneumonia. We pray the Father's richest blessing to rest C. E. Randall, Pastor. upon him.

HOSKINS - HAWKINS

The church, filled with friends and relatives, witnessed, Wednesday, Oct. 17, the nuptial vows read by the writer, uniting in holy wedlock our daughter Carol A. Hoskins to Benjamin F. Hawkins.

Under candlelight and fall decorations did they stand that God might join them together as husband and wife. Piano selections and the bridal chorus were played by Mrs. Roy Palmer, accompanist to Mrs. George Savage, who sang "Oh, Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly."

Mr. Hawkins and his wife are members of this church, and we do pray that their lives will be as Paul describes, "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God,"

Their new home address is 220 14th Avenue North of this city (St. Cloud, Minn.). May its furnishings be an altar of worship unto the Lord. Our prayers go with them on their journey together through life, that they may be "stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

A. E. Hoskins, Pastor.

FROM MCGINTYTOWN, ARKANSAS

The writer of the following appeal believes that an opportunity exists in Arkansas to carry on successful evangelistic efforts. Brethren of the South who know from personal experience the needs of the locality and the ability of the various workers in the state are especially asked to consider this matter. The letter follows.

I thought perhaps the brethren of the Church of God would like to hear from this place and myself as to my work.

Our singing services held each Saturday night are still progressing fine. Our Sunday school continues with a good attendance. I preach here the first Sunday night in each month. I also preach at Bear each fourth Sunday.

I want to say if our Editor will give me space that I have done all that is in my power by the help of God to keep the good work going. I have been called to go to some new places, but I cannot, as I am too poor in this world's goods to go. I have no income and no work. Bear, Ark., is the only place that has even paid my expenses.

Bro. E. O. Stewart of Texas and Bros. O. J. Allard and J. W. Williams of Iowa were in my home the 6th of August and saw the conditions of the crops in this county. They were completely burnt up.

I would be glad to preach and go to the new places, but cannot go unless the brethren help me. I don't want to call on the world

The brethren and sisters at large don't realize the great burden that rests upon a minister of the gospel. I want to say many of our ministers are going to be forced out of the work unless the brethren and sisters help us to carry on, and I want to say anything anyone can do for me will be greatly appreciated. C. E. Weaver, Greenbrier, Ark., Rt. 1.

NOT WITHOUT HOPE

The following letter is from a man who has contributed much to the value and interest of The Restitution Herald through the years, and his companion of whom he writes in sorrow and in hope has also been one of our most helpful writers for many years. God comfort and keep our brother until he walks in eternal paths with his faithful wife.

You have been informed by our beloved pastor (Bro. Magaw) of the death of my beloved companion and helper in fighting "the good fight of faith" and prayerfully striving to "lay hold on eternal life." I sorrow for her absence, but I "sorrow not as others," who reject God's claims and knowingly refuse His proffered mercy, for they "have no hope" (1 Thess. 4:13-18; 1 Tim. 6:12). It is the divinely given "words" of comfort that cheer me in my loneliness and bereavement. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."-Psalm 30:5. our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."-2 Cor. 4:17. The gloom of the grave is scattered by the blessed thought these four words express to believers: "Jesus, and the resurrection" (Acts 17:18).

Yours, awaiting "the kingdom of God" like disciples of apostolic times (Luke 23:51), Rufus A. Curtis.

SUSAN M. WILLIAMS

Susan M. Moats was born in Washington County, Md., December 2, 1844, and died October 17, 1934, at her daughter's home in Ashton, Ill., where she had made her home during the last fourteen years.

She came to Ogle County, III., with her parents, William and Elizabeth Moats, when six months of age, where she grew to womanhood and continued to reside until she removed to Ashton to live with her said daughter, Emma Drummond.

She was united in marriage with Charles B. Williams in 1860, to which marriage two children, Emma Drummond of Ashton, Ill., and Joseph H. Williams of Rochelle, Ill., were born.

Her husband preceded her in death in June, 1916. She was baptized into Christ by D. M. Hudler, September 10, 1894, from which time she walked faithfully in the lighted way that leads to eternal life.

She leaves surviving one daughter and one son, above named, two grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren, together with a host of friends to mourn her death.

Thus ended a long and useful life, rich in faith and good works, filled with noble deeds of kindness and love. She now sleeps and sweetly rests, awaiting the return of our Lord, whom she loved and served in life, to call His jewels from their graves to never-ending life.

L. E. Conner.

EMILY JANE WILLIAMS

Emily Jane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Wideman, was born January 7, 1860, and died October 19, 1934.

She was united in marriage with T. J. Williams November 2, 1884, to which marriage were born four children—Mrs. Minnie Ogle of St. Clair, Mo.; Mrs. Nora Davis of Eureka, Mo.; Mr. Horace Williams of Desoto, Mo.; and Mr. Otto Williams of St. Clair, Mo.

At the age of twenty years she united with the Baptist Church at Grubville, Mo., coninuing as a member of that church for a number of years until, having learned the gospel of Christ more perfectly, she became a member of the Church of God at Morse Mill, Mo., to which she was true and devoted during the remainder of her life.

She leaves surviving, of her immediate family, her husband, two sons, and two daughters, above named; eleven grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; two sisters; and eight brothers; with many other relatives and friends to mourn the loss of a faithful wife, mother, sister, friend, and neighbor, and true member of the body of Christ.

A number of years ago Sr. Williams passed through a serious illness from which she was unable fully to recover, and suffered much during the remaining years. She suffered patiently, looking forward in faith to the coming of the Redeemer with life eternal and to wipe all tears away.

She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting that day. L. E. Conner.

ANGELINE LENT

The Ningara Falls, N. Y., Church of God has lost one of its oldest and most faithful members in the death of Angeline Lent. The major portion of her life was devoted to strict adherence to, and faithful defense of the teachings of the Church of God. Her faithfulness can be traced back to the early teachings she received from that great defender of the gospel, Elder R. V. Lyon.

Angeline, as she was affectionately known to all, never allowed anybody or anything to interfere with her duty to the church. Her service was long and it was good. For the past sixty years she has been a resident of the city of Niagara Falls. In 1874 the family came to the north end of the city, which was then known as Suspension Bridge. She not only saw the rise of the "power city of the world," but, more important, was identified with the beginning and development of the Church of God in this city.

She never married, but she and her sister Elizabeth mothered and cared for three nephews, L. L. Lent, Ransomville, N. Y., C. V. Lent, Lakewood, Ohio, and Dr. J. W. Lent, Niagara Falls. Her faithful care of these during their younger years found a returning blessing in the tender care which the Doctor and his faithful wife gave Angeline in her closing years. She cast her bread upon the waters and it returned to her after many

Funeral services were held from the Bell Funeral Home and burial made in Oakwood Cemetery. Services were conducted by the writer, and the message concerned the hope which she had embraced, lived, and in which she died. She now rests in resurrection hope awaiting the call of the Son of God.

C. E. Randall.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

We are reminded that the international celebration of Armistice Day is at hand. The church at Los Angeles, Calif., will be reminded of the great struggle on Armistice Day, Sunday, Nov. 11, when Pastor Norman John MacLeod takes as his subject, "A Sword Is Sharpened."

Echoes—preceding the detonation rather than following it—are beginning to reverberate in connection with a plensant change to take place soon in the experience of one of our younger and most active workers in the Middle West. We await formal announcement with pleasure.

Bro. E. S. Logan of Lakeville, Ind., calls attention to a statement of Will Rogers which is very much to the point. The famous columnist says, "In October in election years it's awful hard for a sinner in search of spiritual advice to drop into a church and receive any of it, but instead he can hear an awful pretty theological talk on the NRA."

The pastor of the Oregon, Ill., church will conclude his series of Sunday evening addresses on "The Bible and the Modern World" next Sunday with a sermon having to do with "The Permanent Value of the Old Testament."

MRS. JESSIE HARLAN

Jessie Louella Scott, daughter of William and Priscilla Scott, was born in Scott County, Iowa, July 31, 1866, and died at the home of her daughter in North Platte, Neb., September 21, 1934.

She came to Nebraska in October, 1889, and on June 13 of the following year was married to Si W. Harlan. They moved at once to his homestead six miles south of Holbrook. Here they resided until they moved to Holbrook in 1918. To this union two daughters were born, Mrs. Gladys Parish of North Platte and Mrs. Nellie Rocpke, who preceded her in death two years ago.

She was a faithful member of the Church of God for many years, having been baptized in February, 1889.

The sudden death of her daughter Nellie, the constant care of her husband during his long illness, and his death March 9, were more than she could stand. Although in failing health herself, she never complained but was willing and anxious to be at rest.

Besides her daughter, she leaves to mourn: five granddaughters; five sisters, Mrs. Elleabeth Mulford, May Scott, Mrs. Martha lake, and Mrs. Anna Roberts; a brother, John Scott; and a half brother, Clifford Scott.

Funeral services were held from the Church of God Monday afternoon, conducted by Elder Grover Gordon. She was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the Holbrook Cemetery, there to await the call of the Master.

stoop to anything internationally. No crime was too terrible to lay at the door of Russia. But, in a few years, Great Britain and Russia became allies; to be exact, in 1907. The former "barbarians" suddenly became the bulwark of civilization in the benighted continent of Asia. The friend of France and Great Britain, and at that time of Japan, on the east side of Germany to keep her in check, became a very fine people. Russian music, literature, the ballet, and art became ultra-fashionable all over the West. And, during the dark days when the German armies approached Paris in 1914, the Russians were the heroes of the day, for they saved Paris. But again the scene changed. Bolshevism arose. We must resume our hates. The despised people of Russia were in the saddle. The world was really shocked this time by the outrages there committed. Murder by machine gun was the rule of the early Bolshevik regime. But Russia that banished Trotsky, that began to deal with "capitalistic" Western Europe, that deigned to take part in armament discussions, that was recognized by the United States, and has finally been admitted to the League of Nations, has come a long way from the days of 1917. It has been noted by observers of education that the old bedlam and lack of discipline of the early Bolshevik days has given way to the formerly despised aspect of the "bourgeoisie" classrooms of other parts of the world. Patriotism has revived: Russia is a nation rather than the mere leader of the "Internationale." Though still radieally socialist, Russia is not nearly so radical as in the days of yore. The careful political observer will find that Russia has traveled almost back to the point of Menshevism of the regime of Kerensky in early 1917. But at the same time the nations of the West have become more radical. The barrage of writings upon Russia have had their effect. Even in conservative old England and in capitalistic United States, men are beginning to wonder if after all Marx was not right. Would not some radically different form of government from that we have be more in accord with the will of the people? Could we not learn from the Russian experiment? Radicalism does not look nearly as bad to the average citizen of the United States as it did before the political revolt of 1932.

Following the World War Japan became the really great leader of the people of Asia. She came into such prominence in 1905 by the defeat of the great European Power, Russia, that the reverberations were heard throughout the whole of Asiatic dominions. Japan became the symbol of Asiatic nationality, the rallying point of discontent at European domination. Then, during the World War, and afterward, a new Turkey emerged: in spite of defeat and in spite of necessary reorganization, she took on a new nationalistic aspect. Turkey became the rallying point of nationalism in Western Asia even as Japan had earlier in Eastern Asia. These countries at the opposite ends of Asia began to see in each other reasons for friendship. Soon Japanese goods appeared at the permanent bazaars that are held in Constantinople. Then in a few years the two nations exchanged ambassadorial representatives. They recognized each other. But that was not all: in 1926 negotiations began secretly to unite the two peoples in a firm alliance; in 1927 that alliance, offensive as well as defensive, was made. The swift movement of Japan in warfare strikes admiration in the heart of the Asiatic; he can understand that sort of a master. The stubborn resistance of Turkey in the face of disaster likewise stirred the hearts of those peoples. They do not fear the ones that cannot move rapidly toward an objective. Japan's move to start fighting and then to declare war breeds respect throughout the Far East.

All the chancellories of Europe feel the mysterious rumblings of future trouble. Trouble is on every hand. Where will the storm break? The international game of bluff is being played just as it was before the World War. Just when will the various nations concerned refuse to be bluffed? The naval crisis of 1935 (Japan speaks of it as if it were a thing of history) is almost upon us. How will the die be cast? Will Japan win the game of bluff? Or will the other nations refuse to be bluffed and precipitate a war? That is the great question of the day. Mussolini answers by saying that the youth of Italy must be trained to like way. Training mankind to like war is not difficult. Rather has it been difficult to train man to dislike war. Even the common man feels a fascination about the "game of war" with its rules of conflict that remind him of the athletic contest of his school days when he was urged to "do or die" for alma mater. Any little incident will stir that spirit within him. Under such circumstances how long will the coat of whitewash on Moscow last? Would we turn for or against the terrible people who are governed from Moscow?

Close to Russia lies China with its four hundred millions of men and women, the vast majority of whom are also "without God in the world"! India, with three hundred and eighteen million more and an area about two thirds that of this country, has more than three hundred million people without God! Japan, with its eighty-four million of population, mostly without God! According to the estimate of the League of Nations the population of the earth is 1,906,000,000. Consequently, at the present time more than two thirds of the world are without God.

But, praise God, there is light in the distance! The Sun of Righteousness will soon arise with healing in His beams and fill this gloomy world of sorrow with the knowledge of the glory of God as the waters cover the sea!

When, God Calls, "Halt!" to the Nations

THE ambitions of men for national and racial development follow the trails they themselves have surveyed, on rails which they themselves have laid, until God calls, "Halt!"—and then they stop. They can go no further.

The tides of history flow upward on the shores of Time until the Arbiter of the universe cries, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."—Job 38:11. And men and nations and civilizations obey that divine command. Their progress ends, their efforts cease, and the works of men soon sink into the nothingness from whence they arose!

. History provides many striking examples of sudden and dramatic changes that have come about when God called "Halt!" to the nations.

Three hundred years before the birth of Christ the high priest of Heliopolis was asked by the King to write a history of Egypt. Complying with the demand of his sovereign, he prepared his record by dividing the space of time from the reign of Menes to the conquest of the country by Darius II into thirty dynasties.

Some authorities place the beginning of this period as early as 5004 B. C., others from one to two thousand years later. But we are not concerned with ascertaining exactly when the Menes Dynasty began. It is sufficient for our purpose to know that the history of Egypt goes back to an age earlier than that of any other nation of which we have a definite record.

Splendid monuments remain to attest the high civilization that had been developed in Egypt at least three thousand years before Christ. Mathematics, including standards of weights and measures; geography; logical solar divisions of time; a 365-day year, with a calendar composed of twelve months, each of which had thirty days, were already known when the authentic history of Egypt opens.

Remarkable and well-established facts concerning the cultural development of Egypt in the remote past add much to our interest. The Egyptian language belonged to what is known as the Hamitic family of speech and was very ancient. It did not die out as a spoken language until about three hundred years ago.

Between three and four thousand years before Christ a king of Egypt conquered the Sinaitic Peninsula, built roads (which were long afterward followed by the children of Israel in their flight into Canaan), and opened up copper mines in that region the location of which is still well known.

From the days of Abraham onward the Bible furnishes a clear and accurate account of the history of Egypt insofar as it concerned the Hebrew people.

Cultured, talented as a race, far advanced in the arts and sciences of those early days, Egypt is one of a very few nations whose recorded history has come down in an almost unbroken line and rich in detail from the earliest ages to the present time.

But Egypt as a world Power, as a leader in the onward and upward march of civilization, long ago passed from the foreground of the world's picture, for God called, "Halt!" to the long and toilsome advancement of that nation and its people, and its progress was stayed!

We can find no other logical cause for the comparatively sudden termination of its onward and upward march. Egypt ceased to be a power to be reckoned with in the earth when God called, "Half!"

Nature has richly endowed the Nile River Valley. She has given to the region splendid resources for development, and the Egyptians were not negligent in utilizing them. But God called, "Halt!" and the nation's material prosperity and progress ceased. The Nile flowed on between its flower-bordered banks as in the past. The air was as clear, the soil as fertile, the overflowing floods came and went with their wonted regularity. Yet as a power in the earth Egypt died. When the voice of Jehovah speaks, the nation, however strong it may be, is compelled to obey!

After generations marked by constant decay had come and gone, returning travelers from that historic land began to bring back reports of the impressiveness of the ruins they observed on every side, ruins located in a territory that was desolate beyond compare. No human habitation worthy of the name existed in the vicinity where those ancient cities once raised their massive walls and towering monuments of magnificence and splendor. The few people who still inhabited (Please turn to Page Nine)

Powers Speed Arms Program

"And blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles."—Revelation 14:20.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 28.—The report of the Foreign Policy Association made today indicates that the nations are engaged in a feverish armament competition against the threats of war edging over every horizon. In spite of prolonged and repeated efforts to arrive at an agreement on the limitation of military equipment by the leading nations, preparations for war go on with increasing energy.

The following graph indicates the percentage of increase in the expenditures of six great Powers for armament purposes between 1913 and 1934 as expressed in the currency of each country. In the case of Russia the monetary unit has been changed from the Czarist ruble to the Soviet chervonetz, which equals ten gold rubles. The estimate has been made on the basis of the ruble.

FRANCE

1913 - 1,807,000,000 Francs

1934 — 2,273,000,000 Francs — Increase 25.8 Pcr Cent

ITALY

1913 — 927,000,000 Lire

1934 - 1,171,000,000 Lire - Increase 26.3 Per Cent

RUSSIA

1913 - 1,150,000,000 Rubles

1934 -- 1,795,000,000 Rubles -- Increase 35.9 Per Cent

GREAT BRITAIN

1913 - 77,000,000 Pounds Sterling

1934 — 114,000,000 Pounds Sterling — Increase 48.8 Per Cent

UNITED STATES

1913 — 244,000,000 Dollars

1934 - 711,000,000 Dollars - Increase 190.9 Per Cent

TAPAN

1913 — 191,000,000 Yen

1934 — 935,000,000 Yen — Increase 388.0 Per Cent

The report further emphasizes the rapid increase in military expenditures by disclosing the proportion of each nation's budget which is devoted to providing for the support of the god of war. Germany assigns to military purposes 17.1 per cent of her national income; Great Britain, 16.4 per cent; the United States, 17.9 per cent; Italy, 20.8 per cent; France, 22.3 per cent; and Japan, 43.7 per cent.

The time is not far distant when the purpose of these vast expenditures will be revealed, for "the day of vengeance of our God" is at hand!

Church Unimportant!

"Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Jesus.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24.—"We are confronted with more pressing problems," was the response of John B. Blandford, General Manager of TVA enterprises, when asked why it was that no provision had been made for a church in the Government-planned community of Norris, Tenn. With the exception of a church, the town of Norris, which has a population of nearly 3,000, made up largely of the workers on the Norris dam, is almost completed. There is now available a recreation hall and social center, where reading, listening to lectures, and other forms of culture and amusement are provided. These, evidently, are looked upon as necessities. Although not confirmed by Mr. Blandford, the press reports declare that other TVA authorities assert that the Government does not want "sectarianism to obstruct the patterning of lives contemplated by the general scheme; they do not wish competing churches to become an economic drain upon the community." It is said that TVA officials would like to see religion fit in with the general economy, with a community church, in which sectarianism would have no place. This would result in a Government-controlled and maintained church after the order of the one Hitler has vainly attempted to force on Germany.

Brains Cannot Save Country

"The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God."

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 29.—"We have taken our refuge in brains," declared Dr. Walter A. Maier, "but the choicest intellects in the 300,000,000 pounds of American brains have left us helpless. We have tried everything—except the Bible. As well attempt to cure a brain tumor with a haircut," the clergyman continued, as to try to cure the world's diseases with legislation and agreements. Divinity schools and churches "have degenerated into forums for the discussion of economic questions which leave the soul untouched."

Gospel of Liberty

By Arlen Marsh

THE House of Burgesses was in a state of mind. For close to a century, the overruling hand of the English king to whom the House owed its allegiance had urged it on its course with more or less serenity.

But now thunderheads were gathering.

Problems of state had arisen which had divided the House against itself. Ruffled gentlemen strove to preserve the peace and the dignity of the House at the same time. A portion of the Burgesses were beginning to intimate that English sovereignty was fast becoming insufferable. The remaining portion of the Burgesses insisted on the monarchy's integrity, sincerity, and respect for its subjects.

Into the turmoil Patrick Henry projected himself with all the fervor of a Tugwell battling for Planned Economy.

Treason? Burgess Henry sneered at the word. His oratory soared. The Burgesses writhed in their seats before his infamy.

Let you, said Henry caustically to the assembled Burgesses, pursue the even tenor of your ways. Let you despise the birthright of an English citizen. Let you proclaim passivity and a policy of non-resistance toward a code that is grinding us under a heel more iron than Rome's.

But as for me, said Henry, give me liberty or give me death!

And the cause of the Colonies had been stated in seven words. . .

Liberty was the shibboleth upon which America was built. It was a sweet word. Persecutions, political and religious, had made the Old World an unbearable place to live. So the lovers of freedom had commenced the trek to the West.

Puritans and Catholics, political prisoners and debtors, found themselves herded together in considerable proximity along a narrow strip of land that comprised the eastern shore of what now is the United States. The majority of them sought there what they could not find at home—liberty of conscience, speech, and press.

But Burgess Henry was a voice crying in the wilderness. He stood comparatively alone. The Colonies found themselves being burdened with taxes foisted upon them by men who were not their representatives. They found themselves under rulers who exploited them to the limit without regard for the rights every Englishman presumably enjoyed under the Magna Charta.

So the Colonies presently rebelled. Burgess Henry and the few who originally stood by him had succeeded in their purpose. They had incited riot. They had incited revolution. They had finally incited war.

Out of the war came freedom, a freedom guaranteed by as remarkable a document as ever had been evolved by men. That document, having been ratified by a suitable number of the several Colonies, became the Constitution of the United States.

But the citizenry was still dissatisfied. Congress, under the Constitution as it stood, had too much power. The right of free speech and liberty of religious and political thought could be abridged.

So the Bill of Rights was adopted, and became denominated the first ten amendments to the Constitution. That Bill of Rights provided for restrictions prohibiting a licensed press, a State religion, and other efforts to regiment the thinking of the people into a single channel.

The Bill of Rights is America's heritage. It was the child of the Bible. Freedom, as it was understood by the framers of the amendments, was preached first by the prophets of God.

The gospel of Jesus Christ is a gospel of liberty. To the eternal shame of the American people, the Constitution and the flag which guarantee to them the freedom which the Messiah sought for men have become objects of neglect or ridicule.

No man can be a Christian and not be equally a patriot. Christianity and patriotism are corresponding terms. It is possible to have patriotism without Christianity, but it is impossible to have Christianity without patriotism.

These are facts that are forgotten. So imbued do church members become with the idea that the Church is All that they forget that Paul not only spoke but boasted of his Roman citizenship.

Declaration of Independence

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness, That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.

1. 4.40

Rome in the days of Paul was a continual nightmare for Christians. Torture was likely and death a relief for the proclamation of the gospel preached by the Christ. Freedom was an unknown quantity. Romans were gods, and all others were snapping dogs.

Yet, faced with imprisonment in the dank, disease-infested dungeons of Oriental prisons at the behest of Roman rulers, Paul found occasion to impress upon a centurion that he had not purchased his citizenship in the Empire, but had been freeborn.

The Apostle went still further. During the course of his latter life, in which he endured the most violent persecution at the hands of those who governed him politically, he found time to adjure his followers to pray for their rulers and to respect them as a gift from God. Rulers, in Paul's opinion, were a terror to bad works, not to good ones.

It is difficult to see, in a nation in which liberty is taken as a matter of course, why anyone should be moved to go

Prophet, Priest, and King

By Lottie E. Young

THE Prophet, Priest, and King of the Holy Scriptures is emphatically Jesus, the Christ. There have been many of each office, but He is the only One who hath immortality, and it is interesting to note that He assumes these offices in precisely the above order. From the day of His baptism in the Jordan until the moment of His death on the cross of Calvary, our Lord was in the exercise of His prophetic office. This office He reassumed for forty days after His resurrection. The prophets mentioned in the Bible were only sent to the Israelites as a reminder that they had departed from the Lord Jehovah, and that this was His voice calling them back to their covenant obligations and privileges. Their kingdom might be in an outwardly prosperous condition, as in the time of Isaiah; but such prosperity was but a covering for the rottenness of the religious system within, and it served to blunt the conscience and blind the eyes of Israel to that inspired man's message. When the Savior was upon the earth no religionist worked harder than the Pharisees to make proselytes, observing strictly the letter of the law, as well as the rules and restrictions which had been added in the centuries which had passed since the great I AM spoke to Moses; and their success made them complacent and deaf to the greatest of all the prophets who had ever lived.

At the moment of His death our Lord took up His priestly office, offering Himself without spot to God, and this office He will hold until He assumes His kingly office at His second coming to the earth. We know He is now in heaven pleading the cause of His sinning children before the great Father of all, the Intercessor, the Mediator between God and man; the One who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin, and who is alone able to help us in time of trial. When Stephen was being stoned, just before death mercifully released him from his tormentors, he cried, "I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God." Jesus was not sitting, but standing, thus fulfilling one aspect of His great priesthood. As a priest after the order of Aaron He sits at the right hand of the Father, His work being perfected. As a priest after the order of Melchisedek, whose mission was that of ministering to the servants of God, His work is never finished while His followers are in places of suffering and pain, and so Stephen saw Him standing, ready to minister to His dying follower.

His kingly office is yet in the future, but it is one which shall know no end. Thousands of kings have reigned in this earth, but the unwavering record of all has been, "And he died"; but when the last and greatest of all comes, there shall be no more death. He shall reign as kingpriest for a thousand years, until the last enemy, grim old death, is destroyed; so we read in Revelation when John sees Him glorified, and we hear that mighty chorus. "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." The Old Testament predictions concerning a suffering Messiah had been explained away by the rabbis, so that the Jewish people were looking only for a glorious and all-powerful Messiah. A like process, but with a precisely contrary result, has been used by most Protestant denominations. The churches nowadays teach the literal truth of the Lamb of God led to the slaughter with all our sins upon Him, but the part magnified by the Jews of His kingly office is almost forgotten, and few tell of a time when He shall sit on the restored throne of His father, David, executing judgment and justice upon the earth. And yet manifold passages to this effect are to be found in both the Old and New Testament, which are to be taken literally and not allegorically.

Jesus was crucified under the inscription, "King of the Jews," but He also embodied His other offices. The Prophet said, "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but for yourselves." The Priest said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." The King said, "Ye shall see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of power, and coming on the clouds of heaven," as well as promising the penitent thief life when He should come in His kingdom.

"Who Is on the Lord's Side?"

By Norman John MacLeod

ONE of the most dramatic scenes in the entire Scripture narrative is that when Moses came down from the mount after receiving the law from God. Israel had departed from the way. They had made a golden ealf to worship. The consecrated Aaron had led them into disgrace. The patient Moses lost his patience. He upbraided Aaron in no uncertain terms. He caused Israel to drink of water upon which had been sprinkled the dust of their golden image. And then Moses stood in the gate of the camp and called: "Who is on the Lord's side ! let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him." From that day forward the sons of Levi were blessed. God made with them an everlasting covenant. In Malachi (3:1ff) when the Prophet was predicting the purging that shall be at the time of the coming of Christ we read: "And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." That is the priesthood of the new order. Ezekiel in his vision of the new order of worship that shall be established in the great temple that he saw in vision (whether that temple is real or figurative we do not here say) spoke at great length of the position of the Levites in that order of worship. But before we enter further into that discussion let us bring up another thread of the narrative.

When David had rest from his enemies around about him; when he had peace and prosperity; when he had a beautiful palace in which to live, then his heart, contrary to the usual rule, turned to God. The history of Israel is replete with incidents of when they turned away from God in times of prosperity. The history of mankind as a whole is filled with the story of the forsaking of God in times of prosperity. In recent times mankind seem to be forsaking God in times of adversity likewise! Then entered into David's thoughts the desire to build for God a temple. But he was deprived of that honor. Because David had been a man of war (even though he had fought for God's people!) he was not allowed to build that house. That honor should be reserved for his son. But God heaped upon David a reward far greater than the material honor of building God's house. "Also the Lord telleth thee that he will make thee an house. And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom." God told him further that that kingdom should be established forever, that He would not take the kingdom away from David's family as He had taken it from Saul. Even though the sons of David should sin the kingdom would not depart from his house permanently. Solomon broke the covenant made with David his father (1 Kings 2:1-4), for conditions were given there, that it was necessary for the family of Solomon to obey God in order to have a descendant upon the throne of David. Then Zedekiah became such a wicked prince that he was told to "remove the diadem, and take off the erown . . . I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him" (Ezek, 21:25-27). What is the antecedent of "it"? Israel? No, for Israel still exists as a people, and in some respects as a nation. Though other nations have come and gone, many of them having been overloads of Israel, the Jews are still with us. The wicked descendants of Solomon should not possess the kingdom. The house of David should be overturned until Christ should come and He should receive it. Zechariah then says (9:9): "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." The King came, but was rejected. From then His kingdom was not of this age, but of the age to come. Every opportunity was given to the people of Israel to accept Him, but they saw fit to seorn and slay Him. But that is not all that there is to the covenant with David.

"For thus saith the Lord; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings.

The general scheme of the great covenants of the Scriptures is that they are established by promises, ratified by some later event or person, and that then they are finally put into complete operation at the second coming of Christ. For instance the covenant with Abraham was ratified in the crucifixion and resurrection of Christ, and then will be completely set up when Christ comes again. Even so will be the covenants with David and with Levi. The promise was set up in limited operation by the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, and will be completely fulfilled when He comes to reign. Let us read in this connection from the Book of Acts. The early churchmen were in conference at Jerusalem concerning the status of newly admitted Gentiles in the church. After much discussion James said: "Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name."-Acts 15:11. That was the thing with which they were concerned, and perhaps the thing that most vitally concerns us in the entire Scriptures. And then James,

A Memorable Walk

By David L. Norrie

"He showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs."—Acts 1:3.

THREE days had elapsed since the city of Jerusalem was stirred to its depths by the crucifixion of Jesus of Nazareth. Already public interest in Him was abating, for the world soon forgets its friends. The chief priests and scribes who had put an end to His career hated Him and were glad to have done with Him, and they desired only to forget all about Him. There were only a few of His friends who still cherished His memory. The great majority of them looked upon Him as-well, a puzzle. He saved others. Himself He could not save. So they thought. They had admired Him whilst He lived, but now they believed that He had been self-deceived, and that He had also deceived them. Some of them had sacrificed much, and had followed Him in hope of getting positions of honor when He restored the kingdom to Israel, and sat upon the throne of His father David. And now there was some bitterness in the thought that they were made a laughingstock in the eyes of a wise and prudent world, and must go back to their trades and professions poorer than when they left them. They, too, however, would try to forget the past.

But again, there were some who had done more than admire Him, for He had won their hearts' affections; and though He had disappointed their hopes, and though their faith in Him had been rudely shaken, there was something in their hearts greater than faith or hope, and that was the love that "taketh not account of evil," but rather "beareth all things," a love for Himself, begotten in their hearts by His great love for them; and so for these three days they could do nothing but linger around Jerusalem, where He whom they loved was buried. Their love thought of nothing but Himself; and all they could talk about, all they could think about was Jesus.

It was on the afternoon of the third day that two of these men were traveling the road that went down from Jerusalem to Emmaus. It was an eight miles' journey, but they thought not of the length of the road. They were absorbed in conversation, and they walked slowly, like men who had gained their experience, and whose experience had made them sad.

"It seems impossible to believe that we shall see Him no more," said one of them to his companion; "what are we to do now?"

"I do not like to think of the future," he replied; "it all seems dark. We thought He was going to set up His kingdom that day when He rode into Jerusalem."

"What a king He would have made, Cleopas," said his friend. "But it was not to be. Yet He told us plainly that He was our Messiah. Do you think He saw His mistake before He died?"

"On the contrary," said the other, "He could have saved His life if He had denied that claim, but He maintained it boldly before Pilate."

"But on the cross did He not at last confess that He was mistaken?"

"No," said Cleopas, "He seemed to glory in the title that Pilate put over His cross, and just before the end He was still speaking about His kingdom to one of the thieves. My wife was amongst the women who were standing at a distance, and she told me that He died as He had lived—patient, majestic, kingly."

"Tell me all about it," said his companion; and though the story had been told again and again in their hearing, yet once more in earnest tones and grave they talked together of all those things which had happened.

After a pause Cleopas spoke again. "What do you think of the story of the women that He had risen from the dead?"

"I don't believe it," said the other; "for if He could rise from the dead, surely He would have used that power to save Himself from the cross."

"But they say that they saw two angels, who said that He was alive."

"Yes, but they did not see Him Himself, and I am not going to be deceived again. I would never believe that He was alive unless I saw Him with my own eyes."

"Children," said a voice beside them, "what manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad?"

So deep had they been in conversation that they had not noticed the approach of a stranger, who seemed disposed to join them in their walk. There was something so kindly and sympathetic in his tone, that they were content to take him into their company, and share with him their hearts' sorrows.

"Are you only a stranger in Jerusalem?" said Cleopas to him.

It seemed as if a shadow passed over his face as he replied, "Yes, I am a stranger in Jerusalem."

"But even a stranger could not help knowing the things which have come to pass in these days."

"What things?" he asked.

"Concerning Jesus of Nazareth," they answered, "who was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: and how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him. But we trusted that it had been He who should have redeemed Israel: and besides all this, today is the third day since these things were done. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, who were early at the sepulchre; and when they found not His body, they came, saying that they had seen a vision of angels, who said that He was alive. And certain of them who were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but Him they saw not."

The stranger listened as to a subject that interested him intensely. And after they had told him all, it was his turn to speak.

"Foolish men," he said, "this was your Messiah after all. Did not Moses testify of Him, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me'? And you yourselves have borne witness that Jesus of Nazareth was a prophet mighty in deed and word, even as Moses was. And ought not the Christ to have suffered these things before entering into His glory? Was not His name called Jesus because He should save His people from their sins, and do not the sacrifices of your law teach you that there can be no remission of sins without the shedding of blood? This great Passover feast that you have been celebrating, what is it but the shadow of a better sacrifice? And now indeed the Lamb of God has been slain that taketh away the sin of the world."

"These were the very words that John the Baptist said of Him," they interrupted, with surprise in their tones.

"It was needful then that the Scriptures be fulfilled, and that the Christ should give His life a ransom for many. And David likewise testified both of the sufferings of Christ and of the glory that should follow. Have you not read in the twenty-second Psalm, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?'"

"These were the very words of Jesus on the cross," they both exclaimed.

"'They pierced my hands and my feet," continued the stranger, for he seemed lost in his subject, "David wrote not this concerning himself; and, again, 'They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture."

"They did all that to Jesus," cried his astonished hearers; "and do you think, then," they eagerly asked, "that Jesus was really the Christ after all?"

"It is written again," he said, "in Daniel, that after the threescore and two weeks the Messiah would be cut off, and would have nothing. Search and see whether these weeks were not ended when Jesus rode into Jerusalem, according to the prophecy of Zechariah, 'O, daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: . . . lowly, and riding upon an ass.'"

"Truly this was the Christ," they exclaimed, "for He fulfilled all these words. But how, then, can a dead Christ profit us anything?"

"Foolish men," he said, "and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Is it not written in the sixteenth Psalm, 'Thou will not leave My soul in the grave: neither will Thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption'?"

"But does this also point to Christ?" they asked.

"Assuredly," he replied, "for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. You yourselves know that David was left in the grave and saw corruption, but it behooved the Christ to die, and be laid in the grave, and rise again the third day, according to the Scriptures."

"The third day," they repeated. "Does the Scripture also speak of that?"

"Was not Jonah," he replied, "a sign of Christ when he lay three days in the belly of the fish?"

"Now we do remember," they said, "that Jesus told the people that He would give them the sign of Jonah. And this is the third day! Do you think it true, then," they asked excitedly, "that Jesus is really alive again?"

"Fear not," he said, "only believe. Must not the Scriptures be fulfilled?"

How their hearts were burning within them as this wonderful teacher opened up to them the Scriptures. No one had ever spoken to them like this since they had heard their beloved Master speak; and, oh! to think that it might be true that He was alive again. Their minds were strangely agitated between hope and doubt, between joy and despair. Oh, that they might have an infallible proof!

But meantime they had reached Emmaus, and were standing at the door of their lodging. "Will you stay with us?" they asked, and with loving welcome they pressed him to come in, for in truth they longed to sit all night listening to this man as he told them more about their Lord. But to their sorrow he made as if he were going further.

"Where else can you find a lodging tonight?" they asked. "You said you were a stranger here."

It seemed again that a shadow passed over his face as he answered, "A stranger, indeed, in Jerusalem." And then a smile of wonderful grace lit up his face as he added, "But I will come in and sup with you."

What a joy to have him with them. Soon their meal was prepared, and they were about to take their places. when their guest did something that caused them to marvel still more. During the journey he had led them captive by the charm of his speech, and they were honored to be the disciples of such a teacher. But now he was taking upon him another office; for with a quiet and natural dignity that they could not gainsay, he took his place uninvited at the head of their table, as if he were the master of the house; and the men were somehow under a spell, and with unquestioning obedience were content to recline on the vacant couches, waiting to know what this mysterious stranger would do or say next. Nor did he keep them long in suspense. He took up the bread that was provided, and gave thanks for it, and then broke it and handed it to them. But the feast proceeded no further. For, as they received the bread from him, they saw an extraordinary sight. They saw in his hands the marks of cruel wounds. It was the prints of nails. How came these marks there? Was it possible? Yes, this was none other than Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews. With a cry of mingled fear and joy they sprang up that they might throw themselves at His feet to worship Him. But lo, His place was empty. He had vanished from their sight. Up and down the road they looked, but He was nowhere to be found.

Words of mine could never tell the emotion of these two men as they stood looking at each other. Their revulsion of feeling after these three days of despair was beyond all description. Suffice it to say that they were begotten again that night unto a living hope. Christ was alive: He would yet reign, and they would behold His glory. With a joy in their hearts that no man could take from them, they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem to bring word to the disciples that they had seen the risen Christ.

What transpired when they got to Jerusalem, it is not my purpose now to describe. Nor can I tell now of the many other infallible proofs by which our Lord showed Himself alive after His passion. This I know, that for Cleopas and his companion no other proof was needed. And when years came and went, and a scoffing world was denying that Christ had risen from the dead, and was calling the story of His resurrection a cunningly devised fable, these two men found their hearts still burning within them as they recalled to memory how He had opened up to them the Scriptures on the road to Emmaus, and how He had made Himself known to them in the breaking of bread.

"Pretty Soft!"

"I THINK," said Howard, night before last, "that ministers have it pretty soft. Their work's a einch; everybody sets 'em on pedestals, and half their time they're just calling, or going to teas or dining out."

He spoke of clerical ministers, not diplomatic. . . .

Late yesterday afternoon, a ministerial friend of Howard—still clerical and never diplomatic—dropped in to consult the Post Impressionist about getting Howard out of his latest scrape. Our discussion intruded upon the cocktail-hour, wherein, however, the good man was no participant. We asked our caller to remain and dine with us on the roof.

Said he, with that baffling frankness which one encounters in parsons: "I'd better not."

We rudely pressed his honesty and asked him why.

"Because," he explained, "some one from my congregation might see me."

"Is there any harm in a roof garden?"

"Not for you, no. But for me, yes. For me the harm lies as often in what my actions make people think about me as in the actions themselves—perhaps oftener. If certain people of my congregation saw me drinking iced tea at a roof garden, they'd say it was a highball; and if I wasn't drinking anything, they'd say it was a pose.

"The fact is," continued this dominie, "a minister's work is hard; but his position, and the keeping up of it, is harder, and the hardest thing of all is the way people insist on placing him on a pedestal—against his protests—and then try to tear him off.

"Most laymen," he said, "think that all a minister has to do is prepare and deliver a couple of sermons a week, perform the marriage erremony once in a while, visit the sick, and bury the dead. Those duties don't cover half his job. I don't mean he wants to shirk them: he doesn't. But—well, anyway take a look at just one of them.

"Nowadays, the average sermon must run twenty minutes-more, and the congregation won't like it; less, and they'll say the preacher's shirking. Suppose he preaches only Sundays, but at both services. That's 104 sermons a year—call it an even hundred, allowing for visiting elergymen, and vacation, and omitting extra services. He must preach 33 hours per annum. What Senator touches such a record?

"And there's no minister that isn't haunted by the fear of even unintentional repetition. We say our sermons aren't listened to. Right—if we mean 'marked, learned, and inwardly digested.' Only, let one of us preach a year-old sermon over again, or part of such a sermon: a dozen members of his congregation will catch him.

"Then there's the work every minister has to do, but that nobody else realizes—unless he doesn't do it, in which case the whole flock jumps on him like a ton of bricks. I mean Sunday school, Bible class, Boy's Club, Girl's Club, charity bazaars, keeping an eye on the choir, and keeping peace in the Ladies' Aid. Do you think they're easy?

"But the most difficult thing about a minister's existence," said this minister, "is his social life. In every sense of the term, that's pretty awful—because, in one sense of the term, he hasn't any social life at all.

"In the first place, he can't safely make friends. Let him make them outside his own congregation, and his own congregation will say he cares more for people of another religion than for the people of his own religion, so he evidently doesn't think much of his own religion! Or let him make a friend or two among the people of his own congregation, and the other people of that congregation will say he's playing favorites. If such friends happen to be powerful in his church, then he's suspected of being a toady. If they happen to be rich or intellectual, then he's called a snob. And if they're not powerful, rich, or intellectual—why, then his powerful, rich, or intellectual parishioners all turn against him for having low tastes or being a radical.

"What's the result?" asked the dominie.

And he answered his oratorical question:

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

"Nobody can be the close friend of everybody, so the minister must be the close friend of nobody. He must treat everybody pleasantly—and with just the same amount of pleasantness. He must be everybody's acquaintance, nobody's intimate.

"That's in the first place," continued Howard's friend. "In the second place, a minister has to keep to himself because nobody really wants him around. He's invited, and he has to go, but he's more alone away from his home than in it.

"Why? Why, because there are only two kinds of parishioners. There's the kind that say, 'We think a minister ought to be a regular minister.' They expect you never to talk except as if you were in the pulpit—and then they get bored with you; you're a wet blanket. Then there's the kind who say, 'We like a minister to be a man of the world.' So you begin to talk ever so little like one—and they say you're worldly.

"I love my work and believe in my religion. But the parson-pedestal isn't a necessary part of my religion. No sensible minister wants to be put on one, yet every parishioner wants to make a statue of him—and, once he's up, the parishioners all consider themselves art critics.

"Phew!"

It was cool on the roof.

WHEN GOD CALLS, "HALT!" TO THE NATIONS

the land were of the most degraded class, living in vile little huts constructed of river mud. The culture, the art, and the racial vigor of the Egyptian people were gone, and desolation reigned, for God had called, "Halt!" to the empire on the banks of the Nile!

Now let us see, if we may, why such a terrible change was brought to pass. A single illustration will perhaps suffice.

Of the many great cities of ancient Egypt, Thebes was probably the most renowned. Known in the Bible by the first syllable of its Egyptian name, No-Amon, it is called the city of No. Rollin the historian says that Thebes "might vie with the noblest cities of the universe." Homer mentions its hundred gates and its vast population. Diodorus Siculus, who visited Egypt about 50 B. C., and who saw only its ruins, said that the sun had never shone on so magnificent a city.

So massive were the ruins of its defensive walls when Pococke visited the site that he was moved to exclaim, "Without some extraordinary accident they must have lasted for years!" The "extraordinary accident" that overtook that majestic city was the judgment of almighty God! Nothing, however strong it may be, can withstand the destructive power of God's fiery indignation.

Here is the way in which Jehovah pronounced His verdict upon the city of Thebes, No Amon of the Egyptians, and No of the Bible.

"Thus saith the Lord God; I will also destroy the idols, and I will cause their images to cease out of Noph; and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt: and I will put a fear in the land of Egypt. And I will make Pathros desolate, and will set fire in Zoan, and will execute judgments in No. And I will pour my fury upon Sin, the strength of Egypt; and I will cut off the multitude of No. And I will set fire in Egypt: Sin shall have great pain, and No shall be rent asunder, and Noph shall have distresses daily."—Ezek. 30:13-16.

This pronouncement of judgment was written at the spoken command of Jehovah when Nebuchadnezzar ruled Babylon. Thirteen years after Nebuchadnezzar's overthrow, when Chaldea had passed into the hands of the Persians, Cambyses, during his invasion of Egypt (about 525 B.C.), poured out upon Thebes, or No, his insane fury and destroyed the city with fire and attempted to demolish its many splendid monuments.

After a time the city revived, but about 89 B. C. it was again overthrown and has since remained, even as the Prophet was moved to predict, "rent asunder" into nine small villages. Regardless of the efforts made in succeeding generations, it has never been possible to restore it to its old-time grandeur and greatness, and the reason is found in this: "Go up into Gilead, and take balm, O virgin, the daughter of Egypt: in vain shalt thou use many medicines; for thou shalt not be cured."—Jer. 46:11. No man-made remedies can restore national health to a nation upon which has been pronounced the rightcous judgments of God!

The whole kingdom of Egypt was thus doomed to suffer as did its chief cities, when God called, "Halt!" to its progress for all time.

Although successively conquered by the Babylonians, Greeks, and Romans, Egypt remained one of the strongest nations of the East until as late as 639 A.D., at which time the entire country was overrun and subdued by the Mohammedans. It has never since regained its complete independence. It has never since been ruled by a prince of its own royal house. God's Word has been fully vindicated, its inspiration established, and the dependability of its predictions made sure.

Need I ask again why all this came about? It was because God called, "Halt!" to the nation! Listen to His words of resistless power!

"In the tenth year, in the tenth month, in the twelfth day of the month" (observe the exactitude with which the time when this important prediction was made is recorded), "the word of the Lord came unto me, saying. Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him, and against all Egypt: speak, and say, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself." (How many nations speak of their possessions in just that way today!) "And I will make the land of Egypt desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate. . . . It shall be the basest of the kingdoms; neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: for I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations."—Ezek. 29:1-15 in part.

All this has literally come to pass long ages after the words were written by the Prophet, and yet the fulfillment of them has been in such exact harmony with the predictions that the words might well have been taken from the history of the events of which they speak! Such is the foresight of the Lord our God! He makes no mistakes, He never errs, His knowledge is accurate, both His predictions of doom and of blessing come to pass exactly as He has promised.

God has said to all the nations of earth, even as He said to Egypt so long ago, that He will sit to judge them for their sins. "Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in rightcousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."—Acts 17:31.

That day of national judgment is at hand. Already the nations are assembling their hosts to come before Him. "Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision."—Joel 3:14.

Our own country will be judged at that day for her sins! All other nations will be judged for their sins! No people, no kingdom, no race in all the world shall be able to escape out of His hand when the Lord sits to judge the nations for their sins!

When battle lines stretched across a continent, when millions of soldiers representing many different nations in a blasting typhoon of inhuman rage were hurling implements of destruction at each other, when it seemed that civilization was altogether doomed, then the Lord God of hosts cried, "Halt!" to the nations, and "there was a great calm!" The smoke clouds melted away, the tumult subsided, the struggle ceased, and the white-robed figure of Peace appeared once more hovering over the torn and bloody trenches of Europe!

Peace had come because the Lord our God had cried, "Halt!" to the warring nations of men!

And that is the only thing that will ever bring peace to the world. The nations may desire peace, they may agree to keep the peace, they may pray for peace. They may even send every soldier home, dismantle every fort, and sink very battleship in the depths of the sea, but peace, lasting peace, will never come to the suffering, bleeding world until the Prince of Peace Himself shall come, and God through Him shall call, "Halt!" to the nations!

GOSPEL OF LIBERTY

out of his way to impress others with his love for the government that consistently abused him. Nevertheless, the fact remains that Paul did so.

The Christ preached liberty of conscience. He laid down no rigid precepts except one: that which has come to be known, because of its beauty and intense practicality, as the Golden Rule.

Christians have forgotten that. They have forgotten that they owe God thanks for giving them a rulership that believes in and fosters freedom.

Liberty of conscience is a doctrine as essential as the idea that man is mortal and that God is one. Upon liberty of speech, thought, and religion hangs the future of Christianity. Should effort be made to license freedom, to restrict its use, Christianity would immediately suffer.

Patrick Henry called for liberty or death. So did Paul. So did Peter. So did Jesus Christ. And Paul and Peter and Jesus Christ got death. But, through them and the doctrines which they donated to the world, the earth became a place of greater liberty for those who have followed them.

Germany has attempted unsuccessfully to control the religion of its people. Russia is on its way to oust the very thought of God. An unprecedented tide of atheism is sweeping all of the so-called Christian countries.

But America moves serenely onward. Atheism can attack. Religion can falter. But the basis of the nation, founded on the bedrock of the gospel of liberty, remains primarily unchanged. So Christians can still worship as they please.

The Constitution with its Bill of Rights is America's heritage. It stands for freedom and security. It assures to every man the power and the privilege of venerating his Creator in the way that may seem best to him. The Constitution is the political expression of what Jesus sought for men to have.

The constitution of no government can be eternal. No man-made document can be a panacea. Nothing of human origin can exist forever. Nothing of human origin can be perfect.

But this nation has something in the Constitution for which it should be thankful. It has internal peace and the legalized ability to speak and worship as it pleases. Its people need not take to catacombs to hear about their God.

The principles and the government which give us liberty are not matters for neglect. The Christ made no attempt to teach they are. They are matters for serious consideration.

God is thanked for food and clothing and the weather, but God rarely is thanked for government. Yet the one is as important as the others. This is a time for Christian citizens of the United States to awaken to the blessings at their door, blessings which have gone unappreciated and unsung. This is a time to think the thoughts of Paul.

Error on Error

"'No one reads the paper' has been repeatedly told every worker on a paper since Ben Franklin set his first stick of long primer, and has been disproved every time the name of a six year old fairy in the school play was printed Lucy Jones instead of Lucy Ann. Everyone from Grandma to Second Cousin Susan will tell the editor that he should have known the little star's name; that it was wicked to let such a glaring error get into the paper—why, even Lucy would never be the same again without that Ann. 'Squeer, isn't it, that nobody reads the paper, except the issue that happens to print a six point error?"

Credited to "Exchange" by the Blue and White, the four-page daily paper published by Los Angeles High School, Los Angeles, California, this paragraph just quoted strikes at the center of one of the most curious quirks of human nature. It holds as true in the offices of editors of one-horse weeklies as in the offices of city editors of metropolitan dailies. And it holds as true in the every-day life of the average members of humanity as it does in the two other cases.

No one reads the paper except the issue that happens to print a six point error. No one, at least, ever mentions the fact. No one reads the characters of fellow workers except those characters that happen to contain some fault. No one, at least, ever mentions it.

Why humanity is bound to a life of constant censure, it is difficult to say. Nevertheless, it is. Not one person in a thousand does not at pretty frequent intervals comment on some flaw in his neighbor's disposition, taste, or character. The proportion of those who criticize themselves for some such flaws is even smaller.

The mote and the beam are the stumblingblocks for nearly everyone. The beam almost invariably looms larger than the mote—if the beam happens to be in some one else and the mote in oneself. Life is a constant evidence of the necessity—and failure—to practice the ways of Jesus Christ, to overlook the faults in others in favor of the virtues.

Some one must criticize. But that criticism to be of any use must contain something more than bitterness and spite. Constructive criticism is valuable for anyone. The greatest speakers, writers, teachers, and musicians are they who have learned either to criticize themselves effectively or to have others make that criticism for them. But this type of criticism never was condemned by the Messiah. This type of criticism improves and educates.

It is unfortunate that the majority of trouble that arises among churches is due to the propensity of the human race to see the six point error instead of the letter-perfect headline. It is unfortunate because the disease scems to be incurable. No panacea ever has been invented (outside of true Christianity—and how many possess true Christianity?) to make a counterirritant for backbiting and gossip. And that is all most criticism is.

Error on error is heaped on the heads of fellow men by the majority, until finally the best of men find themselves pictured in the guise of the slimy scrpent of the Adamic garden. Choirs are disrupted. Churches are split. And God and all His works are ridiculed by the world as the battle of the Christians flares to a burning zenith.

Dear Editor —

From time to time, I have read with considerable interest of the efforts among Bereans up and down this great land to further the good work and word of the gospel message among young and old alike, in THE RESTITUTION HERALD.

Taking all things into consideration, I rejoice exceedingly at the persistent and steady effort of my associates. Indeed it is good, very good, to see Sunday by Sunday and week after week night, the same faces, all bent upon one objective, viz., searching the Scriptures, for therein is the key to the only door that leads to eternity.

Particularly do 1 wish to make mention of the effort of our younger generation. In this regard, I'm able to form an opinion from lengthy association with those of like precious faith in England. There we had few of the thousand and one worldly attractions with which our old and young are confronted in Los Angeles, and with which I know you have had experience after a sojourn of some two years in our midst. Apart from this, the climate is a great out-of-doors attraction in itself, something which is not altogether true in more northerly regions.

With these things in mind, I rejoice at the steadfastness of our young members; and by virtue of their attention and association with the truth, our church membership has been added to.

Personally I am a firm believer in having a plan in life—a good plan, and sticking to it! Without a plan one is like a ship at sea without a rudder! What builder would go ahead without first seeking plans? What is there excels God's divine plan of the ages, including salvation?

We have a good plan in the form of a Berean outline set before us; we can enlarge upon it if we wish. Our members, faithful and true, are upholding and building out in the West, striving day by day and week by week to see that the Lamp of Truth brightly burns. "For in such an hour as ye think not"—and we believe that time is close to realization. It behooves us, one and all; to be up and doing, for the Master draweth nigh!

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

A GREAT LIGHT AND MANY LESSER LIGHTS

WE ALL love light. Not one of us likes darkness, except perhaps when we are sleepy. Every minute that we are awake, we like to have light about us. Sometimes it is the beautiful sun that shines upon us, sometimes the moon.

In the early evening we like bright lights to study or read by; later in the evening we like soft lights while we listen to Mother or Sister play and sing a sweet song. And a dim light, perhaps only the moon peeping into our window, is enough when we kneel beside our beds to thank our heavenly Father for the good things of the day.

Do you ever stop to think on a cloudy and dark day how dreary the world would be without light? Who was it first brought light to us? Not Edison, nor any of the others who have perfected inventions for giving light. But God!

Thousands of years ago, when darkness was over the earth, God said, "Let there be light: and there was light." Wonderful! All God needed to do was to speak the word, and it happened. Without God, Edison couldn't have given us the bright lights we enjoy.

And though God set the blazing sun in the sky to warm us and give us light and the radiant moon to cheer the night, yet men walked in darkness. Not the darkness we see about us at night, but the darkness of sin. So God sent another light into the world—Jesus.

Jesus wasn't sent to bring us the light of the sun or the moon, but He came to bring the light of happiness, of kindness, of love, of goodness, and of peace to you and to me. Jesus says that if we follow Him, we shall not walk in darkness, but we shall have the light of life. All we need to do is to follow Him.

In our Sunday school lesson for November 18, Jesus tells us that we are also lights. Jesus is the great Light of the world. We are all lesser lights, sending out His brightness to those around us who walk in darkness because they do not know the great Light who will light everyone's way. You will find these words in John 1:9, and in John 12:46.

Let us think of Jesus as a tall, beautiful candle, burning brightly all the time. And of ourselves as having in our hands an unlit candle. Everyone who is alive has a candle in his hand. But who wants merely to be alive and nothing more?

If we want to enjoy life, if we want to be happy and have people love us truly, we must go to that great Light and have our candles lit. The great Light sheds its beams out into the world, and we can see the way we go, as we carry our little candles. Our little lights send out a tiny ray something like the bright ray sent out by the great Light—Jesus.

There is no use in having a light unless we keep it brightly polished, free from dust and dirt. And so we must keep bright the lights we get from Jesus, so that those about us will also want to go to Him and get their candles lit. If we do not keep our lights bright people will think they aren't much good, and they will not honor God who sent that great Light.

And how do we keep our little lights burning brightly? I wish I could hear the answers you give to that question. But since I can't, I'll have to repeat what I think some of you are saying. By studying about Jesus, learning what He did to shed His light, and trying to follow Him in our small way. Is that right?

- "We are little candles, yet we can brightly shine, And show our loving Savior by this tiny sign, How we try to serve Him, His every wish fulfill; For we love Him dearly and want to do His will.
- "Naughty words and tempers are very bad indeed, For they quench our candles, so we must take heed; Harder 'tis to light them, but still we try once more; Ask for God's forgiveness and His help implore.
- "Tears will quench our candles, so we always try
  To keep a happy spirit, and never fret or cry;
  For the One who loves us will guide and teach us, too;
  He tells us in the Bible what we ought to do."

The next letter in the poster you are making of the words, "The Christian," is R. Find a verse beginning with R that tells you something about this lesson. How many are making these posters? Write me a card and tell

LESSON 7. — November 18, 1934

THE CHRISTIAN AS CHURCH MEMBER

Matthew 5:13-16; Acts 2:41-47

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 3:14-21

GOLDEN TEXT

We are members of his body.—Ephesians 5:30.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian As a Church Member.

Aim: The purpose of this lesson is to show that unity of faith and practice is essential in the body of Christ, and that church membership aids in spiritual development and in Christian service.

Basic Truth: "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus."—Gal, 3:28.

- I. The Glory of the Church. (Matt. 5:13-16). The one sweetening, preserving influence in a perishing world! The only illuminating power that points the way out of the darkness of sin in which mankind is groveling! Such is the glory of the church of the living God and of its individual members. Knowing our duty as it is set forth by the Lord in the Sermon on the Mount, and appreciating the wonderful opportunity we have of serving God and man in the world today, we are admonished to devote our hearts and minds and material resources to this splendid task.
- II. The Basis of Unity in the Church. (Acts 2:41-43.) Unity of faith in the gospel, in baptism, in teaching, in brotherly love and devotion to the cause of Christ, brought rich results to the early church. It will do as much for the church today. No progress can be made under a divided leadership; under divided or indefinite teaching; or under inharmonious local, state, or national church couditions. The standard of faith, of practice, and of conduct must be maintained if men and women are to be brought to a saving knowledge of the truth through our efforts. Strangers to the truth must be made to feel the harmonizing Spirit of God working in and through His people.

III. The Fruitage of Unity in the Church. (Vv. 44-47.) "All that believed were together." They continued "daily with one accord" in worship. "Gladness and singleness of heart" were manifested among them. The result was that not only three thousand were baptized on the day of Pentecost, but many more were added by the Lord as time went on. The Lord does not add to the membership of a disunited church, nor does a contentious body find favor with the unbelieving public to the extent that people become anxious to associate with it because they see in its unity of heart and teaching the spirit of Christ.

GOLDEN TEXT

"We are members of his body."-Eph. 5:30.

When one puts on Christ by baptism, he becomes a member of the church. Christ "is the head over all things to the church, which is his body."-Eph. 1:22, 23. Since Christ is head of the church and the church is composed of individuals and you and I are a part of those individuals, what manner of persons ought we to be, to be so closely connected with God's dear Son?

As members of His body, Christians should keep themselves unspotted from the world. Though we must live in the world, we must "be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."—L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

A True Church Member

- -is one by the Lord's making;
- —lets his light shine before men; -glorifies the Father by all his works;
- has the mind of Christ;
- -never knocks but always boosts the work. Church Membership. Membership in the true church of God, whose members' names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life, is entirely in the hands of the Father as far as becoming united with this church is concerned. Read Acts 2:47. If He adds our names to the record, it is logical to then conclude that if there are any requirements which He has made these requirements must be complied with before we can expect to be added to the church. What condition did the early members comply with before they were added according to verse 41? Is it possible to get into Christ and become members of God's church without meeting this requirement (Gal. 3:27; Rom. 6:1-6) ?

Church Workers. There may be many members of local churches that are not active workers, but not so with the real and true church; they are "always abounding in the work of the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58). Idle hands are never found on the true members of Christ's body, the church. They are always pressing forward, plowing onward, and occupying the conquered territory (Phil. 3:14; Luke 9:62; 19:13). One of the joys of Christian living is that which comes from honest and hard toil in this noble cause. "Lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."—C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS Learning From the Early Church

The early church in the zeal it displayed, in its evident concern over the salvation of the lost of all races, provides us with an inspiring example; and in the success that crowned its efforts, with a stimulating incentive to sacrifice and labor.

Jesus places the disciples on an elevated plane of usefulness in the world. "Ye are the salt of the earth . . . the light of the world," He suggests that His disciples by their example and teaching provide the sindarkened world with the only spiritual illumination it possesses. This fact places a weight of responsibility upon us which we may not ignore.

Those who responded to the gospel invitation in the days of the apostles were filled with an exhilerating sense of gladness such as they had never known before. Their sins were pardoned, the sins which separated them from God and condemned them to death! Well might they "rejoice in the Lord"!

But they were not satisfied with their own salvation. They wanted others to share it with them. So "they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them" every where, the Lord working with them" (Mark 16:20). Not even persecution and the threat of death could stay their efforts to "preach unto the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ."

The Lord will work today with a church that is animated with the same missionary spirit that stirred the hearts of the early diseiples with such fervency and zeal. May God help us that we may be thus stimulated and encouraged to carry the gospel into all the world!-G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Why We Go to Church.

As our lesson today is about going to church, I would like each one to draw and cut out a church. Draw and cut the doors in front so you can leave them open. Paste church on piece of paper, leaving doors open.

Jesus wanted people to go to church and become Christian boys and girls, men and women. Just try to imagine what a place this world would be if there were no good people in it. (Get child's description.) Jesus described it by saying it would be like food that had no salt in it. To remember this below our church cut and paste two dishes of food. Under one write "Salt," and under the other "No Salt." Which do you want to be like? Draw a line from the dish you want to be to the door of the church.

Again, draw two burning candles. Put a basket over one. Which one would give the hest light? Which one would be like the boys and girls who go to Sunday school? Which do you want to be? Draw a line from this candle to the door of church.

Now I want to tell you what happened at a church meeting very, very long ago. (Teacher tells what happened in Acts 2:41-47.)

I think it would be a good plan to see if we cannot find another child (candle, or salted dish) to bring to Sunday school next Sunday. If you can we will draw a church; each of you draw a candle for each child that you brought; draw line from candle to door of church, and see who has the most lines. Teach, "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized."—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

TO OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

The Editors of the Truth Seckers' Sunday School Quarterly are considering the advisability of making certain changes in its contents in the forthcoming edition, the first issue of which will appear in December. Before making such changes, however, we are writing the various Sunday schools who use the quarterly asking them to take the matter into consideration and indicate on the blank we are sending them their general preference in the matter. To make it possible for us to include these changes in the first issue of 1935 it will be necessary for us to have returns on our questionnaire immediately. And so we ask that superintendents and teachers cooperate with us in this matter by promptly responding to our letter when it reaches them.

THANKSGIVING IS COMING!

The last Thursday in November will soon be here and with it no doubt will come a Presidential proclamation calling upon the churchgoing people of the country to assemble in their various places of worship and offer thanks unto the Giver of all good for the blessings of the year.

May we suggest that no more effective method of showing our appreciation for what God has given us could be engaged in than for each follower of the Lord to make some little sacrifice in behalf of the gospel of Christ. Hand a "sacrifice dollar" or two to the hard-pressed treasurer of your local church or state conference. Send an offering to some earnest evangelist who is struggling to carry the gospel to those who have never heard it. Or remember at Thanksgiving time the general needs of the Church of God as represented by the National Bible Institution, its publishing plant, and the Golden Rule Home. This would constitute a very practical giving of thanks to God for His goodness.

GRAND RAPIDS ANNIVERSARY

Anniversary Sunday was a pleasant day at Grand Rapids. Several features of real interest helped to give color to the services of the day. And now the church is entering the ninth year of its labors, and we pray this may be a very profitable year in true service to God.

In Berean Sr. Siple's young people's class is still forging ahead as the banner class. Last week there were 34 in that division. The adult class has been working on the tabernacle the past two months, and is getting quite a bit of the materials collected and made for the model. The detail work of figuring out sizes and shapes for all the parts, furnishings, etc., is done, and we hope to have the model pretty well assembled by Christmas.

The senior choir and male quartet are helping with frequent special numbers, and the junior choir is working hard and will soon be ready to serve.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

FORGING AHEAD IN MINNESOTA

The following interesting items are from "The Morning Star," published by Pastor A. E. Hoskins, St. Cloud, Minn.

The Sunday school, following Rally Day, at which 84 were present, continues to advance. Twenty are enrolled in the adult Bible class, while the class of young people taught by Sr. Teichers is moving forward.

By unanimous vote the school decided to pay the banquet fee of all teachers who attended the County Religious Educational Meeting which was held on the 29th. The local churches are considering the feasibility of conducting a Community Training School for Sunday school teachers. We agree that trained teachers are a necessity in a wellconducted and successful school.

We hear good reports of a fine sermon delivered by Bro. Arthur Randall here during the pastor's absence. Bro. Randall comes of a stock that produces good preachers. On the same Sunday the regular pastor was substituting at Eden Valley for Bro. Richard Le Crone, who was undergoing an operation.

Bro. John Denchfield is a busy man these days with his work at Bar's Cannery, preaching at Mora, and rocking the cradle at home.

Attention is appreciatively called to the kindness of the ladies of the church in keeping it clean and attractive, and to the one who gave the load of wood preparatory for the winter.

Bro. Charlie Thoms was given a surprise at a gathering held to show the appreciation of the congregation for his faithful services in looking after the general care of the church.

SAMUEL E. HANEY

Our attention has been called to the death of Samuel Hancy, which occurred April 7, 1934. We have been unable to secure any information concerning the circumstances surrounding his passing, but only the fact that this beloved writer for our columns is now numbered among those who sleep in the Lord.

Bro. Haney was for many years a regular and highly prized contributor to The Restitution Herald, and the appearance of his writings, like those of Bro. George B. Alldridge, whose death occurred during the present year, has been greatly missed by our readers. Both of these men have left a deathless monument to their faith and service in the literary works which survive them.

MISSIONARY WORK IN TEXAS

I am writing this report during a meeting being held near Glen Rose, Texas, October 16. It started with a goodly number present to hear the gospel message given. I held a meeting at this place the latter part of June, running over into the first part of July. Interest justified another meeting. Remember, this is a new place, and we have reason to believe that much good will be accomplished for the Master.

It only shows to the brotherhood what can be done if we will but realize the need and necessity of doing the work. We have put other things first in the past. Before going forth to preach the gospel we had to be assured a substantial salary, thus guaranteeing us that we would not suffer privations while away. And, too, many times we would not even promise to answer a call to preach the gospel unless our salary or a certain amount was promised. And to leave home as the writer did a few days ago to meet this appointment, intending to walk seventy miles if need be, was looked upon with disgust. We as a people have not been as faithful as we might have been.

Just now is a mighty fine time to turn about and manifest a more humble spirit in the Master's service, spending more money in sending the gospel to those out in the byways and hedges of sin, exercising more faith and trust in God.

We sometimes manifest that "look what I have done" spirit (Dan, 4:30), when in fact we have done nothing alone. It is only as God permits that we are able to will and to do.

Are we builders with God? Then let us build according to the plan which God gave to Christ to carry out.

Christ is building His church today according to the plan and purpose of God (Matt. 16.18), and if we would have a part in that work as under-builders, or assistant builders, we must apply ourselves to the work according to the rules.

It is clearly shown to be God's plan to preach the gospel to those in darkness, and that for a purpose. Therefore, this being true, I appeal to one and all to be more zealous and faithful in the future than in the days gone by, inasmuch as we realize that Christ's coming draws very near.

I shall be happy to hear from you, whether you are able to give to the work in this part of the world or not. Your encouraging words will help much to lighten the burden. May we go forward with renewed courage and strength. God is able to care for us.

Yours in the Christ, T. A. Drinkard, Handley, Texas.

A NEW BOOK ON THE ANTICHRIST

We are glad to publish the following announcement at the request of Elder C. F. L. Smith, who is a well known minister of the Advent Christian Church and a deep Bible student. We know Elder Smith holds certain views on prophecy that are somewhat more liberal, shall we say, than those generally believed by the denomination with which he labors, and feel sure his writings will be thought-provoking and helpful, though we may not be able to agree with all of his conclusions.—Editor.

What do you consider the most important need of our times? Is it not light upon the solution of our world problems? Can the present situation be changed by politics? finance? economics? or any other man-made scheme?

Is not lawlessness at the heart of the present world troubles? Does not lawlessness spring from the opposition of world rulers to Christ? Is not Antichrist called the "lawless

What is your idea of Antichrist and his origin? Is he here? now? Or shall we look for him in the future? Is the Papacy the Antichrist? Before answering this pertinent question, investigate for yourself.

There is already in the hands of the printer a copy of a work on the second coming of Christ as related to Antichrist and these mod-ern world events. It answers the question, Is the Papacy the Antichrist? and shows what the prophetic scriptures say of our present world conditions.

Now is the time, emphatically, when these truths should be published to the world. We are asking you, the first and only time, for your assistance to this ministry. Send us an order for a pre-publication copy at $1.00. When we have received five hundred orders. the book will be published and distributed. You are requested and urged to be one of the first to place your order, thereby making this publication possible. Do so now, and you will be a definite part of this great and necessary work. In the event the book is not published, all subscriptions will be returned to the purchasers.

Will you make possible this important publication by sending in your order now, accompanied by a dollar bill, your check, or a postal money order, to

THE RESTITUTION HERALD Published by National Bible Institution Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1: 32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began". Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

A short time ago the pastor of the Oregon church gave an address in the M. E. Church at Flag Center, Ill., on the unity of God's redemptive plan as it is revealed in the Bible. The opportunity was made possible by the efforts of Bro. Glenn M. Birkey of Rochelle. who made all the local arrangements.

On Sunday, Nov. 18, Norman John Mae Lead, paster of the church in Los Angeles, Calif., will speak on a very practical subject based on Jesus' words, "As Ye Would That Men Should Do to You."

The sermon topic at the Oregon, Ill., church on Armistice Day will be, in the morning an armistice Day will be, in the morning an including the morning and militant hymn, "Onanalysis of the great militant hymn, "On-ward Christian Soldiers," and in the evening, "When God Speaks Peace to the World."

Bro. R. H. Judd, Toronto, Canada, has been doing some real missionary work by correspondence with the leaders of the Hebrew Christian Alliance, a Jewish Christian organization with Canadian headquarters in Toronto. Strange to say it is the non-Trinitarian views of Bro. Judd that meet with the most opposition from his Jewish correspond-

Suggestions continue to come into the office in favor of the General Conference engaging in some form of evangelistic effort. This is a matter that should be earnestly considered as the times of the Gentiles draw to a close. No other work can equal evangelism in importance as the day for Christ's coming approaches.

A sister in California writes that she is rather disappointed that more of those who attended the General Conference and agreed to present the needs of the National Bible Institution to the brotherhood through The Herald after their return home have failed to do this. This with special reference to enroll-ment in the "Dollar-a-Month Club." "Go after us, brother, you know how to do it!" Please accept this as a real "go-ing over" until we can do it better in a subsequent issue.

Pastor C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Ontario. writes that the Sunday school has more than trebled during the past nine months. He rightly attributes these happy results to the blessing of God. A united church consecrated to the service of the truth is sure to make progress.

Jesus, the Light of the World, makes an excellent present for children. Order a copy on approval from the National Berean Society, Oregon, Ill. Buy or return the book within thirty days. The price is 25 cents.

E. O. Stewart, Texas evangelist, reports that during the past summer he has baptized ten in Texas and thirty-three in Arkansas.

The Executive Board of the National Bible Institution met for its regular monthly session Monday afternoon of this week. Efforts are being made by the Manager to hasten the settlement with the defunct Oregon State Savings Bank, which has been greatly delayed by the slow action of the receivers.

"Some splendid articles have appeared in The Herald the past year," writes Lawrence M. Howell, Mt. Sterling, Ill. "I only wish that everyone might read and ponder well such articles as 'The Purpose of the Holy Spirit,' by Norman John MacLeod, and 'Miracles in the Last Days,' by the Editor, in the issue of August 28. How much our church is in need of such sound doctrine as the time of the kingdom draws near!"

Pollowing the death of her mother, which occurred recently in Waterloo, Iowa, Sr. Dorothy Herrick has been welcomed in the home of her sister, Mrs. Edna Gruber, in Oregon, Ill., where she will remain for an indefinite Miss Genniel Carpenter, Secretary of the National Berean Society, has returned home from a four months' vacation in California and is now to be addressed at Oregon, Illinois, Route 3.

While taking no active part in politics, it is wise for the student of prophecy to watch with the utmost attention the political developments in all parts of the world, for they provide one of the most outstanding signs of the coming reign of the Antichrist,

Bro. H. W. Patterson, El Cajon, Calif., continues his splendid missionary work in tract distribution. We often hear favorable comments of the interest this effort is aronsing throughout the country.

"WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?"

speaking farther, said: "And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up: that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things."-Acts 15:15-17. Christ Jesus came to earth to set up the "tabernacle" (house) of David in order that the remainder of Israel (that is in poetic implication of the phrase "the residue of men") and the Gentiles might seek after the Lord. Christ Jesus came to earth to fulfill the promise made to David embodied in the covenant made with the great monarch of Israel. Christ Jesus set up the line of David for the purpose of taking out of the Gentiles "a people for his name." Just as the covenant with Abraham was ratified by the blood of Christ, and just as the Mosaic covenant was fulfilled by the sacrifice of the antitypical lamb, so the coming of the king ratified the Davidic covenant and set it up for a limited purpose: selecting a nobility. Nobody for one moment supposes that the covenant with Abraham was fulfilled. It is set up for a definite purpose: to select a royal priesthood. The Davidic covenant is ratified for the purpose of selecting that group of nobles for the kingdom when "a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." The accompanying Levitical covenant is for the purpose of selecting the priesthood.

The position of the Levites in the nation of Israel is one of tremendous importance. The Jews of the present day present a problem which is involved therein. They are still living under the promise of the old covenant. They do not recognize the covenant with Abraham as anything different from the Mosaic covenant. They think of the Abrahamic covenant only in terms of land: even as Stephen in his great oration said: "But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, till another king arose, which knew not Joseph."—Acts 7:17, 18. And Moses in the book of Exodus spoke in the same way: "And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob."-Ex. 2:24. And he further spoke of the fulfillment of that covenant as being the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egypt to send them to Canaan (Ex. 3:15-18). But we know that the promises to Abraham are yet to be completely fulfilled. The Jews are still living with Moses in large measure. Just so there is a constant confusion with the covenant with David and with Levi. Even though Israel is abiding "many days without a king, and without a prince," they are still looking for that great prince. Not only secular rulers are lacking to Israel, but also priests. But just as the kingdom will be restored in its secular phases, even so will it be restored in its great worship (Luke 19:46). The promise to the Christian is twofold: priest and king. Kings and princes are selected in the royal line of David according to the Davidic covenant; priests after the order of Levi according to the Levitical covenant. Always, then, should the Christian be interested in two great phases of our life: political and religious. Not that he should take a dominant position in the world of either as it exists at large. But the signs in those two spheres will tell him of things to come that are more blessed than we can comprehend.

- 1. The promise to David: 2 Sam. 7.
- 2. The promise of the seed: 1 Kings 2:1-4; 9:5.
- 3. Renewed promise: 1 Kings 6:12; 9:4-8.
- 4. The breaking of the covenant by Solomon: 1 Kings 11:1-13, 36-39; 2 Kings 8:19; 2 Chron. 21:7.
- 5. Prophecies concerning the Davidic covenant: Psalm 103:17, 18; Isa. 9:6, 7; 11:1-16. Tabernacle of David: Isa. 16:4, 5; 22:22-24; 37:35, 42; 55:1-5; Jer. 17:24-27; 21:12; 22:2, 30; 23:5-8; 29:16; 30:8, 9; 33:15-17, 20-26; 36:30; Ezek. 34:23, 24; 37:24, 25; Hosea 3:5; Amos 9:11ff; Zech. 9:9; 12:7; 13:1.
- 6. Christ called the son of David: Matt. 1:1; 9:27; 12:23; 15:22; 20:30, 31; 21:9, 15; 22:42, 43, 45; Mark 10:47, 48; 11:10; Luke 1:32, 69; 18:38, 39; John 7:42; Acts 13:34; 15:16; Rom. 1:3; 2 Tim. 2:8.
- 7. Related topics: Rev. 3:7; 5:5; 22:16; Micah 5:2; Zech. 2:12.
- 8. Levitical covenant: Ex. 32:25-29; Num. 3:5ff, 44ff. When the children of Israel inherited land the tribe of Levi was left out; but when a spiritual blessing is given they are always mentioned: Gen. 46; 49; Deut. 33; Num. 1; Josh. 12ff; 1 Chron. 5:1ff; Ezek. 48:1ff, 30-35; Rev. 7.

EVANGELIZATION OR HUMANITARIANISM

CLOSELY following upon the report of the committee of the Layman's Movement, an attempt has been made in some places to stress the value of social work and give it great prominence even at the risk of sacrificing evangelistic efforts. We are told that the gospel of a loaf of bread is more appealing than the gospel of the cross. Everywhere greater efforts are also made to increase the amount of medical relief that can be given by missions and Christian organizations.

While in no way underrating the value of all social and humanitarian work, we must emphatically assert that the church exists for a specific work, namely, the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom. Our Lord went about preaching, teaching, and casting out devils and did not confine Himself to any exclusive kind of social humanitarian work. His great work while on this earth was to teach and preach. His last commission to His disciples was to go to all nations and preach. Humanitarian and social work have their place in Christian work. They are supplementary and auxiliary to the great work of the church and missions, and must never gain the upper hand in Christian work. The moment they do, the church and the missions become benevolent institutions who have betrayed their sacred trust.—Bible Faith Mission Standard.

Reception of the Shadows

By Arlen Marsh

"Judge not, and ye shall not be judged."—Luke 6:37.

A sketch which should, perhaps, be dedicated to all the ministers who ever have slaved for hours over an unappreciated sermon and to those would-be religious workers who are so unfortunate as to suffer from a terrifying diffidence,

R OGER sat quiet, staring between narrowed lids at the shadows that were writhing among the bushes at the edge of the lawn. A mournful monotone hummed from the newstrung wires above as the late evening breeze set the lights to swinging. The illuminated open space where the crowd was sitting made the border shadows all the darker. Roger watched them contract and waver and expand, burst finally into solid, grotesque blackness. A blackness, he was vaguely aware, that fitted perfectly into his present mood.

He slid down restfully on the end of his spine and let the voices of the crowd flow over him. The crowd was leaving him alone, and he reflected somberly it was the first time since he had reached Montrose he had been really comfortable. Had he been orthodox, he would have thought receptions were like hell; but he was not orthodox, and he did not believe in hell. Receptions and ministers on trial appeared to be inseparable from the most acute discomfort. And when the period of trial was over, the sole member of the ghastly triumvirate to be abolished was the receptions. Discomfort was eternal in a minister.

Eternal in a minister who was afraid of people. It was odd to think of him afraid of people, for he had spoken to thousands from the platform, and without nervousness. But from the platform people were a mass, not individuals. Stage fright was painful—George Bryan, back in school, had wept trying to nerve himself to speak to a class of fifty—but fear of persons was actually deadly. A minister could not afford to be afraid of persons.

The shadows flickered before his slitted eyes. By watching them he could avoid looking at the crowd. His congregation, whom he did not know, and whom he ached to know. The congregation, his, if he proved fit, desirable to them. The congregation of whom he was afraid. The congregation of the shadows were a temporary refuge from the congregation of the church.

Beauty is truth, truth beauty; and that was an empty lie. Talking to persons, meeting them, sent his pulse to racing madly, locked the doorway of his brain, made his tongue a stammering, stuttering rebel to his thoughts. That was truth; and where in it was there beauty? His parents had created nothing beautiful when they had begged him to make the ministry his work.

Roger stirred uneasily in his chair, rose stiffly to greet the approaching first elder of the church. Winrod was his name; or it may have been Windsor or Windon. There seemed to be an ironclad rule among reception committees that forbade clear enunciation. It was embarrassing enough to meet new people without having to say you and you and you to them.

The elder flapped large hands at him, waved him to his seat. The elder said, "Well, and how do you like Montrose by this time?" and took a seat himself.

The shadows in the bushes danced to the swinging of the lamps. Roger fixed his eyes on them. Disappear into that infinitude of blackness and have eternal peace. But that was utterly impossible. A minister faced his elders, talked to them, impressed them with his energy and talent. The elders were the heads of the entire congregation, and their demands generally were met.

The elder leaned forward in his chair. He said again, "And how do you like Montrose by this time!" The question muffled while he mopped a fat red face with a saturated handkerchief.

Thirty hours. Thirty hours in this little town, and for perhaps the hundredth time he was expected to lay down a definite opinion. As he was expected to lay down definite opinions on everything from poetry to Darwin. It was required of ministers to be all-knowing and all-wise.

To the first elder, as formerly to the second and third elders, four deacons, and half a hundred laymen, Roger said, "I'm sorry. I haven't (Please turn to Page Nine)

Is It Christian?

"I say unto you, Love your enemies, . . . do good to them that hate you."—Matthew 5:14.

Los Angeles, Calif., Nov. I.—According to the American Guardian, organ of the Socialist Party, Rev. Martin Luther Thomas, "outstanding Los Angeles minister and foremost champion of the Republican gubernatorial candidate," in a radio broadcast last night, said: "I understand that members of the Utopian Society, ten thousand strong, propose to man the polls on election day to see that their man, Sinclair, wins. I want to tell the Utopians and all others that on election day we will have twice that many loyal American Legionaires to assist the police and deputy sheriffs; and if the Utopians or anybody else start anything, our crowd will finish it."

It is hard for one to conceive of a professed follower of the gentle Nazarene, who had nothing but forgiveness for His most violent enemies, manifesting such a bitter spirit even in the heat of a political campaign. It seems impossible for men to maintain the spirit of Christ when they enter the political arena. But why should a minister of Christ enter such a contest? Has he not a far greater service to render to mankind than that of a carnal politician?

Protocols Blamed for Bolshevism

"He hath delivered them to trouble, . . . and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes."—2 Chronicles 29:8.

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 30.—"I believe the protocols caused the pogroms in Russia and facilitated the advent of the Bolsheviki," declared Paul Miljukow, the white-haired ministerial colleague of Kerensky, the President of the Russian Republic which was overthrown by the Communists shortly after its establishment, in his testimony before the court in which the Jews of the world are bringing suit against several men for the circulation of those much discussed documents. The witness believed that the Czar was moved by the false statements contained in them to encourage attacks upon the Jews and in other ways to oppress his people to such an extent that they were easily influenced by the radical element in the nation.

German Church War Over

"Be not entangled again in the yoke of bondage."

Bealin, Germany, Nov. 11.—The long and bitter fight between the Government and the liberty-loving Protestants of Germany was declared by Bishop Hans Meisser of Bavaria today to be at an end. "Evil days lie behind me," said the Bishop. "The victory is due to your love and loyalty, but peace and order are still lacking in the church."

Presidential Responsibilities

"The God of heaven hath given thee . . . power, and strength, and glory."—Daniel 2:37.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—The most powerful ruler in the world! Such is the position in which President Roosevelt finds himself as a result of the sweeping Democratic victories of last week's off-year election. Qualified observers of international affairs, taking into consideration the dictatorial authority exercised by Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin, declare that the President with the express consent of the majority of the American people possesses today "greater potential powers than any other ruler on earth."

With such an accession of authority comes a correspondingly vast increase in responsibility. President Roosevelt holds within his hands the lives, the liberties, and the material well-being of the whole American people.

Those who assist him in the administration of the Government are chosen personally by himself. Congress realizes that its membership has been elected to office for the sole purpose of supporting the President's program of "recovery" and will hesitate to go contrary to his expressed desires. Such a situation is unique in American history. No other President has ever been given so free a hand-to-put into active operation every purpose which he conceives to be for the good of the people. President Roosevelt is supreme in the political life of the United States, for the victory of the Democratic candidates for state and national positions came about because of the confidence the people felt in the personal leadership and ability of the President.

The world is drawing closer and closer to the day when all nations will be ruled for good or ill by single individuals. May God direct the course and steady the hand of our President that he may exercise his tremendous power in full recognition of the fact that in the final analysis it is Jehovah from whom that power comes, and that it is to Him that he owes his first allegiance!

Eastern and Western Ideals

By Norman John MacLeod

POR many years there have been indications which point toward the decline of the British Empire. In fact the historians and political scientists call it "The British Commonwealth of Nations." For several centuries the British Empire has been building: Gladstone said it was "built up in a fit of absent-mindedness." So haphazard was its organization that that phrase is especially apt. So enormous an organization politically the world has never seen. The old Roman Empire would constitute only a single province of the British Empire. Peoples of almost every race, color, and religion are included within its dominions. The proud boast that "the sun never sets on British soil" is at once the envy and despair of the other imperialist nations of the world. France can boast large areas on the map. Russia can look with pride upon a large continental position. But British possessions always include the most important resources of oil, minerals, and other valuables. Needless to say the old traders who built up the British Empire were not altruistic: they did not harp upon the string of benevolent imperialism; they did not pretend to help the people they conquered; they did not pretend to bear the "white man's burden"; they did not wax sentimental over the advantages that British civilization brought to the "poor benighted Hindu." The early modern imperialists went forth into the world to find what wealth they could, brought it back to the mother country, and expected the mother country in turn to proteet their industries. As a result the British flag flies over the diamond mines of South Africa; the Gold Coast of Africa: the gold region that was disputed between Venezuela and British Guiana in South America; the majority of the gold deposits of the Klondike; the rich spice regions of India: oil of Persia and Mesopotamia; and if there be any other valuable thing in the world the major portion of it is within the confines of the British Empire.

Mr. Hossain contradicts the idea that East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet. A discussion of the perennial problem of Indian independence by a thoroughly trained student of history.

IMPERIALISM IN INDIA

When Columbus set out to find India he went because of the fabulous wealth of that hapless country. Marco Polo had returned from the Far East with a vast fortune stored away in the seams of his robes. He was nicknamed "Monsieur Million" because he was supposed to be a millionaire. The nations of the West longed for the vast treasures of India. India became the symbol of fortune. But what is the sad state of affairs there today? India is the most impoverished country that can be found. Why, the people of India ask, should this be so? And then they answer: because the white man (meaning of course the Englishman) has robbed them of their wealth.

Within the last month we heard a man from India, Syud Hossain, speak before an enthusiastic audience. He was telling of the ideals of Eastern and Western peoples: using East and West in the special sense to mean Orient and Occident. He concluded that the ideals of both peoples were the same in spite of a vastly different civilization. His speech was quite innocuous. But after the set oration he devoted a short period to questions and answers. Several very pertinent questions were asked, and his answers were quite frank. One question was: Do you think that British rule has been of benefit to India? His answer was unhesitating and unswerving: No! Then he went on to show that one of the greatest American historians, Herbert Adams Gibbons, had said that in no case was imperialism justified. No people could benefit by domination by a foreign Power. He further quoted from Lord Rosebury, using the latter's definition of imperialism. Not being able to turn to the works of Lord Rosebury to find the definition he quoted we cannot give it exactly. But the definition of imperialism given by the English nobleman was to this effect: Imperialism is a system of domination of one people by another by means of naval and military forces so that the resources of the subject people may be exploited for the benefit of the imperialistic nation. Regardless of what we feel about the situation we can see that there is the "handwriting on the wall" for the foreign domination in Asia. Russia has seen the handwriting. When the World War closed, Russia emerged as a new nation under new conditions. She adopted a new policy! Because of losses in Europe she became almost altogether an Asiatic Power. She was forced to consolidate her empire rather than to stretch out to take in new territory. She withdrew from Persia and from Northern China at least temporarily. She built up her own resources at home. She played into the hands of those people of Asia who were tired of European domination. The Bolsheviks showed themselves to be masters of Asiatic diplomacy: they knew that Asia was weary of the scourge of imperialism. They felt that they would rather have a group of friendly Mongolians on their borders as an independent group than a hostile subject people. They learned the lesson from necessity.

INDIAN HERO

The position of Mahatma Ghandi in India was shown by Mr. Hossain to be unique. Somebody asked him if they

The Soul of the Nation in Peril

THE BOOK says in the days prior to the coming of Christ there shall be "perilous times," and "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse" (2 Tim. 3:1, 13). "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold... As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."—Matt. 24:12, 37. "A time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation."—Dan. 12:1.

If we change one word of the following text it will do no injury to the meaning: "What shall it profit a nation, if (it) shall gain the whole world, and lose (its) own soul?"—Mark 8:36.

"And there shall be signs . . . upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity."—Luke 21:25.

Many scholarly men are proclaiming with no uncertain sound that the conditions of the world today prove the fulfillment of these prophecies.

Likewise men high up in the governments of the world declare a pending world crisis is just ahead of us, and the threatened end of civilization seems unavoidable.

MUSSOLINI'S PREDICTION

Mussolini predicts that 1935 to 1940 will be the crises years of modern history. "Our air fleet must be so mighty that the wings of flying machines will darken the sun above our coasts. Only then can we face history's fateful hour."

Rev. O. J. Smith, Toronto, Canada, says of present world conditions: "War in Europe is now almost a certainty. The entire continent is in uniform, with no less than six million men under arms. One man out of every nine is in uniform. The whole continent bristles with bayonets and guns. An atmosphere of nervousness, never before known, has gripped every country."

Rev. C. S. Stark, Lincoln, Nebraska, says, regarding world dictators: "Believe it or not, the Gentile nations of the world are in this hour standing on the rim of a great volcanic explosion, and are accelerating their speed in preparing for the final take-off into what will prove to be overwhelming disaster. We now see the dictatorship form in the saddle, gaining rapid control of the nations. This form of Gentile government is shown by the Word of God to be the last and final form to be ruling in the earth just prior to the setting up of the kingdom of God which is to be ruled over by the Lord Jesus Christ."

ALL PEACE EFFORTS FAIL*

The League of Nations, the World Court, the peace and disarmament conferences, have all made frantic and feeble efforts to make the "world safe for democracy." Their dismal failure casts a sure shadow of the end of human governments, and the nearness of the time when "the God of heaven (shall) set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever' (Dan. 2:44).

Quoting from Dr. Henry Morgenthau, Sr., "War in Europe in 1934 seems to me inevitable. It is foreshadowed by signs ominously similar to those which were clearly visible in Europe in 1913."

As we preached this sermon in Oakland, California, we were on the eve of the worst strike in the history of the city of San Francisco. Seven miles of bay lie between the commuters in Oakland and San Francisco. Passenger boats that earry thousands of people daily were stopped. Street ears in the city of Oakland were stopped. Truck and taxi drivers were out, laundries and gas statious closed. All but nineteen restaurants closed, and those were open only by special permit. Added to this, the longshoremen had been out on strike eighty-three days with a reported cost of $200,000,000. With over four thousand soldiers on duty to preserve peace, and the population of several hundred thousand people threatened with hunger, it was as near a civil war as 1 want to be, and the literal fulfillment of James 5:1-9.

DOLLFUSS OF AUSTRIA SLAIN

Then, upon the eve of a Pacific Coast strike, and in Middlewest and Southern cities as well, came the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria which threatened the world with greater dangers of world war than the similar tragedy just twenty years ago that caused the World War of 1914 to 1918. In that terrible war twenty-seven nations were involved, with 66,000,000 under arms, of whom 37,000,000 were casualties, totaling a cost estimated at $350,000,000,000.

PROPHECY FULFILLED

Is it any wonder that churchmen and leading statesmen of the world are proclaiming a threatened end of civilization, and the downfall of human governments? To many earnest Christians it is but the fulfillment of the prophecies, because of the wickedness of the world before the coming of Christ and the setting up of His kingdom.

Is it any wonder we make the bold assertion that the soul of the nation and of the world is in peril? Is there any hope of permanent prosperity through the sale of liquor to make more drunkards and greater poverty and misery and a great increase of crime? Those able to judge assert that intemperance is a much greater scourge and curse on a nation than war. Is not the soul of this nation in greater peril because of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment? We have taken a backward step of at least twenty-five years.

We have seen the moral standards of the world during the World War, and since, drop to their lowest level. Beer and cigarettes from the White House down. Divorce and immorality everywhere. No nation can withstand a moral breakdown. Any nation which has lost its soul cannot hope for the mercy of God for long.

A NATION WITHOUT GOD

Sovietism in Russia boasts: "We have abolished God. The best country is a godless country. Our task is not to reform, but to destroy every kind of religion, every kind of morality. The family must be replaced by the Communist Party. In order to destroy the old order the family must be broken up. We must teach children to hate their parents, to rebel against parental authority."

Bolshevism was enforced in Russia by means of confiscation, terrorism, and murder on a scale unprecedented. Twenty million lost their lives by violence, starvation, or disease. Of these 766,118 persons were executed. Does anyone question that such a people have lost their soul, and are ripe for the judgment and the final wrath of God?

Japan employed "human bombs" during the Shanghai struggle, and the men who gave their lives are lauded as their greatest heroes. The "human torpedo" has a steering attachment and a seat for one man. These "living torpedoes," being steered by a man, cannot miss until both battleship and man are blown to atoms. It is reported that Japan has five thousand men volunteered for this service.

The Limitless Scope of Prophecy

AS wide and as deep as the sea, as filled with mystery, with wonder and with power, is the prophecy of God! If you can measure the years of eternity, if you can grasp the magnitude of the universe, if you can compass the purposes of the Almighty, then, and then only, will you be able to understand the marvelous fullness of the revelations of the Scriptures of Truth!

Turn your eyes where you will, fix your attention on what you may, call to mind the happenings of any period and of any place, and you will discover that God has been there before you and that He has revealed His presence in His Word, for prophecy has to do with all things human and with all things divine. The sky, the sea, the earth, and the things under the earth come within the reach of prophetic influence. Measureless oceans and trickling streams, lifeless deserts and fruitful plains, lofty mountains and shadowy vales, village and hanlet and countryside, angels and men and beasts of the earth, all things animate and all things inanimate, fall within the scope of the prophecies of God.

When that vast new lens, four times more powerful than any glass of the kind that was ever made before, shall be finished and installed in the observatory on the Pacific Coast, the eye of the astronomer will gaze with wondering awe upon worlds which men have never looked upon in all the ages of time, but we may rest assured that nothing will be revealed with which the prophecies of God do not have to do in one way or another.

Could we step to the side of those scientists some three years hence and gaze upon the marvels reflected in that magic glass, and realize that the light that reached our optic nerve had left its source in some distant sun ages before our Lord was born, would we not draw back in fear and voice the cry of David as he stood looking into the starry sky: "When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; what is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"-Psalm 8:3, 4.

As we dig with the archæologist into the buried ruins of ancient cities and see revealed the evidence of magnificent civilizations that have long since perished from the earth, as we ponder on the brevity of the life of man and the temporal character of his greatest works, we are moved to cry again: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"

As we search the moldy records of the past as they have been handed down to us by the historian, as we come to appreciate the insignificance of nations however mighty they may have been in the estimation of their times, yet once again we are moved to cry: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"

Then as we pause in our searchings and think of God, and the works of God, the foreknowledge and the wisdom of God as they are revealed in the prophetic Word, we stand enthralled with amazement and trembling awe and repeat: "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"

No works of man can long withstand the ravages of time. But God lives on! God's works endure! His mountains still lift their snowy crowns above the fallen ruins of man's mightiest handiwork. His rivers still flow through valleys where myriads of men once lived, but where they live no more. His seas still lave the shores of lands which have seen the rise and fall of many kings and kingdoms, of civilizations and of powers, that are no more, their crumbling glory buried beneath the drifting dust of ages. These all are gone! But God lives on!

Prophecy covers the entire scope of Time and of Eternity, if the thought of limitation may be permitted to intrude concerning that which has no end! And prophecy stretches over all human history and divine activity and experience! Such is the vast, unthinkable scope of the prophetic Word.

WHOSOEVER

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

**F ΛLU the beautiful passages in God's Word, this is one of the most beautiful. It is full of comfort and consolation to every son and daughter of Adam's race. In it is displayed the wonderful love of God to a lost and ruined world. All had sinned and come short of the glory of God. All were alike helpless, and groaning under the death penalty. No man could save himself, or give a ransom for his brother. But God, the great Creator, against whom man had transgressed, could look with pity and compassion upon a doomed race; and not only this, but He could provide a ransom-His own arm could bring salvation to a fallen world. This He did in the person of His only and well beloved Son. If there was any one way in which God could more fully display His matchless love above another in the redemption of a lost world, it was in this gift—the gift of His own dear Son! Well might the Apostle exclaim, "God is love"! Could sinners but realize the truth of this portion of Scripture, surely they would turn to the Lord with full purpose of heart and serve Him without fear.

"God so loved the world"—the world that had sinned against Him-the world that had worshiped and served the creature more than the Creator. Yes, God so loved the world, not a part of it, but the world that was justly doomed to death on account of sin. And in consequence of this love, or because God did love this world of sinners. this condemned race of Adam, all of them -for all had sinned, and God is not a respector of persons—He gave "his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Precious thought! With these blessed words of our divine Master, as He went forth on His heavenly mission, sounding in our ears, we need have no fears but what the plan of redemption covers the whole race of Adam, if they will believe and obey. "Whosoever," anybody, everybody, that believes can have life. In all the English language we could not get a word that would so fully cover the ground of everybody, rich and poor, white and black, Jew and Gentile, free and bond, as this word "whosoever." To illustrate this: Suppose a schoolteacher would say to a certain class of his pupils, "Whosoever of you will work out a certain problem which I will give you, shall have a reward." Of course we would suppose he meant every one in the class. we would feel assured that he meant us. But now that teacher writes down his problem, gives it to  $\Lambda$  and B. passes C, gives it to D and passes E, and so on to the end of the class; would anyone suppose for a moment that he meant what he said? No; all would pronounce him a cheat and a deceiver; saying what he did not mean. Could those pupils who received the reward look upon their teacher in after days with that degree of love and confidence they could if all had had an equal chance with them in receiving the offered prize? I think not; for they would ever feel that their teacher was partial and unjust. And yet this is the way some would have us believe that Jehovah dealt with man. They would have us believe that when God says whosoever, He means—the sheep—His own, etc.

Now, can we for a moment believe that God, by the mouth of His Son Jesus Christ, would trifle with His creatures? that He would declare that "whosoever believeth" should have life, when He very well knew that for a great portion of those whom He was addressing there was no provision made? Can we suppose that Christ would declare that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son," when the facts were that He only loved His own family, and for them alone gave His Son to die? No, dear reader. We can rest assured that when Jesus says God gave His Son that whosoever believeth in Him might have life, He meant just what He said—whosoever, anybody, all mankind, every son and daughter of Adam's race.

"He that believeth on him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."-Verse 18. Because he hath not believed, not because there was no provision made for him, not because he was the seed of the serpent, a goat, or a tare; but because he did not believe "in the name of the only begotten Son of God." The provision is made, God hath given His Son. that "whosoever believeth" may have life; but he that believeth not, he that rejecteth the offered provision which God has made, is condemned and shall not have lifeshall perish. It is, however, his own free and voluntary act. Jesus said unto the Jews, "Ye will not come unto me that ye might have life." He did not say, "Ye cannot come"-but, "Ye will not." Of this very class Isaiah says, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him (Christ) the iniquity of us all."-Isa. 53:6. Behold Jesus weeping over Jerusalem, because its inhabitants did not know the day of their visitation! Would the Son of God weep over the seed of the serpent, goats, or tares? Would He weep over those who would come forth in the morning of the resurrection, and embrace Him as their Life-Giver. and their rightful King? I think He would not. He went over Jerusalem because she, or her inhabitants, did not know the time of their visitation—they would not receive their King. In this is a solemn warning for us-God's Spirit will not always strive with man. If we resist offered mercy, resist the Holy Spirit, as did "our fathers," like them, the time of our visitation will pass, and we will lose eternal life. Not because Christ did not die for us; but because we would not accept the Father's free gift, and comply with His conditions.

Man, as a responsible being, has a will, a free choice in this matter; and he, and not God, is responsible for that choice. God will not compel us to believe and be saved, neither will He compel us to disbelieve and be lost. We had thought, until recently, that this doctrine, like the Popish Inquisition, had been swept into oblivion by the light of God's unerring Word and the promptings of man's better nature. If man now, as in times past, resisteth the Holy Spirit, does despite unto the Spirit of grace, he makes himself, by his actions, the seed of the scrpent, and a tare; but on the other hand, if he yields himself to the Spirit's but on the other hand, if he yields himself to the Spirit's influence, and accepts offered mercy, he will by so doing make himself a part of the family of God—a joint heir with Jesus Christ, by believing in Him—and to the Father and the Son he will ascribe all the praise in a world without end.

In John 7:37 Jesus says, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." Not if any of the family of God thirst, but any man. Are the wicked, men? that is, that portion of the human family which some would have us believe are the seed of the serpent, for whom no Savior died! Are they men? See Ezekiel 18:26, 27. Here are two classes of men, the one righteous and the other wicked; one dies in their iniquity, the other does not; yet, they are both by the Prophet called men. Now we believe that when the Savior says, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink," any man can come, and if he does not come it is his own free choice. God is no respecter of persons, He is just as willing to save one lost man as another—one sinner as another. Jesus came not to call the righteousthe family of God, or the angels-but sinners, to repentance. Suppose a master to have ten servants; they are all sick of a malignant disease, but there is a fountain in his dominion that, if they drink of it, will heal them. He immediately sends a messenger to tell them if they will all go and drink from that fountain they will live. But now while the messenger is declaring his message to those servants, the master comes, takes five of them and carries them to the fountain and makes them drink; while he leaves the other five bound by some enemy so they have no power to move. Should those servants die, who is responsible? Not themselves, for they are helpless. The master is responsible for their death, for he left them bound by their enemy with no way to help themselves. Just so it would be in the sinner's case, if he has not the power to go to the fountain of living water and drink. If God provided a plan of redemption for one part of Adam's race which excluded another. He is responsible for the sinner's death; but the Bible and the boundless love of our heavenly Father forever forbid such a thought to be harbored for a moment. God does not call us without making a way; He does not tell us to knock unless He intends to open; He does not invite us to ask unless He means to give. There are no empty compliments in God's Word. He does not, like too many of His professed followers, ask us to come, when He does not want us to come. No; when God invites us, we may rest assured that it is His desire that we should accept the invitation.

The Lord by the mouth of Ezckiel says, "If thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand,"-Ezek, 33:8. Now, if Jehovah will make His children responsible if they do not warn the wicked, is it reasonable to suppose the wicked are not responsible themselves when they are warned? But if the plan of salvation embraced only those who will be saved anyhow, if not in this age, they will in the next, why should God require the blood of the wicked at our hand? Does God require the blood of the seed of the serpent, goats, or tares at the hands of His servants? Nay, verily, God is just and no unrighteousness is in Him. And if men will wrest the Scriptures (2 Peter 3:16) to their own destruction, or the destruction of their fellow beings, it is man and not God who is responsible for their destruction.

Dear reader, let no amount of reasoning lead you to think that Jesus did not die for you, or that you cannot come to Him if you desire to do so. The Savior says, "He that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." And Paul says Christ "tasted death for every man." Then you are one of the men for whom Christ died. Then, dear reader, if you have not found peace in believing in Jesus as your Savior, heed the gracious invitation. Come to the Father in His own appointed way; believe in His Son Jesus Christ, and you shall have life. Come to the fountain of living water and drink, so that you may find rest to your weary soul. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. . . . And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." Blessed words: on these my soul shall rest! God gives freely.—Mrs. S. M. Brinkerhoff in The Bible Advocate.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE

IN THE BULE there are 3,586,473 letters; 775,693 words; 31,373 verses; 1,189 chapters; and 66 books.

Psalms is the longest book. It has 150 divisions. The shortest book is 2 John, which has one chapter of 13 verses.

The longest chapter is the 119th Psalm. It has 176

The shortest chapter is the 117th Psalm, which has 2

The longest verse is the 9th verse of the 8th chapter of Esther, which has 90 words. The shortest is the 35th verse of the 11th chapter of John, which has only 2 words.

The 8th verse of the 118th Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible,

The 37th chapter of Isaiah and the 19th chapter of the second book of Kings are practically alike.

The Bible was the first book to be printed, about 1450, and the Authorized King James Version is today the most widely circulated book in the world.

IS JESUS GOD?

By Mary A. Woodward

SUNDAY, October 14, I listened for over an hour to an evangelist who declared many times in his sermon that Christ was the very God. He was so anxious that all who heard him would get the idea firmly settled in their minds that his last words were, "Christ is God."

If that is a fact, what will we do with Christ's own words? John 5:30: "I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me." And in verse 36: "But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me."

Christ was not doing His mighty works alone, for He said, "I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.
. . . The Father that sent me beareth witness of me."—
John 8:16, 18.

Peter, one who was as intimate with Christ and His teachings perhaps as any of the disciples save John, said (John 6:69), "And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God."

How could He be the Son of God and God Himself?

Here are Christ's own words (John 6:39): "And this is the Father's will which hath sent me." Can we believe Christ's own words, or would we rather keep quarreling about it and believe as we choose?

Christ said, "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day."—John 6:40.

Does this evangelist who is every day saying, "Christ is God," stand in danger of losing eternal life? I should be very much afraid of losing that most coveted gift if I failed to believe Christ's words.

Listen again: "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him (through whom? the Son) might be saved. He that believeth on him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

O my brethren, be careful what you preach. You may be the means of leading people into the sin of unbelief instead of saving them.

Read carefully Matthew 11:25 and 26, and especially 27, and Luke 10:21, 22. Then ask yourself whom Jesus was talking to, Himself or some higher power who could help Him in His anxious care for humanity.

"I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth." What thrilling words these are. How plainly Jesus here shows us His glorious relation to His God and our God, His Father and our Father—His Sonship.

When Jesus began to preach (Matt. 4:17), His first words were, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." And immediately He began to choose helpers for the gospel work.

Going into a mountain with them, He began to talk; and such a sermon as He did deliver to that waiting multitude. Words of blessing, words of patience, of humility, of care lest we serve the creature instead of the creator. O what care He took to send to all the world just the right words, that we might understand His message.

He emphasized these words, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." And it came to pass when He had finished these sayings that the people were astonished at His doctrine; and well they might be, for it takes all of our lives to digest that wonderful sermon. Yet still we hear men who are wearing themselves out shouting, "Do not be deceived in believing that Jesus is anything less than God," although we read John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

May God help us to believe Him and His Word, that our names may not be blotted out of the book of life, but in that blessed day, when Jesus returns, we may be among the saved.

MURDER FOR MONEY

• This is the startling heading of an article in Fortune, a de luxe magazine of American big business. It has taken up the cudgels against the world's munitions makers. Their axioms are, "prolong war, disturb peace." It tells of Frenchmen promoting the rise of Hitler in Germany and contributing millions of marks to his campaign, and at the same time publishing French newspapers that did much to enrage France against Hitler.

Another item was that, when in 1914 the German armies marched west into Belgium and eastward toward Russia, the Kaiser's soldiers were killed by German guns manned by the armies of King Albert and the Czar of Russia. Again, Great Britain had built and equipped the Turkish Navy before the war; in the Dardanelles British ships were blown up by British mines, and shattered by British cannon. On a village green in rural England stands a war memorial, a cannon captured by a royal regiment from the Germans. On one side of the cannon are engraved the names of the English soldiers who were killed in the battle, on the other side is the manufacturer's name, the English Vickers, Ltd.

WAR PROPAGANDA EXPOSED

A helpful sign that the public is aroused over the war munitions question, and the manufacturer's part in the propaganda of the war spirit, is the Senate Resolution 179 calling for investigation of the manufacture and the sale of war implements and munitions,

Senator Borah of Idaho, in a speech delivered in the Senate, charged munitions manufacturers with kindling the hatred and warlike spirit now affame in many countries. He said, "So long as the munitions manufacturers exercise the influence they now exercise with governments, we shall make no progress in reducing armaments or holding the navies down to a reasonable program." He further said, "During this period of depression, while millions of people walk the streets ill clad and half starved, while governments have been unable to pay their debts, while educational institutions have been starving for funds, it is a fact hat the munitions manufacturers have been realizing profits twelve, twenty, and thirty per cent during the enire period of the depression."

PUBLIC SENTIMENT AROUSED

Secretary of War George II. Dern said in 1931, when he was a private citizen, "We have won some things from the war that were not on the program. We had a complete demonstration of the fallacy that preparedness prevents war. That is worth something."

As both the United States Senate and public sentiment are becoming thoroughly aroused, and an awakened conscience of the church uniting in a storm of protests against war, it is to be hoped that the threatened conflict in Europe may be averted. Thirteen thousand ministers and rabbis are reported by Kirby Page, editor of The World Tomorrow, that they "would not bless or participate in another world war." Books, pamphlets, and petitions and resolutions by churches and peace-loving organizations are evidences of a mighty protest against war that cannot but have a most wholesome influence for good. . . . We thank God for these omens of hope that may contribute to increased peace in the world. If a lease of time on earth is spared to the church of Christ, it is for one purpose, namely, that the gospel of salvation through the blood of Christ and the gospel of the kingdom may be preached to the ends of the earth. No greater warning message could be given than that fulfilled prophecy proclaims His coming very near.—George E. Cooprider in The Messiah's Advocate.

been here long enough to know."

The elder grunted, and was silent. Roger's eyes narrowed at the shadows. If only there were something one could say. In what was a small town elder interested? Talk, and show interest in the congregation. A minister sold himself by interest in his people. No pastorate ever had been successful until the minister had shown interest in his people.

He could have all the interest in the world and still be quiet. Repetition of such a thought as this was vain. His tongue was tied, because his mind was bound by a senseless fear of persons, and he could think of nothing interesting to say. It always had been so. It always would be so.

The elder looked into the shadows. The elder said, "Nice night," and glanced up toward the brightly dotted darkness of the sky with eyes that questioned his own statement.

Roger nodded. There was something he could say. "Yes," he agreed, "nice night," and wished the elder would take himself away.

That was a fearful thought. If the elder took himself away, it would be because he had been bored. And if the elder had been bored, it meant he, Roger, had been the one responsible. For ministers on trial to bore their elders was for ministers on trial to spoil their chances at a place. Silence was embarrassing; silence embarrassed the elder and him, too.

Roger stared at the shadows twisting in the bushes and forced himself to say, "Splendid reception you've given me tonight, Mr. Winrod."

Probably the elder would have preferred to be addressed as "Brother Winrod." "Brother" had always seemed affected, too peculiar for normal conversation. He could not make himself say "brother." But the elder probably would feel the minister was cold if he did not speak of the members of his congregation as brothers and sisters. It usually was so.

The elder glanced at him and nodded, "Windon," he corrected shortly. "Windon is the name."

The red gushed into Roger's face and ebbed. It was better to refer to people as you and you and you. He watched the shadows close into a sheet of solid blackness, break promptly into huge tendrils of waving forms of leaves and branches. There was peace within that blackness, but even that peace must be broken by the wind. As a longing for companionship must be broken by a causeless fear of people.

The silence could not go on forever. The elder was stirring restlessly in his chair. Upon him and his ideas depended the future of all ministers on local trial. Upon him and the other two elders. For people were like sheep, and followed leaders regardless of the consequences. The silence must be broken; the elder must be made to understand and to appreciate him, Roger, the present minister on trial.

The elder shifted in his seat and spoke. "That was a fine sermon you gave us last night, Brother Loring, a fine sermon. Don't know when I've heard a better."

Last night, ha, ha. And the usual feeding of soft soap that was habitually given ministers, thrown them as a sop to satisfy their vanity. Or the vanity they were supposed to have. The first sermon in a new locality always drew forth empty words of commendation, praise of as little substance as the shadows moving there among the bushes. One became accustomed to it, as he became accustomed to the later criticisms and complaints.

"Speaking," Roger told the elder hesitantly, "is easy."

It was not what he had meant to say. He could never say what he had meant to say. Bound within him were the words, the thoughts, that ached to find expression, that could have found expression from the pulpit, where they had no place. Here, talking man-to-man, he could only dream of what he meant to say, and suffer the bitter agony of frustrated thinking and emotion.

The elder would never understand, he could never understand. For no one but a man tinged with a fear of individuals held power to comprehend the galling chains which it imposed. A rage against himself welled up in Roger.

"Must take a lot of work," the elder observed casually.

"A lot of work." The rage rose high in Roger and exploded with a queer clap within his brain. What student out of school, invited to trial at his first prospective pastorate, would not put work upon his opening address? Weeks of labor and research had gone into that sermon, delivered within forty minutes on the night just past. People would never understand. They would always take their minister for granted, assume he had an easy task.

"I spent five weeks," said Roger, "in preparing it."

The elder clacked his tongue. It was time, Roger thought, the elder learned.

"Five books, newspapers, a half dozen magazines, and considerable reading in an encyclopedia went into that," said Roger.

"No," said the elder surprisedly.

"And, Mr. Winrod -"

"Windon," said the elder. "Fred Windon."

The fire was gone. There was nothing left to move. It was useless to attempt to talk. The old embarrassment was surging back. Two minutes before he had meant to tell this Windon how hard it was to talk to people, and he had ended in a minute's boasting. His eyes sought again the shadows.

"Maybe," the elder commented, "you'd like to come over with the crowd. Get to know 'em better."

Get to know the people, this people whom he had to know, this people whom he was to serve. Show interest in the congregation. So it was a pastor sold himself. Roger rose, looked at the lighted open space, and sank back in the chair. There were so many persons, and he was expected to converse with each of them. He stared up at the elder, conscious of sick fear.

"This is all right here," he said to the elder's fat red face. "I—"

He stopped. There was no excuse he could explain. The elder looked at him a moment, queerly, then said, "All right," and moved away.

There was comfort in the shadows. One could watch them without having to think of things to say. Shadows did not require opinions on the weather, the nation's politics, religion, and the arts. Shadows were silent. One did not have to tax his brain for them to think of epigrams.

But a minister could not afford to covet shadows. A minister built his influence, his entire life, upon his relationship with people; and people demanded conversation, interested attention. In the small denomination it seemed particularly true. A veneer of culture, talent in the pulpit—such things hardly mattered in the small denomination. It was the personal contact of the minister with his congregation that brought the great results. And his was a small denomination.

It would not do to be an ostrich. One could not evade the issue by clinging constantly to the protection of the shadows. This reception was for him, and its effect upon these individuals who were to be his charge would be far greater than the effect of the sermon he had delivered Sunday night. There was no excuse for his remaining in the dark; he must put a grip upon his fear and follow the suggestion of the elder.

Roger moved slowly toward the middle of the open space, nodded at the faces that turned in his direction. These were his people who were greeting him; he must get to know them better. It was hard here, outside the silence of the ever-changing shadows. He would have to talk, and tell what his opinions were. He would be the center of the stage.

The elders and the deacons talked together in a corner of the lawn. Windon was the only one of them he knew more than as a face and name. Above all else, a minister should become familiar with his officers. The laymen were important, but they were largely followers. He stepped toward the little group of men, fought down the lump rising in his throat.

"He's snobbish," said the first elder. "Good speaker, but he's snobbish. Too good for other folks. Boasts about how much he knows."

"Snooty," amended the youngest of the deacons.

"Snooty, then," conceded Windon, willing to agree. "Anyway, he won't do. Have to have somebody who'll mix."

Roger edged away from hearing distance. The shadows played in silence among the bushes on the lawn. He would go to them, have quiet, rest in peace.

To practice the Golden Rule in truth as well as theory; to dedicate his life to the cheerful service of man and God; to make himself an example fit to be copied by anyone; to attempt constantly to raise his standards morally, physically, and mentally; to draw out of the agony of his discovery of man's futility a purposeful recognition of God's plan—that is the Christian's responsibility.

Everyone That Believeth

"And he is the propitiation for our sins: . . . also for the sins of the whole world."—I John 2:2. "God . . . commandeth all men every where to repent."—Acts 17:30. "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common."—Acts 10:15.

From the above scriptures and many others we see the fact of the universal appeal of the gospel. In vision, Peter saw "all manner of fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air." Mind you, these were eligible to be in the church. No one is too wild-beast a sinner but that, if he is willing, God can cleanse him.

We need to "rise, Peter; kill, and eat." Raise the fallen. It is not easting our pearls before swine. It is simply applying the power of God. "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Tim. 1:15. Remember the working faith of the early church, built upon the words of the Lord Jesus: "Go ye therefore, and (margin) make disciples of all nations."—Matt. 28:19. "Whosoever will." "Every one that believeth." Cleansing gospel! Glorious good news! Tell some one today!—Cecil Smead, President, National Berean Society; Blanchard, Mich.

Senior Berean Home Study

This is just a short account of the way we have carried on the work of this committee, submitted in the hope that it will acquaint the members of our church with this phase of church activity and so make it a service to more, and also to bring forth criticism and comment that will make our endeavors more successful.

We have attempted to interest those of our members who are isolated and those who are connected with a church which has no Berean society. One object is to create an interest in Berean study so that new classes may be formed at these churches, but so far we have not been successful in doing this.

The names of those to whom we write are secured through our ministers, the columns of The Restitution Herald, Sr. William Hanson, chairman of the Senior Social Correspondence Committee, and through our own committee members who may know personally of some one. Then there are those who have finished junior home study under Sr. Kincheloe (former chairman, Junior Home Study Committee) and have advanced to senior; and last, those who have in some way heard of it and write to find out more about it. I imagine the best way is through our ministers, as they are better acquainted with the personnel of our churches and so can give names of those most likely to be interested, thereby saving some useless letter writing although if any response at all comes it cannot be considered useless.

Letters are written to these telling them of the course of study offered by the Berean society. If they decide to try it, they become members of the Berean society by paying the annual dues, and secure lesson books through the National Berean Society. They are urged to study, when possible, one lesson each week or to advance as rapidly as convenient if they haven't much time to devote to it. I have not asked them to prepare written discussions of the lessons or to send in written answers of questions, as that to me would make the study a matter of drudgery rather than one of enjoyment. This is only personal with me, however, and each committee member is free to use the method she likes best.

It may be that some written work would bring about a more intense study and that correspondence with some one about it might bring out more ideas and thoughts. However, in a letter I received last winter the writer stated she believed she and her husband would not be able to take up the study if any writing was required. I think we wouldn't doubt that with young people it would perhaps be necessary to have some way to check lessons, and they are more in the habit of written preparation; but with more mature minds I feel my incapacity and there would perhaps be more reason for their checking up on me than me on them.

One of the members of the committee believes there should be some way of having the students exchange their thoughts, and this undoubtedly would be good if such a plan could be worked out. She also suggests that questions and comments of those studying be acknowledged and answered through our paper or otherwise.

Another member suggests, as possibly more profitable, a study by chapters of a book of the Bible. But the lesson books follow the subject or topic plan, and if one is studying alone surely more is to be gained by systematic and directed study rather than by unorganized study.

I hope this paper will bring forth comment which will improve the efficiency of this committee.—Miss Verna Himmelright, 407 East Washington St., Attica, Ind., chairman, Senior Home Study Committee.

JESUS EXPECTS US TO IMPROVE OURSELVES

ONCE upon a time there was a young man who had three younger brothers. This young man had to go on a long journey, and he expected he would be gone a long time. He was very anxious that his three young brothers should grow up to be fine men. And he knew that if they did, they must be busy at the proper things while they were growing up. Also, he hoped that when they were grown, they would take up the same work he himself was doing.

Now in the work that this man carried on, a great variety of seeds was used. Seeds from beautiful flowers, seeds from the finest vegetables, these were the marks of his business. For his work was that of horticulture.

As the time grew near for him to start on his long journey, he called his three younger brothers to him. To the oldest he gave five packages of very expensive and very precious seeds. To the next younger, he gave two, and to the youngest, one.

Then this young man told them about his intended journey and that he might be absent only a short time, but probably a long time. Explaining to each of his younger brothers the value of the seeds he had entrusted to them, he asked them to follow carefully the directions on each package, and they would be rewarded with many beautiful flowers.

The young man knew that if the boys obeyed his request, their future was sure. They would be gardeners of the highest order. For they would understand thoroughly the first steps in their work, and they would grow to love it, being repaid by a multitude of lovely blossoms, as well as a greater supply of seeds for the next year's planting.

Thus giving each one careful directions with many tender words of wisdom, the young man said good-bye.

The two older boys at once set to work with a willing heart. Carefully they selected and prepared the ground according to the directions left by the absent one. In between tending their garden plots they found plenty of time for rest and recreation. Reading many books on horticulture was one of the best ways in which they spent their spare time.

Slowly their gardens grew; gradually the buds formed; gracefully the blossoms unfolded. At last they realized what their older brother had led them to expect. A wealth of beauty met their eyes each morning. And they knew that many more packets of seeds than the original valuable ones given to them, would be theirs at the harvesting time.

The youngest boy? Well, he just didn't try to work up an interest in that little old package of seeds. He knew his brother was very, very particular about that special sort of seed because it was rare and valuable, and so he stored it away in an old tin box, intending to return it to his brother when he reached home again.

"Why should I dig and plant and cultivate in the hot sun? He will only be that much richer because of my work. I'll go lie in the shade and sleep a while." Thus the youngest reasoned within himself.

Suddenly one beautiful day the young man returned. Imagine his joy to find the two older boys planning larger gardens for the next season because of the abundance of seeds with which their work was rewarded.

"You are now my partners in the business," he said to them. "Together we will extend our work and branch out into greater trade."

But what about the youngest boy who had hid away his little package of seeds! Well, the less said about his disappointment and that of his older brother, the better.

Jesus, our Savior, is our older Brother who has gone away on a long journey. You and I are the younger ones left at home to care for His property while He is gone. He has put in our keeping different things of value. He has asked us to use them carefully and wisely, giving us full directions in His Book.

Some day, soon we believe, our older Brother will return from His long journey. Then He will ask us how we have used what He trusted us with, if we have increased it and improved it.

Are we going to be glad when we see Him coming? Will we run to Him with joy, showing Him the results of our labor? Or will we want to run and hide, knowing we have done nothing worth while in His absence?

What have you that you can use for Jesus? Can you sing, or speak, or read nicely? Can you do errands carefully? Can you help your Sunday school teacher with the chairs or the papers? Can you find a new scholar? Or can you even only smile sweetly? Whatever you can do, do it joyfully and carefully.

Your next letter in the poster is I. Look at the last part of verse 40 in our lesson chapter.

THE CHRISTIAN AS STEWARD

Matthew 25:14-30

GOLDEN TEXT

Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of the Lord.—Matthew 25:21.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian Steward.

Basic Truth: "Will a man rob God! Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings,"—

I. Receiving the Lord's Talents. (Matt. 25: 14-18.) Jesus compares Himself to a man going on a protracted journey who left a certain amount of money in the hands of his servants for investment. Our Lord left in the care of His anostles and the church His talents of truth. He commanded them to put the gospel into world-wide circulation that its fruitage might be great. Of each of His servants He expected complete service, nothing more. He did not ask that the accomplish ments of all should be the same, but He did demand that each should do his part according to the ability and knowledge the Lord had given him.

II. Using the Lord's Talents. (Vv. 19-25.) There is no Christian who has nothing to use in God's service. It may be but little, but there is always one talent at least that may he devoted to the work of the church. One splendid Christian man said to the writer, "Please do not ask me to pray in public, or to lead a Bible class. I have no talent for those things. But if the church needs some money for an emergency at any time I will be very happy to supply it. The Lord has given me ability to make money, and I want to use it in His service." Another's gift may be that of a marvelous and well-trained voice for singing. Whatever one's talent may be, when we are haptized it becomes the Lord's; no longer is it our own (Rom. 12:1; 6:13).

III. Rejoicing in the Increase. (Vv. 26-30.) The Master who has left His task for us to carry on, He who has given us health and strength and sufficient money to keep us from starvation, is coming again to inquire as to how we have served Him with the blessing He has provided. How pleased we shall be to hear Him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!"

GOLDEN TEXT

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord."-Matt.

Faithfulness is ever rewarded. "A little thing is a little thing, but faithfulness in little things soon becomes a big thing.' doubt this faithful servant just did his duty day by day, the little things as they came up, till by the time the master returned his little things had grown into one big success, and he was rewarded therefor.

with no stopping nor turning back, but ever on the watch to do things that will please the Master. The servant in the text was rewarded with rulership over many things, and we are told in Revelation 2:10, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." A crown denotes rulership. It pays to be faithful.-L.A.R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Christian Steward

will use his talents wisely; is always about his Father's business; -knows no such thing as slothfulness; does his work in humility;

-will be glad to render account of his stewardship.

Stewardship, Every Christian is a steward over his own talents. The Father has placed under every son and daughter certain responsibilities and will hold them accountable for the manner and way in which they comport themselves as "stewards of the manifold grace of God." The tendency is to shift responsibility and duty to the shoulders of some one clse. Perhaps in the majority of cases some one is found who will carry our load, but this in no wise frees us from our bounden duty. "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and docth it not, to him it is sin."-Jas. 4:17. The sin of omission is as great as the sin of commission. The sin of omission is leaving undone or neglecting the things we know should be done (Matt. 23:23). Name some of the ordinary duties of a Christian which people are inclined to omit, neglect, or decline to do.

Talents. Most people would take offense if they were told they didn't possess any talents, yet at the same time decline or refuse to take part in church work because they haven't any talents. The truth of the matter is that every person of ordinary intelligence, at least, possesses talents of some kind which could be and should be used in Christian service. God has endowed every individual with some power that can be used profitably in His work,-C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Stewardship of Service

The parable we have for study today is a lesson in Christian responsibility. It teaches us that the disciple of Jesus is no longer his own master. Even the talents and the time which he had previously counted as his own now belong to the One who has bought him at so great a price.

We are further impressed with the fact that it is not "quantity" but "quality" that Christ demands in service. He does not expect the impossible from mortal men and women. He only asks that we shall do the best Christ expects His followers to be faithful, that we can with the knowledge, the strength.

and the ability God has given us. He to whom little had been given was not reproved when he was unable to return to his master as much as did the servant who had received

A great many people are satisfied to limit their Christian activity to attending church services and contributing to the financial support of the congregation. So far as time is concerned they generally give only that to the Lord which they could not use for themselves. One to two hours a week on Sunday when they could not be otherwise engaged! But when asked to take an hour or two from their business or from their worldly pleasure to assist in influencing others to become Christians, they generally say they are too busy, or that they do not feel qualified for such work.

In this parable Jesus 'teaches us that all that we are and have and may become belongs to Him, and whatever we use for the accomplishment of our own purposes is "borrowed" from Him.

But great is the reward that will come to the man or woman who makes the most of the life and ability God has bestowed upon him in the service of our Lord! The "well done, thou good and faithful servant," when the Lord comes will more than compensate for whatever sacrifice we may have made in this present time.-G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Our Work for Jesus.

For today let us make this picture first. Draw five pieces of money at one side of your page. Under these draw two pieces of money. and beneath these, one piece of money.

Jesus often told stories to the people. Our lesson today is one of these stories. (Teacher tells story about the talents as found in Matthew 25:14-30, emphasizing the talents as children have drawn on their papers.)

Now since you have heard the story, how many more pieces of money must you add to the five? (Children add five more.) How many to the two? (Children add two.) But how about the one? Which servant do you want to be like?

But Jesus has gone away, for that's who the man is in this story, and He has left us some things to use while He is gone. can they be? Well, here are some: our hands, our feet, our voice; and you name the rest.

Cut and paste picture of a boy or girl in center of another page. Draw a line from the boy's or girl's hands and at the end write what we can do for Jesus with our hands until He returns. Do this for all the other parts of our body that we can use to do things for

Learn and write this verse at the bottom "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

LOS ANGELES THANKSGIVING SERVICE

A special thanksgiving service will be held in Los Augeles on Sunday, Nov. 25, at which time Pastor Norman John MacLeod, basing his discourse on 2 Samuel the 7th chapter, will speak on "The Prayer of Thanksgiving." It is urged that all who can do so attend this service and take part in the hour of praise. The entire nation has much for which to thank the Giver of all good in spite of widespread distress and the uncertainty with which we view the future.

PLANS FOR FALL MEETINGS LAID AT BRUSH CREEK

The annual fall series of meetings of the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church of God is now just a few days off. Remember that Bro. Austin of Chicago will be the speaker. He has served as a minister of the Church of God for forty years, and is one who has a number of times previously worked with the Brush Creek church. The meetings begin November 18, and will continue up into December. Remember this effort in prayer, and attend if possible. We know every sermon from Bro. Austin will be a feast to those who hunger for truth.

At the present time we are enjoying a wonderful visit with Bro. and Sr. W. F. Hoskins and daughter, Iva, of Eden Valley, Minn., and Bro, and Sr. Howard Hamilton of Richmond, Minn. Also, we must mention the presence of Douglas, one-year-old son of the Hamiltons. Sr. Hoskins is giving Sr. Magaw and our newly arrived daughter the best of care as well as being general chore girl of the home. We hope the appeal of Brush Creek will hold the Minnesota brothren with us through the fall series of meetings. Before their return home we anticipate a trip to Ashland, Ohio, to visit the Patrick family. These get-togethers of old friends are blessings never to be forgotten. "Doe" looks ings never to be forgotten. mighty good to us yet!

APPRECIATION

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:

I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the cheery cards and letters I received which helped so much to shorten the hours of suffering; also, for the lovely flowers which brought the artistic hand of our God, in all their gorgeous colors, changing a gloomy hospital room into a veritable flower garden showing the thoughtfulness of loved ones.

I am slowly improving and trust that I may ever be faithful in His service until the

ST. CLOUD, MINN., HAS SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

A good time was enjoyed by all at the pie social given by the Ladies' Society last Thursday evening, Nov. 1, in the church basement. It appears that about 75 pieces of pie were served, with coffee.

A surprise gathering for Bro. Charles Thoms was held in the church Friday, Oct. 19. Bro. Thoms is one of our older members, who has been faithful in caring for the fire. Appreciation was shown at this time for his untiring labors.

Sr. T. M. Savage, Sr., is still under the doc tor's care. She is being taken to the hospital for further examination. We pray that the result be her recovery to health again. We ask that all will pray for her.

Another splendid meeting was held Sunday, Nov. 5, in the home of Bro. and Sr. Philo at Oak Park. The room was filled and overflowing, for some had to sit in another room. Following the service lunch was served. I preached on the subject of "Hell, What Is It and Where Is It?"

A very enjoyable time was had when I preached at Eden Valley, Sunday morning, Oct. 28, in the absence of Bro. Le Crone.

In conclusion may we quote these words from Revelation 3:21: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne."

SUMMER MEETINGS HELD BY E. O. STEWART

The last week in June we held a meeting at New Hope, near Westbrook, Texas, and the result was six baptisms.

In July two week-end meetings at Palava resulted in four additions.

On the 20th of July, Bro. C. E. Weaver and I began a meeting at Bear, Ark., resulting in one bantism.

I went to Backett Mountain, Ark., to attend Conference. On Sunday, nine persons were baptized.

From there I went to Havana, Ark., for a ten days' meeting, and our hearts were made glad when sixteen made the good confession and were baptized.

Thence to Driggs, Ark., where three were baptized; then returned for a week to Bear, where four were baptized. Three of these were from Driggs.

We are glad to commend these forty-three new converts to the Father's keeping.

E. O. Stewart.

ARRIVED AT BLANCHARD

Bro. and Sr. Clio Egbert of Blanchard. Mich., have now acquired a son and heir in the person of Lynwood Rowe Egbert, who came to stay October 30. We hope he will grow up to play life as his namesake plays baseball. The mother is doing nicely. She was baptized into the faith last April, We pray for much happiness in store for this family.

KELSEY - ROMINE

A very pretty wedding was witnessed by about twenty guests and friends of the immediate families of Otis Romine and Miss Lucille Kelsey who gathered at the Kelsey home at 1202 L. W. E., South Bend, Ind., on November 3.

After the wedding ceremony many other friends arrived to bring many beautiful and useful gifts and to wish them well as they enter upon their new experience.

Otis is the son of Bro. and Sr. Lewis Romine; and the bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kelsey of South Bend. They will live at 15051/2 Lebanon St., South Bend, Ind.

We wish for them a happy and useful life together and that they may prosper in every good thing.

ASHLEY P. HARLAN

Ashley P. Harlan was born October 20, 1864, at Alden, Iowa. His parents were Barton and Jane Ayres Harlan.

In May, 1894, he was united in marriage to Wilhelmina Steuber at Holbrook, Neb. To this union were born four children: Carl, who passed away several years ago; Theodorc, Bertha Brown, and Golda; who, with the widow, one brother, A. N. Harlan, and three sisters, Anna Cody, Elizabeth, and Ida, survive.

Bro. Harlan united with the Church of God a few years ago at Corvallis, Ore.

He died, after an illness of several months' duration, of acute peritonitis, September 3, at the Multnomah Hospital in Portland, Orc. Funeral services were held from the Goble Funeral Home, with A. W. Darby officiating, and interment being made in Portland.

Our brother is asleep in 'Christ, but to those who remain we quote these words from the Apostle Paul's writings, "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

We are pleased to learn that Sr. Emma C. Railsback is planning another of her pastoral tours to northern California. She expects to make brief calls at Tulare, Hanford, Fresno, Madeira, San Francisco, and Wheatland on the way and give Bible lessons at each place. Sr. Railsback is peculiarly fitted to carry on work of this kind successfully. May God bless her efforts.

Writing from her home in Briggsdale, Colo., Mrs. Nora Johnson kindly says, "I am always delighted with the paper and read it from cover to cover each week."

Brethren of California: Do not forget the next quarterly conference. Ask Bro. Mac Leed as to where and when it is to be held and please send us the information for advance publication. Thanks!

Our Sunday school teachers, especially those having charge of young classes, will be glad to know that Mrs. Verna C. Thayer, editor of the lessons for the junior classes in the Truth Seekers' Quarterly, has prepared a series of three short articles on "Teaching the Bible to Children." Mrs. Thayer has had much practical experience in this kind of teaching and her articles, which will appear soon in our columns, will be of great value to the teachers of little folks.

Bro, M. W. Lyon, pastor of the Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio, is recovering after undergoing an operation for the removal of his tonsils. Addressing his church, he says he "is as good as new again and at your service."

The first questionnaire concerning the changes contemplated for the Truth Seekers' Quarterly came from the school at Kokomo, Ind. It favors the publication of editorials on the highlights of the International lossons. Who will be the next to respond?

A letter from Sydney E. Magaw, pastor of the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church of God, announces the arrival on Thursday morning, Nov. 8, of a seven and a half pound danghter. Sr. Magaw and the danghter were doing well under the care of Mrs. W. F. Hoskins of Eden Valley, Minn.

On Sunday the 18th, the Lord willing, Pastor Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., of the Plum River, Ill., church will exchange pulpits for the morning service with the pastor of the Oregon church. In the evening of the same day the regular pastor at Oregon will give the final sermon of a series in which he has been engaged, based on familiar hymns. The hymn to be discussed will be "Abide With Me," and will be illustrated with a pantomine provided by Betty Jean Lindsay, the talented grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Lindsay and Mr. and Mrs. George Siple. She will be assisted by her aunt, Mrs. Wendell Doeden, who will sing the beautiful number as Betty Jean visualizes it.

He united early in life to the Church of God. His hope and faith lay in the resurrection of the dead and second coming of our Lord. Brother Reuben passed through the cares and trials common to this life. May we be able to say with the Apostle Paul that the sufferings of this present life are nothing compared to the glories of the world to come. Our brother sleeps until the resurrection call when we may meet again in the coming kingdom.

HARD TIMES INDEED!

A sister in South Dakota whom we have known and respected for many years for her faithful Christian service and for her self-sacrificing defense of the truth, in renewing for The Herald gives the following reasons for not sending her renewal earlier. Her letter paints such a vivid picture of the results of prolonged drought that we venture to quote a portion of it.

"We have raised no crop for the last two years and not a good one for nine years. We got some relief work last week for the first time. It isn't much but will help, and I can hardly get along without the paper. The conditions are very bad here. We sold our pigs for 10 cents apiece and the best of them for 35 cents apiece. We were obliged to sell our chickens as grain is so high in price. We are going to try and winter our cows on Russian thistles and cornstalks. I hope conditions get better and I can pay up what I owe on the paper."

Brethren, you who glance briefly over the news pages of The Herald and then piek up your daily paper, look at the headlines and east it aside, and go to church and Sunday school from force of habit, can you realize the spiritual hunger of one who stands in need of clothes and a hundred household supplies, and sends her "relief" wages that she may have The Herald to comfort and strengthen her in times like these? May God help us to bring to this sister the uplift she needs, is our prayer!

thought that the power of Ghandi was on the decline. He laughed the idea to scorn. Ghandi, he felt, was the most powerful figure in India because all of India had found a rallying point in a figure that stood as a symbol of freedom from foreign oppression. He compared the hero of India to the leaders of Revolutionary America who freed themselves from British domination. The audience was highly delighted by his thrusts at the "oppressions" suffered by the people of America, and more recently in India. Mahatma could not lose his influence in India any more than Washington could lose his influence among the American patriots of Revolutionary days. When asked if the Moslems and Hindus could be brought together he replied unhesitatingly that they could not only be brought together, but were already working as one; they are one people in spite of religion. Anyway, he said, he could not see that anyone outside of India was concerned about the internal affairs of India. He compared the position of India to that of the United States during the Civil War: the people of India would feel toward anyone that should espouse the cause of either Moslem or Hindu as we would have looked upon anybody during the Civil War who would have interfered with our internal affairs. We felt, he averred, that our Civil War was our own affair: even so were the local quarrels of India the affair of the people concerned.

Why did the people of India not choose to forsake Great Britain during the World War? Why did they not espouse the cause of Germany? Because the Indians feared Germany less than they did the British. They saw that they had a good chance to rid themselves of one enemy at least. They felt that the time was not yet ripe for throwing off the yoke of British imperialism. They could get rid of Germany: therefore, they chose the opportunity afforded by the World War to get rid of one enemy. They look to the future to help rid themselves of others. They feel that it is possible to unite all Asiatic peoples under the dominion of either Japan, or Russia, or Turkey; possibly under the joint leadership of all three! What a menace that is to the imperialistic rule of the West. How about the ideals of the East and the West! Do they have the same ideals? Mr. Hossain answered in the affirmative: the same ideals were freedom, political, social, and economic.

ORIENTAL AUTONOMY

When Woodrow Wilson announced his dictum of national self-determination he did not have any part of the world in mind but Europe. He did not wish to apply that principle to Asia or Africa. He was interested primarily in the gerrymandering of European boundaries, not in those of Asia. The mandate system was the thing to take care of Asia and Africa. Asiatic Leople could not govern themselves he felt! But according to Mr. Hossain that is the very thing that the people of Asia are determined to do. European imperialism must be ended, was the gist of his entire thought. How does that fit in with the Christian's life and thought? How can be understand the events that are taking place in the Far East?

Ezekiel (38th and 39th chapters) speaks of a great world conflict yet to come; Joel speaks of all nations gathered into the valley of Jehoshaphat; Zechariah mentions times of trouble in the region around Jerusalem at the time of the appearing of the Lord when His feet shall stand on the Mount of Olives; and the book of Revelation speaks of the immensity of the armies that shall be gathered at "a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." These and many other texts point to the time of trouble that shall immediately precede the coming of Jesus. The Christian notes these and then looks about him in the world and sees trouble on every hand. Continual sore spots on the face of the earth bring war after war. 1914. Serbia and Austria! 1934: Jugo-Slavia (the successor to Serbia) and Austria! These have been the sore spots in the flank of the Balkan Peninsula for centuries, Turkey, Poland, Belgium, Alsace-Lorraine, Manchuria, and Palestine. These are the perpetual breeding ground of wars. The recent wars in Manchuria are only a new event in the long history of conflict among Japan, Korea, and China from time immemorial, with Russia added in modern times. Only a very unsophisticated historian would look abroad at the present time and see peace ahead. None of the points of friction that existed in 1914 has been removed by the war. New points of friction wholesale have been added. Navies have not been materially reduced: new weapons of war have been added. Economic conflicts have become more keen because of the terrific competition of depression circumstances in world trade. Japan has assumed the position of pre-war Germany: she has become the nation that undersells all others. Even in such places as Italy, Jugo-Slavia, and Austria has the competition of Japanese goods become alarming. The economic warfare of Japan has not been confined to her more natural battle grounds of Western America, China, and India. Every corner of the earth where markets are available does the economic battle wage. Swift and sudden destruction is on every wind. The peoples of Asia are in revolt. Against what? Against the Powers that dominate their economic and social life, and that they feel are robbing them of the political power. Surely the great struggle that is approaching cannot be far away. Only the interference of our Savior from heaven can prevent mankind from completely destroying themselves! What a punishment men bring upon themselves! God does not bring these things. Only the devilish devices of sinful men could produce such wholesale devastation as is coming upon the earth. Surely God in His great mercy will shorten those days, in order to preserve alive any of the people on the face of the earth. Why? God is pleading with the nations for His people whom He watches and guards on the earth. He is purging a people for His name from all the peoples of the earth. Are we ready for the trials that cleanse? Are we ready to meet the Savior when He comes: "For he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, . . . that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness."

Let Us Give Thanks

Lord, I am glad for the great gift of living— Glad for Thy days of sun and of rain; Grateful for joy, with an endless thanksgiving, Grateful for laughter—and grateful for pain.

Lord, I am glad for the young April's wonder, Glad for the fullness of long summer days; And now when the Spring and my heart are asunder, Lord, I give thanks for the dark Autumn ways.

Sun, bloom, and blossom, O Lord, I remember, The dream of the Spring and its joys I recall; But now in the silence and pain of November, Lord, I give thanks to Thee, Giver of all!

Abreast of the Times

Night Club Girl Killed

"Her end is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a twoedged sword."—Proverbs 5:4.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 15.—Strong emphasis is given to the article of the Editor which appears in this issue under the title, "Our Young People," by the tragic death of a chestnut-haired girl who early yesterday morning plunged seventeen floors to her death as the aftermath of a drinking party which was held in the Medinah-Michigan Club, where she apparently had been accompanied by one or more men. The young woman was identified as a "night club hostess," or a professional dancer who is available at a price as the dancing partner of any visitor of the club she frequents.

A scrapbook was found in the young woman's room which contained among other clippings a writeup of another young woman who under similar circumstances leaped from the thirty-third floor of the Medinah-Michigan Club last February. Christ only protects from such a fate!

From Heaven or Hell?

"He that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with graveclothes."—John 11:44.

Moscow, Russia, Oct. 30.—Again the difficult theological question arises: "Where do the souls of the dead come from when their bodies are restored to life by scientific means after death has actually taken place?" The matter has been brought definitely before the theologians who believe that souls at death go immediately to heaven or to a burning hell by the declaration of a high Soviet medical authority that the first known instance of a human being "actually dead" being restored to life has taken place in that country.

According to the United Press, the Central Institute of Blood Transfusion, which has conducted numerous experiments in reviving animals, claimed it had recently restored life for two minutes in a man who had been dead for three hours after committing suicide by hanging.

Animation was said to have been restored by means of the "artificial heart" invented by Prof. Sergei Bruikhanenko. Many previous attempts to restore life by that means had failed, said Prof. C. I. Spasokukotsky of the Institute. In the last instance the dead man was revived sufficiently to breathe and to manifest other indications of returning animation.

Now just where did his soul come from? Or was the man, in harmony with the Bible definition of the soul, the soul itself? When the man died did not his soul die also? Was not the death of the man the death of the soul? Are they not one and the same thing? "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man"—the one formed altogether of the dust of the ground—"became a living soul." The dust man became a soul—a living man!

Mission or Theater?

"Choked with . . . pleasures of this life."-Luke 8:14.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 15.—The Federal Government has suggested to city missions all over the United States that if they will change their missions into moving picture shows, putting on free moving pictures several times a week and leave the strictly religious thought out completely, the Government will furnish the means to carry on their work!

Such is the astonishing assertion made by the Superintendent of one of the largest missions in Chicago, to Bro. Glenn M. Birkey in a recent interview. The Superintendent declared further that many missions had seen fit to accept the offer. An influential mission worker from Rochester, N. Y., called on him a short time ago, and said, "We have got to readjust ourselves and substitute modern methods (worldly entertainment was probably meant) for the gospel method."

The Superintendent to whom our correspondent is indebted for this information rejected the proffer and declared he would close the great mission of which he is the head rather than continue it with the gospel of Christ omitted or subordinated to worldly pleasure.

Homeless

"They please not God, and are contrary to all men."—
1 Thessalonians 2:15.

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 17.—Driven from other lands by persecution, a group of some three hundred Jews have chartered a Greek vessel and are now out on the Mediterranean Sea and have been forbidden to land at any port. Poverty and sickness have overtaken them according to radio reports and the outcome is in doubt.

Thanks Due to God

By Arlen Marsh

"Offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving." — Amos 4:5.

M ILLENNIUMS have been required to win for men the freedom which justly is theirs. Autoeracy enjoyed its day, a day of some thousands of years, and it rose to its peak and fell. The Magna Charta of England, the Lutheran revolution in Germany, the revolt of Cromwell, the Revolution in America were all written into history as an expression against the exercise of dictatorial authority.

And now the scene has changed.

Dictators are the fashion. Dictators are the eraze. Like It Ain't Gonna Rain No More, democracy as it was understood by its founders has perished from the earth. In its place has arisen the more popular and supposedly more modern tune of seeurity in individual rulership.

It is a hard time for the peoples of the world to offer thanks for anything. Men are prone always to look upon the gray side of the cloud, and the gray side now seems to be the background for every activity. Only in the realm of fiction and the Brain Trust have men donned rose-colored glasses to look upon business, political, and social conditions.

Oppression never has induced thanksgiving. Neither has financial poverty. Both oppression and financial poverty are the vogue today.

Conditions in the time of the apostles, however, were inconceivably worse than those prevailing in this nation today. Wealth incredible was combined with the most degraded form of slavery. Roman rulers sat in pomp and licentious pleasure on the decks of ships driven by galley slaves whose life expectancy was at best six months. Autocracy was at its peak.

Nevertheless, the apostles found occasion to give thanks. Paul, from the depths of a cell dank, rat-infested, and disease-producing, sang hymns of praise to God. Stephen, in the midst of his death pangs, glorified Jehovah. Oppression might torture them, monarchical rule might unjustly condemn them; but still they found cause to give thanks to the Deity.

The people of the United States are especially fortunate. Although their President is possessed of tremendous potential power, they yet can worship, speak, and write very largely as they please. The national hegemony still leaves a place for freedom.

But the people of the United States, in general, are unwilling to offer any sacrifices of thanksgiving. They are, indeed, unwilling to offer any sacrifices at all. As a matter of fact, the significance of the day which they celebrate in bonor of the God who blesses them has been almost entirely lost.

Freedom is, undoubtedly, the greatest blessing that can be conferred upon mankind. God gave man freedom through the death of His Son—freedom from the chains of mortality. Jesus taught freedom, and the apostles followed His example. Freedom is something to be cherished and protected.

The Constitution of the United States endeavors to secure freedom to its subjects. It is, in effect, a guarantee of liberty.

This nation should be thankful for the government it always has enjoyed. No other nation, with the possible exception of Canada, Australia, and Great Britain, has had its freedom from revolutions, tyranny, and restrictions upon individual activity.

We are bound by no prohibitions on our church attendance. Our taxes go to support no State elergy that is complacent and degenerate. We are obligated to worship at no one denominational building, nor are we forced to become members of some one church.

We have, moreover, prosperity for which to be thankful. Despite the injury the nation feels over the depression, we are experiencing what foreign peoples have experienced since the close of the World War. Asiatic and European poverty is beyond our comprehension. The standard of living in the United States is yet the highest in the world.

This has been largely due to the fact that individual enterprise has been unrestricted. The activities in business, politics, and society of persons moving on their own responsibility have built the country into what it is today.

Autocracy always differentiates sharply between the classes. There is a wealthy and a noble class; there is a

Thanks Be to God

I do not thank Thee, Lord,
That I have bread to eat while others starve;
Nor yet for work to do
While empty hands solicit Heaven;
Nor for a body strong
While other bodies flatten beds of pain.
No, not for these do I give thanks!

But I am grateful, Lord,
Because my meager loaf I may divide;
For that my busy hands
May move to meet another's need;
Because my doubled strength
I may expend to steady one who faints.
Yes, for all these do I give thanks!

-Janie Alford in The Gideon.

middle class; and there are serfs. Rare are the occasions when a member of one class is able to rise to membership in the class next higher. This nation has no such differentiation: any man can climb the heights, and wealth is nothing but a valuable aid.

For these things, too, we should be thankful. God has presented us with freedom, legal equality, and wealth. We have been given peace. We have received internal calm.

Yet the people as a whole are unwilling to acknowledge that God is responsible for their good fortune. They are even unwilling to acknowledge that they have had good fortune. They are unwilling to go through more than the form of giving thanks.

To return to God a portion of what they have received is beyond their ken. That God is deserving of the best they have they cannot understand. Giving to the church in a small amount is a necessary and irritating task, like paying the grocery bill and the insurance premium. To make real sacrifices for Jehovah, and to make them with thanksgiving for the blessings He has given, they will not do.

What Wild Flowers Have to Tell

WILD flowers are found around the world. In our eastern states we have the fragrant Trailing Arbutus amid the mosses of the woods. We admire the modest Quaker Ladies in the sweet meadows by shining streams. We go to Switzerland and enjoy the irrepressible wild blooms that make sumptuous carpet on every side. We tarry in South Africa where on the broad veldt, or secreted beneath lacquered-like foliage of bush and tree, we find the varied colors of wild flowers extending their levely petals and filaments toward the sun. We gaze on the level sweep of the vast deserts of Western Australia, and are told that over six thousand varieties are counted in the springtime, four thousand of them not known in other lands. We voyage the deep blue waters of the Pacific to California and, in the Sierras, there bursts forth the splendor of her early summer flowers. We cross to the Rocky Mountain area, and find rare rivals of mid-Europe, vivid masses of color, evidences of the hidden and open generosity of God.

I think of the richness of the lessons the uncultivated flowers teach. Why should we not find instruction in the wealth of the Creator's workmanship? The starry wonders of the universe are beyond imagination, the charm of the radiant wild flowers is spread beneath our feet. We look into the skies—God is there. We stoop—God is there.

The Wild Phlox shows us that natural wildness can be subdued. The gardener's genius can develop a perfect bloom, the joy of those who delight in an ideal of comeliness and form. Cannot the Great Husbandman of hearts, with equal skill and love, change our wayward natures, make us into spiritual plants—bearers of heavenly things—in the garden of our Lord? He can.

THE RARE ART OF THANKSGIVING

We may learn internationalism from our wild flowers. The White Cherokee Rose, with its Oriental artistic delicacy, came from China. The Wild Honcysuckle was brought from Europe by our forbears. So has it been with other flowers. Our debt to foreign soils is very great. The prodigal decoration of our fields and gardens is part of the generous gift bestowed by our Father's hand.

The wild flowers teach us the rare and helpful art of thanksgiving. When winter is breaking in the Rocky Mountains, and the sunlight pours down through the thin, dry air we search for the Anemone. Out on the open prairie, sheltered under the fragrant pine trees, we discover the exquisite flower, choice but colorful, the forerunner of a multitude of tinted treasures soon to be found in the open spaces or among the decaying leaves. How the Creator must enjoy them—all! On the lonely mountain tops, unseen by men, they lift their pretty heads in adoration and praise. They serve God. We, too, may serve Him when, with thankful hearts, we remember His watchfulness over the marvels of His outward creation and our own restless lives. The service of thanksgiving may be the best

COURAGE IN THE COLD

The wild flowers tell of courage. In the state of Colorado we have 48 peaks lifting their grim forms more than fourteen thousand feet above the level of the sea. Beyond timberline the winter snows sometimes lie twenty feet deep. But in the springtide, as the snow retreats, the gallant little flowerlets peep from tiny crevices split in the mighty rocks that dominate the bitter scene. On the forbidding heights the miniature bushes and blossoms may be only one or two inches high, but there they are—dainty, happy, unafraid. The attacks of adversity have ceased. The glory of the sunlight covers them, they yield to its magic power. So may it be with us. We recollect that if the little seed of faith within us lives, it will—as the struggling plant on the mountain top—survive the stormy blasts of anxiety and care.

The pink Wild Roses nestling by the country hedges, the flaming Poppies in the summer grasses, remind us of the beauty and splendor of a royal faith in God. Down from the Galilean hills, across the centuries of human hopes and fears, we hear the music of the voice of the Anointed One: "Consider the lilies of the field"—not of the garden—"they toil not, neither do they spin; . . . shall God not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"—William C. Allen in The United Presbylerian.

Our Young People

THERE THEY STAND, these splendid young people of ours, alert, vigorous, and responsive to every need of the Church of God of which they are a part! "In the midst of a crooked and perverse generation" they march forward bearing aloft in unsulglasses, with still more bottles buried in pails of chipped ice standing by ready to be claimed by the revellers when the visible supply is exhausted.

lied hands the banner of Jesus Christ! What a picture of well-directed energy they present! What a tremendous force for good and for God they constitute! And how little the church in general appreciates them and the service which they render!

In times like these, when temptations known to ourselves and to our fathers have been multiplied a thousand-fold, when the beckening hand of the world is enticingly extended to young folks, holding out new and wonderfully alluring inducements for them to become "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God," it is encouraging and inspiring indeed to find so many of them standing firmly and fearlessly in the defense of truth and righteousness.

The general moral and spiritual course of the world is obviously downward. It is away from God and Christ and the Bible. It is turning constantly toward a materialism that leads directly to skepticism and infidelity. But within the sheltering walls of the Church of God there is discovered a large and steadfast group of young men and young women who remain unmoved by the sophistry and pretense of the so-called intellectuals of the day. These young people think for themselves. They will not permit others to form their opinions for them. They cannot be moved by the ridicule of their pleasure-loving associates in school and college, for these young folks of ours are true in their allegiance to their beloved Master.

Parents whose children find an outlet for their energy in the service of the church have much for which to be thankful. How their hearts should be poured out in praise to God for the protection by which He has surrounded their dear ones and for the influences for good He has thrown about them!

Glance for a moment through the barred doors of the penitentiary! The poor misguided men you see exercising there in the cramped quarters provided by the State are for the most part young men still under thirty years of age. These are the beloved sons of parents like you! But by the grace of God your son would be there with them. Only the power of the gospel of Christ has saved him from such a fate. O father and mother of a Christian son, may your heart be melted to tears of gratitude to Him who has preserved and kept your loved one from such a fate!

It is long past midnight in the city, but the streets are brilliantly lighted and the raucous sounds of jazz float out from open doorways. Within is a scene that might well

Over there a girl, not yet halfway through her "teens," is being led from the floor by her escort, a middle-aged man whom she had never met until tonight, and—watch closely—he is nearly carrying her in his supporting arms because she is too drunk to walk!

Who is she? Not one of our girls, we may be sure! Praise God for that! But she is the daughter of some father and mother who does not know the friendship and the love and the protecting power of Jesus Christ! She has not been reared under the elevating influences of a Christian home. She has not been instructed concerning the dangers that lurk in the gilded palaces of sensual pleasure.

Some one will be held to account for the losses these young men and young women sustain through the failure of the parents to consider their spiritual and moral instruction as well as their intellectual and material well-being!

As a pastor I look into the faces of a junior choir each Sunday night and rejoice with the homes from which its members come! For there is not a young person there of whom a parent might not well be proud. Night after night they come to the church for practice, night after night they blend their youthful voices in songs of praise to God, and night after night they are being drawn, almost unconsciously to themselves, into a fuller fellowship with each other and into a deeper appreciation of the value of the principles of life and truth for which the church stands which they so ably serve. How we thank God for them! They are the richest asset we possess!

It is a comparatively short and easy task to erect a building with towering spires and stained glass windows, but it takes the Master Architect of the church a lifetime of labor to make a Christian to truly worship there! And that is the work that Jesus is performing in these young lives that are dedicated to His service. They provide the materials with which He builds. He molds and polishes these young people of ours to bring out all the beauty of character they possess and then He fashions them with the hand of experience for a place in the glorious temple of our God. Again we thank God for our young people and pray that His blessing may attend them all!

Why I Know There Is a God

A YOUNG lawyer, an infidel, boasted that he was going to locate out West in some place where there were no churches, Bibles, or Sunday schools. Before a year was up he wrote to a young preacher classmate, begging him to come out where he was and start a Sunday school. Said he, "Be sure and bring plenty of Bibles, for I have become convinced that a place without any Christians in it is too much like hell for any living person to stay in."

This is the experience of many thinkers; therefore, we desire to present a few reasons why we believe in the God of the Bible.

Ţ

The Bible's superiority to any other system of religion is apparent in the following illustration, as given by a Chinese tailor. A man fell into a deep, dark pit and lay in its miry bottom groaning and unable to move. Mohammed passed by close enough to see him, but walked on with a stately tread never offering to help him. Confucius soon passed that way and noticing him, said: "You poor fellow. I'm sorry for you. Why were you such a fool as to get in there? If you ever get out don't fall in again," and he was gone. Presently Buddha came near, and he said: "Poor fellow, I am pained to see you lying there. If you could get half up I could reach down and help you out." But the man in the pit was helpless. At last Jesus, Savior of men, hearing his cry, came to the brink, stretched down, laid hold of the unfortunate man, and lifted him out of the horrible pit and put his feet on the solid rock, saying: "Go and sin no more." "That," said the Chinaman, "is Christianity as taught in the Bible."

H

The Bible's age supersedes that of any other book in the world. It has survived when other masterpieces have vanished. Archaeology has discovered that writing existed in the days of Abraham, before Moses was born. The Tel el Amarna tablets, letters and records passing between Palestine and Egypt, are dated about 2000 B. C.

It was necessary for the God who created all things to reveal it to man, since man was not a witness (Job 38:4). What would be more reasonable than that God, who called Abraham to be the father of a new nation, should make such a revelation to Moses, the deliverer of that nation that came out of Egypt? The Scriptures were given into the custody of the Hebrew people. They were copied by hand for hundreds of years.

The first book to be printed on our modern printing press was the holy Bible. The works of great men have perished, but the Bible has stood the test of the ages. It has been translated into some 835 languages and dialects, while the best of human works have seen but few translations. Shakespeare is read in forty languages. Homer can be had in twenty-five, and Uncle Tom's Cabin is in fifteen languages.

 $\mathbf{III}$

The Bible's fruits bear the mark of God's grace. Many evils have been abolished when the Bible has come—such as slavery, piracy, cannibalism, and crucifixion. The story is told of a group of sailors cast upon one of the South Sea Islands, supposed to be inhabited by cannibals. One sailor who had climbed to the top of a hill to investigate was seen to be wildly waving his arms for the rest to come. What was the reason of his joy? He had seen the steeple of a little Christian church. God's Bible truth shed abroad in the hearts of the savages had changed the cannibals into Christians and the sailors were safe.

Everywhere the Bible goes benefits are born. The early settlers coming to America brought their Bibles with them. They came seeking God. The Spaniards came to South and Central America seeking gold. Can you not see the great difference between the culture of the two countries? Because of the Bible we have doctors, nurses, hospitals, and homes for the aged and helpless. Because the Bible was given to the people the shackles of superstition of the Middle Ages fell from men's minds, and since the great reformation of the sixteenth century we have seen a wonderful fulfillment of the prophecy of Daniel 12.4: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased" in the time of the end. Is it not true that most all of the wonderful discoveries and inventions and educational strides have come to us during the last one hundred and fifty years?

IV

The Bible's unity is a proof that it is the revelation of God. Think of a library of sixty-six volumes, composed by twoscore authors from all walks of life, including king and peasant, being collected over a period of sixteen hundred years and yet full of wonderful harmony. Throughout this library there is a central hero, the Messiah. He is seen as distinctly as the scarlet thread that runs through all the rope of the British Navy.

The Old Testament predicted Christ's first advent; and the New Testament records His nativity, His mission, and also predicts His return to this earth at the latter day. This is sensed by Job, for he records the words: "I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth: and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

The New Testament contains more than eight hundred quotations from the Old. The Pentateuch claims at least eight hundred times to be the Word of God. Job, Isaiah, Jeremiah, David, Stephen, Paul, and Peter all confirm the record of creation written by Moscs. Jesus, a close student of the Scriptures, constantly quoted from them in all His teachings. All these internal evidences of unity convince me that the Bible is God's revelation to man. Cf. 2 Peter 1:21; 2 Tim, 3:16; Psa. 119:89; Matt. 5:18; Acts 1:16.

The Bible never changes. God has revealed His will once and for all time in it. When Sir John Simpson, of the University of Edinburgh, was asked to select all the books that he would need in his lectures on scientific subjects, he said: "Carry down stairs every volume over ten years old. They are worthless, for men's ideas are constantly changing." Behold in the Bible words that shall stand forever.

V

The Bible's predictions are another proof of divine inspiration. Concerning the state of the Jewish nation during the Christian Age, Moses wrote in 1500 B.C., in Deuteronomy 28. Men have recorded what has really happened and this history reveals the counterpart of God's predictions

It is said that Deuteronomy 28 is the fiftieth lesson of the Hebrew law, and that when it is read, they have a pauper come near and read it very low in his ear. Why? They cannot help realizing how true the Word of God has proved in their case. The siege of Jerusalem, the famine forcing them to cannibalism, the slaughter, the scattering of the people, were all predicted by Moses.

Concerning the Messiah promised to the Hebrews, there were many biblical predictions. His ancestry was outlined. Judah was to be preserved in spite of the Babylonian captivity till He was born. He was a prophet like unto Moses in a score of ways. He was a priest after the order of Melchisedek. He was born to be King of kings.

He spoke to the people in parables, performed mira-Please turn to Page Ten

A Message for Harvest Thanksgiving

By R. H. Judd

"While the earth remainsth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease."—Genesis 8:22.

WE OFTEN speak lightly of harvest thanksgiving, and to very many it has come to mean nothing more than self-indulgence in the abundance of nature's gifts. We forget that seedtime and harvest both have in them more than the immediate present, and more than the gratification of individual pleasure.

All the sciences join in the conviction that LIFE is the purpose of creation. In other words, that all creation was brought into being with life as the end in view. Without life, all the abundance of material manifestation is without purpose, and hence without value. Too deep almost for our understanding, yet it is perfectly true that but for life the boundless glories of the universe could serve no purpose, and would indeed be the most colossal monument of wasted energy that the imagination could envisage.

To the writer, all the wonders of modern science and all the marvels of modern invention are small indeed compared with that masterpiece of God's creation—the living seed. Probably the smallest thing in creation, it is indeed the greatest. No matter how small the seed may be, enfolded in its bosom is the life history of the species, vegetable or animal, as it once functioned in bodily form since first created; and in the same minute compass of the same seed is comprised its future history of countless generations yet to come (see Hebrews 7:10), manifesting individual beauty in corporeal living existence, for God "giveth to each seed a body of its own" (1 Cor. 15).

Thus we have in that little seed God's promise, and not only a promise but a covenant (see Jeremiah's comment on this verse of Genesis 8:22, in Jeremiah 33:20), to remember the past, and His promise and His covenant for the future,

There is another wonderful thought concerning LIFE suggested by the seed. I wonder how many of us think of the tremendous power—life power—stored up in the tiny seed. If the material frame of the seed is so small that a microscope scarcely reveals it, what must be the dimensions of the life force which it contains? Yet so powerful is it, multiply it as we will, it continues to reproduce itself and give power to its God-given bodily structure thousands of times its own size, and to continue to reproduce throughout countless generations. If such is true of mortal life, what, then, must be the dynamic power of an endless life (Heb. 7:16)? Both are a given power, "God giveth to all life, and breath, and all things." He gave, even to Christ, power (authority, for in this case it is a different Greek word) to lay down His life and to take it again, from God; His risen life to be after the power (not authority but POWER), "the POWER of an ENDLESS ("indissoluble"-R. V.) life," for He asked LIFE of Thee, and Thou gavest it to Him, even length of days forever and ever.

As seedtime speaks of harvest, the time of the ripened fruit, so the ripened fruit again speaks of seedtime, because "therein is the seed thereof" (Gen. 1:11). Thus, even in a lesson of seedtime and harvest, we can learn to rejoice always and give thanks always for all things.

"Stop It Colonel, Stop It"

DURING my military service in India, in those stirring times of mutiny and murder, I had in my regiment a little bugler who was too weak and delicate for the life he had to lead; but he was born in the regiment, and we were bound to make the best of him. His father, as brave a man as ever lived, had been killed in action; then his mother drooped and died six months later.

She was the daughter of a Scripture reader, and a delicate, refined woman, who had brought up the boy strictly, according to her light, and she was generally liked and respected. The boy was her image; but as he preferred to go to prayer meeting with her rather than to join in the horseplay of the other boys, he was not popular, and suffered from many coarse taunts and mocking gibes. After his mother died his life was made miserable by the scoffings, sneers, and ribald jokes of the men, whose butt he was.

About two years later, when little Willie Holt was fourteen years old, the regiment prepared for rifle practice. I had intended leaving the lad behind, thinking him unfit for such work, as the ground was swampy and unhealthy, but my sergeant-major begged hard "to take him along."

"There is mischief in the air, Colonel," he said; "and rough as they treat the lad his pluck and his patience tells on 'em; for the boy is a 'saint,' sir; he is, indeed."

I had a rough lot of recruits just then, and before we had been out a fortnight several acts of insubordination had been brought to my notice. Those were ticklish times, and I had pledged to make an example of the very next offense by having the culprit flogged.

One morning it was reported to me that during the night the targets had been thrown down and otherwise mutilated, and usual practice could not take place. This was serious, indeed, and on investigation the rascally act was traced to occupants of the very tent where Willie Holt was camped—two of them being the worst characters in the regiment. When enough evidence was produced to prove conclusively that one or more of them were guilty of the crime, the whole lot were instantly put under arrest to be tried by court-martial.

In vain 1 appealed to them to produce the man, and at last I said: "We have all heard the evidence that proves the perpetrator of last night's dastardly act to be one of the men before us." Then, turning to the prisoners, I added: "If any one of you who slept in number four tent last night will come forward and take his punishment like a man, the rest will get off free; but if not, there remains no alternative but to punish you all, each man in turn to receive ten strokes of the cat."

For the space of a couple of minutes, dead silence followed; then, from the midst of the prisoners, where his slight form had been completely hidden, Willie Holt came forward.

"Colonel," said he, "you have passed your word that if any one of those who slept in number four tent last night comes forward to take his punishment the rest shall get off free. I am ready, sir; please, may I take it now?"

For a moment I was speechless, so utterly was I taken by surprise; then in a fury of anger and disgust, I turned upon the prisoners: "Is there a man among you worthy of the name? Are you all cowards enough to let this lad suffer for your sins? For that he is guiltless you know as well as I." But sullen and silent they stood, with never a word.

Then I turned to the boy, whose pleading eyes were fixed on me, and never in all my life have I found myself so painfully situated. I knew my word must stand, and the lad knew it, too, as he repeated, "I am ready, sir."

Sick at heart, I gave the order, and he was led away for punishment. Bravely he stood with bared back, as one, two, three strokes descended. At the fourth a faint moan escaped his white lips; but ere the fifth fell a hoarse cry burst from the crowd of prisoners who had been forced to witness the scene, and with one bound Jim Sykes—the black sheep of the regiment—seized the cat, as with choking utterance he shouted: "Stop it, Colonel, stop it, and tie me up instead. He never did it, but I did"; and with convulsed and anguished face he flung his arms around the boy.

Fainting and almost speechless, Willie lifted his eyes to the man's face and smiled—such a smile! "No, Jim," he whispered, "you are safe now, the Colonel's word will stand." Then his head fell forward—he had fainted.

The next day, as I was making for the hospital tent where the boy lay, I met the doctor. "How is the lad?" I asked.

"Sinking, Colonel," he said quickly.

"What!" I ejaculated, horrified and startled at the words,

"Yes, the shock of yesterday was too much for his feeble strength. I have known for some time it was only a question of time," he added; "this affair has only hastened matters." And with suspicious moisture in his kind old eyes, he stood aside while I passed into the tent.

The dying lad lay propped up on the pillows: and at his side, half kneeling, half crouching, was Jim Sykes. The change in the boy's face startled me; it was deadly white, but his eyes were shining with a wonderful light, strangely sweet. The kneeling man lifted his head, and I saw the drops of sweat standing on his brow as he muttered brokenly: "Why did ye do it, lad? Why did ye do it?"

"Because I wanted to take it for you, Jim." Willie's weak voice answered tenderly. "I thought it might help you to understand why Christ died for you."

"Christ died for me?" the man repeated,

"Yes, He died for you because He loved you. I love you, Jim, but Christ loves you much more. I only offered for one sin, but Christ took the punishment for all the sins you have ever committed. The penalty was death, Jim, and Christ died for you."

"Christ has naught to do with such as me, lad; I'm one of the bad 'uns; you ought to know."

"But He died to save bad ones," answered Willie. "He says, 'I came not to call the rightcous, but sinners to repentance.' 'Though your sins be as searlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.' Dear Jim, listen! He is calling you. He has poured out His lifeblood for you. He is knocking at the door of your heart. Won't you let Him in?"—Source unknown.

ETERNAL LIFE

By Mary A. Woodward

"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."—John 17:3.

WIIO of His followers would not long to know more of God and eternal life? Since creation's dawn God's creatures have sought some kind of a God to worship. The human heart has always sought for help more than itself; and so poor human brains and hands have made in various forms gods to worship.

Jesus had seen these gods, had heard the worshipers imploring help from them; and His great heart of love reached out to His Father for help. He desired His disciples to find the true God, for He says in this wonderful prayer, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent."

Who of us have not at some weary times of life wished we might throw off this mortal life, if by so doing we might gain the eternal life; but we know to gain so coveted a treasure, we must care for the life God has given us, and seek the life eternal. Christ in His great love for us is telling us just how to gain it. "And this is life eternal, that (we) might know thee the only true God."

But how are we mortals to know Him more intimately? Only in one way, and that, to study His Word more carefully, the Word given to us by His Son, Jesus the Christ.

How very plain this prayer of the Christ has made the problem. O beloveds, can we by reading this chapter get near enough to Jesus to understand His anxious love for His converts that they might understand His Father well enough to grasp His message to them?

He himself was on the sure road to eternal life. He was about to leave them, through crucifixion and resurrection, and He was very anxious His followers should find the right way to gain eternal life; and so He has taken pains to mark out the way. Study God's Word, which surely leads us aright and gains for us eternal life.

Are we as His followers marking the trail, that others may find it free from the load of isms that some would urge us to carry, emptied of self, trusting God's help so that our awakening on the glorious resurrection morning (not at death) may be to eternal life? "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."—I Thess. 4:16, 17.

What a glad, joyful meeting that will be if we are ready for it and are living here and now near enough to the divine Helper to be ready for that journey if we should be living when the dear Master comes. It means so much to separate ourselves from the world and join ourselves to that glorious company of redeemed ones.

How necessary to be among those who believe, "for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again (not God, but Jesus), even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

Friends, please read this last verse over again and notice it was Jesus who died, not God; and we must believe the Word if we desire to be on the safe side to receive eternal life. God help us to believe and live for Him, is my prayer.

"MY CUP RUNNETH OVER"

By Margaret E. Barber

There is always something over, When we trust our gracious Lord; Every cup He fills o'erfloweth, His great rivers all are broad. Nothing narrow, nothing stinted, Ever issues from His store; To His own He gives full measure, Running over evermore.

There is always something over, When we from the Father's hand Take our portion with thanksgiving Praising for the path He planned. Satisfaction full and deepening, Fills the soul and lights the eye, When the heart has trusted Jesus All its needs to satisfy.

There is always something over,
When we tell of all His love;
Unplumbed depths still lie beneath us,
Unscaled heights rise far above;
Human lips can never utter
All His wondrous tenderness,
We can only praise and wonder,
And His name forever bless.

cles, was rejected by His own people, deserted by His disciples, betrayed for thirty pieces of money. He was crucified among thieves and buried with the rich. He arose from the tomb a physical being, for He said: "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as we see me have." He ascended to His Father's throne, from whence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead at the final judgment, now Thus over twoscore prophecies concerning Jesus were fulfilled during the last few weeks of His brief lifetime.

Concerning world empires, the Prophet Daniel, twentyfive hundred years ago, foreshadowed exactly the history that men have since written. As he said, there have been exactly four world empires beginning with Babylon. Persia, Greece, and Rome have gone, and today Rome is divided into Europe. The stone of Daniel 2 will smite the metallic image representing human governments very soon. This stone represents the return of Christ in judgment to punish sinners and reward His people. His return is spoken of or referred to over three hundred times in the New Testament alone,

The Bible, then, forces us to the conclusion that we may know there is a God:

First, by His revelation of Himself in that book. We are sure it is God's inspired Word because of its superiority, its age, its fruits, its unity, and its predictions, for no human could write such a book and certainly bad men would not write such a book condemning sin and upholding a godly life.

Second, by His manifestation of Himself in Christ, who was the Word that became flesh and dwell among us. His very name, Emmanuel, suggests this, for it means: God with us. Christ often said: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father, for We are one (in unity of purpose)."

Third, by His proclamation of Himself through Christianity. It is not Christianity that has failed, but it is the practice of Christianity that has been so imperfect. The suppression of the Bible caused the Dark Ages of the past. The giving of the Bible to the people caused the great reformation of the sixteenth century. Christianity improves everything it touches. It is the best thing to hold to when living or dying. Satisfy yourself on this point by comparing the last words of Christians with those of dying infidels.

He who most thoroughly knows the Bible most thoroughly believes it.

Christians, be acquainted with your text-book.

Atheists, investigate honestly, for honest investigation has led such men as Gen. Lew Wallace, Sir William Ramsey, Lord Lyttleton, and a host of other doubters into God's truth.

I know there is a God .- H. E. Thompson, Ph. D., in The World's Crisis.

THANKSGIVING

There is a new song in my lips, A song that fits the day, The music of a quiet stream Upon its seaward way-The monotone of sure content As to a mortal life is lent.

The song a tiny river sings That through a meadow glides, Half hidden by the waving grass, Its level course divides: At last forgetful of the hills That vexed so long its infant rills.

Not yet its chant of victory. Recchoes from the shore: Not yet is all its duty done, Its rush and labor o'er; But ocean neareth every day, And bright is life that glides away.

A little hymn of gratitude Like bird songs from their nest; My heart must fashion into speech, And utter from its rest, A tender voice of thankfulness. For love that loveth most to bless.

The slow speech of a weary child, That, wandering lost and lone, Comes unaware on home at last, And nestles to its own: Wrapped all at once in warmth and peace. Where all the storm and straying cease, Ah! can it be, at last, at last, The time of toil and tears. Of bitter troubles overpast. That hope again appears: That after all this weary strife, I live to thank Thee, Lord, for life?

To gather up the broken clue, And tread the path again. With quiet hope and thankfulness, I trod so long with pain; To trust again with such a faith, As once was wounded unto death?

Lord, keep me closer at Thy side. As life the sweeter grows, Lest I forget in this content. The thorn beneath the rose; That dear as home and love may be. I find them still most dear with Thee. -Cooke; selected by Lyman Booth.

ARLEN MARSH, EDITOR

In the Way of Tradition

The United States, being a youthful country as Powers go, has few national traditions. The Fourth of July, Decoration Day, and Thanksgiving are almost the only celebrations which are attached solely to this nation.

Thanksgiving, therefore, has somewhat greater significance than other festival periods, for it is peculiarly a heritage of the United States.

The course of years, however, has depreciated the day and what it represents. It must be taken at its face value rather than at its actual value. It has become a figure, and nothing else.

Presidential proclamations announce the celebration of the annual feast day. Commercialism and habit desecrate whatever meaning it may once have possessed.

For Thanksgiving presumably is a time for giving thanks to God for the blessings He has conferred upon the nation. And Thanksgiving actually is a time for the exercise of arrant selfishness combined with some small amount of self-righteous giving.

In spite of the fact that the people of the United States have been singularly blessed in the matter of government and prosperity, they find it necessary (so they think) to turn to political alphabet soup to cure the ills they have brought upon themselves, rather than to the Deity who has protected them and given them the highest standard of living on the earth. Thanksgiving has become, except among a small minority, a farce.

Practicality

"Our Berean class," pens Miss Anna Mae Bottolfs of Hammond, Louisiana, "gave a party on Hallowe'en using most of the games that were on the Berean Page of the paper October 23. Everyone had a very nice time."

Branch Class in Cleveland

The Bercan society of the Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio, has changed its time of meeting to 7:30 on Friday night. After meeting for six years at 8:00 p.m., it was felt that the earlier hour would favor the smaller children, enabling them to get home earlier. Meetings will close regularly now at 8:30. It is hoped this will increase the attendance.

The Bereans are branching out. A new class has been organized on the West Side which has already had four meetings, with an average attendance of around 10 and a membership of 12. They meet Friday nights at 8:00. Mary Milburn is class president, and Frances Stadden secretary-treasurer.—Golden Rule News.

What I Believe and Why I Believe It

This subject is one of the most thrilling and vital subjects of our study concerning our heavenly Father and His plans. To give in detail what I believe would probably fill volumes, but I will endeavor to give the most important phases of religion, in my opinion, that I believe and why I believe them.

My first section will be devoted to God. I sincerely believe that God is a being, a holy, righteous being who for the people He created has given a guide which they are supposed to follow. Now this guide that I am speaking of is the Bible, which is commonly called the holy Scriptures. I believe the Bible or Word of God was inspired by Him as we find in 2 Timothy 3:16, 17. I believe God is a kind and gracious God who requires obedience of us and if we obey Him we will be rewarded (Lev. 25:18, 19). God requires us to do certain things if we desire salvation, the most important of which I believe are, to believe the gospel (Acts 16:31), repent of our sins (Matt. 3:2), and be baptized with water even as Christ was baptized (Mark 16:16).

My next thoughts will concern Jesus Christ, whom I believe to be the Son of God who was born of a human mother, Mary, with God as His Father (Matt. 1:20, 21). I believe Jesus Christ was in all ways a real man (John 1:14), for He was tempted in all points just as we are, yet without sin (Heb. 4:15). Jesus lived a life of sacrifice and love, the only perfect life ever lived; and I believe He went about doing good, healing the sick, casting out devils, and preaching the gospel to the poor (Mark 1:24-28; Luke 4:34-37). I believe Jesus died for our sins, which were brought on by Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden when they partook of the forbidden fruit (John 1:29).

The third and last section of my article pertains to us, the human beings God made and for whom He created a heaven and earth wherein to dwell (Gen. 1:1). I believe the two greatest commandments that were ever given to us were given by Jesus when He said to one of the Pharisees in answer to his question, "Master, which is the great commandment in the law?" "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." Matt. 22:36-39.

I believe the coming of Jesus is near because the prophecies foretold in the Bible concerning His advent are rapidly being fulfilled. May we study and know our hearts and minds concerning our convictions so that when the great day of His coming is here we may be worthy to help Him in His wonderful work (2 Tim. 2:15).—Miss Elizabeth Ford, Dixon, Illinois.

WHAT HAVE WE DONE?

"What have we done for the Savior today?
What service to Him have we brought?
What deeds of kindness were wrought on our way?
What blessings from Him have we sought?

"What have we done for the Savior today?

A token to tell of His love,

Kindness and tenderness do we display,

To please the Lord Jesus above?

"What have we done for the Savior today?

O strive to do all that we can;

Keep His commandments and walk in His way,

And help in His life-giving plan.

"What have we done in the praise of His name?
What have we done His great love to proclaim?
O may we strive our best service to bring,
Pledging all hearts to our Lord and our King."

How many of you play the game called, "Follow the Leader"? Most everyone, I guess. But if by chance there might be some who don't know it, we will tell them how it is played.

First you choose a leader, and generally you choose one that can think of a lot of things to do. Then you all fall in line behind the leader, and do whatever he does, go wherever he goes, stop when he stops, etc. Sometimes he does something that is very difficult to do, and some have to drop out of the game, because they can't "follow."

Now in our lesson for December 2, we find some people of long ago "following the leader." These people were church people. How many of you can tell me of what church they were? Now this is harder—how many can tell where that city is?

Get Father to teach you how to pronounce the name correctly, and then where to find it on the map. See how many of you can tell your teacher at Sunday school something about the city. Will you do that?

All right, now for "follow the leader." Who was their leader? The first word in the lesson tells you—Paul! I wonder who Paul's leader was. How many of you know that? It was the same One whose light struck Paul blind that day when he was on the road to Damascus.

Paul cried out that day in his fright, "Who art thou?"

And a voice answered, "I am Jesus." And Paul followed Him from that day onward as long as he lived.

What did Paul do up there in the city of Thessalonica that the people of the church followed him, also doing the same? Verse 3 tells us three things, "work of faith"; "labour of love"; "patience of hope."

Now let's find what each thing means. The first one must mean taking their faith away from those old idols they had worshiped and placing their faith in God. Read verse 9. It was hard to do that at first, you know. They had to look at their leader often to see just what he did, and at their greater Leader oftener. For all their lives they had bowed down to those old idols.

"Labour of love," the second thing they followed Paul doing, what was that? Verse 8 tells you. Why, they were so happy over their new-found faith they wanted everybody around them to learn all about it also. Then they became leaders, and those around followed them.

"Patience of hope," the third thing Paul did, they practiced doing while they watched him. Patience includes waiting, doesn't it, and for whom were they waiting? Why, of course, their greater Leader, Jesus! Verse 10 says so.

Now we have three leaders and three things they did. The leaders were Jesus, Paul, and the church. The people of that country had only themselves to blame if they followed their idols and their old wicked ways after that. Don't you think so?

Do you know that all of you are leaders? There is some one following every one of you, no matter how important or how unimportant you are. Somebody looks at you and wishes he could do just what you do. Somebody watches you and tries to do just as you do. And somebody else does exactly as you do.

When you get up in the morning to get ready for school, when you recite your lessons, when you play after school hours, some one is imitating you, just as you imitate some one who you think is about right.

When you go to Sunday school, carrying your Bible, when you bow your head during the prayer, and listen quietly to the reading of the lesson, some one does just as you do. When you attend to your teacher's words as she explains the lesson and memorize the verse she gives you, some one is playing, "follow the leader," and you are that leader!

Add the letter S to your poster of "The Christian," using a verse beginning with that letter. Verse 7 in our lesson is good or find a better one yourself.

THE CHRISTIAN AS WITNESS

1 Thessalonians 1:1-10

GOLDEN TEXT

But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian As Witness,

Aim: It is our duty to spread the gospel of the kingdom as we wait for the Lord's com-

Basic Truth: "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."-Matt, 24:14.

I. A Steadfast Church, (1 Thess. 1:1-4.) The history of evangelistic work carried on by the Church of God in new places shows that frequently after the minister has converted and baptized a number in a community and has gone away these "babes in Christ" soon lose interest in the truth and in the study of the Bible. Paul continued to labor and pray for those whom He was instrumental in bringing into the body of Christ after he had left them to carry the gospel to other fields. He wrote them letters assuring them of his continued interest in them, and he made their welfare the subject of constant prayer. Because of this continued encouragement they remained steadfast and active in the Lord's service.

II. An Evangelistic Church. (Vv. 5-8.) To carry the gospel of the coming and kingdom of Christ into all the world is the one supreme purpose of the church today. Before God's people can be stimulated to put forth such an effort, however, they must be spiritually strengthened individually. They must be made to feel for themselves the blessedness of salvation and to eatch a glimpse of the glories that are to follow the Lord's return. A truly missionary church is a rarity today. May God help us to so labor for the unsaved that it may be said of us that we have "sounded out the word of the Lord not only in" our own community but as far as our influence and financial ability can send it.

III. A Waiting, Watching Church. (Vv. 9. 10.) The church that is constantly alert to the indications of fulfilling prophecy will not only be watching and waiting for the Lord's return, but will also be zealously engaged in carrying the "blessed hope" to others, and in warning them of the danger that lies in their rejection or neglect of the gospel.

GOLDEN TEXT

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth,"-Acts 1:8.

Before Jesus ascended into heaven. He told His apostles that "they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me" (Acts 1:4). Also see Luke 24:49 and John 14:16, where Christ had told His apostles these things. This promise was made good on the day of Pentecost. Sec Acts 2:1-4.

The apostles began at Jerusalem and preached Christ. Different ones went to different places, and wherever they went Christ was the theme preached. They were indeed witnesses for Him. We, too, must witness for Him, both in word and actions. It is ours to carry on as long as we live so that others may know Christ and also witness for Him.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Witnessing

- -for Christ is man's noblest task;
- -for Christ is to be a living example: -for the truth causes constant growth;
- -for the church creates interest and enthusiasm;
- -for the Lord should not be done so as to cause offense.

Faith Workers. In using the expression "Faith Workers," we employ it in the same sense in which it is set forth in our lesson. The brethren at Thessalonica were living examples or epistles. Their faith and works were of such kind and character that their neighbors round about were impressed by them. They were so consistent in their labors that the "word of the Lord" was sounded throughout all Macedonia and Achaia and the regions round about. Their faith and works were combined, and with such a combination there is always fruitage. There is need today of such workers, who by life and work will spread abroad the Word of the Lord and with such active and living faith woo others to the Christ.

Light Bearers. The torch of gospel truth was ever kept aglow by these faithful light bearers. We can see the visible results of letting our light shine before men. Their devotion to the cause which they had espoused won for them the admiration of others and caused people to glorify their Father which was in heaven (Matt. 5:15, 16). What man has done can be repeated in this great crusade of light bearing and manifesting the "true Light. which lighteth every man that cometh into the world" (John 1:9). Wherever Christ went He cast a radiant glow because He was light. If we are in Him, we walk in the light as He is in the light, and we, too, will east a radiance wherever we go (1 John 1:5-7).—C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

Witnessing for Christ

As we have seen in previous lessons, the great purpose of the church in this age is to preach the gospel of God's coming kingdom and the saving power of Jesus Christ. Paul but manifested the mind of Christ when he expressed his appreciation for the faithful service rendered the cause of truth by the brethren of Thessalonica. For our Lord Himself is grateful to God for those who labor with Him in the cause that is so dear to His heart, the salvation of men.

There are two ways in which we may witness for Christ. The first is by word of mouth and the second by being living epistles which are "known and read of all men." In fact, however, experience shows that both forms must be practiced simultaneously to make either effective. The truth we speak must be emphasized and illustrated by the lives we live.

Do we preach the nearness of our Lord's return? To make our preaching impressive we must show by our actions before men that "every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure" (1 John

Do we preach that the greater values are those pertaining to things to come! Then let us prove to those around us that we really believe this to be true by setting our "affection on things above, not on things on the earth" (Col. 3:2).—G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Paul Talks to the People of Thessa-

Paul was one of the greatest teachers the world ever knew. He loved to teach and preach to the people about Jesus.

At that time there lived some people in the land of Thessalonica who were very good people. They, too, loved to tell others about Jesus.

But they had not always been that way. They had worshiped idols. Paul had preached about Jesus to them and they had changed. Paul had taught them that Jesus would come back to earth some day. They were patiently waiting for Jesus to return.

With these blocks (or whatever teacher wishes to use) make an idol such as these people used to worship. It was usually a calf or some animal. Anyway, we stand this calf (picture or toy animal may be used) on top of the block.

Now look at this picture. Who is it? It is Jesus. Now some one by looking at these things we have here, tell us what happened in our story today. Do we have idols we worship today? No, not that kind, but we have others. Money, good times, play, automobiles may be idols. (Teacher explains how we can use those to take us away from Sunday school, and also what good use they can be.)

For our picture today let us make another church. Make doors open with boys and girls inside. Around the outside make or cut out pictures of things that may be our idols. Beneath the picture write: "Ye were ensamples to all that believe."—V. C. T.

HOSKINS AT BURR OAK, INDIANA

The church is anticipating a feast of scriptural truths beginning November 18 and continuing each evening for a period of two weeks or longer by Bro. A. E. Hoskins of St. Cloud, Minn. A couple of scrmon subjects will be "The Beast Rising Out of the Sea" and "God's Eternal Purpose."

In these, the closing days of Gentile times, we are reminded of the words of the Master, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work."

We extend a hearty welcome to all who are close enough to attend to come and bring your friends.

Mrs, Nettie Guge, Asst. Sec.

MODEL TABERNACLE BEING MADE AT GRAND RAPIDS

The junior choir is getting under headway remarkably well with Miss Evelyn Barr, an accomplished musician, in charge, assisted by her brother, Bro. Robert Barr. More than twenty young people of high school ages are practicing, and a cantata or musical play for Christmas is being developed. They plan to give this in the Godwin School auditorium.

The young people's Berean class is still the banner class, and a request has been made for a young people's meeting Sunday nights before the regular church service.

In the adult Berean class work on the materials for the model of the tabernacle is progressing. Bro. James Cole is making the posts for the court enclosure, turning them from brass. Sr. Ruth Townsond is working on the linen curtains for that portion. Bro. Stevens has made the brazen altar and the golden altar, and Bro. Thomas the laver. Bro. Hopkins is working on the boards for the tabernacle walls. Other parts are also being planned.

And God is leading us forward. F. E. Siple, Pastor.

RALLY DAY AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

October 28 was a beautiful Sunday here and we all feel that our Rally Day program was a success. Although the membership is widely scattered, there were 104 present at Sunday school with an attending offering of $8,32. The committee in charge presented a neatly arranged program of recitations and songs by the children. We would like to echo the closing recitation far and wide—"To come every Sunday and not wait for something special."

The orehestra made its first appearance and everyone was very well pleased with this phase of the service. They are working hard and we hope to have them as a regular part of the service soon. The pastor gave a short sermon after the children's program. We felt it was a day well spent in worshiping the Lord.

Tuesday, Nov. 6, 52 members and friends of the church surprised the pastor's wife, it being her 25th birthday. After a social time together refreshments were served and the guests departed.

Plans are being made for a praise service on Thanksgiving morning at 9 o'clock. All who are in this vicinity are invited to be present and make it a real day of thanks to the Lord.

CARLSONS CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Saturday, Nov. 10, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Carlson entertained their friends at their home in Oak Park, Minn., in honor of their Golden Wedding Anniversary. They were married November 18, 1884.

A. E. Hoskins, pastor of the St. Cloud, Minn., Church of God repeated the marriage vows, which the couple again affirmed. Mrs. Erickson played the wedding march. Luncheon was served following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlson were baptized by James A. Patrick in 1914.

ANDERSON PREACHES IN CAROLINAS

On Friday, Nov. 2, the writer, in company with Bros. James Pack and Jeff Harris, motored to the Dana, N. C., church and remained with those brethren till Sunday, Nov. 4, when we heard three good sermons by Bro. J. H. Anderson of Michigantown, Ind. All three sermons were enjoyed by us, as was the hospitality shown us while visiting these brethren of "like precious faith."

On Sunday night, Nov. 4, Bro. Anderson began a series of lectures on "Prophecy" at the Guthrie Grove church in South Carolina. This meeting was a success from several angles. First, we had splendid weather; second, we had good attendance; third, good attention, an able speaker; and we certainly enjoyed the subjects presented, and we believe others enjoyed the lectures, too, for the house was filled each night to seating capacity with eager listeners.

As a result of this meeting two candidates presented themselves for baptism, and now we introduce to the "household of faith" Sr. Essio Pierson, S. Sixth St., Woodside Mill, Greenville, S. C.; and Sr. W. A. Williams, 122 E. Earl St., Anderson, S. C., both married ladies. the latter being 86 years of age.

We commend them to the Savior who purchased them with His own blood (Acts 20:28) and "to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified" (Acts 20:32).

And may we exhort you to "be stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58).

MRS. IDA M. STONE

The church at Oregon, Ill., was saddened last Wednesday morning by the death of one of its most faithful members, Mrs. Ida M. Stone. Sr. Stone was the daughter of David and Elizabeth Cressy, and was born in Dixon, Ill., July 9, 1865, and died at the home of her son in Oregon, Ill., November 14, 1934.

She was married to Fred C. Stone in 1882, and has made her home in this community almost her entire life. Surviving are her husband; one son, Charles; a daughter, Mrs. Harriett Myers; two sisters, Mrs. Myrtle Morris and Mrs. Martha Peck; and four grandchildren. One daughter, Mabel, preceded her in death on November 27, 1901.

Sr. Stone was practically a lifelong believer in the gospel of the kingdom of God, but did not respond to its appeal in baptism until August 14, 1932, when she was immersed by the writer. Since that time she has been a regular attendant at prayer meeting, Sunday school, and all other services of the church. She was especially active in the work of the Dorcas society.

Some eight weeks before her death she

Some eight weeks before her death she visited her pastor and made all arrangements for her funeral, although at the time she was in excellent health. The funeral sermon was based on Romans 8:35-39, and entitled, "Conquerors Through Christ."

STUDIES IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

No topics could be named of greater importance than those which are included in our present quarter's lessons, for they have to do not only with practical Christian living, but they find their foundation in practical Christian thinking. They touch upon almost every phase of faith and practice, bringing to us in concrete form many of the more essential doctrines of the church, and also pointing out clearly many of the things that we must do and be in order to be saved.

Starting out with a lesson on "Fellowship With Christ," the series follows a logical order of procedure and ends with the consideration of "Tosts of a Christian." Its scriptural authority is found entirely in the New Testament, two thirds of it being taken from the Gospels, the rest from the Epistles of John and Paul.

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, I Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began". Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38. and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

A new arrival is claiming devoted attention in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Rittenbouse, Mr. Morris, Ill. Her name is Elizabeth Ann, and she reached her destination November 4, 1934. The mother will be remembered as Sr. Lucille Reynolds before her marriage.

Sr. Alice Gesin of Oregon, Ill., is again in St. Louis, where she is undergoing further plastic surgery upon the eyelid. She will be under the protecting wing of Sr. Leota B. Hanson while there. Sr. Alice will be greatly missed by the Oregon Sunday school, in which she was the organizer and director of the orehestra.

Sr. Pearl Hatten, who for some months has been assisting the matron of the Home, expects to leave today for Aurora, Ill., and probably later return to her home in Indiana.

Thus far the great majority of those who sent in their questionnaires on the contemplated changes in the Sunday school quarterly have favored the inclusion of doctrinal lessons in place of the dictionary which has appeared in the back of the book.

Yesterday, Nov. 19, saw the official opening of the new concrete bridge that spans Rock River at Oregon. Those who have attended Bible school and conference here in the past will miss the old steel structure when they come again, but will be delighted with the splendid new bridge that has taken its place.

Sr. Alice Kerr, formerly of Dixon, Ill., but for two years or more a resident of Golden Rule Home, has been quite ill. She is now recovering nicely, however, and her cheerful smile is still in evidence.

The service at the Oregon church last Sunday night was brought to an impressive close with a pantomime presented most effectively by Betty Jean Lindsay and Mrs. Wendell Doeden. The pantomime was based on the hymn-subject of the pastor, "Abide With Mc." Next Sunday evening the pastor's theme will be, "The Marvels of the World to Come."

In the absence of A. E. Hoskins, pastor, John Denchfield will supply the pulpit at St Cloud, Minn. Mr. Hoskins is to be in Burr Oak, Ind., holding an evangelistic series of meetings in the Church of God there beginning Sunday, Nov. 18. Arthur Randall filled Mr. Denchfield's place in the pulpit at Mora, Minn., on November 18.

The Bible class of the Oregon Sunday school last Sunday presented their teacher, B. H. Carpenter, with a teacher's Bible as a mark of the regard of those whom he has faithfully served for many years.

The office was pleasantly surprised by a brief call by Dr. I. F. Barnes, pastor atlarge, of the Advent Christian Church, who dropped in for a chat last Saturday afternoon. Dr. Barnes is making a visiting tour among the churches of his denomination in the Middle West.

Who will send in a contribution to complete the fund necessary to purchase the vacuum cleaner for Golden Rule Home? We need approximately ten dollars in addition to what has already been provided for this purpose.

We greatly appreciate the various contributions that are sent in from time to time (some come regularly every month), from donors who do not give their names and who desire no acknowledgment of their gifts to the Lord's work to be published. In one case at least even the handwriting is disguised, and this regular contribution does not come from the United States. We thank all such faithful contributors in the name of the Lord Jesus.

Sr. Howard Moore, Red Bluff, Calif., expects to return to Los Angeles with her parents, Bro. and Sr. Ezra C. Railsback, who are now visiting her, and remain in the parental home for the Christmas holidays.

"Joint Heirs" will be the subject of Norman John MacLeod at the church in Los Angeles on the first Sunday in December. This is the day for the observance of the Lord's Supper, and the pastor's Communion sermon will be entitled, "Eating of the Altar."

Mrs. T. M. Savage, wife of the late Thomas M. Savage, Sr., long-time Minnesota minister of the Church of God, is reported to be seriously ill. Her address is Waite Park, Minn.

dom of God; he must repent of his sins and acknowledge that Jesus Christ has power to forgive them; he must be baptized as Jesus was, that he may "fulfil all righteousness"; and he must arise from the watery grave "a new creature in Christ Jesus." # THE THREEFOLD CHRIST

(The following beautiful poem by Annie Johnson Flint is applicable to the last lesson of this quarter. Keep it in mind.)

He was a Prophet yesterday,
Foretelling future mysteries,
Recalling lessons of the past
And teaching men to learn of these;
And may we see His words fulfilled,
And watch His prophecies come true,
And know God's purpose cannot fail,
Nor any chance His plans undo.

He is our great High Priest today; Within the riven veil He stands, The sacrifice forever made, The shed blood still upon His hands; Those wounded hands our pardon win, His mediation cannot fail, Our Advocate pleads not in vain, Our Intercessor must prevail.

Tomorrow He will be a King,
In splendor robed, with glory crowned,
And every tongue shall hail Him, Lord,
While earth and heaven with praise resound.
Past, present, future, lo! He fills
All time and all eternity;
All things forever He has been,
And so forever mere shall be.

SOURCE OF THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

Jesus is the center and source of the Christian life. Without Him there could be no Christianity. It is His spirit that lives and moves and operates in the life of the Christian. One might as well expect to live the natural life without air as to live the Christian life without Christ. Christ and Christianity are inseparable.

Many people seem to have the idea that Christianity consists of a system of moral teaching introduced by our Lord when He was on earth, that it does not go beyond that point. To them every honest, ethical, and upright man is a Christian, and every nation that manifests regard for the welfare of its citizens is a part of "Christendom," or the kingdom of Christ.

This is a serious and misleading error. Christianity is an expression in word and in deed of the teaching and spirit of Jesus Christ. No matter how high-minded one may be, no matter how charitable and how just in his dealings he may be, unless the mind of Christ is the motivating principle in his life he is not a Christian. He is simply a moral man of the world.

To be a Christian one must first believe the gospel Jesus taught, the gospel of the king-

LIFE'S SYMPHONY— THANKSGIVING

To be thankful for each new day and to put into it and to get out of it all the good I can.

To give, expecting nothing in return, to help to bear the burdens of others without burdening them with mine, to know enough of sorrow to be able to sympathize, to know enough of sin to direct others into right paths, to be blessed with enough of this world's goods to be satisfied with what I have, to look to Nature for my spiritual lessons and my daily sermons, to take care of the present and to let the past and future take care of themselves.

In other words, to live each day as though it were my last.

This is the philosophy of my life, the symphony of my soul.—Jenney.

MAKING PROGRESS IN SPIR-ITUAL LIVING

By H. A. Sheets

M AN is carnal, "sold under sin." This makes it impossible for one to attain the spiritual life with but a single effort and necessitates a constant struggle toward the "unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

One must start his spiritual life as a babe in Christ and must grow, even though he makes many mistakes in his early development.

Paul referred to this growth when he wrote: "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things."—I Cor. 13:11.

Even as a "man" he was not free from error. He admitted this to the Romans (7:15). "For that which I do I allow not: for that I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I." Paul did the evil because of the sin which was in him. He was spiritual because with his mind he himself served the law of God (Rom. 7:25).

It is not possible for man to attain spiritual perfection in this life. Again we turn to Paul for proof. Near the close of his ministry he wrote: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."—1 Cor. 9:27. Seven years later he could say: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

Paul had escaped the corruption of this world and to his faith he had added virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity, the progressive steps in spiritual living.

SWEET BRIAR COTTAGE

By Alice B. Curtis

There's a neat little cottage 'neath evergreen trees. Whose soft waving branches sweep low spreading eaves And make music so sweet that the wind whispers low As it speeds on its way through each whispering bough. The sweet-scented orchard and low-purling brook, The old-fashioned flowers in each sunny nook, Sweet Williams and primroses, modest and fair, With their breath of perfume fill the soft balmy air. The dear old red barn, with its trimmings of white. Stands in front of the wheatfield, that golden and bright Slopes down to the pasture where cows meekly graze, Or lie 'neath the trees through the long summer days. But this is not half of the picture I sec: If you'd see the rest you must enter with me The wide open door, where the sunlight streams through, And the best of the picture will open to view. There's a sweet little woman, whose bright silver hair Frames softly a face that is tender and fair, Her eyes take their color from the blue sky above, And beam with the beauty of heavenly love. At her side the companion, who thro' the long years Has doubled her joys and shared all her tears, Kind, patient, and loving thro' weal and thro' woe, Hand in hand, heart to heart, thro' life's journey they go. Gathered round are the children, each fond earnest look Is fastened on Auntie as she takes the good Book And reads o'er again the sweet story of old, Whose beauty and sweetness can never be told. The picture grows brighter; the angels are there, As they kneel down together in evening prayer, And lift grateful hearts to the Father above, For His manifold blessings and ne'er-ceasing love. O long may this picture of beauty remain In Sweet Briar Cottage and memory's chain, And when time from the earth shall the picture remove, May the home group be found in Christ's kingdom of love.

(Since the death of Sr. Curtis, requests have come to me for a reprint of the above verses, dedicated to Sr. S. Roxana Wince, well known to the household of faith.—R. A. Curtis.)

George Bernard Shaw is quoted as having said: "The real difficulty about the Bible in America is that though few read it, everybody imagines he knows what is in it." The admitted lack of knowledge of the Word of God in our land is lamentable. . . . Religious education must be considered one of the foremost undertakings of the church. Truth makes free and it is the business of the church to disseminate it. If Shaw's stricture hurts it may do us good.

In the Image of God

By E. O. Stewart

ET us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth."—Gen. 1:26.

We often wonder if the great Architect of the universe was not in this verse visualizing His final accomplished purpose through Christ and His body, which is the church, rather than through Adam, whom Paul in Romans 5:14 declares to be the figure of Him that was to come.

A wise architect is able to mentally foresee a building as it will be when finished, and is therefore able to make a figure or blueprint of the building long before the building has any existence except in the mind of the architect.

God's Purpose

"Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him."—Eph. 1:9, 10.

The question will naturally arise in our finite minds after reading these two verses, Was this God's original purpose? If so, why did He command Adam to subdue the earth? We answer this question by asking another. If Adam was in God's image, in the sense mentioned in Genesis 1:26, and if he actually possessed dominion over the beasts of the field, why did God command him to subdue the earth? Why would He command Adam to subdue it, if it were already, as generally believed, in harmony with His will?

That man has never as yet been in God's image as purposed in Genesis 1:26, is evident from Paul's statement in 1 Corinthians 15:49, "And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

THE MAN OF GOD'S PURPOSE

Christ is the express image of God's person (Heb. 1:3),

He "abolished in his flesh . . . the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man" (Eph. 2:15).

"For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son."—Rom. 8:29.

"Our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself."—Phil. 3:20, 21.

Here is the man made in the image of God, who is to subdue the earth. It is Christ and IIis joint heirs, His body, the church. It is the "them" of Genesis 1:26. "Let us make man in our image," and "let them," in the plural, one body of many members, "have dominion . . . over all the earth."

GLORY IN THE MIND OF GOD

As Adam is the figure of Him that was to come, He that was to come was forescen by the great Architect when He made the figure. This is how God created all things by Jesus Christ. In this sense He is before all things.

It was glory in the mind of God before the world was. It was foreseen glory. He could then foreordain His foreseen Son to foreseen glory. Thus Christ had glory with the Father before the world was. In view of this glory, God chose the church in Christ before the foundation of the world, and promised the members eternal life (Titus 1:2).

When Christ takes unto Himself His great power to reign, Isaiah says, "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the (Please turn to Page Nine)

Confusion in Liquor Ranks

"It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink winc, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Romans 14:21.

New YORK, Nov. 24.—How futile are the unaided efforts of men to combat evil! This is brought clearly before the country in the failure of wide open saloons to reduce, to say nothing of putting an end to, bootlegging in the United States. It is now generally conceded, even by the friends of repeal, that more illegal liquor is being manufactured and sold now than was the case in the palmiest days of prohibition. And, furthermore, the bootlegger's product is frequently of a higher quality than that which is produced under the law. It is now being recalled that during the campaign to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment the promise was solemnly made that the Government would positively protect officially dry territory against an influx of liquor from wet states. Apparently no attempt whatsoever has been made to do this, declare prohibition leaders.

The rulers of Babylon were engaged in drunken revelry when the Lord weighed that kingdom in the balances and found it wanting, and broke "in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron," admitting the punishing host of Cyrus. The Lord's hand will once again be stretched out over the debauched nations of men, but for the last time, for the Conqueror who will enter then will be the "everlasting Prince of peace"!

Spies Hunt War Secrets

"They shall speak lies at one table; but it shall not prosper: for yet the end shall be at the time appointed."—Daniel 11:27.

LONDON, Nov. 20. — Widespread suspicion among the nations of Europe has produced a large number of spies who are working diligently to discover the military secrets of the various countries. Last year 225 men and women were convicted of spying, and between 40 and 50 of these suffered the death penalty.

Among the secrets which these underground workers are seeking to ferret out are the following:

It is generally understood that Germany has invented a naval range finder that is superior to anything hitherto developed. Another country is believed to be experimenting with a gas cloud through which no human being could pilot an airplane. Another is said to be working with a carborundum powder designed to be suspended in the air to destroy the mechanism of planes. A correspondent declares that "if a cloud of sufficient density could be laid high enough in the air in the path of a fleet of airplanes, nothing, it is believed, could save the machines."

It will be recalled that a ray was discovered some time ago which would stop an automobile or airplane magneto, provided the magneto was not protected by lead. Now a ray has been discovered which will penetrate even a lead covering. Moreover, it is said to have the power to disable permanently any magneto with which it comes in contact.

Protesting their sincerity in a desire for peace and their willingness to meet their national military contestants halfway at least in efforts to bring peace about, every power of government is being brought to bear in secret preparations for war.

Jews Return to Poland

"The Lord shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies."—Micah 4:10.

Constanza, Rumania, Nov. 22.—After two months of wandering from port to port seeking a country that would receive them, 318 Jews aboard the steamship King Carol have been given permission to land at this port. The right was accorded them when word was received from Warsaw that the Polish Government would allow them to return to that country. Until the action of the Polish Government the plight of these people had been desperate. They had apparently started out with the intention of settling in Palestine, but owing to their lack of money were not permitted to do so, and attempts to land elsewhere were also prevented.

Russia — Japan

"Tidings out of the east and out of the north."-Dan.

Tokio, Japan, Nov. 25.—Japan is preparing to extend its airlines thousands of miles to establish communication with its most outlying military posts in the Pacific.

CHITA, Siberia, Oct. 28.—The Soviet Government is massing vast bodies of troops in Siberia with the evident purpose of being prepared to resist an anticipated invasion by Japan, whose progress in northern China has caused the Russians to fear that the Sunrise Kingdom will seek to cut off her access to the sea.

Every Good Gift

JUST how much of that verse do we believe and how strongly do we believe it? That is, when the blessings of life fall upon us in rich profusion do we gratefully acknowledge our indebtedness to God for them all? That is the question. Do we see in "every good gift and every perfect gift" which we enjoy an evidence of God's providential care over us? Do we attribute to Him all of the delightful and all of the needful things we have?

The omissions of the text are eloquent. Not a single evil thing is mentioned. God does not bring bad gifts to His children, but only good ones, only perfect ones. That is all that God has to give to us, for everything that God has made is good—it has always been good. When the work of creation was finished and the truth-discerning eyes of the Lord were turned upon the multitudinous works of His hands, "God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good" (Gen. 1:31).

God is the Creator of only good, and of all good, and He is the Bestower of only good, and of all good. It is sinful men who transform God's good things into detestable evil.

Observe the significance of the word "every," twice used in our text. Not a single good thing, not a single perfect thing, is left out! All that is good is included, and God is the Giver of them all.

As we meditate on this fact may we question our own hearts further. Does this assurance given by James not cover every desirable feature of our experience? If every good thing, and every perfect thing, is from above, then we must be indebted to the Lord for all of the material comforts and necessities we enjoy as well as for the spiritual hope that brightens our outlook into the future.

So many marvelous discoveries are being made in these days concerning the world around us and of which we are a part that it keeps the thoughtful in a constant state of interested attention. The savants come to us with their learned assertions about the health-giving and healthpreserving qualities of vitamins A, B, C, and D. These vitamins take their general name from the Latin word vita, meaning "life," from which is derived the more familiar word "vital." The name vitamin was given to these strangely potent elements owing to their vital or life-giving properties. It was only a little more than a year ago that the scientists succeeded in isolating the first three vitamins and determining their chemical content. Extended experimentation has shown that these various vitamins are vital to life and health in both men and animals.

But from whence did they come? "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above!" God is the Giver of the vitamins that mean so much to us in our battle with mortality! Had you thought of that before? For thousands of years no man on earth knew of the existence of vitamins, but they were here, working their beneficent purposes in the complex bodies of men and women!

"Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of lurning."—James 1:17.

What truly wonderful things God has made, though you and I may not even know that they exist! And they are all good and very good!

Then there are the newly discovered rays or radiations from the sun and from various metallic substances or elements. For instance, the ultra-violet rays are a recent discovery which are said to "exert a great influence upon life, stimulating growth in the upper forms while retarding it in the lower" (Standard Encyclopedia).

These remarkable rays were just as powerful in the day when Adam and Eve fled from the Garden of Eden in their vain attempt to escape from the wrath of God as they are today! No one in the past dreamed of their existence, and of course did not conceive of the powerful influence they exerted on all living things. Yet there they were just the same as they are today, operating for the benefit of mankind!

Where did they come from? we ask again. Who invented them and set them to sending forth their beams of marvelous power? There is but one answer: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning."

Literally thousands of such unseen blessings God has been pouring out upon His earthly children during the long period of their residence here of which they have known nothing. They have experienced the health and comfort that resulted from them, but did not recognize them as specific gifts of a kind and merciful heavenly Father. And no doubt the future holds in store for us many more discoveries of this kind than Time has thus far revealed. But whatever their nature may prove to be, of this one thing we may be assured: They all come from God, they all were conceived by Him, all were made by Him, all of them are perfect and designed for our good!

Well may the wise man of old exclaim concerning the richness of God's gifts to man that "he hath made every thing beautiful in his time: also be hath set the world in their heart, so that no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end. I know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life. And also that every man should cat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God."—Eccl. 3:11-13. God delights in the prosperity and physical well-being of His people, and provides for them that they may have all good things.

All the gifts of God that have thus far been mentioned are material. Not one is spiritual. But by far the most splendid of all the good things which God bestows upon His people belong to the latter class. The material blessings are transient. They are associated with this present life, while the greater hope rests in the future, for "we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal" (2 Cor. 4:18). How much greater, then, must be the gifts of God that await bestowal from His hands in the golden future, "as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him" (1 Cor. 2:9).

The Two Sculptors

ONCE upon a time a great sculptor conceived the idea of a wonderful statue which should surpass in beauty anything that the world had ever seen. Day by day for years he wrought upon the marble that was to be his masterpiece, developing it from a crude, rough block until it assumed a form of such strength and grace and symmetry that all who saw delighted to look upon it.

But, notwithstanding his wonderful genius and power, the sculptor could never attain in his work the perfection he sought. His statue seemed to change in the night. The vital spirit that animated cheek and lip under the touch of his chisel was lost as often as it was inspired. The exquisite curves, the alabaster smoothness that vied with the handiwork of the great sculptor and made the cold marble a living thing, were in some unaccountable way marred while he slept. The sculptor's art was baffled, and the sculptor knew not why.

His hand had not lost its cunning, his conception was not at fault. His work was well done, but it was spoiled in the night. At last the statue was ruined beyond all hope of restoration.

All too late, the sculptor finally discovered that an enemy sculptor stole into his studio at night and disfigured the statue—a rival sculptor whom none praised and whose work no one ever admired. Jealous of the fame his rival had won while his somber, uncouth works were shunned, he had crept in by night and with a malicious chisel gradually wrought ruin with the work he could not imitate. Thus the statue, which should have excelled all others, never attained perfection.

These two sculptors are continually repeating their efforts upon other statues with similar results. Their names are Right and Wrong, and the material on which they work is the human mind.

The first rises and retires early, and works as much as possible in the open; in the sunlight, where keen winds blow in winter and storms in spring and summer; where golden harvests wave and fruit-laden trees sway in the autumn; where fountains murmur and rivulets sing; where men work and romping children play; where cattle are afield and birds and bees are on the wing.

The other sleeps through the early hours, but comes forth when Nature is asleep; and under the flickering street lights, or the light of the silent stars, or in dark nooks and corners, sometimes by day, his blasting touch falls upon the fairest work of his rival, damaging it all and utterly ruining much of it. Only a few statues are kept wholly out of the reach of this destroying sculptor, yet how wonderful are they in their comparative perfection!

Though few they be, these perfect models are the leaders of constructive progress in our modern life. Without them, our nation would see the in corruption and decay.

There are multitudes of people, many young and model and inexperienced in matters of life, who are victims of destroying sculptors. They are chiscling perfect models, but they feel secure against destroying influences, and secretly they challenge vicious enemy sculptors. They think their secret thoughts and practices are not known by their families and friends and employers.

But at night the destroying sculptor creeps in and transforms the perfect model, little by little, and soon the ideal of perfection seems impossible of attainment. They thought they could chisel out their career in the day with Right, and condone the visits with Wrong in the night. They thought they could indulge in "liberal" living in the night and continue without deterioration in the day. But not one of them has escaped the devastating hand of the sculptor that ruins the life statue. Their thinking becomes destructive, they impugn bigotry to good motives, and lend their citizenship rights to every destructive impulse. They bear ill-will and resentment and opposition to the unselfish efforts of good citizens to make life easier and better for them. Their character has become undermined, and they have virtually become destroying sculptors.

"The mother of destructive thinking is destruction; with your mind you either build mankind or destroy it," said Nietzsche. Don't deceive yourself. You are covered all over with telltales that blab your secret thoughts and experiences. They look out of your face and actions so plainly that any ordinary observer may know.

And what a pity that so often the noblest of life's statues are made hopeless and destroyed by raiding enemy sculptors, all because the builders do not guard their own thinking!—Adapted by Sunshine Magazine from Orison Swett Marden's "Success."

Another Comforter

By Norman John MacLeod

"And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you unother Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever."—John 14:16.

A LL of us are desirous of gaining all the truth that there is on any particular subject. But perhaps no book is so baffling, no set of works is so inexhaustible in its scope, and no literature defies analysis so much as the Holy Scriptures. Just at the time when we feel most sure of our ground, and when we feel most sure that our faith is established firm, doubt enters in. We wonder if after all the other fellow may be correct in his views. That is the thing which impresses us if we are at all liberal-minded. The fanatic never doubts. The zealot never wavers. But he may be just as dead wrong as if he did. The true Bible student comes to his task, however, in a humble frame of mind, for the truths there found cannot be exhausted in all the years of his lifetime. Yes, not in the short span of life of all of us put together.

Of all the difficult books of the Bible those of the Apostle John are perhaps the most difficult. Unlimited study can be put upon such a work as the Revelation without much of it being unraveled. And so are the other books by that same author. But of all the passages of his writings none is more difficult to unwind than the complicated mesh of arguments in the 14th chapter of the Gospel of John. Sermons by the hundreds have been preached on this most marvelous chapter. One of the favorite passages for Christians for centuries has been found in the early part of this chapter. But even those who use it for comfort often do not have the slightest idea of what it is all about. Let us approach it with a feeling of inferiority, and yet with determination to understand some of its teachings.

Puzzle

Just before Jesus went up to heaven He said: "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ve shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judga, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 1:7, 8. On the day of Pentecost they received the "power from on high" (Luke 24:49) which Jesus had promised them. On the latter occasion Peter said: "Therefore being on the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear."-Acts 2:33. Was that the same as the "Comforter" of John 14:16? Is the Holy Spirit (Holy Ghost) always the same? Or are there different "spirits"? different gifts? or is there one spirit with always the same miraculous gifts? We cannot always answer all these questions completely and fully to our own satisfaction, but we can see that the Scriptures teach certain definite things. The implication of those who teach the baptism of the Holy Spirit is that we have not enough faith; or that we are really ignorant of the use of the Holy Spirit; that the Holy Spirit has never been taken from the earth, for the Comforter is to "abide with you for ever." Are we missing a great blessing by not being able to use the gifts of the Holy Spirit which were granted to the early church and have abided with the "true" church ever since? Are we to assume that because we do not have the gifts of healing, tongues, and the like, that we are not of the true church? Such a thought is not very comforting. Such a thing is scarcely to be classed with the "Comforter" about which Jesus spoke. Furthermore, if real healing powers are necessary to membership in the true church, then there is no true church at the present time! If the gift of tongues is a necessary requisite to membership in the true church, then I have yet to see a member of the true church, for none of them have the gift according to the statements of the Apostle Paul.

LITERALITY RIDICULOUS

Just as one of the workings of the Holy Spirit in the resurrection is yet future, when Christ comes, just so are the other items of health, justice in government, its coefficient of lack of oppression in economic and political circles, and if there be any other blessing, the gifts of the Holy Spirit which we might possess in this life are merely a witness of the truth of the teachings of Jesus. Jesus (John 14) spoke of one of the most blessed truths of all time: His second coming. He attacked the subject from a somewhat difficult aspect. It was not all clear to the apostles about Him, as witness by the remarks of Philip (8th verse) and Thomas (5th verse), and even of Peter (latter part of the 13th chapter). In verse 6 Jesus said that He was "the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." To say that Jesus was literally the way, the truth, or the life is hardly sensible. He was a man! He was made of solid flesh, even as we are! What is He saying? "No man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Are we going to the Father? Jesus had told the apostles just previous to this that they could not go to the Father! How do we approach the Father in "spirit"? By the teachings of Jesus! By the precious thought of His coming again! That is the center of that thought. In the second coming is embodied all that is precious to the Christian. That is the way, the truth, and the life. Let us follow the next line of reasoning.

SPIRIT OF THE LORD

1. He told the Apostles that He was going to leave. 2. Where He was going (to heaven) they could not come. 3. In My place, He said, I am going to leave a comforter. That comforter was personified. Just as Jesus embodied His teachings in Himself so that He became the "bread of life" which came down from beaven, so now certain aspects of teachings are personified. In verse 26 of this 14th chapter the "Comforter" is called the "Holy Ghost." That Holy Ghost is evidently the same thing that is mentioned in Acts 1:8. In John 14:16, 17 we find that the "Comforter" is identified with another thing: "Even the Spirit of truth." Just before, Jesus had said that He was "the way, the truth, and the life." If He was the "truth," then this thing that He was to send that was called the "Comforter" was "his spirit." Are we to take the commonly accepted view that Jesus' Spirit, or Ghost, or "spook," is actually sitting beside us if we only knew? Shall we take such a mediæval view as that? Or shall we look for the more modern "idealistie" view that His "influence" is with us? Or shall we not find some more logical, practical view? If we follow the reasoning of the passage a little farther we see that the most important thing about Jesus was His teachings. They were more important than even His most precious life! He went to the cross because of those things that He taught! What? That He was really the King of the Jews; that He would come again to raise the dead, to set up His kingdom, to put down all rule and all authority, and reign forever! Those are the great truths that He taught. Those were the things that were revealed to the apostles after His ascension, revealed by the Holy Spirit, the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, or, as you will find it called, "the Spirit of truth." With that in mind read: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you

Hope for Thanksgiving

By Lucille Le Crone

THANKSGIVING DAY, 1934, What are we going to make it? A day of feasting, which seems to be the main idea most people have in regard to the day, or a day of thanking, as was originally intended?

Two women who are next door neighbors and very good friends were discussing Thanksgiving Day. Said one, "We just can't afford to have turkey this year and it won't seem like Thanksgiving without turkey. I've a good mind just to forget the date."

Her neighbor quickly replied, "I have too much to be thankful for this year to forget the date. We never do have turkey, so we won't miss not having it this year. I always fix just an ordinary meal and devote my time to trying to give some one cause for thankfulness on that day. This year I intend to invite poor old Mr. and Mrs. Stone to eat with us. I have found the only way to be truly thankful and happy is to help make others so."

Surely this woman had the spirit of Thanksgiving, and it must be contagious, for after a moment's silence her neighbor replied, "If I helped you and brought my dinner over, too, would you invite the Woods family also? He hasn't had steady work for so long I wonder how they manage at all with so many little ones to feed."

Before parting the two women had completed their plans for the dinner; and I wonder if four families won't have a thankful Thanksgiving Day?

Some, no doubt, have more to be thankful about this year than last. But many because of the drought will wonder what they have to be thankful for. The granaries and the cellars are empty. There was no grain to sell. There were no vegetables or fruit to can. In many cases the corrals are vacant because there was no water for the stock. Many have lost, or are about to lose, homes and farms because there was nothing with which to meet the payments or pay the taxes.

No matter how dark and discouraging things may become there is one thing for which we have abundant reason to offer thanks. It is hope—the thing that urges us on and causes us to plant another crop when this year's and last's were both failures. It is hope that causes us to go on living when all that made life seem worth while has been taken from us. It is hope that gives us a new grip upon life, that lightens our labors and gives us courage to face tomorrow.

A very dear lady said to me: "If it weren't for the hope that I have of the soon return of Jesus I'd give up in despair, for we are having such a hard time to make ends meet." No wonder Paul calls it a blessed hope. What a blessed hope it is to know that "he that shall come will come" and take us unto Himself where we shall never have cause for fear, worry, and sorrow, and where our every need will be supplied. There shall be no drought, famine, or pestilence and the unhappiness they cause.

What a comforting hope to know that we shall be reunited with loved ones in the presence of the King, never more to be separated. What consolation to realize that we shall all possess glorious bodies not subject to pain, disease, hunger, or death.

For hope let us thank God.

Eternal Torment

By David L. Norric

ONE of the most serious blots on modern evangetical preaching is the threatening of the unrepentant with the horrors of eternal torment. It is not my purpose here to discuss the subject fully, but to point out some considerations which seem to be overlooked by evangelists whom I have heard.

WHAT IS ETERNAL TORMENT?

First, what does the doctrine mean? Our preaching, to be effective, must be realistic. And if there is in store for the unsaved an eternity of suffering in hell fire, we ought to give our heavers some impression of its reality. We could not possibly exaggerate the horrors of the scene, for the impressions of our finite minds must, in any case, fail utterly to grasp the meaning of infinite and eternal pain. Again, therefore, I ask, what does the doctrine mean?

Take that young girl. She was a loving, winsome child, that never was known to wrong anyone. She had the sweetest of dispositions, and was loved by all who knew her. Suddenly at the age of fourteen, she died-unsaved. God is going to torment that girl in hell fire forever. Do you know what that means? She is to exist in a furnace of fire, with every nerve suffused with the intensest painforever. One moment of such pain would have brought on blessed insensibility, if she were but mortal, and if her tormentor were mortal man; but God, by strange exercise of His preserving power, will keep her actively conscious forever, and for no other purpose than that He may torment her. One extraordinary respite she will have; for after at least a thousand years of this torment, she is brought up before the "great white throne," to be examined if she is worthy of this atrocious penalty. But the judgment is a foregone conclusion, and back she is sent to her unspeakable agony, to endure it-forever. Thousands of years roll on, and at times she is tossed up to the surface of the burning lake, and sees her mother who once idolized her. Shrieking with pain, she cries out for a drop of water (a small charity that), but the mother looks on unmoved, because God has taken away from her the finer feelings of her nature; and as she contemplates her child, she sings with unutterable gladness of heart, such words as these: "Blessed be God, the Father of mercies, whose mercy endureth for ever."

Why this terrific penalty? What atrocious erime has that girl committed? Murder would deserve death. What has she done to deserve this ten thousandfold more awful doom? Shall I tell you what the charge brought against her is? It is no charge of crime. No, she had fewer faults on earth than many who were found worthy of glory. The cause of her awful suffering is this—listen: She omitted to accept a gift. She never spoke a hard word against Christ, but indeed innocently sang His praises often with her childish voice; but she could not believe that His gift was really meant for her, and her sudden death prevented her making sure; and so, because she neglected the great salvation, Christ is going to torment her with the flames of hell forever, and when a hundred million years have rolled on, her torment is just at the beginning.

Is it an awful picture? Believe me, my imagination comes miles and miles short of what the reality would be.

THE PREACHING OF ETERNAL TORMENT A FAILURE

In the name of God I denounce this doctrine. Many have been made insane through the mere contemplation of it. It has driven tens of thousands into open infidelity, for they refuse to worship a God of such vindictive cruelty. And what good has it done? "Eternal torment" has had its innings now for 1,700 years (the first of the early Christian fathers to advocate the doctrine was Athenagoras, who died 190 A.D.), and where the doctrine is most believed it has least power to soften men's hearts. Amongst the most depraved classes of society they have heard from street preachers of the punishment God is going to mete out to them in return for their short, sorely tempted life of sin, and they believe it. Hell is a household word with them, and a terrible reality. But it has no power over their lives. How can it have? For the gospel alone is the power of God unto salvation.

THE PENALTY OF SIN PAID BY CHRIST

In the second place, here is a solemn question for evangelists: Do you believe that the doom of eternal torment was once hanging over you? Then you will have good cause one day to thank God that you believed a lie, for if eternal torment was your penalty it has never yet been paid, and you would have to pay it yourself. No one has ever taken your place in this matter. You believe that Christ is your substitute, but even He never offered Himself up to suffer eternal torment for you. "He was tormented for our transgressions" (1sa. 53:5, marg.), and He suffered six hours of dread agony on the cross, but His sacrifice was complete at death, and now "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins" (Heb. 10:14, 26).

Suppose a criminal is fined $100, and a king comes into the court and says: "That man is a friend of mine, I will pay his fine for him; here is a $5 bill"; it would not be accepted by the judge. If the king represented that it was a great humiliation for him to be seen in the court, and that that ought to be taken into account, the judge would still be unmoved. The fine is $100, and it must all be paid.

Now God is just, and at the same time the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus (Rom. 3:26). How so? It is very simple. The penalty due to our sins has to be paid; and "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). Who could take our place? Every man must die for his own sins, so that no one has a life to spare for his friend. "None... can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him."—Psalm 49:7. But Jesus Christ comes forth, and because the penalty of our sins is death, it is written: "Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures."—I Cor. 15:3. "He hath poured out his soul unto death."—Isa. 53:12. Has He not then paid the penalty due to sin? He has. But if it were true that eternal torment was also included in the penalty, how shall we escape?

THE IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL

Thirdly, have our popular evangelists fairly considered this question? How can anyone suffer torment forever unless he possesses immortality? Without immortality his torment would soon end in death. The account in Genesis of man's creation certainly gives no indication of there being anything immortal about man by nature. "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground."—Gen. 2:7. Science tells us that nothing can be annihilated. The Bible tells us nothing about annihilation, so I do not know. But I do know that man was formed of dust, and unto dust he must return (Gen. 3:19), and it does not matter whether the dust is annihilated or not. Now after God had formed man, there was one radical want about his creation. The man had no life. So we are told that then the Lord God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul (Gen. 2:7)—not an immortal soul, as 1 have heard the passage misquoted. The breath of life did not make man immortal. It made him live. The withdrawal of that breath by God makes him die and become as though he had not been. "Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust."—Psalm 104:29. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."-Psalm 146:4. In this respect man and the lower animals are alike. "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast. . . . All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."-Eccl. 3:19, 20. If it were not that God has promised to restore man's breath to him, and make him live again, man after death would be no more. "If there be no resurrection of the dead . . . then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."-1 Cor. 15:13, 18. But "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust" (Acts 24:15). The just are to receive "in the world to come eternal life" (Mark 10:30); but I find no promise that God ever will bestow this gift on the wicked. "Whosoever believeth . . . shall not perish, but have everlasting life."--John 3:16. "The unbelieving . . . shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death."-Rev. 21:8. From this death there will be no resurrection. Their "end is destruction" (Phil. 3:19). "They shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."—Psalm 37:20, "They shall utterly perish."-2 Peter 2:12. "They shall be as though they had not been."-Obad. 16.

THE PENALTY THREATENED IN EDEN

Fourthly, preachers of eternal terment represent the penalty of death to mean, not cessation of existence, but spiritual death or separation from God. In proof of this, God's words to Adam are quoted—"In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Adam, it is argued, must have died on the day that he left the Garden of Eden, and therefore the Bible meaning of death must be separation from God's presence. Not so fast, however. For it is written again, "Adam lived nine hundred and thirty years, and he died" (Gen. 5:5). Was this a second penalty inflicted upon Adam, a penalty that God had not previously threatened? Surely this is to make confusion of the Word of God. How I deplore that the false foundation of the natural immortality of man blinds people to the simplicity of the Scriptures. In 1 Kings 2:36-46 we are told of a man who was warned by Solomon that he would surely die on the day that he crossed the Brook Kidron. Yet it is obvious from the narrative that at least two days must have elapsed before the penalty was inflicted. But the man knew that his life was forfeited on the day that he trespassed. And what if Adam did not die on the day that he sinned? I should have rejoiced if those that love the Lord had found in this, not a subject for theological discussion, but rather a proof of the mercy of God which has been from everlasting to everlasting over all His works. For have they not noticed that even the administrators of human law temper mercy with judgment? Justice demands that the criminal, when proved guilty and sentenced to death, shall be led straight to the place of execution. But it is never so done in this land. The man on that day is under the condemnation of death, and he knows it, but he gets a week or two to prepare. Is "mortal man" more merciful than God? Have we forgotten the story of Nineveb, how God threatened, "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown"? No ray of hope seemed possible for the doomed city, yet even that destruction was, through the mercy of God, delayed for two hundred years, much to the annoyance and disgust of God's servant and evangelist of those days, who "sat till he might see what would become of the city" (Jonah 4). Truly God's thoughts are not as man's thoughts. Is it not written that "mercy rejoiceth against judgment" (James 2:13)? Behold, then, the mercy of God in dealing with Adam. If God had shown no mercy to him, he would have died on that day as he deserved. But then Seth would never have been born: neither would Abraham; neither would Christ. It is written, "According to his mercy he saved us," and again, "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." On the day, therefore, of Adam's sin, God did not repeat the language of His former threat, and say, "Today thou shalt surely die." No, mark the change in the language employed-"In sorrow shalt thou eat . . . all the days of thy life . . . till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."-Gen. 3:17-19. Thus, the death penalty was delayed for 930 years, and then we are told that Adam "died" (Gen. 5:5); that is, God then withdrew the breath that had made Adam live, so that he died and returned to the dust, according to the Bible definition of death already quoted from Psalm 104:29.

Before passing from this point I would call attention to another explanation of the passage, namely, that the sentence, being one of instantaneous violent death, was not inflicted on Adam at all in view of the sacrifice of Christ, who offered Himself "a ransom for all, to be testified in due time."

What must in any case be emphasized is that God's word for the penalty is death. And "the words of the Lord are pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times" (Psa. 12:6). What would be thought of a modern code of laws in which the penalties were expressed in language that was not to be understood literally. so that the penalty of death was found to mean the loss of a man's happiness through the daily infliction of torture just up to the point that he could bear without dying? And yet we are told that when God warned Adam that he would surely die if he ate of the forbidden fruit, God meant not literal death at all, but life in misery, or banishment from His presence. And well may we ask, Why then did God not say what He meant? Why did He not say-"In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely become miserable"? Of course Adam became miserable on that day, as we know: for he and his wife were ashamed to meet God. But the condition into which they had brought themselves is one thing, and the penalty attached to that condition is another. A criminal is usually miserable when he is found out, but whether he is miserable or not, the law demands that punishment shall be meted out to him. That Adam became "spiritually dead" on the day that he sinned, I am willing to grant, though the expression is not a scriptural one. But let me repeat that his state when he sinned is not to be confused with the penalty attaching to that state. And the penalty was death, in an absolute, unqualified sense. So when I read that all men are by nature "dead in trespasses and sins," I do not forget that the wages of these "spiritually dead" men is death, unless they receive by faith the gift of God, which is cternal life. Again, "the soul that sinneth" is surely "spiritually dead," and God says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."-Ezek. 18:20. What does God mean? To me the answer is easy. God just means what He says.

IN THE IMAGE OF GOD

cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."—Isaiah 11:6-9.

When this prophecy is fulfilled, then the man spoken of in Genesis 1:26 will be in God's image and will have dominion over everything that creepeth upon the earth.

THE JEW'S RESTORATION SONG

THE following poem appeared in The London Times more than seventy years ago and was reprinted in the old Restitution. I copy it now from my scrapbook.

Lyman Booth.

Awake! Awake! O Israel, Gird on thy flaming sword, Put on thy garments beautiful, Thou favored of the Lord. For lo! upon the mountains Good tidings cometh forth, As if Bethesda's fountains Burst on the barren earth.

Now over Edom bounding,
In heart and hand we go,
With silver trumpet sounding,
To meet our ancient foe:
Our prophets, priests, and sages
Shall start again to life,
And men of bygone ages
Join in the coming strife.

No more shall Jordan's waters
Wake to a foreign strain,
For Judah's dark-eyed daughters
Have broke the tyrant's chain.
And now our harp of Zion
Through gladdening vales shall ring,
And wastes of old Jerusalem
Welcome a future King..

He comes—the Lord hath spoken,
The captives to release,
To heal the spirits broken,
To give His people peace,
He comes—our great salvation,
To comfort all who mourn,
To build our desolation,
And make our lamp to burn.

Then hail to the Lord's anointed, Of Jesse's royal stem, From age to age appointed, The star of Bethlehem.

And now from olden Zion By fair Tiberia's sea, To the blue crags of Lebanon, Shall Jacob's sons be free.

THE TEACHER of religion should keep clearly in mind that although the amount of power possessed by any individual may be determined by inheritance, the direction in which that power shall be used is largely a matter of training.—Dr. Powell.

for ever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ve know him; for he dwelleth in you, and shall be in you. . . . If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." The Father will come? And make His abode with us? Surely not literally, but figuratively, until that great day when God shall dwell with men. The great words which Jesus spoke are the things that make Him live to us. They are the Spirit which worked through Him, and make Him still an influence in our lives, "In the beginning was the Word." The Word for which Jesus and the prophets (and the Christian) gave their lives. The precious Word of God. And was that not the thing that was with Isaiah when he said: "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots: and the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked."-Isaiah 11:1-4. Does anybody think that that was all fulfilled in the first coming of Jesus? Does anybody think that that is being fulfilled now? Then let him contemplate what follows: peace of a most marvelous kind shall be found in the earth, depicted in one of the most beautiful pieces of literature found in the world; there shall be no enmity even among the most ferocious animals! What is it that shall make Jesus the great ruler in justice? What shall make Him understand quickly what should be done? "The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord." Those are the things that He brought into the world that shall abide forever. The marvelous light from which He has called us. The great truths of His Word. They are the things that separate the church from the rest of the world. They are the things that have separated God's people from the rest of mankind throughout all history. They are the things that will continue to separate the people of His name from the world until He comes. It is the great truths of Jesus' teachings that shall be our "Comforter" in times of stress and trial, of depression and gloom, of testing and despair. It is the "Spirit of truth" that shall bring us forth to set our feet on the path of His choosing, and shall make us ever ready to sacrifice ourselves and our own comfort for the things that are set before us. It is the "Holy Spirit" given through His teachings which shall shape our lives and attune our hearts to His ways and shall bring us at last to His glorious kingdom, when His "Spirit shall be poured out upon all flesh." Let our hearts be comforted by the great truth of the resurrection. Let us take new comfort from the knowledge that His coming will be a greater revolution than that worked by all the advocates of democracy, socialism, communism, and all the other "isms" put together. These great truths are the "Comforter" which shall keep our hearts firm until the end, and shall finally make us one of those who shall share in the glorious kingdom of our Lord and Savior.

THE TOUCH OF THE MASTER'S $_{ m HAND}$

'Twas battered and scarred, and the auctioneer Thought it scarcely worth his while To waste much time on the old violin, But held it up with a smile; "What am I bidden, good folks," he cried, "Who'll start the bidding for me? A dollar, a dollar, now two, only two, Two dollars and who'll make it three?"

Three dollars once, three dollars twice. Going for three! but no-From the room far back, a gray-haired man Came forward and picked up the bow; Then wiping the dust from the old violin And tightening up the strings, He played a melody pure and sweet, As sweet as an angel sings.

The music ceased and the auctioneer With a voice that was quiet and low Said, "What am I bid for the old violin?" And he held it up with the bow. "A thousand dollars, and who'll make it two, Two thousand, who'll make it three? Three thousand once, three thousand twice And going and gone," said he.

The people cheered, but some of them eried, "We do not quite understand-What changed its worth?" Swift came the reply, "The touch of a master's hand." And many a man with a life out of tune, And battered and torn with sin, Is auctioned cheap to a thoughtless crowd Much like the old violin.

A "mess of pottage," a glass of wine, A game, and he travels on, He is going once, and going twice, He's going and almost gone. But the Master comes and the foolish crowd Never can quite understand The worth of a soul and the change that's wrought By the touch of the Master's hand.

IT is difficult to say why it is that the dramatic side of I the life of Jesus among men is stressed for children to the exclusion of the so-called dogmatic side. Yet this is generally done.

It is more difficult to say why it is that the dramatic side of Jesus' earthly life is ignored when the teaching of adults is concerned. Yet this, too, is pretty generally done.

The Bible is essentially a dramatic book. It has furnished plots for Shakespeare that have gone down in the annals of literature as the highest type of English play-writing. Tales galore have been woven about the most beautiful romance ever written-the story of Ruth.

But this high point of drama is neglected. . . .

The Apostle stood staring into the faces of the men who reviled him. They were fellow countrymen. They were, not improbably, former friends. They were Jews.

"Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day."

Paul's voice drifted across the silence and rebounded against an iron wall of opposition.

The high priest's tones came like a snap of a suddenly lashed whip.

"Smite him! Smite him on the mouth! He blasphemes!"

"God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." The Apostle's words throbbed with the intensity of a temper controlled only by sheer will. "For sittest thou to judge me after the law, and commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?"

There was an eternal stillness,

"Revilest thou God's high priest?"

The question cut through the quiet. It came from one of the Pharisees standing by.

The Apostle became apologetic.

"I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written. Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people."

· Again silence. The high priest considered. His followers waited, looking for some action from their chief. The Apostle watched the crowd through shrewd eyes.

Abruptly his voice disturbed the high priest's meditations.

"Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question:"

And out of the silence leaped dissension. Men regarded each other with suspicion. Sadducees, who clung firmly to the belief that resurrection was impossible, bent their forces to argue with the Pharisees, who were sound in the idea that a resurrection was both possible and sure.

Paul stood quiet.

Oregon,

the copy,

The tumult and the shouting grew. Scribes belonging to the sect of Pharisees pled for the Apostle. Scribes num> bered among the Sadducees fought for his conviction.

"We find," said the Pharisees, "no evil in this man." And they changed their former plaint to finish, "But if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God."

The roar rose to a peak. Paul became the center of an angry mob. The air blurred beneath the rapid beat of Hebrew hands.

And the captain of the guard. who had shivered in fear before this same prisoner only the day before, forced through the crowd with an armed guard and carried Paul to safety. . . .

So the Apostle to the Gentiles taught the resurrection of the dead and exercised an obvious love for dramatizing himself at the same time.

But if that same story were told or that same doctrine taught in the average Bible class, it would resolve itself into a maze of technical interpretations of this text and that text, with a liberal sprinkling of "what does this mean?" and "explain that verse."

One cause for the lack of appreciation of the Bible's narratives lies in the language used by the common versions. Their expressions are archaic, obsolete. The serious phases of the Bible are made humorous in modern eyes by the odd phrases used by the translators.

But the stories remain in the Bible in spite of this language. David and Jonathan, Samson, embittered Cain, the fierce hate of Jezebel, the astounding faith of Noah in the coming of a natural phenomenon that never had occurred before—these are all in the Bible, waiting to be drawn out in a dramatic form by those willing to look for them. Jesus used stories, Paul made an actor of himself; and no better examples of religious educators could be found.

TEACHING OTHERS TO LOVE JESUS

POR your lesson for December 9, I wish each one of you would play school, that is, Sunday school. I'm sure many of you play that often, just as many of you play "everyday" school. If you have brothers or sisters, it will be a good way to pass away a stormy Saturday. If you are an only child, you'll have to call in your playmates, or else play all by yourself. You can do that, you know. Set the chairs in order and put your dolls or animals on them, or else have them empty and just pretend you have a whole class of boys and girls. Many of you do that, too.

Now on your blackboard draw two pictures, and as you draw explain to your class. If you have no blackboard ask Mother to pin up a large piece of paper. These two pictures are going to be pictures of a storm. In the first one draw a house all breaking down from the storm. Make slanting lines for the rain and jagged lines for the lightning.

Tell your pupils that this house was built on sand, and show them how the foundation crumbled away when that terrible storm arose. Show them how the windows blew in and the roof caved in, and the house was completely wrecked.

Explain to your class that this house represents a life—a life without Jesus. Tell them how none of us can stand the storms of life if we do not build our lives upon Jesus' teachings. We will come to ruin, just as the house that was built on sand.

Now draw your second picture. Draw a fine, straight house standing up securely through the storm. Make the storm even worse than the one in your first picture, if you want to. Put a good strong foundation under this house.

As you draw tell your scholars that this house also represents a life, but a life that is built upon a foundation that cannot fall—Jesus, our Savior. Then tell them what it means to build your life on Jesus. You will find that in the first verse of the lesson.

Some one in your class, if you have a very inquisitive scholar, that is, one who likes to ask questions, will want to know what Jesus' sayings are. That may puzzle you for a moment. But remember that this lesson is taken from the Sermon on the Mount, and you know there is where you find the "Blesseds."

So you can tell the one who asks to read some of those "Blesseds." (I hope you have asked every pupil to bring his book, that is, his Bible.) As he reads, write under your second picture some of the words out of those "Blesseds." Such as, meek, merciful, pure in heart, peacemakers, etc.

Now under your first picture write those words that describe just the opposite sort of person. Such as, proud, cruel, filthy, quarrelsome, etc. The one who is that kind of person will find his life going to ruin before he is old.

But the one whose life is built on the solid rock, built on Jesus' teachings, will find life getting better and better each day, no matter how hard the storms howl about him. For, "the path of the just is as a shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Don't you want to follow that path? It ends up in the "perfect day," the day when Jesus comes and brings His reward with Him for those who have followed Him. I'm sure all of your pupils will want to follow that path, too. Ask them.

Then if you are a good teacher, you will remind them again of what they must do: Follow Jesus' sayings and be the kind of people whose houses stand up in the storm. Above all, you will do those things yourself.

Isn't it interesting to be a teacher? It carries a lot of responsibility with it, too.

"Lord, speak to me, that I may speak In living echoes of Thy tone; As Thou hast sought, so let me seek Thy erring children, lost and lone.

"O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things Thou dost impart,
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

"O fill me with Thy fullness, Lord, Until my very heart o'erflow In kindling thought and glowing word, Thy love to tell, Thy praise to show.

. "O use me, Lord, use even me, Just as Thou wilt, and when and where; Until Thy blessed face I see, Thy rest, Thy joy, Thy glory share."

THE CHRISTIAN AS TEACHER

Matthew 7:24-29; Acts 18:24-28

GOLDEN TEXT

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Timothy 2:15.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian As Teacher.

Aim: Our education and talents should be used in teaching the gospel.

Basic Truth: "The things which thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also."—2 Tim. 2:2.

I. Jesus the Master Teacher. (Matt. 7:24-29). Jesus was a master Teacher in that He taught positively, "as one having authority"; He used simple language that all could understand; and He illustrated His teaching with common objects and happenings with which His hearers were familiar. So vivid is His description of the two houses, their different foundations, and the sudden bursting of the storm about them, that one can almost hear the furious blasts, and see the rushing waters undermining the house upon the sand, and observe it crumble and fall crashing amid the debris of the hurricane, while the house upon the rock stands firm and unyielding through it all! Such are the impressive meth-. ods of the world's greatest Teacher. We would do well to imitate Him in the assurance with which we speak, in the simplicity of the language used, and in the use of easily comprehended illustrations, as we endeavor to teach others the glorious truths of God,

II. Apollos, an Educated Teacher. (Acts 18:24-28.) Without putting undue stress upon the value of a broad education for the gospel teacher, it is apparent to the thoughtful and to the observant that the more knowledge one has of books and men and life itself the easier it is for him to attract the attention, hold the interest, and convince the minds of others of the truth of what he is endeavoring to teach. Apollos was a cultured Christian Jew who used his education to advance the cause of Christ at every opportunity. Paul was another proficient teacher of the gospel who had spent much time in the best schools of the period, and who used all the knowledge he had acquired in the preaching of the truth of God. Both of these men were constantly learning new things; they were growing in knowledge and utilizing what they learned in the service of the Lord. The learned and the unlearned must be reached with the truth, each in the way he can best understand.

GOLDEN TEXT

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."-2 Tim. 2:15.

To be approved of God should be the thing uppermost in the Christian's mind. If one is a true Christian, he will be approved. We need to study diligently to be able to rightly divide the Word. If we can rightly divide the Word we need not be ashamed before either man or God. Study, study, study, to know God's Word and His will.

All Christians are teachers in one way or another. If not a professional, one's very life is a constant help or hindrance to those about him. As Christian, our lives should be so devoted to God that we be living examples to those about us. May our lives be so ordered that our every word and action may redound to the glory of the Father .- L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Great Teacher

- taught in simple language;

-used common illustrations; -was sympathetic in His teachings;

-took advantage of every opportunity;

-did not attempt to teach that which He knew not.

Teachers. The teaching profession is one of the highest and most important positions in the church. The teacher whether aware of the fact or not leaves an indelible stamp upon the life and character of the pupil. Lives are made and molded and characters formed at the feet of the teacher. Teachers should feel their responsibility and schools should exercise every care in the selection of teachers; especially is this true of teachers of the younger classes. Every teacher should be a Christian, a member of the church, and should believe that the Bible is God's Word. He should have practical knowledge and experience of truth in order to teach faith, repentance, forgiveness, obedience, love, and service. Furthermore, he should be a living example of Christianity in order to influence toward and to convince of the power of Christianity.

The Taught, Before there is any real teaching the pupil, or one to be instructed or taught, must be brought into the same state or principle in which you are; a transfusion takes place; he is you, and you are he: when this unity of dual thought, feeling, or principle is accomplished, there is real teaching; and by no unfriendly chance or bad company can the pupil ever quite lose the benefit. We must bring the one being taught into a condition or frame of mind where he is willing to be taught regardless of whether such teaching is in harmony with his individual reasonings, More injury is done in the teaching of truth by overfeeding than anything else. The WHAT and HOW and QUANTITY depend on the WHO.-C. E. R.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULTS

The Teaching Church

Paul warns us against a time that is coming "in the last days" when men shall be "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God: having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" (2 Tim. 3:4, 5). It is apparent that the time of which he speaks is now upon us. For churches are increasing in membership, but declining in attendance. They are growing in numbers, but are forgetting the truth for which they are supposed to stand.

There is much of music, much of polished oratory, much of entertainment, carried on in the name of the church, but how little of real Bible teaching we discover in them!

It is true that Apollos was an orator of great power, that he was in all probability a graduate of the schools for which Alexandria was renowned, but the knowledge he had acquired there was but used as an aid in the more effective presentation of the truth he had learned in his study of the Bible.

Apollos was a teacher of the gospel as it was revealed in the Scriptures. And, more than that, he himself was a learner, a student, willing to listen as well as to preach. Aquila and Priscilla, finding him thus anxious to learn still more about the way of salvation, gladly assisted him as teachers. And the assistance they thus rendered enlarged the scope of his activity and service, and increased his usefulness to the Lord.

Christianity is not acquired through emo-tionalism, but through long and patient study of the Word of God (Matt. 28:20).—G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: How We Can Teach.

Did any of you tell anyone else about your Sunday school lesson last Sunday? If you did then you are a teacher. (If any child has, let him tell to whom and what he told.)

We are all teachers one way or another. There is always some one watching us, and will often do as we do. So that is one way we teach. We must be sure to teach the right way. Our lesson today is about a man who taught the right way. It was Apollos. (Teacher tells what Apollos did as found in Acts 18:24-28.) There it was not only good for Apollos to teach, but it was very good for the people who listened.

Our Sunday school teachers and our ministers tell us what and how we should do, but we do not always listen. We have been studying many things we should and should not do as taught by the Bible,

Here's a little story about people who do and do not listen. I will tell it to you. (Teacher tells story found in Matthew 7:24-29.)

We will first divide our class into two parts. The first part draw the picture which Jesus said we were like if we listened to Him. The other part draw the picture which Jesus said we were like if we did not listen. Write the little story under each picture.

Who is going to be a teacher this week? Next Sunday I will ask who and what you taught. Learn, "By their fruits ye shall know them."-V. C. T.

RIPLEY - ELDORADO - ST. LOUIS

In order that brethren living in central and southern Illinois and in eastern Missouri may not overlook the dates of the preaching services in this wide territory we publish the following schedule.

Kipley, Ill.—Sunday school every Sunday

Ripley, III.—Sunday school every Sunday at 10 a. m. and preaching at 11 o'clock. When Pastor C. E. Lapp is absent at other appointments Bro. G. L. Cooper supplies the pulpit. Prayer meeting is held Wednesday evenings at 7:30. The annual business meeting of the congregation has been called for Wednesday, Dec. 12, at 7:30 p. m.

Eldorado, III.—Sunday school each Sunday at 10 a.m., Preaching service Saturday evening, Dec. 2, at 7.30 and on the following Sunday at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m., These services will be conducted by Paster C. E. Ladd.

St. Louis, Mo.—Pastor C. E. Lapp will preach at 4318 Olive Street, on November 30, at 8 p.m. Visitors to the city are urged to join in this service.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE PLANNED AT GRAND RAPIDS

A Thanksgiving service is being held at the church at 7 a.m. Thanksgiving Day. How much we all have to be thankful for as we look back over the past, and how much we should continually show that thankfulness to God by humble service in His name!

The annual church business meeting will be held as per usual the first Friday in December. This year it comes on the 7th. At this meeting the officers are chosen who will direct the church affairs for 1935. May God direct the choice.

On the night of November 30 the young people's Berean class is planning to have a "Hard Times" supper at the Siple home. There were 36 present in that class last Berean night, and one beautiful part of it is that many of them are boys and girls who have had no previous opportunity of coming in contact with the truths of God's Word. To teach and train them is a splendid privilege.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

Are you still paying your Dollar-a-Month pledge?

INTEREST IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The maintenance of interest in the Sunday school, upon which the success of the school of course depends, may be ascribed to the following causes: The personality, faithfulness, and teaching ability of the teacher, 75 per cent; the oversight, cooperation, and leadership of the superintendent, 20 per cent; the attractiveness and usableness of materials, 5 per cent.

The final conclusion is that the success of a Sunday school lies in the hands of the superintendent and his teachers. If the teachers of the school are sufficiently impressed with the sacred service they are rendering to the cause of Christ they will be willing to make any necessary sacrifice to keep the children interested and auxious to be always present when the school is called to order and to help them to build into their childish lives the principles of truth contained in the Bible.

PLAN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

Plans for the next Quarterly Conference are to be formulated at a meeting of the Conference Board on the first Sunday in December. Because so little time has been available in the past for detailed planning of these events, the Board is making an extra effort this time to insure a bigger and better conference on January 13. We hope all the people in California who can will plan to attend this gathering and help to make it the unqualified success it deserves to be: make note of the date.

Bro, and Sr. Railsback have been absent from our midst now for some time and will be gone until about Thanksgiving time. They are in northern California, where Bro. Railsback is doing some remodeling at the home of Bro. and Sr. Moore of Red Bluff. Each one who is absent from our group means a large vacancy. Bro. and Sr. Rahn and family are in process of moving to Pomona, where they plan to settle on a small farm. In anticipation of that move, Bro. Richard Rahn has already moved to Pomona and is living with the writer and family.

Norman John MacLeod.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

The Fonthill, Ont., church is rejoicing over the wonderful recovery of Bro. Ernest Shute from his recent serious illness. Bro. Shute is one of the many faithful members of that progressive congregation.

And speaking of Fonthill we are reminded that William Platts, the "Kabbage King" of that locality, has once more piled high the crates of "fruit" for the sauerkraut barrel! Bro. Platts presented the Editor some years ago with a cabbage of the most enormous size and finest flavor.

We would much like to hear the sermon of Pastor Norman John MacLeod of Los Angeles, on Sunday, Dec. 9, when he is to speak on "The Power of an Endless Life." It suggests much of interest to the one who is waiting for the coming of the Life-Giver.

A sister who has been without the paper for some years, but who is again receiving it, writes: "Is The Herald so much improved, or is it because I was so starved for the truths it contains that it seems so much better to me than it used to be?"

Last Thursday was the eightieth birthday of Mrs. Minnie Steffa, who for two years or more has been a resident of Golden Rule Home. Mrs. Mick, the matron of the Home, prepared a fine birthday dinner in celebration and among the invited guests were the pastor of the Oregon church and his family. Mrs. O'Byrne, another member of the Home family, was not able to be at the table on the happy occasion owing to illness, but in order that she might have a part in the festivities she provided the birthday cake.

Miss Elizabeth Anne Claypool called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Claypool at Robinson, Ill., on November 22, 1934, and was so cordially received that she decided to stay. We feel sure she will have no cause to regret the choice she has made. Bro. Virgil Claypool, it will be remembered, was the Treasurer of the National Bereau Society for two years.

Bro. and Sr. George Siple are driving to Waterloo, Iowa, where they will spend Thanks giving with Bro. and Sr. T. J. Ellis of that Sunday schools: Why not give your small scholars copies of Jesus, the Light of the World, and so present them with something of lasting value? 25 cents a copy. Shipments made promptly by the National Berean Society, Oregon, 111. Sample copy sent for examination for a two-cent stamp.

Among the many good things which the new year is predicting for the readers of this paper is a series of articles from the pen of J. M. Stephenson, who awaits the Lord's return in the little cemetery at Ripley, Ill. These articles will have to do with Bro. Stephenson's favorite theme, the glad tidings of the kingdom of God.

Christmas is coming! Let us again plan to focus the attention of our program comittees on the importance of emphasizing the second as well as the first advent of Jesus at this time, for after all, the future coming of the Lord is to us more important and glorious than the first!

Bro. R. H. Judd of Toronto, Canada, continues his efforts to bring the truth to others by correspondence and by the distribution of tracts. We regret that owing to the pressure of the times this splendid writer has little opportunity for literary labor. May God bless abundantly the work he is able to do.

Several weeks ago a splendid short article reached us entitled, "Are We As Christians Driving Those Nearest and Dearest to Us to Everlasting Destruction!" No name was attached to the article and the letter with which it was accompanied was placed in our files so that we do not know who wrote it. If the author will please drop us a eard giving his or her name we will greatly appreciate it, and the article will quickly find, a place in our columns.

Information reaching our office shows a slight decline in attendance at a few of our Sunday schools over the country which is to be greatly regretted, as the growth of the Sunday school is generally followed by increasing interest in all the services of the church. Other Sunday schools, however, report a steady increase in both attendance and interest.

STIRRING REVIVAL AT BURR OAK, INDIANA

The special meetings that have been in progress here since November 18 under the leadership of Evangelist A. E. Hoskins of St. Cloud, Minn, continue with increasing interest and attendance. Bro. Hoskins is giving a series of dispensational sermons based on a chart. Among the themes which have been presented, or which will be introduced before the meetings close, are the following: "God's Great Plan and Purpose"; "When Will Jesus Come!" and "The Beast Out of the Sea.

Those within reach are invited to attend, as the evangelist will continue his effort until Sunday, Dec. 2, and perhaps longer, if the interest demands.

Mrs. Albert Overmyer.

This book contains an illustration of the finding of the baby Moses. Send all orders to National BEREAN Society, Oregon, Illinois.

GOD'S TWO GREAT WITNESSES

One of the most interesting tracts that has reached us in many months has just come from the press under the title, "God's Two Great Witnesses, or, The Bible and Nature in Harmony." It is the work of J. H. Anderson, who presents conclusive evidence based on the universal testimony of the Bible and nature of the truth of God's Word. "To understand the testimony of nature," the author declares, "one must find the key furnished by the Bible that will give the meaning of nature's voice." He then draws a striking analogy from nature of the harmony and beauty of the purposes of God in redemption as they are revealed in the Bible.

The covenants, the nature and destiny of man, and the coming of the Lord as taught in the Scriptures are taken up in sequence and discussed in an able and convincing manner. Do not fail to send to the author for a supply of these tracts to give to high school and college students. The price is ten cents each. Address all orders to J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Ind.

CHILDREN SHOULD BE SEEN AND NOT HURT

By D. G. Harvey

"Let no man despise thy youth."-1 Timothy 4:12.

OUR subject may seem unusual at first glance, but we of the older generations remember the old saying of our elders, "Children should be seen and not heard," so often used when the child presented some troublesome question. What has been the result of such an attitude toward youth? Lack of respect for the aged and lack of faith in God's Word.

We are living in a fast age, an age of advancement. The youth of today must face problems we of the older generations were never forced to meet, but is youth to be blamed for the conditions which they had no part in bringing about? Could we of the older generation be just with youth, and judge them by the standards of the past?

When Grandma wore hoop skirts and her boy friend would dash by at a rapid pace on his high-wheeled bicycle, Great-grandpa was sure the youth of his day were headed for the dogs. Then when Dad wore pegtop pants and padded shoulders and Mom wore hobble skirts and perhaps rode in one of the few horseless carriages, Grandpa was ready to give up. Then came the flappers and the sheiks of a few years ago. It could get no worse. We were sure youth was a failure.

But we have lived through all these changes, yet youth at heart is always the same, trying to adapt itself to the conditions in which it finds itself, conditions it had no part in making.

Youth today is needed, as ever in the past. Let us not forget the call of the boy Samuel, when the sons of Eli, older men, had failed (1 Sam. 3), and Josiah, the boy king, but one of the best rulers in Jerusalem (2 Kings 22). When Job's three old friends, Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar, failed to give comfort, Job said, "I have heard many such things: miserable comforters are ye all."-Job 16:2. It was Elihu, a young man, who succeeded, for he "waited till Job had spoken, because they were elder than he'' (Job 32:4). Then Job repented when he learned the truth (Job 42: 2, 3). We could name many such cases from the Scriptures of the need of youth and youth's service in the past. Moses, a mere babe, was taken out of the water by his sister Miriam, who was there when needed. The boy with the loaves and fishes helped Jesus feed the multitude. Jesus Himself puzzled the learned men at the age of 12.

Youth today has my sympathy. It must meet and stand hundreds of temptations we elders knew nothing of.

No! No! cry the older generations. We never went fifty miles to spend the night dancing. No. "Old Dobbin" wouldn't stand the trip. But we had "hay rides," "husking bees," barn raisings; and remember the older generations then did not regard our youth as a sweet-smelling odor.

The nature of youth is the same in all ages, but conditions differ, the standards differ. Disrespect of elders tothat is due to training, loss of confidence in parents. No · considence, no respect. Youth is blamed for lack of interest in the church, but it only follows the example of Dad and Mom, who are too busy with clubs, lodges, golf, etc., to be interested in the joys and sorrows of the children and point out dangers, but let things drift. Let us be considerate of the mistakes of youth, give it advice as did Huldah the prophetess, Hilkiah the priest, and Shaphan the scribe, to the boy king Josiah. Never hurt or discourage the young in their efforts of service; help them. And may youth heed Paul's words: "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity . . . Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."-1 Tim. 4:12, 16.

ALEXANDER AND BARTHOU

IN THE BALKANS the position of the Jews has never been a happy one. Kings and politicians have used them in the most merciless fashion to bolster up their intrigues. Pogroms, business, and political restrictions have been launched and ended very much in the manner of American political investigations preceding elections. The Jew, in short, has been used—rather, abused—to tip the scales one way or the other.

The assassinations in Marseilles—which, all agree, put an end to the career of the most tyrannical ruler since Czar Nicholas (Hitler excepted)—had a strange sequel. While some elements in Yugo-Slavia openly celebrated the death of King Alexander, the Jews mourned his passing as the loss of a friend and protector. Apparently the deceased monarch, faced with the precarious job of consolidating and ruling a turbulent jig-saw puzzle of Croats, Slovenes. and whatnot, was clever enough to solve the Jewish problem first, granting the Jews a measure of freedom and security, with the hope of winning for himself the sympathy and good will of world opinion. World Jewry is quick to express its gratitude for tolerance, at times too quick. In this instance it is somewhat curious to behold the spectacle of the Jews lamenting the death of a ruthless king who brought severe suffering to his people.

Would it not have been more in keeping with the true spirit of liberalism and equality for the Jews to honor the memory of the unfortunate M. Barthou, who died in the cause of world peace and understanding? Louis Barthou was more a king than Alexander, more a friend of the Jews, more a spirit imbued with the humanity without which no man can rule wisely. Alexander tolerated the Jews because it was good politics. Barthou championed their rights because it was an integral part of his lifelong devotion to social justice.—American Jewish World.

When Antichrist Rules

By Norman John MacLeod

THE "spirit" of Antichrist has been working in the world ever since the days of the apostles. Both Peter and John make mention of it. Both of them speak of the coming of such as a sign. Paul speaks of the spirit as working only slightly in the early days but increasing in its working until "he" should be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. Much has been said in speculation and until "he" should be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. Much has been said in speculation and argument as to just what is meant by such a being, or such a movement, or such a system. Definite conclusions seem hard to reach. But some things stand out clearly.

"Antichrist" is defined by John (1 John 2:22) thus: "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son." Such a definition would fit many. Such a definition would fit many systems. Such a definition would fit several movements. Communism, the newest religion of the world. not only denies Jesus, but becomes very specific in denying God. The ones who advocate that system make a very strong point of destroying all worship. They have entered definitely into the field of religion because they say that religion is an "opiate" of the people. They say that the religion of Jesus puts its followers to sleep. They, according to John's definition, are definitely "antichrist." Few people realize to what an extent the movement of Communism has penetrated the world at large, and the United States in particular. Indifference, which is the result of the great American tradition of toleration, is one of the most fertile grounds for Communism. The coming of economic difficulty on the top of religious indifference sweeps away the anchors of Christian civilization and lets in the flood of turmoil. "Looked at from without, faith in God's sovereignty would seem to sap human responsibility and favor quietism. Actually, it made men of iron will and powerful initiative. So the Marxist faith in a dialectical movement, rendering Communism inevitable, sustains patience in tribulation and inspires hope and nerves effort in times of opportunity."—Christianity and Communism, by H. G. Wood, p. 4. In the field of religion, if this be true, Communism is bound to bring on a serious conflict in the Western World such as the Near East and the Far East could not develop. Czarism tottered and fell with searcely a blow when the final crisis came, for it was a system that was rotten to the core. But Western democracy and its religious system, though badly battered by the present difficulties, is not the decadent instituti in that Russian autocracy and its accompanying religious system proved to be. But the leaven of Eastern antichristianism has entered into the Western civilization and is causing a more intense ferment than it ever could in the vast Russian dominions. Without any question Communism is antichristian.

"Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time."—1 John 2:18.

A religious system cannot remain static or it will die. If for one moment Christianity remains inactive in seeking new members for its organization it begins to decay. When Mohammedanism ceased to go out to the world offering the "Koran or the sword" it began to decay. Though at present there are some signs of a revival of Islam, for the most part it is rapidly ceasing to be an effective instrument in the affairs of mankind. Such a thing is Communism: if it ceases for one moment to make converts it will begin to crumble and dec-The very system itself demands propaganda. In spite of promises to various nations that propaganda would not follow recognition of the Soviet regime, propaganda has gone with trade nevertheless. Any system which seems to offer a solution to the economic, political, and social ills of a nation will receive consideration by many people. Even though they do not adopt such a system at once, its influence is almost immediately felt. It is much like that old quotation from Pope:

"Vice is a monster of so frightful a mien,

As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,

We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

The Royal Wedding

"Prepared as a bride adorned for hor husband."—
Revelation 21:2.

London, Nov. 29.—Accompanied by scenes of splendor which have seldom been equaled in the history of England, George, the fourth son of King George V, King of Great Britain, and the Greek princess Marina were married today in the presence of a large company of royal and other illustrious guests assembled in historic Westminster Abbey. Kings and queens, dukes and duchesses, lords and ladies, diplomats and other distinguished persons, all dressed in the richest garments and most gorgeous uniforms, listened with closest attention as the Archbishop of Canterbury solemnly asked the questions of the prince and princess which led to their marital union.

"George Edward Alexander Edmund, wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou love her, comfort her, honor, and keep her in sickness and in health, and forsaking all others, keep only unto her so long as ye both shall live?"

Clearly and distinctly came the answer of the prince, "I will!" Then followed similar questions addressed to the bride, to which she also responded, "I will."

As we listened over the radio to that impressive ceremony in which a possible King of England took to himself one who might one day become the Queen of the realm, we were impressed with the thought that soon, very soon, a still more marvelous marriage ceremony will take place in the clouds amid circling emissaries of heaven, when the Son of God shall take to Himself His holy bride, the church! Shall we be of that princess company to whom the King of kings shall address the words, "I take thee, beloved, to be my glorified and immortalized bride"?

10,671,000 Without Work

"Let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good."—Ephesians 4:28.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 30.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor in his monthly report of the employment situation issued today declared that the nation is entering the winter with 550,000 more unemployed than was the case a year ago at the same time. The total number without work a year ago during October was 10,122,000. October of this year, he said, saw 10,671,000 unemployed.

"Business activity in October this year was 2.6 per cent below last year," asserted Mr. Green. He further predicted that the relief problem this winter would be the most serious ever faced by the country. "The serious implications of this increase in unemployment cannot be overemphasized," the statement continued. Relief need this winter is already higher than it was last year.

No matter how sincere may be the efforts of men to assure prosperity to the world, nothing but the rulership of the King of kings will solve the problem satisfactorily and permanently.

Choir Sings the "Internationale"

"How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?"—Psalm 137:4.

New York, Nov. 30.—According to newspaper reports, "many Christians in the United States got a shock recently when news dispatches announced that the famous Westminster Choir, of Presbyterian origin, opened a concert in Leningrad, Russia, by singing the godless anthem, 'Internationale,' as their first number. This religious musical organization is regarded as being the most noted of its kind in the United States, and has traveled extensively in other countries on concert tours."—Item submitted by Glenn Birkey, Rochelle, Illinois.

Jewish Feast of Lights

"All the children of Israel had light in their dwellings."—Exodus 10:23.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—The eight-day observance of Chanukah, Feast of the Dedication, known also as the Feast of Lights, will be opened tonight throughout Jewry with brilliant festivals everywhere. In this city Cantor Joseph Giblichman will light the traditional Chanukah candle, to which observant Jews will add one candle each day until the celebration of the feast is completed.

The festival was established in commemoration of the rededication of the temple after its pollution by Antiochus IV (Epiphanes). It was first celebrated on December 25, 165 B. C., exactly three years to a day after an altar to Zeus Olympius had been set in the holy place. The temple was rededicated to Jehovah with brilliant festivities that continued for eight days.

The One Name

By M. W. Perrine

THE one name that was held in reverence by the people whom God claimed to be His people, whom He took by the hand and led out of Egypt into a land that He gave them for an inheritance, was Jehovah, which was considered by them a name too holy to be uttered. It was the name inherited by Jesus, God's only begotten Son.

When Peter and John went up into the temple at the hour of prayer and healed the impotent man, lame from his mother's womb, notice in whose name and by what power it was performed. Acts 3:3: "Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms. And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us. And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them. Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none: but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up. . . . And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God"; and it caused people to wonder greatly. "And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people. Ye men of Israel, why marvel ve at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied him... and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses. And his name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him bath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all." And not only this miracle, but all the miracles performed by the apostles, were done in the name of Jesus the Christ.

Peter and John continued to preach Jesus and the resurrection to the people, which so grieved the rulers with Annas and Caiaphas that they set Peter and John in their midst. They asked by what power or by what name they had done this. Acts 4:8: "Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, if we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole; be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

Poor Fellow

This past week we were riding along with another minister, and he pointed to a eard that was sticking out of the car door pocket and said, "I had a funeral of a non-member several miles away. I had to make two trips, and now I get a card thanking me for my services." He continued, "That is not even honest."

He has a lot of sympathizers in his profession. Oftentimes arrangements are made for funerals, time set, and then the min ister is asked to conduct the service, regard less of any plans and labors he may have on hand, He is expected to drop everything. If clothes are not in good condition, get them cleaned and pressed; and if the week's ironing hasn't been done, buy a new shirt and have it charged. (Ministers as a rule don't have very many extra shirts.) Then he must get his ear cleaned up so it will look respectable, and if he hasn't time, hire it done; and of course the tires must be in good condition so he won't have a flat in the procession. Often he must borrow money to make the trip. And he is let down to bear all this expense with not even a "thank you."

Such is often the experience of a minister.

—C. E. Randall.

The rulers were thoroughly convinced that the power by which Peter and John worked such wonderful miracles was given to them through the name of Jesus of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, and they trembled through fear of the judgment of God that awaited them. They probably were ignorant of the fact that a kind and merciful Father in heaven, in His love toward them, had provided for all of His creatures a refuge to which they could flee and be safe. So the Apostle Paul points it out to all (Phil. 2): "If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfil ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant. and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." This points out the refuge that is in Christ Jesus to everyone that puts on the Lord Jesus Christ in truth and in spirit, and takes (Please turn to Page Nine)

The Hope of Eternal Life

"In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began."—Titus 1:2.
"Heirs according to the hope of eternal life."—Titus 3:7.

IT IS good to hope; it is better to have a good hope. We have all doubtless at times indulged hopes which have failed of realization, because they had no sure basis. The sluggard may hope to win the prize, but his hope is of little worth. The hopes of the diligent student, who has applied himself to master the subjects in which he is to be examined, have, on the contrary, a more or less sure basis. Hope, then, must be well founded, or we shall sooner or later, be disillusioned.

The majority of our hopes relate solely to this life—the things which are seen and temporal; but our texts set before us a hope not bounded by the present, but one that reaches forward to embrace the unseen and eternal—the Life Everlasting; and our present purpose is to consider firstly, the precise nature of the Apostle's hope, and, in the second place, the foundation on which it was built.

As a prelude let me call to your remembrance the incident recorded in the 17th chapter of the Acts, Saul's discourse to the men of Athens when his spirit was stirred in him as he saw the city wholly given to idolatry. Standing in the midst of Mars' Hill he rebukes them for their superstitions, and declares—"God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things." "He giveth to all life"; and, to that statement, he adds: "For in him we live, and move, and have our being." It is of the entire race that the Apostle here speaks, the righteous and the unrighteous, the godly and the godless. and it is therefore impossible to give to the word "life" any other meaning than its primary meaning of being and vitality. With these thoughts in mind let us recall those words of our Savior in John's Gospel, in which He speaks of the Father having given Him power over all flesh that He should give "eternal life" to as many as the Father had given Him. Here our divine Master uses exactly the same word for "life" as did the Apostle on Mars' Hill, prefacing it with the adjective "eternal." Coupling these passages together we see that, whereas God has given to all men "life," it is His gracious purpose to give some "eternal life," namely, to those who are united to the Savior by a living faith. To us these words seem quite simple and to teach with the utmost plainness that whilst all possess the life that now is, which is brief and transitory, and terminable because of sin, there will be those to whom will be given life in perpetuity, life for evermore. But whilst, as we say to the plain man, this seems so clear as to be impossible of misunderstanding, it is just here that some step in and, obsessed with the belief that man is an immortal and imperishable being, forbid us to place so simple an interpretation upon the words, insisting that by eternal life must be understood eternal blessedness. In passing we might perhaps point out that those who thus put a qualitative meaning upon the word eternal when the future of the saved is in question, insist, and that with emphasis, upon a quantitative sense being assigned to it when speaking of the future of the lost. This, we submit, is not "handling aright the word of truth."

INHERENT IMMORTALITY

But with regard now to the belief in man's inherent immortality. This we affirm has no place in the holy Scriptures. According to the sacred Record, man was made out of the dust of the earth, and became "a living soul" by the inbreathing into his nostrils by the Creator of the breath of life. Scripture does not state that man was endowed with an immortal soul, but that he was made a living soul, and the same is said of the creatures which, like Adam, were made out of the dust of the ground, and also of every moving creature which the waters brought forth abundantly; all are called living souls, and all possess the same breath of life. Whilst, however, man's origin was lowly-"of the earth, earthy"-his position as given him by the Creator was most glorious, for he was made to rule, to have dominion, and was immune from death so long as he continued in obedience to the divine commands; but, disobeying, he brought death upon himself and upon the whole race, as it is written: "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

We would here quote the words of Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, in relation to this matter. He says: "Neither immortal nor yet mortal did God make man; but, capable of either destiny, in order that he might incline to the things of immortality, and keeping God's commandments obtain immortality as his reward, and so become divine; but, if he should turn aside to the things of death, disobeying God, he would become the cause of his own death. For God made man free and master of his own fate. But that which he, through his negligence and disobedience, did not acquire, God, in His philanthropy and mercy, now gives to him when men become obedient. For in the same manner as man by his disobedience brought death upon himself, so if he fulfills the will of God any man who desires it can acquire the life eternal. In fact, God has given us a law, and holy precepts, whereby any man who does them will be saved, and, attaining the resurrection, will inherit incorruptibility."

This statement appears to us to express the truth of the Scriptures. Man is not immortal, neither has he an immortal or "never-dying" soul, as is often affirmed. "In the day that thou eatest thereof"—the tree of the knowledge of good and evil—God had said, "thou shalt surely die," or "dying, thou shalt die," as it may be rendered, and, cut off from the "tree of life," death became for Adam inevitable.

OPPOSITES

But just as in the ease of the word life, of which we are told that we may not understand it in its simple, everyday usage, so is it with the word death, the threatened penalty of disobedience. For death, instead of meaning the loss of life, means, it is said, endless life in pain and suffering. We think it is better to believe that God means just what He says rather than to allow human philosophy to distort and nullify the simple statement of the Scriptures.

The learned Dr. Petavel, in his Problem of Immortality, remarks in this connection: "When man is in question, life in the historic and grammatical sense is an existence composed of action, and sensation; death is the cessation of that existence, the end of all action and all sensation. But it has come to pass that in consequence of the preconceived notion of the absolute immortality of the human soul, and in defiance of the formal declarations of Scripture, the traditional exegesis starts from the principle that the life of the soul cannot possibly cease. The result has been to give to that which is called in Scripture death, in relation to the soul, the sense of perpetual life in the midst of sin and sufferings without end. ... Life and death are opposites like black and white. To say that death is a kind of life, a certain 'state of life,' is like declaring that black is a kind of white, a certain 'state of white.' "

We would also quote the comments of Locke in his Reasonableness of Christianity. He says: "Nobody can deny but that the doctrine of the gospel is that death came upon all men by Adam's sin, only they differ about the significance of the word death. For some will have it to be a state of guilt, wherein not only he but all his posterity was so involved that everyone descended of him deserved endless torments in hell fire. It seems a strange way of understanding a law which requires the plainest and directest words that by death should be meant eternal life in misery. Can any suppose for a law that says: For felony thou shalt die, is meant not that he should lose his life, but be kept alive in perpetual and exquisite torments? I confess that by death here I can understand nothing but that ceasing to be, the losing of all actions of life and sense. Such a death came upon Adam, and all his posterity, by his first disobedience in Paradise, under which death they should have lain forever had it not been for the redemption by Jesus Christ."

We believe then that the death threatened and incurred by Adam was the absolute loss of life, giving to the word its basic and elementary significance, and that the refusal to allow to the words life and death in the Scriptures their literal, fundamental, and inherent meaning is the cause of much misunderstanding and serious error, and it is perhaps appropriate here to call attention to some of the evils which result. It is, we think, true to say that the denial of the reality of death is common to all false religions, and the bedrock on which almost every anti-christian system is founded.

Conceptions of Purgatory

Romanism denies the reality of death, and upon the erroneous idea that the dead are living rests its belief in purgatory, saint-worship, prayers to and for the dead. Many Protestants believe the dead are living, and embrace some modified form of purgatory with the gospel of second chance. Heathenism in many of its phases believes the dead are living, and terrible indeed have been the cruel practices arising therefrom. Spiritualism maintains that the dead are living, and through such belief thousands are drawn into its folds, entering those awful gates which lead to demon-control and to destruction. Theosophy believes the dead are living, and founds upon the belief its doctrine of the evolution of the soul by means of repeated incarnations.

Both of these latter systems which are making such rapid advances in our midst deny and scorn the doctrine of eternal life through the death and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ alone, and it is, we submit, a matter for serious reflection, that whilst the Christian church generally repudiates as strongly as we do the teachings of both these evil cults, it does nevertheless agree with them in their belief that death is not the cessation of life, and, to that extent at least, yields ground to the opposers of divine revelation.

LUTHER AND TYNDALE

It is not so well known as it should be that both Luther and Tyndale held firmly to the teaching of Scripture in regard to the reality of death, and had this phase of their teaching received the same prominence in the Reformed Church as the recovered truth of justification by grace through faith, a mighty bulwark would have been erected against the errors which then as now hold sway.

In confirmation of what we have said we quote the following words of Luther: "The dead," said he, "are insensible. . . . They lie, not reckoning days or years, but when awakened will seem to have slept scarcely a moment." And Archdeacon Blackburn, in his Historical View of the Controversy Concerning an Intermediate State, says: "Luther espoused the doctrine of the sleep of the dead upon a scriptural foundation, and then made use of it as a confutation of purgatory and saint-worship," and states that Luther continued in that belief until the last moment of his life. Sir Thomas More opposed Luther because he held "that all souls lie and sleep 'till doomsday,'" and Tyndale, replying to More's objections, made answer: "And ye, in putting them (the dead) in heaven, hell, and pur-

Eternal Torment

By David L. Norrie

IT IS evident that the death in store for sinners is not simply the first death, which is the common lot of all men by nature, but the second death, which is subsequent to resurrection and judgment (Rev. 20:11-15).

But whatever the nature of the first death is, so must be the second. Else it is no second. If the first train is a train, the second train is also a train, not a motor car. And since the first death is not separation from God, but the literal loss of life caused by the withdrawal of the breath of life, therefore, the penalty of the second death is also the loss of life caused by the withdrawal, for the second time, of the breath of life. And there is no resurrection from the second death. For after the second death, the breath of life is never again to be restored to sinners. And, therefore, those that die the second death shall truly be "punished with everlasting destruction" (2 Thess. 1:9).

WHAT IS PUNISHMENT?

But, I am asked, how can death be an everlasting punishment? To this I would reply that death is the only everlasting punishment that could be inflicted on "mortal man." The punishment of flogging is over when the last stripe is inflicted; a fine is paid and done with; and since the days of the patriarchs I know of no term of imprisonment that ever exceeded a hundred years; for, of course, imprisonment must end at latest at death. Now, if a man be imprisoned for ten years, it is a ten years' punishment ten years' loss of liberty; and if he could be put to death for ten years, it would again be a ten years' punishmentten year's loss of life, and all its blessings. Mark, we do not reckon that the punishment is over with the mere pain of dying, any more than it is over when the man steps from freedom into prison. The prisoner suffers punishment as long as he is deprived of freedom, and the dead man suffers punishment so long as he is deprived of life. God is not going to give the wicked a ten years' punishment, no, nor a hundred years', nor yet a million, but an everlasting punishment. "These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal."-Matt. 25:46. Is it not plain that as long as the righteous remain alive, the wicked will remain dead?

WHAT IS PUNISHMENT

Many people argue that there can be no punishment unless there be conscious suffering. But this is wholly false reasoning. For, as I have pointed out, the awfulness of the murderer's punishment is not the pain he endures on the scaffold. In America, indeed, the death of criminals is altogether a painless one. But the severity of the penalty consists in the fact that the man is thereby cut off from all the privileges of the living. And in this connection it is noteworthy that the word "punishment" just quoted from Matthew 25:46 means literally "cutting off," as when branches are lopped off from a tree.

The 37th Psalm formed doubtless the groundwork of the Lord's teaching in this passage, as the following comparison of the language will show:

"Such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off."—Psalm 37:22.

"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you... Depart from me, ye cursed... These shall go away into everlasting cutting off."—Matt. 25:34-46.

Our Lord's reference also to the "everlasting fire" in which the wicked are to be "cut off" reminds us further of the 20th verse of the Psalm: "The wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away."

Let me repeat therefore that everlasting punishment consists not simply in the pain of dying the second death, but in the being cut off forever from the life which the righteous will enjoy. When the righteous receive "in the world to come eternal life," the glorious change will be effected "in the twinkling of an eye," but the life-state that results will endure forever. So when the second death is inflicted, the execution of the sentence may in nearly every ease take no longer than the quickening of the right-cous does. But the death-state will endure forever, and this is everlasting punishment, according to the Scriptures, for "the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:23).

THE LANGUAGE OF SCRIPTURE

Let us suppose for a moment that the doctrine of the eternal torment of the wicked is taught in the Bible. What words then would God have used if He had wished to teach the total destruction of the wicked? I can fancy some one saying, Oh, He could easily have made His meaning so plain that no one could misunderstand. He could have said that the wicked will utterly perish, or that their end is destruction, or that they shall return to the dust, or that they shall consume into smoke, or that they will become ashes, or that they will be burnt up, or that the fire into which they will be east is an unquenchable one, so that they will be quite unable to put it out and thereby escape their fate; or He might have said distinctly that they shall be as though they had not been. My dear friend, all these things God has actually said, and yet people believe these statements mean that the wicked are to be preserved in painful existence forever. I ask again, What words could God have used to express the total destruction of the wicked, if the strongest words that the Greek and Hebrew languages possess to express that idea are unable to convince men? On the other hand I may ask, If God had wished to teach the permanent conscious existence of the wicked, why did He not state such as the following? The wicked shall never be destroyed; or, their life is unquenchable; or, every man is by nature as immortal as God Himself; or, the wicked in the lake of fire shall be incombustible because God cannot destroy immortal souls; or, the wicked shall never be consumed; or, our God is a preserving fire. But not only do these statements not exist in the Bible, but they are given the lie direct by the texts which I have already quoted, and by dozens more.

"DAY AND NIGHT FOR EVER AND EVER"

I have here to ask what then are the proofs advanced in favor of eternal torment. At the most one or two sadly misunderstood passages from the Gospels and the book of Revelation. Let me just refer to one, as it is supposed to be very conclusive.

Revelation 20:10 (R. V.) reads thus: "And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where are also the beast and the false prophet; and they shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever (literally unto the ages of the ages)." Now this text says nothing whatever about the mass of sinful men. It is the fate only of the devil and his supernatural agents that is expressly revealed in this verse. (It is impossible to believe that the beast and the false prophet are "men of like passions with" ourselves. See Rev. 16:13; 17:8.) But are they then immortal? God forbid. We read that God "only hath immortality" (1 Tim. 6:16), and scripture cannot contradict scripture. How can we get over this difficulty? This is how most men do it. The hundreds of passages where "death," "destroy," etc., are found in the legal and didactic parts of Scripture are given a figurative meaning, but in the book of Revelation, a book that is admittedly full of figure, they pick out 20:10, and claim that it be taken as absolutely literal. The folly of such handling of the Word ought to be apparent. Clearly Revelation 20:10 must be interpreted in harmony with the hundreds of other scriptures that teach with no uncertain sound the destruction of the devil and his works (see, e.g., Heb. 2:14; 1 John 3:8). What then is the explanation of these words "for ever and ever"? It is found in Scripture itself, and men err, simply because they know not the Scriptures nor the power of God (Matt. 22:29). In the Bible the words "eternal," "for ever," etc., are used in a limited sense just as commonly as in an unlimited one. This is a fact, and it must be admitted by all who would reverently handle the Word. For example, the servant who loved his master and refused to accept his liberty, was to have his ear bored through with an awl, and was to become a servant forever (Deut. 15:17), that is, till he died. Again, Elisha pronounced this doom on Gehazi, "The leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for ever" (2 Kings 5:27); that is, each of them, as long as they lived, would be lepers. So Jonah, whilst in the belly of the fish, was so filled with horror that he said, "I went down to the bottoms of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me for ever" (ch. 2:6), but his torment really lasted only three days.

Our first concern, therefore, is to find out the nature of the persons or things to which these words "for ever" are applied. When applied to God, who is immortal, or to the redeemed, to whom He gives eternal life, the words must imply absolutely endless duration, but when applied to the sufferings of "mortal man" (Job 4:17), or to the devil, who certainly has not eternal life (1 John 3:15), they simply convey the idea of an indefinite period of time of which the end is not clearly revealed, but which is terminable in any case at death. If it be contended that "day and night for ever and ever," must be unlimited, we answer that in the two other passages of Scripture, where the same language occurs, the words certainly do not imply endless duration. One passage is Revelation 14:10, 11, where the words are applied to living men who are to be tormented day and night forever and ever in the presence of the Lamb, during the tribulation in the time of Antichrist. But, of course, no matter how long the torment lasts in the presence of the Lamb, it must end at latest when the Lord is "revealed from heaven . . . in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel . . . who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord" (2 Thess. 1:7-9).

The other passage is Isaiah 34:9, 10, where God thus pronounces judgment upon Edom, "The land thereof shall become burning pitch. It shall not be quenched night nor day; the smoke thereof shall go up for ever: from generation to generation it shall lie waste; none shall pass through it for ever and ever." Yet the very next chapter tells us of a time when the land shall become a paradise, for the indefinite period of desolation will have come to an end when the Lord's people possess Edom according to Numbers 24: 18 and Amos 9:12. So whilst we read in Revelation 20 that there is to be forment forever and forever, we are thankful to know that here again, in the very next chapter, the torment has come to an end, for the former things are passed away, and there is no more curse. Day and night, too, have ceased, and He that sat upon the throne said, "Behold, I make all things new."

Whilst it is true, therefore, that the devil is to be "tormented day and night unto the ages of the ages." it is just as true that he will at the end of that time be destroyed, Revelation 20:10 does not profess to tell us about his death. but only about his torment. It does not say-"This torment forever and ever is the second death." The second death is not mentioned here. It does not come until later on in the chapter, after the great white throne is set up. Then we read—"Death and the grave were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." And immediately that takes place, we have the record of a new heaven and a new earth (ch. 21), in no part of which is there "anything accursed" (22:3, R. V. margin). Those therefore to whom the Lord said, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire," will now cease to exist; for God has said-"Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more."—Psalm 104:35. Satan also, to whom God said of old, "Thou art eursed," will then no more be found; for God's prophecy concerning him will also be fulfilled—"Therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee, and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee . . . and never shalt thou be any more."—Ezekiel 28:18, 19.

A God-Dishonoring Doctrine

Have evangelists ever considered the mischievous, Goddishonoring results of the preaching of eternal torment? I have referred already to some of these. It has driven thousands into open infidelity. To balance this, some few have doubtless been frightened into accepting salvation, but even to such their craven fear brings no reward; for amongst those who have their part in the lake of fire, which is the second death, there are to be found "the fearful" as well as "the unbelieving" (Rev. 21.8).

ADDING TO THE WORD

Furthermore, God's Word is being daily dishonored by street corner preachers who seem unable to mention the word soul without adding to it the epithet "immortal." God never adds that word, or any such word to it, though the soul is mentioned in the Bible 859 times. "Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar."-Prov. 30:6. We distinctly read, "(God) only hath immortality."-1 Tim. 6:16. Who dares in the name of the Lord to tell perishing sinners that they, too, are immortal, and must live as long as God lives? There is only one passage in the Word of God that distinctly affirms such a thing, and that is Genesis 3:4, where Satan told Eve, "Ye shall not surely die." Satan was the first liar who abode not in the truth (John 8:44); for when God said, "Thou shalt surely die," he (Satan) added the word "not" wilfully and deliberately. Preachers today are doing the same, and though they may do it unconsciously, they do it none the less in error, and in spite of the warnings of God, and are laying up for themselves at least a reproof.

God's Righteousness in Punishment

Yet again, the character of God is sadly libeled by many who preach in His name, and who have actually told me that unless a man believes that God will torment sinners forever, he is not fit to preach the gospel! Now there was once a certain schoolmaster who told his pupils that they would have a holiday on the next day. But some pupils were not present when the intimation was given, and their companions told them after, that they were to have a holiday. But some of them did not believe, and came to school as usual. And the master saw them and was so angry at their unbelief, that he flogged them most unmercifully, and repeated the flogging every day of the session. You say this never happened. True, it is a parable; but if some one went about slanderously affirming these things of the schoolmaster, he would reckon as a friend any man who stood up for him and said, "These things are not true." Today there are men who are libeling the character of the God of love. They represent Him as punishing even now His creatures with a punishment utterly out of proportion to their offenses. Nay, there is something still more awful. It appears that this punishment was not revealed in Old Testament times. So the teachers of the doctrine admit. And, therefore, for four thousand years of Old Testament history, God was inflicting a terrible punishment which He had not even threatened. And, worst of all, sinners now in torment have never yet been brought before their Judge. They are being punished first, and are to be tried at least a thousand years hence! Shall we not lift up our voices as faithful witnesses for the God of righteousness, and preach that pure gospel which is "the power of God unto salvation . . . For therein is the righteousness of God revealed'' (Rom. 1:16, 17).

SORROWS ARE UPON THE CHURCH

By Adna E. Hoskins

JESUS says in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, "All these are the beginning of sorrows." If these days that we are living in are the beginning of sorrows, then what must it be when the fifteenth verse becomes a reality: "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place ..."

No doubt many earnest students of the Scriptures do see the approaching of that beast spoken of in Revelation 13:2. And when he comes it will be surely a time of great tribulation, for the church will have been caught up to meet the Lord in the air, according to 1 Thessalonians 4:15-17.

Russia has been afflicted with tribulation, until their last five-year plan is to wipe ont Christianity by 1937.

However, we remember the words of our Savior, when He said to Peter, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell (hades, or death) shall not prevail against it."

Perhaps Russia or any other nation will not accomplish its complete end or purpose, for we believe Jesus' words in answer to Peter will hold true.

Sorrows are upon the church today, but we are thankful that many are boldly holding the fort. Such seems to be the case in Germany.

May we as a people be busy in strengthening our faith that we will be able to stand in the evil day that apparently is upon us.

To do this, each one should endeavor to build and not to tear down; for tearing down weakens the church and the faith of the individual. God help us to see this.

A SURE CURE FOR THE BLUES

By Mrs. Lottie Logan Pickerl

If there ever was a time when such a recipe was needed, it is now. All around us we see such sad conditions, men's hearts failing them, people becoming unbalanced, untold worries. It cannot but help to react on us and especially the younger generation, who have not had the years of tempering to meet such conditions; but, nevertheless, if each of us will follow the recipe that I am about to give and pass it on to others, it cannot help but bring thanksgiving and cause us to count our blessings instead of finding fault and being depressed.

It is this: Read and meditate on the book of Job, then Psalms; and after doing so, you cannot help but see how God's children are put to the test, but if we remain faithful, although it seems at times the whole world is against us, He will bless us and care for us, as it is written (Psalm 9:9, 10), "The Lord also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble. And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek thee."

Then, if you sing or whistle, try the song, "God Will Take Care of You."

If this doesn't cure you, there is something wrong with your heart.

gatory, destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. The heathen philosophers denying that (resurrection) did put (affirmed) that the souls did ever live (were immortal). If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good a case as the angels be? And then what cause (need) is there of the resurrection?"

These are forceful words, and they emphasize one result of the erroneous belief in the consciousness of the dead in virtually denying the truth of resurrection.

Needless to say, it is impossible in a brief paper to deal with the few passages on which the belief that the dead are living is made to rest, e.g., the rich man and Lazarus; the robber's prayer; Paul's "desire" in the Philippian epistle, etc., all of which are explainable consistently with the teaching of the Scriptures that "the dead know not any thing," and that the grave is a place of silence, where there is "no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom." Suffice it to say that the accepted interpretation of these passages makes one scripture to contradict another. Our Lord has expressly told us in regard to the recompense of the just that this will be "at the resurrection," whilst in regard to the ungodly, the Apostle Peter informs us just as definitely that they are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished. Death, therefore, can mean neither bliss for the righteous nor suffering for the wicked. Both must follow that "hour" of which the Savior spoke when "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth"; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment.

upon himself that precious name. And God has declared he that humbleth himself as Jesus did shall be exalted in due time, even as Jesus was.

In Galatians 3:26 Paul gives us instructions as to the means to use after our hearts are made right in the sight of God. He says, "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ... And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." If you are baptized into the name of Jesus Christ, the only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, having His name and under the blood by faith, and if you live a holy life, you are as safe as the firstborn of the children of Israel were when they partook of the Passover under the blood.

Always remember that God is calling out a people for His name (Acts 15:14). And when you have taken upon you that precious name, the name of Jesus, that one name that is above every name, God expects you to bear it without reproach.

Many people wonder why we call ourselves "the Church of God." Even so have I wondered why anyone should call himself by any other name. When we remember that God is doing the calling, and that for the purpose of having us bear Ilis name, and He does the calling by means of the gospel, and He has commissioned men whom He calls preachers to do the calling; and that the names Jesus and Jehovah signify and have one and the same meaning; and that there is but one name; and that the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Jehovah, the same spirit that was in Christ reconciling the world unto God, how can the church do its work under any other name?

Psalm 72:17-19: "His name shall endure for ever: his name shall be continued as long as the sun: and men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed. Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name for ever: and let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and Amen."

At first Communism seemed to most people the very essence of the worst that was in the world. But presented constantly with the problems of Communism, battered by constant propaganda, weakened in defense by the failure of its own system to bring peace and prosperity, and confronted by the possibility that Russia had succeeded after a certain fashion, the Western World has gradually come to feel that Communism is a possibility. The movement has followed the establishment of the system in Russia. Needless to say, that movement backed by such a system is bound to produce its prominent leaders. Prominent advocates are to be found in every country, not excluding the United States. How are we to identify those people? They fit John's definition of antichrist.

California recently underwent a new phase in its political career. Secretly at first a political party was organized. Agents went from house to house to secure members for a secret society which they called "Utopia" after Sir Thomas More's famous book of that name. They said that the movement was national, that it had started in the East, and that it had almost millions of members. As matters progressed the real nature of the movement could not be covered, for it was a political organization designed to promote the candidacy of Upton Sinclair. To most people Upton Sinclair was more or less a "new man" in politics. Many of the older people had known of his famous book The Jungle which caused such a furor years ago in helping the passage of the federal Pure Food and Drugs Act. In less widely heralded circles he was known for his criticisms of various features in our social and religious life by various books which he had written in a bitter and sarcastic style. But to the informed he was no "new man." They knew of his bitter criticism of all religious things. They knew of his Communistic leanings. They knew of his skeptical and infidel utterances. For many years he had worked with the Socialist organization. And "Communism might be described as the Fundamentalism of the Socialist movement" (Christianity and Communism, by H. G. Wood, p. 4). To be a "good" Socialist you must be a Communist in the present-day situation. Just as in order to be a "good" Christian in the world at large you must be a "Fundamentalist." To say where Socialism leaves off and Communism begins would be just as difficult as to determine the confines of Christianity and Fundamentalism. Fundamentalism is a kind of revived Christianity in a fanatical form. Communism is revived Socialism in a militantly fanatical form. To say that a man is a Socialist at the present time is just about equivalent to saying that he is a Communist. To separate the two has come to mean a "distinction without a difference." Upton Sinclair is certainly not an exception to the rule.

Because "Communism is the one living religion in the Western World today" (Necessity of Communism, by Middleton Murray, p. 111), a follower of Communism must necessarily throw aside all other religions. For a Communist to be a Christian would be as difficult as for a man to be a Christian and a Mohammedan at the same time. Such a thing is scarcely possible. Communism is a religion which exalts man as the sum of all achievement, all good, and all hope. A Christian could not embrace such an idea. For years we have followed the career of Upton Sinclair in his religious phases: he was quoted at length by certain members of skeptic groups because of his ridicule of things for which certain "Fundamentalist" groups stood. But later they discarded his teachings because he criticized them in almost as bitter terms as he had criticized other religious groups: "Woe unto you, doctors of divinity and Unitarians, hypocrites! because you erect statues to dead reformers, and put wreaths upon the tombs of old-time martyrs. You say, if we had been alive in those days, we would not have helped to kill those good men. That ought to show you how to treat us at present. . . . But you are the children of those who killed the good men; so go ahead and kill us too."-Profits of Religion, p. 292. Some will say that he is attacking only the cyils in churches which we all recognize exist, that he is flaying only the hypocritical. But those who have followed his career before his appearance in the political field in California know better. The taint of "antichrist" is upon him. He is dangerously associated with the system of Russia, and the movement that has grown out of it. All these facts confront the Christian in California. What should be his attitude? Should be abstain from any part in such a nasty mess? Surely the opponents of Upton Sinclair are no better than he! Surely the robe of saint and martyr could not be attached to any of his political opponents! Then let all remain aloof, you say. But let us look at another aspect of the situation.

When Antichrist rules are we to submit to his reign? When the ones come who represent such a system shall we accept them in all humility and kindness? Or shall we raise our voice in protest against the coming of such a system, such a movement, and the individuals who represent it? Shall we not as long as politics remains out of religion keep our hands off? But when politicians definitely enter into the field of religion and decry the Christ who died for us, should we stand idly by? Shall we hear the name of our Savior dragged into the filth of Communistic propaganda and raise no voice in protest? Shall we deny the Savior for whom we are named? Or rather shall we not as long as life lasts defy the Antichrist who tramples our religious liberty in the mire? Shall we not at least tell people what sort of a man this is who calls our Christ "a rebel," "a proletarian soap-box orator"; who says that we "ministers of religion are occupied to scrub and clean and dress up their disreputable Founder" (quoted from The Profits of Religion) ?

No --

What this nation and the world needs more than anything else that is human at the present time is a majority of "no" men. The inveterate habit of the most of earth's inhabitants to yes every scheme for establishing Utopia has led us into greater chaos than ever has existed since the barbarians swept the Roman Empire out of existence.

But the church needs "no" men far more than does the general populace. For the church has been suffering from the dry rot of a yessing majority for approximately a third of a century. And the yesses have destroyed or nullified nearly all of the dogmatic teaching formerly held by the religious world.

It is said of a New York financier that, after the fatal Crash, he made the acquaintance of the best linguist on Wall Street and got him to teach him the word "no" in forty-three different languages. The financier had learned his lesson. No would thereafter be his answer to all the dreams of monetary empire that would be proposed to him.

The church, unfortunately, is not possessed of leaders such as this financier. Every plan for social progress, every theory of science, every doctrine of some ancient and revived philosophy, and every scheme for abolishing the influence of the one-time dogmas of theology are yessed violently and with enthusiasm. The church unites in leading cheers over the death of Christianity and the birth of social revolution.

Christianity in one sense is quite as much a no religion as a yes one. It says no definitely and distinctly to all the forms of modernistic teaching which are sapping the strength from every religious denomination of the world. It says no to every attempt to preach the establishment of peace, eternal contentment, and prosperity by the hands of men alone.

No is the most sublime word in the English language. Its use can spell the difference between a marriage and a spinsterhood. It can represent the difference between endless death and never-ending life.

The Christ said no. He said it thrice to Satan. And the Christ was resurrected from the dead.

Peter said no. He said it to the priests and Pharisees. And Christianity swept over Asia, Africa, and Europe like a mighty tidal wave.

The salvation of the world depends upon those nocs. The present success of all religion hangs upon more noes. If no does not become the most revered word within the church, the church will fail in accomplishing its mission.

No must be said to Modernism, proclamations of a Marxism to be perfected by religious leaders, agnosticism, and the new ebullient atheism. In no other fashion will the old, true doctrines of the church be held untinged for serving God.

Why I Want to Be Baptized

I want to be baptized, not for appearance's sake nor for anybody's else sake. I want to be baptized so that I will be in Jesus Christ. I know that Jesus Christ is the only source of life and redemption from sin and death, that the resurrection of the dead is my only hope of life beyond the grave.

I want to follow Jesus Christ and be baptized as He was. It would help me not to do anything that would be a sin.

I want to be baptized so I may be with Jesus Christ when He returns.

We must have faith. To be effective, it must be accompanied by repentance from sin and a union with Christ in baptism.

I believe that there is one God. I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God; that He died for our sins, was buried, and rose from the dead.

I want to be baptized so I can better my own life and also help other people better theirs.—Esther Burke, South Bend, Indiana.

Above is presented the first of three short articles submitted by Mrs. Lois Hunt, former editor of the Children's Page of this paper, from among the essays written on the subject by the intermediates of the South Bend church. The three authors, all girls, were baptized last summer. None of them knew her work was being sent in for publication. Next week will appear an article by Virginia Marie Burke, 9.

Seizing Opportunity

The chief trouble with many teachers, both religious and secular, is that they fail to seize the opportunities that are presented them. Through negligence or failure to recognize their chance, they succeed lamentably in accomplishing nothing.

The Sunday school, Bible class, or Berean lesson should be considered merely as an outline. It should be compared with other outlines, contrasted with other books, other opinions, other Bible references. The mere fact that an opinion appears in the quarterly, Berean book, or other publication does not make it gospel truth.

Apply one Berean lesson to another. Search through old Berean books and new ones to find material for teaching the lesson at hand. Delve into newspapers, magazines, and books with the same view. It pays.

KEEPING OUR ABSENT LORD IN MEMORY

HOW many of you have presents that some one who has gone away has given you? "Keepsakes," you call them, because you keep them for the sake of the one who gave them to you.

Oh, yes, John has a pocket knife Uncle Fred gave him before he went to California to live. Betty has a doll that Grandma gave her. It used to be Grandma's doll. Billy has a watch that Father had when he was a boy. And Barbara has a book that Aunt Barbara enjoyed so much when she was a little girl just like you.

You all think very much of these "keepsakes." You wouldn't for the world lose them or destroy them. You even think more of them than you do of some of your new presents. Why? Because you love the ones who gave them to you and want to remember them always. Run quickly to the box where you keep them and see if they are safe.

Do you know, Jesus left a "keepsake" for all those who love Him and want to follow Him? It doesn't belong to just one person, as your "keepsake" does. But it's for everyone who understands about Jesus, believes what He taught, and has obeyed Him by being baptized.

This "keepsake" Jesus left is the Communion or, as we call it, the Lord's Supper. He asked His disciples, as often as they ate the bread and drank the wine, to think of Him. They were to keep it in remembrance of Him, just as He had shown them on that last night before the soldiers came and took Him away.

You know, Jesus had twelve friends whom He loved very dearly. One of them, we are sorry to say, proved to be false. So there were only eleven who loved Jesus truly. He asked two of them to go to Jerusalem and get ready for their last meal together.

And in the strangest way they were to find a room in which they could eat their supper. They would meet a man, Jesus told them, carrying a pitcher of water. They were to follow him, and go into the same house that he entered.

Then they were to say to the owner of the house, "The Master saith, Where is the guestchamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?" And the man would show them a large room upstairs, all furnished and clean and ready.

Isn't it strange how Jesus knew about this room? How did He know the owner would be glad to invite Him and His friends there to eat? It was something like the time they found the colt for Jesus to ride into Jerusalem. Remember?

Well, the two disciples went into the city, found the man with the pitcher of water, and followed him as Jesus told them to do. Then they were welcomed into this man's house, and they prepared the last supper for them to cat with their beloved Master. If you had been the owner of the house, wouldn't you have been proud to have Jesus as your Guest that day?

When they finished supper, Jesus took a piece of bread, gave thanks to God for it, broke it in pieces, and passed it to them. He told them all to take a piece, for it represented His-body. Then He took the cup, gave thanks to God for it, and told them all to drink of it. It represented His blood.

You see, Jesus knew He was soon to die on the cross for them. That way His body was broken and His blood shed. He didn't want His disciples to forget Him after He was gone. And each time they "kept" this supper, it would be for His "sake." They would think of His great love for them and they would love Him in return.

His "disciples" means us, too. Because He told them they were to eat the "Lord's Supper" until He came back again. So everyone who has obeyed Jesus is one of His disciples, and wants to keep Him in memory until His return, which we believe is soon.

Now when you see your parents and all the older ones taking part in the Communion you will understand what it is. You will decide that as soon as you are older and know what Jesus taught about baptism, you will obey Him. Then you will be one of His disciples, and you will "keep" the Communion with the others for His "sake," until He comes back again. It will be your "keepsake" from Jesus.

Every time you take it, you will ask God to cleanse your heart from everything that is wrong, and fill your heart with love, just as Jesus' heart was. You will try each day that you live to be worthy of eating the "Lord's Supper" with Him when He returns.

How are you getting along with your posters? Everyone who is making one, please write me a card and tell me. There are only two more letters after this one. Your letter this week is another I. Look at John 13:17.

The Sunday School Lesson FROM TRUTH SEEKERS' QUARTERLY

LESSON 11. — December 16, 1934

THE CHRISTIAN AND THE LORD'S SUPPER

1 Corinthians 11:23-34

Devotional Reading: Matthew 26:20-28

GOLDEN TEXT

For as often as ye cat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come.—1 Corinthians 11:26.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian and the Lord's Supper.

Aim: The Lord's Supper is a sacred reminder of the sacrificial death of Christ and an assurance of His second coming.

Basic Truth: "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, . but with the precious blood of Christ."-

1 Pet. 1:18, 19.

I. The Sacred Purpose of the Lord's Sup-(1 Cor. 11:23-26.) Instituted by our Lord in the hour of His betrayal, the Lord's Supper takes on a depth of sacred meaning that is most impressive. The purpose of the service is simply stated: "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." Nothing miraculous follows its observance; yet when it is done in the right spirit, with appreciation of its rich typical meaning, it helps to keep the believer in a constant state of spiritual watchfulness. Only those who know themselves to be mortal and wholly dependent upon Christ and His coming for future life can grasp the full blessedness and glory of this service.

II. Preparation for Partaking of the Lord's Supper. (Vv. 27-30.) Every approach that men make to God must be preceded by spiritual preparation. This was true under the Mosaic order; it remains true under the dispensation of Christ. Faith and repentance must precede baptism (Acts 2:38); repentance must precede prayer (Acts 8:22); and searching self-examination should precede the observation of the Lord's Supper. When this has been done, and the worshiper has sought fergiveness, then he is at liberty to approach this solemn service without fear, looking forward to an uplifting spiritual season with the Lord, and to a riper and more satisfying fellowship with His people.

III. The Blessings That Follow the Lord's Supper. (Vv. 31-34.) When entered into in the devout and thoughtful manner suggested by Paul, the observance of the Communion service_results in much good to the participant. It not only serves to keep fresh in his mind the fact that an adequate price has been paid for his redemption from sin and that the Lord is coming to complete the work of salvation begun in His death, but it also acts as a constant stimulant to heart righteousness.

GOLDEN TEXT

"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come,"-1 Cor. 11:26.

Christ and the twelve were in the upper room when He instituted the Communion service, which is also called the "Lord's Sup-Though Judas was with them at this supper, it was only a short time after that when he betrayed his Master. Christ did not tell them when or how often they should observe this service, but did tell them, "This do in remembrance of me" (Luke 22:19).

Acts 20:7 speaks of the disciples coming together on the first day of the week to break bread, but says nothing about doing it each first day of the week. Our text says, "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death." The Communion is a very sacred service and should bring to mind the Lord's suffering and death; also, remind the partakers that He will come again. -L, A, R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Lord's Supper

-was never instituted for the world; should be eaten only when we are free from sin:

-points toward the return of Christ; -is oftentimes desecrated:

stimulates Christian faith and practice.

Examination. The sacredness and the seriousness of the Lord's Supper require that we examine ourselves, to wit, whether we are worthy to partake of the supper, for he that eateth or drinketh unworthily is guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. Such self-examinations are very profitable if conducted in a sincere manner. Not only should such inventory be taken of self at the Communion table, but stock should be taken of ourselves daily to see whether we be in the faith or not. "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves."—2 Cor. 13:5. People are very prone to examine others, but so often fail to pass examination of self. If we would keep ourselves under strict surveillance and scrutiny there would be little time or desire to inspect our neighbor or friend. This thought is vividly set forth in the Master's statement in Matthew 7:1-3.

Chastened. If we would inspect our lives in the light of God's Word and when they are found to be out of harmony make the necessary corrections, it would save us much of the chastening that we undergo, which is necessary in order to save us from being condemned with the world. Chastening always comes as the result of disobedience. The way of the transgressor is hard, whether he be a little one or a violent offender. The wage of sin is always sorrow, hardship, and many other attendant evils. To avoid this passage submit self to thorough biblical examination and be governed according to the findings .-- C. E. R.

Realizing Christ's Presence in the Supper

As the Passover that was to be distinguished in all future history as the one marked by the crucifixion of our Lord drew near, Jews assembled from all parts of the Roman world, and, heaving of the wonder-worker of Galilee, began to ask, "What think ye, that he will not come to the feast?"-John 11:56.

That is a question that we might well ask as we look forward to the weekly, monthly, or annual gatherings we hold for the celebration of the Lord's Supper. Will Jesus, the origin ator of the service, be present at the table?

To make His presence felt among us, that He, once dead, is alive again for evermore, is the chief end of this solemn service. On the very night of His betrayal as He looked fearlessly forward to the cross, Jesus established this memorial of His death for man.

In that broken bread we hold within our hands do we see the body of our Lord, broken for us upon the tree? In the crimson cup do we visualize the lifeblood flowing from His spear-pierced side? Do our hearts burn appreciatively within us as we hear His compassionate prayer, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"? Are we moved with tender pity at that moment of spiritual abandonment as Hc cries, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

In short, does the Communion of which we partake bring vividly before us the scene on Calvary, so that we are made to see and to feel and to grasp something of the reality and the glory of the sacrifice and victory ac complished there till He comes?-G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

There is one story of Jesus that none of us like to tell very well. It is very sad. It is the story about Jesus being nailed to the cross and how He died there. Of course, we are glad to tell that He remained dead only such a short time. I would like some one to tell this story. We know Jesus is now in heaven and will never die again.

Just before Jesus died He asked His disciples to do something after He was gone. This is what He did. (Teacher tells story as found in 1 Corinthians 11:23-34.)

Jesus wanted all to do this to remember about His death. So today we see people having "Communion," as we sometimes call it. You have all seen it, I am sure.

We will now take our scissors and cut out a cross. Paste it at the top of a sheet of paper. Cut out a picture of Jesus with arms outstretched to fit on the cross. Paste it on eross.

Below the cross and on one side paste a picture of plate with small piece of bread on it. Under it write: "Take, eat: this is my body." At the other side, cut and paste a glass, colored red. Under it write: "This cup is the new testament in my blood." (Explain that bread is body, cup is blood, in symbol.)

Draw line from plate to cross and from cup to cross. This will help us to remember why all Christian people do this.

Learn, "This do in remembrance of me." ---V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

THE CHRISTMAS HERALD

One of the most attractive issues of The Restitution Herald we have ever produced is now in preparation for our Christmas number. In addition to the usual sixteen pages of reading matter it will be provided with a cover printed in two colors and further brightened by illustrations especially secured for this issue.

Some of our best known writers have been asked to contribute special articles pertaining not only to the birth of Jesus but to His future work as King of kings.

Copies will be mailed to any address for five cents cach. Why not make out a nice long list of friends and have the Christmas Herald sent to them in place of the customary greeting cards? We feel sure they will appreciate your thoughtfulness.

Or, better still, make them a Christmas

Or, better still, make them a Christmas year's subscription; it would cost you only one dollar and fifty cents, and would remind your dear ones of you every week of the new year! Let us hear from you soon.

A THANKFUL THANKSGIVING AT GRAND RAPIDS CHURCH

While the morning darkness still hung over the South Lawn district on Thanksgiving morning the little white church at the corner of Jefferson and Abbie Streets shone out with brightness and warmth, calling in a goodly attendance of members and friends who gathered at the early hour to give thanks in a quiet, humble way to their loving Father. With tender words did they join in the service—yes, even with tears.

Then to make the day complete as a Thanksgiving Day for the church four splendid persons were baptized at the conclusion of the service. What a happy occasion it was!

We take pleasure now in presenting to the brotherhood the following new members of our family here: Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Lussenden, 122 Bershire Blvd., S. E.; Mrs. Mabel Alger, 3466 Reiser St., S. W.; and Miss Nettic Helderop, 3418 Division, S. E. All of these have been attending and working with our group for approximately a year as they earned the gospel message, and they are of a caliber and type that promise much of helpfulness and strength for the years to come. May God bless them and us in our labors together.

Sr. Ruth Townsend has been confined to her bed for several days as these lines are written, and many prayers are rising for her speedy recovery. Another cloud of sorrow just now is the illness of our aged and beloved Sr. Skeels. Earnestly do we pray for her welfare.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

NEW FIELD AT OAK PARK, MINNESOTA

We have enjoyed some real good meetings the past five months by Bro. A. E. Hoskins of St. Cloud. On July I, at Sr. Denison's, was held the first meeting; a good crowd came out that day. Again we met in two weeks at the home of Bro. and Sr. Carlson at Oak Park, and also the 12th of August at their home. On September 30 was a meeting at Bro. Henry Ryberg's home in Glendorado, and November 4 at Bro. and Sr. John Philo's in Oak Park.

These meetings surely have been a wonderful help to the community. It has been several years since we have been able to have services. Bro. Hoskins surely brought out many wonderful scriptures to prove that the end is not far off. So we are praying that we may keep on with these meetings, that soon we may be a big family out here.

At this time there are only five families that are of the Church of God.

Clara Stowe, Secretary.

EFFECTIVE HOME DEPARTMENT IN LOS ANGELES

The Los Angeles Sunday school has become so affluent through the contributions of the Home Department that they have decided to purchase fifty new hymnals. Time was taken out of the Sunday school and church services on November 25 in order to make the selection from samples secured at the local stores. Many individuals decided to purchase their own books besides. The Sunday school and church appreciate the efforts of its Home Department Secretary, Sr. Bettie Blackwell, and the gifts of its members. The Home Department has been functioning a comparatively short time, and yet sufficient funds have been secured thereby for this worthy enterprise. Another thing which has almost doubled our Sunday school funds at times is the birthday offering, which was instituted less than a year ago when Bro. Rahn was reelected to the office of Sunday school Superintendent.

Arrangements are under way and our minds being prepared for the special services of the next Quarterly Conference, which will be held the second Sunday of January, the 13th.

We were pleased to see the Reids and Gillespies from Pasadena at services for the special Thanksgiving Day program. They do not often get to attend these days. In spite of several absences from among our usual attendants a good crowd was present to render especial thanks to the Father for His goodness to us in these times of depression.

Sr. Grace Adamson, wife of J. Edgar Adamson, of Pomona, was rushed to the hospital on Saturday afternoon (November 24) and underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis. The appendix had ruptured and the infection had spread upward to involve her lung. Though her condition is serious, she seems to be progressing quite well. Our prayers to the Pather ascend for her speedy recovery.

WATCH FOR THEM, CHILDREN

Jimmie and John, dearly loved twins of the Children's Page, will be back with you in The Restitution Herald in a Christmas story that you will all want to read. If you have missed these fun-loving, but brave and tenderhearted boys, be sure to meet them again in our December 18 issue.

J. II. Anderson, Indiana Evangelist.

"Received November 20 issue of Herald today and think it filled with very good articles." So pencils A. G. Townsend, Grand Rapids, Mich. "May we have many more like it." Thank you. But the Thanksgiving number was the skimpiest foretaste of what we hope to have as a Christmas edition.

THANKSGIVING AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Not knowing how the idea would be received, it was suggested that we have a special praise service Thanksgiving morning. Everyone was enthusiastic and now it is history. At 9 o'clock Thanksgiving morning we gathered to offer our tribute of praise. No special program had been planned but each one gave a thought, a portion of Scripture, a song, or a poem to express his thanks to our heavenly Father.

Some things for which we were thanknl—A Savior who forgives our sins; freedom to worship God; for home and children and health; for food, shelter, and clothing; that God makes all things work together for good to them that love the Lord; for the promise, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee"; that His merey endureth forever; for the hope to be in the New Jerusalem where God shall wipe away all tears, and there shale be no more death or pain, for the former things have passed away; for the joy that comes to the Christian heart; and a number of others too numerous to mention.

A small clipping was read concerning the condition of the farmers in northern Japan. Sixty per cent of their income goes for taxes and some had to sell their girls into slavery for $300 or less to buy food and pay taxes.

Thanksgiving Day! Yes, but may we who live in the good old U. S. A. make every day a time of continual praise to Him who has opened the windows of heaven and poured out countless blessings upon us. Truly, we are thankful at Ripley.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Sr. Lilian S. Railton of Fonthill, Ont., who is a continually engaged in responding to the calls of the suffering, is now at the bedside of her sister in Toronto, who is suffering from a general breakdown which is aggravated by a heart ailment.

As we go to press we are expecting any moment to receive important news concerning the final settlement with the receivers of the Oregon State Savings Bank. The matter is set to come before the court for action this (Monday) morning.

Owing to the heavy snows in Iowa, Bro. T. J. Ellis of Waterloo, Treasurer of the National Bible Institution, was unable to reach Oregon to be present at the monthly meeting of the Executive Board, which was held Monday afternoon.

Sr. A. M. Lobell, Hammond, La., writes interestingly of the new Blood River district church which the Church of God hopes to occupy by January 1. It is constructed of logs, and is now well on the way to completion. It should provide our faithful congregation with a very attractive and unique house of worship. Sr. Lohell is teacher of a primary class in the Blood River Sunday school.

We rejoice with Grand Rapids in their splendid Thanksgiving service which was marked by the haptism of four persons. May God bless and keep them till Jesus comes.

Particular attention is called to the stirring article by Norman John MucLeod which appears on the front page of this issue. Communism, which, as the author says, is "revived Socialism in a militantly fanatical form," is the greatest danger that faces roligion today. Socialism will have no part in the kingdom of God, which is to be an absolute theoremy, the exact opposite of Communism. Isniah declares positively that private ownership will continue throughout the age of glory which Christ is to usher in.

We are authorized agents for the New Analytical Bible and the Indexed Bible, two of the best helps for religious students yet devised. Complete information regarding either or both books will be furnished on request.

Next week's issue will contain an article by John Thomas, M. D., editor of the Church of God paper Herald of the Kingdom and Age to Come during the middle of the last century, and founder of the Christadelphian denomination.

Pastor Norman John MacLeod of Los Angeles will take as his theme on Sunday, Dec-16, these words, found in Ezckiel 36:22, "For Mine Holy Name's Sake." God will vindicate His righteousness in His action toward Israel in the near future.

A brother of the Middle West sends a generous contribution and says, "Been feeling sorry for myself, but when I read the letter from South Dakota, I decided that after all we are 'sitting pretty'!" Several have expressed the same feeling after reading that letter.

Contributions have reached us for the benefit of the needy which have been distributed where want seemed to be the greatest. May God bless the donors of these gifts.

"The Giving of the Law" on page 16 of this issue is an article you will not want to toverlook. It is by Evangelist J. H. Anderson, and like all of Bro. Anderson's writings and preaching, contains a wealth of biblical evidence and interesting exposition. The author's next article in this series will be in answer to this question: "Why did God select the mountain top so many times when He had some great event to bring about?" Watch for it in our next issue.

"Bro. Hoskins is giving us fine sermons and is well liked personally in our community," writes Sr. M. J. Osborn concerning the special meetings now in progress at Burr Oak, Indiana.

Last Sunday evening the pastor of the church at Oregon, Ill., spoke of the religious tendencies of the age under the title, "Belshazar Up-to-Date." Next Sunday he will begin a new series of studies, the first of which will be "God in the Lives of Men."

The Maurertown, Va., Church of God Sunday school still devotes one offering a month to the N. B. I. Contributions from such organizations and individuals are the lifeblood of an institution such as this, which operates necessarily at a tremendous loss each year except for the donations it receives. We deeply appreciate the efforts of those who aid us.

Another order has just reached us for additional copies of the paper containing the article entitled, "Boot Hill." This was the second order from the same correspondent for this paper. Our supply was entirely exhausted shortly after the article named appeared.

The Emphatic Diaglott, described by J. G. Haupt in his article in this issue, is sold by the National Bible Institution in a beautifully bound, thin Bible paper edition at $2.50 a copy. Send your order today, and give one or more copies as Christmas presents.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by National Bible Institution Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

GOD'S TWO GREAT WITNESSES

One of the most interesting tracts that has reached us in many months has just come from the press under the title, "God's Two Great Witnesses, or, The Bible and Nature in Harmony." It is the work of J. H. Anderson, who presents conclusive evidence based on the universal testimony of the Bible and nature of the truth of God's Word.

"To understand the testimony of nature," the author declares, "one must find the key

"To understand the testimony of nature," the author declares, "one must find the key furnished by the Bible that will give the meaning of nature's voice." He then draws a striking analogy from nature of the harmony and heauty of the purposes of God in redemption as they are revealed in the Bible.

The covenants, the nature and destiny of man, and the coming of the Lord as taught in the Scriptures are taken up in sequence and discussed in an able and convincing manner. Do not fail to send to the author for a supply of these tracts to give to high school and college students. The price is ten cents each. Address all orders to J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Ind.

The Giving of the Law

By J. H. Anderson

"TOR the law having a shadow of good things to come."—Heb. 10:1. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come."—Col. 2:16, 17. "Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things."

Christ the Sun shining on the kingdom, good things to come, threw the shadow of it back on the law. So by looking at the law, a schoolmaster, we can see the shadow of the kingdom in which God's people will see and enjoy the good things that God has prepared for them that love Him. Jsa. 25:6-10; Gal. 3:24; 1 Cor. 2:9-12. As the law foreshadowed the kingdom, it follows that the giving of the law points to the setting up of the kingdom, the bringing in of the good things that God has prepared for them that love Him.

When God commissioned Moses to lead Israel out of Egypt to the Promised Land, He said to Moses: "Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain."—Ex. 3:12. "Now all these things happened unto them for types (marg.): and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."—I Cor. 10:11.

The mountain of God on which Moses stood when God appeared to him in the burning bush was a type of the mountain of God, the kingdom of God that shall fill the whole earth in the future (Dan. 2:35; 7:27). Moses was a type of our great leader, Jesus Christ (Deut. 18:15-19; Acts 3:19-25). "And he said, Certainty I will be with thee; and this shall be a token (a sign) unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain." The final proof that God has been with His people and has led them always will be given when they serve Him in His great mountain, the kingdom. Then they shall say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."—Isa. 25:9.

God told the children of Israel that He would lead them to a land flowing with milk and honey (Ex. 3:17). Now He promises to bring us into the kingdom, where we may have all good things (Isa. 25:6-9; Luke 12:32; Psa. 84:11). Of the vast host that left Egypt above the age of 20 only two were permitted to enter the Holy Land (Ex. 12:37; Num. 1:1-3; 14:26-35). Not all that start in the race will be successful, only those that endure unto the end (Matt. 22:1-14; 10:22).

When Israel reached the mount, God commanded Moses to come alone to the top of the mount to receive the law that would make Israel a kingdom of priests, a royal nation (Ex. 24:1, 2; 19:5, 6). Israel was commanded to remain at the base of the mount until the trumpet sounded; then they could come up to the mount (Ex. 19:7-25). Christ, the Nobleman, only could go into heaven to receive the kingdom (Luke 19:12-15; John 13:33). When the trumpet sounds God's people will come into the kingdom (1 Cor. 15:50-52; 1 Thess. 4:13-18). The cloud settled around the base of the mount to keep the children of Israel from following Moses (Ex. 19:12-16, 23). God goes before us in a cloud of witnesses, the writers of the Bible, and shows us that we cannot follow our great leader, Christ, into heaven, but must wait until the sound of the trumpet to come into our future home, the kingdom, where we shall enjoy the good things to come (Heb. 12:1, 2; John 13:33; 1 Thess. 4:13-18; 1:10).

Moses leaves the camps of Israel and goes up to the top of the mount and six days of silence pass by and God does not speak; then comes the seventh day, and we read: "And Moses went up into the mount, and a cloud covered the mount. And the glory of the Lord abode upon mount Sinai, and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud."—Ex. 24:15, 16. (See 1 Corinthians 10:11.)

In speaking of the coming of Christ Peter uses these words: "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."—2 Peter 3:8. God worked six days and rested on the seventh from all His work. He commanded Israel to work six days, rest the seventh; work six years, rest the seventh; and seven of these yearly cycles, and the great Jubile came in and freed all Jewish servants, restored to them their former possessions (Gen. 2:1-3; Ex. 20:8-11; Lev. 25:1-14).

"Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ."—Col., 2:16, 17. The world will labor under the curse for six days, each a thousand years; then will come the great sabbath day of rest from the curse when God's people will rest from the curse and enjoy the good things of the kingdom (Heb. 4:1-9, marg.).

To carry out the type, God waited until the seventh day to give the law, thus showing that in the seventh day, the perfect day, the law shall go forth out of Zion and the word from Jerusalem and the nations will be taught God's way (Isa. 2:1-4; Matt. 25:31-34). In Acts 17:31 we learn that God has selected a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by Christ. In Isaiah 26:9 we are taught that when God's judgments are in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness. Then we can enjoy the blessings of God.

KINGDOM

By John Thomas, M. D.

THE word kingdom, in the Greek basileia, is of very common occurrence in the scriptures of the prophets and apostles. In the English tongue, it is derived from the two words king and dominion, which when joined together, with the syllables inion cut off, make kingdom. The radical idea of the word is therefore king's dominion, or a dominion of a king. Kingdom has a plurality of significations in our language, and is not restricted to the idea of authority or jurisdiction. It is sometimes used to signify the territory or country subject to a king, undivided by the interposition of other countries. This is the kingdom proper, or "the first dominion." At other times it is used to signify the inhabitants of the country, or population subject to a king. This diversity of signification comes from the word dominion, which imports "territory under a government; region; country; district governed, or within the limits of the authority of a prince or state. Government; right of governing. Persons governed." There may be many countries under the jurisdiction of one and the same king. The plural is then used, and they are styled the king's dominions, of which all that are situated beyond the kingdom proper constitute the empire or second dominion. This distinction is observed in the prophets as appears from the testimony, "I will make . . . (Israel) that was east far off a strong nation; and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion Irom henceforth, even for ever. And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem."-Micah 4:7, 8. The first dominion, then, and the kingdom are the same; but that there is dominion beyond "the first" is also apparent from another testimony which speaks both of kingdom and dominion. Thus, the Prophet says, "There was given to one like the Son of man dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, and nations, and languages should serve him." Queen Victoria has a first and secondary dominion. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is the first dominion; while India, British America, the West Indies, etc., constitute the second. So it will be when the kingdom comes to Jerusalem; the kingdom of Israel then existing on the land of Israel will be the King of Israel's first dominion; while all other nations and countries will be His secondary possession; "for the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee, O Zion, shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted."

The word kingdom is not a full translation of basileia; for while it signifies a kingdom, realm, that is, the region or country governed by a king; kingly power, authority, dominion, reign; it also signifies royal dignity, majesty, and the title and honor of a king. In short basileia imports basileos ta, the things of a basileus or king. It is in this way it is used in the Scriptures.

A king's personalia are all expressed by basileia. Hence it stands for the king's majesty in which he shall appear when he comes in power and great glory, as expressed in these words-"Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom (basileia)."-Matt. 16: 28. This majesty in the preceding verse is called "the glory of the Father," in which the Son of man shall come accompanied with the angels, and at which time He will reward every man according to his works. The passage might be more intelligibly and quite as correctly rendered, "Who shall not taste of death until that they shall behold the Son of man making his appearance (erchomenon) in his majesty." In some manuscripts basileia is displaced by the word doxe, that is, visible glory, splender, brightness, dazzling light, or majesty. The persons to be thus favored were Peter, James, and John, who six days after Jesus spoke the words, became evewitnesses of the basileia or doxe with which He will be invested when He confounds the moon and puts the sun to shame at His appearing in His kingdom (Isa. 24:23). In hearing testimony to this Peter says for himself and brethren, "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excel- (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Churches Study New Calendar

"Time and times and the dividing of times."—Daniel 7:25,

DAYTON, Ohio, Dec. 4 .- The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which officially opened its sessions here this morning, has among the matters which will come before it for consideration that of reforming the church calendar to conform with the new international system of time being advocated by the League of Nations. If adopted, this will mean that Easter will always fall on the same date, April 8, and other religious festivals the same way. In the past when calendar reform has been suggested the formalistic churches have objected on account of the fact that the changes introduced would confuse religious observances, but now, according to Dr. S. Park Cadman, chairman of this department, "for the first time in modern history all the churches of the world actually have been consulted on a specific question and replies are now in hand which seem likely to lead the League of Nations to proceed with its plans."

Even the Vatican has signified its willingness to cooperate in the matter, as is also the case with the Greek Orthodox Catholic Church. It will be recalled that the world is now under a calendar which came into effect as the result of a bull issued by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582, when by papal decree he established the present system of "time keeping," known from him as the "Gregorian Calendar."

Warning to Protestantism

"Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing."—Paul.

Mexico City, Dec. 1.—Since Gen. Cortes in 1519, accompanied by a number of militant missionary priests, marched with his little force into the heart of Mexico and brought the entire country under tribute to Spain, the Roman Catholic Church has played a dominant part in the political as well as in the ecclesiastical development of the country. In 1810 a country priest named Hidalgo stirred up the ignorant, downtrodden masses to attempt the overthrow of their tyrranous Spanish overlords, and after long and bloody warfare the independence of Mexico was achieved. But almost immediately the country was divided into two political groups, the one under clerical or Roman Catholic leadership, and the other controlled by anti-Catholic and anti-religious influences. The struggle between these two factions has continued to rage ever since, and is again bursting into open flame. But the church is rapidly losing its power, its property, and its influence over the people, who are forsaking all religion, except the political religion of Socialism.

Socialism, with its inevitable anti-religious attitude, is now in power in Mexico, and under its new President is sweeping the country free from all organized religious activity, and substituting in its place the rankest form of atheism. "The hour is considered one of peril to the whole of Christianity, harassed as it has been by conflicting ideals and isms since the welter of spiritual despair which followed the World War." In two states every church of every kind has been closed, all church property confiscated by the Government, and even private homes where small services are held are being taken over by the State.

Moslems Turn Toward Turkey

"To gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."—Revelation 16:14.

London, England, Dec. 3.—One of the most remarkable migrations of modern times is said to be in progress in Southeastern Europe at the present time, where some seven million Moslems are seeking to make their way into Turkey from Greece, Bulgaria, and other nearby countries. Students of history look upon it as the "ebb tide in the twentieth century of a flow that took place in the fifteenth century when the Turks, with fire and sword, poured into Western Europe and changed its history. In the eyes of many Europeans the present pacific emigration from Western Europe may in the near or remote future have an important effect on the destiny of mankind."

In this way do worldly observers comment upon the development and progress of vital prophetic meaning, events which God has long foreseen and caused to be written down in His infallible Word! The Jews are not the only race who must be restored to their original territory before the Lord comes. Students of the Bible have long expected a regathering and a reestablishment in their former countries of many other races who have migrated to the west and north in the historic past. The "Bible lands" must be again occupied by the descendants of their former inhabitants before the great day of the Lord comes and the nations are brought before the Judge for punishment or reward.

"O Come, Let Us Adore Him"

A CHRISTMAS WORSHIP SERVICE

By Esta L. Starbuck

OUR Berean Christmas service last year was so well received that we are passing it along to others who might like to make use of it this year.

The following is a detailed outline of our program. (All of the songs were sung by the congregation unless otherwise stated, and all of the Scripture verses were read by the leader.)

Voluntary—Any good Christmas number.

Opening remarks, announcements regarding the program, order of service, etc., and leading up to the following Scripture:

Isaiah 9:6, 7.

"Silent Night" (three verses).

Prayer.

Luke 2:1-7.

"Luther's Cradle Hymn" (solo by child or young person).

Luke 2:8-11.

"While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks" (first two verses).

"It came Upon a Midnight Clear" (first verse).

Luke 2:13, 14.

"Hark the Herald Angels Sing" (first verse).

Luke 2:15, 16.

"Oh, Come All Ye Faithful" (first verse).

Matthew 2:1, 2, 7-10. (Read to piano accompaniment of "Star of the East" and finish selection as piano or vocal solo.)

Matthew 2:11.

"We Three Kings" (first verse).

Matthew 2:3-6.

"O Little Town of Bethlehem" (four verses).

Comments regarding the birth of Christ, bringing in His second advent and leading up to the following song:

"Joy to the World" (four verses).

"His Christmas Trees" (a reverie on Christmas Eve by G. O. Herbert in The New Century Leader, December, 1933; read by leader).

Comments regarding Christ's second advent and leading up to the following song:

"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" (first and sixth

Benediction ("We Thank Thee, Lord," by G. E. Marsh in The Restitution Herald of December 19, 1933, given by leader).

Now for a few suggestions regarding the working out of the service.

We had only two books containing these Christmas songs, but as there was only a small number in our Berean class we made a sufficient number of copies on a typewriter, using earbon paper and very thin stationery. A duplicator or mimeograph machine could be used for this purpose; or leaflets containing most of these songs can be purchased from the Rodeheaver Company for very little. If none of these methods is available, we suggest you use only the first verse of each song, as nearly everyone will know the first verse, and especially so if there are school children in your group. All the songs, with the exception of the last one, are to be found in The Golden Book of Favorite Songs, and also in The Gray Book of Favorite Songs. These books are used in many of the public schools, or they can be secured from Hall & McCreary Company, Chicago, for 20 cents each. "Luther's Cradle Hymn" is found in these books; however, we used the one with the music by Martin Luther, as we liked that melody much better. It is found in Hymns of Praise, published by the Hope Publishing Company, Chicago.

This service could be worked out with a quartet or choir singing the songs, but we believe it will be more effective to have everyone take part in singing them. "Specials" can be used for some of the songs that are not so well known.

Have your program written out just as it is to be given, with the page numbers written opposite songs, etc., and have a copy for the pianist so she will be able to tell just what is coming next. Be sure to rehearse the program at least once with your pianist so she will be thoroughly familiar with it. Do not announce the songs after the scriptures, but have your pianist begin the introduction immediately after the Scripture reading is finished. Have the instrumental introduction to the songs just as brief as possible.

If you use song books in the congregation it will be better to have the numbers and verses listed on a hymn board or blackboard so that it will not be necessary to announce the numbers each time, as that causes confusion and greatly detracts from the worshipfulness of the service. Make all necessary announcements and explanations of the program and order of service at the beginning of the service.

This program can be altered in many ways to suit your convenience. A short talk or sermonette can be used in place of the reading, "His Christmas Trees." But if you do not have anyone in your group who can give a talk, we know of nothing better than this selection. Whether you use this service or not you should obtain a copy of this article, if possible, and read it—read it aloud to get the most out of it. It is beautiful. (Please turn to Page Nine)

The Mountain As a Type

Bu J. H. Anderson

GOR whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope."-Rom. 15:4. "Now all these things happened unto them for types (marg.): and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."-1 Cor. 10:11. Then God selected the mountain on which to give in type a lesson for us. Can we find the antitype and thus get the lesson?

Why did God select the mountain top so many times when He had some great event to bring about? is the question asked and answered in this, the third article of a series by the state evangelist of Indiana.

"Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."-Dan. 2:35.

The great outstanding subject of the Bible is the kingdom of God. All through that Book God directs the attention of His people to the kingdom. So in giving the types, pointing to the kingdom, He selected the mountain, thus showing His people that the antitype would connect with the kingdom.

After the flood the ark rested on mountains of Ararat and from those mountains the race made a new start (Gen. 8:4). In the first resurrection God's people will make a new start in the mount of God, the kingdom (Isa. 25:6-10).

Isaac is a type of Christ, the King of the kingdom of God (Gen. 21:12; Gal. 3:16). "And he said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of."-Gen. 22:2. This offering on Mount Moriali points to the offering of the Lamb of God upon the cross, the foundation of the kingdom, God's great mount (John 1:29; 1 Peter 1:18, 19).

Moses stands as one of the great figures or types of Christ (Deut. 18:15-18; Acts 3:22-26). When God was ready to lead Israel out of Egypt to the Land of Promise (this journey is a type of our journey to the kingdom: 1 Cor. 10:1-13), He led Moses to the mount of God, to the backside of the desert, and commissioned him to deliver Israel, and then spoke these words to him: "And he said, Certainly I will be with thee; and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee: When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain."-Ex. 3:1, 12. When Christ leads His people out of the bondage of sin and corruption into the glorious liberty of the kingdom, He and they will serve God in the mount that shall fill the whole earth and then they will know that God has been with them in all their trials (Isa. 40:10; Rom. 8:18-24; 1 Cor. 13:12).

When the mount was reached by Moses and Israel on their journey God said to Moses, "You alone can come upon the mount, but Israel must wait at the base of the mount until the trumpet sounds, then they may come up to the mount" (Ex. 24:1-3; 19: 10-17). Christ alone could go into heaven before the trumpet sounds (John 3:13; 13:33). When that trumpet sounds God's people, made like Christ, will come into the mount (1 Thess. 4:13-18; Matt. 25:31-34; 1 John 3:1-3). When Moses came down from the presence of God his face shone as the sun (Ex. 34:28-35); true of God's children in the mount. "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father."--Matt. 13:43.

In every age God's people have had a desire to know Him; and it is eternal life to know Him and His Son (John 17:3; Matt. 13:17). In Exodus 33:13, 18 Moses prayed that he might see the glory of the great God. God pointed out to him that if he would take his stand on a rock on the mount he might see the back parts of the Almighty, but that His face could not be seen. Moses did so, and saw the back parts and heard the wonderful message proclaimed by God (Ex. 33:12 to 34:8). Here in a type God shows that we must take our stand on the Rock and be with Him on the mount to see the God that we worship. We have learned that the mount is the kingdom. The rock is Christ (1 Cor. 10:1-4). The lesson is, we must be with Christ in the kingdom to see the Father and share in His glory (Rev. 21:1-7; 22:1-6).

Moses, having failed to sanctify God at the water (Reader, have we?), was not permitted to lead Israel into the Promised Land (Num. 20:7-13). So when they stood on the border of the Promised Land God took Moses to the top of a high mountain and showed him that wonderful land, and there he died and was buried by God (Deut. 34). Reader, in the mount we shall see the Father and all the good things that He has prepared for them that love Him (1 Cor. 2:9; Rev. 22:1-4). Then we shall be buried, covered in His love.

Ahab was the most wicked king that ever ruled Israel. Under his rule Israel went into idolatry and God punished them by bringing on a drought that lasted three and one half years (1 Kings 21:25; 17:1). At the end of this time Elijah challenged Ahab and the 850 false prophets to meet him in a test to see whether God or Baal should be worshiped. It was a test between God and Baal, Truth and

Then, being born of the Spirit in After his great victory Elijah left the mount and took the first resurrection, he will find himself in the mount to so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly Then God called him to Horeb, the mount of God, and into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus

Teaching the Bible to Children

QUALIFICATIONS OF A TEACHER

By Verna C. Thauer

THERE are two important questions that every Sunday school superintendent should ask his teachers in the children's department of the Sunday school.

The first one is, "Do you love children?" and the next "Do you enjoy teaching?"

Perhaps those may seem strange questions to you. You may say, "Why not ask them how much they know about the Bible?" I agree with you partially, but unless you can answer the first two questions in the affirmative I care not how much you know about the Bible, you cannot teach children successfully.

By the term "loving children" we want to use the deeper sense of the word "love." This definition of love seems to cover its true meaning: "Love is service so deep that self is forgotten." Now if we could have teachers who would love children in that manner what difference we would find in the majority of our Sunday schools. The disinterested child would be visited. He would be studied carefully to find out why he is disinterested. At the same time the teacher would, no doubt, find out how to interest him. The home of every child should be visited, and the teacher would be seeking information from every hand on how she could best be of service to her boys and girls, to their homes and their community. Yes, she would even be trying to find new pupils. She wouldn't stop seeking others even if her class was already too large.

You cannot fool children. They know whether you love them or not. How? By the little acts of kindness you show to them. And best of all, the true, simple love and trust which they will return to you cannot be described by words. Only those who truly love children can know what it is to be given this love in return.

At a Sunday school convention I once attended I heard the speaker talk on this subject: "How One Class Grew From Three to Fifty." This speaker was a teacher of a class of boys in one of our very large cities. His explanation of the growth was this: "You've got to make them believe that you had rather be right there in the classroom working with them than anywhere on earth. And," he continued, "you cannot make boys and girls believe it if you yourself do not feel that way."

Therefore, we must enjoy teaching to be successful teachers.

If one who loves children and enjoys teaching children undertakes the job here's what she'll do. She'll study her Bible thoroughly. She'll feel so responsible that she will study carefully so as not to lead these children in the wrong direction. She'll study methods and material. She'li search everywhere to find ways and means of presenting the Bible in an interesting way. Yes, she'll study her children. She'll work and she'll pray, and best of all she'll be a successful teacher of children.

May all teachers realize more and more their duty to the child and God.

Eternal Torment

By David L. Norrie

AM told that a gospel without eternal torment has no power in it to convert men, because mere death is not regarded by them as a punishment, and something more terrible is needed to frighten sinners. To all which I would say, in the first place, that the evangelist is not required to trouble himself about results. It is his work to lift up Christ crucified before men, and trust to Him to draw them (not drive them) to Himself. And in the second place it is a very small matter whether we think the punishment suitable or not. The question is not what we think, but what does God say. He has an absolute right to settle the fate of sinners, and if He says it is death, it is foolish, nay irreverent, to seek to explain away His plainly revealed word because of preconceived ideas of our own.

But is death no punishment! Why, in all ages human law-givers have recognized death as the severest of all penalties, so severe indeed that in some countries, such as Italy, it has been abolished in the name of "humanity," and imprisonment for life has taken its place as the penalty for murder. And with what result? In 1903, there were nearly a hundred thousand murders or woundings with intent in the Italian Peninsula and islands. That is, one in every thousand of the population was murdered or wounded with intent. The proportion of homicides in Italy is actually twenty-five times that of Britain, where the death penalty is still recognized by law. Some forty years ago there was a movement made in the British House of Commons to abolish capital punishment, when Sir George Bowyer, a Knight of Malta, who knew Italy well, made the following statement: "I will prove to you that the prison is not, while the scaffold is a deterrent. A Neapolitan, to my knowledge, wanted to kill his wife, but was afraid to do it in Naples, where the guillotine was still the penalty for such a crime. So he took her to Tuscany, where capital punishment had long been abolished, and killed her there." An Italian contributor to the Scotsman wrote recently that "the abolition of the gallows or the guillotine in Italy has deprived the law of its most effective deterrent." Yet when we proclaim that according to the Scriptures "the wages of sin is death," we are told for sooth by evangelists that death is no punishment! I very much question whether, after all, the objection is made seriously. For I have noted that the men that make it are themselves afraid of death, whenever it draws near to them. Through fear of death they are subject to bondage (see Hebrews 2:15). They would give all their wealth to escape it, and if they are saved by providential deliverance from sudden death, their gladness knows no bounds. Yet their theology teaches them that sudden death would have been to them sudden glory! And why then does their theology fail to support them in time of need? It is because their theology is false, and the Holy Spirit refuses to witness to it; for death, according to the Scriptures, is an enemy, not a friend. It is not the gate into life, but the gate out of it, and is therefore associated in the Bible with mourning and sorrow. It is true that sometimes the conditions of life are so grievous that death is looked upon as a welcome relief, and is even prayed for, as it was by Job (6:8, 9; 14:13). But to those who are in the enjoyment of health of body and mind, death is at all times an evil from which they shrink. Now, if this brief life, with its many aches and sorrows, is so dear, what must be the value of that eternal and tearless life spent in the presence of the Lord? And it is from this that the wicked are to be cut off. You say they will not care! Consider again. Does a judge ever sentence a murderer to imprisonment instead of death on the ground that death is no punishment? Do we not find rather that just because the loss of life is regarded as the greatest punishment of all, the friends of the condemned man will use every effort to get the death sentence changed to imprisonment? Even to the murderer life is sweet. The loss of life means the loss of all the privileges of the living. The loss of eternal life will be an infinite loss, for it will be the loss of the infinite riches of God's grace.

ETERNAL TORMENT A HANDLE TO INFIDELS

If a man thinks that the preaching of eternal torment is more likely to effect results in evangelical work, let him remember that there is something more important than even the conversion of sinners, and that is the vindication of the character and glory of God. God was often grieved with Israel because they rejected His offered grace; but He was still more concerned because His holy name was by their conduct blasphemed every day among the heathen. How often was He jealous, not for them, but for His own name. And is it nothing to us that infidels today are blaspheming our God! They are saying of Him, in words which I blush to quote, that He is "the most bloodthirsty monster that the world has ever seen." Who is responsible for this false representation of the God of love? Alas, it is largely Christian preachers themselves, with their unscriptural doctrine of eternal torment, a doctrine wholly foreign to the character of God. God hates cruelty. He denounced the heathen for making their children pass through the fire, and He sternly forbade the Israelites to follow such a practice. Yet preachers of the gospel make out that God is to cause His own creatures not merely to pass through the fire, but to remain conscious in it forever. How grievous such teaching must be to our God and Father, who so often vindicates His character in such words as these-"Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die?" (Ezek. 18:23). No, no, no; a thousand times no.

evangelists of this God of love tell us in effect that whilst God has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, He has pleasure in keeping them alive in torment forever. Some teachers would like to evade this conclusion, and they have different theories on the subject. Some say that God has nothing to do with the fate of sinners, but that it is brought on by themselves. This, however, is misleading, for God made man with the full knowledge that the majority of men would reject Him. Yet He gave man, so we are told, an inalienable immortality, so that the non-elect would be not only a curse to themselves, but a blot in His creation, and an eyesore to His saints forever.

Again, other teachers on this subject do not blush to declare that the wicked are to be kept alive from one moment to another in the lake of fire by the act of God, so that He may torment them forever. Whichever theory is adopted to account for so appalling a judgment, it is no wonder that infidels despise the evangelists' message, and blaspheme the God in whose name such a message is preached. For there is not a civilized man or nation but would count it a disgrace to be convicted of even the semblance of such cruelty. How I thank God that those who reverence His Word can dissociate themselves utterly from such teaching, and can preach a gospel of which they, like Paul, are "not ashamed," but of which they make their boast. We can say, indeed, to the infidel that so far from cruelty being an attribute of God, it is the Word of God alone that has softened hearts by nature cruel, so that today wherever an open Bible holds sway, the torture of evildoers has been banished from the statute books. For the more nearly human laws are modeled on the divine pattern, the more clearly have men come to see that punishment is not necessarily or primarily the infliction of pain at all, but rather the loss of something that would otherwise have been enjoyed—it may be the loss of money, or the loss of liberty, or it may be, in the extreme case, the loss of life. But no one now in our country is branded with hot irons, or has his thumbs crushed, or his ears cut off for wrongdoing or wrong thinking. It used to be otherwise. We have all heard of Queen Mary of England, whose fiendish delight in the torturing flames of Smithfield has earned her a name that I will not quote here. But Queen Mary had the orthodox conception of the nature of the soul and of the cruelty of God, and the contemplation of that cruelty had made her partake of the same cruelty, and she declared-"As the souls of heretics are to be hereafter eternally burning in hell, there can be nothing more proper than for me to imitate the divine vengeance by burning them on earth." Evangelists, does not this make your blood boil with indignation? I need not ask you if Queen Mary's cruelty is your ideal of womanhood, or of manhood either. You shrink from the imputation. Yet an infinitely greater degree of cruelty finds a place in your ideal of the Godhead! Your soul is stirred with anguish when you read of the heathen in dark lands being tortured by their fellow men; but when the poor wretches succumb to their tortures, you contemplate then with quiet satisfaction this awful fact that the diabolical work of torture is stopped by man only to be taken up and continued forever, with untold greater fury, by God Himself. It is altogether too horrible to think of. Out upon the doctrine that leads to such a conception of God, a conception that is wholly alien even to the terrors of God's law, let alone the abounding mercy of His gospel.

GOD'S CHARACTER REVEALED IN THE LAW

It is written of the law that it killed. That is the worst that even the law could do. It did not torment in an unmeaning or unreasoning way. It is true that God did, for acts of cruelty committed in Israel, command that the offender should suffer the same treatment without mercy. Eye had to go for eye, tooth for tooth. But the punishment bore a recognized proportion to the offense. When God, for special offenses, permitted stripes to be given, in no case was the number of stripes to exceed forty, and the reason given was surely worthy of Israel's God-"Lest ... thy brother should seem vile unto thee" (Deut. 25:3). To look on at a fellow creature suffering torment greater than he could bear would have a demoralizing effect upon the people. This, indeed, is its effect in all savage countries, as it was also in the case of the Queen to whom I have referred, and the church of the dark ages to which she belonged. In the coming judgment the God who gave to Israel a law of love will not forget His own character. Some He will cause to be beaten with few stripes, some with many, but none with an infinite number.

FIVE MONTHS' TORMENT

There are some fearful blasphemers mentioned in Revelation 9:5, 6, whom God is to account worthy of a terrible and special penalty. They are to fall into the hands of the living God, and it is to be for them a fearful thing. What are they to suffer? Ask our popular evangelists what would be a fitting punishment for them, and they will tell you that the most fitting thing that could happen to such Christ-rejecting sinners is to die, and thus be ushered into eternal torment. But that is not God's way of punishing them. He has decreed that these men shall have a fearful punishment; so He prevents them from dying that they may be tormented for five months. These wretched creatures who have worshiped Antichrist are to "seek death, and shall not find it." If they died, they would be free from all the sensations of life; therefore, God, into whose hands they have fallen, will, in His wisdom and righteousness, and that others may fear, make their judgment terrible, and though they "shall desire to die . . . death shall flee from them." Yet the torment of even these worshipers of Satan, in whom is sealed up the sum of all iniquity, is to last only five months. Truly it is better to fall into the hand of the Lord than into the hands of men (2 Sam. 24:14), even though these men were evangelists. For what is God's five months in comparison with their unthinkable eternity? Why, if God had said five years, or even five hundred years, aye, or even five thousand, that would still be less than one infinitesimat drop in the ocean of eternity. (OVER)

GOD AS REVEALED IN THE GOSPEL

Has any reader of these pages ever looked on at a man's dying agonies? Have you not felt a sense of relief when death ended his sufferings? Whence that hatred of pain? Surely it has come from God Himself, who has no pleasure either in death, or in the pain that leads to death. We have found it so in the law; but what shall we say of the gospel? "Blessed are the merciful." That was one of the first public utterances of Jesus Christ, when He came to reyeal the Father. And yet evangelists would have us believe that when He thus extolled the quality of mercy, He did so with the full consciousness that His Father was at that very moment torturing with the most appalling cruelty thousands of millions of people in hell! A few months fater, when many more thousands had joined the tormented hosts, and the cry of pain was swelling in volume, the great Teacher gives His disciples a model of mercy to copy; and it is this-"Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful" Luke 6:36). Are we to accept Christ's revelation of the Father, or man's distorted picture? I thank God that just because He is the "Father of mercies" (2 Cor. 1:3), He must be more merciful than even the most merciful of His children. Well had it been for Queen Mary and the Roman Catholic Church, and Protestant evangelists also, if they had remained dumb till they had learned "what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice" (Matt. 9:13).

AN AWFUL PROSPECT FOR THE SAINTS

One thing more I will say in this connection. Christ Himself was ever moved with compassion at the sight of suffering in others. We honor Him for that, and the more like Him men become, the more are their feelings harrowed at the sight of suffering around them. Yet we are taught by many preachers that when that which is perfect shall come, the unsaved are to be writhing in agony forever in full view of the redeemed, and at speaking distance from them. Dr. Hopkins of America even goes so far as to state that "the smoke of their torment shall serve, as a most clear glass, to give the redeemed a constant, bright, and most affecting view. . . . This display of the divine character and glory (1) will be most entertaining, and give the highest pleasure to those who love God, and raise their happiness to ineffable heights." Should this torment "cease and this fire be extinguished, it would, in a great measure, obscure the light of heaven, and put an end to a great part of the happiness and glory of the blessed." (Hopkins' Works, Vol. II, pp. 457, 458; quoted from Pettingell.)

Such is the dreadful condition of mind into which Dr. Hopkins' theology led him, and all because he was blinded by a false system of teaching, at the foundation of which lies the original Satanic lie of the natural immortality of man.

THE ETERNITY OF EVIL.

The eternity of torment is a God-dishonoring doctrine, for it means the eternity of evil. It means that when God says, "Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more," His Word shall not accomplish that which He pleases, nor prosper in the thing whereunto it is sent. It means that when the Word goes forth from His mouth-"Bless the Lord, all his works in all places of his dominion," that Word shall return to Him void, for millions of His creatures in some part of His dominion will live forever in open blasphemy against Him, and will never how the knee or confess that Jesus Christ is Lord. . . . And so a great stumblingblock is created, for God could have taken steps to prevent all this, but He did not! And now that He has made man immortal, He cannot destroy Him even though He would! It is with relief that I turn to the Scriptures and read that God "is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna" (hell-fire, Matt. 10:28); and the relief is complete when I read further that He will do it: "All the wicked will he destroy" (Psalm 145:20).

Universalism and the New Theology

The evil results of the popular doctrine are not yet exhausted. Vast numbers of men have been driven in horror from it to the other pole of error, viz., "Universalism." For there is an awful problem to be faced. Here are "immortal souls" that must live somewhere after "death." Eternal torment is inconsistent with the character of a God of love; therefore, all people must ultimately be saved. I cannot wonder at this doctrine becoming so widely accepted. Christians are playing into the hands of the "Universalists" through their belief in the natural immortality of man. With great indignation they may denounce Mr. Campbell's "New Theology," but if they would first take the beam out of their own eye, then they would see clearly to take the mote (or whatever else it is) out of their brother's eye. Christendom as a whole has got a theology as old as the time when Satan stated these two propositions—(1) Ye shall be as God; and, (2) Ye shall not surely die. Mr. Campbell is but pushing to their logical conclusion these two statements of Satanie blasphemy, which are already virtually accepted by the Christian church.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC ERROR

Those who hold that man has not got a natural immortality, but can have it only by faith in Christ, are often reminded that they are in a very small minority. But that is no test of the truth or error of their doctrine. Martin Luther was in an insignificant minority when he discovered and preached the scriptural doctrine of justification by faith. But he was on the side of the Word of God; and if he could appear amongst us today, our evangelical churches would vie with one another in doing him honor, until-until they discovered that he denied the doctrine of the natural immortality of the soul, and then, alas! many of them would be seech him to depart out of their coasts as one unfit to preach the gospel. Yet Martin Luther was taught of God on the question of man's nature, as on the question of man's salvation; and he and his fellow reformer Tyndale, and many others of whom the churches were not worthy, knew what men today seem to be ignorant of, that it was the Roman Catholic leaders of the church who first introduced into the preaching of the gospel the unscriptural doctrine of the immortality of the soul. The great reformer, therefore, did right when he consigned it to the "Roman dunghill of decretals." But the error has spread through the Protestant churches, and its fruits are seen in the uprising of Spiritualism, Christian Science, Universalism, Prayers to the Dead, and many other abominations. And in the midst of it all there comes from another world a voice that heralded the first coming of Christ, and must be sounded out again as His second appearing draws nigh; "the voice said, Cry; and he said, What shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field: the grass withereth, the flower fadeth: because the spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever" (Isa, 40:6-8).

PEACE! PEACE!

By C. E. Randall

"THEN said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace in this place. Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not . . . yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed."—Jer. 14:13-15.

What was true in the history of Israel is doubly true today. Perhaps the majority of the ministers of the churches are crying forth this same message. What travesty! Religious leaders are giving the people cause to think that soon all wars will cease due to an awakened world and that the world will have peace, assured peace.

This is a false hope born of a social religion and nourished by a degenerate civilization. Why tell the people that there will be no more war, when the Bible says there shall be wars and rumors of wars and that nation shall rise against nation, and these just the beginning of sorrows (Matt. 24:3, 6-8)? Why lead the people to believe there will be no more war, when the Bible says that all nations shall be gathered against Jerusalem to battle at the time the Lord returns (Zech. 14:1-3)?

Instead of nations beating their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks, God has said the opposite shall be true (Joel 3:9, 10). When the Prince of Peace reigns then we will have assured peace. Until then, every peace and safety ery, as in the past, so in the future will be followed by "sudden destruction." "For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them . . . and they shall not escape."—1 Thess. 5:3.—Church of God Messenger.

THINKING PEACE INSTEAD OF WAR

By Harry A. Sheets

As a follower of the Prince of Peace a Christian must be a peaceful person. Paul admonished the warlike Romans: "Recompense to no man evil for evil. Provide things honest in the sight of all men. If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men. Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."—Rom. 12:17-21.

Armed conflict is so contrary to the teachings of Christ that church people have opposed war. It seems that no war can be successfully waged by "Christian" nations without the moral, physical, and financial support of the churches and their members. To get this, some moral issues must be injected into the struggle. The World War was hailed as "a war to end all war," and church people became pawns in the conflict.

The dislike for war has led church people to engage in drives to promote world peace and campaigns to outlaw all war. This would appear to be commendable Christian effort, but many battles have been lost because the soldiers tried to do more than the general commanded. That is the case here. Christ commanded His followers to preach the gospel. He never commanded them to work for world peace, even though He hated war. Paul commanded us to live peaceably with all men, but commanded no further. He did say in 1 Thessalonians 5:3 that "when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Would not working for world peace place us in the "they" class and bring the "sudden destruction" upon us?

"A Lot of energy is spent in trying to find out things we are sorry to know,"

A projector with some good pictures of the Christmas story could be used very effectively in this service. Good violin or organ accompaniment for some of the songs would also be effective.

It takes approximately one hour to give this service.

We would be pleased to receive comments and suggestions on this service from those of you who make use of it. Let us know what changes and improvements you have made.

lent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount."-2 Peter 1: 16-18. The word coming in this place is parousia in the Greek, from pareimi, a verb which signifies to be present, to have come. Parousia, therefore, imports actual presence; which accords with our rendering of erchomenon in the text of Matthew "making his appearance." What the three apostles saw on the Mount of Transfiguration was the majesty of the Son of man. This majesty consisted of "honour and glory" received from the Father; and therefore styled "the glory of the Father." When Jesus is actually present on Mount Zion in Jerusalem, it is no cunningly devised fable to affirm, He will be seen there as He was seen by three mortal men on the Mount of Transfiguration. This is His parousia en te basileia autou and the erchomenos tou vhiou tou anthropou-His manifestation in His kingdom.

The word basileia is used in the proclamation of John the Baptizer, Jesus, and the apostles, before the crucifixion. They preached, saying, "The basileia, or kingdom, of the heavens is at hand." In this instance kingdom means neither territory, population, dominion, nor power. Dr. George Campbell supposes that John and Jesus announced the approach of the reign of heaven, that is, of the Messiah, which after His resurrection was actually established. But this is contrary to fact. Jesus is King of Israel of right; but instead of His reign being acknowledged by His people, they refused to submit to Him, and put Him to death. And after His resurrection, the national will was still supposed to be His. The apostles spent their lives in urging His claims to the throne and kingdom of David, which were nevertheless rejected, and brought ruin upon the nation. What sort of a reign is this? The reign of a king over rebels, which is no reign at all.

John did not certainly proclaim the reign of heaven at hand in preaching repentance, because the basileia approached. He was too well instructed in the prophets to do this. What he cried was, "Repent, because the kingdom of the heavens has approached." The kingdom here was not something to appear seven years after; but a something that was actually present. Eggike is the perfect of eggizo, and imports what has already come to pass. It does not signify at hand, to come, but has come to hand-it is present, in your midst. What is it that is present? The basileia—the Lord whose way 1 call upon you to prepare. "He standeth among you"; and "that he should be manifest to Israel, I am come, as his precursor, baptizing in water, and preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." Matt. 3:2; Mark 1:3, 4; John 1:26-31. Thus spoke John, when in the spirit and power of Elijah he lifted up his voice in the wilderness in the performance of his mission to announce the presence and approaching manifestation of the King of Israel, and to prepare a people to receive Him (Luke 1:17). Hence his proclamation was, "Repent, because the Majesty of the heavens has arrived"; or, "because His Majesty, the King of Israel, and of the nations, is about to appear before you." "I know not who he is; but He that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on Him, the same is He who baptizeth with the Holy Spirit." And when John saw this, he bore record that Jesus is the Son of God (John 1:33, 34).

That basileia is sometimes put for king, and the contrary, in the Scriptures, appears from these words—"Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Mark 11:9, 10. According to another, they said, "Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Matt. 21: 9. This he regards as a fulfillment of the saying, "Behold, thy King cometh unto thee:...lowly, and sitting upon an ass."—Zech. 9:9. A third records it in the words, "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Luke 19:38. In the Prophet Daniel, also, kings and kingdoms are used synonymously (Dan. 2:44); so that it is according to the analogy of Scripture to render basileia or kingdom by king, if the scope and context of the place demand it.

FIVE SHORT RULES FOR YOUNG

1. Pray every day; and when you pray, remember that God is present, and that He hears your prayers (Heb. 11:6). Don't become discouraged if He doesn't always answer in the way you would like Him to. Don't forget to thank Him for previous answers.

CHRISTIANS

2. You should never neglect daily private Bible reading. While reading, remember that God is speaking to you, and that you are to believe and act upon what He says. I believe all backsliding begins with the neglect of these two rules. "Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me."—John 5:39.

3. Try to do something every day for Jesus. Think every night of what Jesus has done for you, and thank Him. Ask yourself: "What am I doing for Him?" "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:13-16.

4. Do not think that you always can do as other Christians do. Have Christ as your example. Ask yourself: "How would Christ act in my place?" and strive to follow Him. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me."—John 10:27.

5. God's Word is true. Believe it, no matter what scientists or other learned men may say. Rom. 3:4; 1 John 5:10, 11.—Marian E. Whitney.

Berean Department

Why I Want to Be Baptized

I WANT to be baptized and saved, for I know I will be happier. I want to help others. I want to pray and receive strength to do right, and after my life's work here is done to be with Jesus. I want good people to love and trust me and help me. I want to be saved so that I won't fear death. I want to know God's Word that I may bring happiness to others.—Virginia Marie Burke, South Bend, Indiana.

The Kingdom of God

"The kingdom of God is one of the outstanding themes of the Bible; yet we venture to say that to the great majority of people the kingdom of God is a hazy and vague subject. However, the Scriptures offer abundant testimony concerning the nature of the kingdom, its location, extent. duration, and citizens. It is our purpose to present briefly the kingdom in its different phases and to show that it will be a real, literal kingdom."

So does Harry Goekler, pastor of the Salem, Illinois, Church of God, President of the Illinois State Berean Society and his local Berean organization, and a teacher in his local Sunday school, introduce the tract recently released for free distribution by the National Berean Society, Oregon, Illinois.

The entire tract occupies eight pages with its cover, and consists of as meaty a discourse on the location, extent, duration, and citizenship of the future kingdom of God as we have ever read.

The Bercans are endeavoring to keep their tracts modern from the viewpoint of makeup as well as of literary style. The old method of printing anything in any fashion, just to put an argument in print, no longer is successful. The material must be put together in a way that will eath the eye and make the average person feel that reading that little pamphlet will be a pleasure, not a chore.

Thus far, the Publishing Committee has released five tracts of the new style: "As a Thief in the Night," by Miss Genniel Carpenter, former editor of this page; "Thus It Becometh Us," by Arlen Marsh; "Words of Comfort," by G. E. Marsh, editor of The Restitution Herald; "The Kingdom of God"; and the tract-price list, "Do You Believe—"

Criticisms and suggestions are welcomed by the Committee. They should be addressed to the chairman, Paul M. Hatch, Route 1, Harvey, Illinois, or to either of the two committee members, Miss Genniel Carpenter and Arlen Marsh, both of Oregon, Illinois.

Copies of each of these tracts may be secured for the asking in as large quantities as desired, provided too great demands are not made upon available stocks. Postal charges are prepaid by the National Berean Society.

A Form of Relativity

EINSTEIN was not so far from right when he propounded the theory that everything is relative, that space is curved back on itself, and that time is warped.

Practically everything in life is dependent upon something else. The customs we use hang on the customs and training of earlier generations. The words we speak are the result of evolution of the language.

At one time in the history of men it was counted a good, if expensive and fight-provoking, habit for a man to marry a number of wives. Today, times having changed, men are arrested for possessing themselves of two wives, let alone the thousand that Solomon supported.

Paul wrote irritatedly to his neophytes that women were not to touch their hair with shears. In Isaac's time, a girl was married before the bridegroom ever had seen her.

These things, too, have changed. Bobbed hair is considered as no crime; and men rarely are married until they have made the acquaintance of their prospective bridge.

The language of the Bible would in some respects be considered unfit for drawing room conversation, not because of its archaic qualities, but because of its subject matter. The ancient Hebrews spoke in such a vein as a matter of course. Hangovers from no Victorian or mauve eras troubled them.

Evil is a relative thing. The great sins remain sins through the ages. But environment, custom, and psychology must determine what evil is under many circumstances.

Advance at Marshall

MISS EDNA II. Wood of the Marshall, Illinois, Berean Society, reports that "for the last four months we have had an average attendance of 44. Our membership is 35. Our smallest monthly average attendance was 44, the largest 52; the smallest attendance up to the 14th of November was 36, the largest 66. At our last meeting in November the attendance was only 11, but the night was a very stormy one. We have had two socials since conference."

The Berean society at Marshall, as has been previously noted on this page, meets in the Salem Church, situated in the country some distance out of town. The only access to the building is a dirt road which can be and not infrequently is one of the muddiest in the United States. Marshall is to be congratulated, especially in view of the fact that the society in its present form is not yet a year old.

PREPARED BY MARY A. GESIN

"Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

HOME IS THE BEST PLACE OF ALL

WE HAVE just passed Thanksgiving Day, and all of us have given thanks for many things. Perhaps the one thing we have been the most thankful for is our home and all it means to us.

What does it take to make a home, children? One says, walls and windows. Another says, a roof and porches. Another thinks it takes furniture and rugs. But do these make a home?

"No," I can hear you all say. "That's only a house."
We see many houses all about us. But some of them are not homes. Let's see what makes the difference.

A home needs a father and a mother, and boys or girls, or both, doesn't it? Now we have the beginning of a home. But suppose no one in that house cares about anyone else in it. The parents do not care for the children, nor the children for the parents or for each other. Would that be a home? It would be just a place to stay, don't you think?

So we see if takes something which we can't see to make a home. Love, that's what it is! And it's more important than the things you can see, such as rugs and pictures. You might not have any of them, but if you have love in your home, you have something better. Let's not forget that.

Now let's see what love will do for us in our home. Electricity will give us bright lights and many conveniences. But if there is no love there, it might just as well be dark as night. Nobody would care about anybody else.

But when every member of the home loves every other member, then each one will be interested in the other, anxious to help, willing to give up, careful to please, and happy to serve. That's better than having all the handy things in the world to help you with your work, and all the beautiful furniture.

Does it all rest upon Father and Mother to see that our home is happy? We know they couldn't do it alone. Every one, from the timest tot to the oldest, has a share in it. Everyone has something he must give toward the happiness of the rest.

If the whole family was kind and loving except one little boy, and he was quarrelsome and cross, would it make any difference? You wouldn't want to be that little boy, would you?

If all the rest did their part to help make home a place to be proud of, and one little girl was saucy and disobedient. would it hurt the home any? Not one of you would be that little girl, I'm sure,

For the Sunday before Christmas we take a peep into Jesus' home. That must have been a wonderful place. But His first home was in a stable, you say. No matter, Mary and Joseph loved each other and cared for each other. And they were so happy and so proud of the baby Jesus.

In school you probably have drawn or cut out pictures of this first home of Jesus. The rough beams overhead, the straw upon the floor, the opening without any glass. But God was watching over all, His love enfolding them, and His protection guarding them from harm.

Now let's take a peep into Jesus' second home. Look farther on in the same chapter, verse 39. This home was in Nazareth. Verse 40 tells you what sort of boy Jesus was, also verses 51 and 52.

Tell Mother what some of the things were that Jesus did to help make His home happy. From these verses you can see that He was obedient, happy, helpful, loving, and many other things a boy should be. Joseph, you know, was a carpenter, and while he wasn't Jesus' father, he must have been very good to Him. Never forget that God was Jesus' Father.

Joseph's shop was probably right next door or in a part of the house. As Jesus played with the curly, white shavings He tried to help Joseph more and more the bigger He grew. And His mother no doubt often told Him about God, His Father, and how He was to be a King some day.

"O Jesus, once a Nazareth boy,
And tempted like as we,
All inward foes help us destroy,
And spotless all to be.
We trust Thee for the grace to win
The high victorious goal,
Where purity shall conquer sin
In Christlike self-control.

"O Jesus, once a Nazareth boy,
Who toiled through happy days,
May we our daily tasks enjoy,
And work, with songs of praise.
At school, at home, we'll follow Thee,
With all our heart and soul,
Work hard, play fair, and try to be Like Thee in self-control."

THE CHRISTIAN HOME

Luke 2:8-19; Ephesians 6:1-4

GOLDEN TEXT

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men .-

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: The Christian Home.

Aim: The happiest home is the home in which parents and children are governed in their relation with each other by the spirit of Jesus Christ.

Basic Truth: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."-1 Cor. 10:31.

I. The Heart of the Christian Home, (Luke 2:8-14.) We are to study today the beginning of the first truly Christian home. There had been godly homes before, many of them, but never was there a Christian home until the Christ was born and the angels sang and the shepherds rejoiced and the earth was made glad by His birth! For there can be no Christian home without the presence of the living Son of God! He alone can transform father and mother, brothers and sisters, all of diverse characters and dispositions, into a united body ruled by Christian love! His blessed assurance: "Lo, 1 am with you alway," brings into the close fellowship of home a Friend, a Teacher, and a Harmonizer of differences that no evil influence on earth can withstand. Jesus Christ is the heart of the Christian home!

II. The Mother in the Christian Home. (Luke 2:15-19.) As we study the life of Mary, the first Christian mother, the first queen of a truly Christian home, we are impressed with the conviction that we are looking deep into the heart of all motherhood, "Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart." That is motherhood everywhere, cherishing the wonders of her child's opening life. To her the Christ was all. Her life eircled around His. And so must it ever be with mothers who take Christ into their heart of hearts!

III. The Father in the Christian Home. (Eph. 6:1-4.) "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but bring them up in the nurture and admouition of the Lord." Such is the standard of Christian fatherhood as set forth by the spirit of Christ through His apostle. A sympathetic understanding of the hearts of boys and girls, a recognition of the immeasurable value of Christian character, and the Christian father is equipped for his great task of making Christian men and women out of his own loved children!

GOLDEN TEXT

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."-Luke 2:14.

Soon after the birth of the Savior, the words of our text rang out from heaven, coming: from a multitude of the heavenly host. They were praising the Father for His goodness in sending One who would have power at some future date to bring peace and good will upon earth.

The Christian home is one in which the members are brought nearer the Babe of Bethlehem. The home where children are taught to reverence the name of Jesus and sing praises to God. Where gifts are wont to be made instead of lavishing everything on self. Christ was the greatest Gift the world ever knew. When this greatest of Gifts comes into His own, then God's glory will shine out and peace and good will will be in the earth.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

The Christian Home

- -is becoming quite scarce;
- -is the happiest home;
- -is a safeguard for young people: -is the bulwark of a nation;

-does not neglect daily Bible study. Christ in the Home. The presence of Christ in the home is what constitutes a Christian home. It insures happiness and peace. Of course, we cannot have the personal Christ in our homes, but we can have His Word and His spirit. How badly these two great influences are needed in the homes of the world today. The mere presence of the Bible in the home is not enough. It must be used, that is, it must be studied carefully and prayerfully and its teachings heeded and practiced. The majority of homes have a Bible, but it is more of a mantle piece or ornament than a guide in life and conduct. As to the spirit, it is a real influence for righteousness and goodness. The spirit of Christ is a powerful influence. It tempers the mind and heart and regulates the whole being of an individual.

Peace and Happiness. These requisites are essentials to a well ordered and enjoyable home. It is true they are lacking in the majority of homes. The reason is apparent, They only come where Christ is really enthroned in the home. Of course, there is a certain kind or amount of happiness in worldly homes, but they do not experience that real peace and happiness that passeth all understanding. There comes to the hearts of Christians a con tentment and quietness that is really beyond description. The way of peace and happiness is the way of Christ. "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Matt. 11:28.—C. E. R.

What Is a Christian Home?

In the beautiful Christmas lesson of today we have placed before us an entrancing pieture of the first Christian home that ever existed, that of Joseph and Mary and the baby Jesus in the stable of Bethlehem.

It is not the house in which the family lives that makes a Christian home, nor the wealth or poverty its furnishings display. The books that line its shelves and the paintings that deck its walls, whatever they may reveal of the culture of their owners, these things do not mark a home as "Christian."

A Christian home is a home where Jesus Christ reigns supreme, where God is known and loved and served by all within its walls. A Christian home is one in which the Golden Rule is the only law, and fellowship the greatest joy. Such is the Christian home!

How may we develop such a home for ourselves? How may we make Christ supreme within our walls? How may we establish and maintain that spirit of mutual tender consideration for each other without which there can be no Christian home?

The answer to these questions is found in our lesson today. We know of no complaint voiced by Mary when she was led within that humble abode in which her Son was to be born. Why should she care if only a manger formed her maternal bed! Was not Joseph her husband there? Was not God present, making of that lowly cot a throne?

As for Joseph, his love for his virgin bride was strong and true, but he made no apology for the home into which he led her. It was the best he could provide, and that is all that any Christian home need be.

Into such humble surroundings came the blessed Son of God, the future King of kings and Lord of lords! But His Father God did not object, for His beloved was ushered into a home of love and righteousness and truth! ---G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: Our Home.

The story of our lesson today is about our homes. Let's see just who lives in our homes. (Children to name members of family.) Let's talk about how happy our homes usually are about this time of year. Why! Everyone seems so happy just before Christmas.

I want to tell you about another home that

I am sure was a happy home. (Teacher tells Christmas story as found in Luke 2:8-19, emphasizing the members of this home.)

Talk about what it takes to make a real home after this story.

Here are some pictures which I have brought. They are pictures of homes. You may each one cut out and paste one on a sheet of paper. No, we cannot call it a home yet; it is just a house. How can we make it a home? It must have people. Well, write out to one side of the house, "People." Another says, "Love." Write it, also. (Continue to do this until all things which make a good Christian home have been named.)

In Ephesians 6:1-4 are some very good rules which help to make our homes happy. Copy them below your picture.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

To Our Brotherhood

I am now able to make the announcement for which you have patiently been looking for a long time.

The N. B. Ps. obligation of $7,231.56 to the Oregon State Savings Bank has been discharged and I have the notes in my possession.

This has been a strenuous and anxious period of five months of negotiation, investigation, examination, etc. But the officials with whom I have dealt have done only their duty in the matter, and have been very kind and considerate in their dealings with me.

Being able to make this announcement after five menths of work and anxiety lest something might be left undone, or some mistake made that might result in failure of success in discharging an obligation so threatening in its nature and possibilities, brings a feeling of relief which must be experienced in order to be appreciated.

I cannot express in words my gratitude to you who, by your contributions and cooperation have made it possible to discharge this embarrassing and dangerous obligation.

It might be helpful and encouraging to give a brief report of the accomplishments of the present N. B. I. administration, with some suggestions.

During the last three years, the worst period of the depression, we have relieved the N. B. I. of the greenhouse burden, which, for a number of years, was a heavy liability, and have reduced the indebtedness of the N. B. I. in the sum of more than $20,000; and have increased the equipment and facilities in the publishing plant, having lost none of our property except the greenhouse, which was a most helpful disposition. The real estate holdings in the Golden Rule Home department have been increased to the highest point since its establishment, and there is no encumbrance on any of our property except that the mortgage that was placed upon the greenhouse property in 1925 also covers the little eleven acre farm, but which mortgage the present owners of the greenhouse are to pay.

In addition to the above the operating expenses of the office, printing plant, and Golden Rule Home have been reduced approximately 45 per cent. This does not mean that the salaries of the former officers and employees were exorbitant, by no means. It simply means that these operatives, in order to meet the conditions existing and keep the work going, have voluntarily reduced their salaries and wages, and are doing more work for less pay. These sacrifices have cheerfully been made.

Now, a few suggestions: It is, or should be, well known that our publishing plant, the culy unit of the N. B. I. that produces any revenue, is not, and never has been, and cannot hope to be in the near future, self-sustaining, and must be operated, in large measure, by voluntary contributions, of which there has not been, for several months, nearly enough to pay operating expenses.

No weekly newspaper nor magazine can pay expenses from subscriptions alone, and especially those having small circulation. Such publications make their money by the advertising they carry, and charges for advertising are governed and graduated according to the volume of their circulation. Our publications carry no advertising except our own publications, which, of course, brings no revenue.

On the other hand, our costs for editorial, linotype, and proofreading work; heat, light, taxes, insurance, and other overhead expenses, are just as great in printing one hundred papers as they would be in printing ten thousand papers. The same equipment is necessary, the only difference in issuing the larger number being the extra work in feeding the press and folder, the cost of paper, mailing, and postage, oll of which is insignificant as compared with the first mentioned cost as

If our subscriptions to The Restitution Herald and Truth Seekers' Quarterly were quadrupled, and residents in Golden Rule Home were doubled, the N. B. I. would be self-sustaining. But with the indifference apparent with many of our people, and destructive criticism on the part of others, it is somewhat difficult to carry on our work successfully, and it therefore becomes hecessary from time to time to keep calling attention to this matter.

we should have at least two or three hundred more members of our "Dollar-a-MontClub," which, with the other help that we now have, would earry the load. And if a lot more of our people could see their way clear to make some saerifices, if necessary, to assist in this way it would not be burdensome to anyone, the expenses would all be taken care of, and all would be glad not to have this thing called to our attention so often. Think this over candidly and seriously as Christian men and women, and then act according to your honest convictions in the matter.

I recall that at our General Conference some months ago a number of you promised to take this very proposition up with your people and churches in your respective communities upon your return home; but the reports, or lack of reports, that have come to the office as to your efforts and the results, would seem to indicate that but few of you have gotten home yet. How about it?

I have no criticism to offer nor fault to find, as I know how these things are. So many things come up demanding the attention of most of us that we neglect these things without any intention or thought of failing to keep our covenants or perform our duty. It just slips by and we don't do it, as we should.

We, here at the office, are constantly reminded of these things and must meet the demands; otherwise, the machinery would stop, and many of our people who, apparently, give little thought as to how and by what means this work is kept going, would be disappointed and wonder what happened at headquarters.

I know you can see my point, if you will just take time and consider it.

"The night is far spent." There are rifts in the clouds, and the light is shining through, which indicates to me (and does it not to you?) that a brighter day is just ahead. Help us, will you not, to drive the rifted clouds away.

Again I thank you for your contributions and cooperation in discharging the indebtedness about which you know: "let us thank God and take courage."

L. E. Conner.

WE OWE IT TO HIM!

The thing is done! The burden that has so long hung like a sword of Damoeles over the head of the National Bible Institution in the form of its indebtedness to the defunct Oregon State Savings Bank has been removed, and we are free to press forward in further efforts to meet our remaining obligations and to carry out the original sacred purpose of the General Conference in spreading the glad tidings of the kingdom of God throughout the land. We of the Executive Board rejoice with you, brethren, in the attainment of our object. We could not have won the battle without your hearty support, nor without the most careful husbanding of the funds you have provided. So much for your part and for our partwith one exception.

During the past three years and more Bro. L. E. Conner has been the Business Manager of this Institution, and I know that I express the sentiment not only of my fellow members on the Executive Board, but of the church throughout the country, when I say that we owe to Bro. Conner a debt we can never hope to repay for the self-sacrificing and faithful efforts he has put forth to relieve the brother-hood of the depressing effect of fettering debt.

I will not attempt to tell you how many thousands of dollars of obligations Bro. Conner has paid off or otherwise disposed of with satisfaction to our creditors as well as to our selves! It makes us dizzy to think about it! But he is the one who by the grace of God has accomplished what once seemed the impossible. Of course he has had the whole-hearted cooperation of the entire Board, but it was the Manager who met the enemy debt in the front trenches face to face!

Let us thank God for His goodness to us, and not forget the human instrument He used.

G. E. Marsh, Secretary,

OUR LETTER TO "SANTA CLAUS"

Yes, we know better than that, and we teach our children that there is no good Saint Nick who flies through the air with his reindeer sleigh distributing gifts to all and sundry, but nevertheless we are writing a letter to Santa Claus at the suggestion of Bro. and Sr. T. J. Ellis, who gave us the idea and started dropping the gifts we crave down the chimney of the National Bible Institution. We greatly appreciate the suggestion of our Treasurer and his wife that as many of our brotherhood as can do so will place the needs of the general work of the Church of God throughout the country on their Christmas list. We will list such Christmas gifts to the Institution under the title, "Christmas Contributions." Who will be the first to add to Who will be the first to add to what has already been received?

MAGAW TO BE AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

Bro. S. E. Magaw of the Brush Creek, Ohio, Church will be the minister for our special meetings beginning January 6, 1935, and continuing for about three weeks. We are very glad to announce this, as everyone knows the merits of Bro. Magaw.

We will be glad to welcome any of the brethren who will be able to attend.

Ednah Cooper, Secretary.

OUR CHRISTMAS NUMBER

Our Christmas number this year will be one of the most attractive papers we have issued for a long time. Special writers are con-tributing to its columns and the general appearance of the paper will be appealing. The cover will be printed in two colors with scasonable illustrations.

The stirring and hope-inspiring message of the Savior's birth will be presented, of course, but the weight of emphasis will be placed on that even more joyful event, His glorious return. So send in the names and addresses of your friends and neighbors whom you would like to have receive a copy of the Christmas number. The price will be 5 cents per copy. What finer greeting could you send for that price to one who is dear to you and whom you are anxious to interest in the things pertaining to the coming and kingdom of Christ? Let us get your list as early as possible.

Better still, send your friends a year's subscription to The Restitution Herald as a Christmas present. It would cost you but $1.50 to new subscribers, and it would be a constant source of pleasure to the ones to whom it is sent for 51 or 52 weeks. And with each such Christmas gift subscription we will mail to the recipient a beautiful Christmas folder informing them of the fact that the paper will continue to come to them for a year through the thoughtfulness of a friend.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH CLUB

Albert Siple ($2); Ella M. Siple ($2); Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lansbery; Mr. and Mrs. M. Fetters; Georgia Thompson; Wayne Thompson; W. A. Reid ($2); Mr. and Mrs. Delos lowship. Andrew: Jessic M. Shea ($5).

ANDERSON AT RENSSELAER

Upon request by folks not members of the Church of God, Bro. J. H. Anderson gave five sermons on the subject of prophecy at Rensselaer, Ind., beginning on Monday, Nov. 19, and continuing to and including Friday evening.

He chose as his subjects "The Value of Prophecy and Where Are We'll "The Valley of Dry Bones," "Daniel's Seventieth Week, or The Day of the Lord," "The Nations in Prophecy," and "The Climax."

The subjects as given were both interesting and instructive, and keen interest was shown by a good andience throughout the meetings. Mattie II. Scott, Secretary.

VIRGINIA PASTOR IS POUNDED

On the evening of December 1 several of the Virginia brethren living near the parsonage and others from more distant parts of the state gathered at the parsonage to give the pastor a "pounding." The event was a real success, the guests bringing a great variety of gifts that will be so appropriate for the table for many days. Some coming from a distance gave other gifts, which were also very appropriate. How very acceptable these gifts are to our bachelor home, as son Lyle and I live in the parsonage while Mrs. Thaver is teaching school near Rockford, Ill.

Perhaps other pastors would enjoy a similar "pounding,"

On December 2 after the morning church services at Maurertown a business meeting was held, with many of the Virginia brethren present or represented by proxies, but after some discussion it was concluded that the Executive Board (consisting of the State Conference Board and the elders of the churches) should act regarding the selection of pastor, after January 1, 1935, at which time the present pastor's time expired. By their decision the present paster will continue with the work here.

Articles of a state constitution for the Churches of God in Virginia are being drawn up and, it is hoped, will be ratified by all before long. As yet there has not been a written constitution, but the work was carried on by all cooperating, the secret of good fel-

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Californians remember! The next Quarterly Conference is to meet on the second Sunday of next month, which falls on January The editor would like nothing better than to slip through the snowdrifts and into the summerland of California and attend that gathering! Bro. MacLeod's Christmas sermon will be entitled, "A Great Affection,"

Mrs. Esta Starbuck of the Rockford, Ill., Church of God has prepared an outline of a Christmas program which would require few materials and very little time for preparation. It is reproduced in this issue on page three for those desiring last minute Christmas services

Some of our news reports are crowded out of this issue to make room for the welcome announcement of Bro. L. E. Conner concerning the final settlement with the receivers of the Oregon State Savings Bank. We know our contributors will not question the propriety of doing this, as we have waited so anxiously and worked so hard to make this report of Bro. Conner possible.

Through the kindness of Dr. J. W. Lent of Niagara Falls, N. Y., the editor has secured a bound volume containing well preserved copies of "The Voice of Truth and Glad Tidings of the Kingdom at Hand," which was published by our grand uncle, Joseph Marsh, in 1846. The old volume contains several letters from William Miller, G. W. Burnham, R. V. Lyon, and many others which are of considerable historical value to the church. may be made in The Herald from time to time from these old writings.

It is not too late now to order copies of Jesus, the Light of the World, for Christmas presents for children of 6 to 11. Order from the National Berean Society, Oregon, Ill.; 25 cents a copy.

C. E. Randall, pastor of the Fonthill, Ont... and Niagara Falls, N. Y., congregations, reports an interesting visit with the Congers of Syracuse, N; Y. Mrs. Conger has long been a member of the Niagara Falls church.

GRAND RAPIDS MALE QUARTET ON RELIEF PROGRAM

The Newell family is quarantined for scarlet fever, Bro. Leo being the victim. We are thankful, however, that he is not seriously ill. Sr. Skeels and Sr. Townsend are both improved in health, for which we also thank the heavenly Father.

Final plans and practices are being made in the Christmas preparations as that important occasion draws near.

Our male quartet has been asked to present some numbers at the Grand Rapids Y. M. C. A. in a program for the unemployed.

F. E. Siple, Pastor,

TRUTH SEEKERS' OUARTERLY

Orders are coming in for the new quarterly with each mail. Among encouraging indications that the Truth Seekers' Quarterly is meeting with approval and giving general satisfaction is the fact that a Baptist Church and a Christian Church where the quarterly has been used for some time have both increased the number required for the first quarter of the new year, and the Baptist Sunday school asks if we cannot provide a teacher's edition. The quarterly with the supplementary doctrinal lessons now being provided furnishes one of the most effective methods we have for teaching the truth of the coming Savior and other elements of the gospel widely. Let's push our Sunday school work and help get the Truth Seekers' Quarterly into Sunday schools of other denominations.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

By J. G. Haupt

You gave His holy Scriptures first to the Jew, but also to The Greek. The Old Testament from Genesis through Malachi was in the Hebrew language. The New Testament, which had to do with the only begotten Son of God, was in the Greck, first in the uncial Greck, but later in the cursive Greek. The Old Testament gave a fine history of the Jewish people including the wonderful prophetical utterances of Jeremiah, Isaiah, and other most worthy writers. The Old Testament pointed out here and there wonderful promises concerning the coming Messiah. It was at the very close of the Old Testament period that the Greek term of the Messiah, the Christ, came into use. Christ is given us as the only begotten Son of God, begotten by the holy pneuma, the holy breath of God Himself. The Christ was the direct descendant of Abraham. The course of descent had passed through Isaac, Ruth, Jesse, and David. The Immaculate Conception of Mary had prepared her for her journey to Bethlehem in Judwa, where in a manger at the inn she bore her Son, for there was no longer room at the inn, the manger being the only available place left. The holy announcement was immediately made by the angels of heaven and shepherds of the plains.

Later the evangelist John appeared on the scene and baptized in water. It was left for the revisers of the Scriptures to give us the true Greek expression (baptized in water) for the King James rendering (baptized with water), which was evidently a grievous error. The Greek preposition en tells plainly what the Apostle intended. The English preachers at the King James round table supposed that they had been baptized with water, while the Greek stated plainly that they had been baptized in water.

Through much suffering and agony the Christ was crucified and placed in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. We find the vital passage, buried by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ. The kindred passage is, "Whereunto baptism doth also now save us, not the washing away of the uncleanness of the body, but the expression to God of a true understanding of the resurrection of Jesus Christ whereby we are saved." The translation is the Church of God rendering.

My uncial text is the Emphatic Diaglott, the Greek and English text given by the author in his excellent work prepared at Geneva, Illinois, a short distance west of Chicago. Mr. Wilson made an express journey to England to select both the Greek and English type that was set up with great pains under his own hand, for which the author's training in Great Britain had prepared him.

A few years ago I had individual experience of the great value of Mr. Wilson's work. In two services of different churches I heard the expression, "Before Abraham was I am." The true Greek is, "Higher than Abraham was natural-ceptionally, I am." Conceptionally Abraham was naturally like his parents, but Jesus was the only Son of God, begotten by the holy pneuma, God's divine breath.

The latter expression may well take a few moments of our time, for in the creation God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life and thereby man became a living soul, i. e., man was a living soul after God had breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. On the day of Pentecost after the crucifixion of Jesus God breathed His divine breath upon the Jews that had gathered from distant points, whereby they were enabled to do wonderful works, including speaking in tongues as well as bringing back life to some who had died. God's holy breath appears to be His spiritual power.

The Apostle John in his Revelation of the future Christ gives us wonderful prophecies that it were well to heed. So much truth has been given us that we may well pay attention to the great truths still prophesied to us. Our salvation in the life to come may largely depend on what heed we give to the great promises of God.

AND OTHER CHRISTIANS COPY

SOMEWHERE in the upper reaches of the great Alpine Stract there lies a fertile valley, occupied by the remnant of the Mennonites who early settled here. These people are nonresistant, law-abiding, and peace-loving. At the passing of the period of bitter persecution, this little group found there a place of refuge and repose, and established laws for their protection.

They were farmers, tillers of the soil, and lived in the spirit of brotherly love. They were as a family of brothers living together, each mindful not only of his own interests but equally of the interests of others.

One day a misunderstanding arose between two neighbors concerning their boundary line. They discussed the matter and tried in every way to come to a proper understanding. But they failed to agree, and rather than allow any ill feeling between themselves, they decided to refer to the court and abide by its decision.

The day for the trial arrived and the farmer who lived farthest away, called David, came by where he found John, the other, hilling his potatoes.

"Come, John," said David, "let us go to the court."
"These potatoes will suffer if they are not hilled today," replied John; "you go to the court and tell the story. You know all about our differences and can tell them as well as I. First put your side before the court, and then mine. Stop on your way home and tell me the verdict."

So David went on alone, down the mountain side into the valley where the court held forth.

That evening at dusk David came plodding back up the mountain path. "Well, brother," he said, as John came to meet him halfway, "I went to court and put both sides before them, and the court decided in your favor."

"THE LORD IS COME!"

A S WE look back over the centuries that have come and gone since the angels' chorus awoke the echoes of the Judwan hills announcing the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem, and recall the nature of the hope which through the ages has animated the hearts of those who "waited for the redemption of Israel," and then compare that hope with the idea that has since become the basis of Christian faith and expectation, we are impressed with the conviction that the Jews of that period saw but half of the glory their Redeemer's birth signified, and that the nominal church today rejoices in but another portion of the hope that happy event should inspire!

The Jews were waiting, watching, longing, praying, for the coming of that Prince of the house of David who should redeem Israel from her enemies and reestablish her as a mighty nation upon the earth! Such was the expectation that lingered in the minds of the chosen people at the moment when heavenly voices were sent ringing through the hills, "Glory to God in the highest!" It was a national restoration that they expected would take place when Messiah came. It was an earthly kingdom He would immediately set up. The scattered tribes would be regathered, the throne of David rebuilt, and the glorious empire of Jehovah would once more be made a power and a glory in the world!

And the Jews were not mistaken in their hope!

As Christian men and women look back upon that day of gladness, as they join their voices in the anthem that the angels sang, they do so with a joy in their souls that is quite different from that which the Jewish shepherds experienced on that marvelous occasion. As a rule it is not of a national salvation that they dream as they bow their heads about that manger-bed! No thought of an earthly empire over which the Prince of Peace one day shall reign comes into their minds.

After the Star of Bethlehem fades from his sight the Christian of today fixes his attention upon the Cross of Calvary! And it is to the Cross he points with gratitude as he remembers that there it was that the price of his redemption from sin was paid by the precious blood of Jesus Christ, and so he sings:

> "In the cross of Christ I glory, Towering o'er the wrecks of time; All the light of sacred story Gathers round its head sublime!"

And the Christian is not mistaken in the estimate he places upon that symbol of sacrifice and of victory over sin! The Jew of the past and the Christian of the present are both right as to the meaning of the great event toward which even a star of heaven changed its course to point! The devout Simeon, who waited in the temple for "the consolation of Israel," did not wait in vain, for it was given unto him to see the One who would fulfill the promise God made to Abraham, "that he would grant unto us (Israel), that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies might serve him without fear."

And the day will come, it even now draws near, when the "lost sheep of the house of Israel" will all be found and gathered home. But Simcon must learn the other half of that promise of which Jesus spoke when He said, "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd." For it is the evident purpose of God "that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him." Thus Jew and Gentile are to be united at last in bonds of eternal union in the kingdom of God.

The Christian is right in his conclusion that remission of sins through the sacrifice of Christ is the heart of the gospel. But he must learn that the final result of such remission means a place on the throne of Jesus when He comes as King of kings and Lord of lords over all the earth. for then it is that the blessing promised at His birth will come to pass of "on earth peace, good will toward men!"

"The Master Is Come, and Calleth for Thee"

By Mary A. Gesin

M IDNIGHT. And the old Judean hills are wrapped in slumber. Light from myriad stars streams down upon the peaceful fields near Bethlehem. Drowsy shepherds rub their stiffened fingers before the cheerful blaze they have kindled as much to warm their waning spirits as their chilled bodies. All is well with the flocks; quietness enfolds them

But see! the dim blue light of night vanishes before a bright effulgence seeming to come from everywhere and nowhere. An angel appears before the startled vision of the watchers, an angel surrounded by a glory brighter than the splendor of the noonday sun. He speaks, and his words are words of greatest import:

"Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

Suddenly upon the still clear air sound the strains of entrancing music. Heavenly music, such as had never before been heard by humble shepherd folk. Glorious music from angel throats. Hark! What sings that celestial choir?

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Their fears quieted, their hopes raised, these roughlyelad men of the fields take their stumbling way hastily toward the lowly manger. Even so, as a tiny babe, did the Master all unconsciously call the shepherds of Bethlehem.

Over the brow of yonder distant hill a little cavaleade approaches. Often the riders glance toward a bright light which seems to point the way, a star of unusual brilliance. Kings they are; men of learning. Men who had studied the stars; men who had diligently searched the pages of God's own Book. Men now seeking the long-expected Messiah.

Thus did the One cradled in a manger, born to be a King, call these sages of the Orient. Bearing the treasures of their wealth, they lay them at the feet of God's beloved Son, a child in His mother's arms. They have found the Treasure they sought. They have answered His call.

Grown to manhood now is this God-given child. Over the same Judean hills He travels, calling the high and the low, the sinner and the sufferer. And these are His words:

"I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

On His mission of proclaiming the good tidings of the kingdom of God, Jesus comes to a home of sorrow, a home within whose sheltering walls He has often found rest. Martha hurries to meet Him, presenting her grief with these words: "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died."

Reassured by her Savior's declaration, "I am the resurrection and the life," Martha carries the message to Mary.

Perhaps no more welcome words ever fell upon mortal ears, "The Master is come, and calleth for thee." Answering His call, together with her sister, Mary nears the tomb of their brother Lazarus.

But see! bound in grave clothes the beloved form emerges at the Savior's call, "Lazarus, come forth." Their joy knows no bounds, this little reunited family.

The Master now is gone. The hills of Judæa no more echo to the tread of His feet. The sands of Galilee no more bear their imprint. For, His work completed, He has ascended to His Father.

But His voice comes ringing down the ages to us, the high, the low, the sinner, the sufferer. In tenderest tone He says, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. Not as the world giveth, give I unto you." Wondrous gift! It is ours, if we will answer His call.

Abreast of the Times

Peace in the Balkans

"On earth peace, good will toward men."-Luke 2:14.

Geneva, Dec. 10.—The threat of an immediate outbreak of a general European war which has kept the entire continent in a state of nervous apprehension for the past several weeks, and which was brought about by the assassination of King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia and the French Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, was temporarily dissipated tonight when Jugo-Slavia and Hungary agreed to submit their differences to the League of Nations and to abide by their decision.

This provides the most fitting Christmas present that could be presented to the world. Already the great Powers were beginning to combine into groups in apparent preparation for another titanic struggle, but the storm clouds have settled back behind the Balkan mountains and the political skies of Europe and of the world are for the moment clearing.

A Move Toward World Peace

"Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us."-Isaiah 26:12.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 12.—President Roosevelt appointed a committee today to draft legislation to present to the next Congress which would authorize the President in time of war to assume absolute power over industrial profits, wages, prices, and rents, together with the operation of all industries. The President told newspaper men this morning that "the time has come to take the profit out of war."

It will be recalled that President Wilson said shortly after the close of the war, "The seed of war in the modern world is industrial and commercial rivalry . . . This was an industrial and commercial war" (Sept. 5, 1919). This being true, it is not strange that war itself has been looked upon as an opportunity for the making of vast fortunes out of war materials. It is this profit stimulant to war that President Roosevelt would have removed by legislation.

Vengeance of the Godless

"Workers of iniquity, which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief is in their hearts."—Psalm 28:3.

Minsk, U. S. S. R., Dec. 11. — Shortly after they were convicted of counter-revolutionary activities, nine more alleged opposers of the Government were executed today. This brings the executions resulting from the recent "vengeful investigation of counter-revolutionary operations" to seventy-five.

The demand made by Soviet Russia some two years ago at Geneva, and repeated several times since to the League of Nations, that the nations disarm entirely, seems altogether inconsistent with the bloody manner in which they attempt to put down every protest against the existing tyrannous order in their own land. It will be well for other nations as well as students of prophecy to watch with the closest attention the internal developments in the land from which the mass of the Antichrist's army is to come.

Who Dated Their "Death Certificates"?

"In the words which man's wisdom teacheth. . . . "

JERUSALEM, Dec. 1.—Four human skeletons which paleontologists estimate to be over 100,000 years old have been uncarthed by excavators in a prehistoric cave near Nazareth. An authority with the American School of Oriental Research, Professor W. F. Albright, describes them as "undoubtedly a missing link in the evolution of mankind."

Like a worn out tire chain, the links in the chain of evolution break frequently and have to be replaced with new theory-links of man's fashioning. These in turn are soon found to be faulty and are discarded for others. The only unbreakable link uniting the present with the past and with the future is provided in the records and the prophecies of God's Word!

Churches in Russia

"That man of sin . . . who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God."—2 Thess. 2:3, 4.

Moscow, Dec. 1.—M. Yaroslavsky, chief of the "Godless Society," the object of which is to stamp out religion in Russia, reports that there are 100,000 churches still open in the country, but it is generally known that their influence among the mass of the people has been practically destroyed. Few attend the services, it is said, but the aged. Belief in God is looked upon as intellectual weakness by the Soviet regime. Of the churches whose doors now remain open for services about forty are located in the capital, where formerly there were upwards of a thousand. Churches are no longer summarily closed down by the Government, but they are taxed heavily to discourage people from going to them.

Under What Conditions?

By Norman John MacLeod

"TELL me in a few words just what the difference between your people and other denominations is."

"Perhaps the greatest difference between our beliefs and those of other people is what is called by our people our belief in 'Conditional Immortality.'

That is, we believe that when a man is dead he is dead, and that he gains life only through Christ's sacrifice; in himself he has no life; physically he is as any beast, but he shall live if he fulfills the conditions of Christianity because his Savior died for him."

"Then you think that your little group and those that believe like you are the only ones that will be saved?"

"No, there are many righteous in other groups who will be saved the same as we; in fact we believe that all come forth to life at the time of the resurrection. The vast majority of mankind indeed shall be saved from the hold of death."

"You say you believe in 'Conditional Immortality'? What are then the conditions?"

Perhaps we have never been confronted by such a quizzing as this, but when we boast of a fundamental doctrine called "Conditional Immortality," let us realize that that indicates that in order to qualify for "glory, honour, immortality, eternal life" we must fulfill certain conditions. What are those conditions?

The entire history of the church is one of selection. Abraham was selected from the selected line of Seth; of the seed of Abraham, Isaac was selected; of the children of Isaac, Jacob was selected; of the sons of Jacob, Judah was chosen; of the tribe of Judah, the family of David was selected. For what purpose? That the Savior might be born in the "chosen" line. That was a selection all the way along. When the children of Israel left Egypt there was a group estimated at about two million people: of those two million people only two (of those over twenty years of age) entered the Promised Land. Why? Because of sins they died in the wilderness and failed to enter into the "rest of Joshua." Why, we might ask, were certain men chosen from the entire race of mankind to serve certain purposes? Was it not because they fulfilled certain conditions? Was it not because they lived according to a certain definite plan? If not, then the Scriptures do not make good sense! For they speak of the reward that shall be the lot of the faithful and of the destruction, sometimes punishment, that shall be the lot of the faithless. That is why we are "conditionalists."

"For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be. But the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace."—Psalm 37:9-11.

During the late Middle Ages when the doctrines of the mediaeval church began to be questioned, along with the other elements of our civilization, certain hard, cold facts confronted the churchmen of the day. The revival of learning of the Renaissance cast doubt upon many of the sacred prerogatives of the church; the "Donation of Constantine" (that Constantine had given a certain portion of land in Italy to the papacy) was proved false by one of the staunchest churchmen of the day, Marsillius of Padua. Erasmus, perhaps one of the greatest reformers to stay within the fold of the church, pointed with great telling sarcasms at the evils of the papal court. Martin Luther saw that the administration of the church and its treasury were at the seat of all evils. Because "purgatory" was the doctrine upon which the attack of the early Protestants was centered it fell under condemnation, and was cast out by the new denominations. The "indulgences" were to help to get the "souls" of the lost ones out of purgatory (a place of purging) and their sale was to replenish the papal treasury. To attack purgatory with its attendant "indulgences" was to attack one of the most aggravated questions of all. In most of the nations of Western Europe the monarchs were powerful enough to prevent money seeking its way across the Alps into the papal treasury; indulgences had been a forbidden means of raising money for a long time in England, France, and Spain. But in Germany there was no powerful monarch to say to the Pope, "No." Purgatory thus became a much involved political-religious question. But in the new Protestant churches "purgatory" was eliminated. minister of such churches was thus confronted with the alternative in his theology of either heaven or hell. Either a man must be saved and go to heaven, or he must be lost and go to hell. There was no place for the great "unwashed majority" who were neither good nor bad. Calvinism added its touch of "predestination" to make the teachings of the newer religions very severe indeed. As a representative of this type of thing the Puritan preacher, Jonathan Edwards, said there would be "infants in hell a span long"; that the "road to hell was paved with good intentions"; and kindred ideas.

When the ardor of a new religion and its system of rewards and punishments had begun to decline and grow less furious due to the new influences of religious toleration and indifference, the idea of such severe punishment for the men who were neither good nor bad as eternal torment, hell, began to receive less emphasis. Now only a comparatively small group believes that there is such a thing as eternal torment: it has gone into the "limbo of forgotten things." "Fundamentalism" is a protest against this growing tendency to "preach everybody off to heaven" whether he is good, bad, or indifferent. But even under "Fundamentalism" only the very boldest of ministers would say that the deceased person for whom he is preaching a funeral has gone to eternal torment. That would be too daring a thing for a ministry, especially that of the "itching palm." The church at large has done away with the "conditions" to immortality. They have assumed that everybody has immortality by nature, and that there must be some future abode for the "departed soul." But from that point we see that we must start another line of reasoning: there is no such thing as the "immortality of the soul." Science finds no such thing as inherent immortality; common sense cannot understand it; and the Bible does not teach it. But are we following into the path of "Unconditionalism"? If we are, then we are no better off than those who follow the teachings of natural immortality. Then we are getting back to the "Modernist" point of view where there is nothing in store for mankind but eternal bliss regardless of whether it has earned it or not. If we make a promise to our children based upon the fulfillment of conditions, and then reward them regardless of their conduct, we break down discipline completely and spoil the child. Can the justice of human parents exceed that of the Father of mankind? Furthermore, "Conditionalism" is taught in almost every section of the Bible, and is the entire basis upon which it is built.

The portion of Scripture quoted at the head of our article sets up conditions which are repeated again and again throughout the entire Bible: do they mean anything? or are they merely rhetorical phrases designed for literary exercise? In the language of our Savior we read: "For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:20. "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."—Matt. 7:13, 14. Life is the reward; what could be the punishment but death?

A King Is Born

By Harry Gockler

FOR years the Jews had looked and hoped for a Messiah to come and deliver them out of the hands of the hated Romans. Their constant prayer was for a King who should rule them in power and justice and make their nation ruler over all.

The years rolled by, however, and as yet no Deliverer had come. Still they looked and waited. Had not the Prophet Isaiah said that "a king should reign in right-cousness"? Surely the prophecy in Isaiah 9:6, 7 must be fulfilled!

Then it happened. While shepherds were watching their flocks by night, behold, an angel of the Lord announced to them these words found in Luke 2:11, "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Their King had come.

Wise men from the East also came, saying, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." It was the herald of the newborn King, the One who was the promised seed of David and would sit upon "the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob for ever."

Thus was Israel's King born. But, alas, the people refused to accept Him as their Leader, and although He was presented as Israel's King (Matt. 21:1-11), yet the multitude of Jews did not accept Him as their King.

Persecuted, denounced, spat upon, and betrayed, He was led to the cross and crucified. Above Him were placed the words, "THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS."

. But because He was the true Son of God He was raised from the dead and ascended into heaven, leaving His disciples this promise, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1:11.

Nearly two thousand years have passed since that time and still the church is waiting for His return. That bright day of hope cannot dawn while the King remains in exile. The kingdom must await the coming of the King.

We are living in troublous times and everything seems to indicate that we are in the "last days." The King's return is drawing near and when He comes He will assume His prophetic office as King of the Jews, build up the tabernacle of David that is fallen down, and sit on David's throne (Matt. 27:11; Acts 15:15, 16; Luke 1:32, 33). He will come to set up the long awaited kingdom of God, and to usher in earth's eternal day of glory.

Yes, the King is coming again and it behooves each of its to so live his life that when the Nobleman returns he may reign with Him who will be crowned King of kings and Lord of lords.

The Birthday of Jesus

By Grace M. Marsh

JUST at this time of the year when every child in civilized countries is looking forward to Christmas with a queerly thrilling anticipation it behooves us to pause in our activities and consider the reason for it all. That it is a day set apart when father and mother, grandmother, uncles, aunts, and cousins as well as a mythical Santa Claus deluge the children and each other with gifts, and surfeit themselves with rich food, almost every normal child over three years of age will tell you. But what a sad reflection on our methods of teaching at home and in Sunday school that those same children need prompting to say, "It is the birthday of Jesus."

According to the Popular and Critical Bible Encyclopedia the first records that are known of the observance of December 25 in honor of the Nativity of our Lord date from the second century. That the day is not His actual birthday few will doubt. But even as it was good for the Israelites to celebrate the feast of tabernacles, the ingathering, the Passover, and numerous sabbaths, so it is good for us to observe such days as Easter, Good Friday, and Christmas as memorials of the gift and sacrifice of our Savior.

It is only too evident that the Christmas festivities as we observe them today are a composite of the traditional festivals of many lands. The tree from the old Norse legend, the holly and mistletoe from old England, the giving of gifts from the Germans all blend in one glad festival in which should be uppermost the joyous conviction that we are one year nearer the time when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea," for "God himself shall be with them, and be their God."

This assimilation into our Christian service of worship of the traditions of other lands would seem to be condoned by Paul in his first letter to the church at Corinth. For, he says, to us there is but one God and the earth is His and the fullness thereof. What, therefore, could be more fitting and proper than that the most beautiful of our art, our poetry, and our music, as well as our clothing, food, and ornaments, should be used in honor of Him?

But how often we, like Belshazzar of old, produce all our finest china filled with our richest food and after asking God's blessing to rest upon it we proceed to desecrate it all by our behavior. May God keep us, while Jesus tarries, in the way that leads to life. May He give us strength in the coming year to do deeds of love to the aged, the infirm, the discouraged, and the young. May all we do be a memorial to Jesus Christ, the baby, the teacher, the savior.

A Gift of Peace

By Paul M. Hatch

OD'S gifts are numerous. One of the more important is His proclamation of peace to the world when the Child of Bethlehem was born in the days of Augustus Casar, the Roman imperium. Those were the historic days when the flower of the Augustan Age was unfolding. A subjugated peace was prevalent with all its tyrannies, squalor or poverty among the poor, and pompous extravagance and elegance among the ruling classes, due to a crushing tax upon the empire. Rome was being adorned in its marble. The rest of the world was being stripped of almost bare necessities. Legions of soldiers were being supported to maintain the peace internally and fighting costly wars abroad, especially in the north of Europe against the stubborn German tribes.

Such were the times when God moved toward His people with a gift of inestimable value. Those times in many respects were not unlike the present. If daily newspapers had been possible in those days no doubt they would have contained news of horrible happenings, such as make up the news today; banditry, murder, robbery, intrigue, revenge, bribery were prevalent because Rome and her rulers were rich but the rest of the world were poor.

It is evident that God was either at peace with the world or He saw the great necessity of a gift of peace in those days. Probably both were true. Not that God was at all pleased with the drift of the prevailing system of both civil rule and religious authority. He certainly was not. But He could through peace accomplish His purposes more effectively. Christ became then the embodiment of the will of His Father. A peaceful life and mien were His all through the sojourn on earth.

By peace and sacrifice He broke the enmity among all peoples and especially between those as generally desig-Ptease turn to Page Eighteen

My Christmas Gift

By Lyman Booth

"Consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.... He prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation; and not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad."—John 11:50 and 51.

CHRISTMAS time for 1934 is here. For many centuries people have celebrated the day in various ways. During these years a great change in the manner of its observance has taken place. When the star of Bethlehem with heavenly light guided the shepherds over Judæan hills and vales, and the wise men from the East, to the birthplace of one who, in time, was to be King of the Jews and Savior of the world, the wise men traveled many miles to worship the babe, who was born in fulfillment of the longings and hopes of the ages.

Three striking incidents mark the birth and infancy of our Lord. First, the midnight appearance of the angelic host to the shepherds on the plains of Bethlehem, and their visit to the village in which the great birth had occurred that night; second, the presentation of Jesus as the firstborn child in the temple, and the testimony there given concerning Him in the prophetic utterances of Simeon and Anna; and third, the visit of the wise men from the East, and the worship rendered, and the rich presents presented to the newborn child. Each of these had its special wonders; each gave a supernatural testimony to the greatness and importance of the occasion; and when woven together they form a wreath of heavenly glory hung by the divine hand around the infancy of the son of Mary.

After the shepherds' visit came the magi or wise men from the East, probably from Persia, where they held a place and power such as the Chaldeans had in Babylon. They formed a tribe or easte, priestly in office, and princely in rank. They were the depositaries of nearly all knowledge or of science in their native country. The education of royalty was intrusted to them, and they filled all the chief offices of state, and constituted the supreme council of the realm. The honor paid to the magi shows that they were persons of high rank, persons of royal service at the court of their king.

Jesus was promised as the Savior and deliverer of all nations, and proofs of His coming to fulfill His high mission were given to pious Jews and Gentiles. Declarations were made to both while He was yet a child of His official character. The shepherds and magi were brought by divine direction to pay their homage to Him. We can attribute such testimonies as these only to Deity, for God would have among all the ranks of intelligent beings a few to be witnesses of His Son. While the shepherds had the first, the sages from the East had the next, visit to the newborn king. Thus we see simplicity first, and science next, find the way to Christ.

While we have no distant, silent star to beekon us to seek Christ, we have a more sure word of prophecy—the Bible in which prophets and apostles conspire to bring us to the Savior. His history was brief but gloriously finished. We have not only His lowly manger, but His cross and tomb and resurrection, as reminders of His humility and greatness. The sands of Judæa, Samaria, and Galilee bore the imprint of His sandals, and a cloud received Him from the sight of friends and bore Him heavenward, while an angelic voice gave the cheering promise that He would return.

The shepherds and magi, with fervency of spirit and sincerity of purpose, worshiped the child and bestowed upon Him their praise and presents. There was no feasting, no table burdened with a sumptuous supply of good things to eat and drink. There was nothing to detract from the solemnity and dignity of the occasion.

The child grew to noble manhood, traveled much, doing good everywhere He went, giving sight to the blind, hearing to deaf ears, speech to the dumb, strength to the feeble, life to the dead, joy to the broken-hearted, and many other gifts, and finally gave His life upon the cross that a sinful race might live. Does the world appreciate the gift? Are people grateful for the sacrifice He made in their behalf? I greatly fear that the great majority have lost sight of the proper service and worship that should be observed. Instead, it has become the custom for people to exchange complimentary greetings and presents. They go visiting, to dine sumptuously, to visit the theater, and otherwise to enjoy a "royal good time."

He gave His life that we may also live—a priceless gift. Shall we be less generous with Him than we are with our friends and kin? We can show our appreciation for His gift in no better form than by presenting our bodies as a living sacrifice to Him, for it is a reasonable service. If we do this on Christmas or on any other day we will not fail to receive the benefit of His gift. The costliest jeweled diadems worn by earth's monarchs can, in no degree, compare in wealth and beauty with the gleaming crowns He will bestow to those who faithfully serve Him, and who give their lives into His keeping. Who would not rejoice in receiving such a gift?

The Hope of Eternal Life

PPROXIMATELY fifty times in the Gospels and Epistles of A John are life and eternal life spoken of as that which Christ our Savior came to bestow upon man, and what we affirm is that these words are to be understood in their plain and literal sense, and that such is the only meaning they could have had to those who heard them from the lips of our Lord and His apostles. For let it be remembered that the belief in the inherent immortality of the soul, "the lie which rules mankind," as it has been called, was not then "in possession," so to speak, as it now is. Many of the Lord's hearers for instance were Sadducees, who denied the truth of the resurrection, and had no hope whatever of a future life, and, as in Jewry, so was it amongst the heathen. The great mass of mankind believed death to be the end, and that the grave would hold them fast forever, True, the philosophers reasoned and speculated regarding the great question of immortality, but with little conviction as to its certainty. Witness the last words of Socrates to his judges: "I am going out of the world, and you are to remain in it, but which of us has the better part is a secret to everyone but the gods"; and Cicero, whom the Rev. G. P. McKay, in Immortality on God's Terms, describes as "incomparably the ablest defender and most cloquent advocate of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul that the heathen world has ever produced." nevertheless was compelled to say: "I have perused Plato with the greatest diligence and exactness over and over again; but know not how it is; whilst I read him I am convinced: when I lay the book aside and begin to consider of myself the soul's immortality, all the conviction instantly ceases." To the philosophers, therefore, it was no more than a fond hope, whilst, as regards mankind in general, the Rev. F. B. Tinling, in The Promise of Life, writes: "In the days of Socrates-in the home and springtime of philosophymost men, according to the great moralist's testimony, believed that at death the soul perished with the body, and his statement was confirmed by the fact that in the great plague of Athens, the multitude, instead of being moved by religious faith to prepare for a future state, plunged into excesses of sensuality as having no expectation of anything that could be spared to them by death. If this was the case with Greece in the height of her glory, it would be strange indeed if the rest of the world, for the most part comparatively thoughtless and barbarous, were found to have generally possessed a consciousness of immortality." That this is true is confirmed by the words of the Apostle Paul to the Thessalonians, bidding them in their bereavements not to sorrow as those "which have no hope," referring manifestly to the belief of the heathen that the dead had perished. Surely these facts are evidence enough that when the glad message of the gospel first came to the nations, that God's gracious purpose in sending His Son into the world was that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life, no other meaning could possibly have been conveyed to their minds by such words than that what they held to be the certain end of all, to perish, would not befall those who repented and believed the gospel, but, on the contrary, the unspeakable gift of life, life eternal, life for evermore, would be theirs through the infinite mercy and grace of God. In a letter written by Lucian, an official of the Roman Empire about A. D. 170, is said: "These miserable men have no doubt but they shall be immortal and live forever."-Biblical Guide, Urquhart, Vol. VII, p. 269. Whether Lucian uses the word "miserable" in pity, because of their sufferings of which he gives account, or uses it in contempt, we know not, but the sentence is of value as showing that Christians stood out in striking contrast with others as men, who had a sure hope of immortality and of eternal life.

NEW TESTAMENT WITNESS

The truth of immortality through Christ alone rests not upon a few isolated passages; it is the witness of the New Testament from beginning to end. In the Epistle to the Hebrews, 1:10, we read: "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thine hands: they shall perish; but thou remainest"; and our Lord in His discourse in the synagogue at Capernaum said: "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that which endureth unto everlasting life." And, yet again, St. John in his first Epistle writes: "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever." Is it, we ask, possible to read these verses and not be convinced that the contrast in each of them is one of bransitoriness on the one hand and permanence on the other? And in no other way, we submit, can the words of John 3:16 be rightly interpreted: "That whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." In speaking of Himself as the Bread of Life, our Lord says, not he that eateth of this Bread shall be blessed forever, true though we know that to be, but "he that eateth of this bread shall live for ever." Bread and water, which latter symbol Christ also uses of the gift He came to bestow, are not expressive of the joys and good things of life, but of the absolute necessities of existence.

It has been pointed out that the Syriac Version of the New Testament has to give tife and Life-Giver as the equivalents of to save and Savior, these renderings emphasizing the fact that it is death from which Christ comes to save by the impartation of a new and divine life.

WORLD TO COME

We have now to ask, When and how is eternal life to be entered upon? And we answer: In the world to come, and by means of the resurrection of the dead and the changing of the living when the Lord comes. To His disciples the Savior said: "There is no man that hath forsaken house or brethren . . . for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, . . . and in the world to come eternal life," these words plainly showing that it is a future award; and, as we have said, for those who have fallen asleep it will be entered upon in the glorious resurrection. It is noteworthy that in the sixth chapter of John's Gospel, in which our Lord speaks again and again of eternal life as the great boon He came to confer, He adds, in relation to the man who believes on Him, the promise: "And I will raise him up at the last day." A promise which is repeated in that chapter four times. Why this emphasis, this fourfold repetition, if not to indicate that resurrection and not death is the gate of eternal life? And the same is true of the words of the inspired Apostle in his letter to the Thessalonians. For he says: "For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so ("thus," or "in this manner") shall we ever be with the Lord."

Like the Apostle, then, we, too, through grace, live, "in hope of eternal life," and, as exhorted in the Epistle of Jude, are "looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, unto eternal life." For, "when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory."

But, some will say, does not the Scripture say, "He that believeth on the Son halh eternal life"? and does not this imply present possession? We would reply that in one sense it is so, for it is written, "God hath given to us the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." Nevertheless the fact that we are told to look for it and to hope for it is evidence that we have it not yet in actual possession, and that the words "hath everlasting life" imply that we have it by God's pledge and promise. Our Lord, speaking of His own to the Father, said in that same prayer of John 17: "The glory which thou gavest me I have given them." Here, without question, it is the promise and pledge of glory which is intended to be understood, since His disciples were still in the world, persecuted, afflicted, hated, and some of them shortly to suffer death itself for His sake. But as it was the Savior's gracious intention that His disciples should be with Him in glory, and He had promised them that they should be with Him, He speaks by anticipation, as though it were already accomplished. It is the same apostle who speaks of eternal life as though it were already possessed, who has said: "And this is the promise which he hath promised us-eternal life."

And here we have the basis of our hope, the foundation on which it rests. The promise of God; of "God, who cannot lie." What a foundation on which to rest! For "hath he said and shall he not do it, or hath he spoken and shall it not come to pass?" "I give unto my sheep eternal life; and they shall never perish. . . . My Father, who gave them me, is greater than all; and no one is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. I and my Father are one "

HOPE A REALITY

If this hope is not to each of us a present and joyous reality, how may it become so? The answer is clear; given to us by one who named himself "chief" of sinners: "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief. Howbeit for this cause I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all longsuffering for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life evertasting." "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death," says James the Apostle, but "Christ Jesus came into the word to save sinners," and this by dying "for our sins according to the scriptures," by His burial and glorious resurrection; and now the promise of God to us sinful men is that "if thou shalt confess with the mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shall be saved."

One final word; upon the last page of holy Scripture there is a sevenfold mention of the words "this book," It is the final call of God from heaven to men on earth to "hear" and "keep" the things which are "written in this book." To turn from the vain philosophies and teachings of men and to hearken to His Word, "the word of the Lord which liveth and abideth for ever." And, further, upon this same last page of holy Scripture, there is a fivefold reference to this great theme of life, life through Christ and His redemption. For, there is the vision of the river of water of life; of the tree of life also, with the blessed invitation and benediction: "Let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely," and, "Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." And finally, the sacred Record closes with the mention of the book of life, reminding us of our Savior's words to His disciples: "Rejoice that your names are written in heaven."

In the prophecy of Isaiah we are told of a time when God shall purge the iniquity of Jerusalem by the spirit of judgment and by the spirit of burning, and it is added, "It shall come to pass that he that is left in Zion, and he that remaineth in Jerusalem, shall be called holy, even every one that is written among the living (margin: written to life) in Jerusalem." God grant that in that great coming day, when God shall cleanse not Jerusalem but the entire universe, we may, through His mercy and grace, be found numbered amongst those whose names will be found written in the book of life.—A. J. Neale in Words of Life.

WE all of us tend to rise or fall together. If any set of us go down the whole nation sags a little; if any of us raise ourselves a little, then by just so much, the nation as a whole is raised.—Theodorc Roosevelt.

Jesus' Resurrection an Intellectual Necessity

IF JESUS arose from the dead it was a miracle. If it was a miracle it was the climax of the miraculous. It was a fact transcendent even in His transcendent career. If miracle can be compared with miracle that was the miracle above all other miracles.

There was a time when miracles were a help to faith; they had evidential value. Times have changed and now miracles are a hindrance to the faith of many who are trained in scientific ways of thinking. But times may change again and miracles may then seem not so quite impossible, not so quite preposterous. One notes how prone the great scientific writers of our day are to say, "We do not know"; "We do not understand how"; "The best we can do is to string together fragmentary knowledge"; "We build our science with symbols, but beneath the symbols we cannot probe." Since science confesses its ignorance; since it has found its own limitations; since it grows humble in the persons of its greatest devotees, faith may still as of old find room in God's universe of mysteries for what we (for the want of a better name) call miracles. The microscope, the telescope, the crucible deal with the natural; that is, with the visible and tangible and ponderable. Faith finds the higher-natural. Sonnets are not measured by the yardstick, and prayers have no chemical reagents. Why should science deny the higher-natural? Why should the microscope be against the resurrection?

Something happened on that first Easter morning. Reason demands it. Reason is not satisfied with a cross and a tomb. Pentecosts and Pauline letters and higher civilizations do not grow out of horrible Roman crosses and untouchable Syrian tombs. The historian who knows what happened between the years 3 and 100 A. D. and thereafter, knows also that something happened more than a death and a burial, even though the death and burial were those of the strangest, greatest, and most gracious man that ever lived.

The theme is a bold one, namely, that the resurrection of Jesus is an intellectual necessity. By way of illustration this is what is meant. In 1846 Leverrier, a French astronomer, discovered disturbances in the orbit of Uranus for which he could find no cause among the known planets of our solar system. He reasoned that if there were another planet of a certain dimension moving in a certain orbit that would account for the disturbance of Uranus. He asked a German astronomer to search the sky at a designated spot with his great telescope; he did so and-Neptune was discovered! Neptune, unknown, became an intellectual necessity to the astronomer who knew that Uranus was off the track of his calculations. More recently our new planet Pluto was discovered in the same way. Pluto became to the astronomers a mental necessity; Pluto had to be to satisfy the knowing minds that move among the stars.

There have been disturbances in the orbit of history for which there is no explanation aside from the reappearance of Jesus after His death and burial.

First: His disciples were discouraged; they were brokenhearted and scattered. They thought of their Master as a national, militant, Jewish Messiah, who should drive out the Romans and "restore again the kingdom to Israel." In their Master's death they saw the end of their hopes and the defeat of their plans. They could not get the gauge of His mind or the wealth of His love or His plans for peace and world redemption. By His death they were scattered. Their leader said, "I do not know him." He swore, "1 do not know him." He told the truth. It broke his heart. He "went out and wept bitterly." Fifty days later that man stood up in Jerusalem (together with more than a hundred others) and preached daringly that Jesus was the Christ. Bravely he challenged the enemies of his Master. He dared to say to them, "Him therefore whom you have taken and with wicked hands have crucified and slain hath God raised from the dead, and made both Lord and Christ." Three thousand were converted. The apostles were transformed and by their preaching they transformed others. Something other than death and burial must have happened. It is life, not death, that so lifts the souls of men.

Again, there is the church—a new institution among men, with a new note for the lives of men, and a new hope in human history. Generations of warfare against old pagan cults; centuries of poverty and persecution; unceasing cross-purposes with 'the world, the flesh, and the devil,' have not crushed, dislodged, or discouraged this new institution among men. It stands. It teaches. It preaches. It inspires reformations, abolitions, prohibitions. It wins—not always at first, but at last. Such an institution is not built on "cunningly devised fables." Socrates left—only philosophy. Jesus left—a church! But Socrates did not rise from the dead.

Or, there is the New Testament. It is a little book of books, the most dynamic, the most transforming, the most challenging body of writings in all "the tide of time." Among the writings that reach the souls of men this is confessedly first. Did fishermen compose it as they stood cowering and disheartened round a tomb bearing a Roman seal and protected by a Roman guard? Or did an empty tomb and a risen Master give them the heart to write and the story to transcribe?

These disturbances (they amount to advancements) in the lives of men; in the history of religion and civilization; and in world literature, demand a cause. Despair transmuted into hope demands a cause. A forlorn love growing into a conquering faith demands a cause. Saul of Tarsus transformed into Paul the Apostle demands a cause. That cause must be something more than crucifixion and death.

Even the sublime manner of the dying of the crucified One could not have wrought such changes. It is that "Life which is overlord of Death" as shown in the resurrection that works in such transcendent ways.—W. J. Lhamon in The Community Churchman.

REJOICE!

Tune: "Marching Through Georgia."

Watchman, sound the trumpet, for the sword is coming on; Give it no "uncertain sound," but blow it loud and long, Many are the sleeping ones who need to join the throng,

While we are marching to Canaan.

CHORUS:

Rejoice! the Lord will bring the jubilee,

Rejoice! the Lord will set the captives free;

We'll trust and work and watch and wait, till Jesus we shall see.

Then we will enter bright Canaan,

Babylon, Medo-Persia, and proud Grecia all are past,
The Roman kingdom also is divided up at last;
We're looking now for Christ to come, whose reign will ever last.

While we are marching to Canaan.

The nations all are angry, but the angels hold the winds, Until the saints of God are sealed, forsaking all their sins; The Holy Spirit is the seal which each true soldier wins, While we are marching to Canaan.

Perilous indeed the times we're living in today, Skeptics, infidels, and crimes hold universal sway; The lukewarm church also inclines to fail to watch and pray, While we are marching to Canaan.

The sea and waves are roaring, and men's hearts do fail for fear,

These things which now are on the earth proclaim His coming near;

So now lift up your heads in faith, and never, never fear, While we are marching to Canaan.

There's nothing now to indicate the Bridegroom tarries

So let's proclaim the tidings glad with trumpet and with song

Exhorting all the tribes of earth to come and join our throng,

While we are marching to Canaan.

-Selected by Mrs. F. M. Cawby.

"THE MASTER IS COME, AND CALLETH FOR THEE"

Not without a promise of return to the watching disciples, Hè left the scenes of His ministry. "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner." And soon, soon upon the startled world again shall burst the angelic chorus. Anew a light of heaven's own splendor shall shine upon the troubled earth.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

May we at this anniversary of His first coming, cleanse our hearts of pride and selfishness and all that is evil, that at His second coming, whether waking or sleeping, we will answer His call and go forth with joy to meet Him.

O Star, whose wondrous light Shone o'er th' Judæan hill, And led by radiance bright The humble shepherds, till They found the One whose birth Brought peace and joy to earth—Lead us again this night, Teach us, the proud, the low, Till we shall live aright, Led onward by thy glow, And hear the glorious call Of Christ, the Lord of all.

O Heralds of the King,
Sound forth thy music sweet;
Till all the earth shall ring,
Thy message glad repeat;
And wise men with the meek
The Christ again shall seek.
Guide us ancw this day;
Help us His will to do;
Then all shall find the way
Once sought by shepherds few,
When angels from heaven's dome
Announce, "The Lord is come."

These are the gifts I ask of Thee, Spirit serene—Strength for the daily task; courage to face the road; Good cheer to help me bear the traveler's load, And for the hours of rest that come between, An inward joy in all things heard and seen.

-Henry Van Dyke.

Christmas Program

HE MOVED ponderously and slowly along the iev cement of the sidewalk. In the red and green glow from the bright windows of the bakery, the grocery, and dry goods store he looked dark and alien. Some of the hurrying procession of the streets stared at him briefly; because in that small a town one should know everybody. But the man was unconscious of any curious stares. He seemed unaware of all about him. You would not suppose he even knew it was Christmas Eve.

Christmas Eve! Oh, it was surely Christmas Eve in the little town. The very air should have told you, if by miraculous indifference you could ignore the silver, the green, the gold, the crimson, the holly on the lamp posts, the shining tree in the drug store window, the very special glitter in the snow and ice, and almost too picturesque to be true, the occasional soft, big flakes which were coming thicker, to make the gala scene quite complete. The man was not ignoring them, either. He was aware of it all, very much so. But the bitter smile on his face would have hurt you if it had suddenly confronted you in the mood of gayety the setting and time demanded. The man was thinking how little Christmas Eve in the town was changed in thirty-five years. True, when he was twenty years old, the grocery store was not a chain grocery, and the lights were not so numerous and bright, but it was much the same. He noticed a jack knife in a window that was surely just like the one that had gladdened his heart as a carefree boy. He stopped and stared curiously. One would suspect him of wishing that age-old and always futile wish: that time would turn back and make him young again. But he was not.

The man was bitter, and not without reason. He was alone, utterly alone on this Christmas Eve. The barren cheerlessness of his room was too much for him, so he came out to walk in the snow. It was his home town, but none spoke to him. He had been there not quite a month and he had made no friends. He avoided those who might remember him from thirty-five years ago and they had certainly not tried to find him! He supposed they were afraid he would want loans or favors. Well, at least he had his living, his work. Work! As a clerk in the same sort of business he once knew only as an executive. And lucky to have that, he knew. It still seemed a dream, that overnight all his goods, his secure life were taken away, and he was back in his birthplace, alone and friendless and very, very poor. Christmas Eve, it was, and last Christmas he had played golf in Florida, and next year? In his grave, he hoped, feeling utterly forlorn and desolate.

Just then a little group paused beside him to look at the shining array of toys. Two little boys, no, three; and surely as many little girls. They were so innocently noisy and gay and so vastly interested in the dolls and fire trucks and sleds that the man could not help noticing them. Their mother was plump, and evidently goodnatured, he perceived, for she let them look a moment, then called them away.

"Come on," she said, "we'll be late for the program."

The Christmas program! The man watched them hurry away. They would make neat stairsteps, he meditated, from the tallest red-cheeked girl to the tiny boy swathed in a blue muffler. He knew the sort of home they came from, too; the warm kitchen smelling of fresh cookies, the cheerful shabby living room. Why shouldn't he? He could remember just such a home.

The Christmas program! Upon a sudden impulse he followed the little group.

The church was not far away. It was a little church, looking, it is true, very much like a box set down among the trees, but its windows were bright, and people streamed through its door. The man hesitated a moment, then walked resolutely up the steps and inside, and found a back scat.

Soon the church quieted down, and a breathless hush settled over the crowd. The lights were dimmed. A tableau! The man leaned forward, not aware that he was as eager as the widest-eyed child. He saw in the dimness robed figures of men, scated around a fire. The shepherds! Suddenly there was music and sweet voices singing,

"The first Nocl, the angel did say,

Was to certain poor shepherds in fields as they lay. . . "

He strained his ears, not willing to miss a single word. How readily the familiar words came back, after all those years!

"In the fields where they lay keeping their sheep;
In the cold winter night that was so deep.
Noel, Noel, Noel, Noel!
Born is the King of Israel!"

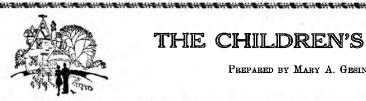

The man sat as in a dream, listening to the words he had not thought of for so long:

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

He listened to the sweet songs of Jesus' birth, and the voices of children lifted up in praise and thanksgiving for their Savior.

He watched the representation of the girl mother and the Baby, and the choir of white-robed little girls singing,

CHRISTMAS DAY WITH UNCLE TOM

"TT SEEMS to be entirely unavoidable, Mother," said Father as he pushed back his chair and arose from the breakfast table.

"But, Father, you and Mother simply can't be away for Christmas," wailed Jimmie. "Whatever will John and I do?"

"Keep quiet, Jimmie, and wait till we're left alone before you holler," advised John, always the steadier twin.

And as she left the room, Mother, addressing her remarks to Father's disappearing back, said, "It's unthinkable, but ---''

Christmas was only ten days off; all family plans had been laid. And here was the disturbing news that Father's younger brother's ship was touching harbor the day before Christmas, and they must see him if for only a few hours. Then he would be gone again for two years.

Immediately a letter was dispatched to Uncle Tom in a nearby city, asking him as a special favor to Mother to entertain the boys for the day. The remainder of the time Mother and Father would need to be absent, they would be well cared for by Tillie, Mother's trusted old helper who lived just down the street.

The very next night Jimmie, already consoled by promises of a really happy New Year's Day, began to surmise just what sort of celebration their young bachelor uncle would plan for them. He and John were finally tucked in bed and ready to drop off to sleep.

"I know he'll take us to a big hotel for Christmas with turkey and all the fixin's," mused Jimmie, his mouth watering in anticipation.

"You always think about eats first, don't you, buddie?" laughed John. "But, then. I guess I do, too." And together they pictured a wonderful Christmas Day in the city with their favorite uncle.

All too soon the time came for Father and Mother to leave. Christmas was just two days away. Tillie had come and had been instructed concerning the gifts for the boys. their tree, and other plans for their happiness. John's last question of Mother was whether it would be all right if they should change any of their plans at the last minute.

"Whatever Uncle Tom says is all right with me, John. Consult him first," said Mother.

As soon as they were gone, John told Jimmie what he was thinking, had been thinking, in fact, for a week.

"You know, buddie, those kids in our room at school who live with their aunt in that rickety house. Well, I'd like to show them a real Christmas in a real home."

PROGRAMMENT PROGRAMMENT AND PR

"Yes, but who wants to have a couple of girls around all day without Mother to look after them? The boys mightn't be so bad," growled Jimmie.

"They're awfully quiet girls, I noticed, kind of scaredlike. They wouldn't bother us boys," John reassured him.

"But what about Uncle Tom? He'd be awfully disappointed, not having us for his company on Christmas Day,' countered Jimmie.

And so they had it back and forth all day. At times John wavered, thinking of the joy of being almost grownup and spending the day as they had planned. Then the thought would come to him of those two girls and two boys who had to spend every Christmas without a father or a mother, only an old aunty too weary and careworn to plan any fun. And finally John won the day.

Quickly Uncle Tom was apprised by telephone of the proposed change. Would be come out and spend the day with them instead? Could he buy five presents, for two girls and two boys and one old aunt? Did he think Father and Mother would care?

Questions and answers flew back and forth between Uncle Tom and John, until at last all was arranged. "All set," called their uncle, "I'll see you bright and early Christmas morning. We'll get the kids in my car. Goodbve."

Tillie was next consulted, and to her satisfaction found she was to cook a Christmas dinner after all. Things were working fine, thought John, if he did occasionally take a longing glance backward at their fast disappearing day in the city. He had constantly to prop up Jimmic's wavering enthusiasm as well.

But the oh's and the ah's that came from their four guests and the aunt, who at once found her way into Tillie's soft heart, made up for all. After dinner, when they were too stuffed for play, Uncle Tom read from the book he had brought as a gift for one of the girls. The story of Mary and the angel, first, then the shepherds of Bethlehem, then the wise men. The radio meanwhile presented a program of Christmas carols, from, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear," on through, "Silent Night," and finishing with, "Joy to the World."

"It was a wonderful Christmas. Nicest we ever had."

"If we only had a home like that and an Uncle Tom!"

"Wasn't the story about the baby Jesus sweet?" "Seems like a fairy tale, these nice presents."

Thus they exclaimed and remarked as Uncle Tom and

TESTS OF A CHRISTIAN

1 John 5:1-12

GOLDEN TEXT

Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that leveth him that begat leveth him also that is begetten of him.—1 John 5:1.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Tests of a Christian.

Aim: We must believe that eternal life can be obtained only through faith in Christ and obedience to Him.

Basic Truth: "Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."—Col. 3:3, 4.

1. Jesus Is the Christ. (1 John 5:1-3.) To believe that Jesus is the Christ is to understand the gospel of the kingdom of God to such an extent that we know that Jesus is to be the King of that kingdom when he comes. In addition to this the Messiahship of Jesus includes the thought of His priesthood and mediatorship, for the priests were anointed to their office as well as the kings. To believe fully in the Messiahship of Jesus is to believe that He is now our King, that when He comes again He will be "king over all the world," and besides this that He is our high priest today, pleading our cause at the right hand of God (Heb. 3:1; 4:14-16). II. Jesus Is the Son of God (Vv. 4-8.)

Our faith in Christ is tested by our knowledge of Him as well as by our confidence in Him. If we truly believe that "Jesus is the Son of God" we will not believe that He is God Himself, something which Jesus neither affirmed nor suggested. But He did say, "My Father is greater than I" (John 14:28), and denied His own goodness could be compared with the Father's (Matt. 19:17), and ascribed to God both His words and works (John 8:28; 14:10).

III. Life Only in God's Son. (Vv. 9-12.) A third test of our faith in God is found in our readiness to discard an idea we may have long held when it is found to be out of harmony with God's Word. In this lesson it is plainly stated that only those who accept Christ as their Savior have the hope of eternal life. All others are "without hope in the world." If we believe God's testimony as here given, that our life is in Christ, that we have no life out of Him, we prove that we are the children of God. If we claim immortality for all men regardless of Christ's life-giving power, we make God to be a liar. But when we confess our complete dependence upon Christ for life we honor both the Father and the Son.

GOLDEN TEXT

"Every one who believes that Jesus is the Anointed one, has been begotten by God; and every one who loves the begetter, loves the one begotten by him."—1 John 5:1, Diag.

"Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth."—Jas. 1:18. True Christians have all been begotten of God. To believe that Jesus is the Anointed One is the foundation of the Christian life. The begettal stage is the beginning. Growth must be made before the spiritual birth, which comes at the resurrection

Do we really believe that Jesus the Christ is the Anointed One? If so, then, our text tells us, we have been begotten by God. In other words, that belief starts us on the Christian life. That is the test: do we believe or do we just think we do? Real belief stimulates action; indifferent belief amounts to naught. Stand the test; believe Jesus is the Anointed One. Love the Father and also the Son Jesus the Savior which was begotten by Him.-L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Review

- 1. To be connected with and abide in Christ is the only source of life.
- 2. The Bible is the world's greatest book and is the only safe guide in life.
- 3. Prayer is not enhanced by long speaking, but to be edifying must be charged by God's - Spirit. 4. Life in Christ Jesus is the only way to happiness and peace.
- 5. Christian growth is essential to Christian life and is greatly aided by regular worship. 6. Christian citizenship expresses Christian
- ideals, which are the backbone of a nation. 7. The true church member is won by the

Victory Through Christ

The secret of successful Christian service and of victory over sin is expressed in today's lesson in that much used, and much abused, word, "faith." Faith not only "removes mountains," but it crases misunderstandings, heals broken hearts, and brings peace and comfort and assurance to the distressed.

Faith in God, in Christ, in the Bible, is the strongest bulwark we can erect against discouragement and the most powerful incentive we can have to stimulate effort. How strange it is that people so often believe men, rather than God! Surely the "witness of God is greater" and more dependable!

Yet millions of heathen, together with many professed Christians, do even worse than that when they confess their belief in the natural immortality of the soul. For in this they believe the serpent, the father of lies, in preference to the God of eternal truth!

It was the serpent who introduced this Goddenying idea into the world. In answer to his question Eve had said with reference to the forbidden tree: "God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye dic. And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die."—Gen. 3:3, 4.

May God help us to believe the truth so clearly expressed in our lesson with regard to this matter, that "God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."

Belief is suggested in our study as one of the tests of discipleship in that it provides one means of determining whether or not we are members of the Christ-body.

It is only, however, when belief (mental assent to the truth of the gospel) has been developed into faith (a positive conviction that the promises of God will be fulfilled) that belief is made sufficiently active to provide proof of our duty with Christ. Belief to be of value as evidence must be "put to work" in the service of God and man .- G. E. M.

PRIMARY CLASS

Topic: What Have We Learned?

We have now come to not only the last Sunday in the quarter, but the last Sunday in the year. It is now time to see what we have learned about our Bible.

- 1. How many more verses can we write on our open Bible than we could at the beginning? Lesson 2.
- 2. Have we been a branch that bore fruit or a dead branch? Lesson 1.
- 3. Say the Lord's Prayer. Lesson 3. 4. Give some rules for living as found in Lesson 4.
- 5. How does a Christian growf Lesson 5. 6. How are we good Christian citizens? Lesson 6.
- 7. Tell how going to church helps us.
- 8. How should we use what God has given
- 9. How are we teachers for Jesus?
- 10. Why do we keep the Lord's Supper? 11. Describe what a real home is like.
- 12. Which lesson did you like best? Why? To the teachers, boys, and girls who have studied these lessons, we wish to say we hope you have enjoyed these lessons. Let us try to take these thoughts home with us and live them every day. Then when Jesus comes to live here on earth, He will say to us this verse you learned, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." From that time on we will always live with Jesus.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

TO OUR READERS

Through the kindness of their friends the Christmas number of The Restitution Herald will come into the hands of many new readers. To all such we extend a hearty welcome to our circle and pray that they may so enjoy this issue that they will want it to continue each week as a visitor in their homes.

We feel sure that you will be impressed with the spirit of our writers, whose only anxiety is that they may rightly interpret the glorious truths of God. May the paper bring to each one something of the joy and hope that animates those who have caused it to be sent forth on its mission of cheer. After you have read its pages we shall be glad to hear from each such new reader as to the impression it has made upon your heart.

To new subscribers the price is One Dollar and Fifty Cents for a full year.

FEMININE INVASION AT BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

A three weeks' series of evangelistic services with Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago as speaker came to a close Sunday, Dec. 9. A very good interest was aroused by Bro. Austin's usual instructive and inspiring sermons. We know the church has been encouraged by this effort, and we pray God's favor for the laborer that he may long continue in the preaching of the gospel of the kingdom of God.

The congregation has had a unique blessing in the arrival of five baby girls inside a month's time. The first one to arrive came to the pastor's home on November 8. We call her Norma Kathleen. The others following are Patricia Lon, born on November 26 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ryan; Patricia Anne, born on November 30 to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sigler; Dorothy Pearl, born on December 1 to Mr. and Mrs. David Lehman; and Betty Lou, born on December 8 to Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Pearson. Surely, the girls are having the center of attraction and attention. All these little daughters are doing well, and when warm weather comes will be ready, we hope, for the photographer and Sunday school. The mothers, too, are doing well except Sr. Lehman of Arcanum, who is only slowly regaining strength, but we pray her God's grace for recovery soon.

Sr. Elgin Black of Tippecanoe City recently underwent an operation in the Miami Valley Hospital at Dayton. We are glad to report her condition is good. We hope to soon see her again home and worshiping with us at the church.

Plans are well along for a Christmas program to be given by the Sunday school. We are all glad to commemorate the birth of the world's Savior and coming King. Keep up the Christmas spirit. When the King comes our every service and gift in His name will be rewarded. S. E. Magaw, Pastor.

GREETINGS FROM GOLDEN RULE HOME

The following letter, coming from one who is not a member of the Church of God, but who has been a most agreeable and beloved resident of Golden Rule Home for a long time, is deeply appreciated by both the matron and those in charge of the business administration of its affairs.

"I take this way of thanking one and all for making Golden Rule Home possible. For two years and more I have enjoyed the comforts of this Home, and I cannot express in words the thanks I feel for all here, for the care and kindness to me.

"As sight grows dim, and steps more slow, we are glad to know that some one cares for the lonely ones. And as the years go by and one by one we pass on to the great beyond may God bless and keep those that are left to still carry on the good work and care for the lonely ones.

"I wish one and all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year."

(Signed) Mrs. M. C. Steffa.

ELECTION AT GRAND RAPIDS

The past week has witnessed the setting in of winter with its snowy blanket, and with this has come an improvement on the part of most of our sick ones. For this latter blessing we are very grateful.

On December 7 the annual church election was held and officers chosen to direct the affairs of the church during 1935. Out of a total membership of less than 150, 97 were at the business meeting, which we feel to be a splendid percentage.

Thursday, Dec. 20, being the last Berean night the pastor will be home before the trip South a request has been made to have as many of the materials for the model tabernacle present as have been prepared so that at least a partial assembling can be made. Some masterly work in craftsmanship has been displayed in the construction of some of the pieces. And we are all learning much more about the ancient system of worship and its typical meanings than we ever knew be-F. E. Siple, Pastor.

A BUSY WEEK AT OREGON

This week promises to be a busy one with the church in Oregon, Ill. Monday night Miss Azalia Winfrey, director of the junior choir, assisted by the wife of the pastor, is entertaining the members of that organization at the pastor's home. Tuesday evening the Dorcas Society is sponsoring a social gathering at the home of Bro. and Sr. George Siple. Wednesday evening prayer meeting (the only one in Oregon) will be held as usual. Each one in attendance is asked to bring a favorite verse of Scripture expressing his or her relationship to Christ. Thursday night the two choirs meet for rehearsal of the Christmas program music. Friday evening, under the direction of Miss Winfrey, the junior choir presents a pageant enriched by several special musical numbers. The Sunday program will be varied. Sunday school at ten o'clock. The pastor's Christmas sermon, "God Brings Peace to the Nations," at 11. Berean meeting at 6:30 in the evening. At 7:30 the children of the Sunday school will present the beautiful story of the Savior's birth.

HOSKINS IN INDIANA

Back home again after a splendid fellowship with our folk at the Burr Oak, Ind., church.

Ties that bind our hearts together are not easily broken. So we are thankful for these loyal people under their able leader, Bro. Austin. We found the church well organized to assist in every possible way for our convenience and the advancement of the work spiritually.

Saturday, Nov. 17, a number gathered in the home of Bro. and Sr. Zechiel for a getacquainted time. Sunday the campaign began and continued each night except Saturday

Bro. and Sr. Albert Overmyer took me to hear Bro. Anderson on a Sunday afternoon. His message on "Hope" was splendid. He preached Saturday evening, Dec. 1, at the church of Argos. These are a splendid group of earnest people struggling to hold together. In all, I preached 25 sermons.

Called on our dear sister in Christ, Mrs. Maxey of Grovertown, a long-time member of the faith at Burr Oak. Also, on Bro. and Sr. Woods and Sr. Cochrane of Knox, and at the home of Bro. and Sr. Stilson at South Bend. I found this sister not well, but both happy in the Lord. Bro. and Sr. Norman LaMunion drove me to this place. I visited many homes, which was a pleasant opportunity.

Meetings closed Sunday evening, Dec. 9. Monday, Dec. 10, 34 met in the home of Bro. and Sr. Osborn for a social time. These dear soldiers of the cross seemed truly the children of the Abrahamic faith. Tuesday, the 11th, I left for Gary and visited with old friends of the North Star State, Bro. and Sr. Magce. By the way, the brother sang for us one evening during the meetings. He drove me to Chicago the next day, where I enjoyed my first visit with Bro. Austin and family. After a three hours' visit I was on my way home, arriving Thursday evening, tired, ready for 'a good night's rest.

I found our dear Sr. Savage not so well, and the folks busy getting ready for the Christmas program to be given Sunday before Christmas.

Personally do I want to thank the Burr Oak people and their friends for their generous and kind way of providing for my comforts. Especially those faithful ones in attendance, also Sr. Hatten's choir and her beautiful pantomime that was presented Thanksgiving night, featuring the song, "Follow the Gleam." Yes, every one, in the way of caring for these services, do I appreciate. God bless them, is my carnest prayer.

Sunday afternoon, the 16th, I will preach at Oak Park. Pray for us and remember the words of Jesus through John, "Behold, I come quickly," Then realizing this sudden appearance of our Lord, may we "put on the whole armour of God."

A. E. Hoskins.

VISITING THE BRETHREN

On our recent trip to Red Bluff to visit Bro. and Sr. Moore and Bro. W. B. Ward we were able to visit some of the isolated members between Los Angeles and Red Bluff.

We found Bro. Wayne and Sr. Georgia Thompson of Tulare eager for a Bible lesson, with questions stored up from their private study and truly growing in grace and in knowledge according to scriptural instruction.

We drove to Grangeville, just a little off our route, where we had a delightful visit with Sr. Lucy B. Groat and Bro. E. E. Groat, also, who came in to spend the evening.

Only those who are isolated from a local organization can appreciate what it means to have a visit with others of the faith and talk over the truths so dear to us all in these perilous times.

We made brief calls on Sr. Mattie Vineyard south of Fresno and her sister in the tlesh, Sr. Maria Truesdell of Fresno.

That evening I had the privilege of speaking to a small but very attentive group in the Christian Church of Maderia, where Sr. Ida Shepherd attends worship. My subject was "The Kingdom of God."

The next day we drove to San Francisco, where we found Bro. and Sr. Cook anxiously waiting for a brief opportunity to talk of the doctrines so precious to us all. We were glad to find them both looking reasonably well, although Bro. Cook has endured a great deal of suffering since we saw him last, and Sr. Cook exercises extreme care on his behalf.

From there we ferried across to Berkeley, where we visited cousins, the first being Sr. Victoria Dunn, formerly of Concord, but at present spending some time in Berkeley that her daughter may attend college. Then the Harrises, after which we resumed our journey north, stopping at Wheatland long enough to inquire after our brethren the Renners. We found only Bro. George at home but learned that all are about as usual.

We held one Bible lesson while in Red Blaff and on returning three weeks later we called again to see Srs. Faye and Lois Logan of Stockton. It seems like seeing some of the family from home to visit with them and the feeling was mutual. We regretted that we could not spend more time with them, but promised to try to do better next time.

Another stop with the Thompsons of Tulare and discussions of Bible themes, and we journeyed on to our old home in Los Angeles, where we will be located at 1020 S. Burlington Avc. again for a time, at least.

Emma C. Railsback.

LINDSAY TO BE AT CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

The California Conference Board has secured the services of Bro. S. J. Lindsay of Tempe, Ariz., to participate in the Quarterly Conference sessions to be held at Los Angeles. January 13. He will have charge of the Sunday school hour at 10:00 a.m. and will teach the topic: "Life Only Through Christ," At the regular morning worship hour the pastor of the Los Angeles church will occupy the pulpit with the subject: "When the Lord Pleads," a prophetic subject, according to the request of the Conference Board. He will also have charge of the Communion service, using as his subject: "The Bread From Heaven." After a picnic lunch at 12:00 Heaven." After a picnic lunch at 12:00 noon which will be held either at the park or at the church according to the weather, the Conference will again convene at 2:00 p.m. Following a short social period Bro, Lindsay will speak at 2:30 on a subject of his own scleetion, not yet announced. The Los Angeles church will welcome its former pastor back for the day in what promises to be a most interesting session.

The Los Angeles church was pleasantly surprised to have Bro. Patterson of the Santa Rosa (California) Advent Christian Church present at its regular morning worship hour. He came to present matters to the congregation concerning the union of the Advent Christian and Church of God denominations in California. He had previously corresponded with the pastor when the latter's letter commending such union appeared in the columns of The Restitution Herald some time ago. Pleading for the gospel and its efficient delivery, he minimized the divergence of belief between the two groups. Bro. Patterson was initiated into faith in Christ very largely within the sphere of the Church of God, and only four years ago became active in the Advent Christian denomination. He asked that no action be taken toward definite union until the matter had been studied and carefully presented. But the Los Angeles church voted him encouragement in his plea, insofar as it concerned "starting a movement toward union of the two organizations in the state."

Sr. Grace Adamson of Pomona (formerly Grace Steffa), who has been critically ill in the Pomona Valley Hospital following an appendectomy, is so much improved that she is declared to be out of danger. Sr. Thelma Moore of Red Bluff, Calif., and her two sons, Dean and, Jerry, are visiting with her parents, Bro. and Sr. E. C. Railsback, over the Christmas season. Bro. and Sr. George Rahn and family have moved to Pomona and may be addressed in that city at 1400 N. Glenn Ave. Consequently Bro. and Sr. E. C. Railsback have returned to their home at 1020 S. Burlington Ave. to resume charge of the apartment house there. Bro. J. E. Hammond of Anaheim, Calif., has been suffering for some time now from blood poisoning, and is under the care of a doctor, but is improving at last reports. We pray for his speedy recovery. Norman John MacLeed.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Crosby of the Niagara Falls, N. Y., congregation, recently left for Florida, where they will spend the winter. "So far," writes Bro. Randall, paster of their church, "we have had ideal weather right here."

The editorial and mechanical force of The Herald extend to our readers the hope that the day on which we commemorate our Loud's birth may bring to them every joy, and that the new year may shower them with the richest of God's spiritual blessings.

Bro. Edward Engle of Niagara Falls, N. Y., has been able to come home for short periods of late. Bro. Engle has been under treatment for some time for pulmonary trouble, and we rejoice to know of his improvement.

We regret that several manuscripts, including one from Bro. R. H. Judd, arrived too late to find a place in this issue, but will appear in the New Year's number next week.

Bro. Norman John MacLeod, pastor of the church at Los Angeles, makes the announcement that he will speak Sunday, Dec. 30, from Revelation 21:5, "Behold, I Make All Things New." Surely this is an appropriate theme on which to meditate as the new year agens!

The Christmas program of the Fonthill, Ont., church and Sunday school will be presented next Friday night. Unusually promising plans are in process of development for the occasion.

CHRISTMAS DAY WITH UNCLE TOM

the twins took them home, loaded down with gifts and remains of the feast. As they drove slowly homeward through the dusk, a train whistled, the train they would have taken on their return from the city, had they spent it there.

But who was that coming up the walk at this hour? Two boys hurried to answer the door. They were swallowed up in the arms of Father and Mother, home several hours earlier than they had expected. Christmas Day was complete at last.

A GIFT OF PEACE

nated Jew and Gentile, by the breaking down of the partitioning wall, the law of commandments contained in ordinances (Eph. 2:14, 15). We do not of course see that entirely accomplished, but the door is open and the wall no longer hinders in the sight of God.

But when the Prince of Peace shall stand in His lot and the government of His increase and peace shall have been accomplished all such enmity shall be swept away.

By the true followers of Christ the peace of God that passeth understanding can be attained in the present time because to those Christ's impress of peace and good will to men will be manifest in their very outlook and daily work, for they have trusted in Christ as the way to attain it.

God intended that all His people should lead peaceful lives, for the most effective weapon in the world is not war, but peace. War tears down, destroys, and sweeps away the lovely things of life, and reveals the ugly, repulsive ruins in its wake. It is anything but Christian. Peace on the other hand builds up, beautifies, and hides the carnage that war has caused. Christian peace is that much more effective in that accomplishment, for its mien is peace and sees the deeper and far-reaching effect of a peaceful program.

Christ at all times taught and admonished His few followers in the ways of peace and at the end of His ministry after giving the promise of the Comforter to be sent to them, also left them His peace as a gift. What a gift that must have been to them, for Christ immediately reminded them it was not as a worldly gift. Because of it He admonished them not to be troubled or afraid. His peace would solve the problem at all times in whatsoever circumstance they found themselves.

The Christian of today could learn much from the Master in these troublous times by studying and practicing the peace that God gave through His Son. God grant that our peaceful mien shall increase with confidence, knowing that peace shall be the keystone of the kingdom of God of which Jesus is the Prince of Peace.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

"Round yon Virgin Mother and child, Holy Infant, so tender and mild, Sleep in heavenly peace, Sleep in heavenly peace."

Peace . . "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Sweet, sweet peace. The man's heart was full of it, and his smile was not bitter. For as he left the little church among the merry crowd, he was happy, as he could not remember ever being before. Because he had found something long forgotten, the most important thing in the world. The innocent children had led him to Jesus, and he was alone and miserable no more.—Miss Genniel Carpenter, Oregon, Illinois.

AGITATORS

Bu C. E. Randall

A THE present time there is a swing toward what is called the "left wing" among peoples of the world against existing governments. This movement to the left is of radical tendency and is also anti-religious in many places and is taking the form of active opposition against present governments and against the church.

There is no doubt but what this condition has been brought on by the corruption and greed in the governments and their indifference to such. Revulsion against this condition is found mostly among the laboring classes, who live from hand to mouth. When a man is hungry and his family is in dire want for clothes, food, and other necessities of life, and then he reads in the press or listens over the radio to vivid descriptions of colossal expenditures by the rich for unnecessary social activities and of governmental parties that create machines which mulct the taxpayers out of millions and millions or which are bribed by large corporations to purchase their goods at fabulous prices, his heart becomes hardened and embittered and he revolts against society that tolerates such excesses. He becomes an agitator. And when there is sufficient agitation a mass movement begins, and mass movements are almost impossible of check.

The natural tendency is to join a movement that is fanned by the winds of public sentiment, and it is in this regard that we wish to sound caution. The Christian is not an agitator. He does not become allied with movements that create discontent and strife. With food and raiment he is content, and with hope as his anchor he awaits the appearing of that better day. Our attitude should be contentment in the peace of God.

Among Our Workers

"The field is the world,"—Jesus.

A MONG the many zealous workers of the Church of God are those named below. The list is far from complete, and cannot be termed "official," as it is drawn largely from very sketchy information furnished in reports from the localities mentioned.

ARKANSAS. Evangelistic work is carried on under local leadership with occasional help from without the state.

Ministers: R. A. Humphreys, Bear Route, Royal; Owen Jones, Driggs; C. E. Weaver, Rt. 1, Greenbrier.

ARIZONA. An active congregation is maintained at Tempe, under the direction of Pastor S. J. Lindsay, 502 Ash Ave.

CALIFORNIA. The state carries forward an energetic program of pastoral and evangelistic work.

Ministers: J. E. Adamson, 987 Weber St., Pomona; S. G. Elton, 2321 Sunset Dr., Ventura; J. E. Hammond, 735 N. Zeyn St., Anaheim; George P. Lichty, 350 Chester St., Pomona; Mrs. E. C. Railsback, 1020 S. Burlington Ave., Los Angeles; W. A. Reid, 3594 Larchwood St., Riverside; Norman John MacLeod, 1105 Val Vista St., Pomona.

FLORIDA. We have but one minister listed from this state: N. H. Geiselman, 312 W. Hillsboro Ave., Tampa.

ILLINOIS. Pastoral and evangelistic work are progressing under state and local organizations.

Ministers: F. L. Austin, 5439 Ohio St., Austin Station, Chicago; L. E. Conner, 610 N. Brinton Ave., Dixon; Gerald L. Cooper, Ripley; Harry E. Goekler, Marshall; Paul M. Hatch, Rt. 1, Harvey; Paul C. Johnson, Oregon; Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., Pearl City; C. E. Lapp, Ripley; G. E. Marsh, Oregon; Mrs. Mary A. Woodward, 5439 Ohio St., Austin Station, Chicago.

INDIANA. Indiana has a strong state conference and several exceedingly active local churches.

Ministers: J. H. Anderson, Michigantown; Vaughn Long, Hartford City; Paul N. Magnus, Rensselaer; O. J. Parker, 725 S. Waugh St., Kokomo; F. A. Stilson, 411 E. South St., South Bend.

10WA. Both state and local organizations contribute to the pastoral and evangelistic work in Iowa.

Ministers: O. J. Allard, 2125 Main St., Cedar Falls; A. J. Eychaner, Rt. 2, Cedar Falls; C. W. Howe, 1036 Newton St., Waterloo; H. S. Hunt, Clarksville; J. Arthur Johnson, Rt. 2, Sac City; A. M. Jones, Eagle Grove; J. W. Williams, Gladbrook.

KANSAS. Arkansas City is the chief point of labor in this state. John Fiske, Jr., Milan, is the only minister listed from Kansas.

LOUISIANA. Churches exist at Hammond and Blood River. No local ministers listed. MICHIGAN. The Grand Rapids church has the largest Church of God Sunday school in the United States.

Ministers: Owen Barney, Byron Center; F. E. Siple, 135 Pennell Road, S. E., Grand Rapids; Cecil A. Smead, Blanchard.

MINNESOTA. The state has several churches under able pastoral supervision.

Ministers: John Dorn, Sebeka; John Denchfield, Mora; Adna Hoskins, 615–23rd Ave., N., St. Cloud; Richard Le Crone, Eden Valley; Virgil Thoms, Emily.

MISSOURI. Work is carried on in St. Louis, Morse Mill, Fredericktown, and other localities. No ministers listed.

NEBRASKA. Pastoral and evangelistic work is carried on by two conferences, the Eastern and the Western.

Ministers: Earl Cowles, Moorefield; E. E. Giesler, Moorefield; Grover Gordon, Holbrook; Wilsie McKnight, Moorefield.

NEW YORK. A growing church is maintained at Niagara Falls, under the pastorate of C. E. Randall, 1926 Tenth St.

OH10. Several large congregations are maintained under pastors of unusual ability and progressiveness.

Ministers: M. W. Lyon, 13705 Diana Ave., Cleveland; Sydney E. Magaw, 243 N. 2nd St., Tippecanoe City; James A. Patrick, Ashland.

OKLAHOMA. Blackwell is the home of The Gospel Trumpet. The only minister listed is Miss Lucille Le Crone, Rt. 3, Helena.

ONTARIO. Under the zealous leadership of C. E. Randall, one of our strongest churches is maintained at Fonthill.

OREGON. The work is carried on largely in connection with that in Washington. The only minister reported is A. W. Darby, 834 Gantenbein St., N., Portland.

TEXAS. The "Lone Star State" has several able evangelists who were very successful this past year.

Ministers: T. A. Drinkard, Rt. 2, Kennedale; E. O. Stewart, Sweetwater.

VIRGINIA. The "Old Dominion" continues to press forward bearing aloft the gospel banner.

Ministers: Harry A. Sheets, 72 Court Sq., Harrisonburg; V. Earl Thayer, Rt. 1, Woodstock,

WASHINGTON. The spirit of Indiana survives in the Church of God in this western state.

Ministers: A. L. Corbaley, 1502 12th Ave., Puyallup; Lyle Rankin, Puyallup.

Note: The listing and addresses given are subject to correction as may be required.

Golden Rule Home

This pleasantly situated, comfortable, and commodious home for elderly people is the fruitage of long years of earnest prayer; zealous, untiring effort; and sympathetic interest on the part of laymen and ministers of the Church of God throughout the country.

GOLDEN RULE HOME at Oregon, Illinois

The many attractive features of Golden Rule Home are now too familiar to the Church of God at large to need repeating here. A visit to its bright little sun parlor, its spacious living room, its pleasant dining room, and its homelike individual apartments, will convince anyone of the desirability of planning to spend his declining years in the security and comfort it affords.

Another most important consideration is the fact that the Home today is more securely entrenched financially than ever before, and plans are already well under way to still further insure its stability if such is possible.

You are cordially invited to visit Golden Rule Home at any time, try out its hospitality and homelike atmosphere, and make any inquiries that may occur to you.

Or, if a personal call is impractical at this time, write for full information concerning conditions of entrance into the Home and it will be gladly furnished.

**----- who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.''—Hebrews 12:2.

WHEN the soldiers of America set out to France they had before them glorious ideals of fighting for democracy; for the honor of the women whom the German soldiers were supposed to have defiled; for the rescue of France, the friend of our early struggling nation; and for Belgium, the gallant little nation that had been an example to the world in fortitude. But those ideals were often be-immed by the mud of Flanders fields. "Somewhere in 'rance" was changed in that classic letter written by a nomesick soldier to read, "Somewhere in mud." "Sunny France" was only a myth in his mind. Eating, working, and sleeping in mud make a man forget the ideals which animated his earlier activities. The goal that was set before him became so remote that he did not care if he reached it or not.

The young minister sets out on his way to serve his Master. The ideal of service has entered his mind and taken possession. So completely has the idea possessed him that he could endure trials of all opposition. He could face burning at the stake, could defy the most fiery infidel, could endure cruel mockings and scourgings without flinching. But he is not asked to do such things, and the ideals become dimmed by the mud of the spiritual battlefield.

Dying for Christ is often not as difficult as living for Him. Battling the humdrum existence of a tolerant world will overcome his higher resolves more quickly than all the battles of infidelity. The men who faced the Mohammedan hordes with defiance rather than submit to the Koran had an easy task compared with the ordinary duties of the ministry. Dying for the blessed name of Jesus takes courage; but living for Him also takes courage.

Not so long ago we were forcibly impressed by an article that appeared in a popular magazine, entitled: "I Do Not Want My Son to Be a Minister." In that article the man bemoaned the fact that he could not associate with intellectual people; that he could not make friends; that he could not spend the time at his disposal in the pleasantest company that his parish afforded; but that he must spend his evenings settling a quarrel between "Old Mrs. Grumpy" and "Old Mrs. Gossip" that had started at the Ladies' Aid Society; that he must waste his valuable time visiting people who did not count in the affairs of the church at all while many of the "worth while" people had to go unvisited; that there was a loneliness in the ministry that could not be outfaced by even the most zealous minister in the profession; that gossip always tagged the minister regardless of his ways: if he did right it was misjudged more than if he did wrong. Such things are the mud that beclouds the ideals for which he set out on the highway of righteous living. Those are the things that hide from him the goal of a consecrated life of service to the Master.

"A minister receives criticism!" Yes, of the severest kind! If he does right, he is misjudged. If he does wrong he receives the full measure of righteous condemnation. How about other professions? The schoolteacher cannot do anything, but criticism is forthcoming. The teacher's life is public property so that he cannot order his life as he would. If he stands aloof from the evil influences of the community, then he is snobbish and goody-goody. If he fails to attend church regularly he is condemned for leading his pupils into infidelity. If he attends any one church, all the other churches are indignant, and do everything they can to see that he is not hired back for another year. A teacher cannot even spend the money he receives in the way in which he sees fit, for the merchants in town feel that they should receive the benefit of the local tax, money. How about the local storekeeper? He must equally bear his burden. He must stand behind the counter and take all the insults that any irate customer may hand out, and smile and be quite friendly, or he loses his customers. John Wanamaker, the great department store man, instructed his clerks that "the customer is always right." No matter how unreasonable (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Federal Council Elects Liberal

"The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine."—2 Timothy 4:3.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 15.—Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, for sixteen years pastor of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church in this city, which is commonly known as "the Cathedral Church of Southern Methodism," was recently elected as President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Before entering the ministry Dr. Holt made an extensive study of ancient languages and literature, and declined a professorship in Egyptology in a large Eastern university. He is well known for the liberality of his views, frequently having had rabbis in his pulpit as guest pastors, and often has preached in synagogues.

The Federal Council of Churches is the organization that among many other activities has charge of the choosing of Scripture texts and subjects for the International Sunday School Lessons, which are used by practically all Protestant Sunday schools in America. There has already appeared a strong tendency within the Council toward Modernism, but, fortunately, it has not as yet made its presence felt in the committee in charge of the Sunday school work. Constant watchfulness must be maintained, however, against the possibility of doctrinal carelessness creeping into this vital department of church work.

The Voice of Peace

"The Lord will bless his people with peace."—Psalm 29:11.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 .- In every corner of the earth the old proclamation will be heard in hundreds of thousands of homes and churches, "Peace on earth, good will toward men!" A writer in The Literary Digest, commenting on the Christmas message, says, "It will be both greeting and prayer for peoples sore distressed. Looking backward, one may question whether the world is any nearer to its fulfillment on the 1934th birthday of Him in whose name the herald angels greeted the shepherds that starry night in Bethlehem. . . . It is the sixth year of the depression. In that time we have witnessed the violation of the Nine Power Treaty, the threat of war in the Far East, another flare-up in the Balkans, war in the Gran Chaco, the apparent failure of disarmament, threats of a new naval race, the resurgence of religious persecution. In these years the world saw more abject poverty than it had known before. Whole nations were driven to their knees by perversity of international conscience. No nation but has been touched by the bony fingers of hunger. Many have been the strikes, rebellions, and revolutions of the weary assurance that "the waning influence of home, church, and school is returning to its wonted place."

The author sees light ahead, however, in the questioned

Yes, there is light ahead. But it is not the light provided by a misguided church, a sin-saturated society, nor an internationalism governed by jealousy and selfishness. The hope of the world is still the old hope of the shepherds, the hope of Israel, the hope of the early church, the coming of the Prince of Peace and the establishment of His kingdom of righteousness.

When the Sunlight Fades

"The city had no need of the sun, . . . for the glory of God did lighten it."—Revelation 21:23.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—The sun, that mighty orb of light and glory which God created to "rule the day," will at some distant period of the future have burned itself out to such an extent that it will move across the heavens with much the same display as a dimly lit automobile through a fog. Such is the conclusion of Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Carnegie Institute's Mount Wilson Observatory. He added the comforting assurance that the reduction in the sun's radiation would not matter to humanity as, the astronomer declared, the earth and its inhabitants would have met whatever fate is in store for them before the millions of years have gone by. Beyond this simple suggestion he did not speculate concerning the destiny of the earth.

"It will take forty million years for the sun to lose half its present mass through radiation," he said, "and it is quite possible that during a considerable part of that period the output of light and heat would not differ seriously from that at present."

According to this authority, the sun has always been classed as a "dwarf" star, and it has been calculated that it is one of between 100 and 200 billion stars that compose the Milky Way system.

However speculative these figures may be they bring before us the magnitude and glory of the Creator's work.

This Same Jesus

By R. H. Judd

POR fifteen hundred years the people of Israel had been waiting for the predicted Prophet. Ever since Moses had said, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brothren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken" (Dout. 18:15), and God had Himself confirmed the promise in almost identical words (Deut. 18:18), unwavering faith had been an outstanding characteristic of a whole nation welded together by one great hope.

The words of Simeon in the text quoted above from the Revised Version, give evidence of this unique fact in beautiful and concise language. It was no secret to the surrounding nations that the expectation of a Messiah to come was the central hope of this remarkable and distinct people. The whole ritual of their worship gave testimony to it. It was the main theme of their prophets, and became the basic thought of a literature which for loftiness of conception and beauty of expression had never yet been excelled, nor even equaled. It was the central theme of their national songs, participated in with devoted sincerity by the humblest peasant and the greatest of their warrior kings.

No truer saying was ever uttered than that which testified that this predicted Prophet was "prepared in the face of all peoples." The history of the people of Israel from the earliest times onward ran concurrently with that of the mighty empires of Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, and Rome, outlasting them all with the possible exception of Egypt. During all that period the nation had borne constant witness to the coming Messiah. So true was this, that in irony it almost might be said that these great empires prospered and fell according to the fulfilled predictions of these same prophets, while Israel herself continued, buoyed up by the hope of prophecy unfulfilled. Surely wonderful testimony to believing faith that God would yet redeem His promises! Not only so, but the life history of the Messiah was written beforehand, unfolding from time to time the outstanding aspects of His character and the God-appointed mission He was to fulfill. Thus, even before His birth, He became in a measured sense "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of (God's) people Israel."

In view of all this, and in view of the fact that Simeon had himself read in the sacred Record the sad pathos of the sufferings of the Messiah, of the dignity of His priestly office, and the glory of His kingly triumph, let us try to comprehend in some degree the depth of his feelings as he said, "Mine eyes have seen thy salvation," Here in this

"He that was (in prophecy), he that is (now liveth), and is to come." "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and for ever." "For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared in the face of all peoples; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel."

small babe, he realized, was God's abundant and tangible answer to all the prophecies of the Old Testament, and in his simple faith in God he summed up in one word, "salvation," the history of the Messenger whom God had sent. Others, such as John, rejoiced that they too had seen and handled the Word of Life.

. It is common belief that Christ "emptied himself and made himself of no reputation" by leaving His heavenly throne and taking the humble position of a babe in Bethlehem. Such an act, even if it were possible, bespeaks intelligent personality such as never has been, nor ever will be, found in newborn infant life. It was not until Christ reached years of discretion that He learned from the Scriptures of His own exalted personality, when He voluntarily humbled Himself in the sight of God and man, that He might become the Savior of men and be "God's salvation" to the ends of the earth; and in this, facts are shown to be contrary to the thoughts of popular tradition. God chose the best means and the highest means of bringing salvation to man. The most wonderful event in all creation is the birth of sentient human life, for nothing else on this earth is of value without it, and no human father has yet realized the wonder of it. More wonderful still, man is destined to become the head and crown of creation. Christ Himself already having been given a name which is above every name. The reader will do well to turn to Psalm 8:4 and Hebrews 2:7 and note the Revised Version and the marginal renderings. There he will see, as in other passages, man's present status below that of the angels, is but "for a little while."

It is interesting to note how Simeon speaks first of blessing to the Gentiles, before he speaks of the glory of God's people Israel. Again and again are these two aspects of prophecy linked together in the Old Testament, but generally in reverse order; with this notable distinction, that God recognized His "covenant" relationship to His people as coming first. Hence, Christ declared, "Salvation is of the Jews," and, "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." True, "he came unto his own, and his own (people) received him not"; but to as many as received Him, both Jews and Gentiles, to them gave He the right to become the children of God, and doubtless among these were the woman of Samaria, the Syrophonecian woman, Jairus, and others, advance trophies—"other sheep" from among the Gentiles.

But Christ's utterance of this very fact must, to Himself at least, have brought the reminder that He had an-Please turn to Back Page

On the Mount, or in the Kingdom of God

By J. H. Anderson

THE article in a recent issue of THE RESTITUTION HER-ALD on the mountains of the Old Testament should be read in connection with this one. We now come to consider the great events that were given on the mountains of the New Testament. We have learned in the previous article that the events that occurred on the mountains pointed to great events to come in the kingdom, the great mountain of God that shall fill the whole earth in the next age, the one in which God will give His people all the good things that He has prepared for them that love Him. Dan. 2:35; 7:27; Isa. 25:6-10; 1 Cor. 10:11 (marg.); 1 Cor. 2:9-12.

"And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: and he opened his mouth, and taught them."—Matt. 5:1, 2. Here on the mountain Christ, the king of that coming great mountain, gave to His followers the law that will be carried out when He and they are in that mountain (Zech. 14:16-21; Isa. 2:2-4). In that day Matthew 7:12 will be obeyed.

The great subject of the Bible is the kingdom, the mountain of God. Christ spent nearly all His time when He was here teaching the things of the kingdom, and said they would be taught in all the world before the end (Matt. 4:17; Acts 1:3; Matt. 24:14).

In Matthew 17:1-9; Mark 9:1-9; Luke 9:28-36, He gave three of His apostles, Peter, James, and John, a picture of the great mountain, and the picture was given in a mountain. When they went to the mountain Jesus was with them as the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief (Isa. 53:3). On the mountain, before the vision of the glories of the coming kingdom was given, the three apostles fell asleep, and when they fell asleep everything was as it had been; but when they awakened out of that sleep a great change had come to the Master. Now He was no longer the man of sorrows, but His face was shining as the sun, His garment as white as the snow.

This sleep pointed out to the apostles that between them and the kingdom was the sleep of death, and before they could enter the kingdom, where their faces would shine as did the face of the Master in the vision, they would have to fall into the sleep of death and by a resurrection be awakened out of that sleep (1 Cor. 15:12-23; Matt. 13:43; 17:9).

The cloud that covered the top of the mountain out of which came the voice of God, showed that God will be in His great mountain with His people (Ex. 13:21, 22; Rev. 21:1-4). Moses and Elias were there to show that the people of the Old Testament times who had obtained a good report through faith would be in the kingdom (Heb. 11: 1-6).

After His resurrection, when the Master as the nobleman was ready to sfart on the journey to the far country to receive the kingdom, He took His apostles to the mount of Olivet, and there He bade them farewell until that glad day when He, having received the kingdom, would return to reward them (Luke 19:12?15; Acts 1:1-12). That was holy ground, as was the mount on which God appeared to Moses and commissioned him to deliver Israel (Ex. 3:1-5).

The kingdom will be more holy as God, His Son, and all the saved will dwell there. When Christ returns to the earth to reign as king in that mountain that shall be established in the top of the mountains, He will come to the Mount of Olives (Isa. 2:2; Zech. 14:1-4).

Some years ago one of the great men of the United States took his bride on a honeymoon to one of the great cities of this country and the papers reported that the people of the city turned out by the thousands, not to see the great man, but to see the bride and how she was dressed. In Revelation 21:9, 10, we find these words: "And there came unto me one of the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee the bride, the Lamb's wife. And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God." We reach the climax of this scene when Christ and the bride are made one in the marriage of the Lamb and His bride. "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready." Yes, it will be a time of joy among God's people.

John saw this from a great and high mountain. We hope to see and partake of its glories in that great mountain that shall fill the whole earth in the future.

The writer was raised in the mountains, and he loves them. He has read much of the great mountain, and he is anxious to live in it when God blesses all its citizens. To live in it, one must meet the conditions of admission. The conditions are given in the Bible, the book of the kingdom. They are: (1) Believe the gospel, good news of the kingdom (Mark 16:15, 16; Acts 8:12); (2) repent of our sins, turn away from them (Acts 2:37, 38; 2 Cor. 7:9-11; Matt. 12:41); (3) be baptized into Christ for the remission of sins, thus be born of the water to enter the Christian life as newborn babes in Christ (Gal. 3:26-29; Acts 2:37, 38; John 3:1-13; 1 Peter 2:1-3; Rom. 6:1-5); (4) having been baptized into Christ, follow the rule given by Peter in 2 Peter 1:5-11; (5) then be born of the Spirit in the first resurrection and one will be in the kingdom (John 3:5; 6:63; Luke 8:11; Romans 8:11; Col. 1:15, 18). The Bible points out no other way to become a citizen of that kingdom. Reader, will you obey so you may hear the King's "well done" when He comes for His jewels (1 Sam. 15:22; Rom. 6:16; Matt. 25:21; Mal. 3:14-18)?

In our next article on "The Wonders of the Bible," we shall consider the great events at the water and what they mean.

Sin in the Church

By Emma C. Railsback

MANY people look for perfection in an individual as soon as he has become converted and taken upon himself the name of Christ. Those outside the church often point to the professed Christian with scorn, because he is found guilty of sinful acts from which the "good moral man" claims to be free. Even those who have scripturally complied with the divine laws of adoption become discouraged because they so often find themselves yielding to the habits of the carnal nature, not realizing that spiritual perfection is reached only through growth and development, following the divine begettal.

Of His own will begat He us with the Word of truth, that we might be a kind of firstfruits of His creatures. When one has heard and believed the good news of the kingdom of God and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ, and has yielded obedience thereto, through a figurative death, burial, and resurrection, has arisen from the watery grave to walk in a new, begotten spiritual life, he is to reckon the old man, the carnal nature, as dead. In the spiritual life, as in the natural, a begettal is not a birth, but a period of growth and development is essential before the "new creature" is ready for birth. Many scriptural instructions are given for the growth and development of the new creature, which has been begotten by the will of God. Grow in grace and in knowledge, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby, walk after the spirit; and to your faith add virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity. This new creature has been purged from his old sins, by applying the blood of Christ, in his obedience; and he now has an advocate with the Father through whom he can confess (not deceiving himself by claiming that he has no sin) his sin, whereby he has the promise of forgiveness and the cleansing from all unrighteousness.

The carnal nature has passed through a figurative death, and he is to be reckoned as dead; but every Christian knows that he is not so easily disposed of, but insists on bobbing up when least expected. One is made to realize that the fathers have eaten a sour grape and the children's teeth are set on edge. The inherited tendency which entered by one man has truly passed upon all men. But the Christian has an advocate, a high priest, who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. Without sin! He is the only one of whom this can truthfully be said; therefore, the Christian is exhorted to purify himself even as Christ is pure. The Apostle Paul declared himself to be a wretched man because of the continual warfare between the carnal and the spiritual. And so there is sin in the church in varying degrees, according as each individual has succeeded in overcoming the carnal and developing the spiritual. Unless one fully realizes the vileness and deceitfulness of the carnal nature, he will not be able to appreciate his wonderful opportunities in Christ. When a full realization is obtained of all that is promised to the overcomer in Christ, he is impelled to diligence in the Lord's work on behalf of others as well as himself, to let go of worldly amusements, to strive for the transformation that comes from a renewed mind. He will hunger for a better knowledge of the Word and strive to walk in its precepts.

Church leaders are commanded to warn the unruly, to comfort the timid, support the weak, reprove, rebuke, exhort; but just how to instill zeal into the lukewarm Christian is often a hard problem. With such there is a great danger of becoming entangled again with the pollutions of the world and overcome, and the Apostle Peter declares it were better for them not to have known the way of right-eousness than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them. Lukewarmness is characteristic of the present period, and Jesus has said that He will spew all such out of His mouth.

Christ is purifying unto Himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing. It must be holy and without blemish. When that company is complete, He will come again to gather His special treasure unto Himself, and make them partakers of the divine nature, equal unto the angels and unable to die any more. Then will they have reached that spiritual perfection, the birth of the Spirit, and be able to sing praise and thanksgiving unto God, who giveth the victory through the Lord Jesus Christ.

The type in the feast of firstfruits, known also as the feast of Pentecost, foreshadowed the sin in the church. All Jewish feasts pointing to Christ were observed strictly with unleavened bread. But Pentecost, pointing to the church, was observed with leavened bread, leaven being a type of sin. Let us purge out the leaven that we may be a new lump, for even Christ our Passover was sacrificed for us.

The Errors of the Age

IT IS not our intention to be rude, unfair, uncharitable, or narrow. We do not wish to discolor or distort; nor do we want to gather up hasty inferences. We speak calmly, remembering that we are a part of the age we live in. We are bound not to be haters of the false, but lovers of the true. We are not to be slanderers nor satirists. We should be alive to the magnitude of good or evil, be it ever so little. We must not be mere assailants of the evil; but, the rather, upbuilders of the good.

The one who sees nothing but errors in an age is very likely to be mistaken; it is so with him who sees nothing but truth. But, on the other hand, he who sees nothing but progress in our days is, beyond doubt, afflicted with as sorrowful a delusion as he who sees nothing but retrogression.

FAIR JUDGMENT

It is not everything that is done in the age that is a part of the age. An error may be in the age, and yet not be of it. It may be an isolation, an exception, or an excrescence, but not a characteristic; an exotic and not a thing of native growth. The lone rock out in the deep is not a specimen of the sea. One weed is not a sample of the whole garden, nor one palm tree of the desert. One hasty word does not represent the man or woman; nor does one blundering sentence stamp the character of the book. Therefore, we must deal fairly with the age and its utterances.

As every freekle is not leprosy, and every leprosy is not an epidemic, so every imperfection is not deadly; and even that which may be deadly may perhaps stand alone. Before we can attach the error to the age, or the age to the error, let us see that the error is widespread and deeprooted, or both, or chronic, or influential, giving tone and complexion to theological teachings, to literature, and to public opinion. It is not a mere summer ripple we are after—a ripple raised by a momentary breeze. It is the broad tidal wave moving shoreward, imparting its blackness to the stream up which it is noiselessly but surely working.

We must always keep this in mind so as to prevent either an overestimate or an underestimate of the evil.

PASSING OF THE KORAN

Besides, the greatness of an error is one thing; but its capacity for mischief is quite another. That which in one age, or kingdom, or stage of the human mind and conscience, would be portent of evil, in another age, or kingdom, or stage of the human mind and conscience, is totally innocuous. What a book of error and cunningly devised fable is the Koran! But is its power of injury commensurate with the magnitude of its errors? A thousand years ago it was a book of power; in our age it is as feeble as the voice or hand of a child. In Bagdad, or Cairo, or Constantinople, it is powerful; in London or Paris, in Dublin or Edinburgh, it is impotent. Among Oriental races, even a century ago, it went forth and was responded to by the Eastern mind and conscience of that generation; now the skepticism of the age has so told upon the Moslem race that their prophet's volume is beginning to lose its hold upon multitudes; conscience has passed into a new stage, and it no longer responds to the appeals which once would have stirred all its depths.

THE NEW INSIDIOUSNESS

In fact, we may say that in many cases it is the magnitude of the error that is its weakness. Were it less in size, or less audaciously untrue: were it less audible, less visible, it would be more pernicious and more infectious, more seductive and perilous. So that often that which error gains in greatness it loses in influence and efficiency. Of two lies, or systems of lies, it is frequently the minute and half invisible, not the imposing and colossal, that is the more extensively mischievous. The volcano thunders and smokes, but you see it and keep aloof; the scorpion, hidden under the stone on which you are sitting, or the snake, dropping from the bough under whose shade you are cooling yourself, strikes its tiny fangs into your limb, and the little drop of invisible poison pours death into your veins. A Voltaire rages and blasphemes. He proclaims the Bible to be a fable of the priesthood. You stand afar off, and his voice reaches you not. Another man rises, clad in priestly garb, uttering no blasphemy, and professing to venerate religion. He blandly suggests that the Bible is "unhistorical." Unhistorical! Yes; that is all. It is a smooth word, but under it is hidden the poison of the adder. By "unhistorical" he seems to the unpracticed car to mean only at variance with common history; but he really means by it all that Voltaire and Paine did-fabulous and false; no truer than the Koran or the Shasters; the weak invention of some unknown impostors, who, like the camel driver of Mecca, or Manu the son of Brachmar, compiled volumes of miracles, whose genuineness they did not themselves believe. Satan, as the Prince of darkness, had overreached himself; he is now clothing himself in the garb of an "angel of light," and arraying error in the seemly raiment of science and philosophy, and poetry or humanity; he is sending it abroad to deceive, if it were possible, "the very elect." The vulgar blasphemies of other days would not serve his purpose now, so he makes a selection of the least offensive; and even for that select number he is at pains to provide a more polite and less audacious phrascology, which will not altogether shock even religious men, and which will yet lodge in their minds the seeds of the same remorseless infidelity that, from the beginning, has set itself to overthrow the book of God. He has picked up the spent shafts of Celsus, and Porphyry, and Blount, and Toland, and Hume, and Bolingbroke, and Voltaire; and having painted, feathered, pointed, and poisoned them anew, he puts them not into the hand of the scoffer, not into the quiver of the profane, but into the hand and quiver of men who are called friends of religion and ministers of Christ. The goddess of reason has put on the miter now, and speaks from sacred ground. It was once but the infidelity of the press and the platform; it is the infidelity of the pulpit and the altar now.

Thus many of the errors of the present day go forth with an authority which they never had before; and are listened to by thousands who denounce the infidelities of the past. A new standing-point, new vantage ground has been secured for error. An undue and undeserved (not to say dishonest) position has been attained by it; and the resurrection of exploded sophistries is received as the discovery of new and irresistible argument.

TRANSCENDENTALISM REINVIGORATED

Besides all this there is great difficulty in taking the measurements of many modern errors, of ascertaining their exact dimensions and character and tendencies. They are so intangible and indefinite. You can lay hands on a skeleton of however gigantic dimensions, but no one can undertake to deal with a specter—a ghost, however imposing in its stature or aspect. You can measure a mountain, but not a cloud, still less a mist; you can grasp the shower drops, but not a rainbow; you can analyze the light, but not the darkness. So indeed we find it is difficult to handle the dreamy abstractions, the incoherent sentimentalisms, the broken reveries, the gorgeous pictorialisms, the swampborn exhalations which meet us on every side in connection with the "young" college theologies and philosophic transcendentalisms of the day. They raise the cry of liberality. progress, geniality, large-mindedness, freedom from Old World fetters, and they brand the defense of old creeds as the mere poverty of intellect or the timorous conservatism of men who are too stupid, too indolent, too cowardly to think for themselves. Their battle word is "young England," or "young Germany," or "young France," as if they had monopolized the youth of the world; or perhaps "young faith," "young truth," "young Christendom," as if in them and through them theology and philosophy were renewing their prime—assuming a nobler form, and brushing aside the obsoletisms of a trammeled and uninstructed past, to emerge into a largeness and a liberty such as Moses or Daniel, such as Paul or John, had never known. And may we not predict that the watchword "young Christendom" will soon be drowned in that of "young Rome" or "young Babylon," when the fermenting theologies and philosophies of the day shall subside into one dark creed of satanic error, a compound of positivism and negativism, of supernaturalism and atheism, of superstition and infidelity, of all beliefs and of no belief; a strange dualism of religion and irreligion, of spiritualism and secularism, of socialism and despotism, which will unite the world in submission to the great, sworn, and public enemy of God? That which now worships unsanctified genius, and to whom goodness apart from high intellect is a term of reproach, which shelters itself under the name of progressive theology, or philosophic eclecticism, or a readjustment of Christianity, will develop into a disbelief of all fixed creeds, it may be into a refined heathenism—certainly into a denial of the one Jehovah and His incarnate Son.

ENEMIES AWAKENED

I enter into no comparison between the present and the past; nor do I attempt to ascertain what and how much we may have gained or lost; yet let me say that it ought to be acknowledged that the modern developments of evil have been met with large compensations and counteractions in the growths and evolutions of good; and that the augmented and intensified energy of error has been, in-no small measure, the result of the new life and power which have, by the all-quickening Spirit, been infused into truth. That which was "from above" came first, and was met immediately by that which is "from beneath." The resurrection of the false was preceded by the resurrection of the true. While truth slept, error also slept; when truth awoke, error also awoke; and the aggression of the former was the signal for the aggression of the latter. The armies of hell have mustered because the hosts of heaven had already taken the field.

I do not attempt either to enumerate or to classify the errors of the age; I simply point out a few of the more prominent and perilous—those especially that have both root and seed, not broken branches, nor cut-down stems, but living and productive. It is of errors connected with man's religious being, or with religion itself, that I mean to speak; understanding by religion, not a cluster of abstractions, but the acting out of each man's personal relationship to God.

The religious movements of our day have not been the mere diffusion of certain abstractions, the mere effervescence of certain doctrines. No truth, however true, could of itself accomplish what has been wrought within these many years. God Himself has come down. It is a divine voice that has spoken, and a divine hand that has been working. It is no mere summer breath that has swept over the churchyard, and clothed its heaving turf with verdure; it is the Spirit of the living God that has gone into the tombs and touched the dry bones, and made dead men live.

Yet this is what the world not merely overlooks, but rejects. It is the admission of a divine element into any movement, or any truth, or any dogma, that is refused. I do not say a supernatural element; for, strange to tell, there are not a few, even of the educated and the literary, that admit the supernatural while they reject the divine; nay, receive the former on purpose to be able to resist and deny the latter: as we see in the tens of thousands in America, on the Continent, and in our own islands, who are the enthusiastic devotees of Spiritualism and all its spiritrapping delusions.

MELANCHOLY THOUGHT

The expulsion, then-I do not say of a supernatural, or spiritual, or transcendental, but of a strictly divine element from our faith, either in its origin, its basis, or its contents—is what the fallen intellect has decided on as indispensable to its own free action in the investigation of truth. The recognition of a divine element would be considered as vitalizing the whole process of inquiry as a necessary condition of authentic faith, and an essential criterion of the genuineness of the truth believed. For it is not speculation or opinion that the natural heart so desperately hates, but God Himself, and whatever contains God.

There are some who say "there is no God"; but they say it with a flippancy that disappoints and disconcerts us. If they suppose honestly that they have made this discovery, they, of all men, ought to be the most profoundly sorrowful. That this vast universe has no head, and that they themselves have no parent, is one of the most melancholy of all discoveries. That what we see and hear and touch is the terminus, the ultimatum, or limit to that which is; that the infinite is an impossibility; that the sun has no brighter fountain than itself out of which it came; that the beautiful in nature has nothing more beautiful after whose. image it was designed; that the lovable in man and man's world is the highest type and widest circle of the lovable; that the stream has no fountain more transparent than itself; that a parent's heart has no prototype or model in an infinite heart above-what a dark and sad discovery! What a disappointment, what a blank, what an infinite loss! To be cut off from the possibility of so much hope and beauty and perfection and love; to be confined within the narrow circle of the finite; surely this is sad! Yet those men who profess to have made this discovery are not sorrowful! Do they believe in their own discovery? Or is it the thought of having succeeded in expelling the divine from their creed that has cheered them into mirth?

THE BIBLE INCOMPREHENSIBLE

There are others who say there is a God, but there is no intercourse between Him and His creatures. The finite and the infinite arc separated by a wide gulf. He has not spoken to man. His only speech is that of nature. There is no divine teaching save that of nature: and men talk of interrogating nature in order to learn the mind of the Creator. The sun and stars speak, but God is dumb. The seas and rivers speak, but God is dumb. Yet these men who have thus expelled the divine element from the circle of their being seem not to miss it. They do not seem sensible of the awful loss which must be sustained by the creature in being cut off from all direct, all personal communication with God.

There are others who affirm that God has spoken, but not intelligibly. His words require an earthly interpreter; otherwise they are as dark as they are dangerous; as if God had muffled His words to prevent men hearing them; as if man alone could speak intelligible language! The Bible, they say, needs an interpreter; the church is the sole interpreter; the priest is the church's organ; and only through the church and the priest can God be made to speak intelligibly to man. And this absence of simplicity, this want of the intelligible and transparent, which in human writings is esteemed a defect and a proof of weakness, is not lamented as a loss and an imperfection, but triumphed in as a perfection and a gain! The divine element of simplicity and clearness which pervades the works of God must be banished from His Word; and that without a sigh! The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament shows forth His handiwork; day unto day utters speech, and night unto night teaches knowledge; so that even the peasant of the field, or the Bedawi of the desert, or the serf of Siberia may see and hear and understand; but the Book of God gives no such glorious utterance of intelligible truth, till the church's voice, more intelligible than that of the Holy Spirit, has spoken-man's speech removing the ambiguities of God, man's rendering legible the illegible handwriting of God; as if it were the church and not the Lamb slain that had prevailed to open the Book; as if it had been the priest and not the Lion of the tribe of Judah that had been found worthy to loose the

SLAVES OF GOD

But, say others, though God may have in a certain sense spoken intelligibly, yet He has not spoken articulately. The Bible is no doubt the Book of God, but not to the same extent in which The Faerie Queen is Spenser's, Hamlet Shakespeare's, or Paradise Lost Milton's. These works of men contain not only the thoughts of the writers, but their words; but as for the Bible, it embodies, no doubt, the thoughts of God; but to say that it contains the very words of God, His articulate speech, is unphilosophical in the extreme, and would assume that prophets and apostles were mere unintelligent machines or printing presses. Suppose it were so; is it a degradation or a hardship for a ereature to be a passive instrument in the hand of God who only is wise, and would the book produced in this way, at the expense of the creature's liberty for an hour or a day, be less correct and less articulate? But let the truth be spoken respecting both man and God. Man left to himself, to speak alone and act alone, is in bondage to influences which prevent his being really himself, which hamper his free thought, his free speech, his free action. It is only when taken possession of by the free Spirit, when filled with God, that he is truly himself, truly free either in thought or word. These hands are never more free than when the soul within moves them; these lips are not slaves, because acting according to the touch of the inner man; these eyes are not machines, because the intellect or the fancy kindles them into eloquent brightness; so the inspired prophet is not a machine, nor a pen, nor an electric wire, because God has come in and awakened his dormant being; because the Holy Spirit has set all his faculties in motion; because the master hand has taken up the harp and passed his fingers over its silent strings, giving liberty to its imprisoned music, and calling forth a melody which but for that divine touch had been hidden there, in durance dark, unheard and unknown. The expulsion of the divine element from the words of Scripture seems to be reckoned by not a few amongst us rather a gain than a loss! The surrender of the perfect in a revelation is made without a sigh.

Unrelievable Lies

But, say the men of another class, though God may have spoken intelligibly and articulately. He has not spoken authoritatively. He has given us the Bible as a book of thought-a sort of handbook or guidebook; but not a statute book, not a promulgation of peremptory law, or infallible and inexorable truth. By this class of reasoners the divine element of authority is struck out, and man is allowed to trifle with the Scriptures, to play fast and loose with their revelations, as if they were the mere utterances of a higher kind of genius than that which gave us the Iliad, or the Canterbury Tales, or Faust, or Locksley Hall. Beauty, eloquence, lofty thought, tenderness, power, they allow to Scripture, but not authority! They will admire, but not obey. They will listen to its suggestions, but they decline its commands. They will study it, but they will not be bound by it. How this free and easy treatment of the Bible is reconcilable with the idea of a revelation from God, I do not now inquire. I point to it simply as another of the eliminations of the divine element from that which is yet recognized as a divine volume. How strangely desirous are some to thrust God out of His own Book! How thoroughly they do this by this repudiation of infallibility and authority! And how blind they are to the loss which they themselves thus sustain in being shut out from all certainty by being deprived of all divine authority! (We need not stay to show how this free and easy dealing with the authority of revelation leads to a free and easy morality.)

Unapologetic Dogmatism

It is hardly possible to read the Bible without feeling how sternly it condemns this laxity. If some of these free and easy commentators would speak out, they would pronounce it the most bigoted of all books. It is so unsparing in its denunciation of error and evil, and so uncompromising in its demands upon men for submission to its teaching. One God, one Christ, one book, one creed, one theology, one religion, one way to salvation! This is its unfaltering utterance from its first verse to its last. "He that believeth shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned." It assumes the absolute authority of the Creator. It assumes that as His wisdom is perfect, so all its utterances must be authoritative. It proclaims truth not as an opinion, a speculation, a theory, but a certainty. It takes unhesitatingly for granted that all error is sin; that truth is one, and never becomes antiquated or obsolete, but always blooms in immortal youth, no length of years or ages availing to extract the divine element from what God has once spoken. Unhistorical, as some have, by means of ancient hieroglyphics or modern arithmetic, tried to prove it, it calmly, yet boldly, claims to be one true history of heaven and earth, of things visible and invisible. Mythical.

as others call it, it spreads before us the naked, rugged facts of four thousand years, each one a veritable fragment of humanity, the embodiment, not of dreams or fantasies, but of living truth. Unphilosophical, as others affirm it to be, it presents to us its revelations as developments of the one authentic philosophy of mind and matter, of good and evil; not solicitous to defend itself from the charges of boasting or of foolishness which self-sufficient assailants have brought against it; and making no apology for announcing itself as the one volume which, like its Author, is immortal and incorruptible. "The grass withereth, the flower thereof fadeth: but the word of our God shall stand for ever."—London Journal of Prophecy.

WHY WE FORGET TO PRAISE

By Tessa Laning

If we knew of our dependence
On the God who gave us life,
If we knew of His compassion
As He sees us in the strife,
Could we only see the glory
That will shine upon us there,
We would all more often thank Him
For His loving, gentle care.

If our minds were not so crowded
With the cares and things of time,
If our thoughts could soar to heaven,
Clearly sense His love sublime,
If our eyes could see the vision
Of that sweet and better day,
We would bow in adoration
And would thank Him as we pray.

If we'd contemplate the future,
Looking thence for sure rewards,
If we'd tune our ears to listen
To those sweet and heavenly chords,
If to God our thanks we'd offer,
We'd go pressing toward the mark,
Bearing all our cares and burdens
With a meek and lowly heart.

Just a word, lest we forget Him: God gives life and everything; Let us not neglect our duty, But let thankful praises ring!

LET those who would die on the field of battle give better proof of their patriotism, and higher glory to their country, by promoting fraternity and justice.—Benjamin Franklin.

a customer was he must be treated with deference. The service station man who wishes to succeed must be just as willing to wash the windshield of the most disagreeable tempered person in town as if he were the very essence of courtesy.

And yet the minister complains if he receives a little criticism concerning his sermon about the original meaning of some abstruse Greek or Hebrew word. If he does not receive a word of commendation from every member of his congregation on the sermon that cost him about five minutes of preparation and very little thought before he stepped into the pulpit, he feels that his whole week is ruined, and he takes himself to his study to sulk for the rest of the week. If a church member tells him that his sermon was fine, but too long, or that he sawed the air too violently with his hands, that he spoke too loudly or too softly, or that his tie did not harmonize with his suit, or that he did not part his hair quite straight, his whole day is spoiled. He is undone! He straightway forgets his labor of love. He forgets the Christ who died for him, while he pets himself in quiet seclusion for the wrongs that society has done him by making him "the friend of all men and the intimate of none."

How may a minister cure himself of the mental attitude of "martyrdom," hurt feelings, and isolation that possesses so many? Let him "work, for the night is coming." We have set before us in entering into that walk of life the goal of service to humanity in the name of our Lord and Savior. If we have to go to the court to "get a boy out of his latest scrape," let it be counted a joy to be given the privilege to serve him in such capacity. The minister is given the opportunity to make a "friend that sticketh closer than a brother" if he does his duty at such times. A Scout executive, or other such social worker, is involved in numerous cases of that kind, but says nothing about them to anybody for fear of injuring the reputation of the boy involved. The true social worker enters into unending visits for the most downtrodden man or woman that exists. Why? From the joy of service! The man or woman who is interested in his fellow beings loves to visit the sick and afflicted in order to cheer their moments as much as possible. But the minister? He is imposed upon if he must spend some small measure of his time trying to oil the wheels of the social machinery that has been trusted to his care. Perhaps the gospel message should never be complicated by personalities, but always it is. The minister is a personality (often not the easiest personality with which to associate), and so are his congregation. The church is a social organization in spite of all that may be said to the contrary. The position of a minister must always be one, then, of the social worker; of the one who pours oil on the troubled waters (he must not get his figures of speech mixed, and pour gasoline on the fire); of the community engineer who deals in human problems; of the confidant of all those who are in trouble; of the one who should spend all his time if necessary in making his sermor fit the personal needs of those in his flock who hunger and thirst after the right way, but do not always know how to find it. These should be the things that the minister should do to keep his mind ever on the ideals that made him take up the ministry for a profession.

Did Christ always go to heal the elite of society? Did Christ use His time in calling on the ones who were of His intellectual level? His social equals? Or did He spend some time with men who had such dread diseases as leprosy? Or did He sometimes visit the place that was saddened by death? Did He always choose to visit those members of His "following" who were of "some consequence"? Did He not spend hours and even days with people that we would look upon as non-consequential? Did He not even endure hardships and trials, mockings and scourgings, and even death, that such miserable sinners as we are might have the hope of eternal life? Was He never misunderstood? nor criticized wrongfully? Why did He endure all these things? Because He enjoyed them more than any other kind of a life! Because He felt Himself equal with the Pharisees and the Sadducees did He ignore all others for their company? They were the best educated people of His land at that time. Let us read our text further: "For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin. And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."-Heb. 12:3-6.

Fellow ministers, let us not allow the mud to bedim our ideals! Let us not pity ourselves! Let us not forget the Christ who died for us! But rather let us "press toward the mark for (Revised Version: goal unto) the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Phil. 3:14).

"THE number of square people, not the number of square miles, make a great country."

NOBLE SIMPLICITY

An advertising man was writing a booklet about a piece of machinery. "At this point the viscose or liquid is extruded under pressure," he explained to his copy chief.

- "Ex-what?" asked the other.
- "Extruded. It means forced out."
- "Well, then, let's say forced out. Maybe some one else who reads this will be as dumb as I am,"

The beauty of the English language is that you can always find short words sufficient to express even the deepest thoughts. The St. James Version of the Bible is perhaps the finest example of the possibilities of our language. Here the noblest sentiments ever uttered are expressed in simple words.—Honolulu Item.

Threshold

Resolutions, in general, are made to be broken. A man resolves to be a success in business, and within the year the courts adjudge him bankrupt. A boy resolves to eat no more green apples, and the doctor buys his groceries because the boy has indigestion. A girl resolves she will never under any circumstances marry, and her wedding presents fill six tables.

Some resolutions are broken from necessity. Others, in large numbers, are broken from forgetfulness. And still others, in the largest number, are broken on account of the weakness of the human will.

Unforeseen conditions, human error or fatigue or illness, death, emotion—these are the causes of the breaking of countless resolutions. Sudden loves and sudden hates, weather, politics, the gout, all influence the consummation of human resolutions.

God, however, never forgets. He never is troubled by the so-called neurotic, or nervous, emotions. He is bothered by no abrupt changes in the weather. His plans go forward regardless of politics, green apples, or the gout.

For God is sufficient in Himself. He speaks of those things which be not as though they were, because His planning anything is the equivalent of its accomplishment. His power is infinite, His wisdom infinite, His knowledge infinite, His life infinite.

God has ordained a kingdom to be established on the earth. All the alphabetical arrangements, all the Utopias, all the planned economies, all the technocracies that men can devise will alter by not one jot nor tittle the plot that God has laid.

God has ordained certain requirements for securing a place within that kingdom. Nothing in the philosophy of men will ever change the conditions He has set. False belief, false reasoning: God is not to blame for them. If men choose to misunderstand, to undervaluate or overestimate, God's plans still remain as they were in the beginning. Men may call baptism unessential; men may say that God is a power and not an individual; men may preach that Jesus Christ is not divine; men may substitute Communism for Christianity, but God's plans move on sevenely on their predestined course. Men's hopes and men's ambitions will not save them if they refuse to recognize the facts.

God's resolutions hold forever. He made a guarantee to Abraham; He said that Palestine would be the Jews'. And, after the passage of four thousand years, the Jews are flocking to their country, preparing to receive the inheritance which they were promised.

The world stands at the entrance of the consummation of God's plans. The world will not acknowledge it. The world says God is an outmoded relic of the superstitions of prehistoric eras. The world will find it is mistaken.

No outmoded relic will seize violent control of men's plans for men. No outmoded relic will bring destruction, devastation, fear. And no outmoded relic will set up in the place of the failures and squabbles of mankind the eternal successes and tranquillity that will exist in the kingdom to be ruled by Jesus Christ.

The foot of Time may fall noiselessly on the earth, but it falls with effect and power. Time is nothing in eternity, and God is eternal. The new year is an atom in the march of God's proposals. But, as Time progresses, God's plans also progress; and, for that very reason, the new year may mark an epoch in the history prescribed for men by God.

Why I Want to Be Baptized

I WANT to be baptized that I may be saved from sin, that I may have eternal life like Jesus Christ our Lord, that I may be one of His sheep to be resurrected.

Isaiah 45:5 tells us there is only one God, and Ephesians 4:6 that God is the Father of all. Jesus Christ is the Son of God. He died for our sins, was buried, and rose again from the dead.

Jesus Christ shall return to this earth to judge the world in righteousness. He shall then establish the kingdom of God on the earth, and reign as King of kings. Jerusalem is going to be the capital.

If you have faith you can please God. Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. Ephesians 4:5 says there is one faith, one Lord, one baptism. Faith, to be effective, must be accompanied by true repentance from sin and a union with Christ in baptism.

Christ is our ark, like Noah and his ark. God told Noah to build an ark. Noah built his ark, and he and his family went in and were saved. We must be baptized into Christ and do right, and we will be saved in our ark of Christ.

Mark 16:16 says you must be baptized to be saved. Galatians 3:27 tells how to become part of Christ. Acts 2:38 reads, "Repent, and be baptized"; Acts 22:16, "Be baptized, and wash away thy sins"; John 10:9, "I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved."

I believe that if faithful to this profession 1 shall be called forth to life immortal at the coming of Christ to share with Him the eternal inheritance promised of the Father.—Emma Jean Van Camp, South Bend, Indiana.

"Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men."—Mark 1:17.

JESUS CALLS A FISHERMAN TO HELP HIM

A BEAUTIFUL blue lake lies before us, Galilee. All about are the smooth sandy shores. If we walk out to where the waves wash in, we can see clearly a boat coming in over the waters.

Two men are in the boat, two brothers, and their names are Simon and Andrew. They are fishing with a net, casting it into the water and drawing it into the boat in a little while filled with fishes. They will have a nice sum of money tonight after they sell what they have caught.

Along the shore from the other direction comes a man. He walks slowly, and looks often toward the boat and the men who are in it. As he gets nearer to us we see he has a beautiful face; full of kind thoughts his mind must be.

When the boat gets closer to the shore this stranger calls to the fishermen and says to them, "Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men."

What strange words they are! We wonder what he can mean. But the two brothers must understand, for they leave their boat and their nets and follow after him at once. Let's follow a little way behind, Leaving all to follow a stranger! We wonder, will they make as much money following him and fishing for men, whatever that is, as they did fishing for fish?

It is the one called Simon we will watch. Later his name is changed, but we will call him Simon now.

Into the city he follows this man, the city called Capernaum, on the shores of the lake. We wonder what they are going to do. We know Simon's home is in this city, and we are sure they will go there. But nighttime comes, and we must wait till morning to see.

At last it is morning, and it is the Sabbath day. So we will go with all the other people to the synagogue. Perhaps we will see the stranger there.

Yes, there he is, and he is standing up to talk. He must be a teacher. We listen to every word he says, as he explains the meaning of some of the words in their roll, which they call the holy Scriptures. And everyone around us listens, too, for the stranger speaks better than any of the others. He talks as if he knows.

But over there in the corner is a man who is making a disturbance. As we look at him we see he is not in his right mind. He looks so wild. He calls out loudly to the stranger and says, "Let me alone. I know who you are. You are Jesus of Nazareth, the Holy One of God."

And Jesus, for that is who the stranger is, tells the man to be still. And as He looks at the man with those loving eyes of His, the man becomes calm and is restored to his right mind.

Everyone all around us is surprised and wonders how Jesus did it. They all begin to talk at once as they go out of the synagogue. And they tell everybody they meet all about it, too.

So it's Jesus, the babe of Bethlehem, now grown to be a man, whom Simon and his brother are following. Let's see what they are going to do now. They are going to Simon's home, a little way down the street.

We follow them in, and we see the dear old grandmother is very, very sick. Jesus goes up to her bed, takes her by the hand, and lifts her up. And at once her fever is gone, and she is well! How wonderful! How did Jesus do it, we ask ourselves.

Then, just like all grandmothers, she goes out to the kitchen and begins to get them all something to eat. The whole family is so happy. They want Jesus to stay with them and make His home with them.

By night everybody in Capernaum has heard all about it, and each one comes bringing his sick or lame one so that Jesus can heal him. Simon's yard is so full of sick people you can hardly walk. But Jesus goes from one to the other, taking them by the hand, just as He had the dear grandmother. And they all go home happy.

It's dark now, and Jesus goes into Simon's house to sleep and rest. After all His work He is tired. Simon never thinks of the boat he left nor the money he was going to make fishing. He only thinks of this wonderful Jesus who told him to follow Him.

Simon begins to see now what He meant when He said He would make them fishers of men. Jesus drew men to Him just as Simon drew fishes into his net. Could it be that some day he, too, would be able to make sick people well? At last he falls asleep.

Very early the next morning Simon arises. He wants to talk to his new-found Friend and learn more about His work. But Jesus' bed was empty! Simon opens the door and follows the little path that leads down into the garden.

There he finds Jesus. He is praying to His Father. Then Simon knows that is the way Jesus gets the power to do all those miracles and the wisdom to explain the holy Scriptures.

PETER'S CONVERSION AND CALL

John 1:29-42; Mark 1:14-39

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 6:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men.-Mark 1:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Peter Called Into Service.

Aim: To show that Peter's conversion began with personal interest, led to faith, and resulted in obedience and service to Christ.

I. Peter Meets Jesus. (John 1:35-42.) The appeal of Jesus is progressive. First, the one who comes to know and believe in Jesus is enxious to share his joy and faith with others. Hope in Christ cannot be held selfishly for encself. Like Andrew, each new believer hastens to bring some one else to the Savior, and the one thus brought, as was the case with Peter, continues the endless chain of missionary service, and so knowledge of Christ and faith in Him can never die out.

II. Peter's Life Changed by Jesus. (Mark 1:14-18.) While the gospel is "the power of God," it must be transmitted through human agency, and it was for this purpose that Peter was called to be a fisher of men. God's work is never permitted to stop. When John was east into prison Jesus immediately caught up the banner of the kingdom of God and bore it forward more successfully than the Baptist had been able to do. And even with the mighty power at His command our Lord in His brief life was unable to accomplish the vast results that have since been achieved by the united efforts of those who have followed

The message of Jesus which Peter was to carry on after the Master's ascension was timely, "the time is fulfilled"; it was definite, "the kingdom of God is at hand"; it denanded works on the part of those who would be benefited by it, "repent ye"; and such works must be based on faith, "believe the gospel." The nature of the message is the same today, it is still timely and definite, and requires faith and works on the part of those who enjoy its blessings in the present and the

Peter's response to the call of Jesus was immediate. With Andrew his brother he left his nets and boats at once and without regret, realizing that a more important task awaited them

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Peter, a disciple of John the Baptist, was well prepared to answer the call to follow Jesus, or, "Come ye after me," as the text expresses it. He was probably between thirty and forty years of age at this time. When the call came, he answered it and was the foremost of the apostles, but for all this, Jesus, a short time before His crucifixion, said thin. "When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren."—Luke 22:32,
"Fishers of men." The disciples were to draw men and women out of the world, not with hook or net, but by teaching and leading them to Christ. God's Word, when rightly used, is as a magnet to draw people unto Him. -L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS Testimony

-for Christ usually bears fruit; is needed among those who know Him not; -for Christ is evidence of active stewardship;

-in Christian living outweighs testimony in words;

-should always carry evidence of sincerc conviction.

Results of Testimony. The testimony and confession of John the Baptist resulted in two of his own disciples hearing him and being persuaded by this testimony that Jesus was the Lamb of God; they immediately followed the Son of God, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."
How true this is in our today's lesson! Oftentimes just a word spoken at the opportune time influences a person to make decisions either for good or bad.

Before we can talk of the Lord and His precepts, we must understand them (Psa. 119:

Testifying for the Lord enriches the one testifying (1 Cor. 1:5).

All testimony should be completely submerged in love (1 Cor. 13:1).

No one should be ashamed of the testimony of the Lord (2 Tim, 1:8). Every Christian should always be ready to give testimony (1 Pet. 3:15).

Confession of Christ. More confession by word of mouth is of little avail (Matt. 7:21-23). It must be deeply rooted and have its origin in the heart and life of the confesser. Expansion of the gospel is due to the confession of Christ on the part of those who love and serve Him. A good confession is necessary to lay hold on eternal life and fight the good fight of faith (1 Tim. 6:12, 13). Belief in and confession of Christ are essential to salvation and the two are inseparably linked together (Rom. 10:10, 11),-C, E. R.

Accepting a Great Leader

The busy life of Peter and the way in which he helped spread the gospel of Jesus Christ furnish the theme for our lessons for the new quarter. From this study we hope to learn what that gospel is and how we may do our small part in spreading it with the help of the Master, even as Peter did.

Jesus had just returned from His forty days' testing in the wilderness, where He had been led by God immediately after His baptism. He was ready to begin His life work. that of preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. He must have helpers for so great a task. One of the first ones He called was Peter, also called Simon. From Bible die tionaries or other helps find out all you can about him-his work, his home, his background. Study the map of the region around Galilee and Capernaum. The teacher should bring interest into this study, realizing that much is gained from geography. The peculiar characteristics of the lake contributed to the pattern of the lives of the men who earned their daily bread upon its waters. The sudden storms, arising because of the formation of the surrounding country and being succeeded by great calms, found their counterpart in the lives of Peter and the others who followed the sea. Can you discover a reason for Jesus' choice of a man such as Peter was? As we proceed let us seek to learn how Peter's character was changed under the influence of the great Leader he so eagerly followed. What accompanied Jesus' preaching of the gospel? Mark 1:34. What effect would these have upon Peter and the other helpers?

Jesus can use one who seems unfitted for His service, if that one is eager to serve .-- M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Memory Verse: "Behold the Lamb of God." Introduction of Lessons for Quarter. Tell children our lessons are to be about one of Jesus' disciples, Peter. Question for any knowledge they may have about Peter.

Introduction of Lesson. First tell about John preaching in the wilderness. Describe the baptism of Jesus. Then try to get children to see the picture given in the lesson: John standing with two disciples; Jesus walking past them; John's calling their attention to Jesus; they follow Jesus; their conversation with Jesus; they stay with Jesus; Andrew brings his brother Simon; Jesus names him Peter.

Memory Verse. Go back to that part of the story where John calls the two disciples. Repeat his words, explaining that Jesus is God'; Son and this is how John told us that: "Behold the Lamb of God!"

Notebook. For the first lesson we would like to have a picture of Jesus and Peter. Paste these on one page. Under the picture of Jesus write the memory verse. Under Pe ter's picture write last part of verse 42 begin ning with the word "thou." On the opposite page a group story of the lesson is to be copied. Teacher gets children to give beginning sentence of story by asking a question and as, "Where was John and what was he doing?" Answer: One day John was talking to two of the disciples. As children proceed with story teacher writes on blackboard the best sentences, which should be very short, If you have no blackboard, have children copy on paper as you go. When completed, have one child read completed story. It may be discussed and corrected.—V, C. T.

NEW OPPORTUNITIES IN 1935

As we face the dawn of a new year let us not overlook the opportunity and the incentive it affords to make a new start in spiritual development and in Christian service. Each daybreak brings the same new starting point, but the New Year seems to give greater encouragement to the thought.

The Restitution Herald is looking forward with much hope to the future, should the Lord delay His coming another twelve months, that it may increase its usefulness in its assigned field of service. Among the several plans now in process of accomplishment is that of maintaining direct intercourse with local conditions in Palestine. Contact has already been established with the largest English newspaper in Jerusalem, and we will soon be prepared to bring our readers the happenings of the Holy Land with a touch of intimacy that should add much to the interest of our pages.

To make the paper as effective as it should be we need a thousand new subscribers next We can get them with your help and the blessing of God. Let's make the start right now!

A NEW YEAR'S GREETING

To all our many friends who are readers of The Restitution Herald we wish to say: Happy New Year; and may it be a prosperous year in the field of our endeavors.

We are proud to report that we have a little randson, John Milford Boice, born November 18, 1934. To all with such good fortune there come many responsibilities, not the least of which is to try to improve our surroundings at home and in our communities.

This Christmas and New Year season I am, as usual at this time, sending out my Visitor "Mother to Son," also about twelve hundred leaflets which we put out in this university community. It is very evident with over a hundred saloons now in our twin cities there is need of greater effort.

Mr. Boice in walking down town was stopped by little girls asking for matches to light eigarette stubs to smoke that they had picked up on the street. What are we going to do about it, for such conditions are in your, as in every, community?

I know what I am going to do about it; I am going to fight this thing as long as I live. I hope you are, too.

Mrs. Harriet E. Boice.

GREETINGS FROM GRAND RAPIDS

The Christmas season has brought its blanket of beautiful, white snow, helping to give Christmas cheer, and some who have been blessed with more of temporal blessings than others have divided with some of the less fortunate, spreading more of the joy of Christ. Season's remembrances are being distributed to the Sunday school children on Sunday morning, the 23rd. Following the program Sunday night the pastor and family plan to leave for a month's trip to Alabama and Louisiana. Walter Ellis of Wayland is to fill the pulpit the first two Sundays and Bro. Cecil Smead of Blanchard the last two.

The church here extends heartiest greetings to all the brothers and sisters on this anniversary of the birth of Jesus.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

The annual business meeting of the Church of God was held Wednesday evening, Dec. 12,

The following officers were elected: Elders—Lawrence Howell, J. W. Cooper; Deacons—Leonard Robins, Wayne Laning; Deaconesses — Vena Logsdon, Bertha Robins; Secretary—Ednah Cooper; Treasurer - Tessie Laning; Trustees-William Fey, George Long, and Fred Paisley; Pianist-Louise Lapp.

Sunday school officers are: Superintendent, L. L. Burnett; Asst. Superintendent, James McClain; Secretary, Francis Burnett; Asst. Secretary, Collis Clark; Treasurer, Etta Densmore; Asst. Treasurer, Florence Howell; Pianist, Ednah Cooper; Librarians, Harold Burnett and Francis Howell.

Pray for us, brethren, that we may be spiritually uplifted during the coming year.

May we each one be found faithful when our Savior comes.

SODESTROM - JOHNSON

With an impressive ceremony in which the double ring service was used, Miss Anna Mary Sodestrom of Pocahontas, Iowa, and Mr. J. Arthur Johnson of Sac City, Iowa, were united in marriage in the Church of God at Oregon, Ill., Sunday, Dec. 23, 1934. The bride was accompanied by a friend from Chicago, while Mr. Eldridge Ellis of Waterloo, Iowa, acted as best man.

The marriage was solemnized at the close of the morning worship period in the presence of the regular congregation, which was augmented by several out-of-town guests, including Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Ellis of Iowa. The groom's brother, Paul C. Johnson, performed the ceremony.

After a visit in Indiana the young people will return to Sac City, Iowa, where they will make their home. Bro. Johnson is widely known by our brethren, before whom he frequently appears as an able minister of the Word of God. May the Father's abundant blessing attend them in their new relationship.

The pleasant news reaches us from Sr. Esther Scaline of Stanhope, Iowa, of the arrival of a little daughter, Caryl Joan, December 11, 1934, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Anderson. Mrs. Anderson was formerly Sr. Bernice Scaline. The little girl provides Sr. Lettic Scaline with her first great grandchild.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Although he selected his sermon tonics for each service months in advance of the date set for delivery, Pastor Norman John Mac-Leod of the Los Angeles church says that on but two occasions has he found it advisable to change the subject from that announced. For ourselves, we have long advocated a definite sermon program, planned well in advance and in harmony with the carefully considered needs of the congregation. On January 6, Bro. MacLeod will speak on the "Evidences of a Christian Life." The Communion service usually held on the first Sunday will be postponed until the conference of the following week.

"How wonderfully the words of the Lord's prophets are being fulfilled and becoming history before our eyes," writes Bro. A. L. Cor-baley of Washington. And he adds, "How zealous and earnest we should all be, realizing that the coming of the Lord is very near, even at the door!" A splendid admonition for the New Year!

Although we published several hundred extra copies of the Christmas number of The Herald the demand has already exceeded the supply and orders are still coming in. So, much to our regret, we are declining further orders and returning the money paid by those whose orders reached us too late to be sup-We appreciate the splendid response of our readers in this matter.

In the Christmas rush we have found no time to tabulate and report on the result of our Sunday school quarterly questionnaire on the matter of editorials or doctrinal lessons. But it is clearly evident that those who desire doctrinal lessons are greatly in the majority, and the forthcoming Truth Seekers' Quarterly will contain twelve lessons on fundamental subjects.

A serious experience recently came to one of our readers in Pendroy, Montana, Ira Ritenour, brother of Sr. Virginia Kincheloe of Virginia. With another man he was engaged in hauling poles from the mountain on a truck. While they were loading a stranger asked if he might ride with them, and when he was told he could do so on top of the load he assisted them in getting all ready for the return trip; then, whipping out a gun, shot both men in the head, and drove off with the load. Mr. Ritenour painfully crawled to a highway and an autoist carried the two injured men to the hospital, where, strange to say, both are now recovering. The would-be murderer was cap-tured, tried, convicted, and sentenced to 100 years in the penitentiary.

The annual business meeting of the church in Oregon, Ill., will be held on Wednesday evening, Jan. 9, 1935.

A New Year's resolution: "I will get at least one new yearly subscriber for The Restitution Herald in 1935!" Sample copies sent free to any address.

THAYER CONTINUES IN VIRGINIA

The services in the churches in Virginia continue as before reported. The first, second, and fourth Sundays at Maurertown, the third Sunday at Dry Run, and every fifth Sunday at Browntown.

A business meeting of the Executive Board of the churches was held December 2 following church services. It was voted to continue Bro. V. Earl Thayer paster of the churches in Virginia till August 31, 1935, which ends the present conference year.

On the evening of December 1 the brethren met at the parsonage for the purpose of surprising Bro. Thayer and Lyle with a food shower, otherwise called a pounding party. The effort was quite fruitful of good, as it showed a kindly spirit among our church people and was a token of appreciation shown the pastor.

Virginia R. Kincheloe.

JOHN ELBERT MURREY

The following sorrowful announcement comes from the wife of Bro. Murrey who has been left to go on for a little while without the companionship of her beloved husband. May God comfort her.

"After a long period of sickness Mr. Murquied on December 1, 1934. He was born July 10, 1860, in Iudiana, and died at his home in Cedar County, near Fair Play, Mo, leaving his wife, eight children, and a host of friends to mourn his loss. He is gone but not forgotten by those he loved."

Emma Murrey.

Father's House

 $By\ C.\ E.\ Randall$

"DUT if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou B oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth."-1 Tim. 3:15. The house of God spoken of in this verse has no reference to a material structure composed of wood and stone, but means the church of God, which is the family of God. In the majority of instances where the word "house" is used it has direct reference to a material building, yet it does not require that its every usage be so applied. For instance, we note exceptions in the following cases: "And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."-Acts 16:31. It is plain that the meaning of house in this verse is "family." In Acts 18:8 the "house of Crispus" is mentioned, and a reading of the verse will indicate the simple meaning of family or household. In numerous places we read of the "house of Israel" and the "house of Judah." No one ever thinks of these expressions meaning anything other than the people of Israel and Judah. It is by this same line of reasoning that we interpret the expression "house of God." It is God's people-God's family—and is scripturally called the "church of God."

God's house or the Father's house is composed or made up, not of dead material, but of living stones. It is spiritual rather than material. "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ."-1 Peter 2:5. God's house or the church can be called a spiritual house composed of lively stones, these lively stones being the members of the church. The foundation stones of this building are the apostles and prophets (New Testament prophets), Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner Stone. "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but felloweitizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation --- of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."—Eph. 2:19-22.

As the "lively stones" are called a "spiritual house" in 1 Peter 2:5 so the "household of God" or family of God are called a "holy temple" by Paul, which he says is being "fitly framed." The framing and fitting of the various "lively stones" is the work of Christ at the present time. He is preparing us a place in the Father's house. In John 14:1-3 He says: "In my Father's house are many mansions (dwellings): if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." Christ's work may be termed twofold: He is preparing a place in the house of God, or Father's house, for us and He is also preparing us for the place thus prepared. When these "lively stones" are fitted, God then puts them in the body as it pleases Him that they may be "fitly framed together." "But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him."-1 Cor. 12:18.

When Solomon's temple was under construction the various timbers and stones were fitted for their special place and when all were finished and properly prepared, then the assembling took place and the building came together without the sound of a hammer. So it is with this spiritual building when it is completed; then Christ will come as He promised when He said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."-John 14:3. The stones that have been fitted and then laid asid: in death will be resurrected and the living stones will be changed and the two groups will together be caught up to meet their Lord at His return. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."-1 Thess. 4:16, 17.

other mission to fulfill. In His study of the Scriptures He could not have overlooked that remarkable passage in Isaiah 49:6, the interest of which is enhanced by the directness of the Revised Version, and its significance realized when the importance of the word "also" is considered; for it predicates two different purposes in the mind of Jehovah. Considered in the light of this passage, Christ presupposes a second coming if His first mission was to Jews only, for He is as much the central figure in the one portion as in the other.

That Christ so understood it would seem to be a logical deduction from His first recorded public utterance (in Luke 4) concerning His ministry, when He said He came "to preach the gospel to the poor, and to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord"; for the words "preach" and "proclaim" are from different Greek words, one having a present application, the other heralding a future event. And did He not preach the gospel to the poor? What was His answer to John's question, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" See Matthew 11:4, 5: "The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, . . . and the poor have the gospel preached to them." Again and again do we read that "he had compassion on the multitude," and compassion has been a dominant note in true Christianity ever since, for has it not been the source of all the noblest efforts of our civilization, spurred on from love to Him who "set us an example, that we should follow in his steps"?

That it was God who so loved the world, and that it was God's salvation He came to preach, Christ made it abundantly clear. "1 am not come to do My own will, but the will of Him that sent Me," was the keynote of His attitude. As Paul points out, He "died for us that (in order that) he might bring us to God." He realized that He was God's "servant," a title He not infrequently recognized as His in the Old Testament. He knew well the wonderful picture of the sufferings He must undergo as the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world, as Isaiah had so vividly prophesied. He knew well, also, the story of Jonah as it prefigured His death and resurrection. He saw, too, quite another picture sketched by the same hand of inspiration, and expressed in titles He again recognized as His. Was He not that Prophet of whom Moses spoke, and into whose mouth God had promised to put His message? Was He not the Seed of Abraham, the root and offspring of David, who was destined to lift the curse from the earth, and bring blessing in its stead, that "where sin abounded, grace might much more abound"? Was He not to be called "the Wonderful Counsellor" and "The Prince of Peace"? Was it not predicted that through Him men should "beat their swords into plowshares"-the one an instrument of death, the other the means to abundant life? Was He not the King who would reign in righteousness, and whose dominion would ultimately extend to the utter-most parts of the earth, and from whom the law would go forth from Jerusalem, and all nations would call Him blessed? Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

"To us a child of hope is born,

To us a Son is given;

Him shall the tribes of earth obey,

Him all the hosts of heaven.

"His power increasing, still shall spread,
His reign no end shall know;
Justice shall guard His throne with love,
And peace abound below."

LEARNING FROM THE EARLY CHURCH

By Harry A. Sheets

CHRIST was sent to the "lost sheep of the house of Israel" to offer the kingdom to them. Because of this He little more than mentioned the church but left the work of establishing and instructing to His Spirit-directed apostles. If we would know how the Church of God should be organized and conducted we must look to the early church as directed by the apostles.

First, we discover that the church was always called "the church of God." Second, we notice that it is God-directed and that He gave some to be apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, some pastors, and some teachers. This was for the perfecting of the saints that there might be unity of faith and knowledge till all reached the fullness of the stature of Christ. Eph. 4:11-13.

Even a casual glance at the early church reveals that it was not a democratic institution. Its invisible but ever-present head is God. He gives and directs its leaders. All contributions to the church are gifts to Him, and all blessings are from His hand.

The elders of the church are likened to shepherds and the members to sheep. The elders must take the oversight of the flock and shepherd it to its benefit (Acts 20:28), not lording over the flock, but being examples unto it (1 Peter 5:1-3). The flock must follow but never lead.

This is perhaps the most fundamental lesson for our day. Too often our elders are merely chairmen or secretaries and the popular ballot is the real authority. This gives the "babe in Christ" as much authority in the church as the most spiritual elder. Ballots are usually controlled by the "carnally minded.". This makes the church "carnally minded," and to; be "carnally minded is death" (Rom. 8:6). Many of our churches are filled with contention and division today because of their refusal to follow the elders. The elders of the early church were appointed by other elders and not by popular ballot. The deacons were appointed by the elders.

Many more valuable lessons should be learned from the early church,

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

MY FIRST argument drawn from the fact that the definite article the uniformly designates the gospel. If there were more than one Bible gospel. then the article the would not designate which was pointed out. Suppose there were more than one supreme being, or one savior of the world, how could we determine which of these Gods or Saviors was designated by the phrase the God, or the Savior? We certainly could not. Only upon the hypothesis that there is but one God, one Savior, and one gospel, is it proper to say the God, the Savior, and the gospel.

UNITY OF FAITH AND HOPE

My second argument with which to prove the unity of the gospel is deducted from the unity of the faith and hope it produces. The Apostle Paul presents seven units in Ephesians 4:3-6, viz.: "One body, one spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and one God and Father of all." These unities stand or fall together. As well may we argue polytheism, or a plurality of gods, a plurality of saviors, and bodies of Christ, and spirits, as a plurality of faiths and hopes. But faith is an effect produced by the gospel as its cause. Proof, Mark 16:15, 16; Romans 1:16; 1 Corinthians 15: 1, 2. "And he (Christ) said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth (believeth what? The thing preached, the gospel, of course) and is baptized shall be saved." "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have rereived, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, f ye keep in memory what I preached unto you unless ye have believed in vain." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." But by hearing how much of the Word of God! Answer: According to the foregoing evidence, just so much (no more or less) as relates to the gospel of Christ. If, therefore, faith is an effect whose only

Here is the first of a series of reprints from a volume by one of the best scholars the Church of God has ever had. The succeeding articles of the group will appear in early issues.

only one faith, we must have only one gospel to produce this unit faith; for there will be as many faiths as there are gospelto produce those faiths. Each cause is the gospel, then to have gospel will beget its respective faith.

The prolific cause of the great variety of faiths in the professed religious world is the many conflicting gospels preached by the clergy, and taught by the religious literature of the present day. Just in proportion as we multiply gospels, will we of course multiply gospel faiths. Buthe Bible teaches that there is only "one faith," consequently there must be but one gospel as the unit cause of this unit faith.

Again, hope is an effect produced by faith in the unfulfilled promises of the gospel. Hence, to have but one hope there must be but one faith as its unit cause; and to have but one faith, there must be but one gospel, as its unit cause; for two gospels will beget two faiths, and two faiths will beget two hopes. But the Bible teaches that there is only one hope; consequently there can be but one faith and one gospel to produce this one hope.

My third argument with which to prove the definiteness and unity of the gospel is drawn from Paul's reasoning in Galatians 1 and 3. In chapter 3:8, Paul affirms that the Gentiles are justified through faith in the gospel preached to Abraham; thereby teaching that there had been but one gospel from the days of Abraham to the time in which he penned this epistle to Galatia. In chapter 1:6, 7, he says, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you. and would pervert the gospel of Christ." Here the Apostle teaches that such is the unity and perfection of the gosper that the least change will pervert it. That there being but one gospel, it cannot be converted into another gospel, but that any change whatever will pervert this gospel.

The Ten Kingdoms

IS THERE any reason why we cannot accept the interpretation that the Italian States were symbolized by the ten horns of Revelation 17:12?

In order to make the answer to this question clear we must consider some fundamental principles of interpretation. First there is to be considered the scope of the application of the prophecies of the book of Revelation, both in time and in geographical extent. Beyond doubt the time is not yet completed because many events plainly described have not yet appeared on the field of history. Regarding the geographical scope of the prophecy, it repeatedly mentions "all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues." After the letters to the seven churches, there is little that is purely local in the entire book. It deals with believers and unbelievers; with the "overcomers" and those who are deluded by the intrigues of the promoters of evil. The book is a revelation to all people in all places until the "new heavens and the new earth" appear. The dictum that the prophecies of Revelation are confined "to the territory of the Roman Empire" is scarce worthy of consideration.

Evidently these "ten horns" are identical with those which had crowns (Rev. 13:1); and they are by implication to succeed to the dominion of the "beast of seven heads," upon whose head they appear, and are contemporary with the head which was "wounded unto death" and his deadly wound was healed (Rev. 13:3). These ten horns are also contemporary with the beast mentioned in Revelation 13:11. This beast with "two horns like a lamb" may be identified with the "little horn" of Daniel 7:8, only in Revelation 13:11-18 the description is much more detailed. It is all world revelation, and is to be fulfilled historically just as many other prophecies have been.

The dominion of the ten horns of Revelation 17:12, without doubt, is the same as the dominion of the ten horns of chapter 13, only there the prophetic subject is the rise of the political power represented by the beast with the two horns, and here the subject which is depicted is the woman sitting on the "scarlet coloured beast." The seven heads in this connection are "seven governments," that is, seven kings or rulers. Politically these kingdoms are the same from chapter 13 on till chapter 17. But the worldwide church, which has divided in the course of time into the true and the false, is brought to view under two figures: those "written in the book of life" and those not written in the book of life. The second is represented as the ... arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, full of abominations and filthiness of her fornications" (Rev. 17).

History reveals no conditions of the Italian States to indicate when they exercised this world dominion. From the time of the overthrow of the Roman power in the West, which culminated in A. D. 476, until the uniting of the Italian kingdom, which was achieved in A. D. 1871, the States of Italy were bandied from one kingdom to another. Some were Moslem, some were Spanish, sometimes they were under the Holy Roman Empire, and sometimes they were under the protection of France, and on one or two occasions they were divided to suit the whims of several different States—Spain, France, Austria. They never have exercised their rule over Italy.

Keeping in mind the requirements of the prophecies as above indicated, we may now ask: In what events and by what peoples are these words in Revelation to be fulfilled?

All similar prophecies in the Bible have been applied in the Scriptures to the dominant political powers during certain successive periods of time, as Babylon, Persia, Greece, and Roman dominions. This fact serves as a key to unlock the words of the Revelator. And while there are yet questions which are unanswered regarding the exact State or States possessing the dominion, the dominion has always been apparent in some form. That this dominion has passed to the European States was evident in the days of the Casars. Following the Casars there were tremendous upheavals and violent revolts throughout the empire. During the year 307 A.D. there were six rulers recognized as emperors, ruling contemporaneously, as follows: Constantine, Maximian, and Maxentius in the West; and Galerius, Maximin, and Lucinius in the East. One by one these rulers were eliminated until the year 322, when Licinius was defeated and Constantine became sole ruler both of the East and the West. When Constantine, now called the Great, established the seat of empire in the old Byzantine capital, which later became Constantinople, removing the archives from Rome, he opened a door in the West for leaders who aspired to rule to enter, and these leaders endeavored to create a new imperial order. This extensive domain was soon divided and subdivided for the purpose of administration, and for three hundred years there was intense sectional strife, and never again has the

The Midnight Cry

"A ND at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."—Matthew 25:6.

Although the parable of the Ten Virgins has received as much attention from students of prophecy and Bible readers as any other of our Lord's parables, yet there are points in it which seem to have been generally overlooked. One of these points, the chief one, I think, is contained in the passage quoted above. Notwithstanding the lesson of this parable, the accepted notion is, even today, that Christ will suddenly come, without any previous warning, apart from outward signs in the world-wars, famines, pestilences, or the Zionist Movement-and translate to Himself in the teavenlies all the watching and ready saints. What, then, is this midnight cry? What does it imply, if not thisthat our Lord's second advent will be duly announced? Hence, that Christ will send a herald, an advent messenger, to announce Him, and so prepare His wise and faithful people for the reception. Now it is this important feature—the advent of this messenger, whose coming and message are of crucial interest to all the virgins-which seems to have been overlooked. Yet that is the point of vital import, because it is the real testing point. When a little later the King is said to have come, the crucial time is past. Those, therefore, who have concluded that Christ will suddenly come and catch them up to Himself are reckoning without this test.

We are told respecting Christ's first advent that at that time the Jews were expecting the Messiah, thinking, doubtless, that when He came they would welcome Him with open arms. Possibly, had they understood the manner and circumstances of His coming, they would have been intellectually prepared. What we have to reckon with, therefore, is this fact: That an advent messenger will announce the Bridegroom, and that the attitude we adopt with respect to that announcement will prove us to be ready or otherwise for the honor of admittance to the presence of the King. The "rapture," the "any moment now" idea is misleading. The midnight cry must be first raised; moreover, it must be believed and understood in the light of the lamp of Prophetic Truth: "The Lord hath appointed a lamp for his anointed." A little consideration will reveal the important fact that the advent of this messenger is the crucial event; it is your acceptance of his message which decides your readiness or unreadiness; if you are ready to receive him, you in turn will be "ready" when the King comes, not otherwise.

It is obvious, then, that there is some interval of time (just sufficient to allow the virgins to examine the message embodied in the midnight "cry," and to satisfy themselves from the sure Word, the Lamp, that it is truth indeed) between the first raising of the "ery" and the "rapture" or entering in of the wise virgins to the marriage feast, possibly from two to three years.

One man's opinion of one of the most discussed parables in the Bible. An interpretation redotent with technicality and intended for analytical students. Possibly opposed to the general view, but nevertheless worthy of consideration as a theory.

The importance of this midnight cry is revealed in its effect upon the virgins. It not only arouses them from their state of slumber or sleep, and sets them trimming their lamps, but it is the instrument by which the "wise" are distinguished from the "foolish."

To both classes it is a testing truth, a plummet of judgment: for it effects a division. It also plainly shows us that a belief in the second coming of Christ is not in itself sufficient to ensure us an entrance into the marriage feast; something else is required. The advent message sets up a demand which reveals this requirement lacking in the ease of the foolish virgins.

The situation created by the "midnight cry" strongly implies that to both wise and foolish virgins that message was not "orthodox"; it evidently did not conform to the general ideas entertained by the virgins upon the subject of the second coming, and events associated therewith. Hence, this trimming of lamps. There were, it would seem, new and strange features about it which required the open mind and the eye-salve of the anointing whereby to discern and receive them as truth. For every unfolding of new truth brings with it a test of spirituality, meekness, teachableness. Like a measuring rod, it tests the measure of our faith and love of the truth, or to what extent we are in bondage to sectarian prejudices, fleshly partisanship, and worshiping of messengers, creed idols, and unscriptural speculations of men.

This parable does not distinguish between saints and sinners, but between "virgins"—pure ones—believers, moreover, who are interested in the second coming of the Lord Jesus. They are, both wise and foolish, a "kingdom" class, who look for His appearing. Both wise and foolish go forth to meet the Bridegroom, all apparently eager and hopeful. This original going forth, we should understand, signifies an advent movement in the churches some few years before the event called the "midnight cry" occurs. Under the inspiring influence of this movement, and the enthusiasm engendered by eloquent expositions and advent discourses, and conferences, and belief in the imminence of the Lord's return, these virgins, in a sense, went forth, in anticipation and preparation, to meet the Bridegroom, each with his or her lamp or Bible, the original source of their hope and expectation, and the light to lighten the way. But their expectations were not then realized. The Bridegroom tarried. This tarrying or waiting time was sufficiently long to produce "slumber" and sleep on the part of the virgins.

There have been several advent movements during the last century. The period from 1829 to 1834 was remarkable for one of the greatest advent movements that history records. Mr. Daniel Taylor, the author of the Reign of Christ on Earth, thus describes it:

"Henceforth the Lord's advent was to take a front place on human lips, and in thoughtful hearts; a great cry went forth that was never to cease; the awakening was wide and great. Pulpits rang with the alarm, pens were busy. In 1829, 1831, 1833, and 1834, no less than six prophetical journals were established in London, Dublin, and Edinburgh, conducted by able pens and cultivated minds."

The next advent movement of any importance was the "Miller Movement" in America-1840-1844. Since then there have been other advent movements in which the cry. "Behold, the Bridegroom," has been raised. As the parable indicates, these cries were too previous. The going forth on the part of the virgins must obviously be the last advent movement, and between that and the "midnight ery" there is evidently a cooling down of advent enthusiasm. Indeed, since the decease of the late Mr. Baxter, the subject has fallen into disrepute, official orthodoxy has consistently cold-shouldered the question of the second coming; only here and there may be heard, ever and anon, a voice in the wilderness; and a few small periodicals of limited circulation maintain a flickering testimony, but they fail to arouse the virgins from the quiescent state into which they have fallen; only the midnight cry will accomplish that.

The going forth on the part of the ten virgins, as already stated, applies to the last advent movement, and as the writer thinks, somewhere in the closing years of the last century. But the point is, that the virgins who will be manifested as "foolish" when the midnight cry is raised, were foolish from the start. In that too previous going forth to meet the Bridegroom, they took no oil with them: a fatal omission! Nor had they during the tarrying period discovered their lack, or taken steps to repair the omission.

So that had our Lord come at that time they would have been in a like case as they were afterwards found, but with this difference: they would not have known the why and the wherefor of their exclusion from the marriage feast. This brings us to the consideration of another vital point—a point which our Lord, as a student of the Old Testament Scriptures, alone understood at that time. The point has reference to the holy callings. The Old Testament callings were shadows of good things to come. They were three in number. The first and most holy was the anointed priesthood: the typical "high calling." The next holy calling was that of the Levites: a body of temple servants and princes of the congregation. The third and last consisted of the people or congregation: a typically holy people or nation.

Of these three holy classes, the priesthood alone were anointed, and were typical of the body of Christ: the body of the Anointed, the "royal priesthood" (1 Peter 2:9).

The Levites were a holy class, but not an anointed class; hence were typical of a class who are called to princely honors outside and apart from the anointed body of Christ. The call and election of these antitypical Levites come into operation when the call and election of the anointed body of Christ — the priesthood — are about to close; that is, about the time of the second advent, that phase of it alluded to in the parable. About that time a certain situation will obtain which could not obtain previously. It is this: The last members of the anointed priesthood will be coexistent with the members of the antitypical Levite body (Isa. 66: 21), whom God will cause to "return" for this purpose. But this Levite company, although believers in Christ, and along with the last members of the anointed, will be looking for His appearing, and recipients of grace will not have experienced the anointing, and, in fact, do not belong to the anointed body of Christ, but are sons and heirs on the earthly plane. This they do not realize nor understand for the time being, nor will they understand it until after the midnight cry has gone forth.

Thus the parable foreshadows a situation where classes belonging to separate callings intermingle, necessitating a division in such a manner as divine wisdom has chosen to adopt. The foolish virgins were foolish in that they entertained hopes and expectations which did not rightly belong to them, nor did they possess that clearness of vision and spirituality of mind to enable them to readily understand the advent message: their lamps began to go out: the: lost, for a time, the light they once had, yet they could not replace it with the new. On the other hand the wise virgins were enabled by reason of the oil of the anointing which was in them, although possibly much was new and strange, to adopt an open and receptive attitude; they quickly grasped the scriptural facts and evidences, and being also in a state of heart readiness, were mentally equipped, and possibly became coworkers in the advent testimony, and thus when the King came they found an abundant entrance into the joy of their Lord.—T. G. Cole in The Faith.

OUT OF THE DUST

A FTER being buried in the soil of Mesopotamia for six thousand years, numerous vessels of crystal, shell, marble, and chalcedony have been unearthed by the University of Pennsylvania Museum's expedition to Ur of the Chaldees, the ancestral home of Abraham. Royal tombs dating back to 3500 B. C. were found in the excavation, containing the bodies of kings and queens, soldiers and domestic servants, of a civilization previously unknown to science. With these bodies was found "an unbelievable wealth of jewelry... attesting to the artistry, the culture, and the luxury of the court of Ur five thousand years ago." Not many years ago skeptics questioned the existence of such a city as Ur. Again the spade has corroborated the Bible account of early human history.

SENT

By Lyman Booth

"ENT" is the past participal of the verb "send." It denotes a past action. To send is to cause to go from one place to another. In its most common use it involves personal agency without personal presence. We have an example of this in the statement, "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John." Here we find that God was the controlling agency who did the sending and John was the object of that act. In all of the varied uses this same idea controls. The word embodies four elements. First, one who sends; second, the party or object sent; third, the means or agent by which the person or thing sent is conveyed to the place; fourth, the person or persons to whom it is sent. For example, James, who lives in Illinois, desires to send a book to Mary, who resides in Iowa. We find James, first; the book, second; the mail or express, third; Mary, the fourth.

This reasoning is even true with Scripture narratives. We read that John the Baptist "was sent from God." He was sent as a messenger to the people with a message. The means by which the message was conveyed to the people was "the voice of one crying in the wilderness." The expression "sent from God" does not convey the thought that John was in the immediate presence of God. If it did, then John would have been in heaven or else God would have been on earth. The truth is made plain in other instances. John was authorized to preach repentance. He came as a witness or messenger from God. Not that John was in heaven, but that he received the message from God, and in turn John delivered it to the people. John was sent in the same manner as Jesus was. In His prayer as recorded in John 17:18 our Lord said, "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world." The pronoun "them" refers to His apostles. We have no record that they had ever been any place other than on the earth. The thought is that He had commissioned them to go "into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). Jesus sent His apostles into the world (or among the people) in like manner as His Father had sent Him. He compares the sending in one instance with the other and conveys the idea that they were alike. This thought is plainly taught in Luke 4:18, 19, 21: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord. . . . And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

In John 3:17 we read, "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." Many good people claim that this verse teaches the popular thought that Jesus was in heaven with His Father, and that He was sent from heaven. We hold such a claim is in error, and contend that He was never in heaven prior to His ascension after His resurrection.

I am aware that an objector may ask, "Did not Jesus say to Nicodemus, 'No man has ascended to heaven, except he who came down from heaven, even the Son of man who is in heaven' (John 3:13, from the Aramaic)?" True, those are His words. The statement may be stumbling to human reason as it was to Nicodemus. This was before His resurrection. Jesus was still on earth. How could He be in heaven and on earth at the same time? It is a known law in philosophy that a material object cannot occupy two places at the same time; neither can two objects occupy the same place at the same time. How, then, can this seeming contradiction be explained?

In the first place, He was in the beginning as the Word of God. That Word or promise came from God—from heaven. Not as a being, but as a promise. When God makes a promise He counts the thing promised as though it were in existence. He was "the seed of the woman" promised to Eve; and to Mary, "the Son of the Highest." Thus we learn how He had been in heaven and how He came from heaven; but how could He have been in heaven and on earth while conversing with Nicodemus, who, though a teacher in Israel, could not understand the Master's sayings concerning heavenly things?

The sense manifestly is this: A perfect knowledge of God cannot be obtained by a person going to heaven to receive it; but by the Son of man, who was to disclose the Father whom He alone knew, for He said, "O, my righteous Father, the world did not know you, but I have known you; and these have known that you have sent me. And I have made your name known to them, and I am still making it known; so that the love with which you loved me may be among them, and I be with them."—John 17:25, 26, from the Aramaic. The more we learn of heavenly things, the nearer we ascend to them; and the more we obtain of God's knowledge, the nearer we ascend to Him, not locally, but in the attributes of His divine nature.

Up and down; to and from; ascend and descend; higher and lower, do not always refer to locality. In the practice of law the terms are used to denote the different courts of justice, or judges thereof, each invested with certain limited powers or authority. Men speak of the lower and higher court; also, the higher court handing down a decision; etc.

Our Lord received His commission from the high court of heaven—from the supreme Judge of the universe. He faithfully performed the work prescribed in that commission, and then sent His apostles and other disciples to continue the work He had begun.

The message Jesus brought is intended to cover Gentile rule. It contained an invitation and a command. Jesus said to the weary and heavy laden to come to Him to find rest. Then after coming He commanded them to go into all the world or among all nations and to extend the same glorious invitation, and it is still being heralded throughout the world. Some are seeking and finding white many heed not the call.

It is not only a generous, but an enticing invitation, calculated to save all who accept its provisions. None need be ashamed of the guests who will assemble at the banquet; for Paul said, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."—Rom. 1:16. The same requirements prevail today. When we "come" we also are told to "go." Question: Having "come," are we "going," and inviting others to come and go with us? Be assured that all trusting souls who come to Jesus He will keep blameless, and step by step will lead them up to higher culture, richer wisdom, fuller knowledge, purer tastes, until finally they attain His likeness in glory. Who will come to the banquet of mercy? There is ample room, and plenty for every hungry and thirsty soul.

Woes of the World

"WOE unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field." God's intention was that every Israelite should have his own home and land, and, to accomplish this end, the land of Canaan was first divided among the twelve tribes, and then in turn the tribe partitioned off the land allotted to it so that each family in Israel could dwell safely under its own vine and fig tree. If a man fell into debt and had to sell his land or himself to his creditor, a law was provided whereby a near relative could purchase the man and his possession back. This was the law of the kinsman redeemer. If no relative could purchase the inheritance, then every fifty years, in the year of the Jubilee, the land must be returned to its original owner.

Here Isaiah is pronouncing were upon those who through greed monopolized property by joining house to house and laying field to field, until their holding became so wast that to live on such an estate was like being "placed alone in the midst of the earth!" To counteract such greed which led to the oppression of the poor, God said, "Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath" (about eight gallons—less than a gallon to the acre), "and the seed of an homer" (about eighty-six gallons) "shall yield an ephah" (one bushel, three pints). Coming to the rescue of the poor, God would cause the greedy landowner's fields to become practically sterile.

Centuries later, Christ pronounced a similar woe upon such oppressors: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widow's houses, and for a pretense make long prayers: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation."—Matt. 23:14. James also declared: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. . . . Behold, the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter."—James 4:1-8.

What a warning for the monopolistic corporations of today! God put enough land and food upon this earth to feed every last mortal, and the only reason many people hunger today is because greedy monopoly has taken bread from the mouths of the poor. This woe is really a pronouncement against the sin of intemperate greed.

DISSIPATION

"Woe to them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink." Here he pictures a man who spends his entire day, from morning until night, drinking until he becomes inflamed with strong drink and wine. Later on . . . he comes back to pronounce woe again upon those who drink wine and mix strong drinks. It seems that drunkenness is such an abomination in God's sight that Isaiah a second time pronounces woe upon it.

Yet in these days we are being told that what the workingman needs is a good liquor, and that the return of the grogshop will bring back prosperity. The liquor interests talk glibly of furthering the cause of temperance by giving a man a drink. You can never make a man temperate by giving him more drink. There is an old Japanese proverb which says, "The man took a drink; the drink took a drink, and the drink took the man." The abolition of prohibition with the consequent result of making drink easier to obtain will not create temperance; rather, it will multiply intemperance. . . . If the liquor interests were to advertise the true facts, this is how their advertisements would read:

"Wanted: One hundred boys for new customers. Most of our old ones are rapidly dropping out. Ten committed suicide last week; twenty are in jail; eight are in the chain gang; fifteen were sent to the poorhouse; one was hanged; three were sent to the insane asylum; most of the balance are not worth fooling with—they have no money. We must have new customers—fresh, young blood—or we will have to shut up shop."

Against Unbelief

"Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity . . . . that say, Let him make speed and hasten his work." These were scoffers who, doubting that God will do the work of judgment He has promised, demand a sign that they may know He will perform all He said. Peter spoke of those who even in our day would intemperately ask for signs rather than walk by faith and not by sight. "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the lathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation."—2 Peter 3:3, 4.

What a wailing was heard when God did answer their request, for a sign that He would do as He promised, when a few years later they were carried captive to Babylon! And what weeping and gnashing of teeth there will be when God shall keep His promise of the return of our Lord. Happy will that man be who when his Lord comes will be found patiently waiting in faith. Christ asked, "When the Son of man cometh, will he find faith on the earth?" Shall we then walk by faith and not by sight?

Lack of genuine faith in God who loveth righteousness, is responsible for the moral breakdown in society, for the lack of integrity in business and for slighting of obligations and duties, and for the many resulting evils.

MORAL CONFUSION

"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil." There is a threadbare expression of this modern day which runs like this: "Let conscience be your guide." There is no more dangerous truth than a half-truth, and this is an insidious half-truth. Conscience is a child of education, and, when educated according to the Word of God, it is a safe guide, but when that conscience is uneducated, it becomes a blind guide leading the blind into the ditch of moral confusion. Conscience never tells us what is right. The judicial faculties of the mind, governed by God's Word, tell us what is right. Conscience says, "Do right." Conscience, properly educated, then, is a rule of action.

Seared consciences have led to moral degeneracy until men in all good conscience call good evil, and evil good, put darkness for light, and light for darkness. Referring in point to the intemperance of drink, the Crusaders, taking to themselves a name which heretofore only applied to those who carried forward some holy cause, declare that their campaign for the return of liquor is a holy, rightcous endeavor to promote the cause of temperance! Upon such who call evil good, this pronouncement of woe falls.

Against Conceit

"Woe to them that are wise in their own eyes." Why? Because such are really fools. Solomon said, "The ways of a fool are right in his own eyes."—Prov. 12:15. That is why you cannot teach a fool anything, because his error is right in his own eyes. Self-conceit is one of the most damaging of all despicable traits. The conceit of a fool who is wise in his own eyes is bad enough, but the worst thing about such a man is that he uses his mouth to advertise his conceit to others. How well did Solomon say, "The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright, but the mouth of fools poureth out foolishness."

. The only redemption that Solomon could see for a fool was for him to keep his own counsel. Hear Solomon on this: "Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise; and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding."-Prov. 17:28. Surely the only way a man could ever be esteemed wise is for him to keep his mouth shut. Paul traces the descent of the worldly wise, "Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened (a total eclipse). Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds and four-footed beasts and creeping things."-Rom. 1:21-23. How truthfully has Paul declared, "For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."—1 Cor. 1:21. Surely, there needs to be pronounced a wee upon the sin of intemperate self-conceit.

PERVERSION OF JUSTICE

"Woe unto them . . . which justify the wicked for reward." How prevalent is this besetting sin today. Lawyers will make a most stirring appeal to a jury to acquit the murderer—usually an appeal to maudlin sentiment. It matters not how others may suffer because of the murderer's vile act, yet an appeal is made to free the criminal, and all this is done "to justify the wicked for reward." The lawyer is after the reward or fee he gets out of it. Likewise the politician will protect predatory interests, regardless of the fact that such interests may be taking bread from children's mouths and clothes from their backs; and it is all done to justify the wicked for reward. Upon such the sixth woe is pronounced.

"And take away the rightcousness of the rightcous from him." As they justify the wicked for reward, by the very act they take away the glory of being rightcous from the rightcous. The thought seems to be, "If the wicked are justified, what virtue is there in being rightcous?"

But right will not always be on the scaffold, nor will wrong be forever on the throne.

This truth is declared by Isaiah when he says, "Therefore as the fire devoureth the stubble, and the flame consumeth the chaff, so their root shall be as rottenness and their blossom shall go up as dust, because they have east away the law of the Lord of hosts, and despised the word of the holy one of Israel." For despising God's Word Israel went into captivity, and for despising God's New Testament law the world today will go into a spiritual captivity worse than that of Babylon, not only in duration of time, but in the severity of its punishment.—Standard Bible Teacher, copyrighted; reprinted by permission.

Again, the Apostle says at the eighth and ninth verses, "But though we (the twelve apostles), or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."

From the foregoing evidence 1 would deduct the following legitimate conclusions, to wit:

- 1. That Abraham had preached unto him by the angel of God, the same gospel which had been preached at Galatia, and which the church of God at that place had received, which some would pervert, and from which some had been removed.
- 2. That if any man, or angel, should ever afterwards preach any other gospel, the curse of God should rest upon him. Thus teaching demonstrably that the same gospel which was preached to Abraham, and which was also preached by the twelve apostles, is to be preached during the present dispensation, and that such has, and will be, the unity and immutability of this great gospel proposition, which was preached by the angel of God, and by His hoty apostles, that neither men on earth nor angels from heaven would ever afterwards be permitted to swerve a hair's breadth from this angelic and apostolic gospel, without calling down the curse of almighty God upon their heads.

I cannot reconcile those plain and definite Bible conclusions with any other view than that of the absolute unity and immutability of the gospel of Christ from the time of Abraham down to the time when the last gospel sermon shall be preached to the last son or daughter of Abraham. Indeed, this Abrahamic and apostolic gospel contemplates the consummation of the Abrahamic and Davidical covenant in "blessing all the nations of the earth" through "Abraham and his seed" (Christ the son of David and His royal brethren), who shall reign as kings and priests over the nations for a thousand years.

CLARITY WITH DEFINITION

The gospel is a perfectly definite proposition. In the light of reason and justice, it must be so explicit and definite that every person who is amenable to it cannot read, or hear it read, without being responsible for believing it. For God to clothe a proposition with so much ambiguity and vagueness that no person can understand it with any degree of clearness, or rely upon it with any degree of confidence; and yet suspend the destiny of a responsible world upon understanding and believing it, would be the climax of injustice. Means of light and truth and responsibility go hand in hand.

Evidence is the sole cause of faith; and faith the only intelligent cause of obedience; just in proportion, therefore, as evidence is obscure or vague, will faith be obscure and vague also. Hence, for God to be just in the condemnation of every responsible person who does not believe the gospel. He must reveal it in such a plain and definite manner that no person who reads or hears it can fail to understand without guilt and condemnation. And since God does command every responsible man to believe and obey the gospel, or be condemned to everlasting destruction, we must conclude that He has plainly and definitely revealed it.

THE TERM GOSPEL

To be a definite term, it must have a definite signification. The philological and Bible import of the term gospel is good news, or glad tidings. To the Bible import of this term I invite attention. Christ affirms that He was anointed to preach the gospel (Luke 4:18). He says "the Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel." This language is a quotation from Isaiah 61:1, which reads, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings," etc. Now just what Isaiah meant by "good tidings," our Savior meant by "the gospel." These, therefore, are synonymous terms in the light of revelation. According to Paul's language in Romans 10:15, to "preach the gospel," and to bring "glad tidings of good things," are one and the same thing. And by comparing this extract of the Apostle's with the original prophecy, recorded in Isaiah 52:7, it will be seen that "gospel" and "good tidings" are convertible terms. Thus the Bible being its own expositor, the term gospel signifies "good news," or "glad tidings." But glad tidings concerning what?

The term good news, or glad tidings, is an unintelligible term, unless that to which these good tidings relate can be definitely defined. The mere philology of the term good news, defines neither its nature nor the cause which produces this effect. Hence, having learned from the Bible that the gospel is good news, we have learned absolutely nothing in reference to the nature, cause, or object of this news; unless, therefore, we can find a Bible explanation of the subject of these glad tidings, we must remain in utter ignorance in reference to this great Bible test of salvation, upon which, as upon a pivot, the world's destiny shall turn.

CONJECTURE UNNECESSARY

But blessed be the name of God, we are not left to conjecture, or the mere ebullitions of feeling upon this vital and all-important subject. If Jesus Christ was anointed to preach the gospel, and if we have a record of the gospel He preached, then by reference to this record we may learn what He then preached, just as definitely as though we had heard Him with our own ears. That the great gospel theme which He publicly proclaimed in every city, village, and hamlet might be transmitted to the latest generation of men, He selected twelve men who accompanied Him during His entire ministration; who heard Him during three years and a half proclaim orally in hundreds of discourses this glorious theme. And, then, that their record might be infallibly true, the holy Spirit was to bring to their remembrance all things whatsoever He had said (John 14:26). With such witnesses, and such an inspired record, we have nothing left but to read our Savior's sermons and believe what

We read. I will quote Mark's testimony in relation to the first gospel sermon our Savior ever preached. "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilce. preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel."-Mark 1:14, 15. The following is Matthew's version of the same gospel sermon. "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."-Matt. 4:17. According to the united testimony of these two witnesses, to preach the gospel is to preach the kingdom of God. But Mark positively affirms that Christ in these first sermons preached the gospel of the kingdom of God. The good things, therefore, promised in the gospel relate to the kingdom of God. The great incentive held out by this model gospel preacher as the reason why the sinner should reform was the kingdom of God. Hence, the kingdom of God was the whole burden of our Savior's first gospel sermon. Modern gospel preachers would do well to copy this illustrious example. Not only did the first gospel sermons of our adorable Redeemer relate to the kingdom of God as their definite and unit object; but all His subsequent gospel preaching was of the same import. Proof, Matthew 4:23-"And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their syna gogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." Here the kingdom was the definite subject of the gospel which Christ preached in all the Jewish synagogues.

Again, in chapter 9:35, the subject of the gospel our Savior preached is clearly defined. And Jesus went about all the cities and villages teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom," etc. Luke's testimony corroborates that of Matthew upon this point. He says: "And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God."-Luke 8:1. These testimonies cover the entire area of our Savior's ministerial labors; and yet He has given but one definition of the subject of the gospel, and that is the kingdom of God. Hence, the gospel is emphatically good things to be realized in the kingdom of God. In Luke 4:18, Christ says He is anointed to preach the gospel. And in verse 43, He tells us just what He preached. "And he said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent. And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee."

Hence, our Savior's being His own expositor—to preach the gospel is to preach the kingdom of God. And to preach this gospel of the kingdom, He was sent into our world. This was the great object of all His preaching.

EARLY COMMISSION

But Christ could not during His brief ministerial career test even the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Hence, we find Him gathering around Him His twelve apostles, and commanding them not to go into the cities of the Gentiles, nor any of the cities of the Samaritans, but to go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. "And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 10:5-7. The following is Luke's version of the same commission, "Then he (Christ) called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick."-Luke 9:1, 2. At the sixth verse he records the fulfillment of this commission. "And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing every where." Hence, according to the foregoing, to preach the gospel, and to preach the kingdom of God, are words of the same import; and why? Answer: Because the gospel is the glad tidings of the kingdom. To preach the one, therefore, we must preach the other also. Hence, Christ and His apostles preached one and the same gospel. A unit faith, therefore, would be the legitimate result of such preaching. But the time was fast approaching when Christ and His beloved disciples must be separated.

BROADENED SCOPE

As yet their labors had been confined to the Jewish nation. It was our Savior's purpose to widen the area of this great gospel commission, so as to embrace within its ample folds the habitable globe.

To qualify His disciples for this glorious mission, He had spent forty days in expounding the great theme they were to proclaim in every nation under heaven; viz.: "The things pertaining to the kingdom of God," having "by many infallible witnesses," demonstrated His resurrection from the dead (Acts 1:3).

Having thus enlightened their minds in all things pertaining to the great subject of their mission, He then appealed to the power of the Almighty, with which they should be environed, as the authorized legates of heaven, to enforce this great gospel test of faith, salvation, and future judgment. "And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power (or authority) is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations."—Matt. 28:18, 19.

But what were they to teach the nations as the essential conditions of salvation? Answer: The gospel! Proof, Mark 16:14, 15. "Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen. And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

The following is our Savior's predicted fulfillment of this commission; "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world."—Matt. 24:14. Thus demonstrating that the gospel which He commanded His apostles to preach in all the world was the "gospel of the kingdom."

DESCENT OF POWER

But the apostles were not qualified to speak the living languages of the world; nor had they as yet been endued with power to demonstrate their commission. Hence, they were commanded to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high (Luke 24:49). Power to do what? Answer: To preach the gospel and enforce its conditions by virtue of their authority as the ambassadors of Christ. They obeyed this divine injunction, and just ten days after the ascension of their Lord to heaven, and while all with one accord, and in one place, the power of the Highest descended upon them, and overwhelmed them with Spirit power, while to the representatives of the languages of all nations, they demonstrated their qualifications to preach the gospel to every creature under the heavens.

Peter stood forth on that august occasion as the oracle of God, and preached the first gospel sermon under this great gospel commission, which is by far the most efficient gospel sermon upon record. And what was the import of this great model sermon? Passing by, for the sake of brevity, the preliminaries, and the personal application of this subject to his Jewish congregation, whose hands were recking with the homicidal blood of their own, long looked-for, but cruelly murdered Messiah, I would answer, the sum and substance of Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost was "the fulfillment of the oath and covenant of God in placing Jesus Christ, redeemed from the power of the grave, upon David's throne and kingdom." In other words, the gospel of the kingdom, in the name of the despised Nazarene; whom with wicked hands His own brethren had crucified and slain. Acts 2:30 will convey a clear and definite idea of the import of this gospel sermon. "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him (David), that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." This oath pledges the great God to give His Son the kingdom as well as the throne of His father David; as will be seen by reference to the following texts of Scripture: 2 Sam. 7:12, 13; Psa. 89:3, 4, 27-29, 34-37; 132. Philip preached at Samaria the same gospel which Peter preached on the day of Pentecost. Acts 8:12-

PREACHING OF PHILIP AND PAUL

But it is affirmed at the fifth verse that Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. The twelfth verse explains what is meant by preaching Christ; i. e., as the Anointed to reign upon the throne and kingdom of David, which was the kingdom of God; and which, when restored again unto Israel (Acts 1:6), will be the kingdom of God again. In other words, to preach the kingdom of God in the name of Christ, is preaching Christ, and vice versa. Paul, although as one born out of due season, was commissioned to preach the same gospel his contemporaries were commissioned to preach. And how faithfully he fulfilled his mission will be seen by reference to the following testimonics.

Acts 20:25—"And now, behold, I know that you all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more." He, the Apostle, affirms that the kingdom of God had been the whole theme of his preaching wherever he had gone. And it continued to be unto the day of his execution. His manner, his theme, and his textbooks are clearly set forth, near the close of his efficient ministerial labors, in the following graphic language: "And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him, into his lodging, to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening." With what laudable zeal the great Apostle labored, from morning till evening, that he might induce some to comply with the conditions of the kingdom of God. During his whole eventful life he never learned a more glorious or efficient theme, to win sinners to Christ, than the kingdom promised to those who love God, in view of all the glorious promises pertaining thereto. He was never ashamed, whether among the classic Greeks, the learned of his own nation, or in the proud metropolis of the world, of this gospel of Christ, knowing as he did that it is the power of God to the salvation of all who believe and obey it, as the great standard of faith and justification (Rom. 1:16, 17).

One Gospel

According to the last texts referred to, there are not two gospels, as some vainly argue, but one gospel to Jew and Greek. The kingdom of God was the whole burden of the Apostle's preaching during the last two years of his life. "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him."—Acts 28:30, 31. Hence, the gospel which the great Apostle of the Gentiles preached during his whole life as a gospel minister related to the kingdom of God and the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ, i. e., His death, burial, and resurrection.

Thus I have proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the subject of the gospel preached by Jesus Christ and His inspired apostles was the kingdom of God.

TRAMPLING ON GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES

SCOTCH botanist sallied forth to the hills one bright A day to study his favorite flowers. Presently he plucked a heather bell and put it under the glass of his microscope. He stretched himself at length upon the ground and began to scrutinize it through the microscope. Moment by moment passed and still he lay there gazing. entranced by the beauty of the little flower. Suddenly a shadow fell upon the ground where he lay. Looking up he saw a tall weather-beaten shepherd gazing down with a smile of half-concealed amusement at a man spending his time looking through a glass at so common a thing as a heather bell. Without a word the botanist reached up and handed the shepherd the microscope. He placed it to his eye and began to gaze. When he handed back the glass the botanist noticed that tears were streaming down his bronzed cheeks and falling to the ground at his feet.

"What's the matter," said the botanist, "isn't it beautiful?" "Beautiful!" said the shepherd; "it is beautiful beyond all words. But I am thinking of how many thousands of them I have trodden under foot!"—Source unknown.

The Holy Supper Instituted

AFTER JESUS had finished telling His disciples of punishment and eternal life, He told them that after two days He would be betrayed to be crucified. He said He would be betrayed by one of His disciples.

The chief priests and the scribes and the elders of the people assembled in the palace of the high priest. They decided they would take Jesus by subtlety and kill Him. The chief priests told Judas they would give him thirty pieces of silver to deliver Jesus unto them. From that time he sought the opportunity to betray Him,

The first day of the Passover had passed, and the disciples came to Jesus and asked where they should prepare for Him to eat the Passover, and He told them to go into the city to such a man and say unto him, "The Master sayeth, My time is at hand, and I will keep the Passover at the house with My disciples."

After all the disciples had come to the feast, He sat down with them. He said unto them again, "I say unto you that one of you shall betray Me. He that dippeth his hand with Me in the dish, the same shall betray Me."

All the disciples said unto Him, "Lord, is it I?"

Then Judas, who betrayed him, said, "Master, is it I?"

As they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it and broke it, and gave it to the disciples, saying, "Take, eat; this is My body." He took the cup and gave thanks; gave it to them, saying, "Drink ye all of it, for that is My blood of the new testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins."

After they had sung a hymn, they went out in the Mount of Olives. Jesus told His disciples that they should be offended because of Him that night. "For it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered abroad; but after I am risen, I will go before you into Galilee."

Jesus told Peter that he would deny Him thrice before the cock erew. But Peter said he would not.

Then Jesus went into a place called Gethsemane and said unto His disciples, "Sit ye here while I go and pray yonder."

He took with Him Peter and two sons of Zebedee and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. He told them that His soul was sorrowful even unto death. Then He told them to wait and watch.

He went on a little farther and fell on His face and prayed, saying, "O My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt."

As He went back to His disciples, they were all asleep. Then He sayeth unto Peter, "Could you not watch with Me one hour? Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation."

He went away again the second time and prayed. He came back to His disciples and sayeth unto them, "Sleep on now; take your rest. Behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise; let us be going. Behold, he is at hand who betrayeth Me."

And while He was speaking, Judas, one of the disciples, came, and with him a great multitude with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people. He that betrayed Him gave them a sign, saying, "The one which I kiss is He; hold Him fast." Then he came to Jesus and said, "Hail, Master," and kissed Him.

Then Jesus said, "Friend, why have you come?"

Then they laid hands on Him and took Him.

All of the disciples forsook Him and fled. All the people that had laid hold on Jesus took Him to the high priest's, where the scribes and elders were assembled. Peter followed Jesus all the way so that he might see the end. Here they sought false witnesses against Jesus, but found none.

The priests asked Jesus whether He was the Son of God, and Jesus said, "Hereafter shalt thou see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven."

The priests said He had spoken blasphemy and that He was worthy of death. Some spit in His face and some hit Him.

Peter sat alone in the palace.

A damsel came to him and said, "You were with Jesus." Then a maid said, "This fellow was with Jesus."

But he denied it.

Other people said that he was with Jesus.

He began to curse and to swear, and said, "I know not the man," and immediately the cock erew.

Peter remembered what Jesus had said, that he would deny Him thrice, and he went out and wept bitterly.—Mable K. Hendrix, Marshall, Illinois.

Social Problems

There has been a strong tendency on the part of this and other churches to denominate certain activities as "social problems," and to classify them with a blanket condemnation as evil under any and all circumstances.

Such an attitude automatically alienates the very ones who should be sought as converts by the church. They find themselves ostracized by self-styled "decent" religionists, and they naturally retaliate by ostracizing the church.

If Jesus' command to judge not were more often actively applied to themselves by Christians, the church would develop into a far stronger organization than it is.

SIMON TELLS US WHO JESUS IS

WHEN Jesus had finished praying to His Father for strength and wisdom for His task, He told Simon to go with Him into other towns. He wanted to tell all the people about God, that one day He Himself was to be King over all the earth, and He would make everybody happy and well.

As He went about preaching this good news, He healed those that came to Him to show them that what He preached was the truth and also to show them how wonderful it would be when everybody would be well. He even healed lepers, and nobody clse could heal them, not even the very best doctors.

One man couldn't get near Jesus one day because there was such a crowd around Him. So those that were with the sick man took him up on the top of the house, opened up the roof, and let the sick man down in front of Jesus by ropes fastened to his bed. They were pretty anxious to have him healed, don't you think? And Jesus didn't disappoint them, either.

You all know many of these stories, I'm sure. You know how He fed five thousand people with only just enough lunch for one small boy. You remember how He quieted a bad storm on the lake and saved the disciples from drowning.

You also know that He did something even greater than all these. He brought the dead back to life! How many can find the story of the ruler's little daughter? Who knows where it tells about the widow's only son and what Jesus did? Try and see if you can find these stories yourselves.

Now you'd think that everyone would realize just who this Jesus of Nazareth was, wouldn't you? How could they help but know that only God's Son could do the things they saw Him do with their very own eyes? How could anyone say He was only a prophet or a very good man!

But, do you know, there are even some people today who think that? There are some who do not believe He was the Son of God. We'll follow Simon and see what he thought about Jesus, the One who had told him to follow Him.

The multitudes that always crowded around Jesus to receive something from Him, had just been fed with the little basket of lunch. Simon, who, we are sure, knew the Old Testament thoroughly, must have thought often about such verses as, "He shall save the children of the needy"; "He shall spare the poor and the needy"; "His name shall be called Wonderful," and many others.

Simon must have thought to himself, "This is the very One, the One promised by God, who should come and do great things. Didn't it say in the book of Micah that He should come from Bethlehem? Yes, this is the very One."

And so Jesus asked Simon one day who people said He was. Jesus, of course, could read what was in everybody's mind. But He wanted Simon to say it out loud, so that those around would hear and so that Simon himself would remember it.

"Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?" asked Jesus.

One of the disciples replied, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets."

"But whom say ye that I am?" said Jesus. For it meant a great deal to Him who they thought He was.

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," was Simon's proud answer.

It made Jesus very happy to have Simon say that, and He said he would receive a blessing from God for it. And here is when Simon had his name changed. Do you remember in last week's story we said his name was changed later?

"Thou art Peter," said Jesus.

Now Peter means, a rock. And because Simon gave such a good answer to Jesus' question, he received that name. And his answer is the foundation of the church. That is, upon Christ, the Son of the living God, the church is built. Without Christ there can be no church. He is the Corner Stone.

Then He told Peter that he was to go out and tell the people all about the kingdom and show them what wonderful blessings would be theirs if they would obey Jesus and follow Him. And Peter became a great preacher later on. But he had lots to learn first.

"O tell me the story of Jesus,
The story I often have heard;
The story so sweet and refreshing
That comes from God's holy Word;
"Tis newer each time that I hear it—
And fresher each time that it's told;
There's something that charms in that story,
The story that never grows old."

LESSON 2.—January 13, 1935

PETER'S GREAT CONFESSION

Matthew 16:13-28; Luke 9:18-36; 1 Peter 2:5, 6

Devotional Reading: Psalm 34:1-8

GOLDEN TEXT

And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matthew 16:16.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Class Discussion: What difference does it nake what one believes? How does increased knowledge of a person affect our attitude toward him? Do we generally seek to imitatewhat we do not approve?

I. Peter's Great Confession. (Luke 9:18-22.) Peter's answer to the Lord's question embodies the basic facts of saving faith. His inswer was made definitely, positively, and without fear. Compare his fearless attitude at this time with his timid action at the time of the arrest of Jesus. (See Lesson 4.) Few, indeed, who read these words of the Apostle appreciate the significance of his declaration. To acknowledge Jesus as "the Christ of God." or, as Matthew records Peter's statement (Matt. 16:16), "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," is to confess a compre-hensive and positive belief in Jesus with the Jewish idea of the Messiah clearly in mind, as well as the spiritual conception of Him as our Savior from sin. Such a confession of Christ also implies faith in His life-giving power.

II. Followers of Christ, (Vv. 23-26.) Jesus asked the two questions with which our lesson opens while He was alone with His twelve personally chosen disciples. He then, according to Mark 8:34, called the multitude to Him and broadened His instruction to include "all." Here He assured them by implication at least that following Him was not a matter of compulsion, but of individual choice, and told them plainly that He wanted no halfway disciples. One must be willing to submit wholly to the leadership of the Master.

III. Peter the Stone. (1 Pet. 2:5, 6.) Jesus. who saw more deeply into human hearts than any man before Him, named Peter "A Stone" (John 1:42), though He may well have known of Peter's coming denial even then. But trials and experience in time burned out the dross in Peter's character, and he did indeed become the Rock which Jesus had called him. Here the Apostle teaches us that we, too, may become "living stones" in the temple which Jesus is constructing to the glory of God.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS Jesus Christ

is the Rock of our salvation;

is the Foundation upon which the church is counting on you to announce Him to the world:

-shall finally prevail over all His enemies; Iesus Is Our Foundation. "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which s Jesus Christ."-1 Cor. 3:11. We must build ipon Him. He is our Foundation. If we suild on Him, when the storms of life come and life seems to be a useless quantity, faith unchored to the Christ will hold us fast during the hours of despondency and doubt (Matt. 7:24-29; Heb. 6:19, 20). We can place full faith and confidence in this Foundation. It standeth sure (2 Tim. 2:19). And whoever builds on this Foundation is lay ing up in store a strong bulwark "against the time to come" (1 Tim. 6:19). The church of God is an enduring institution because it is founded on the Son of God and will prevail. Christ's Church Will Prevail. Earthly governments may topple and fall, human institutions crumble into decadence, but the church of God founded on Jesus Christ stands and will ultimately triumph over every foc.

The church will prevail because Christ is the Head (Eph. 5:23).

The church is an enduring institution because it is fitty framed and put together by God (Eph. 2:21, 22; 1 Cor. 12:18).

The church triumphs because it is undefiled and is kept unspotted from the world

(Eph. 5:25-28; Jas. 1:17).

Happy should be the person who is associated with such an organization. this church will be exalted to sit in heavenly places and show forth the praises of Him who redeemed them. What glory! Eph. 2:6.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

When Jesus asked His disciples who they thought He was, Peter, the spokesman, answered in the words of our text. This was revealed to Peter by the Father which is in heaven; therefore, it must be true. At that time the mission was to teach that Jesus is the Christ; now it is to teach that Jesus, the Christ, is the Savior and what that means to mankind.

Peter's confession is the rock on which the church is built, and nothing shall prevail against it. What does this text mean to you? Have you learned what Jesus the Christ does and will mean to you, if you accept Him as your Savior? If you have not learned that, will you not make it a point to do so in the very near future? It will pay a hundredfold in this life and in the next, life eternal.

What It Means to Confess Christ

Several months had passed from the time of Peter's call to be one of Jesus' apostles to the events of this lesson. Peter had followed Jesus, watched the miracles He performed to give authority to the message He proclaimedthe good news of the kingdom of God and what it would mean to those who accepted it. Though able to read all men's minds, yet Jesus desired an open statement as to who they thought He was. This fact is the very heart of the gospel which Jesus preached. Let us study it and see how much is implied in Peter's answer.

"Jesus," the name of the Master, included the fact of His being the Savior of the wor'. I (Matt. 1:21). "Christ," His title, means "Anointed," or "Messiah" (John 1:41; 4:25. He was the One whom the Jews had long expected to deliver them from bondage to tle Roman Government and be their King. But they didn't acknowledge Him as that On a That, however, did not alter the fact that God had chosen Him for that very purpose (Luke 1:32, 33). Find other verses showing He was born to be King, not over the Jevs alone, but the whole world. Isn't this as good news, or "gospel," as could possibly be brought to us? Why (Psa. 72)? The "keys of the kingdom" which were given to Peter because of his answer to Christ's question were the privilege of proclaiming the gospel to all, this opening up the blessings of God to those who would accept. Peter's reply, "The Christ of God," is the solid rock on which the church s built, Christ being the chief corner store (Eph. 2:20). Does confessing Christ include anything further than the mere statement (Matt. 16:24-26)? What is Christ's part in this confession (Matt. 10:32; 16:27)? Discuss in class how we may confess Christ tday, though we may not be preachers of the gospel. Will the time ever come that all will confess Him (Rom. 14:11; Phil. 2:9-11) This is distinctly a part of the gospel.

To confess Christ may mean a small sacrifice to you now, but will bring a great reward, both now and hereafter.—M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Memory Verse: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."-Matt. 16:16b.

Review of Last Sunday's Lesson. The review may be carried on by questioning or ly having some child tell or read group story.

Introduction of Lesson, Tell story in this order: Where story takes place; who are gathered there; Jesus' question; Peter's ar-swer; Jesus tells how Peter learned about Ilim; this confession is foundation of churel; promise to Peter. If children care to read and talk about parts of lesson this may be done.

Notebook. Again we want two pictures, one of Jesus and one of Peter. Paste then in notebook facing each other if possibl. Under the picture of Jesus write, "But wlsay ye that I am?" Under Peter's picture write memory verse. For this lesson teacher may write a short review of lesson, omitting some important words. Children may conv in notebook, filling in these words. Sample: Fill blanks with following words: Jesus, ---Peter, — disciples. One day Jesus came to — His — were there, also; etc. Next have blanks read and corrected.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE MEETS

Sunday, Jan. 13, 1935, is the date of the next quarterly conference of the churches of California, which will meet in the church at Los Angeles. Pastor Norman John MacLead's sermons on the occasion will be (D. V.), "When the Lord Pleads," and at the hour of Communion, "Bread From Heaven." We swait with interest the result of important rutters that are to be discussed at that time. We are also informed that Bro. 8, J. Lindsay, for many years the pastor of the church in Los Angeles, will be the guest speaker. This latter fact is sufficient to assure a large and interested attendance from all sections of the state.

SEASONAL PROGRAM AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

On the evening of December 12, a large percentage of our resident membership gathered at the church and elected all officers for the church and Sunday school for the coming year.

The church was filled to capacity with memters and friends who gathered Sunday eveing, Dec. 23, to listen to the Christmas program. Children and grown-ups took part in the songs, exercises, and recitations. Millons now commemorate the birth of the Savior. Just what will happen when He comes in plory?

We are getting ready for the meeting to be held in January, Bro. Sydney Magaw plans to be with us to open a series of meetings on January 6. We wish to invite everyone within driving distance to be with us and make this meeting a time of heart searching and soul winning. The prayers of the brotherhood are asked for its success.

C. E. Lapp, Pastor.

CHRISTMAS AT GRAND RAPIDS

The Christmas program presented by the junior choir at the school auditorium Sunday right, Dec. 23, proved to be a real success and a genuine treat. Miss Evelyn Barr and her brother, Robert, deserve much credit together with the cast, for the long and faithful work.

At the morning church service the senior choir presented a Christmas anthem and the junior choir another. It was the first presentation by the latter group, and all were delighted at the splendid work of this group of about twenty young people.

The pastor and family left Sunday night for the South and are now enjoying its lalmy breezes. By the time these lines are read the meetings near Hammond, La., will be in progress. Good speakers are taking care of the Grand Rapids work until our return.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

NORTHWESTERN IOWA

The work in this section of the state continues to press forward under the energetic leadership of Bros. A. M. Jones and J. Arthur J. huson, who are faithfully supported and encuraged in their efforts by the brethren throughout this section.

Sr. Anna Boyanovsky writes that the next services in that region will be held in Mara-tlon, next Sunday, Jan. 6, 1935, at which time. Pro. Jones of Eagle Grove will be the speaker. 8 mday school will precede the sermon.

CONGRATULATES OUR MANAGER

In the last issue of the Church of God Messenger, published by Pastor C. E. Raindall of the Niagara Falls - Fonthill district, the following expression of approval and congratulation is given for the splendid work of L. E. Conner in adjusting the business affairs of the National Bible Institution.

"We congratulate the Business Manager of the N. B. I., Bro. L. E. Conner, for his splendid work in behalf of the Institution. He has been able to pilot the bark through the waters of depression with its heavy load of debt. He has performed a great service to the Church of God."

GEORGE F. SCOTT

George F. Scott, son of James and Jane Scott, was born January 20, 1856, in Bristol, Somersetshire, England. When about six years old he came to America with his parents, who settled in Missouri where he grew to manhood.

He was united in marriage with Mila A. Morse at Martinsburg, Mo., December 31, 1878. Six years later they moved to a homestead in Gosper County, Neb. To this union four children were born, all of whom preceded him in death.

The deceased moved to Holbrook thirty years ago, residing there until his death on Friday afternoon, Dec. 21, 1934.

He was a faithful member of the Church of God; also, a loyal member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Scott lived an unselfish life, always thinking first of his loved ones and friends, always ready to help those in need.

Those left to mourn his death are: his wire and four brothers, besides other relatives and a host of friends.

Fineral services were conducted by the writer from the Church of God in Holbrook. Neb., after which he was laid to rest in the Miller Cemetery to await the trumpet sound when the Savior comes to call him forth to life and immortality. Grover Gordon.

THE GREAT SABBATH

"The Great Sabbath, or What Jesus Will Do When He Comes and Restitution Begins" is the title of a new and interesting tract of 28 pages by Elder J. H. Anderson. This excellent little work presents the Sabbath question from a new and refreshing viewpoint. For sale by the author, Elder J. H. Anderson, Michigantown, Ind., or J. H. Stepp, Dana, North Carolina, at Fifteen Cents per copy, postpaid.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

The pastor and his family at Oregon, Ill., wish to express their deep appreciation for the many gifts and greetings that have reached them from the scattered fields of their past labors. It is blessed to be remembered by those whom we have learned to love but from whom we have been separated by time and circumstance.

The annual business meetings of many local churches are just in the offing. Brief reports of such gatherings will find a welcome in our columns.

With this issue we welcome to our regular circle of readers, Mrs. J. H. Snow of Arkansas. Some thoughtful friend sent her a copy of the Christmas Herald and she sends in a year's subscription for the paper with the following comment: "I received one of your sample copies for Christmas and enjoyed it so much that I want to subscribe for it." How glad her friend will be to know of the pleasure her Christmas greeting has brought!

Many interesting and instructive subjects are suggested by our readers for consideration in our columns from time to time. For the information of our contributors we mention the following at this time: Sr. O. J. Parker asks for an article on the purpose and value of fasting: while Bro. H. W. Patterson feels that a series of articles on Ezekiel 36 to 39 would be of much benefit.

We regret the necessity of omitting the "Abreast of the Times" department from this issue, but it could not be avoided owing to sickness in the editorial force and the pressure of getting out the quarterly. It will be back next issue.

Bro. and Sr. Arthur Gilbey, both active workers in the Fonthill, Ont., church and Sunday school, were recently assisted by the entire church in celebrating the twentieth anniversary of their marriage. We add our congratulations to those of their many other friends, and trust that their Golden Wedding anniversary will be commemorated under equally pleasant conditions.

We regret to learn of the illness of Sr. William Read of Welland, Ont. Sr. Read is a daughter of Bro. Book, founder of the church at Fonthill, and has been closely associated with the work there for many years We pray for her recovery.

The pastor of the church at Oregon, Ill., announces as his subject for next Sunday night, "When the War Clouds Roll Back," He will present the probable results of the fulfillment of Isaiah 2:1.4.

Are you still paying your Dollar-a-Month pledge?

THE TEN KINGDOMS

unity of empire been restored. During this period, and for the next century or more, extremely radical changes were taking place in the political and religious world. Small divisions of the old empire by one means or another developed strong local governments. Bishops of the church multiplied. The church of the West, with its Latin tongue and Roman culture, separated from the church of the East with its Grecian language and Oriental culture. Eventually the barbarians of the north of Europe invaded the western States and overthrew the Romanized rulers, and the whole of the West from the Adriatic Sea to the Atlantic Ocean fell to the invaders, and the city of Rome ceased to wield the scepter of empire forever.

One of the most arduous tasks of Constantine the Great was his effort to get the different factions of the Christian church to cease quarreling and unite under one creed or confession of faith. His purpose was to unite more firmly his immense empire. The so-called heresies began in the first century. A general council of bishops called by the Emperor met in Nice in Asia Minor, A. D. 325, and after a long and violent conflict adopted what came to be called the Nicene Creed. But this did not unite the Christians; rather it intensified their differences. For centuries after this division and conflict continued, mostly in the East. In the midst of this conflict Mohammed was born in Arabia, A. D. 612, and became the leader of a new religion. He claimed to be sent from God, and part of his mission was the overthrow of polytheism, and also to reform the religion of the Arabians, the Jews, and the Christians. After his death (A. D. 632), his followers resorted to the sword and soon the Oriental States became the subjects of the Moslems, and the Christians paid tribute for centuries. Under these conditions the Emperor at Constantinople ceased to be a factor in the government of the West, and all of the States west of the Grecian capital were left to work out their own destinies. One of the Mohammedan armies conquered North Africa, crossed into Spain, advanced into what is now southern France, and was defeated by the Frankish armies and overthrown at the battle of Tours, A. D. 711. This victory left the entire West to develop an empire of its own, which opportunity they improved with great energy and success. In the East the Government became effete, and the Moslems became divided. So it is that the dominion passed to the States of Europe,

In the year 752 Pepin the Short became ruler of the Franks, and two years later Pope Sylvester II, according to agreement, crossed the Alps to crown him King of the Franks. An alliance was made at this time between the Pope and the King, and Pepin with an army crossed the Alps into Italy to drive the Lombards from the territory claimed by the Roman bishop. In this way was begun the policy of the kings going to war for the purpose of defending the papacy against the political enemies, a purpose which continued during the shifting fortunes of the European States for more than ten centuries.

At the close of the seventeenth century there were many small countries in Western Europe which were developing into independent States, a process which moved rapidly during the eighth and ninth centuries. England could boast of three such kingdoms; modern France had four; Lombardy, now northern Italy, Burgundy, and the German Saxony (at that time pagan), were all governments of importance, and at one time or another supported the Papal States. Modern Spain and southern Italy were under the Moslems, who were rabid enemies of the Popo. On Christmas Day of the year 800 at Rome, the son of Pepin the Short was crowned Emperor by the Pope, Lea III. Charles, now called Charlemagne, succeeded in one way or another in getting control of nearly all of Southern Europe west of the Black Sea. He also tried to extend his domain north to the Baltic Sca. In Spain and Italy he made friendly treaties with the Moslem rulers.

Charlemagne, at his death, left a broad domain; but it lacked the social and political bonds necessary to cement a true State. His son and successor, known as Louis the Pious, could not preserve the semblance of an imperial domain. After the death of Louis, his sons, Lothair, Louis, and Charles, were at war among themselves until at the Treaty of Verdun in 843 the empire of Charlemagne was divided into three parts, never again to be united. At this time the modern France took form as an independent State; modern Germany appeared on the charts of history; and during this period of disruption England became a Power sufficient to endure the conflicts of the centuries to come. The papacy at this time, taking advantage of the un!versal turmoil in Europe, was striving to advance its pelitical influence and increase its territorial domain. Succeeding popes proclaimed their authority as the viceregents of God over the kings of the world as much as over the universal church.

These conditions and the ambitions of the popes plunged Europe into war for centuries, culminating in the terrible Thirty Years' War of the seventeenth century, which deluged all Europe in blood, where the decision was against the papal supremacy. Popes Sylvester III, Benedict IX, and Gregory VI were deposed by the German Emperor Henry III, who reigned from 1039 to 1056. In the course of time Henry IV became Emperor and in 1075 Hildebrand of Tuscany was made Pope as Gregory VII. This pope and Henry IV were continually at war for supremacy, until Gregory VII died in exile. To my mind it was during this period that the prophecy of Revelation 13:10-17 began to be fulfilled. The ten horns of Revelation 17:12 came up between the beginning of the seventh century and the end of the ninth. These kingdoms still hold their dominion and are pushing their authority to the ends of the earth. Three of them were united with the papacy for a time (see Daniel 7:20), but the papal dominion ceased to exist in 1870, the last vestige of its name having passed when Prussia defeated Austria in 1867; and three years later the same Power defeated France, the last protector of the papacy, and let the armies of Italy into Rome.—George H. Dewing in Present Truth Messenger.

Among Our Workers

"The field is the world."—Jesus.

A MONG the many zealous workers of the Church of God are those named below. The list is far from complete, and cannot be termed "official," as it is drawn largely from very sketchy information furnished in reports from the localities mentioned.

ARKANSAS. Evangelistic work is carried on under local leadership with occasional help from without the state.

Ministers: R. A. Humphreys, Bear Route, Royal; Owen Jones, Driggs; C. E. Weaver, Rt. 1, Greenbrier.

ARIZONA. An active congregation is maintained at Tempe, under the direction of Pastor S. J. Lindsay, 502 Ash Ave.

CALIFORNIA. The state carries forward an energetic program of pastoral and evangelistic work.

Ministers: J. E. Adamson, 987 Weber St., Pomona; S. G. Elton, 2321 Sunset Dr., Ventura; J. E. Hammond, 735 N. Zeyn St., Anaheim; George P. Lichty, 350 Chester St., Pomona; Mrs. E. C. Railsback, 1020 S. Burlington Ave., Los Angeles; W. A. Reid, 3594 Larchwood St., Riverside; Norman John MacLeod, 1105 Val Vista St., Pomona.

FLORIDA. We have but one minister listed from this state: N. H. Geiselman, 312 W. Hillsboro Ave., Tampa.

ILLINOIS. Pastoral and evangelistic work are progressing under state and local organizations.

Ministers: F. L. Austin, 5439 Ohio St., Austin Station, Chicago; L. E. Conner, 610 N. Brinton Ave., Dixon; Gerald L. Cooper, Ripley; Harry E. Goekler, Marshall; Paul M. Hatch, Rt. 1, Harvey; Paul C. Johnson, Oregon; Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., Pearl City; C. E. Lapp, Ripley; G. E. Marsh, Oregon; Mrs. Mary A. Woodward, 5439 Ohio St., Austin Station, Chicago.

INDIANA. Indiana has a strong state conference and several exceedingly active local churches.

Ministers: J. H. Anderson, Michigantown; Vaughn Long, Hartford City; Paul N. Magnus, Rensselaer; O. J. Parker, 725 S. Waugh St., Kokomo; F. A. Stilson, 411 E. South St., South Bend.

IOWA. Both state and local organizations contribute to the pastoral and evangelistic work in Iowa.

Ministers: O. J. Allard, 2125 Main St., Cedar Falls; A. J. Eychaner, Rt. 2, Cedar Falls; C. W. Howe, 1036 Newson St., Waterloo; H. S. Hunt, Clarksville; J. Arthur Johnson, Rt. 2, Sac City; A. M. Jones, Eagle Grove; J. W. Williams, Gladbrook.

KANSAS. Arkansas City is the chief point of labor in this state. John Fiske, Jr., Milan, is the only minister listed from Kansas.

LOUISIANA. Churches exist at Hammond and Blood River. No local ministers listed, MICHIGAN. The Grand Rapids church has the largest Church of God Sunday school in the United States,

Ministers: Owen Barney, Byron Center; F. E. Siple, 135 Pennell Road, S. E., Grand Rapids; Cecil A. Smead, Blanchard.

MINNESOTA. The state has several churches under able pastoral supervision.

Ministers: John Dorn, Sebeka; John Denchfield, Mora: Adna Hoskins, 615 23rd Ave., N., St. Cloud; Richard Le Crone, Eden Valley; Virgil Thoms, Emily.

MISSOURI. Work is carried on in St. Louis, Morse Mill, Fredericktown, and other localities. No ministers listed.

NEBRASKA. Pastoral and evangelistic work is carried on by two conferences, the Eastern and the Western.

Ministers: Earl Cowles, Moorefield; E. E. Giesler, Moorefield; Grover Gordon, Holbrook; Wilsie McKnight, Moorefield.

NEW YORK. A growing church is maintained at Niagara Falls, under the pastorate of C. E. Randall, 1926 Tenth St.

OHIO. Several large congregations are maintained under pastors of unusual ability and progressiveness.

Ministers: M. W. Lyon, 13705 Diana Ave., Cleveland; Sydney E. Magaw, 243 N. 2nd St., Tippecanoe City; James A. Patrick, Ashland.

OKLAHOMA. Blackwell is the home of The Gospe! Trumpet. The only minister listed is Miss Lucille Le Crone, Rt. 3, Helena.

ONTARIO. Under the zealous leadership of C. E. Randall, one of our strongest churches is maintained at Fonthill.

OREGON. The work is carried on largely in connection with that in Washington. The only minister reported is A. W. Darby, 834 Gantenbein St., N., Portland.

TEXAS. The "Lone Star State" has several able evangelists who were very successful this past year.

Ministers: T. A. Drinkard, Rt. 2, Kennedale; E. O. Stewart, Sweetwater.

VIRGINIA. The "Old Dominion" continues to press forward bearing aloft the gospel banner.

Ministers: Harry A. Sheets, 72 Court Sq., Harrisonburg; V. Earl Thayer, Rt. 1, Woodstock.

WASHINGTON. The spirit of Indiana survives in the Church of God in this western state.

Ministers: A. L. Corbalcy, 1502 12th Ave., Puyallup; Lyle Rankin, Puyallup.

Christianity and Communism

By Norman John MacLeod

CONFLICT exists and will continue between two classes of society, the moneyed people. the aristocracy, the merchant on the one side, against the poor laborer on the other hand, the laborer with his hands, unskilled and unlearned. The people who ories: it is a religion,

"do not labor" against the people who "do the dirty work" of the world! That conflict, said Karl Marx, the founder of modern Communism, will continue until the proletariat (the name he applied to the common unskilled laborers of the industrial order) become so numerous and so powerful because wealth is being concentrated more and more in fewer hands, that they will revolt and set up a dictatorship. Karl Marx, for many years, was thought to be a harmless hair-brained radical, who taught fanatical ideas about economics that were proved to be fallacious by his opponents. They said that all this talk about class conflict was not true. But the Bolshevik Revolution changed the tone of affairs. Here was an actual example of the outcome of class conflict. Communism is, therefore, commonly called "Class Conflict Socialism." But Communism is more than merely a set of political and economic the-

When Christianity came into Rome under the auspices of Priscilla and Aquila and was later developed by Paul, it appealed to the downtrodden. The slave, the serf, the common laborer, the outcast Jew, the despised fishermen, in short the dregs of humanity, were the earliest Christians. Christianity came to them with a hope that neither paganism nor any other ancient system could offer. In this life, Christianity said, you may suffer oppression, but in the age to come all those wrongs will be righted. But Paul had another kind of influence also. In his famous letter to Philemon he gave to the world a heritage of dealing with fellow men that had an immediate appeal. The master must treat his slave as an equal; the slave must submit in humility to the domination of his master without com-

ciety was altered; and even the Emperor upon his throne felt his power affected. The Christian would not worship the Emperor as a god, and so Christianity became a weakening influence in the despotic power of the Emperor. But during the Middle Ages matters changed.

With the coming of the barbarian invasions, Christianity became almost entirely a thing of form, of wealth, of aristocracy, of system, of vested authority. It lost its appeal to the downtrodden and outcasts. With the Renaissance and Reformation it regained much of its original vigor, and went out for new fields to conquer. But the new impulse of life was soon lost in the growth of religious tolerance and indifference. Christianity, even under the early Methodists who believed in carrying the gospel message even to the most degraded portion of humanity, soon again fell into the hands of "respectability." The moral, economic, and political outcast could not longer belong to the noble churches. Christianity even among the more radical Protestant churches soon became a thing of politics. How many churches of the present day would welcome in their midst the social and moral outcasts! How many churchmen are even willing to go as far as many social uplifters in the world of taking interest in the cause of the common people? The Christian church has passed into that stage of lukewarmness noted in Scripture. They are not of the common people: for they play to the influence of political wealth and power. They are not of the aristocracy: the moneyed people spend their wealth in many instances on fine church buildings, but their hearts cannot be with the real purpose of (Please turn to Page Eight)

Abreast of the Times

Floods in Palestine

"Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the Lord your God: for . . . he will cause to come down for you the rain."—Joel 2:23.

JERUSALEM, Dec. 31.—The heaviest rains in ten years have been flooding Palestine recently. It is estimated by the Palcor News Agency today that damages approximating $5,000,000 have been done to the orange crop alone, which represents about half of the economic resources of the country. Streets and houses in Tel Aviv were inundated, and impassable roads cut off Jerusalem from the valleys.

The One who stayed the progress of the storm on Galilee is needed to regulate the overflowing floods.

Palestine "Air-Key" to India

"I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle,"—Zechariah 14:2.

Jerusalem, Dec. 30.—Recent developments seem to indicate that it is the purpose of Great Britain to make Palestine the center of its commercial and military aviation development between England and India. Major Cumblev arrived in Jerusalem today to assume the newly created post of Government Director of Civil Aviation, and his arrival is thought to mark the launching of a new British policy designed to make the Holy Land an aviation key to India and the East. Recent information from Egypt goes to show that the great British air center in that country is to be transferred to Palestine. It is said that the site for a huge new airport in this country has been selected, but the exact location has not been disclosed, although it is thought to be not many miles from Jerusalem. It is also believed that a central branch of the Royal Air Force will be set up here to give the British Government a more powerful and closer air base in the East. The student of prophecy will observe how the presence of such a base will serve to concentrate military activities, both land and air, around Jerusalem in case of war.

Polish Jews Prepare for Palestine

"I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers."—Jeremiah 16:15.

Warsaw, Poland, Jan. 1.—Tens of thousands of Polish Jews are today preparing to return to Palestine. Last summer thousands of Jewish boys and girls whose lives have been spent entirely in the cities of this country were set to work on farms and country estates to study farming first hand and to develop the physical strength necessary to carry on such work in Palestine, to which they are planning to go in the near future. A few seasons of such preparatory work on farms entitles them to a certificate from their employer stating that they are acquainted with farm work. This certificate makes one a "helutzi"—a farm hand—and allows application to one of the Jewish organizations promoting Palestine emigration.

The Polish Government is doing what it can to aid and to encourage Jewish emigration (Isa. 66:20). Passenger and freight traffic between the two countries is being rapidly developed, and a Polish steamship company operates a 15,000 ton liner between the Rumanian port of Constanza on the Black Sea and Haifa and other Palestine ports, and Polish Jews have invested millions of dollars in developing the land which Poland hopes some day may become a semi-colony.

Some report that if it were not for rigid immigration quotas fixed by the British Government Palestine would be speedily flooded by half a million immigrants from Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, and Central European countries where Zionist organizations have enormous memberships.

In the Nasz Preglad, the largest Jewish daily in Poland, Samuel Zuchowicki, a member of the board of the Keren Kajmet Society, which buys land for Jewish settlements in Palestine, reports that although 70,000 Jews are expected to settle in Palestine in 1935, this number will not be sufficient to meet the demand of Palestine Jewish agriculture. "The present Jewish farmers are employing two Arab farm hands for every Jew, and while it is true that the Arabs are better and cheaper workers, still in case some conflict arises the position of the Jewish farmers surrounded by Arab workers will be perilous," he declared. "There is also a serious housing shortage in Palestine. Palestine now has a building boom which will continue for some years. Building laborers are also needed. Jewish immigrants have invested approximately $70,000,000 in Palestine and many new industries have been created." As a result, Zuchowicki declared, "Palestine towns are becoming more prosperous."

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

THE kingdom of God is a definite phrase. If, as has been shown, the gospel is the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and if, as has also been proved, the gospel is a definite proposition, then the kingdom of God to which it relates must be equally definite in its import. If faith in the gospel of the kingdom is essential to salvation, and if as is clearly evident, we must understand the gospel before we can believe it, then it must be equally evident that to understand and believe the gospel, we must understand and believe what God has revealed concerning His kingdom. Not only so, but it necessarily follows, from the foregoing premises, that such understanding and faith in the kingdom, as revealed in the Word of God, are absolutely essential to salvation.

To place this issue definitely before the reader's mind, I will affirm the following position, to wit: The kingdom of God proclaimed in the gospel of Christ is to be the literal kingdom of Israel restored under the personal supervision of Jesus Christ and His associate brethren, the immortal saints. Mark the faith produced in the minds of Christ's disciples as the legitimate result of all our Savior's teachings relative to the nature of the kingdom, during nearly four years, the last forty days of which had been devoted exclusively to this glorious theme. In such case, it must be presumed that there would be a striking analogy between the teachings of Christ and the faith of His disciples. With these facts before our minds, let us note carefully the following question and our Savior's response.

"When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."—Acts 1:6-8.

Here our Savior endorses the disciples' view relative to the nature of the kingdom, and only corrects their mistake in regard to the time in which this work shall be accomplished. If there is any analogy between this question and our Savior's answer, He certainly teaches that the Father has reserved in His own power times and seasons for the specific work in reference to which the disciples propounded this question. Thus teaching beyond a doubt that His kingdom is to be the kingdom of Israel restored.

I will now give an inspired history of the children of Israel, from their sojourn in Egypt to the time in which David and his royal Son, Jesus Christ, are united in the throne and kingdom of Israel, in its original existence, and as it will exist when restored again to Israel. Acts 13:16-23-"Then Paul stood up, and beckoning with his hand said, Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience. The God of this people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, and with an high arm brought he them out of it. And about the time of forty years suffered he their manners in the wilderness. And when he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chanaan, he divided their land to them by lot. And after that, he gave unto them judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, until Samuel the prophet. And afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years. And when he had removed him, he raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own > heart, which shall fulfil all my will. Of this man's seed hath God according to his promise raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus." And as concerning that He raised Him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, He said on this wise: "I will give you the sure mercies of David" (v. 34), which were to be the throne and kingdom of David, as will appear by the following testimony. God sent the Prophet Nathan to David, a short time before his death, to make the following promises concerning the restoration and glory of his kingdom under the personal reign of his son, and the Son of God.

1 Chronicles 17:11-18—"And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom. He

A Little Bhile

A little while, our fightings shall be over; A little while, our tears be wiped away; A little while, the power of Jehovah Shall turn our darkness into gladsome day.

A little while, the fears that oft surround us Shall to the memories of the past belong;

A little while, the love that sought and found us

Shall change our weeping into heaven's glad song.

A little while! 'Tis ever drawing nearer—
The brighter dawning of that glorious day.
Blest Savior, make our spirits' vision clearer,
And guide, O guide us in the shining way.

A little while, O blessed expectation!

For strength to run with patience, Lord,
we cry:

Our hearts upleap in fond anticipation;

Our union with the Bridegroom draweth nigh.

-Selected by H. W. Patterson.

shall build me an house, and I will establish his throne for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my mercy from him, as I took it from him that was before thee: but I will settle him in mine house and in my kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be established for evermore. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David. And David the king came and sat before the Lord, and said, Who am I, O Lord God, and what is mine house, that thou hast brought me hitherto? And yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree, O Lord God!"

From the foregoing, I would deduct the following conclusions:

- 1. The throne and kingdom of God, of David, and of David's Son were and shall be identical!
- 2. The Son of David to whom these promises relate will be the Son of God also.
  - 3. He shall build Jehovah a house.
- 4. He shall be settled in God's house and kingdom for evermore. And
- There are no conditions by which these promises can possibly be forfeited.

Of the same import are the promises made to David in 2 Samuel 7:12-19.

Before I proceed with this investigation, I will endeavor to answer the objections, urged by some, against the application of the foregoing promises to Christ, instead of David's immediate successors.

1. The perpetuity of David's throne and kingdom, by Solomon and his successors, was suspended on certain conditions, the non-compliance with which would forfeit these promises. Proof, 1 Kings 2:1-4; Psalm 132:11, 12, "Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon his son, saying, I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man; and keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest. and whithersoever thou turnest thyself: that the Lord may continue his word which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel." "The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore."

The promises here made concerning Christ are unconditional; but that made concerning David's immediate successors was conditional. David's successors failed to comply with these conditions. 1 Kings 11:9-12—"And the Lord was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel, which had appeared unto him twice, and had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the Lord commanded. Wherefore the Lord said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son."

For the fulfillment of this threatened judgment, please read the following quotations from 1 Kings 12:20-24 "And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only. And when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon. But the word of God came unto Shemaiah the man of God, saying, Speak unto Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not go up, nor fight against you brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the word of the Lord, and returned to depart, according to the word of the Lord."

Again, the application of the covenant God made with David (1 Chron. 17:11-18; 2 Sam. 7:12-19) to Christ, instead of to Solomon, as the Son of God and the son of David, through whom his throne and kingdom were to be built up and perpetuated forever, is objected to, because the personage through whom these promises were to be fulfilled was to build the house of the Lord. Solomon built this house; therefore, all the foregoing relates to and was fulfilled in him.

This is taking one or two points of analogy and making them the basis of a conclusion; whereas we must find analogy upon every point specified, for it cannot be supposed that inspiration made a mistake. I will name a few points in this covenant which were not fulfilled in Solomon and his successors.

- He was not established in God's house and kingdom forever.
  - 2. He did not establish the throne of David forever.
- 3. God did not, as far as Solomon and his successors were concerned, speak of the perpetuity of David's house (i. e., kingdom) for a great while to come.

These three points are vital to the very existence of this covenant. They cannot, therefore, be dispensed with without an entire abrogation of the Davidical covenant on the part of God. But as has been abundantly proved the covenant with David's immediate successor was forfeited by failure on the part of David's son, the second party, and the promises thereof withheld by God, the first party.

The Errors of the Age

THAT this disposition to eliminate or extract the divine element from the Bible is the root of widespread error is obvious; and that the errors are deep and perilous is no less plain. The tendency of each is, in a greater or less degree, to get rid of a personal God, or to remove Him to a distance from us, or to interpose a cloud between Him and us, so that the reader of His book shall no longer meet Him face to face in that book, but simply certain abstractions, certain algebraic symbols, or unknown quantities, which may or may not mean anything, which lay no hold upon the conscience, either for alarming or pacifying, which still leave the soul without a living personality either to worship or to love.

But this line of error goes further than the expulsion of the divine from the Word of God. There is the transference of this to the creature, the deifying of man, the robbing God in order to enrich and magnify man. "Ye shall not surely die" was Satan's insidious commencement of the rejection of the divine element from what God had spoken; his second step was the promised transference of the divine to the human, "Ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." As man ripens in iniquity, and as the errors we have dwelt upon unfold themselves, this daring transference—this full-blown impiety of Antichrist—this last and worst form of man's infidelity—will exhibit itself, both in the church and in the world, consummating the evils of the perilous times of which the Apostle has given us so appalling a picture.

Transfer the divine element to creation at large, you have pantheism; to images of brass or stone, you have idolatry; to the priest or the church, you have Romanism; to forms and rites and sacraments, and you have tractarianism; to the visible things of the senses, and you have materialism; to the invisibilities of disembodied spirits, and you have spiritualism; to the intellect, and you have rationalism; to the fancy, and you have religious pictorialism; to the feelings, and you have religious sentimentalism; transfer it to man, simply as man, and you have the last form of Antichrist—the dethronization of the divine, the enthronization of the human, the rejection of the Godman and the exaltation of a man into His place as the only Messiah of the race, the world's only Redeemer and King.

Most subtle is the error that would have us deal with religious truth as a mere bundle of abstractions or ideas or speculations, of which every man is at liberty to form his own opinion. The essence of the Bible, the Alpha and Omega of revelation, is not truth alone, nor religion alone, but Christianity, a Christianity which is not presented to us merely as the communication of doctrines, but as the settlement of the great personal question between the sinner and God, the solution of the difficulty which law and conscience necessarily raise as to righteousness and grace.

CHRISTIANITY DEFINED

And what is Christianity? Not metaphysics, not mysticism, not a compilation of guesses at truth. It is the history of the seed of the woman—that seed the Word made flesh; the Word made flesh the revelation of the invisible Jehovah, the representative of the eternal God, the medium of communication between the Creator and the creature, between earth and heaven.

And of this Christianity what is the essential characteristic, the indispensable feature from first to last? Is it incarnation or blood shedding? Is it the cradle or the cross? Is it the scene at Bethlehem or at Golgotha? Assuredly the latter! "Eli, Eli, Lama Sabachthani," is no mere outery of suffering nature, the cross is no mere scene of human martyrdom, and the great sepulcher is no mere Hebrew tomb. It is only through blood shedding that conscience is purged; it is only at the cross that the sinner can meet with God; it is the cross that knits heaven and earth together; it is the cross that bears up the collapsing universe; it is the pierced hand that holds the golden scepter; it is at Calvary that we find the open gate of paradise regained, and the gospel is good news to the sinner of liberty to enter in. Let men with the newly sharpened axes of rationalism do their utmost to hew down that cross, it will stand in spite of them. Let them apply their ecclesiastical paintbrush, and daub it all over with the most approved of mediæval pigments to cover its nakedness, its glory will shine through all. Let them scoff at the legal transference of the sinner's guilt to a divine substitute, and of that surety's righteousness to the sinner, as a Lutheran delusion or a Puritan fiction, that mutual transference, that wondrous exchange, will be found to be wrapped up with Christianity itself. Let those who, like Cain of old, shrink from the touch of sacrificial blood and mock the "religion of the shambles," purge their consciences with the idea of God's universal fatherhood, and try to wash their robes and make them white in something else than the blood of the Lamb; to us, as to the saints of other days, there is but one purging of the conscience, one security for pardon, one way of access, one bond of reconciliation, one healing of our wounds-the death of Him on whom the chastisement of our peace was laid; and one everlasting song "unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood."

When we speak of error or of truth, we speak of an idea, an abstraction. But the Bible does not deal in mere ideas. It has an orbit of its own, a religion of its own, a world of its own—very different from that into which the wisdom of men ever enters—an orbit of which God's throne is the center, a world of reality, a region of personality, in which the distant becomes the near, the invisible the visible, and the shadowy the substantial and the palpable. In the Bible we look the living God in the face; and He fixes His gaze upon us. Divine revelation, as developed in Christianity, is not the elucidation of certain unpractical or impersonal questions; but the adjustment of all that is personal between us and God, so that we shall know, of a certainty, that in believing we are forgiven all our iniquities. Christianity is not the mere improvement of natural religion, nor the correction of certain philosophical obliquities, nor the removal of certain heathen misrepresentations as to the character of God; but the settlement of the great controversy between us and God, the readjustment of our relationship to Him, upon a basis and in a way which not merely secures future reconciliation for us, but gives us the present assurance of it, with all the peace, and the liberty, and the holiness which that assurance brings.

CHRIST THE CENTER

It is round the Christ of God that all truth revolves; and hence all error connected either with His person or His work must be perilous. The revelation of the Christ begins at the beginning, and sweeps round a vast circle. It takes up the whole question between the sinner and God, and gives judgment upon every part of it. It condemns man, and justifies God. It pronounces authoritatively, both as to the way of life and the way of death. It does not accept earnestness as a substitute for truth, nor a justification or extenuation of error. It does not show man how to lay the foundation of the great settlement for eternity; it lays the foundation and presents us with everything on God's side as finished. It begins by announcing what God has done, before it says one word of what man is to do; it shows us God as the doer and the giver-man as the receiver, setting aside unsparingly every religion and every doctrine which would make man either in whole or in part his own savior; or which would make worship or service a thing of proxy, and shift the personality and the responsibility of the great transaction between the soul and God, to a priest, or minister, or a church, or a ceremony, or a sacrament, or a creed.

Thus it is that, through the belief of God's testimony to the great propitiation, we are not only justified, but we know, we are assured, that we are; and thus it is that, through the simple reception of the glad tidings, all the gladness which they contain is transferred to us. Believing, we rejoice; we are saved; we have everlasting life.

The revelation of the Christ embraces in it the revelation of the church in Him, as His temple, His body, His bride; His present witness on earth, and the watcher for His return in glory. This church, even on earth, is no mere association of men holding certain opinions, no mere corporation favored with certain privileges, but a body chosen and called out of the world of darkness. Its legislation is divine, not human; its laws are not its own ideas of expediency and order, but the commandments of its Head. The essence of its constitution is not socialism, nor republicanism, nor despotism, nor anarchy; but an unearthly organization founded on entire subjection to its heavenly Head; an organization working itself out in order, unity, growth, fruitfulness, love, and zeal. Its ministers are not philosophers, nor lecturers, nor theorists, nor humorists, nor orators, nor priests; but messengers of God's free love, expositors of the Word, and shepherds of the flock, and executors of government and discipline. Its members are not politicians, nor lovers of pleasure, nor worshipers of gold, nor men who are trying to make the best of both worlds; but men alive from the dead, through the power of the holy Spirit, possessors of a heavenly peace, bearers of a cross, yet heirs of a kingdom, strangers upon the earth, yet citizens of the New Jerusalem, which cometh down from God out of heaven.

FREEDOM IN TRUTH

All the errors of the age we cannot hope to shun: yet many more we might be delivered from, did we trust more to the heavenly Teacher and His heavenly teaching: for surely the promise is to us, "He will guide you in all truth. . . . Ye have an unction from the Holy One, and know all things." Let us learn each truth directly from the Master's lips, so shall it be vital and productive; otherwise we shall be the possessors but of a second-hand, and therefore a second-rate religion—a reflected religion, with all the coldness of moonshine, but none of the warmth of the glorious sun; a timid and shriveled piety that does no mighty deeds, and speaks no words of power—that will not even stand the tear and wear of life, far less brave the brunt of battle, or compete for the martyr's crown.

It is truth that makes us free, for all error is bondage. If, then, you would be free men, grasp the truth, tenaciously, bravely, calmly; bind it round you as a girdle, treasure it in your heart of hearts. "Buy the truth and sell it not"; that is, get it at any cost, part with it never. Error is sin, for which every man shall give an account to God; and sin is no mere mischance or misfortune that claims pity only, but not condemnation nor punishment; else what means the fiery law; what means the cross of the sin-bearer; what means the great white throne; what means the everlasting fire? (See Jude 7; 2 Peter 2:6; 2 Thess. 1:8-10.) "Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth," remembering your high calling, as witnesses for the truth and the True One. Let neither your words nor your lives give any uncertain sound. Every man to whom the Bible comes is responsible for believing all the truth which that revelation proclaims, and for rejecting all the error which it condemns. Cleave, then, to the Word of the living God: and sit, as teachable disciples, at the feet of Him who has said, Learn of Me. So shall you be led into all truth and delivered from all error. Otherwise, how shall you stand, either now or in the evil day? How shall you hope to win the victory, or receive the recompense to him that overcometh? We once saw a painting-the representation of the last struggle of an ancient king. He and three of his pursuers are on horseback, engaged hand to hand in deadly battle. Even with such odds, he looks a man, for stature and strength of sinew, fitted to win the day. But the shield which he holds in his left hand is broken; the sword which he grasps so firmly in his right, is snapped in two, and his helmet has fallen from his head. With half a sword, with splintered shield, without a helmet—how can he, old warrior as he is, win the field? What can he do but die? Let us in our great battle of life remember this, and if we would overcome, let us take the whole armor of God—the shield, the breastplate, the helmet, the sword. So shall we fight; so shall we be more than conquerors; and the God of peace shall bruise Satan under our feet shortly.

The day of error will not always last. The day of truth is coming. For we know that though in the last days perilous times shall come; yet beyond these there is the splendor of the most glorious day that ever dawned upon the earth; for He that shall come, will come, and will not tarry. He that testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.—London Journal of Prophecy.

The Importance of Youth

 $N^{\rm O}$  ONE over magnified child life more than Jesus. At one time He spoke of the honor conferred upon those who receive children, using these words: "He that receiveth one of these in my name receiveth me." Did vou ever think why Jesus came into the world as a babe? We read that He was tempted in all points just as we are. He passed through the long preparation stages of infancy and adolescence to emerge finally into the comparatively short period of adult life. Christ knows by experience how a child feels. He has entered into all the experiences of childhood and youth; was tempted as a child; felt hurt as a child; knew from experience how to sympathize with all the ages of youth. I like to be able to preach to the children and young people about a Savior who fully understands them, and can help them in all their difficulties. He knows; He understands; He is able and willing to help. You remember, do you not, how Jesus looked on the young man that came running to Him, and, falling at His feet, asked what he should do to inherit eternal life? When Jesus had finally told him the plain facts as to what he should do, Jesus said it all for his good, for we read that "he loved that young man." We understand by the words of Jesus already quoted, "whosoever receiveth me," that He (Jesus) honors and comes very near to all those who are interested in children and young people. There is a special blessing for all those who do not neglect the children, whether it be in the home or in the church. There is a severe warning given for those who neglect the children, and who are sometimes a hindrance to them instead of a help. Jesus says it would "be better if a millstone were hanged about his neck and he be thrown into the sea." Do not say, "It is only a child." I have heard some people belittle a congregation when the half are children and young people, every time. Do you not know that most all of Jesus' miracles were performed on the children and young people? Let me just mention a few. There was that nobleman in Capernaum whose boy was very sick. He heard that Jesus had returned to Cana, and he went in great haste and said, "Come, Master, ere my son die." Jesus said to him, "Go thy way; thy son liveth." And on his way back he met his servants, who came in a hurry to tell him that the boy was all right.

Look up Matthew 9. Here, in this chapter, we see Jairus the ruler falling down at the feet of Jesus, saving, "My daughter is now dead." Jesus starts immediately for Jairus' home; but He is hindered by a woman who touches the hem of His garment, and is made whole. She also was a young woman, for Jesus, in speaking to her, reassuring her, said, "Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole," Jesus Himself, being a young man, would not have called an aged woman daughter. She must have been younger than He. Well, after this interfering in Jesus' journey to the Jairus home, some one from the home comes to tell him not to trouble the Master, as the girl is past any help; but Jesus says to Jairus, Do not give up hope, Jairus, only believe. Finally, when Jesus has reached the home and has sent out of the room those who are mourning and wailing (He just wants the father and mother, and some of His disciples with Him), then He speaks to the little girl, calling her and saying, Wake up, girl, and He takes her by the hand and she arises and begins to walk about. and He advises the parents to give her something to eat. The record distinctly says that the girl is only twelve years of age. All those whom Jesus raised from the dead while here on earth were young people.

Then here is another wonderful thing about miracles. When Jesus fed the five thousand men, and it is not said how many women and children there were present, the wonderful thing about it was that, when Jesus asked Hiz disciples if they did not have anything to feed these thousands with, it was a little boy who came to the rescue and offered his lunch, and out of it Jesus fed the people.

"A little child shall lead them."—Isa. 11:6. I once preached a sermon to boys and girls from this text. I had no time to prepare it, as I did not know I would be called on to speak to children. I knew there was such a verse somewhere, but I did not know where. Anyway, the Lord gave me the sermon on the spur of the moment. I brought out three children whom God has chosen to lead His people. 1. Moses. 2. Samuel. 3. Jesus, the Son of God. Of course, the greatest of these children is "the child Jesus." "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."—Samuel J. Boy in The Messiah's Advocate.

the church today any more than it was in the days of Christ. The church is in a serious state of decline for that reason.

Just when the economic system that had become closely allied with the Christian church began to receive such blows that rocked it to its bottom, just when the church itself was suffering most from criticism from within and bitter attack from without, a new influence came to take the place in the world of the old appeal of Christianity. Communism had an appeal to the laborer that Christianity apparently as it was and is practiced no longer possesses.

Communism is the new gospel of the working man. Not that a Christian at heart would hear it. But how could the average workman accept the church of his oppressive employer? How could the unemployed man who was suffering for the common necessities of life support the same church as the man who robbed him of his savings on the one hand, and the man who made it impossible for him to secure a position on the other? Too much has been brought to light of corruption in high places not to have its effect upon the mind of the common man. Christianity has lost its appeal in large measure through lack of aggressive sympathy with the downtrodden. Communism, a thing of the downtrodden Jew, an appeal to the unskilled manual laborer, a new-found focal point for the fanaticism of the zealot, soon made greater headway. Communism came to be the religion, officially, of the Bolsheviks of Russia, and Lenin became their patron saint. Man became the savior of the new religion, and the legendary figure of Lenin came to occupy the place in the new religion of a god. Christianity had failed in all these centuries to bring about the long looked-for redemption of the downcast: a German Jew pointed the way to a new atheistic religion. Faith in self is the keystone principle of the new Communism. But the promises to its followers are much the same as those of Christianity, that is, at least, nominal Christianity. Relief now and present, however, appeals more directly to the hungry man than a promised relief in the future. A man who sees his family gradually starving will be more quickly influenced by promise of immediate relief than he will be by promises of future blessing when Christ comes. Then the fact that the nominal Christians had in such large number ridiculed the idea that the future hopes set forth in the Scriptures were true did not in any way increase the faith of the common man in the things of God. Ignorance of the real plan and purpose of God as set forth in the Scriptures of truth, coupled with a new fanatical hope that there was a chance that man might gain blessedness here and now, led many people to discard the older faith for the new Communistic religion. Communism is more than an economic theory, more than a new social method of organizing a State, it is a religion, a way of belief, a program to be believed in as well as to be followed. Only a religion that honors unskilled manual labor can permanently hold its converts. Christianity has in its nominal sphere failed any longer to do so. Communism not only honors labor, it almost worships it.

NEW IMPERIALISM VS. THE INTERNATIONALE

Perhaps in no sphere has Russian Communism been so successful as in the field of Asiatic relations. When Bolshevik Russia began to emerge from the chaos of the collapse of Czarism, the time was ripe for a new imperialism based upon Russia's peculiar position in the continent of Asia, and in harmony with Russia's new curtailed position. A glance at the map of Eurasia will show us that Russia as a European nation had returned pretty much to the days before the time of Peter the Great. True, she still had her "windows on Europe" in her outlook upon the Black Sca; in her outlook upon the Baltic; and in her friendly Slavic nations of the Balkans. But she had been thrown back upon the continent of Asia. Her best possessions in Eastern Europe had been taken from her by the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk and have never been returned. Russia, by necessity, then became more interested in Asiatic affairs. Here the spirit of the "Internationale" played into the hands of the new imperialism of the Russian nation. For a time in 1917 and even as late as 1919 there were many indications that Russia would dissolve into her component nationalities. But those who thought more deeply and observed more carefully and understood the peculiar Asiatic mind, could see that Russia was putting herself in a new position of strength. Old Russia under the Czars had gone forth into Asia first as a vigorous colonizing nation much of the type which we have seen spread itself in our own land: a pioneer spirit led the Russians east just as it led the Americans west. Then an aggressive diplomacy vaunted itself into Central and Eastern Asia: trickery, bluff, demonstrations of power, actual fighting. and the complete and perfect use of bribery put Russia forth into the first rank of imperialistic Powers in Asia. When Czarism collapsed the Bolsheviks showed themselves to be even greater masters of diplomacy than the Czarists. They "voluntarily" withdrew from Persia (troops were needed other places), and made protestations of cordial friendship for the people of that long misgoverned country. "We, the Bolsheviks, are your friends, not your oppressors," they said in effect. The results were beyond the wildest dreams of magic. Especially because, as the Russian troops were withdrawn from the old "sphere of influence" in northern Persia, the British troops followed closely to take over the whole of Persia as a British sphere. Naturally the British became enemies and the Bolsheviks emerged as friends and champions of the downtrodden people of Asia. The same methods were used in Mongolia: the nomads of that district care little who owns them in name; but they do recognize the actual forces of tyranny. Czarist Russia had ruled them with an iron hand; Bolshevik Russia gave them a Soviet government of their own. But the real hand of the Bolsheviks was shown when the Mongolians did not want to become Bolsheviks. Russian armies put down the tribesmen with great cruelty. But that is one of the most effective methods of Asiatic diplo-

In Sinking (Chinese Turkestan) the Russians have been playing a less successful game, but have been biding their time. In India and China proper is the situation in which the Bolshevik diplomacy works to its best advantage. Propaganda found a ready foothold in those two countries because there particularly were the evils of economic imperialism evident. China was torn asunder by contending Chinese parties, each subsidized by various people. In discussing many of these things with a man who lay next to us in the Naval Hospital at San Diego, a man who had just returned from active service in the United States Marines in China, a man who had seen the Chinese situation first hand, we had our opinion of Chinese conflict confirmed. Anybody, he told us, who could pay soldiers could raise an army in China. A war lord in China was a man who could pay soldiers. When his money was all gone the common soldiers would go over to his enemy who could continue to pay them. That is why there is such interminable quarreling in that sorry country. Dr. Sun Yat-sen was looking for friends in the family of nations for his Chinese Republic. He found nothing but treachery and double-dealing in the circles of most of the nations. But in Russia he felt he had found a friend that really understood his aspirations. He had found a new champion of the anti-imperialistic feelings that filled his breast. The Bolsheviks were truly the friend of the oppressed people of Asia. Russian imperialism of the new Bolshevik variety stormed the citadel of Chinese opposition by coming in the guise of the "Internationale"; the hold of those who wish to make the oppressed of the world into one huge brotherhood. Only when some of the Bolshevik agents became so overbearing that even the Chinese sympathizers could not endure them any longer did the Chinese lose sympathy with Soviet Russia, and even then large numbers of southern Chinese clung to Bolshevism as the hope of Asia.

In India Russia has found the same sympathetic audience. She realized that the best way to defeat British prestige in India was not by a show of force but by a demonstration of friendship to the peoples of India. Quickly Mahatma Ghandi recognized the hand of friendship stretched across the Khyber Pass. Here was the old story of Russian intrigue in India under another guise: Bolshevism and the Internationale. In spite of the fact that India is composed of some 250 distinct racial and language groups, and that they are minutely divided as regards religion, they have found Ghandi a rallying point for all races and creeds. Why? Because he represents the antiimperialism that animates all of India. Because he comes with such backing he is at once the recognized savior of India, the friend of the oppressed. Even far-off Siam, the Philippines, Turkey, and other parts of the world have found a cord of friendship tying them to Russian Bolshevism. But nowhere perhaps is the situation more acute than it is in the Slavic States of the Balkans. Yugo-Slavia, Czecho-Slovakia, and others have found that in order to preserve the Treaty of Versailles and hence themselves they must rely on France. But that is not the sympathy of the peoples of those countries. The leaders of those nations are sitting on veritable volcanoes. Assassination should be considered to be the order of the day, for in assassination do the Slavs of the Balkans hope to find their way of freedom from France and union with Bolshevik Russia. Now Russia has come into the camp of those who want to keep the Treaty of Versailles intact. Russia never hopes to win back her actual possessions on the eastern side of Europe, but she can do as she has done in Asia: a friendly independent nation can be of more assistance than a hostile subject nationality. A friendly group of independent States may be more powerful in the hour of need than so many irritated provinces ready to desert to the enemy at the most inauspicious hour. Even in Japan has the echo of the new Russian attitude been heard. To the surprise of the new Power of Asia, Russia has been very docile. When Japan expected the most opposition, she has often found the Russians quite cooperative. When the Bolshevik regime was established Japan immediately set about to define her spheres of interest more clearly in Manchuria; she found the Russians not only willing but cooperative. Many things have entered in to upset the tranquillity of those relationships, but even in the trying times of Japan's invasion of Manchuria, Russia was singularly hesitant to enter directly into the field. Of course there were many things to deter the Russians aside from winning Japanese friendship, but at least that element entered in. Expediency told the Russians to keep out.

European diplomacy has been singularly connected with the missionary efforts of the church of the Western World. When Spain was building up her empire throughout the world in the sixteenth century, the great leaders of the period of exploration were the Franciscan and Jesuit friars. At the same time that the fearless priests were roaming over the wilds of North America (such priests as Marquette and Hennepin) their fellows were penetrating the vast unexplored regions of inner China and Tibet. Nestorian Christianity (Unitarian in its concept of God) came into China and India long before European civilization awakened the Far East. The people of the outskirts of the world have, therefore, looked upon the missionary as the forerunner of the imperialistic oppressions of European nations. A somewhat intoxicated Spanish sea captain told the Japanese just how these things worked; first, he said, the European sends his missionaries to teach Christianity; when the convert learns Christianity he secures many of the benefits of an advanced civilization; immediately he wants European goods, and so the trader comes to take advantage of that desire; in order to see that the merchant is treated properly in the remote regions of the world, the European calls on his home government to avenge him of the wrongs that have been committed against him by the natives; the troops follow; and then as a final step the imperialist nation annexes the region outright. Needless to say, Asia associates Christianity with imperialism. Needless to say, the people of Asia and Africa think that the only way they can get rid of the odious system of imperialism and exploitation is to get rid of Christianity. Hence, Asia, already infidel (they know not God) becomes militantly atheistic. All of the more important religions of Asia (except Mohammedanism) are atheistic. All these elements, coupled with the fact that the Greek Catholic Church of Russia was the bulwark of the throne of the Czars and their oppressive regime, have made the very name of Christianity a name of contempt. There are three great civilizations of the world: Buddhist, Mohammedan, and Christian. Wherever Buddhism and Mohammedanism hold sway, there is the home of anti-imperialism; there is the best field for the work of Communism. Religion is ever the ally of government. Whether we feel that church and state should be united or not, they usually are: though that religion be Christianity or Communism.

Is it too late for Great Britain and France to adopt the new benevolent imperialism that grants freedom to its subjects? Have the British imperialists learned the lesson of the American Revolution, that it is better to have friendly independent allies, rather than hostile subject peoples? Or will not the course of history rather follow the prophecies of God that will bring all these nations into the welter of war in the Valley of Jehoshaphat?

COMMUNISM AND THE UNITED STATES

"Parlor Bolshevism" has been the curse of the United States for a good many years. Fashionable women who did not have enough to do with their time have toyed with Communism for a long time. They have extolled the benefits of a system that would do away with many of the restrictions of a Christian civilization. In the universities and colleges of the land the same benevolent attitude toward Communism has found sway. Such leading authorities on sociology as Prof. Harry Elmer Barnes of Smith College, and even to a certain extent Prof. James Harvey Robinson of Columbia University, have proclaimed loudly the virtues of a system that will take away all the "taboos" of religion. Prof. Barnes thinks that religion, especially Christianity that is based upon the Bible (he thinks he is a Christian, but will not allow the biblical basis), is one of the elements in our life that is keeping us from a higher state of pleasure and efficiency. He bemoans the fact that we have such institutions as private property; and though he would not speak quite so loudly on the matter, he feels that our Christian attitude on marriage and sex life is wholly wrong; that we should adopt the system of marriage and divorce that is in vogue in Russia and has been the law in China and Japan for many centuries. In order to be married according to Japanese custom the name of the woman is taken from the records of her own family and placed in the records of her husband's family; if the man wishes to divorce his wife he merely transfers the name back again. Under such a system the sacred institution of marriage becomes merely licensed prostitution. Thus in another way Communism strikes at the very roots of Christianity, at the home, which makes a nation strong or weak.

In addition to the fashionable nature of Communism in the United States, economic depression has made many people look for relief in any direction that would seem to offer it. If a system such as we have had in our country since its beginning has led to such extremes of poverty on the one hand and extremes of wealth on the other, surely something is wrong. In addition, graft and corruption in governmental circles, and fraud and embezzlement in high finance, have shaken the faith of even the most loyal advocates of democracy in our leaders and institutions. Hunger speaks even more loudly. People who have lived in affluence find themselves without even a roof to shelter them from the weather. Will Communism offer a solution? How are the Russians making out? Can we find some help from them? They overthrew some of the worst tyrants of history; can we follow their example? The Bolshevik propagandist is only too anxious to answer affirmatively. The "Parlor Bolshevik" says that she has found the theories of Communism have liberated her from the galling restrictions of society. The college professors of economics answer that they have found that the old theories of economics have not been proved sound, but that economically Marxism is the only thing that will work. At least, they feel, we should try out the principles of Bolshevism. They have long ceased to be Christians in most cases, and the feelings of Christian restraint do not deter them. They look back to the "glory that was Greece" and long for the pagan golden age of the "Libertines." Then the labor unions have for many years been permeated with Socialistic ideas. Many radicals have been found in their ranks. Not that the labor unions have been completely converted to Marxism, but that among them is found a large number of people who have been radical in principles. The men who belong to the unions have been in general the group that has suffered most from economic difficulties. Then in England the Labor Party just following the World War adopted as its platform the "Communist Manifesto," Such example had its direct influence in America. But still another element drove America farther along the road to the realms of Bolshevism.

Japan was the outstanding opponent of Communism in Asia. It must oppose and crush Bolshevism or die. Japan is fighting with her back to the wall much as the Roman Republic did in the days of the Carthaginian Wars. So far she has triumphed, and will probably continue to do so. Naval rivalry has stirred the United States and Great Britain against Japan. Nothing irritates the stately imperialistic atmosphere of British and American diplomacy more than naval rivalry. "Britannia rules the waves" and will bear no equal. The United States though an independent nation is in reality a part of the great British Commonwealth of Nations. To all intents and purposes the United States is an integral part of the great British political organization. Japan must be curbed at all costs. Affairs are at a critical juncture. In diplomacy the matter does not rest with conscience and scruple, but with expediency. International friends are friends only because of common enemies. Japan became the common enemy of Great Britain, Russia, and the United States. In order to fight Japan and the influence of its diplomacy, the United

Christ's Second Coming

We find in the great book called the Bible that it says our Savior is coming back to earth again. In Mark 1:7 we find where John said, "There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose." Matthew 24:27 says: "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." And in Matthew 26:64, "Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven."

But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth, also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. For as the lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven shincth unto the other part under heaven, so shall also the Son of man be in His day. 1 Thessalonians 5:2: "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." "Remember, therefore, how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast and repent. If, therefore, thou shalt watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee," the Lord saith.

Revelation 16:15: "Behold, I come as a thief." Matthew 24:15: "When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whose readeth, let him understand)."

Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains and the mighty men, and every bondman and every freeman, will hide themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains, and will say to the mountains and rocks, "Fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. For the great day of His wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" Matthew 24:30: "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." 1 Corinthians 15:51, 52: "Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

Therefore, be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh. Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch.—Miss Julia Fyfe, 14, Lockwood, Missouri.

Sic Semper Tyrannis

Thus always to tyrants! Few more famous—or infamous—expressions exist than that coined by John Wilkes Booth on the occasion of his assassination of President Lincoln. Nor are there many which appear to have a greater bearing upon present-day occurrences.

Dollfuss, the King of Yugo-Slavia, and Minister Barthou of France begin the roll of those who, within comparatively recent months, have been killed by assassing Dollfuss and the Yugo-Slavian King were definitely autocrats, founding their power, in common with Hitler of Germany and Stalin of Russia, on the rule of the iron heel.

And they are only the beginning.

In the days of Rome's decadence, emperors ascended the throne during one period at the rate of more than one a month. Assassinations, forced abdications, and terror-stricken flight drove them one by one from the throne they had seized. The entire empire was in a state of chronic chaos.

Civilization today is no less decadent. Rulers are almost as autocratic. Property is, even in the United States, quite as subject to confiscation. The days of Rome's abysmal failure are enjoying repetition.

Rulers maintain their power only by military force. With the frequency of revolutions in Cuba, they come today and are gone tomorrow. Pogroms become more common. Sound money is a thing of the past. The world whirls like an unmelodious musical top toward cataelysmic self-destruction.

Tyrants come, and tyrants go, but God goes on forever. Those who, through their avariciousness, have brought the earth to its present sorry state, will discover in all truth that their sins will find them out.

Force of arms will be no stay to the punishments of God. One who held the infinite energies of the universe within his grasp would neither brook nor be dismayed by opposition. And Jehovah holds those energies.

They who have stripped the world of its wealth for their own aggrandizement will receive death as their portion of the favors to be distributed by the Judge of the nations. Assassination will become a minor matter for those whose dictatorships have destroyed civilization. For God's judgment will be just and His decision final, and death will fall upon the world for unrepented sin.

PETER LEARNS A HARD LESSON

YOU remember last week we said that Peter had many lessons to learn before he became the great worker for Jesus that he finally was. Today we are going to study the first lesson he had to learn, and maybe we will learn it, too. This is a hard lesson, the hardest of all for some people.

Nearly all'of us are just a little bit proud, aren't we? We like to do the big things, the showy things, the things that people notice. And Peter was no different than we are. He liked to be the leader.

Well, it was all right for Peter to be the leader. And it's all right for any of us to be the leader if we know how to be: But we must be willing to be many other things as well. We must find out just what sort of person makes the best leader. And then we must try to be that sort of person.

Now Jesus, who was the best Teacher there ever was, and the best Leader, also, could see that Peter was going to make a good leader if he learned something first. That was to be a good follower.

And He knew that if He just stood up and told Peter that, Peter wouldn't learn the lesson, nor remember it if he did learn it. So He decided to act out the lesson Himself, and then maybe the other disciples also would understand.

You know, the Holy Land or Palestine is a very sandy country and warm, something like California. You boys and girls who live in California and who read this page, think once in a while about us who are shivering these days because the temperature is around zero. But, then, they don't have the fun sleigh riding and snowballing that we have, do they?

Well, as we started out to say, it was warm and sandy there, and Jesus and the disciples and everybody, for that matter, wore sandals instead of shoes. Something like you do in July and August. Now you can see that the sand would get into their sandals and be uncomfortable. You've found that out when you've gone to the lake in summer.

And so they had a very courteous custom. When a guest came to one's house, a servant stood at the door with a basin of water and a towel. He slipped off the guest's sandals, rinsed the sand off his feet, dried them, and then replaced the sandals. The guest could then go into the house and be quite comfortable while he visited. Don't you think that was a nice, polite thing to do?

I know when your mother has guests, you try to make them comfortable by giving up the most comfortable chair, if you are in it, and by doing other little things to make them feel at home. Then they enjoy their visit and want to come again.

You recall how Peter and John had gone ahead to find a room to eat their last supper with Jesus and the other disciples. Well, I presume there was no servant there to remove the sand from their feet, and who do you suppose did it?

Why, Jesus Himself did! Their Lord and Master stooped down, and with a basin of water and a towel He made them all comfortable. You'd think He would have told Peter to do it, because Peter was the one He wanted to teach. But no! He did it Himself.

'At first Peter didn't see that Jesus was trying to show him that even though He was their Leader, He was willing to do the lowliest thing for them. He was willing to be their servant even. Neither did the other eleven see what Jesus meant. And so He had to explain it to them.

You see, if we are willing to be just like servants, then we can understand how a servant feels. We will know what a servant likes. We will know how he suffers and also what he enjoys.

Then when we are leaders, we can lead so much better. We'll know just what to do for those we lead that will be best for them. And we will do it in a way that will make them want to follow our great Leader, Jesus.

Do you see what Jesus meant now, when He said, "He that would be chief must first be servant of all"? And we know Jesus never asked others to do anything He wasn't willing to do Himself.

Now when we read what Peter wrote to the Christians in his first letter to them, chapter 5, verses 5 and 6, we will know that at last Peter had learned to be humble and lowly just like Jesus. And he wanted those he taught to learn that lesson as well.

"The bravest hearts are tender;
The greatest are most kind;
Love's service let us render
With meek and lowly mind."

LESSON 3. — January 20, 1935

PETER'S LESSON IN HUMBLE SERVICE

John 13:1-17; 1 Peter 5:5

Devotional Reading: Luke 14:7-11

GOLDEN TEXT

All of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility.—1 Peter 5:5.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Humbleness leads to Christian growth and to increased opportunities for service.

Class Discussion; Is humility an indication of weakness? Should a sense of humbleness cause one to refuse responsibility? Can one volunteer his services in something which he knows he can do well and still be humble? Can a business man advertise his goods and service without boasting?

I. Jesus Exemplifies Humility. (John 13: 1.5). No task that needs to be done for the benefit or the comfort of others is too humble to be performed by the most honored and successful of the Lord's followers. All men are equal before God, even the man Christ Jesus, who has left us this splendid example of

II. Peter's Willfulness. (Vv. 6-11.) Jesus, seeing into the heart of Peter, observed his thoughtlessness of the desires of others. Jesus wished to wash the disciples' feet, but Peter refused to submit to the Lord's will in the matter until He had warned him of the cousequences of such refusal. Then Peter demanded more than the Master had said was required! Again setting his will up in opposition to that of his Lord.

III. Jesus Applies His Lesson on Humility. (Vv. 12-17.) To recognize in Jesus' act of washing the disciples' feet only a formal rite would be to deprive it of its richest value. It was the Master's purpose to impress upon His followers a self-forgetful and humble attitude in every walk of life, not to provide them with an ordinance to be rigidly observed. "There are two ways of imitating the example of a person," said Hallock. "One is to imitate the form of his example. The other is to imitate his spirit." It is the latter that Jesus desires on the part of His followers.

IV. Peter Learns His Lesson. (1 Pet. 5:5.) It required many bitter experiences, including the sorrow he felt over his denial of his Lord, which we will study in a future lesson, to teach Peter that complete submission to the will of Christ was demanded of him. But when the lesson was once learned he was ready not only to practice it in his own life, but also to teach it to others, that they might be made happy in the Lord's fellowship and service.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS Humbleness

- -is always present with true Christians;
- is a virtue worth developing;
- -aids the man who possesses it; -acts as a safeguard against pride;

—was very pronounced in Christ's life. Humility. You can possess bumility without having Christianity, but you can't have Christianity without humility. The latter two are coupled together. The need for and the blessing of humility are set forth throughout the entire Bible. Humility must be present before God's grace can be bestowed. "God' resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble."—Jas. 4:6. He forgetteth not their cry for help (Psa. 9:12). Humility precedes honor. "Before destruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honour is humility."-Prov. 18:12. Humility is the fruitage of love. Love is the soil in which humility thrives (1 Cor. 13:4). The humble in spirit serve with an eye single to God's glory and are not desirous of the plaudits of men or the vainglory that comes of selfish service (Gal. 5:26). All service is rendered with lowliness of mind that God in all things might be glorified (Phil. 2:3).

Servants. The disciples needed the lesson that Christianity serves rather than is served. Some of the happiest moments of one's Christian experience come when serving others in the name of the Lord. We are Christ's servants. Not bond servants, but free. We are freemen doing service as to the Lord and not as to men (Eph. 6:5-9). We are servants in the sense that sons and daughters are servants of the parents. When God's spirit comes into our hearts whereby we can cry, "Abba, Father," we are no longer recognized as servants, but sons and daughters. Thus our service should be as obedient children.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves."-Phil. 2:3. Jesus gave us an example in humility in that He humbled Himself as servant and washed the disciples' feet. He also "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant" (Phil. 2:7),

He is our Lord and Master, and as no servant is greater than his master, we should ever be humble and through love serve one another. "Clothed with humility," that is, never be overbearing or haughty, but always be kind and gentle. "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble."—1 Peter 5:5. —L. А. R.

INTERMEDIATES The Dignity of Lowly Service

The cager Peter, even as we have, had many lessons to learn during his discipleship. We recall his ringing words, "Thou art the Christ, the Sun of the living God," in answer to his Lord's question, as given by Matthew. imagine how proudly he made this bold declaration. He is still the same impulsive, dominating personality in today's lesson.

In Ilis ministry among men Jesus had a great twofold purpose: to proclaim the good news of God's coming kingdom on earth, and to fit others to carry on His work when He had finished. To accomplish this latter, the twelve must not only learn the message thoroughly, but they must pattern their characters after that of their great Leader. Can you name the outstanding trait possessed by Jesus (Matt. 11:29)? How did He display this trait in today's lesson? Discuss the common custom prevailing in the sandy country of Palestine, which made it the usual thing for a guest's feet to be washed. Who, however. usually performed this act of courtesy? Did Jesus do this merely for their physical comfort? Show that Peter so considered it by his question (v. 6). Jesus went on to show Peter that by serving others in even the low-liest manner, he would add that shining jewel to his character-humility. Discuss in class the value of humility, how our fuith in God is increased when we have less faith in ourselves. Peter was slow to learn the lesson Jesus intended, that he that would be a leader must first be a servant. But he finally understood what Jesus meant (1 Pet. 5:5, 6). Try to discover how humility will add to your usefulness in Christian service.

God rewards the one who is willing to serve in a lowly way by giving greater opportunities.-M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Memory Verse: "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another."- -John 13:34a.

Review of Lesson. Review lesson may be given by some child. Questions may be asked entire class by teacher to cover past week's lesson. Filled blanks from last Sunday may be read.

Presentation of Lesson. Introduce lesson by inquiring what little acts of kindness they have done for others during past week. After this discussion tell of service described in our lesson today as follows: The finished supp r (John 13:1, 2); Jesus rising from table; preparation for washing disciples' feet; was iing of disciples' feet; conversation with Pete ; Jesus' reference to Judas; His explanation of act of washing their feet. Emphasize humbleness of service rendered by Jesus. Let children discuss lesson.

Memory Verse. Jesus showed His love for His disciples when He washed their feet. He wanted them to know He loved them. But He also wanted them to love each other. Te said, "A new commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another." He wants us to do the same. We should learn this verse.

Notebook. If you can find a picture of Jesus washing disciples' feet, paste in notebook. Should you have child in class with an inclination to draw lesson free-hand, let him do it that way. Write under picture Jesus' and Peter's conversation. Give children some "yes" and "no" questions about lesson to answer. Sample: Was Jesus with His disci ples? Was Judas there? Did Peter want Jesus to wash his feet? All papers should be corrected before end of class .- V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

ARKANSAS CONFERENCE PLANNED

The church in Arkansas is planning an aggressive forward movement for the new year that will include the employment of Evangelist E. O. Stewart of Sweetwater, Texas, during the months of March, May, and July. The state conference dates, it is hoped, will be so arranged that "those who wish to do so may attend the General Conference (which convenes from July 30 to August 11, 1935) at Oregon, Illinois." The Arkansas Conference will meet this year at Bear, Atk., fourteen miles west of Hot Springs.

This information reaches us through the kindness of Mrs. Ruth H. Kinser, Meyers, A rk

WELFARE COMMITTEE REPORTS

Letters from O. J. Parker, pastor of the Kokomo, 1nd., Church of God, and from D. G. Harvey of the same church indicate a re-markable record for the relief work of the Kokomo congregation for 1934, in spite of the impoverished condition of the city. (Kokomo is a manufacturing town of approximately 40,000.)

During the year ending November 27, 1934, the Welfare Department, through the courtesy of the Dale Myers bakery, has distributed in Kokomo 2,503 loaves of bread and 3,045 dozen buns, rolls, doughnuts, and cakes. Baskets of food were provided needy families, as well.

Bed clothes are made from cast-off clothing, and the Welfare Department also receives and renovates considerable clothing for A few toys were distributed to children. needy children at the recent Christmas season.

The head of the Department is O. J. Parker, with Lee Thomas and Charles Martin as assistants and Edgar Harvey as secretary.

FROM DIXIE LAND

We are now engaged in meetings in southern Louisiana, the section of our boyhood home, and it is a pleasure to meet with the loved ones and friends of years gone by, as well as to make the many new acquaintances.

The meetings here are being divided into two parts. The first one, which started on Year's Day, is being conducted in the new log church erected in the country near Blood River and some fifteen miles southwest of Hammond. This meeting will likely continue till January 13, and then the last week of our stay will be put in at the old Happy Woods Schoolhouse, just three miles west of Hammond. That is the section in which Bro. W. H. Wilson once conducted his Pine Woods Bible Class.

We have some loyal workers down here, who with the aid of a minister once each year maintain much interest. Two lively Sunday schools and Berean classes are kept going, and a real influence exerted. F. E. Siple.

Sermons: Pleasant View, 2; Rensselaer, 2; Hillisburg, 2; Plymonth, 1; North Salem, 1; Blush, Mo., 7; St. Louis, Mo., 1. Funerals, 1. Marriages, 1. Money received in Indiana: Pleasant View, $22.50; Rensselaer, $24.60; Hillisburg, $20.83; Plymouth, $12.00; North Salem, $7.00; Conference Board, $11.60. Expense, $15.20. J. H. Anderson.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA PREPARES FOR CONFERENCE

The end of the year 1934 brought to our hearts much cheer in the large attendance for our Christmas and New Year's programs. Many of those who are ordinarily unable to attend were out for those two services. The giving of a Christmas play by the younger members of the Sunday school, followed by giving of Christmas candy to the children, and special Christmas music (largely the work of Kermit Olsen) during the worship period. were features of special note on December 23.

On December 30 the regular annual Sunday school election took place, the following offi-cers being elected: Bro. Wilson Calkins, Superintendent; Bro. Murl Cripe, Asst. Superintendent; Bro. Bradley Crundwell, Secretary-Treasurer; and Sr. Bettie Blackwell, Home Department Secretary. The Sunday school wishes to extend to Bro, Rahn, the retiring Superintendent, and his staff, its appreciation of their splendid efforts during the past year; and with our congratulations to Bro. Calkins goes the hope that the coming year will be as profitable.

Final arrangements are under way for the Quarterly Conference to be held at Los Angeles, January 13, morning and afternoon. Bro. S. J. Lindsay from Tempe, Ariz., will have charge at 10 a.m. to teach the lesson: "Life Only Through Christ." At the morning worship hour the pastor of the Los Angeles church will develop the prophetic subject: "When the Lord Pleads," to be followed by the Communion, with the subject: "Bread From Heaveu." After a picnic lunch at noon, the conference sessions will resume at 2 p.m. for a social hour. At 2:30 Bro. Lindsay will again hold forth with the subject: "For What Is Your Life?" To those who know Bro. Lindsay nothing further need be said; and to those who have never heard him, all that need be said is, "Come and hear him for yourself."

Norman John MacLeod, President, California Conference of the Church of God.

SEASONAL PROGRAM AT HOLBROOK. NEBRASKA

A program in keeping with the spirit of Christmas season was given at the church Sunday evening, Dec. 23.

After Scripture reading and prayer by Bros. Grover Gordon and Arthur Hornaday the opening numbers were recitations and songs given by the younger members of the Sunday school under the direction of Sr. Ruth Knosp.

Following this a pageant, "Hope of the World," was very effectively presented by members of the Berean class in costume on a softly lighted stage.

The choir, with Sr. Icel Stedman at the piano, very ably gave the message in song af stated intervals of the pageant. Sr. Lulu Johnson of Freedom, Neb., added much to the program with her piano solo and song.

Another faithful member, Bro. George Scott, was laid to rest Sunday afternoon, Dec. 23, to await the resurrection morning. May Christ soon come as the Hope of the world to banish sorrow and death.

(Received unsigned.)

ARRIVAL AT BRUSH CREEK, OHIO

On December 17 a son, James Warren, was born to Bro, and Sr. Ralph Kleppinger. The mother is now able to resume her household duties and little James II, named after his grandfather Kessler, is rapidly developing into an amateur farmer.

Srs. Elgin Black and David Lehman, both previously reported ill, are well past the danger point and will soon be back to normal strength

Final plans are being made for a trip to Ripley, Ill., where we are to assist Bro. Lapp in holding a serve applanning to go along.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ADVANCES AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

I am very glad to say that our Sunday school at Ripley has been a very satisfactory institution this year.

We have had an average attendance of approximately 50 each Sunday of the year; and our collections for each Sunday have averaged approximately $3.70.

I hope that our Sunday school may grow and that it may spread the gospel news to many people.

Francis E. Burnett, S. S. Sec.

EDITH MILLER

Edith Miller, wife of Charles E. Miller, died at her home in Dixon, Ill., December 19, 1934, in the fifty sixth year of her age, bringing deep sorrow not only to her household, but also to the Dixon Church of God, of which she was a most devout and active member, and the entire community in which she had lived in comfort and happiness for many

She was born in Dixon, in which city she resided during her entire lifetime. She was united in marriage with Charles E. Miller October 22, 1901.

Her parents both died before she was three years of age, and she was adopted as a daughter by John W. and Elizabeth Anderson, in which home she grew to womanhood. Early in life she became a member of the Church of God, in which fellowship relations she remained true and active to the end.

Of her immediate family she leaves only her husband to mourn the loss of a most faithful, loving, and devoted wife. Of the family of her adoption she leaves four nieces-Mrs. Al Wierks of Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. Myrtle Webster of Chicago; Mrs. Edna Beck of Downers Grove, Ill.; Mrs. Ben Shaw of Dixon, Ill.; one nephew, Charles Anderson of Downers Grove, Ill.; and one sister in law, Mrs. Orpha Sanford of Downers Grove, Ill., together with the grief-stricken members of the church she loved so devotedly, with many friends and neighbors to whom her death came as an unusual shock.

Her devotion to her church, her kindly deeds and generous assistance to many who were less fortunately situated than herself, caused her to be loved and admired by all who knew

It was with unusual sorrow that we said farewell to her for a little while, till we meet

She lived well; therefore, she sleeps well. L. E. Conner.

MRS. THOMAS M. SAVAGE

Our dearly beloved sister in Christ, Mrs. Thomas M. Savage, was laid to rest until the time comes when the dead in Christ shall come forth to meet the Lord in midair. She suffered a great deal, but with a smile of hope that carried her to her grave. To the last she was concerned for those that were not prepared to go into death. Her life has been like her dear husband that died last April, anxious that all who came in contact with them would know the way of salvation. The church here misses these dear ones, for they have sacrificed a great deal that the work may go forward. She loved the Word of God, for it was a lamp unto her feet, and her desire was that all would study to show themselves workmen not ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth.

Mamie Dell Bowers was born at Hoopston, Ill., April 26, 1863; married Thomas M. Savage, Sr., May 17, 1893; was haptized at the age of 17 by Elder Peter Matheny, when the first revival was held here, and the beginning of the church in St. Cloud, Minn. They lived happily together since in their home at Waite Park, Minu., where all the children were born and have grown up and married, living at the same town.

She leaves to mourn friends all over the States; five boys, George, Thomas, Jr., Frank, Harry, and John; one daughter, Sadie; also one sister, Mrs. E. J. Franklin, St. Paul; three brothers, J. B. Bowers, Wenatchee, Wash., Harry Bowers, Bemidji, Minn., and L. L. Bowers, Waite Park.

For many years she was Secretary of our State Conference Board, and until her death and home, yet her beautiful life's influence and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

will live on. May the God of comfort hover over this dear family of children and five grandchildren, and that Mother's influence will lead them in paths of righteousness.

Sr. Savage died December 31, 1934. The funeral was held in the church Wednesday,

A. E. Hoskins.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD

Published by National Bible Institution Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54: the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1: 32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Je-Painfully missed in her community, church, sus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

"The President's Warning" will be the sermon of G. E. Marsh at Oregon, Ill., next Sunday night. Attention will be drawn to the President's message to Congress in which he said, "I cannot with candor tell you that general international relations outside our bor-ders are improved," and then mentioned world developments of a threatening nature.

Manager L. E. Conner returned last week from a brief visit to his farm in Indiana, where he spent the holiday season wielding an ax in the timber. The temperature dropped to 6 below zero while he was thus engaged, but the work went on just the same. Hard wood or hard business, Bro. Conner "hews to the line" regardless of weather conditions and external circumstances.

Bro. J. Arthur Johnson of Sac City, Iowa, gave an inspiring New Year's message from the Oregon pulpit Sunday morning. Bro. Johnson and his wife and daughter were over Sunday guests at the home of Bro. and Sr. Paul C. Johnson.

The key of prophecy is the Jew. He who fails to take into account Jewish activities throughout the world will miss the most sig-nificant of all "signs" that foretell the coming of the world's Redeemer, who is also to be the King of the Israelitish commonwealth. Wonderful events are transpiring among this people in these days.

Through an error, the address of Elder T. A. Drinkard, Texas evangelist, was given in the ministerial list recently published in The Restitution Herald as Kennedale, Texas. His correct address is Handley, Texas.

We are pleased to be able to present in this issue a poem that is done in the modern style, "The Humanness of Life," by Mrs. Richard Skeels of the Grand Rapids, Mich., congrega-

. Have you renewed or started your payments to the Dollar-a-Month Club yet! Receipts will be mailed to all members.

Pastor Norman John MacLeod of Los Angeles will speak on January 20 on a timely theme based on Ezekiel 37:4—"O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord." This will be one of a series of sermons Bro. Mac Leod is giving in interpretation of the writings of this prophet.

The Seventh Day Church of God is establishing world headquarters in Jerusalem. Sentiment, historic association, and perhaps certain prophecies (Isa. 2:3?) were probably the motives behind this movement. Of course it will make but little difference where the business center of the church may be when the Lord calls its members to meet Him in the air. The important thing is for each one to be ready.

CHRISTIANITY AND COMMUNISM

States must give aid to her enemies. To recognize Russia was to honor a possible foe of Japan. Russian influence and political institutions were foreign to the attitudes and desires of the American people, but diplomacy hesitates not at such difficulties. The strange anomaly of a "Communist Party" appears in the "seat of Capitalism," the United States. With religious indifference permeating the masses, with "higher criticism" undermining the power of religion among the more highly educated, with privations eating at the vitals of the common people, with "Economic Laws" being proved false by hard actualities, and with diplomacy demanding recognition of the Bolshevik State, Communism is on its way to strike Christianity a tremendous blow in the United States. Just as Christianity weakened the pagan State of Rome by its refusal to worship the Emperor, so Communism is working as a ferment in the Christian-democracy that is the peculiar bulwark of civilization in the Western World. Decadent Christianity is no equal to militant Communism.

I now propose proving the following two points, viz.:

1. Jesus Christ will build the Lord a house.

2. The promised possession of David's throne and kingdom is unconditional, and therefore cannot be forfeited.

Please compare the following analogous portions of Scripture, to wit: Zechariah 6:11-14; Jeremiah 33:14-26. "Then take silver and gold, and make crowns, and set them upon the head of Joshua, the son of Josedech, the high priest; and speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of hosts, saying, Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord: . . , and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne; and the counsel of peace shall be between them both." "Behold, the days come. saith the Lord, that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel and to the house of Judah. In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and rightcourness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The Lord our righteousness. For thus saith the Lord; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. And the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord; If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers."

THE HUMANNESS OF LIFE

By Mrs. Richard Skeels

Your life is hid with Christ in God-God's gift to all, And what are we doing with This life? This wonderful gift That does so much appall?

Some take the gift and squander it in pleasure. Some stain it dark with little sins, and mean, Injuring good people by carcless speaking, Learning too late what they might have seen.

Their record down, and sadly now they view it. They were not all they had the strength to stem. They took the gift of life, and soon ran through it. As though life would renew the gift to them.

Had they been wiser, they would have been stronger, And not been lured to trip life's rosy way. Had they not been so selfishly foolish, they would have been braver.

And better fitted for their tasks today.

Life is too rare a gift for thoughtless living; And to understand in youthful days Spares one many tears and sorrows, And so grow lovelier along life's way.

God pours out life from His abundant measure; And should it be spoiled by what one has done, For forgiveness, tear deep from your heart passion and strife,

And go to Jesus, your Jesus, the crucified One.

And Jesus stands ready that life to renew, And to cleanse it from all sorrow and sin; And, knocking, He stands at the door of their hearts, And entreats them to bid Him come in.

Because He hath borne with them all this long while. They having so little to offer, He patiently waits, interceding for them. And calls them, as a mother, her child.

And with the peace that comes with purity, And strength, with simple justice due-This is our royal dream of them. Dear God of our fathers, make it true,

Footprints of God

WE STAND today on the threshold of a new age. Events of vast magnitude and of unprecedented importance are transpiring around us. Tremendous problems of the most vital nature are elamoring at our doors demanding solution. Religious, social, political, and scientific questions thus far unsolved and apparently altogether unsolvable by human reasoning are facing the wise men of the world on every side.

Life has become very complex, very intricate, very hard a understand. It is a time of universal iconoclasm. Old dols are being shattered, old ideals discarded. Revolution is sweeping the earth like the enguling waters of a tidal wave. Nothing seems able to stand before it. All things normal seem about to be swept away in one tremendous disaster.

It is a time when the warning Isaiah addressed to Israel might well be applied to all the rulers of the nations and to the leaders of all the peoples of the earth. "Wherefore hear the word of Jehovah, ve scoffers, that rule this people that is in Jerusalem: Because ye have said, We have made a covenant with death, and with Sheol are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us; for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves: therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone of sure foundation; he that believeth shall not be in haste. And I will make justice the line, and righteousness the plummet; and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hidingplace. . . . that he may do his work, his strange work, and bring to pass his act, his strange act. Now therefore be ye not scoffers, lest your bonds be made strong; for a decree of destruction have I heard from the Lord, Jehovah of hosts, upon the whole earth."--Isa. 28:14-22, A. R. V.

Such is the warning of almighty God!

That the earth and its inhabitants are in the hands of

The following is the first of a series of three articles in which the Editor suggests the unfolding of God's plan for the deliverance of the earth and its inhabitants from the sin, the suffering, and the death which have been brought upon it by sin.

God is undeniable. Men may purpose and plan and endeavor to carry out their plans, but the final outcome will be determined by Jehovah of Israel! Of this there can be no doubt. "The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord."—Prov. 16:33. God has a supreme end in view which He will permit no human agency to circumvent. The divine plans were laid far in advance of man's initial appearance upon the scene, for "known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world" (Acts 15:18). The primary purpose of this study is to point out clearly the truth of this assurance.

For assuring it is to know that God does know the end of all things from the very beginning of them, that He has not forsaken the world in the hour of its greatest need, that He is still working on every side in the accomplishment of mighty purposes of deliverance and salvation, and that out of the tangled strands of human mistakes and failures our God will eventually evolve a tapestry of surpassing beauty that will be a last joy and comfort to all mankind!

THE END OF ALL THINGS

To many earnest Christians the end of all things is as intangible and indistinct as a mirage. To such the history of the world and its people is but a meaningless dream, a nightmare of failure and disappointment. But to the more careful student of the Bible this is not the case. For as he scans the pages of Inspiration and compares what he finds recorded there with what he sees happening in the world around him he is quickly convinced that God is obviously working out a marvelous scheme of redemption that includes within the scope of its influence men and nations and the earth itself. Under such comprehensive viewpoint provided by the prophets Nature takes on a new and more beautiful significance, the puzzle of history begins to resolve itself into a symmetrical pattern of purpose, and a divine reason is seen in (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Religious Education

"He will teach us of his ways."-Isaiah 2:3.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University of this city, said recently that religious training should be recognized as an essential part of every child's education. For himself he favored the French method by which children in elementary schools are granted a weekly half holiday to permit them to be brought under such religious training as their parents may desire. "The primary and responsible influence of the religious education of children should, of course, be the family and the church," he said.

The Hauptmann Trial

"Deliver my soul, O Lord, from lying lips."

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 11.—The attention of the world is focused on the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnaping and murder of the little son of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, which is now in progress here. Aside from the renown of the baby's hero-father there is an emotional appeal in the trial that has sent hundreds of the country's best writers to this county seat town to report the proceedings. More than 2.500,000 words are sent over the wires daily to say nothing of the volume of material forwarded to the newspapers by mail and directly to the public by radio. Aside from the news value of the trial the arguments, methods, and disputes of opposing lawyers, together with the conflicting testimony of witnesses, provide matters of great interest to the thoughtful. Only God knows who is telling the truth and who is guilty of the crime for which the defendant is being tried.

It Does Not Pay!

"Be sure your sin will find you out."-Num. 32:23.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Confessing to the theft of at least $48,000, it is alleged, a trusted clerk in the auditing department of the Swift Packing Company acknowledged that he had but 11 cents left when he was arrested yesterday at his desk in the office he had occupied for sixteen years. The amount stolen was all taken during the past two years, and was in part lost in betting on horse races, according to the statement issued by the accused. Two years ago he and his wife separated, she retaining custody of their three children, and the two residing on the same street near each other. It was the wife's suspicions that first directed the attention of the company to his excessive spending and which resulted in his arrest. An ironic turn is given to the situation by the announcement of the company that it had recently marked the man for promotion to the position of assistant manager of the department where he worked, where he would have been paid a salary double that which he had been receiving. The money he dishonestly obtained obviously did him no good, and resulted in the loss of reputation, liberty, and opportunity for success and credit in life.

Cleared by Lie Detector

"Behold, I know your thoughts."-Job 21:27.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 23.—After having served for fifteen years in prison for bank robbery, Joseph Blazenzits has been exonerated by a "lie detector" and pardoned by Gov. William A. Comstock. The "lie detector" is a scientific instrument which indicates the nervous reactions of a person questioned, and after long experiment it has been found to be surprisingly accurate and is now accepted in many courts.

Mr. Blazenzits was seventeen years of age when he entered the penitentiary and is now thirty-three. During his period of imprisonment he made so thorough a study of mathematics that he was able to detect an error in a college textbook which the author, Prof. Leonard M. Passano of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, acknowledged and corrected.

The man was twice convicted of murder, but has now not only been exonerated by the "lie detector" but also by satisfactory additional evidence. Such dreadful miscarriages of justice as this will no longer occur when Isaiah 2:3 and 4 are fulfilled!

Prospect for Peace Poor

"We looked for peace, . . . and behold trouble!"

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, "dean of women pacifists," surveying the prospects for peace in 1935, said frankly "there aren't any." At the same time she said tonight that "the abolition of war is the greatest next change that will come in the history of the human race," and urged the United States to manifest more clearly its "intent to keep the peace and join those nations that are willing to end war."

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

HAVING removed the objections to the application of the prophecies, before introduced, to our Lord Jesus Christ, I will now proceed with the investigation of other evidences upon the same point.

The last words of David express his unwavering confidence in the completion of these promises, covenanted to him through Samuel and Nathan. "Now these be the last words of David. David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet psalmist of Israel said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was in my tongue. The God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. And he shall be as the light of the morning, when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain. Although my house be not so with God; yet he hath made me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure: for this is all my salvation, and all my desire, although he make it not to grow."—2 Samuel 23:1-5.

That this everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure, pledges the great God to give His Son the everlasting possession of His father David's throne and kingdom, will appear from His own testimony and oath. Psalm 89:3, 4, 27-29, 34-37--"I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. ... Also I will make him my firstborn, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will'I make to endure for ever. . . . My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven."

Of the same import is the prophecy of the Prophet Isaiah, chapter 9:6, 7—"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." The testimony of the angel Gabriel confirms the foregoing view. Luke 1:30-33—"And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Our Savior's testimony is of the same import of all the foregoing, and proves that He is heir to all those promises covenanted. Compare Matthew 19:28 with Luke 22:28-30, also Peter's testimony on the day of Pentecost, and Paul's testimony in Acts 13:34, where the Apostle declares that God raised His Son from the grave, "no more to return to corruption," that He might give unto Him the "sure mercies of David," which, as has been shown, are the gift of His throne and kingdom, to the Anointed, His Son, forever.

Also the testimony of Simeon and James, that having taken out of the Gentiles a people for His name, the Lord will return, "and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and . . . build again the ruins thereof, and . . . set it up" (Acts 15:13-16). All of which proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that the throne and kingdom of Christ will be the throne and kingdom of David or Israel, restored.

The literal kingdom of Israel, restored, will be the kingdom of God. The following prophecy spans the entire history of the kingdom of Israel,

Neurer Home

O'er the hill the sun is setting,
And the night is drawing on;
Slowly comes the gentle twilight,
For another day is gone.
Gone for aye, its race is over,
Soon the darker shades will come,
Still 'tis sweet to know at evening
We are one day nearer home.

One day nearer, sings the sailor,
As he glides the water o'er,
While the light is softly dying
On his distant, native shore.
Thus the Christian on life's ocean,
As his light boat cuts the foam,
In the evening cries with rapture,
"I am one day nearer home."

Worn and weary, oft the pilgrim
Hails the setting of the sun;
For the goal is one day nearer;
And his journey nearer done.
Thus we feel, when o'er life's desert
Heart and sandal-worn we roam,
As the twilight gathers o'er us,
We are one day nearer home.

Nearer home! Yes, one day nearer
To the peaceful land of rest;
To the green fields and the fountains,
Where we shall meet all the blest.
For the heavens grow brighter o'er us,
And the lamps hang in the dome,
And our tents are pitched still closer,
For we're one, day nearer home.

The Great Events at the Water

By J. H. Anderson

"For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope."—Romans 15:4.

IN THE BIBLE it is taught that all must die and be buried except the living saints who will escape burial by being translated when Jesus comes (Eecl.

This article, one of a series on types and antitypes of the Bible, is dedicated by the author "to a dear friend." It is deserving of careful study. voice came to them and informed them that Christ was His Son (Matt. 3:13-17). As the brides of Isaac and Moses were found at the water, so Christ finds His

9:10; 1 Thess. 4:13-18; 1 Cor. 15:51, 52). As the great majority of the citizens of the kingdom must be buried before they enter the kingdom, so of the earth; the territory was buried in the water at the flood (Gen. 7:17-24). In John 3:1-13 Jesus taught that a man would have to be born of the water and of the Spirit to enter the kingdom. Water birth begins the Christian life and the Spirit birth eternal life for us (1 Peter 2:1-3; Rom. 6:1-5; 8:11; Col. 1:15, 18). So the earth had to be born of water by the holy Spirit (Gen. 1:2, 7-10). Again, after the flood the earth came out of the water (born of water: Gen. 8:13).

Every student of the Bible knows that Isaac was a figure, type, of Christ (Gen. 21:12; Gal. 3:16). Isaac was born when his parents were past the age to have children. Christ had no earthly father. A miracle was done in bringing these two into the world (Rom. 4:17-25; Luke 1:26-35). When Isaac was a young man Abraham was commanded to make a sacrifice of him and would have done so had not his hand been stayed by the angel (Gen. 22:1-14). In Abraham's mind Isaac was offered and he believed God would resurrect him (Heb. 11:17-19). This pointed to the offering of Christ, the great seed of Abraham of whom Isaac was a type (John 1:29; 1 Peter 1:18, 19).

As Isaac stands as a type of Christ, his bride is a type of the Lamb's bride (Rev. 21:9). In the 24th chapter of Genesis, we have the history of the selection of Isaac's bride and let's remember that this is a type of the selection of Christ's bride (Rom. 15:4; Acts 15:13-17). Abraham called his servant and made him take an oath to go to their old country and select the bride of their kindred, and everything that the bride would need was furnished by Abraham. In the story Abraham is a type of the Father, who provides everything for the Lamb's bride (2 Cor. 5:17-21). The servant going for the bride represents the minister with the Word calling the Lamb's bride (Mark 16:15, 16; Isa, 55:10, 11). As the servant reaches the old country he prays that he may find the bride and know her by her action at the water. As soon as he finishes his prayer a beautiful maiden comes to the water and meets the test. Later this maiden becomes Isaac's bride.

Moses stands as a type of Christ (Deut. 18:15-19; Acts 3:22-26). Moses found his bride at the water (Ex. 2:15-21). Many years later Christ the bridegroom was found by John the Baptist at the water, and it was here that the Father's at the water (Eph. 5:25-27; Rom. 6:1-5).

When Moses was leading Israel out of Egypt (a type of Christ leading us out of sin into the kingdom: 1 Cor. 10:1-13), they came to the waters of the Red Sea, and there God opened up a way for them to pass to the other side. Fifteen hundred years later Paul writes: "Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea."—1 Cor. 10:1, 2.

It was this baptism that took Israel out of Egypt and started them on their way to the Holy Land. It is the water birth that brings one into Christ and starts him in the Christian life (Rom. 6:1-5; 1 Peter 2:1, 2; Gat. 3: 26-29).

Here let me again call your attention to Isaac's bride. She had to be of his kindred (Gen. 24:1-4, 10-15). So the Master's bride will be of His kindred, not of His Jewish kindred, but of those that do His will (Mark 3:31-35).

To do God's will Rebekah left all her friends and went with the stranger to become the bride of his master and by thus obeying God she became the ancestress of Christ, had her name enrolled in God's holy book (Gen. 24:42, 43). To become a member of the bride class one must be willing to forsake all if need be (Matt. 16:24, 25; Rom. 12:1-21).

Abraham provided ten camels to bring the bride to his son. God gave Israel a law based on ten commandments to bring them to Christ (Gal. 3:24, 25). When the bride met Isaac she got off the camel. Israel made a mistake: when Christ came to them they still held to the law, and some in this age seem to think they can ride the law (camels) into the kingdom (Rom. 6:14, 15; Gal. 3:16-21).

Abraham also provided the bride with the wedding garment and the jewels with which she adorned herself (Gen. 24:53). We find that the Bible reveals a filthy garment of man's righteousness that some people boast of, who claim that they are perfect, can't sin. God looks on this as a filthy garment. "For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God."—Rom. 10:3. "But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away."—Isa. 64:6.

Let's not wear such a garment; for the Father has provided a spotless garment and only those that put on and wear His garment will be permitted to remain in the wedding chamber (Matt. 22:1-14). "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."—Rev. 19:7, 8. We put on this garment by faith when we come into Christ by baptism (2 Cor. 5:17-21; Rom. 4:17-25; 6:1-5).

As we type this the ground is robed with a beautiful garment of snow and the pure, white flakes are still falling. Soon in the kingdom of God the earth will be robed in the white garments of God's glory, and then all living creatures will give glory to the Father who provides everything that His people need (2 Cor. 5:17, 18; Rev. 5:9-13; Isa. 35).

In our next on "The Wonders of the Bible," we shall consider the spiritual meaning of water used so many times in the Bible for our learning (John 4:10-14; Jer. 2:13; Rom. 15:4).

The Prophets

WHEN we undertake the study of religion it at once appears that among all peoples there have been prophets. And these religious prophets strive to give credence and authority to their opinions by claiming immediate and peculiar relations with the god or gods of their respective religions. Such a claim involves all the requirements for divine revelation that are set forth in the Christian Bible. Who are these prophets? How may we determine the true and the false? In this inquiry we shall confine ourselves to the sacred writings of the Christian church. May we study them faithfully and prayerfully.

In many passages all the characteristics of prophetic declaration are apparent, although the writing may not be called a "prophecy." The story of the flood, found in the sixth and seventh chapters of Genesis, is treated as a prophecy by the writer of the book of Hebrews, when he declares: "By faith Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saying of his house; by which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith."-Heb. 11:7. Tradition records that Noah proclaimed for 120 years the certainty of the coming flood. In like manner the story of Abraham and the battle of the kings is converted into a prophetic event in the book of Hebrews (chapter 7). . . . Once more, Peter, on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:25-32), quoted from the songs of King David to show that the resurrection of the dead was a vital part of the faith of the Hebrew people, that it was an event which had been long expected; and he applied it to the resurrection of Jesus in these words:

"I have set Jehovah always before me:

Because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved. Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth:

My flesh also shall dwell in safety.

For thou wilt not leave my soul to Sheol;

Neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption."

—Psalm 16:8-10, A. R. V.

It is somewhat difficult for the present-day reader to arrive at a clear comprehension of what the word "prophet" meant to the people of Israel and the early church. No simple definition has been found in the sacred writings for the English word prophet that will apply to all the various uses to which the word has been put. And this is also true of the Hebrew words-there are three of themwhich in the English are all translated "prophet." Two of them are derived from the same root and mean "to see"; that is, to understand. So the prophet was one who understood or saw the real meaning of the events of life, and could explain the situation and advise what course of action to follow. The third Hebrew word meant "to announce," "to bubble up," or "to pour forth." And this indicates the method of getting the message to the people. The Greek word is prophetes, indicating "one who speaks before or in the presence of another." It is from this term that our English word is derived, and it does not mean foretelling events so much as it carries the notion that the speaker is declaring the mind or judgment of another person, and not his own opinion.

The Bible use of these words, or the word prophet. seems to carry the significant idea that God is speaking to His people in the person of His chosen minister, who is called a prophet. It requires careful study of all the related facts of any particular declaration of the prophet in order to understand the full import of his message. In no case does the Lord speak at random. There always is a cause for speaking, a well understood occasion, and a fully explained purpose for the expected action. Dr. J. H. Gardiner, in his book The Bible As English Literature, says: "The prophet of the Old Testament was at once preacher and statesman, seer of visions and guide in the affairs of the nation, reformer of religion, moralist, and poet." He might add: He was a teacher of youth, a social worker. and a minister of good to the needy, to the unfortunate and the downtrodden, as well as counselor to kings and proclaimer of good news to all men.

Israel always has lived among the nations. In the writings of the entire Scriptures there is a tone which keeps

"LAND"

AND!" There is nothing obscure about the meaning of this term. It ought not to be difficult of comprehension what is meant by its use in holy Scripture. Its sense is given in the first chapter of Genesis, and it stands until further definition is supplied us. In ordinary parlance, everybody understands what "land" signifies.

"Earth" is another word equally plain. "God called the dry land earth." The habitable part of our world is meant, in its closest sense; if in its widest, the planet on which we dwell.

These two words, "land" and "earth," are incorporated in the promise of God in many of the scriptures that speak of the rest and final home to which trend the steps of the saved of men. They say: "All the land that thou seest, to thee will I give it"; and, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth."

To you who fear God: brethren, alike we find these terms in the Book we call our standard. They were there before we were born. They will be there when some of us have departed this life. Your Bible has them; so has mine. It devolves upon us to understand what they signify, that we may have a knowledge of the truth. Let us talk the matter over; for we be "brethren."

It is not proselytism we are after. We bring no peculiar sectarian definition to impose upon you. We seek only a unity of understanding in the true sense of the term as it may appear from scriptural usage, that so agreeing we may "all speak the same thing."

It will not be denied that these terms, "land" and "earth," are bespeaking the inheritance of the saints, are profusely scattered over the sacred pages. Candor unhesitatingly admits it. The question is, What sense were they used to convey to us? Let us search and sec.

As far as we know, the two following positions are those usually taken in the premises by such as cannot say with Pcter, "We, according to God's promise, look for new (renewed) heavens and a new (renewed) earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." They are these:

- 1. That "earth" and "land" are to be understood naturally, but that they refer to the present and not the final place of the saints, and that now, in this life, the saints are the real inheritors of the earth.
- 2. That the words "earth" and "land" are not to be understood literally, but are typical of an abode other than what is known as "earth."

We will examine, in a fraternal spirit, these positions, and test them by Scripture.

First, as to the position that they have no reference to the life everlasting, but that they mean that the saints do now inherit the land.

We think it untenable, for reasons which we will presently adduce. We are happy that we can agree that the true Christian can use the world as the ungodly man cannot. Being in harmony with its Creator, its beauties and fragrance and comforts, as far as he is permitted to experience them, are duly appreciated as so many tokens of his Father's love and care for him; and they awaken in his heart response of gratitude and such acknowledgment as is in his power. But this is not inheritance-settling down to undisturbed possession, in everlasting enjoyment. He is a pilgrim, hasting through the present order of things as a man of another country-another in the sense of quality, not of place. If he stops too long in any enjoyment—if his tarry is such as to excite the fear that he will become a permanent resident in the land—he hears a voice telling him to "arise; this is not your rest." So, while we are happy in agreeing substantially with brethren in the truth that the Christian gets more out of the present gifts of God's bounty than the children of the devil, we do not think this fills the measure of the scriptures which speak of "earth" and "land" as the abiding place of the ransomed. For two reasons:

- 1. Because possession is placed after the dissolution of the present order of things, in a condition which is called "the regeneration." See 2 Peter 3:10-13.
- 2. Because the invitation to inherit is not given till the sheep and the goats have been separated, represented in parable to be after our Lord's second advent (Matt. 25: 31-46).

Many other reasons could be added, showing that these promises of a kingdom and dominion under the whole heavens, to be given to the people of the saints of the Most High—that this taking root in the restored and renovated earth—is subsequent to the rule of sinful man, and under the rule of the blessed Potentate, Christ the Lord.

The other position—that "earth" and "land" are types of a realm neither earth nor land—is equally unsatisfactory.

For where in holy Scripture is either "earth" or "land" used as a type of another world—planet or fixed star? It is sometimes, and very rarely, used to signify the people of a country, and there are places where it means the inhabitants of the whole earth; as in the following examples: "O earth, earth, earth! hear the word of the Lord"; and in the title of the Almighty, "The God of the whole earth." So far, and no farther, does the Bible use these terms away from their natural signification. But never do they refer to another abode by the name of this. Indeed, Scripture keeps distinct the dwelling places of the various intelligences it recognizes. For instance, alluding to God Himself, we read: "The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men." So far is it from confusing places of habitation. . . .

Conceive of the earth—the eurse lifted from its bosom and sky, the sun of divine favor smiling on it without interruption, every sun-burned and parched desert healed of its scar, every waste place a blooming and redolent garden. He comes back who was a true man as well as the Son of God, the inhabitants all holy and delighting to do the pleasure of their heavenly Father and beloved Lord, mortality gone, graveyards abolished, funeral processions unknown, sickness forgotten—what could be objectionable in such a home?

"Land"—"earth": these are the words in the deeds of gift of our final home. Brethren, I submit the documents do not mislead. If instead of putting our inventive faculties at work to make other of these words than what they really mean, we, like Paul, believe "even as it is spoken unto us," we shall find we have kept the safe path.

Let us in closing repeat a few scriptures:

"And the Lord said unto Abraham . . . Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever . . . Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee."—Gen. 13:14-17.

"Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed.
... My faith he sojourned in the land of promise ...
These (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off."—Heb. 11.

The Fig Tree Parable

By Emma C. Railsback

"Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh."—Matthew 24:32.

OCCASIONALLY we meet a Bible student who insists on taking the above parable literally. I have before me quite a lengthy dissertation along that line, which to me seems quite illogical. But parables cannot be taken literally. A careful examination of the parables found in Matthew 13 and our Lord's reasons for teaching thus, as found in verses 10-17, and also the disciples' request for an explanation found in verse 36, prove this to be true. If we insist on taking this parable literally, we must not condemn the immortal soulist for attempting to do the same with the parable of the rich man and Lazarus.

A parable is a placing beside, a comparison, an illustration of one subject by another. In Matthew 24 the Savior has been describing events leading up to His second coming, when He inserts this parable of the fig tree. Trees are frequently used in the Scriptures in figurative and parabolic language, to represent nations and rulers.

In the time of the judges we find that the trees went forth on a time to anoint a ruler over them. They called first the olive, then the fig tree, then the vine, and finally the thistle. This parable was given to describe a certain deplorable condition that existed in Israel at that time. Then Nebuchadnezzar's dream concerning the great tree, which was to be cut down and a band of iron and brass placed around the stump for seven years, referred to the sudden cutting off of this wicked king for seven years. Then again in Ezekiel 31:3 the Assyrian nation is called a cedar in Lebanon, and Jehovah commands the Prophet to warn Egypt that she may expect a similar fate to that of Assyria, comparing the nations to the trees in the garden of God.

But the strongest evidence of this fact is found in Ezckiel 17:24: "And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the Lord have spoken and have done it." This language can only be applicable to the nations of the earth, and the dry tree here refers to none other than Israel. God has decreed that the dry tree shall flourish, shall put forth leaves, and the Prophet is made to speak of things that be not as though they were already accomplished (Rom. 4:17).

Now, going to the New Testament, we find the parable of the fruitless fig tree planted in a vineyard, which the Savior commanded to be cut down, after seeking fruit for three years and finding none, is descriptive of the barrenness of the Jewish nation (Luke 13:6-9). Also the cursing of the fig tree by the Savior prefigured the curse brought upon Israel by themselves when they replied to Pilate, "His blood be upon us and our children." The withering away of that nation, destroyed and scattered until they ceased to have a national life, fulfilled the prophecy of these parables. Then why should anyone object to the fig tree standing for the Jewish nation in Matthew 24:32? Luke's rendering, "Behold the fig tree and all the trees," always reminds me of Ezekiel's, "All the trees of the field shall know," and, instead of detracting from the Israelitish explanation, strengthens it. The Jewish or Israelitish nation is truly putting forth leaves, a national resurrection has begun, and all the nations are fulfilling the predictions of the prophets; and so there are signs not only in the fig tree, but in all the trees.

"ONLY A BOY"

MORE than half a century ago a faithful minister, coming early to the kirk, met one of his deacons, whose face were a very resolute but distressed expression.

"I came early to meet you," the deacon said. "I have something on my conscience to say to you. Pastor, there must be something radically wrong in your preaching and work; there has been only one person added to the church in a whole year, and he is only a boy."

"I feel it all," the pastor said. "I feel it, but God knows that I have tried to do my duty, and I can trust Him for the results."

"Yes, yes," said the deacon; "but 'by their fruits ye shall know them,' and one new member, and he, too, only a boy, seems to me rather a slight evidence of true faith and zeal. I don't want to be hard, but I have this matter on my conscience, and I have done my duty in speaking plainly."

"True," said the old man, "but 'charity suffereth long, and is kind; . . . beareth all things, . . . hopeth all things.' Aye, there you have it, 'hopeth all things.' I have great hepes of that one boy—Robert. Some seed that we sow bears fruit late, but that fruit is generally the most precious of all."

The old minister went to the pulpit that day with a grieved and heavy heart. He closed his discourse with dim and tearful eyes.

He lingered in the dear old kirk after the rest were gone. He wished to be alone. The place was sacred and inexpressibly dear to him. It had been his spiritual home from his youth. Before this altar he had prayed over the dead forms of a bygone generation and had welcomed the children of a new generation, and here, yes, here, he had been told at last that his work was no longer owned and blessed.

No one remained. No one? "Only a boy."

But that boy was Robert Moffatt. He watched the trembling old man. His soul was filled with loving sympathy. He went to him and laid his hand on his black gown.

"Well, Robert," said the minister.

"Do you think if I was willing to work hard for an education I could ever become a preacher?"

"A preacher?"

"Perhaps a missionary."

There was a long pause. Tears filled the eyes of the old minister. At length he said: "This heals the ache in my heart, Robert. I see the divine hand now. May God bless you, my boy. Yes, I think you will become a preacher."

Several decades later there returned to London from Africa an aged missionary. His name was spoken with reverence. When he went into an assembly the people rose; when he spoke in public there was a deep silence. Princes stood uncovered before him; nobles invited him to their homes.

He had added a province to the church of Christ on earth, had brought under the gospel influence the most savage of African chiefs, had given the translated Bible to strange tribes, had enriched with valuable knowledge the Royal Geographical Society, and had brought honor to the humble place of his birth, the Scottish kirk, the United Kingdom, and the universal missionary cause.

It is hard to trust when no evidence of fruit appears. But the harvest of faithful work is sure. The old minister sleeps beneath the trees in the humble place of his labors, but men remember his work, because of what he was to that one boy, and what that one boy was to the world.

"Only a boy!"-Elim Evangel.

LIQUOR IN CANADA

THE following letter from our esteemed brother, R. H. Judd, appeared recently in The Toronto Globe, and indicates the deplorable results on young people that have followed the opening of Government liquor stores in the Dominion.

"On our way home Saturday night we passed by a newly opened hotel on Danforth Avenue.

"Desiring to obtain first-hand knowledge of the character of these places, licensed by our newly elected Government, I entered. I am well on in years and have traveled widely, and have no hesitation in saying that the beverage rooms as seen tonight are a greater potential source of evil than anything occurring in the times of the barroom. Young people of both sexes were crowding the place to overflowing.

"Anyone can see at a glance that even from the lowest standpoint—that of the financial—the business will be a curse to the community. Dollars by the thousands that should in the ordinary course go to legitimate trade that makes Danforth outstanding as one of the prosperous portions of our fair city are diverted into unproductive and destructive channels. The Government may talk of returning 40 per cent to the city, but what of the balance? To what and where does that go?

"But the worst feature by far is that on the very threshold of life, when our young people should be looking forward eagerly to the future, their lives are ruined at the commencement, and their opportunities for future success doubly endangered by lowered moral standards and the curtailment of finances that would otherwise provide profitable employment for them.

"Any Government that will thus ruthlessly destroy its own people will in due time reap its reward. The evil already done outweighs by far any gains made by its spectacular financial policies, even granting that they were in a large measure necessary.

"That the churches of this district should fail in a matter of such urgent requirements seems almost inconceivable. Let us meet this enemy as a common foe, and defeat it in the name of the Lord God of hosts.

"R. H. Judd."

THE PROPHETS

one's mind on the human mass outside the Israelitish brotherhood, and the prophets continually kept this world view before the people. Even before the days of Noah this condition was recognized. So we read: "And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose."-Gen. 6:1, 2. Boaz and Ruth, Solomon and the princes of Egypt, and others, have perpetuated the mixing of races. The one enriched the house of David and added to the line of descent from which the Son of promise was born, the other resulted in the division and final ruin of the Israelitish kingdom. Out of such situations as these written prophecy was developed, and the "matter of prophecy took on the form of literature." In this way the prophets of God became the spokesmen of all people and tongues and kindreds. Dr. Moulton says of these writings: "The distinction is not one of form, but one of spirit. Biblical prophecy, in a sense that belongs to no other class of literature, presents itself as an actual divine message." From the Jewish Encyclopedia, concerning the prophets, we read: "Foremost among such truths were the facts now first practically realized, that God's government and interest were not merely national but universal, that righteousness was not merely tribal or personal or racial, but international and worldwide." Out of such convictions as these, out of the personal consciousness that they spoke for all time, that they were dealing with a divine source, a Mind that knew the end from the beginning, prophets of the Lord not only have spoken, but they have toiled and endured and died in order to enlighten the world for all time to come.

If we turn now from the sayings of the prophets of God as related in Christian history to the present-day conditions in the church, we are immediately met with the question, "Why are there not such prophets today?" It is perfectly safe to assume that such prophets are still serving the church. Perhaps they do not bear the same name, yet they perform the same public ministry, invoke the same divine providence, and support the same benevolent customs as were observed all through the historic centuries. True, some stop at existing "nature," and applaud the attainments of recent "science," and neglect to give God the glory. Notwithstanding, the same God is immanent in the world, and many of His faithful ones are worshiping Him in "spirit and in truth." We are admonished in 1 Thessalonians 5:20, 21: "Despise not prophesyings. Prove all things." The church is instructed, "When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken."-Deut. 18:22. This same rule is admitted universally today. The same kind of prophets are still with us.

A recent writer, referring to the prophets of the Bible, says: "They sought to preserve, explain, and spiritualize the law. . . . They were much less concerned with prediction (of concrete occurrences) than with true prophecy; that is, with the verbal portrayal of the great regulative lines of the future course of things." Almost any faithful pastor of a congregation or a parish performs these same services. Such prophets are found among Christian educators, jurists, statesmen, philosophers. While they do not rise to such cestasies as did Isaiah, they do guide and sustain a constant progressive order under divine direction. Our material environment has been greatly changed and our spiritual privileges have increased through the advance of knowledge (Dan. 12:4). The attitude of the masses toward the saints of God is entirely different from that which was manifested in the days of the apostles, or any other past time. Human nature, however, remains unchanged. The purposes of the Creator still persist in the religious and the physical universe. The enemies of rightcousness are myriad and the need of succor from the wiles of the devil is insistent, and the heart of man "is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" (Jer. 17:9). But the modern prophet still stakes his all on the redeeming grace of God. In the vivid words of the ancient Prophet Amos, the prophet of today cries out: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. The lion hath roared, who will not fear? the Lord God hath spoken, who can but prophesy?"-Amos 3:7, 8.-George H. Dewing in Present Truth Messenger.

"The greatest thing in the world is a good man."

"(Abraham) removed . . . into this land, wherein ye now dwell. And (God) gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him."—Acts 7.

"Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it, saith the Lord."—Ezek. 37:12-14.

We must not omit the golden text: it is our individual solace: "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:29.

FOOTPRINTS OF GOD

human life and experience which had never been recognized before.

"Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world"! Those words continue to ring through our hearts with a melody of hope! The Revised rendering, while changing the text completely, adds, rather than subtracts from the depth of meaning of this passage, stating simply, "Saith the Lord, who maketh these things known from of old." God not only knows "all his works from the beginning of the world," but He graciously makes that knowledge available to His people. He reveals His sublime purposes to them, "and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come" (1 Cor. 10:11).

In the sixty-six books of the Bible there has been mapped out for our instruction not alone a history of the world as God sees it, past, present, and future, but a vast comprehensive plan of divine purpose that stretches from the beginning of time to the farthest reaches of eternity!

The divine Record begins with Man in a beautiful Garden of Delight, where he was in constant fellowship with God, and it closes with the same glorious condition restored in full, and more than that, for all possibility of its loss again is to be removed when the inhabitants of earth pass beyond the reach of the wasting waves of time!

THE BEGINNING AND THE END

Let us look at the beginning and the end of this splendid picture for a moment.

Beside that limpid stream that flowed through the Garden, and under the shade of those fruitful trees whose heavily laden branches bent on either bank, moved the forms of the first man and the first woman of earth—but they never walked alone. Another form of benignant glory was ever present with them! Even after they had sinned and forfeited all right to the security and plenty of their Eden home, God remained still within their reach.

"And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the Lord God amongst the trees of the garden."—Gen. 3:8.

Conscience-stricken by a sense of their ingratitude and guilt, they sought to hide themselves from the presence of their best Friend and Counselor at such a time. But they could not do so. God was there—there in the Garden of Delight with His sinful children!

We turn to the concluding chapters of the Bible for the final scene, as we did to the opening chapters for the initial one. John paints the picture here.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away. . . . And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God."—Rev. 21:1, 3.

God is seen again upon the earth in the midst of the Garden of Delight, and in close and tender association with His people! Such is the beginning, and such is the ending of God's great plan as it is pictured in His Word.

LOST THROUGH DISOBEDIENCE

How did it happen that our fathers lost this rich heritage that came to them from their heavenly Father's hand—the heritage of a home of beauty and comfort upon the earth, together with perfect freedom from pain, anxiety, and death, and doubly blessed by intimate fellowship with the eternal God? What tragedy entered the picture that made necessary Jehovah's stupendous plans for human recovery?

One little word answers the question: S-I-N!

Called into judgment before God Adam heard this sentence pronounced upon him:

"And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, saying. Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."—Genesis 3:17-19.

It was not Adam and Eve alone who suffered as a result of their disobedience to God, but they passed the penalty, as they passed the tendency to sin, on to all succeeding generations of their posterity. So Paul reasons: "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."—Rom. 5:12. Home and life and fellowship with God were forfeited for all mankind.

However just such action might have been, the compassionate Father did not leave His disobedient children entirely to the fate they had brought on themselves—He suggested the possibility and provided the means of eventual deliverance and redemption. In immediate connection with the penalty pronounced upon them, He held out the olive branch of conditional pardon and restoration to divine favor. Addressing the tempter, He said: "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel."—Gen. 3:15.

Here at the most awful hour of their experience God brings to Adam and Eve the promise of a coming Redeemer, a Savior from sin!

Art little? Do thy little well;
And for thy comfort know
Great men can do their greatest work
No better than just so.—Goethe.

ARLEN MARSH, EDITOR

To Illinois Bereans

A new year lies before us—a year filled with opportunities of service, of growth, and of individual consecration.

Let us all work together during the coming year for the purpose of not only improving and building up our own local societies but organizing new ones, if possible. The Berean lessons offer a wonderful opportunity for teaching the truths of the Bible to those who are not familiar with them and for this reason new societies should be organized wherever possible. Your president would welcome suggestions as to where and when new classes could be established.

Please remember also that it is time to pay our dues. The state treasurer is Mrs. Mildred Somers, 1807 Ridge Ave., Rockford, Ill.

What do you say, folks, let us organize new societies at Ripley, Eldorado, Plum River, Casey, and other places. We need them.—Harry Goekler, Pres., Illinois State Berean Society.

The Pinkness Fades

It has been a century and a half since the Constitutional Convention meeting in Philadelphia drafted what has been one of the most important documents ever compiled by human hands.

During that entire period, the people of the United States have had, were they only willing to recognize the fact, reasons possessed by no other people in the world to be thankful to the God who gave them liberty to act, worship, think, and speak as they pleased.

The Constitution has been the buttress upon which every attempt to foist a dictatorship, a Socialistic system, or any other form of limitation of personal liberty on this Commonwealth has been broken.

Presidential or other executive flats have been held, thanks to the document which controls the freedom of this people, to have no force in law. Congress may delegate only a limited portion of its legislative powers to any executive branch of the Government,

While other nations suffer from the personal whims of absolute dictators or from the atheistic, ironelad rule of Communism, the United States can move serenely on its course, because its founders trusted God and were motivated in their actions by that trust.

Communism and Socialism have—has might be the better word, since no real distinction between the two exists—been advancing throughout this, as throughout every, nation. Those well versed in academic theory and willing to put man above Jehovah have adopted the ideas of Karl Marx rather than the ideas of the Deity who ever has protected them.

The United States has become colored, not a brilliant, Bolshevistic red, but at least a slight pink. The indifference and the empty theories of the religionists have furthered the cause of the world revolutionaries more than the religionists have dreamed.

It is sad to contemplate that where the church has failed the politics of men has, in a semblance, succeeded. It has been at best a sorry success, but even so the Constitution has guaranteed a freedom to its subject people that they who occupy the nation's pulpits are unwilling to consider.

In an eight to one decision the Supreme Court of the United States has decreed that Presidential orders can have no place as law. In approximately the same proportion, the ministers and religious teachers of the country are turning away from the institutions of the historic past and toward the vague, fallacious theories of impractical, Socialistic-thinking men.

Russia is, presumably, a government essentially by the people; yet Russia, in actuality, is a government by Stalin. The sundry boards and regulations of much of our own government are, by their own admission, a movement to the Left—the Left being the designation by which dictatorial Communism politically is dignified.

God visited a Socialistic system upon Israel only as a punishment for their sins. God's plan for Israel and for the entire world calls for an absolute monarchy to establish peace, contentment, and eternal prosperity. And no wider political gulf exists than that between a monarchy and a Socialistic government.

Dictatorships, however benevolent, can have no place in the United States as long as the Constitution remains in force. Socialism, that will-o'-the-wisp that ever has proved impractical in use, can never receive a place in the government of the United States as long as the Constitution continues as an active power.

Citizens of this nation have real cause to obey that dictate of the Apostle Paul, to "give thanks for those that are in authority." They who framed the government of which we are a part exhibited a wisdom far greater than that of those who would discard the system upon which the country has been built.

The pinkness of the United States has faded under the brilliant light of the Constitution. No constitution, however well framed, can bring about perpetual peace and happiness; only the establishment of God's kingdom on the earth can accomplish that. But, nevertheless, there is in the Constitution of the United States a document to be cherished and protected as a document built upon the freedom-giving principles of God.

THE CHILDREN'S PAGE

PREPARED BY MARY A. GESIN

"Create in me a clean heart, O God,"

My DEAR GIRLS AND BOYS,

It is the last day of the old year as I sit writing to you. The snow is gently falling, large white flakes of it. Soon everything that was not already protected will be covered by a beautiful soft blanket. Mother Nature, under the guiding hand of God, cares for the earth, just as your own mother eares for you.

The last day of the old year, the year of our Lord, 1934! Which means, as closely as men can figure, one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-four years since the birthday of our Savior that we have just so happily celebrated.

Think of celebrating that many birthdays of the same person! Long, long before that everyone would have forgotten that we ever lived, wouldn't he? But not so, our Lord and Master! He means as much to the world today as He did that day He was born in Bethlehem so long ago.

Perhaps He means more to the world now. At least, surely the world could not have needed Him more then than it does now. Every one of us can look about us and see many, many things that Jesus would change if He were here.

But we are happy, in spite of these things, because we believe and know He is coming back soon. Back to this earth where He once lived and labored among men, scattering happiness and comfort every place He went. And He will do the same when He comes again.

Every time you read one of the beautiful stories of Jesus, think how wonderful it will be when He comes and does just the same for us. The more you learn about Him, the more you will want Him to return. And the gladder you will be to see Him when He does come.

You know, every little while I get to thinking I'll not write this Page any more. I'll tell Bro. Marsh he'd better get some one else to do it, because surely the boys and girls must be getting tired of listening to me every week. Some one else would have some new and interesting and peppy ideas.

And then, when I've decided, something happens just as it did this morning. In my mail on this last day of the old year was the finest little letter, also a card of greetings and good wishes, and a snapshot!

The letter tells me that the little boy who wrote it and his mother read their Bibles every day, and he and his father, every Sunday. Can't you picture their home? Even though it is 'way, 'way up in Canada, where it gets very, very cold, yet there's a happiness and cheer in it that no money could buy, I'm sure. And a child in such a home will never forget to love the dear Lord he has heard his mother and father tell about so often. Of that I am sure also.

Each one of you other girls and boys who has a mother and a father like that, don't forget to say "thank you" to God for them at night when you kneel beside your bead. And don't forget to love them a lot and try to obey them in all things.

But, to go on with my letter. My little correspondent says, "Mother and Father and I thank you very much for your faithfulness in writing the Children's Page."

And I say, "Thank you, David Harrington, from Alberta, Canada. You've sent me the warmest greetings and gratitude from your cold country." For that is who wrote me the nice letter.

So, you see, I can't stop writing this Page, at least not just after getting such a beautiful message. I'm afraid, too, I'd miss all you other boys and girls too much. When one is away from others a great deal, as David always must be and as I am now, little things mean much more to him. And it's the little deeds of kindness and thoughtfulness, such as David's letter this morning, that make life happy.

I look out of my window now, as I think of many of you, and I watch the white snow, falling, falling, falling. And I think, why, it's just like the old earth turning over a new leaf. Tomorrow everything will be white just like the new year, the year 1935. Everything will be clean.

And so each one of us has before us a clear, white page of life. Last year with all its mistakes is gone. Let's not sigh over it. Let's get busy in this new year God has sent and see how clean we can keep our page. How much happiness we can bring to others, and in that way joy to ourselves and our parents and God.

Even though it is the middle of January before you will be reading this, the new year has just begun. Let's all join hands and form a Happiness Circle, chase away the shadows, and bring smiles to those around us. We'll elect David our first member. Who wants to join?

The Sunday School Lesson From Truth Seekers' Quarterly

LESSON 4. — January 27, 1935

PETER'S DENIAL

Mark 14:12-72

GOLDEN TEXT

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Corinthians 10:12.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Aim: Thoughtless boasting often leads to lifelong remorse.

Class Discussion: What are some of the tests of loyalty to Christ? Would you defend an absent friend who was being harshly critieized by people whom you were anxious to please? Do you criticize others for giving up to temptations which have no appeal to you?

I. Peter Denies the Word of Jesus. (Mark 14:27-31.) The great sin of Peter was unbelief. He professed a profound faith in Jesus, and yet when the Lord predicted his own fall he promptly and vehemently denied that such a thing could possibly take place. In other words, he was willing to believe all that Jesus said that was favorable to himself, but anything, even when it was solemuly foretold by the Lord, which seemed to question his future steadfastness he set aside as untrue. He had more confidence in his own strength than he had in the word of Christ.

II. Peter Denies Fellowship With Jesus. (Vv. 54, 66-71.) Disloyalty to Christ begins, as in the case of Peter, with rejection of reproof and warning, and ends with a full denial of all allegiance to Him. The one leads to the other. Unless we are willing to be corrected for our faults we will never experience the joy of perfect fellowship with the Lord. Peter's bodily fear exercised a more powerful influence over him than did his faith in the Son of God. His faltering faith led him into the further sin of blasphemy. So long as Jesus was with him personally I'eter continued true and fearless (John 18:10, 11), but so soon as he was deprived of the confidence that presence provided he quickly lost his courage and fell from his steadfast fidelity. Safety to the Christian is found only at the Savior's side

III. Peter Remembers Too Late. (V. 72.) It required but a commonplace happening to recall to Peter's mind the Lord's prediction, and to fill his heart with bitter remorse. Why had he not heeded the warning? Why had he not suffered death just as he had claimed and believed he would do when the testing time came? Peter could not answer those questions-he could only weep weakly over his failure and look forward to a lifetime of repentant regret.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Denial

-comes at crucial moments;

as words;

-of the Word is denying the Author;

-of duty to one's church is frequent; -of wrong does not free from responsibil-

Denials. Denials are always costly and must be fully atoned for by restitution. When we think of "denial" we naturally think of denying Christ. This of course is the most significant, but not the only one of importance. But in noting this type of denial we submit a few questions. Can people deny Christ today? If so, name ways in which He is denied. Is denying His Word, denying Him? Is His Word being denied today? How can a person deny Christ's Word? In considering other kinds of denials let us think about the church. The members of the church owe certain responsibilities to the church and are duty bound to perform certain tasks in the interest of their church. The church has a right to expect its members to respond to its call for help, but how often members deny any responsibility or the right of the church to expect that they will do anything! Denial of duty and responsibility is a wrong of no small proportions. Then there is the denial of wrong. To deny a wrong does in no way right the wrong. It merely adds to the seriousness of the sin. Admission of sin is a long way toward receiving forgiveness of the sin. As long as there is denial there can be no forgiveness.

Guilt. Guilt is not removed or in any way lessened by a denial or the covering up of an overt act of transgression. It is increased by these unchristian acts rather than diminished. There is only one way of getting rid of guilt and our next lesson deals with that, namely, restitution.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Ofttimes when we think we are strongest, we are tempted in some unguarded way and fall before we are aware of what happened. Peter was so sure that he would go all the way with Jesus, but at the fatal moment he denied Him, not realizing what it meant. Most of us are no stronger than was Peter and we are just as apt to make the same mistake.

As a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, neither are we any stronger than our weakest point of contact. Therefore, we must always be on our guard and not be too sure that we will always do the will of God, for temptation lurks on every corner, and we may meet it; but take heed that ye neither stumble nor fall from God's grace.-L. A. R.

INTERMEDIATES

Be Prepared to Meet Temptation

Peter was still the impetuous leader for the - of Christ can be made by actions as well twelve apostles, still sure of himself and of his allegiance to his Lord. He and John were the two chosen by Jesus to prepare the Passover (Luke 22:8). Relate the interesting manner in which they found a room where they could keep this feast. Review briefly the reason for this memorial. At the end of the feast Jesus instituted the "last supper," which we call the "Communion," symbolizing

His death so soon to take place. At its conclusion they went out, following the little path to the Garden of Gethsemane, and the conversation between Jesus and Peter ensued. Jesus knew what lay ahead of Him, and also that the natural result would be that His disciples should be in fear of their own lives and be scattered. But stoutly Peter declared that though every one of the others should leave their Master's side yet he would not. Relate the story of Peter's downfall.

How did Jesus meet temptation (vv. 32, 35, 36) ? Could He have endured the terrible suffering that lay just ahead, if He had not received strength from God? How did He advise Peter to meet temptation (v. 38)? Do you think that advice holds good for you today? Discuss in class different temptations that come to you and the ways in which to meet them. Read James' instructions regarding temptation, 1:13, 14. Then read the blessing that comes to the one who overcomes, v. 12. Paul, in Hebrews 2:17, 18; 4:15, 16, shows us that Jesus, being tempted even as we are, yet without yielding, is able to show us the way to overcome, if we will ask Him.

Peter followed Jesus "afar off"; let us keep close to His side .- M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Review. Oral review of last Sunday's lesson. Have children repeat conversation between Peter and Jesus

Presentation of Lesson. A brief description of some important events of Jesus' life leading up to His trial. Only those events in which Peter is connected should be especially stressed. Have children discuss incidents in their lives when they have said they would not do anything and the first thing they knew they were doing it. Present lesson story as follows: Jesus telling of His death and resurrection; telling how disciples will be of-fended; Peter's denial of fact; Jesus telling Peter how he will deny Him before the cock crows twice: Peter's second denial of fact: Peter following Jesus as He is led before high priest; Peter's denial of Jesus; Peter's feelings after denial. Have one child pretend to be Peter and let him tell Peter's part in story. Let another one describe Jesus' part.

Memory Verse. Ask children this question, Was Peter a true friend to Jesus at the time be denied knowing Jesus? The Bible says, "A friend loveth at all times." Repeat verse.

Notebook. Picture of Peter to be pasted or drawn in notebook. In the background have children place picture of cock. At one side put picture of Jesus. Under Peter's picture write v. 29 of lesson. Under Jesus' picture write v. 30. At bottom of page write memory verses. Have children make group story of this lesson. Copy this lesson in notebook. Have group story read. (How to write group story given in lesson 1.)—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

NEW PASTOR AT BURR OAK, INDIANA

At the recent business meeting of the church at this place a call was extended to Elder A. L. Hoskins of St. Cloud, Minn, to become the pastor of the Burr Oak church. For more than a year Bro. F. L. Austin of Chicago has been acting as supply pastor at Burr Oak, visiting the congregation twice each month, and it was largely through the advice of Bro. Austin that the congregation decided to employ a resident pastor on full time.

The new leader comes strongly recommended by those whom he has served in the past. He was for a number of years pastor of the Church of God at St. Cloud, Minn., where he has accomplished much effective work. Hereafter "The Morning Star," the interesting bulletin which has been published at St. Cloud, will be continued at Burr Oak. We pray for the success of the congregation under its new leadership.

FORTHCOMING MEETINGS AT MARATHON, IOWA

The next preaching services and Sunday school in this vicinity will be held at the home of Sr. Anna Boyanovsky near Marathon on January 20. It is expected that both Bro. A. M. Jones and J. Arthur Johnson will be present to give the sermons.

On February 3 the meetings will be conducted in the home of Arthur Carlson, which it also near Marathon, when the same able speakers are expected.

BLANCHARD IS STILL ON THE MAP

Sr. Woodward wrote me she wondered how the church at Blanchard, Mich., was progressing, for there had been no report from here in a long time.

We are busy bringing in the young folk. We have a nice Berean class, and yesterday, the first Sunday of the new year, there were 41 present at Sunday school, and more than that present at evening service. The young folk are very active and we appreciate very much the work of Bro. Smead, who I am told has visited homes that no other minister has ever entered, and succeeded in bringing them into the church.

We have started the new year with a new staff of officers and teachers in the Sunday school. Those who were at General Conference last year will remember our good friend and brother Emory Toogood, who has consented to act as superintendent of the school. We ask the prayers of all Christians that we nay continue faithful in the Master's service and that many more may be added to God's church.

Mrs. Laura Briggs.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ELECTION AT SOUTH BEND

The Sunday school at South Bend, Ind., recently held its annual business meeting at which time the following officers were chosen for the year 1935: R. C. Stilson, Superintendent; Mrs. Lewis Romine, Asst. Superintendent; Horace Pierce, Secretary-Treasurer; Mrs. William Hunt, Pianist, Albert Hunt and Elwyn Stilson will have charge of the library.

The business meeting of the church was set for Sunday, Jan. 13, 1935.

DIXON SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRESSES

The last Sunday of the year 1934 for the Dixon, Ill., Sunday school was good, 55 being present.

January 6, 1935, the first Sunday of the new year, was the best in a long time, 72 being present.

After Sunday school the election of officers for the new year was held, the following being elected: Superintendent, William Ford; Asst. Superintendent, William Eckert; Treasurer, Mrs. Eckert; Secretary, Elwyn Drew.

Mrs. Ford was elected at this time to fill the vacancy of secretary of the church held previously by Mrs. Charles Miller.

The Christmas program held Friday, Dec. 21, deserves mention at this time. The committee and young folks working together put on a program that was much enjoyed by both the children and their parents.

We pray the Lord will be with us in our Sunday school that there may be more come and study the Bible together during the coming year.

Elwyn Drew, Secretary.

THE NORTHWEST

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Prior and family of Portland spent Thanksgiving vacation at Gresham with Sr. Prior's father, Bro. A. W. Darby, and Sr. Darby.

Illness has visited practically all of our homes in recent weeks. Members of the D. H. Hathaway family are still on the sick list, while Sr. Tremaine and small son are out again after several days' illness. Sr. Minnie Kerr and Sr. M. Rogers have submitted to minor operations.

Among visitors at the Quarterly Conference, December 6-9, at Corvallis were Bro. A. W. Darby, Gresham; Sr. Minnie Rogers, Eugene, Orc.; and Bro. H. B. Hathaway, Felida, Wash.

We were shocked and deeply grieved to learn of the sudden death of Bro. Dan E. Prutzman of Vancouver, Wash. He was a member of the Pelida Church of God, a fine man and a true Christian who followed faithfully in the steps of his Master. May our heavenly Father give comfort to Sr. Prutzman and the family is our prayer.

Gladys Barber.

ANNUAL ELECTION AT BURR OAK,

Bro. Austin will continue to be with us over the third (Jan. 20) Sunday.

We are sure that Bro. Austin's labors at Burr Oak have been deeply appreciated and that they have been an inspiration to all who have heard him to press toward the mark of the high calling in Christ Jesus.

At our annual business meeting on January 4 the following officers were elected: Elders—Dewey Overmyer, Melvin J. Osborn; Deacons—Albert Overmyer, Gerald Osborn; Deaconesses—Evelyn Overmyer, Leona Zechiel; Secretary—Nettie Guge; Treasurer—Mary Hatten; Trustee—Russel Currens; Musical Director—Evelyn Overmyer; Pianist, Elizabeth Zechiel; S. S. Superintendent—Ferris Zechiel; Berean President—Nettie Guge; Ladies' Aid President—Pearl Zechiel.

Said officers were consecrated and installed Sunday, Jan. 6, by Bro. F. L. Austin.

Mrs, Nettie Guge, Secretary,

A PLEASANT AND A SAD OCCASION

On Sunday, Dec. 30, 1 went to Cleveland to fill the pulpit for Bro. M. W. Lyon, who was away visiting his home folks.

It is always a great pleasure to preach to the Clevoland brethren and sisters because of their intense desire to learn more of the truth of God's Word and he of service to their Master. They are very good listeners.

In the morning I spoke on the subject, "Looking Forward, or Behold, He Cometh"; in the evening the subject was, "War, or the Day of the Lord."

Sr. Patrick, Merle, Cccil, and Ione accompanied me. Sr. Patrick and I had intended to come home Monday and the young folks were to stay for a New Year's party with some of the young folks there.

Our plans were changed and our pleasure much marred by the death of Bro. Richard Lindstrom on Sunday afternoon. Sr. Patrick and I stayed at the hospital most of the afternoon with Sr. Lindstrom and her father and mother, Bro. and Sr. H. J. Stadden. The end come about five o'elock.

The young folks and Sr. Patrick came home Monday and I stayed for the funeral on Wednesday.

Thus death comes and we must make way for him. And in the case of Bro. Lindstrom we have another human sacrifice to Mars, the god of war.

James A. Patrick.

FROM THE PINE WOODS

Our trip and meetings in the pine woods of southern Louisiana are proving very interesting. The log church which the brethren in the Blood River district have built is well filled every night, with the most respectful and attentive listeners. The meeting at this church will close next Sunday (13th) with a baptismal service at the river in the afternoon. That night meetings are to begin at the Happy Woods Schoolhouse near Hammond and continue over the 20th.

It is a pleasure to have our family with us on this trip, and for the children to get acquainted with many of their relatives whom they had never met. It is also a great joy to the writer to have his dear old mother, who is well up in her eighties, well and active and always ready to go to church.

The change in scenery and experiences is doing us all good, and we shall soon be ready now to return to our Grand Rapids labors with more zeal than ever.

F. E. Siple.

HANNAH BAILEY GRAHAM

Hannah Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bailey, was born at Windfall, Ind., February 20, 1857, and came to Missouri with her parents at the age of seven years. She was united in marriage to P. J. Graham March 23, 1873. To this union eight children were born.

Her husband; three sons, Joshua, John, and Ernest; and only daughter. Hattie, preceded her in death. She is survived by four sons, Frank of Farmington, Mo., Joe and Fred of Fredericktown, Mo., and Claude of St. Louis; five daughters-in-law; sixteen grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren. Two half brothers also survive: Tom Bailey of Fredericktown and Allen Bailey of St. Louis.

She was baptized into the all-saving name of Jesus some forty years ago by Brc. John Foore and has lived true to her faith ever since. She fell asleep at 5 p.m., December 3 at the home of her son Joe, after a lengthy illness from infirmities incident to advancing years.

Funeral services were held at the Blush, Mo., church at 2:30 p.m. December 5, by Bro. J. H. Anderson of Michigantown, Ind., and she was laid to rest in the family cemetery nearby.

We have lost a kind and loving mother, and our church has lost a faithful member, but we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we know she is at rest, awaiting the Master's coming. Mrs. Claude Graham.

RICHARD S. LINDSTROM

The Golden Rule Church of God of Cleveland, Ohio, was saddened on Sunday, Dec. 30, by the death of one of its deacons, Richard S. Liudstrom.

Bro. Lindstrom was born in Michigan September 21, 1887, of Swedish parents. Most of his boyhood days were spent in and around Manistee. He moved to Cleveland to make his home about 1914.

In 1917 he was called to serve his country in Company A, 308th military police, but was honorably discharged before the end of the war, being incapacitated for service by an injury.

In the latter part of October, 1922, he was baptized by Bro. Joseph Prosek and joined the Church of God and remained a faithful servant of his Master through the remainder of his life.

On June 20, 1925, Bro. Lindstrom was united in marriage to Alice Stadden by Bro. L. E. Conner. To this union were born two sons. Richard, Jr., and Ralph.

During the early part of last September the injury to his heart grow worse and he was later taken to the U. S. Marine Hospital where he died.

Surviving are his wife and two sons, his father, Mr. N. W. Lindstrom of Grand Rapids, Mich., and his brother, Mr. O. W. Lindstrom of Mobile, Ala., and a host of other relatives

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

In our next issue Elder C. E. Randall, president of the Ministerial Association of the Church of God, will present an analysis of the chief points of difference between the teaching of the Church of God and the Advent Christian Church. Many have questioned us regarding this matter and Bro. Randall, who is thoroughly acquainted with both denominations, has consented to prepare a general answer.

We regret to learn that Bro. F. L. Austin, our former executive secretary and the editor for many years of this paper, has been confined to his home in Chicago by an attack of the 'flu. We pray for his speedy recovery.

Watch for unusual developments in Palestine to be presented in our next issue in the "Abreast of the Times" department.

Encouraging news reaches us from St. Louis, Mo., in a letter from Sr. Claude Graham, who writes: "Our Bible classes are progressing nicely with increasing interest." Sr. Graham ealls attention to the fact that visitors who drop in to the classes are manifesting a deepening concern in the lessons. Roy Graham, a teacher in the Sunday school, and Clyde Graham, Sr. Graham's son, are preparing a series of lectures on "The Gospel" to be given in the near future. Both of these young men contemplate enfering the ministry eventually.

Mrs. Orpha Sanford, who is conducting independent relief work among the needy of the Church of God, has moved to 5346 Main St., Downers Grove. III.

The Emphatic Diaglott, edited by Benjamin H. Wilson, containing the interlinear literal translation of the New Testament Greek together with the author's own scholarly version, may be ordered from the National Bible Institution at $2.50 a copy, prepaid, Bro. Howard Moore of Red Bluff, Calif., was a visitor with the Los Angeles congregation over Christmas. He returned to his home December 31 with his family, who had been spending some time with the Railsbacks.

The Dollar-a-Month Club is still ready to receive renewal and new memberships.

Ten cents sent to the National Berean Society, Oregon, Ill., will bring to any address a book containing 75 lessons on strictly biblical themes. This is as much material as 75 tracts would contain at a cost of 75 cents.

"We find," pens Mrs. Mary Hatten, treasurer of the Burr Oak, Ind., Sunday school, "by handing a disinterested member a quarterly he will in a short time show renewed interest. This to me certainly speaks well for the quarterlies." Anyone can obtain a copy for 17 cents. Why not try it?

A new series of sermons will be introduced at the Oregon, Ill., church next Sunday night on the purpose, value, and forms of worship of the past, present, and future. The initial sermon will take the name of the series, "Secking After God." At the Wednesday night gatherings a study of the life and teaching of Paul will occupy the attention for some weeks to come.

A reader in Ohio says he would like to have some of our writers discuss through our columns "the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet" which Jesus mentions in Matthew 24:15. Our Lord refers no doubt to Daniel's predictions found in Daniel 9:27: 11:31; and 12:11.

Continuing his studies on Ezekiel 36, 37, 38, and 39, Pastor Norman John MacLeod of the Los Angeles church will speak Sunday. Jan. 28, on "The Land That Is Brought Back From the Sword," Ezek. 38:8.

and friends. His mother and a sister preecded him in death.

We tried to give the bereaved ones words of comfort from the Scriptures of truth, showing that the time is coming when the inhabitant of that land shall not say, I am sick, and that there shall be no more death, neither sorrow and crying, neither shall there be any more pain.

We laid him to rest in Columbia Center Cemetery where he awaits the call of h s Master. James A. Patrick.

NOEL BOND SMITH

The remains of the late Noel Bond Smith, 62, of Pascoe, Wash., were brought to Corwillis, Ore., and a short funeral service we sheld at 3 o'clock this afternoon (Dec. 10) at the graveside in Crystal Lake Cemetery. Elder A. W. Darby of Gresham officiated. Interment, under the direction of the Keeuey Faneral Home, was in the family plot.

Mr. Smith was a brother of Sr. Flora Hogue of Cavallis, who, with her daughter, Sr. Dulu Tremaine, and the latter's small son Robert, went to Pasco upon learning of h's death, and brought the remains to this city. Prior to locating in Washington, Mr. Smith had lived in California for several years. He was born at Emporia, Kan., September 9, 1872. He is survived by four sisters, St. Hogue, Corvallis; Mrs. M. E. Roberts, Oakland, Calif.; Mrs. Robert Brannick, Watsorville, Calif.; and Mrs. Ed Virlen, Neosho Rapids, Kan.; and two brothers, Dwight Smith, Willington, Ohio, and George W. Smith, Oakland. His parents were members of the local Church of God.

THE RESTITUTION HERALD Published by National Bible Institution Oregon, Illinois

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdor of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heits with Him. Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

from its subversion in the reign of Zedekiah, to its restoration to the Son of God and the Son of David.

"And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."—Ezek. 21:25-27.

The first part of this prophecy was literally fulfilled. The royal crown, the sparkling diadem, these symbols of power, were removed and Israel's proud monarch was abased with the dust of his footstool. His kingdom was overturned by the Babylonians, the Medes and the Persians, the Greeks and the Romans, the Turks, Arabs, and Saracens, and will continue in ruins until He come whose right it is, and it shall be given to Him. But before it can be given to Him, after having passed through this series of subversions, it must be restored. And when thus restored and given to God's Anointed, His kingdom will be the kingdom of Israel restored. And it will be just as literal and substantial when thus restored, as it was before its subversion; for the word restore signifies to bring back to a former state, or replace in a former position.

That Jesus Christ is the rightful heir to the throne and kingdom of David, which were the throne and kingdom of Israel, will be seen, not only by a reference to all the evidence adduced in the former articles, but also by reference to His lineal descent from David His royal father, as recorded in Matthew 1 and Luke 3. All other evidences of His Messiahship will avail nothing without the additional evidence of legitimacy. The right of no prince to His Father's throne can be demonstrated without proving by the most unequivocal testimony this vital point. Matthew traces, with unerring certainty, the genealogy of Joseph, the legal father of our Savior, back to David as His royal father, and Luke traces Mary's pedigree back to the same kingly ancestor.

Joseph had two fathers, just as every married man has—one a legal, the other a natural father.

Prom David, the king of Israel, issue two lines of genealogy; one through Solomon, and the other through Nathan, his sons. These run parallel until they were united in the house of Zorobabel. Again they branch out and run down the stream of time, until they were united in the marriage of Joseph and Mary; and Jesus the Christ, being their eldest son, has all the right legally and naturally to David's throne and kingdom. This only rightful heir to David's throne and kingdom having ascended to heaven without issue, it follows as a necessary sequence that before the oath and covenant of God can be fulfilled, in placing Christ upon David's throne and kingdom, He must return from the right hand of His Father, and His throne and kingdom must be restored from their ruins. But when thus restored to Christ, His kingdom will be the kingdom of Israel restored.

Will the kingdom of Israel restored be the kingdom of God which the gospel promises Jesus Christ, or will Christ inherit two kingdoms?

Answer: As the Son of God and the Son of David, He is heir to both of their kingdoms.

Luke traces the genealogy of Christ to Adam, who was the Son of God, and monarch of the world. Hence, Christ as the Son of God has the right of heirship as well as covenant to the kingdom of God. And not only to the kingdom of Israel, but the dominion of the whole earth: for such was the original title of His great primogenitor. But I will reserve this part of the subject for later.

That the kingdom of Israel was originally the kingdom of God, and consequently will be the kingdom of God again when restored, will appear in the light of the following testimony, viz.: 1 Chronicles 17: When speaking of the kingdom of David, God says: "But I will settle him (David's Son and the Son of God, verses 11, 13) in mine house and in my kingdom for ever."

David says: "Howbeit the Lord God of Israel chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel... And of all my sons, (for the Lord hath given me many sons,) he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel."—1 Chron. 28:4, 5. According to the foregoing, the kingdom of David, of Solomon, and of God is one and the same kingdom.

The Queen of Sheba understood that the throne of Solomon and of God was identical. 2 Chronicles 9:8—"Blessed be the Lord thy God, which delighted in thee to set thee on his throne, to be king for the Lord thy God."

Again, in chapter 13:8, we read: "And now ye think to withstand the kingdom of the Lord in the hand of the sons of David."

The kingdom of Israel must belong to the great God before He can transfer a valid title thereto to His Son. 11, therefore, the kingdom of Israel was originally the kingdom of God, then when restored it will be the kingdom of God again; and when He gives this kingdom to Christ it will be Christ's kingdom. Thus, the kingdom of God, of David, of Israel, and of Christ, is one and the same kingdom.

God of our fathers, bless this our land; Ocean to ocean owneth Thy hand. Home of all nations from far and near, Give to unite us Thy faith and fear. God of our fathers, failing us never, God of our fathers, be ours forever.

IMPORTANT DIFFERENCES DEFINED

By Clyde E. Randall

FOR some time there have been certain good will overtures between some of the ministers of the Advent Christian denomination and our own. These contacts have been made with the idea of creating more of a fraternal relationship between the two groups, which have much in common, both in purpose and teaching. Such fraternity is commendable and exhibits the spirit of Christian fellowship and good will. It should be possible to create a fraternal relationship between these two Conditionalist groups that would be beneficial to both, but as one of our leaders has stated, "To go beyond this, would not only be inexpedient but dangerous."

Fears have been evidenced on the part of some that should more fraternal relationship be developed between the Advent Christian people and ourselves there will follow a clamor for union which might lead to or result in dissolution of the Church of God. These apprehensions are not being minimized or overlooked, but are being considered very carefully. Reports from certain sections indicate that such efforts are being made at the present time and it is the purpose of this article to allay any fears that there is any concerted desire for destroying the independence of the Church of God. The maintenance and development of the Church of God is of far greater importance than the development of a fraternizing spirit. Having explored the attitude and sentiment of our ministers at the last General Conference and through correspondence I find there is no desire for union with any group and it would be a betraval of confidence imposed in them if the leaders of the General Conference, Ministerial Association, or State Conferences led their people into a relationship that would resolve itself into what the membership are opposed to, that is, union.

We have been requested, for the benefit of those who are

To prevent any misunderstanding that might arise in the minds of some regarding the outcome of the increasing friendliness which is now so happily developing between the Advent Christian Church and the Church of God, Brother Clyde E. Randall, President of the Ministerial Association of the Church of God, and who is thoroughly familiar with the teaching and practice of both bodies, presents the following thoughtful analysis.

not familiar with the earlier history of the Church of God, to set forth the reasons why our church fathers were forced to organize an independent body and become a separate people. We are a separate people because of doctrinal differences, and the same doctrines that our fathers held and which forced them to become a separate people are the very same doctrines which we hold today and which keep us apart now as they compelled them to separate then. These doctrines are cardinal, and zeal or the trend for union among religious groups must not influence us in any way to withdraw from active declaration of these distinctive doctrines. These teachings are more vital than union and will never be sacrificed for the sake of opportunity for fellowship. The doctrines which our fathers held and which caused their ostracism and which we stand for today are principally the following: 1. The church name. 2. The kingdom of God, millennial reign of Christ, and the regathering of Israel. 3. Futuristic interpretation of prophecy. A brief treatment of these doctrines is given.

ΤĒ

We take the name Church of God because we can find no other Bible name for the church, and we strive to speak where the Bible speaks and to be silent where the Bible is silent. The Minnesota Church of God Conference had its beginning because such workers as Elders C. D. W. Scott and William Parsons were convinced that the Church of God was the Bible name, and having courage to stand by their convictions began organizing churches by that name and were thereby forced out of the Advent Christian denomination in that state. For years this was the only main doctrinal distinction, but we are still carrying the banner with the Father's name on it (Please turn to Back Page)

Abreast of the Times

Jews Seek Nation of Their Own

"I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king over them all."—Ezekiel 37:22.

CHERBOURG, France, Jan. 17.—Vladimir Jabotinsky, president of the World Union of Zionist Revision, will embark today for the United States, where he will seek support among the Jews for his world petition to the British mandatory government of Palestine to encourage the more rapid immigration of Jews to the homeland. It is the purpose of Jabotinsky and those whom he represents to bring about the establishment of a Jewish national State, as the Revisionists claim that immigration is the only hope for the Jewish people who are now being persecuted in the countries of Central Europe.

To make such a general exodus of Jews from Central Europe possible and their establishment in Palestine practicable, Jabotinsky declares, a change in the policy of the mandatory government must be effected. Immigration regulations must be liberalized and the economic problems of the Jews more definitely considered and solved.

"A new deal for Palestine is necessary, because the whole face of Zionism has radically changed. It is still a national enterprise backed by much idealism," the Revisionist president asserted, "but it has now the added support of several million Jews who must personally go to Palestine or perish."

No other haven remains where the persecuted Jews can flee from their enemies and oppressors save the land promised to their fathers by the God of Israel. According to Jabotinsky only 22 per cent of the population of Palestine now are Jews, but they account for 60 per cent of the Government's taxation revenue, which indicates that the larger part of the taxable property is already in their hands, and that it is Jewish capital and enterprise that has brought this little country to an economic state of marvelous prosperity.

So far 600,000 signatures have been secured for the petition, which is to be addressed not only to Great Britain as the mandatory power in Palestine, but to the Governments of those countries where Jewish distress has become a grave problem for the State itself. The appeal to be made to the Governments will suggest that on their own behalf, as well as in the interest of the Jewish people, they do all they can to aid in the immigration and establishment of the Jews as an independent nation in the Holy Land.

The most significant event of all time, from a prophetical standpoint, is now taking place: the chosen people of Jehovah, in remarkable harmony with the predictions made concerning them, are being forced out of "all the nations, whither the Lord (their) God hath scattered (them)."

For He had promised long before they were a nation, "If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will be fetch thee: and the Lord thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers."—Deut. 30:1-6.

Japan "Sees Red"

"There went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth."—Revelation 6:4.

Токто, Jan. 14.—The military leaders of Japan are convinced that Soviet Russia is now engaged in mobilizing a vast force of men in Siberia and assembling great stores of war materials at various strategic points in the southeastern part of that country in readiness for an invasion of Manchukuo before the close of the present year. Lieut. Gen. Toshizo Okudaira, director of the Meirinkai, an influential patriotic body, said recently that "Japan's relations with the United States, Great Britain, and Holland over disarmament and trade questions have placed her in the position of a country isolated and persecuted. This country, thus, is in no position to wage war on Soviet Russia and has no intention of doing so," he continued. "Russia has a wonderful spy network and certainly knows what the situation in Japan is and that Japanese troops in Manchukuo are retained there to keep peace within that territory and not to fight Russia."

Gen. Okudaira sees in the Russian military program not only a menace to the peace of his own country, but also a definite determination on the part of the Soviet Government to conquer the whole world for Communism.

In the opinion of Licut. Gen. Toyoki Takata, retired, war with Russia is most likely in 1935 or 1936.

Developments in the Far East will be watched with the keenest attention by the student of Ezekiel, Daniel, Joel, and Revelation.

The Herald of Messiah's Reign,

By J. M. Stephenson

THE kingdom is local and universal. In the second and 1 seventh chapters of Daniel, we find the symbolic history of five consecutive and universal kingdoms upon the face of the whole earth, viz., Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and the kingdom of God. While four of these kingdoms, as universal monarchies, were successive, vet as local kingdoms they were contemporaneous. And as such they will exist contemporaneously again to be broken to pieces together by the stone cut from the mountain without hands (Dan. 2:34, 35). These four kingdoms each existed in two conditions, or occupied a twofold position in the earth: 1, as a local, and, 2, as a universal kingdom.

The symbol of the stone, exhumed from the mountain of the fourth kingdom of earth, and the mountain into which the stone is magnified after having broken in pieces the component parts of the image, represent these two conditions. See Daniel 2:34, 35. The stone existed as a symbol, contemporaneously with the image as a symbol of the four kingdoms of earth. It breaks the image in pieces; in other words, it demolishes the mountain from which it was taken, and then becomes a great mountain and fills the whole earth. Thus as a mountain it supplants its predecessor; and as a symbol of a universal kingdom, it supplants the symbols of all the kingdoms of the earth. Hence, the image in all its parts, as a symbol of all the kingdoms of the prophetic kosmos, is represented as being ground to powder, and driven as chaff with the wind of heaven, before the rolling car of the triumphant stone. Having explained the four grand divisions of this stupendous image, as the pictorial representatives of four great kingdoms of earth, and the infusion of a fifth element prefiguring the last phase of the fourth kingdom, Daniel next introduces the fifth kingdom, symbolized by the stone; and describes minutely its relative position among the kingdoms of the world. Also, its transition from a local to a universal kingdom; verse 44: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."

Note, 1. The stone represents the kingdom of God. 2. This kingdom will be set up in the days of these kings.

3. It exists as a kingdom contemporaneously with the kingdoms of earth. It is set up or organized into a kingdom before it breaks in pieces, or subdues, one of the surrounding kingdoms of the world. It occupies one locality, while they occupy other localities. Hence, it must be, as all its predecessors have been, a local kingdom before it becomes a universal kingdom.

4. Like the four great kingdoms which preceded this kingdom in its transition from a local to a universal kingdom, it breaks in pieces and consumes all interposing king> doms, and occupies their territorial domain. But unlike its predecessors, it will not be left to other people, but those who take it will possess it for-

> Where now are the proud kingdoms of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome? Where Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Darius, Alexander the Great, and Julius Cæsar, with all their splendid crowns and costly diadems, with all their magnificent, yet diabolical rule? Their kingdoms have long since passed away, and they are now moldering in the dust. But the kingdom of God shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. Having consumed all the kingdoms of the world, it will be a universal kingdom. Thus, the kingdom of God will exist in a twofold condition: I, as a local; 2, as a universal kingdom. Or, more strictly speaking, the kingdom local and the dominion universal. This discrimination between the kingdom proper and its dominion seems to be referred to by Daniel and Gabriel in their sublime description of the kingdom of God, in Daniel 7:13, 14, 27-"I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed. . . . And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High." (Please turn to Page Nine)

A Prayer of Gratitude

Dear Lord, I do not spend my time In futile whimpering, For in my soul the glad bells chime For every little thing. Instead of being sorrowful For what can never be, For all that makes life beautiful I raise my thanks to Thee.

Soon Spring will dance across the land In green and yellow dress, And there will lie on every band A cause for thankfulness. I will forget the Winter days When skies are clear and blue. The memory of cloudy ways Will vanish from my view.

Dear Lord, put gladness in my heart, For all complaints are vain, I would not want to draw apart From Life's sunshine and rain. I'll take the weather as it drifts Across my days, and strife Or happiness, accept Thy gifts, Glad for the boon of life.

--Anne Campbell.

God's Plan Advances

IT SEEMS impossible for men to learn and to profit by the lessons taught by experience! The posterity of Adam walked not in the safe and peaceful ways of their God, but followed in the sin-stained footsteps of their human father. Sin increased constantly with the multiplication of the race. Disobedience marked every act that men performed. Iniquity soon became so prevalent that the entire earth was filled with bitterness and strife.

"And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth; both man, and beast, and the creeping thing, and the fowls of the air; for it repenteth me that I have made them. But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord."—Gen. 6:5-8.

As was the case in the pronouncement of Adam's doom, God revealed to Noah also the method He was ever to employ for the eradication of sin. Adam was to return to the ground from whence he came, and the sinful inhabitants of the earth in Noah's day were to be destroyed. Destruction, not preservation in misery, was to be the fate of the ungodly of all ages.

The reason why Noah found favor with the Lord is given in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, where he is named among that illustrious company who lived by faith in God. Faith carried Noah and those with him safely through the raging waters that drowned the sinful people of the earth. Faith saved him! But it was a faith that was shown in works of obedience. Faith in God that results in action is the faith that saves! It always brings deliverance, for the Lord works with His people who believe in Him sufficiently to blend their course of service into His own. A small group, out of all the myriads of earth, was saved by faith from the waters of the flood. They believed God, and consequently obeyed Him in building and entering the ark.

ABRAHAM PROVES HIS FAITH

The next great development in the progress of God's plans to bring mankind again into close relation to Himself took place in the days of Abraham, to whom Jehovah made a promise that reaches even to you and me.

"And the angel of the Lord called unto Abraham out of heaven the second time, and said, By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son: that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will mul-

This is the second article in a series of three in which the Editor points out the orderly development of the eternal purposes of God. . In the present number Abrahamic promises are seen to be full of meaning to the Christian as well as to the people of Israel.

tiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice."—Genesis 22.

Here again we see the reward of faith, and also the nature of true and acceptable faith before God. "Because thou hast done this thing . . . because thou hast obeyed my voice!" Obedience, the fruitage of confidence in God's integrity, was the evidence of faith which God demanded of Abraham, and the evidence which He still demands of those who profess to believe in Him.

Increased value is attached to this passage in that it points to the coming of a Redeemer who was to be of the Isaac type. It further suggests the sacrifice by which salvation should be obtained through Him.

THE FIRST PROMISE TO ABRAHAM

Before leaving the Abrahamic feature of our study, upon which Paul places so much stress in all his writings, wo must return to consider briefly the first promise God made to him. As we do so we also recall the Apostle's remarkable assertion regarding the Christian's connection with that promise." "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3:29. It is apparent that whatever the nature of the promise may have been, the disciple of Christ is vitally concerned in its fulfillment, for he is included in it.

We are now ready to sean that original promise with appreciative understanding of its bearing on our own eternal destiny through Christ.

"Now the Lord had said unto Abram, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will shew thee: and I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."—Gen. 12:1-3.

The particular blessing of the Almighty is to fall upon the people of the nation that blesses Abraham and his seed! And who are they? From a racial and national standpoint they are represented today in the Jews!

And a curse is to be poured out upon the man or the nation who curses Abraham or his seed. And who is that seed? Again the answer comes, the Jews!

God speaks very emphatically on this matter elsewhere, for instance: "Thus saith the Lord of hosts; After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations which spoiled you: for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye.

For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, and they shall be a spoil to their servants: and ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me."—Zech. 2:8, 9.

The literal manner in which this result of Jewish persecution has been accomplished in the past is clearly revealed in the history of Russia and of other nations who have directed bitter pogroms against the Jews. The ruling classes have been made the "servants" of those whom they governed.

Jesus pointed out in the strongest terms the danger that would follow the persecution of the Jews, declaring that all nations who have done this should suffer for their action. In the great picture of national judgment presented in Matthew, the determining factor in that judgment will be the attitude of the nations concerned toward God's people, the Jews.

"When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats."—Matt. 25:31, 32. He then announces the basis upon which that division shall be made—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren" (the Jews) "ye have done it unto me."—Matt. 25:40.

Let men and nations, then, be warned in time that God's righteous indignation will be poured out without measure upon all who misuse and persecute the people which, in spite of their sin, is still beloved of Jehovah for their fathers' sake and for the sake of His own most holy name (Ezek. 36:22).

Time hastens on!

What I Believe and Why I Believe It

By A. Nichols

I THINK it is very important to know what we believe and why we believe it. I believe that God is the great architect of the universe. I believe He had the whole plan of creation and salvation in His mind before He created anything. I believe He created all things both in heaven and earth. I will try to give a reason why I believe it.

We read, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."—Gen. 1:1. Isaiah says, "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else."—Isa. 45:18. Isaiah also says. "Mine hand also hath laid the foundation of the earth, and my right hand hath spanned the heavens: when I call unto them, they stand up together."—Isa. 48:13.

David said, "Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands."—Psalm 102:25.

Paul says, "God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands."—Acts 17:24.

Isaiah also says, "Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure."—Isa. 46:9, 10. "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen: that ye may know and believe me, and understand that I am he: before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me."—Isa. 43:10.

Now I think this sufficient proof that God created all things. I believe that Christ was in the mind of God before the foundation of the world.

Paul says, "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began, but is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."—2 Tim. 1:9, 10. "In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began; but hath in due times manifested his word through preaching, which is committed unto me according to the commandment of God our Saviour."—Titus 1:2. 3.

Paul also says, "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love; having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will. . . . Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him."-Eph. 1:4, 5, 9, 10, "And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, according to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord."-Eph. 3:9-11.

The Coming Kingdom: When and Where Is It?

By Mrs. H. H. Kent

"And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying. The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever."—Revelation 11:15.

THERE are many different views concerning the kingdom of heaven. In the face of present conditions some people are still putting it a long way off in the future. The Scripture is our only safe guide.

When Christ was here on earth, as He was one day teaching in the synagogue of Nazareth, it is said of Him (Luke 4:18, 19) that He opened the Book and read, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." This is recorded in Isaiah 61:1, 2. All that was prophesied of Him was faithfully and lovingly carried out by our Lord at His first coming. However, He did not read all of what Isaiah had prophesied of Him, for He stopped in the middle of the second verse. He did this because the time had not yet come when He should "proclaim . . . the day of vengeance," as the rest of the second verse reads. This "day of vengeance" was to be proclaimed at the end of the Gospel Age, but Isaiah did not know then, so could not distinguish.

In Isaiah 63:4, we find that the "day of vengeance" mentioned above is connected with the coming of the "year of my redeemed." In Revelation 14:3, Christ is seen by John with the redeemed standing on Mount Zion, where it may be that the saints are taken for a short period, during the time of the world's greatest tribulation, while vengeance is proclaimed. This may be the "holy hill" that David saw when he gave the requirements of those who are to live in that "holy hill." Mount Zion is near Jerusalem, which will be the seat of the world's government during the Kingdom Age.

In Jeremiah 25:31, we learn more of this controversy with the nations, and we are told that "he will give them that are wicked to the sword." This sounds like war.

Hosea 4:1, 2 (R. V.) tells the reason for this "controversy with the inhabitants of the land." It is because "there is no truth, nor goodness, nor knowledge of God in the land. There is nought but swearing, and breaking faith, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery." Comparing the above conditions which the old prophets saw thousands of years ago, we are assured they agree with what New Testament writers tell of moral conditions relating to our present evil times, which precede the establishment of the kingdom, and upon which the vengeance of God is about to fall. For actual facts show us that evil seems to be getting worse every year.

As we read such scriptures as 2 Timothy 3:1-5, it leaves little reason for doubt that the time has now come that an entirely new order may soon be expected upon earth. Truly the Scriptures prove conclusively that "the day of vengeance" is about on us, and that it will include all nations and "this controversy with the inhabitants of the land" will take place "when the year of my redeemed is come," as the old Prophet tells us.

What could the last clause mean but that the Lord's people are to be redeemed at about the same time that the nations are gathering together for battle—for their own destruction? Does it not seem as if the beacon lights of prophecy are leading us up to that time? It will be the greatest of all world events, when the hope of the Christians of all ages will be realized—when the coming of Christ from heaven to set up His throne and kingdom on earth is nigh—and when the saints will reign with Him.

Isaiah tells us that "the government shall be upon his shoulder" and he calls Him the "Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9:6). Luke tells us He is to sit on David's throne and reign forever (Luke 1:32). David's throne was on this earth. If it were not for this glorious hope, ever looming up before us, we could expect nothing but sorrow, suffering, and death from our present outlook. But, praise God, this long night of darkness is about ended, the light is becoming clearer, and we know we are nearing the end of this age. The air seems full of expectancy, for we can see beyond this present storm to a time when there will be a perfect remedy for earth's troubles.

Of course this does not mean that there will suddenly come a state of utopianism for the nations that are left (Zech. 14:16). The Christians, hope will be realized at Christ's return. They will become immortal. Revelation 22:12 says, "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." "The Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him."-Isa. 40:10. Yes, it looks as if there will be plenty of reconstruction work to be done in the coming kingdom, and God will have a recovery plan that will bring blessing to all the obedient. This work, we are told above, lies before Him. The saints are to be associated with Christ on the earth (Rev. 5:10; 11:15). With their perfect bodies and perfect minds which Scripture teaches that the saints will receive at Christ's return, they will, with the help of Christ, be able to solve problems that human minds have failed to solve. It would take a divine hand to correct the complexities and perplexities of our present order, but Zechariah 14:16 and the 37th Psalm tell us that the nations which are left will become meek.

As we read Daniel 2:35 and 44, it gives us the condition of the last stage of earthly governments, and what becomes of them. The old foundation is very unstable when it comes to the clay. It soon becomes chaff when it has gotten into this state, for there is nothing of value left in it for future use, for the coming universal kingdom will be built upon an entirely new foundation, that of right-eousness and justice. Psalm 37:10 says, "Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be:... but the meek shall inherit the earth" (not the heavens). The overcomer associated with Christ will rule the nations with a rod of iron (Rev. 2:26, 27). "The kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High."—Dan. 7:27. "And every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him."—Rev. 1:7.

The Ark of Safety

By Lyman Booth

WHEN I stand by the ocean's shore and look out upon the blue waters and watch the ships with their white wings spread to eatch the wind which drives one to the north and the other to the south, I ask myself the question, How can it be that the same wind drives the vessels in opposite directions? One is moving with the wind, the other striving against it and making slow progress. I look again at the sails and I discover they are the same in shape but are spread differently. Now I see it is not so much the wind as it is the tack of the sail that drives them in their course. Then I say how much like a ship are we on life's stormy ocean. The same sunshine and showers, the same temptations and vexing trials are common to all. One is moving through many difficulties and perils toward the port of safety; the other is riding the waves leisurely without any exertion to a destiny that may prove destructive.

Again I say how like a ship is the Ark of Safety sailing over life's troubled ocean with its list of happy passengers bound for the haven of eternal rest, where the inhabitants never grow weary nor complain of sickness. All on board have nothing to fear from wind or wave, for Jesus is both captain and pilot who will guide the vessel into port. He has the power to still the tempest and to lull the waves to rest. Though the stars may refuse to shine and the moon to lend its silvery rays there is one whose gentle command can hush the hurricane's loud roar. Though raging storms gather round and disaster seems near, still there is one who can rescue and who will never forsake. Though clouds of sorrow cast their shadows over the waters and black darkness obscure the way, still I fancy I can hear a cheering voice saying, "Heed not the shadows and darkness; be not afraid; My arms are around you; I will guide you safely into the harbor." Beyond the heaving billows is the land of rest; beyond the darkness and the gloom is a home in glory.

A story is related of a ship that sailed from the New York harbor bound for England. The voyage was pleasant most of the way. As it drew near its destined harbor a low, dense fog settled which hid the land from view. Rather than east anchor and wait for the mist to clear away the captain climbed the mast, up above the mist where he could see the lighthouse. From his position he shouted his orders to his men below and the ship was guided safely into the harbor.

Thus it is with the voyagers whose destiny is the kingdom of God. The captain has climbed the heavenly mast, up above the mist, out of sight of all on board. He is standing in heavenly light to direct our course, and He sees the end of the voyage. In a clear and cheerful tone He is saying, "Never fear, but listen to My orders and obey." Thus we sail along; though unseeing, still unfearing we listen to our pilot as He says, "Trust in Me and I will land you safely on the ever green shore, where the storms are o'er, and where sickness, sorrow, tears, and death cannot enter and where an abundant entrance into My joy and rest awaits you."

"For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."-2 Peter 1:11. This language seems to have been borrowed from the account of a ship bringing its passengers to port on a pleasant day, its sails all white and whole, its flags majestically waving in the breeze. while loved ones are waiting on shore for the arrival of friends from over the main. How pleasant, after a long absence, to meet with those on shore who are well acquainted with the coast and who know the best landing place. We have such a friend on shore. He has passed over the waters, and through the dark valley of death, and is Lord of the sea. He will stand on the dock of eternal deliverance, clad in priestly vestments, till the feeblest in all the tribes shall have been landed, and escorted to the house of many mansions. How pleasant to contemplate such a happy ending of a stormy voyage.

Who will picture the condition of the careless professor—the faithless and fruitless idler? Though he may reach shore with his life it may be midnight, surrounded by tempest, full of bitter regrets and tormenting fears. Yet with broken ropes and tattered sails he may gain the port, "for the Lord is good: for his mercy endureth for ever." But who will describe the condition of the un-godly, driven out to sea, in all their misery and wickedness, not even permitted to enter quarantine, but obliged to drift, disabled and dismantled, amidst the darkness and gloom? Why not engage passage in the Ark of Safety? There are room and accommodations for all. The captain has generously paid the fare. All that is required to secure passage is a receipt of obedience to the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation." Remember that the same law that will save and reward a good man may condemn and punish a criminal. Therefore flee for refuge to the Ark, and lay hold on the hope set before us, which is an "anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast."

May I add, Faith believes the truth of the Word, hope waits for the fulfilling of it. Hope should keep us buoyant, and firm—immovable. All men live by hope, even though it is fixed upon the uncertain and changing things of the world. But the hope of those who have not fixed their hearts upon the promises of God tries to cling to the fleeting things of earth; while our hope is placed within the veil and lays hold on the Rock of Ages that towers far above the flying vapors.

Let us then be strong, for our future is not a mere supposition, nor an empty dream, nor a fancy of our own, nor an idle wish, but it is made and certified by Him who is the almighty and unchangeable God. It is built upon His Word. That hope is certain; therefore, let us live contentedly in it and be happy.

If I am even with my enemy, the debt is paid; but if I forgive it, I oblige him forever.—William Penn.

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN HOME?

By Harry A. Sheets

WE believe that we should think of a spiritual home rather than of a Christian home. It is more inclusive. We would say that a spiritual home is one in which each member has accepted Christ, has been baptized, and is living the new life, and is worshiping God daily. Daily worship and prayer are just as essential to the development of the spiritual life as are repentance and baptism.

In the spiritual home there will be three rules practiced. These in the personal are: (I) I will say nothing that I would not like to be saying when Jesus comes; (2) I will go to no place where I would not like to be found when Jesus comes; (3) I will do nothing that I would not like to be doing when Jesus comes. However, spiritual living is not a "don't," but a "do." A spiritual individual will serve in the spirit. As Paul said: "With my mind, I myself serve the law of God." Questionable stories and jokes are not heard in the spiritual home. All conversation will be honorable and uplifting. God's name will be spoken with utmost reverence—it will not be taken in vain. Christ's sacrifice will be appreciated and His commands studied and followed. The Golden Rule will be in evidence.

FAITH

A FEW years ago at a seaside resort, there was an incident which illustrates the value of faith and confidence... A man and his two youngsters, a hoy of six or seven and a girl of nine, were swimming together in the surf. They were having a gorgeous time, and went out farther than they had intended.

All at once the father realized that the children were both quite tired. Rounding up his little family, he started for the shore. But he had not gone far when he saw that the children could never make it on their own strength, and that he was too exhausted to swim the distance to land with a double burden. He quickly decided that the best thing to do was to take the younger child, get help, and return for the little girl. Swimming up close to her, he called out that he was taking her brother in and that he would come back for her presently.

"Remember, Jean," he finished, "that you can float on your back all day and be perfectly safe. Don't be fright-ened if it takes Daddy a long time. He will surely come back for you."

He barely got in with the boy, and the search began for little Jean. There were a hundred volunteers as soon as the word got out, and a dozen boats were launched in less than ten minutes after the father had told his story. But the child was only a tiny speck of humanity out there on the vast expanse of the ocean. It was almost dark when they found her after more than three hours of desperate search. Jean was floating quietly on her back; she was very tired, but not at all frightened.

"No, I wasn't scared," she exclaimed gravely when they lifted her tenderly into a boat. "You see, Daddy told me I would be all right if I kept on floating, and Daddy always tells the truth."

The little girl's father may have failed her and almost did, as he was but a mortal man and not always capable of doing that which he may have promised.

But there is a God and Father in heaven whose promise is sure and unfailing, and will never leave you in the sea of judgment, if you will just trust Him and His Son by faith.—Sunlight for the Young; selected by H. W. Patterson.

GOD WATCHES OVER YOU

THERE were three children in the home, one of whom was very much younger than the others. A terrific storm came up and the two older ones were greatly frightened and cried very hard. The little fellow paid no attention to the storm and finally said to them: "Oh, stop your bawlin'! Don't you s'pose God knows His business?"

The small boy realized that God can take care of you just as well in a storm as when the sun shines. He is with you in the dark as well as in the light. Trust Him.

JEALOUS FOR THE HONOR OF GOD

FROM David's own experiences of life he saw the necessity of praying the following prayer. "Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord God of hosts, be ashamed for my sake: let not those that seek thee be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel."—Psalm 69:6. How could one be more jealous for the honor of God, or show greater interest for His people, than is shown in this prayer? "Let not thy people, O God, be ashamed on account of me. Let not those that seek Thee be brought to dishonor through me."

In this there is a great lesson for thoughtful consideration for every one that names the name of Christ. Our own welfare is not only to be considered, but all others who are followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. An inconsistent Christian life not only weakens the one living it, but brings shame to others. All we do or say must be jealously guarded.

Every Christian not only represents himself alone to the world, but the cause of Christianity in general. What he does either wins for God or repels from His service. Our example must always be positive. It is either good or it is bad. The cause of Christianity is always judged by its professed followers, and thus our words and deeds are far-reaching. Paul emphasizes that thought where he says, "Therefore seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not; but have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God."-2 Cor. 4:1, 2. Again: "Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." No Christian can lead a double life, whether he be minister or layman, without sooner or later bringing great reproach on the cause of God in the earth. Your sin will find you out, guard it as you may, and then your usefulness, if not destroyed, is badly crippled. Whenever a Christian is involved in any questionable transaction it often brings discredit, and too many times, discouragement, to the onlooker.

We cannot be too guarded of our conduct in these days of the multiplicity of the scandalmongers. Christians, watch your influence. Remember that one's life reaches beyond his immediate self, and for good or bad affects the very cause of God. You remember in our text how different the thoughts of the Psalmist! He kept in mind the divine interests of humanity, and prayed so to live that he might not bring any reproach upon the name of God.

Those who make no profession of Christianity may do many things that the Christian cannot do, and yet be considered a perfect citizen. We have high regard for American citizenship, but it is not to be compared with heavenly citizenship. Who would think, even of those who make no profession of the Christian life, of a heavenly citizen engaging in the common language of the day, and defiling his body with any of the defiling practices of the present day? The Christian cannot do any of these things. We must live above true grounds of reproach. May this prayer of David (our beginning text) be in the heart of every Christian.

the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you, who by him do believe in God, that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God. Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever."

Now I think this is sufficient to prove the great wisdom and foreknowledge of God.

THE HERALD OF MESSIAH'S REIGN

In reference to the foregoing scriptures, please observe the following ordinal points, viz.:

- 1. The time when the kingdom of God shall be set up, namely, when "one like the Son of man comes with the clouds of heaven."
- 2. In regard to the locality of this kingdom, it is to fill the whole earth—the dominion under the whole heaven—to be located in the same territory previously occupied by the four successive kingdoms of earth.
- 3. In regard to the order, it is first a local, and secondly a universal kingdom; or in other words, first a kingdom, and secondly a dominion. These points are clearly demonstrated by the foregoing scriptures.

At this point of the investigation, permit me first to illustrate the foregoing position, and secondly to avail myself of the evidences adduced previously relative to the nature of the kingdom promised to Jesus Christ and the saints. Babylon existed as a local kingdom more than seventeen centuries before it became a universal kingdom. Christ's kingdom will exist as a local kingdom at least forty years before it extends its dominion beyond the boundaries of the land promised to Abraham. For proof please read carefully the following texts of Scripture. Ezek. 20:33-38; [sa. 11:11-16. Compare Micah 7:14, 15; Num. 14:33, 34.

To illustrate the difference between a kingdom proper and its dominion, take Great Britain as an example. The kingdom proper of Great Britain occupies a small sea-girt island, while the sun never sets upon its dominion. So with the kingdom of God; while it, as the kingdom proper, will only occupy the territory between the two rivers and the two seas, the territory promised Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Christ, its dominion will girdle, with a belt of glory, the whole earth. Let the stone, according to the divine application of it, represent the kingdom of Israel restored, which originally occupied only the land of Canaan; and let the dominion extend from that central point over the subjects of earth's kings and potentates, who will melt before the victorious march of Messiah's kingdom like mist before the rising splendor of the sun, and all is plain and harmonious.

In the light of the foregoing view, we can easily understand the application of the following parables. Matthew 13:31-33-" Another parable put he forth unto them, saying. The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." If the kingdom is like this parable, then this parable is like the kingdom. Let, therefore, the field represent the land of Canaan, covenanted to Abraham and to Christ. Let the grain of mustard seed be analogous to the stone, and represent the kingdom of Israel to be located in the Promised Land, thus fulfilling the promises covenanted to Abraham and David concerning the land and the kingdom. Let the full-grown tree be analogous to the mountain, and represent the dominion of Judah's king which shall fill the whole earth.

"Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." The leaven controls the measures of meal and assimilates them to itself. Let the leaven represent the kingdom of God, and the three measures of meal the left of all nations (Zech. 14:16-21). Rev. 20:3; 21:24; 22:2. Let the conversion of the three measures of meal by the leaven represent the world's conversion through the instrumentality of the kingdom, as a great missionary society planted in the garden of the world, that great central position between the rivers and seas, with Jerusalem for its capital, which is destined to be the metropolitan city of the world, whence laws shall be fulminated for the world's control and the world's conversion (Isa. 2:1-5; Micah 4:1-4).

Thus nation after nation shall be converted and kingdom after kingdom subdued, until Messiah's kingdom shall fill the world; until all nations shall assimilate to the kingdom of God as the great center of attraction, and revolve around it as the planets around the sun. When, instead of the sighs and groans of the oppressed, the suffering and the poor—the songs of redeemed millions shall swell and fill our world. Then shall roll through heaven's lofty dome, while far-off earth shall catch the symphonious sound, and reverberate back the sweetest music that ever smote on mortal ears, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever."-Rev. 11 15. While louder than all the thunders of heaven combined, shall respond the second blast of the seventh trumpet, not now as the loud peal of thunder which portends the coming storm, upon whose knit brow shall play the lurid lightnings of Jehovah's wrath—the last great storm of war whose thundering cannon and flashing artillery and leaden hail shall roll the car of destruction o'er Armageddon's plains, but the whiterobed messenger of peace, with his silver-tongued trumpet. sounding through earth and air, the world's great Jubilee; when, with the girdle of peace, the world's Messiah and Redeemer shall unite the whole family of man in one common and universal brotherhood, then will all the ends of the earth have remembered and returned to the Lord, and all the kindred of the nations will serve Him. Then shall the will of God be done in earth as it is done in heaven, and the whole earth flash back to heaven the glory of the great God, as her broad, transparent waters reflect back the gems of His starry diadem.

With the sweet poet of Israel, I will close this thrillingly interesting and sublime theme; "Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations. He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass; as showers that water the earth. In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust. The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him. For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper. He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy. He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence: and precious shall their blood be in his sight. And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba: prayer also shall be made for him continually; and daily shall be be praised. There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon: and they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth. His name shall endure for ever; his name shall be continued as long as the sun; and men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed. Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things. And blessed be his glorious name for ever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and Amen."

The Father's Will

"And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."—John 6:35.

Jesus said, in John 6:38, 40, "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.... And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day."

2 Corinthians 3:12: "Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech."

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16:16.

"But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."—John 1:12.

Galatians 3:27, 29: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.... And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

"For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. 6:8.

Galatians 5:1: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the voke of bondage."

Jesus said, John 3:3, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Be born of what? Born of God, or the Spirit. For in John 4:24 Jesus tells us that God is a Spirit. "God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

Jesus said also, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3:5. 1 John 5:18: "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not."

Hence, this goes to show that when we are baptized (or at the water birth) we are begotten of God, and by obeying 1 Peter 1:5-9 we "are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time. Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations: that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ: whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory: receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls."

Then we are born of the Spirit at the first resurrection, and are ready to enter the kingdom. 2 Corinthians 3:17: "Now the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." "Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."—Romans 8:21.

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." — Rev. 21:4. — Norman Fyfe, Lockwood, Missouri.

To Arms! To Arms! Ye Brave!

A Marseillaise and a Hymn of Hate are needed for the church today. A battle cry and a battle song are needed as never before.

The church is stagnating. Rather, the church has stagnated, and it now is moving backwards. It has swept to the acme of its influence, and its degeneracy is an established fact.

The cause for this is obvious. The church has come to teach that nothing is important except what one believes within himself.

The church has become a lodge, a club, a social order. But, unlike other lodges, other clubs, other social orders, it has no set cause to espouse and no definite aim in view.

The doctrines upon which it was built have been forgotten.

Young people's societies of almost every denomination in Christendom have become forums for the discussion of the Oxford Movement, unemployment, and the liquor question. How to obtain peace by human treaties, how to live a neighborly existence, how to conduct oneself in relation to dancing, eard playing, and the like—these are the problems which are the bone and stay of young people's meetings.

That God set down fundamental principles for men to know and teach is ignored. So the church retrogresses, and retrogresses rapidly. It stands for nothing more than a political society; it has lost its religion and become an empty shell, a mockery and a delusion.

The church must adopt and build upon a foundation of solid fact. It must return to the doctrines for which the apostles gave their lives. The better society is not enough. Dogmatic teaching must come back. The Bible, and not the philosophy of moralists, must become its sole support. Boots and saddles must be sounded for the defense of Christian Christianity.

PETER HAS MORE LESSONS TO LEARN

L AST week we followed Peter through some of the saddest times of his life. It was just before Jesus was taken by the soldiers to be placed on the cruel cross. The Lord knew what lay ahead of Him. He had just been describing to His disciples some of the events that would soon take place.

Peter couldn't believe that all these terrible things would happen to his Master. He said, "Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee." But Jesus knew that if He was to be the Savior of the world, He must go through all of the pain and suffering, even death, that was soon to come upon Him.

The disciples knew that Jesus had been chosen by His Father to be King over His kingdom. And they couldn't understand why He didn't show His authority at once and make the soldiers obey Him. They didn't know that God hadn't planned to set up His kingdom then.

You see, God wants many people to learn about His plans for the earth and the people in it. He wants others, even you and me, to learn to love Jesus and obey Him now, so that when He does set up His throne He will have many helpers.

And so the disciples were sad because they saw Jesus letting the soldiers do just as they wanted with Him. Why, Peter even reached out with a sword and cut off the ear of one of those who were arresting Jesus. He was quite brave just then, wasn't he? But let's see what followed.

Into the palace of the high priest they took Jesus. John followed close behind, but Peter stayed outside the door. He wasn't quite so brave just then.

A young girl went up to Peter, as he stood warming his hands at the fire, and asked him if he wasn't one of Jesus' disciples. Peter said he wasn't. Three times he declared that he never knew Jesus.

Just think of it! The One that he had followed so many months and the One who had taught him so many things, to say that he never knew Him!

And, do you know, that was the very thing Jesus had told Peter he would do, and Peter had said he never, never would. Sometimes we say we will never, never do a certain thing we know is wrong. And then the first thing we know we are doing it.

Do you know how Jesus said we could avoid that? By watching always and praying for help from God to be strong and true.

Poor Peter! We read that when he heard the rooster crow he realized what he had done. For Jesus had told him, "Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice." And he went out by himself and wept bitter tears.

He must have felt that now Jesus would have nothing more to do with him. He thought he wasn't worthy to be called one of Jesus' disciples now. But let's see.

We all know the story of Jesus' death, His burial, and His resurrection after three days in the grave. Not understanding what it all meant, Peter and some of the other disciples had gone back to their old task—fishing.

Turn to John 21:1-12, and read that interesting story of the breakfast on the shore, prepared by—whom do you suppose? Can you see the picture of it all in your minds? Jesus still loved every one of them, even though they had left Him to suffer alone. That was all past now.

But listen! Jesus called Peter aside and talked to him alone. Read aloud their conversation, verses 15-17. Do you see the lesson Jesus wanted Peter to learn?

It was easy for Peter to say he loved Jesus, as he did when Jesus was telling him that he would deny Him. It's always easy to say a thing. But to prove it by our actions—ah, that's another matter.

And so Jesus told Peter if he loved Him, he must show it by his works. "Feed my sheep," was what He told Peter to do. And that, of course, meant Peter was to teach the gospel to all who would listen.

That shows that Jesus had forgiven Peter and was giving him a chance to prove his love for Him. What a wonderful Savior He is, to be sure! For He is just as loving and kind to us today when we make mistakes, that is, if we are sorry for our wrongdoing.

"If we only are true,
In each thing that we do,
We shall meet the King some day;
Then His glory we'll share,
And a crown we shall wear
When we meet the King some day.

"If we toil for the Lord,
He will give rich reward,
When we meet the King some day;
Thus obeying His voice,
He will make us His choice,
When we meet the King some day."

PETER'S RESTORATION

Mark 16:7; John 20:1-10; 21:1-23

Devotional Reading: 1 Peter 1:3-12

GOLDEN TEXT

Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee.—John 21:17.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Peter's Restoration.

Aim: Love for Christ finds expression in actions as well as in words.

Class Discussion: In what did the weakness of Peter's character consist? What were his strong points? How may we prove our love for Christ? Will Christian principles when adhered to contribute to business success?

I, Peter's Quick Obedience, (John 21: 11-14.) Jesus commanded all of the disciples to draw in the heavily laden net, but it was Peter who sprang forward at once to obey! his Lord was personally and visibly before him Peter was always the first to respond to His call and the most loyal of His supporters and defenders. But the faithful servant is the one who will carry out his master's desires when the master is absent.

II. Jesus Questions Peter and Gives Him a Great Commission. (Vv. 15-17.) The Master did not doubt the affection of Peter, but He sought to impress upon him the enormity of his offense in denying Him in the past, and to impress deeply upon his heart the importance of no longer depending upon his own strength, but upon the Lord. Thrice Jesus asked him, "Lovest thou me?" Twice He used a word for love that means constancy and involves obedience as well as affection. When this lesson of obedience had been impressed upon Peter's consciousness he was ready to receive the great dual commission from the Lord, to "feed" and to "tend" or "shepherd," which is what the Greek word translated "feed" in verse 17 means, the flock of God of which Christ is the chief shepherd.

III. Peter's Martyrdom Predicted. (Vv. 18, 19.) Jesus told Peter when he was a young man he could go and come as he chose, but the day would dawn when others would carry him where he did not care to go, "signifying by what death he should glorify God." The Lord thus pointed out to him the dangerous but glorious pathway of service he would be called upon to follow, and Peter never forgot that prediction. It all came true, for he followed Jesus a long and sorrowful road of sac-rifice which ended in a triumphant martyrdom. His crown of victory awaits him at the Lord's second coming when he will be made one of the kings who are to reign over the twelve tribes of Israel under the supreme rulership of Jesus Christ, Luke 22:28:30,

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Restitution

-is the way of forgiveness;

- -was made by Peter;
- -rights, rather than covers up, a wrong;
- -when made demands forgiveness;

-does not do away with repentance.

Not Established. The disciples were not established in the "present truth" at the time of Christ's death; else, they would not have been so easily discouraged and turned back to their former vocations. One must be deeply rooted and grounded in the truth to withstand discouragement and reverses and still press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus (Phil. 3:14). It is very clear from Scripture that during the time of the end the love of many will wax cold because of the abounding of iniquity (Matt. 24:12). If the disciples would become inactive so soon after the death of the Lord, it is easy to understand why so many would become slothful during the long sojourn of Christ in heaven and begin to say within their hearts, "My Lord delayeth His coming."

Peter Restored. Peter was restored to favor and fellowship with Christ through restitution. Three times did he deny His Lord; three times must be confess Him. After this restoration we do not read of Peter ever denying His Lord, but he remained true and faithful under all circumstances and was strong enough to face a martyr's death. One of the precepts of Jesus was, "Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother bath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift."— Matt. 5:23, 24.—C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Although Peter denied Christ in last Sunday's lesson, he acknowledges today that Christ knoweth all things and tells Him that he still loves Him. As a proof that Christ did know men read John 2:24, 25; Matt. 9:4; Luke 5:22; 6:8; 9:47; and 11:17. After Peter told Christ the third time that he loved Him, then Christ gave him a work to do. In Christ's words it was "feed my sheep"; in our words it would be, minister unto the children of God, which are called "sheep."

Peter did not give up because he made a mistake in denying Christ. He overcame the disgrace and went on in Christian service. If we make mistakes, and most people do, let us overcome as did Peter and go forward for Christ,-L. A. R.

How to Prove Our Love for Christ

We left Peter weeping bitterly as he realized that he had done exactly as Jesus said he would-deny that he had ever known his beloved Lord. The next mention we find of him is in John 20:3, where he and John visited the grave of the risen Christ. Now we see John running ahead of Peter, contrary to Peter's usual impetuous ways. What do you Peter's usual impetuous ways. What do think caused Peter's lagging footsteps!

Evidently beginning to comprehend the depth of the sin he had done in denying his Lord, Peter went back to his former work, thinking He would have no further use for him. But Peter had not yet learned the depth of the wonderful love and forgivene: s of the Savior. These were what caused Jesi s to add, "and Peter," to the message for the disciples He had given the angel. Jesus m t seven of His disciples after His resurrection. Relate the story of His thoughtfulness of them (John 21:1-13). Realizing that soon His work would be completed and He wou I ascend to His Father, He placed the responsebility of carrying the gospel further on the shoulders of His chosen helpers. No doult Peter thought himself unworthy of that hono:. Useless regret, with its measure of untold suffering, always accompanies us on the pataway of sin. Read aloud the verses (15-17) which reveal Jesus' forgiveness of Peter ard His instruction to him to carry on His work. Peter's words in 1 Peter 1:6, 7 show the s:vere trial through which he had passed bycause of his weakness. He was ready now to prove His love for Christ by deeds, not word; We serve Christ best by serving others

JUNIOR CLASS

Memory Verse: "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee."-John 21:17e.

Review. Just to see which of the class romembers best the lesson from last Sunday a list of simple questions may be given each child. After each has finished, read answer :. Help any child who has not answered quetions correctly to recall lesson.

Presentation of Lesson. Call to mind what Peter had done in last lesson, emphasizing number of times Peter denied Jesus. Start today's lesson by giving word pictures of the following: The disciples returning from fishing; what they see as they land; Jesus speal's to them; what Peter does; they cat; Jesus' questions and Peter's answers, noting number of times Jesus questioned Peter and its significance to the number of times he denied knowing Jesus. Have one child read the words spoken to Peter by Jesus, and anoth r words spoken to feter by Jesus, and anomy rad Peter's answers. Ask, Do you think Peter would deny Jesus again? Why not?

Memory Verse. Jesus asked Peter three times, "Lovest thou me?" In answer to the last question Peter said, "Lord, thou known than the property of the last specific property of the last specific property. est all things; thou knowest that I love thee." Let's learn it.

Notebook. Divide the page on which you wish to place your pictures into two part . In the top half draw what vv. 8, 11 tell you. In lower half draw what you see in vv. 9, 10, On your other page make a little play or di: logue of the conversation between Jesus and Peter. If children wish to read this after it is finished, let them do so, but not the same two that read during study of lesson.—V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

SUPPORT FROM OUR PASTORS

Many of our local pastors are energetic in their support of the work of the National Dible Institution, which is the business organization of the General Conference of the (hurch of God, and this faithfulness on their part is greatly appreciated by the management of the Institution. In the last issue of the "Church of God Messenger," published by Pastor C. E. Randall of Fonthill, Out., and Niagara Falls, N. Y., appears the following:

"We only have one official religious paper and it should be in every home of our members. It is of far more importance than a You need it to keep in touch with the work in general, and you need it for your own spiritual growth. Watch next issue for a testimony!"

We thank you, Bro. Randall, and will await with interest that testimonial.

BIRTHDAY OFFERINGS

The following splendid suggestion comes from Sr. Lottie Logan Pickerl of Michigan, accompanied by a money order for $4.40 to give emphasis to it. She says why not make birthday offerings to the general work after the order of those made in Sunday schools for other purposes? Sr. Pickerl would increase the amount given for each year of one's life, however, from a penny to a dime. If it chanced to be the 30th birthday that was being celebrated the amount sent to the National Bible Institution for the Lord's work would be $3.00. Such a contribution might well be termed a "thank offering," indicating one's appreciation for the prolonging of life with its opportunities of service. She calls attention to the fact that some might be reluctant to reveal their age, but this objection could be taken care of by publishing only the initials of the one sending in the amount if he should so request. So send in your birthday offerings and we will keep your age a profound secret if you so desire.

SERVICES HELD AT CORVALLIS

December 7 we went to Corvallis, Orc., for a meeting over Sunday. We found the brethren all well as usual, but Sr. Hogue had been called that afternoon to Yakima, Wash., on account of the death of her brother.

Friday night we had a meeting, also Saturday at 2:30 p, m, and at night. Services were held Sunday morning and Sunday night. We arrived home at 9 p.m. Monday, after driving across country from Oregon City.

REED - LE CRONE MARRIED AT BLAIR, NEBRASKA

The Church of God at Blair, Neb., has been very fortunate in having preaching services the past four Sundays.

Sr. Lucille Le Crone, pastor of the Com munity Church near Helena, Okla., who has been visiting her parents, Bro, and Sr. Claar Le Crone of Kennard, Neb., since Christmas, spoke to us on Sunday morning, Dec. 30, and again on January 20.

Bro. Richard Le Crone, her brother, pastor at Eden Valley, Minn., spoke on January 6, and in the late afternoon of the same day, a number of the congregation had the pleasure of attending the ceremony of his marriage to Miss Jane Reed of Omaha at the First Christian Church in that city.

On January 13, Bro. Harvey Krogh, Jr., pastor of the Plum River Church near Pearl City, Ill., filled the pulpit. He and his wife were making a short visit at the parental Harvey Krogh home.

The progress of these three young minis ters has been of greater interest to the Blair church on account of their having been former members of the congregation and Sr. Le We hope to Crone our pastor at one time. have them with us again, if the Lord tarries whenever it is possible for them to come.

UNUSUAL WEATHER MARKS CALIFORNIA CONFERENCE

All those attending the Quarterly Conference Sunday, Jan. 13, in Los Angeles, Calif., will confess it was one of the best we have had, with the church room full both morning and afternoon. Bro. S. J. Lindsay, of Tempe, Ariz., was the guest speaker and was leader of the Bible class during the Sunday school hour. His subject was, "Life Only Through Christ," and you all know how Bro. Lindsay brings out the best solutions to his many questions. and makes the old subjects new with a little different angle.

Before closing the Sunday school it is cusomary to ask all those who had a birthday during the week to come to the front and place as many pennies as years old, and on this occasion the Railsback family was well represented, as it was the birthday of Sr. Railsback Sunday, and during the week Bro. Railsback and daughter Mildred. I am going to tell on Bro. Railsback, as he has reached the "threescore years and ten" and is still 70 years young. The morning worship hour was conducted by Bro. Norman MacLeod with a masterly sermon on "The Pleading of God With the Nations and the Church." With charts before us the sermon was most in-structive, and Bro. Lindsay commended Bro. MacLeod very highly and said, "I was thrilled with his discourse, and if he gave out the bread of life every Sunday in such manner, the church should be filled."

Communion service followed, after which a picnic lunch was enjoyed in the church, duc to the unusual dark and cold day in California After lunch, a half hour was devoted to a praise service where favorite songs were sung and short talks were given. Bro. Lindsay then gave the sermon for the afternoon, his subject, "For What Is Your Life?" what a sermon, what power, what truth, and how clearly spoken! The congregation was moved and thrilled, and I am sure went home thinking and pondering these things in their hearts.

Bro, Lindsay is staying over and will have charge of the Bereans Tuesday night, and the study will be the "Three Crosses," and the difference of the two thieves. California is a large state, but we had brethren from Redlands, Pomona, Long Beach, Ventura, Santa Ana, Anaheim, Lynwood, Riverside, Los Angeles, and to our great joy we welcomed Bro. and Sr. Willis Roose from Indiana, who are visiting the Golden State. It was a fine day with so many we seldom see, and Bro. Lindsay said, "It's nice to be back on the old stamping ground," and we were very happy to have him.

and time has crased none of its scriptural significance. Why do we take this name? Because Christ prayed that His followers be kept in the Father's name (John 17:11). The church is the family of God and as the family go by the Father's name, so we take the Father's name (Eph. 3:14, 15). All of the churches organized and set in order by the disciples were named the "church of God" (1 Cor. 1:2; 10:32; 11:22; 15:9; 2 Cor. 1:1; Gal. 1:13; 1 Thess. 2:14; 1 Tim. 3:15).

Ш

The Iowa Church of God had its beginning about 1886 or 1887 because the Advent Christian people would not allow E. A. Marsh, one of their own ministers, and others such as A. J. Eychaner, J. W. Whitsett, G. M. Myers, etc., to present such doctrines as the personal reign of Christ and His saints over the nations, the regathering of Israel, and kindred teachings. These doctrines which compelled our early Iowa brethren to leave the church of their early affiliation and become a separate group, are the cherished doctrines which we hold and advocate today. As one of our leading ministers has said, "A gospel which does not include the literal reign of Christ over the nations with His saints and the regathering of fleshly Israel is only half a gospel." Our understanding and interpretation of Scriptures do not allow of the view that, when Christ comes, in a moment and the twinkling of an eye judgment shall be meted out and the world and all the wicked shall be burned up. The day of the Lord is a prolonged period and not an Instant. The Church of God believes that when the Lord descends from heaven the church will be caught up to meet Him in the air (1 Thess. 4:16, 17) and after the withdrawal of God's people will follow a time of trouble at the end of which Christ will come with His saints to execute judgment (Jude 14, 15) and will sit upon His throne jointly with His saints (Matt. 25:31; Rev. 3:21), and before them shall be gathered all nations, and the saints shall assist in the judgment of the nations (1 Cor. 6:1-3) and will rule over them (Rev. 2:26, 27). The Church of God believes today, as vesterday, that the literal throne of David will be restored as promised (Ezek. 21:25-27; Hosea 3:4, 5) and that Christ will sit upon that throne (Luke 1:32, 33; Isa, 9: 6, 7). Further, that this throne, as of former years, shall be in Jerusalem and from this seat of government shall go forth the law that shall govern the nations (Micah 4:1-5; Isa, 2:1-4). These nations shall go up to Jerusalem from year to year to worship the Lord and keep the feast of tabernacles and offer their gifts (Zeeh. 14:16-20; Rev. 21: 23-26).

The Church of God firmly believes the promises of God that the house of Israel, which was divided under the reign of Jeroboam and Rehoboam into two kingdoms, shall be united into one kingdom again under the earthly reign of Christ, and that David will be prince among them (Ezek.

37; 34:23-28; Jer. 30:9; Hosea 3:4, 5), and that the twelve apostles will rule over them (Matt. 19:28; Luke 22:30). As the result of which, Israel shall be planted in their own land never to be pulled up or removed (Amos 9:13-15).

This millennial reign of Christ, we understand, is that which is spoken of in the twentieth chapter of Revelation when certain live and reign with Christ a thousand years, which reigning is limited to the time when Christ sits upon His own throne (Rev. 3:21). Declaration of and belief in the above scriptural affirmations forced our church fathers in many states to separate. They sacrificed much in defense of their doctrines. The great challenge to us today is not to sacrifice these doctrines, but sacrifice for them. Our people possess the spirit to meet the challenge of the times; all it needs is awakening.

IV

There are two types of prophetical interpretation, one historical, the other futuristic.. With the historical, prophecy merely becomes history. Our great doctrines of the coming kingdom, the literal reign of Christ over the na tions with His saints, and the regathering of Israel are all doctrines that come through the futuristic view. Wholesale discard of plain, literal statements, relegating some of the great future works of God and Christ into the disma past, and rendering meaningless and void much of the purpose of God are the fruitage of historical interpretation. Such a method to avoid the force of premillennial teachings cannot be overlooked through toleration. This heritage of rich teachings which our fathers have turned over to us as a result of intimate fellowship with the heav enly Father and deep and persevering study of the Scriptures is an enduring foundation upon which we have built and by God's grace will continue to build.

The independence of the Church of God has been brought about through love for and adherence to these teachings and if its independence is to be maintained we must continue to pursue the same policy. If we are to build an enduring institution there needs to be a quickening of our conscience to the imperativeness of placing renewed emphasis on these doctrines which made us a separate people in the beginning. Truth is a priceless possession and no permanent gain can come through a sacrifice of any of its cardinal aspects. The Church of God was, the Church of God is, and the Church of God shall be, and every move and every action must be, for the preservation of this divine institution, and with the determination of our fathers, let us dedicate ourselves anew to this proposition.

talks will be given in private or public from the first and second chapters of Matthew and Luke with their wonderful, and yet simple, description of the birth of the One who came in the appointed time and way as prophesied hundreds of years before. Humble shepherds were the first to whom the announcement was made by an angelic messenger—"Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord"; and the record is these men went in haste to see for themselves if this was really true, and after they had seen "the babe . . . lying in a manger" they returned to their occupation of keeping sheep, "glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen."

This night was a pivotal one in the annals of the world. Only, a tiny Babe, and yet He was destined to change history for all time! What had happened? In the first place, a new calendar. When the advent took place it was the year 753, according to Rome, but since Jesus came the letters B. C. and A. D. have altered chronology. A Jewish school-teacher when asked by a child what these letters stood for, hurriedly replied, "No matter now; cut them out." But the great change which had come cannot be "cut out," and ever since nations have reckoned their history as "Before Christ" and "In the year of our Lord."

What else came after the visit of the shepherds? A wider spread of knowledge. When Jesus was crucified the inscription over His head was written in the three languages used in the then known world—Latin, Greek, and Hebrew—but now the account of this death has been proclaimed by the Bible in 950 different tongues and dialects.

A new inspiration for writers came with the life of the Son of God. What would be left in literature if all references to Him were omitted from the fathers of old; then down through the ages listen to Chaucer, Milton, Shakespeare, and our own Longfellow, Lowell, and Whittier, with multitudes of others, as they sing His praise in prose and verse.

After one has visited the great picture galleries of Europe with their miles of paintings he realizes what a power Christ has been in the world of art—The Annunciation, The Visit of the Shepherds and Magi, The Presentation in the Temple, The Supper in Cana, The Last Supper. The Betrayal, The Crucifixion—huge canvasses by the greatest artists ever known are shown over and over again in every city of note.

And what about music? The shepherds returned to their work praising God, and ever since the Christian church has been singing hymns of comfort, cheer, sympathy at death beds, in prisons, at the fireside. What music is better loved than Handel's "He shall feed His flock like a shepherd" and the grand "Hallelujah Chorus"; while Beethoven and Mendelssohn have brought lofty thought to many an earthly pilgrim. How triumphantly "Rock of Ages," "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," have pealed forth literally from "Greenland's iey mountains to India's coral strand"; while the solemn chants of the church have been the keynote of music.

Even in architecture the Christ story is found in the magnificent edifices where the cross has been the ground plan, and the steeple points to where the risen Savior is now interceding for His children before He returns to earth again.

Explorers have carried the story to new lands. When Christopher Columbus reached San Salvador (Land of the Savior) his first act was the planting of the cross in the earth, and on a great building (Please turn to Page Ten)

Woodbridge, editor of a new bulletin just issued by the Independent Board for Presbyterian Foreign Missions, in the first number of the paper. "Members of the Independent Board who are members of that denomination have been singled out for attack. Our friends want to know what is happening to these members," is the explanation given by Mr. Woodbridge for the inauguration of the new publication.

The bulletin endorses the doctrinal position taken by Dr. J. Gresham Machen of Philadelphia, who is to be tried next month before a judicial committee of the Presbytery of New Brunswick on charges of defying the church authority, which ordered the Independent Board for Foreign Missions to discontinue its activities. The trouble in the Presbyterian Church arose from the favorable attitude shown by the denominational Board for Foreign Missions toward the teaching of Mrs. Pearl Buck and other missionaries of Modernistic leanings.

Peace Cowardly, Says 11 Duce

"But I say unto you, Love your enemies." -Jesus.

New York, Jan. 14.—War is the only real test of a people, asserts Premier Mussolini in an exposition of Fascism published yesterday. He discards the theory of the majority rule which prevails in democratic governments. "Fascism is now a completely individual thing, not only as a regime, but as a doctrine," writes Il Duce. "And this means that Fascism . . . can act in the face of all problems, practical or intellectual, which confront the world. And above all, Fascism, the more it considers and observes the future and the development of humanity quite apart from political considerations of the moment, believes neither in the possibility nor the utility of perpetual peace," he continues.

"It thus repudiates the doctrine of pacifism—born of a renunciation of the struggle and an act of cowardice in the face of sacrifice. War alone brings up to its highest tension all human energy and puts the stamp of nobility upon the people who have the courage to meet it," Mussolini declares.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Carnegie Endowment, explains in a preface that the article by the Italian Premier is an authorized translation contributed to the Encyclopedia Italiana.

When the dictator of even one of the five leading nations of Europe openly advocates war rather than peace, it would appear that from a human standpoint there is but little hope for disarmament. The philosophy of the Prince of Peace will one day prevail in spite of all the bloodthirst, dictators of the world—Item submitted by Bro. Compton.

Saloons Worse Than Before Prohibition

"The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to . . . the mire."—2 Peter 2:22.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Conditions in Chicago are even worse than those that prevailed before the enactment of prohibition, according to Miss Jessie Binford, head of the Juvenile Protective Association. Her remarks were made before the National Conference of State Liquor Administrators recently held in this city. Immorality and disregard for the public welfare prevail in all sections of the city, she said. Women who formerly roamed the streets now are congregating in the bars, even though newly enacted ordinances positively forbid such practices.

"The principal abuses existing are found in the devices used by saloon taverns to stimulate excessive drinking. If we are to have temperance and decency, if we are not to surrender to pre-prohibition evils again, either these abuses must be abolished or the tavern itself must go," Miss Birford declared. She also called attention to the President's pledge "that the saloon should not return in its old or in a new guise," and asserted that unless present conditions were radically changed this pledge must be construed as a farcical play on words.

Among the abuses to which the speaker called particular attention were the flagrant violation of the laws against gambling, the mingling of entertainers with patrons, and the sale of intoxicants to drunken persons. Also she urged laws to prohibit the granting of liquor licenses to school supply stores and lunch rooms patronized by school children. From all of which it would appear that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment has not contributed to the safety of young people and children.

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

THAT the kingdom of God will be local before it is universal, is evident from the fact that the saints will come from the east and the west, and sit down in the kingdom. If the kingdom were universal, there would be no east or west outside of it, but it would fill the earth. But the kingdom of Israel when restored to Christ will be confined to the land covenanted to Abraham. Hence, the people of God may come from where the kingdom is not, and sit down within the kingdom, while there will be territory without, into which those who by nature are heirs, but who through transgression have forfeited their title, shall be east.

But if the fifth universal kingdom is established when Christ shall come; if the kingdom under the whole heavens is given to the saints of the most High at the time when they are raised from the dead; then it cannot be said that they come from the east and west of the kingdom in order to sit down in it; for in that case they will be raised in the kingdom. Nor will there be east or west upon the surface of the globe outside of the kingdom.

Again, if the kingdom which the God of heaven shall set up is universal in its dominion, perfect in its nature, and eternal in its duration; and this kingdom is not set up until after all nations, with their kings, are destroyed, the earth purified, and universal and immutable at its commencement; then how can it be commencement; then now can it be said, truthfully, that this kingdom is set up in the days of these kings? Or that it expands from its stone to its mountain form? For in that case there could be no growth. "The stone" never could become a mountain and fill the earth. "The mustard seed" never could "become a tree." "The leaven" could never leaven "the three measures of meal." "The kingdoms of this world" never could "become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ." The "dominion" never could extend "from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." "All the ends of the world" never could "remember and turn unto the Lord." In "Abraham and his seed" Jesus Christ and all I is immortalized saints, "all the nations of the earth," never could "be blessed"; for there would be no surviving nations to bless.

In one word, all the foregoing prophecies and promises, and hundreds more which I have neither time nor space to enumerate, could never be fulfilled. But admit what has been abundantly proved, that the kingdom of Christ is to be the kingdom of Israel restored; that it will be located in the land of Canaan; that it will exist contemporaneously with the kingdoms of the world; that after Christ comes and raises the righteous dead, changes the righteous living, and overthrows the assembled nations, His kingdom will extend its dominion over all the earth, and that the left of those nations will be abundantly blessed under the benign reign of Christ and His saints—all is plain and harmonious.

Having investigated the nature of the kingdom promised to Christ, we are now prepared to investigate the nature of the reward promised those who shall be associated with Christ in the administration of His kingdom.

Keep on Trying

Don't you ever give up trying, Don't you walk off in despair: Just remember You are needed

When the burden's hard to bear.

Don't you think that no one's watching,
Don't you think that no one cares:

Just you think of

Who is listening

When you kneel and say your prayers.

Don't keep looking back and sighing O'er mistakes made in the past: Just you keep on Trying — trying, And you'll win through at the last.

REWARDS FOR ADMINISTRATORS

The kingdom of God being the motive power of the gospel, that it may inspire the right disposition, and develop the right character, it must be understood. That we may be prepared to exercise the functions of our position, it is necessary for us to understand beforehand what that position is to be. A system of tuition, and a mode of discipline, adapted to the position of a subject, might not qualify one for the office of a king. A prince should always be educated in reference to the position he is to occupy, and the functions devolving upon him in that position; as a king who rules and administers law; and not as a subject who is ruled, and whose duty it is to obey law.

With these prefatory remarks, I will now proceed to demonstrate by the plain teachings of the Word that all who believe and obey the gospel of the kingdom will be associate kings and priests with Jesus Christ, in the administration of judgment, justice, and mercy, not only to the twelve tribes of Israel, but to all the nations of the earth, for one thousand years.

The following promise to the twelve apostles does not exclude any others who are equally with them joint heirs with Christ; and who continue with Him in His temptation; or who follow Him, "Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."—Luke 22:28-30.

According to this quotation, the kingdom which the Father has appointed unto Christ, and which Christ appoints unto His followers, is to be the twelve tribes of Israel. This promise was made to the twelve apostles, because they were all who were present at the time; but everywhere else the privilege of reigning with Christ, without qualification, is promised to all the saints indiscriminately. The apostles preached the same gospel of the same kingdom to others, which Christ had preached to them; hence, they are fellow heirs with all the saints to the same blessed gospel promises; for there is no respecter of persons in this plan.

LITERAL REIGN

The Apostle Paul couples his reign with Christ, with all who suffer with Christ. 2 Timothy 2:11-13—"It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him: if we suffer, we shall also reign with him." Just as certainly and literally as we suffer with Christ, just so certainly and literally will we reign with Him. Do we not suffer really and literally with Christ? And will not the promised reward be equally literal?

That all who overcome shall exercise the high prerogative of kings, will be seen in the following quotation:

"And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations: and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father."—Rev. 2:26, 27.

Here our Savior delegates to all who overcome, as He overcame, the same power which His Father had delegated to Him. Hence, their reign will be a co-partnership, a joint rule. And according to the original charter of power, as recorded in the second Psalm, and our Savior's transfer of this power in Revelation 2, the nations are to be broken to pieces as a potter's vessel. No potter ever broke a good vessel, one adapted to the end for which it was made, to pieces. It is only worthless vessels they destroy.

DESTRUCTION FOR THE DISOBEDIENT

That only such as are not adapted to the reign of Christ and His associates—such as will not submit to their rule—shall be destroyed will be seen in the light of the following advice to the contemporaneous judges and kings of the earth. "Be wise now therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."—Psalm 2:10-12. Hence, under the reign of Christ and the saints, none but the disobedient will be broken to pieces like the worthless vessels of a potter, while all the truly wise, who trust in them, shall be blessed.

As will appear in the further elucidation of this subject, all nations and all kings will ultimately submit to Christ and His royal brotherhood, kiss the Son (who will be chief and representative); that is, make a truce with Him, trust in Him, and be blessed. Then will be fulfilled the covenant of God with Abraham, saying, "In thee and in thy seed shall all families of the earth be blessed."

In Daniel 7:13, 14, we find a description of the loftiest position Jesus Christ is to occupy in the kingdom of God. He comes with the clouds of heaven to the Ancient of days, and there is "given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him." At the 27th verse, the same universal dominion and the greatness (or glory) of the same kingdom under the whole heavens is given to the people of the saints (i.e., His anointed Elohim) of the most High.

JOINT POSSESSION EXPLAINED

How can the same universal kingdom be possessed by the Son of God and all His people at the same time?

Answer: Only by a joint possession. Christ and Hispeople being joint heirs, implies a joint possession of all the things to which they are heirs. They are heirs with Christ to all the promises covenanted to Abraham and his seed (Gal. 3:29), which includes the kingdom in its local and universal dominion. Christ is now "prince of the kings of the earth" (Rev. 1:5), but when He returns, invested with the right of universal dominion, He shall be king of the kings of the earth (Rev. 19:16).

When all the blessed of the Father shall "inherit the kingdom prepared" for the first Adam, but inherited by the second Adam, to which they are now heirs (Matt. 25:34), then will they be associate kings with Christ over all the kings of the earth. Then will they reign with Christ, having suffered with Him—share His crown, having shared His cross. Thus the evidence that the saints will reign as literal kings is just as demonstrable as that Christ will reign.

That the saints will be kings and not subjects, will be seen by reference to Daniel 7:21, 22, 26—"I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom (the fourth kingdom of earth, v. 23) . . . But the judgment shall sit, and they (the saints, vv. 22, 25) shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end."

In the light of these quotations the following conclusions are legitimate, viz.:

- 1. The saints of the most High will be the delegate lagents in the inflictions of the judgments of God upon the little horn power, when those ancient worthies shall come. Paul says the saints shall judge the world (1 Cor. 6:2).
- The saints will at that time possess the kingdom. Subjects do not possess the kingdom. They are the kingdom thus possessed. David and Solomon possessed the kingdom of Israel.

What was the kingdom they thus possessed?

Answer: The twelve tribes of Israel. Christ will possess the same kingdom in conjunction with all the kingdoms of the earth. The saints possess the fourth kingdom of earth. They, therefore, are one party, and the kingdom they possess is another party.

sized this strongly at the beginning of the Gentile Age. We re-dream of Nebuchadnezzar, and Daniel's interpretation of it. The

God's Kingdom Comes

In fulfillment of His promise, God did indeed make of Abraham " a great nation"! He led his people down into Egypt, where they suffered in slavery for four hundred years. Then with a mighty hand He led them forth from the land of bondage and humiliation. For forty years they were compelled to wander in the wilderness because of the unbelief which led them into disobedience.

In this, the last of three editorials on the plan of God for the redemption of the earth and its people from sin and death, the reader is led through the corridors of prophecy that he may observe the pictures showing the unchangeable purposes of God being fulfilled. Beginning with the call of Abraham the history of the kingdom of God is traced to the time of its overlhrow under Zedekiah, and onward to the grand consummation of the ages, the inauguration of the Golden Age under the rulership of Jesus Christ.

day overlook. But may you and I as individual members of the King's family, the church, gratefully acknowledge and pray:

When Moses their leader and human deliverer was dead Jehovah gave them another man of mighty faith and zeal-ous labor to carry on His work with them, and under his ceaseless efforts, "the Lord working with them," they passed into Canaan, conquering all the nations that were there before them.

For lack of space we may not discuss the many splendid lessons in the development of a nation's working faith which God gave them there, but merely recall the fact that Jehovah established them in the Promised Land as peculiar people of His own, and termed their little empire, the kingdom of the Lord! 1 Chron. 29:23.

But in process of time their rulers became corrupt, they forgot their powers were derived from God, and ruled each according to his own ideas of government without taking the Lord into account. Their sinful excesses led their people into sin, and sin brought its mede of suffering. At last Jehovah called both king and people into judgment before Him and gave sentence as follows:

"Thus saith the Lord God; Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand. And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it: and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him."—Ezek. 21:24-27.

Fulfilling this pronouncement of a nation's doom to the very letter, God permitted Nebuchadnezzar to capture Jerusalem and lead its inhabitants away into Babylon, turning His own immediate authority over earthly nations, which He had been exercising through Israel, over to the Gentiles. Thus began that period known to Bible students as "the times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21:24), the times in which we live.

It must not be forgotten that God has never renounced His own right to rule over all nations of men. He empha"This is my Father's world,
O let me ne'er forget
That though the wrong seems oft so strong,
God is the Ruler yet!"

The Gentile rulers are bearing the sword of empire by the sufferance of God. During the limited period of their government of the earth the Jews must continually pass under the rod of punishment.

An Eternal Kingdom Promised

We may not leave this portion of our outline of the "Footprints of God" without making one more reference to the great image and its predictions.

Having traced the rise, development, and fall of four great empires, all of which have now come and gone, Daniel speaks of the feet of the image as composed of iron and clay, as substances which do not cleave the one to the other. And then he adds significantly:

· "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever."—Dan. 2:44.

To make the matter of the location of this great eternal universal kingdom of God even more positive, a second vision was sent to the Prophet, concluding with this promise:

"And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7:27.

It is then, beyond question, that the kingdom of God, the eternal home of the saints of all ages, is to be, not in heaven, but "under the whole heaven," and upon this earth!

But time flies!

Inspiration of the Bible

"In the name of the Holy Scripture, we do understand those Canonical Books of the Old and New Testament, of whose authority was never any doubt in thee Church."—Art. VI, Church of England.

IF THE word "Church" is restricted to all regenerate and spiritually enlightened souls, then the declaration of universal belief is substantially true. But if, on the other hand, the name "Church" is meant to include that which is spoken of as theological, or ecclesiastical, then there never has been an age in which the Scripture has not been doubted and denied.

These are difficult days. It would be far too sweeping a judgment to say that all who bear the name of Modernist or higher critic, are the enemies of divine revelation, but we may safely affirm that a recognition of holy Scripture as "God's Word Written" is one of the distinguishing marks of those who are spiritually enlightened (1 John 2:27). Our Lord commenced His ministry by a comprehensive acceptance of the Old Testament, and began the New by saying: "I have given them thy word."—John 17:14.

THE DEFINITION OF INSPIRATION

How shall we define the term? Peter declares that the writers of holy Writ were "moved by the Holy Ghost": the Greek signifying being borne along as a ship by the wind (2 Peter 1:21). Dr. Burk Pope tells us, "Inspiration is the specific influence of the Holy Spirit in the construction and perpetuation of the sacred writings." Hebrew scholars inform us that the word prophecy means "a message straight from God." We derive the word inspiration from the Latin verb inspire, to breathe into. The late Dr. Hiles Hitchens, in his book Ecce Veritus, "Behold the Truth," informs us that the theologians speak of the inspiration of suggestion, of superintendence, of elevation, and of invigoration. We recognize that the Spirit of God may have dictated the exact words to be recorded, or have suggested the matter, leaving the writer in his own way to express correctly the same. Or to have enabled the memory to rightly recall the past, or to so invigorate the mind as to foretell truly coming events. It is a profoundly significant fact that not one of the books of the great world religions ever make the claim of inspiration. How stately, how divinely superior the introduction to the Bible to that, say, of the Hindu Veda, which "issued forth like a stream," or to that of the Koran, which "descended from heaven ready written."

"Write thou these words," said the Author of the Old Testament to Moses. "Write the things which thou hast seen," said the same august Person to John of the New Testament. Thus "the Lord of glory thundereth" from the skies of Revelation, and "the voice of the Lord is upon the waters" of this great ocean of truth. "Holy Scripture is the most faultless, most true, most perfect, most holy law of God," said John Wyeliffe, the Morning Star of the Reformation. "Read God's Word with a good (sincere) heart, and it shall teach thee all things," said William Tyndale, the man who, one hundred years later, gave this divinely inspired Book to the English-speaking peoples, in printed form.

"The pen succeeds the prophet's breath
To save the holy Word from death."

The attempt by Antiochus Epiphanes to destroy the Jewish faith led to the crystallization of the canon of the Old Testament, and the Diocletian persecution to that of the New Testament canon. In settling the canon of the New, only those writings which carried the personal authority of one or more of the apostles were admitted. Moses, the prophets, our Lord, and His apostles all agree that divine authority is vested in "God's Word Written." On this basis the Church of England took its stand as early as the middle of the second century, the first people in all the world to receive the Christian faith in a national sense.

"THE KING TO HIS PEOPLE"

Such was the title of the book published by permission of King George V in 1911. And such is this Book of books, published by the authority and command of the King of kings, who has given us a threefold revelation—a silent universe, an inspired Book, a divine Man (Psalm 19).

The Apostle Peter tells us that "no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation" (2 Peter 1:20), which is rendered by some as meaning not separate, alone, not given without reference to some other part; whilst the homily of the Church of England upon the authority of holy Scripture declares "the agreement of its parts" is one of the strongest proofs of its divine origin.

In the New Testament there are 89 references and quotations to the Pentateuch alone.

Our Lord quoted from 21 books of the Old Testament. Paul quotes from 34 out of the 39.

In the Epistle to the Romans there are 74 quotations from the Old Testament; in all his epistles, 120 references. In the Gospels there are 300 references to the Old Testament.

In the entire New Testament there are considerably over 1,000 references to the Old Testament. Not one Old Testament book stands unquoted, or alone. Here, then, are the "Lively (living) Oracles." If we be ignorant they will instruct us; if out of the way, they will bring us home; if out of order, they will reform us; if in heaviness, they will comfort us; if dull, will quicken us; if cold, will inflame us. And what marvel, the original thereof being from heaven, not from earth, the Author being God, not man. The Inditer, the Holy Spirit, not the wit (wisdom) of the prophets and apostles, the penmen such as were sanctified from the womb, and endowed with a principal portion of God's Spirit.

"Read, then, but first thyself prepare
To read with zeal, and mark with care.
And when thou readest what's here writ,
Let thy best practice second it.
Thus twice each precept read should be:
First in the Book, and next in thee."

Charles Kingsley said, "Next to a living man there is nothing more wonderful than a book." Well, here is a living Book which when we go will lead us, when we sleep will keep us, and when we awake will talk with us (Prov. 6:22). When in St. Helena Napoleon remarked, "The Gospel is no mere book, but a living creature with a vigor, a power which conquers all that opposes it." Diderot, the French skeptic, startled a group of like-minded men by saying that not one of them could equal the writings of the holy Scripture.

MULTUM IN PARVO

One of the most distinguishing features of holy Writ is the fact of vast comprehensiveness, combined with a brevity passing human wit. The first two thousand years of the world's history are condensed into eleven chapters. Whilst in the entire Bible we get six thousand years of the world story told, and told truly, in a volume so small as to go easily into the waistcoat pocket. Vapiscus said of the historians, "There is none of them that hath not told many lies," but the man has not yet been born who can refute the declaration, "Thy word is true from the beginning."

Here, then, we have a divine Library consisting of sixty-six books which, claiming divine authorship, must be able, in the words of Dr. William Pascoe Goard, "to correctly deal with Anatomy, Physiology, Philosophy, Pathology, Geology, Biology, Astronomy, Botany, Zoology, Ethnology, and Anthropology."

Who is sufficient for these things? No wonder the opponents of holy Writ keep clear of any attempt to supersede it—foolish in most things, they are wise in this; and find it easier, and more congenial, to throw stones at the beautiful and costly cathedral of divine Revelation, than to attempt to build another.

"Man's books are a discovery: God's Book is a delivery." Here is "the Book with a million eyes," the divine "Rontgen ray," which sees into and through everything, the heavenly aeroplane, looking down from which we can see, and locate, the wrecks of sunken lives, and the hidden rocks which threaten disaster. It is said the Swiss, dwelling amongst the mountains and snows, are noted for the bright blue eyes they possess. He who lives among the mountain ranges of prophecy, and the heights of the "exceeding great and precious promises" recorded in this Book of God will certainly take on the color of the heavens from which it is inspired. The late C. H. Spurgeon, coming across on old worm-eaten Bible, remarked: "He who is a Bible-worm, will not become an earthworm."

"LORD, TO WHOM SHALL WE GO?"

Thus replied Peter when our Lord asked His disciples if they would also leave Him (John 6:68). And to what, pray, are we to turn if we leave holy Scripture? Shall we discard the majestic, reasonable, possible, probable, certain statement of facts contained in the first ten words of Genesis, for the fatuous nonsense of a leading scientist who tells us, "We cannot allow for the intervention of any supernatural power, not even in the origin of things." Are we likely if we leave Moses, the prophets, and our Lord, to find a safe guide in Julian Huxley, who speaks of verbal inspiration, and miraculous intervention, amongst other beliefs, as "a whole spawn of monstrous ideas," and further adds that "men and women are deserting the religions which have a God, and he believed that they would join one without a God." Well, nearly two thousand years before this gentleman was born, the Book he refers to so slightingly told us exactly what he and his friends would do later on-"Not liking to retain God in their knowledge," and, as a result of this attitude, would be "given up to a mind void of judgment."

At a Modernist conference, in 1928, one leading light (?) declared that "a large part of the Old Testament had gone into liquidation, and the church had better invest its faith in the best of 'Heathen Stock.' " And this, after the reverend gentleman had publicly and solemnly sworn to Article VI of the church which pays him to say exactly the opposite. Well might the secular press say that ecclesiastical morality was not equal to that of the stock exchange. One thing is very plain from the folly this speaker recommends, that most of his investments are in Heathen Stock. But space forbids further heathen quotations. Peter tells us that God's Word is "a lamp shining in a dark place." the Greek word for dark signifying "squalid" place. Those of us who by the grace of God have been rescued from these mental and unspiritual slums have no desire to return to such conditions.

> "Whoso hath felt the Spirit of the Highest, Cannot confound Him, or deny, Yea, O false Science, though thou deniest, Stand thou on that side, for on this am I." (1 Tim. 6:20.)

But those of us who profess our belief in holy Scripture may well pause, and ask the question: How comes it that after nearly two thousand years of a complete and largely open Bible such a state of things exists? Whilst fully allowing for the natural (unnatural) hostility of human nature to a revelation which enforces moral responsibility, and demands obedience, also to the undeniable fact that those professing belief in the Bible have often failed to prove their faith by good works, yet, nevertheless, may it not be said that much opposition arises from the fact that, to quote from the book entitled The Impatience of a Parson, "Christianity has been loaded with ancestral blunders." Who can say to what extent the state of Russia today is owing to the form in which the Greek Church for centuries has overlaid the simple saving truths of God's Word! Or who that knows past, and even much of present, history, can fail to see how the corrupt and idolatrous influence of the Roman Church has had to do with crime and ignorance in men, shown in its deep hostility to the people understanding the Bible, and its fear and dislike of any form of knowledge likely to lead to liberty of thought and action? Nor is the Protestant church free from blame. Who knows to what extent that "basic error of all creeds," viz., that man is inherently immortal by creation, and consequently liable to eternal torment, instead of what Scripture teaches, eternal death-loss of life, not life of loss-who knows how far this dark shadow on the character of God, to say nothing of His wisdom, has closed the heart of man, and clouded his mind in relation to the divine claims? Alas! how often in this most enlightened section of these three—and three only (Matt. 13:33) professions of Christianity, has the Word of God had to exclaim, "Save me from my friends!" Let there be no misunderstanding. We who believe in the verbal inspiration of the original manuscripts, are far from agreeing with much of the interpretation of the same.

An intelligent student of Scripture invites the fullest inquiry into its reliability, fully recognizes its enlarged revelation of truth as the centuries pass, and whilst acknowledging that "God has more to say in the New Testament, also affirms that He has nothing to unsay in the Old." Of both Old and New Testaments he believes that "God has yet more light to break forth from His Word."

"We limit not the truth of God
To our poor reach of mind,
By notions of our day, and seet,
Crude, partial, and confined.
No, let a new and better hope
Within our hearts be stirred.
The Lord hath yet more light and truth
To break forth from His Word.

"Who dares to bind to his dull sense
The Oracles of Heaven,
For all the nations, tongues, and climes,
And for all ages given?
That universe, how much unknown
That ocean unexplored—
We certainly expect more truth
To break forth from God's Word."

"The church lives by its certitudes and affirmations," said Carlyle. "Please do not preach your doubts here, we have quite enough of our own," was the request to one about to take office. "The more I think of it," wrote John Ruskin, "the more it is impressed upon me that the greatest thing a human soul can do in this life is to see something, and tell in a plain way what he sees." Exactly so. "Son of man, all my words... receive in thine heart... and tell them."—Ezek. 3:10, 11. Greek mythology tells of a wrestler who could only overthrow his opponent by lifting him from the earth. The forces of evil are powerless against the church as long as she keeps her footing on "the impregnable Rock of holy Scripture."

"It standeth, and will stand,
Without or change or age,
God's Word of majesty and might,
The church's heritage."

It has been well remarked that "the Old Testament presents principles in the Pentateuch, historical application in the historical books, effects in the devotional, and foreview in the prophets; whilst the New Testament presents in the Gospels the principles of the New Covenant, historical application in the Acts, effects in the Epistles, and a foreview of their realization in Revelation."

FINALLY

A dead man cannot distinguish between a loaf made of flour and one made of sawdust. The spiritually quickened are not likely to be deceived by the dead, unnutritious folly, written and spoken by those who seek to discredit holy Writ. Many a sailor is ignorant of the laws of magnetism, and unable to explain why the needle of the compass always points north, nevertheless he would not go to sea without it. "The devout Christian on his knees can see further than the self-contained philosopher on tiptoe," and the simple French peasant woman at her cottage door with the open Bible was a far greater philosopher than the brilliant Voltaire. Goethe called the Bible "The Book of the Nations," and on the shelves of the British and Foreign Bible Society are 17,000 volumes, in whole or in part, of this Book, in 850 languages and dialects.

A WARNING

We shall do well to lay to heart the words of the late Bishop Christopher Wordsworth that "in an age when Bibles are most plentiful we are in danger of losing the Bible as a divine, and not a human composition, as the Rule of Faith and Practice, as the inspired Word of God by which we shall be judged at the Great Day."—Daniel Farmer in Words of Life.

LITTLE FOXES

One little fox is "By and by." You track him, you get to his hole—never.

Another fox is, "I can't." You had better set on him an active, plucky little thing, "I can" by name. It does wonders.

A third little fox is, "No use trying." He has spoiled more vines and hindered the growth of more fruit than many a worse-looking enemy.

A fourth little fox is "I forgot." He is very provoking. He is a great cheat. He slips through your fingers like time. He is seldom caught up with.

Fifth little fox is "Don't care." Oh, the mischief he has done.

Sixth little fox is "No matter." It matters whether your life is spoiled by small faults.—Good News.

"REMOVE NOTTHE OLD LAND-

Proverbs 23:10

ON March 30, 1863, the righteous Abraham Lincoln issued the following proclamation calling for a Day of Prayer. It is a sample of the kind of sentiment and sincerity that has given moral strength and character to the United States in the past. Let patriots refresh their memories and contemplate what a rich spiritual heritage they have, as they read:

Whereas the Senate of the United States, devoutly recognizing the Supreme Authority and Just Government of Almighty God in all the affairs of men and nations, has by a resolution requested the President to designate and set apart a day for National Prayer and Humiliation; and

Whereas it is the duty of nations as well as of men to own their dependence upon the overruling power of God, to confess their Sins and Transgressions in humble sorrow, yet with assured hope that genuine Repentance will lead to mercy and pardon, and to recognize the sublime truth, announced in the Holy Scriptures and proved by all history, that those nations only are blessed whose God is the Lord:

And, insomuch as we know that by His Divine Law nations, like individuals, are subjected to punishments and chastisements in this world, may we not justly fear that the awful calamity of civil war which now desolates the land may be but a punishment inflicted upon us for our presumptuous sins, to the needful end of our National Reformation as a whole people? We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of Heaven; we have been preserved the many years in Peace and Prosperity; we have grown in numbers, wealth, and power as no other nation has ever grown. But we have forgotten God. We have forgotten the gracious Hand which preserved us in Peace and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us, and we have vainly imagined, in the deceitfulness of our hearts, that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom of our own. Intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace, too proud to pray to the God that made

It behooves us, then, to humble ourselves before the offended Power, to confess our National Sins, and to pray for elemency and forgiveness.

Now, therefore, in compliance with the request, and fully concurring in the views of the Senate, I do by this my proclamation designate and set apart Thursday, the 30th day of April, 1863, as a day of National Humiliation, Fasting, and Prayer. And I do hereby request all the people to abstain on that day from their ordinary secular pursuits, and to unite at their several places of public worship and their respective homes in keeping the day holy to the Lord and devoted to the humble discharge of the religious duties proper to that solemn occasion.

All this being done in sincerity and truth, let us then rest humbly in the hope authorized by the Divine Teachings that the united cry of the nations will be heard on high and answered with blessings no less than the pardon of our National Sins and the Restoration of our now divided and suffering country to its former happy condition of unity and peace.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 30th day of March, A. D. 1863, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-seventh.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Abraham Lincoln knew that American civilization was builded upon the Word of God. The Day of Prayer which he called in the above document, represents the true historic spirit which must again be established in Washington if our beloved nation is to survive the attacks to which it is now being subjected. Back to God, America!—Selected by Glenn M. Birkey.

MARY'S TWO BIBLES

HERE is a true story of a girl whom we shall call Mary. When she was seven years old her father, who was in India, sent her money with which to buy a Bible. There was enough money to buy an expensive one; and no doubt Mary began to picture to herself what a beautiful Bible she would buy, when an idea occurred to her.

"Grandma," she asked, "is there enough money to buy two Bibles instead of one?"

"Yes, dear," replied Grandma; "but why do you want two Bibles?"

"Oh," said Mary, "I want one for myself, and one for some little girl in India, just seven years old, like me, who hasn't any Bible of her own!"

So it came about that Mary did not get as pretty a Bible as she expected to buy. But she didn't mind, for she was thinking about the nice little surprise to the little unknown girl in far-off India.

A letter was written, asking that when the Book was given, its new owner's name should be written on the fly-leaf and also the words, "From Mary ——."

A new petition was added to Mary's evening prayer; for night by night, without fail, she prayed to God to bless the Hindu girl who had a Bible like her own.

Years passed by, and Mary grew up to be a woman, and went out to India as a missionary. One day, not long after her arrival, she was visiting some Zenanas along with a native Bible woman who was a very earnest Christian. In the course of conversation it somehow happened that the Bible woman heard for the first time the missionary's name. A look of glad surprise crossed her face; and hurriedly putting her hand into her pocket, she drew out a Book and eagerly signed to her companion to read what was written on the flyleaf. Mary looked and read her own name! Yes, this earnest Christian woman was the little Hindu girl whom she had so often remembered in her prayers.

God blessed little Mary's first piece of missionary work, for it was through reading that Bible that this native woman had become a Christian; and now that Mary was a woman, she was to have the joy of having as her companion and fellow worker the very one for whom she had prayed so long ago and so far away.—Pentecostal Little Folks; selected by II. #### GOD NEVER FORGOT HIS PROMISE

God never forgot His promise made through Jeremiah the Prophet: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is the name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."—Jer. 23:5, 6. In fulfillment of that promise the angel's message came to Mary, a Jewish maiden of Galilee.

"And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou hast found favour with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."—Luke 1:30-33.

Time passes on!

THE KING REJECTED, YET VICTORIOUS

The King was born in Bethlehem, even as it had been predicted of Him, but when "he came unto his own, . . . his own received him not" (John 1:11). Rejected by His people, who shouted in substance, "We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19:14), He died upon the cross with the accusation written above His head, "THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS."—Matt. 27:37.

But this was not the end, for God is faithful and is still determined to keep the promise He has made. The Son of God was crucified, the destined King of the Jews and Ruler of all nations of the earth died, and was buried. The third day He burst the fetters of death and arose victorious over the tomb. The grave could not hold Him!

For forty days He remained with His disciples, "to whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." And then He was taken up. Let us read the dramatic record of His ascension:

"And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."—Acts 1:3, 9-11.

Yes! He is coming again just as He went away, to complete the great task God assigned to Him. He comes now to usher in the glorious Golden Age of eternal peace, prosperity, and life for which we pray when we join His early disciples in that matchless petition: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven."—Matt. 6:10.

When that prayer is fully answered the wonder of the new heavens and the new earth "wherein dwelleth right-eousness" (2 Peter 3:13) will have burst with all its resplendent glory upon our sight. For Christ the Son of God will be here upon this earth again with us! Sorrow and sighing, suffering and death, will have passed away for evermore!

"And so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."—1 Thess. 4:17, 18.

"Good company' does not necessarily mean highly educated or even finely mannered people. There are many rough diamonds in the world. Truth and kindness and strong principles make good company wherever they are found."

${ m WHAT~CHRIST~HATH~WROUGHT!}$

in New York is depicted George Washington kneeling at Valley Forge carnestly praying to the Father in this time of deepest distress for the welfare of his country.

Then think what a gap there would be if hospitals, homes for the aged and children, for the blind and crippled, for the poor and unsound in reason, and all benevolent institutions, were taken out of this world, for they have been put there by the story of the life of One who went about doing good constantly.

The advent of the Savior brought new hope to mankind. The world was hard and unfeeling when Jesus came to it, the second chapter of the book of Romans giving an awful picture of those who were "without hope, and without God," but when the glad tidings of One who loved mankind so dearly He was ready to die for it, the testimony of a well known heathen was—"See, how these Christians love one another!" as they traveled from place to place, enduring all kinds of hardships, always telling the same story that others might hear about the Savior who came to seek and to save those that were lost.

No, Jesus Christ and the influence He has had on the world can never be "cut out," no matter what atheists may say and evil-minded men and women do.

The first recorded words of God in Genesis are, "Let there be light," and, "in the fulness of time," Jesus, the Light of the World, was manifested. He has shined into the hearts of millions, and some day the song of the angels—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," will be combined with that of "great voices" saying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever." May the earnest prayer of the Apostle John on the island of Patmos—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly," soon be realized, and His faithful ones be "ever with the Lord."

The Valley of Dry Bones

"For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?"—Romans 11:15.

"The hand of the Lord was upon me, and carried meout in the spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones."—Ezek. 37:1.

Now what is this valley, and the bones, in Ezekiel's vision? The valley is "the period of time between the casting away of the house of Israel, until the receiving of them," or "the period of time between the old city Jerusalem, until the new city Jerusalem." The old city is a type of the new one to come, and both are compared to the house of the Lord. The period of time between is the valley of death. For Israel is a dead nation in this period of time.

The bones are the whole house of Israel. Let us take the eleventh verse for proof. "Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts." Verses 12-14: "Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it, saith the Lord."

Why should they wait until the resurrection, or until Christ's second advent, to know Him? Because in John 1:11 it tells us: "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." In the twelfth verse it tells how we Gentiles got in: "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John 1:17.

Ezekiel 37:16, 17: "Moreover, thou son of man, take thou one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand." Verse 22: "And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."

This means the unity of the twelve tribes of the whole house of Israel. For in verse 19 it tells of Joseph, and the tribes of Israel his fellows. In Micah 2:12 it says: "I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee: I will surely gather the remnant of Israel; I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold: they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men." "And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was east far off a strong nation: and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever."—Micah 4:7.

Zephaniah 1:14: "The great day of the Lord is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the Lord: the mighty man shall cry there bitterly."

So let us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.—Norman Fyfe, Lockwood, Missouri.

Annual Election at Dixon

The annual election of the Bereans of Dixon, Ill., was held January 9.

The following officers were elected: President, Glea Rutherford; Vice President, Kathryn Ruppert; Secretary-Treasurer, Jean Ford; Supervisor, Mrs. L. E. Conner; Asst. Supervisor, Mrs. William Eckert.

Jean Ford, Secretary.

Business Meeting Held at Oregon

The annual business meeting of the Oregon, Ill., Berean Society was held Sunday, Jan. 6.

Reports of the officers indicated that during the year 1934 attendance had more than doubled over 1933.

It was determined to take up a weekly collection rather than settled dues, although dues at the regular rate per member will continue to be paid the state treasurer. Thus far, the system has been much more satisfactory than the old method.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Arlen Marsh; Vice President, Evan Knodle; Secretary, Alice Gesin; Treasurer, Lois Carpenter; Pianist, Genniel Carpenter.

The officers are trying to put as great variety as possible into each session. Lessons are split into two or more sections on occasion, each part being given to a different leader; special assignments are being made for coming lessons; the opening and closing exercises are varied with new hymns, Bible readings, unusual Bible drills, social problem questions, and quizzes on Bible facts. As far as possible, current events will be worked into the course of study, which follows that given in the senior Berean book dated 1921-1923.

PETER PREACHES HIS FIRST SERMON

L AST week we read the story of Jesus and the disciples enjoying a fish breakfast on the shores of Lake Galilee. You remember this happened after Jesus' resurrection. And for forty days He visited with the disciples in different places, teaching them many things He was anxious that they should learn. At the end of that time a most wonderful thing happened.

Each one of you boys and girls get your Bibles, or have Mother or some one else read to you; turn to the first chapter of Acts. We'll find out what that great event was. Notice verse 3 tells us that the thing Jesus talked about most during those forty days was the kingdom of God.

Then one day as Jesus and the disciples stood on Mount Olivet, just a little way from Jerusalem, that strange thing happened. As they looked at Him, He began to ascend, rising up into the air toward heaven, with no one helping Him that they could see. Soon the clouds came between them and Him, and they could see Him no longer.

But they heard a voice, and they looked and saw two men dressed in shining white garments, who said to the watching disciples:

"Why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Then they remembered that Jesus had told them that He must ascend to His Father and they must earry on the work He had started. He had just told them to go back to Jerusalem and all wait together for help which God would send them. And so they went to an upper room there, thinking over the strange sight they had just witnessed.

Their beloved Lord and Master was gone. How could they carry on without His help! They did not know. But He had told them He would be with them to the end of their lives, and so they took courage.

The second chapter of Acts tells you how God sent His power, the Holy Spirit, upon the disciples, and they were able to speak in the languages of those around them. You know, Jesus said He wanted everyone in the world to learn the gospel, and a great many strangers from far corners of the earth were able to understand the disciples on that very day so soon after Jesus had ascended.

God always helps those who work for Him, you see, if only they do their part willingly. Even today He helps us, not in the way He helped the disciples on that great day, but in many other ways.

And now Peter just couldn't keep quiet any longer. We are sure he had learned many a hard lesson since that day when he had disowned his beloved Lord. And he wasn't quite so quiek to speak first and think afterwards, as he had been. But now he stood up to preach, and everyone listened.

Look at verses 22 to 24. Bravely Peter told those Jews that they had crucified the Savior. He was a very different Peter from the Peter who was afraid of his life when the soldiers took Jesus, wasn't he? We know he must have passed through many sad and bitter hours, thinking about it all. But he had learned his lesson and was never afraid again.

He spoke so bravely and honestly and clearly, with God helping him, that instead of rushing at Peter to kill him, they asked him what they ought to do to make the wrong right. They realized at last that the One they had crucified was the One who had been sent by God to be their Lord and King. How dreadfully they must have felt!

Peter didn't say, "Never mind; it doesn't matter now because God raised Him back to life." But he said, "You must be sorry for your sins, and you must be baptized to wash them away."

And that very day three thousand believed the gospel, as Peter told it to them, and obeyed it by being baptized. Three thousand, think of it! Each one of these, when he returned to his home, no doubt, told others about the good news of God's kingdom. And daily others were baptized and added to this number.

Peter's sermon did a great work that day, and it has been doing a great work ever since, as people read it, believe it, and obey it. For God told Peter that day just what to say.

There's a story best of all
In God's holy Word,
Of His love so freely given
Through His Son, our Lord;
Jesus Christ in love He gave,
That we might be free,
And He died that He might save
Even you and me.

PETER PREACHES AT PENTECOST

GOLDEN TEXT

Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost .- Acts 2:38.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Peter Preaches at Pentecost.

Aim: Show that the conditions of salvaion are faith in the gospel as preached by Peter and repentance, followed by baptism in the name of Jesus Christ.

Class Discussion: What change had taken place in Peter since the Lord's resurrection? What is repentance? In what lay Peter's persuasive force in speaking?

I, Peter Presents Christ to the Jews. (Acts 1:22-28.) Thoroughly transformed by the conversion Christ had predicted (Luke 22: 31, 32), and which had come to him as the result of Jesus' resurrection and the pouring out of the Holy Spirit upon him, l'eter en-tered vigorously upon his age-long task of world evangelization. Age-long, I say, because the message he delivered on the day of Pentecost was to go ringing onward round the earth for two thousand years, bringing hope and salvation to hundreds of thousands of both Jews and Gentiles. His message centered in Jesus Christ and His right to be both King and Savior to all who believe in Him and are baptized in His name. He net only declared Jesus to be the promised Messiah, but he proved by the miracles He had performed and by the prophecy made by David concerning Him the truth of his assertion.

II. Peter Converts Three Thousand. 36-41.) Peter, who but a few weeks before was a fear-driven fugitive, filled with doubt concerning the power of Jesus and uncertain is to the righteousness of His claims to be the longed for Deliverer of Israel, is seen today as the convincing advocate and faithful defender of the Lord! So obviously sincere was his nanner and so impressive and unanswerable is arguments in defense of the claims of Jesus, the former bitter enemies of the Lord were themselves converted, and demanded in contrite terms what they must do to be saved! Peter answered their question definitely and concretely. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins!" Such was his answer. No one could misunderstand what he meant. But he continued to plead with them long and earnestly to meet those simple requirements and thus escape the just punishment for their sins. Three thousand joyfully accepted the grace offered and were baptized. A clearly stated gospel message, sincerely presented and driven into the hearts of men by the divine power that accompanies the Word of God, will bring results!

THE GOLDEN TEXT

At the close of Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, people were convinced that some thing was lacking in themselves and asked what they should do, and our text is the answer. Baptism in the name of Jesus Christ brings one into Christ, without which there is no hope. When one is haptized his sins are forgiven and he has "an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous" (1 John 2:1).

"Iloly Ghost" is the same as "Holy Spirit." This is a gift and "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above" (James 1:17). For the manifestations of the Holy Spirit study 1 Corinthians 12:1-11.-L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Peter

-preached Jesus as approved of God; -declared that Jesus literally died;

-proclaimed the resurrection of Jesus; in this great sermon set forth sound doc-advocated repentance and baptism for remission of sins.

Sound Doctrine. There seems to be a tendency on the part of most people to get away from the doctrinal phase of Christianity and Bible teaching and deal with only the practical applications. While that is in measure our purpose in this branch of the quarterly, yet we do not try to avoid the doctrinal, but try to make the doctrinal teaching of practical application. It would be hard to preach a sermon with more sound doctrine in it than Peter did on the day of Pentecost, and such remarkable success as resulted from his sermon is evidence to the fact that doctrine does convict of sin and unrighteousness and is conducive to a holy life in everyday living. The great need of the present time is sound doctrine. 2 Tim. 4;1-4, Sins Must Be Remitted. We all have sinned and come short of the glory of God. There are none of us righteous in and of our own selves. Rom. 3:10-12; 5:12; John 1:8, 9. Thus if we are to be freed from sin and the consequent penalty we must seek the liberation from sin in the way and manner which brings about remission. This way is set forth in Peter's sermon which we are studying in our lesson. Listen to this: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," Have you complied with this requirement? If not, have you any scriptural claim to forgiveness? We must get rid of our sins before we can get into Christ. Baptism is the final act in the process of remission and also brings us into the family of God (Gal. 3:27).-C. E. R.

INTERMEDIATES

The Story of a Wonderful Day

Restored to his place among the apostles, Peter had prepared himself, together with them, by prayer for strength and wisdom for the task before him. He took up the great commission which Jesus had given him, but with the power of his absent Lord assisting him (Matt. 28:16-20). Read the account of Jesus' ascension in Acts 1:9-11. these words a most important part of the gopel. Do you believe it, though the promise s now nineteen hundred years old? What resons have you for believing it is still true! Discuss fully in class.

The teacher should assign, ahead of tim, one of the class to give a review of Peters sermon on the day of Pentecost. Study together the meaning of verse 36. In Peter's a dience were, no doubt, those who had assiste l and been onlookers at the death of the Sa ior. What was the effect of the sermon upon them (v. 37)? In Peter's answer is found a: other prominent phase of the gospel (vv. 3 , 39). What was their response (v. 41)? What sort of lives did they live following their obdience (vv. 42-47)? Joy was a noticeabe Let us suppose that they merely believed Peter's message to be true, but did not act upon it. What good would come to them? John 3:16 says, "Whosocver believeth in hi i should not perish, but have everlasting life " Considered together with Peter's instruction (v. 38) what does "believeth" include? Di-cuss the meaning of the word "baptize."

"Whosoever" means you, if you will obe .. —M. G.

TUNIOR CLASS

Presentation of Lesson. So that children may know why Peter was at Jerusalem a brief review of Acts 1 should be given as follows: Jesus and disciples gathered on Mount Olivet; His command for them to stay at Jerusale.1 until something should happen; the ascensica of Jesus; the appearance of angel; the disc ples return to Jerusalem, waiting there. Now take up Acts 2 as follows: The experience of disciples on day of Penterost; Peter stands up to talk to people. Then the lesson today is a part of this speech. First Peter toll them about Jesus. He accused these people of killing Jesus, God's Son. He told them about Jesus' resurrection. Peter made a very fire talk and this is why we know, after hearing him the people were very, very sorry for wh: t they had done. They said, "What shall we do?" Peter answered, "Repent, and be bantized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." Just think, three thousand were baytized that day.

Memory Verse. Our memory verse is Peter's reply to the people's question, "What shall we do?" All repeat these words.

Notebook. Children may select any part of Acts 1 or 2 to make picture. If you wish to have Peter's picture, you may paste it in, an l copy part of his speech under the picture. Give children a "yes" and "no" test on this lesson. Correct all papers before end of class to make sure pupils leave with corrected stor? in mind .- V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

SICKNESS AT GOLDEN RULE HOME

We regret to report that sickness prevails in Golden Rule Home to a greater extent than for some time. Sr. Chaffee is just recovering from an attack that kept her in her bed for ; week or more. Sr. Wood, formerly of Rivcraide, Calif., has been suffering from a severe cough that has interfered badly with her lest at night. Mrs. Steffa is still confined to her bed, but shows signs of improvement for which we are grateful. Mrs. O'Byrne is under the care of Sr. Lewis Lindsay at the present, and her condition remains about the same as ı sual. Our matron, Sr. Mick, who has so faithfully expended her strength in the care of others, has been obliged to turn her work in part over to helpers and go to bed herself. Drop a letter of cheer to these elderly people. It will do them good we are sure.

INDUCTION AND HOMECOMING PLANNED FOR BURR OAK

Final arrangements have been made with I.ro. A. E. Hoskins of St. Cloud, Minn., to become our pastor.

The Induction Service into said pastorate will be held at Burr Oak, Ind., Church of God Canday, Feb. 3, 1935, at 11 a.m. with F. I. Austin, outgoing pastor, presiding.

The church desires to make this a homecoming occasion for all of its members—resident and non-resident—and for all of its friends. To this end a basket dinner is being provided by the local people for all, to be served at curren's Hall.

We cordially invite all to attend said Induct on Service and Homecoming.

CONGREGATION FETES

DEPARTING PASTOR

Rev. A. E. Hoskins, pastor of the Church of Cod of St. Cloud, Minn., has presented his r signation to accept a pastorate in Burr Oak, 1 dd. He plans to preach his farewell sermon on January 27.

In compliment to Rev. and Mrs. Hoskins the congregation and friends gathered January 18 at the church to express their appreciation of the services rendered during the three and one half years Rev. and Mrs. Hoskins have been here, and to extend their good wishes for the future.

The program of the evening was arranged by Mrs. George Pailes. Various songs appropriate to the occasion were sung. Speaker for the Ministerial Association; Elder John Inenchfield for the Minnesota State Conference of the Church of God; Miss Bernice Johnson for the church and congregation in general; and Elder Richard Le Crone, pastor of the church in Eden Valley. Mr. Hoskins responded to the words of appreciation and encouragement with thanks and an exhortation that all remain faithfully in Christian work. After the program refreshments were served.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO DOLLAR-A-MONTH

Eva L. Page; Georgia and Wayne Thompsen ($10); Seraphine Cleek ($2); Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Railsback; Mary Calkins; William J. Halls ($6); Mrs. William Lansbery; Mr. and Mrs. M. Fetters; Marian R. Richards ($3).

ELECTION HELD AT LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The annual election of the Los Angeles congregation was held the first Sunday in the New Year with the following results: Elders—Bros. E. C. Railsback and J. A. Squires; Deacons—Bros. A. L. Brady and Wilson Calkins; Secretary, Sr. Laura Bleasdale; and Treasurer, Sr. C. L. McCallister. With the exception of Bro. Squires and Sr. McCallister the same Board was retained that served during the last year. The church extends its appreciation to Bro. Hammond and Sr. Rahn for their work during the past year; and extends its hopes and its congratulations to the incoming officers. May the Lord bless the work of the church under their guidanee.

Norman John MacLeod, Pastor.

Anne E. Sleight; Nellie Ling; Alma Orr (for self and another); Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Hathaway (for self and others); Otto Wilson; C. Wesley Barelift; Anna A. Eidemiller; Ada M. Eldridge; Alice Lindstrom; B. E. Decker; Alvin E. Phillips.

ARRIVALS ANNOUNCED AT GRAND RAPIDS, MICHIGAN

At the close of a very pleasant week of meetings at the Happy Woods Church near Hammond, La., we drove homeward, stopping over one night in Chicago. The southern trip was very pleasant in its associations, and was one of the finest and most pleasant trips of our life.

It is a pleasure, however, to be back home now and on the job with our faithful ones in Grand Rapids.

Two fine girls were added to our Sunday shool cradle department while we were gone. Bro, and Sr. Lyle Doan are the proud parents of a daughter who comes to round out the family and make life happy for her two brothers. Bro, and Sr. Harold Rice also have their firstborn child, a splendid girl, We rejoice with these couples and trust they may find much comfort in these children.

The various officers and workers performed their tasks nobly during our absence, and we feel very grateful for such faithful helpers. We trust that the future may see much of gratifying results in the work here.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Bro, and Sr. T. J. Ellis and son Eldridge of Waterloo, Iowa, have been enjoying an extensive tour in the South and East. Since their departure they have visited in Kansas City, Mo., Oklahoma City, Okla., then, according to a letter from them, "enjoyed the sights in the Ozarks, the cotton plantations of Tennessee, the lobacco fields and Mammoth Cave of Kentucky," and many other points of interest, and are now at the home of Sr. Ellis' sister, Mrs. G. H. Loudenslager, in Maryland, not far from Washington, D. C.

Shelfworn copies of Gospel in Song, the hymnal published by the National Bible Institution, are being closed out at 20 cents a copy, transportation prepaid, or 15 cents a copy in lots of 25 or more, not prepaid, to one address. The books are cloth bound, contain 292 hymns, and have been in use by Churches of God for some years. Except for slightly discolored edges, they are in excellent condition.

The Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Fonthill, Ont., Churches of God took up a special pre-Christmas collection of $21.60 for use among the needy of the church. Individuals also have contributed to the fund, administered by the N. B. I. Will others?

A brief note from James A. Patrick, former president of the N. B. I., informs us that he will soon have an article ready for publication in this paper. Watch for it.

"Crime: Its Cause, Increase, Relief, and Final Eradication," will be the subject of Pastor G. E. Marsh in Oregon, Ill., next Sunday evening. His morning theme will be, "Honoring God With Our Substance," showing giving to be a necessary part of worship.

Sr. Alice Gesin of Oregon was called to Chicago recently to assist at the home of Bro. F. L. Austin in the vare of his mother, Sr. Mary A. Woodward, during the illness of Sr. Sitler, who has been in constant attendance there for many months.

Bro. R. H. Judd, Toronto, Canada, has been carrying on an interesting literary discussion on the Trinity question with a prominent Presbyterian minister of that city. Those who are familiar with Bro. Judd's ability in dealing with this important matter will appreciate the difficulty in which his ministerial opponent finds hinself involved after a brief correspondence with Bro. Judd. Next week's Herald will contain a most helpful article by Bro. Judd on this subject, Sunday, Feb. 10, Pastor Norman John Mac Lcod will present as his subject at the church in Los Angeles the interesting and exceedingly timely subject, "Christianity and Communism." The attitude the Christian should take toward the most thoroughly antichristian movement of the day should be carefully studied.

Ten cents will bring you a book of Bible lessons that is the equivalent of 75 outline tracts. Order from the National Bercan Society, Oregon, Ill.

Sr. Verda Sitler of the Oregon, III., congregation, whose serious illness was reported last week, is slowly but surely improving. She is still in the Oak Park, III., hospital.

The Emphatic Diaglott, with the interlinear Greek-English New Testament by Benjamin II. Wilson, may be ordered from the National Bible Institution at $2.50 a copy, postpaid,

THE DOCTRINAL LESSONS IN TRUTH SEEKERS' QUARTERLY

The great majority of our Sunday schools having expressed their desire that we provide a series of lessons on the fundamentals of the Christian faith to be included in the Truth Seekers' Quarterly, we have provided such a series of studies in the issue for the present quarter.

These lessons are in no way intended as a substitute for the regular International Lessons, which, as heretofore, comprise the chief reason for the publication of the quarterly. They are intended simply to provide a basis for the study of some of the more important teachings of the church with which every person should possess a reasonable familiarity before baptism.

They may be used effectively in pre-baptismal classes by leaders who have difficulty in preparing outlines for this purpose. They may also be of assistance to isolated believers such wish to conduct small doctrinal classes in their own communities, or to refresh their own minds with regard to the biblical basis of their faith.

Where it is desired to take up such a course of study thoroughly, we strongly recommend the use of Berean Bible Studies, especially senior books 1, 2, and 3, which may be soured at 25 cents each by addressing the National Berean Society, Oregon, 111.

Our subscribers will realize that in the space at our disposal in the quarterly it is impossible to cover the entire scope of truth which should be included under the classification "Fundamentals," but such subjects as may not for lack of room be incorporated in the present quarter's work may be presented in future issues, providing, of course, that the present series meets with approval and is found to be sufficiently valuable to justify a continuation of this department.

The editors would appreciate constructive riticism of these lessons, as the present issue is purely experimental and subject to change or omission entirely in the future. All will agree, we believe, that a definite knowledge of the teaching of the Bible regarding the conditions of eternal salvation is of very great importance, especially in three days of widespread indifference regarding them, and that an earnest effort should be made to instruct ild and young in these matters. If these lessons aid in such a necessary work for the Master we shall be grateful indeed.

The first lesson of the series follows:

LEARNING ABOUT GOD

Golden Text

"That which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto hem,"—Rom, 1:19,

I. Learning to Know God. The history of mankind begins and ends with God. It is important, then, that we should learn all that we can about Him and about His plans for us. Knowledge is obtained by observation, experience, and testimony. To come to a satisfactory understanding of God we must observe how He works in nature, in the lives of men, and with nations; we must experience within ourselves something of His presence and power; and we must study the testimony of the inspired writers of the Bible concerning His ladure, character, and purpose.

II. Some Things We Cannot Know About 50d. God is infinite, we are finite; therefore, there are some things we may not hope to know about Him, for our minds are not apable of grasping them. His being, imnortality, and infinite power and knowledge are all beyond our human comprehension. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain un. it. —Psa. 139;6.

Study in this connection the entire passage, Psa. 139:1-13.

111. What We May Know About God Has Been Revealed. As we shall see in another lesson, God created man to be a worker with Him. In order that we may carry on His work just as He has planned it God has revealed in the Bible much of His wonderful purposes for the world and its people. He has done this in two ways, first, in nature or the things He has made (Psa. 19:1-4; Rom. 1:19, 20: 10: 10-18); and, second, in the holy Scriptures (2 Tim. 3:16, 17). But the revelation of Himself and of His will as it is made in the Bible is the more important because it brings God and His desires before us more clearly and definitely so that there is less possibility of misunderstanding.

Questions on the Subject. What is the first thing we ought to know about religion? By what three methods may we learn about God? What are some of the things we cannot know about God? Why can we not learn these things? How much does God know about us? Why does God want us to know His will?

Thus far a number of renewal pledges to the Dollar-a-Month Club have been made. Has yours?

"Church-Quakes and State-Quakes"

By Norman John MacLeod

"Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him."--Psalm 72:11.

CHRISTIANS are revolutionaries. They cannot be otherwise. And yet they are revolutionaries of a peaceful sort. They are revolutionaries of the idealistic kind that Napoleon dubbed

"There are Church-quakes and State-quakes in the moral and political world, as well as earthquakes, storms, and tempests in the physical."— John Adams."

"Idealogues." Men who are wrapped up in the beatific vision are the kind that make the real Christian. Militant men who are so peaceful at heart that they would shudder even at the thought of bloodshed! And yet they are revolutionaries just the same! They believe in a revolution of the ideal species.

When the "Hundred Years' Revolution" of ancient Rome ended all of the political and economic liberties of the people of the Republic; when France started the series of revolutions that swept over Europe and almost the yhole world; when Russia threw off the yoke of the Czar of ill the Russias, the fruits of victory were poisoned by the sitter feelings that were created by the deluge of blood that was let. The French overthrew one set of despotic Divine Right rulers only to fall under the oppressions of those who had pretended to be their liberators. The erv of "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity" was ridiculed and dragged into the mud by that "Son of the Revolution," Napoleon, when he changed it both in words and in fact to read: "Infantry, Cavalry, Troops." Such was the actuality of the case. The Russians overthrew the autocratic Czar only to take unto themselves a ruler more despotic and tyrannical than any Czar could ever be in his days of most solitary rule. The ancient Romans surrendered all their privileges of self-government when they set up the dictator of the army, the Emperor, the creature of their own making. Such seems to be ever the history of the governments of mankind; change is always the order of the day; change in an effort to right certain abuses in the administration of law; change for the sake of getting better men in office; and sometimes change merely for the sake of change. Usually for a time certain abuses are corrected only to give way to worse ones than before. Often are changes made in the form of governments as a figurative "smokescreen" behind which the politicians do their juggling to fool the public. Such are the "State-quakes" of this world: what seems to be a real reform is merely a shifting of personalities; what seems to be an attempt to economize in government is merely an effort to becloud the issue, to distract the attention of the people from the real ailment to the point of a much needed reduction in taxes; what seems to be an endeavor to secure the best men for the position proves merely to be the ousting of one set of corrupt men so that another set often more corrupt than the others may replace them. Oftentimes a good man when elected either becomes corrupt through bad influences; is of little influence in the government; or raises such a host of enemies by his reforms that he is soon ousted from office. The "quake" is merely a surface ripple that leaves the "dirty pool" undisturbed in its depths.

In the field of religion there is much likewise that appears to be in the nature of revolutionary changes. Here again the real Christian is a revolutionary. The apostate church must be swept away to be replaced by the true church. The ideal church is the one that alone is worthy of support. In the United States we may support whatever denomination we see fit: we can lend our support to whatever creed suits our individual needs. But that is not always the case in other places. Even though the Middle Ages are long past chronologically, many nations still have an established church to which the people must pay "tithes." We have the strange phenomenon in some places where people pay tithes to the State church and attend the denomination of their own selection. Because of the privileged position of the churches in many lands the bitter attitude of the militant revolutionary is to do away with all churches, (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Chinese Gives Life for Baby

"Greater love hath no man than this ---."-Jesus.

TSINANFU, China, Jan. 27.—"Don't harm an innocent thing like this, it has done no harm to us," urged an unidentified unchristianized Chinese to the Communists who were about to kill the three months old child of missionary parents, who had themselves just been slain. An official of the China Inland Mission of Toronto, Canada, told the story of a strange and almost unbelievable sacrifice made by an unknown Chinese, upon his return to this city with the tiny daughter of Rev. and Mrs. John C. Stam, the missionaries who were killed at Miasosheo, last December. Investigations by the official revealed that after the parents had been executed their captors were about to kill the baby to avoid the trouble of caring for it when a man who had but recently been released by Communists from the village prison pleaded for the infant's life. The inhuman captors asked, "Who will forfeit his life for the child?" The released Chinese prisoner volunteered to do so and was killed on the spot. The representative of the China Inland Mission made a thorough investigation of the circumstances and was convinced of the truth of the story. Chinese witnesses of the unknown's self-sacrificing act said that he had "gained great heavenly favor" by it.

When the Dragon Eats the Sun

They "changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things."—Paul.

CALCUTTA, India, Feb. 2.—Tomorrow, according to the Hindus, the dragon Rahu, "the Seizer," will swallow the sun as it passes through the constellation Capricorn, the "horned goat." When this tragic event occurs the natives believe that world calamity is sure to follow. The "swallowing of the sun" has nothing to do with the eclipse of that radiant orb which will be visible throughout North America.

While no physical manifestations appear, nevertheless this astronomical occurrence in India is always accompanied with extraordinary scenes of religious frenzy. Judging from past experiences, the last of which took place in 1908, the authorities fear that hundreds of natives may be crushed to death when literally millions crowd the banks of the sacred River Ganges and force their way in an impenetrable mass into its muddy waters. Their religion teaches that the polluted water of the Ganges washes away all sin and moral taint.

Thousands of pilgrims have been marching many days through the burning heat toward Calcutta, Benares, and other large temple sites on the river, chanting prayers, doing fantastic penances, and gradually working themselves into a wild religious frenzy. Arriving at their destinations, the entire mass of men, women, and children will cast themselves without reserve into the disease-laden waters. It is feared that epidemics may follow as has generally been the case in the past. To meet the threatened danger the Government has prepared huge funeral pyres for the burning of the bodies of those crushed to death in the mad rush to and from the river, or who may fall victims to cholera or other diseases as a result of their immersion in the Ganges.

How strange it is that Christian people, whose faith is so much loftier in tone and richer in promise, seem unable to develop an enthusiasm and a zeal in their religious vice comparable to that of these debased and ignorant heathen!

Arabs Oppose Jewish Immigration

"Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border."—Numbers 20:21.

JERUSALEM, Jan. 11.—A secret meeting of Imams (Mohammedan priests) and Moslem leaders has been summoned for today by the Mufti (a court officer) of Jerusalem, Haj Amin Al Husseini, with a view, it is believed, to further the campaign to prevent sales of Arab lands to Jews. Ways of fomenting land disputes and the renewal of incitement are among other matters to be studied by the meeting, according to information reaching The Palestine Post.

At the same time stronger patrols are being placed on the roads and additional inspectors in trains by the Trans-Jordan Government to prevent illegal immigrants from Syria and Iraq (ancient Babylon) from passing through Trans-Jordan in attempting to reach Palestine. So many are attempting to flock into this country that they may enjoy its prosperity which has been brought about by the business ability of returning Jews that the District Court at Haifa and other centers has been obliged to impose heavy penalties on illegal entrants into Palestine.

·The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

THE reign of the saints is to be a reality. It is claimed by those who oppose the Future Age, that the terms "kings and priests" only designate the exaltation and glory of the people of God without defining the nature of that glory and honor. It is true that a person may be called a king and yet possess no right or title to the name.

But would it be just in our heavenly Father to hold out, as incentives to obedience, promises He never intends to fulfill? To mock His people with rewards they will or can never receive? Certainly not.

The same parity of reasoning which will figure away the literal reign and priesthood of the saints will figure away the literality of the same titles of the Son of God. The philology and Bible use of these proffered titles will prove just as much when applied to the saints as when applied to Christ. But that all the redeemed will not only possess the titles, but exercise the functions of kings and priests, will be manifest in the fruition of the following song:

"And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

From this great gospel song, I would deduct the following legitimate conclusions, namely:

1. The redeemed of all ages and generations are the witnesses in the case. They have passed the fiery ordeal of probation, having fought their last battle and gained the last victory. Clad with immortality and radiant with beauty, with all the gems of virtue which have ever decked the purest and holiest characters, flashing upon their diadem—with their long white robes, fit emblems of the immaculate purity of their character, and with palms of victory, over the last great foe, waving high in the heavens—and without a note of discord, they sing in one long, loud, symphonious strain, while myriads on myriads of angels join in chorus: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

Can it be that all these redeemed millions are deceived in reference to the nature of their reward? Is it not much more probable that those poor, mortal, fallible men, who so strenuously oppose this bright and glorious hope, whose fruition all the redeemed will proclaim, are mistaken? But if this song shall be realized, then all the saints will reign as kings and priests. To deny this is to brand with false-hood or ignorance these countless millions of infallible witnesses. O reader! may you and I be there, on that august occasion, having washed our robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. May we understand and be in harmony with God's plan now, that we may join in unison in this triumphant song. Those who do not expect to be kings and priests cannot realize their faith and hope in the kingdom of God. Those who do not develop characters in reference to these positions, will not be prepared for the discharge of the duties devolving upon them. There will be no adaptation between their education and the functions of their office.

2. It is a song which subjects of a kingdom, however exalted their privileges, as such, cannot truthfully sing. Subjects do not reign. Kings rule, and subjects are required to obey.

3. The position of all the immortalized saints will be the same; consequently they will not reign over one another. They will be immortal; consequently they will not need the intercession or sacrifice of priests. They will all be kings and priests; hence there must be subjects of judgment and mercy in the kingdom

The Privilege of Prayer

THE privilege of prayer to me is one of the most cherished possessions, because faith and experience alike convince me that God Himself sees and answers, and His answer I never venture to criticize. It is my part only to ask. It is entirely His to give or withhold as He knows is best. If it were otherwise, I would not dare to pray at all.

In the quiet of home, in the heat of life and strife, in the face of death the privilege of speech with God is inestimable. I value it more because it calls for nothing that the wayfaring man, though a fool, cannot give—that is, the simplest expression of his simplest desire. When I can neither see nor hear nor speak, still I can pray so that God can hear. When I finally pass through the valley of the shadow of death, I expect to pass through it in conversation with of God. Where shall such be found after the kingdom is set up?

Answer: The living nations from among whom the living saints are selected. While Christ and the saints reign as universal monarchs of the world, there will be the nations, kindreds, and people of earth, as a second party, to serve and obey. See Daniel 7:13, 14, 27.

4. This song of the redeemed proclaims the consummation of the design of the gospel, which is not to convert the world, but to select from all the nations a royal body of rulers.

They are redeemed out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; but these nations out from among which they are taken, are not redeemed.

The gospel is projected on the eclectic system of selecting the best material. Its object is to take out of the nations a people for the name of Christ. All nations are permitted to live, that from the masses of men the best selection may be made. God's plan in this respect may be compared to a class of mechanics who should suffer a whole forest of trees to stand for a time, that they might have the greater number and variety of trees from which to select such as were adapted to the purpose of building.

Such only as were adapted to the design of the builders would be selected, however well adapted to other purposes. And even after being thus selected, if any cause should so mar or injure any tree or stick of timber as to disqualify it for fulfilling the design of the one who selected it, it would be thrown aside as not adapted to the position it was designed to occupy in the superstructure.

Just so in reference to the gospel; it only proposes to select and save such as are qualified by moral and intellectual adaptation to occupy the position and discharge the duties, in the kingdom of God, of kings and priests, to administer law and mercy. There must therefore be these qualifications, to begin with, as the basis of those developments, that discipline and training, which alone will qualify any person to fulfill the design the gospel proposes in God's plan. Where these susceptibilities do not exist, or have been destroyed by habits of vice, there is no hope of salvation, because nothing upon which to operate. Hence, there must be a good and honest heart (or mind) to receive the word of the kingdom, and intellectual ability, with a willing mind to exercise it, to understand it, before the character required by the gospel will, or can be, devel oped. And even after having been selected, if these powers and susceptibilities are so weakened, or perverted, by the use of stimulants of any kind, or intemperance in any of its forms, or the voluntary violation of the laws of our physical, moral, or intellectual natures, or any vice or habit whatever, so as to disqualify us for the discharge of the great responsibilities devolving upon those who shall inherit the kingdom; we will never hear the welcome voice of our royal brother, inviting us to "come and inherit the kingdom" prepared for the blessed of the Father since the world was founded. Nor does it prove a respecter of persons, with God, to select none except such as are thus quali fied by intellectual, moral, and physical fitness, than for a mechanic or joiner to pass hundreds of trees in a forest, and select such only as are susceptible of being converted into the use designed.

5. They sing in the present tense—"Thou hast made us . . . kings and priests." Hence, the preparation for these glorious positions and their appointment thereto will be anterior to the singing of their song, which proclaims the consummation, not the transition, of the gospel plan, as far as its object is concerned. This being true, it follows that all the discipline, education, and qualifications for the position of kings and priests must precede our elevation to these responsible positions

In all appointments by kings, governors, or rulers, to responsible positions of State, those only are thus rewarded who are supposed to be qualified by previous discipline and education for the discharge of the functions of their position.

Will Christ be less reasonable? Why, a teacher cannot obtain a position in a common school without evidence of his qualifications for that specific work! And will Christ elevate to the responsible positions of the imperial dominion, and salvation of the world, such as have not been previously educated in reference to the great and glorious duties and responsibilities of these offices? He certainly will not, if the song of the redeemed, and all who join in unison with it, indicate His design. There will be no Gospel School in the kingdom, to discipline and educate persons for the office of kings and priests. All such wall have been previously educated and disciplined for these specific positions, and have as their rich reward received their appointment. Hence they sing, "Thou hast made us kings and priests." Their future work is to reign and administer mercy over all the earth.

Hence they add, and "we shall reign on the earth." The only gospel discipline and education belonging to the Kingdom Age will be to qualify the nations collectively for becoming subjects of Christ and His associate rulers, and individually of obedience to the commandments of our heavenly Father, as conditions of immortality, through the instrumentality of the tree of life (Rev. 22.14). But I will defer the position and discipline of nations for future articles.

To my mind, no stronger argument ought to be required to show the essentiality of understanding and believing the gospel of the kingdom, than the necessary discipline and education to qualify persons for the position they are to occupy in that kingdom. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient.

6. This song of the redeemed locates the kingdom upon the earth. They sing unitedly, "We shall reign on the earth." Can they be mistaken in reference to the planet on which they stand? It is the only one they know anything about. Here they were born, lived, died, and rose again. It is their only home. Not only so, but it is their mother. They are made of earth. Nay, more, it is the only planet in the vast dominion of God called earth.

If the authors of the following lines should be there, they must change their words, or they will strike a discordant note; and instead of—

"With Thee we'll reign, With Thee we'll rise, And kingdoms gain Beyond the skies."

"Beyond the bounds of time and space, The saints' secure abode."

—they must sing, "And we shall reign on the earth." We had better learn to sing the truth now.

The following testimony proves, as demonstrably, that the saints shall sit on thrones of judgment and reign literally for a thousand years, as that Christ shall. They are indissolubly joined together in this glowing description,

The Fruitage of Peace

WAR in a civilized State is an anomaly, a "throwback" to savagery. There is no logic, no reason, no sanity, in war. War is the game of ignorance, the plaything of stunted minds. It solves no questions, it answers no arguments, it settles no problems. Benjamin Franklin was right when he said, "There never was a good war or a bad peace."

And yet war has held the forefront on the stage of history from the beginning of organized government. Civilization has not changed the situation in the least. The progress of science and the development of invention have not affected it, unless it is to increase its deadliness and horror. Even the religion of Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace and the Advocate of brotherhood and love, as it is generally understood and interpreted has dismally failed to take the bloodlust out of the hearts of men. After two thousand years of preaching the gospel of peace, the heavenly message of "good will toward men," in the words of Lord Byron, "War, war is still the ery!"

The history of the world is but a record of bloody deeds performed on a gigantic scale.

"We watch the circle of the eternal years
And read forever in the storied page
One lengthened scroll of blood and wrong and tears!"

Perhaps Thomas Hardy was not altogether wrong, and war is the one interesting fact of history, the only thing worth recording, for "War makes rattling good history; but Peace poor reading!" he declares.

William Cowper, England's "Christian poet," and obviously a premillennialist, wrote truly of war:

"War's a game which were their subjects wise Kings would not play at!"

With the coming of popular or democratic government, "government of the people, by the people, for the people," it would have been supposed that wars would cease throughout the world, for it is the general populace that suffers, it is the ordinary man who bears the brunt of the battle. Yet peace did not result from the dethronement of kings.

Of all the illogical and useless wars which history records we are coming to see that the last great war was the most illogical and unnecessary of them all. And it struck the world at the highest point of our so-called Christian civilization! The nations responded spontaneously and almost unanimously to its call. What response has our boasted civilization to this terrible arrangement? Has it no reply? Shamed silence is its only answer! There is no-excuse for war!

Ignorance always claims its price, and we are paying through the nose today for the woeful lack of wisdom and sanity we displayed yesterday. But it is needless for me to point out the sad results of war again. They are too obvious, still too close to us to need recounting at this time.

And so I will ignore the human element, forget that the cause of war lies in ignorance, selfishness, and pride, and turn to a hopeful, helpful, and inspiring promise of almighty God that we may refresh our hearts with its assurances.

"It shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.... And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."—Isaiah 2:1-4.

It is with the fulfillment of this splendid prediction that we will concern ourselves. What will be the result of its accomplishment? How will the world react to such a change? How will it profit by it? These are some of the questions that naturally arise in our minds as we contemplate the achievement of this marvelous design of the Lord.

First of all we see it will mean the introduction of an entirely new force or influence in the political arena, the power of right example in government! A perfect government, under a just and righteous constitution, administered by faithful rulers, and which will result in prosperity, peace, and general contentment such as no people has ever before experienced, will attract the attention and enthrall the hearts of mankind everywhere.

For ages it has been the slogan of the strong that "might makes right!" That the will of the strongest must prevail. This is the primeval "Law of the Jungle!" It is the law of the talon, the fang, and the bloodstained maw of the beast! It is the law of the spear, the sword, and the death-dealing cannon! It is the law of fire and ruthless ness and agony of pain! Such is the law that "might makes right!"

But here in this prophecy of Isaiah we see the introduction of a new and nobler law. A law that appeals to the finer instincts of men. A law that turns their thoughts far from thoughts of carnage and directs them into peaceful channels of brotherhood and love.

This new principle of national ethics, of international relationships, is found to be based on voluntary initiative. It will not be compulsion that moves the nations to "beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks." Their action indicates a changed viewpoint on their part. They will have caught a vision of a better order of things which they wish to enjoy for themselves. No congress of nations will be called to bring about this change of heart, no treaty-making body will be assembled. The reversal of thought will result from the spontaneous response of the nations to the appeal of right, or, we might even say, self-interest, for it will be to the advantage of all

The Abomination of Desolation

By Grover Gordon

IN answer to the request for an article on this question 1 will not promise to give a definite answer as to what it is but rather to try and establish when it was, is, or is to be. First, there seem to be at least three different theories concerning the fulfillment of this scripture. One is that it was the destruction of the holy city and the temple by Titus, another that it is the Mosque of Omar which stands on the site of the temple, and still another that it is still future. What does God's Word say about it?

DESOLATION BY TITUS

In Daniel 9:24-27 we are told of the seventy weeks (seventy sevens) which are determined upon Daniel's people; they are divided into three groups, seven weeks, three score and two weeks, one week. It is not my purpose to discuss this at any length but to get the separation between the last two groups.

After the threescore and two weeks Messiah is cut off; then a prince is said to come and destroy the city and sanctuary and unto the end of the war desolations are determined. (Notice there is nothing said about abominations in connection with this.)

In the Gospel of Luke we have a more detailed account of this desolation. "When ye see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh."—Luke 21:20. Note: The disciples are to see and not to read as in Matthew 24 and Mark 13.

Luke says, "There shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people," that is, on Israel (Daniel's people). "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."—Luke 21:24.

After the destruction of their city and sanctuary they were scattered and God left off working or dealing with them UNTIL (a definite time) the times of the Gentiles are ended, at which time He will gather them into their own land and again work with them. The space of time which intervenes between the threescore and two weeks and the one week then must be the times of the Gentiles, so the destruction of the city and sanctuary could hardly be the abomination of desolation as that takes place during the last week, or seven.

THE MOSQUE OF OMAR

We will now deal briefly with the Mosque of Omar and try it by Scripture. Notice if the following scriptures were in any way fulfilled at or since it was placed on Moriah. We are told by Matthew when the abomination of desolation stands in the holy place, "Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." The next verse would imply that it is to be upon all flesh, not just Israel, Daniel's people (Matt. 24:21, 22) (no flesh saved except the days be shortened).

Here is the instruction given: "Whoso readeth, let him understand."—Matt. 24:15.

In Luke is given the account of the destruction of the city (Jerusalem) and the sanctuary which took place about thirty-five years after Messiah was cut off. Jesus, knowing that some of the disciples would live to see it, said: "When ye shall see Jerusalem compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh." But in the case of the abomination of desolation it is said "whose readeth," showing it was given to those of more distant future.

The conditions which exist at the two events are similar and the warning is also much the same, but the time and the people affected are quite different.

COMING ABOMINATIONS

When Daniel's people are again in their own land we still see ONE WEEK determined upon them, and perhaps this is what the Savior was thinking about when He said, "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive."-John 5:43. We seem to see the fulfillment of this statement in the last week. "And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week: and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate."—Dan. 9:27. Compare Daniel 11:31: "And shall take away the daily sacrifice, and . . . shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." In verses 36 to 39 a description is given of the false Messiah; verse 40 says, "The time of the end," and verse 45 gives the place, "And he shall plant the tabernacle of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain." When the false one comes in his own name and is accepted is the time when God will pour out His wrath upon all flesh; then will be the GREAT TRIBULATION such as never was from the beginning of the world, no, nor ever shall be.

Here is understanding: If we have kept the word of His patience, He also will keep us from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world (all flesh) to try them that dwell upon the earth.

God the Creator—Not a Trinity

By R. H. Judd

DEAR FRIEND, Yours of 22nd August duly received. Really, friend, your letter fairly puzzles me. You say, "Your basis is mine; (1) The Bible is a reasonable Book; (2) none of its teachings contradict any known fact." Then you say that you agree with me that "there is but one God." But

The following letter, which was originally written to a friend and by request published in The Restitution Herald of October 17, 1922, is presented again in answer to a question recently addressed to the Editor by a reader in the West. Bro. Judd's logical and scriptural argument in opposition to the Trinitarian view is worthy of thoughtful and prayerful consideration.

(and here is the puzzle) the whole subject of your letter is to endeavor to prove that Jesus Christ is God, and that the Holy Spirit is God, and that they are each separate personal Beings. That being so your doetrine teaches three Gods, not one God, viz., God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit; and yet you say you believe there is but one God. In order to overcome this difficulty you suggest that "God" is not the name of a Being, but "a word which indicates an office," such as, for instance, the word "Casar," which was the title of the Roman monarchs, and you give as an illustration the occasion when Maximus, Bablinus, and Gordian were emperors together at one and the same time.

Before examining your illustration, let us first consider your suggestion relative to the word "God." In the passages of Isaiah quoted by you, God distinctly asserts, "I am God."—Isa. 43:12. Clearly then it is more than the name of an office; it is the title of a Being. But mark this, while it is true the word itself is used to designate others that are "called gods" (for circumstances of human nature make it necessary), it is an indisputable fact that God Himself claims the title as in reality belonging to Himself alone. He distinctly says, "Beside me there is no God" (Isa. 45.5). Hence, since there is but one God, the word cannot properly be used of any other being or thing; the title in its primary sense becomes exclusive when rightly understood.

Now as to the illustration you mention of the three men reigning as emperors at one and the same time. Not one of these three men could with truth say, "I am Cæsar, and there is none else, there is no Cæsar beside me."

Did the word "God" stand for the office instead of the Being, there would still be no gain from your point of view, for God claims that He alone has filled it, and none other ever shall. Isaiah 43:10—"Before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me." Again, neither of the three emperors could, in an official capacity, rightly use the pronoun "I," for they held the office conjointly, and hence would of necessity be obliged to use the plural word "we." Now right here is a remarkable fact, God never once makes use of the term "we," it is invariably "I"; "I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me"; "my counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." If one wished to express the first person singular, and to emphasize the contrast between one and others (be they many or few), will you tell me how it could be more forcibly done than it is in this verse? When this is supported by the additional statement—"Beside me (singular) there is no God; I know not any" (Isa. 44:8), given in answer to the very question, "Is there a God beside me?" the evidence seems to be conclusive; and to endeavor to explain away such direct language seems to me (I cannot speak for others) like making God a liar. I think I am not mistaken in saying that the Bible evidence you accepted when you became a Conditionalist in your views as to the nature of man were not any more explicit than these passages which I have quoted regarding the fact that God is one. Jesus Christ called His Father "the ONLY true God" (John 17: 3; 5:44, R. V.). Does not such language completely shut out the idea of a trinity? If not, how else could it be done?

You say the Holy Spirit is called "God" in Acts 5:3, 4. When you find repeated definite statements such as that in Isaiah 44 8, which cannot legitimately, and I might add possibly, carry more than one sense (for the statements are positive, not inferential), you are bound, if you wish to rightly divide the Word of truth, to give an interpretation to all other passages which will in no way weaken the force of the former. If this is not done, then the positive statements referred to lose just that proportion of truth. You must admit, your assertion that the Holy Spirit is in these verses "called God" is inferential, not positive. The passage does not necessitate the interpretation you put upon it, even from an "orthodox" understanding, and an "orthodox" believer could very properly deny such inference.

On your remarks as to "he" and "him," personal pronouns used in chapters 14 to 16 of John's Gospel, I quote the following from my Bible—"The Greek for Comforter is masculine—the pronoun agrees with the noun. The Greek word for Spirit is neuter, therefore in 1 Peter 1:11 the pronoun used is 'it.'" Had Jesus Christ used the word "Spirit" instead of "Comforter" the pronoun "it" would have governed the translation. Rev. G. P. Burns says the idea of personality does not attach to the original, and for that reason alone the Revisers have done wisely in substituting the word "Spirit" for "Ghost." It is the Spirit of God, not the Ghost of God.

As to the Spirit speaking-How did the Spirit of God speak in days gone by? Was it not by the mouth of His (God's) servants the prophets? See 2 Peter 1:21; Acts 1:16

Then with reference to showing "things to come." I believe I do not mistake when I assert that you will agree that reliable knowledge of things to come can only (and I use the word "only" in the same strict sense as John 17:3) be had through the Old and New Testaments, which were given through holy men of old who spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, both before and after the time of Christ.

You state the Holy Spirit is spoken of as being a "witness" and quote Acts 5:32 as proof. I would call your attention to the marginal rendering—"And God hath given the Holy Spirit to them that obey him." Does not that harmonize with the promise? One does not need to be a very deep student of the Word to be acquainted with the fact that the Holy Spirit was "given" and "received" by different individuals in varying "measure." But is a witness necessarily a personality? Certainly not. For example see Genesis 21:30; 31:44, 45, 52. But to examine the passage quoted by you, viz., Acts 5:32, it will yield yet another interesting fact. What are the apostles witnesses of? "These sayings" (margin). How have they witnessed, and how has the Holy Spirit witnessed? See again Acts 1:16 and 2 Peter 1:21.

Had the Spirit been a personality, and not merely personified, there would not have occurred in Scripture passages that are by common consent admitted to be absolutely incompatible with personality. If the Spirit is a personality, and granting such passages do occur, the instance is, so far as I am aware, without parallel in literature either sacred or secular.

No, dear friend, I do not deserve your flattery that these things are "all child's play" to me, and that I am "familiar with all that can be said," for I am always finding something fresh in God's Word. There is one thing, however, that I have found to be of considerable help in these topical studies of the Bible, and that is to lay hold of some one indisputable FACT in the case. A fact cannot be controverted, and will agree with God's book of nature as well as with God's written Word. Holding to such a fact I have a firm foundation that cannot be moved, and can then patiently wait for light upon passages that appear for the time being to be difficult or ambiguous. The doctrine of the Trinity is a case in point. I came to see that God has given us an infallible science in the science of numbers, and the laws which govern it in the realm of nature, govern it also in His Word. Having an interleaved Bible, I am able to enter bit by bit, here a little and there a little, valuable information from reliable sources, and thus I have ready for instant use an answer for him that asketh of me. What other book could stand such searching? Sometimes I have spent days in the study of four or five words in a single sentence. The first chapter of the Bible has always had a fascination for me, and I have never yet exhausted its first sentence.

Faithfully yours in Christian love and service,

R. H. Judd.

THE FRUITAGE OF PEACE

people to submit to the authority of the King of kings.

It is apparent from other scriptures that the pride and power of the nations will have been broken before the words of Isaiah are fulfilled. The great empires will largely have disappeared, having been broken up into small independent States and self-governing cities, as was the case in the early days of Troy, Venice, Carthage, and Rome.

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts; It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities: and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of hosts: I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord." The reason they will do this is stated in the following verse, where the citizens of the cities and nations are said to address the Jews in Jerusalem, saying, "For we have heard that God is with you."—Zech. 8.20-23.

The individuals who will make up the population of these "strong nations" and independent cities will have lost their fear and suspicion of each other, their pride will have been broken, and they will have reached a place in their humiliation where they will ask for nothing but life and the material necessities of life, and they will "seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem" because they will see that prosperity prevails and life is secure in the little mustard seed kingdom of God. "We have heard that God is with you," will be the reason they will give for submitting to His rulership. They will feel the need of God, and the presence of God is always an assurance of peace, prosperity, and justice. And these will be what the long-suffering nations will crave the most when the weary days of the tribulation are ended.

Now let us see what further results will flow from the fulfillment of Isaiah's wonderful prophecy.

"He will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. . . And they shall beat their swords into plow-shares: . . . neither shall they learn war any more."

What could the world do even under human government should they suddenly determine to "beat their swords into plowshares," that is, turn their entire military expenditures over for the development of agriculture and other peace time purposes?

The World War cost immediately in round figures, $186,000,000,000. That was the actual outlay for the carrying on of the war. But even this vast sum represents but a small fraction of the cost of the war, for all that has been lost through the long years of depression caused by it, the banks that have failed, the securities that have depreciated in value, the enormous sums that have been expended by the nations for material relief, the care for the incapacitated soldiers and their dependents, the soldiers' bonus, and hundreds of other expensive items all of which may be traced back to the World War, must be added to the original figures named before we arrive at the total final cost of the great conflict.

What could the world do with such a sum if used in other ways?

This enormous amount of money would almost rebuild the world from a material standpoint. It would spread over all continents a system of paved highways. It would extend railway lines into the far corners of the earth that those who live far from the centers of civilization might enjoy its benefits and blessings. It would establish a world-girdling system of airports. It would bring the commodities of the tropical and temperate zones to the most distant regions of the frozen North and South. It would build radio stations of tremendous power in all sections, for the transmission of news and educational information of all kinds. It would provide free university training for all the young people of the world. Hospitalization and the care of the sick would be freely furnished to all classes. It would reclaim the desert regions of the earth. These and a thousand other beneficent purposes might be accomplished with the money now being spent on warfare-the last war and its results-if the nations would "beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks!"

And that is exactly what they are going to do when the Lord comes! That is the consummation for which we wait and watch and pray! Then the hearts of hate will be transformed into hearts of brotherhood and love, and the best and noblest possibilities of men will be cultivated and developed that they may enjoy to the full the splendid riches with which God has stored the earth He-has given to be their home.

ART THOU A KING?

By C. E. Randall

"Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world."—John 18:37.

JESUS came into the world to be "King of kings." He confessed His mission before Pilate, and we have it stated by other inspired writers in many places. His mission of becoming King was not realized during His public ministry on earth. He came unto His own and offered them the kingdom and they received Him not (John 1:11). The kingdom was rejected and the King crucified.

God's Word shall not return unto Him void, but shall accomplish the purpose whereunto it was sent, and the promise that Christ would sit upon David's throne will yet be fulfilled (Luke 1:32, 33). David's throne has been promised to Christ (Ezek. 21:25-27; Isa. 9:6, 7), and when Christ shall come the second time, He shall then sit upon the throne of His glory (Matt. 25:31).

Christ while in heaven is sitting on the Father's throne, but when He returns to earth and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, then He will sit upon His own throne (Rev. 11.15; 3:21). In that day the Lord shall be King over all the earth (Zech. 14:9). The law will go forth from Jerusalem and nations will go up to Jerusalem every year to keep the feast of tabernacles and to learn of God's way, and they will learn war no more (Micah 4:1-5; Zech. 14:16-18).—Church of God Messenger.

"And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the persons (Whiting) that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and (those) which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. . . . . Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him (Christ) a thousand years."—Rev. 20:4, 6.

In the foregoing text it is only promised the saints that they shall reign "a thousand years." Why this limitation if they shall reign beyond that period? This limitation is placed upon the reign of the saints with Christ; not upon the reign of Christ.

Suppose it should be affirmed that B went with C from Chicago to Detroit; this might be true, and yet C go on to New York City. But if both should go on to New York City together, without stopping at Detroit, there would be no propriety in saying that one accompanied the other to Detroit.

If the saints reign with Christ beyond the thousand years, why this limitation? 1 will be referred to Revelation 22:5-"And they shall reign for ever and ever." The original is, "eis tous aionos tou aionon." Literally, "unto the ages of ages." Donnegan in his Greek Lexicon says that the preposition eis, when used in defining time, signifies "to, even to, up to, until." The Bible vs. Tradition, and The Bible Union thus render the same Greek phrase-"Smoke ascends"—"tormented" "unto the ages of ages." But of Christ's reign there shall be no end. His throne and kingdom will endure while the sun and moon endure, and the days of heaven roll on. Hence we are not dependent upon such uncertain phrases which would prove endless misery, if admitted, as "for ever and ever," in the King's version, and "to the ages of ages," in the original, to prove the endless perpetuity of the throne and kingdom of Christ.

Churches are often the tools of government. And governments sometimes are the instrumentalities of churches. When the Divine Right of kings was revived in modern times it was used as an instrument to relieve the kings of church domination. The ideal of a secular government free from the fetters of the church became the most popular one in Europe. In these days the Divine Right of kings has become an obsolete theory but in early modern times it served the very useful purpose of severing church and State. If churches were of the proper kind, and if the governments of the world were administered in impartial justice, then the union of church and State would be an ideal thing. But when a corrupt church is united with a corrupt government then the worse comes to worst. We watch with intense interest then the attempt of the German Government to dominate the churches within its borders. We seldom realize that much the same struggle is going on in other parts of the world under cover. But even where there is little or no attempt on the part of the government to dominate the churches there is the appearance of change within the church. But just as in the case of "Statequakes" so the "church-quakes" are merely ripples on the surface oftentimes: what seems to be an effort to purify the worship of the church is merely a shifting of influence from one party to another; what appears to be a movement to increase spiritually is merely a camouflaged political movement within the church government; and what appears to be profound efforts to seek a more united effort are merely efforts to stamp out individual liberty of thought and action in order to secure conformity to the will of others. Political influence is almost always present in the modern church, just as it was in the church of the Middle Ages. What we need is a real "church-quake": one that will stir the church to its uttermost depths and wash it of its filthiness. But that cannot be obtained by Bolshevism, or Fascism, or Naziism, or any other ism.

During the late World War we witnessed the overthrow of many old governments of Europe. There were "Statequakes" happening on every side: the Austro-Hungarian Empire disappeared to be succeeded by numerous States; the German Empire disappeared to be replaced by a much weaker German Republic; the Turkish Empire disappeared to be reorganized by the Turkish Republic-Dictatorship; and new nations sprang up as a crop of discord from the famous "dragon's teeth." Perhaps the most outstanding change of all was Russia, which arose in a completely new form. But most of those changes did not come from the real desire of the peoples involved in most cases: Germany overthrew the Kaiser because they believed that because of Woodrow Wilson's statements there was no other way to bring about peace; the Austro-Hungarian Empire dissolved into its integral parts because of the centrifugal force of the new nationalism working within it. Merely a realignment of conflicting nationalities resulted. The Turks because of military defeat due to bungling decided to back the only man who could save the wreckage of their once glorious empire. Discontents were made more intense by the shifting of political boundaries: more Bulgars live in Rumania, Greece, and Yugo-Slavia than live in Bulgaria; Macedonians divide their allegiance among so many Governments that a special Macedonian society has grown up which has its members throw bombs at various Balkan rulers; "unredeemed Italy" frets at the ties which bind in the limits of the nation which has succeeded to the mantle of the ancient Roman Empire. Another revolution is coming greater than any that has passed. For a new purpose for allegiance both political and religious will soon be found in the earth.

A government which can bring real justice to its poverty stricken people will be welcomed with open arms. A government which can bring a righteous church to its right hand will be one of such power that none can resist it even if he would. A real "State-quake" accompanied by a real "church-quake" is about to take place. Just as one can hear the rumblings in an extinct volcano when an earthquake is about to take place in the physical realm so the rumblings are already heard in the apparently extinct craters of strife in Eastern Europe, the rumblings that predict the coming devastation; the scurrying clouds that predict the coming storm; the coming of the darkest hour that is just before the dawn. Just so can rumblings be heard within the "extinct craters" of the church: the new "Oxford Movement"; the new efforts at church "regimentation'': the efforts within the churches themselves to purify the doctrine: "Fundamentalism" and "Modernism"; the falling away of attendance in the once large denominations, are some of those rumblings that tell of the great "church-quake," the storm that is about to break in the church. Those are the fires that are going to purge "the sons of Levi" so that they may offer an acceptable sacrifice to the Lord (Mal. 3:3),

What a remarkable revolution the coming of Christ will work: the evils with which we are so familiar in our world will be done away; there will be no pretense in those days, for "he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper." And then the greatest "State-quake" of all times will change not only the surface of things politically, but shake the rotten political system to its very foundations and sweep it away: "Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him." "And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness."—Mal. 3:3. And in many ways greatest of all: "Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations he hath made in the earth. He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire. Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth."--Psalm 46:8-10.

John the Baptist and His Preaching

"In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judæa, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 3:1, 2); and in Matthew 3:4 we see what he did eat and wear, and preached, saying, "There cometh one mightier than I after me, the fatchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose."

"And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him: and there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

We see in Matthew 3:5-7: "Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judæa, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins. But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?"

John 1:29, 30: "The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me."

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.-Johnic Fyfe, Lockwood, Mo.

Hammond Election Reported

On January 7, 1935, the Hammond, La., Berean Society held their annual business meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

Anna Mae Bottolfs was elected President, Margaret Bylsma Vice President, Mrs. Warren Landry Secretary-Treasurer. Mrs. W. J. Landry, Secretary.

God's Ark

The ark of the covenant of the Lord with its covering called the mercy scat with the cherubim on each end was the most important piece of furniture in the tabernacle, because it was God's throne in type, where God met and talked to the high priest. The Lord put a cloud over the tabernacle by day and fire by night and when the cloud was taken up, the people journeyed on their way. But if it did not rise the people stayed there until it was lifted. The priests carried the ark to the River Jordan. They stayed there three days. The priests then carried the ark to the water's edge and as soon as their feet touched the water the waters parted; they stood in the midst of the Jordan and the Israelites passed over.

God told the people to take the city of Jericho. So when they came to it, the people marched around the city six times carrying the ark each time, once a day for six days. The seventh day they went around and shouted and the walls of the city fell.

The people of Israel saw that the Philistines were getting the best of them in the war, so they sent to Shiloh for the ark. They thought it would bring them good luck. Eli was an old man. His two sons were with the ark and the people of Israel. Their names were Hophni and Phinehas. They were killed in the war. When the old man Eli found out they were dead he fell off his bench and died. It came to pass that the Philistines won, and got the ark from the Israelites. They put the ark in one of their tribes and they began to get sick. They passed it on from tribe to tribe and soon the Philistines sent the ark back in a cart with two cows tied to it. So the Israelites got back the ark. They were all very happy and had a great time rejoicing. David told all the chosen men to come with him and carry the ark to Jerusalem. As they were going, one of the men. named Uzzah, put out his hand and touched the ark because it was falling. God was very displeased and killed Uzzah. The rest of the men carried the ark on to Jerusalem where it stayed until Israel was taken captive. Jeremiah then took charge of the ark and sent it to the mountains where Moses had died. He hid it in a cave where it is still supposed to be.

In the ark were several things, the golden pot that had manna in it, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the two tables of the covenant.—Betty Davis, Long Beach, Calif.

Taking the Stump

The primary function of any editorial is to campaign for something, whether it be a new type of lipstick or the reduction of the national debt.

The editor has no space for soft soap. His duties are not to write articles, but to take the stump in favor of definite problems. He must, if possible, put the barbs of Thomas Paine and the eloquence of Webster into his work.

An editorial is a goad, preferably a goad to better things. And goads generally hurt. A religious editorial, therefore, pricks in the seat of some one's personal convictions in regard to social or religious things. That is, in fact, to be expected. A religious editorial is a critique, a prod, and a Christian sentiment all in one. It is intended to stir action, not rehash theological theories in a philosophic fashion. That is the purpose of an article. These things should not be forgotten by the reader.

PETER TELLS US HOW TO BE GOOD CITIZENS

HOW many of you boys and girls have ever seen a long list of "do nots"? You've read them over and over, perhaps. "Do not do this"; "do not do that." And you've wondered, and rightly, just what you could do.

Do you know, Jesus, in telling us how to get along the best way in this world, didn't make any long list of "do nots"? He merely set down two rules, and these were both "do."

Open your Bibles to Matthew 22; read verses 37, 38, 39. A very smart man, a lawyer, was trying to trap Jesus here. But Jesus had the wisdom that God gives, and He always had the right answer ready.

How many of you can tell me now the two rules Jesus laid down? They are easy after you read them over. First, love God above everybody and everything else; second, love your neighbor, not as you do your mother or father, but as you love yourself.

Jesus knew that a long list of rules wasn't necessary. If we do just these two things, we will keep every other law that anyone else lays down. Now that seems strange, doesn't it? Let's look at them.

Love God above all. Well, if we do that we will want to obey Him in all things, surely. We will want to know as much about Him and His Son as we can learn. And we will want to be as much like Them as possible. That's the way we are with people we love very much.

Love your neighbor as you do yourself. Why, that's a queer way to love anyone. Let's see! We treat ourselves pretty nice, don't we? We don't knowingly hurt ourselves, at least, not if we have good sense. We're rather good to number one at all times.

Well, that's the way Jesus says we should be to all those we meet. If we keep that rule we'll be easy to live with. Don't you think so? And that's what makes a good citizen.

In our lesson for February 17, Peter is explaining some of the things that come under these two rules that Jesus gave us. One of the first words you will notice, I'm sure, is "honest." If we follow Jesus' way we will be truthful at all times. And that's no small job either, but it's one we can all be proud of accomplishing.

Verse 17 is another one you can easily understand. "Honour all men." Let's each one of us make up our minds, if we want to be good citizens, we must be respectful to all those around us, especially the older ones.

"Love the brotherhood," our brothers and sisters in the church. Nothing so very hard in that surely! But remember, they must love us, too, and they can't do that unless we make ourselves lovable.

"Fear God." Ah, that's the first commandment in other words. Not to be afraid of God, but to reverence and respect Him at all times. We wouldn't use His name in vain then. But of course none of you do that, I know.

"Honour the king," that is, whoever rules over us, all those in authority. Well, if we do just these few things we will be pretty good citizens. In fact, if we follow Jesus we will be the very best citizens possible.

As you grow older, one of your companions one day may say to you, "Oh, I don't want to be a Christian, there are so many things you can't do."

Then you answer, "That's where you're wrong. Jesus never laid down a long list of things you can't do if you want to follow Him. He only gave two rules, and they are both things you can do."

True it is, there are many, many things a Christian doesn't want to do. He has no desire at all to do them. Peter mentions some of them in our lesson.

The people of the world will think it strange we are satisfied without many of the things they call pleasure. But if we were not different from them, they couldn't tell we were Christians, could they?

Let's remember then that a true Christian is the best citizen, and the best citizen is a true Christian. We know many good citizens, however, who are not Christians. They could be much better citizens if they followed Jesus, as a true Christian does.

And now we have two little girls coming hand in hand, to join our "Happiness Circle." They are Eva and Jane Waller, from Marshall, Ill. Eva is eleven, and Jane is nine years old. Eva writes me that they like to read this page every week.

To join our Circle, you need only to study your lesson each week with your Bible, and spread smiles and happiness all about you. That's doing as Jesus wants us to do. And that's being good citizens, too.

Welcome, Eva and Jane! The Circle is growing. Soon there will be miles and miles of smiles. Who is next?

PETER TEACHES GOOD CITIZENSHIP

1 Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5

GOLDEN TEXT

Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.-Romans 13:10,

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Peter Teaches Good Citizenship.

Aim: The Christian should be the most law-abiding member of the community for the sake of Christ and the influence he may exert on others

Class Discussion: Does the limited use of intoxicants lead one into good or bad company! Would smoking have a tendency to lead a girl (or boy) into better or worse com-Would Christ encourage smoking by either boys or girls or men or women?

I. Peter Teaches Respect for Law. (1 Pet. 2:11-16.) Jesus once said in Peter's hearing, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's" (Mark 12:17), and in this lesson Peter is elaborating on that idea. He calls attention to the fact that the disciple of Christ is by faith and hope an alien to this "present evil world," a "pilgrim" traveling toward the eternal kingdom of Jehovah, and admonishes him to remember that while he awaits the taking over of the governments of earth by the Lord he must be submissive to all the ordinances of men that the name of Christ may be made glorious even in the estimation of those who do not acknowledge His authority over them. Peter asserts that the disciple has not done his full Christian duty to God in this regard when he has paid his taxes and complied with the demands of the laws governing the country in which he lives. He must manifest a real respect for those who rule and for the government they represent.

II. Peter Teaches Purity and Temperance. (1 Pet. 4:1-5.) The Christian is engaged in a ceaseless warfare with temptation which assails him from within and from without. So continuous is that struggle within himself for supremacy over sin that he has but little time to spend in defending the worldly man against temptation. The best he can do for others who are tempted is to bring them to Jesus Christ. He is their only hope, He their only salvation! As for himself, the Christian must "fight the good fight of faith" (1 Tim. 6:12) against the claims of the flesh, "abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thess. 5:22) such as the indulgence in wine, tobacco, gambling, dancing, and anything else that may be looked upon as incompatible with the purity of mind and conduct that should distinguish the follower of Christ from the unbelieving mass of mankind, even at the expense of being thought "strange" or fanatical by the world.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Good Citizenship

- —is built on a standard of good morals; -romes from a sense of justice to all; —is found among the law-abiding;
- -is bettered by, but is not, Christianity;

-does not countenance violence.

Honest Conversation. In dealing with the course notice it from the standpoint of the Christian. Christianity, produces the highest type of good citizenship, because it is fair in its dealings, honest in its convictions, and seeks to administer justice to all. It behaves itself among the Gentiles possessing an honest conversation. Christians should so comport themselves in the presence of the world and before the eyes of the world, that the unclean cannot speak anything against them. One of the seemingly great weakness of professing Christians is their inability or their lack of desire to regulate their conversation when in the presence of non-believers. One's speech should always be seasoned and void of filthy communication (Col. 4:6; 3:8). Conversation usually indicates what a person is at heart (Matt. 12:35-37).

Not Agitators. Every little while there arises a mass movement and the majority of people are carried away by the enthusiasm that is created through continued agitation. At present throughout the entire world there is a movement toward the "left" against the existing governments. Agitators and agita-tion seem to be the order of the day. Christians should not be in this class. Instead of rebelling and advocating an overthrow, Christians should submit themselves to their governments "for the Lord's sake." Contentment rather than dissatisfaction should be the role of the Christian (1 Tim. 6:7, 8). We can serve best through obedience.-C. E. R.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbour; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."-Romans 13:10.

If we love our neighbor, we will not get drunk and make a disturbance while he wants to sleep; neither will we get drunk at any other time and be a disgrace to him, but we will attempt to please him at all times.

The second great commandment is, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself"; and if we keep this commandment, we will do nothing to our neighbor that we would not want him to do to us. "For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself."—Gal. 5:14. "If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well."-James 2:8.-L. A. R.

What Makes a Good Citizen

Our study of the life of Peter will show that he who once trembled because of the power the rulers had over his life and so denied that he knew Jesus, later became the very soul of bravery in the midst of peril. A good conscience and trust in his heavenly Father very evidently were the reasons for his courage. lesson on "Good Citizenship" we must of And though he suffered many things unjustly at their hands, yet he tells us to honor the rulers over us, submit to their authority, and thus put to silence any charge falsely made against us. The times in which Peter lived were times of much disturbance. The Jews were ruled over by the Roman Government, which was cruel and unjust. Nevertheless, Peter did not tell them to band together, and attempt to overthrow the rulers and assume the reins of government themselves.

We hear much talk like that nowadays. Many are dissatisfied with those who are in authority. No attempts that are made to govern are pleasing to some. Would conditions be improved if the rule of the dissatisfied ones were put into effect? What is the great law by which the Christian is governed? Show how this law, the Golden Rule, answers all doubt, solves all problems, and fits into every life if applied. We do not expect worldly men to live by Christ's rule of life, though many of them do. But is it too much to expect the Christian to do? Do you see, then, how the Christian should be the very highest type of citizen?

Our allegiance belongs to God, first of all, and then to man .- M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Memory Verse: "Love worketh no ill to his neighbour."-Rom. 13:10a.

Review. For a review today I am going to ask (some child in class) to try to imagine he is Peter talking to the people in last Sunday's lesson. Stand and tell us what you would say. Have rest of class ask the question the people asked after hearing Peter. Have first child give Peter's answer or memory verse.

Presentation of Lesson. If the children in the class have been to school no doubt they have been taught how we may be good citizens. Let children name some of the things which make us good citizens. The lesson may then be read by children or teacher, listing the things from the verses that make us good citizens. Teacher must explain difficult verses. Here is a list which may be found: v. 11, doing evil things; v. 12, honesty, by good works influence others to do same; vv. 13, 14, oheying laws; v. 17, honor, love, fear of God. Then question class as follows: Which of these can we do? In what way? It should be explained to class that Peter wrote these words of our lesson.

Memory Verse. Our memory verse gives us the best rule for being a good citizen. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbour." Repeat it.

Notebook. On the picture page of your notebook paste a picture of Peter. In or under his hand slip a piece of folded paper on which you have written list of things which Peter said would make us good citi-If time permits give pupils a short story of lesson to fill in blanks, as described in previous lesson .- V. ## AMONG THE CHURCHES

"OWE NO MAN ANY THING"

A number of years ago a mortgage was placed on the dormitory which is used for dining room and sleeping quarters during Illinois Bible School and General Conference. This has been reduced until at present it stands at $350. Heretofore no special effort has been made to get this indebtedness paid. But we are now asking our Illinois members, and anyone else who so desires, to send what you can to our treasurer, Miss Leota B. Hanson, Lebanon, Ill.

It may be of interest to know that at the last business meeting of the Illinois State Berean Society the sum of $20 was appropriated for this purpose.

Let's get this matter off our hands.

Paul C. Johnson,

President of Illinois State Conference.

We expect J. W. Williams to preach the third Sunday in February.

Members of the church met at the Clifford Cronbaugh home recently and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Guy Heller; Vice President, Ray Cronbaugh; Secretary, Doris Cronbaugh; Treasurer, Mardie Cronbaugh.

Sr. Hester Berry is in Marengo visiting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Fred Berry, and family. Mrs. L. M. Kiger.

PASTOR REPORTS PROGRESS AT GRAND RAPIDS

South Lawn Church is making splendid progress in the work of 1935. Superintendent Thomas of the Berean Society has been having some special features of interest on Thursday nights. Bro. Stevens, the Sunday school superintendent, held two meetings of teachers and officers during January, and has his organization in good working order. Sr. Newell as superintendent of the Dorcas is receiving the hearty backing of the ladies. Some splendid charitable work has already been planned by them, and other kinds of activities are in the offing. It has been a real encouragement to the pastor upon his return from a month's absence to find the work being so well taken care of.

Sr. Henrietta Hilliker submitted to a major operation on January 22, but is making rapid recovery. Charlotte Liondecker, one of our Sunday school girls, is recovering from an appendicitis operation.

Special plans are being made for the men's meeting on this Friday night, Feb. 8. A general church get-together is also planned for the first Friday night in March, at which time plans for the Easter season will be made. F. E. Siple, Pastor,

During the month we held a special meet ing in the Pleasant View Church, Hedrick, The meeting continued for seventeen Notwithstanding the bad weather, bad roads, and a lot of sickness, the attendance and interest were very good.

Every night we had one half hour of devotional service with a different leader each night. Thus a class was trained to lead in church service. We found quite a number who can carry on the service when the minister cannot be present.

At the close of the meeting a Bible class was organized to meet one night a week to study God's Word. The members will take a part in leading the class.

On Saturday, Jan. 12, we met at the water and baptized Mrs. Celia Lape, her daughter, Marie, and Miss Letha Pelps, all of Hedrick. These sisters have shown that they are able and willing to take an active part in the Sunday school and church service.

ANOTHER MACLEOD ARRIVES

Many visitors have come to attend our services in Los Angeles recently. Among them we welcome back among us Sr. Stearns, formerly a regular attendant at our services; she has been present for several Sundays. Sr. Keturah Rogers, a member of the Blush, Mo., church, and mother of our Bro. Rogers (regularly of the Los Angeles congregation), is visiting with her son and his family for a But perhaps the most permanent visitor of all was the newly arrived boy at the home of the pastor of the Los Angeles church, who came 1:10 Sunday morning, Jan. 27, Ross Allan MacLeod; this is the sixth son that has come to bless the MacLeod home. He was rather a diminutive person, weighing only seven pounds, but is quite some boy. The motto of the MacLood home might well be a paraphrased rendition of a portion of the 127th Psalm: "Lo, boys are an heritage of the Lord: . . . happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them."

Bro. Wilson Calkins is in Tulare County, Calif., looking after his wheat rauch, hope he will not have to linger away long from his newly acquired position of Sunday school superintendent. Sr. Charlotte Rahn is preparing to move to Pomona to join her parents. She has been staying with her grandparents, the Bailsbacks, in Los Angeles until the change of the school semester. We feel sure she will like her new school in Pomona. Sr. Grace Adamson of Pomona is now able to be out again after a long seige as the result of an appendectomy; from experience many of us can know how grand a feeling it is to be able to be up and around after such an experience.

MEETINGS END AT RIPLEY, ILLINOIS

For the last three weeks we have had the privilege of having Bro. S. E. Magaw with us in an evangelistic effort. He was called home the first week-end for a funeral and returned with his wife and two younger children. Very good attendance was manifested the first week but warm rains made the side roads around here almost impassable.

The warm weather seemed to work a hardship but the attendance the second week was good in spite of the weather. We were all hoping the roads would freeze and they did.

The third week saw a drop in temperature of about 50 degrees and caught most unprepared for such an extreme. Nevertheless the last few nights the weather moderated and the attendance was good again. We were just getting started, it seemed, when Bro. Magaw was called home for another funeral on the last Saturday night of the meetings.

There were no additions during the effort put forth but we feel that time alone will be able to reveal all the good it has accomplished. Special music during the meetings was much appreciated by all.

Sr. Edna Brewer and Sr. June Macy were guests here during the meeting. We hope they may come back and visit with us again.

We were handicapped by mud, subzero weather, measles, and funerals but pray that we will be able to have a better meeting some other time. We enjoyed the many inspirational messages of Bro. Magaw and hope and pray he may again come back with more favorable conditions prevailing.

Bro. Wayne Laning is in the St. Francis Hospital at Macomb, Ill., recovering from an operation.

C. E. Lapp, Pastor.

It has been a great pleasure to again meet and work with the Church of God at Ripley, Ill., now being served by Bro. C. E. Lapp as pastor. Over nine years had passed since we had been at Ripley, but many of the faces were quickly recalled and it was not long until we were made to feel at home. The pastor's wife was a former member of our Brush Creek congregation, and her mother, Sr. Brewer, and Sr. June Macy accompanied us to Ripley. I am sure Clarence and Louise will long be remembered as the best of entertain-

After the first week of services we were called home to conduct a funeral, that of Bro. Eidemiller of Troy, Ohio, and we were much favored by the big heartedness of Bro, and Sr. William Fey, who brought us back. After the funeral we returned to Ripley to take up the evangelistic work, Sr. Magaw, Milo, and Norma accompanying. Bro, Lapp, pastor, and Bro, Gerald Cooper had continued the preaching services in our absence.

All through the effort we were graciously entertained, and Sr. Magaw had the pleasure of meeting friends she had not seen for more than fifteen years. Only one thing are we sorry for and that was unavoidable - the roads-the roads! When it was muddy it was muddy, and when it was rough it was rough! The attendance was rather discouraging as a result. Still a favorable interest was seen by those who could attend.

We were again called home the last of the meeting to conduct the funeral of John Macy and thus had to miss the closing Sunday services, January 27. Srs. Brewer and June Macy returned with us.

We will long remember the Ripley brethren, and pray them and their pastor the richest of God's favors. Sydney E. Magaw.

TO MY FATHER-JANUARY 31, 1935

Fourscore years ago teday, Rachel Logan looked up to say, "Dear Charles, I've borne you another son, This one, the fifth, shall be Gideon."

Your advent in life has meant much to me, since you were chosen my father to be; I wonder if you really have known How deep my love for you has grown?

How well I remember, as I sat on your knee The songs that you taught me—still dear to me—

And as I grew older the pleasure you gave.

Mixed with just enough work so I'd know how to save.

And then as you'd quote from the Bible to me, You'd cause me to wonder at its mystery; With Mother to help you and aid you through life,

You have helped build my character, without much strife.

For all these — and more — I'm so grateful, indeed,

For your help through these years in my time of need;

And though your life draws near the fast setting sun.

May His final words to you be these, "Well done!"—Lottie Logan Pickerl.

SAMUEL T. SHIRLEY

Samuel T. Shirley was born in Marshall County, in or near Uniontown, now Culver, Ind., May 19, 1843, where he spent the first twenty years of his life. He attended Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Mich., and came to Lee County, Ill., to accept a teaching position. In 1868 he became affiliated with the Church of God in Dixon. In 1870 he was united in marriage with Miss Alice Worthington of Rock Falls, Ill., mentioned in the papers as "one of the events of 1870 here."

He was recognized as one of the outstanding teachers of Whiteside County, and a pioneer leader in the prohibition movement, delivering many lectures in support of that movement; and when the Eighteenth Amendment was repealed his heart was broken.

After his marriage he moved to Canada, then to Montana, where they resided for a time, and then returned to Rock Falls, III., where he resided until the time of his death, which occurred January 23, 1935, in the 92nd year of his age, well rounded out in faith and righteousness, leaving surviving, of his immediate family, his wife, Alice Shirley, of Rock Falls; one daughter, Mrs. Alice Church, also of Rock Falls; two sons, L. W. Shirley of Scattle, Wash.; and L. E. Shirley of Hillsboro, Ohio.

Bro. Shirley was born and grew to manhood within 35 miles of the writer's old home in Indiana, and it was a great pleasure the last few years to converse with him concerning the early history of the Church of God in that section of the state. He became a member of the church in his youth, remembering well Bros. Barnhill, Logan, Stephenson, Corbaley, and other pioneers of his youth. He was intelligent, cheerful, devout, and true.

He was faithful unto death, and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus. We laid him to rest in Riverside Cemetery, Sterling, Ill., to await the coming of the One he loved to serve and worship.

L. E. Conner.

MARY LOU MCLAIN

Mary Lon McLain, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. McLain, was born April 28, 1933, at Mt. Sterling, Ill., and died February I, 1933, near Ripley, Ill., at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Logsdan

Although her life was short we all came to love her dearly. Her sunny disposition and cheery smile won for her a place in each of our hearts.

She leaves to mourn her death her parents, her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lenville D. McLain and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Logsdon, besides other near relatives and many friends.

We lay her away to rest until the resurrection morning when Jesus shall come to make up His jewels.

C. E. Lapp.

IZA SELLECK MEYERS

Iza Elaine Selleck was born to William and Harriet Jane Selleck in Dover Township, Pocahontas County, Iowa, on July 31, 1889, and fell asteep at the home of her mother in Marathon, Iowa, January 17, 1935.

In early life she was baptized into the body

In early life she was baptized into the body of Christ, and became a faithful member of the Church of God at Marathon, remaining strong in faith until the end of her life.

She was preceded in death by her father in (for se 1923, and a sister, Etta Martin, in 1918. She Magaw is survived by her mother and two brothers, Ernest Ira of Gentry, Mo., and Guy of Storm Lake, other).

Iowa; many relatives; and a host of friends.

Always a great lover of children, she taught school for several years before her marriage on February 28, 1929, to Earl J. Meyers. Most of her life as lived in Pocahontas and Beuna Vista Counties.

She had been in poor health for over a year, but had seemed to be improving until her last brief illness, and was apparently recovering from that, when her heart gave out, and she slipped from a restful slumber into the deep sleep which knows no awakening until the coming of our Lord, and she awaits His resurrection.

Funeral services were held at the home and the old church at Marathon of which she was for so many years such a faithful member, on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 20, by the writer, and interment was made at the Albert City cemctery.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Selleck and children arrived on Friday; also Mrs. Inez Titus from Letcher, S. D., sister of Mrs. Selleck.

A. M. Jones.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Pastor M. W. Lyon of the Golden Rule Church of God of Cleveland, Ohio, is continuing his Sunday evening sermons on character sketches from the Bible. The men whose lives will be discussed this month are Gideon, David, Solomon, and Elijah. This should be a profitable series, and very interesting to younger people especially.

Next Sunday's sermon topics at Oregon, Ill., will be (D. V.) as follows: at the morning service, "Seeking God in Secret Prayer," and in the evening, "The End of a Crooked Pathway."

Elder V. Earl Thayer, pastor of the church at Maurertown, Va., says that three responded to the call of the gospel at a recent service, and promises us a full report later. Such results are encouraging.

A sister sends in one dollar to apply on her subscription with the statement that she will pay the rest "just as soon as I can. It is slow saving when one is getting $1.50 to $2.00 a month to live on"! The exclamation point is ours. Praise God for such faithfulness!

The church at Oregon, III., began the issuance of a local monthly bulletin this month It is called "Church of God Evangel," and will serve to remind members of the congregation of conditions in the church and of forthcoming events.

Copies of The Visitor, by Harriet E. Boice, both of the old and new editions, are on sale by the National Bible Institution at 40 cents each, postpaid. Each book contains a series of lessons and miscellaneous material on the Bible. No 1 (old edition) has 212 pages; No. 2, 180 pages.

As a mark of thanksgiving to God for the preservation of her father's life until he has reached the eightieth milestone in his journey of life, Sr. Lottie Logan Pickerl of Michigan sends in a birthday offering of eight dollars, and tells us that in a postcard shower on his hirthday he received more than eighty cards from relatives and old-time friends.

The topic for presentation to the Los Angeles church on Sunday, Feb. 17, by Pastor MacLeod will be taken again from the prophecy of Ezekiel, and entitled "From the North Parts."

C. E. Lapp will preach at Eldorado, Ill., on February 9 and 10. Those in the vicinity are urged to be present.

Peucils Mrs. Elias Thorene, Mora, Minn.: "I am 72 years old and a cripple, so can't get around very much; but I can read, and there are so many good articles in The Herald." A subscription to The Herald is an excellent way to remember a friend who is shut in, and is only $1.50 for the first year.

It is time to begin to make up your list of those to whom you will want the Easter number of The Restitution Herald sent. We are now working on copy for that issue. It will, of course, have much to say on the hope of cternal life through Jesus Christ.

Mrs. L. M. Kiger, Marengo, Iowa, reports she has been suffering from neuritis ever since Christmas. She is improving at present.

The condition of the Home family continues to slowly improve. Those who have been sick are generally better. Sr. Mick, our matron, is going about her many duties again with her customary vigor and efficiency.

ence to one's feeling of remorse for ill-doing. words it is that element of the mind that either excuses or accuses one's acts or deeds. Some think it is an inward something which acts as a monitor which approves or disapproves one's conduct in every line of endeavor in which he may be engaged. The question may be asked, Is conscience a safe guide to follow at all times? We have learned by observation that what one man's conscience would approve another man's conscience would condemn.

The Apostle Paul truly thought he was doing God's service when he was persecuting the Christians and casting them into prison, even consenting to the martyrdom of Stephen. He thought that he was doing right, and would have said his conscience was clear. His idea of what was right in that matter was in accordance to the superstition and false teaching of the self-righteous Pharisees. After his conversion he was convinced of his error. His sense of right and wrong was entirely changed after being instructed by Peter as to what he should do. His acts and motives which previously his conscience would tell him were right would now seem wrong. We can readily see that his change of conscience was the result of correct education. It is also true of every individual. The mother who throws her child into the Ganges River to appease the wrath of her idol god thinks she is doing right, and her conscience would accuse her if she refused to do it, while we, who have been educated differently, would shudder at the thought. One person may violate a certain written law without the slightest sting of conscience, while another would shrink in horror from it.

Conscience has been the theme of much discussion among highly educated men. The philosopher, theologian, socialist, rationalist, skeptic, and the evolutionist, all have at-

It might be objected that the Scriptures use the word as if all were expected to obey it, and that such fact is in opposition to our idea, but I do not think so. As I understand it, the conscience moves or incites one to do what is believed to be right. A person who has been taught that certain things are right and others are wrong-conscience bids that person to do the things which he believes to be right, or to avoid that which he considers to be wrong. But his belief alone is no proof that any particular course of action is right or wrong unless it is founded upon divinely established fact. A person may have been wrongly educated, and therefore believe that right is wrong, or that wrong is right. Undoubtedly conscience is an attribute of the intellect and incites a person to do the thing he believes to be right. If that he true we can see that conscience of itself is not a safe guide for our conduct. The same Paul who lived in all good conscience while persecuting the Christians also lived in all good conscience before God and labored night and day to lead others to Christ. The same conscience moved him to follow two opposite courses of conduct. His intellect had been changed or enlightened. He discovered that he had made a serious mistake and therefore he was led to cry out to the Lord, "What wilt thou have me to do?" Having learned what to do he hastened to do it. We conclude that conscience is the result of education.

When our education includes the principles of God's will and purpose for the salvation of men from sin, it becomes an incentive to con-(Please turn to Page Ten)

Skilled Workmen Needed in Palestine

"In cutting of stones, to set them, and in carving of timber."—Exodus 31:5.

Tel-Aviv. Palestine. Jan. 23.—An acufe shortage of skilled labor exists throughout Palestine, the labor exchange reports today. Hundreds of additional workers are needed at once in Bnei Bark, Herzlia, Petah Tikvah, and other settlements, the Jewish Labor Organization announces. At the beginning of 1935 contracts for work to be done in this city had already been signed amounting to LP. 150,000 ($1,116,000 at present rate of exchange), and developments here will in all probability exceed this year the figure of 1934 of LP. 270,000 ($2,000,000). Dwellings for workers and roads in workers' quarters will be constructed at an approximate cost of LP, 300,000, the Organization's report continues. Building progress is being hampered by the lack of metal workers, iron foundry men, woodworkers, air-hammer operators, mechanics familiar with American and English-made automobiles, and various other skilled workers. In order to complete the contracts on hand and those in prospect, these workers must be secured and the Organization is deeply concerned over the shortage in skilled labor.—Palestine Post.

The population of Tel-Aviv, the exclusively Jewish city from which this report comes, in 1931 was 46,116. According to the World Almanac its population in 1934 had increased to 85,000. Before the World War there were in Palestine 1,235 industrial undertakings, most of them Arab; in 1933, there were 5,290, 3,000 of which were Jewish, with a capital of $32,480,000, and with an annual output nearly equaling the capital invested. The Jewish population before the war was 66,574. At the end of 1933 it numbered 240,000, of which 165,000 used Hebrew as their daily medium of speech. The area of land in Jewish possession has increased from 102,150 acres in 1920 to 251,970 in 1933, of which 28,375 acres are in orange groves. These are the events for which our leaders waited and longed and prayed no more than half a century ago. The coming of the Messiah of Israel is at hand; the Jews are going home!

Ancient Burial Grounds Uncovered

"At that time, saith the Lord, they shall bring out the bones of the . . . inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves."—Jeremiah 8:1.

JERUSALEM, Jan. 13.—Dr. Eleazar Sukenik, professor of archæology of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, has made what has been termed one of the most important discoveries in recent years. The announcement was made to-day that in his last expedition the archæologist uncovered the most ancient graves that have yet been found in Palestine, and they are regarded as shedding light on the customs of those who lived four thousand years before Christ. The discovery was made at Givat Bitu near Nahliel and bordering on Hedjaz. The location is in the extreme south of Palestine. The existence of a large population in the plain of Sharo, hitherto-unsuspected, is believed to have been revealed. The skeletons were found principally in ossnaries (pits in which the bones of the dead were cast) and wells which had evidently been used for the same purpose. A skull disinterred in the operations is described as the remains of the earliest primitive human head ever found in Palestine.

Lanchow, China, Jan. 20.—The Associated Press reports that archaeological excavators were hewing out today some historically important facts concerning the beginnings of the Buddhist religion in Central Asia and possible connections with ancient Babylon. Hundreds of rolls of Buddhist classics, extremely ancient, have been brought to light from under layers of sand which the winds of centuries have piled over the temples of a Buddhist monastery which flourished some 1,500 years ago. The classics, written in Chinese and Sanskrit, make frequent reference to the wonders and beauties of a far-off city believed to have been Babylon. In the same area archeologists have found earthenware strikingly similar to true Babylonian pottery. Historians are particularly interested in finding out something about the Nestorians, the Christians who were active in West China more than 1,500 years ago. Anything that may be learned about the early Nestorians will be of special interest to the careful Bible student, as this sect denied the Trinity, image worship, the exaltation of the Virgin Mary, and insisted that nothing should be received as Christian teaching that could not be supported by the Scriptures. The Nestorians have remained free from Roman Catholic domination throughout their history.

Question: Will the Ark of the Covenant, together with the tables of stone with the Ten Commandments, Aaron's rod that budded, and the pot of manna, some day be discovered by the spade of the archæologist?

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

I NEXT propose to investigate the present and future position of the Son of God.

- 1. As the antitype of Aaron, He is interceding for His people in the heavenly sanctuary. See Hebrews, eighth and ninth chapters.
- 2. He is exalted with the right hand of God to be a Prince and a Savior to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins (Acts 5:31).

John in describing His present position represents Him as being "the prince of the kings of the earth" (Rev. 1:5).

As the antitype of Aaron, He is not a king, but simply a priest to offer sacrifices and intercede for His people. As the royal Son of David He is now heir to His father David's throne, and consequently a prince royal. As such He is not a king, but a prince; does not possess a kingdom, but is heir to its future possession. But in opposition to the foregoing, it is urged that Christ is now a king, and that He now possesses a kingdom, for the following reasons, to wit: 1. He is the head and lawgiver of the church. Answer: He is not the regal, but the ecclesiastical head of the church.

He does not exercise civil authority in any sense. He is only heir to the civil headship of the kings and kingdoms of the world.

His church is not a civil or political organization, but purely ecclesiastical. As such it does not conflict with the civil authorities of the world. Hence, churches may be organized, and exist in all countries, and under all forms of government. Not so with a kingdom; it could not exist contemporaneously in the same locality with any other kingdom, unless in a subordinate position. Hence, before the kingdom of God can fill the world, it must break in pieces the interposing kingdoms thereof, as an essential prerequisite to such a position.

Again, kings rule by force, but Christ as the moral, not civil, the ecclesiastical, not political head of the church, rules by motive, by moral suasion, and not by force of arms. Christ is not an original lawmaker, but only an agent, acting with delegated authority (Matt. 28:18). Hence, His Father is the proprietor and He the agent. The Father the lawmaker and the Son the expounder, and administrator of His Father's law (John 5:22, 23, 27).

"Christ shares His Father's throne, therefore He reigns with His Father." The simple fact of His sitting on His Father's throne does not prove that He reigns in any sense with His Father. This position may be honorary, the same as an honorary member of any organic body. That such is the case is evident:

1. From the fact that Christ is not a king, but a prince.

2. He is not reigning with the Father, but interceding between the Father and the penitent criminal, as an advocate, and not as a judge. He cannot be judge and advocate at the same time, and for the same party.

- 3. As a nobleman, He is gone to His Father "to receive kingly authority" (Whiting), and to return, and exercise that authority, or reign—not in the far-off country, but in the locality from which He went away.
- 4. The only kingdom ever promised the Son of God (the kingdom of Israel) is now overthrown and desolate. It does not exist to be subject to the conjoint reign of the Father and Son.
- 5. The only kingdom over which the Father ever reigned, as far as this earth and all the promises to Christ are concerned, is now in ruins.

Objection 3. "That Christ terminates, instead of commences His reign, at the second advent is evident from the fact that at that time He delivers up the kingdom to the Father, and becomes subject to His Father's rule." 1 Cor. 15:24-28.

It is argued, in contrarity to the plain import of Paul's language, which commences the reign of Christ subsequently to His coming, and the resurrection of those who are His, that He ceases to reign at that epoch, because the Father will make His foes His footstool previous to His coming (Psalm 110:1; Acts 2:35). But those who urge this objection attach more importance to this language than legitimately belongs to it.

It is one thing for Christ's foes to be made His footstool, and quite another for Him to place His feet upon them. One is the work of the Father, the other the work of the Son. That the Father makes Christ's foes His footstool by investing Him with authority to rule over them, will be seen in the light of the following testimony, viz.: Psalm 110.

The Father makes His focs His footstool, by sending the rod of His strength (Christ) (Please turn to Page Nine)

Renelation

I knelt to pray when day was done, And prayed, "O Lord, bless everyone, Lift from each saddened heart the pain, And let the sick be well again." And then I woke another day And carelessly went on my way. The whole day long I did not try To wipe a tear from any eye; I did not try to share the load Of any brother on my road; I did not even go to see The sick man just next door to me. Yet once again when day was done I prayed, "O Lord, bless everyone." But as I prayed, into my ear There came a voice that whispered clear: "Pause, hypocrite, before you pray, Who have you tried to bless today? God's sweetest blessings always go By hands that serve Him here below." And then I hid my face, and cried, "Forgive me, God, for I have lied; Let me but see another day And I will live the way I pray."

The Wonders of the Bible

THE WATER IN ITS SPIRITUAL MEANING

By J. H. Anderson

THE Master took literal things many times to illustrate spiritual things (John 4:31-38). So we find that water is often taken to illustrate something in the spiritual realm. When the water is so used what does it mean? There is nothing more satisfying than pure cold water when one is thirsty, nothing, except air, that the body needs more than water. About three fourths of the earth's surface is covered with water and the body is largely composed of water. Water is essential to all living creatures. Therefore, to find the spiritual meaning of water as used in the Bible we must find something in the spiritual realm that occupies the same place in the spiritual realm that water does in the world; then we shall understand why it is used so many times in the Book of wonders.

That something is the Spirit that does for God's people in the plan of salvation what water does in our present lives.

"Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water. The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water? ... Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlusting life."—John 4:10-14.

Here the woman had her mind on the water in the well, but Jesus was speaking of that other water. Jesus receives this water from God and He only can give it to us. This water brings salvation to those who drink it. "Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation."—Isa. 12:3.

In Romans 8:11 we find that it is the Spirit, God's Word in us, that saves us. These references show that the water that Jesus gives His followers is the Spirit, the very essence of the Word. See also John 6:63, and for full proof that the Spirit is the water of salvation we find these words in John 7:37-39, "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)"

Reader, if you want to know real comfort go to western North Carolina in the summer time; let yourself become thirsty and then take a drink of that pure, cold water that flows so freely from those mountains. So real comfort comes to the student of God's Word as he studies, drinks of the truths, spirit of that Word.

In John 14:26; 15:26, the Spirit is spoken of as the Comforter. In 1 Thessalonians 4:13-18, we are told how to comfort those that are in trouble. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." We go into a home where one of God's children is asleep in death and the living members of the family are in deep sorrow and we give the words of promise found in the Bible that God's children shall live again by a resurrection when Jesus comes, live in an age where there will be no death, that the sleeping one is only asleep, that she is free from all trouble. There flows from us to them the water, Spirit, that gives them such comfort that only those who have received it can know. Then is fulfilled John 7:38. Then they sorrow not as those who have no hope. (Those who never drink this water: 1 Thess. 4:13.)

We drink of this water by studying the Word (John 6:63). We may be sure that God will see that we can get it pure: For the salvation of His children depends upon the purity of the water (John 15:3; 17:17; Eph. 5:25-27).

The water of life comes from God through Christ to His people (Jer. 2:13; John 14:6, 26). Only in Christ may we drink of the water of life. The only way for one to come into Christ is baptism in literal water (Eph. 4:5; Acts 8:36-39; 10:47, 48).

In Ezckiel 47:1-12 we find a river that brings life to all that come in touch with its waters, and in Revelation 22:1, 2 we find it again mentioned. I am not concerned in this article as to whether or not this will in the future be a real river of real water. We have already shown that water represents the Spirit, power, flowing from God through Christ to God's people, who may partake of it and live forever (John 4:10-14; Rom. 8:11). So let's find out the spiritual meaning of this River of Life (Rom. 15:4).

It flows from God (Rev. 22:1); from the house of God, His church (Ezek. 47:1, 12; 1 Tim. 3:15). This is more proof that the water of this River of Life is the Spirit, power of God's Word that brings eternal life to those that partake of it; for the Spirit flows from God through the believers to those that have hearing ears (John 15:26; 7:37, 39).

This river represents the gospel promises made alive with the Spirit of God. "There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High."—Psalm 46:4. "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance."—Luke 15:7.

What is it that brings a sinner to repentance and thus causes joy in heaven, gladness in the city of God? Belief of the gospel which reveals the goodness of God, the drinking of this water (Rom. 1:16; 2:4). For the first one thousand cubits the water was only ankle deep. So of the gospel promises, water of life: it began with the promise that the seed of the woman (Christ) should bruise the serpent's head (Gen. 3:15). What a wonderful promise, Let's drink, believe it. Yes, here we have the promise that the seed of the woman will bruise the head of the serpent, who had caused their downfall. In Galatians 4:4; Hebrews 2:14, 15. Yes, destroy him. Destroy the cause of all the trouble the world has ever known. Note the river is singular, but the streams that flow into it and make it a mighty river that could not be explored are plural (Psalm 46:4).

The second one thousand cubits brings the waters to the knees. We come down about two thousand years from the fall where the river started in the promise, "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head," and we reach Abraham and here two mighty streams of promise filled with the water of life, Spirit, flow into the stream and swell its waters up to the knees. These are gospel streams (Gal. 3:8). We must believe, drink of them, for they are a part of that message which is the power of God unto salvation (Rom. 1:16). Paul in Ephesians 2:11, 12 points out the condition of those who do not come into these covenants.

The Inward Man

By E. O. Stewart

"For I delight in the law of God after the inward man."-Romans 7:22.

As TO WHO or what the inward man really is seems hard for some to understand. But we believe that the Bible clearly reveals the truth concerning this mysterious being, which has been the subject of so much comment.

Paul, in writing to the Colossian brethren, says, "Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, to fulfil the word of God; even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to his saints: to whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory."—Col. 1:25-27.

Paul lived in the transition period from law to grace. He found it very difficult to get the newly established churches under Christ to break away from the law of Moses and gain sufficient confidence in Christ to let Him dwell in their hearts by faith.

This difficulty confronted him with the Galatian brethren. They were easily persuaded by those of the circumcision. They thought faith came by works of the law of Moses. Paul longed for them to gain sufficient confidence in Christ that they too might delight in the law of God after the inward man, and not after Moses.

He writes to them, saying, "My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you."—Gal. 4:19.

To the Ephesian brethren he writes, "That (God) might grant you according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith."—Eph. 3:16, 17.

He longs for Christ to be established in their hearts, and that they, as he was doing, delight in the law of God after Christ, which is the inward, or hidden, man of the heart.

He says, "If Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin."—Rom. 8:10.

How anyone can believe that the spirit of man is the inward man, I cannot understand.

SOIL AND SEED

The heart, mind, or spirit of man is the soil where the seed which contains the germ of immortality and eternal life is sown.

Jesus said, "When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart."—Matt. 13:19. "This is he that received seed by the way side."

So the Word is the seed. Christ sows the seed, which is the Word. That Word contains the germ of immortality and eternal life. "The words that I speak, they are spirit, and they are life." "I am the resurrection and the life."

As the Word is the seed, and the seed contains the germ of life, there is not a spark of immortality or eternal life in the heart, mind, or spirit of man until the seed is sown in the mind by the Word of God. So it is folly to claim that either sinners or Christians possess immortality by nature.

The hidden man of the heart is the inward man: and that is Christ in the church, the hope of glory.

Church and Conference Organization

ARE THEY AUTHORIZED BY THE SCRIPTURES?

RGANIZATION gives force and power; and because some are abused and some lend their power for evil, certain persons without due reflection at once ery out against all organization, while others, not wishing to come under their restraint, oppose them for that reason. Now, it is wrong to oppose organization or anything else from its abuse. For a man to conclude never to use an ax simply because he cut himself with it, or a farmer never to use a cultivator because it injured one of his horses, or he will never partake of any more food because it once made him sick, is as inconsistent as to condemn all organizations because a few are used for wrong purposes. The Greek word for church is ecclesia, which means, the called out, a Christian assembly, congregation. Now I cannot conceive how this Christian assembly can hold regular meetings for the worship of God, attend to the ordinance of baptism, the Lord's Supper, support the gospel, and preach to all nations without any plan, arrangement, or organization. Besides this, it is direct opposition to all the other works of God. The works of God, as seen in nature, present to us the most exact order and arrangement, and for the church to be without such order would be to argue that God is not the author of it. But that God is not the author of confusion we have the explicit statement of Scripture, and He also commands concerning the church, that everything should "be done decently and in order" (1 Cor. 14:40). This word "order," as used by the Apostle, signifies, according to Webster, a "regular or methodical arrangement," which can be had by organization. Those persons who oppose organization in the church oppose the teachings of the Bible. But some claim that the Spirit leads them in all their arrangements. This may be, but the spirit which leads them is not the Holy Spirit, for it teaches quite a different doctrine. It taught Timothy and Titus to organize churches by ordaining elders and deacons in every church. A spirit that works in opposition to this must be the spirit that works in opposition to the Lord's Spirit. The Holy Spirit gives the qualifications and duties of both elders and deacons; and while it charges them not to abuse their power by being lords over God's heritage, yet it also teaches the other members to "obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves," so that the duty of both is clearly defined by the Scriptures.

Having shown that the work of the Lord in the earth is an organized one, we shall now inquire more particularly into the nature of this work by calling attention to the commission of our Savior. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."—Matt. 28:19, 20.

As this is the commission under which we are laboring.

we will please observe that this work is divided by our Savior into two great branches: (1) the missionary or conference work, "to teach all nations," and (2), church work—to teach baptized disciples. These two branches go hand in hand. One should not be observed to the neglect of the other, for they are mutually dependent upon each other. Some denominations follow out one work more than the other. The church that keeps these two branches most evenly balanced is the one that carries out the commission of our Savior the best.

TT

We shall now inquire into the church work, and afterwards into the missionary work.

The work under the above commission commenced on the day of Pentecost, at Jerusalem, when three thousand were added to the church. A few days after this five thousand more were added to it (Acts 4:4). That the first church under the commission was an organized church is evident from the fact that they had elders and deacons in it; see Acts 4:5 and 15:2. It appears from Acts 4 that the duty of deacons is to attend to the financial and secular work of the congregation, while that of the elders is to have oversight of their spiritual condition: it also appears evident that there were two classes of elders in the primitive church . . . Paul says: "Let the elders that rule well be accounted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine."-1 Tim. 5:17. Some have concluded that one class rules while the other preaches. This is a mistaken idea, for both classes of elders rule, as is evident from this passage, and also from the following: "Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God."-Heb. 13:7. These two classes answer to our local and preaching elders.

Again, the church is to be fed by the preaching of the Word, as the following will teach: "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder . . .: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind."—1 Peter 5:1, 2. Paul's charge to the elders of the church at Ephesus is, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood."

One prominent qualification of an elder, insisted upon by our Savior, as necessary in order to feed the church, is to love Christ above the things of this life. After dining upon fish by the seaside, He asked Peter, "Lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs."—John 21:15. He then asked him the same question the second and third time, and told him each time to feed His sheep. That the early churches had elders or pastors over them to feed them by preaching the Word is also evident from the letters to the several churches of Asia. Each letter opens with an address to the angel of the church, as follows: "Unto the angel of the church in Smyrna"; "To the angel of the church in Pergamos."—Rev. 2. This angel can mean nothing more than a minister or a pastor over each church, whose duty was to instruct them. Thus we see that this part of the commission was carried out by the early church, to teach the baptized disciples.

Again, these seven churches are said to be seven candlesticks, so that each church is represented as a lamp to give light to the surrounding darkness; this would be the more completely fulfilled by preaching the light of God's Word.

Another question to be considered in this connection is. Did each church have the privilege of selecting its own minister, or did an ecclesiastical body appoint a minister over each church? While we have no direct testimony on either side, yet I think we have sufficient evidence to show that each church had the privilege of selecting its preacher, to minister the Word of truth to them. In nature every mature individual has to labor for his own maintenance, and the same is true of each church. This care and responsibility is necessary in nature for the proper development of each individual, and a similar care and responsibility is necessary for the proper development of each church. And if a church neglects to make arrangements for its own spiritual food, and suffers in consequence of it, the responsibility falls where it ought to, upon the negligent party. From this it appears that the early churches, organized by the apostles, were each independent in itself in all local matters. It is according to that pattern that we organize our churches; so the reader will see that we are not attempt. ing to build up a hierarchy to oppress the church, but in harmony with the teachings of Christ, he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. True, we have conferences, but the object of these is to secure a cooperation of the churches in carrying on the missionary work.—A. C. Long in The Bible Advocate.

The Fruit of Modernism

IT WOULD be well for every sound American to thoughtfully ponder this question: Can religion survive if a form of government which recognizes the private property right is destroyed, or even weakened; and can the government which recognizes the private property right survive if the church is destroyed or even materially weakened?

Manifestly the continuation of the one is inextricably linked with the continuation of the other. When this truth is clearly understood by the people, the era of radical thought and action will be brought to a close, constructive progress will again be the order of the day, religious sentiment will continue to inspire people to nobler thoughts and action, and the Constitution will be without mark or scar. But until the people grasp this self-evident truth, evils of many kinds, especially along economic lines, will beset the nation.

Any philosophy of government, any theory of economics, any doctrine of human relations, any code of business ethics based wholly upon the material must of necessity fail.

No more fallacious and destructive theory has ever been presented than that ills and evils the result of human action, can be corrected by legislative enactments. Notwithstanding the self-evident falsity of this doctrine, during the past two decades—and to an alarming extent during the past year—we have followed this theory and plunged into an orgy of socialistic legislation. True, the alleged purpose in each instance has been to correct certain economic maladjustments. Constitutional prohibitions have been buried under the excuse of "emergency." Even though some of this experimental legislation has not been long in effect already it is clear that, in each instance, instead of curing the alleged evil or maladjustment, it has intensified it and brought additional evils and maladjustments.

All of these experimental laws are of socialist inception. While the alleged purpose is to produce one result, in practice they produce quite the opposite. The injury thus inflicted upon the people might not be so bad were it not for the fact that, apparently, those who originally sponsored this legislation do not wish to cure the ills but, instead, hope to bring about a condition that will result in complete socialization of all major industries including agriculture.

Certain threads of reddish hue run through all socialistic activities whether directly against the form of government, against industry, or against religion. Many crimes against moral, ethical, and economic standards have been committed under the name of "reform." Morris Hill-quit, who, for many years, was a leader in the socialist movement in the United States, more than three decades ago uttered this confession—for one must consider it a confession since the present-day Fabian socialists do not admit it:

"... Measures of social reform are, as a rule, originally formulated by the socialist parties on radical and thoroughgoing lines. They become the object of a persistent and widespread propaganda, and finally they acquire the force of popular demands...."

When the "reform" measures of socialist inception become expressed in legislative enactment the people, swayed by extensive and well conceived propaganda, think in terms of the correction of some social or economic ill. They never think in terms of the remedy. They do not stop to analyze it for themselves because they assume those who present it, their duly elected representatives, have given it sufficient study to know whether or not it is workable.

Not only have the so-called "reforms" which have found their way into legislative enactments been of socialist origin but, it would appear, many of the so-called "reforms" that have found their way into religious organizations, are likewise of socialist conception. Each proposal to change dogma, creed, policy, method of procedure, or management, has been offered to correct a seeming defect, or some other ill as it affects the growth and success of the church. The remedy, when adopted and placed in operation, instead of making the correction has, in practically every instance, resulted in additional defects and ills or weakened the management and growth of the church in question.

The outstanding inconsistencies in all so-called religious "reforms" in the past thirty or more years, strangely enough, have been that they are based upon the material conception as stated by Karl Marx, although those who offered the reforms probably were not conscious of this fact, Anyone making a study of these "reforms" must have noted that, almost without exception, they abandon the spiritual truths of the Savior. This is well illustrated by the fact that in a large number of religious organizations more attention is given to the material than to the spiritual man. Within these church organizations have been erected movements designed to interfere in the industrial and economic activities of the nation. In some of these-altogether too many-it is urged that our form of government be changed to fit the socialist pattern. And this in face of the clear fact that should such a form of government result the church would pass wholly out of the picture as it has in Russia.

As every piece of legislation emanating from socialist quarters has weakened our form of government or our business structure, so has every so-called "reform" from the same source injected into religious bodies injured them, and caused a marked decline in followers.

Two truly great reforms would return the nation to the plane of sanity and result in orderly progress. One would be to abandon all socialistic experimental legislation and adhere to the Constitution which has proven its worth. The other would be for all religious sects to discontinue their socialistic affiliations, cease their interference in the affairs of state, and turn their whole attention to the advancement of man spiritually. When State enters the orbit of religion and when religion enters the orbit of State trouble ensues. It always has and it always will. If the people will pay more attention to the spiritual truths found in the Bible, especially the New Testament, and less attention to the mouthings of those who make mountains out of molehills from what they term inconsistencies in the Scriptures, the world would be a whole lot better off.

No person can deny the truth of Paul's statement:

"Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. 4.8

If every American citizen would commit that to heart and daily, yes, hourly, practice it, peace, prosperity, and good will would come to all the people.

If we would express more real religion in the church and in the home, and establish more real statesmanship in government, the ills and evils which beset us would disappear as does the early morning dew before the bright rays of the rising sun.—Fred R. Marvin in The Vigilante.

PEACE! PEACE!

By C. E. Randall

"Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace in this place. Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, ... yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed."—Jeremiah 14:13-15.

WHAT was true in the history of Israel is doubly true today. Perhaps the majority of the ministers of the churches are crying forth this same message today. What travesty! Religious leaders are giving the people cause to think that soon all wars will cease due to an awakened world and that the world will have peace, assured peace. This is a false hope born of a social religion and nourished by a degenerate civilization. Why tell the people that there will be no more war, when the Bible says there shall be wars and rumors of wars and that nation shall rise against nation, and these just the beginning of sorrows (Matt. 24:3, 6-8)? Why lead the people to believe there will be no more war, when the Bible says that all nations shall be gathered against Jerusalem to battle at the time the Lord returns (Zech. 14:1-3)? Instead of nations beating their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks, God has said the opposite shall be true (Joel 3:9, 10). When the Prince of Peace reigns, then we will have assured peace. Until then, every peace and safety cry, as in the past, so in the future will be followed by "sudden destruction." "For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them . . . and they shall not escape."-1 Thess. 5:1-3.-Church of God Messenger.

to rule in the midst of His enemies. Verses 1, 2.

The Lord at the Father's right hand (i. e., Christ) shall strike through kings in the day of His wrath. He (the Lord at His right hand) shall judge among the heathen and fill the places with the dead bodies. He (Christ) shall wound the heads (kings) over many countries. Verses 5, 6.

Psalm 2: The Father sets His Son upon His holy hill Zion (verse 6). He gives His Son the dominion of the world (verse 8). The Son rules His enemies with a rod of iron, and breaks them in pieces like a potter's vessel (verse 9). It is with the Son that the kings and judges of the earth are called upon to sue for mercy, lest they perish when His (the Son's) wrath is kindled but a little. All those are blessed who put their trust in Him.

Revelation 19: The Son judges and makes war (verse 11). The Son smites the nations and rules them with a rod of iron (verse 15). He comes as King of kings, or imperial ruler of the world (verse 16). The kings of the earth and their armies are gathered together to make war against Him (Christ) and against His army (verse 19).

Luke 19: Christ as a nobleman is gone to His Father "to procure for himself royalty (Campbell's translation), and then return" (verse 12). When He returns vested with royal power He commands those servants to be called to whom He had committed the money that He might know what everyone had gained (verse 15—Campbell). His enemies who would not have Him to reign over them, He commands to be slain in His presence (verse 27).

From the foregoing evidence it is clear that the Father makes Christ's foes His footstool by investing Him with power to subjugate them, and that Christ exercises this power as the sovereign of earth in putting His enemies under His*feet. But the Son returns to earth before He subjugates His enemies. He rules in the midst of those enemies whom He puts under His feet. Psalm 110.

The correct rendering of 1 Corinthians 15:23-26 is as follows: "But every man in his own rank; Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Afterward the end, when he shall have given back the authority to God even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death."

The Greek adverb cita, which is rendered after in the previous verse, according to Greenfield signifies "then, afterwards, after that." And according to the Englishman's Greek Concordance, "After that, afterward, furthermore, then." Thus (epeila) afterward they that are Christ's at His coming. "After that the end." "Afterward, furthermore, or then the end," etc.

In reference to the foregoing scripture, please observe the following order, namely:

- 1. The coming of Christ, and the resurrection of those who are His
- 2. His reign, and the work of subjugating all His enemies, and putting down all interposing rule, power, and authority.
  - 3. The destruction of the last enemy, Death.

By reference to Revelation 20 it will be seen that between the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the pious dead, and the final destruction of death, will intervene one thousand years. During this period the saints will reign with Christ, and assist Him in the great work of the subjugation of the nations, and bringing back this revolted world in allegiance to the great God. Having thus consummated the grand design for which the sovereign power of the world was delegated to Him, He gives back this supreme power to the great original, that God may be all in all, that is, supreme, and the Son becomes subordinate to the Father. Ptolemy, King of Egypt, gave up his kingdom to Cæsar, but was permitted to reign subordinate to him in his own realm. Christ, having acted with discretionary power in the conquest and bringing back of the world, will voluntarily lay the trophies of all nations and kingdoms at His Father's feet, and own Him Lord of all, and become a kingly subject to all eternity.

Christ is the antitype of Melchisedec.

"And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest . . . For he testifieth, Thou art a priest for ever (i.e., for the age) after the order of Melchisedec."—Heb. 7:15-17.

Melchisedee was a priest upon his throne, or a king and priest in Jerusalem. "For this Melchisedee king of Salem, priest of the most high God," etc.

Christ will also be a king and priest upon His throne in Jerusalem. Proof: Zech. 6:12, 13; Jer. 33:15-21. "And speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of hosts, saying, Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the Lord: even he shall build the temple of the Lord; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne: and the counsel of peace shall be between them both."

"In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The Lord our righteousness. For thus saith the Lord; David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; neither shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt offerings, and to kindle meat offerings, and to do sacrifice continually.

"And the word of the Lord came unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the Lord; If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign upon his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers." (OVER)

From the foregoing testimony we learn:

- 1. That this righteous Branch whom the Lord shall raise up in those days, is to be the royal son of David—the Lord our righteousness; and therefore the Son of God our Savior.
  - 2. He is to be a king and priest upon His throne.
- 3. His throne is to be the throne of David, and His kingdom the kingdom of Israel.
- 4. That as such He is to execute judgment and right-eousness in the land.

The saints being joint heirs with Christ will conjointly occupy the same glorious position. Hence, they sit on thrones and reign as kings and priests upon earth. Rev. 20:4, 9; 5:10.

What are the two streams of gospel promises that flowed into the river, that make glad the city of God? We find one of them in Genesis 17:1-8. "I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." See also Genesis 13:14-17; 26:3; 28:10-14; Romans 4:13. The other stream is revealed in Genesis 22:15-18. It is, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

What wonderful streams of gospel promises! Note these promises are made only to Abraham and his seed. We must be of Abraham's seed to drink of these promises. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."—Gal. 3:16. In Galatians 3:25-29 we learn how we may become the seed of Abraham and have a right to these promises, drink of the water of life. As this article is long enough, we shall close and later continue to follow this River of Life. Reader, you should keep this article to be read with the next one on "The Wonders of the Bible."

THE REVIVAL OF PURE HEBREW

"Then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord."

W. M. CHRISTIE, D. D., of the Mount Carmel Bible School, Haifa, Palestine, says: "Of all modern languages, Palestinian Hebrew is the purest, and that position is likely to be perpetuated."

At the present moment 98 per cent of the Jewish population of Palestine speak Hebrew; that means 160,000, and all are enthusiastic for the language, as it brings a practical unity into the life of the land, all facilities to that end being afforded for Gentiles as well as Jews at the University of Jerusalem stant action. It becomes a very busy and energetic faculty and has many offices. It becomes a register to take notice of what we do, and to record those acts. It is a witness against us when we do amiss. It is a judge that gives sentence of our innocence or guilt. It is also a tormentor, a "worm that dieth not, and a fire that never goeth out."

Even when men disregard truth, justice, honor, purity, and fidelity in their own actions, they exact those virtues from others toward themselves. He who condemns another for theft, fraud, lying, as well as other faults, shows he has a standard of right and wrong, and by that law he shall be judged. God is patient toward sinners and ever seeks to win them by His love; but if they will not repent, the warnings of their own conscience shall be followed by just judgment. The witness of conscience is good authority. It exposes guilt and fastens it upon everyone it accuses.

In 2 Corinthians 1:12 Paul mentions the "testimony of our conscience." He did not mean faultlessness by those words, but integrity and moral earnestness in his work. He had always been straightforward and open in his ministry. None of his enemies could justly accuse him of being insincere. He was living in simplicity, which means singleness of mind, purpose, and character. The opposite of this is duplicity, doubleness in word and actions. He coupled simplicity with sincerity, but by this he did not introduce any new element, for the two are much alike. Literally sincerity in this connection means clearness of mind, and he calls it "godly sincerity." Its best exhibition is where the word and deed agree-where the feeling and conscience exactly measure and shape the outward profession. In fact the expression is not regulated by a conscious reference to its external effect, but by an irresistible impulse of a just and holy purpose.

In Acts 24:16 Paul stated to Felix before whom he appeared in self-defense against a charge of heresy, "Herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men." Herein he affirms his conscientious endeavor to meet every obligation to God and men. He was striving as a warrior, only his struggle was within. His supreme effort and aim was to keep his conscience free from wrong thought or evil deed, not that he ever perfectly attained or succeeded in this high endeavor, but he was constantly on the alert, always exercising and practicing toward attainment of his desires, ever "pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." If the Apostle of the Gentiles, a man great in faith and ability, found it necessary to constantly maintain a watchfulness and ceaseless practice, how can we presume to keep the course and acquire the crown by anything less than a constant watchfulness and an energetic effort to lay aside every weight and the sin that most easily besets us?

You Answer It

"Never before have I had occasion to discuss religion with anyone who was skeptical, but I have a friend who is several years my junior . . . who does not think that God has any personality and who does not know whether or not she believes in any life after death. I have been talking to her every time I get an opportunity, and after hearing something of what we believe she said, 'If I could be convinced that there really is a God, I would say that your ideas were the most reasonable of any that I have heard.' Well. I am trying to prove to her that there really is a God and that He has personality, but I hardly know how to go about the task. I have hopes that you may be able to give me some good arguments on the subject. . . . Blind belief in the Bible merely because it is said to be the Word of Jehovah is no longer the style, and just how are we to present our faith in such a way as to make it convincing to this generation who seem to be less trusting and more skeptical than older generations have been?

"It is my opinion that there are certain things in the Bible that we have to accept on faith, but making a person of this sort see that is something that I do not know how to cope with. If you can help me I shall be very glad.

"(What) you say about the average Bible class being settled in a groove is certainly the case. . . We do not even have a class for the young people. If there was a live Berean class each week we would ask this friend and her husband to go and perhaps in time we might be able to interest them. . Perhaps it is a hopeless case, but I feel that we should do whatever we can to show people the way and then if they do not follow we have done our part."

Here is a problem, taken from one of the letters reaching the editor in regard to his policy, that is neither unique nor easy of solution. In the editor's own experience, he has found one class of Bible students in which a breath of skepticism was as productive of expressions of horror as a murder would have been—yet not one member of that class could provide any good reason for his conviction that God exists, that God is a person, and that the Bible is true.

It is, to be sure, a difficult thing to do. There are those, as a matter of fact, so thoroughly convinced of their own mental superiority that no argument can move them from the stand they have taken. Such are many of the self-styled doubters, doubters who flatly refuse to entertain any logical argument in favor of the being of God, doubters who in reality are absolute unbelievers. These, it is well nigh impossible to change.

But there are those who are honestly skeptic, skeptic because no evidence of worth has been given them to prove that God is an anthropomorphic being, an omniscient and omnipotent person, creator and controller of the universe and everything within it. They, if approached correctly, can be convinced of the truth of the Bible's revelation of Jehovah.

He is no true Christian who is not ready to give an answer to questions about the faith he holds. But not always on the spur of the moment can an effective argument on a question as vital as the one here presented be given.

In an effort to secure an approximately air-tight case in favor of the personal existence of God, the editor refers this letter and its problem to the general public. Manuscripts or letters on the subject will be especially welcomed. All of them will be forwarded to the questioner; those of special value will be published. Preference will be extended those letters or scripts which contain arguments in which can be found no fallacies, no fault in evidence, and which indicate study by the writer. It is an opportunity to justify your faith, to prove your own beliefs, and to aid others to teach and to learn.

There is, also, a second problem presented by this letter, that of giving the young people of the church something to interest them.

Truly successful Sunday schools, Bible classes, and Berean societies, if confronted with a membership widely varying in age, have split themselves into classes according to age groups. In no other fashion can success be attained.

Youth and middle age, middle age and old age, will not mix. Neither will children and young people. The viewpoint of the high school student is utterly different from that of the child who has not reached adolescence. Each must be taught, if he is to learn, in the way best adapted to his age. This cannot be done efficiently if he is thrown into a class composed of members varying in age from 5 to 80. As far as possible, the age groups—they might, in fact, be termed thought groups—must be separated. Thus only can they be interested.

From freshman to senior in high school is a gap wide enough to justify two classes, if possible. The freshman is just old enough to think he is grown up, but still young enough to enjoy some of the things of childhood. By the time he becomes a junior or senior, this latter trait has entirely disappeared, and he should be treated as what he is—capable of judging for himself. All high school students are alike in one respect, however: their vanity must be flattered. Whether they can think or not, they must be made to feel that the teacher believes they both can and do. When this has been done, their interest is assured.

REACHING OUT A HELPING HAND

ONCE upon a time Jesus had held out a helping hand to Peter, and now Peter holds out a helping hand to some one else. Jesus was Peter's great Teacher, you know, and everything worth while that he knew, he had learned from Him.

The story of how Jesus helped Peter, when he needed help very badly, you will find in Matthew 14, and it's a most exciting story. All of you turn to it in your own Bibles, or have some one read it to you. And now here the story is in a poem:

"When the storm in its fury on Galilee fell,
And the billows were rolling high,
A ship was tossed in the midst of the sea,
Both the wind and the waves did defy.
The disciples were troubled and shook with alarm
As their Lord on the waters drew nigh;
But He called out in words both assuring and sweet,
Saying, 'Be not afraid; it is I.'

"Then Peter said, 'Lord, if it really be Thou, Bid me come on the water to Thee.'
The Savior made answer and said to him, 'Come,' So he walked like his Lord on the sea.
But as soon as he saw how the strong wind did blow, Beginning to sink, he did cry;
And Jesus immediately stretched forth His hand, Saying, 'Why didst thou doubt? it is I.'

"Then Peter with Jesus, his Savior and Guide,
To the ship did return without harm;
And the wind in its fury at once was made still;
The waves dashing high were made calm.
So with faith that ne'er wavers, whate'er may assail,
We trust Him, our Savior on high,
As He still speaks to comfort, to save, and to bless,
Saying, 'Be not afraid; it is I.'"

Don't you think the story is told nicely in those verses? I wonder how Peter felt when he started to sink. And I wonder how he felt when Jesus reached out His hand and saved him. I think he was quite a thoughtful man, as well as a happy one, when he and Jesus stepped into the boat. Don't you think so?

And now Peter has a chance to hold out a helping hand to another man who needs help. They were not in a boat, however, nor in a storm of any kind. And Jesus, Peter's Savior, was in heaven, at the right hand of God. But He was still helping Peter nevertheless.

Peter and the man were at the gate of the temple, the gate called Beautiful, with the solid ground under their feet. But the poor man needed help just as badly as Peter did when the waves rolled high about him.

Let's all turn over the pages of our Bibles till we come to the book of Acts. Which book in number is it in the New Testament? In chapter 3 we will find the story.

You know, "Acts" is a good name for that book, because it is full of acts, that is, doings of the apostles. Every page is filled with exciting events. I suppose that is why all boys and girls like to read it. There was never a dull moment in the lives of the apostles, it seems, especially in Peter's life. He was a great person to do things.

If the Jews started their day at six o'clock in the morning and called that the first hour, which hour on our clock would the ninth hour be? See how many of you can figure that out yourselves. Count on the clock so you will get it right. That is the time Peter was entering the Beautiful Gate.

What do you think the poor lame man expected Peter to give him? Did he give him that? Why? What did he give him? How much was that worth, a dollar, ten dollars, a hundred dollars?

If Peter had been a millionaire, could he have given the poor man any gift worth as much to him as he did give him? If you were lame, had been lame ever since you were born, which would you rather have, all the money you needed, or good straight legs that could take you wherever you wanted to go?

It didn't take the lame man weeks and weeks to learn how to walk either. He jumped right up when Peter reached out his hand to him, and he began walking at once. He was so happy, in fact, he leaped for joy. You would too, wouldn't you, if you had been he?

And now here is the best part of the whole story. How did Peter do it? Look at verses 12-16. Peter wouldn't take any credit to himself for the wonderful deed. He told all those standing around very plainly that it was done through God's power and by having faith in Him. Can any of you write a poem on that story?

LESSON 8. - February 24, 1935

PETER HEALS A LAME MAN

Acts 3:1 to 4:31

GOLDEN TEXT

Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Aim: The healing of the lame man by the power of Jesus' name proved that He was alive, and also that He was the true Messiah.

Class Discussion: Which is the more valuable, riches or health? How did the healing of disease by Peter differ from that of modern faith healers? Would ability to perform miracles help to convince people of the truth of the Bible today?

I. Peter Gives More Than Gold. (Acts 3:1-10.) Peter and John, not yet realizing that the old order of Mosaic worship had fulfilled its purpose in pointing to the sacrifice of Christ, continued to observe the formal hours of prayer in the temple and to take part in the normal religious life of the Jews as in the past. It was while they were thus engaged that they encountered the lame man at the Beautiful Gate of the temple. His was considered an "incurable case." From birth he had been a perpetual sufferer and cripple. All who frequented the temple were acquainted with his familiar figure and pleading voice. When he asked for alms of the disciples he little dreamed that he was to receive something far more valuable than gold or silver, nor that the gift that was about to be be-stowed would be the means of convincing many that Jesus was the Christ of God and future King of Israel. Thus one man's physical need was made the occasion for the delivery of one of the most convincing arguments ever presented in defense of the saving power of Christ.

II. Peter Preaches Christ to Rulers. (Acts 4:8-12.) Called before the Sanhedrin, the highest religious court of the Jews, and questioned as to the source of their authority and power, Peter answered for himself and John in the words of resistless logic found in this lesson. The members of the council could not deny the righteousness of the deed that had been accomplished in the healing of the lame man, and so Peter took that one truth on which they must agree with him as the basis of his argument. Surely no poor, uneducated fisherman would be able to perform such a miracle of healing! Some one else must have been working through him. And, said Peter, that some one was Jesus Christ whom they had murdered, and whom they insisted to the people was undoubtedly dead, but that could not possibly be true, for the lame man had been made by Him to leap and stand and walk. It was an unanswerable argument for the Lord's resurrection.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

The man at the gate expected money, but he received something that money could not buy. Peter had no money, but he had the Spirit of God through which the man was healed. Peter took no credit to himself for this bealing, but gave the glory all to Christ. This gave Peter a chance to preach Christ, and he made the most of the opportunity.

The healing of this man was proof that there was power behind the healing, and Peter told those who were gathered in Jerusalem that it was by the power of the One whom they crucified and whom God had raised from the dead, the One in whom there is salvation; and that there was none other on whom they could depend .- L. A. R.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Helping

-the helpless is a worthy cause;

-those in need brings personal happiness; -in the name of the Lord is the Christian's wav:

-the weak strengthens self;

-just for remuneration robs the service of its real joy.

Being a Help. There is real joy in helping those in need. This joy becomes greater when the help is rendered in the name of the Lord. There is always some one in need and some way in which we can help him. It may be that a cheerful word is all that is needed, or perhaps a little sympathy or counsel. These little bits of kindness done in the Lord's name may be the means of winning that person to Christ. It will at least draw the doer closer to the Father. If we are to experience any measure of joy out of service to others, we must refrain from boasting. Let those helped do the telling. Christ on many occasions after performing some miracle of kindness asked that it be not told. Such humility of purpose in itself wins the esteem and admiration of those served.

"Silver and gold Doing What We Can. have I none; but such as I have give I thee." Such was the attitude of Peter. He gave of what he possessed. In this instance it was spiritual power which the Father was manifesting through him. This incident is no indication that we can do likewise today and say to the maimed, halt, and blind, "In the name of Jesus Christ" do this or do that; but, while we cannot command in His name, yet we can work in His name and do what we can. It isn't so much how much one can do as it is the willingness with which he desires to do. A willing spirit counts for more than ability to do. Some of us may not be able to do much, but we all can possess a will." ing spirit, and hands that are willed to do, can always find a task to perform. A willing heart with a small task well done is of greater value than many jobs done by a forced spirit.—C. E. R.

INTERMEDIATES

Peter Reaches Out a Helping Hand

Following the example of his beloved Lord, Peter "went about doing good" also, while he preached. Review the steps necessary to salvation, as learned in previous lessons: hearing the Word, belief (which includes repentance), obedience, and a different life to fol-low. Life after baptism is different in that it is lived for others rather than self, even as Jesus gave us the example. Peter's healing of the lame man exemplified this. Relate the story. Could Peter have given the lame man any sum of money which would equal the gift he did give, if he had been a millionaire? Peter never lost an opportunity to convict the Jews of their sin in crucifying Christ. He seized it here. Notice to whom Peter gave credit for it. What are the "times of refreshing" he mentions in his sermon (v. 19)? Give other references. Are they identical with the "times of restitution of all things" (v. 21)? Note that these are connected with the return of our Lord. Is the promise to Abraham, referred to in v. 25, part of the gospel which Peter preached? Can you find it in Genesis? The blessing was given to Abraham and his descendants. Are we included in it? How (Gal, 3:29)? What was the outcome of this sermon to Peter? Acts 4:3; to those that heard it (v. 4)? Another opportunity is given Peter, this time to speak to rulers. Note his uncompromising courage in this instance. Quite a different Peter from the one who was afraid to admit that he knew Jesus!

There is no other way to salvation than through Christ .- M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Memory Verse: "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk."—Acts

Presentation of Lesson. This lesson is one of the most beautiful stories in our Bible, and teacher should try to present it in such a way that children have a beautiful mind picture of story. This story tells what Peter did one day. Present story as follows: Set-ting of story, Beautiful Gate of temple: the lame man being carried to gate, laid there to beg; Peter and John coming, see and hear the lame man's plea; Peter talks to him; Peter takes hold of man's hand and heals him; how the lame man acts after he is healed and what he does; the people's surprise. Ask this question, Which was better, to have healed the man, or to have given him gold or silver!

Memory Verse. l'eter did not do this to get credit or honor for himself. No, he could not have done it by himself. Jesus was helping him. This is how we know. Peter said, "In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk." This is our verse to learn today.

Notebook. Find picture of Peter holding the lame man's hand. Perhaps children would like to draw own picture. Write memory like to draw own picture. Write memory verse under picture. This will be a splendid story to write a group story about. After story is finished and copied in notebook let one child read story. -V. C. T.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

MRS. RAILSBACK TO BE IN NORTHWEST DURING 1935

Our quarterly conference will be held at Felida, Wash, beginning on March 8 and holding over Sunday. Sr. E. C. Railsback of Los Angeles will be with us. She has consented to be our pastor here, for the Northwest Conference, for the coming year. A good attendance is desired.

Mrs. Minnie Kerr, Secretary.

NEW SERVICE STARTED AT PLUM RIVER

The annual business meeting of the Church of God at Plum River, Ill., was recently held at the church. We had our election of officers and discussed our condition as a church. The thought was expressed that we have been coming to church Sunday after Sunday and that it may be amounting to no more than a form of godliness.

We decided that we all need a closer fellowship with God and with one another. For that reason we have begun to have meetings once a week at the different homes for prayer. Bible study, and fellowship. Our first meeting Thursday evening, Jan. 31, proved to be a meeting of close communion with God. We carnestly pray that these meetings may be the indirect means of more effectively preaching the gospel to every creature. We humbly ask for your prayers.

Harvey Krogh, Jr., Pastor.

MAGAW TO BE IN CLEVELAND

One hundred five, an average attendance, were out to Sunday school February 3. The first signs of spring are here—seed catalogues, etc.—and we hope for better attendance at all our services soon.

At the present time there is considerable sickness in the congregation, Sr. Black is much improved since our last report, but Sr. David Lehman is still very ill. For over ten days Bro. Benn of Dayton has been confined to his bed; and at this writing Sr. Magaw is getting a sick vacation from her household duties. It seems almost any home we visit we find one or two members down with the flu, but we know spring will soon drive the gloom away. It sometimes is profitable to be in trouble, for we are then reminded of the only source of all blessings and our duty to Him.

According to present plans we hope to assist Bro. M. W. Lyon with a short series of pre-Easter meetings at the Cleveland Church of God which is pastored by Bro. Lyon. If these plans mature it will be our first opportunity to work with Bro. Lyon and our first trip to Cleveland. We anticipate a blessing.

Let none of us get disheartened; the Lord is coming.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Faunic Le Crone; George O. Renner; Mrs. L. E. Marston; Nora Claypool; Willis Stedman; I. M. Abbott; William Hardy, Jr.; Lola Clark; Ruby A. Johnson; Margaret Bylsma; Virginia Kincheloe; Jeunie Townsend (for another); Rolla Hightower; Mrs. Charles W. Sudbury; Loren Burnett; Theron Murphy; Pauline Chapman; Paul H. Overholser; Robert McInturff; Elsie F. Doll; Nancy B. Robison; S. G. Elton.

INDUCTION AND HOMECOMING HELD AT BURR OAK, INDIANA

Judging from the interest shown and the number in attendance our induction and homecoming services were successful. There were people here from Gary, Fort Wayne, Knox, Grovertown, Argos, and Eagle Creek.

At the close of Sunday school the congregation was surprised and very joyous when Sr. Maxey, who has been an invalid for a number of years, was wheeled in. This incident certainly was an inspiration to all since Sr. Maxey and her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Hardy, had journeyed fourteen or fifteen miles to be with us. We are reminded of the words of the poet, "Faith of our fathers, holy faith! We will be true to thee till death."

The induction service was very inspiring, and helped each one of us to sense our responsibility and to realize our opportunity to render eternal service to our fellow men by bringing them to a knowledge of the gospel.

All seemed to enjoy the pot-luck dinner at

At the close of the afternoon service given by Bro. Hoskins a number of testimonies were given, Nettie Guge, Secretary.

SPECIAL LECTURES GIVEN AT GRAND RAPIDS CHURCH

Devotional service on February 5 was held at the church annex and took the nature of a farewell to Bro. Ray Palmer, who left the following day for Los Angeles where he expects to be employed for some time. Many prayers rose in his behalf, and it is the sineere hope of the church that he may be safely cared for in his new associations.

President Lussenden of the Men's Class has been working out some splendid ideas. For the monthly class meeting the night of February 8 he made arrangements for a chalk artist to fill out part of the evening.

South Lawn Church is to have the advantage of an illustrated travel talk on February 17. Mr. Doty, who spent four years in Palestine and took hundreds of pictures and studied the land carefully, is to give this learner entitled, "From Jerusalem to Jericho."

Bro. Smead, pastor of the Blanchard church, was a welcome guest for a few days law week. Bro. Smead made many friends while filling the pulpit here during part of the pastor's absence, and all were glad to see him again and have him present for devotional service.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

FIVE SERVICES HELD AT FLORESVILLE, TEXAS

We wish to say that we enjoyed the brief visit of Bro. E. O. Stewart from January 24 to 27 inclusive. While here he was heard four discourses and on Sunday evening we were blessed with a very interesting Bible lesson, not to say anything of the hours we spent around the fireside talking of the things that so interest us in these closing days.

We are hoping to have Bro. Stewart spend the night with us on his return home from two weeks' work in South Texas.

S. P. Dismukes.

PLEASE REMEMBER

Last week we called attention to the indebtedness against the Dormitory which is used for Bible school and conference purposes at Oregon, Ill. Send your remittance to Miss Leota B. Hanson, Lebanon, Ill. Thank you.

Paul C. Johnson.

APPRECIATION FROM CANADA

In the last Messenger we promised a testimony would be given in this issue concerning The Herald. Bro, and Sr. Holland sent a gift subscription to a friend in Port Arthur and here is what he has to say about the paper: "I have been receiving The Restitution Herald weekly; in fact I look forward to Saturday mornings as that is when I receive it and I can't thank you enough for sending this on to us. We both read it thoroughly and discuss it, too, which I think makes the subjects more impressive. I pass it on to mother and she in turn gives it to my sister-in-law, who finds it most helpful, as she teaches a class of teen age girls. I think the article 'When Antichrist Rules' by Norman John Mac Lead is one of the most impressive articles I have read for some time. It is a shame that it couldn't be published in more of our daily papers." Can you hear this, Oregon? Listen. folks: If a non-member can receive so much benefit from The Herald, does it not stand to reason that a member should receive greater blessings! Lord bless you, Port Arthur!

-Church of God Messenger.

CAMPBELL - BOYER

On Friday night, Feb. 1, 1935, it was our great pleasure to unite Mr. Ernest L. Boyer and Miss Nancy J. Campbell in marriage at our home in Woodstock.

Mr. Boyer, son of Bro. S. E. Boyer, Waterlick (until recently Pelton), Va., is well and favorably known to many of our church people, having attended General Conference in 1932-33. During our nearly nine years as his pastor we found him to be one of the most loyal and dependable members of the Dry Run Church. His keen mind, sound faith, and zeal of service as he saw his duty, together with his frank, open opposition to what he felt was not right, were ever an inspiration to us during our pastorate here. His ability to see the right, together with his high sense of duty and sincerity of purpose, will make him in the future, as in the past, one of the solid, substantial members of the church.

Mrs. Boyer, who is a native of Chesterfield, S. C., has been a teacher in the Powell's Fort Valley Schools for three of the past four years. She attended college the one year she was not teaching. During this time she has proven herself to be a girl of sterling integrity and the many friends she has made speak of her with respect and esteem. Her sincerity of purpose, soundness of judgment, and schoolroom efficiency prophesy success as a "help meet" and home maker. She will prove the truth of Proverbs 19:14 and 31:10.

We understand that Mr. and Mrs. Boyer plan to make their home in the Fort Valley. We pray that God will help them to make their home an honor to His name as well as a joy and comfort to themselves. May they become "one flesh" in this life and "one flesh" with Christ in the age which is to come.

Harry A. Sheets.

WILLIAM HENRY EIDEMILLER

William Henry Eidemiller was born in 1860 to John and Scraphine Eidemiller near Ginghamsburg, Ohio, and died January 11, 1955, at his home near Troy, Ohio, after spending his life of 74 years in Miami County. Farming was his occupation. On February 25, 1886, he married Miss Anna Lehman. To this union one daughter was born, Estella Grace, who preceded him in death. He was baptized a number of years ago by the late Elder D. C. Robison and continued a faithful member of the Brush Creek Church of God until death.

Besides his widow there are two near of kin who mourn his death, a half brother, Wade Eidemiller, and a half sister, Mrs. Tillie Jackson, both of Dayton.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer from the Irvin Funeral Home of Troy, January 13, and burial was made in the Maple Hill Cometery near Tippecanoe City. Another brother awaits our coming Lord, and the resurrection. Sydney E. Magaw.

IOHN MACY

John Macy was born in Monroe Township, Miami County, Ohio, on November 14, 1870, and died at his home near Casstown, Ohio, January 24, 1935.

On September 22, 1892, he married Miss Mary Catherine Burnsides. To this union eleven children were born, two of them having preceded Mr. Macy in death. On February 28, 1930, Mr. and Mrs. Macy

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

Students of the Bible, especially those who are watching developments in the Near East, will find much of interest in an article in the February issue of the National Geographic Magazine. The article is entitled, "Petra: Ancient Caravan Stronghold," and tells of Oregon, Ill., will be "Seeking God in the Temdevelopments in Edom, to the south of the

Bro. A. M. Jones of Eagle Grove, Iowa, writes briefly of the work in the northwest part of the state, and assures us of his hearty interest in the general work. It is a most encouraging service that Bro. Jones, ably assisted by Bro. Arthur Johnson, is rendering the church in Iowa. May the blessing of God attend his efforts.

The Rockford, Ill., church assisted their pastor, Bro. L. E. Conner, in the celebration of his birthday last Sunday.

Developments in the Far East continue to occupy the attention of the world, and the student of prophecy would do well to watch them attentively. China and Japan, it is apparent from the Scriptures, are to be brought under a common leadership before Antichrist puts in his appearance. Further events should also be looked for in southern Russia which will be of prophetic significance.

The Golden Rule Church of God in Cleveland, Ohio, maintains a prayer circle which meets monthly for the study of prayer, its method, purpose, and effectiveness. Prayer is the life of a church.

At present, there are only 72 members in a Dollar-a-Month Club. Four years ago, the Dollar-a-Month Club. there were approximately 500. Are you still paying?

The pastor of the Eldorado, Ill., church spoke on a most interesting theme on February 2, at that place. His subject was, "Why Godly Men Preached the Second Coming of Christ." May other pastors borrow the thought for development in their own way, Bro. Lapp?

"The 'Week of Prayer' services held by the Fonthill, Out., church recently were very inspirational," says Pastor C. E. Randall in the "Church of God Messenger." Prayer is always helpful and always safe, for it is God's will that we ask to have done.

"The Spirit of Prophecy" will be the theme of Pastor Norman John MacLeod at Los Augeles, Calif., on Sunday, Feb. 24.

> Again we remind our pastors of our standing invitation to publish their sermon topics in advance as an advertizing effort. Those who avail themselves of this opportunity find it doubly helpful. First, it provides the busy pastor with his topics far enough in advance to give him ample time to meditate upon them thoroughly, and, second, it has a decided tendency to arouse an interest on the part of his membership to such an extent that they call forthcoming subjects to the attention of neighbors and friends and invite them to come and listen to the message.

> The following observation from an interesting letter from Bro. and Sr. S. G. Elton. Ventura, Calif., is worthy of passing on to you. purchased and moved to their present home, a farm near Casstown.

It was with very great regret that the friends and neighbors of his community learned of his death. Mr. Macy will long be remembered as a jovial and kind-hearted neighbor and as a father constantly in mind of the cares and pleasures of his family.

Besides his widow, two sisters, and two brothers, those left are, Mrs. Edith Gray, Mrs. Edna Bourquin, Mrs. Annette Bowman, Mrs. Ruth Bowman, Miss Rebecca Macy, and George, Dan, William, and John, Jr., Macy, and 22 grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer January 27 from the Macy home and the Brush Creek Church of God, burial being made in the Curtis Cemetery near the church. S. E. Magaw.

George Washington and Today

By Harvey Krogh, Jr.

IF OUR first President were to awake and travel about over this country and ask you the cause of the present conditions what would you tell him?

Washington would undoubtedly be awe-stricken at seeing the wonderful advancements of civilization. The rail-roads, the automobile, and the airplane are great improvements over former methods of travel and transportation. We have conveniences for going to church and to our business. The mail service, the telephone, the newspaper, the radio, and machinery all save unestimated labor and time. One man can with a machine accomplish the work of fifty men. Everything is more accurate and in larger quantities. Every farmer, every housewife, every laborer has his burdens lightened because of scientific developments.

There are coal mines, oil wells, iron, copper, and an overproduction of food at times. Would not our imaginary guest exclaim: "Why do you not have prosperity?" He might say, "There is plenty of raw material, machinery, and man power, but so many are not working. There is discontentment and unhappiness with all these many wonderful things."

My brother Christian, how would you answer George Washington? Would you say the automobile had ruined the country? Was it machinery, the moving picture show? Or would you tell him the last great war made a false prosperity and people spent money foolishly?

No! It might be best to go back farther and say that Sin is at the bottom of it all. Men never could get along really well and peaceably. From Adam's sons down to the last Democratic and Republican rallies, men have been quarreling, discontented, and unsatisfied.

Mr. Washington might say, "Yes, I can see how Sin has been responsible, but are you going to help?"

Some might answer: "I am going to vote for Franklin Roosevelt again and he will finish restoring our nation. Another: "I've been studying economics and think I see a solution that will cure our present ills."

Who can argue the premise given by Mr. Krogh that only one solution for the present problems of this nation exists? A new approach to an old subject framed around this week's national holiday.

May we give this as a probable answer from the true Christian. "The God of heaven and earth created all things and He is watching over all. He has a great plan by which He is working out all things as He desires.

God made man morally free to do as he chooses and told him to take possession and manage things. 'Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.'—Acts 15:18. God knew that man would sin and rebel and He planned a way of reconciling man to Himself. He sent His Son to reveal much of His plan and to found the church.''

Probably Washington would beam with joy to know that there were still Christians like those who first settled in America. Going on, the true Christian might well say: "I believe that Christ is to return to this earth and 'set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed' (Dan. 2:44), 'and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth' (Zech. 9:10). 'With righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth... and the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea' (Isa. 11:4, 9). I believe the earth will be a wonderful place in which to live.''

Washington might again ask: "But what are you doing to better conditions now?"

The answer: "I am going to Sunday school and church. I am trying to set the best example I can. I am fair in all my dealings. I tell people of Jesus and God's plan and I love to teach children these truths, for the children of today will be our nation tomorrow."

Question: "Do you not vote? We became a nation fighting for that right."

Answer: "Ah! yes, I used to vote but I have been discouraged. One time I and other Christians tried to elect a worthy man in our state but he was beaten by unfair politicians. Finally we elected an honest man who did all he could to bring justice but he (Please turn to Page Ten)

Abreast of the Times

Women Sit in Episcopal Council

"There is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."—Galatians 3:28.

New York, Feb. 13.—For the first time in history women were officially seated in the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America when a three day session of the Council opened here yesterday. All but one of the four women placed on the Council at the triennial convention in Atlantic City last October were present.

It may be recalled that at the convention last October a motion was made to drop the word "Protestant" from the name of the denomination, and that the motion was defeated. The seating of women on the National Council is a further indication that the Episcopal Church in America is more inclined toward Protestantism than toward Catholicism.

Tel Aviv Building Fever

"Mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there."—Isaiah 65:9.

TEL AVIV, Palestine, Jan. 27.—Plans for vast building projects and other public and private improvements of great magnitude continue to develop in this exclusively Jewish city. In addition to the extensive plans reported under date of January 23, Vediot Iryat Tel Aviv, official organ of the municipality, declares that the city engineering department during the last twelve months has issued 2,113 building permits. The water consumption in the city has increased 228 per cent since 1930, while the income of the city has risen 50 per cent. In the half year just ended 2,400 Jewish immigrants located in Palestine and obtained Palestine citizenship. In the preceding three years 1,000 Jews applied for citizenship.

Religious "Reform" in Turkey

"They make broad their phylacteries, and entarge the borders of their garments."—Matthew 23:5.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Jan. 28.—The year of 1934 was marked in this country by various important reforms which were introduced by the Government and which affect both the religious and social condition of the people. These changes are remarkable and even startling, declares The Palestine Post, in that they do away with long established conventions and customs of the people. As a result of the franchise being extended to women it is said that at least a score of well known Turkish women will be included in the Kemalist Party's list of candidates at the forthcoming general election. As there is only one party it is presumed that all these will be elected.

 $\Lambda$  religious reform which the Government has introduced, and which is arousing much adverse criticism among all religious groups, Moslem, Orthodox (Greek Catholie), Roman Catholic, Jewish, Armenian, and Profestant, is the ban which has been placed on clerical garb. After the first of next July no priest, rabbi, or minister of any faith will be permitted to appear on the streets in his distinguishing religious attire. The Vatican is understood to be especially concerned over the numerous Catholic organizations, schools, and missions existing in this city. It is said that if the male and female members of the various orders are not allowed to wear their uniforms in public it may be found necessary to close these establishments. (Is it possible that these Catholic teachers could not instruct their students as successfully in the clothing worn by ordinary people as they can in the trailing robes of their office?-Ed.)

The Bible Wanes

"But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of . . . the holy scriptures."—2 Timothy 3:14, 15.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Feb. 3.—The latest set of figures on the book publishing industry released by the Department of Commerce shows that in 1933 there were 120,789,903 books printed in the United States, about one each for every resident. This is a decrease of better than 20 per cent from 1931. But the most striking figures relate to the decline of interest in religion and philosophy in the depression years. In 1931 there were 4,676,000 Bibles printed and in 1933 there were only 666,000 printed. Meanwhile, interest in sociology and economics increased. In 1931 there were 620,000 volumes produced on these subjects and in 1933 there were 1,113,000.

In other words, the nation got one Bible for each 26 persons in 1931 and one Bible for each 182 persons in 1933. And where it got one economics book for each 196 persons in 1931 it got one for each 109 persons in 1933.

If your child asks bread do you give him a stone.

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

THE literal Jews will be restored to their own land before Christ comes.

By reference to Luke's version of our Savior's discourse upon the mount, it will be seen that the Jews were to be the subjects of the most unprecedented judgment, inflicted by the Gentile powers, unto the time of their deliverance. Luke 21:20-28—"Now when you shall see Jerusalem invested with armies, know that its desolation is nigh. Then let those in Judæa flee to the mountains; let those in the city make their escape, and let not those in the country enter the city; for these will be days of vengeance, in which all the denunciations of the Scriptures shall be accomplished. But alas for the women with child, and for them who give suck in those days! for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. THEY shall fall by the sword; they shall be carried captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be over. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth, the anguish of desponding nations, and the roaring in the seas and floods; men expiring with the fear and apprehension of those things which are coming upon the world, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. Then they shall see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with great glory and power. Now, when these things begin to be fulfilled, look up, and lift up your heads, because your Deliverer approaches."—Campbell's Translation.

Please observe,

- 1. These days of vengeance commence with the investment of Jerusalem with the Roman armies, A. D. 70.
  - 2. They extend through the entire Gentile dispensation.
- 3. The subjects of the judgments and rewards—the thralldom and deliverance have, and will be, the Jews' "wrath upon this people." But how long? Answer: "Until the times of the Gentiles be over." "When these things (the signs in the sun, moon, and stars) begin to come to be fulfilled, look up, and lift up your heads, because your Deliverer approaches."

Who is in thralldom to be delivered? Answer: The

The Gentiles are the oppressors, and the Jews the oppressed. The thralldom is national, the deliverance must be national also. The first links in this prophetic chain give the signs of their national thralldom, the last links give the signs of their national deliverance. First judgment and then mercy. The fig tree, beautiful symbol of the Jewish nation, was cursed—it withered and died. So the nation was cursed, it bowed its head and died.

Again, under the genial influence of the vernal sun, it springs into new life and vigor, while blushing buds, opening flowers, and green foliage speak of another summer, and another autumnal harvest of mellow fruit. So, after the long, dreary winter of national thralldom, God will remember His afflicted children, and speak kindly to them, and bid them return to their allegiance, their land, and their home.

The ear will catch the symphonious sound, as the head so long bowed down to earth will be lifted up, and those eyes so long scalded with bitter, burning tears, now radiant with hope, will be raised aloft to the sun, moon, and stars, bright precursors of coming glory to them, but black with wrath to the doomed nations.

Judgment and mercy for this wonderful people, are strangely blended in our Savior's last discourse to them. I can compare it to nothing more appropriately than the last rays of the setting sun, as slowly they fade from the western heavens, after a long and dreary night, again flashing back with resplendent glory upon the eastern sky. Slowly and solemnly He unrolls the red scroll of national crime, until the heart sickens with its mere rehearsal. Having pronounced dreadful woes upon them, He weeps over the utter hopelessness of their condition. But ere He closes this long censorious discourse, He leaves one bright promise as an oasis in the dreary desert.

"For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Matt. 23:39. Just as certainly as the Jews rejected Christ at His first advent, so certainly will they receive Him at His second advent. They will hail Him then as their long rejected Messiah and deliverer. Christ will come the second time as they expected Him the first time. He will come too as the king of the Jews, as long since foretold by Judah's prophets. (Please turn to Page Ten)

Speak Gently

Speak gently; it is better far
To rule by love than fear;
Speak gently; let no harsh word mar
The good we may do here.
Speak gently to the little child;
Its love is sure to gain;
Teach it in accents soft and mild;
It may not long remain.

Speak gently to the young, for they Will have enough to bear; Pass through this life as best they may, "Tis full of anxious core. Speak gently to the aged one, Grieve not the careworn heart, Whose sands of life are nearly run; Let such in peace depart.

Speak gontly to the erring; know They must have toiled in vain; Perchance unkindness made them so; Oh, win them back again. Speak gently; 'tis a little thing Dropped in the heart's deep well; The good, the joy, that it may bring Eternity shall tell.

-David Bates.

The Perils of Youth

"And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king."—Daniel 1:5.

WE ARE introduced quite simply to three young men, Hebrews of the tribe of Judah. Their family names are: Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. What an honor to be thus called to such royal favor! Is that what the reader is thinking? No. It is a grave and perilous situation that confronts those youths. The native setting of this narrative is that of an academy of military students. These young men are being trained for high princely office in the royal court of ancient Babylon. The three of which we speak more particularly are of Hebrew nationality. They have been carried away with many others of Israel's people in captivity. The one most conspicuous in the group is Daniel, who in later years became one of the greatest prophets in the divine economy. They are chosen for their physical state-without "blemish," "well favoured," "skilful in all wisdom," and "understanding science."

THE HILARITIES OF COLLEGE LIFE

College life is usually characterized by youthful hilarities, and quite proper, when the jollity is clean and free from evil suggestions. We do not search the orehard for winter apples on a June morning. The mother bird does not sit in her nest moping because her fledglings are chirping, lively and gay. But there is one young man in that Babylonian college group that does not feel very sportive or gay. Daniel is not inclined to be very hilarious; but his thoughts are somewhat oppressive as he remembers that he is a captive in a strange land, among strange people and customs of which he knew nothing in his native land. The sounds of music that are wafted in through his window are far from being that of his beloved Zion. The flute, sackbut, trombone, and the dulcimer, were instruments used in the worship of the heathen gods of the Babylonians. All the scenes and sounds would serve to distress the devout mind of the youth who knew nothing about worship other than the Jehovah of his fathers. Then there is the sense of homesickness, and the possibility of never seeing the fatherland again, nor any of his own dear loved ones.

How he would miss the dear ones and the familiar scenes of childhood! But there are those things by which he is environed, which try his young heart more than all. The king would have him forget his old home and its surroundings, the worship, and the country of his nativity. For the furtherance of this purpose, the king ordered that his name should be changed to Belteshazzar (one who lays up treasures in secret). Besides all this, the monarch would make of this beautiful boy a prodigy in personal appearance, so he ordered the "master" of the college to put him under a rigidly prescribed form of diet.

HEREIN LIES THE FATAL SNARE

The daily bill of fare consists of wine, meat, and such luxuries as those which load down the king's own table. That is the severest test of all by which the young man is confronted. He refuses the king's dainties. Why? He has no right to partake of such food, for it is the food of idolatrous worshipers, and heathen, upon which, according to custom, a blessing has been invoked from a heathen god. If the young man partakes of such food, he will have violated the law of the Hebrews, which ever forbids partaking of food dedicated to idols. So Daniel, true to the fine instincts of his early training, and in honor of his father's God, requests that he may be put on a simple diet of "pulse" and water. Pulse is a leguminous plant bearing a seed somewhat resembling a pea. Protest avails nothing, and after some debate by the "master" it is decided to try it out (Dan. 1:12, 13). Ten days pass, and the students come for inspection, and the verdict is that of all, none are so ruddy, robust, and well favored in flesh as Daniel and his Hebrew brethren. Graduation comes, and Daniel gets his diploma, signed by the king, and the document carries the following wonderful statement: "In all matters of wisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm."

Daniel rose to great honors and continued even unto the first year of King Cyrus the Mede. Daniel became the "Prime Minister," and continued beyond the reign of Nebuchadnezzar and his successors.

That, then, is the historic setting briefly and simply told. We will now make a personal application of the narrative, and find a lesson that may help some one to rise above the down-dragging magnetism of worldly gravity, by the grace which Daniel's God is able to supply to young and old.

"When Daniel, faithful to his God,
Would not bow down to men,
And by God's enemies was hurled
Into the lion's den, God shut the Lions' mouths, we read, and robbed
Them of their prey, and the God that Lived in Daniel's time, is just the same today."

There is a captivity more to be feared than the one in which Daniel was transported to Babylon—the captivity of evil habits. Silently, imperceptibly, but powerfully, the chains of evil are being forged around young men and maidens. Worse, did we say? Cyrus, the victorious Persian, when capturing Babylon from the proud ruler, issued a decree releasing the Hebrews from their seventy years' captivity, and some fifty thousand availed themselves of the opportunity to return to the fatherland. But, who ever heard of an evil habit issuing a decree to release a captive or let the prisoner go? Ten plagues availed to let Israel go out of Egypt, but where is the Pharaoh of vice that ever consented to let one single victim of evil habits go? Evil, when deeply rooted, is like scorpion whips that tear the flesh. These spikes are spikes more bloody than any path a Brahman ever trod. They are more merciless than the lash of the Egyptian upon the backs of a captive Hebrew in his cruel bondage. Evil habits are as sepulchers into which millions of its victims are being buried alive every day.

IMPERILED BECAUSE OF INEXPERIENCE

The young men, the young women, are unsuspecting. They seem to think the lion is asleep; and his power is thus unsuspected. There is a great difference between the sparkle of a serpent's eye and that of the prish of its slimy folds about its victim. There is a great difference between the paw of the bear as it plays with its intended victim and the crunching of the bones between its massive jaws, and its terrific hug. It is one thing to see a cat play with the mouse, and another when the mouse is ground between its teeth. It is one thing for a young man to sit in the "seat of the scornful" and listen to the jests and jibes and lewd laughter, and have the hours go blithely by, but quite another thing to find himself caught in the whirlpool of wickedness, and ensnared. Solomon, the wise of heart and experience, has well said: "Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men. Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away. For they sleep not, except they have done mischiel; and their sleep is taken away, unless they cause some to fall. For they eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of violence."

If we would only do with evil habits that beset us round about what the customs officers do with plague-stricken ships that come into port—quarantine them in the power of the omnipotent One!—Samuel Forsby in The Messiah's Advocate.

An Unchanging God for a Changing World

By Mary A. Gesin

"Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God."

RECENTLY a well known educator from the University of Chicago appeared before a large gathering of people in a nearby city under the auspices of a prominent club. The theme of his lecture was, in effect, a changing God for a changing world.

The professor most ably, as no doubt the majority of the audience judged, proceeded to establish the fact that the old ideas of God were no longer adequate for this modern world. He contended that God must change, progress, and develop, just as man does from time to time. Else would there be found a lack of communion between God and man, as man progressed closer to the ideal. God could not function today in this changing age were He not a changing God, so the speaker declared.

As I read the reporter's brief synopsis of this most highly "diverting" lecture I felt as though all the standards of my life were crashing down over my head. That is, if I could bring myself to give credence to the most learned gentleman's deductions. Every stronghold on which I had come to depend would totter and fall in ruins at my feet, were his words authoritative.

Changes are part of the inevitableness of this life. The status and the circumstance of every individual change from year to year, almost from day to day. Nothing seems lasting, secure, permanent. What about the God we worship? Let us see.

Who would have His divine attributes altered? How meaningless would be these words: "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God... and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him"!—I John 3:1, 2.

Should God change in His attitude toward man He, who "so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son," would not send Him "the second time without sin unto salvation" (John 3:16; Heb. 9:28). Empty then that great expectation in these difficult days, that most "blessed" hope (Titus 2:13)!

Tell me, which one among us would be willing to worship a Creator whose promises were unstable? Who would relinquish His dependability, His steadfastness? What meaning in these assurances then: "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever"?—Psalm 125:2.

Further, we are assured that "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way. Though he fall, he shall not be utterly east down: for the Lord upholdeth him with his hand."—Psalm 37:23, 24. No need of a changing God to accommodate a changing world, for men still fall and still need a powerful Hand to lift them.

The Prophecy of Zechariah

THE FUTURE FORETOLD

 $\mathbf{R}^{\mathrm{AIN}}$  is an important necessity in all countries, but particularly in agricultural lands. In Palestine, for six months in the year (says Smith's Bible Dictionary)-"no rain falls; and the harvests are gathered in without any of the anxiety with which we are so familiar, lest the work be interrupted by unseasonable storms." As a result of six months' absence of rain, "the whole land becomes dry, parched, and brown, the eisterns are empty, the springs and fountains fail, and the autumnal rains are eagerly looked for to prepare the earth for the reception of seed. These, the early rains, commence about the latter end of October or beginning of November, in Lebanon a month earlier; not suddenly, but by degrees; the husbandman has thus the opportunity of sowing his fields of wheat and barley. With respect to the distinction between the early and the latter rains, Robinson observes that there are not at the present day 'any particular periods of rain or succession of showers which might be regarded as distinct rainy seasons. The whole period from October to March now constitutes only one continued season of rain, without any regularly intervening term of prolonged fine weather. Unless, therefore, there has been some change in the climate, the early and the latter rains, for which the husbandman waited with longing, seem rather to have implied the first showers of autumn which revived the parched and thirsty soil, and prepared it for the seed; and the later showers of spring, which continued to refresh and forward both the ripening crops and the vernal products of the fields' (James 5:7; Prov. 16:15)."

That the provision of the "early" and the "latter" rain implied the supply of the desirable rains in between as well is apparent from Jeremiah 5:24. After rebuking Israel for being worse than the waves of the sea which can be restrained by the sands since they (Israel) revolted and went beyond bounds (vv. 22, 23), the Prophet said—"Neither say they in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season: he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest"; literally, according to Variorum footnote, "the weeks the statute of harvest."

Why does wheat sown in late October ripen in April or May? Because the wise Creator has arranged "the weeks the statute of harvest." God made the grain to germinate under certain conditions of moisture and to develop under more or less regular rain up till the harvest, when rain is not required. The children of Israel should have been grateful to God for supplying their sustenance unfailingly by these natural means, which were under His control. The covenant or arrangement made with Israel was that if they were obedient these regularities of season would be maintained; but if they were disobedient the rains would be withheld. Leeser's rendering of Jeremiah 5:24, 25 is, "And they have not said in their heart, Let us now fear the Lord our God, that giveth rain, the early and the latter rain, in its season; the appointed weeks of the harvest doth he ever preserve for us. Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden what is good from you."

God's Promises Renewed After the Return

Now if, in continuing our study of Zechariah's prophecies, we keep in mind that he prophesied just after the Jews returned from Babylon, we can readily see the appropriateness of chapters 10 and 11, recalling some of their history and reminding them of the promises and the threats previously given through Isaiah, Jeremiah, and other prophets. The promises depended on their obedience, and the threats would be carried out in punishments when they were disobedient. . . . The people required instruction as to their status in the eyes of God, and His willingness to receive their worship on the same terms and in the same manner at the temple as before the captivity. Members of the ten tribes who had been taken captive to Assyria, and who in the meantime had become more or less scattered in other parts of what became the Babylonian and in Zechariah's time was the Medo-Persian Empire, would require special instruction and assurance that they, as well as Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, were welcome to return to the land. . . . They required to have impressed upon their minds the fact that the only acceptable worship would be at the temple at Jerusalem; on no account would sacrifices be acceptable if offered elsewhere.

Chapter 9 showed that the King would come to Zion, at Jerusalem, in Judah, and not to some city of the former northern kingdom that had departed from God and set up a worship of their own. The promise of regular rains (chapter 10) was important as another indication of God's favor toward the returned exiles. In returning them to their own land God assured them that He would provide their sustenance as before. But the same terms were imposed: they should ask of Him; go to Him to supply their wants, in accordance with their covenant.

Chapter 10, verse 2, reminds them that the diviners and those who used images testified falsely. Their dreams and visions and messages were not of God. When followed in the past, these false prophets were successful in misleading them "because there was no shepherd." The "shepherds" of Israel were the tribe of Levi, including the priesthood, and the heads of the other tribes, all of whom had the responsibility of keeping the "sheep"—the nation—in the fold. They were to lead the "sheep" in green pastures of righteousness and truth by teaching them the law and encouraging divine worship at the temple. But these shepherds proved false to their trust.

Verse 3 declares that God's anger was kindled against the faithless shepherds, and against the "goats." festly "goats" here does not refer to animals; an animal could not be held responsible for Israel's going their own way. But in every flock there are rams, usually large and powerful, which take the part of leaders of the flock. Some of these are distinguished by wearing a bell. They are supposed to lead the flock in accordance with the wishes of the shepherd. At bridge crossings in sheep country the crossing keeper may keep a trained sheep to lead any traveling flock onto and safely across the bridge. Palestine shepherds had flocks of goats as well as sheep, and these herds of goats would have their leaders also. The word translated "goats" in verse 3 is not a word of opprobrium, as though goats were of an evil nature. Quite the contrary, the thought is a leader, and, figuratively—as evidently here intended, since people are under discussionleaders of the people. A reading given in the Variorum as conveying the idea intended is "bell-wethers"; and refers to Isaiah 14:9—"even all the chief ones"—as conveying the meaning; with a footnote "bell-wethers." The same thought is conveyed in Jeremiah 25:34-36, by the words "principal of the flock," referring to the leaders among the people. The Hebrew word rendered "principal" means-"wide, large, powerful"; hence conspicuous and esteemed; also lordly, noble, worthy. In Israel those conspicuous and powerful personages who should have been noble and worthy leaders of the people became untrustworthy, and led the people astray (Isaiah 9:14-16).

Jeremiah predicted what the Lord would do to the faithless shepherds and leaders, and Zechariah tells us that the predicted punishment was inflicted; for the captivity to Babylon, the destruction of the conditions or "pastures" where these faithless shepherds enriched themselves, effectually deprived these false leaders of their positions. On the return from Babylon God raised up Zerubbabel, Joshua, Ezra, Nehemiah, and other trustworthy leaders—true shepherds—to guide them back—not only to the land, but to the humble and sincere worship of their God.

In this return Judah was the principal tribe, and so numerous as to make a striking historical event, an event not previously known, of more than forty thousand persons returning from captivity loaded with wealth to settle in their own land (Ezra 2:64). This prominence of Judah is referred to in verse 3 in these words—"For the Lord of hosts hath visited his flock the house of Judah, and hath made them as his goodly horse in the battle." As it were, God rode back with them to the land which He had forsaken for seventy years. Jer. 25:1-12; 2 Chron. 36:14-21; Ezra 1:3-11; Ezek. 8:1-4; 11:22, 23.—The New Covenant Advocate.

Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy.—Ratph Waldo Emerson.

THE BIG TRAGEDY OF LITTLE PREJUDICES

NE of the most interesting incidents in the recorded story of Jesus' life is that one which tells of His visit to Nazareth, "where he had been brought up." Coming back to the village where He had spent His boyhood days, where both He and His parents had been highly esteemed, where His brothers and sisters still lived and were well thought of, He discovered a real prejudice against Himself, a prejudice that, even in His very presence, grew into something like active antagonism and dislike. He understood the feeling of the people of Nazareth, we are led to believe, and saw the naturalness of it so readily that He made use of a familiar proverb to explain it. These village folk were actively annoyed that He who had been one of them only a little while before should come back to them now with feelings and ideas and philosophies altogether different from their own. They resented it and showed their resentment very plainly.

Jesus understood their feeling: in fact, it was very easy to understand, and yet He marveled at it. To Him the things He was saying were so altogether true, and so tremendously important, that He was astonished that they allowed their little prejudices and stupidities to stand in the way of their receiving and understanding and profiting by them. He was there to give them truth that would have made life gloriously different for them all the rest of their days, and yet He was baffled in His desire and purpose to do so by their little bigotries and animosities. It wasn't that He was saying anything inherently hard to believe, or anything beyond the compass of their faith; they didn't give any truth that He tried to give them the least chance, because their minds and souls were filled with their stupid little prejudices against Him. And no doubt it was the very littleness of their prejudices that helped to add to Jesus' dismay.

It is quite evident, then, that Jesus understood quite well why His fellow townsmen felt toward Him as they did, and recognized the naturalness of their feeling, and yet He blamed them for it all the same. He believed that a man must be held responsible to some degree at least for his prejudices and for the bad results that they show in his life. Jesus saw, as we must believe no other great teacher ever saw so well, that it is not the difficulty they may have in believing and accepting the great saving truths of life that make men shy off from them, but the dislike they have for them born of prejudice or stupidity or cowardice. And we may be sure that as He saw it that day in Nazareth it was nothing short of a tremendous tragedy that His own townspeople should shut Him and His great new teaching about the kingdom out of their lives just for a few small town prejudices. And many years of experience have proved how yery clearly and truthfully He saw things.

FACTS FROM GOD'S WORD

By M. Walker

We are just passing through to the city foursquare, Where the saints will be gathered from everywhere. From the east and the west, from the climes of the sun, For the times of the Gentiles, their course have nigh run; And Jesus is calling each sinner to come, Ere the church be complete to the very last one And finished the purpose that God has in hand, Which is stated so plainly, though few understand.

In the book of the Acts, and in chapter fifteen, What Simeon hath said is quite plain to be seen. The world is not coming to Christ, as some say, Matthew twenty-four states a much different way. Second Timothy three tells us things we should know, As it shows the last days of this age in its woe. But out from the lost world, the people do come, Who declare they are saved by the blood of God's Son, Who has made full atonement, and will refuse none, God in free-loving grace has invited each one.

And now blessed be God for the church, in the church, Is freeing herself of the things that besmirch. She now reads the Word with true Holy Ghost light, And is seeing these things with a God-seeing sight, That the end of this age is now drawing near, And she looks up in faith for her Lord to appear, And she says in her heart, "Come, Lord Jesus, do come," For all things foretold will most surely be done, And she takes us to glory, where all is serene, To that place in John's Gospel, in chapter fifteen.

The world in its sin waxes laggard and grim,
And its cup of iniquity fills to the brim,
With Israel still under death and the curse,
Though she thinks she's much better, she's really much worse.

The church goes on blindly, with banners unfurled, Declaring to all she is saving the world. But the world in its sin waxes worse and worse still And her cup with iniquity blindly doth fill.

Beware of earth's leaders who tell things unheard, And make it their business to scoff at God's Word; For this is a day that is troubled and sad, With many professors completely gone mad, Who are wrestling from Scripture all things that are true, Deluding the student who sits in the pew.

There's no man can right it but the King from on high, Who'll bring in the kingdom, which now draweth nigh. The church in her zeal thinks she's doing this thing, She is bringing the kingdom, but bringing no King.

Daniel two, forty-four, says this cannot be done Until the great day of David's great Son, Who will settle all wars, and all sin and strife, Who has purchased our pardon and given us life. The world says the nations and the kings that will be, Shall be greatly enraged when the King they shall see,

But the Scriptures are plain in Psalm number two, And things that are written will surely come true. The Jew will be back in the land, but not blest, And weary and saddened will find there no rest.

Some nations to Israel will not give place,
Against her they'll gather to blot out the race,
But the Lord will appear with His army from heaven,
And the Jew He'll deliver at great Armageddon.
By His wounds they shall know Him, the man of their kin,
The Spirit will bring great conviction of sin,
And they'll mourn and they'll weep, each family apart,
Just as at Pentecost, pricked to the heart.
Their cup of affliction thus filled to the brim,
They'll cry, "This is our Lord, we have waited for Him."
Then the one hundred and forty-four thousand will sing
The new song they will learn from Him who is King.

RELIGION LIKENED TO GOLD

A REVIVAL of religious interest and activity comparable to the gold rush in the Rocky Mountains following the increase in the price of the metal by the Government was predicted by Rev. Edwin T. Dahlberg in his sermon Sunday night in the First Baptist Church.

"With the increase in the price of gold to $35 an ounce, many mines and old stamping mills which were abandoned more than twenty years ago are now throbbing with activity and even individual prospectors can be seen in the creek beds and over the mountains panning out gold," Rev. Dahlberg said.

"This should be a picture to us of a reactivated church. All over the country we see abandoned churches where the machinery of religion is still. Church organizations that in pioneer days throbbed with energy are falling into decay. Many people are saying that the gold mining days of Christianity are over.

"Let us not be too quick to come to such a conclusion. Just as the price of gold has gone up, so have righteousness, faith, and godliness become more priceless by very reason of their scarcity. We may expect to see in our generation the rebuilding of waste places and the restoration of the church of Jesus Christ to its virgin glory as the servants of God once more descend into the dark fastnesses of sin to reclaim the gold ore in the souls of men."—Source unknown.

Not alone of present blessing does He assure us. The unchanging God has definitely declared the nature of His future plans for us. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne" (Rev. 3:21), and "we shall reign on the earth" (5:10). "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."—21:4. A God who does not remain the same throughout eternity without doubt would alter many of His plans for His creation.

More precious to the follower of God today than all other promises is that of forgiveness to the repentant one at the hands of a compassionate heavenly Father, because of the One who died for us. Who would be willing to forego the peace "which passeth all understanding" (Phil. 4:7) resulting when we know that "if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (1 John 1:9)? A changing God might not pity us "like as a father," nor remember "that we are dust" (Psalm 103:13, 14). His wonderful love! how could we exist for a day without it? Tell me that, most learned professor.

Security, which all are seeking, is hidden in these words: "Of old thou hast laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; . . . but thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end."—Psalm 102:25, 26.

Men may come and men may go. Human wisdom may pit itself against the omniscient God. But "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; a good understanding have all they that do his commandments" (Psalm 111:10).

Most wise and happy is he who can say with the learned Apostle Paul, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day."—2 Tim. 1:12.

Within this awful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries!
Happiest they of human race,
To whom God has granted grace
To read, to fear, to hope, to pray,

Who read to doubt, or read to scorn.

THE JEW

By Mrs. Robert McLaughlan

He wanders 'mong the nations,
As first from Judah's hills,
Not time nor place can change him—
A Jew he wanders still.
He falls before the dread simoon,
That in the desert blows;
He shivers underneath the blast,
'Mid the lone polar snows.

The rise and fall of empires,
Have passed his wondering view,
Ah! what a life of destiny
Is that of thine, O Jew!
The proud, the impious Babylon,
The seat of pride and lust:
He writhed beneath her captive chain,
Then passed her in the dust.

The blaze of Persian glory,
Like the meteor flash had gone,
And the ray that brought deliverance
No longer on him shone.
He trod the streets of classic Greece,
When laurels wreathed her brow,
'Mid the tombstones of her splendor,
We see him linger now.

He gazed on Rome in glory,
As she spread her eagle wings,
Soaring mistress of the nations,
Her voice the law of kings.
E'en his queenly Jerusalem,
Strewn 'mid the desert sands,
But the everlasting hills are there,
Mount Zion ever stands.

Jerusalem's promised glory
His waiting eyes shall see,
And Israel's son no longer roam,
From bondage now is free.
When Judah's scattered children,
Throng to their promised home,
And Messiah sways the scepter,
A King on David's throne.

THE UNBELIEVABLE

THE National Methodist Press (Washington, D. C.) quotes Professor Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, as saying that the objective of the New Deal is to make possible a more abundant life for the American people, and that such an abundant life implies the enjoyment of the good things of life in security and contentment. Thus far we agree with him. But what does he esteem "the good things" to be? His answer is, "the conventional trinity of wine, women, and song." American women, he says, "should follow the example of Mrs. Roosevelt and serve wine in their homes."

These words of the professor are taken from the March issue of The Democratic Digest, published by the Women's National Democratic Club, Washington, D. C. Our attention was called to them by an article from the pen of the editor of the National Methodist Press, which appeared in the Western Recorder (Louisville). was tied hand and foot by the grafters and big bosses. Since then I have given up my work in politics. Paul said, 'Be ve not unequally voked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you' (2 Cor. 6:14-17). 'But yo are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light' (1 Peter 2:9).

"The Christian has a special work to do which will take all of his time in this life. The world will take eare of itself. I have given my life to Christ and I owe all things to Him. I know it may look as if I am neglecting my duty to my country and not helping to better it but the long way around is the only way the earth can be rid of Sin. That apparently long way around is God's way and it is not only the shortest but the only way that the earth may be made a beautiful and peaceable place to dwell.

"If we devote our lives to Christ, God will take care of all other things while we are seeking His kingdom and leading others also to find God."

My friends, would that be your answer if some one would question you? Let us so have our minds filled with God's Word and our understanding based on His plan that we may speak for God whenever we have that blessed opportunity.

THE HERALD OF MESSIAII'S REIGN

According to Ezckiel 38 they will have been gathered out of the nations, and be living in unwalled villages, when the king of the North (Russia) shall come with his armed legions against the glorious land, leading in his train the kings of the earth and the whole world in the last great battle of God almighty.

The Prophet Joel when describing the restoration of the Jews and their holy land, and the same gathering of the nations of which Ezekiel speaks, exclaims: "For, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land."-Joel 3:1, 2. Zechariah represents the Lord as saving Judah and his tents, before the gathering of all nations against them, as described by Ezekiel and Joel. Zechariah 12:7-10--"The Lord also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah. In that day shall the Lord defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and he that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the house of David shall be as God, as the angel of the Lord before them. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem. the spirit of grace and of supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn."

From the foregoing the following conclusions are legitimate:

- 1. Judah is saved nationally, before all nations are assembled against them; and the Lord defends them by destroying all the nations that come against Jerusalem.
- 2. Judah are in the land when Christ comes, and look upon Him whom they, as a race, have pierced, and repent of this great sin of their nation, as will be manifested in this deep wail of contrition.
- 3. Our Lord accepts their repentance and extends mercy to them, as is evident by His pouring the spirit of grace, or favor, and supplication upon them.

Personal Liberty

"I have a right to live my own life, and it is no one's business how I live it!" How often we have heard such an expression from young lips.

But there never was a greater untruth. No one can live as he or she pleases without regard for others. There are those who love and cherish us and closely watch every footstep taken. Hearts that are pained and broken by our following the "broad way" that leads to destruction.

We cannot live alone and do as we please. Fathers and mothers; sisters and brothers; friends and neighbors; all have a personal interest in our welfare and well-being. And, above all earthly ties and endearments, God cares! We are not our own! We have been created for a purpose—and that purpose is not for wrongdoing. Jesus Christ has died for us—gave His life that we might live upright and pure in His sight. No, no! Our lives are not our own except for good.—Lottie E. Young, Seattle, Wash.

Fight, or We Perish

The church is on its last legs.

On the one hand is a vague hint of a revival of learning; on the other, an obvious indifference to the destruction of everything for which the church has stood.

The church is on its last legs.

On the one hand is a faint indication of a new understanding of Bible teachings; on the other, a conservative clinging to the errors of the past.

The church is on its last legs.

Where once steeples rose above crowds numbered in the hundreds, steeples now rise above groups numbered in the tens.

The church is on its last legs.

Where once ministers flourished as the guides and confidants of townships, there are no ministers.

The church is on its last legs.

Although men once placed their membership in churches because of social and business reasons, not even these causes bring them to the church today.

The church is on its last legs.

Although men once revered the God and the Bible which the church is supposed to foster, men now ridicule or doubt or east reflections upon both God and Bible.

The church is on its last legs.

Unless we fight, we perish. This is no time for silly theological disputes over abstruce questions of technical interpretation. This is a time for war.

The church pours over its musty tomes and teaches human idealism. The church remains as far away from drab reality as Neptune from the sun.

Our backs are to the wall. No empty Oxford Movement, no reforms, no politics will save us. They have been tried, and they have failed.

Cold facts are needed now, not soft and careful preaching on the ways to renovate society. The Christ taught almost nothing about that. The Christ inaugurated no reforms, save as they came from the conversion of men. And that conversion, in apostolic times, came from the proclamation of the so-called dogmatic truths.

Some are wont to depend on Holy Spirit guidance. Others are indifferent to religion in any guise. Still others believe that nothing matters except one's own internal feelings. None of these depend on the Bible or on work.

The Holy Spirit never guided the apostles until they had undergone three years of strictest teaching under the master teacher of the world, Jesus of Nazareth. What they had learned by study and by practice, the Holy Spirit taught them how to use. The facts which they had learned were brought to their remembrance to insure accurate missionary work. No record has appeared of the Holy Spirit's informing them of something new, or of acquainting them with something they had not previously known.

Indifference is the greatest foe of Christianity today. And Christendom has only itself to blame. It has failed to teach its people anything different from that which they can learn in public schools. It has stressed good citizenship, moral living, and a nebulous "inner life" to the exclusion of the gospel of the kingdom. Only by a return to the dogmas of the apostolic era will the church succeed in reinvigorating itself for really noble efforts.

The "inner life" is nothing. It can mean anything. It generally signifies flaccid distaste for the definite doctrines laid down by Jesus and His early followers. The spiritual comes only with knowledge of the dogmatic. Spirituality is living with God, and one cannot live with Him unless one knows considerable about Him.

Being a Christian is work, not a hobby. Study, not for ancient manuscript differences and trivial technicalities, but study for the great outstanding truths revealed in the Bible, is essential to the well-being of the church. No Holy Spirit guidance alone can save us, for God sends His Spirit only to those who have learned something about Him. No politics can save us, for God has no dependence on the politics of men. Nothing but the Bible, and the bald facts which it sets forth, can be the salvation of the church.

It is our duty to fight for the doctrines of Jesus Christ. Regardless of the prejudices, social, religious, and political, of others; regardless of indifference; regardless of ridicule; regardless of our own desires, it is our duty and our privilege to battle for the return to the facts of Christianity.

WE LEARN FROM PETER

L AST week we read that fine story of Peter and the lame man at the Beautiful Gate. It sounded something like a fairy tale, didn't it? Peter going up to the poor crippled beggar who had never walked in all his life. The lame man reaching out his hand expecting a few pennies. Peter taking his hands and raising him up, saying he had no gold he could give him. The poor cripple suddenly able to walk and run!

There is this difference, however, between fairy tales and these wonderful stories of the Bible: the fairy tales never happened and couldn't possibly happen; the Bible stories are every one as true as can be and really did come to pass just as they are told. You will always remember that, I'm sure.

Now get your Bibles, girls and boys, and find verse 12 of Acts, third chapter. Let's see what happened to Peter and John after the healing of the lame man at the gate called Beautiful.

You remember, the people standing round could hardly believe their eyes, and no wonder! So Peter took that chance to preach them a little sermon. The first thing he said was that he had not cured the cripple by his own power, but that God had given him the power to do it.

Then, when Peter saw they were interested and all paying attention to what he was saying, he went on to show them how great their sin was in crucifying Jesus. For Jesus was God's Son, sent into the world to be their Savior. The Prince of life, Peter called Him.

He preached a great sermon in a few words that day. For he told them all about Jesus' resurrection, His coming again, and what they should do to be forgiven of their sins and be ready when He returns.

Now look at the next chapter and see if you can find out what the officers thought about Peter's preaching to the people. Put him in jail! didn't they? Then the next day he was called up for trial before the rulers.

Well, well, things were happening fast to Peter and John. The strangest part of it all was that Peter wasn't a bit afraid. You know, if he had been a coward, as he was when Jesus was on trial, he'd have told a lie and said he didn't know anything about the healing of the cripple.

But Peter was a brave man now. I wonder how many of you know how he came to be so. Peter was awfully sorry because he had denied his Lord, and he learned a great deal in those sad days following Jesus' death. Nevermore would he tell lies like that.

Now ask Mother or some older person to read and explain verses 13 and 14 to you. The rulers could find nothing really wrong with Peter and John, and so they had to let them out of jail. But first they told them to stop preaching. Peter answered them bravely and wisely in verses 19 and 20.

Peter would not disobey the rulers only in case they ordered him to do something against God. Then God came first. And so he said he must keep on preaching. Then he went back to where the disciples were gathered together praying for him and John, no doubt.

They asked God to give them more courage to do what was right regardless of the rulers, and tell the people every time they had a chance about Jesus and what He could do for them. They prayed to be brave enough always to speak the truth.

And, you know, that would be a good prayer for each one of us to offer to God. When we get into a tight place sometimes it seems easier to tell a lie to get out of trouble. But really we all know it is only making things harder for ourselves, because we have to tell other lies to cover up the first one. And soon no one believes us any time, and we get ashamed of ourselves.

Later on, Peter wrote two letters to his church members, and they are good for us even today. They are called 1 Peter and 2 Peter. Who can find them? They are nearly at the end of the New Testament.

In these letters Peter tells us some of the things he had learned during the hardships he had to endure. In chapter 2, verse 21, of the first letter, Peter says we should follow Jesus' example, which was always a good example. For He was honest, brave, gentle, pure, and loving at all times. Let's try hard to do that, shall we?

"Lord, who lovest little children,
Hear us as we pray to Thee.
Thou who lived a holy child life,
Help us to be pure like Thee.
In our school-time and our playing,
Make us gentle, Lord, like Thee.
When to anger we are tempted,
Help us to be meek like Thee.
Guard our lips from every evil,
Help us to be true like Thee."

The Sunday School Lesson From Truth Seekers' QUARTERLY

LESSON 9. - March 3, 1935

PETER UNMASKS FALSEHOOD AND HYPOCRISY

Acts 5:1-42: 8:4-25

GOLDEN TEXT

Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour: for we are members one of another.—Ephesians 4:25.

A STUDY OF THE SUBJECT

Topic: Peter Unmasks Falsehood and Hypocrisy.

Profession of faith in Christ is of Aim: no value unless accomplished by a true change of heart.

Class Discussion: The reason why the early much had "all things common," What was church had "all things common." the difference between the practice of the early church and modern socialismy. Why is political Communism dangerous to religion!

I. Peter Punishes Deception. (Acts 5:1-6.) At the time of this lesson the church in Jeru salem numbered thousands, many of whom were from the poorest classes in a city where extreme poverty was the rule rather than the exception. But from the beginning of its history the body of Christ had looked upon itself as a family, each member of which was responsible for the well-being of all other members. The great difficulty that was encountered by the leaders in providing for so many needy ones resulted in the establishment of a common fund by voluntary contribution which was used for the support of all. No one was obliged to sell his property and give all to the church, but no doubt, was encouraged to do this. The lesson clearly indicates that no such system could be maintained by worldly men and women, but only by a community made up of those whose hearts had been cleansed from all selfishness by the gospel of Jesus Christ.

II. Peter Denounces the Commercializing of Religion, (Acts 8:18-24,) As a church grows in numbers it becomes ever more difficult for the leaders to maintain as high a spiritual standard as is the case when the body of be-lievers is smaller. The reason for this is that when large numbers flock into its membership it becomes almost impossible for elders and teachers to give to each applicant for baptism the detailed instruction in faith and practice that can be given when converts are less numerous. The consequence is that some "creep in unawares" who are not fully prepared before their immersion takes place. This was the case with three characters in our lesson today. Simon brought into the church with him his former conception of religion as a money making scheme, and his lack of understanding did not appear until some time after his baptism. He had believed, however, and was baptized (v. 13), and was therefore in a position where he could pray for forgiveness through the great Mediator Jesus Christ.

THE GOLDEN TEXT

Ananias did not lie unto the apostles, for his lie was unto God. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."— Heb. 10:31. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that fore the rulers, he was freed with no condemshall he also reap."—Gal, 6:7. Few people nation against him, but with the warning to receive their punishment so quickly as did Ananias and Sapphira, but the reward or punishment is sure to come sometime, for "all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone" (Rev. 21:8).

It is better to always speak the truth and be in favor with God and man and thereby escape all the evils resulting from lying.

PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

Hypocrisy

- -is contemptible wherever found: -in religion is worship in word only;
- -cannot always be concealed; -is never hidden from God;
- -deceives the one who possesses it.

Obeying God. When we are brought face to face with the question as to whether we will obey God or man, there is only one alternative and that is the decision of Peter and the other apostles, "We ought to obey God rather than men." Of course it is not incumbent upon a person to obey God; he can obey men, but if he is going to be loyal to the cause which he has espoused, then must be obey God. The priests of Peter's time were not loyal and faithful to their religion and their God, else they would not have taken the course they did. A person who obeys from the heart the doctrine delivered by God (Rom, 6:17) would not engage in such drastic prac-True obedience leads away from the lusts of the flesh and indulgence in such shameful activities (1 Pet. 1:14). It can be said of the religious leaders of Peter's time that they were "menpleasers." Yes, we can include many leaders of the modern church in such grouping (Eph. 6:6, 7; 2 Tim. 4:1-4).

Opponents of Truth. True "lovers of truth" are not oppressive, they are tolerant and considerate. It is those who love darkness rather than light that resort to foul practices and criminal acts to prevent the free dissemination of truth. Truth holds liberty and carries freedom and travels on wings of love spreading rays of light and dropping branches of The persecutors of the early disciples and all religious tormentors are aptly described by the Master in Matthew 23:13: "But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."—C. E. R.

INTERMEDIATES

The Sin of Lying

Under the guidance and protection of his absent Lord, Peter was daily learning the lesson of courage in right doing, leaving the results to God. Following his appearance bestop preaching the gospel. How did Peter reply to their charge (Acts 4:18, 19)? Returning to the other disciples, who no doubt had been praying for him and John, they gave the honor to God in a prayer of thanksgiving (vv. 24-30). Notice they did not pray that persecution of them by the rulers should stop, but rather, that their courage to continue preaching and healing should be increased.

Discuss the custom of the early church in regard to private ownership of property (vv. 32, 34, 35). Some not being thoroughly converted, the natural result of this practice was the action of Ananias and his wife. Relate the story (Acts 5:1-10). Note the effect upon all (v. 11). Incidents which followed showed Peter's prayer to have been answered. His power increased, but the persecution did also. What effect did this latter have upon the spread of the gospel (Acts 8:4) ! (Mention should be made of the story of Stephen by the teacher, noting the first mention of Saul.) How did Peter possess such clearsighted judgment with regard to the sin practiced by Ananias and the hypocrisy of the sorcerer? Do you think his own experience in connection with the denial of his Lord had anything to do with it?

Courage in doing right, though it may bring suffering, brings its own reward .- M. G.

JUNIOR CLASS

Presentation of Lesson. To get a good understanding of this lesson children should know what had taken place just before this lesson. The disciples put in prison for teaching about Jesus; how they were let out of prison; the surprise of high priest and council to know they were out. Our lesson starts here. Try to get children to tell how they would have felt had they been in disciples' place. Would we have stopped telling about Jesus after we had been put in prison? Peter and the others did not. Here is what Peter did. Tell in this order: Captain sends for Peter and other disciples; they are brought before the council and asked the question in v. 28; Peter's reply; they plan to kill them; they are defended by Gamaliel. Tell Gamaliel's story on past the lesson text to end of Memory Verse. Did Peter and the other apostles need to be brave and strong to go through the experience given in this lesson? Certainly, and while we probably will never go through such an experience, we, too, must be brave and strong. "Be strong and of a good courage," is the memory verse. Learn it.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

TO OUR PASTORS

You who have so staunelly supported the work in the past are invited to join us in putting on a pre-Easter campaign among your people to increase the circulation of our paper. We will be glad to furnish you with sample copies to pass out among prospective sub-scribers and to assist in any other way possible in the furthering of such an effort. The paper is yours. It is exactly what you make it, and we depend largely upon your articles for matter for its columns, and we want your writings to have as wide a circulation as possible. Several of our ministers who have seldom written for the paper have recently signified their intention of contributing of their scholarship and biblical knowledge to the enrichment of its pages in the near future. Who will be the first to send us a list of new subscribers? Remember, the rate is one dollar and fifty cents for a full year to those who have never taken the paper.

Illinois members: Please send your remit-tance for the fund to pay off the indebtedness on our Dormitory to Miss Leota B. Hanson, Lebanon, III.

STILL FOR THE OLD FAITH

A most interesting letter has come to us from a sister in Iowa which we would be delighted to print in full if permission to do so had not been withheld, but having been accorded the privilege of publishing it in part and without signature we select the following excerpts from it.

"I want to thank you for our good Restitution Herald. I read each article, and then with Bible in hand study them over and over, thus (verifying) the truths the writers have studied out for our good. As I grow older my faith in the truth that we as a church have always stood for grows stronger. We think the new quarterlies," (doctrinal lessons implied), "answer a great need of our Sunday school workers. May God continue to bless you and your coworkers in spreading the truth is my prayer."

SOUTH LAWN CHURCH, GRAND RAPIDS

The monthly men's meeting held February 8 drew one of the largest crowds of men that hus ever attended one of our gatherings. President Lussenden had arranged a splendid program which was thoroughly enjoyed by the 35 men present.

The Tuesday night devotional services have been exceptionally well attended recently, and the splendid spirit is very inspiring. The book of Isaiah is being studied in these meetings.

Sunday school attendance had fallen quite a bit below normal a while this winter but for the last few weeks has shown splendid guins. The attendance on February 10 was 217. The officers and teachers are doing their best to teach these children and young people the truths of the gospel, and to keep before them the sweet spirit of love and Christian living which Jesus taught by word and by example.

Berean work is in the best of condition. Especially is the young people's class an inspiration. From 30 to 35 of high school age are in Sr. Siple's class each Thursday night and listen with rapt attention. Many of them come from homes whore religious influence has never before been felt.

F. E. Siple, Pastor.

BAPTISMS IN VIRGINIA

Again we rejoice that the gospel is still the "power of God unto salvation." On Sunday afternoon, Feb. 10, it was our gratifying privilege to assist a mother and her two daughters to take upon themselves the name of the Lord Jesus by baptism.

This service was conducted in the baptistry of the beautiful Christian Church in Woodstock, where we were made to feel so very welcome. The pastor of this church assisted in the service also.

We are happy indeed to commend to the brotherhood this mother, Mrs. Rachel Clem, who is in the mature middle age of life, when a mother can be of such great usefulness in guiding the lives of her family. Pauline, who is 15, and Beatrice, who is 13, are young people of sterling character, and they are anticipating a long life of useful service in the cause of the Master. May they not be disappointed in this desire, should our Lord tarry.

The interest at Maurertown Church of God is very encouraging, and we hope to report more results in the near future.

V. Earl Thayer.

HERALD RECEIPTS

Alice Emerson; Mary J. Calkins (for self and another); George Waters (for self and another); John D. Davis; James H. Lewis; Leroy Hiott; Anna Cochran; Mrs. A. M. Linsenmeier; E. T. Renner; R. A. Humphreys.

DEATH CLAIMS HOME MEMBER

.....

After many months of illness, but which fortunately were accompanied by little actual pain, Mrs. Emma O'Byrne, who entered Golden Rule Home as a regular resident about two years ago, passed from life on the morning of February 8, 1935, in her ninety-first year. She had been nearly blind for many years, having suffered a partial loss of sight as the result of an accident in Ohio. She was a woman of broad culture and pleasing personality, and a life-long member of the Methodist Church, of which her husband had been a minister. The funeral service was conducted at her request by Rev. E. O. Storer, pastor of her church in Oregon.

SADIE HAM DODDSON

Sadie Ham Doddson, second daughter of James R. and Sarah I. Ham (both of whom are nearly 89 years of age), after eighteen months of suffering, died January 6, 1935. The funeral service was conducted two days later. In addition to her aged parents, she is survived by her dear son Ernest, who was away at the time of her death; two sisters, Matilda Marrs of Binghamton, Tenn., where she died, and Mary Humphreys of Collierville, Tenn.; and two brothers, James and Obadiah Ham. She was baptized by the writer, together with some other of her relatives, more than thirty years ago. "Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be com-forted."—Matt. 5:4. R. A. Humphreys.

GRAND RAPIDS OPENS NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL

Pennellwood Church of God Sunday School met in their first session at the new church at 3055 Division Ave., S. W., Grand Rapids, Mich., on U. S. 131, Sunday, Feb. 3, 1935.

This opening session was a complete success with an attendance of 82. The school was divided into ten classes with a total collection of $12.82

The new building is located in a restricted and recently developed section just outside the city limits of Grand Rapids. It is of concrete and face brick construction with nice terrazzo floors. There are seven large classrooms on the main floor, an office, and an auditorium capable of seating 200. A fine basement is under the entire building, a part of which is also used as classrooms.

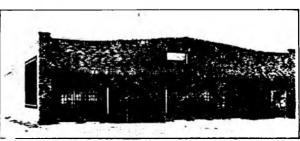

In our new location there is ample room for expansion, with available floor space to enlarge the auditorium and add new classrooms.

The twenty families who are sponsoring this school were former members of the South Lawn Park Church of God. This group, unable to longer cooperate under the South Lawn Park Church program, have established this new Sunday school for the purpose of keeping the 65 members in active service and to spread the gospel as taught by the Church of God.

The officers and teachers are as follows: Board of Elders-A. G. Townsend, Fred E. Hall, William M. Hanson. Sunday school officers Superintendent, Arlie G. Townsend; Asst. Superintendent, Myron Van Portfleet; Secretary, Rhoda Hanson; Treasurer, Harold Teachers-Fred Hall, Beth Mosher, Simpson. Ada Simpson, Eurie Hall, Ruth Townsend, William Hanson, Bee Slocum, Viola Cole, Eva Van Portsleet, Helen Brandou.

ARTHUR TAYLOR

Many of our people have been sick of late with the flu, which has been very prevalent through this section of the country, but Arthur fell victim to this dread malady accompanied by pneumonia, which in the past has claimed so many lives. He was in bed only three days when his heart failed him. Having suffered in the past with a disease that was becoming more gripping in its hold upon him, his physical reserves were so limited that he had little resistance to combat this last siege.

Arthur was one of our faithful workers at Fouthill. For several years he did the janitos work. He was quiet and unassuming, yet al' who know him had a liking for him. He was baptized by Bro. Gordon during his ministry here.

Arthur was born a few miles from here or June 10, 1892, and spent his entire life in this community. He leaves his mother, two brothers, and one sister. His mother is very ill at her home and was unable to attend the services at the church. A letter addressed to Mrs. E. H. Taylor, Fontbill, Out., with Christian cheer will do a lot of good.

Final services were conducted by the writer and Arthur laid to rest awaiting the glorious day when "the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick."

The RESTITUTION HERALD advocates: the near return of Christ, Acts 1:11, and life only through Him, Col. 3:3; the literal resurrection of the dead, John 5:28; the immortalization of those in Christ, 1 Cor. 15:53, 54; the final restoration of Israel as the kingdom of God under the kingship of Christ, Luke 1:32, the church to be joint heirs with Him, Rom. 8:17, and Israel to be made head over Gentile nations, Isa. 60:13; the "restitution of all things. which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world begran", Acts 3:21. It also firmly advocates repentance and immersion in the name of Josus Christ for the remission of sins, Acte 2:38, and a consecrated life as essential to salvation.

The Dollar-a-Month Club is still ready to receive renewal and new memberships.

GOD'S JUSTICE

"God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."—Acts 10:34b, 35.

How glad we ought to be to know that God is no respecter of persons, for if He were I fear we would not stand in His favor. It lies with ourselves, as with everyone else, whether we fear Him with reverential fear and do His will which worketh righteousness, as to being accepted of Him.—L. A. R.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME-

"The Only Living Religion of the Western World" will be the theme of Pastor Norman John MacLeod's sermon Sunday morning, March 3, at Los Angeles. His Communion message will be, "A Lively Hope."

The pastor at the church at Oregon, III. will speak next Sunday morning on "Seeking God in the Lives of Others," and in the evening a Washington's birthday discourse on "Entangling Alliances." The latter will have to do with the historic American attitude toward international affairs and its prophetic significance.

A splendid article by Elder James A. Patrick, entitled, "The Church and Its Name," will appear soon in our columns. Bro. Patrick is a recognized authority in the Church of God on this particular subject, and we recommend his article to your thoughtful attention.

Several of our readers have written in highly commendatory terms of Bro. C. E. Ran dall's presentation of "Important Differences Defined," which was published in the issue of January 22. The article dealt with points of doctrinal difference between the Advent Christian Church and the Church of God.

Sr. Mabel Lindsay, the nurse who has faithfully eared for Mrs. O'Byrne during the final weeks of her illness in Golden Rule Home, returned Saturday to her own home. The Executive Board appreciates the service she has rendered in a difficult case, while to Sr. Mick, our regular matron, who cared for Mrs. O'Byrne throughout her long illness until Sr. Lindsay relieved her, and who combined the duries of nurse and sympathetic companion as her time permitted, with a patience and thoughtfulness that is unsurpassed, the Board acknowledges its lasting obligation.

The editor appreciates various papers which reach his desk through the kindness of brethren, and finds much of value in them as they provide a broader basis of world information upon which to base our department of "Abreast of the Times," and our prophetic studies. Among other publications of merit, we mention at this time "The American Guardian," the official Socialist weekly.

Pastor Harvey U. Krogh, Jr., of Pearl City, III., was a welcome visitor at Golden Rule Home Saturday morning. Bro. Krogh always brings something of brightness into older lives when he calls.

THE JEW AND PALESTINE

THE Jew is the mystery of history. He is the enigma of civilization. The Jew is the positive proof of the existence of a personal God. There is no human explanation for the Jew's miraculous survival of centuries of unparalleled persecution. The great French philosopher, Renan, said, "History fails to account for the Jew." Another thinker exclaimed, "Behold the Jew, and tremble; behold the Jew, and believe; behold the Jew, and rejoice."

God's Word introduces the Jew as a chosen, holy, special people, "above all the people that are upon the face of the carth" (Deut. 7:6-8). All the other nations were to be blessed or cursed according to their treatment of Israel (Gen. 12:3). So marvelously has God's divine hand of protection been upon Israel, that she has been referred to as "water-proof" and "fire-proof." Israel Zangwill, well known author, wrote, "During the thirty centuries or so of his national existence the Jew has been perpetually stumbling on the verge of the abyss of annihilation, yet, always he has recovered his footing. Why! God preserves him."

For almost two thousand years, the Jew has been a wanderer upon the face of the earth. Despised, ridiculed, hounded, haunted, and tortured, he has made his wretched way from country to country without a country, king, or friend. But a great change has taken place lately. On December 9, 1917, the news flashed around the world that Jerusalem was captured. The capture of Jerusalem from the Turk was so startling as to defy human explanation. Not a shot was fired; not a blow was struck; not a drop of blood was shed; not a stone was scratched; not an inch of soil was destroyed. Tremendous events followed the restoration of Palestine to the Jew. The eyes of Israel instantly turned toward their divinely appointed homeland. Hope sprang up in the hearts of millions of Jews. Over 200,000 returned since 1917. All over the world comes the ancient cry, "Next year in Jerusalem." In 1920 Turkey renounced all her rights over Palestine. In 1922, the League of Nations confirmed the mandate which gave the Jews full liberty to return to and rebuild their national home. In 1929, the "Sixth Biennial Zionist Congress" met in Zurich and Zionist combined with non-Zionist in the one common purpose of "Palestine for the Jew."

Miracles are taking place in Palestine, for the first time in thousands of years.

- 1. The flag of Judah flies over Jerusalem.
- 2. A Jew was appointed Governor of Palestine.
- 3. The Jewish flag flies over the seas.
- 4. Palestine deserts blossom as the rose.
- Normal rainfall experienced again.
- The Hebrew tongue is again used as the mother tongue.
- 7. Jewish currency and coins are being issued and used.
- 8. Jews make the pilgrimage to Jerusalem to observe "Feast of Atonement."
- Palestine has taken its place as the most prosperous country in all the world.

- The nations of the world have publicly recognized the Jews as a nation.
- 11. Thousands of Jews are returning; thousands more are planning to return.
- Jewish rabbis are teaching the Jews that the Messiah is coming soon.
- 13. Extensive plans are afoot for the rebuilding of the temple.

All this means that the fig tree (Israel) is putting forth her leaves; a sure sign that Jesus is coming soon. Listen, God's clock is ticking again. Behold in Israel a sure sign of the imminent return of our blessed Redeemer. Are you praying for the salvation of the Jew? Are you ready to meet your Lord? Lift up your head; your redemption draweth nigh.—Charles Haimovitz in The Jewish Hope.

WARNING TO GIRLS

By Mary A. Woodward

Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings sends this warning to girls who have formed the habit of smoking: "The cigarette habit indulged in by women tends to cause nervousness and insomnia. If American women contract the habit, as reports now indicate they are doing, the entire American nation will suffer. The physical tone of the whole nation will be lowered. This is one of the most evil influences in American life today. The number of American women who are smoking cigarettes is amazing. The habit harms a woman more than it does a man. The woman's nervous system is more highly organized than the man's. The reaction therefore is more intense, ruining her complexion, causing it to become gradually yellow and ashen."

And, girls, this is not all there is to it, either. I know you will say, It is no worse for me than for the men. Yes, it is worse, especially if you ever expect to marry and become a mother. Ought not every woman entering this sacred relation take with her a clean, healthy body? No woman who is a habitual smoker but has filled her body with the poison of nicotine. How can she bring healthy children into the world? If a girl or woman must smoke she should never think of marrying.

There was nothing that gave me more real joy than to see a young man throw his tobacco, box and all, into the water before he was buried with Christ in baptism, and hear him say, "Using tobacco is a sin against my body, and God will not help me as long as I carry with me one sin." Praise God for such young men, and we have baptized many just such brave young men.

How much better never to form a habit so very hard to break away from. Time and money are spent for that which weakens and degrades body and soul. Do not do it, boys, girls; live above it with God's help.

THE FINISHED WORKMAN

By John O. Conrad

I AM thinking of a time when my boy was busily engaged tinkering with some toy. His mother called him to dinner. Several minutes passed and he did not come. Again she called with more emphasis, but to no avail. It was only when he was threatened with the loss of his meal that he finally came. I gave no thought to the incident at the time, merely assuming that he was very much interested in his work.

I remember a group of boys who were coming home from school. Presently one of the boys exclaimed, "Gee! there's Dad. I wonder what he'll say?"

As the boys approached, Tommy's father said, "Hello, Tommy, you're late tonight, aren't you?"

- "Yes,"
- "How did it happen?"
- "Oh, teacher kept us in."
- "Well, what did you do?"
- "Oh, we was late getting in at recess."
- "That so? How come?"
- "Well, you see, we had a ball game, and just as the recess bell rang our side was batting, and we had a guy on every base, and Corky was coming to bat, and we knew if he got a crack at the ball he would bring them all in, and we needed everyone to heat the other side, and that's just what happened like we thought it would. Teacher didn't get very mad when we told her why, but she said we would have to stay after school anyhow."
- "Well, that's all right, but try and not let it happen again."

I wonder if Tommy's dad saw in the incident more than the mere love of the game?

I recall having read of another young man who, having accompanied his parents to Jerusalem, thought it perfectly all right to remain in the temple talking to his elders, when his parents remonstrated with him for having caused them so much anxiety and annoyance in going home.

A new writer and a new idea are introduced simultaneously on this page to Herald readers. What was Judas' connection with the Christ's agony in Gethsemane? Mr. Conrad, of the Golden Rule Church of God, Cleveland, Ohio, is convinced the connection is greater than normally is supposed.

For many years I have pondered the reasonableness of the many views given in explanation of the two great agonies of our Lord Jesus in the last hours of His mortal life. Perhaps if we view them from the viewpoint of the workman, it may help to give us a clearer understanding. I have been told that a finished workman is one who is capable of performing a task 100 per cent in accordance with a blueprint or other instructions.

The first, is the great agony which our Lord endured in the Garden of Gethsemane just previous to His betrayal. Paul is the only New Testament writer to offer any comment on this event (Heb. 5:7-9). It seems to be the opinion of many Bible readers that this agony was occasioned by His realization of the nearness of His betrayal and arrest which He knew would result in His death upon the cross. It is quite natural to assume that the cross, with its suffering, ignominy, and death, was the cup of bitterness which Jesus prayed to have removed. Some have based their opinion upon Paul's statement (Heb. 5:7), "And was heard in that he feared," supposing that He feared the cross. The Diaglott rendering, "And was heard for his devotion," would not support such an opinion.

Mr. Lyman Booth, in his article, "The Cup of Exceeding Sorrow," said, "I do not believe it was the fear of death on the cross that prompted Him to pray as He did, but rather the fear He might not be privileged to complete His appointed sacrifice, as it had been predicted by the prophets, and to which He had become completely reconciled." (Matt. 20:18, 19; John 12:33.) Continuing, he said, "If death on the cross was the cup to which He referred, why did He wait until almost under its shadow to pray to have it pass! He had known for a long time that was His portion, and though He often mentioned it to His apostles, He never manifested any fear of it, nor expressed any disposition to escape it." ## Abreast of the Times

Beauty Parlors in Abraham's Day

"The perfume-boxes, and the amulets; the rings, and ... the hand mirrors."—Isaiah 3:20, 22, R. V.

Mosul, Jraq, Feb. 23.—Among other evidences that a high (?) degree of civilization had been developed in Mesopotamia at a very early period, archeologists of the American School of Oriental Research and the University of Pennsylvania Museum have discovered that the ladies of ancient Nineveh, Ur, and other cities in that region used cosmetics freely, including kohl, a beauty preparation. which is made of powdered antimony and used to darken the eyes. Rings, for ears and nose, amulets and hand mirrors, mentioned by Isaiah as in common use at a later period, were already invented. The "tablets," or "perfume-boxes," the latter coming from the Hebrew word nephesh, or soul, probably contained scented preparations which it was believed by the ladies of that day would give them a "soulful look," and that odor of "glamorous beauty" so widely desired by women today. The archeologists have penetrated to the eleventh level at Tepe Gawra, which means "Great Mound," uncovering the remains of an equal number of cities, each superimposed upon the former one. According to the excavators' somewhat sketchy and uncertain conclusions, the eleventh level represents a civilization that flourished something like 3750 B.C. The people of the period possessed craftsmen who manufactured attractive jewelry of electrum, a natural alloy of gold and silver, while the masons were able to construct the true arch. As an amusement the people played dice and engaged in other games.

The recovery of these ancient remains of civilizations long since disappeared from the earth presents an interesting question to the Bible historian and to the student of prophecy, as to what the relationship of these races was to God in the past, and to what extent they may have influenced the progress of divine plans for the future.

Tennessee Retains Evolution Law

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."—Genesis 1:1.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 19.—By a vote of 67 to 20 the House of Representatives today voted down a measure introduced by 22 year old Representative Cecil Anderson to repeal the statute that forbids the teaching of evolution in the state maintained schools of Tennessee. It will be recalled that the anti-evolution legislation, the repeal of which was asked today, resulted in the famous debate on the subject between William Jennings Bryan, eloquent defender of the inspiration of the Bible, and Clarence A. Darrow, renowned lawyer-skeptic of Chicago. In the present skirmish the 22 year old legislator was opposed by Dave

W. Ruffin, 76, who declared that he was the man who "in 1925 led upon the floor of this house the forces of right-eousness which placed upon the statute books the anti-evolution law of Tennessee."

New Jewish Settlement

"O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come."—Ezekiel 36:8.

Petah-Tikvah, Palestine, Jan. 15.—Jewish agricultural laborers who had saved for years out of their small earnings, celebrated a happy event in their lives late this afternoon when the foundation stone was laid for their new settlement near here, appropriately named "Behadraga" (Gradually). They have been assisted by fifteen-year loans granted by the Palestine Mortgage and Credit Bank, Ltd., of Jerusalem.

Situated on the road leading to Wilhelmina, the new settlement will have seventy-four families, all members of the Jewish Labor Federation, and who formerly were hired laborers in this colony. Each holding will consist of a dwelling, a stable, a fowl run, and will be connected to a center water supply. This new center is the eighth in a series established under the 1,000 family colonization plan.

Thunder, lightning, and rain accompanied the speeches, but the elements did not dampen the high spirits of the hundreds of people who stood out in the open, in front of a wooden platform bearing the Magen-David and Socialist colors.—Palestine Post.

Persia Becomes "Iran"

"Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet."—Ezekiel 38:5...

TEHERAN, Persia.—This historic kingdom late in 1934 officially resumed its ancient name, Iran, thus restoring to another nation the designation it bore in the most remote times. In the Bible it is known as Persia and Elam, and will play an important part in the future.

The Herald of Messiah's Reign

By J. M. Stephenson

THE Apostle Paul in his letter to the Romans, proves beyond the shadow of a doubt the restoration of the literal Jews. In chapter 3:1 he propounds a question which those who deny the preeminent privileges of the Jews after the terminus of the Gentile dispensation, can never answer. "What advantage then hath the Jew?" During the Christian dispensation he has no advantage whatever; for touching the position and privilege of the Jew, as he stands related to Christ and the gospel, during the present dispensation sation, "There is neither Jew nor Greek." - Gal. 3:28. Notwithstanding the same apostle affirms that there is "much advantage every way" in being a Jew (Rom. 3:1, 2) how, unless there shall be peculiar blessings in reserve for this people, in a future dispensation, can this statement of the Apostle ever prove true? But we will let the Apostle explain the reason why there is so much advantage in belonging to this despised and rejected people. He says, when speaking concerning his kindred according to the flesh, whose condition, as far as the present age is concerned, is so hopeless that he would die the accursed death of the cross for their "Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."-Rom. 9:3, 4. Thus, the glory, the adoption, the covenants, and the promises belong to this race.

This is not true as far as the present age is concerned. Should there not be a future age of glory for this people, it can never be true.

Again, in chapter 11:11, Paul propounds another question involving the entire issue touching the future destiny of the Jewish nation. Hear him. "I say, then, have they stumbled that they should fall?" Yes, Gentile prejudice would answer, never to rise again. But with the great Apostle let us respond, "God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy." That after having stumbled, and thus made a breach, through which Gentile believers may pass to Abraham and Christ, they will rise again, will appear in the Apostle's conclusion in the next verse: "Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness?" I will leave it to any tyro in grammar if riches are not the things whose degrees are compared by the adverb more. Thus, "and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness?" How much more what? Answer: riches to the Gentiles. Hence, in their fullness they will be the medium of much greater riches to the Gentiles than in their diminution.

But should this people never be replenished after their depletion, how can this promise of the Apostle ever be fulfilled? It never can. But that it will be fulfilled in its most literal sense will be seen by the following prophecy of Zechariah, 8: 20-23. "Thus saith the Lord of hosts; It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities: and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saving, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of hosts: I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.''

Thus all the Gentile nations will acknowledge the Jews as a great blessing. They have proved a curse to the world, in the terrible judgments their accumulated sufferings have invoked upon the defenceless heads of their cruel oppressors. But then they will be the medium of exalted blessings for all nations. This wonderful people have ever been a blessing or scourge to the world. A blessing to those who blessed them, and a scourge to those who scourged them. Nay, they have been and will be the nucleus of the world's hope.

Whether in Egypt, Babylon, or among all nations, the destiny of all with whom they have been connected has been allied to them. No nation, king, or potentate has ever laid his hand upon this people of destiny without doing it at his peril. Like the particles of matter, whether in an organized body, or disintegrated, they are indestructible.

Having learned the living languages of the world, they will be qualified to herald (Please turn to Page Eight)

Looking for the Sabior

Each morning when I wake from sleep,
O teach me, Lord, to say:
"I know that Thou art coming soon,
And this may be the day!
Then help me, Savior, by Thy grace
To live this day for Thee,
That I may look for Thee with joy
And long Thy face to see."

I should not like Him, when He comes A wandering lamb to find; If I were idle, selfish, proud, Untruthful, or unkind, How I should try to hide my face, And from His presence flee; I should not look for Him with joy, Or long His face to see,

Lord Jesus, as the years go by
And Thine own "day" draws near,
Oh, make me know that I am Thine,
For then I need not fear.

If I am cleansed and kept from sin,
From Satan's power set free,
Then I may look for Thee with juy,
And long Thy face to see.

Why Are We Not Better Christians?

By Clarence H. Hewitt

SOMETIMES we are troubled because we are not better Christians. We realize that measured by Bible standards or even by our own Christian ideals there is much land yet to be possessed. Or we acknowledge to our sorrow that we are slipping back into the world. If may be our very indifference that troubles us: the fact that we are not concerned about our spiritual condition when we ought to be.

A general feeling is permeating the modern church that there is more to religion than many have yet experienced. The existence of several religious movements aimed at deepening Christian experience testify to this widespread hunger, such as the Cambridge Group Movement, the Oxford Group Movement, the Victorious Life Movement, and others. Through such agencies thousands of ministers, not to mention tens of thousands of lay men and women, have found their way into gracious and significant experiences of victory in Christ Jesus.

Many of us glimpse the possibility of victorious Christian living beyond what we have yet known, but we do not know what to do about it. Occasionally we find a person who is radiant with the glory of the presence of the Spirit of God. We wish that we could capture a similar radiance, but the secret of it escapes us. What is the trouble? Why are we dissatisfied with our Christian experience? Why are we so powerless, so lacking in vitality, so accustomed to defeat instead of victory?

Some say, You need entire sanctification; others, You need the baptism of the Holy Ghost; you must agonize before the Lord at the altar until the great joy comes. The present writer doubts the need or desirability of agonizing for the Holy Ghost. Jesus said that the Father is willing to give His Spirit to them that ask Him, but asking is simply asking; it need not be agonizing. This point will become clearer as we proceed.

The real reason for the unreality and defeats in our religious experience is that in some way the channels between God and us have become blocked, so that the blessing cannot flow through to irrigate and fructify our lives. What we need to do is to clean out the channels. This means that we must surrender those things in our lives that have blocked the way—then the blessing will come because it is free to come. Can it possibly be as simple as this? It is as simple as this. There is not even need of centering thought on the filling of the Holy Spirit. If we surrender everything that is between us and God, or between us and any fellow man, and thus clear the channels completely, the experience of victory will come. And with it the radiance,

Mr. Hewitt, who holds a professor's chair at Aurora College, is a member of the Advent Christian Church. His name has appeared in this paper many times in connection with selected articles. This is his first direct contribution to The Restitution Herald. joy, and peace that God longs to bestow upon us. When it comes, people will say, "This is that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel, saying, 'In the last days I will pour out my Spirit.'" The present writer can give testimony that the Spirit's presence came to him not by direct seeking but simply as the aftermath of a full surrender of those sins that had been choking the channel. One day in old Jerusalem the people cried, "Men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?" Peter replied, in effect, that if they would meet certain conditions the Holy Spirit would inevitably come upon them. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Is it as simple as this? It is indeed.

Just what is involved in this matter of surrender? It is the surrender of the self. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me." Denying the self means surrendering the self.

And what is the self? It is a complex or integration of all the natural and acquired traits or characteristics of an individual, including past experiences and memories of them.

The self includes the body. No surrender to Christ is complete that withholds the physical man and his appetites. "I beseech you, brethren, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice." "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."

The self includes the intellectual powers. This is for many the hardest surrender of all to make; submitting the intellect to the leadership of the Spirit. Yet it is necessary. For the carnal mind (the natural, unsurrendered, unregenerate mind) is enmity against God, writes Paul, since it is not and cannot be subject to the law (or control) of God, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can be know them, because they are spiritually discerned." The surrender of the intellect does not mean its abdication, Neither does it mean the surrender of intelligence. It only means laying on the altar one's highest intellectual and reasoning abilities, with the prayer that God will spiritualize the entire mental processes, to the end that the mind may not only discern spiritual things but be an instrumentality through which the Spirit of God may work effectively to the accomplishment of spiritual ends.

The imagination must be surrendered. Many people, including church workers, have trouble with a clouded imagination. The Lord said to Ezekiel, "Hast thou seen what the ancients of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery?" A surrendered imagination may well mean the tearing down of many a picture from the walls of our chamber of imagery.

The self includes the will. Here is the very citadel of the self. No surrender is complete until one can ery from the heart. "Take my will, and let it be, and pray the Gethsemane prayer about the surrendered cup and the yielded will. What could possibly keep us from the fullness of victory like a stubborn will?

The self includes our attitudes, especially our attitudes toward other people. Insofar as some of these are wrong attitudes, they must be surrendered; and in such cases, surrender involves proper restitution by way of apology and asking for forgiveness. To make such amends is hard for an unsurrendered will, but not at all difficult for the will that is truly yielded.

The self includes all our experiences. Some of these experiences, it may be, have been bad. Our sins are experiences of a poor moral quality. We must surrender our sins if we would open up the choked channels to the incoming surges of victory. Sins are not an inconceivable element in a Christian self. John was writing to Christians when he said, "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves." Most professing Christians—including ministers of the gospel—need only to check themselves against the absolute standards of Jesus in order to discover the presence of sins that they are scarcely aware of. It is not a bad idea to ask that the Holy Spirit shall X-ray us. The result may be somewhat humbling. But if it shows us where lie the sins that are clogging the channels, happy are we, for we have learned the things that must be surrendered if we would have the Spirit flood our lives with joy and power.

All this is included in the surrender. It is a total surrender of the entire self: body, mind, intellect, imagination, will, attitudes, sentiments, sins, all that we are or can be, for time and for eternity, to the living Christ, whose we are and whom we must serve. And when a man will do this, there is no limit to what God will do in him, for him, and through him.

Facing Realities!

By C. E. Randall

ON August 17, 1922, the General Conference of the Church of God passed a resolution, whereby "a book of registration for the use of each and every one of its members, male and female, who wish to register as one opposed to military service, combatant, non-combatant, or both" was established.

We opposed this resolution at the time of its adoption on the grounds of scriptural and moral principles. It appears to us as a violation of the spirit of "every soul" being "subject unto the higher powers" and submission "to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme; or unto governors" (Rom. 13:1; 1 Peter 2:13, 14).

The present movement among most denominations to resist military service is the child of the idea that with sufficient numbers taking such a stand war can be averted. This is a dream that never will be a reality this side the reign of the Prince of Peace. The Government has announced its intention of not recognizing conscientious objectors in case of another war, and the "straw protection" suggested by the resolution does not warrant the placing of oneself in an unfavorable position with the Government. If those who sign the resolution remain firm in their convictions in case of war, it will undoubtedly mean they must face the firing squad.

I respect conscientious scruples and if our young men choose to sign such a resolution and are determined to stand by it, then I for one am ready to do all I can to help them, but some are urging the young men to take an "out and out" stand against military service without emphasizing what it is going to cost them to carry out such decisions. If our young men after thoroughly considering the matter and knowing full well that it will cost them dearly to keep their vows, choose to be martyrs to their convictions, the Lord bless them, but they can do this as well without as they can with a resolution.

But it is not against the resolution that I wish to send a dart, but against those who encourage our young men to take such action, when they themselves will in no way be affected, but will bring untold hardship on the young men—even greater than actual military service. It is an easy matter to go out and get others to tread in a path in which we never expect to walk. Let us face the realities of the future, rather than live in the balmy breezes of dreamy days. Today we can talk—tomorrow others must act. Anyone can get people to sign a paper but the reality of the act lies in the fact that the signer is the person that must earry out the agreement.

Yes, boys, sign! but before you do beware what you are signing and be sure you understand what your signature is going to cost you. It is you who must live up to that signature! It is you who will be placed in an unfavorable position with the Government. Think twice!—Church of God Messenger.

Blank forms for signatures to the resolution referred to by Mr. Randall may be obtained on application to the National Bible Institution, Oregon, Illinois.

"O Ye Dry Bones, Hear the Word of the Lord"

By Norman John MacLeod

SOMETHING over a year ago we dwelt upon the "Valley of Dry Bones." We described it as if we were travelers along the highways of our country and should suddenly be confronted by the sight of a valley full of dry bones. Let us, therefore, transport ourselves again to that "Valley of Dry Bones" in our imaginations and look for another matter described therein.

When Ezekiel had wondered at the marvelous sight of a valley full of dry bones he was asked the question: "Son of man, can these bones live?" That would seem a ridiculous question in the face of the fact that they were "very dry." And yet in vision nothing is ridiculous! The strangest occurrences seem quite ordinary and correct! But there is another statement in the chapter which is stranger still! "Again he said unto me, Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord,"-Ezek. 37:4. If we were traveling along a highway in our country, and upon seeing a valley full of dry bones, should be commanded to go out and speak to those bones, we certainly would be considered at least slightly queer if we should obey such a command! If out in the wastes of Nevada we should suddenly find somebody out there talking to dry bones, we would be sure that something had affected his mentality! And yet we read that statement in the book of Ezekiel time after time, and think nothing of it! We need to have no one tell us that that statement is figurative! It is what is technically known as an "apostrophe": addressing something that has no life as if it possessed life and understanding. When the poet wrote the lines: "Break, break, break, on thy cold grey erags, oh sea!" nobody thought that the sea would actually hear him; and yet we think the figure quite beautiful. We mention these facts, for when it comes to things just as figurative, some immediately take them literally, when they are no more meant to be literal than the verse quoted above. In the ninth verse of this same chapter we read: "Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind. Thus saith the Lord God; Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live."-Ezek. 37:9. Ah, yes, here is another matter: these slain! Does anybody think for a moment that the wind heard and understood? When Jesus stood up in the boat on the Sea of Galilee and called to the winds to cease blowing, did the winds hear Him? Only the superstitious who believed in supernatural beings called gods who were supposed to blow with their mouths to cause winds, could hold to such an opinion. But let us arrive at the crux of the matter now that we have made sure that these two passages are figurative.

"Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves."—Ezek. 37: 12, 13. Are these words the words of prophecy concerning a literal resurrection? Or are they in the sense of those words quoted above, a figurative illustration? Is the resurrection there mentioned of individuals? Or is it speaking rather of the nation of Israel (the twelve tribes)? Let us compare some texts.
